Gorbachev struggles to retain power

Bryan Brumley
Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Mikhail Gorbachev struggled Sunday to stem the disintegration of his authority, but a sixth Soviet republic declared independence and Russian leader Boris Yeltsin continued to assert control.

Gorbachev huddled with top advisers, preparing a speech for the national legislature today. But Yeltsin and other reformers said they wanted to bypass the largely conservative legislature and convene the more reformist Congress of People's Deputies.

Yeltsin, speaking Sunday night on Russian television, said the national legislature should formally dissolve Gorbachev's Cabinet of Ministers, many of whose members were involved in last week's failed coup, including Prime Minister Valentin Pavlov.

Yeltsin said he would prefer to call a session Tuesday of the Congress, the 2,250-member body that selects the 542-member legislature. "It's better to gather the Congress of People's Deputies a day later and decide all questions straight away on the involvement of the Cabinet of Ministers, on the replacement, the structure, new cadres — much will have to be changed," Yeltsin said in his televised remarks.

See related stories. Pages 3A and 12A.

In the chaos created by the hard-line coup, the 15 Soviet republics were moving to assert their independence from Gorbachev's central government.

Byelorussian lawmakers passed an independence declaration, becoming the sixth republic to do so. The Ukraine, the second-largest republic, declared its independence a day earlier.

Said deputy Zenon Poznyak, head of Byelorussia's pro-independence People's Front faction, "This means we are leaving the Soviet Union."

The Moldavian legislature planned to discuss independence on Tuesday, the news agency Interfax reported.

Meanwhile, France, Argentina,

Norway and Denmark said they were recognizing the independence declarations of the three Baltic republics — Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said he expected the United States to take the same step shortly.

Gorbachev's spokesman, Vitaly Ignatenko, acknowledged that "there's no one today to prevent the national republics from choosing their own road."

Ignatenko, interviewed on CNN, stressed that Gorbachev wanted to keep the process within legal bounds. But events appeared to avalanche beyond Gorbachev's control.

The failed coup led to a stunning upheaval of the Soviet power structure, culminating in Gorbachev's resignation Saturday as Communist Party chief.

Gorbachev also urged the party leadership to disband and barred the party from operating in the armed forces, government, police, courts and KGB secret police. And he crippled it financially by ordering its vast holdings turned over to

Overtaken car slides 200 feet in accident on I-380

CORALVILLE — A car going southbound on Interstate 380 two miles north of Interstate 80 lost control, struck a guard rail, and then overturned and slid across a bridge for more than 200 feet before coming to rest in the median on its top Sunday afternoon.

The Iowa State Highway patrol has not released the name of the driver in the incident. Allen Edward Jacobson, 1625 2nd Ave., Cedar Rapids, has been identified as the only passenger. The driver of the car was flown to UI Hospitals and Clinics, and is listed as having multiple injuries, according to the highway patrol. The name of the driver is not being released until his family can be notified. Jacobson was listed as being in good condition at the UIHC Sunday night.

Rick James free on bail in sex-torture case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Funk rock artist Rick James was free on bail after spending three weeks in jail on sex-torture charges, an official said Sunday.

James, 43, was released Saturday after posting $500,000 bail, said Los Angeles County Sheriff's Deputy George Ducoulombier. The deputy said James' girlfriend, 21-year-old Tanya Ann Hijazi, who faces related charges, was released on $200,000 bail an hour later.

James and Hijazi were arrested Aug. 2 after a 24-year-old Georgia woman told police they held her hostage at James' Hollywood Hills home July 16-17, tortured her with a hot crack pipe and forced her to perform sex acts.

Carl Lewis runs fastest 100 meters in history

TOKYO (AP) — Carl Lewis, who calls himself the old man of track, ran the fastest 100 meters in history on Sunday.

Lewis, 30, blew past fellow Americans Leroy Burrell and Dennis Mitchell in the final 50 meters and shattered Burrell's world record with a 9.86-second clocking.

"It was the most incredible race of all time," Lewis said, "and the great thing was the old man was able to pull it out."

Burrell's record 9.90 was set at the U.S. Championships two months ago in New York — and he had spent under that time Sunday finishing second in 9.88. Mitchell was third in 9.91, and the next three finishers broke 10 seconds — the first time six sprinters broke the 10-second barrier in the same race.

BUDGET CRUNCH

UI victim of continuing cutbacks, layoffs

30 more people may lose jobs

Leslie Yazel
Daily Iowan

Twenty to 30 more UI employees may be laid off after the Iowa state Board of Regents meeting Thursday, according to Mary Jo Small, associate vice president of finances and university services.

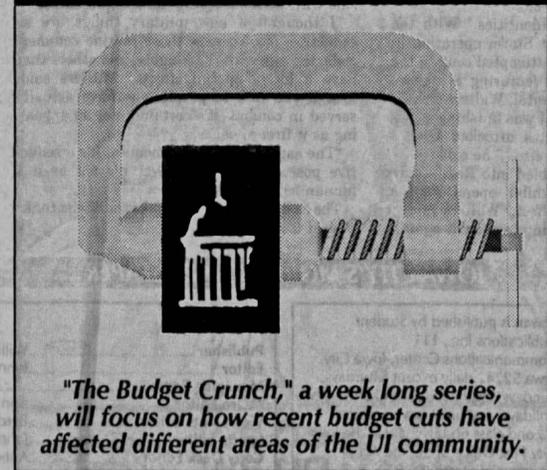

The three regents' institutions will present to the board their plans for instituting the 3.25 percent cuts ordered by Gov. Terry Branstad.

The cuts represent a $15.4 million drop from the regents' original $921.7 million fiscal 1992 budget. The UI stands to lose approximately $5.8 million.

This latest round of layoffs will include faculty positions and are in addition to the 124 UI merit employees who have received notices to date — 37 of whom were reassigned to vacant positions, Small said.

Even with position reassignments, working conditions at the UI are "chaotic," according to Kathy Shaffer, president of the Local 12 American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees union.

THE BUDGET CRUNCH

"The Budget Crunch," a week long series, will focus on how recent budget cuts have affected different areas of the UI community.

"The attitude (of UI employees) is pretty volatile," Shaffer said. "In some areas of campus the staffing is very poor. They're on rotating shifts, and people are working out of their classification." Small admitted problems exist. "Certainly this round of cuts has had some disruptive effects," she said. Employees who have been laid off receive either recall status or probationary status, Small said. The 17 employees on the current recall list have some seniority and are given

If you exercise to relieve stress, avoid the Field House.

Recent budget cuts have forced the UI's Recreation Services to reduce services and increase fees.

The 3.25 percent statewide budget cuts mandated by Gov. Terry Branstad last month translate into a $80,000 cut in appropriated funds for Recreation Services, according to Harry Ostrander, director of the program.

What this means for students is no towel service, a doubling of swimming, weight room and intramural team fees, and a reduction of Field House hours over university vacations.

"We have suffered a rather substantial budget reduction of our appropriated funds," Ostrander said. "There are a number of things we can do to offset that reduction, such as raising fees. But I don't want to see us getting into a private club situation where only those that can afford the fees can use the facilities."

Ostrander said the raise in fees is inevitable. "If we continue to get our operat-

Tensions still high after fatal accident

NEW YORK — Hundreds of mourners attended a wake Sunday evening for a child who died in a car accident that sparked several days of riots between blacks and Jews in the Crown Heights section of Brooklyn.

Earlier at a nearby church, Mayor David Dinkins visited the neighborhood for the fifth straight day to appeal for peace.

Dinkins told about 1,000 people in First Baptist Church that the riots mostly have hurt blacks, including the father of 7-year-old Gavin Cato, killed by a car driven by an ultra-Orthodox Hassidic Jew.

"One of the cars that got trashed belonged to Carmel Cato; I'm sure they didn't mean to do it," Dinkins said. "The stores that are robbed are our stores, the ones we frequent — and so only the community loses."

The mayor said even if the driver did commit a crime, "it would be a

NEW DINER

Timo's, Iowa City's new 24-hour, '50s-style, self-proclaimed "rock 'n' roll diner," is in its second week of business. The new restaurant, sporting bow-tied waiters and pictures of Hollywood legends, is located at 224 S. Clinton St.

24-hour eatery waxes nostalgic

Diana Wallace
Daily Iowan

First impressions of Timo's — with its bow-tied waiters, shiny red booths and wall-to-wall portraits of Hollywood icons — seem to evoke a "wow" from everyone who steps into Iowa City's new 24-hour, '50s-style, self-proclaimed "rock 'n' roll diner."

"People coming in here might think they'll get their windows washed and their oil changed because the waiters look just like gas station attendants of the '50s," says Timo's cook Dan Bell, known at the café as Jimi Ray Clapton.

What they will get, however, says Timo's waiter Doug "Frankie" Zimmerman, is atmosphere.

"What we're selling a lot is atmosphere — a good time — more than anything else. Atmosphere and a good, old-fashioned meal," Zimmerman said.

And at Timo's, located at 224 S. Clinton St. and now in its second week of business, atmosphere comes by the banana-boat-load. The red booths and checkered floor are watched over by larger-than-life replications of Marilyn Monroe, James Dean, Elvis Presley and other rock 'n' roll heroes. The jukebox blares an endless medley of oldies, from the Supremes to the Beatles. The "waitrons" (as the kitchen staff refers to the servers) call themselves Flo, Frenchie and The King, and some wear roller skates when they bring out food with names like Doo Wa Diddy, Yakety Yak and Chubby Checker "funky" chicken.

In a town that houses a '50s McDonald's, where oldies radio stations dominate the airwaves and where fashion trends often glorify clothing of decades gone by, Timo's appears to have bought into a marketable theme. But whatever gimmicks abound at Timo's, employees and customers say that what really sets the diner apart is its open-all-night status.

Timo's supervisor Naomi Buckley said the diner fills a need for a 24-hour café in the downtown area. Previously, the only local restaurants that stayed open all night were the Hawk-I Feed & Relay Station in Coralville, and national chains and franchises like Village Inn and Perkins.

"There is a certain je ne sais quoi about going to a truck stop at 3 in the morning," Bell said, "but we're not really in competition with that. This place caters to the crowds that hang out here, and those places cater to the crowds that hang around there — truckers, cowboys, rednecks."

Buckley added that Timo's is accessible to students who don't have cars to drive to the other local 24-hour spots and as a place to go after the bars close downtown.

Timo's also features a bar, a pool table and video games. Coming attractions include a beer garden and expansion of the menu.

Rick Halliday of Cedar Rapids, who ate at Timo's his second time Sunday and called it "total hipster," said he "expected to find this kind of place in Iowa. Iowa is the '50s."

Halliday's companion, Chad Tovey, called Timo's a "nice little place, kind of the nostalgic '50s, hip, blues, early rock 'n' roll, jam thing" and concluded that his meal, the "Donna" burger, "is sitting well with me."

Timo's owner Warren Cohen, who also owned M.T. Cohen's formerly of the Old Capitol Center, got the idea for Timo's from Ed Debevic's, a chain of '50s-style diners in Chicago.

"The Debevic's wait staff has a certain attitude. They're kind of rude, and they treat you like you're an inconvenience," Buckley said. "We weren't exactly trying to use that, but we do want to keep the fun attitude with the hoola hoops, the roller skates, and the wait staff who sits down and gets to know the customer."

"I try to get down and personal with the customers. You know, sit down with them and make a few smart-ass remarks," Zimmerman said. "I'd just prefer to wear something less constrictive, like a fish tie."

Tracy Tibbitts, Jennifer Tibbitts and Brad Bruhl try a meal at Timo's.

Area artist uses images as tank's ammunition

Greg Smith
Associated Press

DAVENPORT — There are now three M-1 Abrams tanks in the Quad Cities — two at the Rock Island Arsenal and the other just outside Bruce Walters' office at Teikyo Marycrest University here.

Walters' tank is more than metal and plastic, however.

It's actually a graphite painting drawn to scale — 8 feet by 32 feet — with superimposed images that give the huge weapon a haunting look. Collectively, they form the tank's shape.

The images depict everyday life — a seductive-looking mannequin, a game of checkers, a baby in a stroller.

There's a haunting sketch of an electric chair and next to it, a young man sits sleeping with his hands folded comfortably. Other images include the Walt Disney castle and a man delivering a firebrand message, his right hand jabbing the air and a thick book in his left.

Then there are the hands, more than 30 of them, interspersed throughout the 8-foot high, black-and-white painting.

"I thought that this sort of talks about the contrasts between human fragility and the technology of the tank. And yet, the human hand made the tank. I thought it was a strange paradox," Walters said.

Walters' black-and-white painting of "The M-1" is one of several that go on display today through Sept. 29 at the university's Edberdt Art Gallery. Walters is associate art professor at the university and chairman of the school's communications department as well as the fine and performing arts division.

His exhibit is called "Identities." With the recently concluded Desert Storm operation in the Middle East and the attempted coup in the Soviet Union, a painting featuring a life-size tank seems oddly coincidental, Walters said.

"Literally, the very day I was finishing it was the day the United States attacked Iraq. I thought, 'This timing is weird,'" he said.

That Soviet tanks rumbled into Red Square just days before the exhibit opens "had a strange, almost chilling effect," Walters said.

"I'm almost leery of trying to show it again," he joked.

The size of the tank is overwhelming, which is the effect Walters intended. The images are his interpretations — and criticisms — of war in general and the U.S. military in particular.

"I guess the bottom line is that it's sort of a covertly anti-war statement. But I knew if I put flaming flags on it or something like that, the very people I want to impact would immediately be turned off," Walters said. "I didn't want anyone to reject it off hand."

The female mannequin, for example, lies on its side with its head resting on the gun barrel.

"I thought of how military things are so seductive. You've seen those Marine commercials, the one with the knights, and others that have a lot of special effects," Walters said. "Yet if you talk to people who have actually served in combat, it's certainly not as appealing as it first appears."

"The same with the mannequin. It's a seductive pose, beautiful, and yet it's not even a human being," he said.

The castle is fantasy, just like the Soviet tanks proved to be.

TACOMA, Wash. — When United Airlines Flight 455 from Denver lands at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport today, the professional flying career of Capt. James Haynes will be over.

On hand for his final flight will be a group that shared his most terrifying moments in the sky.

Haynes piloted United Flight 232 that crashed July 19, 1989, in Sioux City, Iowa, killing 119 people. But 174 others survived, and Haynes received much of the credit for flying his disabled DC-10 about 70 miles before it went down.

United Airlines coordinated schedules to allow Flight 232 crew members, including Chicago-based flight attendant Jan Brown, work Haynes' last flight instead of the regularly scheduled crew, said Sara Dornacker, an airline spokeswoman.

Coup attempt prompts opinions

Congressmen, mayor, UI professor offer thoughts about future

Daily Iowan

Last week's coup attempt in the Soviet Union has opened the door for drastic political change there. The Daily Iowan polled prominent local figures for their opinion on the implications of the recent events.

UI law Professor Burns Weston:

"Insofar as U.S.-Soviet relations are concerned, this causes one to be optimistic, but it presents longer-term issues that are not as easily resolved. This certainly means the U.S. has no excuses for building up their arsenals or maintaining superior nuclear weapons. I think it was for the good, but one has to approach this tentatively."

Congressman Jim Nussle:

"While we were not surprised that this political upheaval occurred, we were certainly surprised by when it occurred. Historically, the kinds of political changes that have been spurred in the Soviet Union are followed by a change in government. I think it is clear now that many of the administration's policies that took a wait-and-see attitude were right on target."

Congressman Jim Leach:

"In descending order symbolically, the winners are Vytautas Landsbergis, Lech Walesa, Boris Yeltsin and Mikhail Gorbachev — although most importantly the winners are the people of Central and Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. They have won because the lesson has been writ large that instruments of power mean little without public support and legitimizing acts." Leach is a senior member of the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Iowa City Mayor John McDonald:

"I think like so many other people I was very interested in what was happening so quickly in the U.S.S.R. I'm glad the way it turned out, and it's a tribute to the Soviet people that they are not willing to go back to the way things were."

Iowa expert says U.S. must help Soviet Union

Roger Munns

DES MOINES — The United States should begin organizing massive aid to the Soviet Union despite turmoil in that country following a failed coup and a government shakeup, according to businessman John Chrystal.

"I think we can wait a couple of weeks before moving, but in general, yes, I think we should send aid and a lot of it," said Chrystal, Iowa's leading authority on the Soviet Union.

He said assistance from the West, aside from humanitarian benefits, would tend to hold the Soviet Union together, which he said is in the United States' best interest.

"It is better for us to see them as a union as opposed to a bunch of smaller republics," he said.

Chrystal was critical of Russian leader Boris Yeltsin.

"I think he is destroying the national government, which is a serious error. If the republics become nations in themselves, the sum of the parts will not equal the whole. I think they will begin to dispute among themselves because of their ethnicity."

He said he doubted Yeltsin had a "picture of the future," although he said he was encouraged that the Russian leader is surrounding himself with competent advisers.

Chrystal led an Iowa effort to bring medical supplies to the Soviet Union last winter. "We sent about $400,000 in medicine and equipment. It was a relatively small amount, but these are things they're shortest of. It was very appreciated and got a lot of publicity over there," he said. Chrystal said it was too early to decide whether Iowa should lead another effort this year.

Chrystal plans to leave for the Soviet Union Sept. 3 and had originally planned to meet with agricultural leaders and perhaps Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. His itinerary is now not certain, he said.

The businessman said he was "astounded" that Gorbachev would resign as leader of the Communist Party, but he said he could imagine Gorbachev's reasoning.

"Gorbachev is, I think, if nothing else a pragmatist. He sees that a cleansing of the party is a practical impossibility in the time available. That's the reason for his choice. But I think it means a very unsettled immediate future."

"I supposed it strengthened him, but is it too late? I don't know."

SOVIET REACTION

Domrin's UI stay cut due to crisis at home

Eric Detwiler
Daily Iowan

Alexander Domrin, Soviet Parliament member and foreign affairs expert in his country, was scheduled to teach at the UI law school this semester. But his plans changed when the Soviet government asked him to return home six months before his scheduled departure.

"I didn't understand why Parliament was having me return early, but they may have had a feeling of what could happen," Domrin said. "I didn't expect (the coup), and even the CIA didn't expect it."

Domrin said one of the primary reasons the coup was unsuccessful was the fact that coup leaders were unwilling to use bloodshed to solidify their power.

"I cannot say there will definitely not be another coup d'état. If there are not serious improvements in economic and social conditions, the second coup will be terrible."

Alexander Domrin, Soviet Parliament member / foreign affairs expert

"The organizers of the coup d'état were not crazy enough to use bloodshed to keep power," Domrin said. "They could really do it. They could kill Gorbachev and stage a heart attack. They could bring in troops that had no personal ties to people living in Moscow. It's probably because they were not really crazy enough."

Domrin also spoke of what the Soviet Union may have been like had the coup succeeded.

"It would be very dark," Domrin said. "No financial support from the West, no positive relations, isolationism and probably very serious human rights violations. I'm afraid there would be civil war in the country."

With conditions in the Soviet Union deteriorating further as different republics bid to gain independence, Domrin did not rule out the possibility of another coup attempt in the near future.

"I cannot say there will definitely not be another coup d'état," Domrin said. "If there are not serious improvements in economic and social conditions, the second coup will be terrible."

Political upheaval in Moscow grows as the government reveals what part high-ranking Soviet officials played during the coup. Domrin said the "gang of eight" were not the only ones involved, and investigations into the affair are likely to continue for weeks.

"It was a very good lesson for Gorbachev," Domrin said. "He trusted the hard-liners, and he didn't know who was his friend and who was his foe. Now Yeltsin has saved the nation. They didn't try to save Gorbachev, but the country. Now Gorbachev has to understand who his friends and foes are."

Since Gorbachev's return to power, questions persist about who is actually in control in the Kremlin. Gorbachev has undertaken a major house-cleaning this week, and replacements, according to Domrin, are probably being chosen through a joint decision between Yeltsin and Gorbachev.

Domrin added that the combination of Yeltsin's national popularity and Gorbachev's positive foreign influence would allow the two leaders to make real progress with reforms in the Soviet Union.

Heroic pilot of Flight 232 takes survivors on last ride

Associated Press

TACOMA, Wash. — When United Airlines Flight 455 from Denver lands at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport today, the professional flying career of Capt. Al Haynes will be over.

On hand for his final flight will be a group that shared his most terrifying moments in the sky.

Haynes piloted United Flight 232 that crashed July 19, 1989, in Sioux City, Iowa, killing 119 people. But 174 others survived, and Haynes received much of the credit for flying his disabled DC-10 about 70 miles before it went down.

United Airlines coordinated schedules to allow Flight 232 crew members, including Chicago-based flight attendant Jan Brown, to work Haynes' last flight instead of the regularly scheduled crew, said Sara Dornacker, an airline spokeswoman. Haynes, who lives in the Tacoma area, faces mandatory retirement when he turns 60 on Aug. 31.

Haynes told a Tacoma audience last week that several passengers from Flight 232 also plan to ride today's flight.

Dornacker said she didn't know exactly how many crew members or passengers from the ill-fated flight would join today's flight, but said the Sioux City fire chief and some emergency-medical workers in the city had bought tickets to join Haynes.

Flight 232 became disabled when its tail cone tore loose. Crew members had to steer and land the jetliner by alternately accelerating and decelerating the right and left engines.

On landing, the plane cartwheeled, broke into four pieces and caught fire.

CITY COUNCIL

William Ambrisco

Jim St. John

Susan Horowitz

Horowitz, Ambrisco and St. John plan to run for re-election in IC

Ann Riley
Daily Iowan
Today is the first day candidates for Iowa City City Council seats can file petitions for re-election. The Daily Iowan will profile all candidates, beginning with three who have already announced their intention to run.

Susan Horowitz announced her candidacy for re-election to a second term Sunday. Elected in 1987 and Mayor Pro-Tem since 1990, she is again running for the District A seat.

Horowitz plans to focus her campaign on an increasing Iowa City population. Improving availability of housing for all income levels, support for mass transit and better environmental programs are just a few of the concerns Horowitz feels the council must deal with.

"More people will mean an increased demand for public services, such as fire and police protection, use of (the) library and the senior citizens' center, and the infrastructure for streets, water and sewage," Horowitz said. "I believe this will require increased use of fees for services where appropriate."

Developing Iowa City as a cultural and economic center prepared for the next decade is another focus of Horowitz's campaign.

Horowitz is a member of the Johnson County Council of Governments, the National League of Cities, the Iowa City Community School District Strategic Planning Committee and the League of Women Voters.

William Ambrisco announced Aug. 1 he was seeking a third term on the Iowa City City Council. Ambrisco, 61, has served on the council since 1984 and was mayor of Iowa City in 1986-87.

"The challenges our city faces compel me to ask voters for the honor of serving as an at-large representative for another four years," Ambrisco said. "I have no ax to grind. My primary purpose is to serve our community the best way I can."

Ambrisco said his presence on the council helped maintain a balance of experience, political philosophy, age and historical perspective.

The most important issues the next council must face deal with the environment, he said.

"We must find new sources of drinking water, comply with even more stringent solid waste disposal regulations and reduce the volume of solid waste at our sanitary landfill," Ambrisco said.

The city's cable franchise, due for review in 1994, is another reason for Ambrisco's candidacy.

"Many of my constituents are dissatisfied with the quality and pricing of this service since 1984,"

Ambrisco said. "I am anxious to be a part of the negotiating team that reviews their franchise."

Jim St. John declared library funding as one of the most pressing issues facing Iowa City in the upcoming election when he announced his candidacy. He warned that lack of funding for the Iowa City Public Library would lead to a decrease in library services and accessibility.

"The suggestion has been made that we charge user fees to maintain library funding," St. John said. "I believe a city that can propose spending $4.9 million on new soccer fields can afford to maintain the tradition of a free public library."

St. John is running for the Iowa City District A council seat currently held by Susan Horowitz. He is employed by the Special Elderly and Handicapped Transportation System and is Vice Chairman of the Iowa City Committee on Community Needs.

Fair and well-planned development will be the focus of his campaign, St. John said. He also plans to deal with controlling the costs of city services such as sewer and water. Promotion of curbside recycling, historic preservation and increasing low cost housing are also issues St. John said he would address.

Property taxes to rise $30 in '93

Daily Iowan

A statewide consolidation of police and firefighters' pensions will tack on an additional $30 to Iowa City homeowners' property taxes in 1993.

The Iowa state Legislature ordered 88 police and fire pension funds, including Iowa City's, to be condensed into a single $555 million statewide system. Differences between state and local accounting policies created a $536,348 shortage in Iowa City's firefighters' pension plan, the state said. The 3.5 tax increase, approximately $30 per household, was ordered to make up the difference.

The increase will be in addition to taxes necessary to operate the city in 1993. The city's 1992-94 financial plan projected a 5.8 percent property tax for fiscal 1993.

In other city news:

■ The Iowa City Area Chamber of

Commerce announced it will host its first business fair to promote products and services available in this area.

The exhibit, titled "Walk of the Stars," will be held in January at Hancher Auditorium. Local businesses participating in the fair hope to attract new customers, generate leads and talk with other small-business operators.

Organizers John Gross and Kathryn Kurth are hoping for 75 exhibitors and 3,000 visitors. Booths are still available, and businesses outside Johnson County are invited to participate.

■ Families can now apply for free and reduced priced meals for their children in the Iowa City schools.

Income guidelines for the meals apply in the school district and at area schools and preschools.

Families receiving food stamps or children receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children are eligible for free meals.

Application forms are being distributed in letters to parents, and additional copies are available at the principal's office in each school.

■ The Johnson County Board of Supervisors required residents of a local subdivision to change over to four-digit addresses, despite a request from residents to keep their two-digit addresses.

Two residents of Forest Gate, a 43-lot subdivision near Corvallis, asked the board to reconsider the new addresses and street names assigned to all rural residents to accompany the county's new mapping project. They said they wanted to keep the simplicity of the two-digit address.

But board members said changing the addresses would lead to confusion in law enforcement, and emergency and telephone services.

Physical Plant gets temporary director; overseer of Oakdale incinerator quits

Daily Iowan

Interim director named for Physical Plant

George Klein, associate business manager at the UI, was named interim director of the UI Physical Plant.

Klein, whose appointment was announced Aug. 19, will serve until a successor is found for Physical Plant Director James Christenson, who has resigned effective Sept. 13 to accept a position at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

Klein is a 1965 UI graduate and has been employed by the UI for 26 years. He was business manager at the plant from 1971 to 1985.

Incinerator director quits

William Twaler, in charge of the UI's controversial dog carcass incinerator, is leaving the UI for Vanderbilt University.

Twaler has been director of the UI's Health Protection Office since 1984. He is taking a similar job at the Nashville-based university Sept. 15.

Twaler, who has been at the UI for 28 years, said his decision was not affected by the controversy over the incinerator he oversees.

"I didn't look for that job. I was happy here. The money and the position was just there."

Incinerator opponents have criticized Twaler and other school officials, saying they did not adequately inform the public about plans to burn radioactive dog carcasses at the Oakdale campus facility.

Record circulation at library

Check-outs at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., during July increased 4.5 percent over a year ago despite the 11 percent cut in hours that started July 1. The 82,500 check-outs in July was the second highest month ever recorded, exceeded only by last March when library users checked out over 83,000 items.

"The change in hours has given us two mornings a week to play catch-up," said library Director Lolly Eggers. "We've been able to divert the public service employees to assist with the ordering, processing, repairing and shelving of books and other materials."

New library hours since July 1 are Monday and Tuesday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Thursday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Friday, noon to 6 p.m.; and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The library also reduced library programming for adults and displays starting July 1 and rescheduled children's story hours. For more information call 356-5206.

Discovery slows renovation

The rediscovery of a 100-year-old storm sewer has delayed completion of a Civic Center addition and will add about $70,000 to the $1.3 million project.

The sewer, known as "Beer Creek," runs directly under the planned addition. It must be moved before the project can proceed. City Engineer Rick Fosse said construction will be delayed about three weeks, and he placed the completion date near the end of August 1992.

New parks planned in Coralville

Construction on an industrial park and public wetlands area in Coralville is scheduled to begin in September.

The industrial park is south of Highway 6, across from Target and Hy-Vee Food Store. Kay Shive-Henry, a Cedar Rapids developer, plans to build a 15,000-square-foot building on the site, which is zoned for heavy industrial use.

Suburbs, businesses pitch in to keep I-Cubs in Des Moines

Associated Press

DES MOINES — With relief help from local business leaders and nearby cities, Des Moines has apparently completed its bid to keep its Triple-A baseball team.

Des Moines City Manager Cy Carney said businesses and suburban governments have pledged enough to cover a $1.5 million shortfall in financing for the renovation of Sec Taylor Stadium.

"Unless something comes out of the blue, I'd say it's a go," Carney said.

Carney said he will ask the city council on Monday to award the construction contract to Ringland-

Johnson-Crowley Co. of Des Moines so the work can be done on schedule for the April opening of the 1992 baseball season. The 10,000-seat stadium would replace the 43-year-old, 7,800-seat stadium now used by the Chicago Cubs' top minor-league team.

Team officials have said they might move the club to another city if the stadium is not improved to their specifications.

Businesses joined with six suburbs to raise the $1.5 million plus interest so bonds could be issued.

Des Moines Development Corp., a group of downtown firms, and area businesses agreed to pitch in $750,000 plus interest, Carney said. The mayors of six suburbs — Altoona, Ankeny, Johnston, West Des Moines, Windsor Heights and Urbandale — are backing a plan for the cities to pay principal and interest on a bond issue of about $750,000 for 15 years.

Each suburb would make annual payments with lodging taxes beginning 1997, with shares determined by their percentage of area lodging tax collections.

In addition, the Greater Des Moines Chamber of Commerce Federation has agreed to raise money.

"With these facts, I feel confident enough about the $1.5 million that I recommend we proceed with the contract," Carney said Friday.

"Certainly we are encouraged by all the different efforts," Iowa Cubs General Manager Sam Bernabe said.

Des Moines and suburban city councils and the Polk County Board of Supervisors still must agree to the plan.

Urbandale Mayor E. J. Giovannetti said the suburbs are eager to help keep the Iowa Cubs in Des Moines but want something in return.

In return for helping save the stadium project, Giovannetti said, the suburbs want Des Moines to push for a countywide, 1 percent local sales tax referendum as early as this fall.

Also, the suburbs want the I-Cubs franchise owners to either agree to pay the first five years' worth of bills on the $750,000 bond — which would amount to about $75,000 a year — or agree to pay the bill any year an independent auditor found that the club's profit exceeded the average for the previous three years.

Greater Des Moines Baseball Co. majority owners Kenneth Grandquist and Dick Easter could not be reached for comment. They have adamantly said they would pay only the $2 million for construction and rent of $16,000 a year. They also have said they would move the team to another city if the stadium was not rebuilt and expanded.

Including engineering and other expenses, the project would cost $11.5 million. Des Moines would pay about $8 million with lodging taxes approved by voters, taxes from businesses near the stadium and the city's share of state sales taxes, Carney said.

Animals set record prices at '91 Iowa State Fair sale

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Sale of Champions at the 1991 Iowa State Fair set 11 records as the 14 animals sold Saturday averaged $5,000 per head.

Ten of the animals sold in the prestigious sale broke records, and the sale grossed a total of $70,000 to set another record.

The highest-selling lot was the 4-H Grand Champion Market Steer exhibited by Justin Keller of Seymour. The steer, purchased by Featherlite Manufacturing Inc. of Cresco, brought $15,000 to top the 1989 record of $14,000.

The FFA Grand Champion Market Hog, shown by Jamie Sonka of Newhall, brought a record-breaking $8,500, erasing the 1988 mark of $4,000. The hog was bought by a group of swine backers: Swine Genetics International of Cambridge, Genetics Unlimited of Des Moines, and Bob and Sharon Granzow of Ames.

Other record-setting prices included:

- $7,500 for the 4-H Reserve Grand Champion Market Steer, shown by Matt Greiman of Garner.
- $5,100 for the FFA Grand Champion Market Lamb, shown by John Delaney of DeWitt.
- $5,100 for the 4-H Reserve Grand Champion Market Hog, shown by Bill Paustian of LeClaire.
- $4,500 for the 4-H Grand Champion Market Heifer, owned by Randy Anderson of Clarion.
- $4,100 for the 4-H Reserve Grand Champion Market Heifer, owned by Mandy Lehman of West Liberty.
- $3,500 for the FFA Reserve Grand Champion Market Hog, sold by Jeff Eisentrager of Hampton.
- $1,500 for the 4-H Grand Champion Broiler Pen (chicken), shown by Matt Pettit of Mount Ayr.

Cher's 'visitor' mentally ill, says his father

Associated Press

DES MOINES — A former Iowan charged with trespassing in the new home of actress Cher is a victim of mental illness, his father says.

"He's schizophrenic but not dangerous at all," said James King of Albia. His son, John King, 34, was discovered by construction workers in an upstairs bedroom of Cher's house last month.

He had slipped past an elaborate security system. A sword and pieces of paper filled with religious scribbles also were found with him during the July 1 arrest, said a spokeswoman for the Malibu sheriff's office.

John King, a former Albia resident, was valedictorian of Albia High School's 1975 graduating class.

Workers at Cher's house described him as having wild-looking eyes and stringy hair. He gave a northern California address when taken into custody.

King's father said the arrest was the latest of the tragic incidents that have followed John King since he developed a severe mental illness as a younger man.

"The thing about the sword ... occasionally he likes to get a sword and pretend he's someone or other. It's usually a play sword," James King said.

Schizophrenia is a mental illness that leaves its victims at times out of touch with reality and causes a disintegration of their personalities.

James King said his son told him he had been looking for the Malibu home of Michael Landon, the late actor, "because he has some dreams about him."

"He couldn't find the house," James King said. "He said, 'So, Cher lives out there. If I go over to that house they'll be able to tell me where Michael Landon is.' It's rather vague about what happened."

Cher, who was living in a rented home at the time King was in her house, was terrified, according to news reports.

"It was her worst nightmare," an aide was quoted as saying. "She seems to be a magnet for crazies or obsessive men. This has left her shaken."

No one in the church applauded until Dinkins referred to allegations that Hassidim receive preferential treatment from the police.

"Folks got to be treated equally. Got to be fair. There will not be a brand of justice for one community and a different brand of justice for the other community," he told the congregation.

Dinkins also met with Rabbi Menachem Schneerson, spiritual leader of the Hassidic Lubavitch sect, which has its world headquarters in the mostly black Crown Heights neighborhood. The rabbi blessed the mayor during the 15-minute meeting.

priority list.

"I truly believe the students would overwhelmingly endorse a higher student fee over lower or no use fees," Ostrander said.

A referendum to increase Recreation Services fees would first have to be approved by the UI Student Assembly. UISA President Matt Wise said he doubts Recreation Services would get a raise in student fees this year.

"I think in an off year where no other cuts had been made, we would have no trouble garnishing support for a raise in fees to support Recreation Services," Wise said. "But I think students are going to be angry about so many cuts, it's going to be hard to concentrate on one area."

Ostrander said he doesn't expect any additional cuts in the near future. Recreation Services administrators will be monitoring their budget on a month-by-month basis to ensure the department finishes the year without any major budget deficits.

"This is going to be a very difficult budget year," Ostrander said. "In fact, if the new fees don't keep up with our needs, towards spring break we may have to drastically reduce services."

LEGAL MATTERS

POLICE

Iowa City Police Department officers responded to a call of subjects breaking into washing machines at The Washtub Laundry, 923 S. Riverside Drive, Aug. 22 at 3:07 a.m., according to police records. Officers arrested Jonathan Long, 18, Cedar Rapids, and a juvenile male, records said. The investigation by the ICPD Detective Bureau will continue.

crime committed by an individual — not by the Hassidic community, "not by the Jews."

No one in the church applauded until Dinkins referred to allegations that Hassidim receive preferential treatment from the police.

"Folks got to be treated equally. Got to be fair. There will not be one brand of justice for one community and a different brand of justice for the other community," he told the congregation.

Dinkins also met with Rebbe Menachem Schneerson, spiritual leader of the Hassidic Lubavitcher sect, which has its world headquarters in the mostly black Crown Heights neighborhood. The rebbe blessed the mayor during their 5-minute meeting.

Gavin Cato was killed when the Furious that the driver wasn't arrested, blacks rioted and looted stores in the days that followed. The first night, a Jewish man who wasn't involved in the accident was stabbed to death.

A Jewish couple who live down the street from the Catos paid their respects, bringing flowers, a letter of condolence and a pledge to form a new interracial block association.

The Rev. Al Sharpton, a black activist who led two marches in Crown Heights this week, paid a brief visit.

"I truly believe the students would overwhelmingly endorse a higher student fee over lower or no use fees," Ostrander said.

A referendum to increase Recreation Services fees would first have to be approved by the UI Student Assembly. UISA President Matt Wise said he doubts Recreation Services would get a raise in student fees this year.

"I think in an off year where no other cuts had been made, we would have no trouble garnishing support for a raise in fees to support Recreation Services," Wise said. "But I think students are going to be angry about so many cuts, it's going to be hard to concentrate on one area."

Ostrander said he doesn't expect any additional cuts in the near future. Recreation Services administrators will be monitoring their budget on a month-by-month basis to ensure the department finishes the year without any major budget deficits.

"This is going to be a very difficult budget year," Ostrander said. "In fact, if the new fees don't keep up with our needs, towards spring break we may have to drastically reduce services."

CD-PLAYERS

Sony CDP-491

The CDP-491 is a value-packed Sony CD-player with 8-times oversampling and an 18-bit digital filter to assure accurate reproduction. Up to 24 seconds can be programmed. Shuffle play and 5-way repeat are among the playback options. A full-function remote is included.

$229
Sony CDP-C315

The remote-controlled CDP-C315 is a 5-disc changer with programming capabilities to let you take maximum advantage of its five-disc carousel. And you'll be pleased to know that this player contains much of the technical mastery found in much costlier Sony models.

$248
Denon DCD-660

Denon CD-players are always a good value, but when you cut the price by 17%, you just can't go wrong! In addition to the top-flight technology you'd expect from the inventor of digital recording, this single CD player gives you the added flexibility of precise pitch-control.

$298
Nakamichi CD Player 4

Featuring advanced Nakamichi digital and analog technologies, this player provides exceptionally wide dynamic range and precise sonic detail. It is also backed with a full two-year parts and labor warranty.

$348
Sony CDP-C67ES

Included with the purchase of your Sony ES carousel changer is a boxed set of 4 glorious CDs to play on it. It's the Digital Masterpiece Collection, featuring the very best music from American Gramophone, GRP, Telarc, and Windham Hill.

Meet our competition's worst nightmare: the Sony CDP-C67ES

5-CD changer. It has so many advantages, it would be unfair to compare it to other changers in its price class. A new wrinkle for '91 is digital signal processing to match the music you're listening to to the appropriate acoustical environment. So you can hear Haydn in a Hall, a chorale in a Church, and a Stravinsky in a Stadium. This gives even the most familiar CDs a newfound richness of ambience and texture.

CABINETRY

A beautiful solid oak grouping in Audio Odyssey's new Media Room.

The Audio Odyssey Difference

We don't carry cheap $99 vinyl-wrapped racks because they don't represent a good long-term value. Instead, we feature audio/video furniture hand-crafted from select oak and walnut solids and veneers. It is all modular which means it can grow, change, and expand as your needs do.

At our store, you won't find three or four cabinets to choose from. Instead you'll find over 55 cabinets displayed in comfortable, home-like surroundings.

Unlike many other audio stores, we assemble, oil, wax, and deliver your new cabinetry at no extra charge. Holes are drilled to hide all wires and cables. This attention to detail and customer satisfaction has helped us become the 9th largest Custom Woodwork & Design furniture dealer in the United States.

Top marshal found dead in Kremlin

Wendy Sloane
Associated Press

MOSCOW — The top military adviser to President Mikhail Gorbachev who committed suicide after the failed hard-line coup attempt may have been one of its instigators, a television station reported Sunday.

Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev, formerly chief of staff of the Soviet armed forces and a prominent Soviet legislator, was found hanged in his Kremlin office late Saturday, the Russian television news program "Vesti" reported.

On Akhromeyev's desk was a statement from the State Committee for the State of Emergency, the group that last week removed Gorbachev from power for three days. The statement instructed the senior officer how to act when the coup began. Further details were not disclosed.

A suicide note was also found in his office, "Vesti" said. The note said in part, "Everything I have devoted my life to building is collapsing."

Soviet Chief Prosecutor Nikolai Trubin told the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda Sunday that seven of the eight coup leaders now in custody had implicated Akhromeyev in the plot. No further details were given.

The eighth leader, former Interior Minister Boris Pugo, was found shot in his Moscow apartment as police were on their way to arrest him. Initial reports said he committed suicide, but those who found him now say they are not sure.

Marshal Dmitri Yazov, Soviet defense minister at the time of the coup, has been arrested and fired. His deputy, Chief of Staff Mikhail Moiseyev, has also been dismissed.

Gorbachev and Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin have named in the plotters' stead reformers who refused to obey orders from the State Committee.

Trubin said that despite Akhromeyev's death, a thorough investigation of his possible participation in the plot would be carried out.

Akhromeyev, 68, was not originally thought to have participated in the coup although he generally had expressed hard-line views on both foreign and domestic relations.

A Yeltsin spokesman said earlier Sunday he knew of no evidence linking Akhromeyev to the plot.

"He was not a politician. He was a military person. Maybe he was just tired of life," said the spokesman, Valentin Sergeev.

Byelorussia sixth republic to declare independence

Mark J. Porubcansky
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Byelorussia, a pillar of the Soviet Union's traditional Slavic heart, on Sunday became the sixth republic to declare independence and dealt a final blow to efforts to keep the country's historic center together.

Byelorussia, the Ukraine and Russia formed the Slavic core of the country once known as the Russian empire that became the Soviet Union after the 1917 revolution.

The Ukraine had declared independence Saturday, leaving Russia the sole Slav-governed republic still officially committed to signing President Mikhail Gorbachev's proposed Union Treaty to bind the 15 republics together.

The three Baltic states and Georgia also have declared independence. The latest declarations came in the avalanche of events following last week's failed coup against Gorbachev, the driving force behind the Union Treaty.

Lawmakers in the Byelorussian republic of more than 10 million southwest of Moscow voted unanimously Sunday to declare full independence, said Zenon Poznyak, a lawmaker from the nationalist Popular Front faction.

"This means full independence and no Union Treaty. This means we are leaving the Soviet Union," Poznyak told The Associated Press from the capital Minsk.

Earlier, the conservative leader of the Byelorussian republic, Nikolai Dementei, announced his resignation Sunday in a special session of Parliament.

Parliamentary spokesman Yuri Popov said in a telephone interview the 60-year-old Dementei, chairman of the Byelorussian Supreme Soviet, resigned with the intention of retiring and that his resignation was accepted by Parliament.

Dementei is a longtime Byelorussian Communist Party official who became the republic's leader in July 1989.

The Interfax news agency also reported that the Byelorussian Communist Party chief, Anatoly Malofeyev, announced the party was separating from the Soviet Communist Party and that he was leaving the federal party's Politburo.

Byelorussia had been the most peaceful of the republics until last spring, when it erupted with pent-up anger over the disaster at the nearby Chernobyl nuclear plant and price increases. Hundreds of thousands of workers went on strike, extracting government promises of changes and replacement of leaders.

Poznyak said the independence declaration Sunday went a step beyond a resolution in July last year that announced Byelorussia's intention of becoming independent.

It was not immediately clear what changes the new document envisioned in Byelorussia. Declarations by other republics have called for creation of their own armies and currency, among other things.

Byelorussia was among the eight republics that agreed in April with Gorbachev and Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin to sign the Union Treaty. Before the coup and Sunday's declaration, Parliament had agreed to send a delegation to Moscow to sign the treaty.

New defense minister wants to reform army

Associated Press

MOSCOW — The new Soviet defense minister said Sunday he supports Mikhail Gorbachev's move to force the Communist Party out of the army and will seek to replace 80 percent of the top officer corps.

Military commanders "should be younger than they used to be, they should be more loyal and they should be incapable of anti-constitutional 'heroic deeds,' so to speak," Yevgeny Shaposhnikov said in a television interview.

"I am not speaking about personal loyalty. Just professionalism and high moral principles are required here," said the 49-year-old minister, who ascended to the post after refusing to obey the leaders of last week's failed coup.

The defense minister at the time of the coup, Marshal Dmitri Yazov, was fired and arrested. The armed forces chief of staff, Gen. Mikhail Moiseyev, also was fired. In their places, Gorbachev and Russian President Boris Yeltsin have named reformers.

Shaposhnikov said in an interview published Saturday in Izvestia that he does "not intend to launch a witch-hunt" for collaborators in the coup.

But he said, "We will examine every commander and every member of the military collegium," or the leadership of the Defense Ministry.

Shaposhnikov praised the order Gorbachev issued Saturday banning party cells in the military, KGB and other security organs. The order came as the Soviet president effectively ended the party's rule over the country.

He also said the army should not be used against civilians.

"The Soviet armed forces will never, not under any conditions, be used against our own people," he said.

Shaposhnikov also praised the commander of the Leningrad military district, Col. Gen. Viktor Samsonov, who refused to send troops against demonstrators during the coup.

Shaposhnikov denied reports that any of the plotters, including some who may still be at large, had the ability to launch a nuclear strike. "I am sure this will not happen," he was quoted as saying.

Cubans continue to hold hostages; 150 inmates moved from Talladega

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Authorities on Sunday moved 150 inmates out of a federal prison where a group of Cubans who came to the United States in the 1980 Mariel boatlift took 10 people hostage on the eve of being deported.

Roger Scott, warden at Talladega Federal Correctional Institution, refused to say if the inmates were taken from buildings adjacent to the 200-prisoner high-security unit controlled by the Cubans.

An end to the ordeal that began Wednesday was nowhere in sight, he said. He and another prison spokesman declined to give details about negotiations with the hostage-takers.

"We plan to continue communicating with the Cuban detainees in hope of reaching a peaceful resolution," said prison spokesman Ed Crosley.

The besieged unit holds 121 Cubans and 18 non-Cuban inmates in addition to the hostages.

Scott said the prison workers taken hostage were unharmed, based on face-to-face meetings with six of them and reports on the four others by their captors.

Transferring 150 inmates from the prison reduces the general population to 812, said Dan Dunn, spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons. Scott said that will make it easier to manage the prison, which has operated at a higher security level since the takeover began.

Scott wouldn't say where the inmates would be taken.

Non-rebelling prisoners have been allowed out of their cells only for showers. "The inmates have been extremely cooperative," Scott said.

Scott refused to give any information about conditions under which the hostages are being held.

Prison officials continued to keep reporters and the public away from the unit, about 40 miles east of Birmingham in the rolling, pine-covered hills of central Alabama. Only the top of the inmate-controlled building is visible from a hill outside the prison grounds.

Thirty-two of the Cubans were scheduled for deportation to their island homeland the day after the uprising began, and their fight against a return to Cuba is apparently central to the crisis.

Prison officials have not said what prompted the takeover. But Dunn said the deportations "may be part of the negotiating process."

The Cubans were among 125,000 who came to the United States in an exodus from the port town of Mariel, Cuba, in 1980.

Army will be downsized before upcoming election

Denis D. Gray
Associated Press

PATTAYA, Thailand — In what could be a significant concession, Cambodia's Vietnamese-installed government agreed Sunday to partially demobilize its army during the period before U.N.-supervised elections.

Phnom Penh previously had insisted on keeping its entire army during the transition period. That stalled talks with the guerrillas on the adoption of a U.N. Security Council peace plan, which provides for complete demobilization of the four armies.

Phnom Penh's Prime Minister Hun Sen said Sunday he will propose the partial demobilization at peace talks with the guerrillas starting today at this seaside resort near Bangkok.

"We accept to reduce our armed forces and weapons by 40 percent," he told reporters in Pattaya. "This is the first time Phnom Penh has accepted the reduction of our army. I would like to stress this is not a complete demobilization."

He said the remaining 60 percent would be supervised by the U.N. transitional authority proposed by the peace plan.

There was no immediate response from the guerrillas, who have supported full demobilization.

The Pattaya talks are designed to resolve differences over the U.N.

plan. This plan provides for a monitored truce, demobilization and extensive U.N. supervision of the Phnom Penh government prior to elections.

All sides have in recent days pledged a willingness to make concessions. And the international situation — including friendlier Sino-Vietnamese ties and a more liberal leadership in Moscow — has probably never been more conducive to a Cambodian peace.

But Prince Norodom Sihanouk, head of the interim Supreme National Council, warned last week that getting a solid compromise would still be a "very difficult task."

Hun Sen said his side had proposed some amendments but stressed the talks should stay within the framework of the U.N. plan. At a news conference, he described the council meeting as "very crucial."

The council, a 12-member reconciliation body, will meet for three days. Then the Cambodian sides will confer with representatives of the U.N. Security Council's permanent members: the United States, Soviet Union, China, France and Britain. They drafted the peace plan.

The council includes six members from the Phnom Penh government and six from the guerrilla factions opposing it — the Communist Khmer Rouge, followers of Sihanouk and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

nouk and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

Sihanouk, who says he acts as a neutral figure, was expected to dominate the meetings as he did at the June talks, when the factions agreed to a truce and resolved other differences.

Last week, the Khmer Rouge appeared to ease their hard-line stance and said they were now willing to discuss the Phnom Penh government's proposal to amend the U.N. peace plan.

The government has said it wants to keep its army and administration in the transition period because it fears the Khmer Rouge may violate the agreement. It also wants measures to prevent the Khmer Rouge from forcibly taking power.

During the mid-1970s, the Khmer Rouge turned Cambodia into a slave labor camp, killing hundreds of thousands in a fanatical agrarian revolution. They were ousted by the 1978 Vietnamese invasion but kept fighting as guerrillas from strongholds along the Thai-Cambodian border, later joined by Sihanouk loyalists and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

The United States and other countries have said the U.N. plan is the best chance for peace and that while the Cambodians can negotiate its details, no major changes should be made. Otherwise, they say, the peace settlement will be too fragile, or worse, the entire peace process may be set back.

Protests continue with rally

Michael Bates
Associated Press

WICHITA, Kan. — Thousands of abortion foes nearly filled a stadium for a rally Sunday in this city where six weeks of anti-abortion protests have resulted in more than 2,600 arrests.

Earlier, police arrested another 56 demonstrators at an abortion clinic that opened unexpectedly Sunday. Two of the protesters allegedly assaulted the clinic's director.

The national anti-abortion group Operation Rescue has targeted Wichita because a clinic here is one of few nationwide that performs late-term abortions.

At the rally, evangelist Pat Robertson of the Christian Broadcasting Network criticized U.S. District Judge Patrick Kelly's order banning blockades at two of Wichita's three women's clinics.

"Federal Judge Kelly has sent 2,500 men and women to jail. These men and women are not criminals and lawbreakers and disobedient to lawful authority," Robertson told the crowd at Wichita State University.

Police and federal marshals have made more than 2,600 arrests, mainly for trespassing. But some protesters have been arrested as many as eight times, police have said. Wichita officials last week estimated that more than 1,400 individuals, many from out of town, had been arrested since protests began in mid-July.

Kelly has sentenced a handful of Operation Rescue leaders to jail terms for violating his order. Most protesters are released within hours after being arrested, usually for trespassing.

The Most Rev. Eugene Gerber, bishop of the Wichita Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, told the crowd that civil disobedience in Wichita was not madness. "The real madness is legalized abortion on demand. The real madness is singling out disabled children for killing," he said.

On Saturday, about 5,000 pro-choice activists rallied along the banks of the Arkansas River in Wichita, and during Sunday's rally a plane flew over the stadium pulling a banner that read, "Go home. Wichita is pro-choice."

In response, the crowd chanted, "We are home! We are home!"

Casey Scott, Wichita State's assistant athletic director, estimated the crowd at 25,000.

Earlier Sunday, Wichita Family Planning Inc. opened unexpectedly, and about 100 protesters gathered.

Debbie Riggs, the clinic's director, was pushed and shoved by two protesters at the clinic's back entrance when she arrived at 7:30 a.m. to open the center, said Deputy Police Chief Steve Trainer.

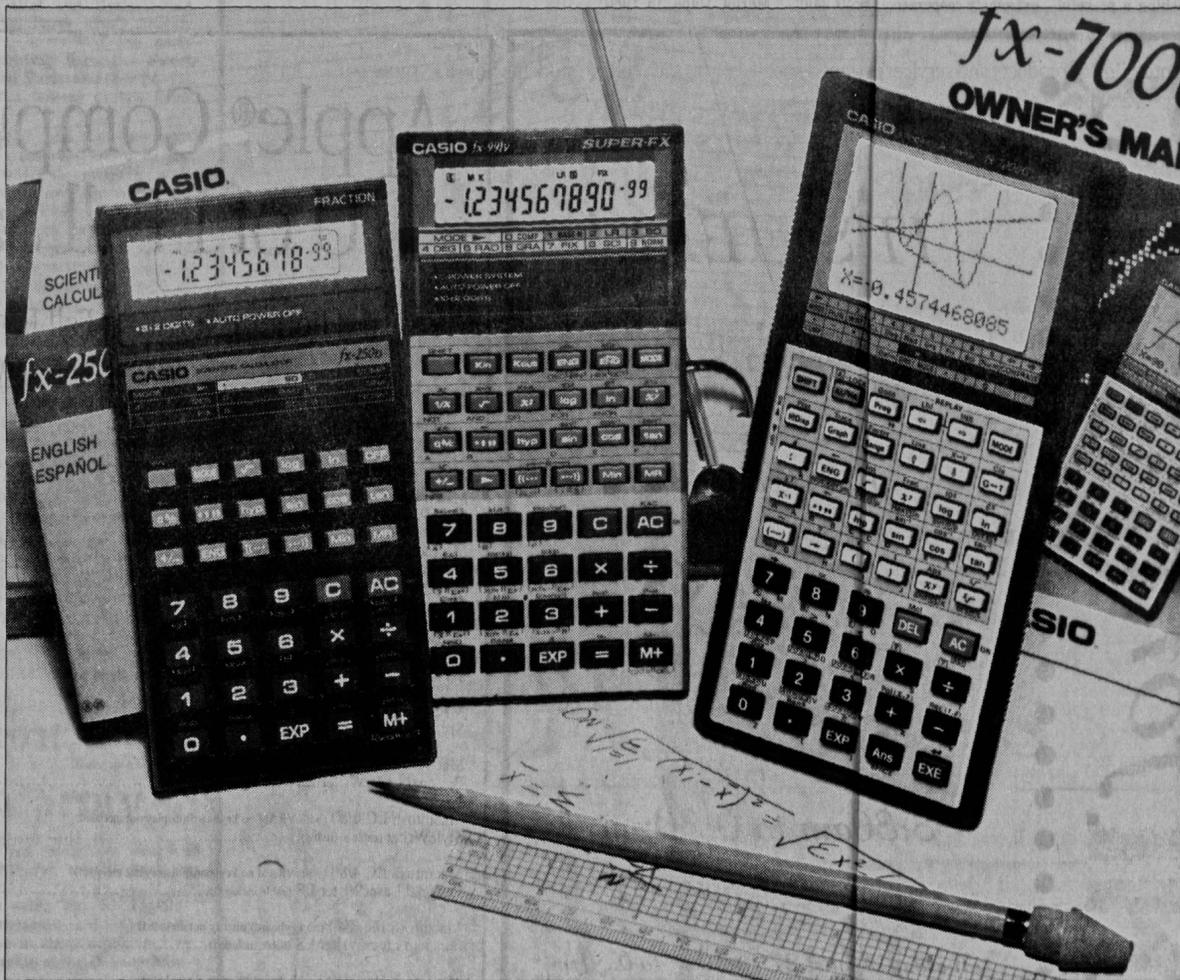

"She was physically roughed up, but she wasn't injured," Trainer said. "She was a little shaken."

Two patrol officers who responded were surrounded as they tried to leave the clinic and felt threatened, and one officer sprayed Mace on some protesters, Trainer said.

"Nobody got hurt," he said. The two demonstrators who scuffled with Riggs were arrested on suspicion of assault, police said.

Squeaky activism neglects the whole

THE SOVIET COUP

Steps forward

History almost turned a page back when Soviet hard-liners tried to topple Mikhail Gorbachev's government last week. When the initial rumors finally gave way to confirmed news of the coup, many around the world thought that a fantasy, a political dream was coming to an end: the fall of the Berlin Wall, the German reunification, political and economic reforms in the Eastern bloc, and most recently the compromise to reduce strategic nuclear weapons.

But the danger of a coup in the Soviet Union was always there. It became a reality Sunday, Aug. 18. The swift development of the coup and its eventual collapse stunned the world once again. One question, however, remained unanswered. Many wondered what changes the coup's outcome would bring to the now ever-changing Soviet Union. Gorbachev came back to Moscow on Aug. 22 from his arrest in the Crimea expressing the need to consolidate the Communist Party. By Saturday, after meeting with Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin, his opinion reflected a 180-degree turn. Gorbachev resigned from the Communist Party and banned it in all state organizations, including the army and the KGB.

Surprisingly, Gorbachev's opponent Yeltsin, who was to sign an agreement with Gorbachev to give more autonomy to the Russian republic, defended the Soviet president and demanded his return to Moscow.

Some political experts had expressed their concerns that the plot against Gorbachev was a bluff. In other words, that Gorbachev and his advisers, not extremely popular among the Soviet population according to the latest polls, had conceived the coup attempt as a way to regain control of the situation and to block Yeltsin's intentions to achieve wider reforms.

Surprisingly, Gorbachev's opponent Yeltsin, who was to sign an agreement with Gorbachev to give more autonomy to the Russian republic, defended the Soviet president and demanded his return to Moscow. It was he who sent the Muscovites to the streets to fight for their newly gained freedom and who came out of the failed coup as the people's hero.

If this had been a coup masterminded by Gorbachev and his aides, Yeltsin's demands for his return to power would have certainly been silenced by the army. On the other hand, when his advisers were sure that the coup had begun without Gorbachev knowing about it, Yeltsin had a great chance to use his enormous popularity and try to become the post-coup Soviet leader. Instead he remained in his position as leader of the Russian republic and most certainly pressed Gorbachev to severely punish the plotters and eventually the Communist Party.

Gorbachev's resignation from the party on Saturday is perhaps the most outstanding consequence of the failed coup attempt. Gorbachev seems stronger now than two weeks ago, and he is free to accelerate the reform process, without really worrying about the hard-liners' opposition. He will have other concerns, though, as the independence movements in the Baltic republics and most recently in the Ukraine threaten to dissolve the Soviet Union. Hopefully this time, history, with Gorbachev's and Yeltsin's help, will take two steps forward.

GUEST OPINION: WILLIAM REISINGER

UI offers students the opportunity to understand Soviet events

We were reminded last week of the importance of the Soviet Union to American interests. The news of a coup d'état against President Mikhail Gorbachev forced Americans to contemplate unpleasant possibilities: an end to U.S.-Soviet cooperation, a renewed nuclear arms race, or threats to surrounding countries, including the new democracies in Eastern Europe, arising from chaos within the Soviet Union.

Fortunately, the coup collapsed within a few days. The leaders of the coup encountered opposition from key military units and regional leaders as well as from citizens in Moscow and Leningrad. This opposition was sufficient to eliminate the possibility of a decisive victory. As soon as this became clear, the leaders began bailing out.

Though Gorbachev soon returned to Moscow, he could not return to his former power. Russian President Boris Yeltsin spoke out quickly against the coup and became the symbol of resistance, as he and his aides camped out in the headquarters of the Russian government. With the failure of the coup, Yeltsin became the most powerful figure in the country. His reformist policies, backed by the voices of now emboldened demonstrators around the country, became the order of the day. By Friday, Yeltsin had forced Gorbachev into numerous concessions, including firing the entire leadership of the central government in favor of Yeltsin appointees. By Saturday, Gorbachev had resigned as head of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and recommended that the party be disbanded.

In many ways, the conspirators brought about the exact opposite of what they hoped. They had sought to prevent the ascendancy of several political movements that had gained strength during Gorbachev's leadership of the country. One was the push for civil and political rights as those are understood in Western countries, including the right for parties and organizations to challenge the Communist Party's power. Another was the call for a market economy. A third was the creation of greater autonomy or even independence to the regions comprising the union. The coup began, not coincidentally, one day before Gorbachev and the leaders of several of the republics that make up the Soviet Union were to sign a new union treaty which would have given the republics significantly stronger powers.

The Soviet Union had already changed greatly during Gorbachev's six years of power. The intellectual and political reforms of this period set the stage for the popular resistance to the coup. Still, the future of these trends was not assured. Gorbachev had long sought to balance conservative and reformist forces, preventing reform from going so fast that a backlash would occur. His efforts to manage change made Gorbachev extremely unpopular and turned out to be inadequate to prevent the coup. He did, however, give the various reformist forces the opportunity and the time to gain strength.

The rout of the conservatives by the Yeltsin and the reformist forces in the country has changed the playing field. We can now expect a faster transition to a market economy and the transfer of political control to the republics. In fact, with Yeltsin's new, stronger position, the separatist republics (Estonia, Georgia, Latvia, Lithuania, Moldavia and perhaps the Ukraine and Armenia) are very likely to gain outright independence.

Does this mean the Soviet Union's problems are solved? Certainly not. While the prospects of a return to the past are well nigh non-existent, the future remains hard to predict. Resolving the Soviet Union's profound economic, health, ecological and social problems would be challenge enough for any country. But these problems must be addressed while Soviets try to create new political institutions and policies. Opposition to Western-style reforms is widespread among Soviet citizens. Creating a stable and effective democracy has rarely been an easy task for any society. We can expect Soviet democratization to be especially tricky.

As last week's event reminded us, we have a stake in the outcome. New conflicts could still threaten the nuclear balance, our allies, the new democracies in Eastern Europe, joint economic ventures and the loss of a valuable partner in resolving global issues.

Understanding the course of future Soviet changes will require more information than we now have. A long-time embarrassment to the United States during the Cold-War period was how few specialists the United States had in the politics, economics or culture of the Soviet Union. The Soviet Union has long had more teachers of English than there are students of Russian in the United States. Part of the problem in the past was that research and business opportunities were limited by the Soviet government's policies. It was impossible to survey average Soviet citizens about political and economic matters as several UI political scientists are now doing.

Past restrictions are gone, yet the lack of knowledge of the Soviet Union remains critical. The same policies of glasnost that made last week possible have opened up more exciting opportunities than dreamed possible just a few years ago. The UI has been particularly active in taking advantage of these opportunities.

Numerous UI faculty are collaborating with their Soviet counterparts, both by traveling to the Soviet Union and by receiving Soviet and East European scholars here. Such joint projects and visiting scholars enrich instruction and provide campus events. The UI has more Russian majors than any other program in the United States. Each semester, approximately a half dozen UI students live in Moscow on a unique exchange sponsored by the American Council of Teachers of Russian. The Iowa Critical Languages Program provides significant financial support to future teachers of Russian. The UI recently approved the creation of a Soviet and Eastern European Studies Program. The SEES Program has faculty members from several departments as economics, history, journalism, political science, Russian and social work. It works to coordinate and publish the numerous campus activities relating to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. Students can receive a B.A. degree in SEES as well. The SEES Program was recently selected by the U.S. Department of Education as a promising new program and given a large grant to improve instruction in the area.

At a time, then, when American students, the government and the international community all vitally need people with Soviet expertise, UI students have a lot going for them. Whether gained as a specialty within a departmental major or as an interdisciplinary SEES major, familiarity with Soviet affairs will open doors. Studying the Soviet Union, moreover, never lacks for excitement. Last week's events are historic for their drama and the extent of change they have ushered in. We can expect more shocking developments "as the Soviet Union turns." William Reisinger is an associate professor of political science specializing in Soviet politics and is co-director of the Soviet and Eastern European Studies Program.

The news, lately, is not so good. Americans seem to be throwing tolerance overboard for other attributes, traits that quickly get them what they want. We often say that the squeaky wheel gets the grease. The truth of this statement is reflected in the newest American pastime: squeaking. The louder the racket, the better. If you are thoroughly irritating, the government or the courts will literally pay you to stop. The end result is that nobody cares whether our social wheels turn at all anymore. The only point is to make enough noise to get other people to stand behind you and squeak along with you, thus forming a power base from which you can enact legislation or just make a splash in the media.

In New York last week, Hasidic Jews and African-Americans in Brooklyn's Crown Heights district murdered each other and clashed with police in the wake of an automobile accident. One African-American child was killed and a second severely injured when a car, driven by a follower of Grand Rebbe Menachem Schneerson of the Lubavitcher Hasidic Sect, jumped a curb and pinned the children to a grate.

In its emotional aftermath, this tragedy was compounded by an act of vengeance. Fueled by (false) rumors that an ambulance crew had treated the lightly injured Hasidim in the car before seeing to the critically injured black children, young blacks went on a rampage, shouting "Jew! Jew!" Ultimately, they found one, 29-year-old Yankel Rosenbaum, an Australian rabbinical student who was scheduled to leave town in three weeks. At the corner of President Street and Brooklyn Avenue, fury intersected with innocence to produce tragedy. Rosenbaum, thoroughly unfamiliar with the racial tension between New York's Jews and blacks, was stabbed and left on the hood of a car to bleed to death.

The incident highlights the dangers of a new twist in the most familiar trait of the American character: impatience. People want everything now. If the police fail to shoot on the spot a driver who's hurt or killed your child, go find someone who has something in common with the driver — say, racial type — and kill him. Instant justice. Just add blood and stir.

As for our police, they have shown themselves to be highly skilled at the impatience game. Weary of the slow-moving cogs in the machinery of justice, they spend a great deal of time dispensing justice — in the form of beatings — these days.

The cost of contemporary activism is being made clearer every day in the form of societal misunderstanding, human misery and actual casualties.

Politicians can play, too. The gulf war was a textbook example of wanting something right now and clamoring for it in the showiest way possible. We pitted our Star Wars technology against a veritable Iraqi F-Troop. The overkill led to Hussein's deranged retaliation in Kuwait's oil fields, where folks now enjoy nighttime 24 hours a day beneath opaque clouds of burning crude.

But those in power hold no monopoly on the politics of impatience. Gay and lesbian activists do it, too. If not enough money is spent on AIDS, if education lags behind or the church opposes it, ACT-UP. Their tactics have gained attention, funding and a grudging respect. If a right-wing no-mind makes fun of the loss of life brought about by AIDS, they raise the roof in an attempt to short-circuit his right to free, if hateful, speech. And if the U.S. military refuses to acknowledge the contributions of its lesbian and gay members, they out Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams — who does not formulate policy for the military.

In fact, the most disturbing thing about all this organized hell-raising is that everyone is so good at it. They're all winning, in large and small ways. Thus the squeaky wheel gets reinforced for squeaking, while those who wouldn't dream of making a peep get nothing but stepped on.

The second most disturbing thing about the new American impatience is its potential for brutality. It is militancy, whether espoused by Newt Gingrich, Randall Terry or the Rev. Al Sharpton. The American Heritage Dictionary defines activism as, "A theory or practice based on militant action." Militant is defined as, "Having a combative character; aggressive, especially in the service of a cause." While our tendency to stare-eyed over the word "cause," assuming it is eternally wedded to the word "just," is understandable, it is nonetheless dangerous. Right to Lifers have a cause, and they think nothing of singing hymns while breaking the law in its service. The Inquisition had a cause, as did Joseph Stalin. Causes are dangerous and nothing on which to base either social interaction or governmental decisions.

The cost of contemporary militant activism is being made clearer every day in the form of societal misunderstanding, human misery and actual casualties. Today's prominent national activists frequently have little to offer. They are in no way the heirs of people such as Martin Luther King Jr. or Mahatma Gandhi. They are loud, obnoxious and greedy, and far too in love with their own pictures in newspapers and magazines.

Some would say that all acts perpetrated by these activists are necessary, even reasonable means to ensure justice. As the newspapers fill with accounts of deaths fueled by the hatred engendered by the rhetoric of the militant, this argument becomes pale and insufficient. In order for contemporary social problems to be solved, we will all have to divest interest in our separate "causes" long enough to come to some consensus on what constitutes the good of the whole. Only then can the process of implementing workable solutions begin. That may sound simplistic, but it's certainly no more simplistic than the adilled belief that everyone can have what they want — right now.

SOVIET: Shakeups in leadership

Gorbachev, held under house arrest during the 63-hour coup attempt, met Sunday with former adviser Alexander Yakovlev and aide Yevgeny Primakov to prepare measures he will propose to the legislature for coping with the crisis. He also will address the fate of parliamentary speaker Anatoly Lukyanov, described by Yeltsin as the "ideologue" of the conspiracy.

Radical legislators will fight Gorbachev's agenda, said Alexei Yablokov, a reformist lawmaker.

Leningrad's reformist mayor, Anatoly Sobchak, planned to ask the legislature to debate a resolution to recognize the independence of six republics — including the Baltics — that are refusing to sign Gorbachev's proposed Union Treaty.

Yeltsin, who led resistance to the hard-line Communist coup, capitalized on the disintegration of the central government and Communist Party over the weekend to issue decrees asserting his government's control over state-owned enterprises in the Russian Federation.

Yeltsin will demand a revision of the draft Union Treaty to "eliminate all the parts which were previously dedicated to the so-called central power," Deputy Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Fyodorov told CNN.

In other developments: Angry demonstrators in the Latvian capital of Riga toppled a statue to the founder of the Soviet Communist Party, Vladimir Lenin. Protesters in the Chichen-Ingush capital of Grozny in the southern Soviet Union on Saturday took down a Lenin monument, blockaded police and KGB buildings, and took control of radio and television stations.

The Moscow City Council on Tuesday was to debate taking down a massive Lenin statue. Mayor Gavriil Popov called on citizens to refrain from pulling down monuments without city authorization.

In several republics, authorities stepped up actions against Communist Party branches and individuals suspected of complicity in the coup plot.

Ukrainian authorities sealed Communist Party headquarters in Kiev pending an investigation of party complicity, said Maxim Myakenty of the independent Ukrainian Information Service.

Transfer QB Eyde lost for season

Iowa quarterback Matt Eyde broke his ankle Wednesday during a scrimmage and will likely miss the entire upcoming season.

The 6-4, 212-pound sophomore transferred from Michigan State and sat out last year and was competing with Jim Hartlieb for the second string spot before the injury.

The East Lansing, Michigan native completed 6 of 8 passes for 53 yards in Iowa's annual spring game this year.

Weno hired as assistant softball coach

Debra Weno, an Iowa State graduate and an all-American at Regina High School in Iowa City, was named assistant softball coach at the University of Iowa on August 19.

Former assistant Ruth Crowe left her post July 31 to pursue a career in law enforcement. Weno had been the head softball coach at Regina since 1989. Her 1990 squad went 14-17 overall and advanced to the second round of regional play.

Iowa Swimmer Wojdat finishes 2nd

University of Iowa swimmer Artur Wojdat finished second in the 400 freestyle championship of the European Swimming Championships Friday.

Wojdat captured the 200 freestyle title on Tuesday, but finished seven hundredths of a second behind Edgeniy Sadozyi of the Soviet Union.

NBA

Warriors sign Alexander to five-year deal

OAKLAND, Calif. — Iowa State standout Victor Alexander, one of the Golden State Warriors' three first-round draft picks, has signed a five-year contract, the team announced Saturday.

Salary terms were not disclosed but Warriors president Dan Finnane said veteran forward Jim Petersen had agreed to a lower salary for the coming season, allowing the team to remain under the NBA's salary cap with the signing of Alexander.

The 6-foot-9, 265 pound Alexander signed as a forward-center but played only center at Iowa State where he averaged 23.4 points and nine rebounds per game as a senior.

Vogus wins U.S. Amateur

OOLTEWAH, Tenn. — Mitch Voges displayed near-perfection from tee-to-green to beat Manny Zerman 7-and-6 on Sunday and win the U.S. Amateur Championship.

At age 41 Voges is the third oldest to win the national title.

"I'm a little numb and very humble right now," Voges said minutes after eliminating Zerman 22. "I've always known I've had the game to do something like that. To be able to cherish this experience with my family is the best thing."

Voges quickly squashed any comeback hopes by Zerman with birdies on each of the first four holes to go 7 up with just 14 holes to go.

Zerman, the Pac 10 champion from Arizona, got a hole back with a birdie on No. 5, but got no closer. The two halved the next four holes to leave Voges 6 up after 27 holes.

Purtzer wins World Series

AKRON, Ohio — Tom Purtzer let victory escape him in regulation play but secured it with a precise playoff par Sunday in the World Series of Golf.

Hayden Fry had already said it was highly unlikely that prized recruit Willie Guy would see action this year. Though he didn't know it at the time, his assessment couldn't have been more accurate.

For the second time since being recruited to play for Iowa, Guy will have to watch Hawkeye football on television — but not because he isn't physically ready to play football in the Big Ten, as Fry had anticipated. The all-purpose speedster from Memphis, Tenn., was declared academically ineligible Saturday by new Iowa Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby, who said he thought Guy would now opt to play for another school.

"He could attend Iowa if he would so choose, but my guess is that he will decide to go elsewhere," Bowlsby said.

In a press release issued by the Iowa athletic department, Bowlsby said that Guy had not met NCAA academic guidelines for freshmen. Guy was initially declared eligible to play this season after he passed Iowa's ACT requirements this spring.

"After a final review of Willie Guy's records, it has been determined that he has not met NCAA bylaw 14.3 and he therefore will not be competing during the 1991 football season," Bowlsby said in Saturday's release.

The statement described bylaw 14.3 as "freshman academic requirements."

Guy's high school statistics have made him the most talked-about Hawkeye recruit since Fry came to Iowa City in 1979.

In his senior year at East High School Guy was a star on both sides of the ball. On offense he rushed for 1,202 yards and 17 TDs. As the team's quarterback he passed for 627 yards. He led the nation in punt returns with a 37.8 yard average, and returned four kicks for TDs.

On defense Guy had 146 tackles, four interceptions and four fumble recoveries.

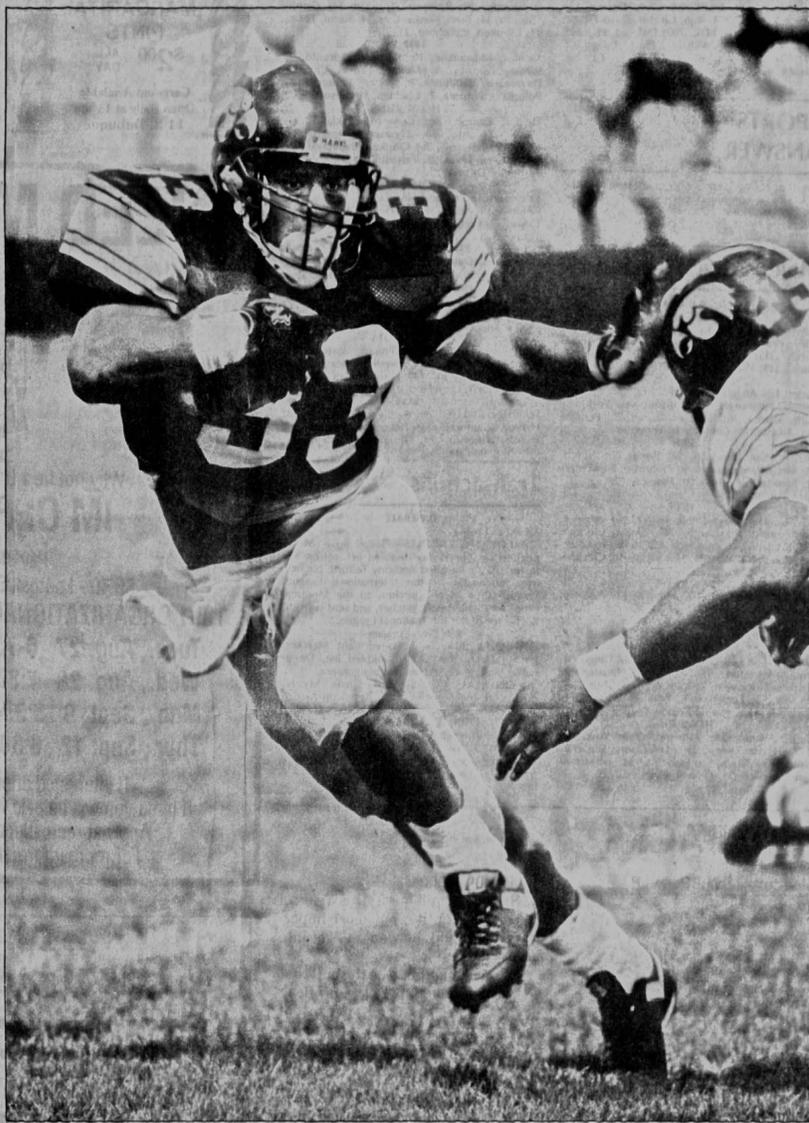

At Iowa's media day August 15, Fry said Guy (5-foot-10, 188 pounds) had the talent to play immediately, but doubted he'd break into the two-deep after sitting out last year.

"He's as talented a young man as we've ever recruited since I've been here at Iowa," Fry said. "Frankly, since Willie's the equivalent of a freshman, and he's been out of athletics for a full year... I don't project an incoming freshman breaking into the two-deep. I don't see Willie doing that his first year."

After initially being declared eligible, Guy was treated like the star he seemed destined to become. When the team was subjected to the media for the first time earlier this month, Guy was treated like a Heisman candidate.

Scooter Lampkin (above) and backfield partner Mike Saunders will try to fill the tailback hole left by Nick Bell and Tony Stewart, who were both drafted into the NFL this spring.

Iowa tailback duo ready for season

James Arnold
Daily Iowan

Last year, the Hawkeye running back tandem of Nick Bell and Tony Stewart punished Big Ten foes and rushed the team to the Rose Bowl. This fall, the names have changed, but the goals are the same.

Stewart left for the NFL's Seattle Seahawks as the Hawkeyes' all-time leading rusher with 2,562 yards. Bell is now pounding out yards for the NFL's Los Angeles Raiders. The 1990 squad with Bell and Stewart rushed for an Iowa team record of 2,699 yards.

Entering the season, senior Mike Saunders and junior Marvin "Scooter" Lampkin are hoping to fill the large void left by the two Iowa record breakers and NFL draftees.

"They were great players and they did their jobs here, and now they are doing their job in the pros," the 6-foot-1, 200-pound Saunders said. "The coaching staff and the whole team doesn't see a drop off. They were good backs and you can't take that away from them. But we're good backs, too, and in a couple weeks everyone is going to see that."

After rushing for 285 yards as a freshman and 158 as a sophomore, Saunders spent his junior season outside the hashmarks as a wide receiver, catching 18 passes for 265 yards — including a score in the Rose Bowl. In his first start as a freshman, he rushed for 123 yards against Minnesota.

Saunders said the move to receiver was because of the knee surgery he had before the season and not due to competition with Bell and Stewart.

"That was the easiest place for me to see time without taking the abuse that the running backs do," Saunders said. "(The knee) hasn't bothered me since... it feels great."

Lampkin was the reserve tailback and rushed for 168 yards in a mopup role last year. He nearly equalled his season total in the spring scrimmage, rushing for 120 yards in the game.

"Nick and Tony were great and they are gone now, unfortunately," Lampkin said. "I was excited last spring to finally get a chance to help the Hawkeyes win. That has been a real motivation for me this summer, to really work hard and get myself in good shape."

Lampkin admits that it will take more than speed and hard work to run over opponents next season. He said the Iowa offensive line will have to return to last year's form for the running game to be successful. With the exception of guard Greg Aegerter, all of last year's starters are back.

"Those guys are your saviors. They protect you day in and day out," Lampkin said. "Most guys realize that these guys are doing all the hard work. They're very goal-oriented and very close."

In 1990, Hawkeye fans enjoyed watching the punishing drives of Bell, many times upending would-be defenders. Stewart didn't have the size to run over people, but he slashed through defenses and then tried to outrun them. The new starters are aware of their own differences.

"I'm just as fast as (Stewart). We are both pretty quick," Saunders said. "I don't consider myself a speed merchant but I can get away from people."

"The big difference between me, Tony and Nick is probably size. They're 6-1 and I'm 5-9, so each back we have on the team has a different running style," Lampkin said.

Although Lampkin isn't a large, punishing back he claims his running style is rushing up the middle and then breaking away for big gains.

"I'm more comfortable running up the middle than running outside. I know that sounds kind of odd, but at this level you have to be able to See TAILBACKS, Page 2B

L.A. opens door but Braves can't get in

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Rookie Rheel Cormier gave up a run in 5½ innings and Lee Smith finished for his 300th career save as the Cardinals completed a three-game sweep of the NL West-leading Dodgers with a 5-2 victory Sunday.

Cormier (2-1) has the only two victories by a Cardinals left-handed starter this season. He also went 2-for-2 and scored a run, but had to leave the game after sustaining a contusion when Darryl Strawberry hit a line drive off his pitching arm in the sixth.

Smith worked the ninth to become the fifth player to record 300 saves. He's tied with Bruce Sutter for fourth on the all-time list, and leads the league with 35 saves.

Dodgers starter Tim Lincecum worked six innings and gave up four runs, three earned.

Padres 12, Cubs 9

CHICAGO — Darrin Jackson hit two home runs, including his first career grand slam to highlight a six-run sixth inning, as the Padres outslugged the Cubs 12-9.

Jackson had a career-high five RBIs as he raised his home run total to 14. It was the second time this season — and third in his career — that Jackson hit two home runs in one game. He also hit two against the Giants on June 30.

Bob Scanlan (5-7) took the loss. Danny Jackson started for the Cubs and gave up HRs to Darrin Jackson and Tim Teufel.

Mike Maddux (5-2) was the winner after taking over for San Diego starter Dennis Rasmussen. Rookie Jim Lewis pitched 3½ innings and Jose Melendez got the last two outs for his second save.

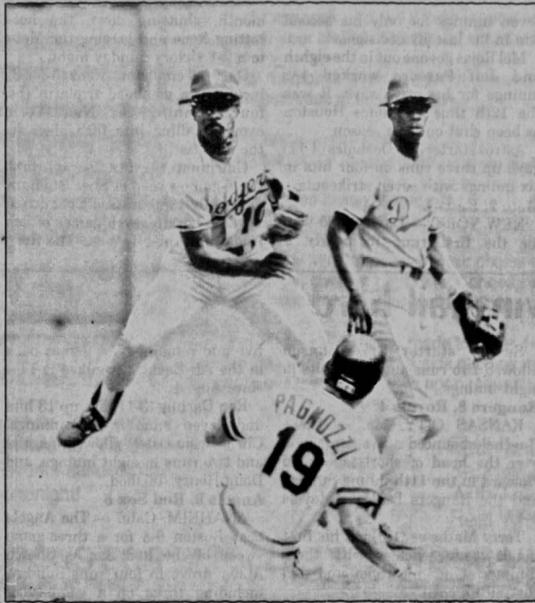

Doug Dascenzo dropped Howell's fly ball for an error in the ninth inning, ending a National League-record string of 242 consecutive outfield appearances without an error and 442 chances. The previous NL record was 226 consecutive games and the major-league record Don Demeter with 266 consecutive games.

Pirates 8, Giants 3

PITTSBURGH — Homers by Cecil Espy, Jay Bell, Andy Van Slyke and Bobby Bonilla accounted for all of Pittsburgh's runs, and John Smiley won his 15th game as the Pirates beat the Giants 8-3 Sunday.

Bell hit a two-run homer and Bonilla added a solo shot in the fifth against last-minute starter Francisco Oliveras (4-3) as the Pirates took a 3-2 lead after managing only one hit in the first four innings.

innings, Smiley (15-8) became the first Pirates left-hander to win 15 games since John Candelaria and Larry McWilliams each went 15-8 in 1983. He walked none and struck out five.

Phillies 6, Braves 5

ATLANTA — The Braves missed another chance to gain a share of the NL West lead as Ricky Jordan and Charlie Hayes homered to help

Philadelphia beat Atlanta 6-5 Sunday.

Tommy Greene (9-5), who pitched a no-hitter against Montreal on May 23, held the Braves hitless for the first four innings.

Erickson pummeled by Orioles

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Scott Erickson was pounded for six runs in 4½ innings and the Orioles beat the Twins 7-3 Sunday, sending Minnesota to only its third loss in 10 games.

Erickson (16-6) is 1-3 in his last four starts and 4-3 with a 7.49 ERA since coming off the disabled list July 15 following an elbow injury.

Joe Orsulak extended his hitting streak to 21 games and rookie Mike Mussina (2-3) allowed seven hits in eight-plus innings. Todd Frohwrth relieved with two on and got his second save.

Orsulak had two hits for the Orioles, each starting a big inning. His hitting streak is the third longest in the majors this season and one short of the Orioles' record.

Erickson gave up one hit in the first three innings, then allowed five hits and two walks in the next 1½ innings. The six earned runs were the most he allowed since Chicago scored seven on June 29.

NFL PRESEASON ROUNDUP

Patriots break out against champions

Hank Kutz Jr. Associated Press

Practically supposed to make perfect. In the case of several NFL teams, it only raises more questions.

The exhibition season ended Saturday with five games as the teams completed preparations for the season opens next weekend.

But at a time when offenses are expected to be sharp and defenses mean, lots of top teams played poorly and a few weaker ones played surprisingly well.

Some highlights from Saturday:

- The Patriots snapped a 17-game losing streak and got 122 yards from rookie Leonard Russell in a 24-3 victory over the Super Bowl champion Giants.
- The Jets almost blew a 13-0 lead against the Redskins before a goal line stand inside the 5 in the final minutes preserved a 13-9 victory.
- Jim Breech's field goal in overtime lifted the Bengals over the Packers 19-16.

They also hadn't had a 100-yard rusher since Dec. 3, 1989, when John Stephens got 124 against the Colts.

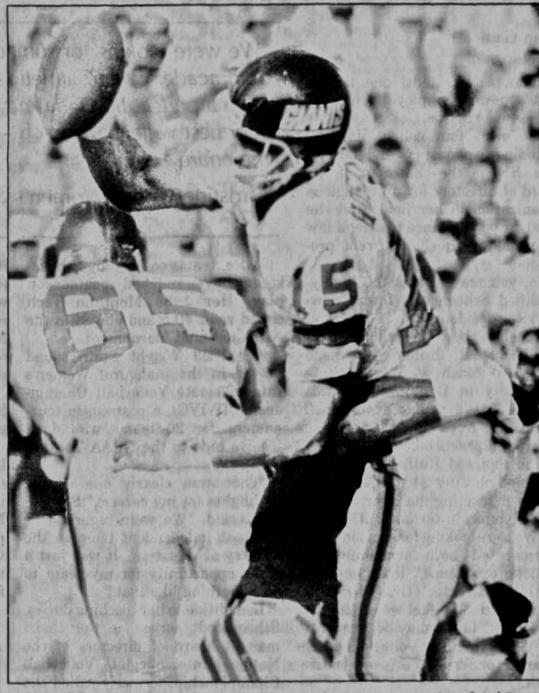

"I just didn't have them ready to play," Giants first-year coach Ray Handley said. "It's embarrassing to me."

Handley said his decision to keep linebacker Lawrence Taylor out of the lineup as a precautionary measure may have affected his team's approach.

"LT practiced all week. He could have played but I didn't suit him up," Handley said. "That may have sent a message that this game was not this important."

It was to New England, a fact magnified when coach Dick MacPherson was hugged and kissed by chief executive officer Sam Jankovich as he ran off the field.

"It was a great test for us to see that we could play the Giants because we admire them so much," MacPherson said. "We beat the Super Bowl champs in a warmup game. I don't know if we have anything bigger in the regular season than that."

Associated Press
Giants quarterback Jeff Hostetler is sacked by New England's Garin Veris during New York's 24-3 loss to the Patriots Saturday. Hostetler was recently awarded the starting spot beating out Phil Simms.

Some lowlights:

- Dan Marino threw interceptions on the Dolphins' first three possessions and was 5-for-18 in his first game since signing a five-year, $25 million contract. He's hit only 14 of 45 passes in his last two games.
- New England ran for 156 yards to the Giants' 43, with 17 of those by quarterback Jeff Hostetler.
- The Bills, without Jim Kelly, were dominated 30-13 by the Bears and didn't score a touchdown until Gale Gilbert hit Brad Lamb for 55 yards on the last play of the game.
- The Cardinals completed a 4-0 exhibition season in style, winning their games against New England and Denver by a combined 80-10. But all that became bittersweet Saturday when the team learned quarterback Timm Rosenbach would miss the season after surgery to repair a torn anterior cruciate ligament. That leaves Tom Tupa, who did not take a snap last season, as the Phoenix starter.
- Marino, whose reported new deal breaks down to $312,500 per game for a 16-game season, finished exhibition play without guiding the Dolphins to a touchdown in seven quarters of work.
- "I did not play too good," Marino said after Miami's 28-24 win over the Saints. "I made some bad decisions throwing the ball and I got unlucky on a couple of them."
- That's not Dan Marino out there that has struggled the way that he has struggled," coach Don Shula said. "Tonight he had some opportunities to make some throws, and he didn't make them."
- The Patriots hadn't won a game since the second week of last season, a 16-14 defeat of the Colts.

The Bills, sans Kelly, defensive star Bruce Smith and others, finished the exhibition season 2-3 with a weak effort against Chicago.

"I'm glad the preseason is over," coach Marv Levy said. "I wish we could have played better."

Mark Green scored two touchdowns and recovered a fumble to help the Bears (2-3). While coach Mike Ditka said he was "not unhappy but not overjoyed," Green thought the lopsided win was a good omen.

"It's nice to get out and do some things," Green said. "We were getting frustrated on offense. It's good to get the momentum going into the first game of the season."

At Columbia, S.C., the Jets salvaged their final exhibition game even after a fumble by rookie quarterback Browning Nagle gave Washington the ball on the Jets 14 with more than four minutes remaining and New York leading 13-7.

Redskins backup Cary Conklin hit Jimmie Johnson for 12 yards and a first down at the 2, but the Jets held. Conklin slipped on the next play for a 4-yard loss, threw two incomplete passes and fumbled on fourth down.

"We needed this win," Jets coach Bruce Coslet said. "We wanted to create that good feeling you have after a victory. We accomplished a lot here tonight."

Washington coach Joe Gibbs, whose team finished 1-3, said his team may have hit a low in completing its first losing exhibition season since 1982.

HAWKEYE VOLLEYBALL

Schoenstedt stresses academics

Brian Gaul
Daily Iowan

Linda Schoenstedt, one of the Iowa's newest employees, has an impressive resume.

She owns four college degrees, including two master's and a doctorate. She is the chairman of the board of directors for a prestigious organization in her field. And she passed up the chance to attend law school to pursue her current profession.

So, you may ask, is the highly-qualified Schoenstedt Iowa's newest vice-president?

No, she's the volleyball coach. Schoenstedt, formerly the head volleyball coach at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio, was named Iowa's women's volleyball coach on Aug. 10, the evening before fall practice began.

She replaced Ruth Nelson, who resigned on July 24 to become the sports marketing manager for Special Olympics International.

"We were looking for someone who represented both academic and athletic excellence," Iowa women's athletic director Dr. Christine Grant said. "We feel we've found a perfect fit. Linda may be, academically, the very best volleyball coach — male or female — in the entire USA."

Athletically, Schoenstedt's record isn't bad, either. She owns a 331-154 overall record, including a 101-48 mark as a Division I coach.

Schoenstedt has won 20 or more matches 11 times in her 13 years as a volleyball coach at Northern Montana, Montana Tech and Wright State. She has suffered only one losing season, a 23-27 mark at Montana Tech in 1984.

"We were looking for someone who represented both academic and athletic excellence. We feel we have a perfect fit. Linda may be, academically, the very best volleyball coach — male or female — in the entire USA."

Christine Grant, Women's athletic director

Twice, teams coached by Schoenstedt have reached postseason play. Her 1983 Montana Tech squad went 40-5 and played in the NAIA national tournament.

Her 1989 Wright State squad played in the inaugural Women's Intercollegiate Volleyball Championship (WIVC), a postseason tournament for 20 teams who don't receive bids to the NCAA Tournament.

"That was clearly one of the highlights (of my career)," Schoenstedt said. "We were regarded as the best independent team in the country at that time. It was just a great opportunity for my team to do something like that."

In addition to her coaching duties, Schoenstedt serves as the chairman of board of directors of the National Intercollegiate Volleyball Championship, formerly called the WIVC. She was one of the founders of the tournament.

"The three people who sat in the back of a bus and dreamed up the tournament just happened to be attending the same spring tournament as I was," Schoenstedt said. "They asked me if I wanted to get involved. I said I would."

"The NCAA (selection committee) has been extremely predictable in law degree to that list. After earning her undergraduate degree from Creighton, she planned to attend law school until a friend called about the coaching job at Northern Montana.

Schoenstedt has been in coaching ever since. She completed her master's degrees from two different schools while coaching volleyball, basketball and track at Northern Montana in 1979.

"Obviously, I believe in education," Schoenstedt said. "I don't think it's for everyone, but I have been a great opportunity to me. I am committed to academics within the athletic area."

"I think it has also given me a great perspective on what it's like to have a full-time job like being a volleyball player and going to school at the same time."

As hard as that may be, Schoenstedt has made it clear that volleyball players are expected to succeed in the classroom as well as on the court.

"You get the impression I expect a lot in academics," said captain Trista Schoenbeck. "We've already started studying for our classes, as a matter of fact."

Florida State starts season ranked 1st

Rick Warner
Associated Press

Florida State, which has never finished first in college football, is starting on top in 1991.

The Seminoles, who have come close to winning a national title the last four years, are No. 1 in The Associated Press preseason poll. They were the overwhelming choice, getting 49 of 60 first-place votes and 1,483 of a possible 1,500 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

"It really doesn't surprise me because everyone seems to be picking us No. 1," said coach Bobby Bowden, who has 17 starters back from last year's 10-2 team that finished fourth in the nation.

"But I still say there are eight or 10 teams that you can put in a hat that have as much a chance to be up there as we do."

One of those teams is No. 2 Michigan, which plays Florida State in Ann Arbor on Sept. 28. The Wolverines got five first-place votes and 1,384 points.

Miami, which has won three national championships since 1983, is No. 3 with two first-place votes and 1,276 points. Washington is next with one first-place ballot and 1,252 points, followed by Florida with one first-place vote and 1,150 points.

Rounding out the Top 10 are Notre Dame, Penn State, Georgia Tech, Clemson and Oklahoma. Tennessee is 11th, followed by Houston, Colorado, Texas, Nebraska, Southern Cal, Auburn, Iowa, BYU, Michigan State, Texas A&M, Alabama, Ohio State, UCLA and Syracuse.

Clemson and Houston each received one first-place vote.

With three schools in the Top 5, Florida is clearly the dominant state in college football. It's the first time in the 55-year history of the AP poll that one state has placed three schools in the Top 5.

"We're starting the year as the No. 3 team in Florida, and this is one state where that's not all bad," said Florida coach Steve Spurrier. "One of our primary goals is to become the top program in the state. If we can achieve that each year, we will be a nationally ranked team."

This is the second time Florida State has been ranked No. 1 in the preseason poll. The Seminoles also were No. 1 in 1988, but didn't hold onto the top spot very long. After Deion Sanders and several teammates made a video to celebrate their status, they went out and lost their opener to Miami 31-0.

"That was a case of putting on too much perfume," Bowden said. "It's OK to smell like perfume, but in '88 we took a bath in it."

Alabama, Ohio State, UCLA and Syracuse are the only teams in the preseason poll that weren't ranked at the end of last season. Syracuse edged Louisville by one point for the final spot.

Nebraska failed to make the preseason Top 10 for the first time since 1977, when the Cornhuskers also were 15th.

A team gets 25 points for a first-place vote, 24 for second and so on, down to one point for 25th place.

John Shipley

When the Orange, Sugar and Cotton bowls got together last spring to discuss a fourth member for their new college football alliance, I didn't bother calling the Rose Bowl. It simply wouldn't have made any sense.

The alliance was formed with the hope of making the national picture more lucid than it has been in recent years. Last season, for instance, ended with Georgia Tech ranked No. 1 by the UPI coaches poll and Colorado ranked No. 1 in the AP writers poll. The two teams never even came close to playing each other.

So which team is the defending national champion? Take your pick.

The alliance is aimed at making such a pick unnecessary, ostensibly because each year the alliance should be able to facilitate a game between the No. 1 and No. 2 team in the country.

The Rose Bowl would do nothing for such an alliance because it is the only bowl in the nation to split into two conferences — the Big Ten and the Pac-10. If the winner of the Pac-10 is undefeated and ranked No. 1, it has to play the winner of the Big Ten, even if it's a Purdue team that finished in a five-way tie for first with a 5-3 conference

SARASOTA, Fla. — Bo Jackson nowhere near where he wants to be, is thankful he's no longer with the White Sox.

The White Sox outfielder began his comeback from a career-threatening hip injury on Sunday by beating out an infield single and hitting a sacrifice fly for the club's Class A Florida State League team.

"I'm happy with my performance, but there's always room for improvement," Jackson said between games of the Sarasota White Sox two-night double with the Charlotte Rangers.

"At this point and time, I'm 50 percent back to where I want to be," he said. "Don't expect much, too soon. There will be when I'm sore and probably come out after a few innings."

Jackson's RBI tied the game in the third inning and he led off the eighth by hitting out a grounder down the third base line. His season has been hampered by the hip injury sustained during last season's playoffs, but he was still able to accelerate and reach base on Jose Oliva's throw.

"I thought it was going to be a ball. I've run twice as fast during my rehabilitation," said Jackson, who wobbled, playfully, as he walked back to the bag where he was replaced by pinch runner Hairston.

"I was just kidding," he said. "Some of my buddies were in the stands, yelling at me. They thought I was winded."

The crowd of 4,459 gave Jackson a standing ovation, then watched

Last season, for instance, ended with Georgia Tech ranked No. 1 by the UPI coaches poll and Colorado ranked No. 1 by the AP writers poll. The two teams never even came close to playing each other.

So which team is the defending national champion? Take your pick.

The alliance is aimed at making such a pick unnecessary, ostensibly because each year the alliance should be able to facilitate a game between the No. 1 and No. 2 teams in the country.

The Rose Bowl would do nothing for such an alliance because it is the only bowl in the nation tied into two conferences — the Big Ten and the Pac-10. If the winner of the Pac-10 is undefeated and ranked No. 1, it has to play the winner of the Big Ten, even if it's a Purdue team that finished in a five-way tie for first with a 5-3 conference record and managed to lose all of its non-conference games.

As its fourth member, the alliance chose the Fiesta Bowl, the only bowl of the four not tied to any conference. The Orange Bowl brings the winner of the Big Eight, the Sugar Bowl the Southeastern champion and the Cotton Bowl that of the Southwestern conference. The idea is that there is a pretty good chance that the No. 1 or No. 2 team in the country will come from one of these conferences.

Of course it also assumes that only one of those will come from the SEC, SWC or Big Eight. If Auburn is No. 1 and Texas No. 2, the Sugar and Cotton bowls might have to arm-wrestle for the right to host the national championship game.

The alliance seems to think the "other" team (No. 1 or No. 2) will come from either the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Big East or South Bend, Ind. Notre Dame is the only independent included in the alliance, but that's only because Florida State joined the ACC and Miami hooked on with the Big East after last season. Both conferences are tied into the alliance.

The best-case scenario for the alliance would be to have, say, Notre Dame ranked No. 1 and Oklahoma ranked No. 2. Then Notre Dame would play Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl for the clever enough or aggressive enough to take advantage."

Paterno sees the alliance as perhaps doing more damage than good for alliance-member bowls, denying them some excellent teams that could end up playing for big stakes in remaining "independent" bowls.

"(The alliance) locked themselves in with X number of teams and there are an awful lot of good football teams out there that won't be available to them, that there are going to be programs with tremendous alumni support," Paterno said. "I really think that some of the bowls that have been waiting in the wings are going to take advantage."

"Some of them have better situations, are more attractive than the bowls in the consortium."

Paterno also sees a chance for the Big Ten to perhaps make some arrangements of its own with some of those remaining bowls, giving the conference some attractive alternatives for teams that don't earn a Rose Bowl bid.

"I think if the leadership in the Big Ten is intelligent and aggressive and has some ingenuity, they can have the best of all those," he said. "They've got the Rose Bowl, which is unique in itself, I think that if they can tie up some other (bowls) they can maybe make the situation in the Big Ten and the Pac-10 very, very attractive."

national title. And so on.

If neither the SEC, SWC or Big Eight have a No. 1 or No. 2 team but both come from somewhere between the ACC, Big East and Notre Dame, the Fiesta Bowl gets to host the title game. Got it?

That's a lot of ifs to come true in the course of a college football season. Michigan State coach George Perles prefers the simple position of the Big Ten. "The Rose Bowl could just as easily have the national title game as the alliance," he says.

Perles, who is also the Spartans' athletic director, seems to represent the opinion of the Big Ten as a whole, which prefers its association with the Rose Bowl and the Pac-10 to the hypothetical gymnastics of the new alliance.

"The new coalition, or whatever they call it, is great for the people involved. But it doesn't affect the Big Ten," said the dean of conference coaches, Iowa's Hayden Fry. "We've had the greatest tie-up in the history of football with the Pac-10 and the Rose Bowl. It's not going to change us whatsoever."

The last team to emerge from the Rose Bowl as national champion was Southern Cal in 1972, but in most of this year's preseason polls, Michigan and Washington lurk within the top five. Add former independent and perennial powerhouse Penn State to the Big Ten schedule in 1993 and it further damages the alliance's chances of fielding a title game.

Penn State coach Joe Paterno has, theoretically, the most to lose of any Big Ten coach by not being included in the alliance. Although playing as an independent at the time, his Nittany Lions are the last Big Ten team to win national titles, in 1983 vs. Georgia in the Sugar Bowl and in 1987 vs. Miami, Fla., in the Fiesta Bowl.

But Paterno feels if the alliance makes an impact at all on the Big Ten, it's in a positive manner, opening up more possibilities for conference teams to participate in bowls that were "snubbed" by the alliance.

"You've got to take advantage of the opportunities that are going to present themselves because these people are locking themselves into these three bowls, maybe a fourth bowl," Paterno said. "I think some of the bowls that have been just on the edge of getting in, with great location, great potential — the Citrus Bowl, the Holiday Bowl, the Blockbuster Bowl, the Sun Bowl — I think it's just a question now that they've opened up things up for them."

Bo Jackson made a less-than quiet return to baseball as over 4,000 fans watched him beat out an infield single and go 1-for-3 in his first game of rehabilitation with White Sox farm team Sarasota.

Jackson goes 1-for-3 in first rehab game

Fred Goodall

Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. — Bo Jackson, nowhere near where he wants to be, is thankful he's no longer where he was.

The White Sox outfielder began his comeback from a career-threatening hip injury on Sunday, beating out an infield single and hitting a sacrifice fly for the club's Class A Florida State League farm team.

"I'm happy with my performance, but there's always room for improvement," Jackson said between games of the Sarasota White Sox two-night doubleheader with the Charlotte Rangers.

"At this point and time, I'm 50 or 60 percent back to where I want to be," he said. "Don't expect too much, too soon. There will be days when I'm sore and probably will come out after a few innings."

Jackson's RBI tied the game 2-2 in the third inning and he led off the eighth by hitting out a grounder down the third base line. His speed has been hampered by the hip injury sustained during last season's NFL playoffs, but he was still able to accelerate and reach base before Jose Oliva's throw.

"I thought it was going to be a foul ball. I've run twice as fast during my rehabilitation," said Jackson, who wobbled, playfully, as he walked back to the bag where he was replaced by pinch runner John Hairston.

"I was just kidding," he said. "Some of my buddies were in the stands, yelling at me. They thought I was winded."

The crowd of 4,459 gave Jackson a sustained ovation, then watched

Hairston score the winning run in a 3-2 victory.

"It was fun," Jackson said of his first game since last October. "It reminded me of when I was young and going out and trying to steal bicycles. Once you learn how, you never forget. You just have to keep polished."

Jackson was the designated hitter Sunday but didn't particularly enjoy the role.

"It killed me to sit on the bench, to have that idle time between at-bats. It's like being caged," he said. "It's good to be back out on the field, but I won't be happy until I'm back in the outfield chasing down fly balls."

Jackson faced three pitchers in the first game, which started 48 minutes late because of a thunderstorm that affected attendance at sold-out 7,500-seat Ed Smith Stadium.

He grounded to third against left-hander Juan Quero in his first at-bat and drove in Rogelio Nunez when he lined to right off Quero with the bases loaded in the third. He lined out to right in the fifth against right-hander Jose Alberro, then got the infield hit off loser Johnny Maldonado.

Major league teams are allowed to increase their active rosters from 25 to 40 players on Sept. 1. Jackson was encouraged by his performance Sunday but isn't sure how soon he'll be able to get to Chicago.

"I don't know if I'm ready or not," he said. "I actually need to get out on the field and face major league pitching before I'll know that."

On Monday, Jackson is scheduled to report to the Class AA Birmingham Barons for four games.

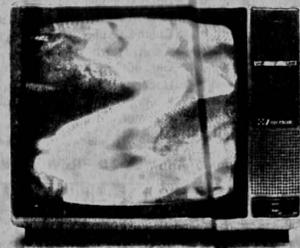

The Market You're Looking For Is Reading The Same Paper You Are.

How do you like that for a coincidence? While you've been pouring all that money into another medium, the answer's been staring you right in the face: An ad in The Daily Iowan. It's one place you can be sure the market's going to look.

And look, they do. More than 45,000 people daily. People who, on paper, are very similar to you. They're educated, savvy, know what they want and know how to find it. And when it comes to buying advice, this is where they're most apt to look.

Unlike TV, You Can't Turn A Newspaper Ad Off.

There's nothing TV reps love more than telling you who's watching your commercial. Because, chances are, it will end up playing to an empty room.

Recent studies bear it out. At the first sign of a commercial break, 50% of the viewers head for the bathroom, the kitchen, turn off the sound or switch channels.

That's something people can't do with a newspaper ad. And according to the 1986/1987 Scarborough Report, they don't want to. The reason is quite simple. Consumers rate newspapers as the most helpful, believable source of advertising information. That's where they prefer to turn first.

If Weeklies Are Such A Great Place To Advertise, How Come They Have To Give Them Away?

Well, that's a question you better consider carefully before you start investing your ad budget. Because, in the case of weeklies, you're putting out cold, hard cash and getting absolutely no guarantees.

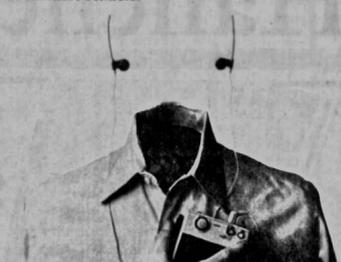

Distribution can be spotty. Timing is often difficult to predict. And even if you can live with those odds, there's no way of telling if the publication will ever be read. That's a gamble most advertisers prefer not to take. Which explains why they overwhelmingly prefer The Daily Iowan.

If You're Trying To Sell The Market In Sixty Seconds, You Could Be Wasting Your Breath.

It doesn't take a Ph.D. in research to figure out that nobody listens to radio for the commercials. In fact, even industry people will admit that commercials can actually cost a station audience. To most listeners, they're just an excuse to push the button, and push the button they do. Hop-scotching between different stations.

That means in order for your message to be heard, you've got to cover a lot of territory. You've got to run a lot of time at a lot of expense, all in the hopes that when your spot finally airs, somebody, somewhere will actually be listening.

Now compare that to what you get with The Daily Iowan - Readers. Loyal. Dedicated. Verifiable readers.

Best of all, once you've got their attention, you can take all the time you want. Nobody will cut you off. That means there's no time limit to your selling power.

45,000 People Can See This Ad. Now, Don't You Wish It Was Yours?

If you want to reach the Iowa City market, this is where you want your message to be. This is where they're looking. This is where they're shopping. This is where they're spending. Come to think of it, how much more proof do you need?

MOVIE REVIEW

Hawke can't save genre cliché 'Mystery Date'

Kimberly Chun
Daily Iowan

Doubtlessly the main reason most people — um, excuse me, red-blooded, all-American, hormonally propelled young girls — see this film goes by the name of Ethan Hawke. I give you that this squeaky Clearasil-clean and keen young stud-puppy has the makings of a star of the magnitude of... oh, Alec Baldwin.

He's studied at the Actor's studio. He's the teen-aged Jesus in "Dead Poet's Society" and the kid with a poochy heart in "White Fang." He's fresh-faced, he's fun and he's stolen River Phoenix's spunky little bowl 'do.

The makers of "Mystery Date," however, hope to offer much more than the beautiful Hawke (Plot-line! Metaphorical Resonance! Significance! Meaningful Relationships! Life, Love and Laughs!). "Mystery Date" nonetheless follows the course of most blind dates — from the start, it's burning or burdened by ambition, and it inevitably offers much less.

Tom (Hawke) deals with his high-school graduation, his chirpy, pastel parents, the sibling rivalry of a prize-winning schauzner and a slick-to-the-sliming-point older brother, Craig (Brian McNamara), the only way he knows how. He escapes into a fantasy world, and spies upon and lusts after a mysterious neighbor (Teri Polo) until Craig brings the dream to life by setting Tom up on a date with her.

However, Tom's foray into the unknown tears open other mysteries, resulting in an excursion into a world of mistaken identities, accidental and intentional killings of all ilk, stolen vases, the "ancient Chinese secrets" of the Chinese Mafia, deranged flower delivery boys and kidnapped maidens.

Cross Martin Scorsese's much more disturbing vision of post-

Teri Polo and Ethan Hawke in a scene from "Mystery Date."

Orion Pictures

AIDS sexual fears "After Hours" with a standard "losing it for zillionth boring time" teen comedy and aim it at the "Risky Business" audience. Toss in some quasi-noir and somewhat thoughtful cinematography, quirk-bomb transitional shots of a doggie-clock and a passing yuck-some joke or two. Come up with the inspired and socko title that doubles as a dog of a board game.

However, isn't it a little late in the genre to trot out the hackneyed and offensive stereotype of the "inscrutable oriental" — the Asian signifying mystery? As Japanese interests delve further into Hollywood, one can see a knee-jerk, Asian-bashing reaction developing in mainstream films from "Year of the Dragon" to "Black Rain."

The sexual anxiety of a first date slips unsurprisingly into the anxiety of the "yellow peril." Asian crime organizations will come to media attention more than ever in the '90s, but a meticulously detailed and dimensional "Goodfellas" this ain't.

The pony-tailed, black-suit-sporting, Fu Manchish Chinese Mafia kingpin Lew (with the oddly anglicized moniker) is the evil opposite of Hawke's Elvis Costello-loving college pop dude. Tom, however, is just as much an excuse for a characterization as Lew is — the sum total of the posters on his walls and the T-shirts he wears. Significantly, at the end, Tom's older sleaze-merchant of a brother yells, "Go back to your safe suburban home and watch MTV." Unfortunately, "Mystery Date" offers no alternative to the superficial and clichéd.

Take 6 ops Hancher season

Daily Iowan families everywhere. Take 6, a Grammy-winning cappella group, will open Hancher's 1991-92 season Tuesday, Sept. 10. Take 6 members call their music "contemporary Christian a cappella pop jazz." The description helps explain why their music has proven to be so popular with a wide range of audiences. The group's first album, So Much to Say, won three Grammy awards and simultaneously hit the music charts in the inspirational, R & B and jazz categories. Hancher follows up its opening night with another blend of musical talent on Sept. 13. "Labor of Love" is a musical comedy that was created by American and Japanese artists. The piece, which features Cajun music, centers on rice farmers in Louisiana and Japan, and seeks to find common es and struggles that bind families everywhere. Miz," the big event of Hancher's 1991-92 season, begins Tuesday, Sept. 17, and continues through Sunday, Sept. 22. Audiences should be especially pleased with "Buddy," the midway show with an Iowa that takes over the Hancher Sept. 27-29. The last 45 minutes of this Buddy Holly story tells Holly's final concert in Lake, where he shared the stage with the Big Bopper and the Valens. In early September Hancher will mount a lobby featuring Holly memorabilia that has been collected by fans. Hancher shifts to classic music the month of October. Zukerman and Marc Neikirk perform Oct. 2. The Bolshoi will perform two nights, Oct. 4-5, followed by the New Music of Indonesia on Oct. 7. Urban Bush Women will perform "Praise House," a combination of dance and theater, on Oct. 9. The performance explores a tradition of spirituality that stretches back through the black churches of the 1800s to Africa. Hancher co-commissioned Wim Vandekeybus for an Oct. 16 performance. Critics have called the multimedia theater fresh, fascinating and innovative. Iowa University Theatres opens its 1991-92 season with an Oct. 17-27 run of "Les Liaisons Dangereuses." This is the stage play from which the Glenn Close/John Malkovich film "Dangerous Liaisons" was adapted. Hancher closes out the month of October with two performances in its Mozart series and two from Asia.

Blackeye sensation quits, says players mistreated

Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Robert Smith, who quit the Ohio State football team because he said players are mistreated by the coaching staff and academics receive short shrift, said Sunday that time would prove his comments were accurate.

"Those guys (on the team) and the coaches who have been critical of me will have their feet in their mouths when the truth comes out," Smith said in a telephone interview. "When things are out in the clear, I know I'll be vindicated. It has to come out eventually."

Smith, who broke Archie Griffin's freshman rushing record last season, quit the team Friday. He demanded the firing of head coach John Cooper and assistant coach Elliot Uzelac. He said the coaches had stripped players of their dignity, had brought about injuries through overwork and were unconcerned about academics unless a player was in danger of losing eligibility.

Cooper and five Ohio State players said Saturday that Smith's charges were baseless. They also said Smith's allegations weren't supported by the team.

Smith said that wasn't the case. "I'm a target for them because they're still on the team and I'm not," he said. "But I talked to one of the players today. He said that although nothing was said in my support (in media interviews), there are those who support me. I didn't expect a lot of support because there is a lot of politics being played and because some of the guys have a fear of not being on the team."

"I know I'm not alone in my thoughts. And these are not just thoughts. It's what goes on in the program."

Smith, a two-time winner of the Associated Press Mr. Football award in Ohio while at Euclid High School, said one of the reasons he selected Ohio State was because of its academic environment and its medical school. He is a microbiology major and has said he hopes to be a surgeon.

Cooper, in an interview at his Woody Hayes Athletic Center office, said he would speak to Smith but didn't see any middle ground.

"If his position is he's not going to play here if I'm coaching, how can you compromise?" Cooper said. "I don't think Robert Smith is in a position to make the decision on who the football coach is here."

Smith said, "I never did anything looking for a compromise or a solution. I did it because there was no solution."

Cooper said he stresses academics every day when he talks to team members.

"That, to me, is shocking," he said of Smith's allegation of indifference to schoolwork. "That's ridiculous."

Ohio State President Gordon Gee said Saturday he would look into the controversy and would speak with athletic director Jim Jones before Jones leaves on a European tour with the men's basketball team Monday afternoon.

"I'm not closing out the opportunity for Robert to speak to Jim Jones," Jones said at the Hayes center shortly after meeting with Cooper. "I've always said I would talk to him (Smith). But I'm not going to go looking for Robert Smith."

Smith said he would like to talk to Jones about matters other than returning to the football team. Smith said he won't return to the team as conditions currently exist.

Smith said he wanted to talk to Jones about transferring his football scholarship to a track scholarship. Smith was the state's 100-meter high school dash champion in his junior year at Euclid and was second as a senior.

Since announcing his decision Friday, Smith said he has received several telephone calls of support. He also said he wasn't surprised by the lack of support expressed in interviews with his former teammates.

"You find out who your true friends are," Smith said. "The ultimate decision was made so I could be happy. I wasn't happy playing for them (the coaches). That's the main thing."

He added, "I know I'm right. This is the price I have to pay."

Smith rushed for 1,126 yards last season. Ohio State opens its season Sept. 7 at home against Arizona.

New Candidate?

90 MILLION AMERICANS ARE "MAD AS HELL AND ARE NOT GOING TO TAKE IT ANYMORE!"

Tom Laughlin Is One of Them

...and wait until you hear what he's doing about it.

Just when you thought the primary was dull, from out of nowhere comes a surprising new possible candidate with a set of political ideas so explosive they will send shock waves throughout the country.

At first the idea of Tom Laughlin, star and creator of the Billy Jack films, leading a movement for serious political reform, let alone running for President in the Democratic primary, can only come as a complete shock.

Yet, when you hear his exciting ideas, especially the wide range of sweeping political reforms that he has developed — and suddenly the idea does not seem so surprising.

Study after study shows that the American people are deeply angry because they feel they are locked out of the political system.

They feel government on every level is unresponsive to their needs because it has become a leviathan run by professional politicians controlled by powerful lobbyists and monied special interest groups (such as the AMA, etc.).

Voters feel that this professional political class speaks a unique language which deals in the art of avoidance ... politicians who do not listen to them, who talk around questions and secretly make decisions behind closed doors that are completely insensitive to the needs of the American people and the terrible problems now facing this country.

In short, politicians lie, cover-up, and offer voters no real choices ... at best their vote means choosing between Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum. The net result is that 90 million eligible voters did not even bother to vote in the last Presidential election.

Yet, these deeply angry American voters are far from apathetic. Tens of millions of Americans do volunteer work in order to help their neighbors and make their communities a better place in which to live. The reason they are not active politically is because they have never seen any improvement come into their lives or the lives of their neighbors as a result of their political work. Mr. Laughlin's platform changes all of that.

It creates a brand new political environment that will restore to the voters immediate and direct control over how their tax dollars will be spent, and an equally direct control over those who are spending it ... forcing government on every level, local, state and federal, to become immediately responsive to the needs of the voters and the communities they represent.

Mr. Laughlin has a remarkable vision of what America is, what it can be, and how, working together, we can tap into the greatness of the American people to make that vision a reality.

JOIN THE VOTER REVOLT AND RESTORE AMERICA'S GREATNESS

A few of Mr. Laughlin's reforms:

- National health insurance for every American — now! Plus private care for those who desire it.
- A reduction in payroll and other taxes.
- A plan to restore to each voter the power to decide where his or her tax dollar will be spent.
- A drastic overhaul of the educational system restoring to every parent the right to pick the school their child will attend, the material they will be taught, and the teachers who will teach them.
- Strict term limitations to stop political insiders from controlling city, state and federal government.
- A way to make the Europeans pay for the $150 billion we spend on bases just in Europe, and put that $150 billion into bases and communities here in America.
- If American labor is so expensive and inefficient, why are the Japanese building automobile plants in America? A new approach to labor and our painful unemployment problem.
- A new way for citizens to have the power to control and supervise insurance companies and pension funds.
- A drastic revision of campaign financing so that every American, rich or poor, will have a fair and equal opportunity to run for any office in the land.
- If American cars got only 2.8 miles more per gallon, we would not need any of the oil from Iran or Iraq. A new plan to free America from its dependency on Mid East oil.
- Everyone knows the war against drugs is a dismal failure. A startling new way to effectively fight drugs and make neighborhoods safe.
- An exciting new way to restore on the personal level intense cooperation between police and the civilians they are to serve and protect.
- Credit report reform whereby credit companies who issue an erroneous report must automatically make a payment of $10,000 to the person damaged by the false report.

If you are truly interested in getting America back on track — in changing your world — join us and find out how to — it.

Smith's attorneys want Judge Lupo to stay

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — William Kennedy Smith's attorneys said Monday his judge should remain on the rape case, rejecting as baseless prosecutors' demands that she disqualify herself. Claiming the state is "judge-shopping," defense attorneys criticized the Aug. 20 motion by lead prosecutor Moira Lasch that Palm Beach County Circuit Judge Mary Lupo should leave the case. Prosecutors accused Lupo of a lack of candor about her family's friendships with attorneys on the case and alleged she showed bias toward the prosecution with her rulings and facial expressions. Lasch accused Lupo of bias for postponing the trial until Jan. 13.

Trial begins for mother of cheerleading candidate

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman accused of trying to hire a hitman to murder the mother of her daughter's cheerleading rival spoke of having the woman killed or sold into slavery, a prosecutor said Monday. The defense called it a set-up. As the trial began, both sides promised to show how tangled family relationships and a bitter divorce resulted in the solicitation of capital murder and kidnapping charges against Wanda Holloway. Defense lawyers called Holloway the victim of brothers scheming to take her children away from her. But prosecutors said Holloway contacted Terry Lynn Harper, her ex-husband's brother, after her 13-year-old daughter, Shanna, lost a spot on the cheerleading squad again to Amber Heath.

U.N. chief meets with special hostage envoy

GENEVA (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar resumed efforts Monday to free 11 Western hostages in Lebanon amid reports that Iran also has stepped up activity to resolve the issue. A Lebanese newspaper said Iran sent the commander of its Revolutionary Guards to Beirut to speed up moves to release the Westerners. One Lebanese faction holding Westerners has demanded that Israel free several hundred Arab prisoners, but the Israelis have demanded concrete information on seven Israeli servicemen missing in Lebanon.
