Police unite to fight street crime

Westland and three neighboring cities will formally join together in a move to curb street crimes. Officers hope to catch suspects involved in drugs, robberies, burgiaries and other crimes.

The one-year agreement would be subject to renewal, and cities may choose to pull out of MSET. But officials appear to believe the special unit will be effective.

Tax forms on the way BY DARRELL CLEM

Westland homeowners may be frustrated because they haven't received a form - one that could save them money — that should be filled out and sent to the city assessor's office by March 1.

But don't blame local officials or mail carriers; the holdup is coming from county officials.

However, Westland assessor Karen Hardin said Tuesday that the forms, or affidavits, will be mailed to residents next week. The homeowner forms will be preprinted with names, addresses, parcel identification numbers and bar codes - all designed to make it easier for residents to fill out.

The county is forwarding the forms to local cities and townships, which in turn will send them to homeowners. The affidavits must be completed and returned to the assessor's office; otherwise, homeowners run the risk of losing the school property tax cut handed to them by state lawmakers.

The late-mailed forms prompted Westland Councilman Glenn Anderson to say Monday that county officials apparently "haven't done their job" of supplying the forms to the city and its residents.

Under the state school finance reform package, school property taxes are set at 24 mills, but homeowners get the promised reduction by filing the affidavits declaring their homestead by March 1.

If Michigan voters approve a 2-cent sales tax increase in a special March 15 election, then taxes on homesteads will be 6 mills. Six mills represents $6 per $1,000 of state equalized valua-

If the proposal is defeated, then a statutory backup plan would boost the state income tax to 6 percent, and homestead taxes will be set at 12 mills, or $12 per $1,000 of SEV.

Be warned, however, that voters must return the affidavits by March 1, even before they decide which proposal they support. Otherwise, their property could be taxed at the 24-mill rate that is to be levied on businesses and second homes.

Blank forms are already available, but Westland assessor Hardin is strongly urging homeowners to wait for their bar-coded, preprinted affidavits that can be processed more easi-

Livonia school board member announces intention to quit

BY MARIE CHESTNEY STAFF WRITER

A "whirlwind five days" in the life of Ray and Sue Thompson means that Susan Thompson will not serve out her first term on the Livonia Board of Education, which serves the northern section of Westland.

At Monday's school board meeting, Thompson announced her resignation from the school board, effective June 30, because her husband has been transferred to Arizona.

Thompson's name will not appear on the June 13 school ballot because she could conceivably rescind her resignation before June 30, said John Rennels, assistant superintendent for personnel. If she does leave June 30 as expected, she would have served two years of a four-year term.

The "whirlwind five days" came about just this past week when Ray Thompson received a job offer in Arizona that Thompson said he couldn't

Nurse returns after helping in aftermath of L.A. quake

By Leonard Poger

Westland's Cathy Barrett won't forget the mid-January Los Angeles earthquake

Barrett, a registered nurse who works in St. Mary Hospital's emergency department, shared vivid memories after she returned home last week after spending six days with a Disaster Medical Assistance Team, providing help to the quake vic-

While sleeping on the second floor of a Santa Monica hotel, she was awakened about 3:30 a.m. Jan. 29 by one of several aftershocks which measured 5.0 on the Richter scale.

"I was awakened by my bed shaking all over the place and things crumbling," she recalled. "Everything was shaking." Although she thought of getting out of bed immediately, the aftershoek was over before she could act.

"It was over too quickly to be scared," she said in an interview last week, adding that she felt several other aftershocks.

Barrett, a 1980 graduate of John Glenn High School, said the Jan. 29 quake was actually a "wakeup call" for her since she had to get up an hour later to go to work as a disaster team member.

But the hardest memory to shake was seeking homeless children huddling in blankets in the chilling 40-degree temperatures.

Barrett also noted that the scenes were much worse than those seen on TV news programs.

"The most positive memory I have is that people were very appreciative of our help. There were many thanks yous," Barrett said.

As expected, she experienced the same traffic tieups as Los Angeles County residents, being stuck for four hours in traffic trying to reach a treatment center which is usually a 45-minute trip.

Working a treatment which dealt primarily with Hispanic people, an interpreter was needed for the medical team members.

Among the medical problems were diarrhea triggered by contaminated water and chicken pox in the temporary tent cities aet up in the quake area.

Barrett was one of 35 members of the disaster team, which was one of many that responded to the quake.

The team, made up of various medical professionals in the Detroit area, was called for help Jan. 23, six days after the Jan. 17 quake. It returned home Jan. 30. The group included doctors, nurses, emergency medical technicians, pharmacists, supply employees and communications workers.

While serving with the disaster term, Barrett wasn't paid by St. Mary Hospital in Livonia, but is expected to be reimbursed for lost income by the federal government.

While that may take many months, Barrett emphasized that "I have absolutely have no regrets in serving with the team. I'd do it again in a minute.'

"It was a great professional and personal experience," she added.

Officials say city won't thaw privately owned water lines

By DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

Frozen water lines have plagued Westland this winter, causing more freezing problems than the city has experienced in memory, Mayor Robert Thomas said Mon-

But residents who blame the city may find that the problem is their own.

Coupled with heavy snowfalls, arctic temperatures have kept employees busy in the public services department, but one resident complained during a Westland City Council meeting Monday that service has been lacking.

Kimberly Sutton, a Donnelly Street resident who has a newborn son and a 31/2-year-old daughter, said she has been without water on three occasions this winter - once for 24 hours.

Each time, DPS workers have thawed the lines, but Donnelly said she has been warned that the city won't continue to address her problems - and she's angry

City officials confirmed Monday that DPS crews won't continue to fix Sutton's problem because the freezing is occurring in water lines on her property - not on city property.

about it.

As a courtesy, DPS workers have thawed Sutton's lines three times, and she has been advised to let water continually trickle from her faucets to avoid the problem, Thomas said. Each city visit to her residence costs $200, he said.

"We don't intend to go out there every day . . . at $200 a crack," the mayor said.

Sutton raised questions about whether the freezing is occurring on her property. She said a city contractor told her the problem has been caused by road grading that lowered the street surface. bringing it closer to water lines.

DPS director Carl Clark said Sutton's street has been lowered 18 inches, but he stressed that city water mains are six feet deep near the home. Like the mayor, Clark said the problem is on the homeowner's property.

"I do not feel that this city has the obligation to take care of any homeowner's property," Clark said during the council meeting. "The homeowner is the one that has the problem."

That prompted Sutton to retort: "Thank you for your inaction.'

The controversy prompted councilman Charles Pickering to ask DPS officials for a report detailing where frozen water lines have occurred - and whether the problems have been on city or private property.

He has asked for the report to be completed within the next two weeks, prior to the council's Feb. 21 meeting.

Gunshots were reportedly fired from a house in the 35000 block of June Street during a dispute between a shotgun-armed resident and a handgun-toting man standing outside, police said.

No one was injured during the incident that a resident said occurred just after 10 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 3, on the Westland street near Wayne Road and Palmer. The case remains under investigation, and few

Beware of pitfalls when setting out bird feeders

NOWICKI

Historically, man has not had a good record when it comes to interfering with the natural world. We need to learn more about the interactions of the many different facets of the natural world to be sure what we do is not harmful. At this time it is not known for certain if our artificial feeding of birds is detrimental. Birds still get most of their food from natural sources as they have done for the past 14,000 years in the Detoit area. But our feeding stations do provide food when severe storms arise and prevent birds from exploiting those natural sources. Individuals are much more likely to survive if they have a feeding station nearby during those storms.

Fortunately, more than half of the households in the nation are feeding birds so there is a good chance birds in urban, suburban or even near rural homes will have access to a feeding station during tough times.

Providing a concentrated food source is beneficial, but like almost anything there are some negatives to feeding birds. If we are aware of those negatives we can compensate for them whenever possible.

One negative aspect of bird feeding is that we concentrate a food source in one local area which helps the bird feeders at our bird feeders.

Hawks may come to a feeding station and select an entree from the buffet created. But since people who feed birds know this can happen, they provide cover close at hand for the songbirds. When the warning call is made that predator has been spotted, sufficient cover close at hand provides a hiding place.

Food we provide at our feeders is concentrated in a manner quite unlike that found in nature. Refuse from the food is also concentrated in an unnatural way. This situation can create conditions that may be detrimental to the birds. They may not have mechanism that alert them to unsanitary conditions since they have not had this kind of problem for ground feeding birds also collect droppings that become mixed with the food. Shells from seeds collect at the base of feeders and may grow fungus or bacteria. Even seeds inside feeders without adequate drainage may have fungus and bacteria growing on them. Just by virtue of the fact that concentrations of birds come to one spot could promote the spread of diseases among those that frequent the feeding stations.

Platform feeders that are great

Equally important to the transmission of diseases to birds is the spread of diseases to people. Proper care of feeders and the feeding area will reduce the threat of this possibility. When cleaning feeders that appear to have mold or fungus growing in them, soak or wash them in mild 10 percent bleach solution. Thoroughly rinse and dry them before filling them with seeds. Be sure not to inhale "dust" from disturbed seeds that have mold on them.

Seed refuse that has fallen to the ground should be removed and buried in several places to add organic material to the soil. Do not just put it on the surface, it may promote continued growth of any mold or fungus."

After cleaning feeders or the feeding area be sure to wash your hands.

birds. Becoming aware of those negative aspects and addressing known concerns now can do nothing but help. If feeding stations are maintained in a manner as close to the natural environment as possible, we can minimize any human-induced complications.

Property tax exemption hinges on March 1 deadline

By TIM RICHARD

Great numbers of callers are concerned — even worried about the affidavit you must fill ' out to get the lower property tax rate on your principal homestead.

Your concern is that you will be taxed 24 mills, the non-homestead rate, instead of the lower rate - six mills if Proposal A pases, 12 mills if it doesn't. You want to make sure your homestead affidavit is received, filled out and returned properly.

Q. Will every homeowner receive this form? When?

A. Yes. In half the state, including Oakland County, it will be mailed by county government. In many cities, the assessor will send it out. Elsewhere, the state Treasury Department will send it to you. They're coordinating efforts to make sure you get one copy - not zero, not two.

It's due in the mail about Feb. 15 and is due back to your local city or township assessor by March 1.

Don't panic! I've seen a sample. It takes barely a minute to fill out. For non-agricultural homesteads, it will ask for four bits of information:

1. Property identification number — it's already printed on your mailed form.

(If you use something other than the form mailed by the assessor, you'll need to fill in the "PIN" number. In my city, it's a 12-digit number that appears just above my name on the tax bill.)

2. Your signature and the coowner's (usually your spouse's). 3. Your social security number and the co-owner's.

4. The street address of the property only if it's different from where you receive your mail. Q. If I fail to sign and return this form by March 1, will I be taxed 24 mills on my homestead?

A. The law doesn't provide for a "grace" period yet, but the Legislature is working on bills to extend the filing date because sc many older folks will be in Florida.

Q. My wife and I are leaving for Florida Feb. 12 and won't return until March 17. Where does this leave us?

Did you ever wish your

A. Have someone forward your ınail.

If that isn't feasible, visit your city or township assessor and explain the situation. Take along a copy of your property tax bill with the PIN number. This newspaper can't speak for 2,000 local assessors, but we'll bet they let you fill out the form in the office.

When you go to Florida, take along a couple of blank copies for your Michigan "snowbird" friends who haven't heard about this exemption. Watch the local media. The state and this newspaper will advertise the program in Florida and perhaps Arizona.

This writer's parents are fullyear Floridians, but their next door neighbors spend only the cold months there and are domiciled in Livingston County. When I visit, I'll take Janet and Ed an extra copy of the form, as a neighborly favor.

For a nominal service fee, this newspaper is offering a fax and mail service with the state Treasury Department form, just in case the assessor missed you somehow. Watch this column.

Q. I have two homes in southern Michigan. Would I be able to change the designation of which is my primary residence at a later date?

A. Yes. Fill out a new form at the assessor's office in the city or township where you're claiming primary residence.

Q. I have two homes — one I live in and one I'm selling on land contract. Can the person buying on land contract get a homestead exemption rate?

A. Yes, says the Treasury Department: "Owning means you hold the legal title to the homestead or that you are buying it on a land contract."

Q. My husband and I are coowners. We have separated. He has moved out, but I live in the house. No divorce proceedings have been started. What do I do?

A. Ask your husband to sign the form. If he can't or won't, visit your city assessor and explain the situation.

Q. Will officials check my homestead affidavit against my voter registration to see if they match?

A. No, says Treasury.

But if your city or township asks, Treasury will run a computer check of the social security number to make sure you're not improperly claiming exemptions for two houses.

Q. Our new house is under construction and won't be finished until July 1, the date tax bills are due. Who should file for the tax break? Can the builder do it or just the potential buyer?

A. The builder can't. Only the occupant may. File your affidavit with the assessor when you move in July 1.

Treasury tells us not to be concerned about the date. The July 1 bill will be calculated on the assessment as of last Dec. 31, when the house was largely unfinished.

Q. I own a property but don't occupy it. I rent elsewhere. Am I eligible for a homestead exemption?

A. No. But you're entitled to a. separate tax break as a renter. The Treasury form says: "Renters should not file this form, but are entitled to a higher renters' credit on the 1994 Homestead Property Tax Credit Claim that you will file in 1995. The credit has been increased from 17 to 20 percent."

Q. Our principal housing consists of two locations. Can we claim exemptions for both?

A. It's "unlikely," but there are rare cases where a married couple could be granted two exemptions. Our Treasury contact cites a pair. where the husband works and lives in Detroit five days a week. while the wife occupies the home in Lansing. Each may be able to. claim one exemption.

The short answer is: "Your! homestead is where you reside the; majority of the time."

House bill calls for stiff fine, jail term

By TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER '

Video "pirates" would face fines of $25,000 and a year in jail under a bill making its way through the Michigan Legislature.

But people who copy videotapes for their own personal use would be unaffected by the bill, strongly supported by the 4,000-member Video Software Dealers Associa-

"Our cost for a feature film is $65 per cassette." Flint dealer Jeffrey Pedersen told the House Judiciary Committee in Lansing Tuesday, "If a pirate captures 1,000 cassettes over six months, it costs me $65,000. But it costs them just $2 a tape.

"We want to go after the larger operators," Pedersen said.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. John Kelly, D-Grosse Pointe, passed the Senate 35-0 last year. Tuesday it was reported out of the House Judiciary Committee on a 14-0 vote and sent to the House

Pedersen said a group of dishonest dealers often pays one , copiers to copy a feature film that retails for $65. The dishonest dealers rent or sell the copies at cut rates.

VSD members say the pirates cheat movie makers, professionals, manufacturers and legitimate dealers of profits, sales and rental

Federal copyright laws prohibit such piracy, but the VSD says federal investigators put a low priority on local-level pirates and are asking state legislation. "Forty-two states have such laws,' Pedersen said.

In Michigan in 1992, the Motion Picture Association of America investigated some 89 video rental and sales outlets on complaints of dealing in bootleg tapes. The association says cus-

> "How do you know something is a pirated tape?" asked Rep. David Galloway, R-White Lake.

Pedersen said an electronic device can detect the difference between a manufactured tape and one that has been illegally copied.

Committee members wrestled with amendments to limit how much property of a pirate dealer police could confiscate in a raid. "The (copying) equipment is not illegal. It's the tapes that are illegal," said Rep. Michael Nye,R. Litchfield.

FOR DIGESTIVE SYSTEM PROTECTION

Non-steroid anti-inflammatory drugs (ANSAIDS) are a group of drugs which are widely prescribed in the treatment of arthritis and other conditions. They are generally safe but in high risk patients including the elderly they may be associated with a variety of side effects mainly in the digestive system. Such as indigestion, erosions on the surface of the stomach and duodenum, ulcers, and ulcer complications such as bleeding and perforation. Esophageal and small intestinal ulcers and strictures might also occur. Injury to and bleeding from the colon, and activation of colitis have been reported as well to a lesser degree. To protect against such damage it is best to avoid the ANSAID's whenever possible. In case you still need to take it, lowering the dose might help or ulcer type medication and/or/ other agent to protect the mucosal surface or digestive system can be given simultaneously.

Firm makes loans available to individuals with troubled credit

There are many reasons why millions of Americans fall victim to credit problems every year. From maxing out credit cards to more sobering causes including loss of employment, family growth, medical emergencies and poor training in personal and household financial management.

Fortunately, there is now a local company making consolidation and new purchase loans available to people in these situations. We asked Bill Cunnington, Vice President of Security Home Loan...

Who is eligible for one of these loans?

We will work with individuals who have equity in their homes and have had debt problems of one type or another.

How does the loan work?

We take people who are living from paycheck to paycheck and consolidate all of their obligations into one lower payment. In fact, the average person will save from 30 to 40 percent a month with a consolidation of this type.

How can someone apply for one of these loans?

At Security, we pre-approve people over the phone at no charge. At that time, we also give the person an idea of how much money we can save them.

Call Bill Cunnigton at Security Home Loan (810) 669-4334 if you are interested in having a payment anaylsis done.

House jail, fine bill in trouble

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

A bill to increase jail terms and fines for city ordinance violators is in big trouble in a House of Representatives committee.

The bill, by Rep. Agnes Dobronski, D-Dearborn, would increase maximum allowable iail terms from 90 days to one year and fines from $500 to $1,000.

'Stiffer sentences, early on, would deter some people," said Dobronski, citing support from the District Judges Association and Michigan Municipal League.

But members of the House Judiciary Committee balked at filling up jails with relatively minor offenders. They set the bill aside last Tuesday after an hour's discussion.

"The jails at one point were cept more — for example, drunk drivers," said Rep-James McNutt, R-Midland.

"Has anyone done a fiscal analysis?" asked Rep. David Gubow, D-Huntington Woods. No one had.

Gubow said it's generally a good idea to deal with offenses at the district court level, lowest trial court in the state.

Ordinance cases are generally violations of housing, building, zoning and weed control codes. Many involve junk cars and noise. Cities, villages and townships write their own ordinances, but state law limits the punishment. Dobronski's bill would amend the Home Rule Cities Act.

Committee members hinted they may go along with raising the fine limit but opposed increasing jail terms. "The monetary value of $500 has jail is still 90 days," said Rep. David Galloway, R-White Lake. "Why not go up on the monetary value but keep the 90 days? Oakland County goesn't have space to put 'em.'

Rick Boyd, representing the Michigan Sheriffs Association, objected to longer jail terms. "Counties already are accepting a large shift of state prisoners," he said. Under a plan offered by Gov. John Engler, non-violent state convicts are being housed in lower-cost county jails and the counties are paid a per-diem rate for housing them.

Refer to House Bill 5236 when writing to your state representative. State Capitol. Lansing 48909. Chair of the House Judiciary Committee this month is Rep. Tom Mathieu, D-Grand Rapids.

Wheels are slowly grinding in two state departments to set up school-to-work programs sometime in 1995.

The elements are (1) school based learning, (2) work based learning and (3) connecting activ-

Gov. John Engler has asked the federal government for $410.000 to assist the state Department of Education and Michigan Jobs Commission in preparing all youngsters for the workplace.

"About half of America's young people do not go on to college, and 75 percent do not earn a college William degree,'' said Weissgerber, director of career and technical education for the

"And yet today's typical high school education is geared toward the college-bound student. . . The United States is the only industrialized nation that lacks a comprehensive School-to-Work transition system," Weissgerber told the State Board of Education recently.

"Many don't understand how to apply their academic knowledge to a practical problem, such as how to use geometry to figure out the proper angle of an X-ray machine.'

So far, the state plan is abstractions on paper. And what any given student will see is likely to be based on local initiatives rather than a single state plan.

Employers will play an "unprecedented" role in the schoolto-work transition, Weissgerber said. Two key concepts:

"Work based learning" means a student will learn on a job, the employer will help design the curriculum, and "students would see the connection between learning and earning." Rewards for the successful student: a high school diploma, a'skill certificate, and a first job or a registered apprenticeship.

"School based learning" means career exploration and counseling. By 11th grade, a student would pick a career major.

In a school to apprenticeship program, "students would begin at age 16, earning wages on a graduated scale, leading to journey status. Students are employed part-time as supervised on-the-job training is combined with classroom work. Continued employment with the firm is typical, but not guaranteed," Weissgerber said.

Michigan's new charter school law could be used, he added, A large employer or group of employers would lead in the design of a program. Employers could also provide equipment, consulting personnel and summer jobs.

It won't be easy, Weissgerber warned, because there are barriers. "Some teachers are still resistant to the integration of career and employability related education with 'academic' education."

Meanwhile, another branch of state government - the Senate Fiscal Agency — raised a questioning eyebrow at past vocational training programs.

"Since 1988 the state has invested more than $3.5 billion in

State rep applauds gun exchange

■ State Rep. Barns likes the guns-for-paint-job swap initiated by the owner of an auto paint and body shop. The swap will continue Saturday at the Garden City police station.

BY LEONARD POGER EDITOR

State Rep. Justine Barns, D-Westland, was in the Garden City police station to get ideas for legislation to get more guns off the street.

She observed the first of two Saturday programs initiated by a Maaco auto painting/body shop to encourage owners of weapons to turn in their guns and rifles for a coupon worth a $150 paint job. The business is on Ford east of Venoy.

Barns, an 11-year state legislator, said Saturday she was fascinated by the guns-for-paint program.

"It took a lot of strength for an independent businessperson to do this," said Barns.

She added that she is looking into some type of legislation that would curb weapons, particularly in light of so many youngsters being killed. The Maaco business owner.

Westland's Bruce Lewis, and the Garden City police department said Saturday they were pleased with the response of 26 people who brought in their guns.

The program will repeated noon to 4 p.m. this Saturday at the Garden City police station, 6000 Middlebelt, north of Ford, directly behind City Hall.

Garden City Officer Mel Maier said the weapons were turned in by residents from Garden City, Westland, Plymouth, Wyandotte, Inkster, Wayne and Detroit.

Maier pointed to the guns on a table in the police department's records room. They included revolvers, semi-automatics, a .38-caliber, a .25-caliber, a .38 special, a .40-caliber, a .357 Magnum and some rifles and shotguns.

Lewis said Saturday afternoon he was "very pleased" with the turnout. Maier said, "We are really happy and received nothing but positive responses."

Many who turned in their weapons volunteered that it was a "great idea," Maier said.

Several said that they wanted to get rid of their weapons but were afraid to sell them because someone may eventually get hurt and "they didn't want to be responsible,' Maier said.

One gun owner turning in his weapon was Garden City's Jay Pascas, who gave up a derringer revolver he had owned for 15 years for personal protection.

"That's one less gun on the road,"

A Plymouth man, who declined to be identified, said he was turning in an old .38-caliber pistol that had been in his wife's family for more than 60 years. The last registration recorded was in 1938, he said. With him was his son, whose car will benefit from the planned Maaco

"My wife's mother (a widow) didn't want it around the house anymore," the man said in the police station lobby.

Maier added that a Detroit man turned in a BNR revolver which had been in his family for three generations. The owner told the officer that he was fearful of the gun being taken in a break-in of his home. He had cited a previous break-in.

Maier said registrations will be checked to determine if any of the weapons were stolen. If they were, the weapons will be returned to their legal owners.

School problem

Board can avoid boundary feud

avne-Westland school board members and administrators are publicly fearing a major community relations problem this year or next when a redistricting plan is unveiled for parents' review. One board member, Mathew McCusker, summed it up correctly when he said parents' reactions will "go off the Richter scale," comparing the expected political turmoil to the Los Angeles earthquake last month.

Actually, when school officials talk about redistricting, they really mean changing school attendance boundaries.

In past years, boundary changes traditionally meant meetings attended by large crowds of angry parents with their position simply being: "Don't change my kid's school."

Francis "Bud" Winter, school board president, said at a recent board meeting that without boundary changes, the district's current inequities will continue to worsen. He also said that any changes should emphasize quality educational opportunities for students.

Warning his colleagues of the potential community relations problems, Winter said that in any revisions, students would make the adjustments easily with parents making the most noise.

But if done right, the board and administration can minimize the expected public furor by keeping in mind a few major points.

One is to be candid with parents and avoid giving the impression that boundaries are being changed merely for administrative convenience.

While administrators usually spend hours with each other developing varying plans for boundary changes, the recommended plan will be the first time that parents will be exposed to prod the appropriate consciences.

The key question that should be put to parents shouldn't be: "Is this plan the best for everyone?" It should be: "Since we have changing population and enrollment patterns, does it make sense to have some schools overcrowded and others with empty classrooms and underutilized facilities, which leads to financial inefficiencies and different educational opportunities for students?"

Obviously, the latter question is the best choice for all public presentations.

The reason is that too many public officials propose a solution to parents without clearly defining the problem.

In past years, school boards and administrators got into trouble because parents (with most of those being potential millage election voters) objected to the proposed answer without being told specifically what the question is.

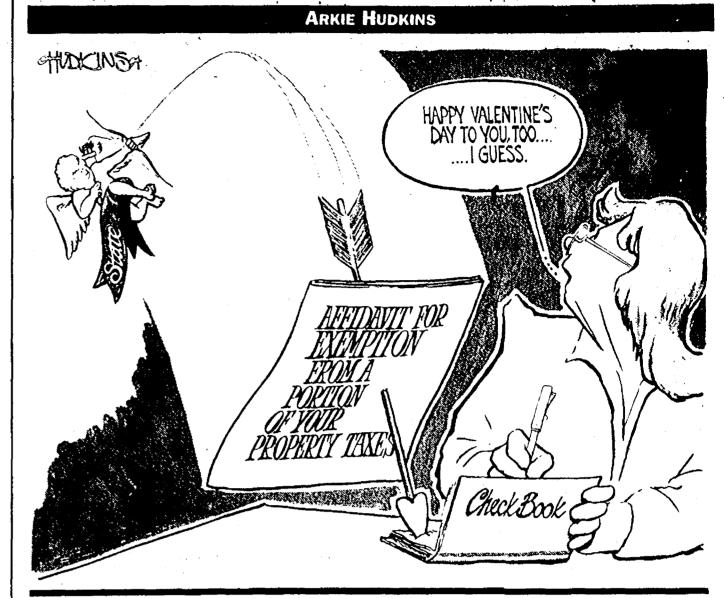

It doesn't take a rocket scientist to realize that local school districts will have no more money, and sometimes, less than in past years under the new Legislature approved school financing policy.

That means that local school officials must look at the entire structure of the organization, not just nibbling around the edges, to save large gobs of money.

Besides money, any boundary changes should be viewed as improving educational opportunities for students. In some cases, programs aren't offered because there isn't a sufficient number of students to justify the cost of a teacher.

With more students in a building, there is more of a chance of the program being offered.

While boundary changes are fraught with controversy, they can be handled if school leaders approach parents and pose the right ques-

Economies knocked

e seem to be evolving into two distinct economies, separate and unequal. One economy is happily protected and prosperous. The other is unprotected and

The protected economy is the highly unionized public sector economy. This economy consists of government workers, bureaucrats, school teachers, social workers and others who derive their income primarily from tax dollars.

The unprotected or hardscrabble economy is the private sector economy. Workers in the private sector are in trouble. The decline of high value added manufacturing jobs and their "replacement" by low-wage service sector jobs has been a disaster for private sector workers.

Even the U.S. government now admits that the high value added manufacturing jobs are not "coming back." This admission alone should alert everyone to the seriousness of the private sector workers' dilemma.

Additionally, the American labor movement has abandon the private sector worker. Government workers have been providing the labor movement with most of the growth in union membership for many years now. Of late, the labor movement has had a decidedly public sector flavor to it.

The few remaining private sector unions are in "dying" industries like steel, autos and textiles. Their members are rapidly aging - retirement looms — when they finally do retire, their jobs will probably "expire" with them.

The best part of the private sector have been devastated by the highly competitive "global economy." Downsizing is rampant. Older victims of downsizing frequently take their life savings and wade into the dismal swamp of entrepreneurship in a desperate effort to "make a living." The failure rate is high.

Others become "kitchen table" consultants. My definition of a "consultant" is a person over 40 who doesn't have a job.

Younger people in their 20s and 30s have been abandon to dead end service jobs in bars, restaurants and shopping malls. Their future is very uncertain - they have few benefits and little job security. For these people — if you aren't stacking those shelves quick enough, scrubbing those floors hard enough, or flipping those burgers fast enough — you can be on the street before lunch.

Many people are forced to work part-time, or are required to take "temporary" positions to make ends meet. Others "give up" and go on welfare.

I challenge the American labor movement and its public sector members like the Michigan Education Association to seriously address the problems of our private sector workers.

So far, all we have been getting from the labor movement and its dominant public sector unions is the gospel of higher taxes and higher wages for public sector workers. Apparently, the rest of us are supposed to applaud this "higher taxes" hypocrisy on the grounds that it is, somehow, "anti-business." What nonsense!

At a time when American workers are going through unprecedented change and crisis — the labor movement has decided to become part of the problem and not part of the solution. Walter Warren, Westland do not wish to disparage Bruce Lewis of Garden City MAACO for his commendable efforts in trying to make a difference in gun-related crimes, but in fact his program will do little if nothing to seriously check the problem. Is that to say he is foolish? Absolutely not. Bruce is making an attempt. I am not.

However, the guns in this swap program must be whole and in working order; those turning in guns must show identification; and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms may be called on to trace the guns. To quote Garden City David Police Chief David Koscis in the Feb. 3 story: "We are trying to take honest guns off the street . . . "Say what?!

Further the article says. "No matter how secured a weapon may seem to be, Koscis said there is always a chance that it could turn up missing from a home."

So? Absolutely everything in anyone's house could turn up missing - VCRs, knives, hammers (remember the murder of Jackie Ponke in a Farmington dental office last

To argue the potential for theft as a reason for turning in a gun is to legitimize unwarranted paranoia.

My thesis is:

Criminals, not honest gun owners, are the problem;

Criminals will not and cannot participate in this program; ■ Therefore this paint swap for guns will do nothing to the criminal element, only to the honest law-abiding citizen tired of an old pop-

No more dreaming

read with amusement your article on Keating's Home Town (Jan. 27, 1994). Keating indicates "This is Dream Street," as he points out the modular homes in his Farmington Hills warehouse. Dream street is right . . and keep right on dreaming! My husband and I visited Home Town during its grand opening earlier this month. We were pretty excited about the possibility of a brand new home, something we didn't think we could afford. The truth is that after Home Town took our reservation deposit, we never heard from anyone, despite our calls and questions.

It is promoted as making home-buying fun and easy . . . I don't think so. We've asked for a refund of our deposit. I can't imagine monthson-end of this headache! At first, I thought the concept was a good one . . . shopping for your home, lot and financing at one time. The problem is that none of the people in these different areas communicate with one another; therefore, the client is left frustrated and angry. We'll just stick to looking at existing homes.

You gotta have hearts, darts

- One heart marked "red badge of courage" goes to the Birmingham citizen advisory committee charged with developing the city's sewer retention basin project. The members took a lot of heat but did their job professionally and stuck by their decision on an issue faced by communities all along the Rouge and Clinton
- Livonia schools earns a heart for finally going "public" and approving cable television coverage of board meetings - something most other governmental organizations did long ago.
- Westland reaps a heart for volunteers acting as the life blood in the Youth Assistance Program by serving as mentors to help troubled youths get on the right track.

- You gotta have heart and Troy's Downtown Development Authority has one that's trying to fill vacant properties.
- A dart to Farmington Hills Democratic Sen. Jack Faxon for dancing the "Nutcracker" while the Legislature decided the fate of property tax reform to finance schools.
- A frost-encrusted dart goes to Old Man Winter for freezing out some attendance at this year's Plymouth ice sculpture competition.
- Darts go to the immature, disrespectful students who have caused too many problems at the West Bloomfield Township Library.

- A dart goes to the Birmingham Board of Education for waffling on its school consolidation plan at the last minute instead of making a decision Jan. 18 as promised. Politics hurts pupils.
- Wayne-Westland schools resemble Swiss cheese from all its darts. In the latest incident, school board member Patricia Brown filed an assault complaint against former board member Sharon Felan. The complaint detracts from efforts to improve education.

Livonia may be squirming for some time to come from a double-pronged dart that city earned for the proposal to rezone the classy Victor development off I-275 for construction of an "upscale" Builder's Square store, and for its withdrawal from the task force upgrading the Eight Mile corridor.

POINTS OF VIEW

Economic realities are holding women back

ike lots of folks stuck home with the flu. I was seduced by daytime television. Yes, I admit it, I fell victim to Oprah, Sally, Vicki, Joan, Phil, Montel, even Paula Poundstone, Forgetting talk show sensationalism for a minute, and the fact that some of the guests might be actors or imposters, I tuned into a Montel Williams segment — the day's controversial subject: female exotic dancers. I was hooked!

The cast of characters was colorful indeed: one topless exotic dancer, kind of a Heidi Fleiss look-alike; one peopshow performer, complete with mask; the club owner, a suave-looking grandfatherly type and proud sponsor of the young ladies in their "careers." Then there were two 50-some year-old ladies, who represented the moral right and who harshly judged the entertainers and labeled the club owner a "pimp.'

And to provide insight, the requisite psychologist, who viewed the dancers as victims of circumstances and empathized. Montel, hip guy that he is, saw nothing wrong with the career choices of the entertainers. The masked lady was merely trying to eke out a living and put herself through law school. The exotic dancer was married but had an understanding husband who did not mind her job one bit. Both women claimed to "enjoy" their work and felt that it was harmless. Hm-m-m . . .

There was no resolution, of course, as per TV talk shows. But lots of emotion and anger were roused and the two older ladies were adamantly ticked off and called prudes by some of the more enlightened folks. The word "moral" was thrown around a lot.

Being an engaged and critical viewer, I felt a major hidden point was missed while the guests pointed fingers and preached about morality. It's really an economic battle, not a moral one. And fear, precisely fear of abandonment, both economic and emotional, are the real reasons the older women were expressing moral outrage.

What people do not realize is that porn upholds the patriarchal structure. Where does morality go when a woman is poor or economically deprived? Out the window. Statistics tell us that about 90 percent of women today are in dead-end jobs. So, "career" is a misnomer, whether you are a secretary or an exotic dancer.

Lots of women are in servile jobs where a man is telling them what to do and gets a cut of her pay and/or makes 20 times what she does. Does that make most women prostitutes in some form? Maybe. Women are kept economically deprived and that inevitably keeps the porn industry going. If women were paid a living wage, the porn/ exotic dancer/prostitution industry might wane.

GUEST COLUMNIST

PAT MCNAMARA

Women are fending for themselves for a reason. Many are unprotected, underpaid, used, unloved, in no one's heart.

Another reason for fear of these entertainers is that voyeurism is frightening to women. A man can be "sexual" and yet avoid romance and intimacy with a woman whose job it is to be an object. He doesn't have to keep her protected and in his heart, or know her intimately. Take a ride down Eight Mile and look at the proliferation of topless bars in the Detroit area — a guy doesn't need a wife. He can eat fast food and have a sexual outlet at a topless joint and avoid the financial commitment and intimacy altogether.

Sadly, there are even shuttles to transport men from club to club. Naturally, any dependent woman, young or old, fears losing her man to this form of temptation and does not want it available for him to be exposed to.

The year 2000 is both the turn of the century and a new millennium. Same as when we moved to the industrial age in 1900, there is much turmoil and warring between the sexes. Obsessive violent behavior is rampant. Men and women are failing to connect. Crazy stories abound: The saga of the Bobbits; the young woman mutilated and in a wheelchair because her boyfriend ran her down with his van.

And look at the personal ads these days — there's more men seeking women and what they want is a fantasy that is perpetuated by media and porn images, not what nature has to offer. There is a refusal to accept what women's lives are about.

Women are afraid. There is a perception of grave danger. Take a look at what's happening: Gun sales to women are booming. A company in San Francisco is doing a brisk business selling sexual aids to women. There is even a female version of a blow up doll - except this one is in the form of a male that rides alongside a woman in her car so she appears not to be alone.

Pull it all together and what does it mean? Could there be an undeclared war against women, as Susan Faludi suggests? Have women made progress, or is there a backlash? Read Moll Flanders sometime and figure if anything has changed drastically from 18th century London.

Women are fending for themselves for a reason. Many are unprotected, underpaid, used, unloved, in no one's heart. What else would you call a group of people behaving in this paranoid way? War refugees? Victims, maybe?

Tiger Stadium issue calls up privatization pitfalls f you're baffled by the Detroit Tiger Stadium funding mess, these thoughts may help.

Pretend you're a mortgage banker. A businessman asks for a loan to buy a $225,000 house. You ask him how much profit he earns. He says $5,000 a year. You laugh him out the door.

Next day he's back. You ask if there any changes. He says he has hired a maid for $7,000 and is going in the red at the rate of $2,000 a year.

Understandably, you are disinclined to loan him anything.

Tack three zeroes onto those numbers, and you have a fair approximation of Tiger economics.

A new stadium is estimated at $225 million to construct. The Tigers' gross revenues (tickets, concessions, etc.) are $50 million in a good year. Net earnings are $5 million in a really good year like 1984.

A company earning $5 million can't possibly handle the debt service on a $225 million stadium. Politicians are reluctant to use tax dollars, however, to build a new stadium for rich guys like Tom Monaghan or Mike Ilitch.

Meanwhile, Tiger owners have signed Cecil Fielder to a multiyear contract for $7 million a year. A profit too minuscule to service debt on a new stadium has turned into red ink.

The foregoing numbers are based on published reports in the Detroit papers, particularly the recent interview with new Mayor Dennis Archer and Ilitch.

We now understand why, when Bo Schembechler was president of the Tigers, he insisted on a fortress style stadium: all parking controlled by the Tigers, all food service, all peanuts. There's no way in the world the Tigers could have a sufficient revenue base unless the club monopolized everything that might draw a nickel. And with Ilitch at the helm, one shudders to think what he would gouge us for parking or a watery beer.

Let's get this business in perspective. A revenue base of $50 million is the equivalent of an average Michigan school district with an enrollmemt of 8,333 spending $6,000 per pupil. This isn't big business.

Wayne County Exec Ed McNamara

envisioned a rejuvenated economy around the stadium, where a community would share in the largesse of big spending by baseball fans. Nice idea but impractical.

The idea of a privately financed stadium is totally incompatible with the idea of a stadium that is part of a local economy. And even if the Schembechler fortress idea were adopted, there's still no guarantee the Detroit Baseball Co. alone could pay for the stadium without a governmental part-

Let us ponder the contract of Cecil Fielder, a family man who is entitled to charge what the traffic will bear. Yet he's making more than those who invested tens of millions to buy the company.

You and I own no stock in Ilitch's company and have nothing to say about how much they pay Fielder. The dilemma is that the powers that be still are talking about publicly funding a stadium.

Some tentative conclusions suggest

■ If there's no new stadium, the Tigers — a Detroit fixture for more than a century — may move elsewhere. ■ No way will we build a stadium without a governmental investment. ■ If government capital is required, government ought to have something to say about how much the Cecil Fielders of this game are paid.

■ The next time the right wing ideologues at the Mackinac Center rave how "privatization" is so much more efficient that government, let us shout back two words, "Tom Monaghan," followed by two more, "Mike Ilitch."

National job training wears 'Made in Michigan' label resident Clinton last weekend announced that the economics and labor ministers of the seven largest industrialized nations will gather March 15-16 in Detroit for an unprecedented summit to figure out what to do about the persistently high unemployment that has hobbled economic growth around the world.

That's great for all of us in Michigan. "It gives us a chance to counter the horrendously negative image we've had," says Karl Gregory, Oakland University's well-known economics professor. And it suggests that Detroit, like our resurgent auto industry, is "on the cusp of change," as the president puts it.

"Detroit is a working city that has embraced change, met the challenges of technology and lives and dies by international trade," said Clinton. "Holding the jobs conference in Detroit will send a message that we intend to confront the challenge of job creation and unemployment."

It's also fitting that the eyes of the world will be here when job training and retraining are under discussion, for Michigan in the 1980s was the laboratory where this previously stagnant field was literally revolutionized.

Facing a severe recession that produced more unemployed people than some states' populations, the Blanchard Administration launched a far-ranging examination of the way to get people back to work. I was part of that effort, serving as the chairman of the Michigan Job Training Coordinating Council.

Two conclusions came early: ■ Good skills produce good jobs; poor skills lead nowhere.

The way to good skills is through training and retraining, but the job training system is a

We took an inventory. What we found amazed even the most hardened bureaucracy watchers. There was no job training system in Michigan. Instead, there was a crasy quilt of 70 separate job training programs with administrative responsibility spread among nine different departments of state government and no coherent overall management!

Nobody recognized how vital job training was to get back to work. And even if somebody reached that conclusion, the administrative chaos insured that nobody could get training even if qualified.

PHILIP POWER

Workers would go to one office to fill out forms, only to be told to go somewhere else to fill out other forms, only then to be told they couldn't qualify for training. Employers couldn't find workers with the skills they needed. And the political system had long since concluded that job training was one of those stagnant governmental backwaters of no use and no possible interest.

Out of this chaos emerged a series of innovations that put Michigan on the job training map, later featured in the best-selling book "Reinventing Government" by David Osborne.

Instead of a myriad of offices and conflicting forms, create one common office for all programs - an approach now called "one-stop shopping." Instead of confusion, provide people with a "Michigan Opportunity Card," like a credit card, which provided skills information and helped people figure out if they were eligible for help. Instead of unemployment compensation being a form of publicly acceptable welfare, think of the system as the gateway to training and re-employment.

President Clinton's thinkers in this area -Labor Secretary Robert Reich and Doug Ross, assistant secretary for employment and training - will no doubt be rolling out the administration's thinking at next month's summit. It's nice to realize that much of that thinking was initiated and tested right here in Michigan.

Bedford best at Schoolcraft

Temperance Bedford, ranked No. 2 in Class A, captured the 21st annual Schoolcraft Invitational Ocelot High School Volleyball Tournament by defeating Livonia Ladywood in the championship final.

By Brad Emons

It was another long Saturday of volleyball at the 21st annual Schoolcraft College Ocelot High School Invitational, but not for Temperance Bedford.

The Kicking Mules lived up to their No. 2 ranking in Class A, winning the 30-team tournament by going unbeaten in 14 games.

Bedford capped off the 14-hour marathon with a convincing 15-4, 15-10 in the championship final over Livonia Ladywood.

Liz Renius, a 5-foot-11 junior setter, teamed up with 6-foot sophomore hitter Kellie Nowak to lead the Kicking Mules to the title. Both were named to the All-Tournament team.

Renius was a freshman starter when Bedford won the Schoolcraft title in 1992.

'We have a strong middle, and with our setter, we're able to use a quick, multiple attack," said ninthyear Bedford coach Jodie Manore. "We can do that better than any team we've had.'

Bedford, which has won six of seven tournaments so far this season, is now 41-3-4 overall.

Ladywood gains final

Ladywood, meanwhile, had a good day despite being outmatched in the championship against Bedford.

The Blazers were led by All-Tourney picks Anne Poglits, a 6-4 junior who had 85 kills and 15 ace serves on the day, and 5-7 junior setter Renae Rozell (143 total assists).

Lyndi Paling added 26 kills, while Kristy Walker paced the defense with

The Blazers overcame serious challenges in the elimination round from Birmingham Marian (15-12, 16-14), Plymouth Salem (10-15, 15-12, 15-12) and Saline (15-12, 5-15, 15-6) to reach the final. In pool play, Ladywood ousted Class C-ranked Burton Atherton (16-14, 16-14) as Erin LeSage came through in the clutch.

"We had five close matches, and it's the best showing we've had all year," said Ladywood coach Tom Teeters, whose team is 25-5 overall. "I'm proud of the kids. For kids like Nicole Vondracek, a freshman, it's the highest level where we've been challenged all year."

Clarenceville fares well

The biggest surprise of the tourney, however, was little Livonia Clarenceville, coached by one of Teeters' former Schoolcraft players, Alisha Love.

The Trojans, a Class C school, won Pool B with a 6-2 record, stunning Livonia Stevenson in two straight while splitting with Livonia Franklin and Monroe St. Mary's.

In the quarterfinals, Clarenceville put up a fight before losing to Saline, 15-5, 16-18, 15-12.

Saline's 5-9 middle hitter Tracy Sniderman was the difference against the Trojans.

"This only prepares us for the state tourney," Love said. "We've been looking forward to this all season. These are some of the toughest teams we'll see. We just played great all day as a team. Right now we're looking for consistency and today that did it for us offensively and defensively."

Beaufait family cheers son Mark

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

Robert and Kay Beaufait will be two of the U.S. Olympic Hockey Team's biggest fans, but they'll have to settle for long-distance

With son Mark, a center, going for the gold in Lillehammer, Norway, the Beaufait family will have to keep abreast of the American icers via AT&T, television (with the help of a VCR) and radio. "We thought about going, the Olympic committee offers a three-day package," Robert said. "But we'd only get to see one or two games because they play every other day for 15 days. It's also quite expensive. Hotels are going for $300 to $600 a day." Some of the U.S. games may be tape delayed because of the sixhour time difference. CBS will televise some live, while TNT, the Turner cable network, is scheduled to pick up the rest. And if that's not good enough, there's always Channel 9, the CBC affiliate in Windsor.

Action starts Sunday

Team USA opens round-robin action Sunday against France, so Kay Beaufait will be scouring the TV listings.

"I've been trying to get a TV schedule, but I haven't found anything complete," she said. "If they're going at two in the morning, I'll just have to go to bed early and set my alarm.

Mark Beaufait, who as a kid plastered posters of the gold medal-winning 1980 "Miracle On Ice" U.S. Olympians in his bedroom wall, has already enjoyed a storybook hockey career.

"The newspaper said he scored on a giveaway by Wayne Gretzky," Kay Beaufait. "How many people can say they scored their first NHL goal while mentioned in the same paragraph with Wayne Gretzky?'

Last summer, Beaufait was invited to Cromwell, Conn., to try out for the U.S. Olympic Team.

He made the cut, earning the distinction of being only the second player from Livonia to make the U.S. squad. (Bentley High product Al Iafrate, now with the Washington Capitals, played for Team USA in 1984 at Sarajevo).

Traveling the globe

Since then, Beaufait has been on a whirlwind tour the past aix months with the American team, playing exhibition games throughout Europe, Canada and the U.S.

Team USA also faced several NHL teams during the tour and Beaufait impressed.

Flanked on a line by Jeff Lazaro, formerly of the Boston Bruins, and John Lilley, a member of the Seattle Thunderbirds of the Junior A Western Hockey League, Beaufait tallied at least one goal against every NHL club (including San Jose) with the exception of the Chicago Blackhawks. The U.S. squad left Feb. 1 to play a tournament in France, finishing 1-1-1. The club also flew to Oslo for orientation, then off to Sweden for another game before returning Saturday to Norway in time for the Winter Games' opening ceremonies.

Motel called home

"Mark told me the travel has been a real grind," Kay Beaufait said. "He's been living basically out of a suitcase for six months. His home is a motel room in Cromwell.

"But it's been a good experience for him. He's seen a lot of the country and the world. They played in Russia, and he said it was very depressing. He said you don't appreciate what we have here in our country until you go to a place like that."

"It's been exciting, but now I can't believe it's here," Kay Beaufait said. "We talked to Mark the other day by phone, and he's in an excellent frame of mind. He thinks they have an excellent chance of earning a medal. The team did well early on, but it's not important that they peak early."

Depending on the schedule, Robert and Kay Beaufait may have to take time off from their jobs at Great Lakes Heating & Cooling and Valassis Communications Inc., respectively, to watch the Olympics.

"It's unreal he's one of the 24 players picked to play for his country," said Kay, who proudly wears a Team USA hockey ski

Salem comes close

Plymouth Salem, minus junior setter Erin Koch for a long stretch because of sore achilles tendon, couldn't hold a 9-2 advantage in the third game before losing to Ladywood in the quarterfinals.

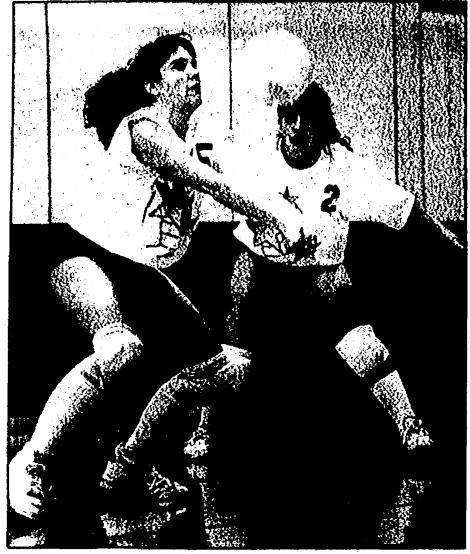

The Rocks' were led by senior Jamey Viau, also named to the All-Tourney team, and junior hitter Paula Dombrowski.

Salem and Ladywood could possibly meet again in a Class A regional final Saturday, March 12, at Berkley.

"A lot of positives came out of this even though we lost," Salem coach Brian Gilles said. "We played well with some other people in the lineup.

"I thought we grew up a bit today. We didn't come here last year, but we wanted to come back with some of the bigger clubs that were here. We had some good wins, and after a tough week, the kids did well.

Farmington Hills Mercy, second behind Salem in Pool E, reached the round of 16 before losing to East Kentwood, rated No. 4 in Class A, 15-6, 15-6.

The Marlins simply could not match up against the East Kentwood block provided by 6-1 senior Corie Richard, a Michigan State signee, and Mya Eveland, a 6-foot junior.

Two other area teams, Livonia Churchill and Livonia Franklin, each finished 5-3 in pool play, but were eliminated on tie breakers.

Churchill lost out by one point to Saline in Pool D, while Franklin came up three points short in Pool B to Monroe St. Mary's Catholic Central.

Goins nets 36, fuels Rockets past Franklin

By NEAL ZIPSER STAFF WRITER

Even though Westland John Glenn's gym was unavailable Tuesday, Tony Goins and Rockets coach Mike Schuette couldn't have felt more at home at Marshall Junior High.

Goins, who played at Marshall one season before attending Glenn, lighted up his former stomping grounds with a careerhigh 36 points to lead the Rockets to a 72-57 boys basketball win over Livonia Franklin.

Schuette, who works at the middle school during the day, didn't mind missing the drive in the snow over to Glenn to watch his team rebound from Friday's 73-61 loss to Farmington. The Rockets improved to 11-2 overall and 6-1 in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

"I think our legs were fresh, our minds were fresh, and we put the ball in the basket when we had to," Schuette said.

Goins, who shot 15-of-21 from the floor and 6-of-6 from the free-throw line, agreed that the Rockets had a different attitude Tuesday.

"I think that (Friday's loss) was a wake-up call for us, and it told us that we weren't as good as we thought we were," the senior forward said. "I felt comfortable out there tonight. I haven't played well the last souple of games and coach told me I had to step it up."

The status of Glenn's gym remains uncertain. School authorities opted not to play in the gym because of a repeat problem of lighting fixtures falling from the ceiling.

The Rockets' next home game is Friday, Feb. 18, against league-leading Plymouth Salem.

The Rockets, who survived a span of four games in six days last week, needed a 17-5 run to open the fourth quarter to pull away from the Patriots (6-5 overall and 4-3 in the WLAA).

The Patriots could blame the loss on their poor shooting. Franklin made only 20-of-68 field goal attempts (29 percent).

"We didn't shoot well from the outside the entire the game. and more than anything, that led to the loss," Franklin coach Larry Jackson said...

The Patriots led for most of the first quarter before a threepoint play by Goins tied the score at 15. Franklin was able to score some easy baskets by breaking a seemingly harmless Glenn press.

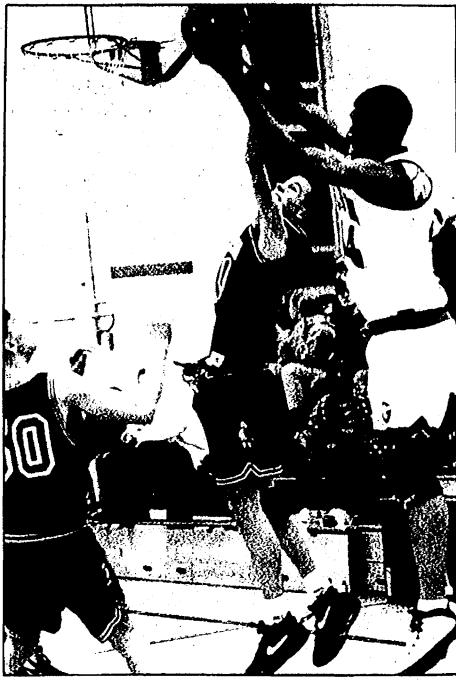

"We were pressing not to steal the ball, but to slow them down," Schuette said. "We did lack concentration getting back on defense, though.

Goins exploded for 12-second quarter points, but Franklin trailed only 32-30 at halftime after a buzzer-beating triple by Mark Baluk.

Senior guard Clem Herrera scored the first nine Franklin points of the third quarter and kept the Patriots within striking range.

Baluk and Herrera had 17 apiece to lead Franklin.

But Franklin couldn't pull closer to within five as Goins and junior center Guy Rucker scored at will. Rucker played a solid game by scoring 14 points, grabbing 10 rebounds and blocking eight shots. Goins added seven rebounds and five blocks.

"Our game plan was to try and control Goins and Rucker and not let them go crazy, but Goins went crazy," Jackson Goins scored eight of the Rockets' first 10 points of the fourth to widen a six-point lead to 60-47. The lead was increased to as many as 18, as Glenn held Franklin to three points during the quarter's first 4:33.

"I told them after the third quarter we can get the points we need to win, but we have to do it with defense and step up the intensity," Schuette said.

Tom Lang said. "The kids did what I asked of them and we were able to get some easy baskets off their press."

Crusaders can't stand prosperity

All the ingredients were there for another win for Madonna University's men's basketball team.

For 30 minutes, anyway. The Fighting Crusaders had a 55-49 halftime lead over visiting Tri-State University Saturday, and with 10 minutes to play their lead was 10, according to coach Bill Sharpe. But it all ended there: Free throws became a factor, and so did technical fouls called against J. Dimes and Christian Emert.

The momentum quickly dissipated. So did the lead. Tri-State made 35 trips to the free throw line and converted an amazing 32 of them (91.4 percent) for the game; Madonna was 9-of-12 (75 percent).

The end result was a 111-88 loss, Madonna's 24th in 26 outings this season. Tri-State improved to 11-10.

Despite the defeat, Sharpe was pleased with his team's effort. Mike Slone (from Plymouth Salem) enjoyed his finest scoring game, connecting on 12-of-16 floor shots - including 6-of-8 threepointers — in scoring 30 points. Dimes added 14 and grabbed eight rebounds. Dan Dombrow netted 12 points and had four assists. Brandon Slone and Kurt Carlos each scored eight points.

"When you play a team like that - a national qualifier last year, a team that kicked the COLLEGES

(heck) out of you the first time you played - and stay ahead of them for three-quarters of the game, that's a major step," said

Tri-State got 33 points from Chris Singpiel, 24 from Doug Targgart, 16 from Frank Berg and 12 from Andrew Hinkle. Tri-State connected on 72 percent of its field goal attempts in the second half and was 37-of-60 for the game (61.6 percent). Madonna was 35of-65 for the game (53.8 percent).

TRI-STATE 57, MADONNA (WOMEN) 39: Finding a reason for the Lady Crusaders' loss Sat-urday in Angola, Ind., was easier than finding a solution

Madonna simply couldn't score. At the half Tri-State led 29-25; over the last 20 minutes, the Crusaders managed to score just 14

"You're not going to win any games scoring just 14 points in the second half," said Madonna coach Bill Potter. "They were getting good shots, they just weren't falling. Right now, we're struggling offensively. In crucial situations we're not getting a person to step

Potter estimated that the Crusaders missed 20 layups in the game. In the second half, they were 7-of-28 from the floor (25 percent). Stephanie Crelley, the team's top scoring threat since Shawn Bannon was lost to a knee injury three weeks ago, managed just two Denise Williams led Madonna with 12 points. Mary Bieniewicz (Farmington Hills Mercy) scored 10. Carmen Ham led Tri-State with 15; Traci Everidge had 12, and Jennifer Rushton scored 11.

The win boosted Tri-State to 12-11 overall. Madonna fell to 9-12.

Lady Ocelots fall 2 short

A miracle finish rimmed out for Schoolcraft College's women's basketball team Saturday, dooming the Lady Ocelots to a 50-48 loss to Mott CC in Flint.

The defeat dropped SC to 4-8 in the Eastern Conference, 8-9 over-

With 10 seconds left in the game, the Ocelots trailed 50-46 with a Lady Bear at the free throw line with a one-and-one opportunity. The shot missed, the Ocelots rebounded and Dawn Newlin was fouled driving to the basket. She converted both free throws to pull SC to within two.

Mott made matters worse by committing a violation on the ensuing inbounds pass, thus turning the ball back over to the Ocelots. Angie Cerne, who led SC with 13 points, got off a 10-foot attempt to tie with three seconds remaining, but it missed.

No one else reached double figures in scoring for the Ocelots, who trailed 29-28 at the half. Shelly Sockow had nine points FLINT MOTT 98, SCHOOLCRAFT (MEN) 84: For about 80 percent of Saturday's game at Mott CC, Schoolcraft College's men's team was the Bears equal

But in one five-minute stretch...

The game was tied with 13 minutes left in the first half. Then, according to SC coach Dave Bogatai, something happened to his team. Poor decisions, poor shots - a good performance gone had. "We started to play terrible," he said.

Ocelots regrouped and recovered, buoying a sinking ship. They played the Bears evenly the rest of the way.

Only that wasn't nearly enough. During that one bad stretch. Mott outscored SC 18-4 which allowed the Bears to open up a 60-44 advantage at the half. They protected that lead the rest of the game, never allowing the Ocelots to get closer than 10 in the second

'We won the second half," said Bogataj. "I thought we stuck with 'em pretty good.' But SC couldn't overtake the team atop the Eastern Conference standings. Mott is 8-4 in the conference; 14-8 overall; SC is 7-16 overall, 1-12 in the conference. Four players reached double figures in scoring for SC: Todd McNeil (23 points), Dan Perttula (22), Lamonte Fondren (17) and Mark Cady (10). Tony Maciejewski grabbed seven rebounds, and Fadi Bazzi dished out six Robert Harris led Mott with 30 points, 22 coming in the first half. Kevin Polite had 27 (18 in the second half), Tim Herron 12 and Ameer Berry 10 (all in the first half).

The Ocelots were still without second-leading scorer Steve Whitlow, who has been sidelined for two weeks with a serious virus. His return before the season ends is unlikely,

Lutheran Westland pulls upset

Lutheran High Westland scored its biggest victory ever in boys basketball Tuesday, handing Metro leader Harper Woods Lutheran East its first conference defeat, 62-48.

East falls to 13-2 overall and 8-1 in the Metro. The Warriors are 6-7 and 5-3.

"We executed as a team," said Lutheran Westland coach Scott Wiemer, who beat East for the first time in seven years. "They had more talent, but we won as a team. We played well. Defense was the key. We scored a lot off of steals and the transition game."

Chris Tieran, a junior guard, led the host Warriors with 16 points, nine rebounds and six as-

Jeff Lichtner, a senior center, scored 14 of his 15 points in the second half as the Warriors broke away from a 25-24 halftime advantage.

Junior forward Jon Smolka chipped in with 10 points.

Local gal stars in 'Crazy For You'

■ Karen Ziemba was in all the musicals at North Farmington High School in the 1970s. She's performed on Broadway and stars in "Crazy For You."

BY KEELY WYGONIK STAFF WRITER

From the time she was a little girl, Karen Ziemba, who starred in musicals at North Farmington High School, and later Broadway, knew she wanted to be a performer.

"I've taken dance lessons since I was 6. I excelled at it, and it made me happy to make other people feel good. It's very satisfying," said Ziemba, who will be coming home Feb. 15 to March 6 to star in the new Gershwin comedy "Crazy For You" at the Fisher Theatre.

"It's pretty exciting," she said in a telephone interview from her hotel room in Cincinatti where the show was playing. "I'm very proud to be doing this show. People walk away feeling lighter than air - like they can dance, and it's so funny. It makes them feel good.'

Ziemba portrays Polly Baker, the only woman in Deadrock, Nev., a town of 157 men in the 1930s. Her life takes a turn when rich, pampered, playboy Bobby Child is sent to town by his domineering mother to foreclose on a long-vacant theater. Immediately love is in the air along with fast-breaking plot twists, high-stepping dances and plenty of chorus "dames and guys" in the spirit of the great, glamorous. musical comedies of the Broadway Theatre.

"Polly is the daughter of the man High School. who owned the old theater -- now it's a post office. Her is mother, who

Los Angeles and asked Ziemba to sign her program. The program was from North Farmington High School's production of "West Side Story." Ziemba starred as Maria. Regan's brother was also in the show.

"She's just a delightful person," said Regan. "A great gal. It was really something to walk back stage and meet her. In the program she talked about what she wanted to do aftergraduating from high school - sing, dance and act on Broadway. It's so wonderful that she reached her goal, she's just so talented. I had tears in my eyes at the end of the show. She was someone who set out to dosomething, and did it."

One of the people who helped nurture Ziemba was Evelyn Kreason, artistic director of the Midwest Dance Theatre. "She made us go to New York to see Broadway musicals," said Ziemba. "She showed us what it was really like to be dancer."

"I had Karen as a student from the time she was 7 until she graduated from high school," said Kreason who is still teaching dance. "She was a lovely dancer and a lovely girl. I took the girls to summer dance classes in New York when Karen was in high school. They saw what the competition was like and attended the ballet and Broadway musicals. I called Azenberg and Neufeld in New York just before they left for Birmingham, to talk about the show. While both acknowledged that a female triumvirate was a bit unusual in a production, neither believes that theater discriminates against women. "Deep in my heart I suppose it's true," Azenburg said, "but I've had wonderful opportunities. Of course, this has all happened in the last few years, and it does take time to work up the ladder. I think the day is coming when we'll see a more even distribution between male and female di-

Azenberg, who has choreographed several productions for Michigan Opera Theatre, has directed and choreographed for Off-Broadway, regional, and stock theaters, as well as symphony orchestras and opera compa-

"I think any discrimination against women is mostly unconscious," Azenberg said. "Men simply feel more comfortable working with men, and men run the theaters and hire the directors.

"Actually, for me, age is more a discriminatory factor than sex. I overhear stage hands remark in disbelief that 'this little girl' is running the show. I find it humorous that people are so surprised to find that I'm the director." Like other directors, Azenberg said she faces the challenge of being assertive without being shrewish and must go through the "courting process" with the actors to prove herself to them.

Neufeld got her first stage manager job in the early 1970s when the public theater in New York was doing a rock musical about women's liberation. She challenged the producer, Joseph Papp, to hire a woman.

"Another time I got the job when a British director requested a woman stage manager because he felt women had more 'soul.' That's a lot of hooey, but at least I got the job," she said.

"Personally, I enjoy hiring both men and women as my assistants,' Neufeld said. "Each can relate to the ". cast in different ways.

Neufeld also said that women stage managers really predominate in regional theaters. While they are still a decided minority on Broadway productions, their number is slowly growing.

Barbara Michals is an inveterate play-goer who regularly catches up on all the New York productions.

Written in 1896, "You Never Can Tell" is a comedy involving a middle-aged suffragette, Mrs. Clandon, who has returned to England from Madeira after 18 years with her beautiful daughter and wild-spirited twins in tow.

They were gone for so long because Mrs. Clandon wanted to keep her children away from the influences of their chauvinist, middle-class father, Fergus Crampton. Some sort of reconciliation is inevitable because Crampton wants custody of the twins; the twins are interested in Crampton because they've heard he has become wealthy, and the eldest daughter, the beautiful and liberated Gloria, has fallen in love with her father's dentist.

Vada's search leads to self-discovery in 'My Girl 2'

In "My Girl," in the open-ended stillness of a Pennsylvania summer, movie audiences were introduced to a precocious 11year-old named Vada Sultenfuss. The summer of 1972 was a summer of long, hot, dreamy days the kind of days that could lull you into believing that things would go on like this forever.

But for Vada Sultenfuss, the summer of 1972 turned out to be a season of irrevocable change: her first kiss, learning to share her father with another woman and learning to face the painfull loss of her best friend.

"My Girl 2" opening Friday at metro Detroit movie theaters, picks up in the spring of 1974. Vada's home life is different now. Her father, Harry (Dan Aykroyd), has settled happily into his new marriage to the vivacious Shelly (Jamie Lee Curtis), who is now very pregnant. Vada is adjusting to the profound influences of babies, breasts and boyfriends, and to top it off, has been bounced out of her room to make way for the new arrival. When Vada chooses to write about her deceased mother, Maggie, for a school assignment, Harry isn't much help in providing clues to her mysterious past.

After all, he only knew her for two weeks before they were married, and she died shortly after Vada was born. All Harry can show Vada is the faint stain on the living room floor where her mother's Halloween pumpkin exploded under the Christmas tree.

With Shelley's help, Vada persuades Harry to let her visit her Uncle Phil (Richard Masur) in Los Angeles over spring break. Perhaps there, on her mother's home turf, she can fill in the details of her mother's sketchy por-

On her arrival in the City of Angels, a dubious Vada meets her reluctant "tour guide," Nick (Austin O'Brien), who has been coerced into service by her Uncle Phil and his girlfriend Rose (Christine Ebersole). Dispite their initial dislike for each other, Vada and Nick embark on a trail of scattered clues that Vada hopes will lead them to her mother's identity.

Their wanderings take them to such Los Angeles landmarks as Hollywood Boulevard, Grauman's Chinese Theatre, the La Brea Tarpits and the backlot of a major motion picture studio.

In pursuit of clues that can reveal her mother's identity, Vada will also learn more about own place in her evolving family; about first love; about making a mark and about the challenge of following a dream.

Columbia Pictures presents an Imagine Entertainment Production, "My Girl 2," the sequel to the film that has earned more than $120 million in worldwide box-office receipts. The film is directed by Howard Zieff and produced by Brian Grazer.

Three years after the exhaustive national casting search that led to Anna Chlumsky's discovery, the spirited 13-year-old returns to the role that made her America's sweetheart. Anna, like her character Vada, has evolved into a budding beauty with athe beguiling blue eyes and radiant smile that charmed audiences in the original "My Girl."

Coming off of the enormous success of the first film (due, in part, to the pairing of Anna Chlumsky and Macaulay Culkin), the filmmakers were met with the challenge of creating and casting a role of a young man who would be an interesting match for Vada in the squel.

Columbia Pictures did not have to look any farther than their summer action-adventure film, "Last Action Hero," to find young Austin O'Brien to fill the role of Nick. The character of Nick is a striking contrast to Vida - the LA-raised, independent son of Uncle Phil's girlfriend facing off against the equally independent daughter of Madison, Pennsylvania's only undertaker.

Boy cashes in with 'Blank Check'

When 11-year-old Preston Waters' (Brian Bonsall) rusty old 3speed bicycle is accidentally run over by a shiny new Jaguar driven by a crook named Quigley (Miguel Ferrer), his prized possession is instantly reduced to a useless heap of twisted metal.

However, the settlement for damages is about to take Preston on the most fun-filled ride of his life as Quigley, a criminal involved in a money-laundering scheme, quickly dashes off a check to pay for the bike, but in his haste neglects to fill in the amount in "Blank Check," a Walt Disney Pictures presentation opening Friday at metro Detroit movie theaters.

The fool and his money are soon parted when Preston sees the oversight and boldly fills in the amount: $1 million.

Now, Preston embarks on the wildest spending spree ever, buying everything he ever dreamed of owning and living the high life that most people just imagine. With a sack full of cash, he hires a personal chauffeur (Rick Ducommun), buys a great house and throws himself an enormous 12th birthday bash.

But the party's over when the FBI, Quigley and his thugs descend as uninvited guests, and Preston discovers the hardest thing about having a million dollars is trying to hold on to it.

Also starring Karen Duffy, Tone Loc and Michael Lerner, "Blank Check" is directed by Rupert Wainwright from a screenplay written by Blake Snyder and Colby Carr. The producers are Craig Baumgarten and Gary Adelson. Hilary Wayne and Blake Snyder are executive producers. Buena Vista Pictures is the distributor.

"Preston starts out as kind of a nerd," said Brian Bonsall. "Nobody likes him because he's shy. But then he gets a blank check and becomes the coolest kid around, and everyone else is jealous. In the end, he finds out he's really an OK person and does know how to make friends.'

Birthday boy: After a week of reckless spending, Preston (Brian Bonsall) center, is once again flat broke and an ordinary member of his family.

Parent-teacher conferences are worth the chat ommunication with parents is an essential part of any good early education program. Parents want to know and need to know about their child from a school's perspective.

Early childhood educators are skilled and have an eye for child development. They can articulate about a child in a way that makes sense to parents and better help them to understand about their own child's skills and behavior.

Parent-teacher/provider conferences are a vital part of this communication process. Schools and most child-care centers schedule regular parent-teacher conferences. Family/group childcare providers also should make this practice part of their program.

Parent-teacher/provider conferences are for just that - to confer, a two-way street of communication, exchanging ideas and information about the child. The information is exchanged and/or shared hopefully in a beneficial as well as positive manner. Educators planning for a conference consider planning as an ongoing process. While collecting children's artwork and daily recording typical behaviors, interests and strengths or weaknesses, early childhood educators are armed with what they need to share with parents. This preparation and planning sets the stage for meaningful dialogue.

Preparation counts

Remember, parents come to conferences to be informed about their child. It's upsetting to a parent to think that the teacher isn't prepared or lacks interest in his child's growth and progress. If the parent already has bad feelings about his child's teacher, then having mediocre information about the child won't change the parent's attitude.

Also, teachers should help parents prepare for the conferences. Announcements should be sent out in advance so parents can adjust their busy schedules. Also, this will give parents time enough to jot down things they want to discuss and questions pertaining to their child's Teachers should set the stage for a relaxed one-on-one setting. Parents must feel a part of their child's school program and comfortable with the teacher or child-care provider. Some parents may feel intimidated in a parentteacher/provider conference setting. As a parent, it's normal to feel you'll receive information about your child that perhaps you should know already. And when you don't know, you may feel inadequate.

Then, too, there's that feeling of finding out something you just don't want to hear. Parents can easily become intimidated in a formal school environment or child-care setting where flashbacks of their own school experiences come into play. Memories of anticipating their parents or themselves meeting with the principal, teacher or counselor can make a parent tense.

Make it good

Therefore, when educators strive to conduct a "good" conference with parents, keep in mind these suggestions:

(1) Help parents to feel good about being there on the teacher/provider's "turf," so to

(2) Communicate with parents on their level without educational jargon. Heavy jargon builds barriers and gives the impression of secrecy -"parents not welcome" - to understanding what the teacher/provider knows.

(3) Apply active listening skills when parents are talking. Don't give parents the impression you know all. Parents provide specific information and suggestions teachers/providers can use to help the child in school and vice versa. (4) Be empathetic when parents discuss their

(5) Avoid being judgmental. Just communicate what you as the professional have observed and give specific ways or suggestions parents can help their child.

A quick negative closed response by a teacher/provider can stop productive communication dead in its tracks. Comments, such as "You really need to spend more time with your child," or a defensive statement like "I find that really hard to believe," will probably be a sure-fire way to limit the parents' willingness to further the

(6) Highlight the positive attributes as much as possible. Even if there are some problems or concerns that warrant attention, get to the point, make it clear and understandable without grinding the issue. In other words, try a balanced

■ If it is true that actions speak louder than words, then Larry Detvay and Harry Stansell have no need for cards, flowers and candy this Valentine's Day. They have shown their love by being there for Detvay's parents and Stansell's wife when it mattered most.

BY SUE MASON STAFF WRITER

Andy and Alma Detvay had their retirement planned out. Andy would retire from his job at Pepsi-Cola with a full pension at the age of 62. They would move to their retirement home on 10 acres in Mio and Andy would work on cars in its six-car garage.

But things have a way of chang-

Andy's now 63. Instead of working on cars up north, he sits in a lift chair in the living room of their Garden City home. Some days are good; some days aren't so good.

He did retire from Pepsi, but it was earlier than planned. It could be Alzheimer's disease; it could be a series of strokes. Doctors aren't sure, only an autopsy after his death will explain the confusion that started in 1987 and growing loss of movement that now affects Alma sits on the coach. She isn't faring very well herself. Her right hand rests limply in her lap. She's recovering from surgery in January when doctors put a rod in to repair a broken shoulder.

It's the third time they've done such a procedure. She has a rod and pin in her right hip and a rod in her left hip. Her bones are "paper thin" and break easily, the result of bone cancer that surfaced three years after a bout with breast cancer.

'Good to me'

'We'll be married 43 years in March," Alma said. "I couldn't ask for a better husband; he's been so good to me. That's why it's so hard to have something like this happen."

Unable to help her husband, Alma relies on their only son Larry. Laid off from his job with Pepsi three years ago, he comes to the house each day and helps get his father up and feed him and later puts him to bed. He never expected to find himself doing that, but he does it for a reason . . . love.

"I've always told my parents I loved them and my dad knew I loved him," Larry said. "My dad was always a private person; I never saw him without clothes. But now I change his diapers and clean up after him and it comes very easily. I do it out of love and devotion and for what he's done for me."

Larry recalls when they both worked for Pepsi; his father on days, he on afternoons. At quitting time, Andy would stand at one of the garage and wave until Larry saw him and waved back. He recalls his father helping him pick out and work on his 1930 Ford. Andy doesn't know it, but Larry did finish restoring it. Even driven by love, Larry hasn't been able to do it all. He's found help through Hospice Services of Western Wayne County Inc. Volunteers have been coming to the Detvay home for a year, helping care for Andy and provide respite so Alma can go grocery shopping, go out to dinner or see a movie. The Detvays discovered the agency quite by chance. They had called several agencies, Including Veterans Administratiuon, looking for help, when Larry's wife happened to visit the former Harrison School where HWW is based.

Our friends

That was about a year ago and now Alma and Larry can't say enough about HWW. They are "200 percent" believers in what the agency does, so much so that Larry used his car to promote HWW in the recent Santaland parade. They lavish praise on volunteers Doug Albrecht, Keith Kenyon and Gladys Stamp. It's a business relationship that has blossomed into friendships.

In good weather, Kenyon takes Andy for wheelchair rides and when Alma had surgery last month, volunteers were there to help so Larry could be with his mother.

"Couldn't ask for a nicer bunch of people," Larry said. "They give so much of themselves. Doug has a heart of gold and Keith and Gladys are over here all the time."

But Larry is a realist. He knows, even with the help of hospice, his father will get progressively worse. Last year he could stand in the shower, now he gets sponge baths. Eventually, he won't be able to even swallow. Doctors say Andy is in the last stages of his illness.

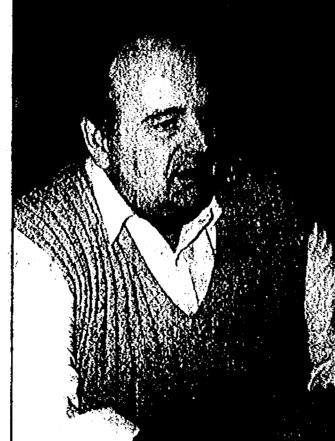

It saddens him to know that some day his mother will have to give up the first home she and Andy bought and move in with her son, but he finds comfort in knowing that the hospice volunteers will there to help.

He also takes comfort in knowing that he let his father know how much he loved him - "I always told my father I loved him and he always told me he loved me. I know deep down inside I've done my best: I've done all I can do. I'll do all I can and as much as I can for as long as I can."

He also knows that his father knew he had a granddaughter, four-year-old Mary Beth, who also helps care for "Papa." She puts on his socks and gets his straws for his drinks. She even keeps an eye on him while playing with her doll, named Naked for her lack of clothing.

Larry takes each day as it comes and enjoys each minute he can spend with his parents. As difficult as it has been, his layoff has been a blessing.

"I take life one day at a time and live life to the fullest because there's no promise of tomorrow," Larry said. "I enjoy each moment as much as I can.'

ART EMANUELE/STATE PHOTOGRAPHER

At peace: It was difficult at times to honor his wife Lucia's wish to die at nome, out with the neip of hospice, Harry Stansell and his children were able to fulfill it.

... FOR MY WIFE

By Sue Mason

When Lucia Stansell died in February 1993 of ovarian cancer, she left her husband Harry a few instructions. He had to wait at least a year before he could date and "no horsing around."

Harry chuckles then recalls a list she had made up 17 years earlier when she was diagnosed with breast cancer. Lucia had a lot of single friends at the time and the list was of those she found acceptable for her husband to date, if her illness took a turn for the worse.

"She was pretty set in her ways," Harry said. "She was from Calabria, Italy. People from there are very stubborn and hardheaded. Her father once told me she had a head like a block of cement."

Harry is adjusting to his status as a widower and talks freely about his wife and their life together, sometimes with humor, sometimes with tears in his eyes, but always in loving tones.

Married for 27 years, the Stansells took their wedding vows seriously, "especially the ones about in sickness and in health." How Lucia chose to spend the waning moments of her life at their Plymouth home and what Harry did for her is proof of that.

You hear about some guys who when something like this happens, they take off and don't come back," Stansell said. "I don't know how they could do that. I never thought of that; it never occurred to me."

Those who know Harry say he underplays what he did for Lucia. With children still at home, the total care of the family and Lucia fell on his shoulders.

Harry admits it wasn't easy and says he couldn't have done it without help - help from family, from friends, from their church and from Hospice of Western Wayne County Inc.

A chemical engineer, the support permitted him to continue working.

"When you look back on something like this, you tend to think, 'How did I ever do it?' " he said. "And without the hospice help it would have been much harder. Wanting to be there and to do something just came naturally . . .

Lucia was first diagnosed with breast cancer in November 1966, shortly after the birth of their first child, Mary Rose. The treatment of choice was a radical mastectomy, followed by radiation treatment.

Although told she shouldn't have any more children, the Stansells chose to have four more children - Anna Marie, Michael Joseph, Harry Jr. and Christina. Harry jokes that his wife was kicked out of Reach for Recovery, a program for women who have had mastectomies, because she got pregnant.

After 17 years of relatively good health,

When it comes to the family name, continuity counts

What is in a name? A friend was driving home on an icy evening. She braked to stop for a light. Her car slid into a car in front of her. She discovered that she had hit her husband's car. He was also on his way home.

When the police arrived, he asked for their driver's licenses. They told the officer that they were husband and wife. What the officer observed was two different last names. The wife had to explain that when they were married she had kept her own family

Today married people may have different last names and wives may not wear a wedding band. It is a matter of life style and a personal choice women are making to keep their family name after they are married. For some women a professional identity is important. For other women taking on the husband's surname feels like a loss of their own identity.

I believe in the importance of the continuity of generations. What is in a name? My mother still does not know much about her grandinother's family. Her grandmother went to live with another family when her mother died. Grandmother took on the family name of the family with whom she lived. It still is confusing as to who my great-grandmother's family had been.

Family and community are important values. We are connected in ways that are at times mysterious. Life does not work if we always choose individually and ignore community needs. Genealogy is important because the young will one day ask about their roots. Tracing family connections becomes even more difficult because of the mobility of people. Today there may not be baptism, church or temple records. There may not even be cemetery plots.

The confusion of family connection can be difficult when children have last names different from their parents. Divorce is often the reason for this. In addition men and women choose to have names that are different from their children.

Women rightfully feel a loss when they remove their family name and take on the surname of their husband. Despite this we must plead for continuity and connection for our children. For those married people who plan not to have children there is no issue at stake. I feel sorry for children whose names are hyphenated. When they become parents how will they name their child?

The major issue regarding surnames is the need to support community and family connections for the next generations. The couples who marry this spring need to think through this issue carefully. There is no perfect answer. Yet we must be sensitive to the fact that the next generations have a stake in naming decisions.

Family name continuity is only one way that we may strengthen; the family and the community; Many factors are destroying family ly and community cohesiveness We need to examine and strength. en every element that supports these values.

Lucia was diagnosed with ovarian cancer; the treatment was a hysterectomy and chemotherapy. But two years later the cancer returned. There was more surgery followed by aggressive chemotherapy so strong that it caused nerve damage, leaving her with little use of her hands. It didn't stop the cancer.

It was Lucia's decision not to be hospitalized and doctors made a referral to hospice.

"It's something you talk yourself into," said Stansell about caring for Lucia. "If you had a choice you know you'd rather be doing something else. It would have been a big concern, if there hadn't been anybody to show the proper way to help out the patient.

"Once in a while, when I'd see it was bothering the kids, I'd wonder if it would have been better if she wasn't at home, but I really didn't dwell on it too much, because her request had always been to be at home."

Many family friends and people they knew from the family church, Our Lady of Good Counsel in Plymouth, came to spend time with Lucia. One friend made tapes of cable TV's "Mother Angelica" show and brought over a copy of the film, "Sister Act." Lucia watched the film many times: she liked the music, according to Hospice workers like Anita Schenk, Jackie Speen, Flo Pofford and Karen Zorney helped the Stansells through the difficult times. They helped prepare the family for Lucia's death and helped make their day-to-day life as easy as possible. Stansell said.

"With hospice, it was easy for the family and Lucia to say goodbye," he said. "When the end finally came, the only thing you could say was thank God it was over for her.

"She was a very devout Christian and really looked forward to going home (to the Lord).'

These days, the Stansells are adjusting to their loss. Anna Marie married last spring and the family figures Lucia "was there (in spirit), or at least watching.'

Stansell has returned to working full time and has resumed some business trips. He also gets to baby-sit his grandson every other Saturday. The three children still at home - Christina who attends at Schoolcraft College, Michael who is at Eastern Michigan University and Harry Jr., a senior at Catholic Central High School - help around the house and make the meals.

And friends still are a big part of the family life.

"Our family's lives have changed because they (the children) have lost their mother and I've lost my wife," Stansell said. "Hospice helped us to adjust to it good.

(7) Be time conscious. During the planning process allocate adequate time periods to effectively discuss concerns about children. Set a conference agenda so priorities are met. By doing this, educators can explain goals and objectives, answer parents' questions and allow precious time for parents to talk.

(8) Follow up. The valuable sharing time and getting to know more about the child's background, family values and their life outside the classroom are important pieces to the bigger picture of the "whole child." These findings can be a great asset to followup planning and implementation of new activities and techniques used to educate children. Also, followup practices are stepping stones to progress better early education programs, approach with the good and not so satisfied and actively participating parents and well-rounded children.

Jacobson's hosts bridal extravaganza

It has the makings of a marriage made in heaven - an extravagant bridal fashion show produced by a premiere specialty retailer at a breathtaking Detroit venue. On Tuesday, Feb. 22, Jacobson Stores Inc. will unveil an array of fashions for the entire bridal party at the Fox Theatre, and "The Making of a Great Wedding" promises to be the most engaging bridal show of the season.

Actress Lynda Carter will host the bridal spectacular. The singer, dancer and producer is best known for her role as "Wonder" Woman" in the show of the same name.

When she isn't entertaining, Carter is lending her time and talents to such charitable causes as the Susan G. Komen Foundation for breast cancer education and research. Recently, the organization acknowledged her efforts by giving Carter the Jill Ireland Award for volunteerism. Because Carter and Jacobson's share a commitment to breast cancer treatment and research, a portion of each $20 ticket sold will be donated to that cause.

During the event, brides and their families will be treated to an evening of fashion and fun, including complimentary refreshnir gifts. Everyone in attendance will be eligible to win prizes such as a honeymoon cruise for two.

Prior to the runway show, those attending can obtain advice on wedding planning from an array of exhibitors featuring table settings, gift ideas, jewelry for the bride and bridal party, bridal accessories, makeup and salon consultants and other merchandise relating to wedding and honeymoon planning and setting up a home.

Women are attaining higher education levels, experiencing more career opportunities and getting married later. In 1967, the average marriage age for brides was 20.6 years. In 1992, the average age was 25.7.

Individuals who are getting married in the 1990s are more sophisticated than ever and they have more money to spend. A recent survey found that an average wedding ceremony and reception consisting of approximately 200 guests costs more than $10,000. ments, hors d'oeuvres and souve-. In urban areas, that number can jump to more than $35,000.

In fact, first-time marriage couples will spend $28 billion for goods and services, including $13.1 billion on wedding and reception, $7.8 billion on housewares and home furnishings, $3.7 billion on honeymoon travel and apparel and $3.2 billion on engagement and wedding rings.

Portions of "The Making of a Great Wedding" will air as part of a Jacobson's bridal TV special at 7 p.m. Saturday, March 19, on WKBD-TV Channel 50. The hour-long program will feature highlights from Jacobson's bridal event at the Fox Theatre. It will be augmented by specially-created segments devoted to advice on all aspects of planning a wedding, honeymoon and setting up a home.

Tickets for the bridal show are available through all TicketMaster outlets or at Jacobson's stores in the metro Detroit area.

WELCOME.

Roman politics shorts February on the calendar deluge of mail order seed catalogs has begun, so spring cannot be far behind! Spring will be here in less than six weeks. February, the shortest month of the year, has only 28 days in 1994.

People often wonder why this one month is so short, when all the others are at least 30 days

The annual long. The reason for the shortcoming can be blamed on politics in Roman times.

The ancient Roman calendar began with the month of March and ended with February. It was an imperfect calendar and, over the course of many centuries, it got out of synchronization with the seasons. Calendar reform was badly needed.

The calendar would have been much easier to deal with if our year (the time it takes the earth to complete one orbit around the sun) were exactly 360 days long. There could be 12 months, each having 30 days. Unfortunately the earth takes 365.26 days to complete its orbit and those extra 5.26 days complicated matters.

It was Julius Caesar who brought the calendar back into step with the seasons. He decreed that the months would alternate in length, having either 31 or 30 days. March, the traditional first month of the year, was given 31 days. April followed with 30 days, May had 31 and so on. By the time February, the last month of the year, rolled around, there needed to be only 29 days to add up to a total of 365. Unfortunately there was still that inconvenient 0.26 of a day left over and that added up each year. It was decided that once every 4 years February would have 30 days.

Being very pleased with the results, Julius Caesar named one of the months "July" to honor him-

Julius' successor was his nephew, Augustus, who felt that he ought to have a month named for him as well, hence the month August, But because August followed a month of 31 days, it was allotted only 30 days of its own. Believing he was every bit as deserving as Julius, Augustus decided that his month should have just as many days as July, so he took one day from February and added it to August. That left February with only 28 days, or 29 on leap years.

All in all, we should be grateful to Augustus; by yanking a day out of February, he brought us one day closer to spring and gave us an extra day in summer! Alas, that's about the only thing Skywatchers can cheer about this month; astronomically speaking, February is the pits!

Study shows how people spend time changes with age

As we age and our hair thins and turns gray, how we spend our time also changes in predictable ways, according to a University of Michigan study.

The study, presented Nov. 22 at the Gerontological Society of America meeting in New Orleans, traces how activities change as men and women go from one stage of life to another, and how chronic illness affects a broad range of activities. It is the first study to track time use by individuals over a period of nearly 35 years.

"In general, society has seen little change in how individuals of different ages spend their time," said Lois Verbrugge, a research scientist at the U-M Institute of Gerontology. "There is one striking exception: women are spending more time working outside the home than they used to and less time doing housework, while it's just the opposite for men."

For the study, Verbrugge and Ann Gruber-Baldini, a researcher with the Hebrew Home of Greater Washington in Rockville, Md., analyzed data from 1,249 men and 567 women participating in the Baltimore Longitudinal Study of Aging, conducted by the National Institute on Aging.

From 1958 through 1992, participants in the study, ages 20 to 90, completed a detailed activity questionnaire about the amount of time they spent on a wide range of activities, including personal

■ In general, time spent on personal care, sleep and rest and passive leisure activities increases in late life, while time spent on work and sports decreases.

"The most pronounced drops in late life appear for both men and women in work, child care, public service and sports," said Verbrugge, "Men and women with chronic health conditions have an even greater than average drop in these areas, but in general, the impact of chronic disease is not as great on time use as the impact of age. Over the past three decades, the amount of time middle-aged men spend working has dropped, while women's time spent working has increased sharply in midlife. Housework shows exactly the opposite changes, with rising involvement by men since the .1960s and declining involvement by women at all ages. Men of most ages have also increased the time they spend on household repairs and yard work, on shopping, and at ages 30 through 49, on

According to Verbrugge, these changes are the only strong shift in time use, reflecting societal changes in opportunities and incentives for men and women, brought about in part by the feminist movement. Otherwise, age and gender patterns of time use have been quite steady.

"This means that the age structure of roles and activities is strongly embedded in our society," said Verbrugge.

Love's in bloom with roses, orchid plants oses are the traditional valentine flower. When I spoke with Dennis Sparr, owner of Sparr's Flowers and Greenhouse, 42510 Joy in Plymouth. I learned that this company has an acre of glass houses.

The roses that they sell in this location, a fullservice florist and greenhouse operation, as well as five shops in the area, are all grown in these greenhouses. From 35 to 100 dozen roses are cut each day of the year except Christmas and New Year's Day.

They sell all cut flowers, no plants, Sparr said. "The long-stemmed roses are the most popular," he said. "We have been growing a red hybrid tea, 'Royalty,' for 10 years. It is longer lasting than older varieties. The most unusual rose, a Sweetheart, is 'Lavonde,' with lavender blooms. Another unusual color has a bright orange bloom."

Pink, white and yellow roses also are grown. For some time, Sparr's has been hybridizing as Sparr says, "playing with" — a rose that will have a variegated leaf and a purple flower.

When you are given a bouquet of roses from Sparr, they have been cut under water at the store and no shipping time is involved, therefore these roses will last a long time. Royalty will last two weeks or more and the Sweethearts a week to 10

The reason the roses are cut under water is to prevent an air pocket from rising up the stem, which causes the head to flop. Since the plants are grown on location, the flower will last longer and will stay erect. Sparr compares this to buying vegetables from a local farmer: Buying from the grower assures that you get a better quality prod-

If it is necessary to cut the stem of roses at home, do cut them under water.

About orchids

Orchid plants are an alternative to cut flower arrangements for a valentine gift. Tim Robinson, design manager at Tiffany Florist, 784 S. Woodward in Birmingham, told me the orchid bloom will last up to two months "if the plant is in the stage of budding when purchased; most clients treat them as a disposable plant.'

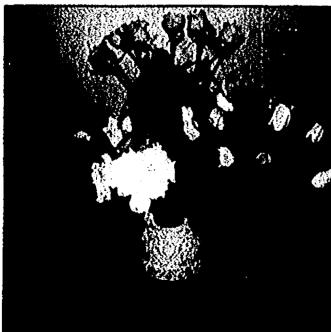

Orchids are available in many colors - green, yellow, lavender, pinks, burgundy and purple. Sizes are quite variable, from the small. 10-inch tall Lady Slipper variety with a single bloom, to the four-foot tall Cymbidium orchid with up to 20 blooms. Tiffany's carries five or six varieties.

'When a supply of orchids comes in they sell out in a hurry," Robinson said. "We have a list of customers who wait for our call."

The basic care for orchids is to water them so that the water goes through the roots; they must not sit in water. These are rainforest plants that grow on tree bark and like to be misted, which keeps the humidity around them high.

Mist the plants in the morning. Sufficient light is essential for healthy growth and flower production. Mature plants need a 10- to 20-degree temperature difference between night and day. Fertilizer must be provided on a regular basis, as recommended.

People often

ask me where my favorite spot is for photography.

Well, I've trav-

right back to the good old U.S.A. and head west to a spot along the Arizona-Utah border about 50 miles west of Four Corners (that's where Arizona, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico all touch).

It's called Monument Valley and in my opinion offers some of the most breathtaking, photogenic scenery anywhere in the world.

Monument Valley contains the most awesome monoliths found anywhere in the world. These are towering, unusually shaped rock formations that arise majestically ic heights.

Named centuries ago by the American Indians who inhabited the area, the monoliths resemble animals, such as "Elephant Rock," and people, such as the "Five Sisters." The most famous formations are East Mitten and West Mitten, which produce sensational photographs.

You'll get good shots any time of the year in Monument Valley. It will be hot in the summer and dramatically snow-covered in the winter. There are usually good cloud patterns to enhance your pictures and sunsets and sunrises are especially impressive. There is subject material to accommodate all lenses from wide angle to telephoto. And be sure to use a polarizer filter to darken the vivid blue skies often seen in Monument Valley. You can tour Monument Valley yourself along a rough dirt but passable road (15 miles round trip) or hire one of many guides from a flat desert floor to dramat- that will lead you through. Adjacent to Monument Valley is Mystery Valley, well worth seeing, but you must have an American Indian guide for entry. It's sacred ground and tourists aren't allowed unescorted.

Where to stay when photographing in and around Monument Valley? The best place is Gouldings Lodge, which is right in the valley. From right in your room in the early morning, you can capture dramatic silhouettes of the monoliths as the sun rises in the east.

Other places to stay can be found in Kayenta, Ariz., a 20-mile scenic drive south of Monument Valley.

So the next time you head west, be sure to include Monument Valley on your itinerary. It's truly a magnificent place that will reward you with extraordinary photographs.

Art cooperative opens to public

The Michigan Art Exchange, Observerland's new artists cooperative gallery, opens to the public with a day of fun for the entire family Sunday, Feb. 13.

Art activities begin at noon in the nearly 1,100 square feet of space at 470 Forest, Plym-

A special glass working demonstration will take place 1-4 p.m. by Plymouth artist Don Schneider.

"We've got some wonderful things planned. The artists will be demonstrating here in the gallery," said co-director Frank Kuszak of Plymouth.

"We hope people will come check out the artworks because the first week in March, we'll kick off our grand opening with a live auction of works donated by the members."

The Michigan Art Exchange gives local artists the opportunity to show their work in a gallery setting.

Unlike regular retail galleries that charge up to a 50-percent commission on the sales of artworks, the Exchange takes only 9 percent. But artists must work in the gallery eight hours a week. This arrangement enables artists to sell their work at lower prices.

The cooperative, which will offer art classes and workshops for children as well as adults, still has room for more fine artists, said co-director, Clifford Holdhampf of Farmington Hills.

For more information, call 313-459-1906.

Fairway Pines: a move-up community

A new subdivision built around a municipallyowned golf course will feature the priciest homes in Canton Township to date, the builders say. The sub is off Canton Center Road, just south of Cherry Hill.

By Doug Funke STAFF WRITER

Fairway Pines at Pheasant Run in Canton Township is another residential development in which several name builders have formed a working arrangement to construct houses on a rotation basis.

Bonadeo Builders in Plymouth and Curtis Building and the Selective Group of Farmington Hills offer several models ranging from a three-bedroom, 1,900-square-foot ranch on a standard lot for $212,900 to a four-bedroom, 3,100-square-toot colonial on a gon course lot for $274,900.

All three builders can build any of the models.

The big attraction at the site, the principals agree, is a public golf course and a pay-for-use community center to be built and owned by the township. Both are due to open in 1995.

"That's probably the biggest asset for this (residential) community," said Steven J. Calverley, marketing director for Selective.

"If you can go out your door and walk over to it, it's a tremendous advantage to our community," said Nancy Bonadeo, operations manager for Bonadeo. "And it provides a productive greenbelt whether you golf or not. Everyone can enjoy it."

The builders will provide a oneyear family membership to the community center as an inducement to buy.

Biltmore Properties of Troy developed Fairway Pines, Some 123 units will be constructed in the initial phase.

"Canton is absolutely a great community for families in terms of amenities, the environment, Activities of the second secon schools," said Leon Zolkower, a Biltmore vice president.

"We worked diligently putting together a product line," said Melvin Menuck, vice president of Curtis. "Together, don't we have 100 years of experience?"

"One thing we offer to customers is the ability to semicustomize," Bonadeo said. "We work off basic floor plans but if people want something changed, it's not a big deal.

Currently, five floor plans each with three or four different exterior elevations are available.

"It won't be a cookie-cutter development," Menuck said. "We try to maintain an architectural con-

What about other services that set you apart from the competition? Shuler: The obvious ones. We're

This probably will eventually be used as a video teleconference room. Sprint is working with us on that. People will be able to walk in a store and hook up with a company with its own equipment or another Kinko's store.

The same holds true for color combinations of roofs and brick. "We don't use aluminum siding," Calverley said. "It's exclu-

"There's no question this is the structed: premier new-home community in Canton," Calverley said.

"It's a move-up community. Our buyers are predominantly Canton move-up buyers. So far, 50 percent of purchasers are move up from Canton, the others equally divided between transferees and move-ups from southeastern Michigan communities.'

Shuler: Ninety to 95 percent of our customers are walk-ins. Commercial customers — training manuals, fiscal reports, meeting materials — spend bigger dollars.

The average retail (walk-in) transaction is probably about five bucks. The average commercial transaction is probably in excess of $100. We want 500 to 600 transactions per day at the register in a mature store one or two years old. When we get to that level, we can afford to staff our stores to give customers all the help they need.

What about employment opportunities with Kinkos's

Shuler: Most of our stores hire on a fairly regular basis. We're growing rapidly and there's constant turnover.

We start higher than minimum wage. Now, it's $6 per hour. Our people sit down with their managers every six months for a review and have an opportunity to increase wages. We offer good health benefits, vacation, a 401(k) plan.

Most of our people are full time. This store (Plymouth) has 25 employees now and about 20 are full time. A majority of our managers and trainers we hire from within. I started as a counter

Features add to house's value

The recession may be officially over, but Americans remain guarded when it comes to buying hig-ticket products, namely houses, reports the National Association of Home Builders.

"More buyers are looking at homes as an investment, and they are furnishing those homes with features that will attract buyers down the road," said Paul Martin, territory sales manager, Pella Window and Door Co., Livonia "Affordable features that enhance the image of quality are luring a full range of buyers.'

Martin offered this insight into the specific "wish list" items of key buying segments: first-time buyers watch for high ceilings, fireplaces and bay windows;

move up buyers value symbols of self-expression such as circular windows; luxury buyers look for signs of value such as sunrooms and French doors; singles and couples value features over space including skylights.

"Homeowners anticipating the need to interest future buyers with investment features can look at the common attractions," Martin said. "Products that enhance space and light, especially unique windows and window combinations, can take a limited budget and turn it into a long-term solu-

Rochester Hills firm on global computer team

By Doug Funke

A fledgling computer network services company in Rochester Hills is one of three international firms that will team to establish a showroom of hardware and software products in Beijing, China.

SandA International, founded here by Peter and Deborah Stephenson, joins Computers & Peripherals based in Hong Kong and China International Software Engineering in Beijing to birth the American Computer Innovation Center.

The 11,000-square-foot ACIC, believed to be the first comprehensive, independent integration center to offer multiple vendor product to the Chinese marketplace, is expected to open in early April, the partners announced

"The ACIC will provide a configurable state-of-the-art multi-vendor, multi-platform enterprise network, which Chinese customers can use to pre-test planned configurations," said Peter Stephenson.

"Since China is just entering the network age, this capability will add greatly to customer confidence as they adopt new technologies. American companies will benefit by having a showplace for their products is this emerging mega-market," he added.

SandA International, and its prime subcontractor based in Edmonton, will provide the system engineering and support training services for ACIC.

"I'm responsible for two areas — liaison with U.S. manufacturers and

... all technical aspects," Stephenson said.

"The Hong Kong partner and I have basically put up all the cash necessary," he said, declining to provide a specific number. "The China partner was allowed by a government agency to make arrangements for space inexpensively.' Vendors are providing equipment at no cost.

"We (SandA and Computers & Peripherals) have distribution rights in China. That's how we make money. We take orders, we sell, we do the mark-up. We also do design, technical support, training. There's a lot of value added," Stephenson said.

If businesss take off as expected, Stephenson estimated his share of sales in China this year at upwards of $1.5 million, significantly more in succeeding years.

Stephenson said he expects to hire 10-20 specialists locally this year—"computer scientists, computer engineers, programmers, perhaps, technical trainers"—as he moves his current three-person operation from his Rochester Hills home to a formal office setting.

Stephenson, 49, said he has more than 30 years experience as a network integrator, trainer and technical writer. He also said he's traveled to Asia many times as a consultant.

It's taken two years of work to get the ACIC to this stage of development. "You have to be programmed to have a lot of patience, build a lot of relationships," Stephenson said.

A variety of vendors, including IBM China, Trend/Intel China, Novell and Microdyne, are expected to participate in ACIC, the partners indicated.

"China's extraordinary growth — GNP is rising at more than 10 percent a year — and national commitment to creating an infrastructure for the 21st century makes the ACIC a compelling market investment," said Philip T. Cunningham, chairman and president of Microdyne.

Liu An-Yi of China's National Planners Training Center also sees potential for ACIC.

"We are certain that China will benefit significantly from the easy availability of the advanced computer network demonstration, prototyping and testing facility, showcasing the most current computer networking products, systems and technologies," An-Yi said.

New satellite service 'revolutionizes' tv viewing

Advanced Satellite, a Plymouth-based satellite television retailer, is authorized to sell the DirectTv entertainment programming service.

DirectTv, a direct broadcast satellite service, is the largest television start-up in history and is slated to revolutionize the way Americans watch television, the company says.

DirectTv entertainment programming will be delivered nationwide via satellite and received by 18-inch satellite dishes installed in homes across the country.

Advanced Satellite will begin selling DirecTv, as well as Digital Satellite System (DSS) receiving units by April.

DirecTv will deliver 150 channels of popular cable networks, Hollwyood movies, sports and special interest programing directly to homes equipped with the DSS receiving units.

Manufactured by Thomson Consumer Electronics and sold under the RCA brand name, DSS is a three-component system consisting of an 18-inch satellite antenna, a digital decoder box and a remote control that will retail for about $699 (plus installation).

The DirecTv service will be delivered via two high-power direct broadcast satellites (DBS). The first, DBS-1, was launched on an Ariane rocket Dec. 17, 1993 from French Guiana, South America.

The second satellite, DBS-2, is scheduled to go up this summer. The DirecTv programming service will begin delivery in April with 75-80 channels of program-

Once the second satellite is in place, DirecTv will be at full capacity to deliver about 150 channels of entertainment and information.

Advanced Satellite is among the first dealers in the country to be authorized to sell DirecTv programming and the RCA DSS.

Through DirecTV, consumers will have access to an array of programming choices and selections delivered in near laser-disc quality video pictures and CD-quality audio sound.

Programming on the satellites will include such leading names in cable television as CNN, ESPN and The Disney Channel, pay-per-view movies from major Hollywood studios, professional and collegiate sports, and special-interest programming.

Movies and special events will be available on impulse through one-touch operation with a special remote control.

An innovative on-screen menu will guide subscribers through the program selections and system operations. It will allow consumers to establish spending limits and exercise parental control through program rating limit passwords.

Because the system uses advanced digital compression technology, it will be compatible with future television formats such as HDTV and be capable of providing interactive services for home shooping and video games.

DirecTv Inc. is a unit of GM Hughes Electronics.

■ ANIMATE SERVICE

MVP Communications, Troy, designed a 3-D wavefront animation with a video to introduce Service Supremacy, a new service department operating system, to 40,000 Chevrolet dealers at the National Dealer Convention in Las Vegas.

The seven-minute animation, accompanied by an original music score, features a flow chart to illustrate the steps in a typical service transaction. Vignettes of customers describing their service experience is blended with the animation, which is also used in a 12-minute marketing tape for dealers.

M NEW HEAT TREATER

Michigan Induction, Canton, a commercial heat treater, has launched a state-of-the-art induction heat treating system.

The new design results in improved and more consistent metallurgical and mechanical properties. The design also allows lower carbon steel to be used in the transmission drive, which cuts cost by reducing the amount of scrap product.
