What Lies Ahead?

The Caribbean will enjoy steady growth in its all-important tourism sector as the U.S. economy continues its recovery, but serious issues — ranging from violent crime in some destinations like the Bahamas and Trinidad to the widely despised U.K. air passenger duty — could prevent the region from realizing its full potential in 2014.

The biggest challenge, say hotel and tourism executives throughout the region, is increasing airlift — whether it's bringing tourists from around the world or getting residents from one Caribbean island to another.

"Airlift is basic. The islands that will deliver the most returns are the ones that have the most airlift," said Frank Rainieri, vice-president of business development and real estate for Grupo Puntacana, speaking at a November 2013 tourism conference in the Dominican Republic.

"We see a bright future because investors are investing in hotels, banks are lending again, and brands are starting to do things they haven't wanted to do in the past," Rainieri told Hotel News Now, noting that a 13% jump in the number of seats flying into Punta Cana has been a huge boost to the hotel sector.

Expect to see the largest hotel ever built in the Caribbean — the 2,900-room Baha Mar resort in the Bahamas — open this year. The planned December 2014 inauguration of the $3.5 billion project means an additional 260,000 [air] seats will be needed to fill all its rooms, says Vincent Vanderpool Wallace, the country's former tourism minister and now principal of Nassau-based Bedford Baker Group.

"We should figure out some ways that the cost of air transportation coming into the region is as low as possible," Wallace said. "We need ways to fill the rooms we have in the Caribbean that aren't filled more than we need more rooms."

With the exception of Cuba, which remains subject to a U.S. embargo more than half a century after its enactment, the Caribbean region depends on the American travel market — and that region's booming cruise ship industry has helped cement Miami's position as the world's busiest cruise port. In late December, port director Bill Johnson announced that Miami had added two new cruise brands — Regent Seven Seas Cruises and Disney Cruise Line — and that more than 5 million passengers will use the port in fiscal 2014, up from just over 4 million in fiscal 2013, which ended Sept. 30.

During the 2011-12 season, cruise ship tourism generated nearly $2 billion in direct expenditures, more than 45,000 jobs and around $728 million in employee wages among the 21 destinations included in an exhaustive survey conducted by the Florida-Caribbean Cruise Association.

The FCCA said five destinations enjoyed direct cruise tourism expenditures of $100 million or more in 2011-12: Bahamas ($393.8 million); St. Maarten ($356.2 million), U.S. Virgin Islands ($339.8 million); Puerto Rico ($186.6 million) and Cayman Islands ($157.7 million). Combined, these five destinations with $1.43 billion in direct spending comprised 72% of total cruise expenditures among the 21 destinations surveyed by the FCCA (the Caribbean's largest island, Cuba, wasn't included in the report).

The next nine destinations, with expenditures between $25 million and $100 million, accounted for 23% of total cruise tourism spending — ranging from $30.3 million in the British Virgin Islands to $70.6 million in St. Kitts-Nevis. In addition to St. Kitts, Aruba ($63.7 million), Turks & Caicos ($60.6 million) and Barbados ($53.7 million) all had total cruise tourism expenditures exceeding $50 million.

Yet the Caribbean's share of the global cruise market is gradually shrinking. Industry statistics show that in 2010, 41% of all cruise itineraries were to Caribbean destinations. By 2011, it had fallen to 39%, and in 2012, the Caribbean's share had declined further, to 37%.

Here's a look at the latest developments in the region's top 13 tourism markets:

BAHAMAS

On Oct. 23, Nassau's Lynden Pindling International Airport officially opened its new terminal for domestic flights and international departures, marking the completion of a four-year, $409 million redevelopment of the country's largest airport.

LPIA, measuring 606,000 sqf, will be able to accommodate more than five million passengers a year — 50% more than before. They will enjoy 24 retail locations and 16 restaurants, bars and lounges.

Outside, an additional one million square feet of aircraft operating surface has the capacity for A380 jumbo jets and other large aircraft. Officials of the Nassau Airport Development Co. (NAD) designed the new airport with 10 aircraft bridges and 30 aircraft ground loading positions that can handle up to 12 U.S. jets simultaneously.

When it comes to cruise ships, the Bahamas leads the rest of the Caribbean in sheer numbers. The FCCA study says just over 4.4 million passengers and crew arrived aboard cruise ships during the 2011-12 cruise year, up 87% from the 2.4 million who came during the 2008-09 season.

Of the current total, 90% disembarked and visited the Bahamas. Along with crew members, they spent a combined $393.8 million — up 60% from $246 million in 2008-09 — though crew members spent an average $110.00 each, as opposed to $64.81 per passenger. Despite the generally upbeat numbers, per-passenger spending declined by 23%, particularly on food and beverages, jewelry and local crafts.

All told, cruise ships contributed $146.2 million to the Bahamian economy in 2011-12 and employed 8,668 people — the highest figure for any Caribbean country.

Getting to the Bahamas — at least the resort island of Bimini — got easier in 2013 with the inauguration of the Resorts World Bimini SuperFast ship in July. The 32,000-ton ship, which carries 600 passengers, makes the 50-mile voyage from the Port of Miami in two hours and is owned by Genting, a Malaysian conglomerate that also plans to build a 300-room resort on Bimini. Day and evening cruises are available and cost $99 round-trip.

The venture is expected to transport 400,000 passengers a year between Florida and Bimini. In 2012, about 70,000 tourists visited Bimini, which is home to 1,500 people.

On Nov. 19, the owners of Baha Mar announced that Spain's Meliá Hotels

International would operate the all-inclusive $3.5 billion resort. The luxury project, which encompasses 1,000 acres including 3,000 feet of oceanfront, is 12 minutes from Nassau International Airport. The new destination will offer more than 2,900 hotel rooms and luxury residences. Amenities include the 100,000-square-foot casino, an 18-hole, 72-par Jack Nicklaus golf course and more than a dozen pools. A convention center will provide 200,000 square feet for meeting facilities.

The Bahamas government also signed a deal with a major resort line for a $90 million refurbishment and expansion project at Columbus Isle Village, and on adjacent land in San Salvador. Prime Minister Perry Christie said the agreement with Club Mediteranee and Sand & Ocean Investments Ltd. would include existing guest rooms, buildings, grounds, mechanical plant and the creation of a spa, and new restaurants. The construction of 360 luxury condo-hotel units will be followed by the building of a 125-room boutique hotel to be managed by a European resort operator, and should be completed in four years.

BARBADOS

Economic difficulties in Europe and the ever-increasing air passenger duty (APD) imposed by the British government have combined to dampen expectations for an improvement in the Barbados tourism sector for 2014.

Barbados, in fact, is the only country in the Western Hemisphere whose economy is predicted to shrink this year, according to the International Monetary Fund. The latest IMF projections show the island's overall GDP declining by 1.1%.

The latest increase in the air passenger duty is being blamed for a 10.7% decline in U.K. arrivals during August 2013 alone. The APD — supposedly an attempt to fight global warming by taxing airline passengers for long-haul flights — now adds £332 to the cost of a Barbados holiday for a family of four flying from any British airport, or £664 when flying in premium economy, business or first-class. The tax on flying to the Caribbean has more than doubled since 2009, when the same family of four would have had to pay only £160, or £320 in premium cabins.

Although attempts to fight the APD have gone nowhere-- indeed, the APD is scheduled to go up again in April in line with inflation -- the Barbados Tourism Authority has begun issuing British tourists vouchers worth a maximum of £128 to offset the increased airfare they pay to visit the island for at least two weeks.

“For Barbados and the Eastern Caribbean islands in particular, the U.K. remains their main tourism source market,” said David Jessop, managing director of the London-based Caribbean Council.

During the 2011-12 cruise year, 770,608 passengers and 311,471 crew arrived in Barbados, virtually unchanged from 2008-09, according to FCCA. Average passenger expenditures declined by 5%, however, from $69.10 in 2008-09 to $65.64 in 2011-12.

“The decline in average expenditures by transit passengers varied by category,” said FCCA. “In some cases, such as shore excursions and ground transportation, the average spend per purchase remained relatively constant or increased, but the percentage of passengers purchasing these services declined. In other categories, such as jewelry or clothing, the average spend per purchase remained relatively constant or declined, but the percentage of passengers purchasing these goods increased. For homeport passengers, an increase in both the average spend and percentage of passengers purchasing lodging and food and beverages was partially offset by a decline in spending in the remaining categories.”

On the other hand, the Barbados government says cruise ship arrivals rose from 616,317 in 2012 to 656,083 in 2013 — up 6.5% — with further growth of 5% projected this year. Local officials hope to reach 700,000 cruise passengers this year for the first time since 2011. They also say cruise ship calls will rise from 372 in 2013 to 395 this year, an increase of 6.2%.

Cruise arrivals are expected to increase dramatically with the opening of the Sugar Point Cruise Terminal. Tourism minister Richard Sealy said this project will not only ensure that Barbados has a proper cruise facility, but that it would provide the island with more adequate facilities for the home-porting of vessels.

Work began in late 2012 on the $300 million project, which is a partnership comprising the Barbados Port Authority, Royal Caribbean Cruise Ltd. and SMI Infrastructure Solutions Inc. It involves the reclamation of 15 acres of land from the sea off Trevor's Way in Bridgetown, the capital. The completed facility — themed around the island's rum and sugar culture — will incorporate the Bridgetown Fisheries Complex.

At the new terminal, cruise and cargo facilities are to be separated. The initial phase, spanning two years, will include two cruise piers to accommodate four megaships, arrival and departure facilities and parking lots. Phase two will start in 2017 and involve the construction of a third pier and the rollout of shopping outlets.

On a positive note, the average stay for visitors in Barbados has gone up by two days, said Tourism Minister Richard Sealy — thanks to an increase in air traffic from Europe.

The Barbados government recently signed an agreement with Sandals Resorts to take control of the defunct Almond Beach Village. Jamaica-based Sandals has also purchased the Casuarina Hotel in southern Barbados and will turn it into a Couples resort.

Sealy said the venture is worth $250 million and will employ 1,500 people at both properties. Together, the two hotels will add 800 rooms to the island's hotel stock, bringing an additional 130,000 visitors to Barbados annually.

BERMUDA

Bermuda's tourism industry remains stagnant, with the British colony of 60,000 expecting little or no growth this coming year. In 2012, total arrivals fell to 615,171, nearly 6% lower than the year before. Some 73% of all visitors come from the United States, 13% from Canada, 9% from the United Kingdom and the remaining 5% from all other countries. The average length of stay has remained relatively consistent at 6.09 nights, according to government statistics.

Air arrivals dropped by 2% to 232,063, while cruise arrivals tumbled

Le Rouge International BV opened a stunning 310-square meter The Yellow House (La Casa Amarilla) store in the heart of Curacao at the end of 2013, relocating from its former location in Salinja Galleries to Fokkerweg 64 with a complete make-over. The new store has added a wide range of product categories, including a full range of popular luxury perfumes, cosmetics and skin care; watches by Michael Kors, Guess, Fossil, Mulco and Diesel; handbags by Guess & Michael Kors; sunglasses by Rayban, Carrera and more, and jewelry by Swarovski and TOUS, reports Le Rouge Director Meena Hemrajani.

by 9% to 378,262 — mainly due to a reduction of 20 cruise calls compared to 2011, a record year.

Cruise arrivals were expected to fall even further in 2013 due to the withdrawal of service of the Veendam, which docked in Hamilton in 2012.

Seeking to remain competitive in the Caribbean cruise market, Bermuda recently passed a law allowing visiting cruise ships to keep their casinos open while overnighting.

The Cruise Ship Casino Act of 2013, approved Oct. 3, allows on-board casinos to operate between 9 p.m. and 5 a.m. — allowing cruise companies to boost their revenues and the Bermuda government to collect higher license fees as a result.

But ships must be in port for at least one night to qualify for permission.

“The use of the casino is to be limited to passengers on board the ship only. No local residents or visitors to the ship will be allowed to participate in casino activities,” said Tourism Minister Shawn Crockwell in presenting the legislation, adding that the impact on local retailers would be minimal.

“Our research has indicated that the majority of visiting cruise passengers return to their ship by 9 p.m. and, by this time, most of our retail shops are closed,” Crockwell told Bermuda’s Royal Gazette. “However, if the destination provides good products that include good entertainment and amenities that goes beyond the traditional offerings, the passenger will stay ashore to take in the local experience and spend money.”

Smaller ships carrying less than 2,000 passengers and capable of berthing in either Hamilton or St. George’s are exempt from the license fee.

Crockwell explained that the government, which opposed the casinos on cruise ships provision four years ago, was supporting it now so as to stay competitive with other destinations.

At the same time, Bermuda has appointed an eight-member board to oversee efforts to rebuild its tourism industry. Crockwell hailed the board — which comprises six locals and two overseas directors — as a “watershed” and “the beginning of a new era.”

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

The undisputed king of Caribbean tourism number-wise, the Dominican Republic consistently attracts more visitors to its shores than any other country in the region. In 2012, the D.R. —known for its low prices and friendly people — saw a 7% growth in arrivals, reaching over 5.0 million. Not content with that number, the Dominican government recently boosted the annual budget of its Ministry of Tourism by $61 million in order to reach the ambitious goal set by President Danilo Medina: 10 million tourists a year within 10 years.

The country’s Central Bank reported that during the first seven months of 2013, just over 2.93 million tourists visited the D.R., up 0.81% from the same period a year ago. The country received 83,577 more U.S. tourists compared to the year-ago period, but travel from Central America, Asia and Europe is down.

Between January and July 2013, the biggest segment of tourists visiting the D.R. came from North America (60.42%), followed by Europe (24.58%), South America (10.18%), Central America and the Caribbean (4.57%) and the rest of the world (0.25%).

Another growth market is Russia, with an increase of 16,072 passengers in the first seven months of 2013. The Russian government already has a consulate in Punta Cana and is considering opening a second one in Puerto Plata, because both destinations are popular with Russian tourists (thanks to a D.R. promotion office in St. Petersburg). Daily flights on Transaero direct from Moscow are filled with wealthy Russian tourists eager to spend money.

Other countries that have seen increases in the number of tourists traveling to the D.R. include Germany (up 12,697 travelers in the first seven months of 2013); Chile (up 8,359); Sweden (up 5,917); Brazil (up 4,469) and Great Britain (up 3,895).

Government statistics show that 63.6% of all tourists flying to the D.R. arrived at Punta Cana International Airport. Another 18.80% flew into Santo Domingo’s Las Américas International Airport, and 9.46% via Puerto Plata International Airport.

Domingo and Puerto Plata, said it intends to build a hotel, convention center and cargo terminal at Las Américas, and a new control tower at Puerto Plata. Works to improve facilities for security staff and install modern alternative power systems are proposed for other terminals.

In total, Aerodom plans to invest $350 million on infrastructure for both airports. It also wants its concession contract extended by another eight years, to end in 2038. Aerodom currently pays the Dominican government 6% in gross income. The company said that to date, it has invested $440 million in the facilities under its charge.

The Dominican Ministry of Tourism has begun an urban renewal project for the colonial zone of Santo Domingo. The intention: to improve the experience tourists have when visiting this UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Architect Maribel Villalona said the first phase will center on Isabela la Católica and Arzobispo Merino, Presidente Billini and Arzobispo Portes streets. The $29.7 million project is funded by the Inter-American Development Bank.

Villalona said the plan calls for the installation of underground power and phone lines as well as new signage, sewers, parking, sidewalks and pedestrian areas. The program will take around eight months and will result in improvements at Ozama Fort, the Museum of Casas Reales, the Columbus Alcazar and other leading historic sites. The San Francisco monastery ruins will become a cultural and arts center.

Sansouci Port of Santo Domingo has contracted Coralux SA to dredge and maintain the Río Ozama estuary where cruise ships dock. The investment will also fund expansion of the Sans Souci tourism dock on the port's eastern side, and a major cleanup and improvement of the port in order to facilitate the arrival of larger-tonnage ships.

The D.R. is not yet a major cruise ship destination compared to nearby rivals such as Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

During the 2011-12 cruise season, the country received just under 270,000 cruise tourists, including 213,000 transit passengers and 57,000 passengers embarking on cruises in the D.R. Of the transit passengers, 85% disembarked and visited the country. Along with crew, they spent a total of $21.4 million, or $49.31 per passenger, while homeport visitors spent $133.82 each, according to the FCCA study.

That will change in 2014, when Carnival Cruise Line opens its $65 million Amber Cove Cruise Center along the Bay of Maimón, near Puerto Plata on the north coast. The project, which broke ground in May 2012, represents one of the largest cruise industry investments ever made in the Dominican Republic.

A joint venture between Carnival and the Rannik family's Grupo B&R, the mammoth cruise port will accommodate up to 8,000 passengers and 2,000 crew daily. The 30-acre facility is expected to host more than 250,000 cruise passengers in its first year of operation — bringing cruise ships back to Puerto Plata after a 30-year absence.

According to a Carnival press release, Amber Cove will feature a welcome center with a variety of retail offerings, including a marketplace for locally sourced Dominican crafts and souvenirs, as well as a wide range of themed restaurants and bars.

“Amber Cove promises to be a spectacular facility that will serve as a gateway for cruise guests to experience the natural beauty and wonder that makes the Dominican Republic such an attractive tourist destination,” Giora Israel, Carnival's senior VP of global port and destination development, said in a press release.

GRENADA

Grenada, which in October marked the 30th anniversary of the 1983 U.S. invasion that overthrew the island's Marxist regime, celebrated the 40th anniversary of its independence in February 2014.

Long dependent on exports of nutmeg and other spices, the now politically stable island is currently pushing high-end, boutique tourism in order to attract foreign exchange and create jobs for its 110,000 inhabitants.

“Grenada has had to diversify. We've moved into tourism, which is now the mainstay of our economy,” said Angus Friday, the country's ambassador to the United States, estimating that 194,000 foreigners visited his island in 2012. “Grenada is one of the best sailing destinations in the world, and our tourism is being fueled mainly by yachting and diving.”

In 2011-12, nearly 275,000 passengers visited Grenada aboard cruise ships, up slightly from the 273,000 who came ashore in the 2008-09 season, said FCCA. But total direct expenditures (including those by crew members) plummeted by 30%, from $21.7 million in 2008-09 to $15.2 million in 2011-12. Likewise, in 2011-12 the average cruise ship passenger spent $40.82 while in Grenada, down from $49.01 in 2008-09.

Meanwhile, Sandals Resorts has invested $100 million to reopen the 100-room LaSource Resort following a government decision to grant the chain a 25-year holiday on corporate taxes and import duties, among other perks. Separately, Egyptian billionaire Naguib Sawiris plans to construct three five star hotels on Grand Anse Beach, with investment likely to total in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Sawiris also has major investments in Egyptian telecom, cement manufacturing and other industries.

Grenada has also gotten into the lucrative business of selling citizenship. A Grenadian passport costs $500,000 — far more than what most of its Caribbean neighbors charge. The program, less than two months old, has already attracted the attention of several wealthy Arabs and Asians.

“Grenada has one of the lowest crime rates in the Caribbean, so we have the most expensive passport,” Friday quipped. “We think our low crime rate and the lifestyle opportunities that Grenada offers, from healthcare to education, make Grenada an attractive investment. We're looking for people who want to commit to the island.”

GADELOUPE

Last year marked the introduction of direct air service from the U.S. mainland to Guadeloupe, a French overseas department in the Lesser Antilles. The April 2013 launch of a weekly American Airlines nonstop flight from Miami to Pointe-à-Pitre and Seaborne Airlines' decision to boost the frequency of its service between San Juan and Pointe-à-Pitre to four times a week helped bring 4,900 U.S. visitors to Guadeloupe last year, a 23% jump from the 4,000 who managed to find their way there in 2012.

In November, Seaborne became interlined partners with JetBlue Airways, offering U.S. travelers more access. In addition, local carrier Air Antilles Express began biweekly service between Guadeloupe and Antigua, providing an additional option for arrival by connecting in Antigua, as well as opening the French-speaking archipelago to British visitors who can connect via flights originating in England.

As a consequence, Guadeloupe reported a 26% increase in hotel room-night bookings in 2013 over the year before, with mainland France continuing to be the island's largest source of visitors. But Germany, Sweden and the United States are among Guadeloupe's fastest-growing source markets. Guadeloupe is especially popular for its premium award-winning rums, diverse landscape and French and creole cuisine as well as perfumes and other luxury imports.

"We have seen a tremendous increase in interest and arrivals from the U.S. since amplifying our strategic push in the market," said Willy Rosier, director-general of the Guadeloupe Islands Tourist Board. "Our islands' blend of French and Caribbean culture and our very modern infrastructure offer U.S. travelers a new and exciting source for travel adventures."

Even so, Americans account for only 1% of the roughly 420,000 tourists who flew last year to Guadeloupe, which is comprised of five islands: Basse-terre, Grande-Terre, Les Saintes, Marie-Galante and La Desirade. That leaves plenty of room for growth; to boost those numbers, in November 2012, the Guadeloupe Islands Tourist Board opened a promotional office in New York.

At present, the archipelago has 5,700 guestrooms, with many hotels scheduling renovations for 2014 through 2015.

Cruise ship arrivals have also been increasing rapidly, from 139,396 passengers in the 2011-12 season to 252,229 passengers in 2012-13 and a projected 300,000 passengers in 2013-14. This season, Guadeloupe expects to receive more than 80 port calls, including two new ships from Costa Cruises and one new ship from MSC Cruise Lines.

A new cruise terminal, the Centre Saint John Perse, opened in November 2012 in Guadeloupe's commercial capital, Pointe-à-Pitre, boosting passenger capacity by 2,000 compared to the previous terminal. The new facility, which cost €1.4 million, has a local crafts village, many new restaurants and improved pedestrian pathways.

Officials say 2014 will be an important year for tourism in Guadeloupe. The latest Route de Rhum — a legendary sailing race which takes place every four years — is scheduled to depart Saint-Malo, France, on Oct. 24 and arrive in Guadeloupe on Nov. 2, attracting sailing enthusiasts from around the world.

HAITI

Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere, will nevertheless show the Caribbean's fastest growth rate in 2014. According to the latest IMF projections, Haiti's GDP will expand by 4.5% this year after having grown by 2.8% in 2012 and 3.4% in 2013. Granted, the country is starting from an extremely low base — and its problems have been greatly exacerbated by the 2010 earthquake that destroyed Port-au-Prince — but the rapid growth should nonetheless bode well for Haitian tourism prospects.

As late as the 1960s and 1970s, Haiti was a prime tourist destination for U.S. vacationers, including Bill and Hillary Clinton, who honeymooned there. But recreational tourism to Haiti vanished in the wake of coups in 1991 and 2004, with the vast majority of visitors now consisting of missionaries, aid workers and business executives.

The new cruise terminal opened in Pointe-à-Pitre, Guadeloupe, features a local crafts village that imparts a Caribbean sense of place for cruise visitors embarking. This season (2013-2014) Guadeloupe expects to receive more than 80 port calls, and a projected 300,000 passengers, up significantly from the year before.

The glaring exception is cruise ship tourism, which is dominated by Miami-based Royal Caribbean Cruises Ltd. RCCL owns the private island of Labadee, off Haiti's northern coast. The $55 million resort is fenced off from the rest of Haiti, and RCCL passengers are confined to the resort area without the need to clear customs or immigration. Labadee attracts about 600,000 visitors a year, many arriving on two of the largest ships in Royal Caribbean's fleet: Oasis of the Seas and Allure of the Seas.

In 2012, some 950,000 people entered Haiti on tourist visas — compared to 4.6 million who visited the neighboring Dominican Republic that same year. Those numbers have been kept low because of poor tourism infrastructure and fears about violence which have been exacerbated by alerts from the U.S. State Department.

Yet only 3% of tourists surveyed by Brazil's Igarapé Institute, which in June 2013 issued a 23-page report on Haiti's tourism potential, said they had been victims of crime.

Indeed, tourists — including many from the Haitian diaspora — are starting to trickle back to Haiti. In December 2012, the 128-room Royal Oasis opened in the Port-au-Prince suburb of Petionville. Rooms at the business-class hotel, which is managed by Occidental Hotels & Resorts, start at $246 per night. Nearby is the Best Western, which opened in March 2013 with rooms starting at $149 a night.

Construction is also continuing on a 145-room full-service Marriott, which is being developed in cooperation with Caribbean mobile phone provider Digicel. The 175-room hotel — which is getting a $26.5 million loan from the World Bank's International Finance Corp. — will generate about 200 jobs and will be one of the few sizeable direct foreign investments in Haiti since the earthquake. Digicel, a veteran investor in Haiti, is the sponsor of Turgeau Developments SA, a company established for this project. The hotel is expected to open in 2015.

In December, JetBlue launched three flights a day to Port-au-Prince — one from New York JFK and two from Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport.

In addition, the Haitian government recently reopened the L'Ecole Hôtelière d'Haiti (EHH), an educational training center supported by the Ministry of Tourism and the Clinton-Bush Haiti Fund. Students at EHH have the option of completing a nine- to 18-month course in tourism-related professions including human resource management, accounting, geography and foreign languages.

Stéphanie Balmir Villedrouin, Haiti's tourism minister, said her government has been able to "reposition Haiti on the international tourist map," with tangible results.

"We constantly expand our efforts to reveal the country's natural and cultural heritage. At all prestigious international events, we spare no opportunity to show off Haiti and make it win acceptance as a tourist destination," she said. "In 2014, we reiterate the hope that tourism can pave the way to prosperity and contribute to the improvement of the socio-economic living conditions of the Haitian people."

JAMAICA

On Dec. 30, with only two days left in 2013, Jamaica welcomed its two millionth air passenger to the island — the first time Jamaica has ever accomplished that in one year. The island hopes to repeat the milestone in 2014, though it's unclear how quickly tourism will grow, given the IMF's projection of only 1.3% economic expansion for Jamaica this year after growth of only 0.4% in 2013 and a 0.5% decline the year before.

Jamaica recently got a boost with the inaugural flight of Air Canada Rouge in November and new service from Air Transero; the two aircraft landed at Montego Bay's Sangster International Airport with just under 600 passengers.

October 2013 saw an increase of 11.2% in air arrivals compared to October 2012, and the following month was up

7.3% over the year-ago period. Tourism Director John Lynch said more than one million air seats have been secured through the winter months into April 2014 — a jump of 40,000 seats compared to last winter.

“Increased airlift and significant hotel investments are due to a greater demand of visitors to Jamaica,” Lynch said in a press release. “The destination continues to see an increase in its annual visitor arrivals, with 2012 recording 1.8 million stopover arrivals.”

The United States supplies 86% of all stopover arrivals to Jamaica and is holding steady, while the U.K. market is recovering. British Airways will introduce a fourth flight to Jamaica this year, and TUI will add a sixth flight to complement its recently announced summer flights that serve its cruise ship, now home-porting in Montego Bay.

Tourism Minister Wykeham McNeill said cruise-ship visitor arrivals to Jamaica are projected to surpass the 1.4 million mark by the end of 2014 for the first time

“We are also concentrating on home porting,” said McNeill, adding that in 2014, Ocho Rios will welcome for the first time the Norwegian Epic, as well as the return of Royal Caribbean. While cruise ship arrivals increased by 17.3% in 2012, McNeill said Jamaica will have ended 2013 “marginally down.”

“But, we have to view this in the context of two phenomenal years of growth after the opening of the Falmouth pier,” he told Jamaica’s House of Representatives last July. “I have every confidence that the tourism sector will meet the expectations we are placing on it, as the path ahead continues to offer promise of further growth, and destination Jamaica retains its international competitive edge.”

PUERTO RICO

Puerto Rico, deep in the throes of an economic and fiscal crisis, is losing ground to rival Caribbean tourism destinations while the island’s population continues to shrink — from just over 3.8 million in 2010 to under 3.7 million today.

“We face strong competition from our neighbors and we need to focus on price-value added, better air access network, and languages,” said a new report issued by H. Calero Consulting. The San Juan consulting agency said the key to improving tourism

“focuses on the traditional traveler as well as on medical tourism; on improving air and maritime access; on expansion of more accommodations; more niche markets on luxury, nature, adventure, gastronomy, and sports tourism.”

Given world tourism trends, said the study, Puerto Rico must focus on new markets such as Germany, China, Japan and the United Kingdom, to lure tourists to its shores and slash its reliance on other industries.

In 1980, Puerto Rico received 19% of the Caribbean’s total arrivals and 26% of its total tourism income. By 2012, these shares fell to 13% and 15%, respectively.

In fiscal 2013, the island received 3.2 million tourists, about 4.7% more than in fiscal 2012. Currently, Puerto Rico has 151 lodging facilities, 86 of which are hotels — down from 169 hotels and lodgings in 2006.

“International competition and the U.S. mainland and Puerto Rican recessions have contributed to the closing of many hotels in the island, particularly in the non-metro area,” said the Calero study, noting that Puerto Rico now has 14,252 rooms with an average daily rate of $130 and an occupancy rate of 69.8%.

Legitimate casinos are also hurting — mainly because of the proliferation of illegal slot machines, the difficult economic situation and the rigidity of Puerto Rico’s gaming law. In fiscal 2012, the Puerto Rico Tourism Co. received 73% of its budget from revenue generated by legal casinos island-wide — but the PRTC said revenues began dropping in 2012, due to casino closures at El Conquistador Resort in Fajardo, Gran Melia Resort in Río Grande and other hotels.

The island’s tourism infrastructure got a boost last year, when Aerostar Airport Holdings LLC took over the operation and management of San Juan’s Luis Muñoz Marín International Airport, Puerto Rico’s main link with the rest of the world.

Aerostar, a 50-50 venture between New York-based Highstar Capital and Mexico’s Grupo Aeroportuario del Sureste (ASUR), has a concession to run LMM for the next 40 years. The airport now handles 8.5 million passengers a year, and Agustín Arellano, general manager of Aerostar, aims to boost that by at least 2% a year.

“We’re going to completely change the way this airport deals with retail. It’s a very old airport from the 1950s that has been renovated in different generations,” said Arellano in a recent interview with TMI. “No profile was ever made of passengers’ needs. We’ll establish the same system we have in our Mexican airports so we can offer passengers a very appealing commercial mix.”

The average passenger transiting LMM spends $2.70, compared to $7.80 per passenger in Cancún and $14 at Miami International Airport, he said, noting that “we are almost in last place in the whole U.S. airport system in terms of per-passenger spending.”

Arellano said certain items like liquor — especially rum — should be promoted at LMM. Taxes make other products like fragrances and cosmetics uncompetitive, meaning mainland-bound passengers will just wait until they arrive in Miami, New York or other gateway cities to buy those items.

He said Dufry, which operates 12 stores at LMM, will expand to 15 shops when the remodeling is finished by December 2015 or January 2016. Dufry’s contract expires in 2029. At present, the airport has 121 food, beverage, retail and duty-free concessions.

“Passengers are going to see a modern, high-quality airport — just the same as Cancún,” Arellano said. “There will be construction all over the airport. There’s just no other way to modernize it. Construction will be running 24/7.”

San Juan is still a major homeport for cruise ships, with 1.17 million passengers arriving during the 2011-12 cruise year, says FCCA. These included 685,628 transit passengers and 491,109 passengers embarking on their cruises in Puerto Rico, making the island the Caribbean leader in passenger embarkations. Of the former group, 91% disembarked and visited the U.S. commonwealth.

Passenger and crew visits generated a combined $186.6 million for the Puerto Rican economy. Transit passengers spent an average of $70.49, while passengers who arrived on the island to begin their Caribbean cruise spent an average $178.35.

Compared to the 2008-09 season, total passenger and crew visits fell 7%, from 1.39 million to 1.30 million. However, total direct cruise tourism expenditures actually rose by 2.4% over that same three-year period. The industry keeps about 5,000

TAG Heuer has opened its first boutique in the US Virgin Islands, in conjunction with the new Little Switzerland store on Main Street in St Thomas. The boutique features its own dedicated entrance and was inspired by the landmark design of the TAG Heuer 360° Museum in Switzerland. This new store in St. Thomas marks TAG Heuer's 8th Boutique in the Caribbean after St Maarten, Aruba, Cayman, Cozumel, Barbados, Bahamas and Cancun, and showcases the new boutique concept.

Puerto Ricans employed, according to the FCCA study.

Last year, the commonwealth government passed a new incentives package to spur activity in the Puerto Rico cruise ship sector. Law 80 extends the 2011 incentives package approved by the previous administration of Gov. Luis Fortuño, adding four incentives to increase cruise ships' homeport frequency and duration in Puerto Rico.

The first gives a discount increase of $1.50 per passenger if the homeport ship sails before 4 p.m. The second offers an additional $1.50 if ships dock before 11 a.m., with a minimum eight-hour port stay. The third gives a 50¢ increase per passenger if the homeport ship includes another Puerto Rico port, such as Ponce, during a week-long itinerary, and the fourth extends a further discount of 50¢ per passenger for homeport ships that embark or disembark from a Puerto Rico port more than once a week.

ST. KITTS-NEVIS

St. Kitts-Nevis, the smallest sovereign state in the Americas in both area and population, has only 53,000 inhabitants and measures just 104 square miles — less than twice the size of the District of Columbia. Yet it's at the forefront of a cruise ship and hotel building boom that shows no sign of slowing down.

In early 2013, the government said it would spend $31 million to build a second cruise pier at Port Zante that'll be able to accommodate two Oasis-class cruise vessels — the world's largest passenger ships — one on either side. Construction is expected to be completed by November 2014, just in time for the 2014-15 cruise ship season.

"The unprecedented growth in the cruise tourism subsector that St. Kitts has experienced over the past six years has placed tremendous pressure on our berthing infrastructure — particularly on those days when more than three large vessels request berthing," said Jonathan Bass, CEO of the St. Christopher Air and Sea Ports Authority.

Under the MOU, Massachusetts-based Jay Cashman Inc. will invest all the money necessary to build the pier. During the 30-year concession, SCASPA will continue to manage and operate the cruise facility.

In November, Prime Minister Denzil Douglas announced that St. Kitts will get its first high-rise buildings — in the form of the $70 million Prime Hotel and Condominium project to commence in May 2014.

Located in the hills of St. Kitts overlooking Basseterre National Park, the project will consist of a 70-room, eight-story major hotel and nine multi-floor buildings with 324 one-bedroom condos built into the hillside, with views of Basseterre. The principal investor is Gholam Abbas Fahim, who gained St. Kitts citizenship more than a year ago.

Earlier this year, Douglas announced two projects by Russian investors involving combined investment of $50 million. The first is the $37 million Ocean Grove project, which consists of 50 two-bedroom villas, and the second is the Windswept Residence Club of nine villas at a cost of $13 million. Ocean Grove is a joint venture between Christophe Harbour Development Co. and Canada's Apex Capital Partners Corp.

Dwarfing all these projects is Paradise Haven on the island of Nevis. Asia Pacific Investment House recently raised $50 million toward the project's total price tag of $250 million. The government says more than 1,000 local jobs will be created by Paradise Haven, a 500-acre golf and beach resort that will include villas, condos, retirement and family residences as well as a five-star hotel and a health and wellness spa

ST. MAARTEN

When it comes to duty free shopping, no Caribbean destination holds more appeal than St. Maarten, the Dutch-speaking outpost of the Netherlands that shares the 37-square-mile island with French-speaking St. Martin.

It also has one of the Caribbean's most attractive airports. Last year, St.

Maarten's Princess Juliana International Airport (SXM) closed a $132 million bond to finance a long list of improvements including rehabilitating the airport's 7,546-foot runway, construction of a new fuel farm that can store 5 days of jet fuel, the building of new taxiways to increase runway efficiency, expanding aprons to provide more aircraft parking, and acquisition of land so the airport can expand later on if necessary. As part of its capital improvement program, SXM will also be constructing a state-of-the-art FBO building, rehabilitating its Cargo building, remodeling its Rescue & Fire Fighting facility and constructing a new Technical building.

SXM also embarked on a new commercial strategy, which involves the redevelopment of its landside and airside retail and F&B areas to boost non-aviation revenues, deemed by a recent study to be lower than regional and global norms for airports its size. The non-aeronautical revenue enhancement study conducted by the InterVISTAS consulting group revealed that there was room for improvement in terms of the performance of concessionaires, and also highlighted the fact that there was unused space in the airside Food and Beverage and Retail area that could be better utilized.

The new strategy promises to create an exciting, innovative, operationally efficient, financially productive and comprehensive retail environment. The grand opening is scheduled for later this year.

SXM — which on Dec. 3, 2013 celebrated its 70th anniversary in business— is upgrading the entire shopping area “with better layout, décor and lighting, which will make passengers more disposed to spend,” said Michael R. Granger, a reporter for St. Maarten's online Daily Herald. He also noted that “the majority of the retail outlets remain locally owned and operated.”

In addition, at least 9 new concessionaires have opened at SXM, reports Suzy Kartokromo, the airport's acting manager of marketing and customer service. She said all of the available space at SXM has already been allocated, and 85% of the concessions are local and already existing stores.

The cruise business is also booming. In 2013, the Port of St. Maarten received 1,785,670 passengers — 32,455 more than in 2012, itself a banner year. Cruise passengers arrived on 631 vessel calls, up from 622 the previous year, said Mark Mingo, CEO of the St. Maarten Harbour Group. Incredibly, only 105,000 cruise ship passengers visited St. Maarten back in 1980, fewer than the amount which now visits in three weeks.

According to the FCCA, passenger and crew visits together generated $356.1 million in revenues for St. Maarten during the 2011-12 cruise season, up a whopping 55% from the $230.3 million reported in the 2008-09 season. Per-capita expenditures by those passengers also rose dramatically, from $147.98 in 2008-09 to $185.40 in 2011-12 — by far the highest anywhere in the Caribbean.

The weighted average spend per party in 2011-12 came to $389.34 and was almost totally dominated by watches and jewelry ($267.03). Perfumes, cosmetics, liquor and electronics also contributed to overall sales, though at much lower levels. Crew members, however, spent slightly more on electronics than on watches and jewelry.

More than 8,100 people are employed in the cruise ship industry, a major driver of St. Maarten's tourism-driven economy.

ST. VINCENT & THE GRENADINES

The Caribbean's newest airport is opening in early 2014, though recent festivities marking the handing over of the new terminal at St. Vincent's Argyle International Airport were tinged with sadness over the widespread destruction throughout St. Vincent caused by December's storms and flooding Little Switzerland, which is celebrating 60 years in business in 2014, has opened a completely remodeled new flagship store on Main Street in St. Thomas, US Virgin Islands, following a devastating fire that destroyed the store in April, 2013. The new concept incorporates the traditional look of an old Caribbean home, with wooden shutters, wainscoting, a pitched ceiling with wood planks, and wood flooring, combined with all the technology necessary to engage and enhance all the products – including a fully functioning Diamond Bar in the center of the store. The store was built by Arco Group of Miami.

Prime Minister D. Ralph Gonsalves, at a ceremony turning Argyle's new terminal building over to the International Airport Development Co., said that the Christmas Eve flooding killed nine people and caused "hundreds of millions of dollars" in damage throughout St. Vincent — and is the worst disaster to strike the 32-island nation in living memory.

When completed, the new airport, which occupies 275 acres on the main island, will have a 9,000-foot runway measuring 150 feet wide. Likewise, the passenger terminal covers 145,000 square feet and will handle up to 1.5 million passengers annually. Funding came from Austria, Cuba, Iran, Mexico, Qatar, Turkey, Trinidad and Venezuela.

The airport marks an important milestone for St. Vincent, which will now be connected to the United States, Canada, Europe and South America since it is big enough to accommodate Boeing 747-400 jets.

St. Vincent gets cruise passengers, though not many compared to destinations like Barbados or St. Maarten. In the 2011-12 season, 65,347 passengers arrived aboard cruise ships. Passenger and crew visits generated $3 million for the country. But those numbers are down by 55% from the 2008-09 season, which brought 144,000 visitors and $6.8 million in tourism receipts, according to the FCCA.

Despite the stagnant economy, nearby St. Lucia — which was also hit hard by the same storms that devastated St. Vincent — managed to boost arrivals from the United States by 12% last year. During the first 11 months of 2013, U.S. arrivals came to 116,982, while in November alone, 9,732 Americans visited the island, up 19% from the 8,171 who arrived in November 2012.

Tourism Minister Lorne Theophilus noted that stayover arrivals for the first 11 months of 2013 came to 288,023, up 4% from the same period in 2012.

U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS

Officials in the U.S. Virgin Islands expect 2017, which will mark 100 years since the United States bought the territory from Denmark, to be a banner year for tourism.

But meanwhile, the numbers look mixed at best.

Air visitor arrivals to the USVI for the first 10 months of 2013 came to 579,613 — down 5.5% from the 613,647 passengers who flew into the territory's two major airports during the first 10 months of 2012. The statistics were even worse for St. Croix, where arrivals fell by 17.8%, from 131,573 to 108,185, over that same time period.

The cruise business didn't fare much better. An estimated 2.0 million passengers arrived aboard cruise ships during the 2011-12 season, according to the USVI Department of Tourism. Of these, 1.8 million disembarked and visited the territory.

However, total direct expenditures in the USVI by passengers and crew members dropped by 12% from $384.4 million in 2008-09 to $339.8 million in 2011-12. Passengers spent an average $146.70 while crew members spent an average $138.30. Together, the industry generates 3,375 jobs in the Virgin Islands.

"The 13% decline in passenger expenditures was the net result of the 14% increase in passenger visits, which was more than offset by the 24% decrease in average passenger expenditures," said the FCCA study, noting that the percentage of passengers making onshore purchases fell from 2008-09 to 2011-12 as follows: shore excursions (51% to 46%); watches and jewelry (39% to 34%); clothing (54% to 48%) and local crafts (36% to 34%).

The situation for crew expenditures was similar, though the study says that the 8% decline in total crew expenditures was driven primarily by an 80% decline in the weighted average crew expenditure for jewelry. "Relative to the 2008-09 cruise year, a smaller percentage of crew purchased jewelry during the 2011-12 cruise year, and when they did, they spent much less," it said.

Even so, USVI Tourism Commissioner Beverly Nicholson-Doty remains optimistic that 2014 will bring good news.

"It appears that in the St. Thomas-St. John district, the winter season is coming in strong. St. Croix is still not as strong as we would like it to be, but the territory overall is looking good based on year-to-year comparisons," she told the Virgin Islands

St. Maarten's Princess Juliana International airport (SXM) had welcomed nine new concessionaires as of February 2014, part of the redevelopment of its landside and airside retail and F&B areas, including the whimsical Taloula's Bar shown here. The grand opening of the redeveloped commercial project, which is still under development, is scheduled for later this year.

Daily News. Yet the tourism commissioner added that over the course of the last five years, consumers have tended to shy away from being “collectors of things” and more toward being “collectors of experiences” — which would support merchant observations that tourists are coming off boats and planes with less money to spend on duty free goods.

Joseph Boschulte, president and CEO of the government-owned West Indian Co. (WICO), said he’s expecting to see a 7.8% increase in cruise ship calls to the USVI this season. Between October 2013 and September 2014, WICO anticipates 423 ships will call at its dock in St. Thomas, bringing around 1.3 million passengers. In addition, four new ships will be in circulation: the Royal Princess, the MSC Divinia, the Carnival Conquest and the Norwegian Breakaway.

Yet he warned that the USVI is losing territory as the Caribbean in general sees its share of the global cruise market shrink.

“From my discussions with their representatives, it is highly unlikely that any of those cruise lines that used to, but no longer, include the U.S. Virgin Islands on their itineraries will be returning any time soon if we maintain the status quo,” Boschulte said.

That’s why WICO, whose dock can now accommodate three megaships, plans to build a second dock for $50 million to $60 million to reduce overcrowding in the harbor.

Boschulte told the Daily News that in addition to the three berths along the WICO dock, a ship can berth in the inner harbor and one in the outer harbor, and the V.I. Port Authority can take two ships at Crown Bay.

“But there are times when the Port of Charlotte Amalie also is unable to find space for the ships, so they go elsewhere,” he said. To keep the ships and revenues coming into the territory, WICO plans to build a second dock, a 1,334-foot finger pier on the western side of Yacht Haven Grande that will accommodate two cruise ships. The project will be funded by partnering with cruise lines rather than using taxpayer dollars.

Meanwhile, the USVI’s newest attraction could be a water adventure park on St. Croix. In November, the territory’s governor, John de Jongh, hired Baker Berrios Architects to prepare an economic feasibility study on the project, which was first proposed in a report by the Virgin Islands Port Authority. At least four companies have submitted bids for the project.

On St. John — smallest of the three islands that comprise the U.S. Virgin Islands — Starwood Hotels & Resorts announced a $35 million project to renovate the Westin St. John Resort & Villa. In addition, Starwood will convert 79 guestrooms into 54 luxury vacation ownership villas under the new Coral Vista Villas brand. Upon completion, a total of 200 villas will grace the resort’s 47 acres.

Also on St. John, Caneel Bay Resort has been rebranded as an independent property. The 170-acre resort, founded by philanthropist Laurance Rockefeller 53 years ago, boasts seven beaches within the Virgin Islands National Park.

International Association of Airport Duty Free Stores

DutyFree Show of the AMERICAS

March 9-12, 2014

Orlando World Center Marriott
Orlando, Florida, USA

Join us for the business-to-business show for the duty free industry.

The Duty Free Show of the Americas offers everything you need to conduct business, all under one roof.

See what attendees are saying:

*" I was pleased that even more people were present this year than the last two years.
We will definitely be back next year. "*

" Excellent gathering of the industry in the Americas. "

" I was so busy with my clients. I saw 100% of my clients and the show was very productive and a great ROI. "

Visit www.IAADFS.org/DutyFreeShow for more information and registration.

The Duty Free Show of the Americas is hosted by the International Association of Airport Duty Free Stores, representing the duty free industry for more than 45 years.
