DR. AUGUR OPPOSES PROHIBITION

Court Modifies Ice Injunction

Barnhart And Brewery Case Is Argued In Circuit Court

Judge Robinson this morning modified the restraining order issued against Honolulu Brewing and Malting Company at the petition of W. O. Barnhart, the amount of ice allowed the petitioner being twenty tons daily, instead of twenty-seven, as asked for.

Barnhart has been buying ice from the brewery and retailing it around the city, the contract between the two parties calling for the delivery of twenty-seven tons daily should it be asked for, which is the total output of the brewery for sale.

As Barnhart had never taken this amount and as his largest daily consumption was less than eighteen tons, the brewery entered into a contract to deliver ice to the Commissary Department of the army at nineteen cents per hundred pounds.

This was claimed as a violation of the contract by Barnhart, in that he should have the entire output of the factory and that it was selling under the agreed rate of twenty-five cents per hundred pounds—agreed to by the brewery as the rate at which all sales would be made to outsiders.

In arguing the question this morning, Attorney Ballou appeared for the brewery and Attorney Lightfoot for Barnhart.

Lightfoot tried to get the total amount allowed increased to twenty-three tons daily, but was unsuccessful. He held that Barnhart could get the army contract should he be given the total output of ice at the brewery. That if he couldn't, he might throw the ice away if he saw fit, but that he was entitled to the full twenty-seven tons.

Attorney Ballou, for his client, stated that whenever the plaintiff could show that he had bona fide customers for any amount over twenty tons, it would be given him, but that the brewery was under $1000 bonds to deliver ice to the Commissary Department and that under the circumstances to deliver ice to Barnhart to throw away was bad business.

The ton rate at which the brewery agreed to sell to outsiders was $3.50, and they claimed that the sale at the brewery was in ton lots, although the contract called for a price per hundredweight. The rate at which the ice was delivered to the government is thirty cents per ton over the minimum rate at which the brewery agreed to sell to outsiders, but taken on a hundred pound basis it is six cents below.

One reason given by the brewery company for selling ice outside was that Barnhart was behind in his accounts to the brewery for ice in the sum of $2262.61. This was denied by Barnhart. He was behind for last year, but this year was all paid up, and the surplus he paid in each month was going to liquidate past indebtedness.

Navy Docks On Broad Basis

PROHIBITION IS WRONG SAYS DR. AUGUR

"When this agitation first came up I thought I believed in prohibition, but since I have thought the matter over fully I have come to the conclusion that I am not in favor of the prohibition movement, nor the law which this movement would put upon Hawaii," says Dr. George J. Augur.

This statement is the more forcible when it is known that the doctor is practically a total abstainer, and thinks it would be a good thing if there were no such thing as liquor in the world.

"You can not legislate a man into being good," said the doctor, "and if he is to stop the use of liquor it must be from education and self-restraint, not from man-made laws which can really accomplish nothing."

Dr. Augur has been a practising physician for many years and realizes as well as any medical man that the excessive use of alcohol, like that of tea, coffee or any other stimulant, has a bad effect upon the human system.

"I am not like some men in this town. I have the courage of my convictions, I hope, and I am not afraid to take a stand on this question," he asserted.

"I am a member of some clubs in the city of Honolulu. If prohibition carried, would those clubs stop selling liquor? I think not. And if you and I or anyone else belonging to those clubs could go there at any time and get what we wished to drink, and the Hawaiians and others who had no clubs could not get a drink, then I fail to see where there is any justice in the matter."

Dr. Augur believes that all people should be on the same basis in regard to obtaining liquor as well as in other questions of everyday life, and he does not believe that under prohibition this would be possible.

By making saloons open like other stores, so that everyone could see what is going on inside as they passed along the street, would, in Dr. Augur's opinion, have a better effect than all the prohibition agitation and laws that could be passed.

Winsome Delay Race

SAN PEDRO, Cal., July 9.—The start of the transpacific yacht race was postponed today in order to allow the entry of the yacht Winsome.

Inability to start at the appointed time was quite a disappointment to the yachtsmen, whom the South Coast Yacht Club have looked after in splendid style, but the yachtsmen were unanimous that it was better to change the time of crossing the line rather than lose one of the boats that had planned to contest the race to Honolulu.

The Winsome evidently did not get to San Pedro in time for the start of the race this morning, as the yawl has been named as one of the entries certain to start. Commodore Hay, her owner, would have been a much disappointed man if the big race had started before his boat arrived on the scene of action.

Sugar Shipment Contracts Rumor

F. A. Schaefer Declares No Agreement Yet Reached With Hilo Railroad

Contracts for the shipment of sugar from the plantations of the Hamakua district over the extension of the Hilo railway system may be under consideration, but according to statements made this morning the report that the negotiations have actually resulted in the signing of contracts at the present time are entirely premature. This report has gained considerable circulation on the island of Hawaii but the indications are that it is entirely premature, however near some development in that connection may be.

"As far as this company is concerned we have not made a contract for the shipment of our sugar over the extension," said F. A. Schaefer, this morning. "What we may do in the future is yet to be determined."

The two plantations controlled by Schaefer & Company, the Pacific Sugar Mill and Honokaa plantation, were mentioned as two in the Hamakua district that were already signed up for the shipment of their sugar over the new extension into Hamakua, to take effect upon the completion of the system.

CHARGE LABOR WITH WRECK

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 9.—War of labor men is credited with responsibility for the destruction today by dynamite of the steel trestle of a building being erected here for the Lehigh Valley railroad.

It is claimed by the contractors that the destruction was done by union men, because the contractors have always held out for the open shop, employing whom they pleased regardless of the affiliation with the unions.

FLIES 211 WITH NO STOP

REEIMS, France, July 9.—De la Bouchers made a flight of two hundred and eleven miles in his aeroplane today. The time was four hours thirty-seven minutes and forty seconds. This establishes a new record for a single flight.

WANT WOOLLEY TO EXPLAIN

That a large number of leading Hawaiians, who are either directly or indirectly connected with the prohibition league, are not at all satisfied with the Woolley propaganda, is apparent from the tenor of their expressions heard frequently. Some of them are strongly opposed to the assumed leadership by Mr. Woolley in local affairs. They are of opinion that the proper place for him to be is in the United States, where they claim he should exercise and push forward his prohibition move. If successful there, then he might have a little chance to try his plans here among the Hawaiian voters.

WANT EDITORS TO COME HERE

The Promition Committee, since the discussion of the visit of the National Editorial Association at the meeting of the committee two days ago, has been working on the idea of having them here and in some way raising the necessary five thousand dollars which the association wants to help defray expenses.

Yesterday Chairman Bush of the committee asked for the entire correspondence which the secretary's office has had with President Baumgartner of the Association and will take the matter up with various business men at once.

The statement made by McInerny at the meeting two days ago put the matter of raising five thousand dollars in a new light to the committee and will probably result in more active interest in raising the money to get the association here in February.

The way the matter was put to the Committee by Mr. McInerny was this: There are two hundred people coming on the excursion and at a low estimate each will spend twenty-five dollars here; that will leave the amount subscribed, $5000, in the city after the departure of the party for the coast. Looking at the matter in that light the subscription will be returned while the party is here and the advertising gained by writeups in three hundred newspapers after the party arrives back home will be all velvet.

By the tone of the letter of President Baumgartner, which was received this week it is evident that the association has decided on the trip to Honolulu but the matter of transportation is the big obstacle now confronting it.

None of the steamship lines will guarantee more than accommodation for eighty persons and the whole party numbering two hundred wishes to come at the same time.

The lowest price so far that has been quoted on a chartered steamer is $35,000, which is thought too expensive. If a steamer can be chartered for $25,000 and the five thousand raised here there will be no question about the party coming here.

PROHIBITION AT KAILUA WAS FAILURE

HILO, Hawaii, July 8.—A letter has been received from a Hawaiian lady who attended the Hawaiian Evangelical Association convention at Kailua, which indicates that the prohibition proposition on that occasion was not crowned with such a glorious measure of success as those who headed the movement have given out.

Says this letter:

"On June 28, when it was tried to see how many stood for prohibition, many women stood up, but most of the voters kept their seats.

"Rev. Mr. Oleson said that he was very sad about the result and the doubt which had been shown.

"Mr. Kamaiopili made a very strong speech for prohibition, and Mr. Mossman stated that he thought that the people were bringing politics into the Association, and if this were done, prohibition would fall through.

"Mossman said further that the women were making sisal leis and were placing them about their necks. This, he said, was a sign that prohibition was dead."

CHARLOTTE C ARRIVES SAFELY

At 8 o'clock this morning the Charlotte C. reached Honolulu and reported all the crew well after their strenuous time on the beach at Kahului. The yacht had a tough time and at first it was thought that she would not be gotten off the reef safely. However, the tug Leslie Baldwin towed the boat off, and she was overhauled and found to be nearly O. K.

A start was made from Kahului at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and the run down was made without any pilikia. George Crozier handled his hooker in good style, and his crew helped out all they knew.

It appears that the Charlotte C. in some way unshipped her rudder just before starting from Kahului last Tuesday, and the consequence was that she drifted ashore before anything could be done to save her from grounding. An investigation revealed the fact that her rudder was gone, and work was at once started on refitting another one. When this was fixed the Charlotte C. set out for Honolulu and reached port safely this morning.

Captain George Crozier reports a smooth sea all the way down. The Charlotte C. behaved well, and the trip was an enjoyable one. Crozier says that just before the yacht started to drift ashore he set two anchors, but both carried away quickly. When the Charlotte C. struck the rocks she started to bump her way inland, and at the finish she was within sixty feet of dry land.

WATERFRONT NOTES

A NUMBER OF Honoluluans who spent the Fourth of July on Hawaii and Maui returned by the steamer Mauna Kea this morning. The elements were kindly and the officers report a fine trip across the channels. The Mauna Kea brought a full compliment of cabin and deck passengers. The freight list included a couple of automobiles, shipments of liquor, hides, cabbage, ohia and other native lumber and awa. The Mauna Kea will sail on her new schedule next Tuesday, the steamer departing at ten o'clock in the morning instead of at noon as heretofore.

IT IS THE intention of H. Hackfeld and Company who represent the Toyo Kisen Kaisha freighter Kiyo Maru to dispatch that vessel for Japan and China ports tomorrow. This vessel is leaving a large shipment of nitrates at Honolulu. Five gangs of stevedores have been working day and night to permit the vessel to sail on her regular schedule. The Kiyo Maru comes from South and Central American ports and is one of the modern type of cargo carriers.

THE FREIGHTER Virginian of the American-Hawaii Line is reported to have arrived at San Francisco from Salina Cruz yesterday. The Virginian is enroute to Honolulu with a considerable shipment of merchandise for local importers.

THE STEAMER Likelike will return to Honolulu with a full load of sugar taken on at Honokaa and Kukuihaele. The vessel is due to load cattle at Puako today and should arrive here on Sunday or Monday morning.

OTTO S. MEYER SHOT DEAD

Killed While Climbing Side of Steep Hill

Otto S. Meyer, the sixteen-year-old son of Otto S. Meyer of Kalae, Molokai, was shot and instantly killed while on a hunting trip up the mountains back of Kalae, Sunday morning, says the Maui News.

It seems that Otto, accompanied by Ito, a Japanese who is working for the family, was climbing up a steep hillside after a flock of goats when the hunters came upon some deer unexpectedly, and in the excitement Ito, who was a little behind his young master, loaded his rifle, a 30-caliber Winchester, and followed. In scrambling up the hillside the gun went off accidently, it is claimed, and the bullet struck the back of Otto's head, making its exit from the top.

Deputy Sheriff Edward Devauchelle hurried over to Kalae and placed the Japanese under arrest, empaneled a coroner's jury and wireleased to Sheriff Saffery to bring over a competent Japanese interpreter. Mr. Saffery left for Molokai on Wednesday morning with the Japanese interpreter, Mr. N. K. Otsuka, to make a thorough investigation of the affair.

Young Meyer was formerly a student at Alliolani College, Honolulu, and had gone to Molokai to help his father on the ranch. Mr. Meyer had broken his leg a short time ago and had requested his son to leave school and go to his home.

SPRECKELS SAYS 'FRISCO IS BAD

Declares Grafters Will Hang Themselves in Final Outcome.

New York, June 19.—Rudolph Spreckels of San Francisco, prominent in the recent graft prosecutions in the California metropolis, sailed from here today for Europe to study phases of graft in European capitals.

Before leaving, he said:

"Conditions in San Francisco are the worst they ever were. I believe, however, that the grafters will go so far that they will hang themselves. I am in the fight to stay. I believe that the stockholders of big corporations are responsible for municipal corruption. They are content to receive dividends without inquiring as to the methods used to obtain them."

Very still ! Still they do it. The Highlander knows his way about. He is not to be overcome by your tectotal Chancellor of the Exchequer or your lynx-eyed gauger. The Budget has has hit the "Celtic Fringe" badly, but the "Celtic Fringe" refuses to succumb. It is recorded that a "Sma' Still," in first-rate working order, has been captured by the Excise officials in the wilds of Kilmorack, Inverness-shire. The "Sma' Still" used to be a great industry in that region, and—according to report—the daft increase in the Budget duties has led to its revival.

So there you are, Mr. Lloyd-George! You have been boasting over your efforts in the way of encouraging temperance. Your little joke, you may learn, can be overdone. Put the screw too much on the legitimate trade and you will find that the "illicit" will crop up somewhere. My dear super-virtuous Chancellor, look at all sides, and be careful what you do. Your gracious endeavors to make the people sober by Act of Parliament may result in the establishment of numerous "Sma' Stills" and shebeens.

THREE JAPANESE CHILDREN DASHED TO DEATH FROM HIGH TRESTLE BY ENGINE

With air brakes jambed on, and with the emergency stop called into action, the 11:45 train to Wahiawa yesterday morning slowly crept up on three children, who were standing on the extreme outside of the trestle bridge that spans the big dam, and brushed them over into the water forty feet felow. When the children were picked up they were dead.

The children were Japanese and all of one family; two were girls of ten and five year sold and the other was a baby boy of two years. The children were the full family of their parents, who are now left childless.

The trestle bridge is not decked at all; it is not meant for pedestrians and anyone who risks crossing it has to step from tie to tie. The waters of the big dam lay forty feet below and to slip is instant death. The railroad track emerges from a curve right onto the bridge and the engineer has no chance of seeing anything till he is almost on the trestle.

The first thing the engineer did when approaching the curve that leads onto the trestle, was to give the regulation whistle. Everyone who was on the train admits that the whistle was blown. As soon as the engine straightened out for the run across the trestle the engineer saw the children on the track.

The mites heard the train coming, and at once scrambled out on the edge of the woodwork and tried in that way to avoid the rushing locomotive. The engineer and fireman were frantic, and they did all in their power to stop the trai nbefore it was too late. All was hopeless, however, and the engine, although rapidly losing way, slowly crept up and simply swept the three little tots off the bridge and down into the depths below.

The train came to a rest five feet beyond the point from which the children were thrown and the crew at once began a search for the little ones. After some time the bodies were recovered, and the sorrowing parents informed of the occurrence. The scene was a most pitiful one as the parents approached the spot where the three tiny corpses lay, and strong men wept when they saw the mother's grief.

The accident was absolutely unavoidable and the engineer did all in his power to stop the tragedy. The children had no right on the trestle, and the bridge is only wide enough to carry the train; there is no margin at either side for anything else.

Deputy Sheriff Cox is looking into the matter and an inquest will be held this evening.

Not For the Careless Smoker

Van Dyck "Quality" Cigars are not made for the man who buys cigars haphazard.

Their appeal is to the lover of good Havana tobacco—to the man who appreciates the best.

All that is possible in fineness of flavor and aroma—all that a smoker ever dreamed of in luxurious satisfaction is to be had in

VAN DYCK

"Quality" Cigars

Nor will you pay half for these cigars what you might well expect.

Similar quality in the "Imported" would cost you again as much.

For we save 100 per cent duty by having our factory in Tampa, Fla.—by importing the leaf instead of the cigars.

This economy is your gain, and you lose nothing that the "Imported" may offer.

We even go so far as to employ Cuban experts in the making of Van Dyck "Quality" Cigars.

And "Van Dycks" come in 27 different shapes, to suit all tastes.

In price, they'll fit the purse of every man-who-knows—the men for whom they are made.

AZORES TO BE AGAIN VISITED

Will Have a Try With the Portuguese Colonies in British Guiana—Photographs of the Plantation Life to Back Up Inducements.

A. J. Campbell, who has been selected by the Board of Immigration for the purpose of gathering up good laborers from foreign lands, will direct his steps towards Demerara, one of the possessions of British Guiana.

It is reported that there are large colonies of Portuguese in the country named and they have in their favor the fact that they are familiar with sugar plantation work.

The sixth of next month is the date set for the departure of Mr. Campbell on his laborer recruiting mission. His first visit, in interest of obtaining laborers, will be to the Azores. Mr. Campbell will be accompanied by J. A. Silva, editor of O Luso.

It has been ascertained by inquiry that the prospects of obtaining plantation laborers at Demerara are exceedingly promising, and after Mr. Campbell has given the Azore a thorough working out, it is planned that he shall visit British Guiana and endeavor to recruit a few hundred Portuguese there.

The Tehuantepec route is tabooed as a route for bringing immigrants to these parts. The Board of Immigration thinking it not perfectly safe to take chances with any fevers that might exist at the Isthmus.

Before departing Mr. Silva will make a thorough inspection tour of the islands, visiting all Portuguese colonies and getting from them statements as to their being satisfied with their present employment, the wages paid, living conditions and other information that will be most useful in the recruiting of laborers in the Azores and other countries to be visited.

To back up his statements he will obtain a full supply of photographs of plantation life, which will fully show all conditions of life in Hawaii from the men working in the fields to the pleasant Portuguese homes that may be found at any of the island plantations.

PISTOLS AND COFFEE FOR TWO

Reinecke Enlists Cupids Aid And Then Wins Forgiveness

Little Dan Cupid has succeeded in making smooth the way for August Carl Henry Reinecke, bacteriologist connected with Kalihi detention station, who returned to Honolulu by the steamer Mauna Kea this morning, after participating in a romantic elopement in which Miss Elsie May Ibson, a vivacious little actress belonging to an Australian musical team became Mrs. Reinecke.

"Doc" Reinecke was the recipient of all sorts of congratulations from his friends today who wish him the best of good fortune in his voyage on seas matrimonial.

The Reinecke-Ibson elopement proved the nine-day sensation at Hilo town. It stirred that damp and rather plegmatic community from center to circumference. The happy groom emerged from the ordeal smiling and with the dove of peace firmly perched upon his roof tree.

From the time that the Board of Health representative stepped from the steamer Claudine on a peaceful Sunday morning until the departure of the Mauna Kea for Honolulu there was something doing for the wagging tongues in the Rainy city.

Reinecke's wild dash from Glenwood to the shrine of Pele at the Volcano will go rattling down the corridors of history on the Big Island, causing a tumult likened to a ton of gravel falling on a galvanized iron roof. Returning passengers tell of the hasty meeting between the doctor and his bride-to-be, the early Sunday morning call upon District Magistrate Charles Swain, who tied the knot while arrayed in little else but an expression of surprise and a pair of pajamas. Then followed the flight to the hilltops through the verdant and picturesque cane fields of Olaa. A high-powered automobile was waiting the happy but hurried pair at the railway terminus and there then commenced a race against time and a surprised and irate manager of the Ibson musical team. The machine containing Reinecke and his winsome bride went wild before the Volcano House was reached, left the road and piled into a yawning ditch. Tales are told of how the wedding party spent the greater part of a day and evening under the scanty protection afforded by the virgin ohia and koa forest which lines that famous roadway. Then followed a brief honeymoon at the fiery brink of Halemaumau, whence springs Kilauea's incessant streams of molten lava.

The return to Hilo brought about a reconciliation between the brother of the bride and the bacteriologist. At first there was wailing and gnashing of teeth, vows of vengeance, of coffee and pistols for two or even more, but the deed was accomplished and a compromise has been effected by which the bride shall continue with the troupe for not longer than six months, that the contracts made already may be fulfilled, and a new member of the team broken in. Happiness and Cupid reign in the Reinecke family.

FORTY-FIVE SACKS of mail from Far Eastern Ports was received by the postal officials last evening. It arrived by the Pacific Mail intermediate steamer Asia.

SATURDAY ..... JULY 9, 1910

O man, forgive thy mortal foe,
Nor ever strike him blow for blow;
For all the souls on earth that live
To be forgiven must forgive.
Forgive him seventy times and seven;
For all the blessed souls in heaven
Are both forgivers and forgiven.
—Tennyson.

Prohibition can not tolerate any opposition, but Prohibition and Perjury always get along well together.

Here's to the Hawaii! She's a winner, and this year the race will be ours; the more competitors the merrier.

Thurston said he would enter into partnership with the Devil. Now is Woolley it, or merely one of the Devil's pups?

If they postpone the yacht race long enough, Delegate Kuhio will get here just in time to vote "No" before the polls close, July 26.

Dare to say "No" is what the Sunday school teaches, and every voter should follow up his early teachings by voting "No" in the Plebiscite.

Not so very long ago Woolley was declaring that it was up to Congress. What he really means is that the Prohibition and Perjury combination is up against it.

And Woolley also said: "Against us are only the guerrillas of evil and timidity." Which was as near to the fact as Woolley ever gets when he deals with Prohibition.

Prepare to vote "No." Your own judgment, backed by such men as Bishop Libert and Bishop Restarick, is better than the dictation of Woolley and Thurston.

Undoubtedly Woolley is ready to wager all he has and all his hopes of Hawaii on his assurance that his brand of Prohibition will have no effect on the laboring people of Hawaii.

Bishop Libert recognizes in the Prohibition presented for the consideration of the people of Hawaii a slick scheme to interfere in the government of these Islands to the detriment of the people.

If Woolley and his Prohibition were such an everlasting benefit to Hawaiian-Americans, would Delegate Kuhio be approaching so rapidly on horseback to help him hypnotize the electorate?

Good attendance at the Republican precinct meetings indicates that the people intend to take an active hand in party affairs this year. If this continues, boss rule will be pigeon-holed with Woolleyisms.

Just as the Russian immigration begins to make a good showing, the authorities start out for the Portuguese. In support of their latest move, the immigration managers have the record of the Portuguese for having always made good in Hawaii.

Woolley says much of "the stake of the liquor dealers" in the Plebiscite. If he will put on another pair of glasses he will see that the people of Hawaii have their rights and privileges at stake. They will therefore vote down the Woolley brand of Prohibition and uphold the present law.

"It is up to the Hawaiians," says Woolley. That is his latest. Not many weeks ago he said, "If we are defeated in this fight, then we will take the matter again before Congress." It is indeed up to the Hawaiian-American voters of this Territory to put a final quietus on the Woolley campaign at home and abroad.

That mass meeting in New York, after having secured a free trip to Honolulu for one or more delegates, will have accomplished its full purpose. We have no doubt these delegates will deal as kindly with Hawaii as Woolley has done, and he is paid by local financiers to call people names if they be "against us."

Prohibition is bringing to light lots of self-sacrifice for the benefit of the dear people. Think of Woolley with nothing but his salary from the Anti-Saloon League to depend upon, and only his great love for Hawaii and the Hawaiians that caused him to take up his residence in the Islands just as long as the salary held out and was large enough.

WOOLLEYITES AND THE BISHOP LIBERT.

"Liar" is the first thought that appears to have entered the Woolley brain of the Prohibition organ after reading the powerful arraignment of Prohibition uttered by the Bishop of the Catholic church in these islands. That is a very sound argument for Prohibition, from the Prohibition standpoint, but it does not convince anyone who is in a state of mind to deal with public questions in a manner to best serve the common good. Prohibitionists when forced to the wall of their hypocrisy usually say something spiteful if their vocabulary has not already been exhausted.

But the Woolley organ makes itself ridiculous in this instance as in most every other contention relating to Prohibition.

After confessing that each man is entitled to his opinions, it proceeds to insult the Bishop of the Catholic church when it says that he didn't know what he was talking about when he said in effect that Woolley went on a secret mission to Washington to manipulate the laws of the country and wheedle the lawmakers into taking away from the citizens of Hawaii a large measure of their present privileges of self government.

It is suggested that Woolley went to Washington with bells on and his movements were duly announced by the Morning Mother of Blind Pigs; and that the Bishop has been misled by the Bulletin.

We are surprised that the Woolleyites are ready to admit that the Bulletin could mislead anyone, but when they charge such a clearheaded, observant, keen, and independent thinker as Bishop Libert with having reached his conclusions by what he has learned from a single source, we are more surprised that they don't represent the Bulletin as the Great Horned Toad, Thurston's partner.

Bishop Libert voices the general sentiment of the citizens of Hawaii, including working members of the so-called Prohibition League, when he says that the presence and the mission of Woolley in Washington was an assault upon the liberties of the citizens of this Territory, and his utterances before the Congressional committee an insult to all self-respecting Hawaiian-Americans.

The Prohibitionists know this. If they thought otherwise they would not have changed their plans for having Woolley tour the islands. If the Prohibitionists were not satisfied of the contempt the people of these islands have for Woolleyisms, they would not have kept him in the background during their struggle to deceive the Hawaiian voters in connection with the coming Plebiscite.

Bishop Libert does not have to argue the question. He has only to point to one of many instances where the people of the islands have repudiated the secret mission of Woolley.

It is worthy of note that the business men of Honolulu made their opinions known in strong terms when they found out what Woolley was doing. Now if Woolley and the Woolleyites were so open and aboveboard what was the need for Attorney Thompson to notify the people of Honolulu what was going on in Washington, and what was the need for the people of Honolulu to rally immediately and utter their protest against the dark lantern, gum shoe, game of Woolley.

The fact of it is that Truth and Justice will prevail and that is where Woolley and his crowd are up against it.

Not satisfied with insulting the good sense of the community as to what Woolley did while in Washington, they add to their evil deeds by putting the self-sacrificing, consecrated workers of the Catholic church in the same class with such "outsiders" as Woolley.

It is doubtful if a greater desecration could be suggested.

The organ of Woolley Prohibition has the effrontery to speak the name of the devoted men and women of the Catholic Church who have given their lives for the uplift, education, healthy prosperity of the Hawaiian people, the men and women who have and are ministering to the sick, the needy and the distressed, in the same lines and refer to them as of the same calibre as the Prohibition campaigner Woolley.

Just what further crime Prohibition may commit against the finer moral sensibilities of the people of Hawaii is not hard to estimate. The campaigners show they intend to go the limit.

And the Prohibitionists who do these things, who snarl at the leaders of the church, who try to evade responsibility for their words condemning the Hawaiian people—Woolley said in Washington, "The native population needs and deserves prompt and powerful intervention in the matter"—these campaigners expect the people of Hawaii to support them at the polls.

They say that the cause of Prohibition is up to the Hawaiians.

Bishop Libert and his church have led the Hawaiians into paths of temperance, virtue and peace.

What did the Woolleyites ever do in the same cause?

DRINK NOT RESPONSIBLE

The following, by Dr. M. M. Mangasarian, is taken from "The Labor World":

I imagine the prohibitionists ask me, "Should a man be permitted to encourage or commit crime in the name of personal liberty?" I have no hesitation in answering "No." No citizen is free to encourage crime or to commit crime. But is it true that the manufacture and the sale and the use of liquor is a hurt to one's neighbor? Let us look at that question calmly and dispassionately. The Supreme Court has decided that no man can be deprived of his personal liberty except for the commission of crime. The question then is this: Is the man who drinks or makes or sells liquor a criminal?

That is the point, and I will show you that in the history of the world, and of nations and of individuals the use of liquor has played a very insignificant role as far as responsibility for crime is concerned.

You must remember that the prohibitionist as a rule is a man of religious tendencies. He is conscientiously and honestly a religious man, and his great argument is that his Bible is against it, and when we have broken down that defense we have really produced a lasting impression upon him. Now I want to argue with you the position of the Bible upon this question, but before I do that I want to show you that of all the great crimes mentioned in the Bible, liquor occupies a very minor role. What do you say was the first great crime? It was the fall of Adam. As a result of that crime, we are told, the whole world was cursed, and that we were exposed to the fires of hell; that it made the death of God's son necessary for our redemption, and yet it was not drink that caused the fall of Adam. It shows that the real cause of crime is ambition. It is in the nature of man. It is not in the apple which Adam ate; it is not in the whisky which the man drinks. Adam was not intoxicated when he sinned. What was the first murder that was ever committed? It was that of a brother shedding the blood of a brother. That was a heinous crime. Was it drink that caused this first awful murder? Was Cain intoxicated? The Bible goes to prove that the real cause of crime is not drink; it is hate. It is jealousy.

What was the great and shameful sin of King David? He coveted his neighbor's wife, but she had a husband to possess her; he arranged for the death of her husband and then he married her. Was it drink that was responsible for that shameful stain upon the reputation of one of the great men of the Bible? No; it was lust, covetousness.

We read in the Bible that frequently the people were in great distress, in rebellion, in riot and in massacre, but never once is it mentioned that all this misery was brought upon them by drink. Look what an insignificant role drink plays in the story of the Bible.

Sodom and Gomorrah were so wicked, it is said, they were visited with fire from Heaven. Yet it is not mentioned that it was from drink. The saloon keeper and the brewery were not responsible for the destruction of those cities. I think that the prohibitionists ought to be generous enough to look at the facts when they attribute all the crime to the drink evil, as they call it. The real causes of crime are in human nature. What do you say was the greatest crime in the New Testament? It was the betrayal of Jesus by Judas. Did he do it on account of drink? No; but for a few pieces of silver, and who would say that it is the free circulation of silver which caused his ruin?

tion held in Kailua, it is said that Fred K. Beckley, one of the agents of the prohibition league, gave a pointed and effective talk to those present. He said that the pastors and pronounced elders and members of the Congregational churches throughout the Islands were not doing according to what they were preaching in their churches. Had they done so, he continued, the country and its people would be better off today.

He concluded by stating that the only people who were earnest in their work were the Mormons, who were now taking an active part in the prohibition work throughout the country districts.

Some of the members of the Committee of One Hundred, he said, were not doing the right thing by the league, in that they do not come forward like men and face the problem openly and fearlessly.

Beckley, while traveling on Hawaii, was received well by his kamaainas. They were glad to hear him make true and pointed statements regarding a certain class of prominent self-styled prohibitionists. Those who realized that they were not doing much work for the success of the prohibition move in the Territory admitted to him (Beckley) that they were shy in going and telling the people to stop drinking and to support prohibition.

The native Hawaiians are anxious to hear Mr. Woolley at a public place, regarding his propaganda. Those who do go to church on Sundays have heard him; but others have not as yet heard him tell the story regarding his proposition.

According to those who have heard him talk prohibition in Kawaiahao church, they think that he has not explained enough to convince them that it is a good thing to have prohibition here in Hawaii.

Another matter that the native Hawaiians would like to hear from him is whether he did actually liken the Hawaiians to Indians when expressing his views before the committee in Washington. Unless Mr. Woolley can explain this matter to the satisfaction of the Hawaiian voters, it is hardly possible that his scheme will work in this Territory, at least, so far as the native voters are concerned. They are indignant at being classed with "Indians."

One of the workers of the prohibition league stated openly, since Bishop Libert made his statements in the Bulletin, that Mr. Woolley, as a malihini, has no right whatever under the sun to interfere with local matters which can be controlled by the Board of Liquor Commissioners. He believed that Woolley was trespassing another man's right and that he had no business to dictate to the Hawaiians to do that which he thinks should be done.

He stated this morning that "the best thing to do was to make a clean and absolute prohibition. He refused to be quoted.

"I don't believe in this kind of prohibition," he said. "If Woolley and others want prohibition, let them advocate strict and absolute prohibition. Let them work against the importation of liquor first and then stop the manufacture and sale of liquor in this country. I don't believe in stopping the manufacture and sale of liquor here and allowing the liquor from abroad to be imported to Hawaii net. That is unjust and unfair. It is taking away and trespassing on another man's right and privilege."

"Are you not supporting Woolley's proposition?" he was asked.

"No, sir," he answered, "because it does not tend to prohibit the importation of liquor from abroad. What is the use of stopping the sale of home-made liquor and allowing the foreign liquor to be imported in a country where there is a prohibition law?" he questioned. "It would do more harm than good. What I am in favor of is prohibition in its entirety."

In conclusion, he stated that if the church people would only work more industriously and prayerfully there would be more good accomplished among their fellow men.

HILO RAILWAY GOING AHEAD

Work on the extension of the Hilo Railway is going forward in first-class shape. Mr. Shingle of the Henry Waterhouse Trust Company, through whom the bonds were floated, received word this morning that ten men of the engineer corps are at work on the extension beyond Hakalau.

The extension of the road south, seven miles beyond Kapoho, to Cant and Blote's lumber mill, is just about completed. Operations of this section of the road will begin in August.

STEAMER TIME was made between Gaviota and Honolulu by the trim American ship Marion Chilcott. This vessel appeared off the harbor early this morning and her log showed that she came down from the coast in eleven and one half days. The Chilcott brings a full cargo of fuel oil for the Associated Oil Company. The vessel was brought inside the harbor by the Matson tug Intrepid and went along side the railway wharf to discharge.

SUFFERED FOR YEARS

Says Peruna Completely Restored Health.

MRS. CHAS. GROS LOUIS.

MRS. CHAS. GROS LOUIS, Indian Lorette, Quebec, Can., writes:

"For years I suffered from a disease that the doctors did not understand.

"One day I read in the paper about your excellent remedy, Peruna. I procured a bottle of it and took it according to directions. It was not long until I observed a change for the better.

"I can say that Peruna has cured me. I could not take any nourishment except milk.

"I will at all times say a good word for Peruna. I hold it in the highest esteem."

Not only women of rank and leisure praise Peruna, but the industrious, useful women engaged in manual toil would not be without Dr. Hartman's world-renowned remedy.

The doctor has prescribed it for many thousand women every year and he never fails to receive a multitude of letters like the above, thanking him for his advice, and especially for the wonderful benefits received from Peruna.

PREPARATIONS FOR ELECTION ENDING

Preparations for the election on July 26 are nearing completion and the force of the office of Territorial Secretary Mott-Smith has been more than busy for the past few days doing the final work.

Large proclamation posters have been prepared and are now ready for distribution, naming the precincts and precinct officers as well as containing a copy of the question to be voted upon, the question being printed in both English and Hawaiian.

Blank ballots for the election have nearly all been sent out to the different precincts and within a few days the last of them will have been received in the places where they are to be used.

ALLEGED GROSS CHEAT

Goo Wan Hoy, a well-known Chinese, had a warrant sworn out for his arrest this morning by another Chinese, Chang Chan. It appears from the complaint that Goo obtained $27 worth of bedsteads in return for a check on the First National Bank. The check is alleged to be worthless, and Goo's arrest on a charge of gross cheat was ordered.

CALIFORNIA OIL INVESTMENTS.

$1000 invested in the stock of the Claremont only a comparatively short time ago is returning $1598 in dividends, and the shares can now be sold for $13,653. This is one of the many instances we can cite you where large returns have been made in oil stocks.

The officers of the Lincoln Mortgage & Loan Co. make frequent trips through the oil fields to inform themselves at first hand of the condition of properties whose stock they offer to the public. They are the largest dealers in Oil stocks in California.

A branch office has been established here for the accommodation of their many clients on these Islands, who are now able to make their purchases of oil stocks in Honolulu.

Of the active low-priced stocks we recommend the immediate purchase of shares of the Ventura Oil Development Co. at 15c. each. The progress of this company has been very rapid and its present outlook indicates a quick advance in the price of these shares in the near future.

GASOLINE GOSSIP GLEANED AT GARAGES

The von Hamm-Young Company have just received a carload of the well known Stevens-Duryea automobiles. This car is one of the most popular of American cars, having perfect records of 50,000 and more miles to their credit, with very small bills for repairs.

This carload includes one Model X 5-passenger car, one Model X 7-passenger car, and one Model A-A 6-cylinder, 7-passenger touring car.

The Model A-A Stevens is the latest creation of the Stevens-Duryea factory. It embodies all the splendid points of former models, with the addition of a great many improvements which make this car superior to most and equal to the best American cars built today.

A great deal of interest is shown in the arrival of this carload, especially as the Model A-A is the first car of this type received by The von Hamm-Young Company.

The Cadillac, handled by The von Hamm-Young Company, is not only one of the most popular cars in Honolulu, but it is one of the best known and most talked of cars all over the mainland. A special honor has been conferred on the Cadillac, as per the following information just received:

The city of New York has again paid the Cadillac Thirty the highest possible honor, in the form of an order for ten of these cars for the municipal service. This is in addition to and closely follows an order for four Cadillacs for the municipal department of the Borough of Brooklyn.

Cadillac cars are by no means unknown in the city service. Fourteen Cadillac ambulances are in use by the hospitals; and three had previously been in use by the Brooklyn departments. Brooklyn was the first borough of greater New York to adopt motor cars as an adjunct to the performence of municipal duties. Twelve cars, of different makes, were installed. Included in this number were the three Cadillacs. A very systematic and accurate record was kept of the cost of operating and maintaining very largely due to the exceptional showing made by the Cadillacs that the New York order for ten cars was placed, in its entirety, with the Cadillac Company.

Of the ten cars, six are to be equipped with demi-tonneau bodies, and four with five pascsenger touring bodies.

Word has just been received that the Cadillac Thirty finished the Atlanta to New York Good Roads Tour with a perfect score.

Out of more than sixty cars in the run, the Cadillac was one of the only six to finish a mark to its discredit. The car was entered by D. K. McColl, a cotton merchant of Bennettsville, S. C., and driven by George Bailey, of Greenville.

The von Hamm-Young Company has sold another Cadillac this week to Mr. Wm. McGerrow of Puunene, Maui. This is the second Cadillac which Mr. McGerrow has bought in four weeks. It shows what great confidence he has in this car.

Among the other purchasers of a Cadillac during the week is Mr. A. W. Eames, who learned to handle the car in a day and drove it the next day to his home at Wahiawa. Several other sales of Cadillacs have been made, but the purchasers of same wish their names withheld for the present.

The Packard, also handled by The von Hamm-Young Company, is keeping to the foreground as much as ever. The first 1911 car of this popular make is due to arrive here inside of ten days. The arrival of this car is looked forward to with a great deal of interest by automobile enthusiasts. It will be the first Packard with the famous fore-door body, which is the standard body for the 1911 season. It is understood, though, that the Packard factory will furnish the regular two-door body if desired by the purchaser.

During the week The von Hamm-Young Company sold one of the well known Stoddard-Dayton runabouts to Mr. C. M. Hottel, who claims that his car will beat any other car of equal power in hill climbing.

Further sales were a Buick, which was delivered by The von Hamm-Young Company to Mr. Edwards of Naalehu. Another Buick has been sold to Mr. John Hogg of the Kauai Garage Company, and a third goes to the Volcano Stables.

The von Hamm-Young Company have received the following interesting information from the Pope-Hartford factory:

The annual hill-climbing contest of the Westchester Automobile Club of Ossing, N. Y, was held on Saturday last. Sunset Hill is the scene of this yearly event. The course is seven tenths o fa mile long with a grade averaging eleven per cent. Thirty-one cars of the leading makes participated on this climb. In event No. 4 for gasolene car or chasis up to 300 cu. in. displacement Mr. H. E. Holt of New York City and Mr. B. C. Finke also of New York entered their Pope-Hartford runabouts. Mr. Finke made the ascent in 1m 19s taking first place and Mr. Holt captured second. His time was only a few seconds slower than that of the first car. Both of these cars were entered and driven purely for the sport of the game but at the same time competed against cars entered and driven by factory representatives. Both Mr. Holt and Mr. Finke are automobile enthusiasts through and through and have so much confidence in their machines that they are willing to entrust their safety to their mad ascents up steep and tortuous inclines.

During the week The von Hamm-Young Company shipped one of the popular Overland runabouts to Mr. McDonald of Lahainaluna. Mr. McDonald is very enthusiastic over his little car, which he claims can take any hill on Maui on the high gear.

The garage and repair department of The von Hamm-Young Company have had a very busy week, there being as many as fifteen cars there for repairs at one time. Acting Superintendent Mr. Shaner is kept up to his eyes with work, and the new electrical expert, Mr. McCorkle, who is at the head of the electric battery charging department and the magneto work, has already made a great many friends, who swear by his work.

Next week the new salesroom of The von Hamm-Young Company will be opened. This salesroom is one of the finest of its kind and will no doubt be appreciated by the friends and patrons of this well known firm.

At the Associated garage all is bustle, and every department is kept going hard all the time. The Hudson car is going off fast, and this week a roadster of that make was sold to W. Dickson, of New York. The car is painted battleship gray and is a handsome looking machine.

A Chalmers pony tonneau was purchased by Mr. Shiner of Maui, and it was shipped to him during the week. Another buyer was G. H. Behn, who bought a Premier "40" to use in the rent business.

The Associated garage fitted out an ambulance for the Board of Health, and it is of the Gramm make. It will hold many patients and has stretchers that fit inside the car.

The Hudson cars have been going out so fast that the number alloted to the Associated garage have all been sold already, and another lot have been bespoken for shipment. The Hudson Twenty is a popular little car and many of the them are to be seen all over the islands.

The Chalmers is a car that is admired everywhere, and the sale of them has been big. Many of the cars are to be seen on the other islands of the group and all the owners of them swear by the make.

The Schuman garage people have been busy lately and all the cars handled by that firm have been in active demand. The Mitchell car is becoming a great favorite and the new type of machine is as good as any that can be seen anywhere.

Among the sales at the Schuman this week were, a 30 Mitchell to D. B. Maconachie, and a Mitchell tourabout to C. Bellina of the Club Stables. Four Mitchells arrived from the Coast on the Lurline and they have all been bespoken.

The ever popular Locomobile is holding its own among the autoists of Honolulu, and one of them came in on the Lurline. The Locomobile is admired by everybody and the easy running engine is a treat to listen to.

The Winton Six is rapidly coming to the front and many of these cars are now to be seen around town. There were formerly a good number of Wintons about, but for some time the factory has not been shipping as many as usual to Hawaii. However, the agents are on the job now, and the Winton will, doubtless soon be seen all over the islands.

The Rambler is another car that is selling fast and the records of the machine are so good that all owners of other cars have to take notice of the Rambler, which is handled by H. A. Wilder of this city.

Prince Wells, president of the Louisville Dealers' Association, and for twenty-five years a representative of Rambler products, first directing Rambler bicycle sales in Louisville and for ten years in charge of Rambler automobile sales there, will lead the battalion of Rambler dealers who will gather at Kenosha within the month to secure their allotment of Rambler cars for 1911.

In point of loyalty and long service rendered the sales organization of Thomas B. Jeffery & Company is perhaps unequaled.

W. K. Cowan of Los Angeles, E. R. Cumbe of Denver and L. G. Martin of Pittsburg compete with Wells of Louisville for the honor of having longest served Rambler owners in their respective territories.

Not far behind these men in point of years devoted to the automobile business are Rambler representatives from all other important sections of the country.

The strength of the Rambler sales organization has been attributed to its independence. In this respect the sales and manufacturing policies of the company are identical.

This car is exclusively handled by many dealers, with the result that the rambler man in every town assumes the position of a factory representative. The majority of them maintain stock parts depots for the convenience and service of owners and, with the backing and prestige of Thomas B. Jeffery & Company, their success has been as rapid as that of the company and few changes have been necessary.

Through mud hub-deep and in the midst of a severe hailstorm, a Hudson captured first honors in the fifteen-hour New Jersey non-stop endurance run. It finished with a perfect score. The distance was 290 miles.

News of the Hudson victory was conveyed to the Hudson Motor Car Company in a telegram from its New York dealer, the A. E. Ranney Company, as follows:

"Hudson 'Single Entry' finished with perfect score, fifteen hour New Jersey non-stop endurance run. Road covered with mud hub-deep and during the worst hailstorm seen here in years; course covered 290 miles; most severe test ever held in New Jersey and probably in the East. Hudson was the only perfect score car to comply with New Jersey laws regarding non-use of chain and finished without a puncture. Most notable feature of Hudson was its perfect cooling system. Other cars dropped out due to over-heating by using first and second and gears."

"Billy" Bruner driving a Hudson car in a ten-mile race at Shenandoah, Iowa, last week, nosed out a victory in a close ride with Death.

Over a one half mile oval dirt track, unbanked, the race had progressed into the fifth mile without particular incident other than the warm pace set by two leaders, the Hudson and a National "40," these two being far in advance of all other competitors.

The National was setting the pace for the Hudson which was scarcely a length behind, when a guest of wind raised a cloud of dust, totally obscuring the vision of Bruner. Before his car had penetrated through the dust his left front wheel struck the fence with a resounding crash and turned his car completely around.

Few in the grand stand could see what had happened, while others were certain that a spill had occurred. Bruner, however, managed to keep his car right side up, and turning around, took pluckily after the other contestants, all of whom had gone by him.

Passing the grand stand on the next lap, he was given a round of applause. As his car gradually gained upon his opponents, the entire assemblage arose and amid deafening shouts his car overtook one after the other. He closed all but a small gap between his car and the National. The latter won the race, with the Hudson second and the balance of the field badly scattered.

After the race, the Hudson was examined and found to be in a badly damaged condition.

From Los Angeles there comes to the Cadillac Motor Car Company the detailed story of a 15,000 mile trip of a Cadillac Thirty, which for severity and rough usage has seldom been excelled, even on a Glidden tour. One of the incidents of the trip was the breaking of a bridge, which let the car fall into a swollen mountain stream.

The car is driven by A. P. Harris, who uses it in his business as a means of transportation over the western half of the United States. When it arrived at Los Angeles, it had been on the road six months, starting from Chicago, and calls had been made at Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake, Ogden, Reno, Portland, Seattle, Spokane and San Francisco. Harris has averaged 2,000 miles a month, and looks upon a thousand-mile run as a mere pleasure jaunt.

On the trip from Omaha to Denver occurred the most exciting incident of the tour. Rain was falling so continuously that streams were flooded and roads almost obliterated. After driving ten miles through hub-deep mud, Harris came to a rushing stream. The bridge, it was easy to see, was unstable and trembling in every timber. He decided to risk it, and started across the bridge on low gear. Within 20 feet of the far side, the bridge gave way.

Harris leaped from the car and gained the bank in safety. The Cadillac went to the bottom, and stayed there all night. In the morning Harris secured six horses, dragged it to land, cleaned the motor and gears of mud, and the next morning was on his way.

This was the only occasion on the entire 15,000 miles that it was necessary to resort to horses.

Joseph R. Spencer, well known throughout the Territory, died last night and the funeral will be conducted tomorrow afternoon from the Masonic Temple by Oceanic Lodge, of which he was a member.

Mr. Spencer was born in East Greenwich, Rhode Island in 1830 and came to Hawaii in 1851. In the early part of his life he was engaged in the whaling business and afterward in the merchant service.

Mr. Spencer is survived by a widow and two daughters, Mrs. Mitchell of New York and Mrs. Moody of Honolulu.

Mr. Spencer's brothers, Charles N. and Thomas Spencer, were widely known throughout the Territory.

IN BUSINESS CIRCLES

Although it attracted comparatively little attention from the people generally, the event of the past week of the greatest purport to the future of Honolulu was the brief visit of the Secretary of War, Mr. Dickinson.

When one stops to consider how much influence Mr. Taft exerted while Secretary of War for the development of our national defenses in the Pacific, he should certainly be impressed with what Secretary Dickinson may do for or against us during his term of office. A great many seem to believe that Mr. Taft, as President, will see that his plans are carried out regardless of what the present incumbent of the War Office may think. This is true to a certain extent, but the fact remains, nevertheless, that a Secretary in touch and in sympathy with the aspirations of a Territory may do a great deal toward forwarding the operations of the department for a speedy completion of the plans that may be put down as broadly national.

Officially Mr. Dickinson was put through the paces in lively style. It was most unfortunate that something went wrong in the scheme for the final event of the evening, and Honolulu presented the dubious exhibit of turning out less than one hundred people to listen to an address by and to meet the Secretary of War of the United States. In view of the pow-wows the town has made over Japanese and Chinese potentates and dignitaries from other lands, Dickinson might form his own ideas of what sort of Americans the people of Honolulu are, unless he is of a charitable turn of mind and realizes that someone must have blundered.

Some declare that greetings to high officials of the government have nothing to do with business. It is always good business to show respect for the officials of your country and to show them exceptional courtesy.

Mr. Dickinson did not say much, but when he reaffirmed the announcement that the Government intends to locate a larger force of men in the forts and barracks of this city, he issued another guarantee of the future prosperity of the city of Honolulu.

Building Barracks.

Coincident with the coming of Mr. Dickinson is the announcement by Colonel Schuyler that all points of difference regarding the site for the cavalry post at Leilehua have been settled and within a comparatively short time the construction of the permanent post, to cost over $200,000, will begin. The site of the permanent post is to include a large share of the present location.

Pearl Harbor Work.

Walter Dillingham returned on the same steamer that brought Secretary Dickinson. On the Lurline, following, a large quantity of large machinery for the dredging operations at Pearl Harbor was brought to port, and as all the appropriations sought from Congress for the proper forwarding of the Pearl Harbor work were passed as requested by the departments, the next year or more should witness great activity in that part of the island, an activity the influence of which is felt very materially in the city of Honolulu.

Residents of Honolulu do not yet realize the great amount of permanent work, assuring an increased permanent population, that is going on and will continue under the Federal government on this island, and in the immediate vicinity of this city.

Federal Building.

Letters from the Delegate received this week give a full explanation of what has been done in connection with the additional $350,000 for the extension of the Mahuka site. Congress has authorized that this amount be transferred from the $850,000 appropriated for the building, to the site fund, and the money is thus made available without immediately increasing the total appropriation for our Federal building. Just what will happen now is a matter of conjecture. A great many believe that the $350,000 which was the Governor's secret estimate, based on the tax returns, will not be sufficient to meet the just claims of such concerns as Hall & Son, who have a long unexpired lease, and Castle & Cooke, whose reconstruction of the Cummins block is now going on under a lease very recently closed. On the other hand, some business experts, who claim to have had experience in condemnation proceedings by the Government, assert that the owners of property and of leases mixed up in this site extension can not maintain any claim against the Government larger than their taxation returns. All that is now known positively is that there is a great deal of argument and trouble ahead, and there is still the feeling that the supporters of the civic center for Palace Square are expecting a tie-up and an eventual turn to the Irwin site.

Congress was very good to Hawaii in the matter of appropriations, but there is no certainty that it has settled the Federal building site so that the site will be ready for the plans promised by the architects to be finished by the first of the year.

Bank Statements.

Bank and trust company statements as of June 30 have attracted attention in business circles this week, and without exception the financial exhibits of the institutions reporting up to the present day are most gratifying. Never in the history of banking has there been such a strong showing as that presented by Bishop & Co., the oldest banking institution of the Territory and the first to make its report. Relatively satisfactory was the last statement of the Claus Spreckels Company, which on the first of July became the Bank of Honolulu. The First National also presented a splendid financial condition in its statement as of July 8, for the youngest banking institution of the city.

Trust companies are in line with the banks. Statements have been published of the Henry Waterhouse Trust Company, that has handled some of the largest deals of the year; the Hawaiian Trust Company, that is always steady and conservative; and the Bishop Trust Company, the youngest in its class.

All the financial institutions show an increase of deposits and a very liberal margin of coin carried for the protection of their clients. It is understood that there has been a steady increase in the number of depositors as well as the size of the deposits. Returns from the sugar crop that are steadily coming in ease up the money market, but the source of the real financial strength of any community is found in a large number of comparatively small depositors. That is what Honolulu has at the present day. The withdrawals of large sums by the "large" customers was what caused the unprecedented money shortage last spring.

Hilo promises to be well supplied with banking facilities. On the first of July the Bishop & Co. branch bank opened, with Mr. Watson, recently with the Audit Company of Hawaii, in charge. The Hilo Trust Company, of which Mr. Z. K. Myers is the commanding factor, is also nearly ready for business, and cooperates with the First Bank of Hilo. These institutions should give Hilo and the Island of Hawaii just enough competition to build up the country and prevent a financial monopoly with which Hilo was at one time threatened.

Stock Trading.

Business on the Stock Exchange has been fairly good though it cannot be classed as lively. Honokaa and Olaa are the stocks in which the largest dealing has been done, although there has been a steady trading in Oahu at 32.75. Honokaa sold at 19.50 the first of the week and under the influence of the new demand is now held at 20. Olaa took a turn Thursday and the 5.25 stock was cleaned up. Friday the stock sold at 5.375 and advanced on board sales to 5.50. Despite the fact that Waialua plantation was never in better physical condition and never had so much gravity water to draw upon, that stock has declined during the week and closed on Friday at 130.50 bid.

Honokaa is advancing under the strength given it by the assurance of its water supply through the completion of the lower Hamakua Ditch and also the excellent showing of the crop that will be taken off next year. With no more fear of drouth Honokaa will be one of the popular and strong plantations of the list.

Pacific Sugar Mill under August Ahrens management is also in fine condition and there would undoubtedly be considerable activity in that stock if it were not so closely held. The capital stock of that company was increased to $750,000 the first of July. Of the $250,000 increase, one half is paid in cash and one half goes to the stockholders as a stock dividend.

The progress that was promised for Olaa early in the season is materializing, and this is making the stock popular with those who still believe in sugar stocks as opposed to the many outside propositions that have been brought into the market.

Olaa should close the season with a reduction of at least $200,000 in its indebtedness. Some claim that it will be $300,000. This will be brought about by a decrease in the cost of production of a ton of sugar as well as by the increase in the price of sugar. The reduced cost of production is of course one of the very important features that gives the stock strength. Olaa has gone through its experimental periods and is now handling cane adapted to the several sections of the property and gaining the best results from the soil. In some instances the production of sugar per acre has been doubled by a change in the variety of cane. Once it was thought that the lands of the higher levels would have to be abandoned, and Puna would be the salvation of the property. Now Puna is producing well and a variety of cane has been found that gives a high yield per acre on the higher levels.

The only stocks reported sold other than those mentioned were thirty-seven Hawaiian Sugar at 40 ten Ewa at 34, twenty Brewery at 18 and five Mutual Telephone at 15.

Sugar Prices.

Raw sugar prices have advanced to 4.33 and beets to a parity of 5.15. Private advices from New York are such as to create a fair degree of confidence in a rising and firm price of raw sugars. Europe still holds to its high level, but no one can tell whether the slight shading in price the latter part of the week is the beginning of another drop during which the speculators are cleaning up, or a slight sag previous to a spurt that will set a new figure for "highs" for the year. There seems not the slightest doubt however that the Bulletin's prediction made early in the season, that the crop will be marketed at an average of 4.25, will be fulfilled.

Real estate, and especially the suburban property of the Kaimuki Land Company, has been very active. There is a general movement toward the Kaimuki section and the number of home builders among the buyers is on the increase.

Judge Robinson made a report for the Land Court for the end of the year as of June 30. He shows that the total area of land registered from Oct. 13, 1903 to June 30, 1910 was 72,357,586 acres valued at $1,739,722. The registration for the year ending June 30 was 63,316 acres valued at $560,660. The value of the Torrens land title is being better understood and the day is not far distant when all the property of the city will have its title establishing through this court.

More Steamships.

News comes from San Francisco that the Pacific Mail is contemplating the construction of additional passenger liners of the most modern type for the Oriental run, with a stop at Honolulu. These will help build up the tourist trade and should also effectually quiet the demand for suspension of the American laws for the protection of shipping.

New Promoter.

W. H. McInerny has been added to the membership of the Promotion Committee and he is certain to be a vigorous promoter of aggressive campaigns. McInerny first showed what sort of a promoter he is when he took hold of the Trans Pacific yacht race. At times he has been the back bone and the ballast of the whole proposition. The success of the venture and the increasing interest each year is the best proof of what McInerny can do.

The will of the late Alexander Young was filed for probate this week. Mr. Young leaves an estate valued at $1,125,785. Mr. Young made his money in Hawaii and reinvested it for the advancement of the interests of the country that had dealt kindly with him. If all the men who have made fortunes in Hawaii showed their gratitude as practically as did Mr. Young, Honolulu would be growing more rapidly even that it is today.

The Kentwell property at Waikiki and Chinatown has been sold and was filed for record during the week. Mrs. Sophie Cressaty is named as the purchaser and $15,000 the consideration. Cottages will be built on the beach property.

Island Steamer Changes.

Important changes in the schedule of the Inter-Island steamers will go into effect next week. The Mauna Kea is to leave Honolulu at 10 o'clock Tuesday and by cutting out the landing at Makena arrive in Hilo early Wednesday morning. The Claudine is to cut down its time on the return trip from Hilo and arrive in Honolulu on Wednesday instead of Thursday morning. These are improvements for quicker dispatch and better accommodation of passengers.

Public attention will be very much centered on the Prohibition campaign in the next two weeks. Although comparatively little is said of it in the open, it is obvious that any measure of success for the Prohibition cause will have a very damaging and possibly disastrous effect on the labor conditions in the islands. The people who have been brought here to labor do not take kindly to the idea of Prohibition. They all use liquors moderately and regard a stimulant as a necessity and food. If the conditions of life in the islands are made irksome for those people, instead of remaining as permanent residents as the continued prosperity of the islands demands, will leave.

Prohibition will do more to stir up discontent among the working men of these islands than was done by the four leading agitators of the last years strike, who were let out of jail the other day under commutation of sentence.

"Resolved, That we, the enrolled Republican voters of the Ninth Precinct, Fifth District, hereby pledge our allegiance to the party organization and follow no leader in party politics except he head of the Republican organization."

Another resolution offered by Eli J. Crawford, was carried, as follows:

"Whereas, The Hon. Jonah K. Kalanianaole, Delegate to Congress has, through his efforts and courteous ways, been enabled to secure liberal appropriations from the federal government for various works now in progress of construcion and some which are in time to be construced, and

"Whereas, We deem it right and proper at this, our biennial gathering, to express our appreciation for what our Honorable Delegate has accomplished for this Territory; therefore,

False Reports.

An evidence of the absolute unreliability of the morning paper's reports of the Republican precinct club meetings is given in the report of the meeting of the Thirteenth of the Fifth. The report says that a boom was started for Wm. E. Paikuli for representative. As a matter of fact the name of Paikuli was not brought before the meeting. Mr. Judd proposed that the club endorse S. P. Correa for renomination for the House of Representatives where he has already served faithfully for two terms. While it is probable that Mr. Paikuli will come up later as a candidate for Supervisor, he did not figure in last night's proceedings.

THE TURKEY AND CHICKEN

(By Joseph R. Farrington.)

A turkey will succumb to most any disease, if infested with vermin, as the system is already weakened and they haven't the strength to resist them. If gorged or overfed while young, it causes a diseased liver, which results in bowel trouble and usually ends in death, or, if the opult should recover, it always remains a puny, stunted turkey, and one would much rather it was dead. Trukeys while young, easily contract disease from other fowls. For this and other seasons they should not be allowed to run with other poultry, until they are older and stronger.

Nothing keeps a turkey in good health so much as free range. They must have free range to grow and develop. We were once asked how much free range ought a turkey to have. Our answer was that an 80-acre farm was none too much for them, sometimes they trespass on a neighbor's 80, which frequently causes an outbreak of a well known disease called bad blood, in which more than the turkeys are affected. In this case you probably will have a remedy of your own. All dead animals, or fowls, should be promptly burned or deeply buried, as in all dead bodies ptomaine poison develops and if eaten by turkeys it causes paralysis of the nerves or limber neck, as it is usually called, for which there are very few remedies. Anything that will stimulate the nerves will save them.

It is probably a well known fact that a fowl does not perspire, the waste of the system in a large measure being carried off in the vapor of the breath, which is far more rapid than many would suppose. The heart of a turkey beats 150 times per minute, which causes a rapid respiration and demands twice the amount of air, in proportion to its weight. Thus it will be clearly seen how very great the demand for fresh air during their sleeping hours. We have seen turkeys that were taught to go in the poultry house and roost with the chickens, but they were not the strong, healthy turkeys as those that were allowed to roost in the open air, on trees or fences, both winter and summer. Possibly they may live, but we want them thrifty as well.

The term cholera is applied to a disease which, though it varies in different parts of the country, is everywhere accompanied by a violent diarrhoea and is rapidly fatal. In such an outbreak among your turkeys separate the sick ones from the well, and at once give a change of food, which should be of the most nutritious character, combined with some stimulant, as ginger or cayenne pepper or a tonic of iron put in the drinking water.

Turpentine put in the drinking water of the well ones acts as a disinfectant and prevents the disease from spreading.

A continual feeding of corn with the lack of grit or coarse sand, will sometimes cause an outbreak of this trouble, which attacks the whole flock in general. The disease appears to be epidemic, but the so-called cholera very seldom makes its appearance. A subscriber writes that she has turkeys that have swollen heads and would like to know if this is a germ disease and how long it will take to stamp it out. This disease may be caused from germs as there are very few diseases that do not originate from germs, bacilli, or in some microbe form, and unless it is fully developed, it can be stamped out with very simple remedies. In common words, this swollen head is nothing more or less than colds, caused mostly from exposure, and is the first symptom of roup, one of the most formidable diseases we have. If taken in its first stages it is quite easy to control, but if allowed to develop is one of the hardest to contend with. At first they begin by sneezing and their heads swell. To neglect this trouble at this stage would result in roup in a short time. The membrane of the air passage, tear tubes and throat becomes inflamed and when so much so as to close the air tube, the discharge becomes acrid and roup is the result. To prevent this, it is necessary to check these mucous discharges.

We found that turpentine rubbed on their neck and head, swabbing the throat with the same acted as a counter-irritant, and worked like magic, demonstrating the fact that this disease could be checked in its first stages by a very simple remedy.

In raising turkeys, we prefer setting turkey eggs under some motherly hen whose brooding qualities are assured, says a correspondent of the National Stockman. The turkey hen is of too strolling disposition. Twenty-seven days are required for incubation. If the weather is warm no especial care is necessary during the time the hen leaves the nest to seek food. The best time for hatching is May, if it can be managed, especially if the birds are wanted for the Thanksgiving market. Eleven eggs may safely be given to a large fluffy hen, but nine are enough for an ordinary sized hen.

As soon as the poults are hatched, which is all about the same time—being much more uniform in this respect than chicks—remove with their mother to a new coop if possible. Let it be warm and rain proof; one with a southern front is best, as it will admit both sun and air on pleasant days. A storm door must be provided for rainy days. If the coop has been used before thoroughly fumigate and whitewash it. Select an elevated, well drained place. Confine them five days, when they may be allowed to go out for an hour or so; but do not allow them to become tired out. Visit each coop every evening and see that every chick is covered by the hen—many fatalities arise from this cause—the silly things will chill within a foot of the hen, so during the first few days watch them closely.

During the first few weeks they should be fed at least five times a day, and only what will be eaten up clean, using saucers or shallow dishes for this purpose.—Exchange.

A noted breeder says since he has used medicated charcoal for his chicks they have never had any trouble with diarrhoea.

The Leghorn has become very popular because of its fine laying qualities. It is a very light breed, therefore not being very good for market purposes. This breed is known as the greatest layers, their eggs being large and white.

The chick matures early, being very hardy, and the pullet starts in laying when five or six months old. They have yellow legs, and with a red comb and the chicken, of whatever variety it may be, is a pretty bird.

A drawback is their nervousness which makes it hard to confine them. A free range is very much appreciated by them and they can pick up half their food when running around.

It is very important to give chicks and chickens grit and water.

When you have liceless coops you have diseasesless chickens.

Lawn clippings make fine scratch material to mix the chickens' food in.

Whitewash is a very good disinfectant and if possible whitewash your coops from three to four times a year.

When changing your nesting material burn the old straw.

Picked Poultry Points.

Roosters fight when hens are laying. Seldom otherwise.

A cold draft will stop hens laying as quickly as anything in the world—sure.

We don't sell all our eggs. Don't you think they are as good for us to eat as for other folks?

If your chicks are ever troubled with gapes, look after the earth worms. They are the common carriers of the worms and eggs.

Can't you raise a pound of goose meat as cheaply as a pound of pork? If you have a piece of waste land, with water in it, why not raise geese?

Someone is advising to make hen houses low, says you can't expect hens to warm up all creation with the breath from their bodies. It's good sense.

Windows are good to make the hen houses light. But they are seldom made tight enough to exclude drafts of cold air. If close to roosts, you run risks.—Practical Farmer.

Poultry Terms.

A cockerel is a male bird less than a year old.

A cock is a male bird over a year old.

A pullet is a female bird less than a year old.

A hen is a female bird over a year old.

A yearling is generally one counted as having laid 12 months.

A setting of eggs is 13, although many poultrymen have increased it to 15.

A broiler is a bird weighing two pounds or less and from six to twelve weeks old.

A spring chicken is a young bird weighing over two pounds.

A capon is the male bird deprived of its generative organs for the purpose of improving the weight and delicacy of its carcass.

A stewing chicken weighs about three pounds.

A roosters weighs four or five pounds.

A poult is a turkey in its first year.

A poularde is a pullet, deprived of the power of producing eggs, with the object of great size.

A trio is a male and two females.

A breeding-pen is generally made up of from six to 14 females and one male.

The male chick is called a cock the male goose a gander, the male duck a drake, and the male turkey a tom.—Produce Review.

Cure For Gapes.

One poultry raiser says in the Farmer's Guide that he shuts his chicks affected with gapes in a box and sifts lime and sulphur on them. This will cure them.

Another poultryman gives this method: Take four or five chicks and place in large candy pail or a common pail keg and place over top a piece of cheese cloth. Then sift a tablespoonful of lime in on them. They will do a good deal of fluttering but you need not doctor them again. Do not leave them in keg more than two or three minutes. I have used this cure for 15 years and have never lost any chickens from gapes. I also use lime in the drinking water.

Early hatched chicks seem to do better than late hatched ones.

Poultry diseases are usually easily stopped if tended to at an early stage.

HOW TO VOTE AGAINST PROHIBITION

When you receive your ballot at the polling place on July 26—the day of the plebiscite to determine whether Hawaii is to continue under the best liquor law in the United States or be afflicted with a Woolley-made statute—the voting form will appear as follows:

Yes Ae ☐

No Aole ☐

To vote against the proposed Woolley-Taurston law place a cross mark in the square opposite the words "No" and its Hawaiian equivalent "Aole."

THIS IS A VOTE IN SUPPORT OF THE EXISTING LIQUOR TRAFFIC CONTROL LAW, ADMINISTERED IN EACH COUNTY OF THE TERRITORY BY A BOARD OF FIVE COMMISSIONERS, APPOINTED BY THE GOVERNOR OF HAWAII.

We can not believe that there is a sensible man living who would put his own money into the purchase of any other than a DE LAVAL cream separator, for his own use, if he would but first avail of the opportunity open to everyone to SEE and TRY an improved DE LAVAL machine before buying any other.

It is hardly possible to say more than this. It is hardly possible to put the simple truth in plainer words. It would hardly seem possible to say it more convincingly.

OUR REPRESENTATIVE
The Hawaii, which will attempt to win the trans-Pacific Yacht Race from San Pedro to Honolulu. The race started this morning and the hopes of Honolulu are centered on the local craft.

YACHT RACE.

BOATS START OFF TODAY

HAWAII SHOULD DO WELL IN TRANSPACIFIC EVENT

Trip Down May Be Made in Fifteen Days or Less—Wilder Confident That Hawaii Will Sail Well.

Once again the transpacific yacht race is under way and this morning the boats that are to compete in the long distance sailing race got under way. The Hawaii is thought to have a good chance in this year's race, and it would delight everybody if our representative were to win the big event.

Captain Wilder will do his best to bring the Hawaii in first and his crew may be depended on to do their level best in every department. All the crew are experienced and some of them will be making their third trip in the Hawaii. The boat herself is much lighter than she was in the first race she took part in and her sail area has been much enlarged.

The Hawaii took 15 days 3 hours 23 minutes and 30 seconds to make the trip down last time and it is thought by those in a position to know that she will beat that time easily in the present race.

The Hawaii and the Gwendolyn are the only boats that were in the former race, and it will be interesting to see how the pair finish this year as compared with last.

The Sweetheart's performance will be watched with interest and the yawl should sail well in tan race. The Winzome ,the Siwash and Mollilou also are looked to do well in the race, and as they all receive handicaps from the Hawaii, they may have a chance of winning out in the greatest yacht race of the year.

The standing of the Military League ball tegms are as follows:

	G.	W	L.	Pct.
Cavalry	12	8	4	.666
Marines	14	9	5	.642
Hospital Corps	10	6	4	.600
N. G. H.	12	7	5	.583
Fort Shafter	14	4	10	.285
Fort Ruger	12	3	9	.250

This afternoon at the League grounds the Fort Shafter and Fort Ruger ball teams will meet on the diamond, and the nines will fight it out to see which is going to be last in the Military series. A second game will be played between the Hospital Co. and the Chattanooga team and it should be a great struggle.

The Wasedas are getting used to the "skin" diamond at the Athletic Park, and they should now be better able to field grounders than they were at first.

ATHLETIC PARK.

PLENTY BALL GAMES PLANNED

WASEDAS VS. MARINES TODAY —TO PLAY P. A. C. TOMORROW

First Game This Afternoon Between J. A. Cs. and Oahu College Alumni—Marines Determined to Win Match.

There will be plenty doing in the way of sport today, this evening and tomorrow, for baseball, boxing and other stunts are to be pulled off. This afternoon at the Athletic Park there will be two games of ball, and the second one, which will be between the Wasedas and the Marines, should be a peach of a struggle. The Marines are determined to put it over the Wasedas, and the local team will have the sympathy of a big bunch of fans this afternoon.

The half-wets should make the Japanese extend themselves to the limit today, and no matter how the game goes, there should be a great afternoon, there will doubtless be a two teams.

The Marine supporters have arranged to have a big bunch of their mates at the game, and the rooting should be the best ever. Although most people have to work this aft- exhibition of baseball given by the great crowd present when the umpire calls "Play ball!"

The first game will be between the J. A. C. and the Oahu College Alumni, and it should be a good one if the J. A. Cs. have their proper nine. All the present day students of the college will doubtless be on hand to root for the men who in the past upheld the honor of Punahou, and the scene should be an animated one at the Athletic Park this afternoon.

Then tomorrow afternoon the usual big crowd which attends Sunday games will be about doubled, as all the fans of the island will be on hand to watch the Wasedas go up against the Portuguese Athletics. All Punchbowl will be present in force, and the plantations will yield a big crowd of Portuguese, who will root for their team in a manner that will astonish all the rest of the fans.

The Athletic Park will be occupied on Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday next week, and the Wasedas will go up against teams from the cruisers, Military league, Oahu league and the team from the Oahu College.

The park can accommodate a great crowd of fans nowadays, and there will be need for plenty of room tomorrow, as a record crowd is expected to attend. The Wasedas are improving every day, and the practice they are getting at the park is doing them a lot of good.

DATES OF MILITARY GAMES WITH WASEDAS

Arrangements have been made whereby a picked team from all of the military forces of these Islands is to play a series of three games with the Waseda team. These games are to be played at the Athletic Park (near Aala Park) on the following dates:

First game on Thursday, July 14th at 3:30 p. m.

Second game on Thursday, July 21st at 3:30 p. m.

Third game on Thursday, July 26th at 3:30 p. m.

To those who are fond of baseball this is expected to be the rarest treat of the season for there is no doubt but that the team that has been picked by the Military Athletic Association to represent the service on the above dates, is the strongest nine in the Territory. Those who have kept up with the Wasedas know their class of playing and it is thoroughly recognized that there will be no walk-away on either side.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team will play the Shafter team on July 20, and it is probable that a return game will be played on August 6.

BOXING AT ALOHA PARK THIS EVENING

Three Good Bouts Will Be Staged—Ironman McCollough to Tackle Hoao.

There will be stoush unlimited at the Aloha Park tonight, and three fine bouts will be staged. The main event will be the ten round go between Hoao and Ironman McCollough, and it should be a great contest. Both men are trained to the minute, and both are confident of victory. That being the case, the fans should be treated to a great exhibition of the "Bosker" art.

Then the two other scraps will be good also, and the knockout drops may be handed out by any one of the four pugs. The go between Wahilani and Terrien should be a merry one, and the native boy will try and make up for his defeat by McCollough some weeks ago.

The sailors will be present in force to root for Crowley and Yediin, and the two Jackies should put up a great fight over the six round course that they are scheduled to go.

BIG INCREASE SHOWN IN ALASKA'S POPULATION

SEATTLE, June 27.—The Alaska census is almost completed. It shows a big increase in the population, according to A. N. Evans, in charge of the bureau of education, including the census work, who arrived here yesterday.

Evan says the entire census is taken with the exception of the districts included in the Diomedes islands, the north arctic coast east of Point Barrow, the St. Lawrence islands and the Nunivak islands.

The United States revenue cutter Bear is on a cruise to those districts, and before the end of the summer season the entire Alaskan census will have been completed.

SOME LITTLE STORIES OF JACK JOHNSON IN CAMP

Negro Reckoned That He Could Fight at Any Altitude—Change of Scene Affects Some Pugs.

The old saying that "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown" is being brought home to Jack Johnson, says Douglas Erskine in the Examiner. For the first time since he defeated Tommy Burns in Australia a year and half ago and annexed the right to add "champion of the world" to his name, Jack is feeling the hardships that go with an exalted position.

All the champions who have preceded Jack on the pugilistic throne have had their troubles with the men of the law. John L. Sullivan traveled in many parts of the country before he could pull off some of the battles that made him the best-known fighter of his day and won him the admiration of all followers of pugilism and the respect and fear of all aspirants for his title of champion.

Jim Corbett, who defeated the mighty John L., also had his experiences with sheriffs and other officials. His first glove battle with Joe Choynski was stopped by the officials of Marin county and the pugilistic sons of the Golden West had to settle their little affair on a barge moored near Benicia in order to get away from the zealous sheriffs of the neighboring counties.

Dodging the Law.

Corbett yielded the palm to Fitzsimmons, and Bob also was an experienced man when it came to dodging the minions of the law. With Peter Maher he galloped all over the South before he could get a chance to mix things in the ring, and when he was matched to fight Corbett for the championship there were quite a few States that put up the "No admittance" sign before the Kangaroo and the Native Son were enabled to settle the question of supremacy in the same friendly State of Nevada, which has now taken the Jeffries-Johnson fight under its wing.

Jeff was fortunate in gaining his laurels during a period when midnight rides in cattle cars, and swift journeys from place to place, were not necessary, but it seems as if the big fellow had returned to the ring just in time to taste a little of the perambulating which made fighting a hazardous sport in the years that have gone.

This was Johnson's first experience of the shifting battleground. It is also Jeff's, and neither may gained an advantage by being case-hardened. It looks as if the men who see that the fight-prohibition laws are enforced prefer to select the shining marks, and Jeff and Johnson are suffering just as their predecessors in the pugilistic limelight have done.

The question of the altitude does not impress the negro champion and he says that he could fight just as well on the top of the Himalayas as he could on the sands by the ocean. His friends are not so sure, however; anyhow, they think that the longer Jack has to accustom himself to the rarer atmosphere of the Nevada plateau the better it will be for his wind on the day of the encounter with Jeffries.

Takes Lots of "Gasping."

I played football once on the University of Nevada campus at Reno and my experience is that when a man who is not used to it gets "winded" in Reno he has to do a lot of gasping to get enough air inside to satisfy the cravings of his lungs.

At the ocean beach yesterday Johnson did his work in the gymnasium just as if he wasn't going to leave the State within forty-eight hours. In spite of a dull sky and a blustering wind there was a good gathering in the gymnasium when Jack appeared, and his bag-punching and boxing brought forth the usual enthusiasm.

Al Kaufman was in his boxing suit and he engaged the champion for four rounds. Johnson didn't delve very deep into Al's anatomy, but he worked hard enough to make the exercise worth while. In a four-round bout with George Cotton, which followed the Kaufman set-to, Johnson was more open in his work and he landed a number of hard punches with the big gloves on Cotton's head, meanwhile stepping around in a lively manner to evade the dashing onslaught which George kept up throughout.

"I don't want to go to Nevada too near the weight at which I'll fight," said Jack, after the scales had shown that he was carrying 214 pounds. "It will be hot up there and it will be no trick at all to take off weight. If I go up there with a few pounds to spare I will work down to my fighting weight without taking any heroic measures, and I will, at the same time, retain all my vitality. On the eve of my departure for Nevada I must say that I couldn't wish to feel any better or be in any better shape to start the finishing work which I will have to do in Reno."

LARGE TAX FOR SPRECKELS

Amount Coming to the State From Heirs Will Be About $275,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 20.—That the State will receive about $275,000 as in inheritance tax from the Claus Spreckels estate was shown by figures presented to Superior Judge Coffey yesterday by the State appraisers, but there is still some doubt as to whether a tax will be paid on $75,000 realized from the sale of property in Honolulu to William G. Irwin, with whom the late sugar king was formerly associated in business.

The heirs claim that this sum is not subject to tax, but Treasurer McDougald, who acts as the State's collecting agent in this matter, is of the opinion that it is. Judge Coffey reserved his decision on the point.

Hartley F. Peart, representing McDougald and the inheritance tax department of California, called Claus A. Spreckels to the stand to give details regarding some of the property going to make up the total of the $9,565,000 belonging to the estate.

The various appraisements of the estate, which differ but little as to the total amount, were compared, and a few items corrected. It was agreed by all parties that $30,000 be added to the assessed value of the Stevenson-street electric light plant, bringing this property up to $300,000.

There was also some discussion as to the amount of deterioration to be allowed for the private car "Spreckels," which was worth $22,000 nine years ago. It has been appraised as of a present worth of $10,000 making the depreciation nearly 50 per cent. There was some evidence to show that the usual depreciation of such cars during a like period was but 33 1-3 per cent.

It appeared that $120,000 had been spent in remodeling the Spreckels mansion on Van Ness avenue. All matters relating to the inheritance tax were finally submitted to the Court for future decision.

MISS ELSIE SCHUYLER
The versatile ingenue of the Casino Musical Comedy Co.

More than making good the reputation which it has gained as being one of the best musical farces ever seen in Honolulu, "The Astronomer," as presented at the New Orpheum by the Casino Musical Comedy Company, has proved a scream, sending the audiences nightly into convulsions of laughter at every stage. The astronomical satire, with its pretty trimmings in the way of scenery and show girls, has a happy vein running through it that makes it worth while. The singing of Miss Rockwell and the violin renditions of Miss Canfield are features in themselves while the work of the other members of the company does not go unnoticed. Miss Steck, Miss Schuyler, Miss Atkins all do pleasing numbers.

Monday evening a change of program is announced, the occasion being the presentation of "The Three Twins," a musical comedy of high order. "The Three Twins" is a musical adaptation of the well known farce "Incog," perhaps one of the funniest pieces of its kind ever written. Many novel features will be introduced, including special numbers by all the principals as well as some new dances and ensembles by the show girls.

A letter should bear the stamp of approval—also a 2-cent stamp if it is to go by mail.

Climb a little higher than the crowd and you will be a target for the knockers.

CHAPTER VIII.

I WHIP PETER JACKSON AND GET DECISION OVER SHARKEY.

IT was on March 22, 1898, that I fought Peter Jackson and knocked him out in three rounds.

Now, I didn't pick Jackson. I was around ready to fight anybody. Jackson came back from England, where he had beaten everybody for several years. He was a mighty popular fighter in California because of the sixty-one round draw with Jim Corbett seven years before. In fact, he was popular all over the country because he was a good, square man in the ring and out. I've often heard men say, "Well, Peter Jackson was a gentleman, if he was black." He was too. And there was no doubt that he could fight. John L. Sullivan wouldn't meet him, although the whole country wanted John to stand up and show the superiority of the white race. Jackson had to go to England to get a good fight, and there he knocked out Frank Slavin, the Australian and English champion.

PETER STOOD LOOKING ACROSS THE RING AT ME WITH A SMILE.

As I had cleaned up all the other heavyweights who might have had a look in, Billy Delaney was asked if I'd fight Jackson. Billy didn't even stop to see me. He took the match.

I went to work as usual and did a lot of running and some boxing. I knew that Jackson was a fast and clever big man and that I'd have to use as much speed as possible to offset his skill.

The fight came off in Woodward's pavilion, which divided honors with Mechanics' pavilion in the good old days in San Francisco.

I can remember now just how Jackson looked when he stood up in his corner stripped for the fight. I've seen a lot of good men, but I don't think any one of them compared with Jackson. He was as tall as myself, and his shoulders were as wide as a door. His arms were long, and his hands swung nearly to his knees, yet he wasn't at all awkward, like most negroes. His muscles all lay smoothly instead of bunching up anywhere, and he didn't have any fat to spare. I could see at a glance that he had trained hard. He weighed 200 pounds, and the club physicians had pronounced him in perfect physical shape.

Billy Delaney and Spider Kelly were in my corner. They were the best seconds in the business. They knew enough to keep still when a man was fighting and didn't need advice. Young Mitchell and Patsy Corrigan were behind Jackson.

Peter stood looking across the ring at me with a smile, and then the bell rang.

We started lightly, feinting each other out. I was crouching a little and held my left well extended. I began jabbing with the left, and Peter ducked easily. The crowd laughed. But I had my plans laid and kept right on using the left until we came together, when I ripped in a right for the body. Jackson jabbed me on the mouth several times.

By the end of the first round I had learned two things—Jackson's punches weren't as damaging as I had expected, and I could hit him in spite of his cleverness. I've always believed I could beat any man I could hit. The second round I started with a rush.

In the first few seconds I had Jackson on the defensive and taking more punishment than he liked. He knew after half a minute that his one chance lay in mixing it, for he couldn't keep away or block the punches I threw in one after another as fast as I could. He stood and walloped with me, and for a minute we certainly did do some artistic slugging. He ripped some good ones into my body, but it was like iron. Punches didn't hurt. I looked across the way and figured how I'd finish him. There wasn't any use in holding back a punch until the job was finished, but I made up my mind not to beat him up any more than I had to.

I went straight at him. He didn't ask for quarter, but put up his hands and tried to jab me away. I pushed in against the jab and punched him in the stomach with my left, bringing the right over to his chin for a quick and merciful knockout. Jackson fell against the ropes and hung to them to keep from falling. He was practically knocked out, although still on his feet. I had started another left, but pulled it back without landing and turned to Referee McDonald.

"He's done, Jim," I said.

McDonald stepped between us and beckoned for Jackson's seconds.

About this time there was just one fighter left to the Pacific coast to meet me. He was Tom Sharkey, the famous sailor pugilist. Tom had a couple of years' start in the game. When I fought Long, Sharkey was a topnotcher. He came ashore from the cruiser Philadelphia in 1896 and knocked out Australian Billy Smith in seven rounds. After licking a soldier named Miller and drawing with Alex Greggains he knocked Choynski out in eight rounds. Sharkey was such a rough customer that they put him against Champion Jim Corbett, expecting to see him cut to pieces. He roughhoused Corbett for four rounds, and everybody went crazy over him. Then he fought Fitzsimmons, and Wyatt Earp gave him the decision on a foul.

When I was offered a fight with Sharkey, Billy Delaney and I both felt like celebrating. Things were coming my way, and the championship didn't look far off. As for Bill, he sat down and said: "Jim, you can lick this sailor. There's nothing to it." Billy wasn't much on giving out tips, but he did tell a lot of his friends that I could beat Sharkey. The fight was in Mechanics' pavilion on May 6, 1898.

"HE'S DONE, JIM," I SAID.

When we entered the ring I looked over at Sharkey, and he grinned. He was as confident as a gamecock. He looked like a sawed off Hercules. His skin was tanned by the sun and wind, and his muscles bulged out all over in big humps. He had anchors tattooed on his arms and a big ship in red and blue ink on his chest.

"Do you see that ship on Sharkey's front?" I asked Billy Delaney.

"Sure," said Bill.

"Well, keep your eye on it. I'm going to sink it," I said.

We began fighting.

Without waiting to feel Tom out I walked straight at him, and he gave ground. He didn't like my looks much, I guess, after the clever fellows he had been fighting. But in a moment he jumped at me with a wild swing. It was no trouble at all to push him away with my left and make him miss.

I had taken a good lead and was forcing the fighting round after round. In the seventh round Sharkey got vicious and rushed at me as if he wanted to throw me overboard. Two or three times he jammed me against the ropes.

In the next round Tom came tearing at me with his head down like a bull. I reached out and caught him by both shoulders. Then I spread my feet to get a good hold on the floor and shook him like a schoolteacher shaking a boy. That was the biggest surprise Sharkey ever had in his life.

I tried hard to get him in the last round, and I guess he tried hard, too, for he got in a couple of good swings. At the finish Greggains gave me the decision. Sharkey left the ring looking pretty glum, but he hadn't anything to say except that he'd fight me again.

I gave him the first chance at my title when I became champion.

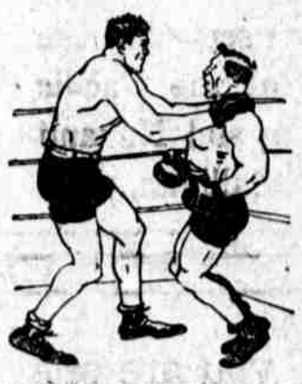
I had cleaned up all the big heavyweights in the west now, and there was nothing to do but to go east and make a cleanup there that would lead to a fight with Fitzsimmons for the championship. My hopes went high when I was offered my first chance in New York. The eastern people wanted to see the man who had beaten Peter Jackson and Tom Sharkey. Tom O'Rourke matched me against two men for ten rounds each, the fights to take place at the Lenox Athletic club, in New York city.

The east seemed strange to me on this first trip back since my boyhood days. Even the streets and the trees and the buildings were so different from ours in California that it seemed like going into a foreign country. Even the people were different. Today I have friends and acquaintances everywhere and can enjoy a visit to New York, but the first time a few days of it left me homesick for my own California mountains.

As for Armstrong and O'Donnell, the men picked to fight me, I didn't worry over them. Armstrong I knew only by reputation. O'Donnell I had met in San Francisco when he came to the coast with Madden and Ruhlin. O'Donnell was as clever as Jim Corbett in a gymnasium, but he was an unlucky big fellow. As soon as he stepped into a ring to fight he became so nervous that he forgot his skill. I picked Armstrong for my first man, thinking I'd do the hardest before there was a chance of getting tired.

I couldn't help admiring the looks of big Bob when he stripped in the opposite corner on the night of Aug. 5, 1898. He was like a great bronze statue. Here at last I was going to fight a man taller than myself, with a greater reach, equal strength and plenty of weight. Armstrong was clever, I knew that, and he could hit. He was a fine looking fighter, even if he was black.

Armstrong was waiting when I stepped into the ring with Billy Delaney. As soon as I reached my corner he came across and held out his hand with a wide smile that showed all of his teeth. Billy Delaney whispered to me that Armstrong's corner, the southwest, was considered unlucky because of the number of losers that had occupied it.



I SHOOK SHARKEY LIKE A SCHOOLTEACHER SHAKING A BOY.

There were many famous fighters around the ring that night. I remember seeing Jim Corbett, John L. Sullivan, Joe Goddard, Peter Maher, Kid Lavigne, Sammy Kelly, Tom Sharkey, Mysterious Billy Smith and a lot of others. Bob Fitzsimmons wasn't there. Being champion, he didn't care to look at any dub heavyweights.

As soon as the bell rang I went right at the big black man. After a few light exchanges I landed a hard left on his jaw and, rushing him back, swung the left again. Armstrong ducked a little, and the blow went high. As it landed a sharp twinge of pain shot along my arm. I had broken my left thumb.

That was pretty tough luck in the first round of a double header.

I didn't let any one know my hand was hurt, but went right on hitting with it. If you ever punched anybody with a broken thumb on your punching hand you know how it feels. It isn't any fun.

As I remember the fight, I forced the pace from the start. The black man was hard to get at, being on the defensive.

I figured when we came up for the last round that I had the fight won easily, but I wanted to knock Armstrong out now that the end was so near. He stood up to me for a moment, and I swung my left hard enough to do the trick. Bob saw it coming and in his hurry to get away fell on the floor. As he got up I went after him and, landing both hands on his jaw, drove him back into his own corner. Armstrong's seconds were yelling to him that the end of the round was near, and the big black turned his back to me and covered up like a turtle. I was pounding away at his back ribs to make him turn around when the last bell rang.

Referee Charlie White gave me the decision at once, and I started toward my dressing room for the half hour's rest.

As I stepped from the ring Billy Brady, in a ringside chair, called to me and asked, "How are you, big fellow?"

I just held up my broken hand and went along. Brady followed me out to the dressing room. My hand was so badly swollen that the glove had to be cut to get it off. Brady took one look. Dr. Fivey of the club examined the hand, too, and said that it would be impossible for me to go on with O'Donnell. I never could have put on another glove that night.

It was announced from the ring that on account of a broken hand Jeffries would not be able to go on with the second bout. I could hear a sound like the Roman mob growling behind the scenes in a theater just before reaching the stage. All of a sudden it struck me that for the first time in my life I was being hooted and jeered by the crowd. It was the worst jar I ever had. I felt like going on and fighting O'Donnell with one hand, but what was the use? I felt sick and sore and disgusted with the east. That was the most homesick moment of my life.

And to tell the truth it was nothing to what I got the next morning. As soon as I had hopped out of bed and dressed myself with my hand in a big bandage, feeling pretty blue, they began to hand me the papers. Whew! What a roasting! It seemed that everybody regarded me either as a quitter or a clumsy second rater. Some of them even said it was lucky for me I did break my thumb, for Steve O'Donnell would have beaten my head off.

That day I went down to the Police Gazette office with Billy Delaney. In the outer hall there was a bench for visiting fighters to sit on while they were waiting to see the editors. Dube sat on the bench. Champions walked right in. I sat on the bench while Billy saw Sam Austin and talked over the fight with him. It was funny to be left all alone out there, with the office boys looking me over and everybody walking right by. It made me feel like a measly yellow dog without any friends. That surely was a grouchy day, and I didn't love the east.

What Is Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey?

It is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain, great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus destroying the germ and producing a predigested liquid food in the form of a medicinal whisky; softened by warmth and moisture, its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

It is a gentle, invigorating stimulant and tonic.

What Does It Do?

It builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart, gives power to the brain, strength and elasticity to the muscles and richness to the blood. It brings into action all the vital forces; it makes digestion perfect and enables you to get from the food you eat all the nourishment it contains.

It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children. It strengthens and sustains the system, is a promoter of good health and longevity, makes the old young and keeps the young strong.

It cures nervousness, typhoid, malaria, every form of stomach trouble, diseases of the throat and lungs, and is recognized as a medicine by doctors of all schools.

Thousands of letters have been received from men and women in all walks of life, many from those nearly 100 years old, extolling the virtues of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as the world's greatest medicine.

Fourth of July Celebration.

The glorious Fourth of July has come and gone; in Honolulu it was celebrated in various ways. There were house parties galore, given at mountain homes and on the beautiful shores of Pearl Harbor. Numerous week-end parties that extended over the Fourth were given at Haleiwa and Wahiawa. The principal celebration was the entertainment of General Dickinson and his party. One of the prettiest sights was the arrival of the Siberia on this day. Just as the vessel entered the harbor with the Secretary of War and his party on board, all the government vessels in port dressed ship with their flags and pennants, giving a very festive air to the occasion. On the ship's arrival, General Dickinson was met by a delegation of Army, Navy and Marine officers, which included commissioned officers and heads of several army departments, and Admiral Rees with the commissioned officers of the Navy and Marine Corps. Everything worked like clockwork and the entire party was ashore and being whirled away in automobiles before the crowd on the wharf realized it. The women folk of the party were taken to the Young hotel, where an informal reception was held in the drawing room. Mrs. Corwin P. Rees, the Princess Kawananakoa, Mrs. Chapman, wife of Captain Chapman of Fort Shafter; Mrs. Falls, wife of the local quartermaster; Mrs. Sidney Ballou, Mrs. Waldron, Mrs. Humphreys, Mrs. Gartley and Mrs. Winslow, wife of Major Winslow, U. S. A., were in the receiving party. After there had been extended a cordial welcome to Honolulu by this coterie of society women, they all entered machines and motored to view the different points of interest of the city, visiting the Pali, Moanalua and Punchbowl. At 1 o'clock a start was made for Waikiki, where a delicious luncheon was awaiting them. The table, arranged to accommodate thirty-four, was beautifully decorated in the red ponciana regia. Most of the visitors had never seen this beautiful tree before coming to Honolulu and exclaimed over the floral display, which was so artistically arranged on the table. Among those seated at the table were Mrs. Dickinson, Mrs. Corwin P. Rees, Princess Kawananakoa, Mrs. Sidney Ballou, Mr. and Mrs. Lary Anderson, Mrs. Walter B. Cutting, Mrs. Edwards, wife of Brigadier General Edwards; Miss Edwards, Mrs. Winslow, Judge and Mrs. Humphreys, Mr. and Mrs. Gartley, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Waldron, Mrs. Falls, Mrs. Chapman, Mr. C. R. Simpkins, Mr. Brewster Reamey, Mr. Dickinson, Jr., Mr. Granberry, Mr. Ollie Swain, Mr. C. S. Short and others. After luncheon the gathering motored to the aquarium, had tea with ex-Governor Cleghorn at beautiful Ainahau. The gorgeous tropical gardens surrounding this home were greatly admired by the guests. After that, most of the party adjourned to the Moana hotel to take a siesta before going to the luau that had been planned for them. In the meantime General Dickinson and his party after bidding adieu to the fair sex at the wharf, boarded the lighthouse tender Kukui and went to Pearl Harbor. En route the fortifications and defenses of Oahu were shown to the General. Upon arrival at Pearl Harbor the Secretary landed and visited the forts in that vicinity. On returning to the Kukui the site of the Naval Station at Pearl Harbor was visited, after which the Secretary, the Acting Governor, General Edwards and Col. Schuyler disembarked at Pearl City to take autos and visit the cavalry cantonment at Leilehua. Here a general review was held, and a general inspection made. A hurried trip was made to town; on arriving, Acting Governor Mott-Smith was host at an elaborate luncheon, served at the Young. In the evening a banquet was given in the Secretary's honor. Covers were laid for fifty-four. A list of names will not be given as they have been published previously. This banquet was a stag affair. Colonel Schuyler suggested to the Chamber of Commerce that the women folk of the party would enjoy a luau, in other words a native feast. This suggestion was quickly acted upon, arrangements were made with Mr. Jimmie McGuire and the luau was served at his home shortly after 7 o'clock. The table was set out of doors, the beautiful tropical garden appealing to the visitors. Overhead were numerous electric lights strung, the wires being concealed by maile. The table was covered with ferns and flowers; red carnation leis were at each place—the novelty of wearing them pleased the party. Everything served was typically Hawaiian, even knives and forks were tabooed. Many toasts were drunk and witty speeches made, and this unique entertainment will linger long in the memory of the guests. After the feast the party adjourned to the Young hotel to listen to the Secretary of War's speech. Among those who participated in the luau were the entire party that had luncheon at the Moana hotel, with an addition of a number of the bachelors of the 4th Cavalry.

Tea on U. S. S. Cleveland.

Through the kindness of Captain Berger, who offered to give a band concert on the Naval wharf from 3 to 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, a few friends of the officers of the Cleveland were invited informally to tea, and to listen to the excellent program prepared. This was not a function given by Captain Rodman, but was entirely a wardroom affair, although the Captain was aboard the Cleveland, greeting everyone in his cordial manner. The Cleveland looked very attractive on this occasion. The quarter deck was hung with flags and pennants, the sides were enclosed with bunting, in order to obscure the rays of the sun. Punch, salads and sandwiches were served in the wardroom. This was a buffet tea. The long table from which the refreshments were served was ornamented with long stemmed roses. During the afternoon members of the younger set danced with the officers on the quarter deck. Among those present were Admiral and Mrs. Corwin P. Rees, Captain and Mrs. Rodman, Captain McDonald, Acting Governor and Mrs. Ernest Mott Smith, Captain and Mrs. Frank Robards, Captain and Mrs. Arthur Marix, Paymaster and Mrs. John Hornberger, Dr. and Mrs. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shingle, Mrs. Henry Bond Restarick, Mrs. Walbridge, Mr. and Mrs. William Montrose Graham, Mrs. Gray and Miss Gray of Los Angeles, Miss Hazel Hoffman, Miss Katherine Stephens, Miss Nannie Wallace, Miss McChesney, Miss Beatrice Campbell, Miss Parks, Miss Violet Makee, Miss Florence Hoffman, Miss Sturtevant of California, Miss Constance Restarick, Mrs. Kenyon, Miss Bartlett of California, Mr. Sydney Hoben, Mr. Wright, Mr. Irwin, Lieut. Concert at Judge Ballou's.

The social event of next week, the musicale at the beautiful home of Judge and Mrs. Sydney Ballou on Tuesday evening, is being eagerly looked forward to. The list of patronesses is imposing, and includes our most prominent leaders. A great many tickets have been sold privately, and a limited number have now been placed on sale at Bergstrom's, and tickets can also be obtained at the door. Mr. Sydney Hoben will contribute piano gems from the most interesting of the great composers, all of which will be new to Honolulu. Chopin will be represented by the lovely Etude No. 7, Op. 25 (which the Polish composer himself played constantly in public), and the posthumous Nocturne in E minor, in both of which the left hand (in the use of which Mr. Hoben is particularly skillful) has the prominent part. From Schuman the soulful Romance in F sharp will be heard. Lovers of Bizet's opera, "Carmen," will welcome the playing of a couple of the airs—the fortune-telling scene and the Gamins' Chorus—arranged by Mr. Hoben. Padarewski's brilliant "Cracovienne Fantastique," and a light, charming piece, "Mandolinata," by the great French composer, Camille. Saint Saens will finish Mr. Hoben's share of the first part of the program. There will be two vocal numbers: "Mary of Argyle," by the lately arrived young Irish tenor, Mr. Vaughan, and "I Hid My Love" (d'Hardelot), by Miss Phroni Dyke. Mrs. Ballou will act as accompanist.

The second part of the concert will be a genuine novelty to Honolulu, for it will consist of vocal excerpts from Wagner's marvelous opera (or music-drama, as he always called each work), "Tannhauser." To make things clear to all hearers Mr. Hoben will give a short synopsis of the plot beforehand. To those who have seen "Tannhauser" abroad it will be remembered that the hero, a minstrel knight, tired of the conventionalities of life, spends a year in the Mountain of Venus, whose enticements he breaks away from to return to the pure love of the saintly Elizabeth (Mrs. Allen White), the niece of the Landgraue of Thuringia. At the Tournament of Song at the castle, while other minstrels sing of the delights of purity and spiritual love, Tannhauser (Mr. Vaughan) violently bursts into praise of Venus, and his life is only spared by the intervention of Elizabeth. He goes to Rome to seek pardon from the Pope, and finally dies repentant, after the heart-broken Elizabeth has been carried to her bier.

The music is, of course, magnificent. Naturally, it would be impossible to give more than a few selections from such a work without the assistance of a large body of soloists and chorus. Mr. Hoben has chosen the Shepherd's Song (given in the opera without accompaniment) in the first act, to be sung by Miss Phroni Dyke; the Hall of Song aria and following duet for Elizabeth and Tannhauser, and the popular "Star of Eve," which Mr. Usborne will sing. In none of these will the absence of an orchestra matter.

Altogether the concert promises quite unusual interest. Mr. Sydney Hoben has only been here since February, when he arrived from Australia en route to London, and like so many of our residents who originally only intended a week or two's stay, stopped on. Introduced on arrival to Honolulu society at a reception at Mrs. Theodore Richards,' where his playing instantly aroused enthusiasm, Mr. Hoben has had the support of our social leaders on all occasions. He gave a recital at the Young Hotel some weeks after landing, and had a large and extremely fashionable audience. Mrs. Walter Frear headed a long list of patronesses, the creme de la creme of Honolulu society. Later he gave an organ recital at the Central Union Church, where his skillful organ playing came as a surprise to those who had recognized him only as a piano virtuoso. There, too, most of our best known people could be seen in the large audience. When the Central Union Men's League gave its annual dinner and concert a few weeks ago Mr. Hoben was engaged. As well as that he has goodnaturedly played at various complimentary concerts, such as that at Kamehameha Chapel, Central Union social, etc., always with much success.

As a student in Germany, where he studied under Carl Reinecke and other famous masters, at the celebrated Leipzig Conservatorium, Mr. Hoben came in personal contact with Greig, Busoni, Carreno, Kullak, Padarewski etc. At the Bagreuth Festival he met the Wagner family at their home, "Wahnfried," and they gave him complimentary tickets for "Parsifal" and "Tristan and Isolde," and introduced him to various musicians there. Of course the Wagner operas are constantly produced in Leipzig, where they draw overwhelming audiences. During the years he spent in the Saxon city Mr. Hoben became very familiar with all the operas. Among the patronesses are Princess Kawananakoa, Mrs. Corwin P. Rees, Mrs. Sanford B. Dole, Mrs. William Richards Castle, Mrs. Sidney Ballou, Mrs. A. H. Judd, Mrs. Walbridge, Mrs. William Whitney, Mrs. Harry Lewis, Mrs. John Strayer McGrew, Mrs. Charles Bryant Cooper, Mrs. W. D. Baldwin, Mrs. Vos, Mrs. Frederick A. Schaefer, Mrs. Ernest Waterhouse, Mrs. Westervelt, Mrs. Ernest Ross, Mrs. William Montrose Graham, Mrs. Du Roi, Mrs. J. J. Dowling, Mrs. J. McCandless, Mrs. Walter Hoffman, Mrs. Ralph Forster, Mrs. Jack Galt, Mrs. Alexander Lindsay, Mrs. F. R. Day, Mrs. Allen White, Mrs. James Judd, Mrs. Alexander Robertson, Mrs. George Rodiek, Mrs. H. C. Coleman, Mrs. Theodore Richards, Mrs. Newcombe, Mrs. W. W. Low, Mrs. H. S. Lewis and Mrs. Walter Coombs.

Our Princess in Washington.

The New York Sunday World publishes a photograph of Princess Kalaniannole and the following from its Washington correspondent:

WASHINGTON, June 11. One of the most striking figures in Washington official life is "Princess" Kalaalanaole, wife of the delegate from Hawaii. Since the election of "Prince Cupid," as he is popularly known, to Congress, ten years ago, he and his wife have established a reputation for hospitality and have made a large circle of friends. "Princess" Kalaniannole, to give her the Hawaiian title, never fails to attract much attention at social functions. She is a fine type of Hawaiian womanhood and dresses sumptuously in the brilliant colors of which her countrymen are so found. She is unusually tall and carries herself in the regal manner which is characteristic of her people. Princess Kalanianaole is fond of society and has readily adapted herself to Washington social conditions.

Before her marriage to the scion of Hawaiian royalty Princess Kalanianaole was Elizabeth Kahanu Kaauwal, daughter of a native chief of the Island of Maui. Her marriage to "Prince Cupid," Oct. 8, 1896, was the occasion of great rejoicing throughout the islands. Princess Kalanianaole was educated in English schools and took a finishing course in France. She is a thorough linguistan artist of no small ability and an especially fine musician. She has been largely instrumental in creating a vogue for Hawaiian music.

The native instrument of Hawaii, a variety of guitar which lends itself readily to Kanaka folk music, is frequently heard in the drawing room of the fine residence in Massachusetts avenue maintained by the Kalanianaoles. Former Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii, the aunt of Prince Cupid, is a much feted guest when she comes to visit her young relatives.

Princess Kalanianaole has a fine collection of native jewelry and curios. Among them is the war helmet of the national hero, Kamehameha I. Some bits of pottery which she possesses are of untold antiquity and are highly valued by collectors. The "holoku," the native dress of the Hawaiian women, is shown in great variety in a collection made by Princess Kalanianaole. The garment is a sort of sublimated mother-hubbard and is often made of costly fabrics and even ornamented by precious stones. The Princess possesses, by the way, some of the finest jewelry in Washington.

McCormick-Hunn.

On the spacious lanai of Kawaiahoa Seminary on Thursday, July 7, 1910, the wedding of Miss Jessie S. McCormick to Mr. Chester J. Hunn was solemnized by the Rev. A. A. Ebersole. The central staircase before which the contracting parties stood was a massive bank of palms and ferns, forming a pretty background for the ceremonies. The two-ring Episcopal service was used, both the bride and groom being unattended.

The bridal gown was a creation in white satin and pearl passementrie, with hand embroidered panels. The bride wore a large picture hat of white tucked net and tulle, and carried a bouquet of bride's roses.

Since the parents were unable to be present, the wedding was very private, the bride being given away by Mr. Francis Damon. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Agnes Judd, a schoolmate of the groom's mother. After the ceremony the newly married couple and the guests enjoyed a daintily appointed luncheon, interrupted by the pair stealing away, much to the consternation of the guests, who thought to speed them on their way. The honeymoon will be spent at Waiahole, the summer home of Mr. Arthur Wall on the windward side of the island. After the first of September the young couple will be at home in one of the Federal Experiment Station bungalows on the slopes of Tantalus.

The bride was graduated from the University of California with the class of 1908 and in the same year the groom received his degree at Cornell University. Miss McCormick has been the popular teacher of music and literature at Kawaiahao Seminary for the past two years and was recently elected secretary of the College of Oahu. Mr. Hunn is assistant horticulturist at the Federal Experiment Station, is a member of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A., and also an active member of the Cornell Club.

Miss Campbell Entertained.

Miss Beatrice Campbell was the motif for a luncheon which was given at Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chillingworth's attractive residence on Young street. Mrs. Chillingworth's sister, Miss Amy Stratemeyer, presided as hostess on this occasion. The flower bedecked table of Marguerites called forth exclamations of admiration as the young people were seated. It was deserved, for Mrs. Chillingworth is an artist in decorating. The oval table was covered with a heavy damask cloth which could not be discerned the dainty white daisies and maidenhair fern being so artistically strewn over the table. Suspended from the chandelier over the center of the table was a fancy wicker basket filled with Marguerites. Directly underneath the basket was placed a large silver bowl filled with the same variety of flowers. The place cards were hand painted and ornamented with the same floral design. The grape fruit was served in grape fruit baskets ornamented with natural daisies and tied with white ribbon. Among those seated around this exquisite table were Miss Amy Stratemeyer, Miss Beatrice Campbell, Miss Sybil Winter, Miss Grace Robertson, Miss Ella Murray, Miss Henrietta Smith, Miss Lillian Robertson.

Mrs. Ballentyne's Bridge Party.

Golden shower was used in great profusion by Mrs. Clinton G. Ballentyne when she entertained Friday afternoon at cards in honor of Mrs. and Miss Gray of Los Angeles. Mrs. Gray and Miss Gray are the wife and daughter of Judge Gray, judge of the Supreme Court of the southern district of California. Mrs. Gray and her daughter have apartments at the Moana Hotel. They will sail for Australia the last of July. Among the number of women invited to meet these charming ladies were Mrs. Harry Lewis, Mrs. Arthur Marix, Mrs. Alan Bottomley, Miss Blair, Miss Katherine Stephens, Miss Lucas, Mrs. Lane (wife of Dr. Lane of the Navy), Mrs. Frederick Damon, Mrs. Hornberger, U. S. A., and others. Prizes consisting of hand embroidered center pieces were awarded at each table. The tables were arranged on the large lanais overlooking the sea. The verandas were decorated with palms, Australian maidenhair fern and baskets of luxuriant maindenhair fern.

Engagement Announced.

Mrs. Walter Coombs entertained delightfully at luncheon last Wednesday. This affair was a prenuptial one, the engagement being announced of Miss Genevieve Langton to Mr. Charles Bennett. This lucheon, while a small affair, was one of the prettiest entertainments that has even been given in Honolulu. Pink and white was chosen as the color scheme, these two colors being favorites of the guest of honor. Luncheon was served at half after one, only the intimate friends of Miss Langton being invited. The engagement was announced in a novel manner. An old-time German custom was used, that of tying a bunch of flowers to the chair which the bride-to-be was to occupy, with her fiance's photograph attached. The cosy circular table was covered with tiny pink hearts, in the center was placed a wicker basket filled with delicate pink carnations and fringed with maiden hair fern. The loop handle was tied with pink and white tulle. The place cards carried out the prenuptial idea. All the edibles were pink and white and the salads and ices were served heart-shape. Miss Langton's chair was artistically decorated with pale pink Cecil Brunner roses, with Mr. Bennett's picture attached with streamers of pink and white tulle. Many good wishes were showered on the prospective bride, and great interest was shown when listening to her plans for the future. Mr. Bennett arrived from the Orient on the Asia. Full plans for the wedding have not been made. The friends of Miss Langton are in hopes that she will decide to have a large church wedding. After the marriage the young couple will winter in Boston, Mass. Among Mrs. Coombs' guests were Miss Langton, Miss Sara Lucas, Miss Helen North, Miss Hattie Lucas and Miss Alice Cooper.

Princess Eentertained.

The Princess Kawananakoa was entertained at an exquisitely appointed dinner on Monday evening. This function was given in the private dining room at the Pleasanton. A center piece of carnations was used, tall silver candlesticks with red shades were artistically placed in a circle around the table while strands of smilax were arranged in an irregular design, winding in and out at the base of the candlesticks. Red carnation leis were found at each place and worn by the guests during the dinner. Hand painted place cards were attached to each lei. After dinner the entire party motored to Waikiki, to Mr. Jimmie McGuire's place, and joined the Dickerson party. Those in this party were Princess Kawananakoa, Dr. and Mrs. Philip Frear, Miss Mary Low, Dr. and Mrs. Holsly, Captain Foster and Dr. Hedgins.

Dr. and Mrs Judd's Dinner.

At a handsomely appointed dinner Dr. and Mrs. Judd presided as host and hostess. This affair was given at the Judds' Swiss Chalet. Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Judd were the complimented guests on this occasion. Dr. and Mrs. Judd are noted for their hospitality, and Friday's dinner proved extremely enjoyable. Golden shower was used in great profusion in the different rooms of this attractive home. Yellow was the color scheme chosen for the dinner. Handsome candelabra with fluffy yellow silk shades lent an added charm to the table appointments. Among Dr. and Mrs. Judd's guests were Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Judd, Miss Annie Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dillingham and Mr. George Fuller.

Stag Dinner.

Lieutenant Lauren Willis of the U. S. Marine Corps made a capital host at a stag dinner which was given at the Pleasanton, where he is residing. The affair was given in the private dining room Wednesday evening. The table was decorated throughout in scarlet. The center piece was of red carnations and maidenhair fern. Fragrant leis made of the same flowers were found at each place. During the dinner Lieutenant Willis announced his engagement to Miss Allen Hedden of Denver, Colo., and received the congratulations of those present. Covers were laid for eight. After dinner the entire party went motoring. Among those present were Lieutenant Willis, Mr. Irwin, Mr. Kirkpatrick, [illegible] Mr. Harry Cobb, Mr. Cowan, Mr. Brown and Mr. O'Dell.

Kalakaua, the little son of the Princess Kawananakoa, with his grandfather, Colonel Sam Parker, will arrive on the Manchuria. Kalakua will spend the summer with his uncle, Prince Kalanianaole. The Princess will not return to the mainland on the Sierra as was her first intention, but will remain in the islands until August 7th. On her arrival in San Francisco she will proceed directly to New York, where she will spend the fall months, and may possibly winter in Europe.

Mr. Jim McCandless, who met with a painful automobile accident on Hawaii some weeks ago, is convalescing at the Young Hotel. Mr. McCandless has had numerous visitors, trying to help him while away the tedious hours of invalidism, and has been the recipient of many flowers, which help to brighten the sick room.

Mrs. Frederick Ramsey, wife of Captain Ramsey, was the hostess at a delightfully appointed luncheon Friday. The affair was given in honor of Mrs. Van Every and her niece, Miss Cates. The latter is the daughter of a retired Army officer. This luncheon was one of the most delightful affairs of the week, as whenever Mrs. Ramsey entertains some novely is introduced which is keenly enjoyed by her guests, and Friday's entertainment was no exception to the rule. The affair was a bridge whist luncheon, and the decorations were carried out on new plan, and were extremely beautiful.

Captain and Mrs. Zanders have been the motif for much entertaining during their sojourn in Honolulu. In fact the social life became so strenuous that Mrs. Zanders has been spending the past week at Mt. Tantalus as the guest of Mrs. George Rodiek. Captain Zanders is in command of the Belgian ship.

Mrs. Byron K. Baird, who has been visiting at Fort Ruger with her sister, Mrs. Wilbur, wife of Captain Wilbur, U. S. A., will return to her home on Hawaii next Tuesday. Mrs. Baird has been the incentive for much social entertainment during her visit in Honolulu.

FORT SHAFTER NEWS FIELD AND BARRACKS.

There has been much attention given by the military authorities to a lighter equipment for the infantry. The proposed hat is much lighter than the one that is being worn now. It has been recommended that it should be worn with the "Montana peak" instead of the "Alpine crease." Another article which is being examined by the infantry members is the poncho. It is of a form which provides better protection against the rain, being longer than the one that is in use at present. The poncho weighs two pounds six ounces, and is a factor in the reduction of the weight of the infantryman's burden.

The new equipment, including the clothing to be worn, one hundred rounds of ammunition, the rifle, the haversack and the roll, weighs forty-seven pounds. Without the roll it is thirty-eight pounds.

The most important to the equipment is the shoe, weighing eight ounces. This shoe has a buckskin sole, with a canvas upper, and will be found of the greatest comfort as well as a protection to the feet in the relief it affords after a day's march. There is another new article, and that is the field overcoat. The new garment is of canvas, kersey lined, and of the pea jacket variety. It will be used for field service only.

Basketball.

The Fort Shafter basketball team has arranged a game with the Y. M. C. A. boys of Honolulu for the championship of Hawaii. The Fort Shafter boys have suggested July 20 as a good time to have the game. The date, however, has not been definitely decided upon. Mr. Larimer of the Y. M. C. A. said he did not know whether he could get his bunch together on that date, but the first match will come off somewhere about that time. The Fort Shafter players have been getting their daily practise and have showed some very scientific work. The Fort Shafter lineup is as follows: Sergt. McCall, right forward; Corp. Woodruff, left forward; Fulton or Marks, center; Lieut. Chilton, left guard; Lemm, right guard; Kistler, Grant and Rowland, substitutes.

To Duty.

Private Taylor of Company H was restored to his duties yesterday by the post surgeon. He had been in the hospital for the last week with a sore arm.

Before going on the stump next fall President Taft should see what the Democrats will pay him for the service.

TO HELP RUSSIANS IN HAWAII

NEW YORK, July 8.—A big mass meeting of laboring people was held in Madison Square Garden tonight to utter a protest against alleged unfair treatment of Hawaiian plantation laborers by the heads of the companies owning and controlling the sugar industry in the Territory.

Resolutions calling for immediate action on the part of the Department of Commerce and Labor were passed. It was charged that the laborers, especially the Russian element, were oppressed by their employers.

A copy of the resolutions will be sent to President Taft with a view to obtaining his assistance in the matter of helping the laborers get fair treatment.

WANTED TO KILL JOHNSON.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Richard McQuirk, a machinist, today attempted to enter the residence of Jack Johnson, the pugilist, with a rifle in his hand. It is believed he wanted to kill the pugilist. After being taken into custody, McQuirk declared he lost money in a wager on the result of the Jeffries-Johnson fight and that he took his gun with him to compel Johnson to return the lost cash.

The prisoner will be held to await the action of the grand jury, and pending such action he may be examined as to his sanity.

Johnson is appearing in a local vaudeville theater and has taken up his residence during his sojourn here.

KERMIT ROOSEVELT OFF FOR PARIS

OYSTER BAY, July 8.—Kermit Roosevelt, who accompanied his father on the celebrated hunting tour in Africa, will sail tomorrow for Paris.

CLOAK-MAKERS ON STRIKE.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The cloak makers of this city, numbering 75,861, went out on strike today because they were not receiving wages they deemed sufficient for the work they have been doing.

The cloak-makers are about as numerous as the shirtwaist-makers who struck a year ago and, after a long period of industrial strife, forced their employers to pay higher wages, and they depend upon the public for sympathy and material assistance, as in the case of the shirtwaist-makers.

The suffragist leaders have been helping the women workers in New York to secure higher wages.

MOB HANGS DETECTIVE.

NEWARK, O., July 8.—Carl Etherington, aged 22, an anti-saloon league detective, who fatally shot a saloonkeeper during a recent raid on the alleged lawless dives in this city, was dragged from his cell in the county jail tonight and hanged by a crowd of lynchers, who overcame the sheriff and his deputies who were guarding the prison building.

Etherington cried piteously, begged for a chance to obtain a fair trial, and even tried to commit suicide by setting fire to his bed clothing when the mob was assaulting the jail.

WELLMAN TO CROSS OCEAN.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Walter Wellman, the journalist, today announced that he would next autumn attempt to cross the Atlantic Ocean in a dirigible balloon. This is the second sensational feat to be planned by Wellman. Two years ago he wanted to sail to the North Pole in a balloon, but his balloon was wrecked and he changed his notion.

FLOODS IN FRANCE.

PARIS, July 8.—Rain is falling daily and there have been six weeks of recurring floods, which threaten a loss in the Champagne district of $5,000,000.

MANILA EDITOR SIZES US UP.

Earl Hamilton Smith, a newspaper man of wide experience in the Orient and recently in charge of the city editor's desk on the Manila Cable-news-American is passing through Honolulu enroute to San Francisco as a passenger by the Pacific Mail Intermediate steamer Asia.

Smith was at one time editor of Justicia a periodical that thrived at the Philippine capital during the stirring days of insurrection. The newspaperman is giving some study to the condition of Filipino laborers who are now joining forces in large numbers with the island plantations. Editor Smith speaks in optimistic terms concerning future of the sugar industry in the "Far Away Islands." He predicts that fortunes will be made by those who turn their attention to agriculture or mining and stay with the game.

HALF A CHANCE

By Frederic S. Isham,

Author of "The Strollers," "Under the Rose," "The Lady of the Mount," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

A gripping story having to do with the most vital forces that affect the human being; a thrilling narrative of the combat of an American against the worm eaten aristocracy of the old world---as such may the novel "Half a Chance" be briefly described. The brilliantly drawn characters, typical of London, range from Jocelyn Wray, the beautiful young debutante, sought and worshiped by a score of noblemen, to Tom Rogers, the brutish filcher, highwayman and debased magsman. A feature of the story is the influence that can be exerted on her associates of low and high degree by the sweetness, simplicity and purity of a little girl. She was confident that there was something good in a man, no matter how low he might have sunk. She set out to prove it. The manner of her endeavor and the events associated with it go to make the story one of rare fascination. And the vivid pen picture of the struggle of a great human spirit to emerge from the abyssmal depths of wrong living and degradation will long be imprinted on the memory of the reader.

CHAPTER I.

MR. GILLETT'S CHARGE.

"BY all means, m'dear, let's go down between decks and have a look at them."

"Of course, if you wish, Sir Charles, although— Do you think we shall be edified, Mr. Gillett?"

"That depends, m'lady"—and the speaker, a man with official manners and ferret-like eyes, shifted from one foot to another—"on what degree or particular class of criminal your ladyship would be interested in. If in the ordinary category of skittle sharper or thimblerigger," with a suspicion of mild scorn, "then I do not imagine your ladyship would find much attraction in the present cargo. But, on the other hand," in a livelier tone, "if your ladyship has any curiosity—or shall we say a psychological bent?—regarding the real out and outer the excursion should be to your liking, for," rubbing his hands, "a properer lot of cutthroats and bad magsmen it has never been my privilege to escort across the equator, and this is my sixth trip to Australia."

"How interesting—how very interesting!" The lady's voice floated languidly. "Sir Charles is quite right. We must really go down. At any rate, it will be a change after having been shut up so long in that terrible stateroom."

"One moment, m'lady. There's a little formality that must be observed first. No one allowed on the prisoners' deck without the captain's permission. There he is now."

"Then be good enough to beckon to him," said the lady.

But this Mr. Gillett, agent of the police, discreetly declined to do. Captain Macpherson was a man not to be beckoned to by any one, much less by him.

"Sir Charles and lady and Sir Charles' party have expressed, Captain Macpherson, the desire to obtain permission to visit the prisoners' deck," said Gillett.

Captain Macpherson looked toward Sir Charles and his lady, the other passengers lounging around them, a little girl at the rail, her hair blown windward, a splash of gold against the blue sky. "What for?" said the skipper brusquely.

"To have a look at the convicts, I suppose."

"What good'll that do them?" growled the commander. "Idle curiosity—that's what I call it. Well, go along and keep them away from the bars. The weather has nae improved the tempers of a few of the rapscallions, and they'd like naught better than a chance for their claws."

"Thanks for the permission, and," a little stiffly, "the admonition, which latter," turning away, "a man whose lifelong profession has been dealing with convicts is most likely to stand in need of and heed."

"May I go too?"

The child with the golden hair desisted in her occupation of watching the flying fish and other real winged creatures and, leaving the rail, walked toward the group that was about to follow Mr. Gillett. She was a very beautiful girl of ten or eleven, slim, delicately fashioned, of a definite proud type.

"May I go, too, aunt?" she repeated.

"Why, of course," interposed a blase, cynical appearing young man who had just emerged from the cabin. "Don't know where she wants to go or what she wants to do, but don't say she can't; really you mustn't, now."

"Well, since you insist on spelling her, Lord Ronsdale"—

He twisted a blond mustache which adorned a handsome face that bore many marks of what is called experience of the world. "Couldn't do that! Besides, Jocelyn and I are great chums, don't you know. We're going to be married some day when she grows up."

"Are we?" said the child. "The man I marry must be very big and strong and must not have light hair."

Lord Ronsdale laughed tolerantly.

"Plenty of time for you to change your mind, don't you know. Meanwhile I'll not despair. Faint heart, and so on. But," turning to Sir Charles, "where is it she wants to go?"

"To see the convicts."

"Convicts? Ah!" He spoke rather more quickly than usual, with accent sharper.

"You didn't know who your neighbors were going to be when you decided so suddenly to accompany us?"

"No." His voice had a metallic sound.

Sir Charles addressed Mr. Gillett. "Tell us something more definite about your charges whom we are going to inspect. Meant to have found out earlier in the voyage, but been so jolly seasick, what with one gale after another, I for one until now haven't much cared whether we had Claude Duval and Dick Turpin themselves for neighbors or whether we all went straight to Davy Jones' locker together. A bad lot, you have already informed us, but how bad?"

"Well, we haven't exactly M. Duval or Mr. Turpin in the pen, but we've one or two others almost as celebrated in their way. There's Billy Burke, as desperate a cracksman as the country can produce, with," complacently, "a record second to none in his class. He"— And Mr. Gillett, with considerable zest entered into the details of Mr. Burke's eventful and rapacious career. "Then there's the 'Frisco Pet,' or the 'Pride of Golden Gate,' as some of the sporting papers call him."

"The Frisco Pet!" Lord Ronsdale started; his color slightly changed; his lashes drooped over his cold eyes. "He is on board this vessel?"

"Yes. You remember him, my lord, I dare say?"

"In common with many others," shortly.

"Why," asked Jocelyn, "did they call him such a funny name—the Frisco Pet?"

"Because he's a Yankee bruiser, prizefighter, or was before the drink got him," explained Mr. Gillett. "Some one brought him to London, found out about his 'talents' and put him in training. He was a low, ignorant sailor—could scarcely write his own name—but he had biceps and a thick head. Didn't know when he was whipped. I can see him yet as he used to look, with his giant shoulders and his swagger, as he stepped into the ring. There was no nonsense about him or his fist—could break a board with that. And how the shouts used to go up! 'The pet!'—'a quid on the pet!'—'ten bob on the stars and stripes!'—meaning the costume he wore. Oh, he was a favorite in Camden Town! But one night he failed them—met some friends from the forecastle of a Yankee trader that had dropped down the Thames—went into the ring with a stagger added to the swagger. Well, they took him out unconscious. Never was a man worse punished. He never got back to the sawdust, and the sporting gentlemen lost a bright and shining light."

"Broke his heart, I suppose," observed Sir Charles.

The police agent proceeded. "After that it was a case of the rum and the toss pots, and when he was three sheets in the wind look out for squalls. He got put in quod, broke out and overpowered and nearly killed two guards. Took to various means of livelihood until they got him again. Trouble in prison and transferred to the solitary, with a little punishment thrown in for a reminder. When he got out of limbo again he lived in bad company in one of the tunnels near the Adelphi. Hard place for the police to rout a cove from. He made it quite interesting for the police—quite interesting. So much so he attracted me, and I concluded to take a hand."

Mr. Gillett paused. Obviously in his case egotism allied to enthusiasm made his duties a pleasure. He seemed now briefly commending himself in his own mind. "Up to this time," he resumed, "our friend the ex-pugilist had never actually killed any one, but soon after I engaged myself to look after him word was brought to the department that a poor woman had been murdered, a cheap music hall dancer. She had seen better days, however."

Lord Ronsdale, who had been looking away, yawned, as if finding the police agent "wordy," then strolled to the rail.

"Suspicion pointed strongly in his direction, and we got him after a struggle. It was a hard fight, without a referee, and maybe we used him a little rough, but we had to. Then Dandy Joe was brought in. Joe's a plain, mean little gambler and race track follower with courage not big enough for broad operations. But he had a wide knowledge of what we term the thieves' catacombs, and, well, he peached on the big fellow—gave testimony that was of great service to the prosecution. The case seemed clear enough. There was some sort of contrary evidence put in, but it didn't amount to anything. His record was against him, and he got a heavy sentence, with death as the penalty if he ever sets foot in England again."

Sir Charles assisted his lady from her chair. "Coming, Ronsdale?"

"Believe I won't go down," drawled the nobleman at the rail. "Air better up here," he explained.

Sir Charles laughed, got together the other members of his party, and all followed Mr. Gillett to a narrow companionway. There a strong iron door stopped their progress; but, taking a key from his pocket, the police agent thrust it into a great padlock, gave it a turn and swung back the barrier. Before them stretched a long aisle, at each end of which stood a soldier with a musket. On one side were the cells, small, heavily barred.

Mr. Gillett peered into the cells at his charges with a keen, bright gaze that had in it something of the animal tamer's zest for his part.

"Well, now are we all today?" he observed in his most animated manner to the guard. "All doing well?"

"No. 6 complained of being ill, but I say it's only the dumps. No. 14 has been garrulous."

"Garrulous, eh? Not a little flighty?" The guard nodded. Mr. Gillett whispered a few instructions and asked a number of other questions. Meanwhile the child had paused before one of the cells and, fascinated, was gazing within. What was it that held her—the pity of the spectacle, the terror of it? Her blue eyes continued to rest on the convict, a young fellow of no more than one-and-twenty of magnificent proportions, but with face sodden and brutish. For his part he looked at her open mouthed, with an expression of stupid surprise at the sight of the figure so daintily and slenderly fashioned, at the tangles of bright golden hair that seemed to have imprisoned some of the sunshine from above.

"Well, I'm blowed!" he muttered hoarsely. "Where'd you come from? Looks like one o' them bally Christmas dolls had dropped offen some counter in Fleet street and got in here by mistake!"

A mist sprang to the blue eyes. She held her white, pretty fingers tight against her breast. "It must be terrible here," she said falteringly.

The convict laughed harshly. "Hell!" he said inconically.

The child trembled. "I'm sorry," she managed to say.

The fierce dark eyes stared at her. "What for?"

"Because you have to stay here."

"Well, I'm"— But this time he apparently found no adequate adjective. "If this ain't the rummiest Christmas doll!"

She put out her hand. "Here's something for you, poor man," she said as steadily as she could. "It's my King George gold piece, date 1762, and belonged to my father, who wore it on his watch chain and who is dead. Perhaps they'll let you buy something with it."

He looked at the hand. "If she ain't stickin' out her duke to me right through the bars! Blamed if she ain't! Looks like a lily—a bally white lily," he repeated wonderingly, "one of them kind we wonst run acrost when the cap turned up adrift on an island jest to waller in green grass!"

"Don't you want it?" said the child.

He extended a great, coarse hand hesitatingly, as if half minded to and half minded not to touch the white finger tips.

"You ain't afraid?"

The golden head shook ever so slightly. Again the big hand went toward the small one, then suddenly dropped.

"Right this way, m'lord—m'lady!" The face of the convict abruptly changed. Fury, hatred, a blind instinct to kill, were unmistakably revealed in his countenance as he heard the bland voice of the police agent. From the child's hand the gold disk fell and rolled under the wooden slab that served as a couch in the cell.

"Good heavens!" Mr. Gillett seized the girl's arm and abruptly drew her away. "My dear little lady," he said, "really you don't know the danger you run. And near that cell of all of them!"

"That cell?" observed Sir Charles. "Then that is"—

"The convict I was telling you about—the 'Pet of Frisco,' the 'Pride of Golden Gate.'"

CHAPTER II.

A MESSAGE TO THE ADMIRALTY.

THE following night Captain Macpherson, in his cabin, rolled up carefully the chart he had been scanning, deposited it in a copper cylinder and drew from his pocket a small pipe. The weather had turned nasty again; above the wind sounded loudly. Now it descended on the ship like a fierce scolding virago, then rushed on with wild, shrieking dissonance. Suddenly something happened that caused him to change his mind; abruptly hurled to the other end of the cabin, he found himself lying half stunned on the floor. A hubbub of noises filled the air—snappings, crashings, the rending of woodwork.

Captain Macpherson staggered to his feet and, swaying like a drunken man, stood a few moments holding his hand to his brow. Then his fist clinched, and he shook it at the cylinder that had fallen from the table.

"Ye viperous, lying thing!" he cried and ran from the cabin to the deck.

A single glance told all: two of the ship's giant spars had gone by the board; entangled in her own wreckage, the vessel thumped and pounded with ominous violence against some sunken reef. Captain Macpherson groaned.

"Mr. O'Brien!" he called loudly.

"Aye, aye, sir."

"How long do you give her?"

"Half an hour, sir."

The master shook his head. "She'll one last that long."

"Any orders, sir?" asked the chief mate.

Captain Macpherson recovered himself; his tone became once more quick and incisive. "Ye're right; I'm gone daffy. We'll get this business over in a decorous and decent manner." A number of orders followed.

As the chief mate disappeared to execute the commands he had received the harsh noises of the breaking ship, the seething of the sea about her, the flapping of canvas like helpless, broken wings, was supplemented by a babel of new and terrifying sounds, the screaming and cursing of the convicts below, their blasphemous shrieking to be let out. To this turmoil and uproar were added the frantic appeals and inquiries of the passengers who, more or less dressed, had hurried to the deck and who were now speaking to the master of the ill starred vessel. He answered them briefly. What could be done would be done.

"It's a question of the boats, I suppose?" Sir Charles, one of the calmest of the ship's cabin party, asked quickly.

"In ten minutes they'll be ready for the launching with nae lack of water and provision. Get plenty of wraps and greatcoats. It'll be a bit disagreeable nae doubt out yon in the wee craft."

ENTANGLED IN HER OWN WRECKAGE THE VESSEL THUMPED AND POUNDED.

The boat was soon overhauled, the lockers and water butt were filled, and the passengers, one by one, set into it. On the whole, at that moment for leaving the ship their conduct left little room for criticism. One or two of the women who had appeared on the verge of hysterics now restrained audible manifestation of emotion. Sir Charles proved a monument of helpfulness, assisted in placing the women here and there and extended a helpful hand to Lord Ronsdale, who had become somewhat dazed and inert. Total darkness added to the difficulties of their task, for the moon, which until then had shone with much luster, now went behind a curtain of cloud. But Captain Macpherson coolly called out by name the men to handle the lifeboat, and with no evidence of disorder they crowded in, none too soon. As the boat with its human freight hung in readiness for the lowering the remaining spar of the Lord Nelson fell with a mighty crash.

"Remember the name of your ship, lads!" Captain Macpherson's voice seemed to anticipate a movement of panic among the seamen on deck; if there had been any intention to rush the already well loaded boat it was stayed. "Mr. Gillett, I'll be troubling ye for the keys to the convicts' deck. Mr. O'Brien, get in and take charge. Steer southeast with a bit of rag; it's your best chance to get picked up. Hold near the ship until the other boat with the crew can come alongside. It's as well to keep company. Are the lines clear? Let her go."

The boat was lowered and at the right moment touched a receding wave. Captain Macpherson waited until the chief officer called out that they were safely away, then gave his last order:

"And now, lads, ye can be lookin' to yourselves!"

They did. The master turned and with some difficulty made his way toward the convicts' cells. Suddenly a number of mad, leaping human figures issued with horrible cries from one of the hatches.

"The life rafts!" Shrieking, calling down maledictions on the captain, they ran about, when suddenly an angry black wave swept the deck. A few went overboard with the hissing crest; several were hurled against the bulwarks, limp lifeless things swirled back and forth. One of their number, a big fellow of unusual strength, was shot toward the open companionway leading to the main cabin. As he plunged down he clutched at and caught the railing. Considerably shaken, dripping with water, he pulled himself together, and, raising a face sodden and fierce, like a beast brought to bay, he looked around him. The light of one or two swinging lamps that had not yet been shattered revealed dimly the surroundings, the dark leather upholstering, the little tables. Uncertainly the convict paused; then suddenly his eyes brightened; the lustful anticipation of the drunkard who had long been denied shone from his gaze as it rested on a sideboard across the cabin.

"Bottles!" he said, steadying himself. "Rum! Well, I guess there ain't much chance for any of us and a man's a fool to go to hell thirsty!" He had started toward the sideboard, with its bright gleaming ware and its divers and sundry receptacles of spirits and liqueurs, when suddenly his look changed and his jaw fell.

"What the"— A flow of choice billingsgate, mingled with the sailor's equally eloquent Golden Gate, completed the sentence. The convict stood stock still.

From the door of a stateroom at the far end of the cabin a figure appeared. A great shawl draped the small form. The golden hair, a flurry of tangles, floated around it. Clinging to a brass rail that ran along the side of the cabin, she approached, her eyes all alight as if well satisfied with something. Amazed beyond power of action, the man continued to gaze at her, at the tiny feet in the little pink slippers, at something she carried. "By the great horn spoon, the Christmas doll!" he muttered hoarsely. Then, forgetting his purpose, the bottles, he lurched quickly toward her.

"W'at you doin' here?" he demanded.

"I slipped out," said the child, holding the rail tighter as perforce she paused to answer. "I thought it would take only a moment."

"Slipped out?" he repeated.

"Of the lifeboat, I mean. It was dark, and they didn't see me. I just happened to think, and I had to do it. If I'd told them they mightn't have let me. It would have been very wicked if I'd gone away and forgotten. Don't you think so? And now I'm going back. Only I am afraid I've been longer than I thought I would be. The door of my stateroom seemed to stick, and I was a few minutes getting it open."

Beneath disheveled masses of thick dark hair the brutish face continued to study the fairylike one. For the instant words seemed to fail him. "Do you mean," he observed, "you come back here for that measly dicky bird?"

"It isn't measly, and it isn't a dicky bird!" she answered indignantly. "And I'll thank you not to call it that. It's a love bird, and its name is Dearie."

"Dearie. Ho, ho!" The ship reeled at a dangerous angle, but the convict appeared not to notice. His voice rose in harsh, irresistible rough merriment. "Dearie! And she thanks me not to call it names! It! No bigger'n my thumb! Ho, ho!" His laughter, strange at such a moment, died abruptly. "Do you know what you've gone and done on account of what's in that cage?" he demanded, almost fiercely. "You've got left!"

"Left!" said she blankly, shrinking from him a little. "You don't mean—Oh, I thought I would be only a minute! They haven't really gone and"—

The great fingers closed on her arm. "They've gone, and the crew's gone! Both boats are gone!"

"Oh!" The big blue eyes widened on him, and an inkling of her plight seemed to come over her. Her lips trembled, but she held herself bravely. "You mean we must drown?"

The thunder of seas breaking on the deck answered. A cascade of water dashed down the companionway and swept round them. The man bent toward the child. "Look a' that! Now, ain't ye sorry ye come back?"

"I couldn't leave it to drown!"—passionately—"couldn't—couldn't!"

"Blow me, she's game!" With difficulty he maintained his equilibrium. "See here! Maybe there's a chance if any of them's left to help with the raft. But we've got to git out o' this!"

He passed his hand through her arm, awaited a favorable moment, and then, making a dash for the stairs, drew her as best he might to the deck.

Of living man he caught no sight. Only a single one of the dead yet remained, sliding about on the slippery planks with the movement of the ship, now to leeward, now rushing in a contrary direction, as if some grotesque spirit of life yet animated the dark, shapeless form.

From wave washed decks the man's glance turned to the sea. Suddenly he started, his eyes straining. He stared hard. "Maybe they've missed you. One of the ship's boats seems headin' this way!"

"Are they coming back to save us?" asked the child.

The convict did not answer. Could the boat make the ship, could it hope to, in that sea? Undoubtedly no.

"Put yer arms round my neck," said the man, stooping.

She put one of them around, with the other held up the cage. He opened the door of the wickerwork prison and a tiny thing flew out. Then he straightened. Both arms were around him now.

"'Fraid?" he whispered hoarsely.

The child shook her head.

An instant he waited, then launched himself forward. Buffeted hither and thither, he made a fierce fight for the rail, reached it and leaped far out into the seething waters.

CHAPTER III.

AN UNAPPRECIATED BOUNTY.

IN the prime of his belligerent career the Pet of Frisco had undergone many fierce contests and withstood some terrible punishments, but never had he undertaken a task calling for greater courage and power of endurance than the one he had this night voluntarily assumed. Overwhelmed again and again by the waves, each time he emerged with the child tight against his breast. Half strangled, he continued to fight on. But at length even his dogged obstinacy and determination began to flag. He felt his strength going, when, raising his eyes, he saw one of the small craft from the lost vessel bearing directly down upon him.

The sight inspired new energy and effort. Nearer, nearer, she drew; now she was but a few yards away. Then suddenly the sheet of the lifeboat went out, and the little sail fluttered like a mad thing, while the men bent with might and main over their ash handles in the endeavor to obey the commands of the chief mate in the stern. But despite skill and strength she was not easy to steer. Once she nearly capsized; then eager hands reached over the side. The convict held up the child. A voice, the police agent's, called out that they had her, and then the mate broke in with harsh, warning yells.

"Pull port, quick, or we're over!" And at once the outreaching arms returned quickly to their task. As the child was drawn in oars dragged and tugged. The lifeboat came slowly about, shipping several barrels of water. At the same time some one made the loosened sheet taut, the canvas caught the gust, and the craft gained sufficient headway to enable her to run over and not be run down by the seas. As she careened and plunged, racing down a frothing dark billow, the convict, relieved of his burden, clung to the lower gunwale. By a desperate effort he drew himself up, when a face vaguely remembered as part of a bad dream looked into his with a flash of surprise.

"Eh? Gimme a hand."

The asked for hand swept suddenly under the one grasping the side of the boat and shot up sharply. In the darkness and confusion no one saw the act. The convict disappeared, but his half articulate curses followed.

"The fellow's let go," muttered Lord Ronsdale, with a shiver.

At the steering oar the chief mate, hearing the cries of the man, cast a swift glance over his shoulder and hesitated. To bring the boat, half filled with water, around now meant inevitable disaster. One experiment of the sort had well nigh ended in their all being drowned. He knew he was personally responsible for the lives in his charge, and with but an instant in which to decide he declined to repeat the risk.

"He's probably gone by this time, anyhow," he told himself and drove on.

"He's done me—done me!" the convict repeated to himself. "And I ain't never goin' to git a chance to fix him," he thought and looked despairingly at the sky. "Ain't never! The slob!" And with a flood of almost sobbing invective he let himself go.

But as the waters closed over him and he sank his hand, reaching blindly out to grip in imagination the foe, touched something round, like a serpent or an eel. His fingers closed about it. It proved to be a line. He drew himself along, and to his surprise found himself again on the surface and near a great fragment of wreckage. This he might have discovered earlier but for the anger and hatred that had blinded him to all save the realization of his inability to wreak vengeance. Now, though he managed to reach the edge of the swaying mass from which the line dangled, he was too weak to draw himself up on the floating timbers. But he did pass a loop beneath his arms, and thus sustained he waited for his strength to return. Finally, his mind in a daze, the convict clambered, after repeated efforts, upon the wreckage, fastened the line about him again, and, falling into a saucer-like hollow, he sank into unconsciousness.

The night wore on. He did not move. The sea began to subside. Still he lay as if dead. Dawn's rosy lips kissed away the black shadows, touched tenderly the waves' tops, and at length the man stirred. He tried to sit up, but at first could not. Finally he raised himself and looked about him.

No other sign of the vessel than that part of it which had served him so well could he see. This fragment seemed rent from the bow. Yes, there was the yellow wooden mermaid bobbing to the waves, but not as of old. Poor castout trollop! Now the seas made sport of her who once had held her head so high!
