Board DODEFUL denied chance

■ An 18-year resident cannot run for the Wayne-Westland school board due to a new state law requiring proof of citizenship. But those who filed for office before March 31 met a different set of standards.

BY DARRELL CLEM

A Wayne man has been refused an opportunity to enter the June 9 Wayne-Westland school board race because of a new, controversial state law that requires proof of U.S. citizenship.

Thomas Cortez Spann Jr. wasn't allowed to file nominating petitions at district elections offices on April 4 - three days prior to the filing deadline - because he didn't have a birth certificate or passport.

District elections officials denied his candidacy under a state law that, on March 31, began requiring a proof of citizenship for legislative Spann asked that he be allowed to file his nominating petitions on April 4 and that he be given time to try to obtain a birth certificate from South Carolina, but he was refused. He has been a district resident for more than 18 years.

Spann has collected 90 signatures on nominating petitions — far more than the required 20.

On April 10, he filed a complaint and an appeal with Wayne-Westland school officials, asking that his name be placed "immediately" on the ballot. He filed copies of his complaint with the state Board of Education, the Michigan Election Commission, the Michigan Chronicle, state Sen. Loren Bennett, the Detroit NAACP, U.S. Sen. Lynn Rivers, the Wayne County Elections Office and the Westland Observer.

Wayne-Westland school Superintendent Duane Moore said Tuesday that school district attorneys have advised officials that no exception can be made for Spann.

"We have no choice," Moore said; "There's nothing we can do."

Two head for prison in swindle

BY DURBLE CLEA STUF WRITER

A Wayne County Circuit Court judge sentenced two con men to prison last Friday for swindling $30,000 from an St-year-old Westland woman who paid for turnace repairs she didn't Circuit Judge Kathleen Macdonald ordered 21-year-old Larry Grissom of Redicid to spend two to five years in prison. She sentenced 33-year-old Limothy Barrett of Howell to a term of 13 months to five years.

Grissom and Barrett conned Phila

Gust out of more than $30,000 since 1990 for unnecessary furnace repairs at her Parkgrove residence. The men worked for Allied Comfort Systems of

Macdonald announced her sentence after convicting the men March 4 on charges of attempting to obtain more than $100 under false pretenses, punishable by a maximum five-year prison

The men convinced Gust to empty her bank account and then obtain a loan, Westland police Sgt. David Hooper has said.

On Monday, Gust said she hopes the case will provide a warning to other homeowners.

"From what I hear, this happens to young people, too. It's not just elderly people," she said. "Young people even in their 30s get taken in.

Gust said she didn't know enough about criminal matters to give an opinion on whether the sentence was fair.

"I don't really know, This is the first time I've ever had anything to do with the court system," she said. Gust said she attended the sentencing on Friday.

The case against Grissom and Barrett emerged after Gust's neighbor, Michael Cates, became suspicious when he saw a stack of bills while visiting Gust. He contacted a television station that, in turn, notified state Adult Protective Services offices.

State officials contacted the Westland Police Department, which sought charges against Grissom and Barrett following an investigation that led to criminal charges last summer. Cates brought attention to the conmen just as they were preparing to swindle another $6,000 from the elderly woman. Hooper has recommended Cates for a police-sponsored citizen's award for his help in bringing the con men to justice,

Thomas said efforts are being made to get Lanco's insurance carrier to resume talks. that have been led by mediator Laurence Connor of the CPR Institute for Dispute Resolution

Officials are about $1 million to $2 million short of the pot of money they need to begin settling homeowner claims. Thomas said. An estimated $6 million to $7 million will be needed, he said.

Sewaxe backed into 402 basements Feb. 20-21 because of a sewer chamber that was improperly blacked by a concrete wall during the latest phase of a sewer-separation project. The blockage, near Merriman and Ann Arbor Trail, has been corrected.

Many residents say they have become sick because their basements haven't been stripped to remove all of the raw sewage that backed into their homes.

Two class-action lawsuits already have been filed in Wayne County Circuit Court against the city and the companies hired for the $10 million, federally mandated sewerseparation project.

Cheryl Bates, a Merritt Drive resident who has joined one of the suits, said more residents are showing an interest in suing in the wake of the mayor's April 12 letter that detailed little progress in settling

"That letter upset a lot of people," she

The two-page letter noted that efforts have been made to resolve complex issues such as paying homeowner claims, developing procedures for evaluating claims and establishing a way to offer payment for proven damages.

"The first priority is to see that innocent homeowners be compensated as quickly as possible," Thomas wrote.

Thomas remained hopeful for a breakthrough by late this week or early next week.

"If not," he wrote, "it won't be because we haven't tried."

He encouraged homeowners to continue to gather as much documentation as possible for their lost belongings, regardless of how the claims are eventually resolved. The city also hopes to recoup $802,932 in money spent for outside contractors and city employees involved in post-flooding cleanup

The city has refrained from pursuing efforts to be reimbursed, in part, because officials want homeowner claims to be resolved first. Thomas said.

In response to homeowner complaints about garbage pickup, Thomas noted that crews have been assigned daily to the Boulevard Gardens subdivision. Residents needing help may call (313) 467-3232. Other questions may be referred to a flood hotline at (313) 721-2005.

Man guilty in respite case

BY DARREL CLEM

A Wayne County Circuit Court jury Tuesday convicted a Detroit man of sexually assaulting a mentally impaired woman at the Rose Kennedy Respite Center in Westland.

The jury found David McGee, 45, guilty of one count of firstdegree criminal sexual conduct involving allegations that he had the 28-year-old woman perform oral sex on him on Feb. 20, 1996.

The jury acquitted McGee on a second count of first-degree CSC involving other alleged sex acts. McGee was a temporary care worker at the respite center on Marquette, east of Newburgh.

Westland police Sgt. Michael Terry confirmed the jury's decision Wednesday morning. When the Observer learned Tuesday afternoon that a verdict had been announced, a secretary for Wayne Circuit Judge Sharon Tevis Finch refused to release public information about the

The secretary, who wouldn't give her full name, would only release the phone numbers of defense and prosecuting attorneys, who couldn't be reached Tuesday afternoon.

Terry, meanwhile, commended employees of the Rose Kennedy Respite Center for helping to convict McGee.

"All of the staff and the administration were instrumental in this man's conviction," Terry said. "I have never encountered a more cooperative agency than that one."

Terry stressed that the sexual molesting was an isolated incident caused by a temporary worker, and he said it shouldn't cast a negative light on the center or its employees.

Second-degree murder conviction handed down by jury on Tuesday

A 22-year-old Inkster man has been convicted of second-degree murder for the May 1, 1996, shooting death of a Redford Township man in Westland.

Thomas Lamar Walker also was found guilty of a felony firearms charge Tuesday when a Wayne County Circuit Court jury convicted Walker of murdering Christopher Rugg, 30.

Walker faces sentencing on May 6 by Judge Sean Cox, a court clerk said. He could face a maximum sentence of life in prison for second-degree murder, and he faces a mandatory two-year term for the felony firearms conviction.

The jury deliberated about six hours over two days before reaching a verdict Tuesday afternoon, Westland police Sgt. Scott Fetner said. The trial ended one week after it began.

Rugg suffered a head wound and three chest wounds when he was gunned down following a dispute that began on Klink Street in Inkster and spilled over into Westland.

His body was found alongside Henry Ruff Road north of Annapolis, and Dr. Carl Schmidt of the Wayne County Medical Examiner's Office testified that Rugg was shot even after he had fallen to the Westland police said an investigation indicated that Rugg went to Inkster to avenge an earlier robbery when he was slain. He had taken a .45-caliber Colt handgun with him and had written notes to family members indicating that he may be facing trouble, Fetner said.

The NBD bank branch at Michigan and Wayne roads helped the effort by taking in the vanload of pennies and sorting and counting them.

The Student Council does a number of activities during the year, including a food drive around Thanksgiving. The group recently received a commendation from the Westland Salvation Army for it's 1996 food drive efforts, Zupko said.

Teachers honored

The Wayne-Westland YMCA will show the community's appreciation of the great value of excellent classroom teachers at the April 24 Annual Recognition Dinner.

The board decided several years ago that the ongoing excellent work of teachers should be honored by this YMCA," said John Zech, YMCA board chairman. "It is our way of saing.

'thank you' for a job well done." This year's honorees will be Barbara Sue Carlson of Franklin Middle School Bev Woodard of Schweitzer Elementary School, Merrill Harkema of Hicks Elementary School and Diane McLean of the William D. Ford Career/Technical Center.

"The evening is our annual celebration of community pride for the Wayne-Westland YMCA," according to Zech.

YMCA DINNER

The highlight of the evening will be the honoring of three outstanding community volunteers: Margaret Harlow of Westland and Patrick and Karen Norton.

The YMCA has been honoring volunteers since 1970,

"The YMCA honorees are special because they have given not jus ta year of service or handled one project, but have demonstrated a lifetime of charitable giving to community causes, consistent with the goals of the YMCA," Zech added.

The evening is open to the public. The reception is at 6:30 p.m. with dinner starting at 7 p.m. Tickets are $30 per person and can be obtained by calling Pauline King at (313) 721-7044.

The prepared board statement heaped praise on Moore for his professional leadership, curriculum/instruction efforts and finance expertise. He also won support for his relations with district employees, board members, community groups and government officials at the municipal, state and federal levels.

Moore's "leadership and vision" have fueled "a positive atmosphere which focuses on the student and has resulted in our staff continuing to improve their commitment and dedication to the teaching profession," Fowlkes said.

The board's statement commended Moore for:

Continuing to implement a five-year curriculum improvement plan.

Continuing to fine-tune a middle school concept that is "going very well."

Work starts again on Newburgh Lake project

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER

A $10 million restoration of Newburgh Lake has often been referred by county officials as a project to make the lake the "pearl" of western Wayne Coun-

The restoration came to an abrupt and tragic halt on Feb.

That day Frank Zimmerman, president of Divtec Corp. of Romulus, drowned while working underwater clearing debris from the front of a sluice gate. Construction work stopped for sorted out information, Officials with the state's construction safety division operating under the Michigan Occupational Safety and Health Act have not completed a final report, and would not comment on their investigation last week. County officials also would not comment on that investigation.

The first phase to lower the lake is expected to last two weeks when excavators begin removing soil and sediment conbiphenyla (PCBs) from the lake.

Approximately 390,000 cubic yards of contaminated sediment will be removed, and about another 230,000 cubic yards of additional sediment will be excavated to increase the lake's

Contractors will drain the lake, conduct two "kills" of potentially contaminated fish and remove contaminated sediment and soil throughout the next 15 months.

Ridgway expects John Carlo will begin excavating first in the area where contaminants flowed into the river and lake, then move into the lake in May.

> "I lost nine days of my life," Ayoub said.

He spent a month in the hospital and at a rehabilitation center before coming home last week. He suffered a dislocated hip, a broken clavicle and a closed head injury, and he lost three teeth.

"That's why I sound funny," Ayoub said, struggling to pronounce his words properly.

Ayoub, a construction student at the William D. Ford Career Technical Center in Westland and an employee of a Detroit Coney Island restaurant, knows that he narrowly escaped death.

"I am lucky to be alive," he said. "I've learned that you've got to be careful with your life. You can't go out drinking and expect to drive."

Parrish was on his way to work when he drove upon the accident that had just occurred about 10:35 p.m. March 10.

"When I first saw that traffic had stopped, I thought somebody had hit a deer," he said. "Then I could see smoke."

Flames had begun to engulf the car by the time Parrish got out of his vehicle and reached the scene. He tried without success to douse the flames with a

"It was like I had tunnelvision," Parrish said, "I was operating on pure adrenalin. But the smoke was starting to choke me."

He had to struggle to open a jammed passenger door before Mugurian and Ayoub could be pulled out, and he remembers someone else helping him. He believes the helper cut a seat belt that was restraining the door.

Road funding

Municipalities lobby Engler for fuel tax hike

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

The news is that city officials and Gov. John Engler are on speaking terms. It's not news that they still disagree.

Engler spoke to the Michigan Municipal League's legislative conference April 9 in Lansing and, according to his news release, said the state has been "a generous partner with municipalities."

"State funding for local roads increased more than 38 percent" since 1991, he said. He won't support a fuel tax increase for transportation, however, until all other efforts are exhausted.

MML wants more revenue through a fuel tax hike. Its March 26 legislative bulletin quoted the mayors of Dearborn and Kentwood as advocating "a substantial increase in the gas tax (that) must be part of any package."

Engler said he would "review" the PA 51 formula that allocates 21.8 percent of the $700 million fuel tax to cities and villages in 1998, when it expires, but promised nothing. MML wants changes in PA 51.

They disagreed on revenue mayor complained of "the continuing deterioration of revenue sharing."

Engler replied that statutory revenue sharing (as distinct from constitutionally required revenue sharing) was intended for one-time capital projects, and too many cities are using it for general fund operations. (Engler's fiscal 1998 budget proposes that revenue sharing with cities be counted as road aid.)

MML and Engler agreed:

The federal government. should return more road money to Michigan because this state gets back just 4 cents for every 5 cents it sends to Washington. Engler set a goal of $200 million and may get half. MML's stand: The board joined with the governor."

■ There should be "tort reform to stop outrageous and expensive lawsuits," in Engler's words. "MML supports," said the cities. Their argument is that generous jury awards in road liability cases gut those budgets.

Changes in the compulsory arbitration law (PA 312) need to be made, MML cited a "one-sharing. The Norton Shores involving the state troopers." MMI, "welcomed the governor to the club. Michigan has 534 municipalities - 271 cities and 263 villages. The figure does not include 1,241 townships.

Turnback'

Engler said he's studying a "turnback" plan in which part of the federal fuel tax is repealed and replaced by an increase in the state fuel tax.

Taxpayers wouldn't notice a difference, but governments would. The federal government levies 4.3 cents per gallon for the general fund (not transportation). If Michigan could capture that for its state transportation fund, the net benefit would be about $194 million.

SEMCOG meetings

"Road funding will be a key item on the agenda," said the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, which will hold spring workshops later this month.

Wayne County units will meet from 9 to noon Saturday, April sided arbitration settlement 19, in the Wyndham Garden Hotel at Metropolitan Airport, Romulus.

Oakland County units will meet from 5 to 8 p.m. Tuesday, April 22, in the county's Information Technology. Building, Pontiac.

SEMCOG members include counties, townships and community colleges as well as cities and villages.

Hatless tuition

A key state senator warns parents of collegians against a Democratic bill raising the income tax credit for college

The idea sounds good - a $500 tax credit instead of $250 - but Sen. John J.H. Schwarz noted the bill climinates the requirement that colleges and universities cap tuition hikes at or below the rate of inflation, currently about 2.5 percent.

The cap contains "a strong incentive for universities to keep tuition rates low," said Schwarz, R-Battle Creek, chair of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on higher education. The law was sponsored by Sen. Loren Bennett, R-Canton.

Last year 10 of the 15 universities and 13 of the 28 community colleges kept tuition hikes below the increase in the consumer price index (CPI), so their students' families could claim the tax credit. The University of Michigan and Schoolcraft College were among those whose tuition hikes exceeded the CPI.

The governor has reappointed Dr. Paul DeWeese Williamston to the Michigan Municipal Bonding Authority, which provides low-cost method of financing capital improvements for school districts and local governments.

County will expand Web site

BY KEN ABRANCEYE STAFF WRITER

Wayne County officials hope to promote county services and ease access for residents to county information with an expanded World Wide Web page on the Internet.

On April 3, county commissioners concurred unanimously with County Executive Edward McNamura on a two-year contract for $210,000 with Jurist Systems Group of Detroit to provide improved accessibility to the Internet, establish a Website service home page and expand Website content.

Wayne County's Department of Information Procession will be working with Jurist Systems.

County residents who own computers and access the Internet regularly can expect to find information about county commissioners, parks activities, immunization sites or even bid specifications on advertised contracts up for bid.

Currently computer users must dial different numbers to access various county web sites. The new system will allow just one number to be used for access to information from various departments.

flood over areas where contaminated soil lies, while channels will redirect those flood waters on the south side of lake.

"You want to keep certain things dry and you want some flood control," Ridgway said. "The construction site will be flooded a couple of times during the project."

The stop logs can be returned to the sluice gate if the lake level needs to be raised. Ridgway expects Carlo's workers will be dredging on a small barge, which will need various levels of water to float and operate around the lake area. About 10 acres will need to be dredged, Ridgway said.

Nearby residents may notice a smell from decomposing seaweed, which will be exposed to open air on the land in the lake area. Residents will not smell retenone and potassium permanganate during the fish kill, Ridgway said.

As contractors remove the killed fish on the same day as the rotenone and potassium permanganate are applied, residents should not smell the decomposing fish, Ridgway said.

Contractors will exercise measures to control odor if necessary.

"If there is a problem with odor, and we see it and smell it, and what impact it has on residents, we may use something called a landfill foam," Ridgway said. "It is sprayed on, and both the soil and foam is removed.

"But it is very expensive to use. We do have money in the budget and you try to anticipate what the problems will be."

Contractors may be able to add lime to the soil while excavating, Ridgway said.

The first fish kill will be completed between June 15 and July 15, while another will be completed in July 1998. Game fish will be stocked in July 1998.

to be up on the expanded site includes the Electronic Procurement Assistance Center system, according to Carol Steffanni, deputy director of Wayne County's Department of Information Processing.

EPAC is a seven-day, 24-hour computerized on-line system designed to permit businesses, particularly those that are small and minority/disadvantaged, to submit bids and learn about electronically access purchasing opportunities from Wayne County and Michigan Consolidated Gas, using a personal computer.

The current EPAC system outlines bids below $15,000, but will be expanded on the new site for bids at all price levels. About 300 businesses are registered on EPAC.

A policy committee consisting of all elected county officials will examine and recommend what information should be accessible on the Internet.

Other information on park schedules of activities, roads, economic development and health will be available by the fall on the expanded Web site, Steffanni said.

"By having Wayne County on one site, they'll be able to see what county government does,"

While the Internet allows residents access to some information already, the new expansion will allow for improved accessibility.

For county departments examining bids, it will allow for quicker answers for questions on specifications or bids, and interaction to speed up purchasing orders.

For Wayne County's Department of Jobs and Economic Development, the expanded site means it can complete a geographic information system (GIS) from an economic development standpoint.

The Web site is expected to contain aerial photos of each property and statistics on each site, said Tim Johnson, director of marketing and communications division for the Department of Jobs and Economic Development.

Johnson said businesses can learn about loan programs to expand or modernize, or about brownfield sites, which are contaminated sites that can use a tax increment finance authority to finance clean up and allow for future development.

and hackers can't make it into the Web site, Steffanni said.

Residents will be able to access information on roads, whether the road is a local or county road or state highway, what projects will be undertaken over the next several months, and pothole information.

Wayne County asks for and expects county residents to provide input on the available information.

"It will be a growing learning experience as we find out what people want," said Dave Wattenberg, information processing consultant for Wayne County.

"What we find with computers is it levels the playing field. You get people who won't tell you something in the hallway, but then they will e-mail you with what they think."

To find out more about Wayne County Jobs and Economic Development, contact that department on its Web Site at www.waynecounty.com, To obtain information about Detroit/Wayne County Metropolitan Airport, use the Web Site number of www.metroairport.com.

Education gap widening, says WSU's Adamany hires and oversees 75 employees at the municipal libraries, and is reimbursed by each community.

Through the Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, all county residents who qualify have access to free library service. Here, hundreds of books on tape and periodicals on disk are mailed each week.

The Illingworths and the 3,300 other users in Wayne County who are blind or have other impairments - to the point that they cannot turn pages - can listen to their favorite books, receive a current popular magazine on an audio disk or borrow videotapes of movies with special narration describing the action.

The service is free to users, funded through money from Wayne County, while equipment is paid for and supplied by the Library of Congress.

The Illingworths particularly enjoy the talking books.

George Illingworth recently listened to "Life on the Color Line: The True Story of a White Boy Who Discovered He Was Black" by Gregory Howard Williams. Williams reflects on his life, as he was raised believing his father was Italian. He details his feelings after he went to Muncie, Ind., and discovers that his father's side of the family was actually black.

The Illingworths receive a catalog quarterly of talking books. listen to a tape of the list, then they can call the library or type up and mail an order form.

"When the spirit moves us, we read," said George.

Books that 'talk'

Talking books generally are created by the Library of Congress, but Wayne County also records some works through volunteer readers.

When deciding to tape a particular book, the Library of Congress chooses a narrator whose voice and speech inflections are appropriate for the book's context, said Pat Klemens, county librarian.

"They're people who are professional actors or speech therapists," Klemens said. "(Library users) love it."

At the Wayne County library, narrators generally read local books, such as a book on a regional leader, or a book with regional appeal. The volunteers read in a soundproof booth. A monitor listens to the narration outside the booth and informs the reader if a particular tone or voice inflection is inappropriate for the story's context.

The narration of about 350 pages can be taped on three regular cassettes. The cassettes use four tracks and run at about half the usual speed.

X- and O-shaped letters on top of the cassette player's operational switches allow for a blind person to feel which switch indicates play or stop. Blind or disabled people can use the machines as long as they continue to borrow talking books from the library, Klemens said.

Library users can borrow the tapes for eight weeks.

"We mail them out with several days lead time and they mail them back to us," Klemens said. "I'm always surprised. It seems to take longer to listen to a book."

Library users can send reference questions on the Internet, or e-mail a question or book requests to the library.

Every year the users receive a catalog, containing categories such as For Younger Readers. Romance and Humor.

Faster publication

In September 1996, a bill amended the Copyright Act to allow a reproduction without the copyright owner's permission of "nondramatic" literary material in alternative formats for use in publications for the blind.

*People now get books much more papidly," Klemens said.

What's new?

The library recently purchased a large number of books in Arabic and Polish. Klemens expects to add popular radio show tapes from the 1940s and 1950s to the collection.

"The demographics show that 60 percent of library users are past the age of 60," Klemens said. But users can be as young as 2. They range from students to white-collar workers, some employed, some unemployed, Klemens said.

"We really have a cross-section of the population," Klemens said.

They enjoy best sellers from Mary Higgins Clark, and Louis L'Amour and W.E.B. Griffith, Klemens said. "They tend to like romances, Harlequin novels, and you see a little more inspirational. Not necessarily theological, but inspirational."

Young readers enjoy the "Goosebumps" series, while preschool readers like "Dr. Seuss." "Black Beauty" remains popular for preteen girls, along with "Sweet Valley High" and *Anne of Green Gables."

The library has four librarians, two library aides and five part-time student assistants who help with the sorting of mailed talking books.

"We have the most wonderful group of young people," Klemens said. They are good with what they do, they do so much in rewinding and duplicating tapes and repairing tapes."

Materials are delivered directly to a patron's address by mail. Here are some of the services the library provides:

Talking books. These are books recorded on tape and vinyl record. The collection covers topics similar to those offered in a mid-sized public library, including best sellers, mysteries, biographies, science fiction, poetry, humor, westerns and auspense.

All books have been recorded in their entirety.

The Library for the Blind does not offer recorded textbooks or music. Equipment to play the talking books is provided on extended loan.

Magazines. More than 60 popular titles are available in recorded format on audio discs.

Other items are available for use at the library, including a closed circuit TV enlarger and Kurzweil Reading Edge - a machine that reads aloud printed material - and a Kuraweil voice-synthesised computer, unable to hold or turn pages of print books also qualify, besides those who are blind or have poor vision. The service can be long-term or temporary. "People who use our library must qualify," said Pat Klemens, Wayne County librarian.

"That (qualification) was originally blindness, but it was modified for anything that prevented them from reading print, in that they cannot hold a book or turn its pages. It can include people on medication or someone in an auto accident and can't use their

People must be certified as having a physical disability by a medical doctor.

People are eligible if vision in their "better eye" is 20/200 or less with correcting glasses, or the widest diameter of visual field is no greater than 20 degrees; or they cannot see well enough or focus long enough to read standard print, according to the Library of Congress.

Both individuals and organizations, such as schools and nursing homes, may enroll in the Talking Book program.

How to apply

The library staff will send residents an application for enrollment in their program. Residents complete the application and have it signed by a "certifying authority" and mail it to 33030 Van Born, Wayne, Mich. 48184-2496

Persons who are visually or physically disabled may have the application signed by a doctor, optometrist, visiting nurse, counselor, etc. Persons who are reading-disabled must have the application signed by a doctor of medicine.

Persons may request an application be sent by calling (313)

SEMCOG officials say signs point to managed growth

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

One year you see a fox den and deer tracks in the vacant lots near your new home. Next. year you see a shopping center full of chain stores and traffic lights at the corner.

And yet there is little overall population increase. People. businesses and health care offices just shift around - outward.

For three decades, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments has talked against "urban sprawl" and in favor of "managed growth."

This year the numbers continued to worsen. Ed Limoges of SEMCOG's data center staff told delegates from seven counties in March that single-family lot sizes were getting larger. Average density was three households per acre before 1990; two to three per acre in 1990-95; and one per acre in Livingston County.

"Our forecast is that we're likely to see further loss of farmiland," said Jerry Rowe, also of SEMCOG's data center staff.

Nevertheless, Patrick Brunett. SEMCOG's environmental and land use manager, said he is "a little more on the optimistic side. For the last 20 years you couldn't say 'land use' in Michigan because people equated it with stopping growth. Now we (the region) are willing to talk about it."

Toward consensus

In a recent interview, Brunett and Rowe pointed to many signs that people from many kinds of communities across the state are edging toward a consensus on managed growth and away from sprawl. Items:

■ The Michigan Legislature last year had 50 or so bills on land use. In previous years, there had been but a handful.

■ The leading name in the Legislature is not a big city acaPatrick Brunett, SEMCOG's environmental and land use manager, said he is "a little more on the optimistic side. For the last 20 years you couldn't say 'land use' in Michigan because people equated it with stopping growth. Now we (the region) are willing to talk about it."

demic but Sen. Leon Stille, a former business executive and village president of Spring Lake (pop. 2,500), near the Lake Michigan shoreline.

■ The Michigan Economic and Environmental Roundtable has taken up land use as a project. Key player: Dow Chemical of Midland.

Environmental groups are looking beyond fragile meadows and bird populations to the urban sprawl issue.

■ Churches in Detroit and the near-in suburbs are seeing a linkage between the problems of poverty and sprawl, said Brunett, singling out interfaith organizations like the Moses and Jeremiah groups.

■ The Legislature streamlined the Condemnation Act, which in the past has blocked the assembly of large land parcels for redevelopment. "But that act needs more reform than we were able to get," said Brunett.

■ Former House Speaker Paul Hillegonds, now president of the corporate-sponsored Detroit Renaissance, told SEMCOG delegates about a bipartisan group of lawmakers coming together on land use reform issues, though so far there is no consen-

■ Dr. Robert Burchell, of Rutgers University's Center for Urban Policy Research, did a study for SEMCOG in which he said that a 10 percent more compact land development would save millions in local government and homeowners' dollars.

The savings nationally would be "15 percent in developable land, 12 percent in local roads, and an average of 15 percent in water-based development utilities" because homeowners would be watering smaller lots.

'Get together'

The problem is not how good guys in white hats can beat bad guys in black hats.

"Unless less we get the urban and rural interests together, we're not going to go anywhere in this state," said Brunett.

"There is a loss of credibility when both sides are after each other," said Rowe.

Detroit lawyer Norman Hyman, who has represented developers like Taubman as well as municipalities, cautions those who point a finger at developers. Said Hyman in response to Hillegonds' speech:

"It is not developers who are responsible for urban sprawl but municipalities. The declines in density relate to restrictive, exclusionary housing practices embodied in local zoning ordinances. Moreover, not only are our suburban municipalities requiring larger lots and mandating lower densities, but by and large, they oppose other higher density residential residential uses, such as multiple residential. . .

"In California, there are even single-family residential developments with as many as nine to 10 units per acre. The last time I looked, in a county in Florida adjoining Tampa, four units per acre is considered the dividing line..."

Programs expand

ALS, police programs on tap

estland residents have several highprofile programs to look forward to later this year.

An expansion of community policing efforts, a canine police unit and expansion of Advanced Life Support services to fully complement the city's emergency medical services are all in the works, according to Mayor Robert Thomas, who proposed them at his annual State of the City address last week.

Thomas said that, although voters rejected a tax increase for some of these services last year, he believes residents really want them they just don't want to pay any more.

We concur. All three of these services and programs are beneficial ones for Westland, and if city officials can find an effective way to pay for them, we offer hearty support.

It does cause us to wonder why, however briefly, these ideas weren't considered before a tax increase was put to voters last year. They were likely discussed and considered and we probably will not get quite the same program we would have with increased taxes.

So be it. We will live with whatever size programs can be tucked into the budget.

We are pleased to see that ALS service will expand to all four fire stations from the current two. As our entire area ages, services for an older population - including needed medical services — become crucial to saving lives. In his address, Thomas noted two cases of lifesaving which he believes would not have occurred without the service Westland now provides.

How can we argue with that? The canine unit has a two-fold value to Westland. It will help police fight crime, track suspects, sniff out drugs and help with investigations. Other communities have canine units - usually one trained dog and a police handler and sometimes more than one team - which are frequently used. We could make good use of such a team here, as well as share such a service with other departments which helps build community camaraderie.

The canine unit also plays an integral public relations role for the city. Anyone who has attended area summer festivals with canine. demonstrations knows how supportive a community can be of such a program — they generally embrace it.

And last, but not least, is Westland's new approach to community policing. We believe this approach may well be better than the original thought of hiring a corps of new officers for a "community policing program," although that concept has worked well in Norwayne.

This is a change in departmental philosophy which should permeate the very core of the department - it will teach our officers to think differently and to approach their jobs in a new and unique way.

We're not saying it will be easy, but all we need do is look west to neighboring Canton where a community policing philosophy has been in place throughout that department for more than two years. Given time, such a fully integrated program will also benefit Westland.

Thomas proposes to have these programs in place by October. Bring 'em on. We just wish the programs could be put in place sooner.

Basketball was fun

emember when basketball was not about salary caps, free agency, and money? Basketball was made to be fun, but today's times have turned it into a three-ring circus.

Ten years ago, you could see players running up and down the court giving all they had. Now you see them posing for the camera, showing off their shoes, and trying to get noticed by dyeing their hair purple and green. They care more about contracts and endorsements than about the fans and the team.

The question I leave with you is "What will basketball be like 10 years from now?"

we can a society now solve the problems of child abuse when it defends the ultimate child abuse in the name of choice? How can members of a family be brought closer together knowing that one of their brothers or sisters has been disposed of because of incon-

How can sexual partners draw closer together or even respect each other knowing that one or both of them decided to do away with the product of that love? how can a woman be better off not knowing what that child might have looked like or might have become had she not decided to kill it before birth?

Child abuse has increased by over 600 percent since abortion became legal despite the fact that it also has killed off the "unwanted" (future problems) at the rate of one every 20 seconds. Legalizing child abuse as the Supreme Court did in Roe vs. Wade did what most legalizations of anything do. It increased the occurrences and brought with it even greater disrespect for life.

Society can spend millions of dollars on advertisement against child abuse until their computers run dry. Clinton can add hundreds of thousands more policemen. But until we become honest with ourselves and stop the deliberate killing of innocent human life before it comes into this world, we will continue to increase incidences of child abuse after birth.

It is very obvious that legalizing child abuse has lead and will continue to lead to greater and greater disrespect for all life. Just look at the headlines in the newspaper and see for vourself.

Libraries: a reason to celebrate ational Library Week.

It's one of those annual events that is more often overlooked than celebrated. It doesn't have the consciousness-raising element of "Black History Month" or "Women's History Month," the personal involvement of "Take Your Child to Work Day" or even the tonguein-cheek possibilities of "Groundhog Day." But it's a week that should be celebrated.

Public libraries have long been the repositories of knowledge and learning. In today's rapidly changing society, they have taken on even greater roles. Suburban libraries have become centers of community activities, providing gathering places and meeting rooms for local organizations. They have taken the lead in bringing new technology (the so-called "Information Superhighway") to their patrons. And they have done it all at a bargain price for the taxpayer.

Property owners in western Wayne County pay, on average, about 1 mill for library services. For the owner of a $200,000 home, that amounts to $200 a year — roughly what it would cost to purchase eight hard-cover books. Circulation figures indicate that library patrons check out considerably more materials than that. In January alone, according to figures compiled by The Library Network, Livonia's four libraries circulated almost 66,000

In Canton, the figure was more than 63,000, Plymouth 43,000, Westland 30,000, Redford 18,000 and Garden City 8,800. In addition to books, those figures also include materials such as videos, audio cassettes, compact discs and CD-ROMs. That $200 wouldn't go far in purchasing these items.

But community libraries have begun to provide an even more important service than simply circulating books and videos. As innovators in the technological revolution, community libraries are trying to bridge the gap between the "haves" and the "have-nots." The theme of this year's National Library Week is "Kids Connect @ The Library." According to Mary R. Somerville, president of the American Library Association, the goal of the ALA is to have every public school and college library on-line by the year 2000. Somerville says that families with incomes of $50,000 a year are five times more likely to have computers at home than other families.

"As librarians," she said, "we're concerned that all children and adults have access to this important new technology. A library card gives every child the key to success."

And with such technological services as Metro Net and The Library Network, even the smallest community library has access to other resources. Patrons at any of the member libraries of The Library Network have access to more than 500,000 titles in the shared access catalog. And all Metro Net and TLN libraries offer Internet access at terminals in their own facilities.

Just this week the Canton Township Library was selected to receive the "Library of the Future Award" from the American Library Association for its Cyber Kids room.

As libraries bridge the gap between the old and new technologies, those resources literally become available to anyone with a library card. That's something worth celebrating.

Superstores reign

The Wall Street-Washington elites have been telling us for years that the stock market is the best place to invest your money. Guess what? I believe they're right. And that's scary, Consider:

The days of the "mom and pop" business are over. Virtually every aspect of our huge retail and service economy has been taken over by the big box, "category killer" superstores. You name it - office supplies, books and music, pets and pet supplies, hair cutting and now even used cars are being sold by Wall Streetbacked superstores. Even your family doctor may now be working for an HMO.

There is very little room for the little guy in this economy of giants - except as an employ-

Of course if you are downsized out of your job — you may be advised to get a computer and retire to a spare bedroom and declare yourself a consultant. White-collar consultants are in the 1990s what blue-collar "apple sellers" were in the 1930s: Excess labor masquerading as entrepreneurs.

Many of our parents and grandparents got through the 1930s on small family farms. Most small farmers were cash poor, but at least they didn't have to beg for food and they had family and friends in a pinch. The family farm was probably the greatest social safety net ever devised for ordinary people.

Of course, the family farm is long gone. Now farmers are an industry group, not a social class.

Today, our economy is like a high-tech 747 jet cruising at 37,000 feet. Stocks and bonds are the jets' fuel. And Wall Street is its engines. Inside our pressurized cabin all is screne - yet a bit surreal. Outside, wing and weather clash violently at incomprehensible speed. In the laws of physics and markets we ot too long ago, I picked up a few old Life magazines at a used book sale held at the local library. What a treasure I found. These issues had covers of the famous astronauts John Glenn, Scott Carpenter and Jim Lovell.

It was like taking a trip in Mr. Peabody's Wayback Machine to my vouth. The April 24, 1970, issue really caught my attention. Jim Lovell was on the cover, and the feature story was about the successful return of Apollo 13. The movie "Apollo 13" was fresh in my mind, and I kept comparing Tom Hanks to the real Jim Lovell in the photos.

The page following that article was a story on the Beatles breaking up, I sure remembered that happening more than the Apollo mission. Then on the next page was the real surprise. I was looking at a photo of the people who organized the first Earth Day, Having participated in many Earth Day events over the years, I never gave much thought to how it all began, and here I was looking at the "radicals" that started it all.

The Life photo on Page 41 shows six young people dressed casually in bellbottom pants, all with long hair and long sideburns, looking like other typical college radicals of the day. As I read the short article, I was surprised to find out that Sen. Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin came up with the Earth Day concept. He wanted to apply anti-Vietnam demonstration tactics to the growing war on pollu-

The six young people were on his staff. One of them was Denis Hayes. who became the national coordinator for Earth Day in 1970. Hayes makes a quote to end the article. He says he cannot be sure that Earth Day will radically alter the gloomy environmental picture, but "there's no survival potential in pessimism."

Well Denis, 26 Earth Days have radically altered that gloomy environmental picture. Pessimism has not dampened the spirit. There have been many victories, successes, and improvements. Most industries are in compliance of hard-won environmental regulations. These point-source polluters are only 10 percent of our pollution problems now.

Earth Day is based on taking collective action against local polluters. If industry is now more environmentally responsible, being only 10 percent of the problem, what is the other 90 percent? That 90 percent is considered non-point pollution, and you know who causes that problem? Us, you and me.

So, I guess the next mass demonstration should picket my house. I may not be dumping a toxic chemical with a name 87 letters long, but I sure am contributing to the pollution problem. I waste too much water, I misuse fertilizers and pesticides, I spill gasoline, oil and glycol down the storm drain, I use too much detergent, I sweep my grass clippings and sand into the street, I don't clean up after my pet, and I don't recycle butteries or anything else. If you're like me, you too are part of the pollution problem. So, this Earth Day I will be changing my environmentally damaging habits. I hope you join the others who are already following environmentally friendly practices.

We must continue the work of supporting legislation that will protect our land, air and water. It is more work than you can do in one day. Each day must become Earth Day. I'm sure we can do our fair share for the 27th Earth Day, April 22, 1997.

Race for Cure offers breast cancer reminder y mom doesn't walk well, but otherwise is healthy. There is no history of breast cancer in our family. But my daughter and I will be among the more than 15,000 people taking part in the Race for the Cure this Saturday at the Detroit Zoo as we have done in years past.

Carol Lifton's mother died of breast cancer 25 years ago at the age of 59. Carol, now 59 herself, was diagnosed with early phase breast cancer in one breast four years ago. The Beverly Hills resident, accompanied by two of her daughters, will have special status among the more than 600 breast cancer survivors registered for the race, the fourth largest aimed at breast cancer in the country.

Lifton, talkative and energetic, was taken aback but not by surprise, by her diagnosis. "When my mother died of breast cancer, I said then I knew it (breast cancer) would happen to me but I'd find it in time." And when it did, she chose an aggressive course of action: a double mastectomy with reconstruction at a later date.

She acknowledges husband Sidney, a retired electrical contractor, preferred that she undergo less drastic treatment. But, "I'm pigheaded and stubborn, and it was my life," she asserts. "I wanted to live. I had waited for this diagnosis my whole life and I wasn't going to take any chances." As it turned out, her doctors also found cancer in her other breast.

Lifton, a travel agent for Mayfair Travel in Southfield when she and Sidney aren't traveling themselves. didn't have to go through radiation or chemotherapy. "I was lucky, Everyone should be as lucky as I was." But she is very conscious of a legacy she doesn't like. Those with breast cancer in their immediate family are at higher risk. And she has three daughters and a 10-year-old granddaughter she describes as "the light of my life."

JUDITH DONER BERNE

"I thought positive," she said. And by her example, she hopes she has turned what could have been a legacy of fear into a legacy of hope. She caught her disease early. She attributes her now-healthy status to early detection, education about the disease and the fact that she's in touch with her body and knows it well.

It's a legacy we should all be passing on to our daughters and granddaughters. Because even if breast cancer runs in families, just 20 percent of breast cancer patients can confirm a familial link. Other factors that put a woman at higher risk include: menstruation before age 11 or menopause after 54, having a first child after age 30 and early exposure to radiation. Obesity, high-fat diets and alcohol consumption of more than two drinks a week also influence.

Lifton wants to see more research. And that's where Race for the Cure, a group of road races across the country, puts 75 percent of its proceeds. Locally it's presented by the Karmanos Cancer Institute, in affiliation with The Detroit Medical Center and Wayne State University.

Remaining funds go to promote awareness, education and early detection. And this year, for the first time, a free, eight-hour Expo on those very subjects will be held the day before the race. From noon to 8 p.m. Friday you can get important information on breast cancer prevention and treatment and be entertained as well, sponsored by Jacobson's.

The Expo is open to everyone, whether or not you enter the race. But it's also your last chance to register for Saturday's 5K or one-mile walk or run since there's no race day registration.

Breast cancer is no casual matter. It threatens one in 12 white women and one in 14 black women by age 75.

Monthly self examination, yearly medical screening and regular mammograms for those either at risk or over 40 make it more likely that it will be detected early when it can be cured. It bears repeating that once a year we join together to Race for the Cure. Once a month, each woman must race for herself.

Adamany takes sensible position merica is the most diverse country in the world, possibly one of the most diverse societies in history.

Michigan's early history, for example, mingled French Catholic fur traders with indigenous Indians. Later on, English-rooted farmers and businessmen employed a dazzling array of ethnics - Irish, Poles, Flemings, Czechs, Hungarians, Lithuanians. After World War II, drawn by the presence of good wages and the absence of Jim Crow segregation, thousands of black families immigrated from the rural South to the factories of Detroit, joined eventually by a latter-day Diaspora of Christian and Muslim families from the Middle East.

The obvious sociological question - how to keep such a heterogeneous society from flying apart at the seams? - has haunted our institutions. For the last 30 years or so, it has been an article of establishment faith that one important tool to do so is "affirmative action" - policies that cause social institutions to set aside certain benefits for ethnically defined groups.

A highly charged example is admission to colleges. Virtually every university in Michigan tilts a certain portion of its admissions to accommodate students, principally black, who are deemed "disadvantaged" by income, by past segregation or by poor schooling.

These policies came about in response to differing kinds of arguments, from the civil rights movement in the 1960s asserting simple justice to the round of student activism in the 1980s with the sometimes explicit threat to "shut the place down."

Though certainly not all minority high school graduates who are admitted by Michigan's universities are less qualified by grade point average or aptitude test scores than the average of majority applicants, there is no doubt that some

This has created two kinds of conflicts. At some universities where admissions are highly competitive - the University of Michigan, for example - white parents are outraged when their children are denied admission in favor of minority students with poorer test scores and grade point averages. Once on campus, however, many minority students are equally outraged to find themselves stereotyped as "quota students," presumed to be academically inferior.

All this has contributed intensity to a series of legal challenges now being mounted against affirmative action programs of all sorts around the country. Voters in California, for example, after a nasty campaign that bordered on racebaiting, voted last November to adopt Propositien 2209, which eliminates any race-based preferential policy whatsoever.

And there are legitimate constitutional questions having to do with the simple "race-blind" equality set out most compellingly in the 14th Amendment. The Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last year struck down the University of Texas Law School's admissions policy, which was in part tilted to admit minority students, on the constitutional grounds that race or ethnicbased admission standards are on their face impermissible. Other suits are sure to come, and the entire issue of affirmative action surely is headed for the U.S. Supreme Court.

So it was with great interest that I listened last week to retiring Wayne State University President David Adamany, who spoke to the Journalist of the Year awards program at some of these newspapers and was asked about affirmative action and university admissions.

"The big difference between America and other societies around the world is that our society, because so heterogeneous, has adopted for many years a kind of 'inclusionist' idea," said Adamany.

"Our social policy for many years has been to try to find ways to include into full membership in our society the endless stream of immigrants: Irish, eastern European ethnics, blacks, Latinos and Asians. That's the way we have continually fashioned and refashioned America, including my own family which originally came to Wisconsin from Lebanon.

"There is no doubt that access to learning and technology, even more than family wealth, will determine success in the years to come," Adamany continued. "That's what our great universities offer, and that's why admission to them is such an important thing. And if we are going to continue to include everyone into American society, that's why we need to preserve affirmative action admission policies.

It's good to see such a sensible position taken on a contentious issue by such a distinguished leader.

Things to do list includes some clogging n my "To Do Someday" list I've added clogging. That's right, clogging. It's got nothing to do with drains or arteries those are under UN-clogging, on my "To Do Right Now" list.

But this clogging, this is something else. It's dancing. There's clacking and stomping and tapping and rhythm and music and an ensemble of joyful noise to be made in this dance.

And I like that. Just like I like tap dancing, although I've never seen a live performance of tap dancing, but I have seen it in old movies and on TV.

I remember one Bill Cosby Show episode where he and an old guy, a tap dance instructor, had dueling feet. The instructor would tap out a completely impossible rhythm and yell out to Cliff Huxtable (Bill Cosby), "Challenge," and then Cliff would have to repeat the rhythm. And back and forth they'd go.

I remember standing in my family room and watching that when I should've been doing a thousand other things, folding the laundry, scrubbing the floor, baking brownies, something other than watching tap dancing. A commercial finally intervened and I went back to real life, the dishes, but now adding a terrible, amateurish tap dance done in tennis shoes at the kitchen

And just yesterday when I finished mixing up cake ingredients in the mixer I, and I always do this (ask my annoyed children), clanged and tapped the beaters on the top edge of the bowl to get the batter off. It, too, is a rhythm sort of thing with crescendos and decrescendos and variations of sound, metal on glass, and metal against metal. It's quite dramatic. And dumb, according to certain young critics. Oh, well. It's a joyful noise.

Make a joyful noise and all, you know. So maybe that's why clogging is so appealing. It has that at its heart - a joyful noise.

A 'Gate-ful' noise

One recent Friday I sat in on a rehearsal session of the Sixth Gate Cloggers up in Novi. And this group, I'm telling you, was terrific! The cloggers were all women, with one of the two instructors a man. One dancer, Donna, had been with the group since it began nine years ago and she explained how the Sixth Gate Cloggers practice two times a week, three hours a pop!

Now the short while I was there, I saw these dancers dancing and dancing and dancing. Tapping and moving and clacking and clicking the whole time. A ton of energy was expended in that short amount of time. A ton!

The Sixth Gate Cloggers are good. And they're in demand. They're asked to perform all over the place, about 50 shows a year. And, of course, these shows are above and beyond the six hours of practice a week. Needless to say, I was overwhelmed by the dedication and commitment to this art form these women had.

And it is an art form; it's an art form that originated in the Appalachian Mountains here in the U.S. and has been influenced by other dance art forms including tap and Irish step dancing.

Appalachia? Tap? Ireland? Clogging? But what about Holland? I asked. You know, the wooden shoes? The Dutch "clogs" dancers wear in Holland? Oh, no, no. That's not this. This clogging is done with more regular looking shoes with tape nailed or glued to the toe and the heel. No wooden shoes here. As a matter of fact, at practice, the women, many of them anyway, wore tennis shoes - with taps glued on the bottoms.

Practice attire also consisted of jeans, pants, or shorts. Performance attire, though, consists of short, fluffy, flouncy, kind of like square dancing dresses only shorter, with lots of leg showing.

Verna, another Sixth Gate Clogger, filled me in on just how much fun the performances are. She's the group's master of ceremonies; she loves the job. She knows so much about the history of the dance. And her enthusiasm for it just bubbles over. She figures it's a way to skip all that dusting and vacuuming and those household chores and go clogging instead.

Difference in age

I could have signed up right then and there! But there was this age difference, you know. And then the three solid hours of dancing, twice a week, and the 50 performances a year. At almost 40 years old, I couldn't keep up with that, not

But my heart and feet were captivated. I felt like I could elack and tap and turn and jump,

For Daddy, being there matters

Father knows best: When it comes to children fathers James Dolan (left) and Christopher Lee (center) have managed their time and made strong commitments to spend quality time with their children. Along with fellow father Kevin Kelly, they were part of a panel discussion on fatherhood, moderated by WDIV-TV news anchor Emery King.

Three fathers got together last week to talk about their kids. Those there to listen came away with a view of fatherhood that goes well beyond being the good provider.

"It comes down to time management," says James Dolan, principal of Carter Middle School in Warren. "You can't do everything, so you have to decide what you want to do and set priorities. You have to make changes in your life not out of need, but because you want to."

A father and grandfather, his message is one that was repeated again and again as the Child Abuse Prevention Council of Out-Wayne County supporters gathered at its annual meeting to "Celebrate Fathers!"

Joining Dolan in discussing fatherhood were Christopher Lee. the father of four children ages 6-11, and Kevin Kelly, the father of a 20-month-old son.

Offering insight into fatherhood of the '90s was Dr. John Farrar, the father of two children, a counselor at Livonia Churchill High School and adjunct professor at Madonna and Eastern Michigan universities.

The panel looked at fatherhood in three ways - how they juggle their work schedules and other demands and share parental responsibilities with their wives and others and the resources they have identified as helpful. Their comments painted a portrait of fatherhood that goes beyond the traditional concept of being the good provider.

According to Farrar, the roles of mother and father are merging, and while some may say "only a mother | For Lee, it was the lack of not loves the smell of a dirty diaper, today's father sees a correlation between being a good father and the number of activities he performs, specifically diaper changes.

"Raising kids is an adventure," Farrar said, "We all have ideas in our heads about raising children and our behavior flows from those ideas. The common thread here is that being a father is important, and each of these men has chiseled a notion in their head that the role of the father is important."

That was a part of the message Dolan, a Royal Oak resident and father of five adult children, conveyed. For him, it is important to do things with children. When his children were young, he was a coach at and member of the Shrine Grade School's Board of Education and Dad's Club and Royal Oak Tball coach.

While his wife stayed home, they worked together and shared the responsibilities for raising their children. Since he was the educator, he was better with homework. She was the better listener and would read to the children, he said.

"We worked out our priorities and we never made decisions without sitting down and talking it over," he said. "When our oldest son went to college, she had to go to work full time. It showed she cared and set an example, It's definitely important to do things together."

Past shapes present

having a father growing up that motivated him to be the father he is today.

"I used what I lost as a child to regain it through my children," he said, "I'm there; I'm part of their lives. I take them to school, I pick them up, I do the homework and I take them to dance classes. Saturdays and Sundays are theirs. It's quality time for my children and my wife."

It is no easy feat for Lee, an Ecorse resident. He works as a Hi Lo driver at Dana-Spicer in Pontiac and commutes 150 miles each day. He has chosen to work midnights so he can spend time with his children and squeezes in sleep while they are at school and for a few hours before leaving for work. He also set aside two hours each evening for quality time with his wife.

He also does volunteer work with the schools and coaches and helps out with the summer baseball

"It's very stressful and strenuous on me, but I'd rather do this to have the quality time with my children because my father was not there for me," he said. "There's a lot on my shoulders, but I enjoy it. I'm kind of a homebody. I love being home with my wife, I love my wife." Kelly's "good fortune" is the two 24-hour shifts he works as a Detroit firefighter. His schedule gives him five days in which to spend with his 20-month-old son Kendall.

"I include my son in my activities," he said, "I don't like to be away from my son, so I take him with me. I take him to as many things as I can and only juggle: things when I have to."

Born and raised in Detroit, Kelly is committed to the city. He is

Parenting tips to help fathers

It's not easy being a father, but fathers shouldn't think they aren't as important as mothers. The roles might not always be the same, but their interest in their children can make a significant dif-

Children don't need perfect fathers; they need caring and involved fathers. • Give your children hugs and kisses often. Children need physical comfort and contact from their fathers.

• Tell them how much they mean to you.

• Praise their efforts, especially if they don't succeed; teach them the importance of doing their best.

• Give your children rules and make sure your rules are clear to them; don't say maybe when you mean no.

• Explain your rules; it's important that children understand why they need to follow those rules.

• Be consistent with your rules; children get confused when you seem to change your mind without any reason.

• Use effective discipline to help children develop self-control; set limits and encourage children to feel good about themselves.

• Gain your children's trust by listening to them when they come to you with a problem. Children will welcome your guidance, but are not likely to listen to lectures.

 Be honest with your children; admit your mistakes and teach your children the importance of taking responsibility and making amends. • Tell your children that they can come to you with any questions, otherwise they may receive inappropriate answers from other people.

• Remember that you are your children's role model; they are looking to you to learn how a responsible and mature adults

 Do household chores with your children; make them feel good about helping you and teach them that fathers also share household duties.

• Encourage your children to think for themselves; guide and help them with their decision making process.

Auction attracts generous bidders

The sound of nervous laughter could be heard at times last Friday in Laurel Manor as anxious guests tried to outbid one another all in fun and for a worthwhile cause - scholarships for students at Madonna University.

The university's ninth annual Scholarship Dinner Auction drew more than 400 supporters and raised more than $260,000 for student scholarships.

Items such as a weekend getaway including four tickets to a Notre Dame home game went for $5,000. A Lalique crystal statue of the Madonna drew lots of attention and was sold for $3,250 to Madonna University trustee William Phillips and his wife, Brid-

The annual items - very much in demand - are the Name Your Street sign, which was purchased by trustee Jean Coor. The sign is located on a prominent spot on the Madonna campus.

Another annual favorite, the eight-hour Lake Erie fishing trip with Sister Lauriana and Captain Fred Benson, went to William Johnson, owner of Burton Manor in Livonia, for $1,200.

An original oil painting by Canadian artist Littorio Del Signore, will hang in the main entrance of Madonna University's Residence Hall, thanks to James and Earlene Bonadeo of Plymouth. Bonadeo, a Madonna trustee, and his wife bid $6,000 for the painting and donated it to back to the university. In return, the Bonadeos received a framed, sign lithograph of the painting.

This year's auction paid special attention to Madonna University's 50th anniversary. General chairpersons Jerry and Justine Raymond hosted a champagne and roses reception, greeting guests with a yellow rose in honor of the golden anniversary.

The silent auction featured gold-colored mystery bags that went for $50 each. Gold bars were placed on the silent auction tables containing dinners and get-away weekends, with bidding starting at $80 for each.

Adding to the celebration was Joe Weaver, retired editorial director of what was formerly WJBK-TV2, as master of ceremonies and an appearance by Miss Michigan 1996 Jonnifor Lynn Drayton.

Topping off the evening was the drawing for the 1997 Cadil-

Gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered people have a unique sacrament to offer the world and the religious community - coming out. When Kelly talks about sharing the parenting, it includes not only his wife, but their families. The Kellys, he explained, made a choice to live near their families to "not only share parenting with each other but with our families."

Making specific choices

"We made a choice to live near our families to share the good times and have support," he said. "You have to yes to the people who say yes, they want to help. The big thing is to share the responsibility."

Kelly, however, admits that saying yes to help is easy when he needs to get something done, but other times he "feels guilty." And on the flip side, he has learned to say no and not overextend himself.

Each of the fathers has found different people and institutions have served as resources in the effort to be good fathers.

Kelly credits his church and being raised in a Christian, nonviolent faith, his family and friends. He also points to his parents as role models and the fact that they stayed together even when his father was drinking. It has given him the faith "that we will be here for the long haul." "We planned out our relationship," he added: "We went to school before we got married, we had a home before we started our family. We did it in the proper sequence which makes it easier to be a father and a husband."

Lee credits his late grandmother, the woman he met as a teen who invited him to play his guitar at her church and the minister who "made me feel complete." They gave him "meaning, hope, faith and a belief in what I can and will do." he said.

Raised "in a faith community," Dolan sees that as a resource for fathers. It shaped how he saw himself, how he viewed what is right and wrong and what was expected of him. Likewise, he views education as extremely important, but sees it as failing to teach children what is right and wrong.

Asked how to avoid the "wait until your father gets home" syndrome, Dolan pointed out that both the man and wife have to be equal disciplinarians, one should not have to wait on the other, a concept Farrar agrees

"The line should be 'I need to talk to your mother or your father,' " he said. "People see it as opposites on the continuum, but is possible as a parent to be affectionate and an effective disciplinarian. Children need both simultaneously to grow up to be responsible adults.

WRC program earns state honors

The Schooleraft College Women's Resource Center's program "From Chocolate Chips to Micro Chips" has been named an exemplary college program by the Community College Services Unit of the Michigan Department of Education.

The DOE cited it as "one of the best in the state," The 16-week program is designed to help displaced homemakers get back into the work force:

Displaced homemakers, either female or male, are defined as those who have worked in the home for a period of time, have diminished marketable skills, and must seek paid employment because of the wage earner's death, divorce, descrtion, separation or disability.

In the "From Chocolate Chips to Micro Chips" program, students come to class or activities twice a week for 122 hours of involvement and instruction.

"The "Chips" program is very structured and includes orientation, assessment, tuition help. study skills, group and other support activities, two hours of group physical activity each week, assistance in resume writing, a Job Club, referrals, job placement and a boutique for free professional clothing.

There also is a two-hour col-

"This is the key place," said Nancy Swanborg, WRC director. "Participants come out with an official college transcript,"

When participants complete the program, they often go into vocational education programs to further their skill levels in preparation for a job.

Swanborg estimates that the earning potential of the program since it started in 1986 is more than $15 million, based on the initial wages paid after participants were first hired.

The "Chips" program is part of the Carl D. Perkins Act funding, which provides support to single parents, displaced homemakers and single pregnant women enrolled in vocational education programs. So far this year, 255 persons have participated in the Perkins grant program at Schooleraft.

St. Mary's readies for Pascha

While Easter day is already long forgotten by many American Protestants and Roman Catholics, Orthodox Christians all over the world are still preparing for and anticipating their Easter or "Pascha" celebration on Sunday, April 27.

For St. Mary Antiochian Orthodox Church in Livonia, this year's celebration will be a very special.

In April 1996, just prior to the special Holy Week of services before Easter, St. Mary's Church facility was devastated by an accidental fire which consumed its entire contents.

While this tragedy was an emotional strain and inconvenience, St. Mary's parishioners never doubted that, through the leadership of the Rev. George H. Shalhoub, their church building would be restored. This year, the community of St. Mary will celebrate Pascha on with a special fervor and with a renewed sense of resurrection.

Commonly referred to in the west as Easter, the Eastern Orthodox "Pascha" is preceded by the Great Lenten fasting period and stretches 40 days after the actual celebration of the Resurrection to the feast of Christ's Ascension.

the most ancient Christian term, refers to the passing over "from death to life, and from earth to heaven" affected by Jesus's Resurrection. In the Bible Jesus is referred to as the "paschal lamb" (see 1 Cor. 5:7).

The difference in calculating the day of Pascha goes back to early Christian times. For the Orthodox, the celebration may fall on the same day as the western Easter, or as long as four weeks after, as is the case this year.

The main difference in timing occurs because the Orthodox Church makes its calculation based upon the Jewish Passover which falls on the 14th day of Nisan, a lunar-based calculation. Pascha is dated each year on the first Sunday following the spring equinox, the date the Jewish Passover fell in the year that Jesus was crucified.

St. Mary's Holy Week and

Pascha services this year (to be held in Cultural Center at 18100 Merriman Road) include the Bridegroom Service at 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, April 21 and 22; Holy Unction Service at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 23; Service of the Twelve Passion Gospels at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 24, and the Great and Holy Friday Services at 8 p.m., The word Pascha, or Passover Friday, April 25, Divine Liturgy at 10 a.m. and Pascha (Easter)

Bishop Demetri

Service at 10 p.m. Saturday, April 26.

On Sunday, April 27, the Agape (Love) Vespers with Bishop Demetri presiding and including readings of the Gospel in many languages will be at 1:30 p.m. A children's Easter egg hunt will follow.

The community is invited to participate in the services, especially people able to read the Gospel in Asian languages, such as Chinese, Japanese, Vietnamese and Korean. For more information, call the church office at (313) 422-0010.

Recruit Jordan returns as Titan

By Neal Zipser Staff Writer

A familiar name is on his way back home to play basketball for University of Detroit Mercy.

Michael Jordan, who played bas-ketball at Redford Catholic Central, from 1994-96, recently signed to play basketball at UDM beginning in the fall. Jordan spent the past year attending a post graduate school outside of Boston.

The announcement may have surprised some people who knew Jordan more for his famous name than for his basketball skills.

But according to the 6-foot-6 guard-forward, his game has drastically improved thanks to a growth spurt and superior coaching.

"I was 6-4 and 195 pounds at CC, and now I'm 6-6 and 215 pounds," he said. "Every past of my game has improved drastically. My work ethic has been better and the coaching here is the best I've ever had."

Jordan helped lead Cushing Academy of Ashburnham, Mass. to a 15.7 record in a league he considered "more stacked" than the Catholic League. He averaged 22 points and a team-high 11 rebounds. Jordan joined 6-5 point guard Jared Hardwick as one of the state's most potent one-two punches. Hardwick was honored as a member of the Massachusetts Dream Team, while Jordan was named to the All-New England Prep Team.

"Offensively, everything went through Michael and Jared," Cushing coach Bill Wenning said. "Michael was our outside scoring

Butler, Indiana State, New Hampshire and Akron were other universities that courted Jordan. But all it took to sway the 18-year old was a trip to UDM during spring break and a chance to meet UDM coach Perry Watson and his staff. "Once I met the coaching staff I knew that was the place for me," he said Tuesday from his residence at Cushing. "There was no need visiting any other schools." "We saw him his senior season at CC and Perry knew that he was a tough-nose kid who just needed some seasoning," UDM assistant coach Mickey Barrett said. "He's a very good shooter and at 6-6 he'll be able to shoot over people." After being a part-time starter during his senior season at CC, Jordan struggled through the remainder of the year. He decided another year of school, along with the guidance of a renown coaching staff, could fine-tune his game as a player - and more importantly as a per-

"It was a mutual decision between me and my family that I attend this school," Jordan said. "Cushing is well known out East to have an excellent basketball program and play tough competition. It's a tight community here and not only have my basketball skills have improved, but so have my grades. But the biggest change has been my mental approach on the court."

Wenning said Jordan made tremendous strides during the sea-

"He was very intent on scoring early in the season, but he learned to let the game come to him and not force his shots," he said. "He came a long way this season and I really thing his best basketball is still ahead of him."

According to Jordan, Watson has assured him that he will not be redshirted and have a role on the team next season. Jordan, who will have four years of eligibility remaining, will join Livonia Franklin's 6-8 standout Matt Bauman as freshman on the team.

"I'll probably play the three-man," he said. "Coach Watson likes my outside game and thinks I can be effective there."

When I left CC, I never thought be playing for UD.".

teams, placing fourth behind Hartland, Brighton and Northville-Novi.

Competing in what was arguably the toughest regional in the state, Farmington scored 139:55 — the best ever recorded by a Farmington team — but finished fifth and missed qualifying for the state meet by a niere 1.5 points.

ALL-AREA FIRST TEAM

Sarah Nolan, juntor, Farmington: Nolan came back from a potential season ending back injury to finish the season with a strong performance at the state finals.

Notan achieved her highest all around score (35.85) of the season at the state meet and finished third in Division II allaround.

She also was all-state on bars, beam and vault. It was her second time at state, having finished 10th in the allaround last year.

In the regional, Nolan placed second on bars (9.25), sixth on vault (8.75), seventh on floor exercise (9.2) and fifth in the all-around (35.8). Nolan was ninth in the all-around (35.55) at the Western Lakes meet, seventh on beam (8.85) and ninth on vault (8.7).

"Sarah is one of the best competitors I've ever coached," coach Jeff Dwyer said. "She's able to put aside any nervousness and just concentrate on the task at hand. She usually accomplishes what she sets out to do.

"It will be hard to top what she did this year. But she has a great opportunity next year, and she definitely has the potential to do as well or better."

Brook Rubin, sophomore, Farmington: Rubin has been a solid performer for two seasons. She was a state qualifier as a freshman but just missed on vault and floor in a difficult regional this year.

She had an outstanding WLAA meet, placing sixth in the all-around with a season high score of 35,55. Rubin also was second on beam (9.3) and eighth on bars (8.9) in the WLAA.

Rubin averaged 34.40 in all around competition. Her high scores were 8.6 on vault, 9.0 on bars, 9.3 on beam and 9.3 on floor.

"Brook was our leader in every competition," Dwyer said. "She was consistently one of the top all-arounders in every big meet, For a sophomore, that was outstanding.

"She makes the sport look really casy. She's very elegant and she makes it look like an art. She's one of the most dedicated gymnasts I've had. She's in the gynt year round. She's already started working out for next year.

Liz Fitzgerald, freehman, Ply. Canton: What Fitzgerald accomplished as a freshman is almost scary, particularly considering she took a year off from gymnastics before returning to compete for the Chiefs.

Chosen as Canton's rookle of the year, Fitzgerald "didn't get it together until mid-season," according to Canton coach John Cunningham. "You could see her improvement week-to-week.

"She's taking the steps that will make her an elite gymnast in the years to come."

At the state regional meet, Fitzgerald placed 10th in the all-around (33.55); at the WLAA championships, she was 13th (34.15).

Together with teammate and firstteam selection Marcie Emerick, Fitzgerald gives Cunningham something "exciting to look forward to."

Marcie Emerick, sophomore, Pty. Canton: What Emerick managed to accomplish in the past year is truly amazing.

On the Chiefs' state runners up team of last season, she was "sixth or seventh" best, according to her coach. With the loss of several of those gynnasts, Emerick's stock rose - and she rose to the challenge.

"She did a lot of work during the offseason and, if not for her strained back, she would have done even better at state meet," Cunningham sald, "She's going to be someone to beat next vear.'

Both (Emerick and Fitzgerald) are team leaders, someone the others look up to," said Cunningham. "They haven't yet reached their potential, and it's not because they haven't worked at it. They just need time.

*They made quantum leaps this year. and they have quantum leaps yet to Katle Boogren, senior, John Glenn: Boogren was Glenn's most consistent gymnast and led the Rockets to the state finals as a team qualifier.

She qualified for state individually on beam and would have qualified for the all-around competition if not for a fall in floor exercise.

Her season best was 34,35 in the allaround. She was 12th in the WLAA meet (34.25) and tied for ninth in the regional (33.1). She averaged 33.5 for the sea-

Kristin Kosik, senior, Ply. Salem: Kosik isn't just an athlete who enjoys competing. She excels, at everything she goes after.

The defending WLAA champion in the high jump, Kosik has been Salem's leader in gymnastics the past two seasons, during which she has served as team captain: Her consistency is exceptional, Koslk Kosik's grade-point average is another indication of her drive for excellence: 4.02, making her a National Honor Society member and class valedictorian.

the mid-teens at sunrise I wondered why on earth I was even thinking about fishing. Yet there I was last week, bundled up like a Eskimo on a pilgrimage, waiting to motor out of Lexington Harbor and into the southern waters of Lake Huron for some early spring salmon fishing. Although the weather was more suited for ice fishing, I felt fortunate that we were even able to get out on the lake on such a frigid morning. The lower unit on the motor of Captain Rod Cope's 24-foot Sea Ray froze-up during the arctic drive to the lake. Fortunately he was able to the episode added to my concern about the cold. When Cope ran his finger along the side of the boat and came up with a pile of frost we all seemed to silently agree that the prospect was bleak for a cooler full of tasty King salmon.

"It's a little cold, but we'll give it a try," said Cope, who then admitted, "I really don't know what to expect."

The shallow water in the southern end of Lake Huron provides anglers with terrific early spring salmon fishing opportunities.

The warm water triggers the smelt's spawning runs into the dozens of rivers, streams and cuts that slice into Michigan's thumb. When the smelt move in toward the river mouths, salmon leave their winter holds in the middle of the lake and move in toward shore to feed on the large numbers of baitfish gathered in the shallow waters.

> Anglers have great success at this time of year by trolling body plugs and spoons just off shore in 12- to 20-feet of water. Planner boards and outriggers help get the lures out from beneath the boat in such shallow water

The water temperature was hovering around 38- to-40 degrees last week, which seemed to be a little

Good thing no one told the fish.

We found a good number of salmon but they were out a little deep, in 30 to 40 feet of water, and suspended eight to 15 feet down. They were still a little sluggish because of the cold water temperatures, but with a very slow troll they were enticed into attacking our bait.

The fish should be in tight toshore next Saturday, April 26, when hundreds of anglers will gather in southern Lake Huron to participate in the 19th annual River Crab Salmon Stakes charity fishing tournament. Although the fishing is expected to be great; of even greater significance is that money raised through the tournament will benefit family service agencies statewide.

To date, the Salmon Stakes tournament has raised over $800,000.

Money is raised through the sale of $10 raffle/entry tickets, Anyone who purchases a ticket is automatically a winner because the tickets are good for $10 off dinner for two at any Chuck Muer restaurant nationwide. Raffle prizes, which will be drawn at the weigh in of the tournament, include a trip for four to Walt Disney World; a trip for two to the Napa Valley wine country; a trip for two to Toronto; hundreds of dollars in gift certificates redeemable at any Chuck Muer Restaurant nationwide; and a charter fishing trip for four.

Patriots prevail in 8

Livonia Franklin earned its first baseball win of the season Monday with a 3-2 victory in eight innings over visiting Northville.

With the victory, the Patriots are 1-2 overall and 1-0 in the Western Division of the Western Lakes Activities Association:

Nick Anagnostopoulos and David Wampler each figured prominently in the victory.

In the bottom of the eighth, Wampler doubled, went to third on a sacrifice and came home with one-out on a suicide squeeze bunt by Anagnostopoulos.

Wampler, a senior right-hander, pitched the first seven innings, throwing 100 pitches. He struck out 13 and allowed just three hits. Anagnostopoulos came on in the eighth to retire Northville in order to pick up the save.

The two also teamed up for two of Franklin's four total hits.

"Wampler has been tough all season," Franklin coach Jim Karoub said, "Each game he strikes out 10. 11, 12. He throws very, very hard and makes the game easy for our defense. We've got to give him more support."

Northville's Scott Vigh, in relief, took the loss. Starter Joe Wiley gave up just two hits in seven innings while fanning 13.

. W.L. CENTRAL 7, JOHN GLENN 6: Senior infielder Raj Mittra went 3-for 4 and singled home Derek Moore with the game-winnig run with two strikes and two outs in the bottom of the seventh, giving Walled Lake Central the WLAA-Lakes Division win Monday over Westland John Glenn.

Mittra's game-winning hit came off Greg McCollum.

Junior outfielder Jeff Mathison went 3-for-3 as Central improved to 4-4 overall and 1-0 in the Lakes. Ethan Amolsch pitched five innings, striking out six, to pick up the win. Gordle Smith went 3-for-3 with three RBI for Glenn, Tim Reeves added a double and solo homer (to put the Rockets up 6-5 in the seventh). Sean Heard contributed a two-run homes in the third to give Glenn a 4-1 lead. John Fedulchak also had two hits for Glenn.

Paul Merandi, the losing pitcher, gave up nine hits and four walks, while striking out seven in 6% innings.

Glenn falls to 2-2 overall and 0-1 in the Lakes. -. N. FARMINGTON 6, STEVENSON 3: In a WLAA-Lakes Division game Monday, host North Farmington (2-0, 1-0) pulled out the victory with a three-run sixth against Livonia Stevenson (1-1, 0-1).

A Mike Gleeson bunt, coupled with a Stevenson throwing error, brought Chad Feldman home with the game-winning run. Feldman and Jeff Seaman each had three hits for the Raiders. Andrew Weitz knocked in a pair of runs.

Tony Dattillo led Stevenson with two hits and two RBi, white Todd Wilson and Mike Allison each had RBI singles.

Kirk Taylor, in relief of starter Jeff Trzos, was the winning pitcher.

Stevenson starter Mike Allison worked four innings, allowing two runs over four innings. Brent Wojtynlak, in relief, suffered the loss.

•W.L. WESTERN 18, CHURCHILL 2: On Monday, senior first baseman John Wilson had six RBI, including a two-run homer. as Walled Lake Western (4-1, 1-0) took five innings to mercy visiting Livonia Churchill (1-2, 0-1) in a WLAA-Western Division encounter. Wilson had two hits, while junior shortstop Ryan Waselewsky added a three RBI, including a two-run homer.

innings, fanning nine.

Churchill pitchers gave up 11 walks.

*CLARENCEVILLE 10, LUTHERAN N'WEST 4: A strong relief effort by Bob Wyss gave Livonia Clarenceville (1-1) as Metro Conference victory Monday at Rochester Hills Lutheran North-

Wyss worked the final three innings, fanning six and walking just one. He did not allow a hit or run.

His bases loaded single gave Clarenceville the lead for keeps, 5.4, in the top of the seventh. The Trojans scored seven runs on five hits in the seventh to put the game away. Dave Lemmon added two doubles and two RBI.

·LUTHERAN WESTLAND 10, HAMTRAMCK 4: Ben Meyer continued his torrid hitting, going 5-for-5 with a double and three RBI, leading Lutheran High Westland (2-1, 1-0) to a Metro Conference triumph against the host Cosmos (1-1, 0-1). The Warriors collected a total of 14 hits as Joe Pruchnik and Mike Baltz each contributed a pair.

The Shamrocks won the first game, 5-4, in eight innings before taking the nightcap, 10-0, in five innings because of the mercy rule.

CC, which improved to 4-2 overall and 2-2 in the Catholic League Central Division, needed a little luck and some timely hitting over the last two innings to win the first game.

With two outs and a runner, Josh DelCorvo, in scoring position in the seventh, Matt Firlik sent a ground ball toward the first baseman.

The throw to the pitcher covering first base was wild, sending DelCorvo home for the tying run.

The Shamrocks won 5-4 when Anthony Tomey singled up the middle with the bases loaded and two outs in the eighth to score Joe Saah from third base. Matt Ksiazek earned the pitching victory in five innings of Vicki Malkowski had two hits, including a double, and drove in two runs for Madonna. Vickers chipped in two hits - one of them a double - and an RBI, and Shawna Greene had a hit and two runs scored.

Poor defense again plagued the Crusaders. They committed four errors in the first game and five in the doubleheader.

*MADONNA 15-10, SIENA HTS. 1-4: The bats were booming for Madonna University's softball team Sunday against visiting Siene Heights, and that made for a short double header - with the mercy rule applied to both games.

Seven Mile Crossing may have new tenant

New events take center stage at area parks

Whether it's live music, movies in the outdoors or children's storytelling, Wayne County parks will offer more activities this summer than at any time in its nearly 80-year history.

The expanded events schedule is part of the new parks millage that was passed last year. The 1/4 mill will generate $40 million worth of parks improvements over the next five years.

"The parks millage just went into effect last winter, but there's already been a remarkable amount of growth in the Wayne County parks system," said Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara. "This summer we'll have something going on almost every day at one of our parks and that wouldn't have been possible without this millage."

Giant video projection in full color and stereo surround sound will set the stage for Movies in the Parks — a series of three family movie screenings at three of Wayne County's parks. The Concerts in the Parks series will feature six concerts at six different park locations and a variety of jazz, country, top 40 and opera artists. Six different locations will also host the Children's Evening Out, which will feature children's entertainment acts including music, magic and puppet shows. All of these new events are free.

Jazz fans can enjoy an extra day of Jazz on the River at the county's Elizabeth Park in Trenton. This event made its debut in 1996 and was so well received it has been expanded to two days — Aug. 16 and 17.

In addition to more jazz artists, the event will add a boat parade and fireworks to the festival.

Walkers, runners, roller bladers and bicyclists will have the entire weekend to enjoy Hines Park, as Saturday in the Park expands to Saturday and Sunday in the Park. Six miles of Hines Drive between Ann Arbor Trail and Outer Drive will be closed to motor traffic every Saturday and Sunday between May 3 and Sept. 28 between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

A bigger and better children's area at Elizabeth Park will add more children's entertainment and games to the Somewhere in Time event in Trenton on Sunday, Sept. 14. This event recreates Elizabeth Park's environment the way it was in the late 1920s. Antique auto displays, trolley rides, river boat rides and musical entertainment provide a trip back to the early days of the park.

For a complete 1997 events schedule or information on other parks programs and facilities, call the Wayne County parks office at (313) 261-1990.

be approved on April 23. Duke Investments, Inc. is the current owner of the buildings.

If negotiations are successful, Prentiss Properties Trust, a real estate investment firm, is expected to assume Duke's contractual responsibilities on the lease with Schoolcraft.

Duke is leaving the Detroit area and had examined possibly selling the buildings with the land — if the college accepted an offer to sell the land — or Duke could sell just the buildings. But Schoolcraft officials want to hang onto the property because of its prime location - just west of I-275 - and land value.

Butch Raby, vice president of business services at Schoolcraft College, told trustees at their March business meeting Duke's sale of the buildings is expected to materialize this month. Once Duke reaches a deal with Prenties. Raby expects to have documents prepared for the Schoolcraft board to approve.

Prentiss Properties Trust was initially founded in Dallas by Michael Prenties in 1979.

The company owns 87 properties in 10 major markets," Raby. said. Twenty-eight of the properties are office buildings, with over 3.8 million rentable square feet."

Prentiss owns one Class A office building in Southfield at One Northwestern Plaza It manages this facility out of its Midwestern region headquarters in Chicago.

Prentiss wants to continue the option to develop an adjacent vacant parcel, but that firm wants revise Duke and Schoolcraft's quarter-to-quarter arrangement, Raby said. Prentiss wants a date certain option agreement to give the parties assurances that Prentiss would be expecting to exercise that option by 2002, Raby said. Schoolcraft also may need to execute a "nondisturbance and attornment" agreement that would require Schoolcraft to assume responsibility for a Schoolcraft Development Authority (SDA) if the SDA ever defaults.

That document essentially assures Prentise and any lender that their agreements will remain intact should the SDA default.

design for singles

By Sharon Chris Special Willer

While many singles can benefit from interior design advice for living alone, the reality is that most of my business is requested by the recently divorced man.

At the risk of sounding as if I'm discriminating, it has been my experience that the newly alone man is establishing a new household with very little materially – a sofa, the dog and a can opener come to mind.

The newly single woman, who may be emotionally and financially drained as well, seems to have a clearer sense of what she wants in her new home, how it should look and, yes, a more practical view of what it costs to set up a household.

I do hope my insights can work equally as well for both, even though my views seem more male oriented.

The key to setting up your new home is determining how you want to live in it. When I'm working with a client I try to get a lot of lifestyle information.

So, start with your grand scheme. Will you be entertaining? Will it be the boys for poker, or will it be business entertaining or meetings? Will you have children visiting on the weekend? How casual are you, or how formal? Will you cook at home, or will you mostly be eating out? Do you travel a lot? Will you need a housekeeper?

In the initial interview, I often look at the way a client is dressed. You may find by opening your closet door that the colors you love to live with are all right there. I also may get a chance to look around his office – it's helpful in determining the "things" he likes.

Your surroundings, too, will play a big part. For example, are you in an apartment or condo? Do you plan to stay there, or is it temporary while you look for a house? Remember, all these considerations may have an impact on your initial budget, or how much you're willing to spend if you're planning to move on.

Newly single, you may find that you need a lot at a time when your budget and resources are small. It can be done, but plan to be realistic about your goals.

We know you want the big screen TV, VCR and surround-sound stereo. The payback is that you might be sitting and/or sleeping on the floor. For instance, furnishing a bedroom is a lot more than buying a bed and drosser.

Sharon Chris

You also need mattresses, pillows, mattress pads, sheets, blankets and maybe a comforter. You may even have to buy hangers for the closet!

Ideally, you will establish a budget that allows you to be flexible and stretch a little. The time may come when you find you really do want that answering machine, or wine rack or window coverings or a piece of art.

Also, don't think that you must buy a number of things with a small amount of money. Think long term and make some good investments to enjoy now and use in a future residence.

This is where a professional designer can be very beneficial. He or she can save you money by knowing where the good values are; will save you time, and your time is money; and will develop a plan helping to create something special that makes you feel at home.

Above all, this is your home now. You're starting over, but you're not starting empty. You want to create a sense of "wholeness," something complete, that's not a "macho stereotype," but an environment that reflects who you are and how you want to live.

Some of my clients get very involved in the design process, many say "just do it." In the end, a great deal of my reward comes when I finish a bachelor interior and he or she says "I'm home." And means it.

Sharon Chris is an interior designer from Troy. She is a member of Michigan Design Center's "Designer On Call" program. For a complimentary one-hour consultation with a designer such as Chris, call toll-free 1-888-DIAL MDC.

Nothing batty about vital bats

MARTY FIGLEY

Several weeks ago I spoke at the Lansing Home & Garden Show and learned how important bats are to our environment. I also learned that many Michigan bats are tiny little innocent creatures that have gotten a lot of "bad press" through the years, along with larger bals.

Bats are quite good at devouring unsuspecting unwelcome garden pests – and human pests such as the mosquito! Representatives of the Organization for Bat Conservation were at the show with several of the soft little creatures, and all who heard a young lady speak about bats went away with many myths dispelled. The children were fascinated.

Some of the things we learned were:

Bats aren't "blind as a bat," but rather have eyesight similar to that of a dog. They need warmth to survive and come out from their roosts in the evening when insects are most prevalent. One little brown bat can eat 600 to 1,000 mosquito-sized insects each hour. The Upper Peninsula is home to approximately 1 million bats during hibernation, where they gather in a cave near Iron Mountain.

Most bats in Michigan are found in bat houses, human dwellings, trees or abandoned mines. We probably haven't been aware of how small bats are, so haven't recognized them if they are flying around in our yards. Here in lower Michigan bats are often seen near lakes, streams or rivers, often during sunset.

A bat house on your property encourages them to roost and enjoy the feast in your back yard; it may take a year for the bats to find your house.

Eight species of bats live in Michigan. Bats are in the Chiroptera (pronounced cur-aptera) order of creatures and are the only mammals that can fly. Their wings resemble a human hand with four fingers that are elongated and a thumb.

Megachiroptera bats mainly eat fruit and nectar and live in the old world tropics. Microchiroptera bats are generally very small and mainly eat insects (although in other parts of the world they eat other food) and are one type living in Michigan. They find their food through high-pitched sounds (called echolocation) that hit the insects and bounce back to the bat's ears:

The Little Brown Bat, Myotis lucifugus, is the one you will probably see most readily in this area. They are very small to medium-sized with brown fur and emerge to forage for their food at dusk.

There are several things we can do to encourage these creatures to stick around and help rid our outdoor spaces of mosquitoes and other insects. If there is a good water source, a small pond for instance, insects are attracted to it and therefore bats will come.

Trees and those that are dying or dead provide a natural habitat for the bats. If this isn't possible, piles of logs, shrubs or mixed woodland are good sites.

Night-flying insects feed on the nectar of sweet-scented flowers, so bats will be attracted to that area of the property. Evening primrose, nicotiana, sweet rocket and soapwort are all desirable, as well as herbs such as borage, chives, mint, marjoram and lemon balm. Solitary bats may find a spot to roost in climbing vines such as honeysuckle, ivy, white jasmine or dogrose.

Another way to provide a feeding ground is to leave part of the lawn unmowed during the summer, which increases the insect population whose larvae feed on grasses.

Mercury vapor lights attract insects, which in turn attract the bats.

Bat houses aren't just a phase but can really provide a perfect place for bats to roost. The design of bat houses must be built to specifications to attract them.

The newer designed houses provide easy access to the houses and are designed to be temperature efficient (bats don't like cold weather). Some contain several chambers so more bats can inhabit the house and cuddle up to stay warm. Dark-colored houses retain the most heat.

For meat lovers - the beef is back

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

Meat is back in a big way - steaks are definitely being served (big and rare) and there are "houses" actual being devoted to them.

With the concern over fat and cholesterol, I'm in a quandary, as to why now? I guess if I'm honest with myself and believe the trends that I closely watch, and share with all of you - it's truly that old comfort thing. As with almost all good things, the moderation issue is key. It seems the steak restaurants don't necessarily agree with me they are huge! Some of the steak house are selling steaks that are almost the size of a cow. Morton's of Chicago (in Southfield) is selling Porterhouse steaks that are a full 48 ounces (for 1-2 people).

You do realize in the dietitians world of numbers, most recipes are designed and calculated nutritionally for 3 1/2 to 5 ounces of meat per meal. Morton's is selling big steaks, and plenty of them.

"Where's the Beef?" may resurface for another go-round in the ad world, and the timing is right on. This may be a great time to do a steak party at home. Invite some friends, make sure they are all carnivores, call your local butcher, or favorite grocery, and place your order (I don't suggest 48 ounces per person). If you want to invite your friends by sending an invitation, it might be fun to get some actual photos from the National Cattleman's Beef Association - Chicago Office (312) 467-5520 or the USDA Meatand Poultry Hot Line 1-800-535-4555 automated system or real folks 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Use a color copier or your computer art program, and entitle your invitation - Let's Meat.

In preparation of your steaks (whatever cut you choose), decide how you would like to prepare them; you can grill them in- or outdoors, broil, or pan saute them. Le Creuset Cookware has several brand new grill pans available, as well as their brand new Oven with Ribbed Reversible Grill-Lid this fabulous cast iron over enamel roaster has a lid that doubles as a grill pan - two for the price of one!

Another idea is to do the steaks table side with the use of a small gas burner and pan or grill (Burton makes the gas burners, they can be purchased at Kitchen Glamor Shops, upscale hardware stores - in the camping section, or camping stores. Oriental brands of the gas burners are available, and can be found in Asian grocery or gift shops). Make sure you buy the can(s) of butane fuel you need to make your burner operational.

The best tool for checking doneness (or lack of it in my case of rare, almost mooing) is the instant read thermometers (sometimes called contact thermometers). They have them in packages at Sam's Club, or sold individually at all kitchen shops. These wonderful thermometers will check everyone's steak for the perfect amount of pink!

If a Morton's of Chicago 48-ounce steak intrigues you, pay them a visit at . One Town Square in Southfield, for reservations call: (810)354-6006. If interested in cooking your steaks at home, add a baked potato stuffed with cheese and chopped peanuts, a huge leafy green salad splashed with some Balsamic Vinegar, and add some beautiful steamed Spring asparagus for a side

Some meaty tips:

Buy good quality meat

■ Pat the meat dry before cooking

■ If cooking the meat in a pan or grill, make sure the surface off the pan or gill is well oiled.

Cook the meat over high heat

While many chefs rely on the "touch test" or "feel test" to see what point of doneness has been achieved on the meat, instant read thermometers do a great job (just don't keep poking the meat with the thermometer).

Remember the meat keeps cooking after it has been removed from the heat source, so take that into consideration of cooking time.

> CHEDDAR AND PEANUT STUFFED BAKED POTATOES

While these double stuffed potatoes are delicious, make sure your guests have no nut allergies - nuts can be deadly for some. Because the nuts are chopped and not necessarily recognizable, make sure you check with your guest before someone takes a bitel. The amount of servings will be as flexible as the amounts of each ingredient.

Baking potatoes (one per person)

Milk:

Butter

Cheddar Cheese, shredded

Peanuts (without shells), chopped (not too fine)

Salt and pepper if desired

Wash and scrub each potato, poke the potato all around with the tines of a fork. Bake in a 350 degree P. oven or microwave until the potato is tender.

Remove the polatoes from the oven, let cool down enough to handle. Slice off the top of each potato, and carefully scoop out the inside of the potato, leaving the walls and skin of the potato in tack - making the jacket. Place the inside of the polato in the bowl of a mixer, or mash in your own typical fushion - add a small amount of milk and butter, to taste. When your polato looks like mashed potatoes, add the desired amount of cheddar cheese and chopped pennuls (again to desired taste) and mix only to combine all ingredients.

Add salt and pepper if desired - adjust seasonings.

Divide the potato-cheese-nut mixture evenly between all of the potato jackets. They should appear to be quite full. Place stuffed baked potatoes on a sprayed cookie sheet, and place back in the oven. Heat the potatoes until they appear golden on top (approximately 15-20 minutes, or longer if your potatoes were out of the oven for a long time. Serve as a side with your steak!

BALSAMIC VINAIGRETTE

Yield: approximately 1 cup of dressing

3 tablespoons Balsamic Vinegar

2 whole cloves (small) or 1 large clove of garlic, peeled

1 1/2 teaspoons light brown sugar

3-4 anchovies

Salt and freshly ground pepper

3/4 cup good quality Olive Oil

In a food processor, fitted with the steel S blade, or a blender, place all of the ingredients except for the olive oil, gradually add the oil as the processor is going. Process until mixed. Adjust seasonings (you may not want any salt at all with the saltiness of the anchovies. Splash desired amount of vinnigrette over your washed and dried salad greens.

Modernism streamlines design

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN Staff Writer

Modernism's minimal design melds with the ornate 18th century English and contemporary furniture decorating the Bloomfield Township home of Judge Avern

Modernism, a catch-all term for 20th century design, accents the environment in nearly every room of the couple's 3,500-square foot home. Although from different eras, the burnt umber coloring of Dutch Gouda pottery displayed on an English secretary in the fover works to create warmth.

"What I like about Modernism is the way it mixes," Lois Pincus Cohn said. "It's so elegant, so simple. I like the clean lines. It's warm, not austere. It speaks to me of the many changes in this century."

The Modernism objects decorating the Cohns' home are typical of the furniture, art glass, pottery, paintings, and bronzes on display in the Michigan Modernism Exposition. The fourth annual show and sale of merchandise dedicated entirely to 20th century design runs 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, April 26, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, April 27, at the Southfield Civic Center, Evergreen Road at 10-1/2 Mile in Southfield. Tickets are $7.

Preview the show at a gala party to benefit the Detroit Area Art Deco Society 7-10 p.m. Friday, April 25 Tickets are $60 per person in advance and include hors d'ouevres, wine and entertainment. Call (810) 547-5716.

Leger's 1952 painting of a woman holding a potted plant is hung above an American Federalist table just left of the contemporary black marble fireplace in the Cohns' living room. Vibrant red, yellow, green, and blue starkly contrast the softness of the table's inlaid satinwood. Milton Avery's painting of a white dove against a red background is hung on the right. In front of the fireplace, matching gray fivelegged Art Deco chairs rest on an antique peach Bakshaish area rug from Iran

Inspired by a purchase of Tiffany candlesticks, Cohn began collecting Modernism objects and furniture last year. Everywhere the eye can see, Modernism compliments and contrasts the surroundings. In the den, pre-Columbian pottery sits atop an Art Deco end table. An ivory glow emanates from Rookwood pottery filling an upper shelf of a built-in bookcase to the right of the end table.

A black Bombay lamp lighting the Joseph Hoffman designed chairs and tables in the den is from Artspace II, Cohn's Birmingham gallery, Many of the visual arts, antiques and lighting similar to those in her home can be found in her gallery, including art works by Joan Miro, Jim Dine and Alex Katz.

"Modernism is the art of this century. Begun as a reaction to the industrial revolution, the key concept of the movement was form followed function. When I think of Modernism, I think of elegant, refined, streamlined design and curvilinear lines." History

Although Modernism was known by several different names depending on the country where it was prevalent, the theme reoccurring in all styles celebrating the 20th century was new, original, modern.

The Decorative Arts movement, founded by William Morris and John Ruskin, emerged in England at the end of the 19th century. In the United States, Gustav Stickley was the father of the American Arts and Crafts Movement. In France, the movement was known as Art Nouveau. In Austria, the Vienna Sezession, founded in 1897, led to the creation of the Wiener Werkstatte in 1902 and eventually the creation of the Bauhaus School of Design in Germany.

The Detroit Area Art Deco Society, a non-profit corporation founded in 1986, conducts tours, lectures and social events aimed at increasing public awareness of the Art Deco style and period.

A society board member, Chuck Zuccarini of Livonia, will exhibit furniture, glass, jewelry, ceramics, silver, and chrome from the late 1800s to the 1960s in the upcoming exhibition, Zuccarini sells many of the same 20th century Decorative Arts objects at his Modernage Gallery in Pontiac. At times, he finds collecting Modernism for the gallery, co-owned with Jauques Caussin, both stimulating and

"There's always something new to learn," Zuccarini said. "Art Deco, one of the styles of Modernism, was the avant-garde merchandise of its day and usually quite costly. We travel all over the country attending auctions and estate sales; it's a challenge to find objects from the era."

Ann Duke, publicist for the society, specializes in selling objects and furniture from the Arts and Crafts era. She will exhibit a 1910 Austrian ceramic handled vase, placed in a corner of the Cohns' den, offer a cozy getaway. Mission style furniture, and Mexican and Arts and Crafts jewelry at the Modernism exposition.

Duke admires the "Decorative Arts as an art form because it challenged the artist to make something functional and beautiful that adds to our daily life.

"At the end of the 18th century, decorative objects were industrialized, made by machine. Morris and Ruskin were interested in elevating the status of the worker when they initiated the Decorative Arts movement. By the 20th century, they realized they had to instill some industrial aspects in the work to make them affordable enough for everyone," said Duke, who formerly owned the Duke Gallery in "One of the nice things about Modernism is it consists of objects that are familiar to us. Most everyone can remember these items from our childhood. Either our parents or grandparents had them in their homes."

Starting business teaches lessons

LISA LUCKOW-HEALY

For some families, summer break commences the end of April when college students disassemble their dorm lofts or campus apartments and pack up the family minivan for the jaunt home.

Unless parents find tremendous pleasure in watching their students turn into beach bums, late afternoon snoozers or money spongers, many will encourage their children to go out and find summer jobs immediately while the picking is still good.

High school and middle school students dismissed for summer break in June often have to settle for the leftovers - those jobs the college students didn't want.

Whether it be a 12-year-old starting a lawn service or a 20-year-old interning at an advertising agency, summer jobs help keep young people busy during summer break,

These jobs also instill responsibility while providing that much coveted spending money parents often hope their children will save for the upcoming school year.

Many children learn a more valuable lesson when they opt to start their own business. A new kit on the market helps youngsters get started. World of Money Business Kits for Kids, produced by Summit Products Inc., has all the ingredients to assist young people age 12 and older in starting their own businesses.

Student entrepreneurs may select. from five available choices, including General Business, Baby Sitting, Car Wash, Pet Care and Lawn Mowing. Other student business ideas not covered in these kits include baking for social events, home videotaping events and computer invitation/flier design.

Youngsters considering any of the five businesses covered in the kits can benefit from valuable business information contained in each kit's handbook, business cards, fliers and invoices. An accompanying videotape features helpful facts and tips on the given business, including how to maintain a competitive edge.

In addition to providing children with the business tools to get started, the kit offers guidance on goal setting, accounting, collecting, marketing and profitability.

Youngsters who set their minds on starting their own businesses should spend at least a few hours planning their endeavor.

Parents can help their entrepreneurs work out a simple business plan that takes into account initial startup costs, ongoing expenditures (i.e. transportation, materials, marketing), profitability and the competition. Parents may want to assist their child in getting in touch with the secretary of state's office to gather necessary legal and tax informa-

When children express interest in starting their own summer or yearround businesses, it's important that parents encourage their desires and applaud their efforts.

Children need to take charge of their business planning and decision making as much as possible. One of the valuable lessons they will learn in running a business is making mistakes.

Column inspires plan for new book

JOE GAGNON

A little something happened in last week's edition of this newspaper which you could say was the catapult which is pushing me in another direction. That path which I intend to follow is leading to a new book about the teaching profession.

Now you might wonder, what in Sam Hill is an appliance technician going to write concerning the teaching business and what is it that lit the light bulb in his uneducated head.

It all started when I read a column in last Thursday's Community Life Section written by Karen Meier. I sometimes let my ego get the best of me and think I'm a pretty good column writer, but after reading what Karen wrote, I'm back on earth where I belong.

Karen wrote about her visit as an invited guest reader to children at Bulman Elementary in the Redford Union school district. I happen to know the school quite well because the principal, Valorie Williams, has been my main motivator in life for the past eight years. Karen described the teachers and students as sparkling, shining and shedding light on the future. The children were filled with excitement, spirit, electricity, enthusiasm, all rolled into one, and then she pointed out the fact the the kids stood to say the Pledge of Allegiance. She was brought to tears as she described how these young children said the pledge.

"These children did not mumble, did not fool around, shuffle feet, they did not gaze about, no. With hands on their hearts, eyes on the flag, they, every one of them, said the pledge with conviction and with spirit. And such clarity of voice, it almost sounded like a cheer. A cheer for being American."

As I finished reading Karen's beautiful story, I, too, had tears streaming down my cheeks and I realized what a rookie I am at writing for this wonderful newspaper. Karen's article has prompted me to write about the very principal, Ms. Williams, who has spent the past 25 years loving children like her own.

Before coming principal three years ago, Valorie worked in Farmington as a teacher with special talents. Her friends were other teachers and they became very close friends as well. They are a special kind of person and I fell in love with every one of them.

The social events and school functions became a part of me, so much so that I was thought to be a teacher by some students and I wore a false badge proudly.

Today Ms. Williams wears the title principal with great pride and spending many of ther own school hours to received accreditation. Her job has changed and now includes preparing and guiding teachers to perform their tasks in life. Her main focus in life is to take her fine teaching staff and make sure that every child is affected by some degree of betterment.

Of the young adults that I have met who were taught by Valorie, many comments have been about her influence on them. Karen Meier walked into that school a few weeks ago and observed in just a short time what I have known for years. That's called being smart and observant and seeing what is right there in front of your nose. That's called being a professional in the field of writing.

Thank you, Karen, because now I will write another book. It will be about Valorie Williams, her smile, her always positive attitude, her common sense approach and her professional example she always displays. It will be quite a book and just might make the best seller list in Redford and Farmington. Stay tuned.

Joe Gagnon, the Appliance Doctor, will answer your questions about maintaining and repairing large appliances. Gagnon is president of Carmack Appliances in Garden City and does a weekly radio program on WJR-AM.

focus on photography

Come out at night for special photos

Have you ever been tempted to photograph a dramatic moonlit landscape and gave up because you just didn't know how to adjust the camera settings? Or ever wanted to shoot Christmas lights at night or, six months later, the Fourth of July fireworks?

Well, stars, werewolves and photographers who want to add to their portfolios all come out at night! So don't give up. Night photography offers an abundance of opportunity from the examples above to an intimate setting lit only by candlelight.

Most likely, your camera metering system won't function properly at night so the best thing to do is to use the recommended exposures from the chart below.

You will, of course, need a steady tripod and cable release and bracket your shots to assure getting a correctly exposed negative or slide. You'll have to set your automatic cameras to a manual mode.

Subject - Settings (400ASA)

Home interiors at night - 1/4 sec.

f/5.6

Outdoor Christmas lights - 1/15 sec. f/5.6

Candlelit closeups – 1/8 sec. f/5.6 Streets at night – 1/4 sec. f/4 Floodlit buildings/statues – 1/4 sec. f/4

Moonlit landscapes - 30 sec. f/4 Fireworks/lightning - "B" f/11

The "B" setting for fireworks and lightning shots means "bulb" and the shutter remains open for as long as you depress the cable release.

While this chart contains recommendations based on 400ASA speed film, any other film speed can be used. Simply calculate what the exposure should be. For example, 100ASA film is two increments "slower" than 400. So a candlelit scene requires an exposure two increments less, or 1/2 second at 1/5.6.

Expert photographer Frank Andreae took this excellent night photograph of Blackfriars Crafts in Plymouth, England. Shot at midnight with a wide angle lens, Frank's exposure of f5.6 at 1/2 second worked perfectly.

So don't always be a daytime photographer. Come out at night! Nighttime photography offers dramatic and exciting opportunities for you and your camera.

Monte Nagler will be conducting a two-week photo workshop to Spain June 27 to July 11. Call Nagler at his office, (810) 426-0333, for more information.

Monte Nagler is a fine art photographer based in Farmington Hills. You can leave him a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 then his mailbox number, 1873.

Sprinklers need proper maintenance

Q: We winterized our lawn sprinkler system last fall, but when we opened it in the spring the back flow preventer was broken. What would cause this?

A: You may have a couple issues going on. First of all, older systems are being serviced where there is a gate valve in place. There are two types of valves used to connect the domestic water system to the back flow preventers; gate valves and ball valves. A gate valve that is screwed down and over time may not seal completely, causing water to get into your backflow preventer which may expand when the water is frozen during winter, breaking the backflow. Many people purchase gate valves due to initial cost. However, a brass ball valve fastens tight enough so that no water can get through to the backflow preventer. If your system has a gate valve you may want to consider replacing it with a ball valve for preventative maintenance. This would take approximately an hour of labor costs at $60. The part will run about $30. To repair a back flow is about $185 labor included.

The second thing to consider is that when fall rolls around, many so-called sprinkler companies drive through neighborhoods offering winterization as extremely low costs and are often unqualified, some even uninsured. Remember, saving money now may cause you big money down the road. Keep in mind that an eight zone system will probably cost $5 per zone with a minimum of $40 to winterize. The company should also offer a warranty against damage to the system for the spring opening unless you have a gate valve. Preventative maintenance should include converting to a valve and selecting a qualified contractor. Although there is no licensing required for an irrigation contractor in the State of Alichigan, you will want to look for the following:

Ask for a certificate of insurance you can verify with their insurance company.

■ Choose a full-time irrigation company that specializes in servicing after the installation.

A written work order provided by the company which includes an address and phone number. Ask for a business card.

■ Make sure that the company you choose has been in business for at least three years and intends to continue in this line of work.

Reep your receipt and contact the same company in the spring for a spring turn-on, so if damage has occurred, you're now dealing with the same contractor

In short, a qualified legitimate contractor will gladly do the job the first time so you will continue to do business with them. A sprinkler business is not unlike any other service business – it boils down to service and backing up your work. Keeping the customer happy. The bottom line is service, service, service, service, service, service, service...

Blue Suede Shoes keeps spirit of Elvis alive and dancing

BY FRANK PROVENZANO STAFF WRITER

Elvis not only lives, he's returned to his rightful place.

No, not to a Burger King in Kalamazoo. Not even as a sandwich artist at a Southfield deli. His latest resurrection isn't strictly a rock and roll incarnation, but as an inspiring influence for a ballet named after his famous obsession for a hue, texture and footwear. With the Michigan Opera Theatre's current presentation of Blue Suede Shoes" at the Detroit Opera House, all bets favor that Elvis can do for American ballet what his quivering lips and pulsating pelvis did to ignite pop music. Elvis in tights? Well, he's back in spirit anyway. Despite purists grumbling that ballet is being unhinged from its classical roots, the show of exuberant Presley songs provides an aphrodisiac to baby boomers who regress into rebellious adolescence at the sound of "Hound Dog," "Jail House Rock" and "Heartbreak Hotel." And who become squishy sentimentalists over "Teddy Bear," "Are You Lonesome Tonight" and

"Love Me Tender." The classical ballet of Presley music is performed by the Cleveland San Jose Ballet under the direction of former Detroiter Dennis Nahat. Since its preview last May, "Blue Suede Shoes" is often mentioned as one of the new American ballets designed to attract audiences to what has been considered a "high brow" art form.

Elvis returns - again: The Michigan Opera Theatre presents the Cleveland I San Jose Ballet in "Blue Suede Shoes" inspired by the music of Elvis Presley. The new ballet is attracting wider audiences to the classic dance form. Performances run through Sunday at the Detroit Opera House.

In the past year, along with the Houston Ballet's "Dracula," Blue Suede Shoes" has been a bona fide "hit," a term usually reserved for big-scale Broadway musical productions. Longtime designer Bob Mackie created costumes and set designs for "Blue Suede Shoes."

The ballet ties together a tenuous plot of three guys who travel along a similar road as the King from a backwoods high school in the 1950s to induction into the army to coming back to a rapidly changed America, Feeling defiant, lonesome yet determined to follow the American Dream, the three search for perspective as Presley croons "Stranger in My Own Hometown," In the Ghetto" and "Big Boss Man."

Unlike most other classical ballets, "Blue Suede Shoes" offers a contemporary subject with music that nearly everyone has heard. It's surely not "Romeo and Juliet" or "Swan Lake." But according to Bradley Stroud, MOT's director of dance, that's exactly the point.

Time has come, said Bradley, a Birmingham resident, for American ballet to reinvent itself by incorporating more accessible music and themes.

Never an Elvis fan? Come on.

"I was never truly an Elvis fan until I saw the ballet, said Stroud. "People are coming to see this ballet because of the music, and because of their love for Elvis Presley It has both the appeal of a Broadway show, and a strong connection with classical ballet.

In the rather staid dance world, that amounts to a minor rebellion. It's probably difficult for ballet dichards to imagine Michigan's 7,000 member Elvis fan club lining up to watch classic ballet. But then, who else but Elvis could perform the miracle conversion? "Dance is more than a tutu and point shoes," said Stroud, former executive director of the former. Metropolitan Ballet Theatre of. Detroit. When that fledgling dance company folded three years ago, Stroud went back to practicing law and accounting. When the MOT position opened last August, he found himself in the ideal place to apply his administrative skills and love of ballet.

In past years, MOT produced a couple of classical ballets per season. Stroud was hired to create a dance program to spotlight the Detroit Opera House to international dance companies. Last February's presentation of the American Ballet Theatre was an unprecedented step in that direc-

"In the dance world, Detroit is back on the map because of this venue," said Stroud, who readily listed versatility, size, rehearsal space and ambience as the reasons for the growing appeal,

*Not many venues can handle 'Blue Suede Shoes' and the ABT," said Stroud. "To truly appreciate dance, you need to see it in the right venue. If people hear enough about dance, it'll become more familiar and they'll consider spending more of their entertainment dollars on it."

In just six months, Stroud has already developed plans for a Family Dance Series as part of MOTs community outreach pro-

Ironically, metro Detroit has more small private dance studios than any other area in the country (see related side bar), yet has few large scale productions, said Stroud. The MOT, he said, hopes to be the magnet that draws leading contemporary dance companies such as Mark Morris and Les. Ballet de Monte Carlo.

"Classical ballet is reinventing itself along with the emergence of the contemporary dance movement," said Stroud, who points to the popular success of "Stomp," "Riverdance," "Tap Dogs" and "Lord of the Dance" as evidence of the resurrection of dance.

And now, with Blue Sucde Shoes" once again eliciting wide. spread adulation for Elvis, classical ballet might have found its savior in a familiar specter. Long live the King!

"Poor" Appalachia, a region of America touching 13 states, including Kentucky, West Virginia, and Tennessee, is celebrated in "Appalachian Strings," opening Wednesday, April 28, for previews at Meadow Brook Theatre.

The dictionary may define this area as "economically poor," but playwrights Randal Myler and Dan Wheetman found it rich in tradition statem bits

"My father was born in West Virginia, and I was drawn to the region," said Myler who co-wrote "Appalachian Strings," with Wheetman from oral histories and Smitheopies Institution.

"These people are misunderstood. There's the stereotype of the lasy hillbilly, the Beverly Hillbillies, but these are a profid people, flercely independent, hard working with a lot of family values worth keeping."

Appalachian Strings" premiered last May at the Denver Center Theatre Company where it played to sold out audiences. Several regional theaters have expressed an interest in the play. Meadow Brook will be the first in the Midwest to present it.

"I flew out to Denver, and saw the show," said Geoffrey Sherman. Meadow Brook Theatre's artistic director. "I had a whale of the time, and so did the audience. I was moved by the music, and the cast is remarkable. As an Englishman I was fascinated by the story, and didn't know the way Appalachia was settled. When I same back I other."

1950s, the people of Appalachia, Irish and Scottish immigrants who settled the area in the 1840s, left their homes, and moved where jobs were, which included automobile factories in metro Detroit.

'Appalachia Strings,' is not a realistic play with a plot," explained Myler, "It's an evening chockful of song. Among the songs are stories and reminisces about life in the mountains."

The words, taken from oral histories, and books, are spoken by three actors, representing three generations. Bob Burrus plays a grandfatherly character, Melinda Deane, the daughter, and Adale O'Brien the mother.

James Morisi of Livonia directs the Plymouth Theatre Guild production. Margaret Wunschul of Troy is the music. director/conductor. Judy Ryckman of Canton is the producer. MaryLynn Kuna of Plymouth designed the costumes.

Based on the novel by Frances Hodgson Burnett, "The Secret Garden," musical book and lyrics by Marsha Norman, music by Lucy Simon, is about an 11-yearold girl, orphaned in India, who returns to Yorkshire to live with an embittered, reclusive uncle and his invalid son.

The uncle's estate includes a magic locked garden. Flashbacks, dream sequences, a strolling chorus of ghosts, and music dramatize "The Secret Garden's" enduring tale. Plymouth Theatre Guild's cast of 20 ranges in age from eight to

"The show is about healing through love," said Morisi. "The house is haunted by ghosts who come to but the events in motion; and help Archibald Craven put to rest the memory of his wife who died giving birth to their son. The music is beautiful, and very richly orchestrated."

For this production, Morisi played up a let of the mysticism and the ghosts. "Chest stories are interesting," said Morisi, "If. you don't know which people in the cast are ghosts it's confusing. The bottom line is I want to make it an evening of magic, because that's what theater is all about."

The cast features Michael. Burden of Redford as Dr. Neville Craven, Leslie Burgamy of Canton as Ayah; Cindy Cooper of Livonia, (Martha Sowerby); Christina Djordjevic of Garden City (Claire Holmes/Mrs. Shelleys Angie Djordjevic (children's chorus); Elizabeth Filios of Canton (Mary Lennox); Catie Pilios (children's chorus); Mike Hammonds of Canton, (Dickon Sowerby); Peter Hathaway of Walled Lake (Lt. Shaw); Dane Canton (children's chorus); and Jardine of Westland (children's chorus), Brianna Overmars of Plymouth (children's chorus): Kerry Plague of Canton (Lt. Wright); Connie Randall of Livonia (Claire Holmes/Mrs. Shelley); Judy Ryckman of Canton (Nurse); Wendy Sielaff of Canton (Mrs. Medlock and Mrs. Winthrop); Dave Signor of Plymouth (Ben Weatherstaff); Allison Soranno of Livonia (Martha Sowerby); Michael Soranno (Fakir); Jeanette Sowman of Farmington Hills, (Alice); Meghan Symons of Craig Wickham of Plymouth, (Major Holmes/Major Shelley).

Marcus, L.J. Slavin, and Dan Wheetman on guitars, mandolins, fiddles, penny whistles, dulcimers, autoharps, jugs, and a musical saw. Sandy Silva, a clogger, also performs. It is an ensemble piece where people play multiple roles, and instruments.

"Appalachia Strings," opens with an Irish reel as a family leaves Ireland to escape starvation caused by the potato famine and settles in the eastern mountains of the United States.

"It's music I've been playing for 25 years. It's music I love, and feel very close to," said Wheetman, a professional musician and composer who was a member of John Denver's band for seven years.

Some of the songs will be familiar like "The Water Is Wide," which I remember singing in high school choir, but many such as "The Farmer is the Man, and "Hard Working Miner," will not.

"The songs related to courtship, farming, mining, they're songs of the land and about how people made their livelihood. Randy put together the words, I put together the music, and we worked together. We picked aspects of life that were common to people. The words and music are traditional, except in the second act where they're more modern."

"Appalachian Strings," gives the audience a taste of making moonshine, the sale of which gave people, many of them farmers, extra money to buy flour and other necessities. It also shows happened during what Prohibition when stills were destroyed.

"They made their living off the land, and didn't want anyone telling them what they could do with it," said Wheetman. "Their feeling for the land was almost a mystical bonding."

With Act 2 comes the beginning of the end when coal mining came to the area, destroying land and lives. "People offered farmers money for mineral rights. The farmers sold them not realizing that mining would destroy the land."

When the mines shut down in the 1950s, the people, who were once self-sustaining - they grew or hunted their own food, made their own houses, toys, clothes and musical instruments - were forced to leave the mountains to search for work in cities. But every weekend they would come back.

Radio also played a role in changing the fabric of Appalachian society. "Everyone participated, if you weren't playing an instrument, you were singing or dancing," said nationally this year.

Wheetman. "When people started listening to radio, that's when oral histories started to fade."

For the authors, the play is a celebration of a way of life, and also a proud people. "It shows how much alike we are by opening a window that shows how these people lived. They believed in family values, things that are important - love, responsibility. giving support in hard times, things that make us human that are lost in urban living."

directs Myler, "Appalachian Strings," was involved in other popular Meadow Brook productions including "Quilters," "The Immigrant," and "To Kill a Mockingbird.'

Myler and Wheetman have worked together on other musicals, including "It Ain't Nothin' But The Blues," which toured independent ... films, So you might experience more than about "Chasing Amy" and "SubUrbia," two odes to the credence given unique problems facing Generation X. And some of it is even features under their belts respectively, Kevin Smith ("Clerks") and Richard Linklater ("Dazed and Confused") could easily cross over to bigger budgets and actors. Both prefer to stay far from mainstream Hollywood and the headaches that go along with it.

"Chasing Amy," currently at the Main Art Theatre, focuses on Holden and Alyssa (Ben Affleck and Joey Lauren Adams), a pair of comic book artists whose blooming love story is interrupted by the fact that she's decidedly gay. They stay platonic friends until an emotional confrontation in the rain lands them in each other's

Of course it's never that simple. Holden's best friend Banky (Jason Lee) uncovers some dirt on Alyssa from her high school days that starts Holden questioning their relationship. The movie then becomes not so much a story about homosexuality as how anyone deals with a partner's past. Which is not a bad idea for a movie, especially in an

One upshot era where AIDS has made it from this year's impossible to place blinders on Oscars was the when it comes to sex. Whether Smith, whose main interests to low-budget remain hockey and comic books, is the best filmmaker for the job is another story entirely.

Made for about $250,000 (far less than the millions spent on the usual hype his sophomore disaster "Mallrats"), "Chasing Amy" is, according to Smith, the third in a trilogy of films set around the New Jersey suburbs he came from, While Smith addicts will pick up the more obscure references, the main link here is his deserved. With two and three ongoing cameo as Silent Bob, who, along with trash-talking sidekick Jay (Jason Mewes), pops in to offer sage advice. In "SubUrbia," opening tomorrow at the Main, Richard Linklater teams with writer Eric Bogosian ("Talk Radio") for a story about recent high school graduates who spend their time around the corner of an all-night convenience store. Their late teen existentialism is thrown off balance when a successful former school mate, now a rock star, comes home for a visit.

When the writing doesn't get too preachy or ansgst-ridden, the movie actually comes alive. Bogosian wrote the piece for the stage and many of the actors have come along, including Steve Zahn as Buff, a simultaneously irritating and endearing wild man and drunk.

Leading this ensemble is Jeff (Giovanni Ribisi), whose jealousy of his former friend is cloaked in cynicism. "Just because I don't choose to prostitute myself in front of an audience doesn't mean that I'm not a creator," he phone, mailbox 1866.

says while taking another slug of Pabat Blue Ribbon, drink of choice for these sidewalk slack-

Ethnic tension arises in the form of the irritated convenience store owner, a young Indian roughly the same age who is going to college while tending the family business. During his nightly ritual of shooing them away, he makes a point of belittling them for squandering the opportunities that he and his family have worked so hard to obtain. Ultimately "SubUrbia" turns into a slightly more mature version of the John Hughes high school movies, in which characters inevitably fall into types. Nicky Katt's Tim walks an uneven line between sensitive and tough guy, especially in his soul-searching interludes with rich-girl music publicist Erica (another satisfying turn by ubiquitous independent star Parker Posey.) Ultimately, the mark that Linklater and Smith leave on the cinematic landscape has less to do with story as location. Think of "SubUrbia's" leisurely rolls past generic-looking suburban Thomes and strip malls or "Chasing Amy's" no-frills shoot ing in New Jersey parks, bars, and even comic book conventions. Both fall short of their intentions, but both have also proven to the world that suburban life is no longer an oxymoron.

Band capitalizes on 'That Thing You Do' success

New York-Pountains of Wayne is look. ing toward a longer career than Tom Hanks fictional band The Wonders in the movie That Thing You Dor

The Fountains of Wayne's brilliantly crafted self-titled album (Scratchie/TAC/Atlantic) is filled with addictive pop melodies that harken back to the 30s and 60s. The quartet - bassist Adam Schlesinger, singer Chris. Collingwood, guitarist Jody Porter, and drummer Brian Young - doesn't apologize for its soaring harmonies and irresistible choruses. As the song "Harbara H." goes, "can't shake that tune but it's OK."

If the description of Fountains of Wayne sounds a lot like The Wonders, it's because Schlesinger is the man behind the Oscar-nominated movie theme.

"I think it's pretty ironic that it (the song's popularity) paralleled the course of the movie." said Schlesinger. "It was really a fluke thing in a sense."

A fluke, sure, but the timing of the single was perfect, coinciding with the release of Fountains of Wayne* fall almost exactly when the movie came out," said Schlesinger, a partner in the Chicago based Scratchie Records label, co-owned by D'arcy and James Iha of the Smashing Pumpkins,

His bandmate Collingwood said that the media hype was good and bad.

"It's allowed us to get some sort of media coverage. Otherwise we might have been ignored. But people think that this is Adam's band and he's the songwriter."

Schlesinger added, "Ultimately that will sort of be a footnote. I I certainly didn't plan it that think we made a really good way. As we started to get closer record. It's not even all of my songwriting. Chris wrote more of (Fountains of Wayne - the latest incarnation for Collingwood and Schlesinger who have played in other bands together - do not play "That Thing You Dol" live. As a matter of fact, neither of them sing the song. Mike Viola of the band the Candy Butchers takes on the vocal duties.) Although Collingwood writes most of the lyrics. Fountains of Wayne has been compared to Squeeze's Chris Difford and Glenn Tilbrook, and John Lennon and Paul McCartney

"As far as Lennon and McCartney, we have more in common with them than Difford and Tilbrook. It's a definite collaboration. In Squeeze, Chris Difford writes the words and the other guy writes the music. With Lennon and McCartney, they never split it up like that."

Collingwood explained that be and Schlesinger's styles are definitely different. Take the second single "Radiation Vibe," for example.

That's actually one of Adam's songs. That's the one song on the record that's completely Adam and didn't involve me in the least. He wrote that song around the phrase 'radiation vibe.' My songs are more based on personal experience. His usually are works of art. He's much more of a craftsman."

But they did have a common goal in mind while writing songs for "Fountains of Wayne."

"We wanted to write songs that we could play drunk so the best way to do that is to write them when you're drunk."

The band comes to St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress in Detroit, for an all-ages show on Sunday, April 20, with Sloan and Treadmill Trackstar. Collingwood told Newsweek magazine that one time the band spent an entire show making fun of Eric Clapton. This time Collingwood mused a more viclent tale.

"We like shoot model rockets and the more people who get hurt the funnier it is for us. Hopefully there'll be some blood." Collingwood said with a sinister laugh stressing that he's joking.

It seems apropos that the title of Silverchair's sophomore effort released Feb. 4, 1997, on Epic is "Freak Show." "Freak" is the secend track on the album.

"It's mostly just talking about how people get perceived as being freaks," bassist Joannou explained during a phone conversation from his Australia: home. Singer happy with male response to anti-macho song

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO

A performance with Sarah McLachlan on June 12, 1996, at Pine Knob Music Theatre will ferever be embedded in the mind of singer/songwriter Paula Cole.

"It was my first time playing piano live in front of an audience," Cole said via telephone from New York. It was terrifying. I was very shy to reveal my piano playing in front of that many people. I think the discomfort was in my own head."

Fans can expect Cole to tickle the ivories at her headlining show Thursday, April 17, at Clutch Cargo's in Pontiac.

the first single.

"As a producer I ensured that it would sound really good on the radio - as good as possible coming out of the crappiest little speakers," she said.

The song is the tale of macho men and frail women afraid to stand up for themselves: "I will do the laundry/if you pay all the bill. Where is my John Wayne?/Where is my prairie song? Where is my happy ending?/Where have all the cowboys gone?"

"It's a little story of the every woman. It's a life story in 3 1/2 minutes. It's about the wistfulness and meloncholy and disappointment of a life. There's a touch of sarcasm and hopefully it's a chance to tear apart some of our media stereotypical roles."

The great thing about the song, Cole explained, is that men have positively responded to the song too.

"There's a lot of pressure to be macho and be a rogue man. There's certainly pressure on women to be confined by stereotypical roles, which feels so

The video for "Where Have All the Cowboys Gone" shows a buff Cole in a sort of new age dance and thought process. She said it amazes her how many times people ask her if she's had any dance training.

"I did study some for about a year in the eighth grade and recently I took some Eastern dance lessons which in the western world we call bellydancing." she said.

Cap off, or start, a great evening at Edison's

BY JOE BAUMAN STAFF WRITER

Edison's Restaurant is like no other in Birmingham, or for that matter, all of Oakland County, The latest creation of Bill and Judi Roberts is closed more than it is open, offers more specialty cocktails than food items, and includes not a single entree on its menu.

But like the Birmingham couple's other restaurants - The Beverly Hills Grill in Heverly Hills and Streetside Seafood and 220 in Birmingham - Edison's has proven a huge success in the three weeks since its opening.

Manager Carol Cahalan describes Edison's, tucked into a former framing shop and antique business directly below 220 on Merrill Street, as an upscale piano bar offering lively cocktails and entertainment in an atmosphere reminiscent of a New York nightclub.

"People come in all the time and say the place reminds them of New York and Chicago and think it's really cool to have something like this in Birmingham," said Cahalan, who worked for three years upstairs in 220 before taking over the daily operations of Edison's. "This is a popular after dinner or theater stop, and we are confident the restaurant will become a destination place."

Designed by the owners' lengtime associate Ron Rea, Kdison's certainly presents a clubby atmosphere with low lighting, sofas and chairs replacing traditional couches, and a long barprominently centered in the room.

Time saver: Brian Waskiewicz finds that a mobile office enables him to gather more information more quickly and schedule more appointments.

Mobile office lightens load

BY DOUG FUNKE

A vehicle is more than a means of transportation for Brian Waskiewicz, owner/manager of Remerica Neighborhood Realtors in Westland.

A look inside his Ford Expedition reveals a laptop computer, digital camera, printer, DC/AC electrical converter and a pair of cellular telephones.

It's an office on wheels. Waskiewicz can access multilists of houses available for sale, prepare instantaneous market analyses, take and process photographs and send faxes - all from his car. "It saves tons of time," he said. "If it saves me time to prepare for an appointment, I have more time to go on appointments. Timing is everything in house hunting."

David R. Johnson, a Realtor with Coldwell Banker Preferred in Plymouth, also has all the bells and whistles in his vehicle.

"It makes you about 75 percent more efficient than the old days," Johnson said. "There's no way people can run back and forth to my office and do it more efficiently."

Al Block, a Realtor with RE/MAX East in Clinton Township, does a lot of work out of his van, too.

"I want an office so I can do business anywhere," he said. "It's just time. Have I made more money? I think so."

Waskiewicz figures he spent upwards of $5,200 to equip his mobile office and that it costs about $300 per month in telephone charges to run it.

But he isn't deterred by the expense. "All you have to do is sell two houses and the tools pay for themselves," he said, adding that favorable tax regulations also help the bottom business

Clients can be dazzled when he compiles information for them with his laptop from inside his vehicle or at a kitchen table, Waskiewicz said. "It shows I'm committed to my profession and can help buyers and sellers be more prepared for transactions," he

"I'm in my car constantly with buyers," Johnson said. "I don't think there's been a sale I've participated in in the last six or seven months that I didn't use my laptop.

Waskiewicz related a story.

"We were looking for a house that wasn't to exceed $140,000. They wanted a three bedroom ranch. We had looked at all ranches available in that price range and hadn't found anything to suit their needs.

"We made a wrong turn and there was a colonial with a for-sale sign," Waskiewicz said. "The purchasers asked me, 'How much is that house?' I typed the address into my laptop com-

"The price was about $14,000 more than they wanted to spend, but they decided they wanted to look at it anyway," Waskiewicz said. "I called (car phone) the listing company to see if the property was available and could it be shown." The answer to both was yes.

"After viewing, the purchasers decid ed they wanted to make an offer, Waskiewicz said. We went back to the truck, typed in the latel description and looked at all the commerable listings in the last 12 months that sold.

"We drove have comes and compared each one to establish fair market value, Waskiewicz said. We made an offer the same day." The deal was sealed after a couple of days of negotiations. And what if Waskiewicz didn't have a mobile office when they stumbled upon that colonial?

"We probably would have bought a ranch under $140,000," he said. "Who knows how many other houses I would have showed them? The frustration level at that point was pretty high."

Not to mention all the time that was saved identifying and visiting comparables immediately.

"The industry trend is agents are going to portability rather than desktops," Waskiewicz said. "Prices have dropped and there's a need for having all information with you."

So why don't more Realtors have mobile offices?

"They don't see a benefit or they're scared to change," Waskiewicz said. We're a rarity," Block said, adding that cost and temperament may hold others back. But cost shouldn't, he said. "I think anybody who drives a Cadillac or a Buick or a higher end car can afford this easily," Block said.

knows the mortgage business. Neither the lender nor the mortgage product are as important as the loan officer you will be working with because a good loan officer can save you thousands of dollars with their knowledge and guidance. In addition, they will answer the numerous questions you may have during the mortgage process. Two recent surveys of the mortgage industry have findings that attest to this advice. First, in a survey conduct! ed for the Mortgage Bankers Associat tion, results showed that four of 10 consumers find the paperwork and disclosure forms associated with the mortgage application and settlement process confusing. Here's a good exam! ple of how having a loan officer take time and explain all aspects of the mortgage process can affect how happy you feel when the final papers are signed. In the same survey, 98 percent of the 500 households sampled said they would like to receive a firm cost commitment prior to the application process. The bankers association commissioned the survey to help the mortgage industry, consumer groups and regulators find ways to improve the mortgage process for borrowers. In another survey of people who had recently mortgaged, establishing a strong relationship with a mortgage lender was shown to be a crucial factor in a buyer's level of satisfaction with the mortgage process. For example, the mortgage application process can be very complicated. If your mortgage lender is preoccupied with seeking more sales, he/she may not be available to spend the time necessary to explain all aspects of the process to the homebuyer. First-time homebuyers should focus more on customer service than on rates when seeking a loan officer because the application process entails many more factors than just the rate. Typically, buyers will need to have a lot of their questions answered at this time, such as which is the best mortgage product for them and an explanation of all costs associated with the When looking to refinance the

Q. My landlord knew of several muggings on some property next to our apartment but failed to warn me about the problems with the vacant lot next to our apartment. I was attacked and robbed

Do I have any recourse against the landlord?

A. Under a recent case rendered by the New Jersey Supreme Court, that court held that a landlord cannot be held liable for an attack on property from which it receives no "economic benefit." The courts indicated that imposing liability on the landlord would be "unprecedent ed" and would "transfer to an innocent property owner the duty to prevent criminal conduct that is more properly the responsibility of others." In a recent California Supreme Court case, the court allowed a landlord to be sued for an accident on a neighboring property where he "exercised control" over the property regardless of whether he realized any economic gain. In that case, there was a jury issue as to whether the landlord "exercised control" over a strip of cityowned land where he cut the grass three and built an fence after the accident occurred. In short, depending upon the facts of your case, you may have basis to pursue the matter.

Home prices rise in Midwest and South

BY DAVE SKIDMORE

ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER WASHINGTON (AP) - Home prices nationally kept up with inflation last year. But values in the Midwest and South steeply appréciated.

Throughout the nation, 130 of 184 metro areas recorded median price increases, while 39 showed a decline, according to a survey by the National Association of Home Builders.

There was no change in nine areas, while comparative data were not available in six. The aredian is the midpoint, meaning half the homes sold for more than that cost and half for less.

Nationally, the median price of new and existing homes rose 2.6 percent over the year to $120,000 in the fourth quarter. The core inflation rate last year minus volatile food and energy prices - also was 2.6 percent.

its a statistic of vital importance to many Americans because "far and away housing is" the most important asset of most households," said economist Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester,

Kent Colton, executive vice president of the home builders, said "faltering economies put downward pressure on home prices" in parts of the Northeast but "in places where the economies are creating jobs and the housing markets are hot, we are seeing healthy gains."

Kalamazoo had the thirdbiggest increase in median prices in the nation at 15.5 percent to $82,000.

Home-price increases in the Midwest and South "reflect a tight labor market that's raising everyone's wages," he said.

The home builders' affordability index, which measures the ability of someone earning the local median income to purchase a median-priced home, showed the most affordable markets in the country as:

Binghamton, NY; Wilmington, Del.; Elkhart, Ind.; Lima and Elmira. The least affordable markets were San Francisco; Salinas, Calif.; Santa Cruz; Port-land, Ore.; and Santa Rosa, Calif.
