Steel Silhouette Targets

If you have not had the enjoyment of shooting steel chickens, pigs, turkeys and rams, you are missing out on a challenging shooting game. Silhouette targets can be set-up on almost any shooting range and even indoors using air rifles and pistols. NRA sanctions silhouette matches for air rifles, air pistols, rimfire rifles and pistols, and high power rifles and pistols.

Range dimensions are outlined in our NRA Silhouette rule books and can be shot for fun at any safe range distance. NRA Silhouette rulebooks can be found online at www.nrahq.org/compete/nra-rule-books.asp. Silhouette targets can be purchased commercially or you can make them yourself using the templates that are on the NRA Competitive Shooting Division website www.nrahq.org/compete/dept-silh.asp. Whether you use an air gun, rimfire or high power firearm, you will have a blast watching the silhouette target drop with a well placed shot.

One of the newest silhouette courses includes lever action rifles known as Cowboy Action Silhouette in which three different lever action firearms can be used. These firearms are broken down by cartridge: rimfire, pistol and high power rifle.

"The National Matches: 1903-2003 the First 100 Years..."

It is fascinating to go through this wonderful new tabletop book and see pictures from the early beginnings of the National Matches' and read articles about the people who have traveled from around the world to visit and shoot these matches. Every page contains a little piece of history and the thousands of pictures from the NRA archives bring the National Matches story to life.

For those who will be at Camp Perry this year, we will have the book in the NRA Camp Perry Store for sale at a $10 discount off the regular price of $69.99. Many of the people featured in the book will be at Camp Perry though out the summer and you can have a great time getting them to sign your copy. Copies of this book are also available through the NRA Program Materials Center online at <http://materials.nrahq.org/go/product.aspx?productid=CC%2019740>. This is one book that you will not be able to put down until you have gone through all 575 pages.

Update on Online Tournament Sanctioning

I don't think it is too early to say that our new online tournament sanctioning program is a success. We have heard from match sponsors across the country telling us that it is making their job much easier. The ability to sanction up to 12 matches at one time cuts out the redundancy of printing and mailing stacks of paper to get your club's matches sanctioned by the NRA.

It is our hope that many more of our tournament sponsors will start to use this online tool to sanction their matches. I invite you to take a look at the online forms and see for yourself how user friendly these forms are to use. The online address to sanction all NRA tournaments is www.nrahq.org/compete/tournaments/. ©

Want to win?

Sierra MatchKing bullets are used by more shooting champions at more long-range matches than any other rifle bullet in the world.

In fact, 49 out of 60 NRA Hi-Power Rifle Champions used MatchKing bullets in 2010 to win at Camp Perry and 105 out of 151 champions used them at the 2010 NRA Silhouette Nationals.

MatchKing's hollow point Boat Tail design provides that extra margin of ballistic performance match shooters need at long range, under adverse conditions.

Put MatchKing to work for you, but be warned; winning has interesting side effects.

DID YOU KNOW?

...that the M1 Garand rifle made its first appearance at the Camp Perry National Matches in 1939—although not really for competition? Two hundred new semi-automatic rifles were made available for “instruction only” at Camp Perry on the eve of WWII and 100,000 rounds of ammunition were also on hand for training use.

Winchester Ammunition Recall

Winchester has recalled 12 lots of its RANGER .223 Remington 64-grain Power-Point centerfire rifle ammunition. The last four characters of lot numbers being recalled are: DM70, DM80, DM90, DM01, DM11, DM21, DK01, DK11, DK21, DK31, DK41 and DK51. Winchester has determined the above lots may contain incorrect propellant which may cause firearm damage, rendering the firearm inoperable, and subject the shooter or bystanders to a risk of serious personal injury. Inspect the lot numbers stamped on the inside right tuck flap of the 20-round carton. For further information, contact Winchester at (866) 423-5224.

Celebrity Shooting!

Last month some of Hollywood's most notable celebrities participated in the Hollywood Celebrity Sporting Clays Invitational at the Oak Tree Gun Club in Santa Clarita, CA. The weekend event offered not only sporting clays but support for several charities such as Guide On, Wounded Warriors, Paralyzed Veterans of America, Children of Hero's Wish Program and Gallant Few. There were plenty of famous faces attending and participating, including veteran action star Patrick Kilpatrick, Joe Mantegna, Colin Farrell, Julian McMahon, British actor Vinnie Jones, Lou Ferrigno and Jerry Mathers, Ken Davitian from the movie Borat, Will Durant from CSI New York, and Gregory Michael from Greek. Double Tap Championship

For Max Michel, 2011 is already proving to be another outstanding shooting season. On a course designed for speed, but one that maintains a sense of humor throughout, the champion speed shooter won the June Double Tap Championship for the Open Division and Overall titles. Held in Wichita Falls, TX, The Double Tap drew 300 shooters from around the country. Additional titles went to Chris Anderson for Single Stack, Kale Garretson for Production, Russ Shaver for Limited-10, and Manny Bragg for Limited. Among the women, Rhonda Stonaker took the Production title, Randi Rogers took Limited and Athena Lee edged out Valerie Levanza Rosales by less than a point for the Open win.

20th Annual International Revolver Championships

Held at Hogue Action Pistol Range at the San Luis Obispo Sportsmen's Association, the 20th IRC drew more than 230 top revolver shooters from 26 states and three foreign nations. Titles were awarded in the Open, Limited or Classic divisions with scoring based on time and accuracy where time penalties are accrued for misses and shots outside the x-ring. In a win that came as no surprise, Jerry Miculek continued his unbeaten streak, winning the Open Division and the top title for the 19th time. In the Limited Division, John Bagakis made it a four-peat, claiming the wins on nine of 10 stages and the title with a final match time of 257.81 seconds. Leading the Classic division field from start to finish, Josh Lentz won 10 of 14 stages to take the title. Annette Aysen also claimed her fourth consecutive Women's Limited division title with a final time of 368.29 seconds, holding off team member Julie Golob in a heated competition between two of the country's top women revolver shooters. ©

The tournament is dedicated to a fine young man who was one of our junior shooters. From our local junior program, he moved on to attend the United States Naval Academy where he served as captain of their rifle team and graduated as a Lieutenant in the U.S. Marine Corps. Just after he was promoted, he was diagnosed with leukemia and passed away just a few years ago. This tournament is one of our ways to keep Ken's memory alive.

This event has become the largest NRA Smallbore Rifle Regional in the U.S. Seventy-five shooters and 150 coaches came to the NRA indoor range for this two-day match. We were especially grateful to the families and volunteers who came to the range on Saturday despite tornados and heavy down pours.

THAT'S SAVAGE ACCURACY.

If you want to have a chance in 1,000-yard competition, your rifle better be able to do this at 100. So will The Model 12 Palma give you a chance? Absolutely. But if you want to be the best, you'll have to beat Team Savage, and they (and their Model 12 Palmas) just happen to hold the U.S. team record at 1000 yards.

an open rig that is purpose-built for the challenges of Bianchi: Target movement, speed and accuracy.

Blackhawk pilot Trevor Baucom (left) now shoots for S&W and turned in a solid performance on the Mover at his first Bianchi Cup. After 13 years in the U.S. Army, Baucom was injured in a helicopter crash while serving in Afghanistan during his fourth deployment.

From Bianchi Cup Coordinator and NRA National Pistol Manager Tom Hughes: "One of the inspirational stories to come out of this year's Bianchi Cup was Sgt. Kevin Worrell, a member of the Marine Reserve team whose infrequent practices occur only between official duties. Worrell posted an amazing 476–26X on the moving target event, using an out-of-the-box production gun with no optic or lead

Shooting shoulder-to-shoulder with the champions is one of the unique opportunities of the Bianchi Cup. If you and I attended a NASCAR race, the Masters Golf tournament or the tennis classic at Wimbledon, we would likely be there only to watch. Bianchi Cup spectators, however, also get to participate. Sixty-three new shooters joined the roster for 2011, in addition to the doubling of new shooters at the 2010 Cup. There's something contagious going on among shooters who either bring their production gun or step-up to adjuster and using a stock "carry" holster. A perfect score for the Mover is 480, achieved this year only by those in the open class. This young Marine placed second overall in the Production Division—in his first year at Bianchi. A very seasoned and experienced Rob Leatham bested Sgt. Worrell by two points! Congratulations to all the Bianchi competitors and God Speed to our men and women in uniform."

into the final match at the Mover. Koenig would later say that he'd left too many Xs on the table to be confident of a win this year. Piatt's X-count was in front until the Mover, where the lead passed back to Koenig for his 13th win. Both men shot perfect scores.

As the prize money increases, so does the scrutiny. Triggers are weighed during registration and spot-checked during the match, as demonstrated by NRA referee John Rickards above, while match director Larry Mead looks on. Cartridges are randomly collected to verify their power floor. From the rule book: "All ammunition fired in the tournament must meet or exceed the power floor as described when checked by chronograph using the formula: Bullet weight (grains) X muzzle velocity (feet per second) = not less than 120,000."

Unclassified open class shooter Jeremy Newell (above) of Kansas City, MO, shoots a Caspian frame and shroud, and uses an Aimpoint scope with a Protocol Design Stick Shift that allows him to center the red dot while shooting the Mover, thus avoiding the need to lead the target.

The shooter pictured upper right knocks down the plates in the production class using his SIG Sauer X5 Allround in 9mm.

World Champion Jerry Miculek (middle right) shooting his signature S&W Model 625 revolver. The heat and powder burns near the cylinder reflect the 80,000 rounds he shoots annually.

At the formal awards ceremony, NRA National Pistol Manager Tom Hughes (l.) introduced the keynote speaker of the evening, John Bianchi himself, to a standing ovation.

THE 6.5 CREEDMOOR

The 6.5 Creedmoor cartridge excels at Camp Perry ranges and the plains of Africa.

By Aaron Carter, Managing Editor,
American Rifleman

Photos by Creedmoor Sports

One of the products sold at Creedmoor Sports is the Tubb 2000 (T2K) rifle. It was created by renowned competitive shooter David Tubb who used it to win multiple NRA High Power National Championships. Although it was chambered for several cartridges, one that sparked much interest was Tubb's own design, the 6mm XC, a cartridge used by Tubb and others to capture several Camp Perry titles. The only problem with the cartridge was that it required handloading and load data was scarce.

"People were passing around load data by word of mouth and things like blown primers and stiff bolt-lifts were common," explained former Marine Corps competitive shooter and current Creedmoor Sports general manager Dennis DeMille. Since DeMille's company sold the rifles, customers actively sought him out at the range to explain the problems they encountered.

Approached by DeMille, David Emary, chief ballistics for Hornady Mfg. Co., had a simple solution to the 6mm XC dilemma: Hornady would commercially manufacture the load—or a similar one. But first, Emary wanted to get it right the first time, so he suggested that DeMille make a wish list for the perfect cartridge. DeMille's list included: magazine length and low recoil (for rapid fire); bullets with high ballistic coefficients; nothing proprietary; flat-shooting and inherently accurate; not a barrel burner; recipe printed on the box (for handloaders); two bullet weights for both across-the-course and long range; comparable in price to the .308 Win. and readily available components. "In short, the idea was to produce one cartridge for anything out to 1,000 yards," added DeMille.

"The original intent of the cartridge was an across-the-course match cartridge," said Emary. "We envisioned it as an off-the-shelf round that would produce the accuracy and ballistics to compete in all match shooting disciplines right out of the box. At the same time, we realized that the same characteristics would make an exceptional hunting cartridge with the right bullets." But it was through the development of Hornady's Superformance propellant—used in LeverEvolution loads, the Ruger Compact Magnums, and .308 and .338 Marlin Express cartridges—that enhanced the external and terminal ballistics to near-magnum cartridge performance, without excessive recoil and rifle weight.

During the design phase, Emary collaborated with Hornady Mfg. Co. assistant director of engineering Joe Thielen. "The general design of the case provides sufficient cartridge head height to allow for very long ogive, high-ballistic-coefficient 6.5mm bullets in a short-action rifle," said Emary. "We knew from past experience that a large case wasn't needed to get performance with this smaller caliber, and the propellant charge weight had to be kept down to reduce recoil for competitive timed-fire events. We needed a very efficient cartridge in order to meet our goals."

The .30 TC served as the parent case, and the shoulder angle was limited to 30 degrees to ease manufacture. Besides, little could be gained from a steeper shoulder angle.

Originally the 6.5 Creedmoor was loaded only with Hornady's A-Max target bullets. To adapt the cartridge to hunting, the company recently began loading 120-grain GMX and 129-grain Super Shock Tip (SST) bullets. Said Emary: "The Superformance loads provide virtually the same performance as the 6.5mm and .284 Norma, but does so with less propellant, less recoil, longer barrel life and better accuracy."

This was confirmed by noted competitive shooter Kent Reeve. "I have used seven different 6.5mm cartridges in long-range, mid-range and over-the-course shooting," said Reeve. "Of all of them, the 6.5 Creedmoor is the most even-tempered."

Another Gun for the Rack?

During a week of hunting, the Creedmoor performed consistently. If there was any question as to the appropriateness of the cartridge on African plains game, arguably some of the toughest species on Earth, it proved itself time and again. There was the impala at 401 yards; the SCI No. 18 steenbok at 80 yards; the black wildebeest at 300 yards; two fallow bucks at less than 100 yards; a vaal rhebok at approximately 280 yards; a springbuck at 226; and a host of varmints and non-trophy species out to 530. With the exception of the vaal rhebok, when a second shot was taken but unnecessary, all were one-shot kills.

There's something to be said about a cartridge without excessive recoil that offers the qualities and capabilities of the 6.5 Creedmoor. It has certainly impressed me.

EDITOR'S NOTE:
Notice Anything New?

The 6.5 Creedmoor cartridge on the left is the version that was ultimately released once the R&D was completed in 2007. What is being shipped now is an evolutionary improvement—the cartridge on the right. National Champion and originator of the 6.5 Creedmoor concept—Dennis DeMille, is a perfectionist. So are the people he works with at Hornady. DeMille recently approached Emary with the observation that case neck openings were less than perfect in the brass used for the 6.5 Creedmoor cartridges. Subsequent findings concluded that the standard industry practice of washing the brass to remove annealing marks was the culprit. Choosing function over form, the two companies agreed to forgo the washing step in favor of even more consistent performance. Bottom line: The upgraded cases and cartridges now have a new look; sort of a color-case-hardened patina. Only those in the know will appreciate the improvement. ©

2011 NCAA Rifle Championships

Columbus State University hosted this year's 2011 NCAA Rifle Championships Mar. 11-12, in Columbus, GA, with the assistance of the United States Army Marksmanship Unit from Fort Benning, GA.

Forty competitors from the top eight schools in the regular season were selected to compete as well as eight individual competitors based on scores submitted in a designated qualifier.

The championships are comprised of both individual and team competitions in smallbore three position and air rifle matches, with the overall champions determined through an aggregate of the two scores.

Sarah Scherer, from Texas Christian University, images her next shot sequence in Columbus, GA.

The smallbore championship, held first at the USAMU's Pool Complex in Fort Benning, came down to a close finish between the West Virginia University Mountaineers and the Kentucky Wildcats. West Virginia's score of 2329 was edged out in both individual and team championships by Kentucky, with Ethan Settlemires' 691 beating West Virginia's Nicco Campriani's 689 and the Wildcat's team score of 2336, giving them a 7-point lead heading into air rifle.

Determined to overtake Kentucky for their 15th national championship, West Virginia had an impressive 599 from Nicco Campriani, who went on to win the individual air rifle championship with a 701. The close race between perennial champion West Virginia and winless Kentucky intensified as the Mountaineers claimed the air rifle championship with a 2368, bringing their total team score to 4697. Under tremendous pressure, Kentucky's Settlemires fired a 590 that was only enough for second in air rifle, but pushed the Wildcats over the hump to bring them their first overall championship in school history with a total team score of 4700.

“It really was a team effort,” said Settlemires of their undefeated regular season and national title. Finishing as the runner-up four times and third-place four times since 1994, the Wildcats needed one small nudge to finally land themselves in the winner's circle. “We had a lot of hard practice coming into this—five, six days a week on the range,” Settlemires said.

Texas Christian University, the 2011 NCAA champion, shot well but was unable to pass West Virginia or Kentucky, finishing third overall with a team score of 4664.

2011 NRA Pistol Championships

The 2011 NRA Pistol Championships were held for the seventh consecutive year at Fort Benning, GA, on Mar. 15-19. Free Pistol, Women's Air Pistol, Standard Pistol, Women's Sport Pistol and Open Air Pistol championships make up this top event for collegiate pistol shooters around the country. A total of 100 shooters came to compete in the championships, representing 16 schools, with 14 eligible to compete for team championships.

Despite all the teams and individual shooters present, the 2011 championships were dominated by only a handful of people. The United States Naval Academy took first place in both Women's Air Pistol and Women's Sport Pistol. Their shooters also captured the individual titles with Emily Meyer winning Air Pistol and Kirsten Asdal taking Sport Pistol. By a significant margin, they won the 2011 Women's Team Aggregate with a 2712.

When it came to competing for the overall team championship, Ohio State and the United States Military Academy began butting heads for the team aggregate. The Ohio State Buckeyes started strong by winning Free Pistol as the Black Knights placed second, but the United States Military Academy took over after that and shot their way to victory in the Standard Pistol and Open Air Pistol championships. Ohio State was close in score, but ultimately ceded the team championship to USMA whose 6357 was the highest team aggregate this year.

Despite having top teams, neither Ohio State nor the United States Military Academy had shooters win individual titles due to the impressive shooting of Nick Mowrer. A student at Pike's Peak Community College, Mowrer has the opportunity to train at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, CO. The high level of competition he

Although she did not win an individual title in either of the Women's championships, Heather Deppe from the United States Military Academy shot steady and finished near the top of both championships. Her consistency paid off in the end as she captured the women's individual aggregate with a total of 933.

2011 NRA Intercollegiate Rifle Club Championships

Coming off a strong inaugural year, the second annual NRA Intercollegiate Rifle Club Championships were hosted by Clemson University in Charleston, SC, Apr. 7-10. The Citadel graciously offered to be the official site of the championships and let the competitors make use of its facilities. Open to College Rifle Clubs, ROTC Teams and independent shooters, the NRA Intercollegiate Rifle Club Championships were created for shooters who currently have no national championship of their own. Fifteen schools and universities were represented at the championships this year, among which only West Virginia University was represented at both this event and the NCAA Rifle Championships during the previous month.

Like the NCAA Rifle Championships, the NRA Club Championships are comprised of a smallbore three-position and air rifle championship. Penn State's club team shot their way to the smallbore championship with a total score of Joe Totts of Ohio State University shooting his way to third place.

2142 on the first day as Clayton Peck from Michigan State University took the individual title with a 570.

On the second day, Clayton Peck continued his dominant shooting and won the air rifle title with a 582, solidifying his top individual aggregate score of 1152. Host school Clemson, who was defending their air rifle title from the previous year, shot to the top of the first relay with a 2218, which stood throughout the rest of the day as no one from the other two relays was able to best their score. Although Penn State finished second, their combined 4326 convincingly won them the overall team aggregate.

After the air rifle championships concluded, a large number of competitors stuck around to participate in a fun shoot held by NRA Board Member Dave Butz (former Washington Redskins football player) where shooters contended for a cash prize by running a short obstacle course and taking aim at various targets with air rifles.

Aside from the competitions, the NRA Intercollegiate Rifle Club Championships provided educational opportunities to those interested in the shooting sports but may not have as much experience shooting professional matches as non-club teams.

H.Q. Moody from NRA's Competitive Shooting Division and volunteer Mary Furr were on hand the last day of the championships to share their wealth of knowledge and walk the students through the proper procedures of a match and the best ways to approach each segment in order to become a better shooter. ©

EXPERT FORUM - EYE DOMINANCE

By Chip Lohman, Managing Editor

Basic instruction introduces this subject to beginning shooters, but without much follow-up. We asked Dr. Norman Wong—Master Bullseye Pistol shooter and Optometrist, for a medical introduction, followed by the shared experiences of nine champions.

Dr. Norman Wong

"Shooters should understand the physiological changes within our eyes, whether we choose to close (or occlude) our non-aiming eye or not. The reason for closing or occluding is to prevent diplopia (double vision) as we obtain our sight picture.

"The sympathetic nervous system (SNS) and the parasympathetic nervous system (PSNS) are part of the autonomic nervous system that controls our body. Within the SNS, we're concerned with the iris dilator muscle—a smooth radial muscle that dilates the pupil. The pupil dilates automatically when, for example, there is a 'fight or flight' response and when the light is dim. Conversely, within the PSNS, the iris sphincter muscle constricts the pupil. If one were to compare the human eye to a camera lens, the average eye has an 'f stop' of f 5.6.

"As many know, our pupils constrict with bright lighting. With each millimeter decrease in pupil size, our depth of focus improves by 0.12 diopter. When a light source is directed onto one eye, the pupil of that eye constricts. This is known as the "direct light reflex." Interestingly, the pupil of the opposite eye also constricts, which is known as the 'consensual light reflex.' Of particular interest to the shooter, when we close the non-aiming eye while shooting, not only does that pupil dilate because of the diminished lighting, but so does the pupil of the aiming eye.

"With a larger pupil, we may not see as well for a couple of reasons. As the pupil size increases, the depth of focus within our eyes decreases along with a corresponding decrease to the depth of field.

Although our front sights may be clear, the target will become more blurred.

Secondly, when the pupil is larger, all of the light rays may not converge onto the retina in a single point because of spherical aberration. There is spherical aberration as light passes through both the cornea and the crystalline lens. With younger shooters, the positive spherical aberration from the cornea is compensated by the negative spherical aberration from the crystalline lens. This is another reason why younger eyes see better than older eyes. With aging, spherical aberration from the cornea remains constant but the spherical aberration from the crystalline lens changes, causing more focusing problems among older shooters.

Why does closing one eye seem to affect some of us more than others? One reason is our individual pupil size.

"Why does closing or using a dark occluder over our non-aiming eye seem to affect some of us more than others? One of the main reasons is our individual pupil size. At one time, it was thought that myopic eyes (nearsighted eyes), blue eyes, and women tend to have larger pupils; whereas hyperopic eyes (farsighted eyes), brown eyes, and men tend to have smaller pupils. Recent studies have indicated that these factors may not be significant, but age has always been a determinant of pupil size. As we age, our pupil size decreases and the pupillary response becomes more sluggish. When a shooter under the age of 40 focuses on the front sight, the pupils constrict naturally, a principal known as the 'accommodative reflex.' The accommodative reflex is diminished or absent with older shooters. With such a variety of situations, so are our own interpretations of how blurred the target appears. A shooter with a 6 mm pupil will see differently than a shooter with a 3 mm pupil.

"Within reason, we would generally like to allow as much light as possible to reach our eyes to keep the pupils small. Besides causing the shooting eye to dilate, closing the non-aiming eye may also cause the eyelids of the shooting eye to tighten and alter vision. If the shooter chooses to use an occluder rather than closing the non-aiming eye, s/he can maximize the lighting to that eye by using a white, translucent occluder or scotch tape, rather than a black occluder.

"Conventional pistol shooters and the majority of rifle shooters are static in their shooting positions so a variety of methods may be used. Other disciplines that require quick movements may not benefit from occluders which would limit peripheral vision. While experimenting, some shooters may find that they can keep both eyes opened while shooting—aiming with the dominant eye while ignoring the non-aiming eye, without the use of an occluder."

"Even with all this knowledge about our eyes, we still need to keep things in perspective. Jim Lenardson, a past national conventional pistol champion, shot his iron sight pistols while he simply closed his non-aiming eye. Other notable pistol shooters such as Philip Hemphill, 10-time winner of the National Police Shooting Championships; Dave Lange, past civilian national conventional pistol champion; and SSG John Ennis of the AMU pistol team have all used a black occluder. Five-time national conventional pistol champion Steve Reiter writes: 'I have a black patch for my left eye. Sometimes I wear it, and sometimes I don't.'"

And from our Expert Panel

Jessie Abbate

National Action Pistol Champion

"When I shoot limited (iron sight), I close one eye. When I shoot open (scope) I leave both eyes open. I am right-eye dominant, but even when I close my left eye, I bring the gun over to my right eye. I don't like to move my head, because it won't always be in the same position. It's more consistent for me to bring the gun to my eye. I always bring the gun over to my dominant eye, but it still seems to be pretty centered. Consistency is very important when it comes to acquiring the sights at speed, and it is more consistent for me to bring the gun to my dominant eye."

Dennis DeMille

National Service and Long Range Rifle Champion

"I close my non-shooting eye initially. Once I pick up my sight picture it's not something I focus on. For those that use a patch, I recommend that they use something white to block their view rather than cover the eye. The eyes are made to work together, so if you put an eye patch over your non-shooting eye, the other eye will be affected as well. Putting a piece of scotch tape, masking tape, or even a white paster over the upper part of the lens covering the non-shooting eye works well. It only needs to obscure the line of sight to the front sight."

Julie Golob

National Action Pistol Champion

"I shoot with both eyes open. Some shooters just don't see well with both eyes open though and can even see two sight pictures. In that case I encourage them to either use a piece of frosted tape to cover the line of sight for one eye, or squint. I am fortunate that the gun naturally lines up to my point of aim. I am right handed and right-eye dominant, so it's not much of an issue for me to line things up easily. For cross-dominant shooters that can keep both eyes open, I suggest a simple tilt of the head to line up their dominant eye with the sights."

Phil Hemphill

National Police and Bullseye Pistol Champion

"In Bullseye I use a patch over my non-dominant eye, which helps with muscle fatigue. I have tried closing my left eye using the eye muscles and I tend to get some eye fatigue from doing so.

"Eye patches are not legal in PPC (Police Pistol Competition), so I squint my left eye, trying to avoid the muscle fatigue again. This also helps me to 'clear' the target up a bit and still see the sights sharply."

Bruce Piatt

National Police, Bullseye and Action Pistol Champion

"Depending on the type of shooting, I will place a piece of translucent scotch tape over the upper half of the glasses on my non-dominant eye. I do this for Bullseye and almost all iron sight NRA Action Pistol events. When shooting events that are fast paced, I want the non-dominant eye to help locate the next target. On all aerial shotgun events, I will have both eyes open. I hold the pistol directly in front of my face, not for visual reasons but to balance the recoil of the pistol. Having the pistol to one side or the other will change the amount of recoil traveling up each arm, causing the pistol to track unevenly during recoil and, most importantly, during sight acquisition for the next shot. The faster the shooting, the more important a balanced stance is.

"Some shooters, especially those with nearly equal or cross dominance, will naturally find themselves squinting one eye. When anyone does this, you are also closing your dominant eye to some extent and adding stress to your face. Being relaxed as much as you can will lead to proper shooting. Keeping your dominant eye open during the entire firing sequence (during the wobble stage, pressing the trigger, the gun's recoil and the return of the sight or follow thru) will lead to 'reading the sight' and learning from each shot fired."

Carroll Pilant

Marketing Manager, Sierra Bullets and Action Pistol Champion

"I am right handed and left eye dominant, so I close my right eye and roll my head slightly right so that my left eye is centered up with the pistol and the pistol is still centered up with my body. A few of my handguns have the old style HoloSights on them and I actually shoot them with both eyes open. That is about the only dot sighting device I can shoot with both eyes open though. With iron sights, I always use my dominant left eye. When shooting strong hand only, I still center the handgun with my body and roll my head slightly right and use my dominant left eye again. When shooting a rifle with iron sights, I am fortunate enough that I can shoot a rifle as well left handed as I can right handed, so I just shoot iron sighted rifles left handed."

Judy Tant

National Bullseye Pistol Champion

"I shoot with both eyes open. I shoot right handed but am left eye dominant. Fortunately, my right eye is strong enough (with corrections) to see the target adequately (which for bullseye is not a high standard), so I occlude my left eye with a small tab of translucent tape that blocks sight of the target only when I am in my usual stance. This leaves a lot of my left lens uncovered so that I can see reasonably well out of it when scoring. I like translucent tape rather than something more opaque because it minimizes the disparity in light reaching the two eyes, which is desirable I am told. Shooting left eyed would be very uncomfortable for my neck, though I know of shooters who manage with this arrangement. When I first started out, I blocked the left eye completely, but that was a nuisance because it left me either half blind or needing to fiddle with flip-up patches or separate glasses for going down range to score. And before that, I think I just closed my left eye, an obvious inferior approach that I would advise against."

David Tubb

National Service and Long Range Rifle Champion

"I keep both eyes open, always. Some use an opaque blinder in rifle or shotgun shooting. If you close your nondominant eye, you will not get as good a sight picture—to say nothing of the extra time involved (closing gives sympathetic enlargement of pupil). If your aiming eye is not your dominant eye, you have even more of a problem to overcome. I cannot recall there ever being a national champion rifle or shotgun shooter with a non-dominant aiming eye."

Lones Wigger

World, National and Olympic Champion Rifleman

"I don't shoot high power rifle anymore but the technique for iron sights is the same for all rifle disciplines that utilize an adjustable rear aperture to control the amount of light into the shooting eye. Iron sight shooters with such a sight, focus on the entire sight picture—not just the front sight or target. Pistol and service rifle shooters, however, focus on the front sight which is a different technique since they can't control the amount of light allowed into the shooting eye through the sight unless they are using a scope. All shooters should use their dominate eye to look at the sights. Even then, the non-dominant eye will sometimes take over. If this forces you to squint, use a blinder attached to the sight or a blocker on the lens of the non shooting eye so it will not take over. This problem is more apparent when you use the non-dominant eye. As a rule of thumb, shooters should try to use the dominant eye unless the vision is impaired and the non-dominant eye has better vision. You should always shoot with both eyes open since this will allow the shooting eye to function properly." 📍
