REVIEW OF MARCH.

The overshadowing events during March were the death of J. P. Morgan and the change of Administration. Next to these were several others, chief among which may be mentioned the developments abroad in connection with the war in the Balkan regions, and very disastrous floods and storms in the United States. The death of Mr. Morgan occurred on the very last day of the month and brought extraordinary tributes of respect and admiration, together with recognition of his massive genius and commanding influence in the financial world, the like of which have probably never been paid to any other individual in the world's history, except military and political heroes. But the event was without disturbing influence in financial circles or on the Stock Exchange. This was due in the main to the fact that Mr. Morgan's affairs were in excellent shape and that he had made full provision for his passing away. The event was unexpected and therefore was a great shock, yet it had been known for some weeks that he had been seriously ill.

Mr. Morgan died in Rome, Italy. The fact that he was in a critical condition was not made public until Sunday, March 30, but the public was aware that he had suffered a sharp attack of indigestion in February while traveling up the Nile from Cairo. Because of this attack he was forced to return to Cairo, where he remained until March 10. He then proceeded to Italy, arriving at Naples March 13, going thence to Rome. On Easter Sunday (March 23) he attended services at the American Protestant Episcopal Church, but immediately thereafter was forced to go to bed and his strength ebbed away rapidly. The end came slightly after midday on Monday, March 31—that is, at 12:05 o'clock, equal to 6:15 a. m. New York time. The physicians said his nervous energy had become utterly exhausted and the Pujo money investigation is generally ascribed as the cause. He was on the witness stand part of one day and the whole of another day, and though he apparently stood the ordeal well, and gave a splendid display of mental and moral vigor, in defense of his character and name, the strain was of a kind and character such as few men even forty years younger would have been able to endure; and for a man nearly seventy-six years of age it proved too much to bear. It sapped his nervous energy and this in turn impaired his digestive organs. It appears he was far from well when he left New York for the Mediterranean on Jan. 7.

The change of Administration was of course a matter of momentous importance. President Woodrow Wilson's inaugural was pitched in a high moral key and was generally commended for its literary qualities, but could hardly be considered reassuring. It was evident from what the President said that he felt he had received a commission to bring about an industrial and economic revolution. He said: "No one can mistake the purpose for which the nation now seeks to use the Democratic Party. It seeks to use it to interpret a change in its own plans and point of view. . . . Our duty is to cleanse, to reconsider, to restore, to correct the evil without impairing the good; to purify and humanize every process of our common life without weakening or sentimentalizing it." He spoke with religious fervor, saying: "Men's hearts wait upon us; men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do." His indictment is found in the following statement: "We have been proud of our industrial achievements, but we have not hitherto stopped thoughtfully enough to count the human cost, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly the years through. The groans and agony of it all has not yet reached our ears, the solemn, moving undertone of our life, coming up out of the mines and factories and out of every home where the struggle had its intimate and familiar seat." As to currency reform, Mr. Wilson was rather vague, but he spoke of the country's customs system as "a tariff which cuts us off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation, and makes the Government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests."

He also hinted at changes in other directions and made reference to "an industrial system which, take it on all its sides, financial as well as administrative, holds capital in leading strings, restricts the liberties and limits the opportunities of labor, and exploits without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country." The Cabinet, too, was of a radical type. With the possible exception of William G. McAdoo, the Secretary of the Treasury, there is, it seems, scarcely a man in it likely to call a halt upon extreme ventures of any kind. William J. Bryan was made Secretary of State; James C. McReynolds, formerly Mr. Wickersham's right-hand man, was made Attorney-General; Franklin K. Lane was taken from the Inter-State Commerce Commission and made Secretary of the Interior, while Albert S. Burleson, who had been active in Congress in urging legislation against the Stock and Produce Exchanges, was made Postmaster-General.

An important step by Mr. Wilson was the announcement of a change of policy in the Government's attitude towards the Chinese loan. When the new Administration came into office a committee of bankers, representing the American Banking Syndicate, called upon William J. Bryan, Secretary of State, and notified him that, at the request of the previous Administration they, had undertaken to participate in a loan of about $125,000,000 to the Government of China by the Six Nation Group. They stated that the Taft Administration asked American participation in the loan because it desired that the good-will of the United States towards China should be exhibited in this practical way; that American capital should have access to that great country and that the United States should be in a position to share with the other Powers any political responsibilities that might be associated with the development of the foreign relations of China in connection with her industrial and commercial enterprises. Mr. Bryan was informed that the American bankers would withdraw from connection with the proposed loan unless the new Administration also desired that they should continue participation. President Wilson promptly reversed the policy of his predecessor and stated that the new Administration did not approve the conditions of the loan or the implications and responsibility on its own part which it was plainly told would be involved in the request.

With reference to the developments in Europe, much uneasiness was felt because of the policy of military expansion pursued by Germany, France, Russia and Austria. There were also financial apprehensions, owing to the monetary strain which Germany would incur on the occasion of the quarterly settlements at the end of March. As a result of this situation, there were large engagements of gold at New York for export. The first half of the month a quite general fear pervaded European financial centres lest a crisis involving the greater European Powers should arise as soon as peace between Turkey and the Balkan League should be definitely concluded. The basis for this fear were suggestions that Russia's ambition might induce her to take a forward step in her well-known desire to acquire Constantinople. In London, on March 10 and March 11, there was such depression that usually conservative correspondents spoke of it as a semi-panic, though this was apparently an exaggeration. In Berlin, on March 11 (the Berlin Bourse having been closed on March 10 to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the deliverance from Napoleonic rule) the opening of business was attended by many spectacular declines, though for some of these special causes existed apart from apprehensions regarding the monetary strain and the fears of adverse developments. The latter part of the month, fortunately, a decided change for the better occurred as it became evident that no serious financial crisis would develop in Germany, because of the extensive preparations made beforehand for the settlement.

Very large gold engagements for export were the feature of the foreign exchange market during the month; $6,135,000 ($2,000,000 being for Paris, $500,000 for Berlin, $200,000 for Brussels and $3,435,000 for the Argentine Republic) were taken the first week, $5,050,000 ($4,000,000 going to Paris, $950,000 to Germany and $100,000 to Venezuela) the second week, and $6,000,000 (all for Paris) the third week. The last week only a small amount went—$100,000 for Venezuela and $300,000 for Canada. With continued firmness in money abroad, sterling exchange early in the month reached a point where rates were very close to the basis at which it was figured gold could be exported as a routine exchange operation. The engagements for Europe, however, were all looked upon as special transactions, and they continued even after exchange rates declined; France and Germany evidently buying the gold and assuming the loss in exchange. Demand bills and cable transfers were relatively firmer than 60-day bills, indicating an active demand for remittance. The latter part of the month, the large gold exports began to have their effect, and with easier conditions at the European centres, resulting from the completion of preparations for the April settlements, the demand for remittances moderated and exchange rates dropped to a lower level.

Money rates ruled distinctly higher both on time and on call, owing to the large gold exports and the demand for the first of April payments.

loss of life, the great destruction of property and the interruption of railroad communication, were a further adverse influence. The market then, however, was enjoying an upward reaction, in part apparently as a result of a small campaign against the shorts.
