Weight adjusted traits

Please note that all traits marked * are now weight adjusted. This means that EBVs are a better prediction of carcass composition at a fixed weight.

Example: A ram with a muscle depth EBV of +2mm is estimated to produce lambs with loin depths 1mm deeper at a fixed weight than a ram with an EBV of 0

TREAT

Routine vaccinations and parasite control

TEETH

Check for under- or over-shoot teeth, gaps and rotar abscesses.
If teeth are not the ram will not be able to eat sufficiently to maintain condition

TONES

Ram BCS should be between 3.5 and 4 at the start of tupping
(5% of bodyweight can be lost during the six weeks of tupping)

TOES

Check locomotion, arthritis and hooves.
If a ram is lame, their ability to serve ewes will be limited

TESTICLES

Measure and check firmness and for lumps and bumps.
Large firm testicles produce 30% more semen each day than medium sized, soft ones.

Specifically formulated to support the hard-working ram

Ram health check

Routine vaccinations and parasite control

TEETH

Check for under or over-shot teeth, gaps and rotting abscesses.
If teeth are lost the ram will not be able to eat sufficiently to maintain condition.

Ram BCS should be between 2.5 and 4 at the start of tupping.
15% of bodyweight can be lost during the six weeks of tupping.

WELL

Check locomotion, joints and hooves.
If a ram is lame, their ability to serve ewes will be limited.

Measure and check firmness and for lumps and bumps.
Large firm testicles produce 80% more semen each day than medium sized, soft ones.

TESTICLES

TOES

Specifically formulated to support the hard-working ram
