License or Prohibition—Which Pays?

Money moves and controls. The whisky question is one of money not appetite. Every saloon is set up to make money. Every wholesale dealer desires that the national to make money easily and on a large scale.

Distilleries and breweries are in operation for that reason only. The friends of license pay the same money plus. The state license law rests on the argument of income. Municipal licenses are granted for the sake of the few hundreds or thousands that will flow into the treasury. Does this greed for money look further, and count up the police business? The seventy-five per cent. duty on whisky. These are sure, regular and large incomes, which employ many persons. Do the questions of health, rents, transportation and crime, however, come into the account? Still money is the object. No man does this business to gratify appetite. Money moves and controls.

The liquor traffic is a business to be carried from the grand saloon to the lowest dive.

Does it pay anywhere along the line? The honesty and integrity of the dealer. Saloon keepers the early and in debt. Of fifty rummellers reported 10 years ago by a merchant, who knew them all, 47 had become bankrupts, and 10 had died. The rest had gone to jail, and were now in the hands of the law. Within ten years one of these also became bankrupt. These were days of pure rum, gin, brandy and whisky, but the business did not pay. Wholesale and distillers shared in the wrong. There are now in the whole line of the whisky trade, and a man must invest in something else if he is to get out of the whisky trade. There
