Encl: (1) TL 85-4, The Naval Reserve Sea Air Mariner VOTECH Program: Qualified Civilian Schools for RAMP

1. Enclosure (1) presents the work conducted within advanced development subproject Z-1772-ET-016 (VOTECH Accession Program) under the mission sponsorship of the Chief of Naval Operations (OP-01). The objective of the project is to develop a program using civilian institutions to train Naval Reservists in Navy vocations that are experiencing shortages of Navy personnel and training facilities.
2. Presently the Naval Reserve Forces have the most critical shortfall in the Hospital Corpsman (HM) rating and in the construction ratings in the Construction Battalion (CBs).
3. The Commander Naval Reserve Force requested enclosure (1) to facilitate recruiting efforts under the Sea Air Mariner (SAM) Reserve Program component that is dedicated to the enlistment of HMs--the Reserve Allied Medical Personnel Program (RAMP). The civilian schools listed in enclosure (1) are eligible to participate in the SAM program, because their training programs have been accredited by various American Medical Association organizations, such as the Committee on Allied Health Education and Accreditation and the National Society of Cardiopulmonary Technologists. Appreciation is extended to the American Medical Association for granting permission to duplicate pages from the Allied Health Education Directory, 13th edition. (Department of Allied Health Education and Accreditation of the American Medical Association, 1985).
4. Appreciation is also extended to CDR G. S. Windham, former Director of Education and Training Division, Naval Medical Command for his efforts in compiling the information in the appendices and for his efforts in establishing the RAMP program.
5. This report is intended for the recruiters from the Naval Reserve Forces Command to use in implementing the RAMP program beginning October 1985.

As part of this total effort, the recruiters in the Naval Reserve Force Command need a document that lists the schools eligible for this program. The first part of this Reserve program is directed toward the recruitment of Reserve Hospital Corpsmen. This program is known as the Reserve Allied Medical Personnel (RAMP) program. This report contains the lists of all the civilian schools that have been certified by the relevant American Medical Association accrediting organization. SUMMARY

Purpose and Background

This report provides the Navy recruiting community with a listing of the accredited civilian schools that are eligible to participate in the Reserve Allied Medical Personnel (RAMP) component of the Navy's Sea Air Mariner (SAM) Reserve Program.

Using civilian vocational/technical (VOTECH) schools in lieu of Navy training schools is a way of meeting the increased training requirement resulting from expansion of the Naval Reserve Force and a diminishing pool of trained personnel in critical ratings.

Program Description

The SAM VOTECH program is a Naval Reserve program for non-prior military service personnel, ages 17-34. The Hospital Corpsman (HM) rating and the construction ratings in the Construction Battalion (CBs) have been targeted as having a critical shortage of trained reservists. The RAMP program for HMs is being implemented in fiscal year 1986 to alleviate the shortage. The CB VOTECH program is still under development because of the need for more extensive civilian school curriculum evaluation.

In the RAMP program, participants complete the regular 8-week Navy recruit training and then return to their home community for technical training in a qualified civilian school, monthly reserve drills, and 2 weeks of annual active duty. The Navy reimburses participants for tuition, books, and supplies. Bonuses up to $2,000 make the program even more attractive.

Selection of Qualified Civilian Schools

Schools that have been accredited by various American Medical Association organizations were selected as eligible for the RAMP program. Reservists who complete one of the qualified civilian schools listed in Appendixes A through C will receive a specific Navy Enlisted Classification (NEC) designation.

Qualification of civilian schools for the CB program requires individual school curriculum analysis by the Navy Personnel Research and Development Center and the Naval Education and Training Command organizations, because no similar national accrediting body exists for construction trade training. Lists of qualified schools for the CB ratings will be provided when the curriculum review is accomplished during fiscal year 1986.

Recommendation

COMNAVRESFOR recruiting personnel should use the lists of qualified schools contained herein in determining eligibility of civilian schools for the RAMP program.

INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this report is to provide to the Navy recruiting community a listing of the civilian schools that are eligible for participation in a component of the Navy's Sea Air Mariner (SAM) Reserve Program directed toward the Hospital Corpsman (HM) rating. Specifically, this report provides recruiters with a list of civilian schools supporting the Reserve Allied Medical Personnel (RAMP) component of the SAM program. The use of civilian schools to provide Navy technical training is an outgrowth of a planned expansion of the reserve forces and its resulting shortage of trained personnel.

Current expansion of the Naval Reserve forces will increase the number of reservists by approximately 30 percent during the next few years. The resulting increase in required technical training is taxing the Navy's available resources of instructors, equipment, and facilities. At the same time, demographic variables are significantly reducing the pool of military eligible individuals over the next decade. Both of these factors have prompted the Navy to explore alternative methods for recruiting reserve personnel for critical occupational areas and to identify alternative training resources for accomplishing required Navy technical training.

The Chief of Naval Operations (OP-01) sponsored a research project (Z-1772-ET-016) to develop alternative civilian training sources for Navy occupational ratings that are undergoing a critical training and personnel shortfall. The idea is to use civilian schools to provide the vocational/technical (VOTECH) training for critical Navy ratings that have insufficient Navy training resources. Presently, the Naval Reserve Forces have the most critical trained personnel shortfalls in the HM rating and the constructing ratings in the Construction Battalion (CBs). Programs that address these training shortfalls are currently being developed and implemented.

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The SAM program is a Naval Reserve program that seeks to enlist 17 to 34-year-old personnel without prior military service into the Navy. These personnel usually complete the regular Navy recruit training and various kinds of technical training, before returning to their home community to participate in monthly reserve drills and 2 weeks of active duty annually. However, this added annual requirement to train approximately 10,000 SAM Reservists exceeds the maximum capability of the Navy technical training schools.

The VOTECH component of the SAM program involves sending the personnel to the regular 3-week Navy recruit training, but to a civilian school, in their home community for completion of the Navy related VOTECH training. The Navy will provide reimbursement for tuition and cost of books and fees for VOTECH training completed after enlisting in the reserve SAM program. Additionally, reservists will receive up to $2,000 as a bonus for successful participation in the SAM program for the critical occupation areas. Implicit in this program is the idea that reservists who intend to use the same skill in their full-time occupation as in the reserves will be of greater benefit to the Navy than reservists who use the skill only on their drill weekends.

Hospital Corpsmen RAMP Program

The purpose of the RAMP program is primarily to get personnel who meet specific Navy Enlisted Classification (NEC) requirements for selected technical skills. The NECs that the Navy has identified as being in a critical shortage status are listed in Table 1.

Table 1
Critical Shortage Status Navy Enlisted Classifications

NEC	Title
HM-8408	Cardiopulmonary Technician
HM-8445	Advanced Ocular Technician
HM-8452	Advanced X-Ray Technician
HM-8454	Electroencephalography Technician
HM-8463	Optician Technician
HM-8466	Physical Therapy Technician
HM-8477	Biomedical Equipment Technician (Basic)
HM-8478	Biomedical Equipment Technician (Advanced)
HM-8483	Operating Room Technician
HM-8501	Laboratory Technician (Basic)
HM-8506	Laboratory Technician (Advanced)
HM-8732	Dental Equipment Repair Technician

The RAMP program can acquire highly skilled technicians and avoid the sizable cost of delivering the NEC related technical training in addition to the costs for HM "A" school. The RAMP program generally will produce HMs who work full time in the same medical technical area in which they work during their Reserve drill periods.

The Naval Medical Command, together with the Commander Naval Reserve Force (COMNAVRESFOR), are structuring a total reserve training pipeline to ensure that the reserve HMS will have the full complement of hospital corpsmen skills, as well as the NEC specific technician skills. The RAMP program is being implemented beginning in October 1985 to meet a sizable fiscal year 1986 HM requirement.

Construction Battalion VOTECH Program

The VOTECH program involving the seven construction ratings for the CBs is still under development. This program is similar to RAMP, but its goal is to obtain "A" school qualified CB personnel from civilian training schools instead of conventional Navy "A" schools. The construction ratings under consideration for the CB VOTECH program are: Equipment Operator, Builder, Construction Mechanic, Construction Electrician, Engineering Aid, Steelworker, and Utilitiesman.

As with the RAMP program, reimbursement will be provided for costs associated with acquiring the Navy related training--tuition, books, supplies. A special 4-week CB-oriented apprentice training program will be provided to all CB VOTECH reservists immediately following the initial recruit training. The combined recruit and apprentice training will satisfy the 12-week training requirement for mobilization and will provide needed orientation to the CB reservist without prior military service.

The primary difference in the two programs is in the method by which civilian schools are determined to be eligible for participation. This difference is described in the following report section.

SELECTION OF QUALIFIED CIVILIAN SCHOOLS

RAMP Program

Selection of qualified civilian schools for the RAMP program was simplified by the existence of several accrediting bodies recognized by the American Medical Association. The Naval Medical Command recognized the accreditation granted to these institutions by these bodies and decided that reservists graduating from the accredited institutions would be granted the Navy NEC equivalent. Table 2 lists for each NEC, the equivalent civilian title, and the criteria for Navy acceptance.

Personnel from the Naval Medical Command compiled the qualified schools listed in Appendixes A through L for the NECs listed in Table 2. A fact sheet at the front of each appendix provides salient information about the NEC and its technical area for the convenience of recruiters attempting to enlist individuals into these areas. The listing for each school generally includes: school name, address, director, tuition, class capacity, starting date, and the date of next scheduled (accreditation) review. Graduates, as well as students, in these listed civilian school programs are eligible for the SAM RAMP program.

Construction Battalion VOTECH Program

Identifying qualified civilian schools for the CB VOTECH program is considerably more difficult than for the RAMP program because no national accrediting bodies exist for construction trade training. Each institution must be accredited by a nationally recognized body, such as the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges. Specific evaluation of the technical training will be based on research being conducted by the Navy Personnel Research and Development Center in coordination with the Naval Education and Training Command and its subordinate organizations. This research consists of analyzing the curriculum of each school to determine the similarity of the civilian and Navy training.

An initial survey of civilian schools revealed that many civilian schools are extremely interested in participating in the program and have construction training programs similar to the Navy's. Completion of the research is necessary for adequate determination of the similarity of the Navy and civilian school training. The evaluation of the civilian training will be accomplished through Curriculum Review Boards comprised of Navy training command personnel who will review school material and information collected by NPRDC via questionnaires and actual site visits.

OPHTHALMIC MEDICAL ASSISTANT

Occupational Description: In ophthalmology medical assistants play a directly supporting role to the physician. Ophthalmic medical assistants are skilled persons qualified by academic and clinical training to carry out diagnostic and therapeutic procedures under the direction and responsibility of the physician.

Job Description: Ophthalmic medical assistants assist ophthalmologists by performing delegable tasks, collecting data, and administering or supervising treatment ordered by ophthalmologists. Their duties may include: (a) taking a medical history, administering diagnostic tests, making anatomical and functional ocular measurements, testing ocular functions (including visual acuity, visual fields and sensorimotor functions), administering topical ophthalmic medications, instructing the patient (as in home care and in use of contact lenses); (b) care and maintenance of optical instruments; care, maintenance and sterilization of surgical instruments; and maintenance of ophthalmological office equipment; (c) assisting in ophthalmic surgery in the office or hospital; (d) making optical measurements, administering orthoptic and pleoptic procedures; (e) carrying out ocular electroneurological procedures; (f) assisting in the fitting of contact lenses; (g) fitting, making minor repairs on, and adjusting spectacles; (h) clinical photography; and (i) such other tasks as may be delegated consistent with sound medical practice.

Employment Characteristics: Ophthalmic medical assistants render supportive services to the ophthalmologist. They are employed primarily by ophthalmologists, but may be employed by medical institutions, clinics or physician groups and assigned to an ophthalmologist who is responsible for their direction. Ophthalmic medical assistants may be involved with patients of an ophthalmologist in any setting for which the ophthalmologist is responsible.

Educational Programs:

Length: Programs are generally 1-2 years in length.

Prerequisites: High school diploma or equivalent.

Curriculum: Instruction should follow a planned outline which includes courses in anatomy and physiology, medical terminology, medical laws and ethics, psychology, ocular anatomy and physiology, ophthalmic optics, microbiology, ophthalmic pharmacology and toxicology, ocular motility, and diseases of the eye; diagnostic and treatment procedures, including visual field testing, contact lenses, ophthalmic surgery, as well as care and maintenance of ophthalmic instruments and equipment. Students may also have a supervised clinical experience, during which they have opportunities to apply theory to practice through correlated and supervised instruction in clinical practice areas.

Essentials: Essentials are minimum educational standards adopted by the organizations listed above. Each new program is assessed in accordance with the Essentials, and accredited programs are periodically reviewed to determine whether or not they remain in substantial compliance. The Essentials with Guidelines are available upon written request of the Department of Allied Health Education and Accreditation.

(See attached sheet)

RADIOGRAPHER

Occupational Description: Radiographers provide patient services using imaging modalities, as directed by physicians qualified to order and/or perform radiologic procedures. Radiographers usually provide patient care essential to radiologic procedures; this includes exercising judgment when performing medical imaging procedures. When providing patient services, the radiographer adheres to the principles of radiation protection for the patient, self, and others.

Job Description: Radiographers accurately demonstrate anatomical structures on a radiograph by applying knowledge of anatomy, positioning, and radiographic technique. Radiographers must also be able to recognize emergency patient conditions and initiate lifesaving first aid and basic life support procedures. Additional duties may include evaluating equipment and processing film. Radiographers may be required to perform some of these duties at the patient's bedside or in the operating room.

Employment Characteristics: Most radiographers work in hospitals. In addition, positions in clinics, private offices, industry, civil service, and public health service facilities may be open to qualified professionals. Full-time radiographers usually work 40 hours per week. Salaries naturally vary according to experience, ability, and geographic location, but they are generally competitive with those of professions requiring comparable educational preparation. Entry salaries range from $13,000 to $19,000. Employment opportunities are available in most areas of the nation.

Educational Programs:

Length: Programs are generally 2 years, depending on program design and objectives and on student qualifications.

Prerequisites: Applicants must have a high school diploma (or equivalent), have other acceptable preparation, or have successfully completed a college entrance examination. Courses in physics, chemistry, biology, algebra, and geometry are strongly recommended.

Curriculum: Curricula of accredited programs include medical terminology; human structure and function; radiation biology; radiation protection; radiographic evaluation; patient care; and professional ethics and law. Related subjects may be required by the degree granting institution. Supervised clinical education is an essential part of the curriculum of all radiography programs.

Essentials: Essentials are minimum educational standards adopted by the American College of Radiology, the American Society of Radiologic Technologists, and the AMA Council on Medical Education. Each new program is assessed in accordance with the Essentials, and accredited programs are periodically reviewed to determine whether or not they remain in substantial compliance. The Essentials with Guidelines are available upon written request from the Department of Allied Health Education and Accreditation.

Military Conversion:

Army: MOS 916T5
Air Force: 902503/902703

Employment:

Neurology departments of hospitals, private offices of neurologists and neurosurgeons.

Schools:

(See attached sheet)

ELECTROENCEPHALOGRAPHIC TECHNOLOGIST

Occupational Description: Electroencephalography (EEG) is the scientific field devoted to recording and studying the electrical activity of the brain. EEG technicians and technologists operate an instrument called an electroencephalograph, which records this activity, producing a written tracing of the brain's electrical impulses. This record is called an electroencephalogram.

Various kinds of brain disease can be diagnosed by neurologists and other qualified medical practitioners using the EEG.

Job Description: The EEG technologist is skilled in the following functions: patient handling, patient briefing, history taking and abstracting, properly applying recording electrodes, and understanding the optimal use of EEG equipment. The EEG technologist may also be required to apply EEG procedures to a specific patient's problem; to recognize, correct, or identify artifacts which are manifested during the recording; to manage medical emergencies in the laboratory; to correct instrument faults; to debrief the patient; and to write a descriptive report of the recording for use by the electroencephalographer. The responsibilities of the technologist may also include laboratory management and the supervision of EEG technicians.

Employment Characteristics: Although EEG personnel work primarily in the neurology departments of hospitals, many work in private offices of neurologists and neurosurgeons. The employment outlook for EEG technologists is expected to grow faster than the average for all occupations due to the increased use of EEGs in surgery and in diagnosing and monitoring patients with brain disease. EEG technologists generally work a 40-hour week.

Educational Programs:

Length: Twelve months or more, which may be integrated into a college sponsored program leading to a degree.

Prerequisites: High school diploma or equivalent.

Curriculum: Anatomy, physiology, and neuroanatomy--with major emphasis on the brain; as well as electronics and instrumentation, including personal and patient safety.

Essentials: Essentials are minimum educational standards developed by the Joint Review Committee on Education in Electroencephalographic Technology. The Essentials have been adopted by the following organizations collaborating with the American Medical Association as well as by the American Medical Association itself: American Electroencephalographic Society, American Medical Electroencephalographic Association, and the American Society of Electroencephalographic Technologists. Each new program is assessed in accordance with the Essentials, and accredited programs are periodically reviewed to determine whether or not they remain in substantial compliance. The Essentials with Guidelines are available upon written request of the Department of Allied Health Education and Accreditation.

APPENDIX I
HM-3483 OPERATING ROOM TECHNICIAN

INDIVIDUAL NEC FACT SHEET

NEC	NEC TITLE	CIVILIAN TITLE
8423	OR Technician	Surgical technologist

NEC Description:

Assists medical officer in carrying out surgical techniques. Provides nursing care, safety, and support to patients before, during and after surgery. Selects, sterilizes and prepares instruments and materials and the aseptic environment necessary for surgery. Assists anesthetist during operating procedures in giving artificial respiration and in the use of resuscitators. Maintains surgical equipment and records. Assists with instruction, supervision, and evaluation of students and other duties relating to surgery.

Certifying Body:

Association of Surgical Technologists, Inc.
8387 Shaffer Parkway
Caller No. E
Littleton, CO 80120

Acceptance Criteria:

Graduates of programs accredited by CAHEA and/or certified by the Association of Surgical Technologists, Inc.

Military Conversion:

Army: 91D
Air Force: 902Y2/90299/90200

Employment:

Hospitals, clinics

Schools:

(See attached sheet)

Occupational Description: Surgical technologists work principally in the operating room performing functions and tasks that provide for a safe environment for surgical care, contribute to the efficiency of the operating room team, and support the operating surgeons, nurses, and others involved in operative procedures. Surgical technologists also work in other patient service settings which call for special knowledge of asepsis.

Job Description: Because of the marked variations in practice resulting from geographic, sociologic and economic factors, the ultimate role of surgical technologists is not rigidly defined. Surgical technologists perform functions and tasks in support of operating surgeons, nurses, and other personnel which contribute to patient care and safety, to the efficiency of the operating team, and to the cleanliness of the surgical environment. Knowledge of and experience with aseptic surgical techniques qualify surgical technologists to prepare instruments and materials for use at the operating table and elsewhere and to assist in the use of these materials.

Employment Characteristics: A majority of surgical technologists work in hospitals, principally in operating rooms and occasionally in emergency rooms and other settings which call for knowledge of and ability in maintaining asepsis. A much smaller number work in a wide variety of settings and arrangements including out-patient surgicenters, either under the employ of physicians or as self-employed technologists.

Those who work in hospital and other institutional settings are usually expected to work rotating shifts or to accommodate on-call assignments to assure adequate staffing for emergency surgical procedures which need to be done during evening, night, weekend, and holiday hours. Otherwise, surgical technologists follow a standard work day.

Salaries vary depending upon the experience and education of the individual, the economy of a given region, the responsibilities of the position, and the working hours. Starting annual salaries begin in the range of $10,500, with more experienced technologists earning incomes of $16,000 and higher. Demand for technologists varies among communities and geographic regions. Prospective students are advised to assess the market for graduates within the region in which they would like to work before matriculating in an educational program. Such information is likely to be available through local employment offices, local accredited programs, and hospital councils or hospitals.

Educational Programs:

Length: Programs vary in length from 6 to 20 months. This variation is largely due to differences in student selection criteria and in the educational objectives of individual programs. The majority that are not designed around an associate degree model are of 9 to 10 months in length. The shorter programs are those designed for students who have successfully completed a course of instruction in practical nursing.

Prerequisites: High school diploma or equivalent.

Curriculum: Accreditation standards require clinical didactic and supervised practice instruction including an orientation to medical terminology, professional ethics, and medical-legal aspects of surgical care; to weights and measures as they pertain to operative procedures; and to anatomy, physiology, pathology, asepsis, and anesthesia. Instruction in the proper use and care of surgical equipment and safe methods of transporting and positioning surgical patients is also essential. In addition, supervised clinical practice is required in surgical procedures common to general surgery, obstetrics and gynecology, ophthalmology, otorhinolaryngology, pediatrics, plastic surgery, urology, orthopaedic surgery, neurosurgery, thoracic surgery, cardiovascular surgery, oral surgery, and peripheral vascular surgery. The curriculum is not expected to develop a student's competency in the more complicated surgical procedures.

Essentials: Essentials are minimum educational standards adopted by the several collaborating organizations. Each new program is assessed in accordance with the Essentials. Accredited programs are periodically reviewed to determine whether or not they remain in substantial compliance. The Essentials with Guidelines are available upon written request of the Department of Allied Health Education and Accreditation.

Air Force: 92450

Employment:

Hospitals, clinics

Schools:

(See attached sheet)

MEDICAL LABORATORY TECHNICIAN (CERTIFICATE)

Occupational Description: Laboratory tests play an important role in the detection, diagnosis, and treatment of many diseases. Medical laboratory workers perform these tests under the supervision or direction of pathologists (physicians who diagnose the causes and nature of disease) and other physicians, or scientists who specialize in clinical chemistry, microbiology, or biological sciences. Medical laboratory technicians (certificate) perform many routine procedures in the clinical laboratory under the direction of a qualified physician and/or medical technologist.

Job Description: Medical laboratory technicians (certificate) perform routine, uncomplicated procedures in the areas of hematology, serology, blood banking, urinalysis, microbiology, and clinical chemistry. These procedures involve the use of common laboratory instruments in processes where discrimination is clear, errors are few and easily corrected, and results of the procedures can be confirmed with a reference test or source within the working area.

Employment Characteristics: Most medical laboratory personnel work in hospital laboratories, averaging a 40-hour week. Salaries vary depending on the employer and geographic location. Employment opportunities are expected to be favorable through the mid 1980s.

Educational Programs:

Length: The period of clinical education is usually 12 months and results in the granting of a certificate.

Prerequisites: High school diploma or equivalent.

Curriculum: Includes areas of medical ethics and conduct, medical terminology, basic laboratory solutions and media, basic elements of quality control, blood collecting techniques, basic microbiology, hematology, serology, and immunohematology.

Essentials: Essentials are minimum educational standards adopted by NAACLS and the AMA Council on Medical Education. Each new program is assessed in accordance with the Essentials, and accredited programs are periodically reviewed to determine whether or not they remain in substantial compliance. The Essentials with Guidelines are available upon written request to the Department of Allied Health Education and Accreditation.

Schools:

(See attached sheet)

MEDICAL LABORATORY TECHNICIAN (ASSOCIATE DEGREE)

Occupational Description: Laboratory tests play an important role in the detection, diagnosis, and treatment of many diseases. Medical laboratory workers perform these tests under the supervision or direction of pathologists (physicians who diagnose the causes and nature of disease) and other physicians, or scientists who specialize in clinical chemistry, microbiology, or the other biological sciences. Medical laboratory workers develop data on the blood, tissues, and fluids in the human body by using a variety of precision instruments.

Medical laboratory technician (associate degree) programs are conducted in junior or community colleges, two-year divisions of universities and colleges, or in other recognized institutions granting associate degrees.

Job Description: Medical laboratory technicians (associate degree) perform all of the routine tests in an up-to-date medical laboratory and can demonstrate discrimination between closely similar items and correction of errors by use of pre-set strategies. The technician has knowledge of specific techniques and instruments and is able to recognize factors which directly affect procedures and results. For confirmation of results, the technician conducts more than one test for each specialty area. The technician also monitors quality control programs within predetermined parameters.

Employment Characteristics: Most medical laboratory personnel work in hospital laboratories, averaging a 40-hour week. Salaries vary depending on the employer and geographic location. Employment opportunities are expected to be favorable through the mid-1980s.

Educational Programs:

Length: The period of education is usually two academic years in duration and results in the granting of an associate degree to the students.

Prerequisites: High school diploma or equivalent. The applicant must also meet the admission requirements of the sponsoring educational institution.

Curriculum: Includes courses in teaching and clinical laboratories. Courses are taught on campus and in affiliated hospital(s). The teaching laboratory on campus focuses on general knowledge and basic skills, understanding principles, and mastering procedures of laboratory testing. The clinical courses include application of basic principles commonly used in the diagnostic laboratory. Technical instruction includes procedures in hematology, serology, chemistry, microbiology, and immunohematology.

Essentials: Essentials are minimum educational standards adopted by NAACLS and the AAMA Council on Medical Education. Each new program is assessed in accordance with the Essentials, and accredited programs are periodically reviewed to determine whether or not they remain in substantial compliance. The Essentials with Guidelines are available upon written request to the Department of Allied Health Education and Accreditation.
