LORA SMITH of Westland showed her appreciation Saturday for the help she and her husband received several years ago after they were seriously injured in an auto accident. "People need to help others," she said in reflecting on the support her family and friends provided after the accident.

To return the favor, Mrs. Smith coordinated a neighborhood campaign Saturday to collect household articles and clothing for the new Wayne County Family Shelter, which provides temporary housing as well as counseling for homeless parents and their children. Smith, along with friends and relatives, said the family shelter in Westland has a need for household items, food, clothing and dispers.

The collections took place in the Wayne Road-Palmer area.

School board recall thwarted

staff writer

A fatal blow has apparently struck a recall campaign to oust three Wayne-Westland school board members, ending a chapter that marked one of the district's stormlest political battles ever.

A recall committee has fallen short of the petition signatures it needs for a special election to try to oust board members Kathleen Chorbagian and Andrew Spisak, the Observer learned Friday. An effort to oust board member Leonard Posey had already failed for the

The latest development ended a heated recall campaign that emerged after board members last year voted to give teachers a twoyear pay raise of 11.9 percent, despite a budget crunch that threatened massive school program cuts.

"I'm really glad it's over," Spisak said Friday, after learning from the Observer that he appeared certain to survive the recall attempt. "I think I'm a good board member. I've always had the best interest of the kids in mind."

The county elections office and local city clerks have tossed out enough petition signatures to end the recall, the newspaper learned

The county, in an initial review, had already declared hundreds of signatures invalid when petitions were sent to local city clerks for further study. Many people who weren't district residents or registered voters signed.

THE RECALL committee needed 4,420 signatures against each board member. In its initial review, the county tossed out enough signatures against Posey to block his recall, but upheld 4,433 signatures against Chorbagian and 4,500 against Spisak.

On Friday, Westland city clerk Diane Fritz confirmed that her office has tossed out more than 14 signatures against Chorbagian, pushing her below the 4,420 mark. Fritz also said more than 81 signatures against Spisak have been declared invalid, putting him below the same mark.

"I'm sure I've got 81, at least," Fritz said, and the count hadn't been completed. The recall group was expected to lose additional signatures in other cities, such as Wayne.

Recall leader Steven Lind has said he won't try another recall campaign. But he said his effort should send a strong message to board members that thousands of district residents are upset about their performance.

Spisak's term expires in June 1993, and Posey's a year later. Chorbagian's term expires in three months, and she has said she won't seek re-election.

LIND, WHO'S seeking a board seat in the June 8 election, has been accused of attempting the recall for political gain - a claim that he has denied. He has said he hadn't planned a campaign when he started the recall drive last

"I personally think that Mr. Lind knew all along that he was going to be a candidate,"

Spisak said Friday. Board members have defended the teachers contract as among the best negotiated last year in Wayne County. It averted a threatened

"When you start recalling people for doing their jobs, you're putting in motion some really scary things," Spisak said.

The teachers contract angered board critics because it was approved as massive cuts loomed, such as eliminating busing, athletics and numerous other programs and services. The cuts were averted last June, when voters approved a controversial 7.75-mill tax rate in-

Seniors demand refund for bus

staff writer

Many Westland senior citizens have demanded a refund of the monev they donated for a recreation tour bus, in a show of protest against the city council's decision to add a lift for handicapped people to it.

But council President C Pickering, calling for a "cooling-off period," said he didn't know if - or when - the money would be returned to seniors, who raised nearly_ $75,000 for the bus. He may suggest an alternate proposal that could alleviate their concerns, he said.

Late Friday afternoon, Pickering said he didn't know how many seniors have asked for refunds, but he said the mayor's office expected to receive many requests. Mayor Robert Thomas was in a staff meeting and couldn't be reached for com-

Some seniors have strongly opposed the lift, saying it would reduce seating capacity, cause excessive noise and slow down bus trips. They had suggested a separate bus for the disabled.

The controversy caused a bitter dispute between seniors and advocates for the disabled. The clash resulted in the council narrowly deciding to add a lift to the bus.

IN ANOTHER development, however, Pickering said the city may consider halting the order for the bus and conducting a study of its needs. It's possible that bids could be sought for another bus that would satisfy both sides in the dispute, he said.

Pickering said he plans to discuss those possibilities with other council members.

Some seniors had voiced concerns that the 41-passenger bus that's been approved would lose several seats because of the lift. However, Picker-12 ing said the city could seek bids for. an alternate bus that would include a lift and the same number of seats.

Such a plan, however, could hinge on how much of a penalty the city would have to pay to get out of its contract with the Grand Rapidsbased Hoekstra Co., which was hired; to build the original bus, Pickering

FOR NOW, the city has told Hoekstra not to begin manufacturing the bus, he said. The issue is expected to be discussed during the council's April 6 session.

Pickering said he wants more information about the need for a recreation bus and who would use it. The plan was to buy it for the senior; resources department. The city agreed to pay $75,000 if seniors. raised a matching amount.

Debate ensues on how to cut school budget

staff writer

The Livonia school district's debate on how to cut $11 million of program and staff cuts will start tonight and continue Tuesday and Wednesday as the board tries to plan a balanced budget for the next school year.

The school board's finance committee will begin discussions of the budget cuts at 6 p.m. each of the three nights. The committee will meet in the district's administrative

Director in Illinois to head Westland Y

By Leonard Poger editor

Richard Perlowski has a record of boosting memberships at the YMCAs he has directed in Illinois. Membership retention has been improved, deficits eliminated and programs expanded.

With that record, Perlowski plans to arrive April 13 as the new executive director of the Wayne-Westland Family YMCA, which also serves Garden City and Canton Township.

Perlowski, now executive director of the Clinton, Ill., Y in the Chlcago region, was hired after interviews by the Y board and metro Detroit Y officials.

He will replace Janet Gillies, who resigned in early November In the midst of an investigation of alleged policy violations.

The new Y director, 41, has an an excellent background as a Y executive, has good communications and leadership skills, said Shirley Ritter, YMCA district vice president and Perlowski's immediate supervisor.

She sald there were more than 40 applicants for the vacancy with four finalists interviewed.

"Any one of the four could been selected and do a good job," said Ritter, who is also executive director of the Livonia Family Y.

PERLOWSKI WAS in the community last weekend to visit the Y facilities on Wayne Road south of Cherry Hill, meet with employees and start his house-hunt. His wife, Laurie, is also a Y executive. They are the parents of two children.

In a telephone interview earlier in the week, Perlowski said he wants to increase the Y's memberships and boost its programs through more community involvement.

He intends to be personally involved in community activities, such as joining a service club and getting to know more about the school system.

"I plan to spread myself out and get to know the movers and shakers," he sald.

In the five years in his current position, Perlowski compiled a long list of major accomplishments.

Richard Perlowski, now executive director of the Clinton, Ill., Y in the Chicago region, was hired after interviews by the Y board and metro Detroit Y officials.

Those include implemention of the branch's first auction, held to eliminate a debt, secured additional endowment funds of $600,000; supervised a $100,000 renovation of his facility and helped his Y board work through a controversial reorganization of an endowment committee to assure that funds were "properly managed and ethically invested."

OTHER MAJOR accomplishments were implementation of a membership retention program which boosted the retention rate to 85 percent, a 66.6 percent increase. He led a campaign which ended in doubling of contributions to the Y and helped create a new Clinton Sports Committee, which improved youth sports, community recreation and provide better training for volunteer coaches.

His previous Y positions were program director for the Lincoln Belmont branch in Chicago, program director for the Buehler branch in Palatine near Chicago, and assistant program director for the Irving Park branch in Chicago.

At the Buehler branch, Perlowski helped organize the first 10K run which now has 500 runners.

Perlowski was raised in Chicago and graduated from the University of Illinois/Chicago Circle with a bachelor's degree in physical education and a minor in recreation.

He has earned 23 graduate hours toward his master's degree in human and community service administration from George Williams College in Downers Grove, Ill.

Not surprisingly, his hobbies include physical fitness activities, such as running, swimming, biking, camping, football and tennis as well as music, wildlife and ecology.

Lower bond denied for suspect

staff writer

A judge has refused to reduce bond for an ailing Westland man failed on charges he tried to kill his wife by shooting her with a sawed-off shotgun.

Family and friends of Harry Wayne Ransom, accused of shooting his wife Janice amid a marital break-up, are worried that jail authorities won't provide the medical treatment he needs for diabetes. Ransom, awaiting a kidney transplant, requires dialysis.

"He's not receiving the appropriate treatment for his dialysis," despite being treated in the county jall infirmary ward, attorney Thomas Wilhelm argued Thursday in Westland 18th District Court.

Wilhelm also raised concerns about Ransom's heart condition, which forced him to receive a quadruple bypass four years ago. He may need another bypass, Wilhelm sald, because "his heart is not receiving or pumping enough blood."

Despite the concerns, visiting Judge John McCartney refused Thursday to reduce the $250,000 cash bond set for Ransom, 37, accused of firing a single shot from a .12-gauge shotgun and wounding his wife in the thigh and stomach.

Wilhelm asked McCartney to grant Ransom a $100,000 personal bond, which means he could have been released upon posting $10,000.

The request came as Ransom appeared in court for a hearing to determine if he should stand trial on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder. He could face life in prison if convicted.

RANSOM ALSO could face a mandatory twoyear term on a felony firearms charge stemming from the 5:40 p.m. Jan. 15 incident at the Ransom residence on Bakewell Street, west of Wayne Road and two blocks south of Westland Center.

Judge McCartney delayed Thursday's preliminary examination at the request of attorneys, who said 35-year-old Janice Ransom, the key witness, had been returned to a hospital for several days. She needed further treatment, including akin grafts, for her wounds.

The hearing has been rescheduled for Thursday, April 9, by which time she is expected to be able to testify. Janice Ransom has told police her husband shot her during a domestic dispute. The Ransoms, who have two teen-age sons, are in the process of a divorce.

Attorneys also are awaiting copies of a report based on a psychiatric evaluation that Ransom underwent at a state forensic center in Ypsilanti. Defense attorneys have questioned whether Ransom was mentally competent during the shooting, and they want the psychiatric results prior to his Concerns about Ransom's mental and physical health emerged in January, when defense attorneys described his diabetes as potentially lifethreatening. At that time, 18th District Judge Gail McKnight set a $250,000 bond and said Ransom would receive medical treatment in jail.

ON THURSDAY, Wilhelm said a reduced bond would allow Ransom to stay in Brighton with his parents, who want him to receive medical help at a Washtenaw County dialysis center. Ransom's mother sat in the courtroom Thursday.

Wilhelm suggested that Ransom wouldn't be a danger to the community and that authorities could use a tether monitoring system to track his movements.

Moments after McCartney denied the request, authorities led Ransom from the courtroom to a holding cell, in preparation to return him to the county jail.

the full extent of the proposed cuts. On Tuesday and Wednesday, board members will pick apart the proposed cuts and most likely offer cuts of their own.

School officials have two months to make some of the most wrenching decisions facing the district in years, decisions that, if enacted, could elther cut or kill some of Livonia's showcase programs.

"But every program is of ultimate importance to the children, parents and employees," said Joe Laura, finance committee chairman. "There will be no winning here, Every cut will affect someone."

The district will set its 1992-93 budget May 27. The new budget and the program and staff cuts that go with it - will be aired at an April 28 public hearing.

The actual size of next year's budget cut depends on what school aid plan the Michigan Legislature adopts.

By asking department heads to cut 11 percent from their budgets, Livonla is preparing itself for a worsecase scenario.

The district could lose up to $6.2 million if the state decides to no longer fully fund district employee social security.

The district is expecting at least a $5 million shortfall next year. School officials also want to keep at least $2 million in the district's fund equity, or rainy day fund. With these two, next year's estimated cut could begin at $7 million.

"I believe the cuts will be closer to $7 million," Laura said.

In coming up with the list of proposed cuts, school officials have said that all programs and services are on the table.

Angry parents have deluged school offices protesting some of the proposed cuts. On the chopping block are either parts or all of the following programs: middle school team sports and newspapers, Math-Science-Computer (MSC), ROTC, Creative and Performing Arts (CAPA), Parent Outreach, Masterworks, instrumental music and Franklin's Patriot Inn.

"THESE PROGRAMS mean the world to parents," Laura said. "It's going to be very difficult being God and judge what's important to children. We have to do as much as we can for as many students as we can with the dollars we have."

The retirement of 67 teachers under a one-time-only retirement incentive program offered this year could cushion teacher layoffs.

Staff cuts could also occur among the secretarial and custodial ranks. The cuts could also lead to a request for higher millage.

"A millage increase is a consideration," Laura said. "And it wouldn't be like passage of the bond issue.

County prosecutors have found no proof that four Wayne-Westland school board members conspired in violation of the Open Meetings Act to oust Superintendent Dennis O'Neill.

Board members Vicki Welty, Laurel Raisanen, Fred Warmbier and Sylvia Kozorosky-Wiacek came under fire in October, amid accusations they secretly plotted to fire O'Neill.

Board member Kathleen Chorbagian, a strong O'Neill supporter, accused the four of forming a behind-thescenes majority and deciding to force O'Neill from the district's top post — a claim they categorically denied.

The Westland Eagle newspaper made the same accusations and filed a formal complaint. But assistant Wayne County prosecutor Frank Bernacki confirmed Thursday that no evidence has been found to substantiate the claim.

"It was determined that we wouldn't take any action on that," he said.

The board president said she had remained confident that the board and her name would be cleared.

"I knew I had done nothing wrong, illegal or improper with regard to the retirement of the superintendent of schools," Kozorosky-Wiacek said. "I have not and will not violate the trust of the people of this district as long as I hold an elected office.'

KOZOROSKY-WIACEK SAID the accusations stemmed from political opposition to her. Moreover, she said the "scheme" diverted attention from "real issues" that need the board's attention, such as student achievement test scores, school violence, high taxes and emThe accusations emerged Oct. 14 in an explosive school board session in which Chorbagian raised allegations of law-breaking among the four board members.

O'Neill, in an angry statement announcing plans to retire Aug. 31, blasted the board members in October and accused them of unethical behavior. Soon afterward, the embattled superintendent began a medical leave that has kept him off the job.

In February, O'Nelli and the school board reached an agreement allowing him to remain off the job through Aug. 31 and receive his pay. He has continued to be paid every other week an amount coming to him from his annual base salary of $103,513.

Kozorosky-Wiacek, the board president, and Welty, the vice president, had conceded that they went to O'Neill's office Oct. 2 and told him that they "believed" they had a majority vote not to renew his contract.

Raisanen and Warmbier had opposed O'Nelli's administration in their board campaigns prior to last June's election. In fact, Raisanen had included O'Neill's dismissal in her campaign platform and had called for an immediate search for a new superintendent.

THE BOARD has launched that search with assistance from a Chicago-based firm that is spearheading the effort. The board is expected to receive an update on the search during a special session 7 p.m. today (Monextinguisher, Sikorski said.

Jones was unconscious when police arrived, and authorities used a Jaws-of-Life to remove her from her 1989 Mercury Tracer, he said. "If that car had been engulfed in flames, there's no way she could have been (immediately) removed," he said.

The accident occurred when the Westland man, driving a 1989 Chevrolet pickup, ran a blinking red traffic light while headed north on Nankin Boulevard at Central City Parkway, Sikorski sald. The truck struck the driver's side of Jones's car, near the front.

The impact threw the pick-up into the air, and both vehicles came to rest on the median, with the truck partially blocking the southbound lane of Nankin Boulevard.

Westland police found the man in the bed of his truck, where he had been thrown from the driver's seat. He suffered head injuries. Police were awaiting blood-alcohol test results on Friday.

The man, who was conscious but incoherent when police arrived, had been driving 50-60 mph in the 35-mph zone, Sikorski said.

The crash blocked traffic on Nankin Boulevard for two hours.

Help us make steps in the fight against SIDS

If you knew a healthy, happy baby had died suddenly without reason, you'd want to help. There are over 7,000 babies who die from a cruel, mysterious killer. It's called SIDS: Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

Perhaps you've heard SIDS referred to as "Crib Death." But maybe you didn't hear that SIDS is the number one cause of death in infants from one week to one year. babies of all races and religions. And it's not hereditary.

Donations of your time and dollars will make a difference. And we can make bigger steps to fighting SIDS.

Schoolcraft talking taxes, bonds as building grant falls into limbo

By Wayne Peal staff writer

Schoolcraft College thought it could build its new student activities center without asking area voters

Now, it's not so sure. Declining state grants have college officials considering a potential bond or millage request; possibly as soon as this Schoolcraft was to have split the estimated $7.2 million construction cost with the state.

While the Livonia based community college is well on its way toward meeting its half of the project, state money is drying up.

"THE (STATE) money isn't there and we have no idea when it will be there," Schoolcraft president Richard McDowell said.

Officials are considering a shortterm millage — perhaps has short as one year in length — or a 20-30 year bond issue.

The college could seek to raise as much as $10 million to complete the building and renovate Waterman Campus Center, McDowell said. Roughly two-thirds would come. from the bond issue or millage, the rest from college rental income.

Schoolcraft trustees discussed matters only briefly during Wednesday's meeting., Future discussions are expected.

Ground was to have been broken this summer, college business vice president Adelard Raby said.

But construction was put on hold when Schoolcraft couldn't secure state financing.

On its own, the college has already secured roughly $2.5 million in rental payments from the Seven Mile Crossing office complex. Seven Mile Crossing was built in 1988 on college-owned land near I-275. It includes two office buildings and a res-

College officials planned pay for the new building with $3.6 million in rental income from Seven Mile Crossing, augmented with a matching state grant.

College admissions, financial aid and counseling offices would all move into the new building from other campus sites. "We want a one-stop student cen-

Stay clam, remember you are ina flare, not a finale; the episode will pass.

Your friends may think you exaggerate, but your doctor believes you. If you have arthritis, times will arise when you: "hurt everywhere."

The episode often occurs on arising in the morning or when after being seated for a prolonged time, you get up, only to find you can't. Your incapacity comes from pain in the usual joints such as the hands or knees, plus an intense ache in areas not previously involved.

What has happened is that a flare of your arthritis to one or two joints, precipitated a reaction by your body. The muscles in your back, shoulders and legs, reflect a mood of anger, disgust,

Highway law gives more power to SEMCO

By Tim Richard staff writer

Since 1969, SEMCOG has prided uself on being a voluntary planning agency. This year it faces the shock of becoming a big-time spending

The Southeast Michigan Council of Governments has been run by elected local officials. Now it may have to bringing appointed county road commissioners, bus operators and state bureaucrats into positions of voting power.

The reason is ISTEA, pronounced "ice tea." It stands for "Intermodal Surface Transportation and Efficiency Act," $155 billion in federal programs signed into law last year by President George Bush.

When I saw it in December, I couldn't believe it. It changes the nature of the organization," said John Amberger, SEMCOG's executive director, a hired man who always is voice vote and by a 10-1 margin.

deferential to his bosses, the elected

'It opens a Pandora's box," sald Jack Olsen, R-Huntington Woods, an Oakland County commissioner resisting the change.

"THERE IS significant decisionmaking reponsibility, if we choose to accept it," said Milton Mack, a Wayne County probate judge and former suburban county commissioner.

Mack heads SEMCOG's bylaws committee, a seemingly dull, dry task. Not any more. Mack's panel last week offered the SEMCOG General Assembly a rules change that would enable the seven-county agency to allocate federal road, bridge and public transit funds under IS-

Oakland County's delegation, led by Olsen, lobbied for and won a three-months delay in the rules change. The decision came on a

THE RULES change would expand SEMCOG's executive committee to 57 members from 45 by adding 12 transportation providers.

ISTEA spells out their qualifications: one each from six county road boards outside Wayne County; one representative of Wayne County's public services department (which replaced the road commission); one from SMART, the suburban bus agency: one from Detroit's D-DOT: one from Detroit's public works department; one from the Ann Arbor Transit Authority; and one from the Michigan Department of Transpor-

There's argument about whether SEMCOG must make the rules change in order to be designated to allocate the money.

Mack argued that "SEMCOG is grandfathered. It's not required to have transportation providers."

But MDOT's view, he said, is that "if we do not amend our bylaws, we will not be certified to decide" fund-

THE ARGUMENT will spill over from last week's meeting in the Rackham Building in Detroit to a series of county meetings around the region. Among the sessions:

• Wayne County -- 9 a.m. Saturday, April 4, Holiday Inn/Fairlane. ◆ Oakland County — 5:30 p.m.
 Wednesday, April 8, Bloomfield

Township Hall. • Livingston County - 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 29, Hamburg Township Senior Center.

OLSEN IS likely to be joined by fellow Oakland commissioners Richard Skarritt, R-Milford, and Kay Schmid, R-Novi in making the case against giving appointed transportation people voting power.

"It opens a Pandora's box," he told a caucus of county officials last week. "If one special interest transportation — is given 20 percent of the vote on the executive committe, others will want in. It would turn SEMCOG into a series of special interest activities. It (SEMCOG currently) is a voluntary organization of elected officials.

"The rule of one person, one vote is not observed (in the new rules).

"Transportation officials don't pay dues," he added. SEMCOG is funded by dues from member governments, but county road commissions can't join. "Transportation representatives can serve on our technical advisory committees. There's no prohibition on their saying what they wish."

SOME WANT to approve the change.

Ruel McPherson, D-Hazel Park, an Oakland commissioner, said, "Bo knows football. Transportation peo-

Amberger, the SEMCOG staff chief, wants the rules change to avoid a battle over SEMCOG's being designated, the money-allocation, STARK, KEYNOTER on the second day of a two-day conference, said American employers won't hire young workers (below 25 or so). "In Europe they start in good jobs at age 22. We're losing people 18 to 25 from good-paying jobs into secondary

Stark called for Michigan educators to make job readiness a top priority and employers to play a key

"In Europe, the customer is business, the employer. Our education is disconnected from the economy.

"Europe pays attention to the middle (academically); they're willing to give up some at the top and bottom. We pay attention to the high (college-bound) and low ends. We still act like 'you can walk across the street and get a job at GM.'

"In Europe you don't have a sense of rivalry between academic and voWe have to accept preparation for work as a role of education. There a whole lot of school districts who don't believe that," Stark said.

INTEGRATING business and education is done several ways in Europe, she said.

Denmark alternates several weeks of schoolroom academics and on-the-job training. Germany uses several classroom days and several work days. Sweden's schools are entirely study-based followed by internships.

"We need to decide who trains for vocations. In Japan, it's the companies. In Europe, it's a shared responsibility. We haven't decided.

"If I hadn't been to Europe, I wouldn't understand 20 percent of what I'm saying to you," Stark said.

Wolfgang Lenz, executive director of a German business foundation, fielded a question about American fears of pigeon-holing students into academic and vocational tracks at too early an age.

Lenz said Germany has "career information centers" with profiles and wage data on 380 occupations? "They don't have counselors in the schools; they have counselors in the career information centers. I'm won's dering why there aren't more of these around the United States."

KEITH IS vowing to spend years pushing his House Bill 4165, and amendment to the state school code to restructure vocational education along the German model.

Under his plan, students after 10th grade would choose between acau demic and career-technical pro grams, though they could transfer back and forth.

Suburban squires roll on spiked foolishness

I HATE LAWN edging g I don't mean this in the sense of, "I hate to do it." The fact is, I would never do it. I have never done it. The reason? It is a shameful, goofy thing to do. It certainly seems goofy to spend good money on a lawn edger, then run a spiked wheel down a sidewalk crack, with face all serious, in earnest conformity.

Lawn edging is shameful. That's because life is too short to waste on such nit-picking. There are places to go, movies to see, books to read, people to meet. To choose lawn edging over such activities is to reveal a deep character flaw.

When you see someone edging a lawn, there's a spiked wheel on one end and a fool on the other.

LIKE THE suburban squires in the Monkees' song "Pleasant Valley Sunday," these must-edge folks "need a change of scenery."

At least, they need a change of attitude. They should accept that grass growing freely over a sidewalk edge is beautiful.

And creating a edge along the sidewalk, frankly, is irresponsible.

That's because you put your family at risk for a lawsuit, if some poor kid runs a bike tire into that edge and cracks a skull.

When I have raised the concept of lawn edging as a foolish endeavor to people, most are a bit surprised.

Some volunteer that they have no strong feeling on the subject. Yet, they do say they're afraid of what the neighbors would think if they didn't edge.

To them, I say this: A neighbor offended by a freely-growing, unedged lawn is a dip, unworthy of your consideration.

Then there is a second group, commonly characterized as lawn Nazis.

These humorless, scary people often men - typically boast with macho pride about their most recent session spent fertilizing their lawns.

I think there's a double meaning

BUT FERTILIZING is only one symptom of their disease. These suburban gruppenfuehrers aren't really satisfied until their lawns mimic a Marine-like, brush-cut, dyed green.

This sort of low life is also known to comment roughly about the relative state of neighbors' lawns. Grass is only acceptable in their eyes if whipped into a state as unnatural as

My favorite homeowners are those who let their lawns grow freely, providing a suitable nesting place for squirrels, rabbits or discarded tires.

Better yet was the lawn of an old buddy in Ann Arbor. One day, he upped and tore it up, and planted rows of vegetables.

Sure, his less-sophisticated neighbors complained. They even went to the city council. But there was nothing they could do about it.

Besides, come harvest time, he had plenty of roughage to bolster his

Recognition deserved by the band

To the editor:

According to "Webster's New World Dictionary," sport is defined as "any activity or experience that gives enjoyment or recreation; pastime; diversion." So much for your Neanderthal argument that there is actually a distinction between activities that are physical and mental.

Achievement and recognition, as a result of football, basketball or baseball heroics is no more or less meaningful to the athlete than it is to the pompon girl, debater or marching band member who devotes countless hours to their "sport." Each and every student wears their letter with pride in their accomplishments and dedication.

I have a daughter in the marching band. As a former high school varsity athlete, I was unprepared for the commitment my daughter, and the nearly 200 other students, was to make to ensure success. This commitment was both mental and physical. As you are aware, their hard work paid off in the form of two National Championships.

Members of band work hard on field

Tell the truth now. Did a newspaper editor really write those silly things, or has he been abducted by terrorists only to further their mindless propaganda? Did they threaten him with physical violence unless he signed his name to that editorial?

Aw, comè on.

Who is the wimp, Mr. Counts? Is it the student who studies for years, practices for most of his waking hours (long after he/she should be asleep) and performs for others during the entire school year and not just for a season - and who can certainly handle the likes of you?

Or is it the grown man who attacks the energetic enthusiasm, natural exuberance and musical talent of dedicated young people from the safety of his little column in a suburban néwspaper?

Mr. Counts, when was the last time you practiced for hours in the values and recognized excellence in freezing cold just before a football game so that you could high step your way across a football field, while blowing your lungs'out - and all the while playing real music. (Don't forget that you would have also been playing almost continuously throughout the entire game from the stands).

I daresay, Mr. Counts, that most people your age would need to be carried off the field.

The fact that you feel threatened by those students amuses me. The fact that you have any editorial control of my hometown newspaper appalls me.

And to Bill Bresler I can only say:

Tuba players do get dates

To the editor:

I read your opinion about the issue of letter jackets for members of other "activities," outside of athletics. I'm a Garden City High School student, and a band student. I feel I should tell you how I feel.

At my school there's heated debate whether or not only athletes or all activities should be wearing letter jackets. Garden City High School permits band members to wear letter jackets, along with athletes.

You called band members "wimps," personally I feel that if you sit back and watch the band maybe you would see the work and effort that goes into putting on a "nice half-time show." If you have never been in the band or even watched a practice, I feel you have no right to call band members "wimps," because maybe you are the "wimp" yourself. You also mentioned that, "Our educational system produces kids who think everything should be fair all the time and nobody should ever be unhappy." That in itself is untrue. The students know more than you think. We know that life is unfair and we all will be unhappy at one or more points in our lives. Maybe you should actually try talking to some students before making a comment

You said, "They (band members) have their own recognition." I know that at my school, the recognition we get is from our parents, the school, and some students. If getting a letter boosts our self esteem, are you going to stop it? Athletes can get awards, announcements made about them. and letter jackets. Band members can get letter jackets, and rarely a scholarship.

BAND IS an activity that's dependent on students learning notes. tunes and walking in step. Isn't it true that football is an activity that's dependent on students learning basic skill, plays and running in the right direction? I seem to lack the insight that you have to find learning plays more difficult than learning note patterns.

You also mentioned that athletes push themselves to the limit of physical endurance, and that success or failure is immediately visible in athletics. Well, Mr. Counts, band members have to push themselves or else they will embarrass themselves and the group. Success or failure is immediately visible in hand, "if you hit a high C in the horn section," it will be very noticeable if everyone else is playing a low B. In band you also have solo performances during certain parts of a song. If you miss a note, or "fumble" the part, then you're alone on the stage and everybody is listening.

If the only accomplishment you can see is athletic ones, then I feel sorry for you. I would hate to see a world with only people who thought like you. You place athletes on a pedestal and knock everyone else down when you probably don't know who or what they are.

What if your child decided to become a band member, would your opinion change then? In the end, Mr. Counts, the tuba player will get more dates than the "blond quarter-

Bigots of both races should stop

To the editor:

Your Points of View column, "Respect Lacking for Blacks," caught my eye and was read with interest and empathy.

Dance, music, theatrical events stir city from siesta

By Laurel Berger New York Times Syndicate

Last month Madrid's clay-tiled rooftops were covered in snow, but even that didn't distract the city's construction workers, who are proceeding at an uncustomary breakneck pace to revamp the 1992 Culture Capital of Europe, which will serve as the backdrop this year for almost 1,800 cultural events. Some of the more ambitious projects include the continuing restoration of the Teatro Real to its former status as an opera house and the scheduled reopening next July of the Museo de Americas, which, after an 11-year slumber, will display a magnificent trove of pre-Columbian

Faced with such formidable competition as the Barcelona Olympics and Seville's Expo '92, Madrid is doing its best to shine with a strong program of dance, music and theatrical events.

Among this month's highlights are the 12th International Theater Festival, a new season of zarzuela (Spanish light opera) and a continuing series of flamenco concerts that have nothing to do with the clubs often encountered by the package tourist.

EVENTS

Tickets generally go on sale several weeks before each event. All five performances of the Monte Carlo Opera's version of Carmen at the Teatro Lirico Nacional de la Zarzuela later this month are already sold out. Fabulous pretenders cut costs

What started out to be an April Fool's column on "fake foods" has taken on a new angle. Although it's true that the Ritz Cracker Mock Apple Pie and "city chicken on-a-stick" were invented during the Great Depression to help stretch food dollars, a recent grocery store walk-through has pinpointed many "fake" foods.

Whereas many of these mock foods were invented for health's sake (i.e., imitation sour cream and Egg Beaters) many of the other so-called fabulous fakes were introduced so that folks like you and me can get more for the ever-shrinking food dollar.

One of the top 1980s pretenders is a product called Krab with a "k" instead of a "c." This product, still growing in popularity, used what was once called "trash fish" that when harvested in deep-sea nets was usually thrown back.

consisting mainly of pollack, this imitation crab is processed, artificially flavored and colored and then molded into sticks that when tasted, actually resembles crabmeat. With Alaskan King Crab selling way over $10 per pound, this imitation crab was an immediate hit, especially when introduced around $4 per pound with a taste that was almost indistinguishable. The popularity of imitation crab has since

John and Marge Shimpel of Troy, both cruising in their golden years, recall products like city chicken with fond memories.
Marge says that her momma used to buy the pork and veal combo on a stick for 19 cents per pound in the days following the Depression.

spawned a market for fake

"This was certainly a budgetstretcher that when served with homemade dumplings and a vegetable 'put up' from the family garden made for a wondrous meal" sald Marge.
John recalls a meat market in southwest Detroit that used to make a mock city chicken (how about that — a fake of a fake!) that was rumored to be made of horse meat.

Another product that was not as well received as city chicken and mock apple pie was the 1950s introduction of imitation processed cheese. Products like Velveeta and sliced imitation cheese found their way into cost-conscious kitchens promising great taste, versatility and a price that couldn't be beat.

TO THIS day, momma still has the ever-present box of Velveeta available for everything from grilled cheese sandwiches to sauces. Made more of oil, water,

If there ever was a buzzword for great-tasting imitations of 1990s foods, just glance at the mayonnaise and salad dressing shelves in the grocery store. Although these products are far from being imitation, now there are jars sprouting claims of no cholesterol and even no fat.

Imitation products abound in the "diet" section, where lowcalorie products mocking creamed soups and snacks abound. Geared toward the more health-conscious consumer, these products are marketed to improve brand loyalty and to heighten the awareness of good dietary habits.

So if you remember the days of grocery cost-cutting and rent parties, you might be surprised about the fabulous fakes that are out there on your grocers' shelves and meat cases.

In all honesty though, I still feel guilty after eating a big bowl full of "imitation ice milk," especially when slathered with imitation chocolate topping.

Foods that fool Improvise during hard times

Weathering the recession, worsened by the auto sales slump and planned closing of the Willow Run assembly plant in Ypsilanti, is not easy, but we'd like to help. Over the next few weeks, we'll look at ways to stretch your food dollar. Next week, we'll talk about ways to cut your grocery bill.

By Keely Wygonik staff writer

Fool's Day, and cut your grocery bill too with some money-saving ideas from people who grew up and raised families during the Great Depres-

During these tough times, which began in 1929 and lasted through the 1930s, people learned how to make do with less, recycle leftovers and substitute when certain foods were not available or were too expensive.

Marion Kuclo of Garden City, known by many as Gundella the Kitchen Witch, remembers raspberry jam made with green tomatoes, sugar and a three-ounce package of raspberry jello.

For advice, homemakers often listened to Aunt Sammy on the radio. cipe for so Her program, which aired from 1926 cookbooks to 1944, offered recipes and tips for using new contraptions like refrigerators, which replaced ice boxes.

Rita Spence of Livonia remembers "lots of meatless meals. My mom made great dumplings. Give her a bag of flour and some salt and she could feed an army."

Even today, Spence "Improvises."
She doesn't throw old clothes away, but cuts them up for rags and saves the buttons for another use. A roll of paper towel lasts a long time because she prefers to use rags that can be washed and reused.

JOSEPHINE SEPIN of Garden City remembers a dish her mother made with elbow macaroni, pork and beans and onlons.

"We made a lot of soup, they used to give away soup bones," she said.

The marrow in the bone made a rich broth. Dr. Miles Medical Company of Toledo, Ohio, offered this recipe for soup from bones in his 1925 soup. Save bones from meat, crack large ones. Cover with cold water, cook slowly for several hours, strain, add vegetables, tomatoes, onlon, celery, put-in-rice or barley, cook until done."

When Helen McGeorge's grandchildren visit her in Garden City, they often ask for "Poor Man's Gravy." It was sometimes served on a biscuit without meat.

"You boil potatoes, then fry your meat like hamburgers or porkchops. Take the meat out, pour potato water into meat drippings, thicken it with flour," she said.

"Everyone canned back then," said McGeorge. "You could buy five pounds of hamburger for less than $1. We ate a lot of rice, too. There was some good food back then, believe it or not."

DOROTHY METZER of Garden City remembers eating potato soup with dumplings before payday. Even today, she's careful not to waste food. She cuts celery and onion and puts it in containers in the freezer for soup so it won't spoil. She'll buy an off brand instead of a name brand because it's usually cheaper and tastes just as good.

needs more seasoning

Eating good doesn't have to be expensive. With a little bit of planning and work, you can prepare low cost nutritious meals your family will enjoy.

"We typically eat too much meat," said Linda DeVore, registered dietitian at St. Mary Hospital in Livionia. "One pound of meat, raw weight, no bone is four servings. Limit serving sizes to two to three ounces cooked weight, about the size of a deck of cards. Serve twice a day, three if pregnant."

Protein needs can also be met with eggs. "Fouryolks a week is the American Heart Association recommendation," said DeVore. "Discard the yolks if you have a cholesterol problem. People are afraid of eggs, but there's no need to be, they're a good source of protein. One egg equals one protein serving."

One cup of legumes such as soybeans, chickpeas, navy beans, pinto beans, kidney beans, lima beans, split peas and lentils can be used for one protein serving. "It's best to combine them with grains such as rice, wheat, pasta, and corn," said DeVore. "Two tablespoons peanut butter also equal one protein serving."

There's no secret to good eating. "Choose foods from the basic four food groups — milk, meat, fruit-vegetable and grain everyday," said DeVore.

FROM THE milk group, which includes yogurt and cheese, adults need two servings, children three, teens, young adults and pregnant women need four. Examples of serving size are one cup milk, one cup yogurt, I ounce cheese, ¼ cup cottage cheese.

Four servings a day are recommended for everyone from the fruit and vegetable group. Examples are ¼ cup juice, ¼ cup vegetable, ¼ grapefruit, 1 medium apple, banana, orange, ¼ cup dried fruit.

Four servings a day from the grain group are also recommended. Examples are one slice bread, & English muffin, & cup cooked pasta, rice, cooked cereal, one tortilla, roll, muffin.

To lower costs, purchase lower cuts of meat like pot roast and round steak. Cook them slowly with moisture, pot roasting, braising, simmering or stewing to tenderize them. Tougher cuts can also be tenderized by marinating.

BUY A whole chicken or turkey, cook and use leftovers in soups, casseroles, stirfry, salads and sandwiches. Lunch meat is expensive.

Lois Thelleke of the Oakland County
Cooperative Extension Service, recommends stocking your pantry so you'll have beans, rice, pasta, and other items on hand to make meals in a hurry without having to run to the store. Buy the tower-priced family pack of meat and divide it into smaller packages to freeze.

SOUTHWESTERN BEAN BURGERS (makes 2 servings, 2 burgers each)

8 ounces rinsed drained canned white kidney (cannellini) beans,

1 cup mild salsa, divided

14 cup plain dried bread crumbs 1 tablespoon minced fresh cilantro (Chinese paraley) or Italian (flat-leaf) parsley Dash hot sauce

34 ounce reduced-fat Cheddar cheese, shredded

In medium mixing bowl combine beans, 1/2 cup salsa, the bread crumbs, cilantro, and hot sauce. Shape into 4 equal pattles. Wrap pattles and refrigerate until firm, about 20 minutes.

Spray 12-inch non-stick skillet with non-stick cooking spray and heat; add pattles and cook over medium heat until browned, about 5 minutes on each side.

To serve, top each burger with an equal amount of the remaining salsa and the cheese. Each serving provides: 2 protein, 1 vegetable, 1 bread, 30 optional calories. Source: Simply Light Cooking from the Kitchens of Weight Watchers, 1991.

Southern Rhone wines an excellent value

Chardonnay and cabernet sauvignon are fashionable wines; so are the wines of Bordeaux, Burgundy and Champagne. Rhone wines are not fashionable in the same sense, but they are recognized by connoisseurs as some of wine world's best values.

Single-handedly, author Robert Parker may have increased the fashionability of Rhone wines in the United States. For several years, he glowingly praised the wines of several Rhone estates in his bimonthly periodical "The Wine Advocate." He furthered the reputation of several Rhone producers in his book, "The Wines of the Rhone Valley and Provence," Simon and Schuster ($22.95).

Kermit Lynch, a wine retailer and importer based in Berkeley, Calif., is responsible for introducing Rhone wines to an expanding number of small, artisan winemakers in California. Lynch's book "Adventures on the Wine Route, A Wine Buyer's Tour of France," Farrar, Straus and Giroux ($19.95), gave readers an insider's view of several of the Rhone's superior producers.

focus on wine

Eleanor and Ray Heald

THE HOTTEST wines from California continue to be Rhone-style wines made from grapes originating in the Rhone Valley such as mourvedre, syrah, cinsault, grenache, roussanne, marsanne and viognier.

France's Rhone Valley runs south from Lyon to the Mediterranean Sea and is divided into two distinct subregions - north and south. The principal grape variety in the north is syrah.

Although Americans are accustomed to identifying wines by the name of the wine's principal grape variety, red wines of the southern Rhone are blends of several grape varieties, grown in a warmer climate. They are softer and more approachable when young. Northern wines tend to be more muscular and tannic, with greater longevity.

Learning about the red wines of the southern Rhone requires a certain familiarity with the place names used to identify these wines. Cotes du Rhone (coat dew rone), Cotes du Rhone Villages (vee-lajh), Chateauneuf-du-Pape (shot-toe-nuff dew pop), Cotes du Ventoux (coat dew vawn-too), Vacqueyras (va-kayras), and Gigondas (jhe-gone-das) are wines most frequently found in

J.C. Mathes, a professor of technical writing at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, has also developed a fondness for the wines of the southern Rhone. Rather than write about his wine passion, he has established a small importing company, J et R Selections Ltd., specializing in southern Rhone wines.

MATHES spends vacation periods and sabbaticals living in the southern Rhone. He has an affection for several proprietors and their wines, and markets them in Michigan. His wines are selected from a cluster of excellent domaines whose vineyards extend from les Dentelles de Montmirail across le plan de Dieu to the stony slopes of Chateauneuf-du-

Because we are Rhone wine fans, we asked Mathes to let us taste through his wines and recommend our favorites in the Wine Selections of the Week. These wines represent excellent values. If you have yet to be introduced to Rhone Wines, you would be well advised to begin here. Mathes' selections can be found in many area wine shops.

WINE SELECTIONS OF THE WEEK

It may take some searching to find the following southern Rhone wine values from J et R Selections Ltd. If your favorite wine shop does not presently carry them, remember that they can always be ordered for you and delivered in a few days.

1988 Cotes du Rhone Domaine de La Grangette Saint Joseph ($7.75) showcases black cherry, chocolate and cocoa aromas. It's spicy with good tannins, balanced acidity and an appealing peppery finish.

1988 Gigondas Cotes du Rhone Le Mas des Collines ($13) is higher priced than the first two recommendations, but the extra dollars bring a complex wine with smoky, blueberry and violet accents. It's a rich, multi-dimensional mouthful with guts and flavor.

Tips for storing, using whole grains

AP - You've probably already baked with whole-wheat flour and cooked oats, but when was the last time you used buckwheat? Or how about the first time, you leaped beyond wheat flour to cracked wheat, wheat bran or wheat berries?

A word to the wise before you stock up: Buy whole grains in small quantities. Because they contain the oil-rich germ, whole grains turn rancid faster. It's best to store them tightly covered, in a cool, dry place for no longer than five months. For longer storage, refrigerate or freeze grains, tightly covered, in moistureand vaporproof containers. Just be sure to warm chilled whole grain flour to room temperature before adding to yeast bread recipes.

Barley: The polished kernels or seeds of the barley plant. Available in regular (pearl) and quick-cooking form, barley is most often used in soups and casseroles.

Bran: The fiber-rich outer cover-corn, rice or wheat (which is also known as miller's bran.) Substitute a spoonful or two for flour in baking.

Buckwheat Groats: Whole, unpolished buckwheat kernels, roasted or unroasted, often ground into buckwheat flour. Roasted kernels, called kasha, may be cooked and served as a breakfast cereal or a side dish. Buckwheat flour makes especially good pancakes.

Bulgur Wheat: Wheat kernels that have been cracked and precooked to cut cooking time. You can use bulgur for casseroles, cereals and salads, such as tabbouleh, a favorite in the Middle East.

Cornmeal: Ground and dried yellow, white or even blue corn kernels commonly used in American Indian, Mexican and colonial American cooking. Use cornmeal in traditional corn bread, tamales or mush (also known as hasty pudding in colonial days), or add it to yeast breads, waffles, muffins, dumplings or pasta Cracked Wheat: Coarsely ground unpolished wheat kernels that have not been precooked. Cracked wheat is interchangeable with bulgur, only it takes a little longer to cook.

Hominy: Yellow or white corn kernels that have been hulled, soaked and dried. Add hominy to salads and soups. Coarsely ground hominy is called hominy grits, which is cooked into the Southern breakfast favorite of the same name.

Oats: Regular rolled oats are unpolished oat kernels that have been steamed and flattened. Quick-cooking folled oats are cut before steaming and flattening. Both forms may be used for cereal, cookies and breads, or can be ground into oat flour. Steel-cut oats are whole oat kernels that have been cut into lengthwise pieces; they may be used for hot cereal.

To toast rolled oats for extra flavor, place 1/2 cup quick-cooking or regular rolled oats in a shallow bakfor 15 to 20 minutes or until the oats are light brown.

Rice: Brown rice is a whole grain. yet its white counterpart is not. White rice has no endosperm. Brown rice is the unpolished whole rice kernel that still has its endosperm. You can substitute brown rice for white rice, but you'll need to double the cooking time. Quick-cooking brown rice and brown rice flour are also available. Wheat Berries: Unpolished wholewheat kernels. They make a hearty cereal and add texture to breads, soups and pilafs. Wheat berries can also be ground into whole-wheat

Wheat Germ: The soft, oily portion of the wheat kernel. Add a spoonful or two to baked goods or granola.

Wild Rice: Unpolished, dark brown, whole kernels from a marsh grass. Although wild rice is a grain, it is not a true member of the rice ing pan. Bake in a 350-degree F oven ing of any grain kernel, such as oat, Scramble up breakfast for three in a hurry

The time is filled up talking about himself. There's plenty to talk about.

After all, how many people can say they've been run over by a 3,200-pound Jeep, had a tug-of-war with a 180-horsepower single engine airplane, towed a 30-ton rivera marathon backwards.

Skydiving and bungle jumping. all of which Austin has done, seem passe by comparison.

Often, Austin has pulled off such daring feats in the name of charity. He runs off a list of causes he's helped raise money for, such as the American Cancer Society and the American Heart Association.

"I can get your attention," said Austin, who lives with his wife, Shella in Franklin. "I can talk about any subject."

In many ways, Austin is a throwback to the nostalgic days of public relations before the sound bites of

TV news. Then acts of publicity would be The 1975 graduate of Garden designed to elicit a good photo opportunity in the halcyon days of the newspaper business. Today, there's the immediacy of electronic media. His stunts have been chronicled in national publications like USA

Today and the Wall Street Journal. Austin's methods make him somewhat a maverick in the often sterilized corporate PR world where faxes and power luncheons are the norm. But Austin's desire to be the focal point transcends the public relations business.

LISA FISCO, a producer of "Kelly & Co.," can usually count on a phone call from Austin. He's been a guest on the morning talk show for such topics as prenupitual agreements and male vanity.

"He calls when he sees a topic that intrigues him," Fisco said. "He says, 'I did that.'

"I told him we were having a show on male vanity. He said, 'That fits me perfectly. I said, 'No kidding.'

Fisco hastens to add Austin's non-stop energy and sense of humor is rather refreshing.

"I don't know where he comes up with his ideas," she said. "He's so creative. He comes up with stuff I've never heard before."

Initially, Austin flirted with feats of endurance while at the YMCA in Williamsport, Pa. He remembers swimming an old logging river for 15 miles in a benefit for the March of Dimes, including treacherous rapids for the last five. At the finish, there were 200 people to greet him. "I started crying," he sald. There were all these people to welcome me. I thought, This feels

Pacheco: Perfect musical match

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

A restless spirit carries Tom Pacheco, and his songs mirror his jour-

For a songwriter who's claimed Woodstock, Nashville, Austin and, currently, Dublin, Ireland, as his home, Pacheco's work covers a wide variety of themes from desperation to isolation, all rooted in a vivid folk narrative and matched with an uncanny sense of melody.

"I'm kind of happy I've lived in a lot of places," said Pacheco in a telephone interview from Dublin. "By staying in one place too long you tend to get into that whole sound. When you live in Texas, you tend to think of Texas as the whole world, which is a little provincial. It's the same if you stay in New York too long or live in California.

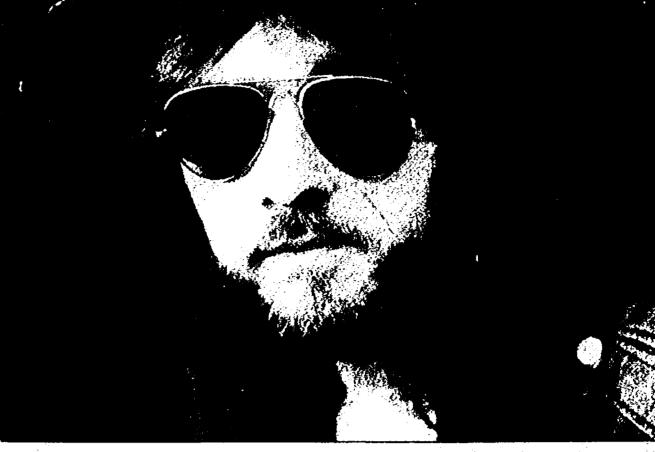

"Each place has its own musical influence, something special about it. I've tried to absorb all the various influences into my music."

His last album, "Sunflowers & Scarecrows," (Round Tower) features an array of eloquent postcards from people met on the road as well as anti-war numbers such as "Merchant of Death." Self-admittedly, Pacheco's effort was "overdone" in parts but aptly captures the inspirational story/songwriting style he

AFTER HIS performance Friday, April 3, at the La Casa Folk Music Series in Birmingham Unitarian Church, Pacheco will fly to Nashville to record "Tales from the Red

Pacheco feels his third album (to be released in September) will be much like his first. "Eagle in the Rain," a critically acclaimed effort released in 1990 on Round Tower, cut to despair with "Robert & Ramona" and featuring his wry-sense of embellishment with "Jesus in a Black Leather Jacket."

On his new album, there will be a tale of what became of the alleged second gunman in the Kennedy assassination, "Jessica Brown," and one rather unconventional parrative about a woman biker and a New York cop falling in love.

Tom Pacheco has lived in many places and his songs covera wide variety of themes, rooted in his vivid folk narrative and uncanny sense of melody.

Pacheco lives in a place where a good tale is still much appreciated, often told by a turf fire over some poteen or like substance. He moved to Ireland in 1987 after an Irishman he met in New York invited him to tour there.

"I moved to Nashville for awhile and I pretty much hated it," Pacheco said. "I was chomping at the bit to get out. Songwriting in Nashville is dull, totally banal. Most of it is verse-chorus-verse-chorus, bridge and out. It's usually dull love songs most of the time. I thought, 'Oh god, I've ended up my life here.' I couldn't imagine sitting in a cubicle somewhere with three or four other songwriters turning out songs like

AFTER A THREE-week tour of Eire, Pacheco had no thoughts of returning. He's taken up residence in the southside of Dublin where England, Scotland and the rest of Europe years as have his travels. are accessible for touring.

Receptive audiences made the transformation to a new country much easier. Pacheco has often found himself performing before younger crowds, seeing as nearly half the population of Ireland is 25 or younger.

"In terms of songwriting, there's so many great writers who've come out of this country," he said. "There's such an emphasis on writing, on poetry and on the arts. Especially coming from Nashville where most people just talk about football and basketball and Baptist stuff. It was great to come to Ireland where the people are interested in the

The art of writing songs, though, is universal. Pacheco uses the process of matching an idea with a melody and then filling in the words later.

His craft has evolved through the

"It's almost like writing a screenplay," he said. "The average screen play is 120 pages or so. Usually, there's a minute of film per page. Every 15 minutes, you have to write something to keep it moving forward. It's sort of the same thing in story songwriting. It's keeping the interest up and keeping the flow

"Most stories should have a beginning, middle and an end . . . and hopefully the melody to match the

Marillion is rocking with a message

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

Marillion is an arena rock act sure and true. Songs are simple, written in a strident hard rock motiff that ask few questions.

"(A song) has to be saying something," said vocalist Steve Hogarth, whose band performs Friday, April 3, at The Ritz. "It has to be conveying an emotion and painting a picture. It has to paint a picture musically as well as paint one lyrically.

"Above all else it has to be honest." Such a credo won't land them on the cover of Melody Maker, cause upheavel in the alternative scene or rankle the myopic radio programmer. A cynic might even dismiss such statements of virtue to insincerity. Somebody must be buying it, though.

It's hard to scoff at a European sales figure of 600,000 of their latest album "Holldays in Eden" or write off an outfit that's lasted nearly 10 years and even endured a change in lead singers, from Fish to Hogarth, in that span.

Perhaps there's a vulnerability that leads to Marillion's durability. Hogarth, who replaced Fish in 1988, has a soft yearning singing style that puts an emotional attachment to his songs.

MANY NUMBERS on "Holidays in Eden" speak of voids and personal longing, which Hogarth said were culled from nearly three years of touring after the 1989 "Season's End" album.

"Half of the time, we seemed to be saying goodbye to people for months on end," said Hogarth, who wrote a majority of the numbers on the "Holidays in Eden." "I was trying to put my finger on it. I felt a bit dislocated spiritually. It was something nagging me."

Hogarth's vocal ability is somewhat easier to retrace. Although he had no formal vocal training, he did sing in school choirs in his native England.

His singing hero was John Lennon, whose honesty as a singer appealed to him more than the former Beatle's vocal range. Likewise, he gets the same "buzz" listening to REM's Michael Stipe and solo artist Michael Bolton.

His schooling in the rock arena included stints with English bands How We Live and Europeans before joining Marillion. The group already had established itself with several albums, including one under the band's original moniker of Silmarillion in 1983 "Script for a Jester's Tear."

Marillion made its American debut in 1985 with "Misplaced Childhood," which was both critically and commercially successful as a concept album featuring the hit single "Kayleigh."

Hogarth had little trouble slipping in as a replacement for Fish, writing half of the songs for "Season's End." Fans seemingly accepted the change in frontmen as well.

Then again, Hogarth is a believable sort.

"If you stick a politician in front of a TV camera, you can tell if they're lying," Hogarth said. "Maybe it's something we should remember as people. You should look them in the eye and ask yourself, 'Can I believe this?'

"I think people can generally tell if people are being honest or not."

Marillion will perform Friday, April 3, at The Ritz, 17580 Frazho, 1014 Mile and Gratiot, Roseville. Tickets are $5 advance; $7 at the door. For information, call 778-8150.

Restored 'Othello' reunites sight and sound

Among serious film buffs, Orson Welles' "Othello" ranks among those titles that is often discussed, but rarely actually screened. Part of the reason lies in the garbled soundtrack, which was shot over several years and under often slapdash con-

A recent restoration and enhancement has now placed the film among the upper eschelon of Welles' work, right up there with "Citizen Kane" and "Magnificent Ambersons." You can see for yourself what all the fuss is about when the Detroit Film Theaire brings the film into town with considerable fanfare this weekend.

What a difference a decade makes. In the early 1940s, Welles was at the top of his profession. By 1948, he proved so difficult to work with that Hollywood wanted little to do with him except as an actor.

"Othello" was shot over a four-year period, primarily using money Welles made by appearing in other people's films.

Indeed, the story of "Othello" behind the scenes could make a good movie script in itself. His cast and crew could be found waiting in train stations and hotel rooms for their boss to arrive from abroad with more money for filming.

"Othello" was not Welles' first or last brush with the great William Water went into lungs and he began to think he was going to drown. After panicking, a calmness overtook him and he managed to finish.

All exhibitions of physical endurance are well-planned, Austin said. Acts such as enduring a 3,200-pound truck wheel on his chest and anchoring a plane involve specialized breathing techniques, all developed from years of physical fitness train-

In many ways, Austin is ahead of his time. He was first on the roller blade scene, starting an indoor skating at One-on-One Athletic Club in West Bloomfield.

He became known for starting what is called retro-running - in essence running backwards. "I could not beat people going for-both wonderful as the angels the film focuses on. They are gentle and usually solemn faced, moving gracefully to provide unseen comfort with whisper and touch on the shoulder. Sadly, even the unseen intervention of these spiritual beings isn't enough to save everyone.

PICKING UP conversations in apartments or houses, trains or passing cars, the angels see the world in black and white. The corporeal world doesn't really exist for them as they move through walls or high above the ground.

Only the humans see the world in color or can feel the substance of an object, whether a stone or a flower.

After an eternity of spirituality, Ganz longs to experience the tastes, smells, colors and sounds the humans take for granted. He wants the contacts that only humans can have with each other. His long existence has been one of answering "Yes" and "Amen." Ganz is willing to trade his eternal life as an angel for a real human life.

During his travels about the city Ganz falls in love with a French aerialist at a small failing circus. He is enthralled with her at first sight, taking a childlike delight in her chicken feather wings, an imitation someone her mind speaks to is him. Sander follows an elderly man, searching in vain for a street that exists now only in his memory after the destruction of World War II. The bombings and damage suffered by the city still resonates in the old man's thoughts.

ONE OF the people Ganz has contact with is actor Peter Falk, playing himself, as he arrives to make a World War II era costume film. The angel is startled when Falk speaks with him, even though he isn't visible. Falk waxes fondly of the earthly pleasures of coffee and a good cigar. "Wings of Desire" is a stark, compelling and moving film both in terms of is visual style and story. Don't expect little winged cherubs or angels wandering about the cloud cover. People live their lives, they are happy or angry or sad but they do live.

In its own unsentimental way, Wenders' film celebrates the joy of connecting with other human beings and just being alive in the universe.

"Wings of Desire" is available on video cassette in local video

Get rid of Southfield as regional site

Things to ponder while watching the split-screen feeds from CBS on the NCAA basketball tournament.

• I don't understand what's going on when the Michigan High School Athletic Association continues to allow Southfield High as a site for the regional basketball tourna-

It is unfair to the fans and the players to stage a regional - especially when you have marquee teams such as Redford Catholic Central, Detroit Cooley, Wayne Memorial and Detroit Southwestern - all at the same site in one night.

To make matters worse, tournament Art Carinci decided it was best to hold a doubleheader on Tuesday, charging separate admissions at 5 and 8 p.m., and then have the final the next night on a Wednesday.

Just ludicrous. And not giving the kids a day off is even more ridiculous.

Carinci, it seems, always has a surprise up his sleeve for the spectators.

After it was announced several times that the starting time of the first game Tuesday would be 5:30 p.m., Carinci changes it the night before and moves it up to 5 p.m., only informing Wayne Memorial coach Chuck Henry at 10 p.m. the night before. (After I called the same day to confirm the time, Carinci's student assistant still gave me the wrong starting time.)

Add that to the fact that Southfield's gym is antiquated and cramped, with a slippery floor and obstructed-view seats (posts in the balcony), it lends itself to a volatile situation. And if that's not bad enough, Carinci funnels spectators through only one door with only one ticket salesman. Needless to say, there were a few people standing outside in the cold.

If Carinci is the only athletic director to put in for a regional site, then the MHSAA is going to have to make things more financially attractive to host a regional. There are certainly better venues.

I found it interesting that when a Class A quarterfinal doubleheader at the University of Detroit Mercy was unexpectedly canceled because of a student protest, the games were convienently relocated at the MHSAA Highland Park and Ferndale gyms.

When Graham ran during the early '80s, she was a state champion in both the 100and 200-yard hurdles. She had the nation's top time in the 100 hurdles (13.6) her senior season, but now the records apparently don't mean anything because the distances have been changed to 100- and 300-meter hurdles.

Graham, who went on to run at Indiana University, is now the head girls track coach at Livonia Churchill.

I think she deserves better.

• It's been a tough year for area high school coaches. The kids, it appears, are getting tougher to coach because the parents can't let them alone.

In today's day and age, parents only care about their own kids and what they do in a game. It's not about loyalty to the school or team anymore.

The most complaints I heard came from coaches whose teams were winning. Parents see their own kids, the coaches say, and nothing else.

HO'S ON THE right track this season when it comes to Observerland boys Westland John Glenn secondyear coach Jess Shough is optimistic about his squad for 1992 despite some key losses.

The Rockets are coming off a second place finish (behind Plymouth Salem) at both the Observerland and Western Lakes Activities Association meets.

But lost to graduation is schoolrecord holder David Arbour (161 feet, 8 inches in the discus), Jason Key (155-10 in discus), sprinter Randy Seach (22.9 in 200 meters and 50.4 in 400).

"We don't have a Seach in the sprints, but we're more senior-laden in a number of events," Shough said. "We have good depth throughout our lineup. I think we compare to last year."

Seniors Mark Bennetts, Carl Brooks and Jerry Finch hope to pick up the slack in the shot put and discus.

High jumper Bill Griffiths, who cleared 6-6 as a sophomore, but only 6-2 last year, returns along with junior Chris Vanderburgh (6-

Returnees in the hurdles include letter winners Andy Hodge and Mark Kalser, both seniors, along with Randy Ellison and Jeff Kolbas, a pair of juniors.

With Seach and Lamar Ellison (11.4 in 100) graduated in the sprints, Shough is depending on Pat Brown, a senior, juniors Kevin Claypool and Joe Paddock, along with Buck and Schultz.

The middle distance team (400 and 800) includes Griffiths, Vanderburgh, junior Jeff Tapper and senior Mark Coleman.

Both Tapper and Coleman will be joined in distance events by senior Rob Bloomfield, junior Bob Lulek and sophomore Scott Szukaltis.

Tournament relief: Summer tourneys

OST OF THE local bowling centers are preparing to start summer leagues which usually begin at the end of the regular season and run about 10 or 12 weeks.

Something different will take place this year, as a group of eight metro Detroit establishments are holding a "recession relief summer league tournament."

The houses in the Observerland communities with this tournament are Plum Hollow Lanes in Southfield and Merri Bowl

Any bowler competing in the summer leagues are eligible for free entry in the tournament. The grand prize is one full year of house payments or rent, with a maximum prize at

Each of the participating houses will also award one month mortgage payment or rental to the winner from their teams. Other prizes will also be given.

This is a handicap event with mystery strikes and spares in each game.

JULIE WRIGHT, who was selected as the 1992 Star of Tomorrow by the Michigan Women's Bowling Association, won her third Michigan Junior Masters Association title of the year at a recent tournament in Grand Rapids.

Ironically, Julie's opposition in the stepladder finals was Lisa Bishop, the recipient of the same award in 1991.

The win also puts Julie in the lead for Bowler of the Year honors in the girl's division of the MJMA, also known as the Rolling Rebels. Julie won the match 216-193.

The Paralyzed Veternas of America wheelchair bowlers are holding their major tournament at Super Bowl in August. The PVA needs about 30 volunteers to keep score. More than 100 competitors are expected and the event will be hosted by Johnny Petraglia. The all-time great bowler is a veteran of Vietnam conflict.

The tournament is August 7-9. Anyone who wants to help should call Bob Calderon at 522-4574.

LIVONIA BOXERS WIN

John Bahoura, a super heavyweight from the Livonia Boxing Club, defeated Kevin Banks from Detroit Butzel Recreation Center on a unanimous decision Wednesday at the Detroit Area Golden Gloves Tournament (Open Division) at the Detroit Athletic Club. The 24-yearold Bahoura advances to the finals April 25 at Cobo Arena with a 3-5 overall record.

Another super-heavyweight bout (Senior Novice), Donnie Ryan of the LBC was stopped in the first round by Tony Simmons of the Coleman Youth Center of Detroit.

Improving Kevin Tripodi, a 12year member of the LBC, defeated Shawn Black of London, Ontario in an amateur bout March 22 in a Lucas, Ontario club show.

Tripodi, 20, will fight in the 156pound Open Division in a future Golden Gloves elimination bout. He'll enter the round with a 17-10 record.

Tripodi is one of nine LBC members entered in next month's Golden

Stevenson boots Troy

Livonia Stevenson opened the 1992 girls soccer season Friday with a 4-1 win at Troy High.

The Spartans, 17-1-2 a year ago after winning the 1990 state Class A title, will travel tonight to meet Plymouth Salem in an early season showdown. (Game time is 7.)

"For the first game things looked promising," Stevenson coach Mary Kay Hussey said. "Troy plays hard and they're a good team. It was good to play one before we meet Salem."

The Spartans-jumped out to a 2-0 halftime league on goals by Holly Kimble and Allson Pinta. Shannon Wilkinson and Ragen

Coyne drew assists. Stevenson added two more goals in the second half - Jean Barnas son (unassisted). Stevenson's shutout bid went awry in the final 40 seconds as the host Colts scored on a free kick.

(from Michelle Brach) and Wilkin-

Karen Groulx (first half) and Alicia Smith (second half) divided time in the Stevenson goal.

More Detroit suburban savers and investors

I f your business has anything to do with banking, consumer lending, investing, or any other financial services, this is the best possible place for your ad to appear.

SPRING Newspapers.

And the SPRING Newspapers' circulation more than doubles the daily suburban circulation of either
The Detroit News or Free Press.

Because this is one of the fifty

In fact, SPRING's suburban circulation is greater than the two metro dailies' combined.

And that's not all.

According to the 1991 Belden newspaper readership study,

SPRING reaches more of the affluent suburban shoppers who have more to spend—and who spend more.

▶ 151,800 more suburban savings account users than the daily News

(68,100 more than the Free Press).

▶ 109,000 more suburban NOW account users than The News (41,000 more than the Free Press).

▶ 121,700 (and 31,900) more suburban investors.

Not to mention more suburban buyers of new cars, boats, jewelry, $200.000+ homes, etc.

Simply put, one order in SPRING delivers more.

Shouldn't you advertise in SPRING more?

SPRING is the network of 50 suburban Detroit newspapers published by the Adams, Associated, Heritage, HomeTown, and Observer & Eccentric groups. SPRING gives you all the selling power of local newspaper, and all of the economic power of Detroit's affluent suburbs. To get all the facts, call your SPRING or Observer &
