Record of Belknap Family

Written by Hyrum Belknap Ogden

The history of Orange County New York contains the following written by C. M. Kattenberg.

"The Belknap family - or Belknappe as the name was originally written - is of Norman origin and can be satisfactorily traced back to the time of William the Conqueror (1066). They maintained considerable distinction in England at an early period - Sir Robert Belknappe having been created chief justice in the reign of Edward the third (1375)." In 1637 Abraham Belknap emigrated from England and settled in Lynn, Mass. where he died in September 1643 leaving four sons and a daughter. Their names were as follows:

Orange County History says
 "Four of these children, viz. Thomas, Benjamin, Samuel, and Joseph removed to and settled in Newburg, and its vicinity, at different dates from 1749 to 1763. The first settlement was made by Samuel, who purchased (1749) nearly all the tracts known as the Baird patent, which he divided with his brother Thomas"
 The price is also given by the same history which says.
 "Thomas, Joseph and Benjamin, settled in New Windsor, where Joseph was clerk of the precinct in 1763 and subsequently assessor"

Isaac Belknap was one of the truest sons of America during his whole life, and especially throughout the dreary struggle for independence. Previous to the war he was engaged in the freighting business between Newburgh and New York, and not infrequently extended his commercial ventures to the more eastern ports as well as to the West India Islands. When the troubles with the mother country came on, he entered into active service in defence of the cause of the colonists, and was early appointed captain of a company of rangers. He was afterwards in the regular service as assistant deputy quartermaster-general. After the war he resumed the freighting business and

Belknap Family Record

Isaac Belknap and George Gardner commenced the freighting business in 1790, from Benjamin Birdsall's dock (formerly the Golden dock), as appears from a handbill which has been preserved. They had two sloops which they sailed alternately on Saturdays. Gardner subsequently continued the business.

Herick Amerman was the son of Albert Amerman, a native of Holland. He was born in New York, and removed to Newburgh at the age of 15 years. After the Revolution he engaged in the milling business with Abel Belknap, which business he relinquished for that of freighting, which he followed for forty years. He died March 4, 1826, in his 67th year.

Mrs. Coffin was the daughter of Col. Briggs Alden, of Huxbury, Mass., and a lineal descendent from John Alden, one of the Pilgrims by the May Flower.

 This Belknap was a man of great personal worth and high moral character. He died 26 Jan 1845 aged 84 years.

From a notice of his life and character, which appeared in the village papers at the time of his decease, the following is copied: "He deceased has long been widely known as one of our oldest and most substantial citizens. At an early age he was engaged in the service of his country during her Revolutionary struggle, and subsequently filled with credit many important posts of honor and usefulness.

As a member of the state legislature, judge of the county court, and president of the bank of Newburgh, he had established in former years a reputation for integrity, sound sense, and good feeling, which secured for him the sincerest respect and esteem of all who knew him. But as the crowning excellence of his character, he was for many years distinguished as a devoted and consistent follower of the Lord Jesus Christ. He was an accepted and honored elder of the Reformed Dutch Church from the time of its organization until his decease, and those who were associated with him in this capacity, as well as others, can bear honorable testimony to his practical wisdom, piety and worth."

The following is a copy of the inscription from his monument in St George Cemetery.

^{she was born 12 April 1777, died 28 Jan 1857} This Belknap of was a man of great personal worth and high moral character. He died 26 Jan. 1845. Aged 84 years.

From a notice of his life and character, which appeared in the village papers at the time of his decease, the following is copied: " He deceased has long been widely known as one of our oldest and most substantial citizens. At an early age he was engaged in the service of his country during
her Revolutionary struggle, and subsequently filled with
credit many important posts of honor and usefulness.

As a member of the state legislature, judge of the county court, and president of the bank of Newburgh,
he had established in former years a reputation for
integrity, sound sense, and good feeling, which
secured for him the sincerest respect and esteem
of all who knew him. But as the crowning excellence of his character, he was for many years distinguished
as a devoted and consistent follower of the Lord Jesus Christ. He was an accepted and honored elder of the Reformed Dutch Church from the time of its organization until his decease,
and those who were associated with him in this
capacity, as well as others, can bear honorable
testimony to his practical wisdom, piety and worth."

monument in St George Cemetery.

Samuel Belknop prior to the Revolution, resided at Hoborn Mass. and occupied the homestead and mills which were erected by his father, and to which was attached a large and productive farm situated on the public road leading to Concord. In the early part of the controversy with England, he was active in the cause of the Colonists; and in 1775, he organized a company, of which he was Captain and took part in the conflict at Concord. During the following year he was in the engagement at White Plains, and subsequently rendered much efficient service in the field. After the war he was elected to the Legislature of his native State, where he served to the ample satisfaction of his constituents. He afterwards removed to Newbury where he resided until his death.

"He entered the military at the age of 18 years, and took part in the war of 1812, through which he served as an officer with distinction to himself and honor to his Country. His conduct during the attack by the British on Fort Erie (Aug. 15/1814) drew from Genl. Ripley the following remarks in his report, viz- "The manner in which Lieutenant Belknap, of the 33rd, retired with his private guard from before the enemy's column, excites my particular commendation. He gave orders to fire three times as was retreating to the camp, himself bringing up the rear. In this manner he kept the light advance of the enemy in check for a distance of two or three hundred yards. I have to regret, that when entering our lines after his troops, the enemy pushed so close upon him that he received a severe wound with the bayonet". In the war with Mexico, he shared largely in the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma. The citizens of Newburgh, at a public meeting held on the 27th of June 1846, caused a sword to be made and presented to him in their name, as a mark of their appreciations of his distinguished services. He died near Fort Washita, in the Chickasaw Nation, Nov. 10-1851. His army record is as follows, viz- appointed 3rd Lieutenant, 33rd infantry, April 1813. 2nd Lieutenant Oct. 1813. 1st Lieutenant Aug. 1814. Transferred to Second Infantry May 1815. Transferred to 3rd infantry May 1821."

Captain 3rd infantry, Feb. 1822; Major 8th infantry January 1842 lieutenant-colonel 5th infantry, 26th Sep. 1847.
Brevetted Major Feb. 1832 for ten years in one grade lieutenant-colonel March 15, 1842 for general good conduct in the war against the Florida Indians and for securing by military operations a great number of prisoners: Colonel 9th May 1846 for gallant and distinguished services in the battle of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma; brigadier-general 2nd Feb. 1847 for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battle of Buena Vista.

William North Bellknopf his son was born at Newburgh on the 22nd September, 1829, and after attending the High School and the Academy, entered the College of New Jersey at Princeton, in the year 1846 and graduated from that institution in June 1848. After studying law in Georgetown D.C. and being admitted to the bar in the City of Washington, he went in the year 1851, to Keokuk, Iowa and commenced the practice of law in that city. He was a member of the Legislature of Iowa in 1857 as a representative of the democratic party; but being what was known at that time as a Douglas democrat, and not uniting with the members of that party who favored what was known as the Secession Constitution of Kansas, which was an important and exciting question in the politics of that party, he joined the republican party.

He was appointed major 15th Iowa Volunteers in Nov. 1861 and participated in that capacity in the battle of Shiloh. He remained in the army until the close of the war rising gradually through all the grades of lieutenant-colonel, Colonel and brigadier-general and was brevetted major-general in 1865. For gallant and meritorious services during the war. Having as brigadier-general of volunteers, commanded the 3rd brigade 1st division 17th Army Corps (Blair's) of the Army of the Tennessee (McPherson's) he was in numerous battles, the most important of which was Shiloh (where he was wounded and had a horse shot under him) the several battles of Atlanta, the battle of Bentonville N.C. etc.
He was engaged in the sieges of Corinth, Vicksburg and of Atlanta and accompanied Sherman in his

Belknop Family Record by J. W. Belknop grand march from Atlanta to the sea, then to Goldsboro, Raleigh, and Washington. He was repeatedly mentioned for coolness and courage, and in the battle of Atlanta, July 22, 1864, he took prisoner Colonel Sampley 45th Alabama, by pulling him over the works by the his coat collar. At the close of the war, being honorably mustered out of service in 1865 he was appointed collector of internal revenue for the first district of Iowa, and remained in that position until the latter part of 1869, when in the month of Oct. he was Secretary of War by President Grant, and remained in that position until March 24 1876 when he resigned."

Sydia Belknop 35 child of Samuel Belknop married Edward Riggs Nov. 25 - 1782 and settled in New York, but subsequently removed to Newburgh. She died 9 Jan. 1824 Mrs. Riggs was a school teacher, and it is said she taught De Witt Clinton his letters. She was present at the inauguration of Washington, at the Old Federal Hall, corner of Wall and Nassau street New York. She was a woman remarkable for her piety, education, and virtue, and it is said of her that she maintained "that distinction under a democracy which a royal government would confer upon rank"

"The Rights of Man, of Nov. 19, 1804, referring to the death of Abel Belknap, remarks; "This venerable, useful, and truly pious citizen, enjoyed the esteem of all who knew him. As a magistrate, he conscientiously performed the important duties of his office; as a husband, parent, relative and friend he attained to patriarchal years not only without reproach, but such was the blameless tenor of his life, that his decease is a subject of general regret"

His son - Stephen, Chaney, Abel, Moses Higby, and Aaron, - enjoy for many years the high esteem and confidence of the community. The business enterprises of Stephen and Chaney were extensive, and contributed in no small in some degree to the early commercial prosperity of the town. Stephen was born 4 Aug. 1766 and died 25 Oct 1848. He married Mrs Sarah Mace and had legation at Washington. It was even said that Miss Belknap had determined to change her religion to make the marriage possible. This engagement was broken off last autumn. It was during a visit just paid by Miss Belknap to friends, Mr. and Mrs. Lippincott, in Philadelphia, that the present engagement occurred. Mr. Barclay Henry, Miss Belknap's fiance, is a son of Morton Henry, a prominent lawyer of the Duaker City, and also of Mrs. Hessel of that city.

A near relative of the late John Gilbert, writes to the Boston Post as follows:—"Mr. Gilbert's maternal grandfather was a well-known and well-to-do^{many} of the last century, living in a handsome house, with large garden, in what was then the court end of the town—the North End. There must be many people in Boston who remember the quite quaint old store opposite the Old South, kept by his uncles, Tom and Tim Atkins. His father, John Gilbert, was the eldest son of John Gilbert and Mary Belknap of Atkinson N. H. This John was an Englishman, with no relatives in this country. His family were renowned for their longevity, his mother lived to the age of 106, a brother to 101, and his four sisters are mentioned in the memoirs of the "American Academy" as each exceeding the age of 100. I myself saw a pair of stockings knitted by one of these sisters at the age of 105. Lieut. Ezekiel Belknap died in 1836, in his one hundred and first year year."

The following, in reference to Sir Robert Belknap referred to on page 5, is of interest.

From "The Lives of the Chief Justices of England. From the Norman Conquest till the death of Lord Mansfield," by

Volume I, Page 113.

After giving an account of Sir Robert Tresilian, it says: I must now give some account of his contemporary, Sir Robert Belknappe, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, who, although trepanned into the unconstitutional and illegal act of signing the answers which Tresilian had prepared at Nottingham, with a view to overturn the party of the Duke of Gloucester and the Barons, appears to have been a respectable judge and a worthy man.

The name of his ancestor (spelled Belknappe) is to be found in the list of the companions of William the Conqueror, who fought at Hastings, preserved at Battle Abbey. (Battle, a town of England, Sussex County, 52 miles S. E. of London. Remarkable for remains of Abbey, built by William the Conqueror in 1067, on site of battle of Hastings. Deposited here the famous Roll of Battle Abbey with names of leaders of Norman Invasion enrolled.

(Thierry, Nor. Con. 385.)

The family continued in possession of a moderate estate in the County of Essex, without producing any other member who gained distinction till the reign of Edward III. Robert, a younger son was then sent to ~~France~~ push his fortune in the wars of court and he acquired such a taste for the

of law, that on the death of his father and elder brother, while he was an apprentice, he resolved still steadily to follow his profession, and to try for its honours. After some dissappointments he was made a King's Sergeant: (While King's Sergeants he seems to have had a salary of 20 l. a year, in respect of which he was sometimes he pleaded crown cases as an advocat:—

his ambition was [A. D. 1367.

fully gratified with the office of Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.
He gave high satisfaction as a judge, and, being [A. D. 1375] esteemed by all parties, it was expected that on the accession of Richard II. he would have been appointed Chief Justice of the King's Bench; but he was passed over through the intrigues of Tresilian. He was permitted, however, to retain the pillow of the Common Pleas; and with this he was quite contented, for, [A. D. 1377] devoting himself to his judicial duties, he had no desire to mix in the factions which then divided the state.

He did not take any part in the struggle which ended in the commission for making fourteen Barons viceroys over the King; and he went on very quietly and comfortably, till the month of August, 1387, when, returning from the summer circuit, he was summoned in the King's name, to attend a council at Nottingham. On his arrival there he was received by Lord Chief Justice Tresilian, who at once explained to him the plan which had been devised for putting down the Duke of Ireland and the Barons; and showed him the questions to be submitted to the judges, with the answers which they were desired to return. He saw that many of these answers were contrary to the law, and, though extrajudicial opinions were given without scruple by the judges to the Crown ages afterwards, he was startled by the danger to which he must expose himself by openly flying into the face of those who were actually in possession of supreme power. He therefore flatly refused to sign the answers, and he did not yield till the Duke of Ireland and the Earl of Suffolk were called in and threatened to put him to death if he remained contumacious any longer. Thereupon he did sign his name under Tresilian's saying, "Now I want nothing but a hurdle and halter to bring me to that death I deserve. If I had not done this, I should have been killed by your hands; and, now I have gratified the King's pleasure and yours in doing it, I have well deserved to die for betraying the nobles of the land."

(Another account makes him say, "Now I want nothing but a ship, or a nimble horse, or a halter to bring me to that death I deserve." (3 Tyrrell. 904); and a third, "Now here lacketh nothing but a rope, that I may receive a reward worthy of my desert; and I know if I had not done this, I should not have escaped your hands; so that for your pleasures and the King's, I have done it, and thereby deserve death at the hands of the Lords."—(3 Holin. 456)

Belknappe observed with great dismay the King's march to London, and the ensuing civil war which terminated in favor of the Barons; but he remained unmolested until the 3rd day of February following, when he was arrested while sitting in the Court of Common Pleas, and, along with the other judges, was committed to the Tower of London. There he lay till after the trial of Brambre [A.D. 1389] and the apprehension and execution of Tresilian.

The House of Commons then took up the prosecution against Sir Robert Belknappe, and [March 2^d] the other judges, and impeached them before the House of Lords, 'for putting their hands and seals to the questions and answers given at Nottingham, as aforesaid, by the procurement of Sir Robert Tresilian, already attained for the same.' Some of them pretended that their answers had not been faithfully recorded; but Sir Robert Belknappe pleaded the force put upon him, declaring, "that when urged to testify against the Commission, so as to make it void, he had answered, that the intention of the Lords, and such as assisted in making it, and the statute confirming it, was to support the honor and good government of the King and kingdom: that he twice parted from the King, having refused to sign the answers: that, being put in fear of his life, what he had done proceeded not from his will, but was the effect of the threats of the Archbishop of York, the Duke of Ireland, and the Earl of Suffolk; and that he was sworn and commanded, in presence of the King, upon pain of death, to conceal this matter. He therefore prayed that, for the love of God, he might have a gracious and merciful judgment." The Commons replied, that "the Chief Justice and his brethren, now resorting to such shifts, were taken and holden for sages in the law; and they must have known that the King's will, when he consulted them at Nottingham, was, that they should have answered the questions according to law, and not, as they had done, contrary to the law, with design, and under color of law, to murder and destroy the Lords and loyal lieges who were aiding and assisting in making the Commission, and the statute confirming it, in the last Parliament:—therefore they ought all to be adjudged, convicted and attained as traitors."

The Lords Spiritual withdrew, as from a case of blood; and the Lords Temporal, having deliberated upon the matter pronounced the following sentence:—"That inasmuch as Robert Belknappe and his brethren, now impeached by the Commons, were actually present in the late parliament when the said Commission and statute received the assent of the King, and the three estates of the realm, being contrived, as they knew, for the honor of God, and for the good government of the state, of the King, and whole kingdom; and that it was the King's will they should not have answered otherwise than according to law; yet they had answered in manner and with the intent charged against them: they were by the Lords Temporal, and by the assent of the King, adjudged to be drawn and hanged as traitors, their heirs to be disinherited, and their lands and tenements, goods and chattels, to be forfeited to the King."

Richard himself sat on the throne during the trial, and was much shocked at this proceeding. But, to his unspeakable relief, as soon as the sentence was pronounced, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and all the prelates returned, and prayed that "the execution, as to the lives of the condemned judges, might be respited, and that they might obtain their lives of the King." This proposal was well relished, both by the Lords and the Commons, [The Parliament considered that the whole matter was managed by Tresilian and that the rest of the judges were surprised, and forced to give their opinion" - 1 Kennet, 263.

This Parliament was rather unjustly called "The Merciless Parliament". - 4 Rapin, 49. Others more justly styled it "The Wonder-Working Parliament." [1 Kennet 262.] and, after some consultation, the King ordered execution to be stayed, saying that "he would grant the condemned judges their lives, but the rest of the sentence was to be in full force, and their bodies were to remain in prison, till he, with the advice of the Lords, should direct otherwise concerning them." 3 Fyrell 630, 632.

A few days afterwards, while the Parliament was still sitting, it was ordained that "they should all be sent into Ireland, to several castles and places - there to remain during their lives; each of them with two servants to wait upon him, and having out of their lands and goods an allowance for their sustenance." Belknappe's was placed at the rather liberal sum of 40l. a year. [5 Nov. an. 13 Ric. II.]

To Sir Robert Belknappe, knight, who, by force of a judgment pronounced against him in the King's last Parliament assembled at Westminster, was condemned to death; and all and singular the manors, lands, and tenements, goods, and chattels whatsoever, which belonged to the aforesaid Robert, were seized into the King's hands, as forfeited to the King, for the reason aforesaid; whereupon, the said Lord the King being moved with mercy and piety, and wishing and being desirous of making a competent provision for the support of the same Robert, towards whom he was moved with pity, did remit and pardon the execution of the judgment aforesaid, at the request of very many of the prelates, great men of the estate, and other nobility of this realm, lately attending the said parliament; and of his especial grace, with the assent of his council of the 13th day of July, in the 12th^{year} of his reign, granted to the same Robert 40l. yearly, to be received during his life out of the issues and revenues of the manor lands and tenements aforesaid, to be paid by the hands of the farmers thereof for the time being, &c., according to an ordinance of the Parliament aforesaid. In money paid to him by the hands of Juliana, his wife, viz., by assignment made to the same Juliana this day, 20l., and in money counted, 20l. and 40l.

(A list of the horses, with a description of them, belonging to the said Robert, is entered on this Roll.)— Devon's Issue Rolls, 240.]

He was accordingly transported to Ireland, then considered a penal colony. At first he was stationed at Drogheda, having the liberty of walking within three leagues of that town. ¹ ("Drogheda et infra praecintum trium leucarum circa dictum villam."—Rymer, vol.
vii. 591.) He was subsequently transferred to Dublin; and, after he had suffered banishment for nine years, he had leave to return to his own country, and to practice the law in London. ² (3 Tyrell, 959.; 1 Kennet, 274.)

This mitigation was at first complained of, as being contrary to a sentence pronounced in full parliament—but it was acquiesced in; and, although the attainder never was reversed, King Richard, considering him a martyr, made him a grant of several of his forfeited estates.

He never again appeared in public life, but retired into the country, and reaching extreme old age, became famous for his piety and his liberality to the Church. By a deed bearing date October 8th, in the second year of King Henry IV., he made over a good estate to the Prior of St. Andrew in Rochester, to celebrate mass in the cathedral church there forever, for the soul of his father John, of his mother Alice, and for the souls of himself and all his heirs.
(This estate still belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Rochester.—See Halsted's Kent, iii. 474.) He died w few months afterwards.

He was married to Sibbella, daughter and heiress of John Dorsett, of an ancient family in Essex. Holding estates in her own right, these were not forfeited by her husband's attainder; and, bringing an action during his banishment for an injury done to one of them, the question arose, whether she could sue alone, being a married woman? But it was adjudged that, her husband being disqualified to join as a plaintiff, she was entitled to the privilege of suing as a feme sole; although Chief Justice Mureham exclaimed, —

"Ecce modo mirum, quod femina fert breve regis, Non nominando virum conjunctum robore legis." 1.

(Lord Chancellor Ellesmere, in citing this decision in the case of Paston's, states that Sir Robert Belknappe had been banished into Gascony "relegatus in Vasconiam," and that he continued there in the reign of Henry IV. — whereas, Ireland was the place of this banishment, and he had been recalled by Richard II. —

Gilbert Belnap journal says he was the 5th child of his parents, Jesse, Phoebe, Louisa; John, then Gilbert, then three (3) brothers after him, James, William and Thomas. This makes Louisa born before John. Hence she was near 14 years old when she died in Canada.
