Lake proposes integration of EMS

Commissioners consider plan to bring service under county's umbrella

By Carlos E. Medina
cmedina@dailycommercial.com

Lake County commissioners will consider a proposal to bring Lake EMS under the county's umbrella, though not to consolidate the ambulance service into Lake County Fire Rescue.

The proposal is set for a vote during the commission's

Feb. 13 meeting and comes after years of debate and a 20-month-long feasibility study into the best way of operating the ambulance service. The integration plan was one of the three options reviewed in the $25,000 study prepared by Fitch and Associates.

"The main advantage is that it's a streamlining of our process. (Lake EMS would) be able to have more direct oversight by the county commission and have us folded into the board of county commissioners budgeting process," said Jerry Smith, Lake EMS executive director.

The plan calls for eliminating the county-owned, non-profit Lake EMS and integrating it under the county's Public Safety Department as the Emergency Medical Services Division. Lake EMS employees would become county workers and qualify for the state pension plan,

See EMS, A7

Under a plan that will be considered on Feb. 13, Lake EMS would be eliminated as a separate entity and brought under the county's Public Safety Department as the Emergency Medical Services Division.

Trump seized on memo meaning

WASHINGTON — Even before he'd read the memo, President Donald Trump seized on what it could mean.

The president first learned of the House Intelligence Committee document last month from some Republican allies in Congress and he watched it take hold in the conservative media, including on some of his favorite Fox News programs, according to seven White House officials and outside advisers.

Emergency rooms' new approach to older patients cuts hospital stays

By Carla K. Johnson
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — When 86-year-old Carol Wittwer took a taxi to the emergency room, she expected to be admitted to the hospital. She didn't anticipate being asked if she cooks for herself. If she has friends in her high-rise. Or if she could spell lunch backward.

"H-C-N-U-L," she said,

ruling out a type of confusion called delirium for the geriatrics-trained nurse who was posing the questions in a special wing of Northwestern Memorial Hospital's emergency department

Wittwer's care is part of a new approach to older patients as U.S. emergency rooms adapt to serve the complex needs of a gray-ing population. That means asking more questions, asking them earlier and, when possible, avoiding a hospital stay for many older patients.

Cyclist hurt after city's Naked Bike Ride sues for $566K

A bicyclist is suing the city of Portland for $566,000 after he hit a pair of concrete islands on his way home from the World Naked Bike Ride, causing him to crash and break his nose, arm and two fingers.

The Oregonian/OregonLive reported Friday that, according to the lawsuit, a fully-clothed Charles Ziemer was pedaling back to his car after participating in the June 2016 ride when his wheels suddenly struck the islands.

Suicide bombing in northwestern Pakistan kills 11

A suicide bombing in Pakistan's northwestern Swat Valley killed 11 soldiers and wounded 13 on Saturday in what authorities said was the first attack in over three years in the region once ruled by militants.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the attack.

The bomber detonated his explosives vest near an empty lot used by the soldiers for sports and exercise in the Kabal area, the military said.

Will Trump plan help?

By Rebecca Santana and Kevin McGill
 The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — When a heavy rain hits New Orleans, residents move their cars to higher ground for fear of fast-rising street flooding. Knee-deep potholes can eat a car's fender. When pressure drops in the city's aging water delivery system, restaurants and cafes have to boil water to feed customers.

Battered by nature and neglect, New Orleans is one of the best examples of what President Donald Trump calls the country's "crumbling infrastructure." But when looking at the billion-dollar needs of this 300-year-old city, two things become apparent: The rebuilding task is immense and it's not clear the president's new plan will help.

The city needs about $11.6 billion to bring key parts of its infrastructure into "this century," said city official Katie Dignan. That means repairing the roads, the infrastructure under them — sewer, water and drainage — as well as other parts of the drainage system that empties the city of water when it rains.

Dignan said the city has about $2 billion available, some from FEMA to mitigate Hurricane Katrina damage and some from other sources. Now, the city faces choices on how to come up with the remainder. Mayor Mitch Landrieu, who calls the aging sewer, water and drainage system a "prime example" of needed infrastructure work, has doubts about Trump's proposal.

Trump called on Congress to produce a bill that generates "at least $1.5 trillion" for infrastructure investment. But he hasn't detailed how much money the federal government would actually supply and has suggested that much of the money would come from state and local governments or private-sector investments.

"What the president is really proposing is not HIS infrastructure plan but basically saying to the states and the cities: 'Build it on your own and find another way to pay for it through raising taxes or cutting services,'" Landrieu, a Democrat and the current president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, said Thursday.

Finding more money is a challenge in a financially strapped Louisiana — and in a city that was facing a major budget deficit when Landrieu took office eight years ago.

Landrieu said public-private partnerships can work on some types of projects where there's money to pay back the partner, but poorer cities — often those with the biggest infrastructure problems — are going to have a harder time. Forcing cities like New Orleans to pay for the infrastructure means taking money away from other local priorities, such as housing homeless veterans, he said.

The precariousness of the city's infrastructure was on full display last August when a massive downpour overwhelmed the pumping system and inundated many neighborhoods.

The Broad Theater was still recovering from a previous rainstorm when the August storm hit. Movie-goers evacuated waist-high waters by boat. Manager Michael Domangue lost his car to the flood. The theater closed for seven days and had to refund tickets.

"I still feel when we rain, people get worried about coming here," Domangue said.

And this damage all happened within sight of a pumping station that's part of the drainage system. Of the $11.6 billion, an estimated $2 billion is needed for long-term repairs and upgrades to the city's pumping system, Dignan said, although she cautioned that figure could change. The other $9.6 billion would go toward fixing the roads and the infrastructure under them. That includes a drinking water system plagued by wasteful leaks and occasional power failures and pressure drops that can let contaminants in — requiring residents to boil water.

Renee Blanchard owns the Church Alley Coffee Bar. She bought a $3,500 reverse osmosis water filtration system so that she can still make lattes and cappuccinos when the water pressure drops. Blanchard is frustrated that a small business in a big city has to deal with such expensive problems.

"That's ridiculous," she said. "I'm so small. I work most of the hours. I started off with a tiny bit of savings."

All cities have potholes but the New Orleans streets are in another category. Locals put traffic cones or tires into especially deep potholes to warn other drivers.

"If it rains the day before and it's filled with water, you don't know the pothole's there. You could tear up your car, your front end," Kenny Buras said of his street.

Residents try to take it in stride. During the summer flooding, people canood through the streets, sometimes with a drink in hand. In May 2016, there was a "Sinkhole de Mayo" party after a massive sinkhole opened up at the foot of Canal Street.

But there's also a real frustration about how problems in New Orleans and elsewhere will be fixed.

Resident James Jensen noted mudslides and fires in California and rising seas in Miami: "There's many New Orleans out there."

Astatula man shot to death; Police looking for gunmen

A 24-year-old Astatula man was shot to death late Friday night, authorities say.

The Astatula Police Department responded to a call around 11 p.m. about a man being shot at 13424 Delaware Ave. Officers found Kevin Trejo had been shot.

Witnesses told police he was shot by black or dark-skinned Hispanic men wearing masks.

Trejo was pronounced dead at the scene.

The Astatula Police Department asked the Lake County Sheriff's Office to take over the investigation. Sheriff's detectives believe this was not a random attack.

No other details were available midday Saturday.

Suspect in fatal wreck skips bail

Warrant issued for Leesburg man charged with vehicular manslaughter

By Frank Stanfield
frankstanfield@dailyccommercial.com

TAVARES — The courts have issued a warrant for a man charged with vehicular manslaughter in a fatal motorcycle crash after he failed to show up for a pretrial hearing.

Jose Omar Azua, 34, of Leesburg, was also charged with leaving the scene of a fatal crash on Aug. 20, 2016.

Police responded to a 911 call at 9:34 p.m. at Citrus Boulevard and Tally Road and found Lori Dudley of The Villages lying on the highway. Rescue workers tried to give CPR. The autopsy report said she died of "multiple blunt force trauma," with injuries to her head, multiple ribs, lung, heart, liver, spleen, bowel mesentery, left humerus, and right tibia and fibula.

"It's frustrating as hell," her son, Matt Casey said of Azua skipping bail. "My guess is that he fled back to his own country, or wherever he came from." Azua told investigators he was from Mexico and had lived in the United States for 14 or 15 years. He said he had a Green Card but did not have it with him.

Casey, who lives in Battle Creek, Mich., said his family was notified of the warrant for his arrest and told that Azua's attorney had not been in contact with him for a month.

The trial was set for Feb. 12, with a pretrial conference set for Wednesday before Circuit Judge Don Briggs. When he didn't show a warrant was issued for his arrest and his $35,000 bond was revoked.

Azua has a lengthy history of driving infractions. In 2016, he was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic; in 2014, failure to yield to a vehicle while a pedestrian; two speeding tickets in 2011 and another citation for running a stop sign, and finally, a DUI and resisting police without violence.

Witnesses were horrified at what they saw a year-and-a-half ago.

Micro housing: Big demand for living small

By Richard Danielson
Associated Press

TAMPA — When Omar Garcia announced plans to transform a vacant downtown office building into 120 micro apartments of about 300 square feet each, the calls and checks poured in.

"We got 90 reservations like that," Garcia said, snapping his fingers at a Tampa Downtown Partnership panel discussion on micro housing, and 88 percent came from people who already worked downtown. "People were like, 'Yes!'"

But while interest in micro housing isn't hard to find, developers said local regulations and the availability of financing are still catching up to a market that evolved sooner in some cities (Seattle, Nashville) than in Tampa.

In Garcia's case, he learned that city codes required 120 parking spaces for 120 micro apartments.

If he didn't provide one parking space per unit, he would have had to pay a city fee of $26,000 per unit — or about $3 million.

So Garcia changed the plan to create 48 two-, three- and four-bedroom apartments of student housing. The payment-in-lieu-of-parking fee for those dropped to a more doable $300,000.

Garcia said he plans to start construction on the $15 million project, called 220 Madison, in a couple of weeks. Students will pay $769 per bedroom, and the No. 1 amenity they said they wanted was fast Internet

Dennis Edwards, Temptations singer, dies at 74

By Jeff Karoub
The Associated Press

DETROIT — Dennis Edwards, a Grammy-winning former member of the famed Motown group The Temptations, has died. He was 74.

Edwards died Thursday in Chicago after a long illness, said Rosiland Triche Roberts, his longtime booking agent.

Edwards replaced founding member David Ruffin in 1968, and his soulful, passionate voice defined the group for years. A member on and off for about two decades, he was part of the lineup that released hits "Ball of Confusion (That's What The World Is Today)," "Cloud Nine" and the chart-topping "Papa Was A Rollin' Stone."

He possessed a "voice for the ages," with great range, energy and artistry, Paul Riser, a Motown arranger and musician who worked with Edwards during the label's Detroit heyday and on subsequent projects, told The Associated Press. "That voice was just flat-out outstanding — very well-defined."

Edwards was inducted into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame with the rest of

The Temptations in 1989.

In the 1990s, a federal judge barred him from performing under his former band's name. Otis Williams, the band's lone original member, sued Edwards for trademark infringement after he had used variations that included "The New Temptations." He was allowed to use "The Temptations Review featuring Dennis Edwards," and performed under that name for nearly two decades, according to Roberts.

"He is now at peace, and our love and prayers go out to his family,"

Williams said in a statement Friday. "At this moment and always, we acknowledge his extraordinary contribution to The Temptations legacy, which lives on in the music."

Motown star Smokey Robinson said in a statement that he was saddened "that another Motown soldier is gone."

"Rest in Peace my brother," he said. "You were a great talent."

Born in Birmingham, Alabama, Edwards lived near St. Louis with his wife, Brenda. He would have turned 75 on Saturday.

connections, so the project will provide download speeds of 300 megabits per second. It also will have a bicycle rack with room for 60 bikes and maybe a couple of dedicated parking spaces on the street for Zipcars.

One key assumption driving the micro housing trend is that residents will go carless — or at least they won't own cars.

Of Garcia's initial 90 reservations, 72 percent said they had a car, but 78 percent of those indicated they were willing to give up their car. And no wonder, he said, in light of AAA statistics that owning a car costs an average of $724 a month.

Automakers, Garcia said, recognize that "the future's not going to be about people owning vehicles. It's going to be about people using vehicles."

Another factor: the desire, especially among older homeowners, to scale down their living expenses, how much work they have to do to maintain a home and how much stuff they want to have.

"There's a tidal wave coming, and it's not climate change. It's seniors," said David Bailey, who grew up in Tampa and now splits his time between Ybor City and New York City, where he is a real estate

Seen in a Jan. 23 photo, David Bailey built this tiny house in Ybor City, Fla., and plans to break ground on a second soon. advisor-broker for the Stan Johnson Company.

The nation will soon see 10,000 Baby Boomers a day turn 65, said Bailey, citing statistics published by Wired, and many people are living longer (though the opioid epidemic has caused life expectancy at birth to start dropping).

"You guys have to start thinking about where do you want to live and how do you want to live," Bailey said. "I personally do not want to live in a traditional nursing home."

So Bailey and his wife recently built a "tiny house," with 365 square feet on the first floor, plus an 80-square-foot loft overhead, a couple of blocks south of E Seventh Avenue in Ybor City. The first floor, he said, consists of three 10-by-10-foot rooms: a living room up front, a kitchen and bathroom in the middle and a bedroom in the back.

He loves it, and so do guests who rent the place through Airbnb.

"If we don't reserve our own house a month in advance, we don't get in our own house," said Bailey, who plans to start building a second tiny house next to the first one in a couple of weeks.

The trend is not just gaining momentum in Tampa.

In Pinellas, LocalShops1, which advocates for small and locally owned businesses, has scheduled a St. Pete Tiny Home Festival for April 7 and 8 at the St. Petersburg College Allstate Center in St. Petersburg. (To learn more, check tinyhomestepete.com.)

Another said he saw the motorcyclist fly up into the air, strike the windshield and roll to the ground.

Yet another witness directed officers' attention to a gray 1997 Saturn station wagon that was parked 338 feet away. There were no skid marks indicating that the driver had applied the brakes. The motorcycle was stuck in the grill. A man later identified as Azua was about 60 feet away walking northbound and talking on his cell phone, according to police reports.

Witnesses said they saw two men jump out of the car and run away.

Leesburg police put Azua in the back of a squad car and began questioning him.

They described him as "clearly intoxicated." He denied being behind the wheel, saying he was "too drunk to drive."

He said he did not know the name of the other man in the car.

"Due to there being no wheel witness and no evidence that the male was driving, the male was released," according to the arrest affidavit. That changed on Aug. 22 when he went to the police department with his girlfriend, who spoke some English, to see about getting his car released from impound.

He said he had gotten off work that day around 3 p.m. and drove to Mascotte where he had three or four beers.

Asked if he was the driver, he said, "I was the copilot."

He said he left and got back to his home at the Marietta Trailer Park, just down the street from the crash site, at 7 p.m. After more questioning he said he left Mascotte at 9 p.m. Sometimes he cried.

"I told him that there was a big difference between a car accident than me going into a house and killing someone. A big difference. Do you understand?" Senior Officer Gus Escalante told the girlfriend.

"Yes, that's a big difference," she replied. Azua said he was only going 25 to 30 mph when he ran into the back of the stopped motorcycle.

"I was here," he explained. "My light was green and then it changed to yellow. The motorcycle was standing there. There was the motorcycle...."

"You didn't realize...." [Azua crying]. "It's OK."

"The motorcycle in front of you didn't have time to stop?" Investigator Shannon Welsh asked.

"No."

He said he lied to police about not being the driver because he was scared. The case against Azua has been inching forward in the court system with the typical requests for delays, plea conferences and the compiling of subpoenas and depositions.

Prosecutors asked for and got the court's permission to get a DNA sample from Azua. Casey said investigators compared it to the deployed airbag in the car.

"She was a very nice person," Casey said of his mom. "She loved her dogs and the business she had, and her family."

Like Dudley, Casey also developed a love for motorcycles. "I have a Harley myself."

Dudley moved to Florida right after he graduated from high school. As far as riding a motorcycle with his mother, "I never had that opportunity."

with these men, and she wants the courts to issue injunctions barring the trio from entering Seminole, Orange, Osceola and Lake counties. Hey, if this works, perhaps we can get injunctions barring other politicians from the area. Any recommendations?

Dog Day Morning

Leslie Campione is very punctual. But at the start of a recent Lake County Commission meeting, Chairman Tim Sullivan announced the commissioner was running late.

The reason? Her dog ran off.

"Being the law-abiding citizen she is, her dog got out and she wanted to make sure it was properly taken care of before heading this way," Sullivan announced.

She didn't miss much, arriving just a couple of minutes after the meeting started.

Walk This Way

During a reporter's interview this week with Tavares City Administrator John Drury, the subject drifted to his newfound effort to walk more for exercise. He wanted to get to the recommended 10,000 steps per day. Drury parks far away from entrances, uses the stairs and takes advantage of any opportunity to get more steps. He even gave the reporter a walking tour of downtown Tavares, the subject of the interview.

After the walk, the reporter checked the pedometer app on her phone and noted the trip took almost 3,500 steps. Amazed, Drury said he was estimating his steps all along.

He said the availability of pedometer apps came up before but seeing one in action really sold him.

The classified memo sent to the Oval Office by the committee's majority Republicans asserted that the FBI and Justice Department abused their surveillance powers to monitor the communications of a onetime Trump campaign associate. Trump told confidants in recent days that he believed the memo would validate his concerns that the "deep state" — an alleged shadowy network of powerful entrenched federal and military interests — had conspired to undermine the legitimacy of his presidency, according to one outside adviser.

That adviser and the others weren't authorized to publicly discuss private conversation and spoke on condition of anonymity.

Trump's decision to authorize the memo's public disclosure was extraordinary, yet part of a recent pattern. Like few of his predecessors, Trump has delivered repeated broadsides against intelligence and law enforcement agencies, working in tandem with some conservatives to lay the groundwork to either dismiss or discredit special counsel Robert Mueller, who is leading the Russia investigation.

"This memo totally vindicates 'Trump' in probe," the president tweeted Saturday from Florida, where he was spending the weekend. "But the Russian Witch Hunt goes on and on. Their (sic) was no Collusion and there was no Obstruction (the word now used because, after one year of looking endlessly and finding NOTHING, collusion is dead). This is an American disgrace!"

Trump had dismissed forceful pleas from the FBI director, Christopher Wray, and the second-ranking Justice Department official, Rod Rosenstein, to keep the memo under wraps. They said the four-page document was inaccurate and lacked critical context, and they made their views known in a remarkable public statement objecting to its release. Democrats said the memo, which disclosed material about one of the most tightly held national security processes, selectively used Republican talking points in an effort to smear law enforcement.

Trump, however, was undeterred.

Early last week, aides briefed him on the never-before-used process that the House would use to release the classified memo. Lawyers at the White House and Capitol Hill worried about making dangerous missteps.

Trump told allies he believed the memo would reinforce his belief that accusations of collusion between his 2016 campaign and Russian officials were false and part of the conspiracy to discredit his victory. And the president signaled that he would approve the memo's public disclosure if the House committee voted to pursue that course.

Several aides cautioned that the memo did not contain convincing evidence of a conspiracy, while others urged him to black out sections on intelligence-gathering methods, according to a White House official. Other advisers, inside and outside the West Wing, questioned why his administration had allowed the memo to become the dominant talking point during the week when he gave his first State of the Union address, overshadowing the well-received address.

But those worries, as well as fears that the disclosure could lead to retaliatory leaks from the Justice Department, did not hold sway in the Oval Office. Trump made clear to aides he was intent on seeing the memo released as soon as possible.

White House officials with concerns resigned themselves to the memo's release. Trump put his chief of staff, John Kelly, in charge of making that happen, and Kelly called Justice Department officials multiple times to upbraid them for criticizing the likely disclosure.

Trump's counsel, meanwhile, took issue with the House process. Don McGahn believed that if the president only allowed the memo to go out, rather than declassify it, that would set a dangerous precedent and curtail executive powers, according to a White House official.

A final decision to authorize the release, without any part blacked out, came Thursday, a day before the document was sent back to the House for publication. While many in Congress, including House Speaker Paul Ryan, R-Wis., denied that the release undermined the FBI or Mueller's investigation, Trump seemed to acknowledge that the memo was explicitly political.

"The top Leadership and Investigators of the FBI and the Justice Department have politicized the sacred investigative process in favor of Democrats and against Republicans — something which would have been unthinkable just a short time ago," the president tweeted on Friday.

which would increase retirement contributions from 8 percent to more than 22 percent for EMTs and paramedics. The Fitch study estimated integration would cost the county almost $600,000 more per year.

But Smith said those costs could be offset by other savings including vehicle lease options and consolidation of computer systems.

The Fitch study also looked at full consolidation and a hybrid system, where Lake EMS would remain separate but have its administrative services - including human resources and accounting - provided by the county. Full consolidation would cost more than $1.3 million, while the hybrid system would save more than $360,000 per year.

Smith said under the integration plan EMS services can concentrate more on the population centers while fire rescue can better serve rural areas. Under the current system, emergency calls go to both Lake EMS and LCFR. If fire rescue arrives first they tend to the patient until Lake EMS arrives to take them to the hospital if needed.

Under an integrated system, some Lake EMS ambulances would operate in rural areas with LCFR crews on board. Smith said it should reduce the time it takes to get rural patients to the hospital.

"Potentially, in the rural areas, we would not respond. It would be fire rescue. The 90th percentile of our response time in the rural areas is somewhere around 22 minutes. Lake County Fire Rescue is somewhere around 14 to 15 minutes. So you can see that's saving time," Smith said.

The latest effort at reorganizing the EMS service comes after Jeff Cole, Lake County manager, asked the commission to increase the ambulance service's limit of temporary cash during the Jan. 9th meeting.

Since October, the pooled-cash limit - as it's known - went from $1 million to $2 million. Smith said the need for more cash is not a sign of trouble, but due to backed up federal payments.

Smith said about 65 percent of Lake EMS revenue comes from Medicare payments. Federal bureaucracy, budget cuts under sequestration and last year's major natural disasters slowed payments to a crawl.

The Fitch study also advised exploring the use of an outside company to handle billing. Using a dedicated billing company could save money, though the current system was within acceptable billing costs.

At the early January meeting, commissioners seemed willing to consider the issue.

"If our goal is to save taxpayers money and provide the best service possible, we all know based on what we've received so far that an integrated system, where everybody is working together, really is the best system," said Commissioner Leslie Campione.

Campione, who represents the Mount Dora, Eustis area, began pushing for reorganization in 2012.

"We spent resources on the Fitch study. Really, this is a continuation of what we've done in every department and it has been a long process. I think it's time to take action on some of those recommendations," said Tim Sullivan, commission chairman.

HELP

The surprising truth? Hospitals can make older patients sicker. Infections, incontinence and weakening muscles from bed rest can cascade into delirium, frailty and death. More than 30 percent of older adults go home from a hospital stay with a minor or major health problem they picked up at the hospital.

But for an ER doctor, sending an elderly patient home sometimes feels risky.

"The doctors are not comfortable sending you home unless you're safe," said Northwestern

Medicine's Dwayne Dobschuetz, a nurse practitioner who started making house calls by bicycle a year ago for the health system's geriatrics department. "It's easier to admit older patients than to send them home."

One of his patients, Marvin Shimp, 87, has lost much of his vision to macular degeneration, but lives independently. Dobschuetz helps him stay out of the hospital with regular visits to check vitals and answer questions.

"He becomes quite a helper," Shimp said.

Emergency rooms have been called the hospital's front door, so that's where reformers are starting.

Boundaries being tested

GOP-led states considering range of abortion restrictions

By Ryan J. Foley
The Associated Press

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Republicans who control a majority of the nation's statehouses are considering a wide range of abortion legislation that could test the government's legal ability to restrict a woman's right to terminate pregnancy.

The Mississippi House passed a bill Friday that would make the state the only one to ban all abortions after 15 weeks of pregnancy. In Missouri, lawmakers heard testimony earlier in the week on a bill that would ban abortions after 20 weeks. The Ohio House is expected to consider bills, already passed in the Senate, that would prohibit the most common type of procedure used to end pregnancies after 13 weeks and require that fetal remains be buried or cremated.

Abortion is a perennial hot button issue in statehouses across the country. Republican-controlled states have passed hundreds of bills since 2011 restricting access to the procedure while Democratic-led states have taken steps in the other direction.

The early weeks of this year's state legislative sessions have seen a flurry of activity around the issue. It comes as activists on both sides say they expect the U.S. Supreme Court to soon consider a question that remains unclear: How far can states go in restricting abortion in the interest of preserving and promoting fetal life?

The state bills debated since the start of the year "are all tests designed to see how far government power to legislate on behalf of a fetus can reach," said Jessica Mason Pieklo, who has been tracking legislation as the senior legal analyst for Rewire, a website that promotes views supporting abortion rights.

She said the outcome will determine whether states can legally ban abortion after a specific time period and outlaw specific medical procedures. Advocates for abortion rights say those strategies undermine the Supreme Court's 1973 ruling that women have the right to terminate pregnancies until a fetus is viable.

In Utah, critics have warned that a pending bill to prevent doctors from performing abortions on the basis of a Down syndrome diagnosis is unconstitutional. But its co-sponsor, Republican state Sen. Curt Bramble, said he is willing to defend the bill in court because its goal is to protect unborn children.

"There are times if the Supreme Court got it wrong, it is appropriate to push back," said Bramble, an accountant from Provo.

The anti-abortion bills have drawn opposition from women who say they have made the excruciating choice to terminate a pregnancy, often after discovering serious fetal abnormalities.

"A 20-week abortion ban sounds OK, but if that gets passed, what's next — 18 weeks, 15 weeks? At what point does it make abortion truly illegal?" said Robin Utz of St. Louis, 38, who submitted testimony this week against the Missouri bill. "It's terrifying and it's willfully ignorant."

Utz recounted terminating her pregnancy in its 21st week in November 2016, after learning her daughter would be born with a fatal kidney disease if she survived birth. She said doctors told her that dilation and evacuation, the most common abortion procedure in the second trimester, was the safest way to terminate the pregnancy.

Undeterred by such stories, the National Right to Life Committee and its allies have been pushing for state laws that ban abortion after 20 weeks of pregnancy and outlaw dilation and evacuation. Supporters of both measures argue that fetuses are capable of feeling pain after 20 weeks and call the procedure "dismemberment abortion."

Several court challenges to both types of laws are underway, with federal appeals courts considering the "dismemberment abortion" bans approved last year in Texas and Arkansas. The Kansas Supreme Court is expected to rule soon on the first-in-the-nation ban passed in that state three years ago.

Ingrid Duran, director of state legislation at the National Right to Life Committee, said the model state laws drafted by her group are aimed at U.S. Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy, a swing vote who wrote the court's 2007 opinion upholding a federal ban on a procedure critics call partial-birth abortion.

She said the court could use similar reasoning to prohibit dilation and evacuation and noted it has never considered whether states have an interest in protecting fetuses from pain.

"We did draft these laws with the bigger picture in mind," Duran said.

The shifted focus comes after the court dealt the anti-abortion movement a blow in 2016 by ruling that strict Texas regulations on abortion clinics and doctors were an undue burden on abortion access and unconstitutional.

Anti-abortion groups hope President Donald Trump will be able to nominate one or more justices to the Supreme Court following last year's confirmation of Neil Gorsuch, potentially making the court more conservative on the issue for decades to come.

TSA: Nearly 4,000 guns found last year

By Dana Hedgpath
The Washington Post

There was a realistic-looking replica of a suicide vest found in a checked bag at an airport in El Paso. A block of inert explosives was discovered in a carry-on bag at an airport in Florida. Hand grenades were confiscated from luggage at airports all over the country.

These, along with 3,957 firearms, were among the items discovered agents with the Transportation Security Administration discovered at airport security checkpoints in 2017.

In its "TSA Year in Review" report, the agency said a "record-setting" number of firearms were found in carry-on bags. With nearly 4,000 firearms for the year, that translates to about 10 firearms a day. That's up 17 percent from 2016, when 3,391 firearms were found at checkpoints, TSA said. And the number of firearms found has risen steadily since TSA began tracking the number in 2005, when 660 firearms were found.

According to the agency, 2 million travelers a day went through security checkpoints last year and a total of 771.5 million passengers were screened.

TSA said nearly 35 percent of the firearms found had a round in the chamber. And "the most firearms discovered in one month — a whopping 31 were found in August at the Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport, according to the report.

Below are the top 10 airports where firearms were found and the number

Another problem was many items appeared to be real but weren't.

The suicide vest mentioned earlier is one example. The traveler worked as a contractor dealing with explosive ordnance disposal, and the items were used as training aids.

In another case, a military instructor said he "forgot" his carry-on bag contained inert explosives.

Officials advised that if your line of work necessitates the use of such devices, "plan ahead and find another way to transport" the training items.

When seen on the X-ray monitor, TSA said, "we don't know if they're real, toys, or replicas until TSA explosives experts are called upon."

And even inert grenades can cause terminals and checkpoints to close, meaning delays or canceled flights.

Amateur finds lost US satellite

By Allison Klein
The Washington Post

Amateur astronomer Scott Tilley was in his home office on a recent evening, using his radio equipment to scan space in a needle-in-a-haystack search for a spy satellite operated by the U.S. Air Force.

Tilley, 47, launches himself on missions like this nightly. Since he was about 8, he has been a devoted but earthbound space explorer, looking for hidden satellites in the sky for hours on end.

As he scanned the skies that night a few weeks ago, he did not find what he was looking for, but he came across something possibly even better: A different satellite, a weather craft NASA lost more than a decade ago. NASA had searched for the spacecraft, worth about $150 million, for two years before giving up.

For an amateur astronomer, it was the stuff of dreams.

"By far, it's the most important thing I've discovered," said Tilley, an electrical engineer. "It's a pretty cool thing in my world."

Tilley, who lives in British Columbia, had single-handedly located the weather-tracking spacecraft IMAGE, which NASA launched in 2000 and lost contact with five years later.

At dinner, he told his wife about his discovery. She told him to tell NASA.

"I said, 'Well, how do I do that?'" "Tilley said. "She said, 'If you can find a satellite in space, surely you can find who built the thing.'"

So Tilley posted on Twitter what he had found. Then he got some names of scientists who had worked on the project and sent some emails.

"When I woke up, my inbox was filled with emails from people who worked on it in the early 2000s," Tilley said.

NASA confirmed his discovery through identification data collected by scientists at the Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Laboratory in Maryland.

"We are all very, very excited we might get the satellite back," said Patricia Reiff, who was co-investigator for the IMAGE satellite and is a professor of physics and astronomy at Rice University.

Attention Seniors: Trusts are not exclusively for the wealthy

 This is an Advertisement *****

Despite popular belief, wealthy people aren't the only folks who may need revocable living trusts.

Attorney Andrew Curtis, Esq. – whose practice concentrates on the areas of trusts, estates and elder law – is very familiar with this common misconception.

"It's a false notion," he said. "For example, I recently had a fellow, whose mother had just died, visit my office. All she owned was a $100,000 condo, and her will read, 'I leave my condo to my child.' Clear and simple. Well, the child had to go through probate before he could sell the condo, and the legal fee was $3,000. A revocable living trust could have avoided this."

Below, Curtis has shared many other reasons why a revocable living trust may be advisable for a person of modest means.

A trust might also allow you to "rule from the grave" – after you pass on, your assets may be distributed according to specifications made while you were still alive. This may prevent potentially undesirable scenarios, such as your children leaving their inheritance to people you never knew or cared for, like an in-law. If you leave your assets to your kids in a lifetime trust, they may each use the money for normal living but, upon their deaths, the remaining assets will pass to your grandchildren or to the surviving sibling(s) – not to their spouse. Further, the trust can protect against your spouse leaving the money to a new spouse or significant other after you are dead.

Trusts are extremely useful in second marriage situations. If you simply leave your assets to your new spouse, he/she is free to leave them to his/her children, not yours, once you pass away. This scenario is avoidable with a trust, however, and the assets would pass to your kids.

Trusts may be used to manage assets inherited by children who aren't good with money. For example, you may provide that the child will only get the income from his/her inheritance.

Trusts may also protect your children's inheritance if they go bankrupt, divorce or face a lawsuit. Further, if you have a handicapped child, a "supplemental needs trust" may be utilized to prevent loss of his or her government benefits.

OUR OPINION

Mount Dora stargazes and ignores bigger problems

In disputes between governments and their citizens, there is rarely a true bad guy, and so it is with Mount Dora and its battle with the owners of the so-called Starry Night house.

By now, the story is well known. Last year, Nancy Nemhauser and Ludomir Jastrzebski commissioned artist Richard Barrenechea to paint a mural on the drab masonry wall outside their home, fronting Old U.S. Highway 441. Barrenechea used this odd canvas to create an adaptation of Vincent Van Gogh's iconic "Starry Night" masterpiece, with its swirls of deep blue and white punctuated by bursts of yellow.

It was an attention-getter, to be sure, and so it soon drew the attention of city code enforcement officers, who decreed it was graffiti and cited the homeowners. After further reflection, the city decided that it wasn't graffiti but instead constituted an illegal sign and directed the couple to paint over it.

They didn't. Rather, in what some see as an act of defiance, Nemhauser and Jastrzebski commissioned the artist to carry the "Starry Night" theme to their handsome house overlooking Lake Dora, and he did.

A city magistrate heard the case against the couple and imposed fines of $100 for each day that the mural remained, capping it at a month, or 31 days, for a total of $3,100. The couple sued, and now we are waiting for a Circuit Court judge to hear the case.

Last week, however, the city brought the issue back before the magistrate and asked him to start the clock running on the fines again. He did. Magistrate David Tegeler restarted the $100-a-day fines and made it retroactive to when the fines stopped in the fall, for a total of $8,000 and counting.

Seen in the most favorable light for Mount Dora, the city is simply trying to preserve the quaint character of one of the most unique and interesting towns in Central Florida, if not the entire state. It is a town whose economy is largely based on tourism dollars, so preserving the city's character is important.

But is this particular fight worth fighting?

For starters, classifying the mural as a "sign" is absurd on its face. Signs communicate messages, while art is a form of personal expression. But let's let the courts sort that one out.

We wonder, as do many others in the community, whether the city is missing an important point ... still. Works of art like Barrenechea's should be encouraged. They amplify — rather than spoil — the city's carefully nurtured artistic and cultural environment.

Yet here they sit, their heels dug in and refusing to move over ... a coat of paint. Mind you, this is not grotesque or offensive to community standards. It is a sound interpretation of a masterpiece on private property.

And then last week, the city made the leap from legislative and regulatory body to government bully by imposing excessive fines to pressure the homeowners into complying.

At the end of the day, this fight will cost the City Council, the city administration and, indeed, the citizens dearly. It will cost tax dollars to fight this foolish battle and it will cost the city credibility in its continuing effort to brand itself a cultural oasis.

Shame on Mount Dora officials. You have real problems, significant problems, that need solving. Keep your gaze trained on those and not on the 'Night' sky.

How would you change political apathy among youth?

Shelby Mulholland
Umatilla High School

In my opinion, many young people, as well as adults, are apathetic about political involvement. I feel this is because many people are unaware of the large role government plays in our daily lives. If given the opportunity to make today's youth more aware of the importance of political involvement, I would implement a student government program that replicates the government and politics in the United States, unlike the student government programs in many schools today which mainly focus on activities and events.

My form of student government would begin as early as elementary school. Students at this age would learn how the government is run on a local level such as city and county governments. At this level, a "mayor" and "county officials" would be elected as leaders. Students would then be taught how to campaign and run for office as well as learning how to register to vote. Students in elementary school would vote on topics that would affect them every day,

The following are the four winning entries in the Lake County Essay Contest sponsored by the Chamber Alliance of Lake County to help develop leaders among Lake County youth. The essayists had the option of writing about how to cure political apathy among today's youth or whether political figures should be held to a higher ethical standard than the average citizen. The winners are being treated to a trip to the state Capitol this week.

Should politicians be held to a higher ethical standard?

Ava Bixby
Mount Dora Christian Academy

The question of ethics has prevailed in our country from the very beginning. Americans once relied on their leaders to be fair, diligent and responsible, no matter what. Throughout the years, these standards that were once imperative to the people have been altered. Why? The answer is simple. A new, cynical generation is forming and with it comes a different perception of what's right and wrong. Our modern world is much more willing to conform to increasingly offensive behavior. A nonchalant, carefree attitude that comes along with the millennial generation results in the constant justification of today's politicians and begs the question, how far is too far?

Ever since the development of social media, the presidents of our country have remained under constant, live-time criticism. With our current president taking paramount governmental decisions to Twitter, it seems that nothing is too confidential for the internet. When our president is expected to represent what our nation stands for, offensive tweets and degrading women is not exactly what comes to mind. When other countries see the immature behavior of the most powerful man in the free world being justified and accepted, it sets a precedent for what will be allowed in the future. Where is the boundary drawn? What Tweet will finally be taking it too far? One would think the recorded words of our current president insulting women and minorities would

Should politicians be held to a higher ethical standard?

Riley Hollerand
Lake Minneola High School

Political scandals have been commonplace since the birth of politics. People have questioned the morals and ethical codes of politicians and vilified them when they fell short of the public's exceedingly high expectations. Politicians should not be held to a higher ethical standard than you or me because they are people just like us. They are subject to the same temptations that we are, and though they should display integrity to perform their job well, they should not be subject to unrealistic standards of ethics. We shouldn't hold them to a higher ethical standard than everyone else, but instead, we should hold everyone to the same high standard.

Furthermore, the whole concept of ethics is fuzzy. Different people declare different things moral and immoral. It is improbable and impossible for us to require politicians to meet higher ethical standards when we cannot clearly define those standards. Ethical ambiguity is hard to live with because some people, politicians included, genuinely want to do the right thing or want others to do so, but someone, somewhere, will always find fault in that person's decision.

Politicians are elected to serve and perform a job: to serve the people and assist with the governance of a country. However, skillful and effective execution of politics and high ethical standards are not mutually exclusive. One can be advantageous and successful without having pristine morals. We have just as much of a role in what takes place in our government, therefore we cannot expect

How would you change political apathy among youth?

Carson Schreiner
Lake Minneola High School

America's youth tends to view political involvement from an apathetic perspective. The root of the indifference is a lack of knowledge and understanding of current events. In high school social studies courses, the focus is often placed on past events and not present-day affairs. Although historic events can be examined and mapped to prevent future mistakes, current issues should also be given priority to engage students with what is occurring in their world. Therefore, I suggest increasing exposure to modern problems will spark an urgency to become progressively more involved in politics and help eliminate apathy among youth.

The lack of coverage of current events in the typical classroom has led to casual indifference among today's youth concerning politics. Committing classroom time to recent history and class-wide discussion will spawn an increase in youth participation in politics because current events are as important as past events, and discussions create more educated citizens as it takes knowledge of specific topics to communicate ideas.

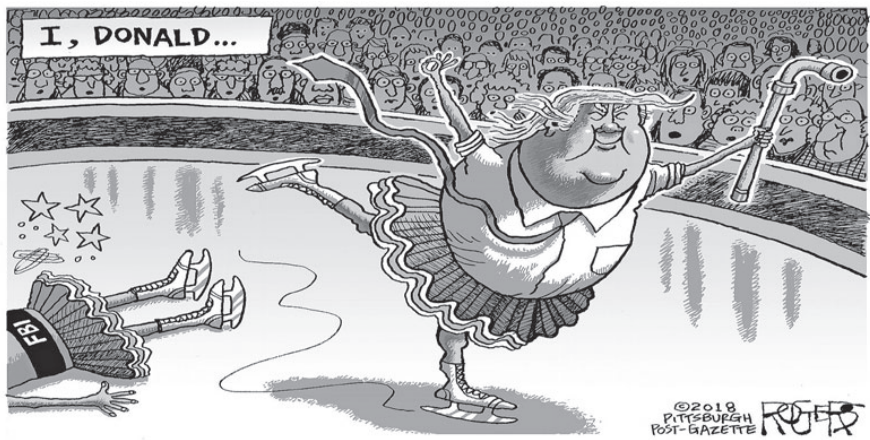

Concurrently, expanding their knowledge of the decisions and consequences in history will assist students in processing the issues of their times. For example, the topic of immigration has become a sore subject in the United States. Distinguishing between prideful aversion and the promotion of national security has become increasingly difficult. Political opinions will be formed and views will be challenged. As a result, informed citizens will be created.

By incorporating current events into social Studies classes, today's youth will be exposed to issues pertaining directly to their lives. Spending time reviewing news articles in class will increase the knowledge of pressing issues in society. This sort of exposure will lead to a decrease in apathy towards politics. Introducing current information alongside historic information will result in an understanding and appreciation for our political process.

America's treatment of indigenous peoples is unforgivable

Choice Edwards

President Trump, in his childish way, derisively calls Senator Elizabeth Warren Pocahontas; indeed it is a badge of honor instead. What nations have done to the indigenous peoples of the Americas is unforgivable. Yet it continues.

Slavery is our country's original sin, but what we did and continue to do to the indigenous people called Indians only because Chris Columbus thought he'd come to India, is enough to make a grown person with a heart and Iron Eyes Cody cry out loud.

The total American Indian/Alaska Native population is 2.9 million or about 0.9 percent of the U.S. population. Obviously, the natives of these lands (North, Central and South America) had a very lax immigration policy — they vetted no one. Where is nativism when most needed?

Chief Justice John Marshall set Native Americans on the path to poverty in 1831 when he characterized the relationship between Indians and the government as "resembling that of a ward to his guardian." With these words, Marshall established the Federal trust doctrine, which assigns the government as the trustee of Indian affairs. That trusteeship continues today, and unfortunately, it has served Indians about as well as did Andrew Jackson.

The federal government is responsible for managing Indian affairs for the benefit of all Indians. But by all accounts, the government has failed to live up to this responsibility. As a result, Native American reservations are among the poorest communities in the United States.

The federal government guaranteed the health, safety and welfare of tribal nations in exchange for over 450 million acres of tribal lands. Upholding this federal responsibility remains critical as American Indian and Alaska Native citizens experience higher disease rates, lower life expectancy rates, higher dropout rates and higher poverty rates than any other racial or ethnic group in the country.

Tribal communities are among the poorest in the country and unemployment rates in Indian country often stand above 50 percent.

- 1 out of 10 American Indians (12 and older) become victims of violent crime annually.

- Native people die at 600 percent higher rates than other Americans from tuberculosis, have a 510 percent higher rate for alcoholism, 189 percent higher rate for diabetes, 229 percent higher rate in injuries, 152 percent higher rate in vehicle crashes and a 62 percent higher rate in suicides.

- Indian youth have the highest rate of suicide among all ethnic groups in the U.S. and it is the second-leading cause of death for Native youth aged 15-24.

- 40 percent of on-reservation housing is considered substandard (compared to 6 percent outside of Indian Country) and nearly 1/3 of homes on reservations are overcrowded. Less than half of the homes on reservations are connected to public sewer systems, and 16 percent lack indoor plumbing.

Over 66 percent of the roads system is unimproved earth and gravel. Approximately 24 percent of Indian Reservation Roads bridges are classified as deficient. These conditions make it very difficult for residents of tribal communities to travel to hospitals, stores, schools and employment centers.

Water is sacred to many tribal nations and is vital to tribal subsistence, cultural practices, health and welfare, agricultural production and economic development. Water allocations to tribal lands first originated in the early 1800s through tribal treaty provisions, advancing through tribal water settlements and claims, and now water resources are closely monitored for quality and safety reasons. Nonetheless, according to the 2007 Indian Health Service Sanitation Deficiency System Summary Report, over 13 percent of tribal homes lack basic access to safe drinking water and sanitation services, compared to less than 1 percent of homes nationwide. And I thought Flint, Michigan was unforgivable.

Treatment of natives borders on some of the worst human rights abuses any place on Earth. The demographics of the country are changing. Some of us now can commiserate with the first Americans as they saw the inhabitants of their lands change.

We must do better. Let our federal office holders know they must do better. Infrastructure enhancement should and must begin with the first Americans.

FROM THE RIGHT

Schemers, screamers and Dreamers

Russ Sloan

As I am watching the debate on immigration play out, what Americans need to consider is how the schemers, screamers and Dreamers fit in this debate. First, we see that for the Democrats and a few Republicans, illegal immigration is now viewed the same as legal immigration. We also see how "political wordsmithing" attempts to create a sympathy for those here illegally. The offspring of illegal aliens are now called Dreamers. I guess this means that offspring of citizens here legally don't dream. It's like you're not "pro abortion," you're "pro choice," or you're not an "illegal alien," you're an "undocumented worker."

The big debate now seems to be focused on what to do with the Dreamers. This is first and foremost on the minds of democratic leaders, more so than our military, national security or our economy. What today's democratic leaders fail to mention is that this problem with the Dreamers existed under former President Barack Obama and they could have fixed it in the first two years of his initial four years as president, as they controlled the House and had a filibuster-proof control of the Senate. The Republicans could not have stopped them on this issue or any other. Can't believe the caring Democrats of today who did not care in 2008 or 2009. But today's Democrats have a new scheme to gain votes after losing over 1,000 elected offices throughout the U.S. during the Obama presidency. We now see TV coverage of crowds screaming out their desire to grant amnesty to all of the Dreamers and also ignore any distinction between illegal and legal immigrants.

The democratic governors and mayors of several states and cities are refusing to be of any assistance in obeying federal immigration law. In fact, many of these democratic leaders are openly defying federal immigration law as did democratic governors in Alabama and Arkansas following the desegregation ruling by our Supreme Court in 1954.

The scheme of today's Democrats is to get the Dreamers amnesty, as they view them as their future voters. I believe they are correct in that assessment. I have seen the impact of illegal immigration on California politics. California had some talented and astute republican governors in Ronald Reagan, George Deukmejian and Pete Wilson. But over the years those illegals who settled in California had children in California who became automatic citizens and also became democratic voters to a large degree. The Democrats seeing the political benefits of illegal immigration in California and having lost over 1,000 elective offices during the Obama administration desperately realized their future political base rests with tolerating and promoting illegal immigration. The Dreamers are just another tool to regain political office.

So how do we know that the Democrats are not sincere in truly caring about Dreamers? It became very clear in their immediate rejection of President Trump's recently announced immigration policy including his approach to the Dreamers and immigration as a whole. President Trump offered a path to citizenship for not just 800,000 Dreamers but for 1.8 million Dreamers. That is more than two times the number which had been discussed previously, dramatically enlarging the Dreamer base and offering a path to citizenship. This was rejected by the caring Democrats. Trump's other immigration basics include ending chain and lottery immigration, building the wall on our southern border, adding more border security agents and adding more state-of-the-art border security measures on both our northern and southern borders. Replacing chain and lottery immigration with a merit-based immigration system is the only approach that makes sense for America's future. If you owned a company and hired a skilled employee would you also hire two dozen more of the employee's relatives regardless of talent? It has been a stupid policy.

Personally, I would probably allow the Dreamers who have no felonies to stay but get in line with others seeking American citizenship and all judged based on a merit system. The Dreamers have become the focus of democratic schemers, screamers and legalities and merit be damned. Seeking more democratic voters is their primary objective.

be enough to spark global outrage. While many are upset by these actions, there are still 14 percent of Americans who say they will approve of our president no matter what he decides to do in the future, right or wrong. This complacency is a contagious disease that is the reason politicians are free to lack any form of ethical nature. The only way to stop the corruptness of politicians is for our nation to take a stand. Disinterest in politics is our worst enemy. Not caring about the blatantly dishonorable actions that occur within our political system means that nothing will ever change. More millennials are leaning closer and closer to complete political apathy because they believe they cannot make a difference. Because we are the future of politics, this must change. We must take a stand against corrupt government officials. We must encourage others to have a voice in the status of our government. We must educate others that unethical politicians will result in the downfall of our country. In order to make a difference, we must be the difference.

politicians to meet a standard that we ourselves cannot even meet. Ultimately, politicians are expected to do a job - represent the people

- and if their morals do not affect their politics or harm others, then they should not be victimized or expected to live up to higher standards than anyone else.

Some may argue that the immense potential affect politicians have on people and their status as role models subject them to higher ethical standards. However, by that logic, celebrities too have a greater capacity to influence others and be a role model than the average person. Obviously, and sadly, most people don't always hold them to a higher ethical standard. Instead, the public and media crucify them for their flaws and questionable morals. Politicians are the same way.

If a politician does something unethical, like committing adultery, we condemn them in the press. We are horrified and express disgust. But if our doctor or teacher had an affair we wouldn't villainize them or refuse to listen to or see them again. Why should it be any different for politicians? Everyone exhibits a lack of ethical standards now and then, yet only the politicians are continuously and unwaveringly vilified.

Politicians have a tremendous responsibility to their fellow men and country, but so do we. We shouldn't expect more from politicians than other so-called role models, public figures or even ourselves. We should instead hold them to our own high standard.

such as which new playground equipment they would like the school to purchase or what color the cafeteria should be painted.

At the middle school level, students would learn about state government. Students would learn how a state government operates as well as how laws are implemented and changed. Students would vote for a "governor" and "state representatives." Middle school students could vote on matters such as the weekly lunch menu. The "elected officials" or "lawmakers" might propose and encourage a healthy lunch menu.

Students, or voters, who oppose the healthy lunch menu would be taught how to lobby or petition for other options. The purpose of this would be to teach students the process of how a bill becomes a law and how to change a law that negatively affects them.

Students in high school would learn how our government operates on a national level.

They would vote for "politicians" such as "president" and "treasurer." For example, students would be encouraged to vote for someone who will spend their class dues or "taxes" wisely. If the money was not spent wisely or not enough money was raised, then students would see the negative affect this would have on prom, homecoming and graduation ceremony. In my revised form of student government, students would not be forced into participating, just as citizens of the United States are not forced to participate in our government. However, a participation grade would be given to encourage all students to engage in their level of government. As the maturity and knowledge of the students increased through school, the elements of the roles of government would become more complex, much like today's government in the United States. If students were taught at an early age how much politics affects them in almost everything they do in their daily lives, I believe young people would want to be more involved in politics at every level.

Denver's haven for abused animals

In a golden field, a black leopard emerges from an underground den, climbs upon a high perch and serenely gazes out over the savanna to the mountains beyond.

But look closely and you'll see that the den is made of concrete piping, the perch from rubber and wood, and that it is not Mount Kilimanjaro on the horizon, but the Rocky Mountains. We are in fact just 35 miles north-east of downtown Denver, in Keenesburg, at the 720-acre megashelter that is The Wild Animal Sanctuary.

That leopard enjoying the view is Eddy, one of some 450 large carnivores and other species that reside here, and like all of them, he is lucky to be alive. These animals were rescued from abusive, dangerous or otherwise unsuitable conditions; but here, thanks to the efforts of founder Pat Craig, hundreds of volunteers and the generosity of donors, they live in peace and tranquility at the oldest and largest sanctuary of its kind in the world.

Visitors to the Wild Animal Sanctuary are greeted at the Welcome Center, where they watch a video about its history and mission then proceed outside to the Mile Into the Wild raised walkway. At 1.5

miles, it is the longest foot-bridge in the world. Here, visitors have spectacular views of the grounds and the animals in their various habitats. They might see a herd of white alpaca moving like a cloud along the sanctuary's perimeter; in a field, lions playfully batting at each other; a bear lumbering along a fence; and, right beneath the walkway, tigers sleeping.

Viewing the animals from above, rather than at eye level, was Craig's idea. He had observed that when the animals saw humans at eye level, they felt threatened, but they did not perceive anything above them as a threat. The walkway, which rises anywhere between 18 and 42 feet along its route, allows observation without intrusion so that the animals feel safe.

The sanctuary comprises 60 species-specific habitats ranging in size from 5 to 25 acres. Water is pumped through wells to pools and water tanks throughout the habitats. The bear, lion and tiger habitats contain concrete dens that are kept at a constant 60 degrees. When the animals arrive at the sanctuary, they are first placed in what are called lockouts, where they remain for a few months while they get to know and feel comfortable with other animals. Once it is determined that the animals will get along together, they are released into a habitat.

The animals are fed a USDA-approved diet that ranges from fresh fruits and vegetables to raw fish and meat to breads and cereals, depending on the species. There are no set feeding times because animals in the wild eat randomly, whenever they can find food.

The sanctuary does not breed animals. All males are neutered, with the exception of lions. Neutering a male lion causes him to lose his mane, which plays an important role in the lion-pride dynamic. Female lions are on a contraceptive implant.

Have bun will travel: San Fran's cult baked goods

By Rachel Ward
WhereTraveler.com

For half a decade now, the kouign amann has been a staple in San Francisco pastry cases. With origins in Brittany, France, this treat can be thought of as a mix between a palmier cookie and a croissant.

At B. Patisserie, chef Belinda Leong has been perfecting her version of this treat, something like a caramelized croissant, for 12 years. Flaky, light, crunchy, gooey, buttery and addictive are all fitting descriptors. Oakland-based Starter Bakery's version of the kouign amann, available in San Francisco at Reville Coffee Co. locations, has its own twist. Like a traditional croissant, the signature pastry is layered with salted butter. But unlike a croissant, it's also layered with sugar and baked in a pan lined with more butter and sugar. The result is buttery, salty, sweet and caramel-y. Varieties are made fresh every day: traditional, chocolate (made with local brand TCHO 68 percent) and seasonal fruit.

More San Francisco treats:

The Rebel Within at Craftsman and Wolves

The specialty item at this modern patisserie from James-Beard-nominated chef William Werner is a savory breakfast muffin that has asiago cheese, green onion and breakfast sausage baked into the mix and a full soft-cooked farm egg in the center. Praised by GQ and Bon Appetit magazines, it sells out nearly every day.

Almond Croissant at La Boulangerie de San Francisco ▶ This decadent pastry from the popular local chain starts in the French tradition: A baked plain croissant is cut in half and filled with frangipane (almond cream) before going back in the oven.

This version, however, has a slight twist, with extra frangipane and shaved almonds on top.

Morning Bun at Tartine Bakery

This flaky bun is a cult favorite at the internationally famed bakery in the Mission neighborhood. It's made with laminated croissant dough, which makes for a light and layered interior and a crisp and intensely caramelized exterior, and sugar and cinnamon. Orange zest gives a subtle, fresh tang that balances the buttery sweetness.

Cinnamon Roll at Mariposa Baking Company

The most popular pastry at the gluten-free confectionary with a prime outpost in the Ferry Building Marketplace is also free of dairy and nuts. Soft, sweet and cinnamon-y, it's a perfect breakfast treat.

Service project featured in campaign

Leesburg High School Students in Action team recognized for community efforts

By Lake County Schools

LEESBURG — The Leesburg High School Students in Action team recently received recognition from the Jefferson Awards Foundation (JAF) for their community service efforts.

The students were featured in an outreach campaign for Lead 360, a contest held last month for young people to submit ideas for solving problems they are most passionate about. The winning idea will be activated across the country with the foundation's constituents and partners.

Leesburg students were featured for a project they conducted in September that involved packing more than 85 Brae's Brown Bags that were donated to the local high school food pantries. The bags contained a bottle of water, healthy snacks, an encouraging note written by the student and a sheet that included local resources to assist youth and families suffering from food insecurities in Central Florida.

The Jefferson Awards Foundation is the country's longest standing organization dedicated to activating and celebrating public service. Through its programs, JAF trains and empowers individuals to serve and lead in their communities, amplifying their impact through the organization's vast network of media partners, mentors and volunteers.

Cypress Ridge Elementary celebrates grand opening of science center

By Lake County Schools

CLERMONT — Cypress Ridge Elementary School celebrated the grand opening of its new Discovery Science Center (DSC) with an open house on Jan. 30.

Funded by Lake County Schools, the Educational Foundation of Lake County, corporate sponsors, private donations and grants, the center will be open weekdays for inexpensive field trips that will be used to introduce and reinforce concepts students will explore in class during the school year. The DSC staff will tailor those trips to fit the needs of each grade level during guided lessons that incorporate its numerous exhibits. Eventually, the staff hopes to designate some Saturdays to be open to the public.

"We have over 100 exhibits from a robotic arm to a Bernoulli blower to a wind tunnel," said Principal Dale Delpit, who led the effort to create the DSC. "We have dinosaur fossils, some woolly mammoth hair and lots of hands-on building and engineering activities."

The primary target for the center is Lake County Schools students in kindergarten through fifth grade, but private schools and home school groups are welcome as well.

"We envision the day when surrounding counties will come, too," Delpit said.

The center has been a passion of his. He started working on it nearly three years ago when he applied for and received a $20,000 grant to support the initiative. Early plans called for a traveling set of about 50 exhibits, but the provision of a portable from the school district allowed him to expand.

"We are a STEM (science, technology, engineering and

Eustis Heights staff delivers books

By Lake County Schools

EUSTIS — Teachers and administrators from Eustis Heights Elementary School took a bus ride through the city on Jan. 27, making stops along the way to greet students with free books.

Principal Chad Frazier said it was done to "encourage a love of literacy for our students." The project came at the end of a weeklong observance of Celebrate Literacy Week in districts across Florida. It was done in partnership with the Eustis police and fire departments, who served as escorts during the bus ride and provide mentors for many of the students.

"Our population is largely low income and some families don't have access to home libraries to encourage the love of reading," Principal Chad Frazier said. "We give high interest books to all of our students so that they have access to them at home."

The school gave away about 1,500 books in what was the fourth year for the project. Last year, the project was expanded to include neighborhoods outside of the Eustis Heights attendance boundary. This year, the focus was on Eustis Heights students.

"One benefit is the parents and the community see how much we truly care about our students," Frazier said. "A bus load of teachers on a Saturday pulling into your neighborhood giving away free books builds trust and gives us an opportunity to interact with parents, some of whom we rarely see at school."

Sawgrass Bay named a 'Leader in Me' Lighthouse School

By Lake County Schools

CLERMONT — Sawgrass Bay Elementary School has been honored by the Franklin Covey Co. for implementing its "The Leader in Me" process and achieving outstanding results in school and student.

The Leader in Me is a whole-school transformation model — developed in partnership with educators — that empowers students with leadership and life skills. By integrating leadership development into existing school programs, curricula and traditions, it aims to help students learn how to become self-reliant, set initiative, plan ahead, take and track goals, do their homework, prioritize their time, manage their emotions, be moderate of others, express their viewpoint persuasively, resolve conflicts, find creative solutions, value differences and live a balanced life.

"We are honored to become a Leader in Me Lighthouse School," said Principal Andrea Steenken. "I am extremely proud of our student leaders, faculty, parents and community for embracing this process as we work to build leaders here at Sawgrass Bay."

The Leader in Me process is implemented once school staff identify the outcomes they want for their school. They learn the program's principles and then incorporate them into their work and relationships, modeling the behaviors to students. Key elements of the model involve reinventing the physical environment to reinforce the vision and outcomes for the school with banners, signs and murals; giving each student a leadership role within the school, and holding student-led Leadership Events.

Schools become a Lighthouse School when they have implemented the process with fidelity and produced outstanding results in school and student outcomes. Sawgrass Bay is the 351st school to have achieved this milestone.

The comeback kings

Tom Brady, Patriots thrive at late-game playoff rallies

By Josh Dubow
The Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Tom Brady is the comeback king in the playoffs.

From his past two Super Bowl wins to the AFC championship game rally against Jacksonville that got the Patriots to the NFL's biggest stage for the third in four seasons, no quarterback has engineered more late-game playoff comebacks than Brady.

But he is not alone. Whether it was Marcus Mariota and the Tennessee Titans in the wild-card round against Kansas City earlier this postseason, or

"There's a great belief no matter what the circumstances, that we have enough to overcome it. I don't think we want to try to overcome that again this year. That was pretty tough to do. Hopefully we can get a lead, play from ahead, play on our terms."

MOUNT DORA — They show up one after another at Mount Dora Christian Academy.

Dan Mullen, the new University of Florida coach, just dropping by for a visit.

Mark Richt, the University of Miami coach, bringing his entire defensive coaching staff with him.

The list goes on.

Big name coaches at big-time programs are all beating a path to the football offices at MDCA and the object of their attention is junior linebacker Jesiah Pierre.

"It's very exciting and it's a blessing, too," Pierre said Friday at the school. "It's rare that you get to have that happen and I'm really happy about it. But as you get older you realize it's more serious. It's a fun process, but my focus is on next season and having a good senior year."

Pierre has had time to get used to all the attention. He was offered a scholarship to Miami after his freshman season at MDCA and has been on the radar of major college

At 6-foot-2, 214-pounds, he is an ideal size for an outside linebacker and is ranked as the 31st best prospect in the country at the position by 247Sports, which also ranks him as the 53rd best football prospect in Florida at all positions.

"It can be intimidating or it

Fowler takes lead at Phoenix Open

By John Nicholson
AP Sports Writer

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Rickie Fowler birdied the last three holes to take the lead in the Waste Management Phoenix Open, overcoming a sluggish start in front of the largest crowd in golf history.

Justin Thomas went the other way, wasting a brilliant opening run with another late meltdown.

Fowler shot a 4-under 67 on Saturday to reach 14-under 199 with a round left at TPC Scottsdale's Stadium Course, the fan-friendly layout packed with an estimated 216,818 fans on an 80-degree afternoon.

"I really made some good swings coming in," Fowler said. "I just wasn't getting the ball close enough and finally on the last few there I was able to get some good looks."

The fourth-ranked Thomas, the PGA Tour player of the year after winning five times last season, birdied the first six holes to take the lead. But instead of making a run at his second sub-60 round in a little over a year, Thomas had to fight for an even-par 71 that left him eight shots back. He dropped six strokes in a three-hole stretch, making a bogey on the par-4 14th, a triple bogey on the par-5 15th and a double bogey on the rowdy par-3 16th. On Thursday in the first round, he had a double bogey on 16 and a bogey on 17.

Thomas left the course without speaking to the media.

Former Arizona State players Jon Rahm and Chez Reavie were a stroke back along with Bryson DeChambeau. Phil Mickelson was two shots behind, another former Sun Devils star riding the crowd support.

"It means a lot to me," Mickelson said. "It's very helpful and very important to my success. I think it's been a big instrument in allowing me to get into the round and play and have fun and get out of the technical side."

The crowd pushed the week total to 654,906, just short of the record of 655,434 set last year.

Fowler is trying to finally win in the desert. He finished a shot behind Hunter Mahan in 2010, lost to Hideki Matsuyama on the fourth extra hole in 2016, and tied for fourth last year.

"It's just a matter of time," Fowler said. "It would just be nice if it was sooner rather than later."

OCALA — The recent cold spell that passed through the southeastern United States featured temperatures sinking into the low 20s and the potential of hazardous ice on the roads. Such conditions are rare in Marion County, and the cold weather inspired many social media posts featuring frozen ponds and even light snowfall all across North Central Florida.

It is hard to imagine that a region where freezing weather and hard winter-like conditions are so rare could have produced three of the United States' 13 Olympic speedskaters. But that is the case.

CLEVELAND Thome wants block 'C,' not Wahoo, on plaque

Newly elected Hall of Famer Jim Thome won't be enshrined with Chief Wahoo.

Thome played most of his career with the Cleveland Indians and "fully" supports the team's decision to remove the divisive Wahoo logo from its uniforms. He prefers to have the club's block "C" logo on his Cooperstown plaque.

The slugger feels the "C" logo is "the right thing to do." Thome plans to speak with his wife, Andrea, and Hall of Fame officials before making a final decision.

Thome wore the Chief Wahoo logo while playing for the Indians from 1991-2002 and again when he returned in 2011. The left-handed hitter belted 612 home runs, eighth on the career list.

The Wahoo logo will be removed from jersey sleeves and caps starting in the 2019 season, when Cleveland hosts the All-Star Game.

HAKUBA, JAPAN Watabe wins 4th straight Nordic combined event

Akito Watabe of Japan won his fourth straight Nordic combined World Cup event on Saturday to enhance his position as a gold medal contender at the Pyeongchang Olympics.

Watabe jumped 130.5 meters and finished the 10-kilometer race in 24 minutes, 14.6 seconds, 1:12.6 ahead of Norway's Jan Schmid. Germany's Manuel Faisst was third.

The 29-year-old Sochi silver medalist, who will represent Japan in his fourth straight Winter Olympics in Pyeongchang, extended his season wins to five — the most he has won in a single season on the World Cup circuit.

Watabe lost only the second athlete to sweep the three-day Seefeld Triple event in Austria last month. He has surged to the top of the World Cup standings with the results from Japan and Austria, adding to a win earlier this season in Finland.

FISHING REPORT

Source: maps4news.com/©HERE

GATEHOUSE MEDIA

Tip of the week: According to www.fishingtipsdepot.com, when fishing for trout in streams and rivers, make sure to know the current. Deep pools created by the current can hold big and small trout. The large trout are most likely to be found in these pools at dawn and dusk.

1. Yankeetown/Waccasassa: According to Jim Zaloga, the hope is that if it is warmer, the trout will start venturing out the flats in the afternoon. The redfish should be toward the mouths of the rivers and creeks. Mud minnows are great bait for redfish this time of year.

2. Crystal River/Homosassa: Capt. William Toney reports that the best fishing has been in the rivers with live shrimp for bait. Most of the keeper fish are sheepshead and black drum. A few redfish are in the slot but most are undersized but good fun. During the change of tides is when one likely will find the best bite. The near-shore rocks are holding sheepshead, but wind and weather have kept most anglers inshore. With a warming trend coming this weekend, it may trigger a sea trout bite near the creek mouths and adjacent flats. Glow nose hooked jerk baits are the best choice for a soft plastic lure. The best retrieve is a twitch, twitch pause. Most strikes are during the pause part of the retrieve. Incoming tide will be early morning or late evening this weekend.

3. Withlacoochee: Capt. Bob at Angler's Resort on the Withlacoochee River in Dunnellon reports The West Hernando Bass Club held its monthly fishing tournament on Lake Rousseau last Saturday, putting in at the damn. The winning boat caught five fish for a total weight of 11 pounds, and the big bass weighed in at four pounds. These were caught on artificial bait. Those fishing on Lake Rousseau have had some success with artificial bait. However, those fishing on the lake and Withlacoochee River using shiners are still struggling. Some crappies are still being caught in the phosphate pits on the river. Remember to practice catch and release.

4. Orange Lake/Lochloosa: Lochloosa Harbor is reporting that specks are biting with regularity all over, including the weeds. Anglers have been bringing their boats in to resupply with bait minnows before going back out to catch more.

5. Ocklawaha River: Roger Robbins at Buck 'N Bass Sports Center reports that the Ocklawaha River has produced nice bass on wild shiners and sinko-type worms in junebug and green pumpkin color spectrums. Specks have been caught below the dam and in the river heading towards Highway 19.

6. Salt Springs: Roger Robbins at Buck 'N Bass Sports Center reports that Rodman Reservoir has produced some nice bass and specks below the dam. Speck fishing has been good on the north side of the reservoir just outside the lilly pads. Fishermen have been catching slab-sized specks in this area and a few in the stumps. Trolled minnows are the best bait for these. Betts beetle spins in green and black are also working well. Catfish are being caught up to 20 pounds below the dam.

7. Forest Lakes: Roger Robbins at Buck 'N Bass Sports Center reports that fishing has been good for the people who have braved the weather on Lake George, Lake Kerr, Lake Delancy and the St John's River. Bass are starting to show signs of going on the beds. Wild shiners have been the best bait for these. Speck are being caught in Lake George and Lake Kerr. They are carrying roe and should be plentiful in the next week or two. Minnows are the bait of choice with Jiffy Jigs trolled are also working. The south end of Lake George in the bomb-range and in the wood fenders have been producing some nice specks. The St. John's River below Lake George has produced some nice bass on wild shiners and the Ole monster black zoom worms.

8. Lake Weir: Liz at Fat Daddy's reports that specks are being caught near certain fish tractors here. Go to different tractors, gradually eliminating non-producing areas as you go, and eventually, you will find fruitful zones. Big bass also are starting to move around here in some places.

9. Harris Chain: According to BassOnline.com, bass often can be found here in the open water. The canals have them at times, too.

10. Panasoffkee/Tsala: No update.

11. Astor Park: Roger Robbins at Buck 'N Bass Sports Center reports that speck fishing is good under the Astor bridge and in some canals off the river.

12. Ponce Inlet: According to www.floridasightfishing.com, the bite is still red hot in the Mosquito Lagoon and near New Smyrna Beach and Ponce Inlet. Redfish have been biting with regularity since Hurricane Irma. Tours are fishing schools of redfish every morning in Mosquito Lagoon and wrapping things up catching bunches of spotted sea trout. There are lots of snook and tarpon in the deeper waters around New Smyrna. Fishing is not going to slow down for a while, then we'll start to see baitfish thinning out and the fall transition taking place. Fishing for Mosquito Lagoon redfish have been excellent the last couple weeks. Lower water levels have the fish schooled up big time during the morning. Numerous groups of 75-150 grouped up fish ranging between five and 10 pounds. Giant bull reds have also been schooled up in both lagoons for their annual spawn with fish in the 20-40 pound range coming to the boat each day recently. Summer and early fall is prime time for catching these trophy-sized redfish. Live bait has been the ticket with mullet, pinfish, pigfish all catching plenty. Soft plastics, plugs and spoons have worked when throwing lures. The speckled trout bite in Mosquito Lagoon is still going strong. It's also picked up well in New Smyrna Beach around oysters, creek shorelines, and docks. Live bait is producing around 15-to-20 trout each day. Many are smaller keeper-sized fish with some big ones upwards of seven or eight pounds. Fishing for speckled trout will remain like this until the cold fronts start to roll through and baitfish supplies run out in late September. Fishing for snook n New Smyrna Beach and Ponce Inlet has been good around the docks, bridges and shorelines. However, it's going to get even better next month when cold fronts start to get going and baitfish begin their fall migration. Where snook are hanging out now makes for tougher fishing with heavy gear and lots of lost fish or break-offs but anglers are getting a fair number of bites each time out.

IN BRIEF

TAIPEI, TAIWAN Babos advances to Taiwan Open finals

Fourth-seeded Timea Babos beat Wang Yafan 6-3, 6-4 Saturday to advance to the final of the Taiwan Open. Babos claimed her first win in three matches against Wang and will face Kateryna Kozlova in Sunday's final. Kozlova eliminated Sabine Lisicki, earning a 7-5, 6-4 victory to reach her first WTA singles final. Babos took both sets behind 24 winners, including seven aces. The Hungarian also won far more points on her second serve than Wang — 54 to 38 percent. Kozlova had 18 winners and only 13 unforced errors against Lisicki, whose 32 winners were offset by 31 unforced errors and six double faults.

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — The Tom Brady-Bill Belichick dynasty actually lacks something: a 100-yard rusher in the Super Bowl for the New England Patriots.

Perhaps that's the best way to explain why it's been a decade since a title game winner reached a mark often reserved for Super Bowl MVPs. It also illustrates how the game has changed since Hall of Famers Emmitt Smith and Terrell Davis were carrying the Dallas Cowboys and Denver Broncos to championships.

Today's Super Bowl Philadelphia Patriots and Philadelphia Eagles will be the 20th since the last time a running back was the MVP: Davis.

"I think gone are probably the days of the one running back that carries the ball 35 times," Philadelphia defensive coordinator Jim Schwartz said. "People use running backs in a lot of different roles and they use running backs, I don't want to say by committee, but by specialty."

That's a pretty good way to describe both these teams, who have combined for just three 100-yard rushing games all season.

Jay Ajayi, the heralded midseason acquisition by the Eagles in a trade, doesn't have the one for Philadelphia. It belongs to LeGarrette Blount, who led the Patriots with just 31 yards last year when New England threw almost non-stop in the second half while rallying from 25 points down to beat Atlanta.

High school coaches see recruiting shift after early signing

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press

All the top 2018 football prospects at St. Peter's Prep in New Jersey took advantage of the new NCAA signing period and wrapped up their recruitments in December.

Still, St. Peter's coach Rich Hansen has been kept busy lately by college recruiters.

"Duke just left. Syracuse was in this morning. Northwestern's in tomorrow. Virginia," Hansen said recently.

The day before, Rutgers coach Chris Ash and coaches from Penn State swung by the Jersey City school that has produced Alabama All-American Minkah Fitzpatrick and Notre Dame quarterback Brandon Wimbush in recent years. The previous week, Ohio State coach Urban Meyer dropped by.

"It's the same traffic. It's the same schedule," Hansen said. "The agenda just changed a little bit. But they're not going to give up an open (recruiting) period."

The first two-legged signing period in major college football began Dec. 20 and will largely wrap up on Wednesday, the traditional big signing day. The modified agenda for schools this January has been to fill a handful of open spots in the 2018 class and get a running start on 2019 and beyond.

Several longtime, successful high school coaches gave the new recruiting calendar generally positive reviews. They were hopeful early signing would create more clarity and opportunities for their players. They said they have seen an increase in the recruitment of their remaining prospects. And while adding signing-day planning to the to-do list during playoff time was not ideal, none of the four thought it distracted players to the detriment of the team.

According to recruiting and scouting analyst Tom Luginbill of ESPN, about 2,800 prospects sign in a typical year. During the Dec. 20-22 signing period, 2,003 high school players signed with Bowl Subdivision schools. Another 360 prospects are unsigned but committed heading into this week's traditional signing day, Luginbill said.

Hansen had six players sign in December, including three of the top 20 prospects in New Jersey, according to 247 Sports' composite rankings.

"It's over and done and I can start getting the kids going to D-IIs and IIIs, and the juniors and sophomores and freshmen," Hansen said. "But if I'm on the other side of the table and I'm waiting for that offer and it hasn't come, I don't know how I'm going to feel about it."

Hansen said having most of the top prospects signed should help clear the "logjam" of prospects farther down the board that in past years would be holding out for better offers.

Steve Mask, head coach at St. Paul's Episcopal in Mobile, Alabama, had his best player, cornerback Jalyn Armour-Davis, sign with the Crimson Tide in December. Mask's quarterback, Swift Lyle, held out, hoping that a Power Five offer might come. That's happened, Mask said. It's impossible to know if that would have happened without the early signing period, but it seems like a positive sign to Mask.

"It may benefit those kids to some degree," Mask said. "The other side of that coin is it could also backfire. If Timbuktu College is a Group of Five and they're recruiting three quarterbacks and they say, 'You know what? We're going to take the first one that signs in December.' All of sudden that kid that gambled a little bit may not have the opportunity to come back."

With college recruiters no longer having to focus on verbally committed recruits through January, guarding against last-minute flips, they have more time to take a swing at a top uncommitted recruit such as linebacker Solomon Tuliaupupu from Southern California powerhouse Mater Dei.

"That many more phone calls started to happen. That many more tweets. I guarantee these guys are coming in and (asking), 'What do you know about Solomon?'" Mater Dei coach Bruce Rollinson said.

Rollinson's team won the state championship in 2017 in a game played four days before the early signing period opened. He said he never felt as if the looming decision-day affected his players.

Kevin Wright, head coach at IMG Academy in Bradenton, a school that draws elite athletes of all kinds from all over the world, had 19 players sign with FBS schools in December. It didn't necessarily hurt his team, hard right in the middle of the season to commit."

Rollinson said the only nuisance caused by the early signing period was trying to prepare a signing day celebration for players inking a national letter of intent in December. He said the event lost some of its luster.

"Whereas in February, we as a school try to make it as special, as we have done in the past," he said.

Mask said less attention on signing day was fine by him.

"Most people were out for the holidays. You didn't have all that fanfare," Mask said. "You didn't have ESPN using 19 channels to try to cover everybody from all over the country. And from that standpoint I thought that was a major benefit."

he said, but he could tell recruiters were anxious to have players signed in December.

"It definitely weighs on those kids," Wright said. "They're getting pushed

The Eagle Way is similar to the Patriot Way: No egos

By Rob Maaddi
The Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Bill Belichick's impressive resume makes it easy for the five-time championship head coach to mandate that players check their egos before joining the New England Patriots.

Doug Pederson didn't have a hard sell, either.

The Philadelphia Eagles are an unselfish group that prioritizes winning over personal accomplishments. It's a major reason why the Eagles (15-3) are playing the Patriots (15-3) in the Super Bowl on Sunday.

"It's a group that doesn't really care who gets the ball. The bottom line is trying to win the game," Pederson said. "I didn't have to sell it too much."

Pederson was 7-9 last year in his rookie season as head coach but has guided the Eagles from worst to first in search of the franchise's first NFL title since 1960. He found a way to blend a young locker room with a mix of accomplished veterans.

The team added veteran receivers Alshon Jeffery and Torrey Smith, running backs LeGarrette Blount and Jay Ajayi, defensive linemen Chris Long and Tim Jernigan and defensive backs Ronald Darby, Patrick Robinson and Corey Graham.

"I can remember this team showing up in April and talking about being at this place, talking about our dreams, aspirations and focusing on a grind," safety Malcolm Jenkins said.

"Guys being unselfish, adding guys along the way that added to the team and continued to push, and every time we won and had some success — we even had some adversity — the team believed more and more. It's been awesome to be a part of."

Blount led the NFL with 18 touchdowns rushing and earned his second Super Bowl ring last season in New England. He didn't get a carry in a loss at Kansas City in Week 2 and never complained. Same with Jeffery, who went from No. 1 receiver in Chicago to being one of the guys in Philadelphia.

the par-4 17th and 18th holes. He also birdied 13 after playing the first 12 in even par with a birdie and a bogey.

"I just kind of had to fight through it," Fowler said. "The swing was just a fraction off. It wasn't bad, still made some good swings out there, but just had to try and get the ball in the short grass, get some looks and try not to make many mistakes."

Rahm had a 65, playing alongside Mickelson and Schauffele for the third straight day. The 23-year-old Spaniard had five birdies in a seven-hole stretch on the back nine. He won two weeks ago in the California desert at La Quinta to jump to No. 2 in the world.

"I hit the ball really well off the tee, gave myself a lot of opportunities," Rahm said. "But the main key today was my iron play. My game was a lot more accurate than the first few days and thanks to that I had a couple better birdie chances and a couple more went in."

Reavie birdied the final two holes for a 67.

"To win tournaments out here is great, but to win one that you grew up going to would be very special," Reavie said. "For me, this is a fifth major."

DeChambeau shot 68. He lost the lead with a bogey on 17 after driving into the water.

"Tempo and rhythm," DeChambeau said. "If I can control that and control my golf swing like I have been the past three days I think that I'll be fine."

Mickelson birdied the final two holes for a 66. He's making his record-tying 29th start in the event he won in 1996, 2005 and 2013.

"If you look at it, it looks like a very simple, solid bogey-free round, 5 under," Mickelson said. "It was anything but that. I made some really nice up-and-downs to keep the round going and when I did hit some good tee shots and hit some good shots into the fairway I was able to get aggressive and make some birdies."

Xander Schauffele and Daniel Berger also were 12 under. Schauffele shot 66, and Berger had a 68.

"I'm getting the full experience playing with Phil and Jon," Schauffele said. "Especially when all of us are playing well."

Fowler is wearing a pin on his hat with a picture of Griffin Connell, the area boy he befriended at the event who died last week at age 7. Griffin was born with a rare airway disorder.

"We actually had a ball go a little left on 11 today and we joked about it that Griffin took one in the chest and kept it out for us," Fowler said.

SKATE

With the completion of last month's Olympic speedskating time trials in Milwaukee, the stage has been set for Team USA — and Marion County will be well represented. Brittany Bowe, Joey Mantia and Erin Jackson will all be in PyeongChang, South Korea, to compete in the XXIII Olympic Winter Games, which begin with the Opening Ceremony on Friday.

The connection extends to Leesburg with Renee Hildebrand, who works at Lake Harris Health Center at Lake Port Square and coaches Jackson. She has also coached Bowe and Mantia.

All three skaters race in the Olympic discipline of long track speed skating, with Bowe and Mantia making their second appearance after competing in the 2014 Winter Olympics in Sochi.

Bowe is 2006 Trinity Catholic graduate who went on to star in basketball at Florida Atlantic University. At the Milwaukee trials, the 29-year-old had the quickest time after the first heat of the 500 meters, with longtime rival and Team USA teammate Heather Bergsma right behind.

Bowe won the 1,500 with a time of 1:55.92 at the trials in January, again with Bergsma — the reigning world champion in the 1,500 and current world-record holder at the distance — placing a close second in 1:56.12.

In the 1,000, she placed second behind Bergsma, and now the two Team USA superstars will have a chance to win their first Olympic medals.

But Bowe's return to this year's games was not guaranteed. Before competing in Milwaukee, she spent the fall battling concussion symptoms that began after a crash on the ice last summer.

Bowe's recovery turned into a personal nightmare, but she emerged this winter just in time to qualify for her second Winter Games.

Mantia also will be making his second Olympic appearance. The 31-year old Vanguard High School grad won the 1,000 meters, the 1,500 and the Mass Start race in Milwaukee last month.

He is the overwhelming favorite in the Mass Start, which is speedskating's version of a NASCAR race on ice — a 16-lap, 6,400-meter free-for-all that included four sprint laps. PyeongChang 2018 won't be the first time the mass start will be featured in speedskating, as it made a solitary appearance at the third edition of the Olympic Winter Games in Lake Placid back in 1932.

In Sochi, he placed 15th in the 1,000, 22nd in the 1,500 and seventh in the team pursuit.

Jackson, making her first Olympic appearance, has been skating on ice for just over four months.

In Milwaukee, she qualified in the 500 meters by finishing third behind Bowe and Bergsma to become the first African-American woman to make the U.S. long-track team.

Jackson posted a time of 39.22 in her first heat, and improved to 39.04 in her second to seal her spot.

She joins Davis, and short-track skater Maame Biney, who is originally from Ghana, as the third African-American to make the U.S. speedskating team for the Olympics in PyeongChang.

Hildebrand is an inline skate coach, and has been since the early 1990s, when the new brand of roller skating first began to take off.

She works at Skate A Way South in Ocala. Skate A Way South is where it all started for Bowe, Mantia and Jackson. It is the building where all three Olympians began as childhood members of the Ocala Speed Team.

Bowe and Mantia switched over to the ice when they were teens, and they both moved out to Salt Lake City to train.

"We have a lot of skaters make the switch later on, after their teenage years, and they obviously do not have the same success as Joey and Brittany," Hildebrand said.

Jackson, who is the exception at age 25, was skating inlines exclusively as of a few months ago. But Hildebrand pointed out some specifics about her sprinting style that was a fit for the ice.

"She actually wanted to do ice and inline at the same time, and I knew she had the right techniques (for the ice)," Hildebrand said.

Hildebrand says there was one point when Jackson was competing in Poland and she noticed Erin's takeoff times were slower. Hildebrand felt she needed to stick to one at a time.

"I always tell her to run on her toes on inlines, but on ice, you can't just run on your toes; you need to move your feet," Hildebrand.

"Instead of going back and forth, I recommended she concentrate on the inlines for the championships in (Nanjing), China, which was in September," Hildebrand said. "Then go to the ice when you need to be on the ice."

PATRIOTS

Russell Wilson against Green Bay in (2015) or Andrew Luck against the Chiefs the previous year, there have been as many playoff comebacks from at least 10 points down in the fourth quarter the past five seasons as there were the previous 26 seasons.

"What happens is instead of playing the team, they start playing the clock. Sometimes you win and sometimes you go against a bad boy like Tom Brady and you get burned," former Colts receiver and current NFL Network analyst Reggie Wayne said. "A lot of that falls onto the coaches. The players are going to run what the coaches call."

Whether it's Atlanta failing to run the ball enough late in last year's Super Bowl that helped the Patriots rally from 28-3 down to win in overtime or Seattle's decision to pass at the goal line instead of hand it to Marshawn Lynch back in 2015, questionable coaching decisions have contributed to some of those comebacks.

But nobody is better at exploiting those mistakes than Brady and the Patriots. He has four playoff wins in games he trailed by at least 10 points in the fourth quarter, including the "Tuck Rule" game against Oakland in 2002. No other quarterback has led more than one such comeback in playoff history.

"There's a great belief no matter what the circumstances, that we have enough to overcome it," Brady said. "I don't think we want to try to overcome that again this year. That was pretty tough to do. Hopefully we can get ahead, play from ahead, play on our terms."

The Patriots are comfortable when that happens. They are 6-6 in the playoffs when trailing after three quarters under Brady and coach Bill Belichick, while the rest of the NFL has a 27-140 record in that span with only Russell Wilson and Eli Manning having more than two fourth-quarter comebacks with four each.

Not that it is by design.

"That whole comeback thing is overrated," said NFL Network analyst Willie McGinest, who won three Super Bowl titles as Brady's teammate in New England. "Players can't go in and say, 'Hey, we want to win this game in dramatic fashion, be down 11 with eight minutes to go and come back and have the crowd go crazy.' You want to be in control, play a certain way and be in front. Because that changes how you play the game."

The biggest deficit overcome to win a Super Bowl before last season was just 10 points and the Patriots were the first team to overcome a deficit that big in the second half when they did it against the Seahawks three years ago.

The only other teams to come back from 10 points down to win a Super Bowl faced those deficits early in the second quarter with New Orleans rallying against Indianapolis in 2010 and Washington against Denver in 1988.

Brady's postseason passer rating when trailing in fourth quarter the past four years is a staggering 121.2, compared to 75.6 for the rest of the NFL.

Georgia, Kentucky, Wake Forest, North Carolina and East Carolina. But with coaches still wrapping up their 2018 class, Pierre will become the focus for plenty more schools in the coming months as the attention shifts to the 2019 class.

For most high school kids, getting calls, texts and visits from major college coaches could easily become a distraction and lead to a big head.

With Pierre, that couldn't be further from the truth.

"He'll come into my office and we don't talk about recruiting, he wants to talk about next season," MDCA football coach Kolby Tackett said. "He's got Mark Richt and Dan Mullen coming to see him and he's worried about our defensive schemes. He's just so genuine and so focused on his senior year. It's really rare in today's society to see someone be that selfless."

Pierre can count on his teammates for plenty of opinions about where he should go to school, but it's all done in a light-hearted manner.

"It's all fun and games and it's not a huge distraction," Pierre said about how the recruiting process is playing out with his teammates.

But it also has an upside for the rest of the Bulldogs. Holding practice with coaches from major college programs watching is not a bad thing.

"The kids have fun with it," Tackett said. "We'll go out to practice and they'll say, 'I'm going to get a scholarship today.' Kids today think they've got to go to this program or that program to get noticed. That's just not the case. If you're good enough, college coaches will find you wherever you are playing."

Pierre plans on taking his official visits, saving Miami until last. The Hurricanes were the first ones to show a big interest and he's still officially listed as a Miami commitment. Miami coaches have told him that he would be one of only two linebackers the school would sign in the 2019 class.

"Miami is still my top priority," Pierre said. "That's why they will be my last visit."

Pierre is on track to graduate from MDCA in December and will likely sign during the new early signing period in December. It would allow him to enroll at whichever school he ultimately selects in time for spring drills in 2019.

Once he is done with his visits, Pierre will sit down with his mom, Marie Jesse Piard, and decide on what is best for him.

"Jesiah is all about family," Tackett said. "Him mom is his rock and his support. When it comes time they will make a decision and my only job is to support whatever decision they make."

DIVERSIONS

Woman freed from cooking is not eager to dive back in

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 64-year-old woman, divorced for 27 years. A nice guy I'll call "Ronnie" has taken me out to lunch and dinner several times. He really likes me and I really like him, but I'm skeptical about getting into a serious relationship because I don't feel like doing a lot of the "wife duties" anymore, such as cooking.

I know this may sound terrible, but I don't cook. My kitchen stays clean, and all I have to do is sweep the floor. Ronnie hasn't said anything about my not wanting to cook, but I don't want it to come up later as a problem. What should I do? -- OUT OF THE KITCHEN

DEAR OUT: Healthy relationships are based on honest communication. Talk to Ronnie about your concerns. You may be pleasantly surprised to find that HE likes to cook and would be willing to do it. Some men enjoy it so much it's hard to pull them away, especially from a barbecue grill. Cross your fingers, speak up and hope Ronnie is one of them.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been happily married for seven years. He recently graduated from his final residency, and after 11 years of post-high school education, he is finally out practicing.

During all those years, I supported us financially. Once he graduated, I asked that eventually I get a nice piece of jewelry to commemorate our accomplishment (and his nice new salary).

He bought me a lovely pearl ring, but it isn't real. It doesn't have natural diamonds, and it isn't white gold. To me, it doesn't commemorate the accomplishment as much as a real one. We could have afforded a nice costume ring years ago. I wanted to be spoiled a bit. Am I allowed to say something, or should I "appreciate the thought"? -- SPOIL ME, PLEASE, IN OHIO

DEAR SPOIL: Your husband, the doctor, may be a jewel, but after supporting him for 11 years, you deserve better than what you were given. Explain to him that when you asked for "a nice piece of jewelry," you meant the real thing and not a costume piece. Then suggest the two of you go shopping for it together.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to my husband for 16 years. His brother died suddenly, and he was devastated. We dropped everything and drove 1,000 miles to attend the funeral. When we arrived and went to be seated, he asked me to sit four rows back because the front row was "immediate family only." I felt I was immediate family, but didn't want to cause a scene, so I did as he asked. When I sat down, I received odd looks and sad looks. I'm not angry, but my feelings are hurt. Am I wrong? -- LEFT OUT IN THE EAST

DEAR LEFT OUT: If the spouses of your husband's other siblings -- and children, if there are any -- were also asked to sit elsewhere, then you should not feel hurt. However, if you were the only one told to sit in "Siberia," your feelings are justified.

Opening lead — three of spades.

Notrump contracts generally feature a race between the defenders and declarer for the establishment of tricks. That is why the opening leader so often starts with his long suit.

The defenders, having the opening lead, thus get the jump on declarer in the race to build up tricks. This advantage is usually offset by the fact that the declaring side has more high cards, but if the defenders have enough high cards and a long-enough suit, the tempo they gain will often make the difference between the success and failure of a contract.

The battle is often touch-and-go because of the timing factor. For example, the declarer may misguess which of two suits to try to establish, and if he chooses the wrong one, he may lose the race.

Today's hand features just such a situation. South got a spade lead and won East's king with the ace. He played a club to the jack, and East took his ace and returned a spade. The ten lost to the jack, and a spade continuation established West's suit.

Declarer now had only eight tricks. When he later led a heart, West grabbed the ace and cashed two spades to set the contract.

Actually, the contract was a certainty from the start with correct play. South should have attacked hearts before he touched the clubs.

At trick two, he should cross to dummy with a diamond and lead a low heart toward his hand. If East has the ace, he cannot afford to play it because that would give South his ninth trick (three hearts, four diamonds and two spades). East would therefore have to play low, allowing declarer to win with the queen. South can then drive out the ace of clubs to assure nine tricks.

If West has the ace of hearts (the actual situation), the queen would lose, but West could not make a damaging spade return with declarer holding the Q-10 of the suit. Regardless of what West returned, South would have ample time to tackle the clubs and make at least four notrump.

Tomorrow: Famous Hand.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR SUNDAY, FEB. 4, 2018:

This year you open up to new ideas that greatly appeal to you. You will become more open and less judgmental over the next year. You draw others toward you, and often encourage them to become more involved in what they care about. If you are single, you easily will find many companions, some of whom you will enjoy immensely. Depending on where you're at in your life, you might want to consider settling down. If you are attached, the two of you interact with a great deal of happiness. Others admire your style as a couple. LIBRA can be very charming.

ARIES (MARCH 21-APRIL 19) Reach out to others, and deal directly with each person. Fatigue could be a problem when dealing with someone who is on top of his or her game. One-on-one relating anchors you and your inner circle. You know what you want and why.

TAURUS (APRIL 20-MAY 20) Stay levelheaded, and understand that you have limitations, just as everyone else does. When you reach out to a loved one at a distance, you are likely to hear good news. Consider playing it low-key today. If you need to make it a lazy day, do.

GEMINI (MAY 21-JUNE 20) Your creativity emerges once more. Relate to others on a one-on-one level. You will discover that a lot is going on with those close to you. Take a stab at getting through some paperwork. You'll want to free yourself up to have some fun later on.

CANCER (JUNE 21-JULY 22) You could feel as if you can't turn a situation around quick enough. Allow greater give-and-take between you and someone else. You are likely to discover how easily you relax when you are around this person. A partner could be quite pushy.

LEO (JULY 23-AUG. 22) Your position could be more solid than you realize. Make an effort to reach out to a partner or loved one who often seems closed down. This person might be lonely and/or depressed. Your call will help this person break free of his or her mood.

VIRGO (AUG. 23-SEPT. 22) Be aware that you can

JACQUELINE BIGAR

avoid a problem by tapping into your self-confidence. You often don't respond in the way that others expect you to. You express a uniqueness that forces people to rethink their approach. Expenses could add up if you are not careful.

LIBRA (SEPT. 23-OCT. 22) Your ability to draw in others emerges. You might want to get closer to a certain group of people. Your ability to hang out and not get triggered by others comes out. Your fatigue might be stopping you from accomplishing as much as you'd like.

SCORPIO (OCT. 23-NOV. 21) Much could be going on behind the scenes. Communicate what is bothering you when out meeting up with friends. You quickly will discover that you want to make an extra effort to have others understand your desires. Take the time to talk through a problem. SAGITTARIUS (NOV. 22-DEC. 21) Relax and make a point of joining several friends. You'll find one person very exciting and invigorating. You might not want to share everything that you are thinking and feeling, even with a partner. Refuse to let anyone drag you down.

CAPRICORN (DEC. 22-JAN. 19) You might be more willing to take a stand. Be aware of your image within your community. You seem to be more easygoing and carefree than usual. A friend seems to push you in a certain direction. Be aware of this person's energy.

AQUARIUS (JAN. 20-FEB. 18) You will be able to gain a deeper perspective by not projecting yourself and your thoughts into complex situations. Instead, relax and don't push so hard to take charge of a project. Do not forget to check in with an older relative.

PISCES (FEB. 19-MARCH 20) One-on-one relating stars in your plans. You seem to be able to understand where others are coming from. A fiery person could make all the difference in how you react. Once you deal with this person's energy, you might want to be more laid-back.

» TODAY IN HISTORY

TODAY IS SUNDAY, FEB. 4, the 35th day of 2018. There are 330 days left in the year.

TODAY'S HIGHLIGHT IN HISTORY:

On Feb. 4, 1783, Britain's King George III proclaimed a formal cessation of hostilities in the American Revolutionary War.

ON THIS DATE: In 1861, delegates from six southern states that had recently seceded from the Union met in Montgomery, Alabama, to form the Confederate States of America.

In 1938, the Thornton Wilder play "Our Town" opened on Broadway. Walt Disney's animated feature "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" opened in general U.S. release.

In 1941, the United Service Organizations (USO) came into existence.

In 1962, a rare conjunction of the sun, the moon, Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn occurred.

In 1974, newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, 19, was kidnapped in Berkeley, California, by the radical Symbionese Liberation Army.

In 2004, the Massachusetts high court declared that gay couples were entitled to nothing less than marriage, and that Vermont-style civil unions would not suffice. The social networking website Facebook had its beginnings as Harvard student Mark Zuckerberg launched "Thefacebook."

Columnist hits the mark about education

Nina Gilfert

Dear Leonard Pitts, I have been reading your column in the Daily Commercial for some time now and I just had to write to you about your Jan. 28 column. I was so impressed with something you said: "Now would also be an excellent time for schools to beef up their teaching of philosophy, history, civics and social studies. Teach those things as a means of helping people to think critically, value truth and internalize the ideals that are supposed to make America America."

Mr. Pitts, I am a 91-year-old white lady who never read a truer word. I have thought this for some time and didn't know quite how to express it. Although I have written a newspaper column for many years, I have never written anything that I thought was truer or more imperative for our country than this quote I have taken from your column. I am somewhat ashamed to say that I never expected to read this as written by a young black man. To me, your words express my greatest concern for our country.

I have for some time been an admirer of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. I believe he saved the white and black people of America from a terrible confrontation that probably would have resulted in much bloodshed with no one, black or white, escaping the consequences. In my mind, America cannot honor him enough for what he has done for us. Your column states the truth from the black point of view but what you said in your last column also states the truth for every American, black, white or in-between.

When I first read your column in my paper, I thought, "Oh, he sure knows how to state the black point of view but he isn't cognizant of the thinking of the majority of Americans. He can't truly understand our concerns." I have revised my thinking. Unfortunately our schools today have become both educators and nurturers of our children. They have in many instances been forced into the position of fulfilling the responsibilities of

Howey Horse Haven in need of help after taking in malnourished mini horses

Linda Florea
Correspondent

HOWEY-IN-THE-HILLS — Howey Horse Haven has been rescuing abused, starved and neglected horses since 2013, but a few months back it became overwhelmed with a herd of animals needing significant care.

In July, Howey Horse Haven took in nine miniature horses that were relinquished to the Lake County Sheriff's Office. Left in a pasture without human contact, farrier care and proper food, the miniature horses were malnourished, wild and the mares were pregnant. Two of the horses were in such bad shape they could not be saved.

"It's not the ones I save, it's the ones that I can't save that kill me," founder Teresa Meixner said.

Meixner said the horse rescue is now overloaded with miniature horses and needs help finding forever homes for the horses that have recovered enough to leave. She

WORD ON THE STREET

WHAT ARE YOUR THOUGHTS ABOUT PERFORMING ARTS IN SCHOOLS?

"If we look at successful people — Bill Gates (piano/trumpet), Warren Buffet (ukulele/mandolin), Steve Jobs (guitar) and Steven Spielberg (clarinet) to name a few — it's no coincidence that these four successful people are also musicians."

Ric Barclay

"I don't think it's focused on enough anymore. When I was in school, it was more focused on to develop a well-rounded student, and with the current budget cuts that are taking place in our school system, they are now just creating a society of entitled brats."

Amanda McGlothlin

"I like that. The community needs performing arts, and that's a good place for it to start."

David Shumway

"Tests have shown that it helps with left brain/right brain function. Academic studies have shown that students in the arts do better in all subjects."

Barry James

Bullseye is a playful and sweet 4-month-old male puppy. He is great with other dogs and kids. Being that Bullseye is still a puppy, he will need patience and training to help him grow up to be a social and happy adult dog. Meet Bullseye at the Humane Society of Lake County.

Clawdia is a 2-year-old female kitty. She enjoys spending time with her kitty roommate, Simon. Clawdia is a sweet girl who loves attention. Meet Clawdia at the Humane Society of Lake County. She's ready for a home!

Ace is a sweet 1-year-old male Lab mix. He can be shy at first, but warms up with treats and belly rubs. Ace has a mellow personality and wants to be your favorite companion. He gets along great with everyone he meets, and would probably do best in a home with another dog to help build his confidence. Spend time with Ace at the Humane Society of Lake County. He's a wonderful boy!

Cheddar is a sweet 11-month-old male kitty. He has a friendly personality and enjoys attention. Cheddar can't wait to find a home to call his own. Meet Cheddar at our shelter today! The Humane Society of Lake County.

LAKE COUNTY HISTORY DID YOU KNOW?

By Rick Reed
Correspondent

Why did people come to Lake County? They came for many reasons.

Alfred Williams wrote about what he found after coming to Lake County. Williams had moved to Groveland and his letter appeared in the Bank of Tavares' advertisement that appeared in the Lake County Citizen on May 5, 1923.

"There are many opportunities and adventures for the agriculturist, horticulturist and stock raiser," he wrote. "The country is awaiting development in all its branches and has a wonderful future. If one is a lover of the picturesque who enjoys hunting, fine fishing, all kinds of boating,

Oranges were one of the many reasons folks moved to Florida. [SUBMITTED]

good bathing, sunshine, cool nights, where one can secure good water and have good health to enjoy the beautiful scenery, midst palms and pines, oaks, magnolia and Spanish moss. Along improved highways, past fine citrus groves and comfortable houses and most congenial people — those who enjoy these will go no farther than Lake County. We found all these and more, for health is happiness."

• • •

The first issue of the Orange and Black, which was published semi-monthly by the students of Leesburg High School, ran Sept. 29, 1920.

A story explaining the first school paper began, "The students and faculty of LHS have undertaken this year for the first time to publish a separate school paper. The Orange and Black appeared last year within the pages of the Leesburg Commercial but will be published this year as an individual newspaper to give the students, teachers, patrons and public in general all the dope on the school work, literary society, class organizations, athletics and school activities in general."

The four-page issue did just that.

Page one proclaimed, "Seniors Victorious at Annual Flag Rush." It also had stories about both the boys reorganizing a Hi-Y society and the girls forming a Y-Hi society.

The purpose of the boys' organization was to "create, maintain and extend throughout the school and community high standards of Christian character."

The girls met on Sept. 14, 1920, to organize Y-Hi. The purpose was similar to the boys: clean living, clean speech, clean athletics, clean scholarship and contagious Christian character.

said they're looking for people who have the time, motivation and finances to take care of the horses for the rest of their lives.

There are three mini geldings, two mini mares and two horse geldings available for adoption. The three pregnant mares are available to sponsor and later adopt after their foals wean at about 6 months.

Others will have a longer wait until they can be adopted. For example, a young colt named Pudge suffers from overgrown hooves and it will take a while before he can walk normally. Pudge also needs to be gelded, but because of a medical problem it will cost between $1,800 and $2,500 instead of $150 to $250. Pudge never had human contact before he came to the rescue, and he's slowly beginning to trust people.

Meixner said that while the adoption fees are low, it's about finding the right people who understand what it takes to keep a horse that is important.

"It's all about the homes, and I will skip over 10 people to get that one home."

Despite all their problems, life is looking up for the rescued mini horses. With a proper diet, they have put on weight and most of their medical issues have been addressed.

According to Meixner it costs around $3,500 to $4,000 a month to operate Howey Horse Haven, and the rescue is in need of donations, volunteers and people that would like to sponsor a horse.

Howey Horse Haven, 22109 N. Buckhill Road, is open from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. most Saturdays for education and barn tours. For information or to see a list of adoptable horses, go to howeyhorsehavenrescue.org or Facebook.

EDUCATION

parents. Parents today are hard pressed to keep up with financial responsibilities, physical care and emotional responsibilities of their children. There doesn't seem to be enough hours in the day for all that requires. Even good, responsible parents are relying more and more on schools and teachers to help raise responsible adults. Thus, your words are vitally important to the education of our children.

Today's teachers deserve the support and recognition from all of us. They are providing a growing service to the future of America. Many teachers have given up the good fight because it has become more and more difficult to handle a classroom full of disgruntled and irresponsible young people.

Even 20 years ago, I remember working with a very intelligent gentleman who had gotten his teaching certificate with a feeling of fulfilling a need for teaching responsibility and resourcefulness to a recalcitrant student body. He went into the teaching profession with confidence and optimism only to find he was spending ¾ of his teaching day on discipline and leaving the classroom with a feeling of frustration. His zeal only lasted him one semester and he decided he was accomplishing nothing worthwhile. Mr. Pitts, in the vernacular of the day, "You are right on!"

To parents who undoubtedly love their children but feel unable to spend the time to help with their education, Pitts' words must sound like the answer to a prayer. It is important to our children's personal future and our country's future that citizens understand the nature of the country they are inheriting, the need for their involvement in her welfare and the causes we fight for around the globe. They need to understand strength of character and devotion to duty, forgetfulness of self and love of country. They need to understand what it means to be true to an ideal. In other words, we need to teach them more about philosophies, history and social studies. They need to value critical thinking and an education. They also need to understand that monetary reward, although aggrandizing, is not the most important goal or the most rewarding. They need knowledge of the past and the philosophies that strengthen a nation and ultimately a world.

Thank you, Mr. Pitts. Please continue your critical thinking, your concluding arguments and your columns.

Florida Hospital Waterman broke ground on its Emergency Department expansion on July 6. [TOM BENITEZ / CORRESPONDENT]

Waterman employees donate more than $127K back to the hospital

Staff Report

TAVARES — Florida Hospital Waterman employees pledged a combined $127,495 toward various programs and services through the 2017 Employee Giving Campaign.

According to a press release, the Florida Hospital Waterman Foundation provides employees with the opportunity to give to a fund of their choosing during the annual campaign.

The Caring and Sharing fund provides support for the Community Primary Health Clinic and programs assisting employees and qualified patients. During difficult times, employees can apply to access the funds for financial assistance.

The Community Primary Health Clinic provides care for those without insurance or the ability to pay and who meet certain qualifications.

"The generosity of our team is a true testament to our culture and the care and support we provide, not just for our patients but for each other," said April Kauffman, president of the Florida Hospital Waterman Foundation.

"We have incredibly giving employees. They are proud of our hospital and committed to our mission. We are truly blessed to have such a compassionate team."

Funds raised also support the Florida Hospital Waterman Mission teams, who provide physical, medical and spiritual support in our community and abroad.

"This is our work home," said Stacey Sotnik, RN, who pledged funds for Emergency Services. "If we want it to be a better place, we need to support the mission."

The hospital is currently in the process of more than doubling the size of its current Emergency Department, a project aimed at accommodating the growing Lake County community.

About 56 percent of Florida Hospital Waterman employees pledged a gift through the campaign. Every member of the hospital's leadership team also participated. This Employee Giving Campaign was the most successful in the history of the Florida Hospital Waterman Foundation.

FEATURE STORY

'Eric Clapton: Life in 12 Bars' profiles a music great who lives to tell the tales

By George Dickie
© Zap2it

If the measure of a musician's work is the number of contemporaries they inspired, there is no arguing that Eric Clapton is among the greats.

Brian May, Stevie Ray Vaughan, Duane Allman, Gary Moore, Tony Iommi, Eddie Van Halen — these are just a few of the guitar virtuosos who count the artist nicknamed "Slowhand" as an influence. And his story is told in a documentary debuting this week on Showtime.

Told through his words and his music, "Eric Clapton: Life in 12 in Bars," premiering Saturday, Feb. 10, looks at the good and the bad in the life and career of the blues/rock legend whose resumé includes membership in such seminal groups as the Yardbirds, Cream, John Mayall & the Bluesbreakers and Blind Faith; a successful solo career, countless gold and platinum records, 18 Grammy Awards and three inductions into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame (with Cream and the Yardbirds and as a solo artist).

Eric Clapton

But for all his success in music, there was sadness and tragedy: a confusing childhood; infidelity, broken marriages and relationships, drug and alcohol abuse and the accidental death of his 4-year-old son Conor in 1991.

Before Conor, Clapton was a heavy drinker and not a happy one. One clip in the film shows how nasty he could be, going off on a drunken, profane tirade in front of a concert audience. But fatherhood changed him in a profound way, says the film's director Lili Fini Zanuck, a longtime Clapton friend.

Super Bowl LII

Super Bowl LII will be a re-match of Super Bowl XXXIX, played in 2005 between the New England Patriots and Philadelphia Eagles. The Eagles come in as the NFC champions with Nick Foles guiding the team in the wake of an injury to Carson Wentz. Meanwhile, Tom Brady is still calling signals for the AFC champion and reigning Super Bowl champion Patriots, who are making their record tenth appearance in the Super Bowl. Justin Timberlake stars in the halftime show.

8 p.m. on (STARZ)
Counterpart

The characters on both sides of the parallel dimensions must resolve a conflict, so they turn to classic diplomatic procedures to reach a solution in the new episode "The Lost Art of Diplomacy." Elsewhere, Emily (Olivia Williams) manages to obtain a special visa, while Howard (J.K. Simmons) puts a suspect through a rigorous interrogation.

10:15 p.m. on 2 3
This Is Us

In recent years, the network with the Super Bowl has selected one of its series to follow the big game ... and this time, that coveted slot goes to this popular, acclaimed drama. The trick is to come up with a new episode that can stand alone for new viewers while also satisfying steady fans, which may be a particular challenge with this show's serialized nature — but we'll bet on its talents pulling it off. Stars include Mandy Moore, Milo Ventimiglia and Sterling K. Brown.

Emily VanCamp

Your role in "The Resident" involves a complicated relationship with Matt Czuchry's fellow-medic character. What would you say about your teamwork?

I think that from day one, it was just sort of there with Matt. I just have a huge amount of respect for him as an actor. He has an incredible work ethic, and we both take the work very seriously. Our processes are very similar in terms of how we prepare and how we like to rehearse.

OF "THE RESIDENT" ON FOX

From the beginning, the chemistry between (the characters) Conrad and Nic was one of those happy moments. We did our first few scenes, and we sort of realized, "Oh, this is great!" It's all there, so now, we just have to build on it and enjoy creating this interesting thing between these two people. It's just been huge fun.

How does this compare to your preceding series experience on "Revenge"?

On the pilot of "Revenge," we all sort of connected and it just sort of worked. There was that really wonderful feeling of, "Oh, wow. If we get to do this (series) together, this is going to be amazing."

That was definitely the feeling I had shooting the pilot of "The Resident." You never know what's going to happen over the course of a series, but the one thing I did know was that if I got to work with this group of people for an extended period of time, I'd be really lucky.

You're also known to Marvel fans as Sharon Carter in the "Captain America" movies. Do you think we'll see her again?

I can't answer that. I really have no idea what they have in store. They're definitely beefing up their "Universe," but who knows? Sharon played a big part specifically in the "Captain America" of it all, but it sort of depends on where she would fit in with what they're doing with future films. We'll see.

How would you describe your character of Brandon on Showtime's "The Chi"?

Brandon is the epitome of a lot of guys who want to make it out of the hood, because growing up in this environment, you sort of have to walk the walk. And in the process of proving that you're a man and not wanting to be bullied, not wanting to be talked about, you sort of create this thick skin. But a part of you really wants to get out, so you try to do these good deeds and these investments for your life for it to get better, but they always have something that sucks you

OF "QUEEN ELIZABETH'S SECRET AGENTS" ON PBS

What fascinates you most about the subjects of "Queen Elizabeth's Secret Agents"?

These were people who had this incredible network which stretched from eastern Europe to Spain to Italy and back to England, all dependent upon human beings and (delivered) letters – and yet, it was remarkably sophisticated, the speed at which they could communicate and the efficiency with which they were able to set up props and expose enemies. It was absolutely astonishing.

Would you compare father-and-son William and Robert Cecil, who were the earliest chiefs of the Elizabethan secret service, to James Bond's boss M?

I think that's a good analogy, but I suppose that where it breaks down is that as well as being public figures, they were ministers in Elizabeth's government. That's what makes them so intriguing, because their public and their private faces were so very different. They were at the heart of the spy network, but – especially in the case of the senior Cecil – they were also the architects of the English nation's fate.

What do you think of the image that the actors who have played James Bond have projected of what many people think of as a "secret agent"?

Something I do know about that is that when you enter the Secret Service, they give you a rating which is referred to as the "Hot or Not Rating." It's a 10-point rating, and if you score over 8.7, you're deemed to be too handsome to go on missions, because you're too conspicuous and too memorable.

Actually, being too good-looking is a disadvantage for agents, so perhaps James Bond never would have been hired!

OF "THE CHI" ON SHOWTIME

back in, which is the story of a lot of guys who I know, and it could have possibly been me ...

Like Brandon, you were once a line cook in your hometown of New Orleans, correct?

Yes, yes, I was once a line cook. I was working as an oyster shucker. I moved around the kitchen a lot (laughs). I've got a few skills.

Those are handy skills. You'll never be unemployed.

Exactly, and the thing about food, food changes people's lives, it changes people's attitudes. And I think my entire life I've sort of lived for instant gratification. You know, I love to see people smile, I love to see people laugh and that's how it became something that stuck to me, once I sort of figured out how it sort of brings people together. Food is necessary (laughs).

Some people love seeing others eat.

Yeah, most of the cooks that I know, they don't even eat; they just watch people eat, which is really funny.

Super-sized opportunities: Shows that have followed the Super Bowl

A new episode of "This Is Us" follows Sunday's telecast of Super Bowl LII on NBC.

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

With each year's Super Bowl comes another contest, involving which show will get the coveted slot following the NFL's much-watched championship game.

On occasion, the networks have opted to use special programming ... such as the 1989 NBC miniseries "The Brotherhood of the Rose," which crashed and burned when the late end time of the game caused most working-the-next-day viewers to invest in their pillows instead of the two-hour opening half of a plot-heavy drama. (That also didn't help the network the next night, when the conclusion also tanked, with so few eyes having been on the opening portion.)

By and large, the network that has the Super Bowl has stuck with a series premiere or an episode of a notable ongoing show. The latter happens again this year as NBC presents a special edition of "This Is Us" — but not so special that it disrupts the drama's continuing stories — after Super Bowl LII on Sunday, Feb. 4. Then, NBC will back that up with a new "Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon" from 2018 Super Bowl host city Minneapolis after the late local news; "This Is Us" cast members are scheduled guests, along with Super Bowl LII halftime-show star Justin Timberlake and Dwayne Johnson.

Here's a look at several of the more notable series that got their starts by premiering immediately after the Super Bowl.

"The A-Team" (NBC, 1983): In the first year that the Super Bowl allowed for only one other show in that night's primetime lineup on the relevant network, the slot went to an action-oriented show that likely would retain much of the audience. Indeed, the saga of Special Forces officers-turned-troubleshooters would have a healthy five-year run ... helped by the iconic status of Mr. T, the matinee-idol looks of Dirk Benedict and the assured acting of movie veteran George Peppard.

"Airwolf" (CBS, 1984): Starring Jan-Michael Vincent and Ernest Borgnine, the adventure centered around a super-helicopter had a super ratings start. The show — which can be seen now on the nostalgia-oriented Get TV — lasted through the late winter of 1985, then had a USA Network revival in 1987 with a different cast.

"A BAD MOMS CHRISTMAS"

The mothers without boundaries return in this expectedly bawdy and often funny sequel, as Mila Kunis, Kristen Bell and Kathryn Hahn reunite as the title characters. Those who saw the first film only can imagine how the women handle the holidays approach the yuletide in their own rebellious way, but that has its challenges, especially in the presence of their own mothers — respectively played by cast additions Christine Baranski, Cheryl Hines and Susan Sarandon. Naturally, all sorts of complications arise among the ladies, and it's anybody's guess whether those can be resolved by Christmas Day. DVD extras: theatrical trailers; deleted scenes; outtakes; music video. ★★★ (R: AS, P) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

Kathryn Hahn and Susan Sarandon

"SUBURBICON"

Intended satire goes a bit too dark for its own good in the hands of director George Clooney, who takes a script by siblings Joel and Ethan Coen ("Fargo") brothers and shows why material originated by them probably should be completed by them. The varying tone is much of the problem, as Clooney pal Matt Damon plays a family-man resident of a seemingly perfect late-1950s neighborhood — which, in the Coens' world, typically is anything but perfect. That's made clear by the block's general reaction to racial integration, and also by a tragedy that transforms Damon's character, though the heavy lifting in acting terms is done by Julianne Moore in dual roles. Oscar Isaac also is notable as an insurance investigator. ★★★ (R: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

"ONLY THE BRAVE"

The true story of the firefighting unit known as the Granite Mountain Hotshots is dramatized in this sincere and occasionally hair-raising tale, recalling their efforts to stop Arizona's Yarnell Hill Fire in 2013. The camaraderie among them — and, in some cases, the individual troubles they had to overcome — are played out affectingly by actors including Josh Brolin, Miles Teller, Taylor Kitsch, James Badge Dale and Geoff Stults, with the pyrotechnics on the order of "Backdraft" (though computer imagery also is involved here), Jennifer Connelly, Jeff Bridges and Andie MacDowell also are in the cast. ★★★ (PG-13: AS, P) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

"HOMELAND: THE COMPLETE SIXTH SEASON"

With the seventh round of the acclaimed, award-winning Showtime series about to begin, its previous chapter brings Carrie Mathison (Claire Danes) back to the U.S. — Brooklyn, N.Y., to be specific — in a plot that initially finds her assisting Muslims in need of help. It also comes to involve America's first female president (played by Elizabeth Marvel) and counterterrorism efforts, eventually and inevitably leading Carrie back to the CIA. Rupert Friend, Mandy Patinkin and F. Murray Abraham also continue their roles. ★★★ (Not rated: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray)

"LBJ"

In director Rob Reiner's drama, Woody Harrelson makes a good run at portraying Lyndon Baines Johnson's sudden ascension to the U.S. presidency following the assassination of John F. Kennedy (who's portrayed by "Burn Notice" alum Jeffrey Donovan). That period in the Oval Office was marked by tension and controversy as Johnson tried to unite an increasingly divisive America — also encompassing the differences among politicians, making Johnson's presidential tenure that much more challenging. The interesting cast also includes Jennifer Jason Leigh (as Lady Bird Johnson), Richard Jenkins, Bill Pullman and C. Thomas Howell. The music is by Marc Shaiman, who also worked earlier with Reiner in depicting an American president ... in "The American President." ★★★ (R: AS, P) (Also on Blu-ray and DVD)

What's Trending THE SUPER BOWL: TV'S FAVORITE SPORTING EVENT

BY DAN LADD
@ZAP2IT.COM

Joe Namath

The Super Bowl is one of television's biggest annual events, one that attracts viewers world-wide and advertisers willing to shell out millions for air time. But that wasn't always the case. Still, as the NFL has evolved into the most popular television sport in America and beyond, thus has the Super Bowl.

The early Super Bowls weren't even called that at the time. They were just a matchup between the American Football League and National Football League champions when the two leagues were headed for a merger. The Green Bay Packers won those first two games. Then in 1969, ahead of Super Bowl III between the AFL's New York Jets and the Baltimore Colts of the NFL, Jets quarterback Joe Namath made his famous prediction that the Jets would win. They did, and all that surrounds that moment and that game is part of the NFL's nostalgic history.

With the 1970s came the expansion of the NFL and more games on TV, including Monday Night Football. The Miami Dolphins, Pittsburgh Steelers and Dallas Cowboys won a combined eight Super Bowls during that decade, and to this day have some of the biggest fan bases among NFL teams. TV ratings peaked in 1978 when the Cowboys beat the Denver Broncos in Super Bowl XII in what was the first prime time Super Bowl as opposed to an afternoon game. Nearly 79 million viewers tuned in; a number that wouldn't be surpassed until 1982 when more than 82 million viewers watched Joe Montana's San Francisco 49ers start what would be their 1980's dynasty with a win over the Cincinnati Bengals in Super Bowl XVI.

Still growing, nearly 93 million tuned in to watch the Chicago Bears rip apart the New England Patriots in 1986 and cap one of the greatest seasons in NFL history. Ratings and viewer numbers would fluctuate throughout the rest of the 1980s and most of the 1990s. The three Super Bowls the Cowboys played in during '90s all had over 90 million viewers, including 1996 with a then-record 94 million viewers. The Super Bowl wouldn't see that type of viewership again until 2008, and since then it's been through the roof with a now-record audience of 114 million tuning in to Super Bowl XLIX between the Patriots and Seattle Seahawks in 2015.

This year's viewership will depend on a few factors. First and foremost is fan interests in the players and the teams. Then there is also the political unrest over players protesting by kneeling during the National Anthem, which will likely affect the ratings, with patriotic viewers vowing to at least wait until kick-off to tune in, or skip the game entirely. When it's all over, the numbers will tell the real story.

TRAGEDY REUNITES 'GIRLFRIENDS' OF A CERTAIN AGE IN NEW ACORN SERIES

If you're tired of shows about young, pretty people and yearn for stories about those of a certain age, a new series on the streaming service Acorn TV might scratch your itch.

"Girlfriends," a six-part dramedy from award-winning writer Kay Mellor and British broadcaster ITV, tells the story of three friends struggling with the problems of being a modern woman past the age of 50, one that is catalyzed by the sudden death of Micky, the husband of Linda (Phyllis Logan, "Downton Abbey"), a well-kept wife who must now go it on her own after 30 years of marriage.

This brings her back together with childhood friends Sue (two-time Oscar nominee Miranda Richardson, "Tom & Viv"), a high-powered magazine editor in a long-term fling with her married business partner John (Anthony Head, "Merlin"); and Gail (Zoe Wanamaker, "Mr. Selfridge"), who copes with a divorce from the husband she still loves and an adult son (Matthew Lewis, "Ripper Street") in trouble with the law.

As the circumstances surrounding Micky's death are investigated, secrets surface that could threaten the newly reunited trio's friendship.

"I don't want to issue too many spoilers," Logan told a recent gathering of journalists in Pasadena, Calif., "but in episode one, we don't know what's happened to Micky, her husband, played by the wonderful Steve Evets. And throughout the series, things chop and change. Suspicion falls in various directions and then it gets cleared up and then it falls back. So it's not a simple answer without telling you the whole plot of the six episodes, so I've got to be careful about that. But, yes, there are certain things that get thrown up where suspicion may lie."

A sort of sub-plot to the investigation storyline is Sue's very dramatic life, which includes a lot of glamour as the boss at a bridal magazine and the discovery that business/bed partner John has been sizing up her replacement.

MONDAY'S BEST BETS

Mark Feuerstein

8 p.m. on 18 44

Supergirl

With a Worldkiller named Purity (guest star Kryss Marshall) in custody, Supergirl and Alex (Melissa Benoist, Chyler Leigh) attempt to get insight into conquering Reign (Odette Annable) in the new episode "Both Sides Now." Those hopes are dashed — at least temporarily — when Purity escapes and heads into the subway system beneath National City. Others concentrate their efforts on repairing the Legion ship. Jeremy Jordan and David Harewood also star.

9 p.m. on (TNT)

The Alienist

Some innovative evidence calls the team's attention to the fact that a crucial element in the case suddenly has gone missing in the new "Silver Smile." Kreizler and Moore (Daniel Bruhl, Luke Evans) interview a witness who they hope can shed some light on what happened to Moore at the brothel. Douglas Smith also stars.

9:30 p.m. on 6 10

9JKL

The sitcom based on star, executive producer and co-creator Mark Feuerstein's life ends its freshman season with "Tell All," referring to a very revelatory book that's been written by Josh's (Feuerstein) ex-wife (guest star Brooke Lyons, soon to appear in the series "Life Sentence"). With all she's disclosed publicly about him and his relatives, others in the family can't believe he's considering a reconciliation with her.

TUESDAY'S BEST BETS

Bethenny Frankel and Fredrik Eklund

8 p.m. on 3 5 24 We'll Meet Again

A new episode titled "Lost Children of Vietnam" leaves little doubt that the reunions featured during the Ann Curry-hosted hour will be emotional. One involves a Vietnam-born woman who seeks her American father — whom she hasn't seen in four decades — while in another, a man who was saved overseas as a 12-year-old by a Texan hopes to locate him in the United States.

9 p.m. on 13 35 51 LA to Vegas

It's never a wise idea to insult your company's custodial staff, as Captain Dave (Dylan McDermott) learns the hard way in the new episode "The Fellowship of the Bear." He and Bernard (Nathan Lee Graham) have to handle something they'd rather leave to the usual cleaners. Colin (Ed Weeks) gets help from Ronnie (Kim Matula) in looking for his son's teddy bear.

10 p.m. on (BRAVO) Bethenny & Fredrik

What happens when reality TV worlds collide? Find out in this new series mash-up between "The Real Housewives of New York" and "Million Dollar Listing New York," starring, respectively, Bethenny Frankel and Fredrik Eklund. She's his former client and current friend, and the pair partner up here for a new venture scouting, buying and redesigning multimillion-dollar homes. Both Frankel and Eklund have very big "alpha" personalities, and her zeal for staying on budget likely will clash with his fondness for exquisite furnishings.

WEDNESDAY'S BEST BETS

Julie Chen

8 p.m. on 6 10 Big Brother: Celebrity Edition

Celebrity editions of the competition have been staged in foreign versions, but never in the American one ... until now. Familiar faces become housemates in this new round, which will play out on multiple nights over several weeks instead of all summer, a big factor in the participants being available for it. All of the show's usual elements will be present, including Head of Household contests and evictions — and Julie Chen as host.

8 p.m. on 18 44 Riverdale

Betty (Lili Reinhart) comes to regret an earlier decision, prompting her to seek help from Jughead (Cole Sprouse), in the new "Chapter Twenty-Six: The Tell-Heart." Veronica (Camila Mendes) tries to get several people on the same page. Agent Adams (guest star John Behlmann) causes Archie (KJ Apa) to rethink cooperating. Julie Plec ("The Vampire Diaries," "The Originals") directed the story. Madelaine Petsch, Marisol Nichols, Madchen Amick and Luke Perry also star.

9 p.m. on 13 35 51 9-1-1

Even if it's a week early, a Valentine's Day-themed episode still is timely with the new tale "Heartbreaker." An unexpected proposal takes a dangerous turn that requires the assistance of first responders.

CELEBRITY PIPELINE

Is 'The X-Files' marking its spot for the last time?

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Q: Will "The X-Files" continue beyond its season that's on the air now? — John Fleming, via e-mail

A: That's a good question, and one that might seem to have an answer now, though nothing is rock-solid yet. Gillian Anderson has said the current Fox round of the show will be her last, adding that she didn't expect to go beyond the last one as Dana Scully. In turn, creator and executive producer Chris Carter maintains that he wouldn't want to do a version of "The X-Files" that didn't include Scully.

Compounding matters is what David Duchovny told us recently, that he would believe the franchise really had reached its end only if Carter killed off Mulder or Scully or both. As the actor put it, the saga inherently remains open-ended until that happens. Time will tell, then, though Fox co-chief Dana Walden has reasoned that there would be no more "X-Files" without Carter and Anderson's participation.

Gillian Anderson and David Duchovny

Q: I've been hearing that there's going to be a television version of "Jesus Christ Superstar." When will that be on? — Julie Hare, Columbus, Ohio

A: NBC is planning to air a live telecast of the rock opera on Easter Sunday, April 1. Officially titled "Jesus Christ Superstar Live in Concert!," the production will be staged before an on-site audience in Brooklyn, N.Y., with original composers Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice among the executive producers.

The cast still is being assembled, but some impressive names from the music world have been enlisted so far. John Legend will have the title role, with Alice Cooper portraying King Herod. The part of Mary Magdalene — encompassing the song standard "I Don't Know How to Love Him" — will be performed by Sara Bareilles, who has added acting to her resume with her work in the Broadway-music version of "Waitress," for which she also wrote the score.

Q: Is "The 100" coming back? I thought it was renewed for another season. — Tim May, Providence, R.I.

A: It was. The sci-fi drama is set to begin its fifth CW season April 24, paired on Tuesdays with "The Flash" after the new "Black Lightning" completes its freshman season on that night a week earlier.

Q: I saw "Beyond the Poseidon Adventure" on cable not long ago, and a young actor in the cast looked like Mark Harmon. Was it? — Donna Holt, via e-mail

A: It was. He played an elevator operator who went along with other survivors after the overturned ship was boarded by a salvage team in the 1979 sequel to producer Irwin Allen's huge 1972 disaster-movie hit. It was only Harmon's second film — the first having been "Comes a Horseman" a year earlier — but he had done a good amount of television work during the 1970s, encompassing such shows as "Laverne & Shirley," "The Love Boat" and "Police Woman" as well as the miniseries "Centennial."

Checking in with Mark Feuerstein

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Mark Feuerstein undoubtedly would like the lease on "9JKL" extended, but in any event, he's gotten to do his dream project this television season.

The former "Royal Pains" actor has told his own story as star and — along with wife Dana Klein — creator and executive producer of the CBS sitcom that ends its freshman round Monday, Feb. 5. The circumstances of lead character Josh largely are Feuerstein's own, since he also lived alongside his closest relatives while making an early go of his career. In fact, his real-life parents have appeared on the show during the season, though in the series, they're played by veteran talents Linda Lavin and Elliott Gould.

"I was told that nobody would be in the Mark Feuerstein business more than Mark Feuerstein," the friendly Feuerstein reflects, "but it took me a while to catch on that I might want to write my own ticket. It took as long as it took to get to that moment in my career where I could turn to my wife and say, 'Hey, let's write this show about my family, because they're colorful and they might be entertaining.' And here we are."

THURSDAY'S BEST BETS

Meghan Trainor

8 p.m. on 13 35 51

The Four: Battle for Stardom

This competition has had a fairly compact run, marked by the fact that after a little over a month, it airs its two-hour season finale here. The last four contestants who have vied to stay in the game — literally — face the music, also literally, to be declared the winner. Sean Combs, DJ Khaled, Meghan Trainor and Charlie Walk are the mentors and judges, with Fergie serving as host.

8 p.m. on (FREE)

Beyond

Holden and Charlie (Burkely Duffield, Eden Brolin) grow closer as they embark on a road trip that they hope will allow him to gain further mastery of his powers in a new episode called "The Hour of the Wolf."

FRIDAY'S BEST BETS

Ricky Gervais

8 p.m. on 2 3

2018 Winter Olympics

With tensions easing just 50 miles to the north, PyeongChang, South Korea is set to host the XXIII Olympic Winter Games. PyeongChang Olympic Stadium, which seats 35,000 people and is only a temporary structure, will be the venue for tonight's opening ceremonies and will only be used again for the closing ceremonies. One country's flag who will not fly will be that of Russia, as most of their athletes have been banned for doping violations.

9 p.m. on 20 23
Child Support

It hasn't been a long maiden run for this game show, since after debuting in January, it already presents its season finale here. Ever-sly comedian and actor Ricky Gervais chats with five youngsters and gets them to answer questions — which then are posed to adult contestants, who can rely on the kids to “save” them if they're stumped. Fred Savage, in a break from his customary acting and directing, is the host.

10 p.m. on (MAX)
Strike Back: Retribution

The new “Episode 2” opens in Ajir, Libya, where the members of Section 20 must brave an artillery gauntlet and an urban ambush to extract Morgan Ives (Trevor Eve), the shady American arms dealer whom Idrisi (Don Hany) double-crossed.

COVER STORY

Live from South Korea, it's the 2018 Winter Olympic Games!

By George Dickie
© Zap2it

Get ready for more than 2,400 hours of skiing, skating, bobsledding, curling, luge and more as NBC and its partner networks broadcast the games of the 2018 Winter Olympics from PyeongChang, South Korea.

Beginning Thursday, Feb. 8-25 on NBC, NBC Sports Network, CNBC, USA Network, NBCOlympics.com and the NBC Sports app, these games will see nearly 3,000 athletes from 88 nations (plus the Russian federation) competing in seven sports for 102 medals, among them Lindsey Vonn, Shaun White, Kelly Clark, Mikaela Shiffrin, Nathan Chen and Chloe Kim. There will be four new events at these games — big air snowboarding, freestyle skiing, mass start speed skating and mixed doubles curling — and viewers across the nation will get to see prime-time and late-night competition live at the same time thanks to South Korea being 14 hours ahead of New York and 17 hours ahead of Los Angeles.

“There’s no spoiler alert with a call from your aunt on the East Coast if you live in California, that, ‘Hey, did you see this person or that person win a medal?’ ” points out Mike Tirico, who succeeds Bob Costas as NBC’s Olympics studio host with these games. “And they have to wait to see it three hours. They’ll see it all as it’s happening, it’ll be on live across the country in the evening and then a little bit later on late night on the East Coast, which is prime time on the West Coast. So I think that’s going to be the major difference in the coverage of these games from Asia.”

There will be a few glaring absences in PyeongChang, probably the most significant being Russia, which was banned from these games because of a doping scandal. Any athletes competing from that country will do so under the aegis “Olympic Athlete from Russia” or O.A.R., which should make the medal ceremonies interesting.

Also missing in men’s ice hockey are the players from the NHL, which has opted not to pause its 2017-18 season for the games, thus ending a run of five consecutive Olympics.

“Well certainly that was a terrific competition over the last few Olympic games and not having the National Hockey League players will certainly impact that ...,” Tirico says. “I think we’ll see perhaps a return to that magical 1980 feel if the U.S. team can become one that makes a run in the tournament, because we’ll have a lot of college players involved, which is the real essence of that ‘Miracle on Ice’ team. So maybe there’ll be some new names and some amateurs to root for, as opposed to what we’ve become used to of late with the professionals.”

DID YOU KNOW

Jenna Coleman, who was born in 1986, is an English actress and model. Notable for her work in British television, she is best known for her role as Queen Victoria in the biographical drama series “Victoria” on PBS (2016–present).

Coleman was born in Blackpool, Lancashire, England, and began her acting career at an early age as a member of a theater company called In Yer Space. While auditioning for drama schools in 2005, she was chosen to play Jasmine Thomas in the British soap opera “Emmerdale.” She received critical acclaim for her performance and was nominated for the Most Popular Newcomer Award at the 2006 National Television Awards.

Coleman also appeared in the TV series “Doctor Who” beginning in 2012 and the film “Captain America: The First Avenger” in 2011.

Coleman has appeared in various British television series, taking on the roles of Lydia Wickham in the BBC drama mini-series “Death Comes to Pemberley” (2013) and of Katrina Clark in the romance film “Me Before You” (2016).

In an interview with The Independent (UK newspaper), Coleman said of her name change from Jenna-Louise to Jenna: “The boring truth is that people have never really called me Jenna-Louise and I just found it very strange because I started to do more interviews and go places where people I didn’t know kept calling me Jenna-Louise. It sounded odd to me.”

Coleman has been involved with charity work in South Africa, raising awareness of HIV with One to One Children’s Fund, for which she is an ambassador. She is also an ambassador for Place2Be, a charity providing emotional and therapeutic services in schools.

On future roles: Coleman says, “I’d love to be a Bond Girl.”

Gal Gadot

3 p.m. on 2 & 3 2018 Winter Olympics

It's the first full day of Winter Olympics action from PyeongChang, South Korea with plenty to see. In Women's hockey, Japan and Sweden square off as do Switzerland and South Korea. Curling's round robin tournament continues and early medals will be awarded today in Biathlon with the running of the women's 7.5km sprint. Short track, alpine skiing and speed skating will also hold medal events, while snowboarding kicks off with the men's slopestyle.

8 p.m. on (HBO)

Movie: Wonder Woman

Although she introduced the character a year earlier in "Superman v Batman: Dawn of Justice," Israeli actress Gal Gadot emerged as an international superstar in the title role of this blockbuster follow-up, one of the biggest cinematic success stories of 2017. Partly an origin story, Patty Jenkins' wildly entertaining film finds Wonder Woman leaving her island home to join American pilot Steve Trevor (Chris Pine) to fight for the Allies in World War I. Robin Wright, Danny Huston and David Thewlis also star.

9 p.m. on (HALL)

Movie: Very, Very Valentine

Danica McKellar and Cameron Mathison star in this romance as, respectively, Helen, a Brooklyn, N.Y., flower shop worker and Henry, her longtime close friend. She doesn't realize he's also carrying a torch for her until they attend a masquerade ball together.
