LOUISVILLE JOURNAL PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY THE LONDON, March 16, 1565. We are once more in darling old Lon-don, in the sung apartments of good Mra. Coker, Cavendish Square, where we spent last spring and the early summer so happily. Wedneeday we go to Scotland, and about the 7th of April we shall sail for home. I wish I could spend a week more in London, but I cannot afford the time. The more I ase of the English the more I am charmed with them. They are so thorongh-bred, so high-toned, so frank, so snave, so kind, so manly, that it is impossible to know without respecting and admiring, aye, and loving them too. It is stated as the result of careful experiments for six years at Greenwich Obimpossible to know without respecting and admiring, sye, and loving them too. Whenever you hear any one abnsing the English you may depend upon it the tault lies with the defamer. His opinions are the fumes of ignorance or of prejudice, or else he is one of those peculiar creatures for whose taste there is no accounting. Yesterday we paid our farcwell visit to what to me is the most charming features servatory, that rain is more frequent between noon and midnight, than between midnight and noon. The smallest rainfalls take place in the morning, as the sun is going up; the greatest in the afternoon as the sun is setting.

I esterday we paid onr farcwell visit to what to me is the most charming feature of famons old London—I mean the Aoolo-gical Garden. Daring the last twelve months I have seen, I believe, all the Xoological Gardens of Europe, except those in St. Petersburg and Berlin; but none of them compare with this of Lon-don, and it is difficult, in trnth, to see how this could be improved, noless, perhaps, a slicht enhargement of some of the dens A Paris correspondent describes an extraordinary performance that was recently announced at the Cirque. A family of wolves were to appear in the arena, in company with a little child of three years old, whom the public were informed the amiable beasts take pleasure in licking. The second act was to consist in the appearance of the child's father wearing a necklace of raw meat to be torn from his ed and even happy, that it is impossible to feel sorry for them; and were they to evince the faintest dissatifaction with their fort in life I should call them beastly ingrates, only worthy to be consigned to the fithy and cramped cages of a travel-ing monagerie. Hiere, the king of beasts, instead of having to hant and chase about the country, and lie awake of nights, and do all sorts of nakingly work in order to get a square meal, as he has to do in his own native forests, and is lucky il he gets neck by the animals. This pleasing spectacle was summarily "squelched," by an order from the Prefect of Police.

A Swedish bride is thus described by a traveler in that conntry: "In a land so near the region of enow, white seems to be eschewed, and the bride comes forth in a dark blue cloth dress, fitting tight to the bust, body and skirt both trimmed with black velvet. In guise of buttons down the front are leaf-shaped buckles of gold or silver, spreading wider than the brass ones that used to adorn cloaks. As she moves, these rattle gaily above her black silk apron. But her head dress-how describe it? A perfect Cheops pyramid of artificial flowers towers half a yard above her head. A white collar alone looks

A series of singular accidents preceded and followed the marriage of Victor Emanuel's second son and the young Princess Della Cisterna. A few days before the marriage the carriage in which were the royal betrothed and her mother was shattered in the streets of Turin; the porses ran away. The day of their marringe Connt Verasis de Castiglione was calloping by the side of the carriage in which they were going to the Chateau de Stafrinigi, to spend the honeymoon, when he fell dead from his horse from apoplexy. A few days afterwards the bride's orite chamberlain committed suieide: and now the bride's mother died suddenly, the other day, in the noon of life.

The Yaka from lutin are incident of the common ratific access curing sound and refreshing slumber at will, published in London in 1842. The principal feature of Binn's system is for the patient to fix his attention on his own breathing. "He must depict to himself that he sees the breath passing from his nostrils in a continuous stream, and the very instant that he brings his mind to conceive this, apart from all other ideas, conscionsness and memory departs; imagination slumbers; fancy becomes dormant, thought subdued; the ganglionic system assumes the sovereignty, and he no longer wakes, but sleeps."

If the composition at all resembles the recent productions of the lanreate, Mesers. Macmillaa need give themselves no anxiety. Rumor says that "Lncretius' is in the sensuons style of Mr. Swinburne, and that the editor has had to prune it of some of its luxuriance, as too Swinburne, and that the editor has had to objectionable even for his readers' taste. ¥11. The Western journalists, says the New York Evening Post, are acquiring a rare delicacy in their way of patting things. The Chicago Times, under the head of Ornithological," speaks of a cock-fight in one of the lowest dens of that city as a "series of chicken disputes;" while another journal in the same city, in alluding to virago who entered a bar-room, and, after calling for a drink, thrashed the barkeeper and broke a pitcher over the head of a man who ventured to remonstrate. calls her "a lady of alcoholic taste and emphatic manner." Even more delicate is the way in which a Nashville editor avoids committing himself by heading a city item about a man arrested for an attempt to poison his family, "Probable VIII Fiend." Under the general title of the "Ohio Valley Historical Series," Robert Clarke & Co., of Ciacinnati, propose to publish a aeries of works relating to the early history of the valley watered by the Ohio River and its tributaries-including Western Pennaylvania, Western Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinoisand embracing its aboriginal history, the French and English intrignes and wars tor its possession, the travels and journals of early explorers and missionaries, its early settlement hy the whites, their contests with the Indians, etc. It is hoped this can be accomplished by the collection and publication of the large amount of materials for history now scattered among the pioneer families, precarionsly preserved in the gatherings of collectors or hidden away in State or county ar-chives; and also by re-printing some of the early works of interest relating to the western country, which have been long ont of print. preserved in the gatherings of collectors The literary club recently organized in New York, and composed of women in any way distinguished in literature, music, art or other approved profession, has defantly adopted the name of "The Blue Stocking Club." The society, in its experimental stage, is confined to New York; but has invited the co-operation of women of kindred tastes and distinction in other cities. The object is understood to be the formation of a national society for the purpose of bringing the leading women of e country into more intimate and friendly relations with each other. Every body feeds the monkeys, who seem to be omniverous and capable of containing nnlimited supplies. Whether these creatures are really affec-tionate, or whether it is because of their sensitiveness to cold, I don't know, but they are excessively fond of putting their life. Therefore, I say again to every American who is going abroad, go straight to A. S. Petrie & Co., put your money in their hands, and take their advice about

Before closing this letter, long as it is, Before closing this letter, long as it is, I must apologize to the public for a state-ment in my letter published in the Jork-NAL of February 6th, to the effect that sensitiveness to cold, I don't know, but they are excessively fond of putting their arms arond one abother. I have often seen three or four asleep, wrapt in each other's embrace. I observed one large monkey, a matronly-looking old hag, seated on the floor nodding, with her arms around two yonng monkeys, who were sleeping with their heads resting on her lap. A chimpanzi had a small wood-en house in one of the cages, end, when tired of the tricks of her companions, or to elude "horses and other domestic animals luxuri-ate in the Garden of the Tuileries". It cannot be possible that I ever wrote this. Some one has made a mistake in attempt-ing to decipher my chirography. Why, you would be as likely to find wild animals roaming about the palace, as horses, hogs, cows, &c., luxuriating in the Garden of the Tuilcries. Everybody who has been to Paris and read that leiter must and, when threa of the tricks of her companions, or to elude the persecutions of a tyrannical ape, would clink to this house, which was near the tep of the cage, and rushing in would close the door after her and hold it fast. been to Paris and read that letter must have set me down as an out-and out liar. All lies are sinful; but an absurd, pre-pesterous lic that could not go twenty-four hours undetected is too horrible. That statement over my signature is aw-ful. I nust beg my friend, Shipman, to set the matter right, in a separate paragraph, in his best and strongest style. L. P. Y. Jr.

Ilaving devoted as much time to these consins of man as we could sparc them, we bastened to the dens of the beasts of cages, growing and roaring and howing, and looking as impatient as the boarders of one of our larger hotels when they have collected around the dining room door, whiting for it to open and let them in to dinner. The lions appeared to roar in concert. First, a splendid old monarch with a tawny mane, and the finest lion I have ever seen, would utter a short roar which sounded much like a note from a big has viol next his lady a fat nely old

I have never seen a fine old English gentleman, but in a manufacturing town of Maine I had the pleasure of meeting as fine a specimen of nature's nohlemen as can be found in the country. He was no longer young, but had a face and bearing that time had rather mellowed than im-paired. A kind heart and settled purpose holded out foom the dork error their press which sounded much like a note from a big bass viol; next his lady, a fat ugly old dame, would bring out a note in a key just a triffe ligher; then another grand lion, with a sandy mane, would open his big mouth and send forth a short brassy blast, and be would be followed by his mate in a less masculine tone. The tigers, and superh beasts these are, gave ns the benefit of their music, in short, harsh growls, and the leopards sounded a note of their own, while A merica was represented by a handsome parther, who eccasionally uttered his singular cry. The only animal which showed no excitement was a black leopard. This is a rare animal, and I have only seen one other in Europe and bat three in my life. The one of which I am speaking is of fine size, and is in excellent condition. He is pect in all who were associated with him The particular bearing which distinguish ad him was aptly expressed by au Irish size, and is in excellent condition. He is jet black, except the eyes, which are of a dead white color. You cannot conceive of a more savage and cruel-looking creathre than this sable monster was as he lay crouched in his den, perfectly motionless, except his wicked eyes, which followed the persons who moved about him, and the end of his serpent like tail, which rest lessly curled and twisted and straightened out as you have seen a cat's tail do when prepairing for a spring pon a mouse or bird. Presently the keeper came along, rolling a wheelbarrow full of raw moat, and at the sight and sound of the man the beasts grew more wild, rushing to and fro furiously, standing on their hind legs, clawing the bars of their cages, growl-ing, and gnashing their horrid white teeth. I thonght to myself, sup-pose all these cages should suddenly open, what a perfect lake of blue blood of English aristorracy would be effused, and aglish aristocracy would be effused, and t improbably some American red vital id. Each brute upon receiving his eve of flesh seized it and retired to the selves in the grounds, on the beach, in the library, or in their own rooms in the morn-ing, they all assembled together at din-

Ilaving served the felines, the man with the wheelbarrow proceeded to the homes of the bear, wolves, and hyenas, which were near by. Here there was the ensure used for, the same nervous activity, the same fierce restlessness, but the sounds were different. The wolves whined, and the bears made noises in sound between the bleating of a calf and the crying of a child. Each bear was made to perform before receiving his meat. Some climbed up the bars of their cages, some took hold of their hind paws with their fore feet, and sat up or rolled

The following poem is as beautiful as it is seasonable. It will be read with delight. The authoress wrote, some years ago, several charming pieces of poetry I have a "Little Dorrit" sort of feeling for our columns, and we have lamented her long silence. NAL Well, in the first place, a word to you, Mr. G. W. Bricks. You are a man, and— unless under petiticoat government—have no right to say anything about petticoats. WHOM THEY WERE NEGO There is no truth in the statement that Mr. McGee was ever associated is the edi-torship or proprietarship of his weekly paper, The American Cell, with John Mitchel, who conducted an American newspaper in Richmond during the civil war, and subsequently got into trouble by his writings in a Copperhead paper in New York. Another Mr. Mitchel, now in the West, was Mr. McGee's partner, and attended to the business department of The American Cell. In the summer of 1857, when Mr. McGee went to reside in Canada, Measnes Sadiler, the well-known There is no truth in the statement the AND WHO HOLD THEM.

Edward De Leon, formerly a Confede-rate agent in Europe, is writing a series of papers, on the late Confederacy, for the New York Citizen. His last contribution fives an account of the Confederate cost-ton loan. A man who held some Confed-erate contracts appealed to a M. Carta-ret—who had organized the omnibus sys-tem in Paris—and arged ham to go into a speculation with him, that might benefit at once the Confederacy and themselves. Cartaret suggested M. Erlanger, a young banker, as the best man for their parpose, and anggested a cotton loan, which Erlan-ger and the agent adopted, but failed to give Cartaret any of the benefits of the

Mr. McGee was one of the "Young Ire-land" agitators arrested by the Irish gov-ernment in 1848, and his name appears in a list of these, published in Savage's "Ninety-eight and Forty-eight." As Mr. McGee was an spected, after he returned to this country, of not being stannch in his antagonism of the British power, most of the Young Irelanders, who also came hither, were the reverse of friendly to him. On this account it was out of the question for John Mitchel to have had any connection with him in any newspaper. Erlanger displayed great energy and skill in his management of the matter in its earlier stages. He sent several agents by different routes to Richmond, fortified by Mr. Sidell's recommendation, and furn-ined with desfa. ished with drafts of the terms on which the proposed loan was to be given to him and his associated, and negotiated with the public. Some of the measangers went by the blockade, others through the North. The proposition of M. Erlander & Co., was submitted hy these agents to the Confed-erate anthorities at Richmond, and after some modifications was seat into the Con-federate Congress for its sanction. Some discussion took place in secret seasion in regard to it, and some diversity of opinion prevailed, but it was finally indorsed, and the agents came back to have it carried out. THE COTON MILLS. Next to the peniteutiary, nothing over stuck me half as dismal as the cotion mills. Great shells of brick and mortar, alive with machinery, and filled with living automatons, who go from one loom to another and never look out of a window, or loiter a momeut, but what the tell-tale nachive they are bound to stops it: wheels loug enough to make a note of it. Some girls tended four looms, some two, and some but one. The instant the finest thread broke, or gave out on the spool, the locm stoole, or gave out on the spool, the locm stood still, and to anticipate the greedy man of the web, the tender had to watch-watch without ceasing-Oh! it was a wear, weary tread mill round, and the catterer for the Round Table who disthe caterer for the found Table who dis-coursed so sweepingly of the frivolity of American women certaiuly never visited a cottou mill, or be would make an ex-ception of factory girls. I would like to know how the text would apply to them. The argument briefly is this: While the Rickmond Government had possession of the cotton in the South, and the control of Scuthern resources, it pledged them for the payment of these bonds, which are in the hands of bons fiels holders, macon-nected with the Confederacy, and, there-fore, unaffected by any action of Con-gress. They simply made a contract, for the fulfillment of which Confederate pro-perty and cotton, into whatever hands they have passed, are responsible. The Washington Government takes that pro-perty subject to that lies. Such is the ar-gmment of the bondholders, and the bonds in England are regarded by many persons as a good offset to the Alabams claims, which point, when those claims are adju-dicated or submitted to arbitration, will probably be pressed. making. The author assumed that facil-ity of expression comes of hard labor, and that novel writing is a trade, which can only be learned in a long apprentice-ship. This last is a striking fact. In Norwood one is reminded of Rusanded at a factory at Boxford, Mass., ast winter, to be converted into friction matches. Even this large amount is not thought to be sufficient to last a year. In Norwood one is remnace where kin, where he says: "There are some things we must do for our bread—but we are not called upon to do anything into matches." Wr.

the radical interpretation of the rule succession to the Presidency be strictly forced, every member of the Senate will have a chance to enjoy that position before the next inauguration.

Farmington, Mass., is sconrged with a visitation of the measles, the first for forty years. Churches, courts, schools, and stores are closed; old and young alike are victims of the malady. Advices from the West Indies statc that wo ineffectnal attempts have been made o float the United States steamship Monongahela, grounded during the hurricane and earthquake at Santa Crnz.

Two young ladies answered a personal advertisement in the New York daily pa-pers a week since, and went to New York, since which time every effort has been made to find them, but these efforts have been nusnccessful, though skillful detect-ives are busy in ferreting out the affair.

An offer has been made by a Cincinnati citizen to the city government to pay fif-teen hundred dollars a year for the use of the four hundred lamp-posts. He wishes to cover each post with metalic advertis-ing cards. A committee of Councils has reported for archive on the metalic advertis-eported favorably on the matter. If the city railroad companies of New York could be induced to pay one cent out of the six they receive from each pas-senger into the city treasury the city would be benefitted to the extent of over $1,000,-000 annually—over one hundred million passengers having been carried has year.

When Dr. Livingstone returns to Europe, if he will open M. Figuir's twelfth volume of the Annee Scientifique, he will find (pp. 536, 537) a biographical sketch of himself, duly recorded in the scientific ob-ituary for the past year. It is not the first time that a man has been able to see what nosterity thought about him osterity thought about him.

An English Builder, in a recent com-munication to a scientific jonral, states that he objects to chimney pots. "The narrowest part of a chimney," he says, "khould be near the fire, where the rare-faction of the air is most intense, and its upward passage most rapid, and the chimney should rather increase than dintnish in size upward. As the heated air rises it loses some of its lightness. We should then not hear so much of smoky chimneys and duil fires. Makers of rail-way engines have found this out, for they now make the engine chimneys funnel-shaped or bell-mouthed.

The largest and most complete tock of fine and fashionable imported Piece Goods in the West, is now offered for sale, REGARDLESS OF COST, by Mr. Henry Deppen, on Main street. Mr. Deppen is retiring from his present business, and his advertisement in another column offers superior inducements, especially to gentlemen whose wardrobes need replenishing. The auction house of Messrs. M. L. Alexander & Co., we are pleased to see. s doing a larger business than their nost sanguine expectations caused them to anticipate. are not called npon to do anything into which we cannot put our hearts." Mr. Beecher has written the novel for money, but he has not put into it his heart. Read the first paragraph. It is as stiff, formal and hard as a traveler's guide. The sew-ing girl would not tax her eyes over that, nor cast much thought upon Rachel. Ro-ticence with her would pass for cunning, and silcnce for abstraction upon house-hold gear. Abijah himself she could not separate in her mind from the cut of him with the axe in an impossible line from the tree he had felled. But this is dwelling on one serial only, when the is dwelling on one serial only, when the whole book is before us—a book full of repetitions varied by an occasional death, some war and a pretty picture of a hospi-tal nnrse. Such proper courtship and mar-riage no one in real life has had the happiness of knowing. We miss the illustra-tions, and think the book would sell better if they had been retained. We have noticed that the number of the books have either been constantly repleuished or very few have been purchased. Altogether the novel is more like Win-chel'a performances than anything else. The imitations are perfect in their way, but one recognizes Winchel in them all. So Mr. Beecher marches his characters upon the stage, and sits prompter. You the text. Many of his thoughts are original, striking and beautifuily expressed; but more is diluted preacher-talk, altogether behind this telegraphic age. People are expected to talk to the point and write to the point also. The fewest possible words to express an idea. This is the true art which Michael Angelo understood, when with a few dashes of his brush be pointed with a few dashes of his brush he painted an angel.

wished to produce oral testimony to the same effect. The Chief Justice read the articlea charging evil intent, and expressed his opinion that the evidence offered was ap-plicable to those points. The yeas and nays having been taken, resulted in 20 to 22; so the decision of the Chief Justice was overruled and the evi-dence not admitted. Mr. Welles, Secretary of the Navy, was then recalled, and the counsel pro-pored to ask whether the question of the applicability of the tenure-of-office bill to Stanton was considered in the cabinet artings, previous to its return with the objections of the President, and whather the opinion was expressed that the law did not apply to any of the Secretaries mr. Mr. Evarts said this testimony was in reference to the construction, not the con-stitutionality of the law, and held it was adminsible for other reasons. Mr. Butler read from the veto message to show that the President vetoed the bill on the ground that it did not apply to all the members of his Cabinet. He also held that the President did not pretend to be-lieve that Stauton would acquiesce in his removal because he felt himself not cov-ered by the law. The President put it on the ground of cowardice. Mr. Evarts referred to the portion of the massage read by Mr. Butler, and said that they insde part of a general argument as

Among the early jobs to be begun or completed in April is that of planting the Irish potato crop, which is one of the most singular plants in its habits we have in cultivation. When growing, its leaves cannot bear the slightest frost, and yet it ellights in the coal wasther of apring and delights in the cool weather of spring and antumn, and generally, when planted ac late as not to have formed young potatoes on the coming of the hot weather in mid summer, will fail to form any at all. Early planting, therefore, secures the best re-turns, and is allowable insamnch as the potato is a good while coming up. Those who would cultivate the potato profitably should select good ground, in clean tilth, and planting in drills thirty inches apart, keep the crop perfectly clear of weeds by using the harrow just before the plants come up and the cultivator afterwards an-til the plants are some ten inches high and just ready to fall over, when, by a single furrow from a double mold-board plow, or two furrows from a single mold-board plow, the cultivation should be fin-ished, closely filtering the loose dirt in among the plants from either side. In districts of country where hemp is one of the farmers' crops, it is better to sow this crop before than after planting the corn crop. Hemp seed will vegetate at a low temperature, and the plant is not injured by a slight frost, and, besides, it is insuring the success of the hemp crop to get it to attain such a height and vigor of leaf as will cover the ground before the bat dry days of June.

of ten as will cover the product the region hot dry days of June. The great crop, however, of this region is the corn crop, and whilst we think the pitching of this crop should be delayed until the departure of frosts, yet we think until the departnre of frosts, yet we think experience warrants the belief that early planting is desirable. In July, when sum-mer is at its greatest heat, if the corn plant, during the earlier stages of the growing season, has been well cared for and has attained a vigorous yonng growth, it will, at this period, develop rapidly, requiring only a few weeks of hot weather and seasonable rains to reach its highest perfection.
