conjuratio (kon-juu-ray-shee-oh). [Latin] CONJURATION.

CONJURATION

conjuration (kon-j<<schwa>>-ray-sh<<schwa>>n). Hist. 1. A plot or compact made by persons who swear to each other to do something that will result in public harm. 2. The offense of attempting a conference with evil spirits to discover some secret or effect some purpose; witchcraft; sorcery.

“Coniuration (coniuratio) is the very French word drawne from the latine, which as it is compounded of (con & iuro) so it signifieth a compact or plot, made by men combining themselves together by oath or promise, to do some publique harme. But in our common lawe, it is especially used for such as have personall conference with the devill or evill spirit, to know any secret, or to effect any purpose. And the difference that I have observed (how truly let those judge that be beter skilled in these maters) betweene coniuration and witchcraft, is because the one seemeth, by prayers and invocation of Gods powerfull names, to compell the devill, to say or doe what he com-mandeth him: the other dealeth rather by a friendly and voluntarie conference or agreement betweene him or her and the devill or familiar, to have her or his desires and turnes served in lieu of blood, or other gift offered unto him, especially of his or her soule.” John Cowell, The Interpreter (1607).

CONJURATOR

conjurator (kon-j<<schwa>>-ray-t<<schwa>>r). Hist. A person who swears an oath with others; a coconspirator.

CON MAN

con man. See CONFIDENCE MAN.

CONNECTING FACTOR

connecting factor. Conflict of laws. A factual or legal circumstance that helps determine the choice of law by linking an action or individual with a state or jurisdiction. • An example of a connecting factor is a party's domicile within a state. See POINT OF ATTACHMENT. [Cases: Action 17. C.J.S. Actions §§ 18–20; Conflict of Laws §§ 2–3, 12,15, 20, 23, 27–32, 34–40, 42–48, 50–65, 96–97, 100, 102, 105–107.]

CONNECTING-UP DOCTRINE

connecting-up doctrine.The rule allowing evidence to be conditionally admitted if the offering party promises to show relevance by adducing other evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 672; Federal Civil Procedure 2014; Trial 51. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1217; Trial § 177.]

connexity (k<<schwa>>-nek-s<<schwa>>-tee). Connectedness; the quality of being connected. • In some states, connexity expresses the relationship that must exist between a foreign party (such as a corporation) and the state for a plaintiff to maintain personal jurisdiction over the party; generally, the claim must arise from a transaction connected with the activities of the party in the state.

CONNIVANCE

connivance (k<<schwa>>-nI-v<<schwa>>-nts), n.1. The act of indulging or ignoring another's wrongdoing, esp. when action should be taken to prevent it. 2.Family law. As a defense to divorce, one spouse's corrupt consent, express or implied, to have the other commit adultery or some other act of sexual misconduct. • Consent is an essential element of connivance. The complaining spouse must have consented to the act complained of. [Cases: Divorce 45. C.J.S. Divorce § 85.] Cf. COLLUSION(2); CONDONATION (2); RECRIMINATION. — connive (k<<schwa>>-nIv), vb.

CONNIVE

connive (k<<schwa>>-nIv), vb.1. To knowingly overlook another's wrongdoing. 2. Loosely, to conspire.

CONNUBIUM

CONQUEROR

conqueror,n.[fr. Law French conquerir “to acquire”] Hist. 1.One who acquires territory by force during war with the intention of exercising sovereignty. See CONQUEST(1).2. The first person who acquired land by purchase; one who first brought an estate into a family. See CONQUEST(2); PURCHASE(2).

conqueror,vb.[Latin] To complain. • Conqueror served as a declaratory statement in petitions, often by intro- ducing the complaint: Conqueror quod.... (“I complain that”).

conquest. 1.Int'l law. An act of force by which, during a war, a belligerent occupies territory within an enemy country with the intention of extending its sovereignty over that territory. • That intention is usu. explained in a proclamation or some other legal act. 2.Hist. The acquisition of land by any method other than descent, esp. by purchase. 3.Hist. The land so acquired. Cf. PURCHASE(2).

“What we call purchase, perquisitio, the feudists called conquest, conquaestus, or conquisitio: both denoting any means of acquiring an estate out of the common course of inheritance. And this is still the proper phrase in the law of Scotland: as it was, among the Norman jurists, who stiled the first purchaser (that is, he who first brought the estate into the family which at present owns it) the conqueror or conquereur. Which seems to be all that was meant by the appellation which was given to William the Norman, when his manner of ascending the throne of England was, in his own and his successors' charters, and by the historians of the times, entitled conquaestus, and himself conquaestor or conquisitor; signifying, that he was the first of his family who acquired the crown of England, and from whom therefore all future claims by descent must be derived: though now, from our disuse of the feudal sense of the word, together with the reflection on his forcible method of acquisition, we are apt to annex the idea of victory to this name of conquest or conquisition; a title which, however just with regard to the crown, the conqueror never pretended with regard to the realm of England; nor, in fact, ever had.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 242–43 (1766).

conquet. See ACQUET(1).

CONQUISITIO

conquisitio (k<<schwa>>n- or k<<schwa>>ng-kwi-zish-ee-oh). [Latin “search”] See CONQUEST(2). — Also termed conquisition.

CONQUISITOR

conquisitor (k<<schwa>>n- or k<<schwa>>ng-kwiz-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin “one who searches”] See CONQUEROR(1).

CONSANGUINE BROTHER

consanguine brother. See BROTHER.

CONSANGUINEO

consanguineo. See COSINAGE.

CONSANGUINE SISTER

consanguine sister. See SISTER.

CONSANGUINEUS

consanguineus (kon-sang-gwin-ee-<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin “related by blood”] Hist. A person related to another by blood; a consanguineous relative.

CONSANGUINEUS FRATER

consanguineus frater (kon-sang-gwin-ee-*<<schwa>>s fray-t<<schwa>>*r). [Latin “blood brother”] Hist. A half-brother by the same father.

CONSANGUINEUS UTERINUS

consanguineus uterinus (kon-sang-gwin-ee-*<<schwa>>s yoo-t<<schwa>>-rI-n<<schwa>>*s). [Latin “blood relative by the uterus”] Hist. A half-sibling by the same mother.

CONSANGUINITAS

consanguinitas (kon-sang-gwin-<<schwa>>-tas), n. [Latin “relationship by blood”] Roman law. The relationship between siblings who have the same father.

CONSANGUINITY

consanguinity (kon-sang-gwin-<<schwa>>-tee), n. The relationship of persons of the same blood or origin. See prohibited degree under DEGREE. Cf. AFFINITY; AFFINITAS AFFINITATIS. [Cases: Incest 5; Marriage 10. C.J.S. Incest § 4; Marriage § 17.] — consanguineous,adj.

“In the mode of computing the degrees of consanguinity, the civil law ... begins with the intestate, and descends from that ancestor to the next heir, reckoning for each person, as well in the ascending as descending lines. According to this rule of computation, the father of the intestate stands in the first degree, his brother in the second, and his brother's children in the third. Or, the grandfather stands in the second degree, the uncle in the third, the cousins in the fourth, and so on in a series of genealogical order. In the canon law, which is also the rule of the common law, in tracing title by descent, the common ancestor is the terminus a quo. The several degrees of kinship are deduced from him. By this method, the brother of A is related to him in the first degree instead of being in the second ... for he is but one degree removed from the common ancestor. The uncle is related to A in the second degree, for though the uncle be but one degree from the common ancestor, yet A is removed two degrees from the grandfather, who is the common ancestor.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *412–13 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

collateral consanguinity.The relationship between persons who have the same ancestor but do not descend or ascend from one another (for example, uncle and nephew, cousins, etc.).

lineal consanguinity.The relationship between persons who are directly descended or ascended from one another (for example, mother and daughter, great-grandfather and grandson, etc.).

CONSCIENCE

conscience. 1. The moral sense of right or wrong; esp., a moral sense applied to one's own judgment and actions. 2. In law, the moral rule that requires justice and honest dealings between people.

conscience clause. A legislative provision that allows a person to claim an exemption from compliance, usu. on religious-freedom grounds.

CONSCIENCE OF THE COURT

conscience of the court. 1. The court's equitable power to decide issues based on notions of fairness and justice. See EQUITY(4). 2. A standard applied by the court in deciding whether a party or a jury has acted within acceptable limits. • Thus, in some cases, a jury's award of damages is upset because it is said to “shock the conscience of the court.” See SHOCK THE CONSCIENCE.

CONSCIENTIA ILLAESA

conscientia illaesa (kon-s[h]ee-en-shee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩ i-lee-s⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩ or -z⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩). [Latin] Hist. An un-violated conscience; good faith.

CONSCIENTIA REI ALIENAE conscientia rei alienae (kon-s[h]ee-en-shee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩ ree-I ay-lee-ee-nee or al-ee-). [Law Latin] Scots law. The knowledge that property held by one person actually belongs to another.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR conscientious objector. A person who for moral or religious reasons is opposed to participating in any war, and who may be excused from military conscription but remains subject to serving in civil work for the nation's health, safety, or interest. See 50 USCA § 456. Cf. PACIFIST. [Cases: Armed Services 20.6(3). C.J.S. Armed Services §§ 56–59.]

conscionable (kon-sh⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-n⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-b⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩l), adj. Conforming with good conscience; just and reasonable . Cf. UNCONSCIONABLE. — conscionableness, conscionability, n.

CONSCIOUSLY PARALLEL

consciously parallel. Antitrust. Of, relating to, or characterizing the conduct of a party who has knowledge of a competitor's action (such as raising prices) and who makes an independent decision to take the same action. • In some cases this is viewed as evidence of a conspiracy.

CONSCIOUS PARALLELISM conscious parallelism. Antitrust. An act of two or more businesses in a concentrated market intentionally en-gaging in monopolistic conduct. — Also termed tacit collusion; oligopolistic price coordination.

CONSCIOUS-PRESENCE TEST

conscious-presence test. A method for judging whether a testator is in the presence of a witness to a will, whereby if the testator can sense the presence of the witness — even if the witness cannot be seen — the witness is present. Restatement (Third) of Property: Wills and Other Donative Transfers § 3.1 (1999). — Also termed conscious presence. See PRESENCE-OF-THE-TESTATOR RULE E.

CONSCIUS FRAUDIS

consciis fraudis (kon-s[h]ee-<<schwa>>s fraw-dis). [Latin] See PARTICEPS FRAUDIS .

CONSCRIPTION

CONSECRATIO CAPITIS

consecratio capitis (kon-s<<schwa>>-kray-shee-oh kap-i-tis). [Latin “consecrating the body”] Roman law. The act of declaring a wrongdoer an outlaw who could be killed on sight; the punishing of criminal behavior by re-legating an offender to the gods, i.e., leaving the person outside divine and human protection. See SACER; OUTLAWRY.

CONSECUTIVE SENTENCES

consecutive sentences. See SENTENCE.

CONSECUTIVE TORTFEASORS consecutive tortfeasors. See TORTFEASOR.

CONSENSUAL

consensual (k<<schwa>>n-sen-shoo-<<schwa>>l), adj. 1. Having, expressing, or occurring with full consent <consensual relations>. 2. Created or existing by mutual consent without formalities such as a written document or ceremony < consensual marriage>. — Also termed consentaneous; consentient.

CONSENSUAL CONTRACT

consensual contract. See CONTRACT.

CONSENSUAL CRIME

consensual crime. See victimless crime under CRIME.

CONSENSUAL MARRIAGE

consensual marriage. See MARRIAGE(1).

CONSENSUAL SEARCH

consensual search. See consent search under SEARCH.

CONSENSUS

consensus. A general agreement; collective opinion. See general consent under CONSENT(2).

“The regular method for the chair to use is to ask the members, ‘Is it the consensus of this meeting that ... is agreed to?’ or, ‘Is it the will of the assembly that ... is agreed to?’ or, ‘Is there an objection?’ Consensus has been used successfully throughout the years by Quakers, Indians, New England town meetings, and others as a decision-making procedure. It permits compromise. In small groups where less formality is required, it is a simple method for making decisions.

“General consent is an equivalent to consensus, when done without objection. Otherwise, a formal vote must be taken.” Floyd M. Riddick & Miriam H. Butcher, Riddick's Rules of Procedure 56 (1985).

consensus ad idem (k<<schwa>>n-sen-s<<schwa>>s ad I-dem). [Latin] An agreement of parties to the same thing; a meeting of minds. — Also termed consensus in idem; consensus in idem, placitum et conventio.

“Agreement between the parties or consensus in idem is the basis of contractual obligation” 2 David M. Walker, Principles of Scottish Private Law 11 (4th ed. 1988).

consent, n.1. Agreement, approval, or permission as to some act or purpose, esp. given voluntarily by a competent person; legally effective assent. • Consent is an affirmative defense to assault, battery, and related torts, as well as such torts as defamation, invasion of privacy, conversion, and trespass. Consent may be a defense to a crime if the victim has the capacity to consent and if the consent negates an element of the crime or thwarts the harm that the law seeks to prevent. See Model Penal Code § 2.11.

blank consent. See BLANK CONSENT.

express consent. Consent that is clearly and unmistakably stated.

implied consent. 1. Consent inferred from one's conduct rather than from one's direct expression. — Also termed implied permission. 2. Consent imputed as a result of circumstances that arise, as when a surgeon removing a gallbladder discovers and removes colon cancer.

informed consent. 1. A person's agreement to allow something to happen, made with full knowledge of the risks involved and the alternatives. • For the legal profession, informed consent is defined in Model Rule of Professional Conduct 1.0(e).2. A patient's knowing choice about a medical treatment or procedure, made after a physician or other healthcare provider discloses whatever information a reasonably prudent provider in the medical community would give to a patient regarding the risks involved in the proposed treatment or procedure. — Also termed knowing consent. [Cases: Health 906.]

voluntary consent. Consent that is given freely and that has not been coerced.

2. Parliamentary law. ADOPTION(5). — consent, vb. — consensual, adj.

general consent. 1. Adoption without objection, regardless of whether every voter affirmatively approves. 2. See unanimous consent (1).

unanimous consent. 1. Adoption with every voter's approval. 2. See general consent (1). • The terms “general consent” and “unanimous consent” have distinct but interchangeable meanings. Some parliamentary manuals treat them as synonymous; others distinguish them; and still others distinguish them, but in exactly the opposite way.

“ ‘Unanimous consent’ does not necessarily imply that every member is in favor of the proposed action; it may only mean that the opposition, feeling that it is useless to oppose or discuss the matter, simply acquiesces.” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 4, at 52 (10th ed. 2001).

CONSENT AGENDA

consent calendar. 1. Family law. A schedule of informal hearings involving a child, usu. arranged when it appears that the child's best interests will be served if the case is heard informally. • The child and all interested parties must first consent before the case goes on the consent calendar. [Cases: Infants 203. C.J.S. Infants §§ 51–52, 62, 64–67.] 2. CALENDAR(4).

CONSENT CLAUSE

consent clause.See AUTHORIZATION CLAUSE.

CONSENT DECREE

CONSEQUENTIAL ECONOMIC LOSS

consequential economic loss.See ECONOMIC LOSS.

CONSEQUENTIAL INJURY

consequential injury.See consequential loss under LOSS.

CONSEQUENTIALISM

consequentialism.Ethics. An ethical theory that judges the rightness or wrongness of actions according to their consequences. • One of the best-known types of consequentialism is utilitarianism. See UTILITARIANISM. Cf. VIRTUE ETHICS .

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS

consequential loss.See LOSS.

CONSERVATION

conservation.Environmental law. The supervision, management, and maintenance of natural resources; the protection, improvement, and use of natural resources in a way that ensures the highest social as well as economic benefits. [Cases: Environmental Law 31–51.]

conservator (k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>r-v<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r orkon-s<<schwa>>r-vay-t<<schwa>>r), n. A guardian, protector, or preserver. • Conservator is the modern equivalent of the common-law guardian. Judicial appointment and supervision are still required, but a conservator has far more flexible authority than a guardian, including the same investment powers that a trustee enjoys. The Uniform Probate Code uses the term conservator, and Article 5 is representative of modern conservatorship laws. — conservatorship,n.

managing conservator. 1. A person appointed by a court to manage the estate or affairs of someone who is legally incapable of doing so; GUARDIAN(1). [Cases: Guardian and Ward 1.] 2. In the child-custody laws of some states, the parent who has primary custody of a child, with the right to establish the child's primary domicile. See CUSTODY. [Cases: Child Custody 28.]

possessory conservator.See noncustodial parent under PARENT.

CONSERVATOR OF THE PEACE

conservator of the peace.See PEACE OFFICER.

CONSERVE

conserve,vb.1. To take care of; to care for. 2. To protect from change, destruction, or depletion. 3. To reduce or minimize the use of.

CONSIDERATION

consideration,n.1. Something (such as an act, a forbearance, or a return promise) bargained for and received by a promisor from a promisee; that which motivates a person to do something, esp. to engage in a legal act. • Consideration, or a substitute such as promissory estoppel, is necessary for an agreement to be enforceable. See Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 81 (1979). [Cases: Contracts 49. C.J.S. Contracts § 87.]

by the plaintiff, however small the detriment or inconvenience may be, if such act is performed, or inconvenience suffered by the plaintiff with the assent, express or implied, of the defendant, or, in the language of pleading, at the special instance and request of the defendant.' ” Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 286 (13th ed. 1924).

“A consideration in its widest sense is the reason, motive, or inducement, by which a man is moved to bind himself by an agreement. It is not for nothing that he consents to impose an obligation upon himself, or to abandon or transfer a right. It is in consideration of such and such a fact that he agrees to bear new burdens or to forgo the benefits which the law already allows him.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 359 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“The word ‘consideration’ has been around for a long time, so it is tempting to think we have had a theory of consideration for a long time. In fact until the nineteenth century the word never acquired any particular meaning or stood for any theory.” Grant Gilmore, The Death of Contract 18 (1974).

“In the late fifteenth and early sixteenth centuries the word ‘consideration’ was very familiar to lawyers, and although it had not yet acquired a special legal meaning (and indeed was not to do so during the period under discussion) it had already begun to develop legal associations. Most commonly it was used in statutes.... In the statutes of Henry VI it became quite common for the draftsman, after he had rehearsed the circumstances to introduce the enacting part with a clause in the following (or similar) form: ‘The King, considering the premisses, of the Assent and Request aforesaid, hath ordained and established’ In the course of time the matters which were considered, and to which consideration was given, came themselves to be called ‘the considerations.’ [By the late 15th century] the considerations were the matters considered; they were the factors which Parliament or the King was supposed to have had in mind in legislating, and which moved or motivated the enactment. Loosely the word could be treated as synonymous with ‘cause,’ and both in statutes and elsewhere causes and considerations were often mentioned in the same breath. But ‘cause’ does not mean exactly the same thing as ‘consideration’; it lacks the suggestion of what was in the mind, what was considered, what motivated.” A.W.B. Simpson, Legal Theory and Legal History 332 (1987).

adequate consideration. Consideration that is fair and reasonable under the circumstances of the agreement. Cf. sufficient consideration. [Cases: Contracts 53–54. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 87, 131–132.]

“It is helpful to observe precision in use of vocabulary when analyzing consideration issues. Distinguish carefully between ‘adequate’ consideration and ‘sufficient’ consideration. ‘Adequacy’ refers to whether there was a fair bargain involving an exchange of equal values. ‘Sufficiency’ refers to whether the consideration is legally sufficient to enforce a promise, and this requires only that there be some legal detriment incurred as a bargained exchange for the other party’s promise.” Claude Rohwer & Gordon D. Schaber, Contracts in a Nutshell 83 (4th ed. 1997).

“Although courts have not lost the habit of speaking of an ‘adequate,’ a ‘sufficient,’ or a ‘valuable’ consideration, the bargain test as epitomized in the Restatement imposes no such additional requirement.” E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 2.11, at 69–70 (3d ed. 1999).

and other good and valuable consideration. See other consideration.

concurrent consideration. Consideration arising at the same time as other consideration, or where the promises are simultaneous. [Cases: Contracts 56. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 105–106.]

continuing consideration. An act or performance extending over time.

due consideration. See sufficient consideration.

executed consideration. A consideration that has been wholly given; past consideration as opposed to present or future consideration. [Cases: Contracts 78. C.J.S. Contracts § 92.]

executory consideration (eg-zek-y<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A consideration that is to be given only after formation of the contract; present or future consideration as opposed to past consideration.

express consideration. Consideration that is specifically stated in an instrument.

fair consideration. 1. Consideration that is roughly equal in value to the thing being exchanged; consideration given for property or for an obligation in either of the following circumstances: (1) when given in good faith as an exchange for the property or obligation, or (2) when the property or obligation is received in good faith to secure a present advance or prior debt in an amount not disproportionately small as compared with the value of the property or obligation obtained. — Also termed fair and valuable consideration. 2. Consideration that is honest, reasonable, and free from suspicion, but not strictly adequate or full.

future consideration. 1. Consideration to be given in the future; esp., consideration that is due after the other party's performance. 2. Consideration that is a series of performances, some of which will occur after the other party's performance. 3. Consideration the specifics of which have not been agreed on between the parties. Cf. past consideration.

good and valuable consideration. See valuable consideration.

good consideration. 1. Consideration based on natural love or affection or on moral duty <good consideration, being based purely on affection, does not amount to valuable consideration>. • Such consideration is usu. not valid for the enforcement of a contract. — Also termed meritorious consideration; moral consideration. [Cases: Contracts 76–77. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 102–103, 127, 130.]

“Stated simply, good or meritorious consideration is nothing more than motive or moral obligation.” 3 Richard A. Lord, Williston on Contracts § 7:16, at 325–26 (4th ed. 1992).

2. Loosely, valuable consideration; consideration that is adequate to support the bargained-for exchange between the parties <his agreement to pay the offering price was good consideration for the sale>. [Cases: Contracts 49. C.J.S. Contracts § 87.]

gratuitous consideration (gr<<schwa>>-t[y]oo-i-t<<schwa>>s). Consideration that, not being founded on any detriment to the party who gives it, will not support a contract; a performance for which a party was already obligated.

grossly inadequate consideration. Consideration whose value is so much less than the fair value of the object acquired that it may not support finding that the transaction is a valid exchange. • Depending on the surrounding circumstances, the transaction may actually be fraud, a gift, or something else other than a sale and purchase.

illegal consideration. Consideration that is contrary to the law or public policy, or prejudicial to the public interest. • Such consideration does not support a contract. [Cases: Contracts 103. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 195–200, 213–214.]

immoral consideration. A consideration that so offends societal norms as to be invalid. • A contract supported by immoral consideration is usu. voidable or unenforceable. — Also termed turpis causa. [Cases: Contracts 112. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 275–276.]

implied consideration. Consideration that is inferred by law from the parties' actions.

impossible consideration. Consideration stemming from a promise or performance that cannot be fulfilled. [Cases: Contracts 80. C.J.S. Contracts § 106.]

inadequate consideration. Consideration that is not fair or reasonable under the circumstances of the agreement. Cf. adequate consideration. [Cases: Contracts 53–54. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 87, 131–132.]

invented consideration. Fictional consideration created by a court to prevent the invalidation of a contract that lacks consideration.

legally sufficient consideration. See sufficient consideration.

meritorious consideration. See good consideration.

moral consideration. See good consideration.

nominal consideration. Consideration that is so insignificant as to bear no relationship to the value of what is being exchanged (e.g., $10 for a piece of real estate). • Such consideration can be valid, since courts do not ordinarily examine the adequacy of consideration (although they do often inquire into such issues as fraud and duress). — Also termed peppercorn. [Cases: Contracts 53–54. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 87, 131–132.]

involving much larger sums. But gross disproportion between the payment and the value of the option commonly indicates that the payment was not in fact bargained for but was a mere formality or pretense. In such a case there is no consideration Nevertheless, such a nominal consideration is regularly held sufficient to support a short-time option proposing an exchange on fair terms. The fact that the option is an appropriate preliminary step in the conclusion of a socially useful transaction provides a sufficient substantive basis for enforcement, and a signed writing taking a form appropriate to a bargain satisfies the desiderata of form. In the absence of statute, however, the bargaining form is essential: a payment of one dollar by each party to the other is so obviously not a bargaining transaction that it does not provide even the form of an exchange.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 87 cmt. b (1979).

other consideration. Additional things of value to be provided under the terms of a contract, usu. unspecified in the contract, deed, or bill of sale, because they are too numerous to conveniently list, or to avoid public knowledge of the total amount of consideration. — Also termed other good and valuable consideration.

past consideration. An act done or a promise given by a promisee before making a promise sought to be enforced. • Past consideration is not consideration for the new promise because it has not been given in exchange for this promise (although exceptions exist for new promises to pay debts barred by limitations or debts discharged in bankruptcy). See PREEXISTING-DUTY RULE. Cf. future consideration. [Cases: Contracts 79. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 125–126, 128–130.]

“A past consideration is, in effect, no consideration at all; that is to say, it confers no benefit on the promisor, and involves no detriment to the promisee in respect of his promise. It is some act or forbearance in time past by which a man has benefited without thereby incurring any legal liability.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 149 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

sufficient consideration. Enough consideration as a matter of law to support a contract. — Also termed due consideration; legally sufficient consideration. Cf. adequate consideration. [Cases: Contracts 54. C.J.S. Contracts § 87.]

valuable consideration. Consideration that is valid under the law; consideration that either confers a pecuniarily measurable benefit on one party or imposes a pecuniarily measurable detriment on the other. — Also termed good and valuable consideration; legal consideration. [Cases: Contracts 49. C.J.S. Contracts § 87.]

“By a valuable consideration is meant something of value given or promised by one party in exchange for the promise of the other.... The thing thus given by way of consideration must be of some value. That is to say, it must be material to the interests of one or the other or both of the parties. It must either involve some gain or benefit to the promisor by way of recompense for the burden of his promise, or it must involve some loss or disadvantage to the promisee for which the benefit of the promise is a recompense." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 360 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

2.Parliamentary law. The process by which a deliberative assembly disposes of a motion; DELIBERATION. • Consideration begins with a member making a motion and the chair stating the question on the motion; it ends with the chair putting the question on the motion (or on a subsidiary motion that disposes of the first motion). It also includes debate and may also include (among other things) amendment and referral to a committee.

consideration by paragraph.See consideration seriatim.

consideration seriatim.Consideration serially, whereby a deliberative assembly considers a long or complex motion in a series of readily divisible parts before voting on the entire motion. — Also termed consideration by paragraph (in which case a "paragraph" means not a literary paragraph but any readily divisible part of a motion, which may include more than one literary paragraph); serial consideration.

"When a proposition, motion or resolution has many parts (paragraphs, sections, or clauses), or many articles (as a set of bylaws which is up for revision or amendment), it is best and most prudent that no vote be taken on each separate part. Instead, a single vote covering all its parts should be taken after each of them has been duly con-sidered, amended, and perfected. Seriatim (Lat.) literally means 'serially,' and when applied to several or more parts of a parliamentary proposal or question it means consideration paragraph by paragraph or part by part.

"Hence, under the doctrine of consideration by paragraph, or seriatim, each part is discussed and may be amended and perfected to suit; then, without putting it to a vote for final adoption, the next part or paragraph is similarly open to discussion and amendment, but is not voted on for final adoption yet; and, in like manner, each additional part is perfected in turn until all the parts of a proposal have been considered." George Demeter, Demeter's Manual of Parliamentary Law and Procedure 146 (1969).informal consideration.Consideration without limit on how often a member may speak to the same question. • Informal consideration is substantially equivalent to consideration in committee of the whole or quasi-committee of the whole, without the fiction of the assembly resolving itself into a committee. See committee of the whole under COMMITTEE.

serial consideration.See consideration seriatim.

3.Hist. A court's judgment. — Also termed (in Roman law) consideratio.

CONSIDERATION, FAILURE OF consideration, failure of.See FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION.

CONSIDERATION, WANT OF consideration, want of.See WANT OF CONSIDERATION.

CONSIDERATUM EST PER CURIAM consideratum est per curiam (k<<schwa>>n-sid-<<schwa>>-ray-t<<schwa>>m est p<<schwa>>r kyoor-ee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. It is considered by the court. • This was the formal language preceding the judgment of a common-law court. — Sometimes shortened to consideratum est. Cf. IDEO CONSIDERATUM EST.

“A judgment is the decision or sentence of the law, given by a court of justice, as the result of proceedings instituted therein for the redress of an injury. The language of the judgment is not, therefore, that ‘it is decreed,’ or ‘resolved,’ by the court, but that ‘it is considered by the court,’ consideratum est per curiam, that the plaintiff recover his debt, etc. In the early writers, considerare, consideratio always means the judgment of a court.” 1 John Bouvier, Bouvier's Law-Dictionary 619 (8th ed. 1914).

consign (k<<schwa>>n-sIn), vb.1. To transfer to another's custody or charge. 2. To give (goods) to a carrier for delivery to a designated recipient. 3. To give (merchandise or the like) to another to sell, usu. with the understanding that the seller will pay the owner for the goods from the proceeds.

CONSIGNATION

consignation (kon-sig-nay-sh<<schwa>>n), n.1. A debtor's delivery of money to an authorized third party after the creditor refuses to accept the payment. • Unlike a tender, a valid consignation discharges the debtor. Cf. TENDER(1).2.CONSIGNMENT(1).

CONSIGNATOR

consignator (k<<schwa>>n-sig-n<<schwa>>-tor), n. A person authorized to accept delivery of money from a debtor if a creditor refuses to accept it. See CONSIGNATION.

CONSIGNEE

consignee (kon-sI-neeor k<<schwa>>n-). One to whom goods are consigned.

CONSIGNMENT

consignment (k<<schwa>>n-sIn-m<<schwa>>nt).1. The act of consigning goods for custody or sale. — Also termed (archaically) consignation. [Cases: Factors 5.] 2. A quantity of goods delivered by this act, esp. in a single shipment. 3. Under the UCC, a transaction in which a person delivers goods to a merchant for the purpose of sale, and (1) the merchant deals in goods of that kind under a name other than the name of the person making delivery, is not an auctioneer, and is not generally known by its creditor to be substantially engaged in selling others' goods, (2) with respect to each delivery, the aggregate value of the goods is $1,000 or more at the time of delivery, (3) the goods are not consumer goods immediately before delivery, and (4) the transaction does not create a security interest that secures an obligation. UCC § 9-102(a)(20).4. See bailment for sale under BAILMENT.

CONSIGNMENT SALE

consignment sale. See SALE.

CONSIGNOR

consignor (k<<schwa>>n-sI-n<<schwa>>r or kon-sI-nor). One who dispatches goods to another on consignment.

CONSILIARIUS

consiliarius (k<<schwa>>n-sil-ee-air-ee-<<schwa>>s), n. [fr. Latin consilium “advice”]
1. Roman law. A person who advises a magistrate; one who sits with the judge and assists in deciding cases. See CONCILIUM(1). 2. Hist. A counselor learned in law. See APOCRISARIUS.

CONSIMILI CASU

consimili casu. See CASU CONSIMILI.

CONSISTORIAL COURT

consistorial court. See CONSISTORY COURT.

CONSISTORIUM

consistorium (kon-sis-tor-ee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman law. In the later Empire, the emperor's privy council that functioned both as a general council of state and as a supreme court of law.

CONSISTORY COURT

consistory court (k<<schwa>>n-sis-t<<schwa>>r-ee). Eccles. law. In England, a diocesan court exercising jurisdiction over the clergy and church property, such as a cemetery, and other ecclesiastical matters. • Consistory courts are presided over by the bishop's chancellor or the chancellor's commissary. — Also termed consistorial court. Cf. BISHOP'S COURT.

consobrini (kon-s<<schwa>>-brI-nI), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. First cousins; children of brothers and sisters, or, more precisely, of two sisters.

CONSOL

consol (kon-sol or k<<schwa>>n-sol). See annuity bond under BOND(3).

CONSOLATO DEL MARE

Consolato del Mare (kawn-soh-lah-toh del mah-ray). [Italian “consulate of the sea”] Hist. Maritime law. An influential collection of European maritime customs, referred to by commercial judges (consuls) in ports of the kingdom of Aragon and other Mediterranean maritime towns. • The Consolato del Mare was compiled in the 14th century and soon became one of the leading maritime codes of Europe. It is widely believed to be a Spanish work, but some historians suggest that its origin is actually Italian. — Also written Consolat de Mar.

CONSOLIDATE

CONSOLIDATED OMNIBUS BUDGET RECONCILIATION ACT OF 1985

Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985. A federal statute requiring employers that offer group health coverage to their employees to continue to do so for a prescribed period (usu. 18 to 36 months) after employment has terminated so that the former employee can continue to benefit from group-health rates until becoming a member of another health-insurance plan. • The statute temporarily continues group coverage for a person no longer entitled to receive it, such as a terminated employee or an overage dependent. One of the “qualifying events” justifying the continuation of group-health-insurance benefits is divorce or legal separation. So COBRA often provides critical transitional coverage until a divorced spouse and children can arrange for new health insurance. The period of transitional coverage is up to 36 months, and an applicant spouse of the employee must make written application to the employer within 60 days of the separation or divorce. — Abbr. COBRA. [Cases: Pensions 21, 127.1. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits § 7.]

states Thus, COBRA was designed to fill this void, by providing a statutorily mandated mechanism for enabling terminated employees (and their eligible family members) to continue to have access to group health coverage at group rates until they can get another job or otherwise arrange for replacement coverage.” I.M. Golub et al., COBRA Handbook § 1.1, at 1–2 (1994).

CONSOLIDATION

consolidation, n. 1. The act or process of uniting; the state of being united. 2. Legislation. The combination into a single statutory measure of various legislative provisions that have previously been scattered in different statutes. 3. Civil procedure. The court-ordered unification of two or more actions, involving the same parties and issues, into a single action resulting in a single judgment or, sometimes, in separate judgments. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(a). — Also termed consolidation of actions. Cf. JOINDER; SEVERANCE(2). [Cases: Action 54–59; Federal Civil Procedure 8. C.J.S. Actions §§ 204–219.]

substantive consolidation. Bankruptcy. The merger of two or more bankruptcy cases, usually pending against the same debtor or related debtors, into one estate for purposes of distributing the assets, usually resulting in the two estates sharing assets and liabilities, and in the extinguishment of duplicate claims and claims between the debtors. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2084.]

consonant statement.See STATEMENT.

CONSORTIUM

consortium (k<<schwa>>n-sor-shee-<<schwa>>m).1. The benefits that one person, esp. a spouse, is entitled to receive from another, including companionship, cooperation, affection, aid, financial support, and (between spouses) sexual relations . See LOSS OF CONSORTIUM; CONJUGAL RIGHTS .

filial consortium (fil-ee-<<schwa>>l). A child's society, affection, and companionship given to a parent. [Cases: Parent and Child 7. C.J.S. Parent and Child § 329.]

parental consortium.A parent's society, affection, and companionship given to a child. [Cases: Parent and Child 7.5.]

spousal consortium.A spouse's society, affection, and companionship given to the other spouse. [Cases: Husband and Wife 209(3, 4).]

2.Hist. The services of a wife or daughter, the loss of which gives rise to a cause of action. • A husband could, for example, bring an action against a person who had injured his wife, “whereby he lost the help or companionship (of his wife)” (per quod consortium amisit).3. A group of companies that join or associate in an enterprise <several high-tech businesses formed a consortium to create a new supercomputer>.4.Roman law. A community of undivided goods existing among coheirs after the death of the head of their family (paterfamilias). Pl. consor-tiums, consortia.

CONSORTIUM VITAE

consortium vitae (k<<schwa>>n-sor-shee-<<schwa>>m vI-tee). [Law Latin] Hist. Cohabitation; the agreement between two parties to live together.

CONSORTSHIP

consortship (kon-sort-ship).Maritime law. An agreement by which salvors agree to work together to salvage wrecks, the recovery being apportioned among the salvors. • Consortships reduce interference among competing salvors and help prevent collisions at sea between operators attempting to salvage the same wreck.

CONSPICUOUS

conspicuous,adj. (Of a term or clause) clearly visible or obvious. • Whether a printed clause is conspicuous as a matter of law usu. depends on the size and style of the typeface. Under the UCC, a term or clause is conspicuous if it is written in a way that a reasonable person against whom it is to operate ought to notice it. UCC § 1-201(b)(10). See FINE PRINT. [Cases: Sales 267. C.J.S. Sales §§ 238, 263–270.]

CONSPICUOUS PLACE

conspicuous place.For purposes of posting notices, a location that is reasonably likely to be seen.

CONSPIRACY

conspiracy,n. An agreement by two or more persons to commit an unlawful act, coupled with an intent to achieve the agreement's objective, and (in most states) action or conduct that furthers the agreement; a combination for an unlawful purpose. 18 USCA § 371. • Conspiracy is a separate offense from the crime that is the object of the conspiracy. A conspiracy ends when the unlawful act has been committed or (in some states) when the agreement has been abandoned. A conspiracy does not automatically end if the conspiracy's object is defeated. See Model Penal Code § 5.03(7); United States v. Jimenez Recio, 537 U.S. 270, 123 S.Ct. 819 (2003). — Also termed criminal conspiracy. Cf. ATTEMPT(2); SOLICITATION(2). [Cases: Conspiracy 1.1, 23.1. C.J.S. Conspiracy §§ 2–3, 8, 14–17, 98, 100–103, 110.] — conspiratorial,adj.

“Conspiracie (conspiratio) though both in Latine and French it be used for an agreement of men, to doe any thing either good or bad: yet in our lawyers bookes, it is alway taken in the evill part.” John Cowell, The Interpreter (1607).

“[Conspiracy is an] elastic, sprawling and pervasive offense, ... so vague that it almost defies definition. Despite certain elementary and essential elements, it also, chameleon-like, takes on a special coloration from each of the many independent offenses on which it may be overlaid. It is always ‘predominantly mental in composition’ because it consists primarily of a meeting of minds and an intent.” Krulewitch v. United States, 336 U.S. 440, 445–48, 69 S.Ct. 716, 719–20 (1949)(Jackson, J., concurring).

“When two or more persons combine for the purpose of inflicting upon another person an injury which is unlawful in itself, or which is rendered unlawful by the mode in which it is inflicted, and in either case the other person suffers damage, they commit the tort of conspiracy.” P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 128, at 434 (5th ed. 1950).

bathtub conspiracy. See intra-enterprise conspiracy.

chain conspiracy. A single conspiracy in which each person is responsible for a distinct act within the overall plan, such as an agreement to produce, import, and distribute narcotics in which each person performs only one function. • All participants are interested in the overall scheme and liable for all other participants' acts in furtherance of that scheme. [Cases: Conspiracy 24(3). C.J.S. Conspiracy §§ 117–118.]

“In a ‘chain’ conspiracy, the court looks to whether the parties serve as links in a chain. In Blumenthal v. United States (1947), the Supreme Court found that the parties had agreed to sell liquor at prices exceeding the ceiling set by regulations of the Office of Price Administration. The Court found that the agreements were steps in the formulation of one larger general conspiracy. By reason of all having knowledge of the plan's general scope and common end, the disposing of whiskey, they could be drawn together in a single conspiracy.” Ellen S. Podgor & Jerold H. Israel, White Collar Crime in a Nutshell 52 (2d ed. 1997).

circle conspiracy. See wheel conspiracy.

civil conspiracy. An agreement between two or more persons to commit an unlawful act that causes damage to a person or property. [Cases: Conspiracy 1.1. C.J.S. Conspiracy §§ 2–3, 8, 14–17.]

conspiracy in restraint of trade. See RESTRAINT OF TRADE.

conspiracy to infringe. Intellectual property. An agreement by two or more persons to commit an act that would interfere with the exclusive rights of a patent, copyright, or trademark owner. • This action is commonly recognized in trademark law. The Copyright Act does not provide a basis for alleging a conspiracy to infringe, but an action is recognized by some states. The Patent Act provides no basis for an action asserting conspiracy to infringe because patent law covers only acts, not threats of acts.

conspiracy to monopolize. Antitrust. A conspiracy to take exclusive control of a commercial market. • Under § 2 of the Sherman Act, a conspiracy to monopolize exists if there is a conspiracy or concerted action directed at a substantial part of interstate commerce with the intent to acquire monopoly power.

hub-and-spoke conspiracy. See wheel conspiracy.

intracorporate conspiracy. A conspiracy existing between a corporation and its own officers, agents, or employees. • To be prosecutable under federal law, the conspiracy must involve at least two persons (i.e., not just the corporation and one person). 18 USCA § 371.

intra-enterprise conspiracy. Antitrust. A conspiracy existing between two subsidiaries, divisions, or other parts of the same firm. — Also termed bathtub conspiracy.

sedition conspiracy. A criminal conspiracy to forcibly (1) overthrow or destroy the U.S. government, (2) oppose its authority, (3) prevent the execution of its laws, or (4) seize or possess its property. 18 USCA § 2384. [Cases: Conspiracy 28(3). C.J.S. Conspiracy §§ 209, 215–225, wheel conspiracy. A conspiracy in which a single member or group (the “hub”) separately agrees with two or more other members or groups (the “spokes”). • The person or group at the hub is the only party liable for all the conspiracies. — Also termed circle conspiracy; hub-and-spoke conspiracy. [Cases: Conspiracy 24(3). C.J.S. Conspiracy §§ 117–118.]

conspirator, n. A person who takes part in a conspiracy.

unindicted conspirator. See unindicted coconspirator under COCONSPIRATOR.

conspire, vb. To engage in conspiracy; to join in a conspiracy.

CONSTABLE

constable (kon-st<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), n. 1. A peace officer responsible for minor judicial duties, such as serving writs and warrants, but with less authority and smaller jurisdiction than a sheriff. 2. In the United Kingdom, a police officer; also, the title of a police officer. [Cases: Sheriffs and Constables 8. C.J.S. Sheriffs and Constables § 20.] — constabulary (k<<schwa>>n-stab-y<<schwa>>-ler-ee), adj. — constabulary (body or force), n.

constablewick (kon-st<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l-wik). Hist. In the United Kingdom, the territorial jurisdiction of a constable. Cf. BAILIWICK.

CONSTANT DOLLARS

constant dollars. The value of current money expressed as a percentage of its buying power in a previous year as determined by the consumer price index. • This value is used as a measure of inflation.

constat (kon-stat), n. [Latin “it is settled”] Hist. A certificate made by the Clerk of the Pipe and the auditors of the Exchequer at the request of a person intending to plead in the Court of Exchequer for the discharge of some item. • The constat certified what appeared on record.

CONSTAT DE PERSONA

constat de persona (kon-stat dee p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] Hist. It is evident what person was meant. • A writing that misidentified a person was enforceable if the true identity of the person was evident from the remainder of the document. See DUMMODO CONSTET DE PERSONA.

CONSTAT DE SUBJECTO

constat de subjecto (kon-stat dee s<<schwa>>b-jek-toh). [Law Latin] Hist. It is clear as to the subject matter (of a transaction).

constate (k<<schwa>>n-stayt), vb. To establish, constitute, or ordain. • Constate usu. appears in relation to corporate documents; for example, the constating instruments of a corporation are its charter, organic law, or grant of powers to it.

CONSTITUENCY

constituency. 1. The body of citizens dwelling in a defined area and entitled to elect a representative. 2. The residents of an electoral district.

CONSTITUENCY-BASED QUORUM

constituent, adj. 1. (Of a component) that helps make up or complete a unit or a whole . 2. (Of an assembly) able to frame or amend a constitution .

constituent, n. 1. A person who gives another the authority to act as a representative; a principal who appoints an agent. 2. Someone who is represented by a legislator or other elected official. 3. One part of something that makes up a whole; an element. — constituency, n.

CONSTITUENT ELEMENT

constituent element. An essential component of a crime or cause of action.

CONSTITUERE

constituere (kon-sti-tyoo-<<schwa>>-ree), vb. [Latin “to appoint”] Hist. To appoint (someone). • Constituere was used principally in powers of attorney: attornavi et in loco meo constitui (“I have attorned and put in my place”).

CONSTITUTED ANNUITY constituted annuity. See ANNUITY.

CONSTITUTED AUTHORITY

constituted authority. See AUTHORITY(3).

constitutio (kon-sti-t[y]oo-shee-oh), n. [Latin “a decree”] 1. Roman law. An imperial decree; a law issued by the emperor; later, in the plural form constitutiones, a collection of laws. • The constitutiones took various forms, including orationes (laws submitted to the Senate), edicta (laws — usu. of a general character — put forth by the emperor), mandata (administrative directives to imperial officials), decreta (decisions by the emperor in legal cases), and rescripta (the emperor's responses to questions posed by litigants or imperial officials). Over time, the rapidly increasing number of constitutiones prompted their arrangement into collections such as the Theodosian Code and the Code of Justinian. They were the sole form of legislation after the third century A.D. Pl. constitu-tiones (kon-sti-t[y]oo-shee-oh-neeZ). — Also termed (collectively) constitutiones principum. See CODEX THEODOSIANUS; JUSTINIAN CODE.

“The name constitutiones, applied to the law-making utterances of the Roman emperors, had a very different meaning from our word ‘constitution,’ used to denote the fundamental, organic law of the state. Every official public document issuing from the emperor, and creating, declaring, or modifying law, was a constitutio.... [A]nd it is hardly necessary to say that, although professing to come from the person of the emperor, they were actually composed by jurists, and usually by those who stood first in their profession.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 6–7 (1881).

2.Civil law. A settlement achieved without a trial; the sum paid according to the settlement.
3.Hist. In England, a statute; a provision of a statute. Pl. constitutiones (kon-sti-t[y]oo-shee-oh-neeZ).

constitution. 1. The fundamental and organic law of a nation or state that establishes the institutions and apparatus of government, defines the scope of governmental sovereign powers, and guarantees individual civil rights and civil liberties. [Cases: Constitutional Law 1.1.] 2. The written instrument embodying this fundamental law, together with any formal amendments.

flexible constitution.A constitution that has few or no special amending procedures. • The British Constitution is an example. Parliament can alter constitutional principles and define new baselines for government action through ordinary legislative processes. The Canadian Constitution also grants its legislature some limited ability to amend the Constitution by legislation.

rigid constitution.A constitution whose terms cannot be altered by ordinary forms of legislation, only by special amending procedures. • The U.S. Constitution is an example. It cannot be changed without the consent of three-fourths of the state legislatures or through a constitutional convention. U.S. Const. art. V.

unwritten constitution. 1. The customs and values, some of which are expressed in statutes, that provide the organic and fundamental law of a state or country that does not have a single written document functioning as a constitution. • In British constitutional law, the constitution is a collection of historical documents, statutes, decrees, conventions, traditions, and royal prerogatives. Documents and statutes include Magna Carta (1215), the Bill of Rights (1689), and the European Communities Act (1972).2. The implied parts of a written constitution, encompassing the rights, freedoms, and processes considered to be essential, but not explicitly defined in the written document. • Many aspects of an unwritten constitution are based on custom and precedent. The U.S. Constitution does not, for example, give the Supreme Court the power to declare laws unconstitutional, but the Court does so without question. Nor does the Constitution expressly guarantee a right of privacy, but the Supreme Court has declared that the right exists and is protected. See PENUMBRA; RIGHT OF PRIVACY.

3. A nation's history of government and institutional development. • This was the standard definition before the United States produced the first written constitution. It remains current in Great Britain and other nations that have unwritten constitutions. 4.Parliamentary law. A governing document adopted by an organization for its internal governance and its external dealings. • The constitution may be an organization's most authoritative governing document, but if the organization has also received a charter or adopted articles of incorporation or association, then the constitution is subordinate to them. If the organization has also adopted bylaws, then the bylaws are subordinate to (and usu. more easily amended than) the constitution. The constitution and bylaws are sometimes contained in a single document. See governing document under DOCUMENT. Cf. BYLAW(1).

constitutional,adj.1. Of or relating to a constitution <constitutional rights>.2. Proper and valid under a constitution <constitutional actions>.

CONSTITUTIONAL CHALLENGE

constitutional challenge.See CHALLENGE(1).

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

constitutional convention.See CONVENTION(2).

CONSTITUTIONAL COURT

constitutional court.See COURT.

CONSTITUTIONAL-FACT DOCTRINE constitutional-fact doctrine. 1. The rule that federal courts are not bound by an administrative agency's findings of fact when the facts involve whether the agency has exceeded constitutional limitations on its power, esp. regarding personal rights. • The courts reviewed the facts de novo to afford protection of constitutional rights. Although it has not been overruled or wholly discredited, this rule has fallen out of favor. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 783, 784.1. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 229.] 2. The rule that a federal appellate court is not bound by a trial court's findings of fact when constitutional rights are implicated, specif. in citizenship-determination and First Amendment cases. See, e.g., Bose Corp. v. Consumers Union, 466 U.S. 485, 104 S.Ct. 1949 (1984). Cf. JURISDICTIONAL-FACT DOCTRINE. [Cases: Federal Courts 870.1.]

CONSTITUTIONAL FREEDOM

constitutional freedom.A basic liberty guaranteed by the Constitution or Bill of Rights, such as the freedom of speech. — Also termed constitutional protection; constitutional liberty.

CONSTITUTIONAL GUARANTEE

constitutional guarantee.A promise contained in the United States Constitution that supports or establishes an inalienable right, such as the right to due process.

CONSTITUTIONAL HOMESTEAD constitutional homestead.See HOMESTEAD.

CONSTITUTIONAL IMMUNITY

constitutional immunity.See IMMUNITY(1).

CONSTITUTIONALITY

constitutionality,n. The quality or state of being constitutional <the constitutionality of the senator's bill is questionable>.

CONSTITUTIONALIZE

constitutionalize,vb.1. To provide with a constitution <constitutionalize the new government>.2. To make con-stitutional; to bring in line with a constitution <the court plans to constitutionalize the segregated school district>.3. To make a constitutional question out of (a question of law); to subject (issue, etc.) to the burden of passing constitutional muster <the dissenter accused the majority of unnecessarily constitutionalizing the issue>.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

constitutional law. 1. The body of law deriving from the U.S. Constitution and dealing primarily with govern-mental powers, civil rights, and civil liberties. 2. The body of legal rules that determine the constitution of a state or country with an unwritten constitution. Cf. STATUTORY LAW; COMMON LAW . 3. The field of law dealing with aspects of constitutional provisions, such as restrictions on government powers and guarantees of rights.

CONSTITUTIONAL LIBERTY

constitutional liberty.See CONSTITUTIONAL FREEDOM.

CONSTITUTIONAL LIMITATION constitutional limitation.A constitutional provision that restricts the powers of a governmental branch, depart-ment, agency, or officer.

CONSTITUTIONAL MAJORITY constitutional majority.See majority of all the members under MAJORITY.

CONSTITUTIONAL MALICE

constitutional malice.See actual malice (2) under MALICE.

CONSTITUTIONAL MONARCHY constitutional monarchy.See limited monarchy under MONARCHY.

CONSTITUTIONAL OFFICE

constitutional office.A public position that is created by a constitution, rather than by a

CONSTITUTIONAL OFFICER

constitutional officer. See OFFICER(1).

CONSTITUTIONAL PROTECTION

constitutional protection. See CONSTITUTIONAL FREEDOM.

CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTION

constitutional question. A legal issue resolvable by the interpretation of a constitution, rather than a statute.

constitutional right. A right guaranteed by a constitution; esp., one guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution or by a state constitution.

CONSTITUTIONAL TAKING

CONSTITUTIONAL TORT

constitutional tort. See TORT.

CONSTITUTIONES PRINCIPUM

constitutiones principum (kon-sti-t[y]oo-shee-oh-nee-z prin-sip-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] See CONSTITUTIO.

CONSTITUTIONS OF CLARENDON

Constitutions of Clarendon. Hist. A 12th-century statement of customary law, produced during the reign of Henry II, intended to limit the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts and narrow the clergy's exemption from secular justice.

“During the first half of the twelfth century the claims of the church were growing, and the duty of asserting them passed into the hands of men who were not mere theologians but expert lawyers. Then, as all know, came the quarrel between Henry and Becket. In the Constitutions of Clarendon (1164) the king offered to the prelates a written treaty, a treaty which, so he said, embodied the ‘customs’ of his ancestors, more especially of his grand-father. Becket, after some hesitation, rejected the constitutions. The dispute waxed hot; certain of the customs were condemned by the pope. The murder followed ... [F]rom [Henry's] time onwards the lay courts, rather than the spiritual, are the aggressors and the victors in almost every contest.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law 124–25 (2d ed. 1898).

constitutor (kon-st<<schwa>>-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>r), n. [Latin “an orderer, arranger”] Roman law. A person who, by agreement, becomes responsible for the payment of another's debt.

CONSTITUTUM

constitutum (kon-sti-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin “agreed arrangement”] Roman law. 1. An agreement to pay an existing debt, either one's own or another's, on a fixed day. • A constitutum was not a novation; the creditor could still sue the original debtor. It differed from a stipulation because it had to be for an existing debt. If the promise was to pay one's own debt, it was called constitutum debiti proprii. If it was to pay another's debt, then it was constitutum debiti alieni. 2. The fixing of a day for the repayment of money owed.

constitutum debiti (kon-sti-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>m deb-<<schwa>>-tI). [Latin “debt agreement”] Roman law. See CONSTITUTUM(1).

CONSTITUTUM DEBITI ALIENI constitutum debiti alieni (kon-sti-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>m deb-<<schwa>>-tIay-lee-<<schwa>>-nI). [Latin “debt agreement”] Roman law. See CONSTITUTUM(1).

CONSTITUTUM DEBITI PROPRII constitutum debiti proprii (kon-sti-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>m deb-<<schwa>>-tIproh-pree-I). [Latin “debt agree-ment”] Roman law. See CONSTITUTUM(1).

CONSTITUTUM POSSESSORIUM

constitutum possessorium (kon-sti-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>m pah-ses-sor-ee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “possessory agreement”] Roman law. 1. A type of constructive delivery in which mediate possession is transferred while the immediate control or custody remains in the transferor. 2. The agreement by which this transfer is brought about. • In the context of a security interest, the pledged property may remain in the possession of the debtor, but as bailee of the creditor. For the other two types of constructive delivery, see ATTORNMENT; BREVI MANU. — Also termed traditio longa manu (tr<<schwa>>-dish-ee-oh long-g<<schwa>> man-yoo).

“[Another] form of constructive delivery is that which the commentators on the civil law have termed constitutum possessorium.... Any thing may be effectually delivered by means of an agreement that the possessor of it shall for the future hold it no longer on his own account but on account of someone else.... [I]f I buy goods from a ware-houseman, they are delivered to me so soon as he has agreed with me that he will hold them as warehouseman on my account. The position is then exactly the same as if I had first taken actual delivery of them, and then brought them back to the warehouse, and deposited them there for safe custody.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 306 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

construction,n.1. The act of building by combining or arranging parts or elements; the thing so built. 2. The act or process of interpreting or explaining the sense or intention of a writing (usu. a constitution, statute, or instrument); the ascertainment of a document's meaning in accordance with judicial standards. [Cases: Contracts 143; Statutes 174–278.C.J.S. Contracts § 302; Statutes §§ 306–431.] — construct (for sense 1), vb. — construe (for sense 2), vb.

“Some authors have attempted to introduce a distinction between ‘interpretation’ and ‘construction.’ Etymologically there is, perhaps, such a distinction; but it has not been accepted by the profession. For practical purposes any such distinction may be ignored, in view of the real object of both interpretation and construction, which is merely to ascertain the meaning and will of the lawmaking body, in order that it may be enforced.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 337 (3d ed. 1914).

“There is no explanation of the distinction between interpretation and construction [in Blackstone], nor can it be inferred from the matters dealt with under each head. The distinction is drawn in some modern works, but it is not taken in this book because it lacks an agreed basis. Some writers treat interpretation as something which is only called for when there is a dispute about the meaning of statutory words, while speaking of construction as a process to which all statutes, like all other writings, are necessarily subject when read by anyone. Others treat interpretation as something which is mainly concerned with the meaning of statutory words, while regarding construction as a process which mainly relates to the ascertainment of the intention of the legislature.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 18 (1976).

construction ut res magis valeat quam pereat (k<<schwa>>n-str<<schwa>>k-sh<< schwa>>n<<schwa>>t rays [or reez or rez] may-jis vay-lee-at kwam peer-ee-at). [Latin “a construction that gives effect to the matter rather than having it fail”] A construction arrived at when alternative readings are possible, one of which (usu. the broader reading) would achieve the manifest purpose of the document and one of which (usu. the narrower reading) would reduce it to futility or absurdity, whereby the interpreter chooses the one that gives effect to the document's purpose.

contemporaneous construction. An interpretation given at or near the time when a writing was prepared, usu. by one or more persons involved in its preparation. — Also termed practical construction; practical interpretation; contemporaneous and practical interpretation. See CONTEMPORANEOUS-CONSTRUCTION DOCTRINE. [Cases: Contracts 170; Statutes 218, 219(2). C.J.S. Contracts § 340; Statutes §§ 342, 344.]

liberal construction. An interpretation that applies a writing in light of the situation presented and that tends to effectuate the spirit and purpose of the writing. — Also termed equitable construction; loose construction; broad interpretation. [Cases: Contracts 143. C.J.S. Contracts § 302.]

literal construction. See strict construction.

practical construction. See contemporaneous construction.

purposive construction (p<<schwa>>r-p<<schwa>>-siv). An interpretation that looks to the “evil” that the statute is trying to correct (i.e., the statute's purpose). — Also termed teleological interpretation. See liberal construction.

statutory construction. See STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.

strict construction. 1. An interpretation that considers only the literal words of a writing. — Also termed literal construction; literal interpretation. See STRICT CONSTRUCTIONISM. [Cases: Contracts 143. C.J.S. Contracts § 302.] 2. A construction that considers words narrowly, usu. in their historical context. • This type of construction treats statutory and contractual words with highly restrictive readings. — Also termed strict interpretation. 3. The philosophy underlying strict interpretation of statutes; STRICT CONSTRUCTIONISM.

“Strict interpretation is an equivocal expression, for it means either literal or narrow. When a provision is ambiguous, one of its meanings may be wider than the other, and the strict (i.e., narrow) sense is not necessarily the strict (i.e., literal) sense.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 171 n. (t) (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

consul (kon-s<<schwa>>l), n. 1. A governmental representative living in a foreign country to oversee commercial and other matters involving the representative's home country and its citizens in that foreign country. • Consuls are not diplomatic agents, so, unless a treaty provides otherwise, they do not enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities. But consuls are entitled to consular immunities, which protect them from local law and jurisdiction in the exercise of their consular functions. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls 1–8. C.J.S. Ambassadors and Consuls §§ 2–32.] — consular (kon-s<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>r), adj. — consulship (kon-s<<schwa>>l-ship), n.

“The commercial agents of a government, residing in foreign parts, and charged with the duty of promoting the commercial interests of the state, and especially of its individual citizens or subjects, are called consuls. These, under the regulations of some countries, are of different grades, being either consuls-general, consuls, or vice-consuls, from whom consular agents differ little.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 99, at 159 (5th ed. 1878).

“The usual criterion used for the distinction between diplomats and consuls is the representative character of the former of which the latter are devoid. However, this distinction is not altogether correct. Undoubtedly diplomatic agents have a general representative character since in all matters and relations they represent their country in the state to which they are accredited. Consuls, on the other hand, as state organs, also represent their country in another state, but only in matters within their competence. Thus, the representative character of consuls is, like their competence, specific, and secondary to that of diplomatic agents.” Constantin Economidès, “Consuls,” in 1 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 770 (1992).

consul general. A high-ranking consul appointed to a strategically important region and often having supervisory powers over other regions or other consuls.

2. Roman law. One of two chief magistrates elected annually during the Republic to exercise supreme authority. • Under the Empire, the consulship was reduced to a sinecure, held by appointees of the emperor or the emperor himself. “The principal inheritors of the royal authority and dignity were the two consuls elected by the comitia centuriata. They enjoyed equal powers. In the calendar the year was distinguished by their names. They convoked and initiated legislation in either comitia. In special emergencies, particularly in times of grave crisis, either consul might appoint a dictator who exercised supreme authority, but not beyond six months, unless re-appointed.... It was abolished by Justinian in A.D. 541, though later emperors continued to assume the title.” R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 14 (4th ed. 1956).

consumer-contemplation test.A method of imposing product liability on a manufacturer if the evidence shows that a product's danger is greater than that which a reasonable consumer would expect. — Also termed consum-er-user-contemplation test; consumer-expectation test. Cf. RISK-UTILITY TEST. [Cases: Products Liability 8. C.J.S. Products Liability §§ 11–15.]

CONSUMER CREDIT

consumer credit.See CREDIT(4).

CONSUMER CREDIT CODE

Consumer Credit Code.See UNIFORM CONSUMER CREDIT CODE.

CONSUMER CREDIT PROTECTION ACT

Consumer Credit Protection Act.A federal statute that safeguards consumers in the use of credit by (1) requiring full disclosure of the terms of loan agreements, including finance charges, (2) restricting the garnishment of wages, and (3) regulating the use of credit cards. 15 USCA §§ 1601–1693. • Many states have also adopted consum-er-credit-protection acts. — Also termed Truth in Lending Act (abbr. TILA). See UNIFORM CONSUMER CREDIT CODE . [Cases: Consumer Credit 30. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 317–318.]

CONSUMER-CREDIT SALE

consumer-credit sale.See SALE.

CONSUMER-CREDIT TRANSACTION

consumer-credit transaction. A transaction by which a person receives a loan for buying consumer goods or services. • Consumer-credit transactions are usu. subject to regulations enacted for the consumer's protection. [Cases: Consumer Credit 1, 3. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 274, 280–293, 306.]

CONSUMER DEBT

consumer debt. See DEBT.

CONSUMER-EXPECTATION TEST

consumer-expectation test. See CONSUMER-CONTEMPLATION TEST.

CONSUMER FINANCE COMPANY

consumer finance company. See FINANCE COMPANY.

CONSUMER GOODS

consumer goods. See GOODS.

CONSUMER-GOODS TRANSACTION

consumer-goods transaction. Secured transactions. A transaction in which (1) an individual incurs an obligation primarily for person, family, or household purposes, and (2) a security interest in consumer goods secures the obligation. UCC § 9-102(a)(24). [Cases: Secured Transactions 15. C.J.S. Secured Transactions § 14.]

CONSUMER LAW

consumer law. The area of law dealing with consumer transactions — that is, a person's obtaining credit, goods, real property, or services for personal, family, or household purposes. — Also termed consumer-transactions law.

CONSUMER LEASE

consumer lease. See LEASE.

CONSUMER LOAN

consumer loan. See LOAN.

CONSUMER PRICE INDEX

consumer price index. An index that tracks the price of goods and services purchased by the average consumer and that is published monthly by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. • The consumer price index is used to monitor periodic changes in the rate of inflation. — Abbr. CPI. — Also termed cost-of-living index. Cf. PRODUCER PRICE INDEX.

CONSUMER PRODUCT

consumer product. An item of personal property that is distributed in commerce and is normally used for personal, family, or household purposes. 15 USCA § 2301(1).

CONSUMER PRODUCT SAFETY COMMISSION

Consumer Product Safety Commission. An independent federal regulatory commission that develops safety standards for consumer products and promotes research into the causes and prevention of product-related deaths, illnesses, and injuries. • It was established in 1972.15 USCA §§ 2051 et seq. — Abbr. CPSC.

CONSUMER-PROTECTION LAW

consumer-protection law. A state or federal statute designed to protect consumers against unfair trade and credit practices involving consumer goods, as well as to protect consumers against faulty and dangerous goods. [Cases: Consumer Credit 1; Consumer Protection 2. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 24, 27, 33, 35, 37–39; Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit § 274.]

CONSUMER TRANSACTION

consumer transaction. A bargain or deal in which a party acquires property or services primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose.

CONSUMER-TRANSACTIONS LAW

consumer-transactions law. See CONSUMER LAW.

CONSUMER-USER-CONTEMPLATION TEST

consumer-user-contemplation test. See CONSUMER-CONTEMPLATION TEST.

CONSUMMATE

consummate (k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>m-it orkahn-s<<schwa>>-mit), adj. Completed; fully accomplished. • Consummate was often used at common law to describe the status of a contract or an estate, such as the transformation of a husband's interest in his wife's inheritance from that of a tenant by the curtesy initiate to a tenant by curtesy consummate upon the wife's death (assuming that a child had been born during the marriage). See curtesy consummate under CURTESY. — consummation, n.

consummate (kon-s<<schwa>>-mayt), vb. 1. To bring to completion; esp., to make (a marriage) complete by sexual intercourse. 2. To achieve; to fulfill. 3. To perfect; to carry to the highest degree.

CONSUMMATE DOWER

consummate dower. See DOWER.

CONSUMMATE LIEN

consummate lien. See LIEN.

CONSUMMATION OF MARRIAGE consummation of marriage. Family law. The first postmarital act of sexual intercourse between a husband and wife. • Under canon law, a refusal to consummate the marriage may be grounds for an annulment or for divorce. But this is not so at common law or under modern state law.

CONSUMPTION

consumption. The act of destroying a thing by using it; the use of a thing in a way that thereby exhausts it.

CONSUMPTION TAX

consumption tax. See TAX.

CONTAGION

contagion. Int'l law. A discredited doctrine holding that revolution or abhorrent practices in a neighboring state justify its invasion and the overthrow of its government on the grounds of national security. • The doctrine was employed by the Holy Alliance (1815–1848) in Europe to invade countries where revolutions were brewing. — Also termed doctrine of contagion.

CONTAINING BY ESTIMATE

containing by estimate. Archaic. More or less. • This phrase usu. appears in deeds where measurements are made by metes and bounds. It is redundant when the phrase “more or less” is used.

CONTAINMENT

containment. Int'l law. The policy of restricting the ideological and territorial expansion of one's enemy. • This was the basic philosophy of the United States during the Cold War.

contango (k<<schwa>>n-tang-goh). Securities. 1. A market in which long-term futures or options contracts sell at a premium over short-term contracts. — Also termed normal market. 2. The premium so paid. • The premium paid for securities with longer maturities reflects the cost of holding the commodity for future delivery.

contemn (k<<schwa>>n-tem), vb. To treat (as laws or court orders) with contemptuous disregard. See CON-TEMPT.

CONTEMNOR

contemnor (k<<schwa>>n-tem-<<schwa>>r or -n<<schwa>>r or -nor). A person who is guilty of contempt before an instrumentality of government, such as a court or legislature. — Also spelled contemner.

CONTEMPLATION OF BANKRUPTCY contemplation of bankruptcy. The thought of declaring bankruptcy because of the inability to continue current financial operations, often coupled with action designed to thwart the distribution of assets in a bankruptcy proceeding. — Also termed contemplation of insolvency.

CONTEMPLATION OF DEATH

contemplation of death. The thought of dying, not necessarily from imminent danger, but as the compelling reason to transfer property to another. See gift causa mortis under GIFT. [Cases: Gifts 59; Internal Revenue 4159(2). C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 514.]

CONTEMPLATION OF INSOLVENCY

contemplation of insolvency. See CONTEMPLATION OF BANKRUPTCY.

CONTEMPORANEA EXPOSITIO

contemporanea expositio (k<<schwa>>n-tem-p<<schwa>>-ray-nee-<<schwa>> eks-p<<schwa>>-zish-ee-oh). [Latin “contemporaneous exposition”] The doctrine that the best meaning of a statute or document is the one given by those who enacted it or signed it, and that the meaning publicly given by contemporary or long professional usage is presumed to be the correct one, even if the language may have a popular or an etymological meaning that is very different.

CONTEMPORANEOUS AND PRACTICAL INTERPRETATION

contemporaneous and practical interpretation. See contemporaneous construction under CONSTRUCTION.

CONTEMPORANEOUS CONSTRUCTION

contemporaneous construction. See CONSTRUCTION.

CONTEMPORANEOUS-CONSTRUCTION DOCTRINE contemporaneous-construction doctrine. The rule that the initial interpretation of an ambiguous statute by an administrative agency or lower court is entitled to great deference if the interpretation has been used over a long period. [Cases: Statutes 218, 219(2). C.J.S. Statutes §§ 342, 344.]

contemporaneous-objection rule. The doctrine that a timely and proper objection to the admission of evidence must be made at trial for the issue of admissibility to be considered on appeal. • An objection is timely if it is made as soon as practicable and is proper if made formally on the record. These requirements afford the trial court an opportunity to correct the alleged error, and they preserve the issue for appeal. [Cases: Appeal and Error 204; Criminal Law 1036.1.]

contemporary community standards. The gauge by which a fact-finder decides whether material is obscene, judging by its patent offensiveness and its prurience in the locale at a given time. See OBSCENITY(1). [Cases: Obscenity 1. C.J.S. Obscenity §§ 1–8.]

“Both pruriency and patent offensiveness are determined by ‘contemporary community standards.’ But what is the relevant community? In Miller [v. California], the Court rejected the contention that only a national community standard, free of local biases, would provide adequate First Amendment protection and allowed lower courts to use local standards in defining what is obscene. Subsequent cases have made it clear that the state may choose to omit reference to any particular geographic community, state or local, although it may do so. If a geographic reference is omitted, each jury is free to ascertain the contemporary community standard.” Jerome A. Barron & C. Thomas Dienes, Constitutional Law in a Nutshell 396 (3d ed. 1995).

contempt, n. 1. The act or state of despising; the condition of being despised. 2. Conduct that defies the authority or dignity of a court or legislature. • Because such conduct interferes with the administration of justice, it is punishable, usu. by fine or imprisonment. Fed. R. Civ. P. 45(e); Fed. R. Crim. P. 42; 18 USCA § 401. — Also termed contempt of court; judicial contempt. See CONTUMACY. [Cases: Contempt 1–26; States 40. C.J.S. Contempt §§ 2–33, 37; States § 60.] — contemptuous, adj.

“Contempt is a disregard of, or disobedience to, the rules or orders of a legislative or judicial body, or an inter-ruption of its proceedings by disorderly behavior or insolent language, in its presence or so near thereto as to disturb the proceedings or to impair the respect due to such a body.” Edward M. Dangel, Contempt § 1, at 2 (1939).

civil contempt. The failure to obey a court order that was issued for another party's benefit. • A civil-contempt proceeding is coercive or remedial in nature. The usual sanction is to confine the contemnor until he or she complies with the court order. The act (or failure to act) complained of must be within the defendant's power to perform, and the contempt order must state how the contempt may be purged. Imprisonment for civil contempt is indefinite and for a term that lasts until the defendant complies with the decree. [Cases: Contempt 4, 20. C.J.S. Contempt §§ 9, 14, 17.]

common-law contempt. See criminal contempt.

consequential contempt. 1. Contempt that, although not amounting to gross insolence or direct opposition, tends to create a universal disregard of the power and authority of courts and judges. 2. See indirect contempt.

constructive contempt. See indirect contempt.

contempt of Congress. Deliberate interference with the duties and powers of Congress, such as a witness's refusal to answer a question from a congressional committee. • Contempt of Congress is a criminal offense. 2 USCA § 192. [Cases: United States 23(9).]

contempt of sovereignty. Int'l law. The minor diplomatic offense of interference in domestic affairs by a foreign representative, esp. by making a public statement about an issue currently being debated in the legislature.

criminal contempt. An act that obstructs justice or attacks the integrity of the court. • A criminal-contempt proceeding is punitive in nature. The purpose of criminal-contempt proceedings is to punish repeated or aggravated failure to comply with a court order. All the protections of criminal law and procedure apply, and the commitment must be for a definite period. — Also termed common-law contempt. [Cases: Contempt 3. C.J.S. Contempt §§ 7–8.]

“Criminal contempt is a crime in the ordinary sense; it is a violation of the law, a public wrong which is punishable by fine or imprisonment or both.” Bloom v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 194, 201, 88 S.Ct. 1477, 1481 (1968).

direct contempt. A contempt (such as an assault of a testifying witness) committed in the immediate vicinity of a court; esp., a contempt committed in a judge's presence. • A direct contempt is usu. immediately punishable when the transgression occurs. [Cases: Contempt 2. C.J.S. Contempt §§ 2–6, 11.]

indirect contempt. Contempt that is committed outside of court, as when a party disobeys a court order. • Indirect contempt is punishable only after proper notice to the contemnor and a hearing. — Also termed constructive contempt; consequential contempt. [Cases: Contempt 2. C.J.S. Contempt §§ 2–6, 11.]

contempt of court. See CONTEMPT(2).

CONTEMPT POWER

contempt power. The power of a public institution (as Congress or a court) to punish someone who shows con-tempt for the process, orders, or proceedings of that institution.

CONTEMPT PROCEEDING

contempt proceeding. See PROCEEDING.

CONTEMPTUOUS DAMAGES

contemptuous damages. See nominal damages under DAMAGES.

CONTENEMENT

contenement (k<<schwa>>n-ten-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>nt). Hist. 1. Freehold land held by a feudal tenant, esp. land used to support the tenant. • Magna Carta exempted this property from seizure.

“Contenement, (contenementum) seemeth to be the free hould land, which lyeth to a mans tenement or dwelling house, that is in his owne occupation. For magna carta. ca. 14. you have these words: A free man shall not be amerced for a small fault, but after the quantity of the fault: and for a great fault, after the maner thereof, saving to him his contenement or free hould. And a merchant likewise shal be amerced saving to him his merchandies: and any other villaine then owers, shal be amerced saving his wainage” John Cowell, The Interpreter (1607).

2. A person's reputation or standing in the community. • Though contenement as used in this sense is also rooted in the ownership of land, it may stem from the Law French contenance (“countenance”) rather than the Law Latin contenementum (“with tenement”), as used in sense (1). “Contenement signifies his Countenance, Credit, or Reputation, which he hath, together with, and by reason of his Freehold; and in this sense does the Statute of 1 Edw. 3 and Old Nat. Br. use it, where Countenance is used for Contenement: The Armor of a Soldier is his Countenance; the Books of a Schollar, his Countenance; and the like.” Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

CONTENT-BASED DISCRIMINATION

content-based discrimination. See DISCRIMINATION.

CONTENT-BASED RESTRICTION

content-based restriction. Constitutional law. A restraint on the substance of a particular type of speech. • This type of restriction are presumptively invalid but can survive a constitutional challenge if it is based on a compelling state interest and its measures are narrowly drawn to accomplish that end. Boos v. Barry, 485 U.S. 312, 108 S.Ct. 1157 (1988). See SPEECH (1). [Cases: Constitutional Law 90(3). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 502, 542, 546–550.]

CONTENTIOUS JURISDICTION

contentious jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

CONTENTIOUS POSSESSION

contentious possession. See hostile possession under POSSESSION.

CONTENTS UNKNOWN

contents unknown. A statement placed on a bill of lading to show that the carrier does not know what is inside shipped containers. • Carriers use this phrase in an attempt to limit their liability for damage to the goods shipped. Shipper's load and count is also used. [Cases: Carriers 50; Shipping 106(3). C.J.S. Shipping §§ 260–263, 265.]

content-valid test. A job-applicant examination that bears a close relationship to the skills required by the job. • Content-validation studies are often performed in employment-discrimination cases that contest the validity of an examination. [Cases: Civil Rights 1142, 1546. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 29, 144, 170.]

“The simplest form of test validation is where the test replicates major portions of the job, as for example, where a test measuring typing or computer literacy is used to select a secretarial support person A content valid test must measure or replicate a ‘representative sample’ of the job's duties. It is not valid if it measures only a small portion of those duties. For example, fire fighters may need to write reports, but a grammar test is too narrow to be content valid.” Mack A. Player, Federal Law of Employment Discrimination in a Nutshell 101 (3d ed. 1992).

conterminous,adj.1. Sharing a common boundary <the surveyor set a new line between the conterminous counties>. — Also termed coterminous. 2. Enclosed within a common boundary <all 48 conterminous states of this country>.

CONTEST

contest (k<<schwa>>n-test), vb.1. To strive to win or hold; contend <he chose to contest for the prize>.2. To litigate or call into question; challenge < they want to contest the will>.3. To deny an adverse claim or assert a defense to it in a court proceeding <she contests that charge>. — contest (kon-test), n.

CONTESTABILITY CLAUSE

contestability clause (k<<schwa>>n-tes-t<<schwa>>-bil-<<schwa>>-tee).Insurance. A policy provision setting forth when and under what conditions the insurer may contest a claim or void the policy based on a representation or omission made when the policy was issued. • Contestability clauses usu. lapse after two years. — Also termed contestable clause. Cf. INCONTESTABILITY CLAUSE. [Cases: Insurance 2950, 3121. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 536, 1636.]

contestant. 1. One who contests the validity of a will, trust, or other legal instrument. — Also termed objectant; caveator. 2.Trademarks. One who challenges the placement of a trademark on the Principal Register. • The term refers to a challenger in (1) an interference proceeding, (2) an opposition proceeding before a mark is placed on the Principal Register, or (3) a cancellation proceeding after the mark is placed on the Principal Register. [Cases: Trade Regulation 217. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 179, 183.] 3.Patents. A party to an interference proceeding in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. — Also termed (in sense 3) interferant. [Cases: Patents 106(1). C.J.S. Patents §§ 159–162, 165.]

CONTESTATIO LITIS

contestatio litis (kon-tes-tay-shee-oh II-tis). [Latin “contestation of suit”] See LITIS CONTESTATIO.

CONTESTATION OF SUIT

contestation of suit (kon-tes-tay-sh<<schwa>>n).Eccles. law. The point in an action when the defendant answers the plaintiff's libel (i.e., complaint); the plea and joinder of an issue. — Also termed litis contestatio.

CONTESTED DIVORCE

CONTESTED HEARING

contested hearing.See HEARING.

CONTEXT

context, n. 1. The surrounding text of a word or passage, used to determine the meaning of that word or passage <his remarks were taken out of context>. 2. Setting or environment <in the context of foreign relations>. — contextual, adj.

CONTEXTUAL ZONING

contextual zoning. See ZONING.

CONTIGUITY

contiguity (kon-ti-gyoo-<<schwa>>-tee), n. The state or condition of being contiguous <contiguity existed between the two adjoining tracts of land>.

CONTIGUOUS

contiguous (k<<schwa>>n-tig-yoo-<<schwa>>s), adj. 1. Touching at a point or along a boundary; ADJOINING <Texas and Oklahoma are contiguous>. 2. Near in time or sequence; successive <contiguous thunder and lightning>.

CONTIGUOUS ZONE

contiguous zone. Int'l law. An area abutting and extending beyond the territorial sea, in which countries have limited powers to enforce customs as well as fiscal, sanitary, and immigration laws. [Cases: International Law 7. C.J.S. International Law §§ 23–24.]

CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Continental Congress. The first national governmental assembly in the United States, formed in 1774 to protest British treatment of the colonies. • The Second Continental Congress, commencing in 1775, adopted the Declaration of Independence and served as the national government until the Articles of Confederation were ratified in 1781.

CONTINGENCY

contingency (k<<schwa>>n-tin-j<<schwa>>n-see). 1. An event that may or may not occur; a possibility. 2. The condition of being dependent on chance; uncertainty. 3. CONTINGENT FEE.

CONTINGENCY BENEFICIARY contingency beneficiary. See contingent beneficiary (1) under BENEFICIARY.

CONTINGENCY FEE

contingency fee. See CONTINGENT FEE.

CONTINGENCY RESERVE

contingency reserve. See contingent fund under FUND.

CONTINGENCY WITH A DOUBLE ASPECT contingency with a double aspect. A contingent remainder existing along with a second remainder, the latter taking the remainder only if the first fails. • In the following example, this type of remainder would arise if A never has children: “to A for life, and if A has children, then to the children and their heirs forever; and if A dies without children, then to B and B's heirs forever.” See contingent remainder under REMAINDER. [Cases: Remainders 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 70–71, 77, 79, 81–82.]

contingent (k<<schwa>>n-tin-j<<schwa>>nt), adj. 1. Possible; uncertain; unpredictable <the trust was contingent, and the contingency never occurred>. 2. Dependent on something else; conditional <her acceptance of the position was contingent upon the firm's agreeing to guarantee her husband a position as well>.

CONTINGENT ANNUITY

CONTINGENT BENEFICIARY

contingent beneficiary. See BENEFICIARY.

CONTINGENT CLAIM

contingent claim. See CLAIM(4).

CONTINGENT DEBT

contingent debt. See DEBT.

CONTINGENT DEMAND

contingent demand. See DEMAND(1).

CONTINGENT ESTATE

contingent estate. See ESTATE(1).

CONTINGENT FEE

contingent fee. A fee charged for a lawyer's services only if the lawsuit is successful or is favorably settled out of court. • Contingent fees are usu. calculated as a percentage of the client's net recovery (such as 25% of the recovery if the case is settled, and 33% if the case is won at trial). — Also termed contingency fee; contingency; conditional fee. [Cases: Attorney and Client 146. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 313, 319.]

reverse contingent fee. A fee in which a defense lawyer's compensation depends in whole or in part on how much money the lawyer saves the client, given the client's potential liability — so that the lower the settlement or judgment, the higher the lawyer's fee. • For example, if a client might be liable for up to $2 million, and agrees to pay the lawyer 40% of the difference between $1 million and the amount of the settlement or judgment, then a settlement of $800,000 would result in a fee of $80,000 (40% of the $200,000 under the threshold amount of $1 million). — Also termed negative contingent fee; defense contingent fee; reverse bonus. [Cases: Attorney and Client 146. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 313, 319.]

contingent fund. See FUND(1).

CONTINGENT GUARANTY

contingent guaranty. See GUARANTY.

contingent-interest mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

CONTINGENT LEGACY

contingent legacy. See LEGACY.

CONTINGENT LIABILITY

contingent liability. See LIABILITY.

CONTINGENT OWNERSHIP

contingent ownership. See OWNERSHIP.

CONTINGENT REMAINDER

contingent remainder. See REMAINDER.

CONTINGENT TRUST

contingent trust. See TRUST.

CONTINGENT USE

contingent use. See USE(4).

CONTINGENT WILL

contingent will. See WILL.

CONTINUAL CLAIM

continual claim. Hist. A formal claim to a tract of land made by an out-of-possession owner who is deterred from taking possession by a menace of some type. • The claim — called continual because it had to be renewed annually — preserved the claimant's right to the land. The owner had to make the claim as near to the land as could be done safely. This procedure gave the disseised person the same benefits (such as the right to devise the land) as a legal entry. The continual claim was abolished early in the 19th century.

“Continual claim is, where a man hath right to enter into certain lands whereof another is seised in fee, or fee tail, and dares not enter for fear of death or beating, but approaches as nigh as he dares, and makes claim thereto within the year and day before the death of him that hath the lands” Termes de la Ley 114 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

CONTINUAL INJURY

continual injury. See INJURY.

CONTINUANCE

continuance, n. 1. The act of keeping up, maintaining, or prolonging <continuance of the formal tradition>. 2. Duration; time of continuing <the senator's continuance in office>. 3. Procedure. The adjournment or postponement of a trial or other proceeding to a future date <motion for continuance>. Cf. RECESS(1). — continue, vb.

CONTINUANDO

continuando (k<<schwa>>n-tin-yoo-an-doh). [Law Latin “by continuing”] Hist. An allegation charging that the trespass or other wrongful act complained of constitutes a continuing tort against the plaintiff's property.

continuation. Patents. A patent application that is based on the same disclosure and that claims the same invention as a rejected parent application but contains some change in the scope of the claims. • A continuation application maintains the original filing date for prior-art and interference purposes, as long as it is filed while the parent application is still pending, has at least one inventor in common with the parent application, and refers to the parent application. — Also termed continuation application; continuation-in-whole application; continuing application; file-wrapper continuation application. Cf. CONTINUATION-IN-PART, continued-prosecution application under PATENT APPLICATION; REQUEST FOR CONTINUED EXAMINATION . [Cases: Patents 110. C.J.S. Patents § 156.]

CONTINUATION AGREEMENT

continuation agreement. Partnership. An agreement among the partners that, in the event of dissolution, the business of the partnership can be continued without the necessity of liquidation. Cf. BUY-SELL AGREEMENT(1). [Cases: Partnership 277. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 318–320.]

“Normally, a continuation agreement would have some type of provision for purchasing the interest of a deceased or expelled partner. However, such a provision is not necessary. Courts have enforced agreements that give the estate of the deceased partner nothing.” Harold Gill Reuschlein & William A. Gregory, The Law of Agency and Partnership § 269, at 461 (2d ed. 1990).

CONTINUATION APPLICATION

continuation application.1.CONTINUATION. 2.CONTINUATION-IN-PART.

CONTINUATION-APPLICATION LACHES DOCTRINE

continuation-application laches doctrine.Patents. An equitable defense to patent infringement, based on an assertion that the patentee deliberately delayed the issuance of the patent-in-suit by filing multiple continuing applications that added new patent claims to cover products marketed or processes used after the original application was filed. — Also termed prosecution-laches doctrine. See SUBMARINE PATENT.

CONTINUATION-IN-PART

continuation-in-part.Patents. A patent application filed during the pendency of an earlier application by the same applicant, repeating a substantial part of the earlier application but adding to or subtracting from the claims. 35 USCA § 120. • This type of application contains new technical descriptions from the inventor or reflects im-provements made since the parent application was filed. A claim in a continuation-in-part application is entitled to the benefit of the parent application's filing date if the claimed subject matter is the same, but new matter takes the filing date of the continuation-in-part application. Continuation-in-part applications are usu. filed to describe and claim later-discovered improvements to an invention, or to distinguish the invention from some prior-art reference. — Abbr. CIP. — Also termed continuation-in-part application; continuation application; continuing application; file-wrapper continuation application. Cf. CONTINUATION. [Cases: Patents 110. C.J.S. Patents § 156.]

CONTINUATION-IN-PART APPLICATION continuation-in-part application.See CONTINUATION-IN-PART.

CONTINUATION-IN-WHOLE APPLICATION

CONTINUING HARM

continuing harm. See continuing injury under INJURY.

CONTINUING INJURY

continuing injury. See INJURY.

CONTINUING JUDICIAL EDUCATION

continuing judicial education. Continuing legal education for judges, usu. organized and sponsored by a go-vernmentally subsidized body and often involving topics such as judicial writing, efficient decision-making, caseload management, and the like. — Abbr. CJE.

CONTINUING JURISDICTION

continuing jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

CONTINUING-JURISDICTION DOCTRINE continuing-jurisdiction doctrine. 1. The rule that a court retains power to enter and enforce a judgment over a party even though that party is no longer subject to a new action. [Cases: Courts 30. C.J.S. Courts §§ 71–73.] 2. Family law. The rule that once a court has acquired jurisdiction over a child-custody or support case, that court continues to have jurisdiction to modify orders, even if the child or a parent moves to another state. [Cases: Child Custody 745; Child Support 507. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 205, 246, 251–253.]

CONTINUING LEGAL EDUCATION

continuing legal education. 1. The process or system through which lawyers extend their learning beyond their law-school studies, usu. by attending seminars designed to sharpen lawyering skills or to provide updates on legal developments within particular practice areas. • In some jurisdictions, lawyers have annual or biennial requirements to devote a given number of hours (usu. 12–15) to continuing legal education. [Cases: Attorney and Client 9. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 24–25.] 2. The enhanced skills or knowledge derived from this process. 3. The business field in which educational providers supply the demand for legal seminars, books, audiotapes, and videotapes designed to further the education of lawyers. — Abbr. CLE.

CONTINUING NUISANCE

continuing nuisance. See NUISANCE.

CONTINUING OBJECTION

continuing objection. See OBJECTION.

CONTINUING OFFENSE

continuing offense. See OFFENSE(1).

CONTINUING PART-TIME JUDGE

continuing part-time judge. See JUDGE.

CONTINUING THREAT OF HARM

continuing threat of harm. A condition or situation that presents a high risk of injury at intervals or over an extended period, whether or not an injury has actually occurred. • The condition or situation can be a behavior that is subject to repetition, as with unfair-competition practices or stalking, or an enduring state, such as environmental contamination. — Also termed threat of continuing harm; continuing threat of injury; threat of continuing injury. Cf. continuing injury under INJURY.

CONTINUING TRESPASS

continuing trespass. See TRESPASS.

CONTINUING-VIOLATION DOCTRINE

continuing-violation doctrine. Employment law. The judge-made rule that if an employer's discriminatory acts are of an ongoing nature, the statute of limitations will be extended to allow the plaintiff to recover even when a claim based on those acts would otherwise be time-barred.

CONTINUING WARRANTY

continuing warranty. See promissory warranty under WARRANTY(3).

CONTINUING WRONG

continuing wrong. See WRONG.

CONTINUITY

continuity (kon-ti-n[y]oo-<<schwa>>-tee). 1. Int'l law. The principle that upheavals and revolutions within a country — as well as changes in governmental forms, the extent of a country's territory, and measures taken during a military occupation — do not affect the existence of the country and therefore cannot lead to its extinction. 2. Patents. The rule that a continuation or divisional patent application carries the effective filing date of its parent application if (1) the parent application fully discloses the same invention, (2) there is at least one common inventor, and (3) the parent application was still pending when the latter application was filed. • A continuation-in-part application carries the effective filing date for everything disclosed in the parent application, but not for new material. 35 USCA § 120. — Also termed doctrine of continuity. Cf. HIATUS. [Cases: Patents 110. C.J.S. Patents § 156.]

CONTINUITY OF BUSINESS ENTERPRISE

continuity of business enterprise. A doctrine covering acquisitive reorganizations whereby the acquiring corporation must continue the target corporation's historical business or must use a significant portion of the target's business assets in a new business to qualify the exchange as a tax-deferred transaction. [Cases: Corporations 445.1. C.J.S. Corporations § 657.]

CONTINUITY-OF-ENTERPRISE DOCTRINE continuity-of-enterprise doctrine. See SUBSTANTIAL-CONTINUITY DOCTRINE.

CONTINUITY-OF-ENTITY DOCTRINE continuity-of-entity doctrine. See MERE-CONTINUATION DOCTRINE.

CONTINUITY OF EXISTENCE

continuity of existence. See CONTINUITY-OF-LIFE DOCTRINE.

CONTINUITY OF INTEREST

continuity of interest. 1. A doctrine covering acquisitive reorganizations whereby a target corporation's shareholders must retain a share in the acquiring corporation to qualify the exchange as a tax-deferred transaction. 2. A judicial requirement for divisive reorganizations whereby a target corporation's shareholders must retain an interest in both the distributing and the controlled corporations to qualify the exchange as a tax-deferred transaction. [Cases: Internal continuity-of-life doctrine. The principle that the withdrawal, incapacity, bankruptcy, or death of the owner of an entity (esp. a corporation) does not end the entity's existence. — Also termed continuity of existence. [Cases: Corporations 36. C.J.S. Corporations § 52.]

CONTINUITY-OF-LIFE DOCTRINE

CONTINUOUS-ADVERSE-USE PRINCIPLE

continuous-adverse-use principle. The rule that the uninterrupted use of land — along with the other elements of adverse possession — will result in a successful claim for adverse possession. — Also termed uninter-rupted-adverse-use principle. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. [Cases: Adverse Possession 44. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 149–150, 332.]

CONTINUOUS CRIME

continuous crime. See CRIME.

CONTINUOUS EASEMENT

continuous easement. See EASEMENT.

CONTINUOUS INJURY

continuous injury. See continual injury under INJURY.

CONTINUOUS-OPERATIONS CLAUSE

continuous-operations clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease giving the lessee the right to continue any drilling well that was begun before the lease expired and to begin drilling more wells. See OPERATIONS CLAUSE .

CONTINUOUS POLICY

continuous policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

CONTINUOUS-REPRESENTATION DOCTRINE continuous-representation doctrine. The principle that the limitations period for bringing a legal-malpractice action is tolled as long as the lawyer continues the representation that is related to the negligent act or omission. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 55(3). C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 159, 166, 171–175; Physicians, Surgeons, and Other Health-Care Providers § 108.]

continuous servitude. See continuous easement under EASEMENT.

CONTINUOUS-TREATMENT DOCTRINE continuous-treatment doctrine. The principle that the limitations period for bringing a medical-malpractice action is tolled while the patient continues treatment that is related to the negligent act or omission. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 55(3). C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§

159, 166, 171–175; Physicians, Surgeons, and other Health–Care Providers § 108.]

continuous trigger. See TRIPLE TRIGGER.

CONTIO

contio (kon-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. A public meeting to which participants have been summoned by a magistrate. 2. A speech delivered at a public meeting. — Also spelled concio. Pl. contiones (kon-shee-oh-nee-z).

contort (kon-tort), n.1. (usu. pl.) The overlapping domain of contract law and tort law.

“I have occasionally suggested to my students that a desirable reform in legal education would be to merge the first-year courses in Contracts and Torts into a single course which we could call Contorts.” Grant Gilmore, The Death of Contract 90 (1974).

2. A specific wrong that falls within that domain. 3. Informal. A constitutional tort. See constitutional tort under TORT.

contra (kon-tr<<schwa>>), prep. Against or contrary to. • As a citation signal, contra denotes that the cited authority supports a contrary view. In old law reports, contra often identifies the defendant's attorney (pro que-rente refers to the plaintiff's).

“Observe in the note citing cases in support of a proposition mentioned in the text whether any of the cases follow the word contra, which means that a contrary rule has been laid down in them.” Frank Hall Childs, Where and How to Find the Law 78–79 (1922).

CONTRA ACCOUNT

contra account. See ACCOUNT.

CONTRABAND

contraband (kon-tr<<schwa>>-band), n.1. Illegal or prohibited trade; smuggling. 2. Goods that are unlawful to import, export, or possess. — contraband, adj.

absolute contraband. Goods used primarily for war, such as arms and ammunition, as well as clothing and equipment of a military character.

conditional contraband. Goods susceptible of being used for warlike and peaceful purposes, such as coal and food. — Also termed ancipitis usus (an-sip-i-t<<schwa>>s yoo-s<<schwa>>s).

contraband per se. Property whose possession is unlawful regardless of how it is used. Cf. derivative contraband.

derivative contraband. Property whose possession becomes unlawful when it is used in committing an illegal act. Cf. contraband per se.

CONTRA BONOS MORES

contra bonos mores (kon-tr<<schwa>> boh-nohs mor-eez). [Latin “against good morals”] Offensive to the conscience and to a sense of justice. • Contracts contra bonos mores are voidable. — Also termed contra bonos mores et decorum; adversus bonos mores.

“Whatever is contra bonos mores et decorum, the principles of our law prohibit, and the King's court, as the general censor and guardian of the public manners, is bound to restrain and punish.” Jones v. Randall, 98 E.R. 706, 707 (1774)(per Mansfield, C.J.).

CONTRACAUSATOR

contracausator (kon-tr<<schwa>>-kaw-zay-t<<schwa>>r).Hist. A criminal; a person prosecuted for a crime.

CONTRACEPTIVISM

contraceptivism.Hist. The criminal offense of distributing or prescribing contraceptives.

contract,n.1. An agreement between two or more parties creating obligations that are enforceable or otherwise recognizable at law . [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2, 9, 12.] 2. The writing that sets forth such an agreement .

“The term contract has been used indifferently to refer to three different things: (1) the series of operative acts by the parties resulting in new legal relations; (2) the physical document executed by the parties as the lasting evidence of their having performed the necessary operative acts and also as an operative fact in itself; (3) the legal relations resulting from the operative acts, consisting of a right or rights in personam and their corresponding duties, accompanied by certain powers, privileges, and immunities. The sum of these legal relations is often called ‘obligation.’ The present editor prefers to define contract in sense (3)” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 13 n.2 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“A contract is a promise, or a set of promises, for breach of which the law gives a remedy, or the performance of which the law in some way recognizes as a duty. This definition may not be entirely satisfactory since it requires a subsequent definition of the circumstances under which the law does in fact attach legal obligation to promises. But if a definition were attempted which should cover these operative facts, it would require compressing the entire law relating to the formation of contracts into a single sentence.” Samuel Williston, A Treatise on the Law of Contracts § 1, at 1–2 (Walter H.E. Jaeger ed., 3d ed. 1957) (footnote omitted).

“The term ‘contract’ is also used by lay persons and lawyers alike to refer to a document in which the terms of a contract are written. Use of the word in this sense is by no means improper so long as it is clearly understood that rules of law utilizing the concept ‘contract’ rarely refer to the writing itself. Usually, the reference is to the agreement; the writing being merely a memorial of the agreement.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 1.1, at 3 (4th ed. 1998).

3. A promise or set of promises by a party to a transaction, enforceable or otherwise recognizable at law; the writing expressing that promise or set of promises <when the lessor learned that the rooms were to be used for the delivery of blasphemous lectures, he declined to carry out his contract>. See Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 2 (1979). “The promissory element present in every contract is stressed in a widely quoted definition: ‘A contract is a promise, or set of promises, for breach of which the law gives a remedy, or the performance of which the law in some way recognizes as a duty.’ [1 Samuel Williston, Contracts § 1.1 (4th ed. 1990).] This, like similar definitions, is somewhat misleading. While it is true that a promise, express or implied, is a necessary element in every contract, frequently the promise is coupled with other elements such as physical acts, recitals of fact, and the immediate transfer of property interests. In ordinary usage the contract is not the promise alone, but the entire complex of these elements.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 1.1, at 1–2 (4th ed. 1998).

4. Broadly, any legal duty or set of duties not imposed by the law of tort; esp., a duty created by a decree or declaration of a court <an obligation of record, as a judgment, recognizance, or the like, is included within the term “contract”>.5. The body of law dealing with agreements and exchange <the general theory of contract>.6. The terms of an agreement, or any particular term <there was no express contract about when the money was payable>.7. Loosely, a sale or conveyance. “Sometimes the word ‘contract’ is used to designate a transaction involving the exchange of goods or land for money. When money is exchanged for goods, this constitutes a sale. When money is exchanged for land, this constitutes a conveyance. Sales and conveyances may be the result of a previous contract but they are not the contracts in themselves. There is no undertaking or commitment to do or refrain from doing anything in the future. This indispensable element of contract is missing.” John Edward Murray Jr., Murray on Contracts § 2, at 5 (2d ed. 1974).

8. Loosely, an enforceable agreement between two or more parties to do or not to do a thing or set of things; a compact <when they finally agreed, they had a contract>. — contract, vb. — contractual, adj.

absolute simulated contract. Civil law. A simulated contract that the parties intend to be wholly ineffective. La. Civ. Code art. 2026. See simulated contract.

accessory contract. A contract entered into primarily for the purpose of carrying out a principal contract. • The principal types are suretyship, indemnity, pledge, warranty, and ratification. Cf. principal contract.

adhesion contract. A standard-form contract prepared by one party, to be signed by the party in a weaker position, usu. a consumer, who adheres to the contract with little choice about the terms. — Also termed contract of adhesion; adhesive contract; adhesory contract; adhesiory contract; take-it-or-leave-it contract; leonine contract. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

“Some sets of trade and professional forms are extremely one-sided, grossly favoring one interest group against others, and are commonly referred to as contracts of adhesion. From weakness in bargaining position, ignorance, or indifference, unfavored parties are willing to enter transactions controlled by these lopsided legal documents.” Quintin Johnstone & Dan Hopson Jr., Lawyers and Their Work 329–30 (1967).

“Dangers are inherent in standardization ... for it affords a means by which one party may impose terms on another unwitting or even unwilling party. Several circumstances facilitate this imposition. First, the party that proffers the form has had the advantage of time and expert advice in preparing it, almost inevitably producing a form slanted in its favor. Second, the other party is usually completely or at least relatively unfamiliar with the form and has scant opportunity to read it — an opportunity often diminished by the use of fine print and convoluted clauses. Third, bargaining over terms of the form may not be between equals or, as is more often the case, there may be no possibility of bargaining at all. The form may be used by an enterprise with such disproportionately strong economic power that it simply dictates the terms. Or the form may be a take-it-or-leave-it proposition, often called a contract of adhesion, under which the only alternative to complete adherence is outright rejection.” E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 4.26, at 296–97 (3d ed. 1999).

aleatory contract (ay-lee-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). [fr. Latin aleator “gambler,” fr. alea “the throwing of dice”] A contract in which at least one party's performance depends on some uncertain event that is beyond the control of the parties involved. • Most insurance contracts and life annuities are of this type. — Also termed hazardous contract; wagering contract. Cf. certain contract. [Cases: Contracts 218; Insurance 1713. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 355, 358; Insurance §§ 253, 272, 285.]

“A contract is aleatory when, because of the nature or according to the parties' intent, the performance of either party's obligation, or the extent of the performance, depends on an uncertain event.” La. Civ. Code art. 1912.

alternative contract. A contract in which the performing party may elect to perform one of two or more specified acts to satisfy the obligation; a contract that provides more than one way for a party to complete performance, usu. permitting that party to choose the manner of performance. — Also termed alternative-methods-of-performance contract. [Cases: Contracts 172. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 341, 506; Trading Stamps and Coupons §§ 7–9.]

assessment contract. A contract in which the payment of a benefit is dependent on the collection of an assessment levied on persons holding similar contracts. See assessment insurance under INSURANCE. [Cases: Insurance 2080.]

best-efforts contract. A contract in which a party undertakes to use best efforts to fulfill the promises made rather than to achieve a specific result; a contract in which the adequacy of a party's performance is measured by the party's ability to fulfill the specified obligations. • Although the obligor must use best efforts, the risk of failure lies with the obligee. To be enforceable, a best-efforts term must generally set some kind of goal or guideline against which the efforts may be measured. See BEST EFFORTS. [Cases: Contracts 189. C.J.S. Contracts §§

bilateral contract. A contract in which each party promises a performance, so that each party is an obligor on that party's own promise and an obligee on the other's promise; a contract in which the parties obligate themselves reciprocally, so that the obligation of one party is correlative to the obligation of the other. — Also termed mutual contract; reciprocal contract; (in civil law) synallagmatic contract. See COUNTERPROMISE. [Cases: Contracts 1, 10(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12, 105–106, 108–113.]

blanket contract. A contract covering a group of products, goods, or services for a fixed period.

bona fide contract (boh-n<<schwa>> fīd orfī-dee). A contract in which equity may intervene to correct inequities and to adjust matters according to the parties' intentions.

build-to-print contract. A contract requiring the contractor to build a product according to exact technical specifications provided by the customer. • The design specifications are explicit and are often coupled with performance specifications, so the contractor has little discretion in how to perform. Much governmental contracting is build-to-print. — Also termed design-specification contract. Cf. performance contract (1).

certain contract. A contract that will be performed in a stipulated manner. Cf. aleatory contract.

collateral contract. A side agreement that relates to a contract, which, if unintegrated, can be supplemented by evidence of the side agreement; an agreement made before or at the same time as, but separately from, another contract. See COLLATERAL-CONTRACT DOCTRINE. [Cases: Evidence 440. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1249–1251, 1283.]

“The term ‘collateral contract’ has no very precise meaning in the law. It is generally used as a label for a contract which is collateral, or by the side of, another contract. A great many examples of implied or constructive contracts created by the Courts are collateral in a broad sense.... [A]lthough the normal presumption is that the parties intend a written contract to be exclusive evidence of their intentions, it is always open to a party to show that in fact the writing did not exclusively represent their intentions, because of a ‘collateral’ contract made during the negotiations but not incorporated in the written instrument.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 80–81, 161 (3d ed. 1981).

(k<<schwa>>-myoo-t<<schwa>>-tiv orkom-y<<schwa>>-tay-tiv). Civil law. A contract in which one party's performance is correlative to the performance of the other, so that nonperformance by either affords a defense to the other. La. Civ. Code art. 1911. Cf. independent contract; synallagmatic contract.

conditional contract. An agreement that is enforceable only if another agreement is performed or if another particular prerequisite or condition is satisfied. — Also termed hypothetical contract. [Cases: Contracts 218. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 355, 358.]

consensual contract. Hist. A contract arising from the mere consensus of the parties, without any formal or symbolic acts performed to fix the obligation. • Although the consensual contract was known to the common law, it originated in Roman law, where it embraced four types of contracts in which informal consent alone was sufficient: (1) an agency agreement (mandatum), (2) a partnership agreement (societas), (3) a sale (emptio venditio), or (4) a letting or hiring (locatio conductio). Cf. real contract.

“[T]he peculiarity of these Consensual Contracts is that no formalities are required to create them out of the Pact. Much that is indefensible, and much more that is obscure, has been written about the Consensual Contracts, and it has even been asserted that in them the consent of the Parties is more emphatically given than in any other species of agreement. But the Consensual merely indicates that the Obligation is here annexed at once to the Consensus. The Consensus, or mutual assent of the parties, is the final and crowning ingredient in the Convention, and it is the special characteristic of agreements falling under one of the four heads of Sale, Partnership, Agency, and Hiring, that, as soon as the assent of the parties has supplied this ingredient, there is at once a Contract. The Consensus draws with it the Obligation, performing, in transactions of the sort specified, the exact functions which are discharged, in the other contracts, by the Res or Thing ...” Henry S. Maine, Ancient Law 322–23 (10th ed. 1884).

construction contract. A contract setting forth the specifications for a building project's construction. • This type of contract is usually secured by performance and payment bonds to protect both the owner and the subcontractors. [Cases: Contracts 198.] constructive contract. See implied-in-law contract.

continuing contract. A contract calling for periodic performances. [Cases: Contracts 216. C.J.S. Contracts § 421.]

contract for deed. A conditional sales contract for the sale of real property. — Also termed installment land contract; land sales contract; land contract. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 54. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 145–146.]

contract for sale. 1. A contract for the present transfer of property for a price. — Also termed contract of sale. [Cases: Sales 1(1). C.J.S. Sales §§ 2, 9, 29, 48.] 2. A contract to sell goods at a future time. — Also termed (in sense 2) contract to sell.

contract implied in fact. See implied-in-fact contract.

contract implied in law. See implied-in-law contract.

contract of adhesion. See adhesion contract.

contract of affreightment. See CONTRACT OF AFFREIGHTMENT.

contract of beneficence. See gratuitous contract.

contract of carriage. See CONTRACT OF AFFREIGHTMENT.

contract of indemnity. See indemnity contract.

contract of insurance. See INSURANCE POLICY.

contract of marriage. See marriage contract.

contract of record. A contract that is declared by a court and entered into the court's record. • Contracts of record include judgments, recognizances, and (in England) statutes staple.

“Contracts of record are not really contracts at all, but are transactions which, being entered on the records of certain courts called ‘courts of record,’ are conclusive proof of the facts thereby appearing, and could formerly be enforced by action of law as if they had been put in the shape of a contract.” 1 Stewart Rapalje & Robert L. Lawrence, A Dictionary of American and English Law 282 (1883).

“A contract of record is in point of fact no contract at all, and has nothing whatever to do with the law of contracts. These so-called contracts are the obligations incurred by a judgment or recognizance of a Court of Record. They came to be called contracts only because they were enforceable by the same type of action as was used for genuinely contractual cases in the old common-law system of procedure.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 31 (3d ed. 1981).

contract to pledge. 1. An agreement purporting to create a present pledge without a bailment. 2. An agreement to make a future bailment for the purpose of security. See PLEDGE(3).

contract to satisfaction. See satisfaction contract.

contract uberrimae fidei (yoo-ber-<<schwa>>-mee fi-dee-I). A contract in which the parties owe each other duties with the utmost good faith. [Cases: Insurance 1867, 2996. C.J.S. Insurance § 377.]

“In a certain restricted group of contracts good faith is peculiarly necessary owing to the relationship between the parties, and in these cases — known as contracts uberrimae fidei — there is a full duty to disclose all material facts. The typical instance of such contracts is the contract of insurance. Here the duty to disclose all material facts to the insurer arises from the fact that many of the relevant circumstances are within the exclusive knowledge of one party, and it would be impossible for the insurer to obtain the facts necessary for him to make a proper calculation of the risk he is asked to assume without this knowledge.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 221–22 (3d ed. 1981).

contract under seal. A formal contract that requires no consideration and has the seal of the signer attached. • A contract under seal must be in writing or printed on paper or parchment and is conclusive between the parties when signed, sealed, and delivered. Delivery is made either by actually handing it to the other party (or party's representative) or by stating an intention that the deed be operative even though it is retained in the possession of the party executing it. Modern statutes have mostly eliminated the special effects of a sealed contract. — Also termed sealed contract; special contract; deed; covenant; specialty; specialty contract; common-law specialty. See SEAL. [Cases: Contracts 48. C.J.S. Contracts § 85.]

“The only formal contract of English law is the contract under seal, sometimes also called a deed and sometimes a specialty. It is the only formal contract, because it derives its validity neither from the fact of agreement, nor from the consideration which may exist for the promise of either party, but from the form in which it is expressed.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 82 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“Contracts under seal also bear little resemblance to ordinary contracts, although here at least the liability is based on a promise. A contract under seal, that is to say a deed, ... is a written promise or set of promises which derives its validity from the form, and the form alone, of the executing instrument. In point of fact the ‘form’ of the deed is nowadays surprisingly elastic. The only necessities are that the deed should be intended as such, and should be signed, sealed, and delivered. The sealing, however, has now become largely a fiction, an adhesive wafer simply being attached to the document in place of a genuine seal. Similarly, ‘delivery’ is not literally necessary, provided that there is a clear intention that the deed should be operative.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 31 (3d ed. 1981).

cost-plus contract. A contract in which payment is based on a fixed fee or a percentage added to the actual cost incurred. [Cases: Contracts 229(2). C.J.S. Contracts § 386.]

de facto contract of sale. A contract that purports to pass property but is defective in some element.

dependent contract. A contract conditioned or dependent on another contract.

deposit contract. An agreement between a financial institution and its customer governing the treatment of deposited funds and the payment of checks and other demands against the customer's account. [Cases: Banks and Banking 133, 137–155. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 266–268, 277–278, 283–287, 290, 294–300, 320–321, 326–335, 342–381, 393, 399, 401, 415–423, 425–444, 455.]

design-specification contract. See build-to-print contract.

destination contract. A contract in which a seller bears the risk of loss until the goods arrive at

discharged contract. See void contract (2).

divisible contract. See severable contract.

dual contract. A contract between parties who have made two contracts for the same transaction, sometimes so that one may be used to defraud another (such as a lender) as to the terms of the parties' actual agreement.

electronic contract. See E-CONTRACT.

employment contract. A contract between an employer and employee in which the terms and conditions of employment are stated. [Cases: Master and Servant 2. C.J.S. Apprentices § 2; Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 21, 25–26.]

engineering, procurement, and construction contract. A fixed-price, schedule-intensive construction contract — typically used in the construction of single-purpose projects, such as energy plants — in which the contractor agrees to a wide variety of responsibilities, including the duties to provide for the design, engineering, procurement, and construction of the facility; to prepare start-up procedures; to conduct performance tests; to create operating manuals; and to train people to operate the facility. — Abbr. EPC contract. — Also termed turnkey contract. See SINGLE-PURPOSE PROJECT.

entire-output contract. See output contract.

escrow contract. The agreement among buyer, seller, and escrow holder, setting forth the rights and responsibilities of each. See ESCROW. [Cases: Deposits and Escrows 13, 15. C.J.S. Depositories §§ 15–17; Escrows §§ 6, 8–10.]

evergreen contract. A contract that renews itself from one term to the next in the absence of contrary notice by one of the parties.

executed contract. 1. A contract that has been fully performed by both parties. [Cases: Contracts 6; Sales 197; Vendor and Purchaser 53. C.J.S. Contracts § 8; Sales §§ 214, 223; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 144, 146.] 2. A signed contract. [Cases: Contracts 34. C.J.S. Contracts –§ 73–74, 700.]

executory contract (eg-zek-y<<schwa>>-tor-ee). 1. A contract that remains wholly unperformed or for which there remains something still to be done on both sides, often as a component of a larger transaction and sometimes memorialized by an informal letter agreement, by a memorandum, or by oral agreement. [Cases: Contracts 6; Sales 197; Vendor and Purchaser 53. C.J.S. Contracts § 8; Sales §§ 214, 223; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 144, 146.]

“If a contract is wholly executory, and the legal duties of the parties are as yet unfulfilled, it can be discharged by mutual consent, the acquittance of each from the other's claims being the consideration for the promise of each to waive his own.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 138 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

2.Bankruptcy. A contract under which debtor and nondebtor each have unperformed obligations and the debtor, if it ceased further performance, would have no right to the other party's continued performance. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3106. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 218.]

express contract.A contract whose terms the parties have explicitly set out. — Also termed special contract. Cf. implied contract. [Cases: Contracts 3. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 5, 7.]

financial contract.Securities. An arrangement that (1) takes the form of an individually negotiated contract, agreement, or option to buy, sell, lend, swap, or repurchase, or other similar individually negotiated transaction commonly entered into by participants in the financial markets; (2) involves securities, commodities, currencies, interest or other rates, other measures of value, or any other financial or economic interest similar in purpose or function; and (3) is entered into in response to a request from a counterparty for a quotation, or is otherwise entered into and structured to accommodate the objectives of the counterparty to such an arrangement.

fixed-price contract.A contract in which the buyer agrees to pay the seller a definite and predetermined price regardless of increases in the seller's cost or the buyer's ability to acquire the same goods in the market at a lower price. [Cases: Sales 77. C.J.S. Sales §§ 26, 96–98.]

formal contract.A contract made through the observance of certain prescribed formalities. • Among the formal contracts are the contract under seal, the recognizance, the negotiable instrument, and the letter of credit. Cf. informal contract; formal agreement under AGREEMENT.

forward contract.An agreement to buy or sell a particular nonstandardized asset (usu. currencies) at a fixed price on a future date. • Unlike a futures contract, a forward contract is not traded on a formal exchange. — Also termed forward agreement. Cf. FUTURES CONTRACT.

futures contract.See FUTURES CONTRACT.

gambling contract.An agreement to engage in a gamble; a contract in which two parties wager something, esp. money, for a chance to win a prize. • Where gambling is legal, contracts related to legal gambling activities are enforceable. — Also termed gaming contract. See wagering contract. [Cases: Gaming 25.]

“Generally, under or apart from statutes so providing, or prohibiting such contracts or transactions, gambling contracts and transactions are illegal and void and cannot be enforced; and such contracts are void ab initio.... A gambling contract is invalid, no matter what outward form it may assume, and no ingenuity can make it legal.” 38 C.J.S. Gaming § 26, at 138–39 (1996).

government contract.A contract to which a government or government agency is a party, esp. for the purchase of goods and services. See procurement contract.

gratuitous contract (gr<<schwa>>-t[y]oo-i-t<<schwa>>s).1. A contract made for the benefit of a promisee who does not give consideration to the promisor. — Also termed contract of beneficence; contract of benevolence. Cf. onerous contract. 2.Civil law. A contract in which one party promises to give a benefit to the other party without expecting or gaining any benefit in return. — Also termed voluntary contract.

grubstake contract.A contract between two parties in which one party provides the grubstake — money and supplies — and the other party prospects for and locates mines on public land. • Each party acquires an interest in the mine as agreed to in the contract. Grubstake contracts are used chiefly in the western United States. In some states, such as Alaska, a request for grubstake money is considered the offer of a security and must be registered. — Also termed grubstaking contract. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 101. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 396–401.]

guaranteed-sale contract.A contract between a real-estate agency and a property owner in which the agency agrees to buy the property at a guaranteed price after a specified length of time if it has not been sold under the listing agreement. • The guaranteed price is usu. a substantial discount from the listed price. — Also termed guaranteed-purchase contract.

guaranty contract.See GUARANTY(1).

hazardous contract.See aleatory contract.

hypothetical contract.See conditional contract.

illegal contract.A promise that is prohibited because the performance, formation, or object of the agreement is against the law. • Technically speaking, an illegal contract is not a contract at all, so the phrase is a misnomer. Cf. unenforceable contract; void contract. [Cases: Contracts 103. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 195–200, 213–214.]

“An illegal contract is exceptionally difficult to define. It does not merely mean a contract contrary to the criminal law, although such a contract would indubitably be illegal. But a contract can well be illegal without contravening the criminal law, because there are certain activities which the law does not actually prohibit, but at the same time regards as contrary to the public interest and definitely to be discouraged, for instance, prostitution. While a void contract is not necessarily illegal, an illegal contract is often void. However, the consequences of an illegal contract differ somewhat from those usually produced by a simply void contract, so illegal contracts are usually accorded separate treatment.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 38 (3d ed. 1981).

illusory contract.An agreement in which one party gives as consideration a promise that is so insubstantial as to impose no obligation. • The insubstantial promise renders the contract unenforceable. [Cases: Contracts 10. C.J.S. Contracts § 108.]

immoral contract.A contract that so flagrantly violates societal norms as to be unenforceable. [Cases: Contracts 112. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 275–276.]

implied contract. 1. An implied-in-law contract. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts 1. C.J.S. Im-plied and Constructive Contracts §§ 2–3.] 2. An implied-in-fact contract. Cf. express contract. [Cases: Contracts 27. C.J.S. Contracts § 6.]

implied-in-fact contract.A contract that the parties presumably intended as their tacit understanding, as inferred from their conduct and other circumstances. — Also termed contract implied in fact. [Cases: Contracts 27. C.J.S. Contracts § 6.]

implied-in-law contract. An obligation created by law for the sake of justice; specif., an obligation imposed by law because of some special relationship between them, or because one of them would otherwise be unjustly enriched. • An implied-in-law contract is not actually a contract, but instead a remedy that allows the plaintiff to recover a benefit conferred on the defendant. — Also termed contract implied in law; quasi-contract; constructive contract. See UNJUST ENRICHMENT. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts 1. C.J.S. Implied and Constructive Contracts §§ 2–3.]

“[A]dventurous courts have turned to the idea of a ‘contract implied in law,’ a ‘quasi-contract’ — not really a contract, a legal fiction necessary to promote the ends of justice and, in particular, to prevent ‘unjust enrichment.’” Grant Gilmore, The Death of Contract 73–74 (1974).

impossible contract. A contract that the law will not enforce because there is no feasible way for one of the parties to perform. See IMPOSSIBILITY(3). [Cases: Contracts 309. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 520–522, 524.]

indemnity contract. A contract by which the promisor agrees to reimburse a promisee for some loss irrespective of a third person's liability. — Also termed contract of indemnity.

independent contract. A contract in which the mutual acts or promises of the parties have no relation to each other, either as equivalents or as considerations. Cf. commutative contract.

informal contract. 1. A contract other than one under seal, a recognizance, or a negotiable instrument; specif., that derives its force not from the observance of formalities but because of the presence in the transaction of certain elements that are usually present when people make promises with binding intent — namely, mutual assent and consideration (or a device other than consideration). • An informal contract may be made with or without a writing. Most modern contracts are informal. — Also termed bargain; simple contract. 2. See parol contract.

innominate contract (i-nom-<<schwa>>-nit). Roman & civil law. A contract not classifiable under any particular name; a contract for which the law supplies nothing in addition to the express agreement of the parties. La. Civ. Code art. 1914. • This type of contract was developed late in classical Roman law. Although the agreements were reciprocal, they did not become operational without at least part performance. — Also termed innominate real contract. Cf. nominate contract.

installment contract. A contract requiring or authorizing the delivery of goods in separate lots, or payments in separate increments, to be separately accepted. • Under the UCC, this type of agreement will be considered one contract even if it has a clause stating that each delivery is a separate contract. UCC § 2-612. [Cases: Sales 163, 192. C.J.S. Sales § 181.]

installment land contract. See contract for deed.

integrated contract. See INTEGRATED CONTRACT.

invalid contract. A contract that is either void or voidable. — Also termed invalid agreement. [Cases: Contracts 98. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 137, 139–140, 145, 153–155, 157, 171, 173–174, 185, 188.]

investment contract. See INVESTMENT CONTRACT.

joint contract. A contract in which two or more promisors are together bound to fulfill its obligations, or one in which two or more promisees are together entitled to performance. Cf. severable contract. [Cases: Contracts 181. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 366, 371.]

land contract. See contract for deed.

land sales contract. See contract for deed.

leonine contract. See adhesion contract.

letter contract. In federal contract law, a written contract with sufficient provisions to permit the contractor to begin performance. [Cases: Contracts 26. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 61–62, 64.]

leverage contract. See LEVERAGE CONTRACT.

literal contract. 1. Roman law. A type of written contract originally created by — and later evidenced by — an entry of the sum due on the debit side of a ledger, binding a signatory even though the signatory receives no consideration. • Literal contracts were often used for novations. See LITTERIS OBLIGATIO.

“Though an obligation could be created by a literal contract in the time of Gaius, the so-called literal contract of Justinian was not, in itself, a means of creating an obligation, but was the evidence of an obligation created in some other way The true literal contract, as described by Gaius, may be defined as a means of creating an obligation to pay money by a fictitious entry ... in the creditor's account book ... with the consent of the intended debtor. A, with B's consent, enters the fact that B is indebted to him ... and thereupon B is under an obligation to pay, though no money has passed between them.” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 316–17 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

2. Civil law. A contract fully evidenced by a writing and binding on the signatory.

marine contract. See maritime contract.

maritime contract. A contract that is recognized in admiralty jurisdiction. • In general, a maritime contract relates to a vessel in its use as such, to navigation on navigable waters, to transportation by sea, or to maritime employment. — Also termed marine contract.

marketing contract. 1. A business's agreement with an agency or other association for the promotion of sales of the business's goods or services. 2. An agreement between a cooperative and its members, by which the members agree to sell through the cooperative, and the cooperative agrees to obtain an agreed price.

marriage contract. A form of mutual consent required for a matrimonial relationship to exist according to the law of the place where the consent takes place. — Also termed contract of marriage.

mixed contract. 1. Civil law. A contract in which the respective benefits conferred are unequal. 2. A contract for both the sale of goods and services. • The UCC may apply to a mixed contract if the predominant purpose is for the sale of goods. [Cases: Sales 3.1. C.J.S. Sales §§ 3–4.]

mutual contract. See bilateral contract.

naked contract. See NUDUM PACTUM.

nominate contract (nom-<<schwa>>-nit). Civil law. A contract distinguished by a particular name, such as sale, insurance, or lease, the very use of which determines some of the rules governing the contract and the contractual rights of the parties, without the need for special stipulations. • The contracts are generally divided into four types: (1) real (arising from something done), (2) oral (arising from something said), (3) literal (arising from something written), and (4) consensual (arising from something agreed to). La. Civ. Code art. 1914. Cf. innominate contract.

nude contract. See NUDUM PACTUM.

onerous contract. Civil law. A contract in which each party is obligated to perform in exchange for each party's promise of performance. La. Civ. Code art. 1909. Cf. gratuitous contract.

option contract. See OPTION(2).

oral contract. See parol contract (1).

output contract. A contract in which a seller promises to supply and a buyer to buy all the goods or services that a seller produces during a specified period and at a set price. • The quantity term is measured by the seller's output. An output contract assures the seller of a market or outlet for the period of the contract. — Also termed en-tire-output contract. Cf. requirements contract. [Cases: Sales 71(4). C.J.S. Sales §§ 178–180.]

parol contract (p-<<schwa>>-rohlorpar-<<schwa>>l). 1. A contract or modification of a contract that is not in writing or is only partially in writing. — Also termed oral contract; parol agreement; (loosely) verbal contract. [Cases: Contracts 31, 238(2). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 68, 412–414.] 2. At common law, a contract not under seal, although it could be in writing. — Also termed informal contract; simple contract. See PAROL-EVIDENCE RULEE.

pay-or-play contract. A contract in which one party agrees to perform and the other agrees to pay for the promised performance even if performance is never demanded. • Pay-or-play contracts are usu. made in the entertainment industry.

performance contract. 1. A contract that requires a party to act personally and does not allow substitution. • People who provide unique personal services often make performance contracts. 2. A contract that allows the contractor to choose the means to achieve the end result. • The product's specifications may be loose and allow the contractor latitude in deciding how to perform. Cf. build-to-print contract.

personal contract. 1. A contract that binds a person but not that person's heirs or assignees because the contract requires a personal performance for which there is no adequate substitute. 2. A contract that binds a representative as an individual rather than binding the person or entity represented. • For instance, contracts made by a decedent's personal representative traditionally bind the representative, not the estate, unless expressly agreed otherwise. 3. A real-property-related contract that is treated as personal property, not as a substitute for the real property. • Ex-amples include oil-and-gas royalty contracts and property-insurance policies.

pignorative contract (pig-n<<schwa>>-ray-tiv). Civil law. A contract in which the seller of real property, instead of relinquishing possession of the property that is theoretically sold, gives the buyer a lien; a contract of pledge, hypothecation, or mortgage of realty. [Cases: Mortgages 31. C.J.S. Mortgages § 20.]

precontract. A contract that precludes a party from entering into a comparable agreement with someone else. • Historically, a precontract was usu. a promise to marry. It formed an impediment to marriage with any person other than the promisee. The legal impediment was extinguished and revived several times until it was finally abolished in 1752 by 26 Geo. 2, ch. 33, § 13. Cf. LETTER OF INTENT. [Cases: Contracts 25. C.J.S. Contracts § 60.]

principal contract. A contract giving rise to an accessory contract, as an agreement from which a secured obligation originates. Cf. accessory contract.

private contract. An agreement between private parties affecting only private rights.

procurement contract. A contract in which a government receives goods or services. • A procurement contract, including the bidding process, is subject to government regulation. See FEDERAL ACQUISITION REGULATION. — Also termed government contract. [Cases: Public Contracts 5. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 7–9.]

public contract. A contract that, although it involves public funds, may be performed by private persons and may benefit them. [Cases: Public Contracts 1. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 2–3, 6.]

quasi-contract. See implied-in-law contract.

real contract.Hist. A contract in which money or other property passes from one party to another; a contract requiring something more than mere consent, such as the lending of money or handing over of a thing. • This term, derived from Roman law, referred to contracts concerning both personal and real property. Real contracts in-cluded transactions in the form of commodatum, depositum, mutuum, and pignus. Cf. consensual contract.

“The essence of ...the real contracts, was that, at the time the agreement was made, one party, by delivering something belonging to him to the other party to the contract, imposed on that other an obligation to return the thing itself or, in the case of things intended to be consumed, an equivalent in kind. As the Roman lawyers ex-pressed it, the contractual obligation was created by something being handed over” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 292 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

“The term ‘real contract’ is in common use in the Civil law, and though not commonly used by judges or writers in the common law, nevertheless describes certain obligations enforced in England from very early times. A real contract is an obligation arising from the possession or transfer of a res.” Samuel Williston, A Treatise on the Law of Contracts § 8, at 19 (Walter H.E. Jaeger ed., 3d ed. 1957).

relative simulated contract.Civil law. A simulated contract that the parties intend to have some effects, but not necessarily those recited in the contract. La. Civ. Code art. 2027. See simulated contract.

requirements contract.A contract in which a buyer promises to buy and a seller to supply all the goods or services that a buyer needs during a specified period. • The quantity term is measured by the buyer's requirements. A requirements contract assures the buyer of a source for the period of the contract. Cf. output contract. [Cases: Sales 71(4). C.J.S. Sales §§ 178–180.]

retail installment contract.A contract for the sale of goods under which the buyer makes periodic payments and the seller retains title to or a security interest in the goods. — Also termed retail installment contract and security agreement; conditional sales contract. Cf. chattel mortgage under MORTGAGE. [Cases: Consumer Credit 4. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 280, 284–293.]

satisfaction contract.A contract by which one party agrees to perform to the satisfaction of the other. — Also termed contract to satisfaction. [Cases: Contracts 282. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 561, 563–564.]

sealed contract.See contract under seal.

self-determination contract.Under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, an agreement by which the federal government provides funds to an Indian tribe and allows the tribe to plan and administer a program that would otherwise be administered by the federal government. 25 USCA § 450b(j). [Cases: Indians 7. C.J.S. Indians §§ 46–47.]

service contract. A contract to perform a service; esp., a written agreement to provide maintenance or repairs on a consumer product for a specified term. [Cases: Contracts 190; Sales 3.1. C.J.S. Contracts § 341; Sales §§ 3–4.]

severable contract. A contract that includes two or more promises each of which can be enforced separately, so that failure to perform one of the promises does not necessarily put the promisor in breach of the entire contract. — Also termed divisible contract; several contract. See SEVERABILITY CLAUSE. Cf. joint contract. [Cases: Contracts 137, 171. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 297, 349–354.]

shipment contract. A contract in which a seller bears the risk of damage to the items sold only until they are brought to the place of shipment. • If a contract for the sale of goods does not address the terms of delivery, it is presumed to be a shipment contract. UCC §§ 2-319, 2-504, 2-509. Cf. destination contract. [Cases: Sales 201(4). C.J.S. Sales §§ 224–227.]

“In the jargon of commercial lawyers, a contract that requires or authorizes the seller to send the goods to the buyer but does not require that he deliver them at any particular destination is called a ‘shipment contract.’ Generally, in shipment contracts, risk of loss passes to the buyer at the point of shipment, which is also the point of ‘delivery,’ while in ‘destination contracts’ (seller must deliver at a particular destination) risk passes upon seller’s tender at destination.” 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 3-5, at 128–29 (4th ed. 1995).

simple contract. See parol contract (2).

simulated contract. Civil law. A contract that, by mutual agreement, does not express the true intent of the parties. La. Civ. Code art. 2025. • A simulated contract is absolute when the parties intend that the contract will impose no obligations; no obligations are enforceable on the parties by such a contract. A simulated contract is relative if the parties intend it to impose obligations different from those recited in the contract; the intended obligations are enforceable if all relevant conditions are met. A simulated contract may affect the rights of third parties. See action en déclaration de simulation under ACTION(4). — Also termed simulation. [Cases: Fraudulent Con-veyances 1, 24(1).] special contract. 1. See contract under seal. 2. A contract with peculiar provisions that are not ordinarily found in contracts relating to the same subject matter. 3. See express contract.

specialty contract. See contract under seal.

standard-form contract. A usu. preprinted contract containing set clauses, used repeatedly by a business or within a particular industry with only slight additions or modifications to meet the specific situation. • Because stan-dard-form contracts usu. favor the drafting party, they can amount to adhesion contracts. Courts offset the drafting party's advantage by construing the contract in the light least favorable to the drafting party. — Also termed standardized contract. See adhesion contract. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2, 9, 12.]

“[U]niformity of terms in contracts typically recurring in a business enterprise is an important factor in the exact calculation of risks. Risks that are difficult to calculate can be excluded altogether. Unforeseeable contingencies affecting performance, such as strikes, fire, and transportation difficulties can be taken care of... Standardized contracts have thus become an important means of excluding or controlling the [‘irrational factors’ that could persuade a court or jury to decide against a powerful defendant].” Friedrich Kessler, Contracts of Adhesion — Some Thoughts About Freedom of Contract, 43 Colum. L. Rev. 629, 631–32 (1943).

statutory contract. A contract for which a statute prescribes certain terms. • Statutes often govern the contracts made by public entities, but also some by private persons. For example, a statute may define and set minimum standards for terms in home-improvement contracts.

stock-option contract. A negotiable instrument that gives the holder the right to buy or sell — for a specified price within a fixed time limit — a certain number of shares of the corporation's stock. See STOCK OPTION. [Cases: Corporations 116. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 233–240, 242.]

subcontract. A contract made by a party to another contract for carrying out the other contract, or a part of it.

subscription contract. See SUBSCRIPTION(3).

substituted contract. A contract made between parties to an earlier contract so that the new one takes the place of and discharges the earlier one. • A substituted contract differs from a novation (as “novation” is traditionally defined) in that the latter requires the substitution for the original obligor of a third person not a party to the original agreement; when the obligee accepts the third party, the agreement is immediately discharged. In contrast to both substituted contract and novation, an executory accord does not immediately discharge an obligation; rather, the obligation is discharged on performance, often by a third person, rather than the original obligor. Cf. NOVATION; ACCORD(2). [Cases: Accord and Satisfaction 1; Novation 1, 4. C.J.S. Accord and Satisfaction §§ 2–17, 25–33; Novation §§ 2–4, 9–16, 29.]

“[A] substituted contract immediately discharges the prior claim which is merged into the new agreement. Consequently, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, the original claim can no longer be enforced. In the event of a breach, any action would have to be brought on the substituted agreement.... The concept of ‘substituted contract’ was created largely to circumvent the unsatisfactory rules that until recently governed executory accords. Now that these rules have been modernized, the next step should be the reabsorption of the substituted contract into the executory accord.... [T]he untidy distinction between executory accords and substituted contracts should not be allowed to complicate litigation about routine claim settlements.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 21.6, at 803 (4th ed. 1998).

synallagmatic contract (sin-schwa-lag-mat-ik). [fr. Greek synallagma “mutual agreement”] Civil law. A contract in which the parties obligate themselves reciprocally, so that the obligation of each party is correlative to the obligation of the other. La. Civ. Code arts. 1908, 1911.

- A synallagmatic contract is characterized by correlative obligations, whereas a commutative contract is characterized by correlative performances. The term synallagmatic contract is essentially the civil-law equivalent of the common law's bilateral contract. Cf. commutative contract.

tacit contract. A contract in which conduct takes the place of written or spoken words in the offer or acceptance (or both). [Cases: Contracts 27. C.J.S. Contracts § 6.]

take-it-or-leave-it contract. See adhesion contract.

take-or-pay contract. A contract requiring the buyer to either purchase and receive a minimum amount of a product ("take") or pay for this minimum without taking immediate delivery ("pay").

- These contracts are often used in the energy and oil-and-gas businesses. [Cases: Electricity 11(3); Gas 13(1).]

third-party-beneficiary contract. A contract that directly benefits a third party and that gives the third party a right to sue any of the original contracting parties for breach. [Cases: Contracts 187. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 612–622, 624–629.]

unconscionable contract. See unconscionable agreement under AGREEMENT.

unenforceable contract. A valid contract that, because of some technical defect, cannot be fully enforced; a contract that has some legal consequences but that may not be enforced in an action for damages or specific performance in the face of certain defenses, such as the statute of frauds. Cf. illegal contract; void contract. — Also termed agreement of imperfect obligation. [Cases: Contracts 1, 138(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12, 280–281, 283–284, 290, 292, 300.]

"The difference between what is voidable and what is unenforceable is mainly a difference between substance and procedure. A contract may be good, but incapable of proof owing to lapse of time, want of written form, or failure to affix a revenue stamp. Writing in the first cases, a stamp in the last, may satisfy the requirements of law and render the contract enforceable, but it is never at any time in the power of either party to avoid the transaction. The contract is unimpeachable, only it cannot be proved in court." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 19–20 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

"Courts are ... fond of condemning the unenforceable agreement as 'illegal.' This is misleading insofar as it suggests that some penalty is necessarily imposed on one of the parties, apart from the court's refusal to enforce the agreement. In some cases, the conduct that renders the agreement unenforceable is also a crime, but this is not necessarily or even usually so. It is therefore preferable to attribute unenforceability to grounds of public policy rather than to 'illegality.'" E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 5.1, at 323 (3d ed. 1999).

unilateral contract. A contract in which only one party makes a promise or undertakes a performance; a contract in which no promisor receives a promise as consideration for the promise given. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

"[M]any unilateral contracts are in reality gratuitous promises enforced for good reason with no element of bar-gain.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 126 (3d ed. 1981).

valid contract. A contract that is fully operative in accordance with the parties' intent. — Also termed valid agreement. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

variable annuity contract. Securities. An annuity whose payments vary according to how well the fund (usu. made up of common stocks) that backs it is performing. SEC Rule 0-1(e)(1) (17 CFR § 270.0-1(e)(1)). See variable annuity under ANNUITY.

verbal contract. See parol contract (1).

voidable contract. A contract that can be affirmed or rejected at the option of one of the parties; a contract that is void as to the wrongdoer but not void as to the party wronged, unless that party elects to treat it as void. [Cases: Contracts 98, 136. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 137, 139–140, 145, 153–155, 157, 171, 173–174, 185, 188, 280–281, 286, 296.]

void contract. 1. A contract that is of no legal effect, so that there is really no contract in existence at all. • A contract may be void because it is technically defective, contrary to public policy, or illegal. Cf. illegal contract; unenforceable contract. [Cases: Contracts 98, 136. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 137, 139–140, 145, 153–155, 157, 171, 173–174, 185, 188, 280–281, 286, 296.]

“Strictly speaking, a ‘void contract’ is a contradiction in terms; for the words describe a state of things in which, despite the intention of the parties, no contract has been made. Yet the expression, however faulty, is a compendious way of putting a case in which there has been the outward semblance without the reality of contract.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 18 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“A valid contract is, of course, simply a contract of full force and effect, not vitiated in any way. A so-called void contract, on the other hand, is really a contradiction in terms inasmuch as a contract has already been defined in terms applicable only to a valid contract. However, the term is convenient and is universally used. For purposes of exposition, it is convenient to treat void contracts as falling, broadly speaking, into main categories. On the one hand, are cases where one of the normal requirements for the creation of a contract is absent, while, on the other hand, are cases where all the normal requirements are satisfied, but the contract is void because the law disapproves of its purpose or the terms by which it seeks to achieve that purpose. Typical examples of contracts which are void because one of the normal requirements is absent are contracts in which the acceptance of an offer has not been communicated or in which a promise is given gratuitously. Typical examples of contracts which are void because of their terms or objects are wagering contracts, and contracts prejudicial to family relations.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 36–37 (3d ed. 1981).

2. A contract that has been fully performed. — Also termed discharged contract.

“Not only is the term ‘void contract’ in itself technically inaccurate, but a contract is sometimes said to be void, not because it was destitute of legal effect from its commencement, but because it has been fully performed, and so has ceased to have legal operation. It would be more proper to describe such a contract as ‘discharged.’ ” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 20 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

3. Loosely, a voidable contract.

“Again the word ‘void’ has been used, even by judges and the framers of statutes, where ‘voidable’ is meant. One illustration will suffice. By 17 Geo. III, c. 50, failure to pay certain duties at an auction is stated to make a bidding ‘nul and void to all intents,’ but this does not entitle a purchaser who has repented of his bargain to avoid the contract by his own wrong, that is by refusal to pay the statutory duty. The contract is voidable at the option of the party who has not broken the condition imposed by law.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 20–21 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

voluntary contract. See gratuitous contract (2).

wagering contract. 1. A contract the performance of which depends on the happening of an uncertain event, made entirely for sport. See gambling contract. Cf. aleatory contract. [Cases: Gaming 17(1).]

“Although wagering and gaming agreements were generally enforceable under the English common law, they were condemned in most American states, in part because they were thought to encourage shiftlessness, poverty, and immorality, and in part because they were regarded as too frivolous to be worthy of judicial attention. Irwin v. Williar, 110 U.S. 499 (1884) (‘In England it is held that the contracts, although wagers, were not void at common law, ... while generally, in this country, all wagering contracts are held to be illegal and void as against public policy.’)” E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 5.2 n.4, at 326–27 (3d ed. 1999).

2. A contract in which an uncertain event affects or results from a business transaction. • With this type of wagering contract, a businessperson is protected from a trade risk.

written contract. A contract whose terms have been reduced to writing.

“Written contracts are also commonly signed, but a written contract may consist of an exchange of correspondence, of a letter written by the promisee and assented to by the promisor without signature, or even of a memorandum or printed document not signed by either party.

Statutes relating to written contracts are often expressly limited to contracts signed by one or both parties. Whether such a limitation is to be implied when not explicit depends on the purpose and context.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 95 cmt. c (1979) (citations omitted).

contract, freedom of. See FREEDOM OF CONTRACT.

CONTRACT OF AFFREIGHTMENT contract of affreightment (<<schwa>>-frayt-m<<schwa>>nt). Maritime law. An agreement for carriage of goods by water. • A contract of affreightment may employ a bill of lading, a charterparty, or both to ship the goods. — Abbr. COA. — Also termed contract of carriage. See CHARTERPARTY. [Cases: Shipping 104. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 247–250, 252–254.]

contractor. 1. A party to a contract. 2. More specif., one who contracts to do work or provide supplies for another.

of injury to others and who has the personal characteristics necessary to carry out the work.

general contractor. One who contracts for the completion of an entire project, including purchasing all materials, hiring and paying subcontractors, and coordinating all the work. — Also termed original contractor; prime contractor. [Cases: Contracts 197. C.J.S. Contracts § 11.]

independent contractor. See INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR.

subcontractor. See SUBCONTRACTOR.

CONTRACT RATE

contract rate. See INTEREST RATE.

CONTRACTS CLAUSE

Contracts Clause. The clause of the U.S. Constitution prohibiting states from passing a law that would impair private contractual obligations. • The Supreme Court has generally interpreted this clause so that states can regulate private contractual obligations if the regulation is reasonable and necessary to serve an important public purpose. U.S. Const. art. I, § 10, cl. 1. — Also termed Contract Clause; Obligation of Contracts Clause. [Cases: Constitutional Law 113–185. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 277–389.]

CONTRACT-SPECIFICATION DEFENSE

contract-specification defense. An affirmative defense that immunizes a contractor from liability for a defect in a product when the contractor has manufactured or performed according to detailed contractual orders. • The defense applies to specialized, single-use components and protects a component supplier from claims of negligent design if the component conforms to the contractual specifications — unless the specifications are obviously dangerous. Under modern notions of strict liability, courts have increasingly rejected this defense. Cf. GOVERNMENT-CONTRACTOR DEFENSE; GOVERNMENT-AGENCY DEFENSE .

CONTRACT SYSTEM

contract system. Hist. The practice of leasing prisoners out to private individuals for the prisoners' labor.

contractus (k<<schwa>>n-trak-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. A contract; an agreement between two or more parties, usu. to create an actionable bond between them. See CONTRAHERE.

“The texts of the Roman Law do not supply a definition of contract. The words contractus — contrahere — like ‘contract’ in English, are used in various senses, sometimes wider, sometimes narrower. Labeo gives contractus the meaning of a reciprocal obligation, such as purchase and sale, hire, partnership. But when the Romans speak of obligation arising from contract, they mean obligations arising from convention or agreement. In Roman law it was far from being the case that all agreements which might be expected to produce a legal obligation did so.” R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 285 (4th ed. 1956).

CONTRACTUS BONAE FIDEI, VEL STRICTI JURIS

contractus bonae fidei, vel stricti juris (k<<schwa>>n-trak-t<<schwa>>s boh-nee fi-dee-I, vel strik-tljoor-is). [Latin] Roman law. Contracts of good faith or of strict law; a contract requiring that the parties perform their duties in good faith. • In an action brought on a contractus bonae fidei, the plaintiff had to assert that he had not acted in bad faith. All consensual contracts were considered contractus bonae fidei. Essentially, then, the phrase was typically used when a remedy was being sought for a breach. Judges enforced contracts of good faith (e.g., contracts of sale) according to the requirements of good faith and contracts of strict law (e.g., stipulations) according to their strict terms. — Sometimes shortened to contractus bonae fidei.

CONTRACT ZONING

contract zoning. See ZONING.

CONTRADICTORY JUDGMENT

contradictory judgment. See JUDGMENT.

CONTRADICTORY MOTION

contradictory motion. See MOTION(1).

CONTRA EXECUTIONEM

contra executionem (kon-tr<<schwa>> ek-si-kyoo-shee-oh-n<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. Against execution. • The phrase appeared in reference to the presumption in favor of a defendant's objections to the manner of execution against the defendant's property.

CONTRAFACTIO

contrafactio (kon-tr<<schwa>>-fak-shee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. The act of counterfeiting. • The word appeared frequently in the phrase contrafactio sigilli regis (“counterfeiting the king's seal”).

CONTRA FIDEM TABULARUM NUPTIALIUM

contra fidem tabularum nuptialium (kon-tr<<schwa>> fl-d<<schwa>>m tab-y<<schwa>>-lair-<<schwa>>m n<<schwa>>p-shee-ay-lee-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Scots law. Against the provisions of the marriage contract. • The phrase usu. referred to antenuptial contracts.

CONTRA FORMAM COLLATIONIS

contra formam collationis (kon-tr<<schwa>> for-m<<schwa>>m k<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin “against the form of a collation”] Hist. A writ to regain lands given to a religious society in exchange for perpetual alms. • The writ was usu. sought by an heir of the person who had given the land away.

CONTRA FORMAM FEOFFMENTI

contra formam feoffmenti (kon-tr<<schwa>> for-m<<schwa>>m feef-men-tl). [Latin “contrary to the form of the feoffment”] Hist. A writ that commanded a landowner to stop demanding from a tenant more services than those included in the tenant's deed to the land. — Also spelled contra formam feoffamenti.

“Contra formam feoffamenti is a writ that lies where a man before the statute of quia emptores terrarum, made 18 Ed. 1, infeoffed another by deed to do certain service; if the feoffor or his heirs distrain him to do other service than is comprised in the deed, then the tenant shall have this writ, commanding him not to distrain him to do other service than is comprised in the deed.” Termes de la Ley 116 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

CONTRA FORMAM STATUTI

contra formam statuti (kon-tr<<schwa>> for-m<<schwa>>m st<<schwa>>-tyoo-tl). [Law Latin] Contrary to the form of the statute. See AGAINST THE FORM OF THE STATUTE .

CONTRAHERE

contrahere (k<<schwa>>n-tray-h<<schwa>>-ree), vb. [Latin “draw together”] Roman law. 1. To establish or enter into a formal relationship, as between husband and wife, creditor and debtor, by mutual agreement. 2. To commit a crime. 3. To accept an inheritance. 4. Generally, to perform any act of legal significance. See CONTRACTUS.

CONTRA HEREDITATEM JACENTEM

contra hereditatem jacentem (kon-tr<<schwa>> h<<schwa>>-red-i-tay-t<<schwa>>m j<<schwa>>-sen-t<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. Against a succession that the heir has not taken up; against a fallen inheritance. • The phrase appeared in reference to a creditor's right to pursue a debtor's estate for recovery of a debt even though the heir did not take up the succession.

CONTRA JUS BELLI

contra jus belli (kon-tr<<schwa>> j<<schwa>>s bel-I). [Latin] Against the law of war.

CONTRA JUS COMMUNE

contra jus commune (kon-tr<<schwa>> j<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>-myoo-nee). [Latin] Against common right or law; contrary to the rule of the common law.

CONTRA LEGEM

contra legem (kon-tr<<schwa>> lee-j<<schwa>>m). [Latin] 1. Contrary to law; against the law. 2. EQUITY CONTRA LEGEM.

CONTRA LEGEM TERRAE

contra legem terrae (kon-tr<<schwa>> lee-j<<schwa>>m ter-ee). [Latin] Against the law of the land.

CONTRA LIBERTATEM MATRIMONII

contra libertatem matrimonii (kon-tr<<schwa>> lib-<<schwa>>r-tay-t<<schwa>>m ma-tri-moh-nee-I). [Latin] Hist. Against freedom of marriage. • The phrase appeared in reference to marriage restraints, some of which were illegal.

CONTRA NON PRODUCTA

contra non producta (kon-tr<<schwa>> non pr<<schwa>>-d<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>). [Law Latin “against things not produced”] Scots law. In a reduction action, a decree declaring that a challenged deed is void.

CONTRA NON VALENTEM

contra non valentem. See DOCTRINE OF CONTRA NON VALENTEM.

CONTRA OMNES GENTES

contra omnes gentes (kon-tr<<schwa>> om-nee-z jen-teez). [Latin] Hist. Against all people. • These were the traditional words of warranty in a deed.

CONTRA OMNES MORTALES

contra omnes mortales (kon-tr<<schwa>> ahm-nee-z mor-tay-leez). [Law Latin] Hist. Against all mortals. • This language was contained in an absolute warranty.

CONTRA PACEM

contra pacem (kon-tr<<schwa>> pay-s<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Against the peace. • This term was formerly used in indictments to signify that the alleged offense is against the public peace.

CONTRA PIETATEM

contra pietatem (kon-tr<<schwa>> pI-<<schwa>>-tay-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. Contrary to natural duty.

CONTRAPLACITUM

contraplacitum (kon-tr<<schwa>>-plas-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. A counterplea.

CONTRA PROFERENTEM

contra proferentem (kon-tr<<schwa>> prof-<<schwa>>-ren-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin “against the offeror”] The doctrine that, in interpreting documents, ambiguities are to be construed unfavorably to the drafter. — Also spelled contra proferentes. — Also termed ambiguity doctrine. [Cases: Contracts 155. C.J.S. Contracts § 337.]

CONTRAROTULATOR

contrarotulator (kon-tr<<schwa>>-roch-y<<schwa>>-lay-t<<schwa>>r or kon-tr<<schwa>>-roh-ty<<schwa>>-lay-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin “controller”] Hist. A person responsible for collecting and managing funds on behalf of the Crown or other government office. • A variety of controllers existed in England, including the contrarotulator customarum (controller of the customs), contrarotulator hospitii domini regis (controller of the king's household), and contrarotulator pipae (controller of the pipe — i.e., an officer who collected debts due to the Exchequer).

CONTRARY TO LAW

contra spolium (kon-tr<<schwa>> spoh-lee-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin “against the spoil”] Scots law. A real action for the recovery of stolen movable property.

CONTRA TABULAS

contra tabulas. See BONORUM POSSESSIO CONTRA TABULAS.

CONTRAVENE

contravene (kon-tr<<schwa>>-veen), vb.1. To violate or infringe; to defy <the soldier contravened the officer's order, and then went AWOL>.2. To come into conflict with; to be contrary to <the court held that the regulation contravenes public policy>.

CONTRAVENING EQUITY

contravening equity. See EQUITY.

CONTRAVENTION

contravention (kon-tr<<schwa>>-ven-sh<<schwa>>n).1. An act violating a legal condition or obligation; esp., an entail heir's act that conflicts with the entail provision. 2. French law. A criminal breach of a law, treaty, or agreement; a minor violation of the law. • A contravention is traditionally punishable by peines de police, usu. a fine not exceeding 15 francs and imprisonment not exceeding three days. See public-welfare offense under OFFENSE(1).

“We might get [terminological] help from the practice of Continental Europe in which three classes of punishable offenses are maintained — crimes, delicts, and contraventions. The last word is used for those minor violations of regulations, all of them necessary enough for public safety and convenience, which are so numerous and so detailed in our lives. It is a convenient term and is widely used in the United States for just such acts, but it has not yet been made official. The Continental practice has the advantage of using the word crimes only for really serious offenses, which is in conformity with popular feeling on the subject.” Max Radin, The Law and You 92 (1948).

3. Scots law. An action brought for breach of a peace bond. See LAWBURROWS. 4. Hist. Scots law. An act committed in violation of a legal condition or obligation, esp. one done contrary to a deed by an heir to an en-tailment.

CONTRACTATAE

contractatae (kon-trek-tay-tee). [Latin “things meddled with”] Scots law. Things that a person (such as a thief) either improperly used or tampered with.

CONTRACTATIO

contractatio (kon-trek-tay-shee-oh), n.[fr. Latin contractare “to touch or handle”] Hist. The act of laying hands on another's property with the intent of taking, misappropriating, or misusing it. • This term implied a greater culpability than simply taking property without the owner's permission and, under Roman law, was an element of theft (furtum). Pl. contractationes (kon-trek-tay-shee-oh-nee-z).

CONTRIBUTING CAUSE

contributing cause. See CAUSE(1).

CONTRIBUTING TO THE DELINQUENCY OF A MINOR contributing to the delinquency of a minor. The offense of an adult's engaging in conduct involving a minor — or in the presence of a minor — likely to result in delinquent conduct. •

Examples include encouraging a minor to shoplift, enabling underage drinking, and soliciting sex for money. — Often shortened to contributing to delinquency. See JUVENILE DELINQUENCY. Cf. IMPAIRING THE MORALS OF A MINOR. [Cases: Infants 13. C.J.S. Infants §§ 5, 92–93, 95–98.]

CONTRIBUTIO LUCRI ET DAMNI

contributio lucri et damni (kon-tri-byoo-shee-oh loo-krI et dam-nI). [Latin] Scots law. Distribution of or sharing in profit and loss. • The phrase referred to one test for determining whether a partnership existed.

CONTRIBUTION

contribution. 1. The right that gives one of several persons who are liable on a common debt the ability to recover ratably from each of the others when that one person discharges the debt for the benefit of all; the right to demand that another who is jointly responsible for a third party's injury supply part of what is required to compensate the third party. — Also termed right of contribution. [Cases: Contribution 1–6. C.J.S. Contribution §§ 2–7, 9–24, 29.] 2. A tortfeasor's right to collect from others responsible for the same tort after the tortfeasor has paid more than his or her proportionate share, the shares being determined as a percentage of fault. [Cases: Contribution 5–7. C.J.S. Contribution §§ 5–10, 12–24, 29.] 3. The actual payment by a joint tortfeasor of a proportionate share of what is due. Cf. INDEMNITY. 4. WAR CONTRIBUTION.

CONTRIBUTION AGREEMENT contribution agreement. See SUPPORT AGREEMENT.

CONTRIBUTION BAR

contribution bar. Preclusion of a defendant having contribution rights against other defendants, who have settled their dispute with the plaintiff, from seeking contribution from them. • The bar is usu. allowed in exchange for a credit against any judgment the plaintiff obtains against the nonsettling defendant. [Cases: Contribution 8. C.J.S. Contribution §§ 26–31.]

CONTRIBUTION CLAUSE

contribution clause. See COINSURANCE CLAUSE.

CONTRIBUTIONE FACIENDA

contributione facienda (kon-tri-byoo-shee-oh-nee fay-shee-en-d<<schwa>>). [Latin “writ for making contribution”] Hist. A writ to compel a tenant in common to contribute to a fellow tenant who has paid more than the tenant's share of a sum for which all the tenants are liable.

“Contributione facienda is a writ that lieth in case where more are bound to one thing, & one is put to the whole burden.... If tenents in comon or joynt, hold a mill (pro indiviso) & equally take the profits therof, the mill falling to decay, & one or more of them refusing to contribute toward the reparation therof, the rest shall have this writ....” John Cowell, The Interpreter (1607).

CONTRIBUTION MARGIN

contribution margin. The difference between a product's selling price and its cost of production. • The contribution margin indicates the amount of funds available for profit and payment of fixed costs.

CONTRIBUTORY

contributory (k<<schwa>>n-trib-y<<schwa>>-tor-ee), adj. 1. Tending to bring about a result. 2. (Of a pension fund) receiving contributions from both the employer and the employees. [Cases: Pensions 101–107. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 53–68, 121–129.]

contributory, n. 1. One who contributes or who has a duty to contribute. 2. A contributing factor. 3. Hist. A person who, as a result of being or representing a past or present member of a corporation, is liable to contribute to the corporation's debts upon its winding up.

CONTRIBUTORY INFRINGEMENT

contributory infringement. See INFRINGEMENT.

CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE

contributory negligence. See NEGLIGENCE.

CONTRIBUTORY-NEGLIGENCE DOCTRINE contributory-negligence doctrine. Torts. The principle that completely bars a plaintiff's recovery if the damage suffered is partly the plaintiff's own fault. • Most states have abolished this doctrine and have adopted instead a comparative-negligence scheme. See NEGLIGENCE. Cf. COMPARATIVE-NEGLIGENCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence 547. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 293, 297.]

CONTRIBUTORY PENSION PLAN

contributory pension plan. See PENSION PLAN.

CONTROL

control, n. The direct or indirect power to direct the management and policies of a person or entity, whether through ownership of voting securities, by contract, or otherwise; the power or authority to manage, direct, or oversee <the principal exercised control over the agent>.

superintending control. The general supervisory control that a higher court in a jurisdiction has over the administrative affairs of a lower court within that jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 204.]

working control. The effective control of a corporation by a person or group who owns less than 50% of the stock. [Cases: Corporations 174. C.J.S. Corporations § 307.]

control, vb. 1. To exercise power or influence over <the judge controlled the proceedings>. 2. To regulate or govern <by law, the budget office controls expenditures>. 3. To have a controlling interest in <the five shareholders controlled the company>.

CONTROL GROUP

control group. The persons with authority to make decisions on a corporation's behalf.

CONTROL-GROUP TEST

control-group test. A method of determining whether the attorney–client privilege protects communications made by corporate employees, by providing that those communications are protected only if made by an employee who is a member of the group with authority to direct the corporation's actions as a result of that communication. • The U.S. Supreme Court rejected the control-group test in Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 101 S.Ct. 677 (1981). Cf. SUBJECT-MATTER TEST. [Cases: Witnesses 199(2). C.J.S. Witnesses § 325.]

CONTROLLED COMPANY

controlled company. See COMPANY.

CONTROLLED CORPORATE GROUPS controlled corporate groups. See CONTROLLED GROUP.

CONTROLLED CORPORATION

controlled corporation. See CORPORATION.

CONTROLLED DEBATE

controlled debate. See DEBATE.

CONTROLLED FOREIGN CORPORATION controlled foreign corporation. See CORPORATION.

CONTROLLED GROUP

controlled group. Tax. Two or more corporations whose stock is substantially held by five or fewer persons. • The Internal Revenue Code subjects these entities (such as parent–subsidiary or brother–sister groups) to special rules for computing tax liability. — Also termed controlled corporate groups. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 851(c)(3), 1563(a). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3870–3880. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 17–18, 638.]

CONTROLLED-SECURITIES-OFFERING DISTRIBUTION controlled-securities-offering distribution. See securities-offering distribution (1) under DISTRIBUTION.

CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE

controlled substance. Any type of drug whose possession and use is regulated by law, including a narcotic, a stimulant, or a hallucinogen. See DRUG. [Cases: Controlled Substances 9.]

CONTROLLED-SUBSTANCE ACT

controlled-substance act. A federal or state statute that is designed to control the distribution, classification, sale, and use of certain drugs. • Most states have enacted these laws, which are usu. modeled on the Uniform Controlled Substances Act. [Cases: Controlled Substances 4.]

CONTROLLED TIME

controlled time. See controlled debate under DEBATE.

CONTROLLER

controller. See COMPTROLLER.

CONTROLLING INTEREST

controlling interest. See INTEREST(2).

CONTROLLING PERSON

controlling person. See CONTROL PERSON.

CONTROLLING SHAREHOLDER controlling shareholder. See SHAREHOLDER.

CONTROL PERSON

control person. Securities. A person who has actual control or significant influence over the issuer of securities, as by directing corporate policy. • The control person is subject to many of the same requirements applicable to the sale of securities by the issuer. — Also termed controlling person. [Cases: Securities Regulation 35.15, 60.40. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 105–106, 218.]

“[T]he question of who is a control person is highly factual and is not dependent upon ownership of any specific percentage. For example, it has been held that someone owning eight percent of a company's stock was not a control person...” 1 Thomas Lee Hazen, The Law of Securities Regulation § 4.24, at 279 (3d ed. 1995).

CONTROL PREMIUM

control premium. See PREMIUM(3).

CONTROL STOCK

control stock. Stock belonging to a control person at the time of a given transaction. — Also termed control shares.

CONTROL TEST

control test. See IRRESISTIBLE-IMPULSE TEST.

CONTROL THEORY

control theory. The theory that people will engage in criminal behavior unless certain personally held social controls (such as a strong investment in conventional, legitimate activities or a belief that criminal behavior is morally wrong) are in place to prevent them from doing so. Cf. ROUTINE-ACTIVITIES THEORY Y; RA-TIONAL-CHOICE THEORY; STRAIN THEORY.

CONTROL-YOUR-KID LAW

control-your-kid law. See PARENTAL-RESPONSIBILITY STATUTE.

CONTROVER

controver (k<<schwa>>n-troh-v<<schwa>>r). Hist. A person who concocts false news.

CONTROVERSY

controversy. 1. A disagreement or a dispute, esp. in public. 2. A justiciable dispute.

public controversy. A controversy involving issues that are debated publicly and that have substantial ramifications for persons other than those engaged in it. • A participant in a public controversy may be deemed a public figure for purposes of a defamation suit arising from the controversy. See PUBLIC FIGURE. [Cases: Libel and Slander 48(1). C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 91–92, 96, 98, 102–104.]

separable controversy. A claim that is separate and independent from the other claims being asserted in a suit. • This term is most often associated with the statute that permits an entire case to be removed to federal court if one of the claims, being separate and independent from the others, presents a federal question that is within the jurisdiction of the federal courts. 28 USCA § 1441(c). [Cases: Removal of Cases 48–61. C.J.S. Removal of Causes §§ 134–140.]

3. Constitutional law. A case that requires a definitive determination of the law on the facts alleged for the adjudication of an actual dispute, and not merely a hypothetical, theoretical, or speculative legal issue. — Also termed (in senses 2 & 3) actual controversy. See CASE-OR-CONTROVERSY REQUIREMENT. [Cases: Action 6; Federal Courts 12.1. C.J.S. Actions §§ 38–45.] “What is a ‘case or controversy’ that is justiciable in the federal courts? The answer of Chief Justice Hughes is classic if cryptic. He said: ‘A controversy in this sense must be one that is appropriate for judicial determination. A justiciable controversy is thus distinguished from a difference or dispute of a hypothetical character; from one that is academic or moot. The controversy must be definite and concrete, touching the legal relations of parties having adverse legal interests. It must be a real and substantial controversy admitting of specific relief through a decree of a conclusive character, as distinguished from an opinion advising what the law would be upon a hypothetical state of facts.’ [Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Haworth, 300 U.S. 227, 240–41, 57 S.Ct. 461, 464 (1937) (Hughes, C.J.)] Unfortunately, this definition, though often quoted, turns upon labels that the Court had used in the past to describe cases before it, and the labels themselves are ‘elastic, inconstant, and imprecise.’ ” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 12, at controvert (kon-tr<<schwa>>-v<<schwa>>rt or kon-tr<<schwa>>-v<<schwa>>rt), vb. To dispute or contest; esp., to deny (as an allegation in a pleading) or oppose in argument <the allegations in Peck's pleadings were never adequately controverted>.

CONTUBERNIUM

contubernium (kon-t[y]uu-b<<schwa>>r-nee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. A marriage-like union between slaves. • Contubernium was recognized in the United States. Before slavery was abolished, only one Southern court gave a marriage between slaves legal effect upon manumission. See Girod v. Lewis, 6 Mart. (O.S.) 559, 559–60 (La. 1819). In 1825, the Louisiana legislature passed a law expressly making such marriages invalid.

“No such thing as marriage among slaves was, or could be, recognized by the law. As slaves were wholly subject to the disposal of their masters, no unions having the character of permanence or sacredness could exist among them: such a union, if it existed, would abridge the master's power of absolute control. Among slaves there could only be contubernium, cohabitation of the sexes for a longer or shorter time, but no legal matrimonium.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 111 (1881).

“There was ... among slaves a permitted cohabitation called contubernium, but it brought with it no civil rights.... [C]ohabitation, ... in a state of slavery, was not marriage, or evidence of marriage. It conferred no rights upon the offspring, and created no legal disabilities on the part of the father from forming a valid marriage, whenever he became in a condition which would authorize him to contract one.” Adrienne D. Davis, The Private Law of Race and Sex: An Antebellum Perspective, 51 Stan. L. Rev. 221, 245 (1999).

conubium (k<<schwa>>-n[y]oo-bee-<<schwa>>m), n.[fr. Latin con “together” + nubere “to marry”] Roman law. 1. The legal capacity to wed. 2. The collection of rights that accompany a marriage between persons who have the capacity to marry. — Also spelled connubium. — Also termed jus connubii. See CONCUBINATUS; JUSTAE NUPTIAE.

“The word connubium denotes properly the right to intermarry with Roman citizens; and hence to contract a Roman marriage, according to the peculiar forms and with the peculiar incidents and effects of marriage between Roman citizens. Chief among these incidents or effects was the patria potestas, or life-long control of the father over his children ... which was among the most remarkable peculiarities of the Roman system. In general, con-nubium embraces the peculiar rights of Roman citizens, so far as they pertain to family relations.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 116 (1881).

conusance (kon-y<<schwa>>-z<<schwa>>nts).Hist. 1. Cognizance; jurisdiction. • The word conusance is actually an archaic form of cognizance. See COGNIZANCE(1); CLAIM OF COGNIZANCE. 2.JUDICIAL NOTICE. 3. An acknowledgment (of a debt, act, or opposing claim). • Examples of conusance include an acknowledgment in replevin that the defendant took the sued-for goods, or an acknowledgment in a land transfer (by fine) that the grantee is entitled to the land. See FINE(1).

conventio (k<<schwa>>n-ven-shee-oh). [fr. Latin convenire “to come together”] 1.Eccles. law. The act of con-vening the parties to an action by summoning the defendant. 2.Hist. An agreement or convention; an agreement between two or more persons respecting a legal relation between them. See CONVENTION(1).

“Conventio is a word much used both in Ancient and Modern Law-pleadings, for an Agreement or Covenant.” Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

convention. 1. An agreement or compact, esp. one among nations; a multilateral treaty <the Geneva Convention>. See TREATY. [Cases: Treaties 1.C.J.S. Treaties § 2.] 2. A special deliberative assembly elected for the purpose of framing, revising, or amending a constitution. See CONSTITUTION (1). — Also termed constitutional convention. [Cases: Constitutional Law 8, 10. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 5, 8–9.] 3. An assembly or meeting of members belonging to an organization or having a common objective <an ABA convention>. — Also termed conference. 4.Parliamentary law. A deliberative assembly that consists of delegates elected or appointed from subordinate or constituent organizations within a state or national organization, or elected directly from the organization's membership or from defined geographic or other constituencies into which the membership is grouped, and that usu. exercises the organization's highest policymaking authority . — Also termed assembly; congress; convocation; delegate assembly; general assembly. See HOUSE OF DELEGATES . 5.Parliamentary law. A session of a convention (sense 4), consisting of a series of consecutive meetings separated by short recesses or adjournments, often during a convention (sense 3) that includes educa-tional and social programs for the benefit of other members in addition to the delegates. 6. A generally accepted rule or practice; usage or custom <the court dispensed with the convention of having counsel approach the bench>.

CONVENTIONAL

CONVENTIONAL CUSTOM

conventional custom.See CUSTOM.

CONVENTIONAL INTEREST conventional interest.See INTEREST(3).

CONVENTIONALISM

conventionalism. A jurisprudential conception of legal practice and tradition holding that law is a matter of respecting and enforcing legal and social rules.

CONVENTIONAL LAW

conventional law. A rule or system of rules agreed on by persons for the regulation of their conduct toward one another; law constituted by agreement as having the force of special law between the parties, by either supplementing or replacing the general law of the land. • The most important example is conventional international law, but there are many lesser examples such as rules and regulations of a country club or professional association, or the rules of golf, basketball, or any other game. — Also termed (in international law) treaty-made law; treaty-created law; treaty law. See CONVENTION(1).

CONVENTUS

conventus (k<<schwa>>n-ven-t<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin] 1. An assembly. • Conventus magnatum vel procerum (“the assembly of the nobles”) was an ancient name for Parliament. 2. CONVENTUS JURIDICUS. Pl. conventus.

CONVENTUS JURIDICUS

conventus juridicus (k<<schwa>>n-ven-t<<schwa>>s juu-rid-i-k<<schwa>>s). [Latin “judicial assembly”] Roman law. A court session held by a provincial governor in the leading cities of the province. — Sometimes shortened to conventus.

CONVERSION

conversion, n. 1. The act of changing from one form to another; the process of being exchanged.

equitable conversion. A change in the nature of property so that real property is treated as personal property, or vice versa, in certain circumstances. • Equitable conversion is based on the maxim that equity regards as done that which ought to be done. The most common situation involves transferring real property as the parties to a contract intended before the seller experienced a change in circumstances, such as marriage or death, that could affect the property's ownership. When a contract is made, the buyer acquires equitable title to the property, and the seller retains legal title. But the seller's interest is treated as one in personal property rather than in real property because the seller's true interest is in the proceeds (usu. personal property such as cash); the legal title is security for the buyer's payment. Courts usu. apply the doctrine of equitable conversion to recognize the transfer of equitable title, including the right of possession, to the buyer when the contract was signed. The buyer then acquires legal title by performing under the contract. [Cases: Conversion 1. C.J.S. Conversion §§ 2–4.]

forced conversion. The conversion of a convertible security, after a call for redemption, when the value of the security that it may be converted to is greater than the amount that will be received if the holder permits the security to be redeemed.

2. Tort & criminal law. The wrongful possession or disposition of another's property as if it were one's own; an act or series of acts of willful interference, without lawful justification, with an item of property in a manner inconsistent with another's right, whereby that other person is deprived of the use and possession of the property. [Cases: Trover and Conversion 1. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 1, 5.] — convert, vb. — conversionary, adj. “There are three distinct methods by which one man may deprive another of his property, and so be guilty of a conversion and liable in an action for trover — (1) by wrongly taking it, (2) by wrongly detaining it, and (3) by wrongly disposing of it. The term conversion was originally limited to the third of these cases. To convert goods meant to dispose of them, or make away with them, to deal with them, in such a way that neither owner nor wrongdoer had any further possession of them: for example, by consuming them, or by destroying them, or by selling them, or otherwise delivering them to some third person. Merely to take another's goods, however wrongfully, was not to convert them. Merely to detain them in defiance of the owner's title was not to convert them. The fact that conversion in its modern sense includes instances of all three modes in which a man may be wrongfully deprived of his goods, and not of one mode only, is the outcome of a process of historical development whereby, by means of legal fictions and other devices, the action of trover was enabled to extend its limits and appropriate the territories that rightly belonged to other and earlier forms of action.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 94 (17th ed. 1977).

constructive conversion. Conversion consisting of an action that in law amounts to the appropriation of property. • Constructive conversion could be, for example, an appropriation that was initially lawful. [Cases: Trover and Conversion 6. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 35–38.]

conversion by detention. Conversion by detaining property in a way that is adverse to the owner or other lawful possessor. • The mere possession of property without title is not conversion. The defendant must have shown an intention to keep it in defiance of the owner or lawful possessor. [Cases: Trover and Conversion 6. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 35–38.]

conversion by estoppel. A judicial determination that a conversion has taken place — though in truth one has not — because a defendant is estopped from offering a defense. • This occurs, for example, under the traditional rule that a bailee is estopped from denying the bailor's title even if the bailor has no title to the chattel.

conversion by taking. Conversion by taking a chattel out of the possession of another with the intention of exercising a permanent or temporary dominion over it, despite the owner's entitlement to use it at all times. [Cases: Trover and Conversion 11. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 30.]

conversion by wrongful delivery. Conversion by depriving an owner of goods by delivering them to someone else so as to change the possession. [Cases: Carriers 93. C.J.S. Carriers § 408.]

conversion by wrongful destruction. Conversion by willfully consuming or otherwise destroying a chattel belonging to another person. [Cases: Trover and Conversion 12. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 20.]

conversion by wrongful disposition. Conversion by depriving an owner of goods by giving some other person a lawful title to them. [Cases: Trover and Conversion 10. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 31–34.]

direct conversion. The act of appropriating the property of another to one's own benefit, or to the benefit of another. • A direct conversion is per se unlawful, and the traditional requirements of demand and refusal of the property do not apply. [Cases: Trover and Conversion 3–5. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 8, 19, 21–30.]

fraudulent conversion. Conversion that is committed by the use of fraud, either in obtaining the property or in withholding it. [Cases: Trover and Conversion 3, 7. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 8.]

involuntary conversion. The loss or destruction of property through theft, casualty, or condemnation.

CONVEY

convey, vb. To transfer or deliver (something, such as a right or property) to another, esp. by deed or other writing; esp., to perform an act that is intended to create one or more property interests, regardless of whether the act is actually effective to create those interests.

CONVEYANCE

conveyance (k<<schwa>>n-vay-<<schwa>>nts), n.1. The voluntary transfer of a right or of property.

absolute conveyance. A conveyance in which a right or property is transferred to another free of conditions or qualifications (i.e., not as a security). Cf. conditional conveyance.

conditional conveyance. A conveyance that is based on the happening of an event, usu. payment for the property; a mortgage. Cf. absolute conveyance.

derivative conveyance. See secondary conveyance.

innocent conveyance. Hist. A leaseholder's conveyance of the leaseholder's property interest — that is, something less than a fee simple. • The conveyance is of an equitable interest. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 74. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 30, 53.]

mesne conveyance (meen). An intermediate conveyance; one occupying an intermediate position in the chain of title between the first grantee and the present holder.

original conveyance. See primary conveyance.

present conveyance. A conveyance made with the intent that it take effect at once rather than in the future.

primary conveyance. A conveyance that creates an estate. • Examples of primary conveyances include feoffment, gift, grant, lease, exchange, and partition. — Also termed original conveyance. Cf. secondary conveyance.

“Of conveyances by the common law, some may be called original, or primary conveyances; which are those by means whereof the benefit or estate is created or first arises: others are derivative or secondary; whereby the benefit or estate, originally created, is enlarged, restrained, transferred, or extinguished.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 309 (1766).

secondary conveyance. A conveyance that follows an earlier conveyance and that serves only to enlarge, confirm, alter, restrain, restore, or transfer the interest created by the primary conveyance. — Also termed derivative conveyance; derivative deed. Cf. primary conveyance.

voluntary conveyance. A conveyance made without valuable consideration, such as a deed in favor of a relative.

2. The transfer of a property right that does not pass by delivery of a thing or merely by agreement. 3. The transfer of an interest in real property from one living person to another, by means of an instrument such as a deed. 4. The document (usu. a deed) by which such a transfer occurs. [Cases: Deeds 3. C.J.S. Deeds §§ 1–8.] 5. A means of transport; a vehicle. 6. Bankruptcy. A transfer of an interest in real or personal property, including an assignment, a release, a monetary payment, or the creation of a lien or encumbrance. — Also termed (in sense 6) bond for deed. See FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE; PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER.

CONVEYANCER

conveyancer (k<<schwa>>n-vay-<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>r). A lawyer who specializes in real-estate transac-tions. • In England, a conveyancer is a solicitor or licensed conveyancer who examines title to real estate, prepares deeds and mortgages, and performs other functions relating to the transfer of real property.

CONVEYANCING

conveyancing (k<<schwa>>n-vay-<<schwa>>n-sing). The act or business of drafting and preparing legal in-struments, esp. those (such as deeds or leases) that transfer an interest in real property.

“Conveyancing is the art or science of preparing documents and investigating title in connection with the creation and assurance of interests in land. Despite its connection with the word ‘conveyance’, the term in practice is not limited to use in connection with old system title but is used without discrimination in the context of all types of title.” Peter Butt, Land Law 7 (2d ed. 1988).

“Conveyancing may be regarded as the application of the law of real property in practice.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 125 (6th ed. 1993).

CONVEYANCING COUNSEL

conveyancing counsel. Three to six lawyers who are appointed by the Lord Chancellor to assist the High Court of Justice with opinions in matters of property titles and conveyancing. — Also termed conveyancing counsel of the Supreme Court; (formerly) conveyancing counsel to the Court of Chancery.

Cooperative State Research, Education, and Extension Service. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for coordinating departmental research activities with those of academic and land-grant institutions. — Abbr. CSREES.

CO-OPT

co-opt, vb. 1. To add as a member. 2. To assimilate; absorb.

CO-OPTATION

co-optation (koh-ahp-tay-sh<<schwa>>n), n. The act of selecting a person to fill a vacancy (usu. in a close corporation). — co-optative,adj.

COORDINATE JURISDICTION

coordinate jurisdiction. See concurrent jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

COORDINATION-OF-BENEFITS CLAUSE

coordination-of-benefits clause. See COB CLAUSE.

COOWNER

coowner, n. A person who is in concurrent ownership, possession, and enjoyment of property with one or more others; a tenant in common, a joint tenant, or a tenant by the entirety. [Cases: Husband and Wife 14; Joint Tenancy 1; Tenancy in Common 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Joint Tenancy §§ 2, 4, 7–9; Tenancy in Common §§ 2–5.] — coown, vb. — coownership, n.

COPA. abbr. CHILD ONLINE PROTECTION ACT.

COP A PLEA

cop a plea, vb. Slang. (Of a criminal defendant) to plead guilty to a lesser charge as a means to avoid standing trial for a more serious offense. See PLEA BARGAIN.

COPARCENARY

coparcenary (koh-pahr-s<<schwa>>-ner-ee), n. An estate that arises when two or more persons jointly inherit from one ancestor, the title and right of possession being shared equally by all. • Coparcenary was a form of coownership created by common-law rules of descent upon intestacy when two or more persons together constituted the decedent's heirs. Typically, this situation arose when the decedent was survived by no sons but by two or more daughters, so that the daughters took as coparceners. — Also termed parcenary; tenancy in coparcenary. — coparcenary, adj.

“Coparcenary is converted into separate ownership (i) by partition, or (ii) by the union in one parcener of all the shares, and it is converted into a tenancy in common if one parcener transfers her share to a stranger.” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 553 (3d ed. 1933).

coparcener (koh-pahr-s<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>r). A person to whom an estate descends jointly, and who holds it as an entire estate; a person who has become a concurrent owner as a result of descent. — Also termed parcener; (archaically) coparticeps.

“Coparceners constitute a single heir, and they occupy a position intermediate between joint tenants and tenants in common. Like joint tenants they have unity of title, interest and possession; like tenants in common, their estate is not subject to the doctrine of survivorship, and if there are three coparceners and one dies, her share passes separately to her heirs or devisee, not to the survivors, though the unity of possession continues. It follows that unity of time is not necessary to constitute coparcenary, for if a man has two daughters to whom his estate descends and one dies leaving a son, such son and the surviving daughter will be coparceners." G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 553 (3d ed. 1933).

COPARTICEPS

coparticeps (koh-pahr-t<<schwa>>-seps). [fr. Latin particeps "sharing"] See COPARCENER.

copartner. A member of a partnership; PARTNER. [Cases: Partnership 1.C.J.S. Partnership §§ 1–7, 17.]

"Copartner need not exist alongside partner. The joint relationship (i.e., that the existence of one partner implies the existence of one or more other partners) is clear to all native speakers of English.... Because copartner adds nothing to the language of the law, it should be avoided." Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 223 (2d ed. 1995).

COPARTNERSHIP

copartnership. See PARTNERSHIP. • The terms copartnership and partnership are equally old — each having first appeared in the 1570s.

COPARTY

coparty. A litigant or participant in a legal transaction who has a like status with another party; a party on the same side of a lawsuit. — Also termed joint party. See CODEFENDANT; COPLAINTIFF.

copayment. A fixed amount that a patient pays to a healthcare provider according to the terms of the patient's health plan. — Often shortened to copay. [Cases: Insurance 2523.]

copending,adj. Patents. (Of serial applications filed in the same patent prosecution) before the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office at or near the same time and concerning the same invention. • A continuation or divisional application that is copending with its parent application benefits from the parent's earlier filing date.

COPENDING PATENT

copending patent. See PATENT (3).

COPIA LIBELLI DELIBERANDA copia libelli deliberanda. See DE COPIA LIBELLI DELIBERANDA.

COPLAINTIFF

coplaintiff. One of two or more plaintiffs in the same litigation. — Also termed joint plaintiff.

Cf. CODE-FENDANT.

COPRINCIPAL

coprincipal. 1. One of two or more participants in a criminal offense who either perpetrate the crime or aid a person who does so. [Cases: Criminal Law 59. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 127, 998.]
2. One of two or more persons who have appointed an agent whom they both have the right to control.

COPULATIVE CONDITION

copulative condition. See CONDITION(2).

COPY

copy, n. 1. An imitation or reproduction of an original. • In the law of evidence, a copy is generally admissible to prove the contents of a writing. Fed. R. Evid. 1003. See BEST-EVIDENCE RULE. [Cases: Evidence 174.1. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1074, 1102–1104.]

archival copy. See ARCHIVAL COPY.

attested copy. See certified copy.

certified copy. A duplicate of an original (usu. official) document, certified as an exact reproduction usu. by the officer responsible for issuing or keeping the original. — Also termed attested copy; exemplified copy; verified copy. [Cases: Criminal Law 430; Evidence 338. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1025, 1029–1031; Evidence §§ 879–880, 893, 895.]

conformed copy. An exact copy of a document bearing written explanations of things that were not or could not be copied, such as a note on the document indicating that it was signed by a person whose signature appears on the original.

examined copy. A copy (usu. of a record, public book, or register) that has been compared with the original or with an official record of an original. [Cases: Criminal Law 445; Evidence 367. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1025, 1029; Evidence §§ 881, 884, 889.]

exemplified copy. See certified copy.

true copy. A copy that, while not necessarily exact, is sufficiently close to the original that anyone can understand it.

verified copy. See certified copy.

2. Copyright. The physical form in which a creative work is fixed and from which the work can be reproduced or perceived, with or without the aid of a special device. 17 USCA § 101.
3. Copyright. An expressive work that is substantially similar to a copyrighted work and not produced coincidentally and independently from the same source as the copyrighted work. • Proof of copying in an infringement action requires evidence of the defendant's access to the original work and substantial similarity of the defendant's work to the original. See substantial similarity under SIMILARITY. “The noun ‘copy’ ordinarily connotes a tangible object that is a reproduction of the original work; the courts have generally found no reason to depart from this usage in the law of copyright.” 1 Melville B. Nimmer & David Nimmer, Nimmer on Copyright § 4.08[B], at 4-47 (Supp. 1995).

COPYCAT DRUG

copycat drug. See generic drug under DRUG.

copyhold. Hist. A base tenure requiring the tenant to provide the customary services of the manor, as reflected in the manor's court rolls. • Copyhold tenure descended from pure villeinage; over time, the customs of the manor, as reflected on the manor's rolls, dictated what services a lord could demand from a copyholder. This type of tenure was abolished by the Law of Property Act of 1922, which converted copyhold land into freehold or leasehold land. — Also termed copyhold tenure; customary estate; customary freehold; tenancy by the verge; tenancy par la verge; tenancy by the rod. See base tenure under TENURE; VILLEINAGE.

privileged copyhold. Hist. A copyhold subject only to the customs of the manor and not affected by the nonconforming dictates of the current lord.

COPYHOLDER

copyholder. Hist. A tenant by copyhold tenure. — Also termed tenant by the verge; tenant par la verge.

“The lord still held a court, and that court kept records of all transactions affecting the lands. These records were called the rolls of the court. When, for instance, a tenant sold his interest to a third party, the circumstances of the sale would be recorded, and the buyer would receive a copy of the court rolls in so far as they affected his holding. Inasmuch as he held his estate by copy of court roll, he came to be called a copyholder.” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 24 (3d ed. 1933).

COPYHOLD TENANT

copyhold tenant. See customary tenant under TENANT.

COPYHOLD TENURE

copyhold tenure. See COPYHOLD.

copyleft. Slang. A software license that allows users to modify or incorporate open-source code into larger programs on the condition that the software containing the source code is publicly distributed without restrictions.

COPYLEFTED SOFTWARE

copylefted software. Slang. Free software whose distribution terms forbid the addition of restrictions if the software is redistributed in its original or a modified form. • Not actually a legal term, this phrase is popularly used as the antithesis of copyright by Internet free-software promoters. See FREEWARE.

copyright, n. 1. The right to copy; specif., a property right in an original work of authorship (including literary, musical, dramatic, choreographic, pictorial, graphic, sculptural, and architectural works; motion pictures and other audiovisual works; and sound recordings) fixed in any tangible medium of expression, giving the holder the exclusive right to reproduce, adapt, distribute, perform, and display the work. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 1. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 2, 4–5.] 2. The body of law relating to such works. • Copyright law is governed by the Copyright Act of 1976. 17 USCA §§ 101–1332. — Abbr. c. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 101. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 102–104.] — copyright, vb. — copyrighted, adj.

“[C]opyright is a monopoly of limited duration, created and wholly regulated by the legislature; and ... an author has, therefore, no other title to his published works than that given by statute.” Ethan S. Drone, A Treatise on the Law of Property in Intellectual Productions 2 (1879).

“The development of copyright law in England was shaped by the efforts of mercantile interests to obtain monopoly control of the publishing industry — similar to those of the guilds that were instrumental in shaping patent and trademark law.... American copyright law came to distinguish between the ‘common law’ right of an author to his unpublished creations, and the statutory copyright that might be secured upon publication. Until recently, therefore, an author had perpetual rights to his creation, which included the right to decide when, if, and how to publish the work, but that common law right terminated upon publication at which time statutory rights become the sole rights, if any, to which the author was entitled. This distinction was altered by the Copyright Act of 1976, which shifts the line of demarcation between common law and statutory copyright from the moment of publication to the moment of fixation of the work into tangible form.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 280–82 (2d ed.

“What is copyright? From copyright law's beginnings close to three centuries ago, the term has meant just what it says: the right to make copies of a given work — at first it meant simply written work — and to stop others from making copies without one's permission.” Paul Goldstein, Copyright's Highway 3 (1994).

ad interim copyright.Hist. A limited five-year U.S. copyright granted to the author of a foreign edition of an English-language book or periodical if, within six months after its publication abroad, the author deposited one complete copy of that edition in the U.S. Copyright Office and requested ad interim copyright protection. • An ad interim copyright was granted as an exception to the 1909 Copyright Act's manufacturing clause, which limited copyright protection for English-language books and periodicals to those printed in the U.S. If the copyright owner published the work in the U.S. during the period of ad interim protection and complied with the Act's manufacturing requirements, full copyright protection related back to the date of first publication. Otherwise, the work went into the public domain at the end of five years.

common-law copyright.A property right that arose when the work was created, rather than when it was published. • Under the Copyright Act of 1976, which was effective on January 1, 1978, common-law copyright was largely abolished for works created after the statute's effective date. But the statute retained the common law's recognition that the property right arose when the work was created rather than when it was published. And the common-law copyright still applies in a few areas: notably, a common-law copyright received before January 1, 1978, remains entitled to protection. — Also termed right of first publication.

copyrightability test.A judicial test for determining whether a contributor to a joint work is an author for legal purposes, based on whether the contributor's effort is an original expression that could qualify for copyright protection on its own. • This test has been adopted by a majority of courts that have addressed the question. Cf. DE MINIMIS TEST.

COPYRIGHT ACT OF 1790

Copyright Act of 1790.The first U.S. copyright law, which, like England's Statute of Anne, gave authors copyright protection for 14 years, renewable for another 14 years, after which time the work then entered the public domain.

COPYRIGHT ACT OF 1909

Copyright Act of 1909. A major revision of U.S. copyright law, extending the term of protection from 14 to 28 years (renewable for a second 28-year term); measuring the copyright term from the time of publication rather than the time of registration with the Copyright Office; and expanding coverage to all writings. • The Act retained the formalities for securing a copyright and required that a copyright mark appear on the work. It governed U.S. copyrights issued from July 1, 1909 to December 31, 1977. Although the 1976 Copyright Act supplanted the 1909 Act, the 1909 Act still applies to some pre-1978 claims and affects certain other rights of copyright owners. — Also termed 1909 Copyright Act.

COPYRIGHT ACT OF 1976

Copyright Act of 1976. A major revision of U.S. copyright law, extending the term of protection to the life of the author plus 50 years, measured from the date of creation; greatly expanding the types of works that qualify for protection; dropping the requirement that the work be published before it can be protected; making fair use a statutory defense to a claim in infringement; and preempting state common-law copyright. 17 USCA §§ 101 et seq. • This is the current federal statute that governs copyright registrations and rights. — Also termed 1976 Copyright Act.

COPYRIGHT AND THE CHALLENGE OF TECHNOLOGY

Copyright and the Challenge of Technology. See GREEN PAPER ON COPYRIGHT AND THE CHALLENGE OF TECHNOLOGY .

COPYRIGHT APPLICATION

copyright application. A written request for copyright protection made by a work's creator, filed with the U.S. Copyright Office and accompanied by a filing fee and either a deposit copy of the work or approved identifying material. • A registrant who does not meet the deposit requirement of the Copyright Act of 1976 risks losing copyright protection. See, e.g., Coles v. Wonder, 283 F.3d 798 (6th Cir. 2002). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 50.20.]

COPYRIGHT BUG

copyright bug. See COPYRIGHT NOTICE.

COPYRIGHT CLAUSE

Copyright Clause. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 8, which gives Congress the power to secure to authors the exclusive rights to their writings for a limited time. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 2.C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 3–6, 8.]

COPYRIGHT CLEARINGHOUSE

copyright clearinghouse. An organization that licenses members' works to applicants for specific purposes. • A clearinghouse usu. licenses only one type or class of works, such as songs, photographs, cartoons, or written materials.

COPYRIGHT INFRINGEMENT

copyright infringement. See INFRINGEMENT.

COPYRIGHT LEGEND

copyright legend. See COPYRIGHT NOTICE.

COPYRIGHT-MANAGEMENT INFORMATION copyright-management information. The name and other identifying information about the creator, performer, or copyright owner of a creative work. See DIGITAL MILLENNIUM COPYRIGHT ACT.

COPYRIGHT MISUSE

copyright misuse. In an infringement action, an affirmative defense based on the copyright owner's use of a license to restrain trade or in any other manner that is against public policy. • The defense, roughly parallel to the declining patent-misuse defense, was invoked, for example, to prevent the American Medical Association from enforcing its copyright in its medical-procedure codes after licensing them to the U.S. Government for use in the Medicaid program. See Practice Mgmt. Info. Corp. v. Am. Med. Ass'n, 121 F.3d 516 (9th Cir. 1997). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 75. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 43–44, 62.]

COPYRIGHT NOTICE

copyright notice. A notice that a work is copyright-protected, usu. placed in each published copy of the work. • A copyright notice takes the form © (year of publication) (name of basic copyright owner). Since March 1, 1989, such a notice is not required for a copyright to be valid (although the notice continues to provide certain procedural advantages). The phrase “all rights reserved” is usu. no longer required. — Sometimes termed copyright bug; copyright legend; notice of copyright. See ALL RIGHTS RESERVED; BUENOS AIRES CONVENTION . [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 50.1(2). C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 35, 95.]

COPYRIGHT OWNER

copyright owner. 1. One who holds an exclusive right or rights to copyrighted material. 17 USCA § 101. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 22, 93.] 2. One who is named as the owner on any copyright notice attached to a work and who is registered with the U.S. Copyright Office as the owner.

COPYRIGHT ROYALTY TRIBUNAL

Copyright Royalty Tribunal. A former board in the legislative branch of the federal government responsible for establishing and monitoring copyright royalty rates for published and recorded materials. • Its functions are now performed by copyright arbitration royalty panels.

CORAM

coram (kor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m), prep. [Latin] (Of a person) before; in the presence of.

CORAM DOMINO REGE

coram domino rege (kor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m dom-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-noh ree-jee). [Latin] Hist. Before our lord the king.

CORAM IPSO REGE

coram ipso rege (kor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m ip-soh ree-jee). [Latin] Hist. Before the king himself. — Also termed coram ipso domino rege.

“The court of king's bench (so called because the king used formerly to sit there in person, the style of the court still being coram ipso rege) is the supreme court of common law in the kingdom....” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 41 (1768).

CORAM JUDICE coram iudice (kor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m joo-di-see). 1. In the presence of a judge. 2. JURISDICTION.

CORAM NOBIS

coram nobis (kor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m noh-bis). [Latin “before us”] Hist. 1. A writ of error taken from a judgment of the King's Bench. • “Before us” refers to the sovereign, in contrast to the writ coram vobis (“before you”), which refers to any court other than King's Bench, esp. the Court of Common Pleas. 2. A writ of error directed to a court for review of its own judgment and predicated on alleged errors of fact. — Also termed writ of error coram nobis; writ of coram nobis. [Cases: Criminal Law 1411; Judgment 334.C.J.S. Judgments §7 360–361.]

CORAM NON JUDICE

coram non iudice (kor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m non joo-di-see). [Latin “not before a judge”] 1. Outside the presence of a judge. 2. Before a judge or court that is not the proper one or that cannot take legal cognizance of the matter.

CORAM PARIBUS

coram paribus (kor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m par-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-b⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩s). [Latin] Hist. Before the peers. • This phrase appeared in deed attestations.

CORAM REGE COURT

Coram Rege Court. See KING'S BENCH.

CORAM SECTORIBUS

coram sectoribus (kor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m sek-t⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-tor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-b⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩s). [Law Latin] Hist. Before the suitors.

CORAM VOBIS

coram vobis (kor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m voh-bis), n. [Latin “before you”] Hist. 1. A writ of error directed to a court other than the King's Bench, esp. the Court of Common Pleas, to review its judgment.

“Certain errors in the process of the court, committed by the defaults of the clerks, or as to matters of fact, could be remedied by the court itself. The writ issued for this purpose was called a writ of error ‘coram vobis’ if the error was in the Common Pleas; ‘coram nobis’ if it was in the King's Bench.” 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 224 (7th ed. 1956).

2. A writ of error sent by an appellate court to a trial court to review the trial court's judgment based on an error of fact. — Also termed writ of error coram vobis; writ of coram vobis. [Cases: Courts 207.1.]

CORDON RULE

Cordon rule. A rule of the U.S. Senate requiring any committee that is reporting a bill amending current law to show in its report what wording the bill would strike from or insert into the current statute. • The rule is named for Senator Guy Cordon (1890–1969) of Oregon, who proposed it. The analogous rule in the U.S. House of Representatives is the Ramseyer rule. See RAMSEYER RULE.

CORE EARNINGS

core earnings. See operating earnings under EARNINGS.

CORE PROCEEDING

core proceeding. Bankruptcy. 1. A proceeding involving claims that substantially affect the debtor-creditor relationship, such as an action to recover a preferential transfer. • In such a proceeding, the bankruptcy court, as opposed to the district court, conducts the trial or hearing and enters a final judgment. Cf. RELATED PROCEEDING. 2. In federal courts, an action involving subject matter that is clearly within the confines of federal bankruptcy law and the management of the bankrupt's estate. • A federal bankruptcy court may also hear noncore matters that have an independent basis for subject-matter jurisdiction, such as a federal question. For a nonexclusive list of core proceedings, see 28 USCA § 157(b)(2). [Cases: Bankruptcy 2043–2063. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 5, 9–12, 14–15, 17–18, 22.]

core rights. 1. Human rights that are generally recognized and accepted throughout the world. • These rights include freedom from extrajudicial execution, torture, and arbitrary arrest and detention. Core rights are embodied in many human-rights conventions, including the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. 2. Fundamental rights claimed within a social, cultural, or other context. • These are not universally recognized rights. For example, the ability to vote may be a fundamental right of citizens in one country but only a privilege limited to selected people in another.

CORRESPONDENT

corespondent. 1. A coparty who responds to a petition, such as a petition for a writ of certiorari. 2. In some states, a coparty who responds to an appeal. 3. Family law. In a divorce suit based on adultery, the person with whom the spouse is accused of having committed adultery. See RESPONDENT. [Cases: Divorce 26. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 60, 70.]

CORE WORK PRODUCT

core work product. See opinion work product under WORK PRODUCT.

CORIUM FORISFACERE

corium forisfacere (kor-ee-*<<schwa>>m for-is-fay-s<<schwa>>*-ree). [Law Latin “to forfeit skin”] Hist. To whip (a person, esp. a servant) as punishment. — Also termed corium perdere.

CORIUM REDIMERE

corium redimere (kor-ee-*<<schwa>>m ri-dim-<<schwa>>*r-ee). [Latin] Hist. To redeem one's skin. • This referred to a person who paid restitution for an offense.

cornage (kor-nij). [fr. Anglo-French corne “horn”] Hist. 1. A type of grand-sergeanty military tenure in which the tenant was bound to blow a horn to alert others whenever an enemy approached. 2. A form of tenure entitling a landowner to rent based on the number of horned cattle owned by the tenant. • Cornage may have developed into a type of serjeanty or knight-service tenure that obligated the tenant to blow a horn to warn of invaders, esp. along the border with Scotland. See KNIGHT-SERVICE; SERJEANTY. — Also termed (in senses 1 & 2) horn tenure. 3. A tribute of corn due only on special occasions, as distinguished from a regularly provided service. • This term has often been spelled coraage or coraagium, stemming perhaps from a spelling error in the 1569 edition of Bracton's De Legibus et Consuetudinibus Angliae.

CORNELIAN LAW

Cornelian law. See LEX CORNELIA.

CORNER

corner, n. 1. The common end of two survey lines; an angle made by two boundary lines. [Cases: Boundaries 7. C.J.S. Boundaries §§ 10–13.]

existent corner. A corner whose location can be verified by an original landmark, a surveyor's field notes, or other reliable evidence.

lost corner. A point in a land description, such as a landmark or natural object, whose position cannot be reasonably determined from traces of the original marks or other acceptable evidence. • The location can be determined by reference to one or more independent points remaining in the description.

obliterated corner. A corner that can be located only with evidence other than that put in place by the original surveyor.

2. The acquisition of control over all or a dominant quantity of a commodity with the purpose of artificially enhancing the price, carried out by purchases and sales of the commodity — and of options and futures — in a way that depresses the market price so that the participants are enabled to purchase the commodity at satisfactory prices and withhold it from the market for a time, thereby inflating its price. • A corner accomplished by confederation, with the purpose of raising or depressing prices and operating on the market, is a criminal conspiracy if the means are unlawful.

CORNERING THE MARKET

cornering the market. The act or process of acquiring ownership or control of a large portion of the available supply of a commodity or security, permitting manipulation of the commodity's or security's price.

CORN PRODUCTS DOCTRINE

Corn Products doctrine. Tax. The principle that a capital asset should be narrowly defined to exclude inventory-related property that is integrally tied to the day-to-day operations of a business. Corn Prods. Refining Co. v. C.I.R., 350 U.S. 46, 76 S.Ct. 20 (1955). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3178, 3230.1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 110.]

corody (kor- orkahr-<<schwa>>-dee). Hist. An allowance of money, accommodation, food, or clothing given by a religious house to any person who signed over personal or real property or both in exchange or to a royal servant at the Crown's request. • The amount of property required from a person who purchased a corody depended on the person's age and remaining life expectancy. The Crown was entitled to a corody for a retired royal servant only from houses that the Crown had founded. Theoretically, the cost of a retired royal servant's care would come from the royal purse. But since the royal purse did not always open, royal servants were not always accepted as corodiaries. — Also spelled corrody. Cf. LIFE-CARE CONTRACT. — corodiary (k<<schwa>>-roh-dee-air-ee), corodiary, n.

“Corrody is a partition for one's sustenance. Be it bread, ale, herring, a yearly robe, or sum of money for the robe. So of a chamber, and stable for my horses, when the same is coupled with other things....” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 162 (1759).

COROLLARY

corollary (kor- orkahr-<<schwa>>-ler-ee), n. A proposition that follows from a proven proposition with little or no additional proof; something that naturally follows.

CORONA

corona (k<<schwa>>-roh-n<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. The Crown. • This term formerly appeared in criminal pleadings, e.g., placita coronae (“pleas of the Crown”).

CORONATION CASE

coronation case.Hist. Any of the many lawsuits for breach of contract resulting from the postponement of the coronation of Edward VII because of his illness. • In one case, for example, the defendant had agreed to hire a ship for watching the naval review by King Edward VII and for a day's cruise around the fleet. The court held that the contract was not frustrated by the cancellation of the naval review — the day's cruise around the fleet was still possible, and indeed, the ship could have been used for many other purposes.

CORONATOR

coronator (kor- orkahr-<<schwa>>-nay-t<<schwa>>r). [fr. Latin corona “crown”] A coroner. See CORONER(2).

“The formal title of custos (or occasionally conservator) placitorum corone continued to be used throughout the Middle Ages, but the more convenient shorter forms coronarius, which was confined to a short period around 1200, and CORONATOR rapidly gained greater currency. The English form was ‘coroner’ or ‘crownier.’ ” R.F. Hunnisett, The Medieval Coroner 1 n.1 (1961).

CORONATORE EXONERANDO

coronatore exonerando.See DE CORONATORE EXONERANDO.

CORONER

coroner (kor- orkahr-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>r).1. A public official whose duty is to investigate the causes and circumstances of any death that occurs suddenly, suspiciously, or violently. See MEDICAL EXAMINER. [Cases: Coroners 1. C.J.S. Coroners and Medical Examiners § 2.] 2.Hist. A royal official with countywide jurisdiction to investigate deaths, to hold inquests, and to assume the duties of the sheriff if need be. • The coroner acted as a check on the sheriff, a local officer whose growing power threatened royal control over the counties. The coroner reported criminal activity to the king's justices in eyre. When the eyre court arrived in a county, it collected the coroner's roll to learn what had occurred in the county during the eyre's absence. The justices fined the coroner if he failed to produce the roll, or if they learned of criminal activity in the county from a source other than the roll.

“The office of coroner was established in September 1194, when the justices in eyre were required to see that three knights and one clerk were elected in every county as ‘keepers of the pleas of the crown.’ These were the first county coroners.... Throughout the Middle Ages the coroner could be ordered to perform almost any duty of an administrative or inquisitorial nature within his bailiwick, either alone or with the sheriff, but there were other duties which belonged more specifically to his office and which he performed without being ordered. These consisted of holding inquests upon dead bodies, receiving adjurations of the realm made by felons in sanctuary, hearing appeals, confessions of felons and appeals of approvers, and attending and sometimes organising exactions and outlawries promulgated in the county court. These were the ‘crown pleas’ which the coroner had to ‘keep’” R.F. Hunnisett, The Medieval Coroner 1 (1961).

CORPORATE WELFARE

corporate welfare. See WELFARE(2).

CORPORATION

corporation, n. An entity (usu. a business) having authority under law to act as a single person distinct from the shareholders who own it and having rights to issue stock and exist indefinitely; a group or succession of persons established in accordance with legal rules into a legal or juristic person that has legal personality distinct from the natural persons who make it up, exists indefinitely apart from them, and has the legal powers that its constitution gives it. — Also termed corporation aggregate; aggregate corporation; body corporate; corporate body. See COMPANY. [Cases: Corporations 1. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 2, 4.] — incorporate, vb. — corporate, adj.

“A corporation is an artificial being, invisible, intangible, and existing only in contemplation of law... [I]t possesses only those properties which the charter of its creation confers upon it.” Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 17 U.S. (4 Wheat.) 518, 636 (1819)(Marshall, J.).

acquired corporation. The corporation that no longer exists after a merger or acquisition. [Cases: Corporations 586. C.J.S. Corporations § 807.]

admitted corporation. A corporation licensed or authorized to do business within a particular state. — Also termed qualified corporation; corporation qualified to do business.

aggressor corporation. A corporation that attempts to obtain control of a publicly held corporation by (1) a direct cash tender, (2) a public-exchange offer to shareholders, or (3) a merger, which requires the agreement of the target's management.

alien corporation. See foreign corporation.

brother-sister corporation. See sister corporation.

business corporation. A corporation formed to engage in commercial activity for profit. Cf. nonprofit corporation.

C corporation. A corporation whose income is taxed through it rather than through its shareholders. • Any corporation not electing S-corporation tax status under the Internal Revenue Code is a C corporation by default. — Also termed subchapter-C corporation. Cf. S corporation.

charitable corporation. A nonprofit corporation that is dedicated to benevolent purposes and thus entitled to special tax status under the Internal Revenue Code. — Also termed eleemosynary corporation. See CHARIT-ABLE ORGANIZATION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4045–4069. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 327, 462–474.]

civil corporation. Any corporation other than a charitable or religious corporation.

clearing corporation. A corporation whose capital stock is held by or for a national security exchange or association registered under federal law such as the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

close corporation. A corporation whose stock is not freely traded and is held by only a few shareholders (often within the same family). • The requirements and privileges of close corporations vary by jurisdiction. — Also termed closely held corporation; closed corporation. [Cases: Corporations 3. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 5–7, 62.]

collapsible corporation. A corporation formed to give a short-term venture the appearance of a long-term investment in order to portray income as capital gain, rather than profit. • The corporation is typically formed for the sole purpose of purchasing property. The corporation is usually dissolved before the property has generated substantial income. The Internal Revenue Service treats the income earned through a collapsible corporation as ordinary income rather than as capital gain. IRC (26 USCA) § 341(a). Cf. collapsible partnership under PARTNERSHIP. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3728.] common-law corporation. See corporation by prescription.

controlled corporation. 1. A corporation in which the majority of the stock is held by one individual or firm. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3643.] 2. A corporation in which a substantial amount (but less than a majority) is held by one individual or firm. • Some states presume control with as little as 10%.

controlled foreign corporation. Tax. A foreign corporation in which more than 50% of the stock is owned by U.S. citizens who each own 10% or more of the voting stock. • These shareholders (known as U.S. shareholders) are required to report their pro rata share of certain passive income of the corporation. — Abbr. CFC. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 951–964. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4119. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 484.]

cooperative corporation. An entity that has a corporate existence, but is primarily organized for the purpose of providing services and profits to its members and not for corporate profit. • The most common kind of cooperative corporation is formed to purchase real property, such as an apartment building, so that its shareholders may lease the apartments. See COOPERATIVE(1). [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 350. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 792.21.]

corporation aggregate. Hist. A corporation made up of a number of individuals. Cf. corporation sole.

“The first division of corporations is into aggregate and sole. Corporations aggregate consist of many persons united together into one society, and are kept up by a perpetual succession of members, so as to continue forever: of which kind are the mayor and commonalty of a city, the head and fellows of a college, the dean and chapter of a cathedral church.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 457 (1765).

“The corporation aggregate is the typical corporation, which, at any given time, normally contains a number of individuals as members. This number may be great or small, varying from the hundreds of thousands of burgesses of a large borough to the two members of a private joint-stock company. It is even said that a corporation aggregate would not necessarily cease to exist if all its members died, leaving no successors; and this is, probably, sound doctrine.” Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 118 (P.B. Fairst ed., 6th ed. 1967).

corporation by estoppel. A business that is deemed, by operation of law, to be a corporation because a third party dealt with the business as if it were a corporation, thus preventing the third party from holding a shareholder or officer of the corporation individually liable. See ESTOPPEL. [Cases: Corporations 34. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 65–66.]

corporation by prescription. A corporation that, though lacking a charter, has acquired its corporate status through a long period of operating as a corporation. • Such an entity may engage in any enterprises that are not manifestly inconsistent with the purposes for which it is assumed to have been created. — Also termed common-law corporation. [Cases: Corporations 27.]

corporation de facto. See de facto corporation.

corporation de jure. See de jure corporation.

corporation for profit. See for-profit corporation.

corporation qualified to do business. See admitted corporation.

corporation sole. A series of successive persons holding an office; a continuous legal personality that is attributed to successive holders of certain monarchical or ecclesiastical positions, such as kings, bishops, rectors, vicars, and the like. • This continuous personality is viewed, by legal fiction, as having the qualities of a corporation. Cf. corporation aggregate.

“It would have been quite possible to explain in the same way the devolution of the lands of the Crown, or of a bishopric, or of a rectory, from the sovereign, bishop, or rector, to his successor; but English law has preferred to introduce for this purpose the fiction, peculiar to itself, of a ‘corporation sole.’” Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 350–51 (13th ed. 1924).

“But English Law knows another kind of corporation, the ‘corporation sole’, in which the group consists, not of a number of contemporary members, but of a succession of single members, of whom only one exists at any given time. This kind of corporation has been described by eminent legal writers as a ‘freak’; but it is a freak which undoubtedly has a legal existence. It has been said that the Crown is the only common law lay corporation sole; though the Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, has been claimed as another example, and statutory examples, such as the Public Trustee and the Treasury Solicitor, are conspicuous. But the examples of ecclesiastical corporations sole are numerous. Every diocesan bishop, every rector of a parish, is a corporation sole, and can acquire and hold land (and now also personal property) even during the vacancy of the see or living, for the benefit of his successors, and can bind his successors by his lawful conveyances and contracts. But, obviously, the distinction between the bishop or rector, in his personal and in his corporate character, is even harder to grasp than that between the members of a corporation aggregate and the corporation itself....” Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 118–19 (P.B. Fairst ed., 6th ed. 1967).

dead corporation. See dissolved corporation.

de facto corporation (di fak-toh). An incompletely formed corporation whose existence operates as a defense to personal liability of the directors, officers, and shareholders who in good faith thought they were operating the business as a duly formed corporation. — Also termed corporation de facto. [Cases: Corporations 28. C.J.S. Corporations § 63.]

de jure corporation (di juur-ee). A corporation formed in accordance with all applicable laws and recognized as a corporation for liability purposes. — Also termed corporation de jure. [Cases: Corporations 3. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 5–7, 62.]

dissolved corporation. A corporation whose charter has expired or been revoked, relinquished, or voluntarily terminated. — Also termed dead corporation.

domestic corporation. 1. A corporation that is organized and chartered under the laws of a state. • The corporation is considered domestic by the chartering state. Cf. foreign corporation. 2. Tax. A corporation created or organized in the United States or under federal or state law. IRC (26 USCA) § 7701(a)(4). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3623. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 369.]

dormant corporation. 1. An inactive corporation; a legal corporation that is presently not operating. 2. A corporation whose authority to do business has been revoked or suspended either by operation of law (as by failure to pay franchise taxes) or by an act of the government official responsible for the corporation's authority.

dummy corporation. A corporation whose only function is to hide the principal's identity and to protect the principal from liability.

ecclesiastical corporation (i-klee-zee-as-t<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>l). English law. A corporation that is organized for spiritual purposes or for the administration of property held for religious uses. — Also termed religious corporation. Cf. lay corporation.

“Ecclesiastical corporations. Corporations created for the furtherance of religion.... They are of two kinds: (1) corporations sole, i.e., bishops, certain deans, parsons and vicars; and (2) corporations aggregate, i.e., deans and chapters, and formerly prior and convent, abbot and monks, and the like. Such corporations are called ‘religious corporations,’ or ‘religious societies,’ in the United States.” 1 Stewart Rapalje & Robert L. Lawrence, A Dictionary of American and English Law 432 (1883).

eleemosynary corporation. See charitable corporation.

foreign corporation. A corporation that was organized and chartered under the laws of another state, government, or country <in Arizona, a California corporation is said to be a foreign corporation>. — Also termed alien corporation. Cf. domestic corporation. [Cases: Corporations 632. C.J.S. Corporations § 883.]

“ ‘Foreign’ is defined as ‘not native or domestic.’ This is the meaning given to the word in the various judicial definitions of foreign corporations. With respect to a particular state or country, a corporation created by or under the laws of that state or country is a ‘domestic corporation,’ and any corporation that owes its existence to the laws of another state, government or country is a ‘foreign corporation.’ The difference between a domestic and a foreign corporation of the same kind is one of status, determined by considerations that are external to the corporation and not internal or organic. Moreover, foreign corporations of all classes fall equally within the definition. In many jurisdictions foreign corporations are defined by statute, and the statutory definitions do not differ in substance from that stated above.” 17 Fletcher Cyclopedic on the Law of Private Corporations § 8290, at 6–7 (1998).

for-profit corporation.A corporation organized for the purpose of making a profit; a business corporation. — Also termed corporation for profit; moneyed corporation.

government corporation.See public corporation (3).

joint-venture corporation.A corporation that has joined with one or more individuals or corporations to accomplish some specified project.

municipal corporation de facto.See MUNICIPAL CORPORATION.

nonprofit corporation.A corporation organized for some purpose other than making a profit, and usu. afforded special tax treatment. — Also termed not-for-profit corporation. Cf. business corporation. [Cases: Corporations 3; Internal Revenue 4045–4071. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 5–7, 62; Internal Revenue §§ 327, 462–474, 670, 798.]

nonstock corporation.A corporation that does not issue shares of stock as evidence of ownership but instead is owned by its members in accordance with a charter or agreement. • Examples are mutual insurance companies, charitable organizations, and private clubs. [Cases: Corporations 3. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 5–7, 62.]

not-for-profit corporation.See nonprofit corporation.

parent corporation.A corporation that has a controlling interest in another corporation (called a subsidiary corporation), usu. through ownership of more than one-half the voting stock. — Often shortened to parent. — Also termed parent company.

political corporation. See public corporation (2).

private corporation. A corporation founded by and composed of private individuals principally for a nonpublic purpose, such as manufacturing, banking, and railroad corporations (including charitable and religious corporations). — Also termed quasi-individual. [Cases: Corporations 3. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 5–7, 62.]

professional corporation. A corporation that provides services of a type that requires a professional license. • A professional corporation may be made up of architects, accountants, lawyers, physicians, veterinarians, or the like. — Abbr. P.C.

public corporation. 1. A corporation whose shares are traded to and among the general public. — Also termed publicly held corporation. [Cases: Corporations 3. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 5–7, 62.] 2. A corporation that is created by the state as an agency in the administration of civil government. — Also termed political corporation. 3. A government-owned corporation that engages in activities that benefit the general public, usu. while remaining financially independent. • Such a corporation is managed by a publicly appointed board. — Also termed (in sense 3) government corporation; public-benefit corporation. [Cases: States 84. C.J.S. States §§ 141–143, 165, 202.] publicly held corporation. See public corporation (1).

public-service corporation. A corporation whose operations serve a need of the general public, such as public transportation, communications, gas, water, or electricity. • This type of corporation is usu. subject to extensive governmental regulation. [Cases: Public Utilities 103. C.J.S. Public Utilities §§ 3–4, 6, 11.]

qualified corporation. See admitted corporation.

quasi-corporation. An entity that exercises some of the functions of a corporation but that has not been granted corporate status by statute; esp., a public corporation with limited authority and powers (such as a county or school district). — Also sometimes termed quasi-municipal corporation. Cf. MUNICIPAL CORPORATION. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 2. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 7–9.]

quasi-public corporation. A for-profit corporation providing an essential public service. • An example is an electric company or other utility.

railroad corporation. A company organized to construct, maintain, and operate railroads. — Also termed railroad company. [Cases: Railroads 13. C.J.S. Railroads §§ 24–25, 31–33.]

purely and strictly private corporation.” 1 Byron K. Elliott & William F. Elliott, A Treatise on the Law of Railroads § 3, at 7 (3d ed. 1921).

registered corporation. A publicly held corporation a security of which is registered under § 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. • The corporation is subject to the Act's periodic disclosure requirements and proxy regulations. 15USCA § 78l. [Cases: Securities Regulation 35.22. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 112–114.]

religious corporation. A corporation created to carry out some ecclesiastical or religious purpose. See ecclesiastical corporation. [Cases: Religious Societies 4. C.J.S. Religious Societies §§ 2, 5, 7–13.]

S corporation. A corporation whose income is taxed through its shareholders rather than through the corporation itself. • Only corporations with a limited number of shareholders can elect S-corporation tax status under Sub-chapter S of the Internal Revenue Code. — Also termed subchapter-S corporation; tax-option corporation. Cf. C corporation. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3885–3903. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 374–379.]

shell corporation. A corporation that has no active business and usu. exists only in name as a vehicle for another company's business operations.

CORPS DIPLOMATIQUE

corps diplomatique (kor dee-pl<<schwa>>-ma-teek).DIPLOMATIC CORPS.

CORPUS

corpus (kor-p<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin “body”] 1. The property for which a trustee is responsible; the trust principal. — Also termed res; trust estate; trust fund; trust property; trust res; trust. [Cases: Trusts 1. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18.] 2.PRINCIPAL(4). Pl. corpora (kor-p<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>), corpuses (kor-p<<schwa>>-s<<schwa>>z).

CORPUS COMITATUS

corpus comitatus (kor-p<<schwa>>s kom-<<schwa>>-tay-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin “the body of a county”] Hist. The area within a territorial jurisdiction rather than on the “high seas” and hence where admiralty jurisdiction did not originally extend. See INFRA CORPUS COMITATUS.

CORPUS CORPORATUM

corpus corporatum (kor-p<<schwa>>s kor-p<<schwa>>-ray-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. A corporate body; a corporation.

CORPUS CUM CAUSA

corpus cum causa (kor-p<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>m kaw-z<<schwa>>). [Law Latin “the body with the cause”] Hist. A writ issuing out of Chancery to remove both a person and a record from an inferior court in order to review a judgment issued by the inferior court.

“The first use of the writ to challenge imprisonment was in cases of privilege; an officer of a central court, or a litigant there, could be released from imprisonment in another court by writ of privilege in habeas corpus form. The Court of Chancery at the same time developed a similar procedure for reviewing the cause of imprisonment in an inferior tribunal; this species of writ was called corpus cum causa, and it became a common remedy against the misuse of borough jurisdiction in the fifteenth century.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 168 (3d ed. 1990).

CORPUS DELICTI

corpus delicti (kor-p<<schwa>>s d<<schwa>>-lik-tIor -tee). [Latin “body of the crime”] 1. The fact of a trans-gression; ACTUS REUS. [Cases: Criminal Law 26; Homicide 511. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 44–45, 1110.]

“One of the important rules of evidence in criminal cases is that which requires proof of the corpus delicti. Literally defined this term means ‘the body of the offense,’ or ‘the substance of the crime.’ In popular language it is used to describe the visible evidence of the crime, such as the dead body of a murdered person. Properly used, however, it is applicable to any crime and relates particularly to the act element of criminality; that is, that a certain prohibited act has been committed or result accomplished and that it was committed or accomplished by a criminal human agency.” Justin Miller, “The Criminal Act,” in Legal Essays in Tribute to Orrin Kip McMurray 469, 478 (1935).

“The phrase ‘corpus delicti’ does not mean dead body, but body of the crime, and every offense has its corpus delicti. Its practical importance, however, has been very largely limited to the homicide cases. It concerns the usability in a criminal case of a confession made by the defendant outside of court.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 140 (3d ed. 1982).

2. Loosely, the material substance on which a crime has been committed; the physical evidence of a crime, such as the corpse of a murdered person. • Despite the common misunderstanding, a victim's body could be evidence of a homicide, but the prosecutor does not have to locate or present the body to meet the corpus delicti requirement.

CORPUS DELICTI RULE

corpus delicti rule. Criminal law. The doctrine that prohibits a prosecutor from proving the corpus delicti based solely on a defendant's extrajudicial statements. • The prosecution must establish the corpus delicti with corroborating evidence to secure a conviction. [Cases: Criminal Law 412(6), 517.3. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 942–945.]

CORPUS JURIS

corpus juris (kor-p<<schwa>>s joor-is). [Latin “body of law”] The law as the sum or collection of laws <Corpus Juris Secundum>. — Abbr. C.J.

CORPUS JURIS ANGLIAE

corpus juris Angliae (kor-p<<schwa>>s joor-is ang-gee-ee). The entire body of English law, comprising the common law, statutory law, equity, and special law in its various forms.

CORPUS JURIS CANONICI

Corpus Juris Canonici (kor-p<<schwa>>s joor-is k<<schwa>>-non-<<schwa>>-sl). [Latin] Hist. The body of the canon law, compiled from the decrees and canons of the Roman Catholic Church. • The Corpus Juris Canonici emerged during the 12th century, beginning with the publication of Gratian's Decretum (c. 1140). In addition to the Decretum, it includes Raymond of Peñaforte's Liber Extra (1234), the Liber Sextus of Pope Boniface VIII (1298), the Clementines of Pope Clement V (1313), the Extravagantes Joannis of Pope John XXII (1325), and Extravagantes Communes published by Pope John's successors (1499–1502). In 1582, the entire collection was edited by a commission of church dignitaries and officially named the Corpus Juris Canonici. It remained the Catholic Church's primary body of law until the promulgation of the Code of Canon Law in 1917, now replaced by that of 1983.

“After Gratian, later papal enactments, called ‘decretals,’ were collected and issued by the authority of various popes.... A revised edition of such ‘decretals’ ... was presented to Pope Gregory IX in 1234 — only a short while, therefore, after the final form of Magna Carta in 1225 — and issued by him with statutory force. The revision freely made changes in the text of the enactments and the resulting compilation in four ‘books’ was regarded as a ‘Code,’ corresponding to the ‘Code’ of Justinian, just as the Decretum of Gratian corresponded to the Digest.... All these compilations and collections were, from the sixteenth century on, known as the Corpus Juris Canonici, the ‘Body of Canon Law,’ and formed the basis of the law administered in the Church courts.” Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 33–34 (1936).

CORPUS JURIS CIVILIS

Corpus Juris Civilis (kor-p<<schwa>>s joor-is s<<schwa>>-vil-is or s<<schwa>>-v I-lis). The body of the civil law, compiled and codified under the direction of the Roman emperor Justinian in A.D. 528–556. • The collection includes four works — the Institutes, the Digest (or Pandects), the Code, and the Novels. The title Corpus Juris Civilis was not original, or even early, but was modeled on the Corpus Juris Canonici and given in the 16th century and later to editions of the texts of the four component parts of the Roman law. See ROMAN LAW. Cf. JUSTINIAN CODE.

CORPUS POSSESSIONIS

corpus possessionis (kor-p<<schwa>>s p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh-nis). [Latin] Roman law. The physical aspect of possession. See animus possidendi under ANIMUS.

CORPUS PRO CORPORE

corpus pro corpore (kor-p<<schwa>>s proh kor-p<<schwa>>-ree). [Latin] Hist. Body for body. • This phrase commonly expressed the liability of a surety in a civil action (a mainpernor). See MAINPRISE.

correal (kor-ee-<<schwa>>l or k<<schwa>>-ree-<<schwa>>l), adj.[fr. Latin correus “codebtor”] Roman law. Of or relating to liability that is joint and several. • A correal debtor who paid an entire obligation had no right of action against a codebtor. See CORREUS; SOLIDARY.

“If Aulus, having first obtained from Titius the promise of a hundred aurei, turned to Seius and said, Spondesne mihi, Sei, cosdem centum aureos dare?(Do you engage, Seius, to give me the same one hundred aurei?), then if Seius answered, Spondeo, there was one single obligation for a hundred aurei, binding in full on each of the two debtors. Aulus could demand a hundred from Titius or a hundred from Seius, and in case of non-payment could sue either one, taking his choice between them, for the full amount. If either paid the hundred, whether willingly or by compulsion, the other was released: for there was but one debt, and that was now discharged. This kind of obligation is called correal obligation (correal, from con, and reus or rei, connected parties, parties associated in a common debt or credit).” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 258 (1881).

correality (kor-ee-al-<<schwa>>-tee), n. The quality or state of being correal; the relationship between parties to an obligation that terminates when an entire payment is made by one of two or more debtors to a creditor, or a payment is made by a debtor to one of two or more creditors.

“But there were circumstances, apart from indivisibility, in which each of the parties might be liable in full.... Several were liable or entitled, each in solidum, under an obligation, but the thing was due only once. Satisfaction by, or to, one of those liable, or entitled, ended the whole obligation, and action by one of the joint creditors, or against one of the debtors, not only ‘novated’ the obligation between the actual parties, but destroyed it altogether as against the others. This relation is commonly called correality (correi debendi vel credendi).” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 349–50 (2d ed. 1939).

CORREAL OBLIGATION

correal obligation.See OBLIGATION.

CORRECTED POLICY

corrected policy.See INSURANCE POLICY.

CORRECTION

correction, n. 1. Generally, the act or an instance of making right what is wrong . 2. A change in business activity or market price following and counteracting an increase or decrease in the activity or price <the broker advised investors to sell before the inevitable stock-market correction>. See DOWN REVERSAL. 3. (usu. pl.) The punishment and treatment of a criminal offender through a program of imprisonment, parole, and probation <Department of Corrections>. — correct, vb. — corrective (for senses 1 & 2), correctional (for sense 3), adj.

CORRECTION, HOUSE OF

correction, house of. See house of correction under HOUSE.

CORRECTIONAL INSTITUTION correctional institution. See PRISON.

CORRECTIONAL SYSTEM

correctional system. A network of governmental agencies that administer a jurisdiction's prisons and parole system.

CORRECTIVE ADVERTISING

corrective advertising. Advertising that informs consumers that earlier advertisements contained a deceptive claim, and that provides consumers with corrected information. • This type of advertising may be ordered by the Federal Trade Commission.

CORRECTOR OF THE STAPLE

corrector of the staple. Hist. A clerk who records merchants' transactions at a staple. See STAPLE(2).

CORREI CREDENDI

correi credendi (kor-ee-I kri-den-dI). [Latin] Roman law. Joint creditors. — Also termed correi stipulandi (stip-y<<schwa>>-lan-dI). See STIPULATIO.

“The mode for stipulatio is stated in the Institutes. Of several stipulators (correi credendi, active correality) each asks the debtor and he answers once for all. Of several promisors (correi debendi, passive correality) the creditor asks each and they answer together.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 350 (2d ed. 1939).

CORREI DEBENDI

correi debendi (kor-ee-I di-ben-dI). [Latin] Roman & Scots law. Joint debtors. — Also termed correi promittendi (proh-mi-ten-dI). See STIPULATIO.

“Correi Debendi — The name given by the Roman law to persons jointly bound.... In the Scotch law, if bound severally, and not jointly and severally, each is bound only for his share, whatever be the responsibility of the others.” Hugh Barclay, A Digest of the Law of Scotland 196 (3d ed. 1865).

CORREI STIPULANDI

correi stipulandi. See CORREI CREDENDI.

CORRELATIVE

correlative (k<<schwa>>-rel-<<schwa>>-tiv), adj. 1. Related or corresponding; analogous. 2. Having or involving a reciprocal or mutually interdependent relationship <the term right is correlative with duty>.

CORRELATIVE-RIGHTS DOCTRINE

correlative-rights doctrine. 1. Water law. The principle that adjoining landowners must limit their use of a common water source to a reasonable amount. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 41, 101. C.J.S. Waters §§ 13, 193, 195–197, 201–204.]

“Under the correlative rights doctrine ... rights to groundwater are determined by land ownership. However, owners of land overlying a single aquifer are each limited to a reasonable share of the total supply of groundwater. The share is usually based on the acreage owned.” David H. Getches, Water Law in a Nutshell 249 (3d ed. 1997).

2. Oil & gas. The rule that a lessee's or landowner's right to capture oil and gas from the property is restricted by the duty to exercise that right without waste or negligence. • This is a corollary to the rule of capture. Cf. RULE OF CAPTURE(4).

CORRESPONDENCE AUDIT

correspondence audit. See AUDIT.

correspondent, n. 1. The writer of a letter or letters. 2. A person employed by the media to report on events. 3. A securities firm or financial institution that performs services for another in a place or market that the other does not have direct access to. — correspond, vb.

CORRIGENDUM

corrigendum (kor-<<schwa>>-jen-d<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin "correction"] An error in a printed work discovered after the work has gone to press. — Also termed erratum. Pl. corrigenda (kor-<<schwa>>-jen-d<<schwa>>).

CORROBORATE

corroborate (k<<schwa>>-rob-<<schwa>>-rayt), vb. To strengthen or confirm; to make more certain <the witness corroborated the plaintiff's testimony>.

CORROBORATING EVIDENCE

corroborating evidence. See EVIDENCE.

CORROBORATING WITNESS

corroborating witness. See WITNESS.

CORROBORATION

corroboration (k<<schwa>>-rob-<<schwa>>-ray-sh<<schwa>>n), n.1. Confirmation or support by additional evidence or authority <corroboration of the witness's testimony>. [Cases: Witnesses 410–416. C.J.S. Wit-nesses §§ 776–787.] 2. Formal confirmation or ratification <corroboration of the treaty>. — corroborate, vb. — corroborative (k<<schwa>>-rob-<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>-tiv), adj. — corroborator (k<<schwa>>-rob-<<schwa>>-ray-t<<schwa>>r), n.

CORROBORATIVE EVIDENCE

corroborative evidence. See corroborating evidence under EVIDENCE.

CORRODY

corrody. See CORODY.

corrupt, adj. 1. Archaic. (Of a person) subject to corruption of blood.

"[T]here are divers offences made Treason by Act of Parliament, whereof, though a Man be Attaint, yet his Blood, by Provisoes therein, is not corrupt, nor shall he forfeit any thing...." Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

2. Having an unlawful or depraved motive; esp., influenced by bribery.

corrupt, vb. 1. Archaic. To impose corruption of blood on (a person). 2. To change (a person's morals or principles) from good to bad.

CORRUPTING

corrupting, n. See IMPAIRING THE MORALS OF A MINOR.

CORRUPTION

corruption. 1. Depravity, perversion, or taint; an impairment of integrity, virtue, or moral principle; esp., the impairment of a public official's duties by bribery. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 121.C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 329–334.]

“The word ‘corruption’ indicates impurity or debasement and when found in the criminal law it means depravity or gross impropriety.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 855 (3d ed. 1982).

2. The act of doing something with an intent to give some advantage inconsistent with official duty and the rights of others; a fiduciary's or official's use of a station or office to procure some benefit either personally or for someone else, contrary to the rights of others.

CORRUPTION IN OFFICE

corruption in office. See official misconduct under MISCONDUCT.

CORRUPTION OF A MINOR corruption of a minor. See IMPAIRING THE MORALS OF A MINOR.

CORRUPTION OF BLOOD

corruption of blood. A defunct doctrine, now considered unconstitutional, under which a person loses the ability to inherit or pass property as a result of an attainder or of being declared civilly dead. — Also termed corruption of the blood. See ATTAINDER; civil death (1) under DEATH.

“Corruption of blood is, when any one is attainted of felony or treason, then his blood is said to be corrupt; by means whereof neither his children, nor any of his blood, can be heirs to him, or to any other ancestor, for that they ought to claim by him. And if he were a noble or gentleman before, he and all his children are made thereby ignoble and ungentle” Termes de la Ley 125 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

CORRUPTLY

corruptly, adv. In a corrupt or depraved manner; by means of corruption or bribery. • As used in criminal-law statutes, corruptly usu. indicates a wrongful desire for pecuniary gain or other advantage.

CORRUPT-MOTIVE DOCTRINE corrupt-motive doctrine. Criminal law. The rule that conspiracy is punishable only if the agreement was entered into with an evil purpose, not merely with an intent to do the illegal act. • This doctrine — which originated in People v. Powell, 63 N.Y. 88 (1875) — has been rejected by the Model Penal Code. — Also termed Powell doctrine. [Cases: Conspiracy 24.5. C.J.S. Conspiracy §§ 111–112.]

CORRUPT-PRACTICES ACT

corrupt-practices act. A federal or state statute that regulates campaign contributions and expenditures as well as their disclosure. [Cases: Elections 317.1. C.J.S. Elections § 329.]

cosigner. See COMAKER.

cosinage (k<<schwa>>z-<<schwa>>n-ij).Hist. A writ used by an heir to secure the right to land held by a great-great-grandfather or certain collateral relatives. — Also spelled cosenage; cousinage. — Also termed consanguineo; de consanguineo; de consanguinitate. Cf. AIEL; BESAYEL.

“[T]here is the closest possible affinity between the Mort d'Ancestor and the action of Cosinage. If I claim the seisin of my uncle, I use the one; if I claim the seisin of a first cousin, I use the other. But procedurally, the two stand far apart.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 569 (2d ed. 1899).

COSMETIC DAMAGES

cosmetic damages.See DAMAGES.

COST

cost,n.1. The amount paid or charged for something; price or expenditure. Cf. EXPENSE.

aboriginal cost.The cost of an asset incurred by the first company to use it for public utilities. [Cases: Public Utilities 124. C.J.S. Public Utilities §§ 23–26, 30–33, 48–49.]

acquisition cost. 1. An asset's net price; the original cost of an asset. — Also termed historical cost; original cost. 2. LOAD.

after cost. A delayed expense; an expense, such as one for repair under a warranty, incurred after the principal transaction.

applied cost. A cost appropriated to a project before it has been incurred.

average cost. The sum of the costs of beginning inventory costs and the costs of later additions divided by the total number of available units.

avoidable cost. A cost that can be averted if production is held below a certain level so that additional expenses will not be incurred.

carrying cost. 1. Accounting. The variable cost of stocking one unit of inventory for one year. • Carrying cost includes the opportunity cost of the capital invested in the inventory. — Also termed cost of carrying. 2. A current charge or noncapital expenditure made to prevent the causing or accelerating of the termination of a defeasible estate, as well as the sums spent on repairs required by the duty to avoid permissive waste.

common cost. See indirect cost.

cost of completion. Contracts. An element of damages based on the expense that would be incurred by the party not in breach to finish the promised performance. [Cases: Damages 121. C.J.S. Damages § 111.]

direct cost. The amount of money for material, labor, and overhead to produce a product.

distribution cost. Any cost incurred in marketing a product or service, such as advertising, storage, and shipping.

fixed cost. A cost whose value does not fluctuate with changes in output or business activity; esp., overhead expenses such as rent, salaries, and depreciation. — Also termed fixed charge; fixed expense.

flotation cost. (usu. pl.) A cost incurred in issuing additional stock.

historical cost. See acquisition cost.

implicit cost. See opportunity cost.

indirect cost. A cost that is not specific to the production of a particular good or service but that arises from production activity in general, such as overhead allocations for general and administrative activities. — Also termed common cost.

manufacturing cost. The cost incurred in the production of goods, including direct and indirect costs.

marginal cost. The additional cost incurred in producing one more unit of output.

mitigation cost. A party's expenditures to reduce an existing harm so that further damage might be halted, slowed, or diminished.

mixed cost. A cost that includes fixed and variable costs.

net book cost. The cost of property when it was first acquired or devoted to public use, minus accumulated de-preciation. — Also termed rate-base value.

net cost. The cost of an item, arrived at by subtracting any financial gain from the total cost.

opportunity cost. The cost of acquiring an asset measured by the value of an alternative investment that is forgone <her opportunity cost of $1,000 in equipment was her consequent inability to invest that money in bonds>. — Also termed implicit cost.

original cost. See acquisition cost.

prime cost. The true price paid for goods on a bona fide purchase.

prophylactic cost. A party's expenditures to prepare property to withstand or prevent potential future harm. • These costs are not related to any existing property damage and are usu. not recoverable under insurance contracts.

replacement cost. The cost of a substitute asset that is equivalent to an asset currently held. • The new asset has the same utility but may or may not be identical to the one replaced.

social cost. The cost to society of any particular practice or rule <although automobiles are undeniably beneficial to society, they carry a certain social cost in the lives that are lost every year on the road>.

sunk cost. A cost that has already been incurred and that cannot be recovered.

tangible cost. Oil & gas. A particular expense associated with drilling, such as the costs incurred for materials and land. • Drilling and testing costs are considered intangible.

transaction cost. (usu. pl.) A cost connected with a process transaction, such as a broker's commission, the time and effort expended to arrange a deal, or the cost involved in litigating a dispute.

unit cost. The cost of a single unit of a product or service; the total manufacturing cost divided by the number of units.

variable cost. The cost that varies in the short run in close relationship with changes in output.

2. (pl.) The charges or fees taxed by the court, such as filing fees, jury fees, courthouse fees, and reporter fees. — Also termed court costs. 3. (pl.) The expenses of litigation, prosecution, or other legal transaction, esp. those allowed in favor of one party against the other. • Some but not all states allow parties to claim attorney's fees as a litigation cost. — Also termed (in sense 3) litigation costs. [Cases: Costs 2, 146–194; Federal Civil Procedure 2721–2748. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 83; Costs §§ 2–3, 6, 8–9, 94–97, 99–101, 105–124.]

accruing costs. Costs and expenses incurred after judgment.

costs of increase. See COSTS OF INCREASE.

costs of the day. Costs incurred in preparing for trial.

costs to abide event. Costs incurred by a successful party who is entitled to an award of those costs incurred at the conclusion of the matter; esp., appellate court's order for payment of costs to the party who finally prevails in a proceeding that has been returned to a lower court. [Cases: Costs 69. C.J.S. Costs § 2.]

interlocutory costs. Costs incurred during the pendency of an appeal.

taxable cost. A litigation-related expense that the prevailing party is entitled to as part of the court's award.

COST ACCOUNTING

cost accounting. See cost accounting method under ACCOUNTING METHOD.

COST ACCOUNTING METHOD

cost accounting method. See ACCOUNTING METHOD.

COST AND FREIGHT

cost and freight. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must (1) clear the goods for export, (2) arrange for transportation by water, and (3) pay the costs of shipping to the port of destination. • When the goods are safely stowed on the receiving ship while docked, the seller's delivery is complete; the risk of loss then passes to the buyer. This term is used only when goods are transported by sea or inland waterway. — Abbr. CF; CFR; C & F; CandF. Cf. COST, INSURANCE, AND FREIGHT ; FREE ON BOARD. [Cases: Sales 77(2), 202(5). C.J.S. Sales §§ 96–98.]

COST APPROACH

cost approach. A method of appraising real property, based on the cost of building a new structure with the same utility, assuming that an informed buyer would pay no more for the property than it would cost to build a new structure having the same usefulness. Cf. MARKET APPROACH; INCOME APPROACH. [Cases: Taxation 348(4).]

COST BASIS

cost basis. See BASIS(2).

COST-BENEFIT ANALYSIS

cost-benefit analysis. An analytical technique that weighs the costs of a proposed decision, holding, or project against the expected advantages, economic or otherwise.

COST BILL

cost bill. See bill of costs under BILL(2).

COST BOND

cost bond. See BOND(2).

COST-BOOK MINING COMPANY

cost-book mining company. An association of persons organized for the purpose of working mines or lodes, whose capital stock is divided into shares that are transferable without the consent of other members. • The management of the mine is entrusted to an agent called a purser. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 101. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 396–401.]

cost depletion. Oil & gas. The recovery of an oil-and-gas producer's basis (i.e., investment) in a producing well by deducting the basis proportionately over the producing life of the well. Treas. Reg. § 1.611–2. Cf. PERCENTAGE DEPLETION .

“Under cost depletion, the taxpayer in an oil and gas property deducts the basis in the property from the income as oil and gas are produced and sold. Cost depletion is calculated by a formula ... [that] relates the recovery of the taxpayer's investment to the proportion that the current unit sales of oil and gas bear to the total anticipated sales of oil and gas from the property. The investment is recovered ratably over the life of the reserves.” John S. Lowe, Oil and Gas Law in a Nutshell 353 (3d ed. 1995).

COST, INSURANCE, AND FREIGHT

cost, insurance, and freight. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must (1) clear the goods for export, (2) arrange for transportation by water, (3) procure insurance against the buyer's risk of damage during carriage, and (4) pay the costs of shipping to the port of destination. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods are loaded on the receiving ship while docked in the port of shipment. This term is used only when goods are transported by sea or inland waterway. — Abbr. CIF; C.I.F. Cf. COST AND FREIGHT; FREE ON BOARD. [Cases: Sales 77(2). C.J.S. Sales §§ 96–98.]

“ ‘C.i.f.’ is a mercantile symbol that is commonly used in international sales contracts. It is defined by section 2–320 of the UCC and by the Incoterms — 1953 and the Revised American Foreign Trade Definitions — 1941. Under all of these definitions the letters ‘c.i.f.’ mean that the price covers the cost of the goods, the cost of insuring them for the benefit of the order of the buyer, and the cost of carrying them to the named point, almost always the destination. Like the other mercantile symbols, the meaning of ‘C.I.F.’ may be varied by agreement.” William D. Hawkland, Uniform Commercial Code Series § 2-320:01 (1984).

CIF destination. A contractual term denoting that the price includes in a lump sum the cost of the goods and the insurance and freight to the named destination. — Also termed C.I.F. place of destination. [Cases: Sales 77(2). C.J.S. Sales §§ 96–98.]

cost justification. Under the Robinson–Patman Act, an affirmative defense against a charge of price discrimination dependent on the seller's showing that it incurs lower costs in serving those customers who are paying less. 15 USCA § 13(a).

COST-OF-CAPITAL METHOD

cost-of-capital method. A means of measuring a utility's cost of acquiring debt and equity capital. • Regulatory commissions often use this method to determine a fair rate of return for the utility's investors. [Cases: Public Utilities 129. C.J.S. Public Utilities §§ 35, 38–41, 57.]

COST OF CARRYING

cost of carrying. See carrying cost under COST.

COST OF COMPLETION

cost of completion. See COST(1).

COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT

cost-of-living adjustment. An automatic increase or decrease in the amount of money, usu. support or mainten-ance, to be paid by one party to another, the adjustment being tied to the cost-of-living-adjustment figures maintained and updated by the federal government. — Abbr. COLA.

COST-OF-LIVING CLAUSE

cost-of-living clause. A provision (as in a contract or lease) that gives an automatic wage, rent, or benefit increase tied in some way to cost-of-living rises in the economy. • A cost-of-living clause may also cover a decrease, though this is rare. See INFLATION. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 200.7.]

COST-OF-LIVING INDEX

cost-of-living index. See CONSUMER PRICE INDEX.

COST-PLUS CONTRACT

cost-plus contract. See CONTRACT.

COST-PUSH INFLATION

cost-push inflation. See INFLATION.

COSTS DE INCREMENTO costs de incremento. See COSTS OF INCREASE.

COSTS OF COLLECTION

costs of collection. Expenses incurred in receiving payment of a note; esp., attorney's fees created in the effort to collect a note. [Cases: Bills and Notes 534. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 238, 297, 306, 312–328, 339.]

COSTS OF INCREASE

costs of increase. Costs of court awarded in addition to what a jury awards. • Juries usu. awarded the successful party only a small sum for costs. A party wishing to recoup the additional costs had to file an affidavit of increase setting forth what further costs were incurred by taking the matter through trial. — Also termed costs de incremento. See affidavit of increase under AFFIDAVIT. [Cases: Costs 1–283; Federal Civil Procedure 2721–2748. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 83; Costs §§ 2–209.]

COSTS OF THE DAY

costs of the day. See COST(3).

COSTS TO ABIDE EVENT

costs to abide event. See COST(3).

COSURETY

cosurety. A surety who shares the cost of performing suretyship obligations with another. See SURETY. [Cases: Principal and Surety 62, 191–200. C.J.S. Principal and Surety §§ 71, 259–280, 289–291.]

cosuretyship. The relation between two or more sureties who are bound to answer for the same duty of the principal, and who are jointly responsible for any loss resulting from the principal's default.

COTARIUS

cotarius (k<<schwa>>-tair-ee-<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] Hist. A socage-tenure serf who holds land by paying rent and providing some personal services to the lord. • Both cotarius and coterellus serfs were also known as cottagers. Cf. COTERELLUS.

count, n. Procedure. 1. The part of an indictment charging the suspect with a distinct offense. 2. In a complaint or similar pleading, the statement of a distinct claim. Cf. DECLARATION(7). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 627; Pleading 53. C.J.S. Pleading § 150.]

“This word ... is in our old law-books used synonymously with declaration.... But when the suit embraces two or more causes of action (each of which of course requires a different statement), or when the plaintiff makes two or more different statements of one and the same cause of action, each several statement is called a count, and all of them, collectively, constitute the declaration.” 1 John Bouvier, A Law Dictionary 245 (1839).

common count. Hist. In a plaintiff's pleading in an action for debt, boilerplate language that is not founded on the circumstances of the individual case but is intended to guard against a possible variance and to enable the plaintiff to take advantage of any ground of liability that the proof may disclose. • In the action for indebitatus assumpsit, the common count stated that the defendant had failed to pay a debt as promised. See indebitatus assumpsit under ASSUMPSIT.

general count. A count that states the plaintiff's claim without undue particularity.

money count. Hist. A count, usu. founded on a simple contract, giving rise to a claim for payment of money.

“Simple contracts, express or implied, resulting in mere debts, are of so frequent occurrence as causes of action, that certain concise forms of counts were devised for suing upon them. These are called the ‘indebitatus’ or ‘money counts.’” 2 Stewart Rapalje & Robert L. Lawrence, A Dictionary of American and English Law 833 (1883).

multiple counts. Several separate causes of action or charged offenses contained in a single pleading or indictment. [Cases: Pleading 50. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 147–148.]

omnibus count (ahm-ni-b<<schwa>>s). A count that combines into one count all money claims, claims for goods sold and delivered, claims for work and labor, and claims for an account stated.

separate count. One of two or more criminal charges contained in one indictment, each charge constituting a separate indictment for which the accused may be tried. [Cases: Indictment and Information 97. C.J.S. Indictments and Informations § 133.]

several count. One of two or more counts in a pleading, each of which states a different cause of action. [Cases: Pleading 50, 53. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 147–148, 150.]

special count. A section of a pleading in which the plaintiff's claim is stated with great particularity — usu. employed only when the pleading rules require specificity. [Cases: Pleading 18, 50. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 70–71, 147–148, 162, 165.]

3. A canvassing. See CANVASS(2). 4. Hist. The plaintiff's declaration, or initial pleading, in a real action. See DECLARATION(7). 5. Patents. The part of a patent application that defines the subject matter in a priority contest (i.e., an interference) between two or more applications or between one or more applications and one or more patents. See INTERFERENCE(3). [Cases: Patents 106(2). C.J.S. Patents §§ 163–164, 167, 169.]

count, vb. 1. In pleading, to declare or state; to narrate the facts that state a claim. 2. Hist. To plead orally; to plead or argue a case in court.

COUNTED VOTE

counted vote. See VOTE(4).

COUNTER

counter. Hist. An advocate or professional pleader; one who counts (i.e., orally recites) for a client. • Counters had coalesced into an identifiable group practicing before the Common Bench by the beginning of the 13th century. They were the leaders of the medieval legal profession, and over time came to be known as serjeants-at-law. — Also spelled countor; contor; counteur. See SERJEANT-AT-LAW.

COUNTERACTION

counteraction. See COUNTERCLAIM.

COUNTERAFFIDAVIT

counteraffidavit. See AFFIDAVIT.

COUNTERBOND

counterbond. See BOND(2).

counterclaim,n. A claim for relief asserted against an opposing party after an original claim has been made; esp., a defendant's claim in opposition to or as a setoff against the plaintiff's claim. — Also termed counteraction; countersuit; cross-demand. Cf. CROSS-CLAIM. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 775–784; Set-off and Counterclaim 9. C.J.S. Set-off and Counterclaim §§ 9–10, 65.] — counterclaim,vb. — counterclaimant,n.

compulsory counterclaim.A counterclaim that must be asserted to be cognizable, usu. because it relates to the opposing party's claim and arises out of the same subject matter. • If a defendant fails to assert a compulsory counterclaim in the original action, that claim may not be brought in a later, separate action (with some excep-tions). See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 775; Judgment 585(4); Set-off and Counterclaim 60. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 775, 777–778; Set-off and Counterclaim §§ 102–103.] permissive counterclaim.A counterclaim that need not be asserted to be cognizable, usu. because it does not arise out of the same subject matter as the opposing party's claim or involves third parties over which the court does not have jurisdiction. • Permissive counterclaims may be brought in a later, separate action. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(b).

COUNTERDEED

counterdeed. See DEED.

COUNTERFEISANCE

counterfeisance (kown-t<<schwa>>r-fee-z<<schwa>>nts).Archaic. The act of counterfeiting.

COUNTERFEIT

counterfeit,vb. To unlawfully forge, copy, or imitate an item, esp. money or a negotiable instrument (such as a security or promissory note) or other officially issued item of value (such as a postage stamp or a food stamp), or to possess such an item without authorization and with the intent to deceive or defraud by presenting the item as genuine. • Counterfeiting includes producing or selling an item that displays a reproduction of a genuine trademark, usu. to deceive buyers into thinking they are purchasing genuine merchandise. See 18 USCA §§ 470 et seq. [Cases: Counterfeiting 1.Trade Regulation 312. C.J.S. Counterfeiting §§ 2, 8; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 151.] — counterfeiting,n. — counterfeit,n. — counterfeit,adj.

“Literally a counterfeit is an imitation intended to pass for an original. Hence it is spurious or false, and to counterfeit is to make false. For this reason the verbs counterfeit and forge are often employed as synonyms and the same is true to some extent of the corresponding nouns. No error is involved in this usage but it is important to distinguish between the words as far as possible when used as the labels of criminal offenses. In the most restricted sense, [c]ounterfeiting is the unlawful making of false money in the similitude of the genuine. At one time under English statutes it was made treason. Under modern statutes it is a felony.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 431–32 (3d ed. 1982).

COUNTERFEIT ACCESS DEVICE AND COMPUTER FRAUD AND ABUSE ACT OF 1984

Counterfeit Access Device and Computer Fraud and Abuse Act of 1984.A federal statute that criminalizes various computer-related activities such as accessing without permission a computer system belonging to a bank or the federal government, or using that access to improperly obtain anything of value. 18 USCA § 1030.

counterfeiter. A person who makes an unauthorized imitation of something (esp. a document, currency, or another's signature) with the intent to deceive or defraud.

COUNTERFEITING

counterfeiting,n. The unlawful forgery, copying, or imitation of an item, esp. money or a negotiable instrument (such as a security or promissory note) or other officially issued item of value (such as a postage stamp), or the unauthorized possession of such an item, with the intent to deceive or defraud by claiming or passing the item as genuine. See 18 USCA §§ 470 et seq. — counterfeit,vb. — counterfeit,adj. — counterfeit,n.

COUNTEROFFER

counteroffer, n. Contracts. An offeree's new offer that varies the terms of the original offer and that ordinarily rejects and terminates the original offer. • A late or defective acceptance is considered a counteroffer. See MIRROR-IMAGE RULE. [Cases: Contracts 24. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 52–53.] — counteroffer, vb. — counterofferor, n.

COUNTERPART

counterpart. 1. In conveyancing, a corresponding part of an instrument <the other half of the indenture — the counterpart — could not be found>. 2. One of two or more copies or duplicates of a legal instrument <this lease may be executed in any number of counterparts, each of which is considered an original>.

“Formerly ‘part’ was used as the opposite of ‘counterpart,’ in respect to covenants executed in duplicate, but now each copy is called a ‘counterpart.’ ” 2 Stewart Rapalje & Robert L. Lawrence, A Dictionary of American and English Law 927 (1883).

“Counterparts are not nowadays written on the same parchment, but that which is executed by the grantor of an interest is called the ‘original,’ while that which is executed by the party to whom the interest passes — for ex-ample, a lessee — is called the ‘counterpart.’ ” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 674 (3d ed. 1933).

COUNTERPART WRIT

counterpart writ. See WRIT.

COUNTERPROMISE

counterpromise, n. A promise made in exchange for another party's promise . See bilateral contract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Contracts 55. C.J.S. Contracts § 109.] — counterpromise, vb.

COUNTER WILL

counter will. See mutual will under WILL.

COUNTEZ

countez (kawn-teez). [Law French] Hist. A direction given by a clerk of a court to a crier, after a jury was sworn, to count the jury members.

“Of this ignorance we may see daily instances, in the abuse of two legal terms of ancient French; one, the prologue to all proclamations, ‘oyez, or hear ye,’ which is generally pronounced most unmeaningly, ‘O yes:’ the other, a more pardonable mistake, viz., when a jury are all sworn, the officer bids the crier number them, for which the word in law-french is, ‘countez;’ but we now hear it pronounced in very good English, ‘count these.’ ” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 334 n.s (1769).

COUNTING HOUSE OF THE KING'S HOUSEHOLD

Counting House of the King's Household. See BOARD OF GREEN CLOTH.

COUNTRY

country. 1. A nation or political state; STATE(1). 2. The territory of such a nation or state.

COUNTY

county. The largest territorial division for local government within a state, generally considered to be a political subdivision and a quasi-corporation. • Every county exists as a result of a sovereign act of legislation, either constitutional or statutory, separating it from the rest of the state as an integral part of its territory and establishing it as one of the primary divisions of the state for purposes of civil administration. — Abbr. co. [Cases: Counties 1. C.J.S. Counties §§ 2–4.]

“A county is a part of the realm, intirely governed by one sheriff under the king, but all subject to the general government of the realm; and therefore every county is as it were an intire body of itself, so that upon a feoffment of lands in many towns in one county, livery of seisin made in one parcel in any one of the towns in the name of all, sufficeth for all the lands in all the other towns within the same county: but upon a feoffment of lands in divers counties, there must be livery of seisin in every county.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 79 (1759).

foreign county. Any county separate from that of a county where matters arising in the former county are called into question, though both may lie within the same state or country.

COUNTY AGENT

county agent. See juvenile officer under OFFICER(1).

COUNTY ATTORNEY

county attorney. An attorney who represents a county in civil matters and, in some jurisdictions, who prosecutes criminal offenders.

COUNTY COURT

county court. See COURT.

COUNTY JUDGE

county judge. See JUDGE.

COUNTY OFFICER

county officer. See OFFICER(1).

COUNTY PALATINE

county palatine (pal-<<schwa>>-tIn or -tin). Hist. A county in which the lord held certain royal privileges, such as the right to pardon a felon or to have indictments recite that offenses were committed against the lord's — rather than the king's — peace. • In England, there were three such counties: Chester, Durham, and Lancaster. The separate legal systems in these counties were slowly eliminated; the last vestiges of a separate system were abolished by the Courts Act (1971). Cf. proprietary government under GOVERNMENT.

“The counties palatine were Chester, Durham, and Lancaster. Whatever may be the precise date at which these counties became ‘Palatine,’ it seems likely that there was in Saxon times a jurisdiction equivalent to that of the Palatine earl, and originating in usurpation and necessity. The Central Government was too far away both before and after the Conquest to control effectually the administration of the Marches, which were always turbulent and lawless districts.” A.T. Carter, A History of English Legal Institutions 192 (4th ed. 1910).

COUNTY PROPERTY county property. Property that a county is authorized to acquire, hold, or sell. [Cases: Counties 103. C.J.S. Counties § 143.]

COUNTY PURPOSE

county purpose. An objective pursued by a county; esp., one that a county levies taxes for. [Cases: Counties 190.1.]

COUNTY SEAT

county seat. The municipality where a county's principal offices are located. — Also termed county town. [Cases: Counties 25. C.J.S. Counties § 45.]

COUNTY SUPERVISOR

courier. A messenger, esp. one who delivers parcels, packages, and the like. • In international law, the term denotes a messenger duly authorized by a sending state to deliver a diplomatic pouch.

COURSE OF BUSINESS

course of business. The normal routine in managing a trade or business. — Also termed ordinary course of business; regular course of business; ordinary course; regular course. [Cases:

Customs and Usages 9. C.J.S. Customs and Usages § 15.]

course of dealing. An established pattern of conduct between parties in a series of transactions (e.g., multiple sales of goods over a period of years). • If a dispute arises, the parties' course of dealing can be used as evidence of how they intended to carry out the transaction. Cf. COURSE OF PERFORMANCE ; trade usage under USAGE. [Cases: Contracts 170. C.J.S. Contracts § 340.]

“A course of dealing is distinguishable from a course of performance. As defined by the [UCC], ‘course of dealing’ relates to conduct under other transactions which occurred with regularity prior to the formation of the present contract, while ‘course of performance’ relates to the conduct of the parties under the contract in question subsequent to its formation. However, in meaning the two expressions are essentially equivalent.” Ronald A. Anderson, Uniform Commercial Code § 1-205:86 (1997).

COURSE OF EMPLOYMENT

course of employment. Events that occur or circumstances that exist as a part of one's employment; esp., the time during which an employee furthers an employer's goals through employer-mandated directives. Cf. SCOPE OF EMPLOYMENT ; ZONE OF EMPLOYMENT.

COURSE OF PERFORMANCE

course of performance. A sequence of previous performance by either party after an agreement has been entered into, when a contract involves repeated occasions for performance and both parties know the nature of the performance and have an opportunity to object to it. • A course of performance accepted or acquiesced in without objection is relevant to determining the meaning of the agreement. Cf. COURSE OF DEALING; trade usage under USAGE. [Cases: Contracts 170. C.J.S. Contracts § 340.]

“[C]ommon law courts have recognized the necessity of learning how people usually talk and what they usually mean by their language before one interprets their contracts.... ‘[C]ourse of performance’ refers to a pattern of performance of the contract that is the subject of the dispute, as contrasted to ‘course of dealing’ which refers to the pattern of performance in prior contracts between the same parties.” Claude Rohwer & Gordon D. Schaber, Contracts in a Nutshell 171–73 (4th ed. 1997).

“The phrase ‘course of performance’ relates to the way the parties have acted in performance of the particular contract in question. The judicial inquiry on this point is limited to the way the parties have acted in carrying out the particular contract that is in controversy, as distinguished from a general pattern of dealing that may embrace many other contracts or transactions between the parties.” Ronald A. Anderson, Uniform Commercial Code § 1-205:74 (1997).

COURSE OF TRADE

course of trade. See trade usage under USAGE.

court,n.1. A governmental body consisting of one or more judges who sit to adjudicate disputes and administer justice .

“A court ... is a permanently organized body, with independent judicial powers defined by law, meeting at a time and place fixed by law for the judicial public administration of justice.” 1 William J. Hughes, Federal Practice, Jurisdiction & Procedure § 7, at 8 (1931).

2. The judge or judges who sit on such a governmental body <the court asked the parties to approach the bench>.3. A legislative assembly <in Massachusetts, the General Court is the legislature>.4. The locale for a legal proceeding <an out-of-court statement>.5. The building where the judge or judges convene to adjudicate disputes and administer justice <the lawyers agreed to meet at the court at 8:00 a.m.>. — Also termed (in sense 5) courthouse.

admiralty court.See ADMIRALTY(1).

appeals court.See appellate court.

appellate court.A court with jurisdiction to review decisions of lower courts or administrative agencies. — Also termed appeals court; appeal court; court of appeals; court of appeal; court of review. [Cases: Courts 203–254.]

A sheriff or county court that appoints and confirms the executors of decedents who have personal property in Scotland. 3. Hist. Scots law. A supreme court in which matters of probate and divorce were decided. • This court was established in Edinburgh in 1563 to hear cases that had previously come under the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical commissary court. It was absorbed by the Court of Session in 1836.

commissioner's court. In certain states, a court having jurisdiction over county affairs and often functioning more as a managerial group than as a judicial tribunal.

common pleas court. See COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

commonwealth court. 1. In some states, a court of general jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 118. C.J.S. Courts § 3.] 2. In Pennsylvania, a court that hears suits against the state and reviews decisions of state agencies and officials. [Cases: Courts 242(1).]

competent court. See court of competent jurisdiction.

conciliation court. See small-claims court.

consistory court. See CONSISTORY COURT.

constitutional court. 1. A court named or described and expressly protected in a constitution; esp., ARTICLE III COURT. 2. A court whose jurisdiction is solely or primarily over claims that legislation (and sometimes executive action) is inconsistent with a nation's constitution. • Germany, for example, has state constitutional courts and a Federal Constitutional Court.

consular court (kon-s<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>r). A court held by the consul of one country within the territory of another. • Consular courts are created by treaty, and their jurisdiction is usu. limited to civil cases. The last of the U.S. consular courts (Morocco) was abolished in 1956. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls 6. C.J.S. Am-bassadors and Consuls §§ 31–32.]

coroner's court. English law. A common-law court that holds an inquisition if a person died a violent or unnatural death, died in prison, or died suddenly when the cause is not known. • The court also has jurisdiction over treasure trove.

corporation court. In some jurisdictions, a court that serves an incorporated municipality. See municipal court.

county court. 1. A court with powers and jurisdiction dictated by a state constitution or statute. • The county court may govern administrative or judicial matters, depending on state law. — Also termed parish court; (in Latin) curia comitatus. [Cases: Counties 38; Courts 182. C.J.S. Counties § 63.] 2. See probate court.

court above. A court to which a case is appealed. — Also termed higher court; upper court.

court merchant. Hist. A court of limited jurisdiction that decided controversies arising between merchants, dealers, shipmasters, supercargoes, and other, usu. transient, people connected with trade. • Cases were usu. tried before a jury of merchants.

court not of record. An inferior court that is not required to routinely make a record of each proceeding and usu. does not.

court of appeals. 1. An intermediate appellate court. — Also termed (as in California and England) court of appeal. See appellate court. 2. In New York and Maryland, the highest appellate court within the jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 226, 237(1).]

court of chivalry. See HIGH COURT OF CHIVALRY.

court of claims. A court with the authority to hear claims made against a state (or its political subdivision) for cases in which the state has waived sovereign immunity. — Also termed claims court. See UNITED STATES COURT OF FEDERAL CLAIMS. [Cases: States 184. C.J.S. States §§ 273–274, 280, 282.]

court of competent jurisdiction. A court that has the power and authority to do a particular act; one recognized by law as possessing the right to adjudicate a controversy. — Also termed competent court.

court of domestic relations. See family court.

court of equity. A court that (1) has jurisdiction in equity, (2) administers and decides controversies in accordance with the rules, principles, and precedents of equity, and (3) follows the forms and procedures of chancery. Cf. court of law. [Cases: Courts 42(7).]

court of final appeal. 1. See court of last resort. 2. Eccles. law. (cap.) JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

court of first instance. See trial court.

court of general jurisdiction. A court having unlimited or nearly unlimited trial jurisdiction in both civil and criminal cases. — Also termed general-jurisdiction court. [Cases: Courts 118–158.1. C.J.S. Courts §§ 3, 23–31, 33–35.]

court of impeachment. See COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF IMPEACHMENTS.

court of inquiry. 1. Hist. In English law, a court appointed by the monarch to ascertain whether it was proper to use extreme measures against someone who had been court-martialed. 2. Hist. In American law, an agency created under articles of war and vested with the power to investigate the nature of a transaction or accusation of an officer or soldier. 3. In some jurisdictions, a procedure that allows a magistrate to examine witnesses in relation to any offense that the magistrate has a good-faith reason to believe was committed.

court of instance. See trial court.

court of last resort. The court having the authority to handle the final appeal of a case, such as the U.S. Supreme Court.

court of law. 1. Broadly, any judicial tribunal that administers the laws of a state or nation. 2. A court that proceeds according to the course of the common law, and that is governed by its rules and principles. Cf. court of equity.

court of limited jurisdiction. A court with jurisdiction over only certain types of cases, or cases in which the amount in controversy is limited. [Cases: Courts 159–197. C.J.S. Courts §§ 3, 23, 25–35.]

court of ordinary. See probate court.

court of original jurisdiction. A court where an action is initiated and first heard. [Cases: Courts 118–158.1, 206. C.J.S. Courts §§ 3, 23–31, 33–35.]

court of record. 1. A court that is required to keep a record of its proceedings. • The court's records are presumed accurate and cannot be collaterally impeached. See OF RECORD(2). [Cases: Courts 48. C.J.S. Courts § 4.]

“The distinction that we still draw between ‘courts of record’ and courts that are ‘not of record’ takes us back to early times when the king asserts that his own word as all that has taken place in his presence is incontestable. This privilege he communicates to his own special court; its testimony as to all that is done before it is conclusive. If any question arises as to what happened on a previous occasion, the justices decide this by recording or bearing record (recordantur, portant recordum). Other courts ... may and, upon occasion, must bear record; but their records are not irrefragable We easily slip into saying that a court whose record is incontrovertible is a court which has record (habet recordum) or is a court of record, while a court whose record may be disputed has no record (non habet recordum) and is no court of record.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 669 (2d ed. 1899).

2. A court that may fine and imprison people for contempt.

“A court of record is, strictly speaking, a court which has power to fine and imprison.” Lancelot Feilding Everest, Everest and Strode's Law of Estoppel 13 (1923).

court of review. See appellate court.

court of special jurisdiction. See limited court.

court of special session. A court that has no stated term and is not continuous, but is organized only for hearing a particular case. [Cases: Courts 64. C.J.S. Courts § 119.]

criminal court. A court with jurisdiction over criminal matters.

Crown Court. See CROWN COURT.

Dean of Guild Court. See DEAN OF GUILD COURT.

de facto court (di fak-toh). 1. A court functioning under the authority of a statute that is later adjudged to be invalid. — Also termed court de facto. [Cases: Courts 59. C.J.S. Courts § 8.] 2. A court established and acting under the authority of a de facto government.

dependency court. A court having jurisdiction over matters involving abused and neglected children, foster care, the termination of parental rights, and (sometimes) adoption.

diocesan court (di-ahs-i-sin). Eccles. law. A court exercising general or limited jurisdiction (as determined by patent, local custom, or legislation) of matters arising within a bishop's diocese. • Diocesan courts include the consistory court, the courts of the commissaries, and the courts of archdeacons.

district court. 1. A trial court having general jurisdiction within its judicial district. — Abbr. D.C. [Cases: Courts 191.] 2. Scots law. A local court, usu. staffed by lay magistrates, with jurisdiction over petty crimes.

divided court. See DIVIDED COURT.

divisional court. An English court made up of two or more judges from the High Court of Justice sitting in special cases that cannot be disposed of by one judge. • Each division of the High Court has a divisional court, e.g., the Divisional Court of the Family Division. With the exception of the Divisional Court of the Chancery Division, which has jurisdiction to review land-registration appeals from the county court, almost all judicial appeals are from decisions of a magistrates' court. The Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division hears appeals from the Crown Court or the magistrates' court by way of case stated in criminal prosecutions, which is the most frequent use of a divisional court.

domestic court. 1. A court having jurisdiction at the place of a party's residence or domicile. 2. See family court.

domestic-relations court. See family court.

drug court. A court that hears cases against nonviolent adults and juveniles, who are often first-time offenders and who are usu. charged with possession of a controlled substance or with committing a minor drug-related crime. • Drug courts focus on treatment rather than on incarceration.

ecclesiastical court (i-klee-zee-as-ti-k<<schwa>>l). 1. A religious court that hears matters concerning a particular religion. 2. In England, a court having jurisdiction over matters concerning the Church of England (the established church) as well as the duties and rights of the people serving it, but whose modern jurisdiction is limited to matters of ecclesiastical discipline and church property. — Also termed church court; court christian; spiritual court; (in Latin) christianitatis curia; curia christianitatis. [Cases: Religious Societies 12, 14. C.J.S. Religious Socie-ties §§ 84–86, 88–92.]

examining court. A lower court (usu. presided over by a magistrate) that determines probable cause and sets bail at a preliminary hearing in a criminal case.

family court. A court having jurisdiction over matters involving divorce, child custody and support, paternity, domestic violence, and other family-law issues. — Also termed domestic-relations court; court of domestic re-lations; domestic court. [Cases: Courts 174.]

federal court. A court having federal jurisdiction, including the U.S. Supreme Court, courts of appeals, district courts, bankruptcy courts, and tax courts. — Also termed United States court.

foreign court. 1. The court of a foreign nation. 2. The court of another state.

forty-days court. See COURT OF ATTACHMENTS.

franchise court. See FRANCHISE COURT.

full court. A court session that is attended by all the court's judges; an en banc court. — Also termed full bench.

General Court. See GENERAL COURT.

general-jurisdiction court. See court of general jurisdiction.

High Commission Court. See COURT OF HIGH COMMISSION.

High Court. 1. HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE. 2. HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY.

High Court of Admiralty. See HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY.

High Court of Chivalry. See HIGH COURT OF CHIVALRY.

High Court of Delegates. See COURT OF DELEGATES.

High Court of Errors and Appeals. See COURT OF ERRORS AND APPEALS.

High Court of Justice. See HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.

High Court of Justiciary. See HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY.

higher court. See court above.

highest court. The court of last resort in a particular jurisdiction; a court whose decision is final and cannot be appealed because no higher court exists to consider the matter. • The U.S. Supreme Court, for example, is the highest federal court.

hot court. A court, esp. an appellate court, that is familiar with the briefs filed in the case, and therefore with the issues, before oral argument. • Typically, a hot court controls the oral argument with its questioning, as opposed to listening passively to set presentations of counsel.

housing court. A court dealing primarily with landlord-and-tenant matters, including disputes over maintenance, lease terms, and building and fire codes. [Cases: Courts 174.]

hundred court. Hist. In England, a larger court baron, held for all inhabitants of a particular hundred rather than a manor, in which the free suitors were the judges (jurors) and the steward the register. • A hundred court was not a court of record, and it resembled a court-baron in all respects except for its larger territorial jurisdiction. The last hundred court was abolished in 1971. — Also termed hundred moot. See COURT BARON.

impeachment court. See COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF IMPEACHMENTS.

inferior court. 1. Any court that is subordinate to the chief appellate tribunal within a judicial system. 2. A court of special, limited, or statutory jurisdiction, whose record must show the existence of jurisdiction in any given case to give its ruling presumptive validity. — Also termed lower court.

inquisitorial court. A court in which the inquisitorial system prevails.

instance court. 1. See trial court. 2.Hist. The admiralty court in England exercising original jurisdiction in all cases except those involving prizes.

insular court.A federal court with jurisdiction over U.S. island territories, such as the Virgin Islands. [Cases: Federal Courts 1021–1024.]

intermediate court.An appellate court that is below a court of last resort.

International Court of Justice.See INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE.

International Criminal Court.See INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT.

International Trade Court.See UNITED STATES COURT OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE.

J.P. court.See justice court.

justice court.A court, presided over by a justice of the peace, that has jurisdiction to hear minor criminal cases, matters involving small amounts of money, or certain specified claims (such as forcible-entry-and-detainer suits). — Also termed justice-of-the-peace court; J.P. court. [Cases: Justices of the Peace 31. C.J.S. Justices of the Peace § 26, 47.]

juvenile court. 1. A court having jurisdiction over cases involving children under a specified age, usu. 18. • Illinois enacted the first statewide juvenile-court act in 1899. Today every state has a specialized juvenile or family court with exclusive original delinquency jurisdiction. — Also termed children's court. [Cases: Courts 174.] 2. A court having special jurisdiction over orphaned, delinquent, dependent, and neglected children. • This type of juvenile court is created by statute and derives its power from the specific wording of the statute, usu. having exclusive original jurisdiction over matters involving abuse and neglect, adoption, status offenses, and delinquency. Generally, juvenile courts are special courts of a paternal nature that have jurisdiction over the care, custody, and control of children (as defined by the statute). The jurisdiction of the juvenile court is exercised as between the state (for the child) and the parents of the child and is not concerned with a custody controversy that does not affect the morale, health, or welfare of the child. A juvenile court is not a criminal court. The primary concern of a juvenile court is the child's immediate welfare. See UNIFORM JUVENILE COURT ACT.

kangaroo court. 1. A self-appointed tribunal or mock court in which the principles of law and justice are disregarded, perverted, or parodied. • Kangaroo courts may be assembled by various groups, such as prisoners in a jail (to settle disputes between inmates) and players on a baseball team (to “punish” teammates who commit fielding errors). 2. A court or tribunal characterized by unauthorized or irregular procedures, esp. so as to render a fair proceeding impossible. 3. A sham legal proceeding. • The term's origin is uncertain, but it appears to be an Americanism. It has been traced to 1853 in the American West. “Kangaroo” might refer to the illogical leaps between “facts” and conclusions, or to the hapless defendant's quick bounce from court to gallows.

King's Court. See CURIA REGIS.

land court. A court having jurisdiction over land-related matters including: (1) exclusive original jurisdiction of applications for registration of land titles and related questions, writs of entry and petitions to clear title to real estate, petitions to determine the validity and extent of municipal zoning ordinances, bylaws, and regulations, and proceedings for foreclosure and redemption from tax titles; (2) original concurrent jurisdiction of declaratory judgment proceedings, shared with the supreme judicial, superior, and probate courts; and (3) original concurrent equity jurisdiction in land-related matters, except for cases of specific performance of land contracts. • Land courts today exist in the United States only in Massachusetts and Hawaii. [Cases: Courts 174, 472.1. C.J.S. Courts §§ 186–187.]

landed-estates court. Hist. English law. A statutorily established tribunal to dispose of encumbered real estate more promptly and easily than could be accomplished through the ordinary judicial machinery. • This type of court was first established in Ireland by acts of 11 & 12 Vict., ch. 48 and 12 & 13 Vict., ch. 77. The purpose of the court was to enable the owner, or any lessee of an unexpired term of 63 years or less, of encumbered land to apply to commissioners to direct a sale. The court served as a court of record and was called the Incumbered Estates Court. A later act abolished that court and created a new permanent tribunal called the Landed Estates Court. 21 & 22 Vict., ch. 72.

legatine court. A court held by a papal legate and having ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

legislative court. A court created by a statute, as opposed to one created by a constitution. — Also termed (in federal law) Article I court. [Cases: Courts 41. C.J.S. Courts §§ 93–96, 100, 102.]

levy court. Hist. A court that once existed in the District of Columbia, exercising many of the functions typical of county commissioners or county supervisors in the states, such as constructing and repairing roads and bridges.

limited court. A court having special jurisdiction conferred by statute, such as a probate court. — Also termed court of special jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 159–197. C.J.S. Courts §§ 3, 23, 25–35.]

local court. A court whose jurisdiction is limited to a particular territory, such as a state, municipal, or county court.

lord mayor's court. A court of law and equity having jurisdiction in civil cases arising within the city of London and acting as the appellate court from the Chamberlain Court. • It was abolished by the Court Act of 1971.

lower court. 1. See court below. 2. See inferior court.

magistrate's court (maj-i-strayts or -strits). 1. A court with jurisdiction over minor criminal offenses. • Such a court also has the power to bind over for trial persons accused of more serious offenses. — Also termed police court. 2. A court with limited jurisdiction over minor criminal and civil matters. — Sometimes spelled (esp. in England) magistrates' court. — Also termed (in England) court of petty sessions; court of summary jurisdiction. [Cases: Justices of the Peace 31. C.J.S. Justices of the Peace §§ 26, 47.]

maritime court. See ADMIRALTY(1).

mayor's court. A municipal court in which the mayor presides as the judge, with jurisdiction over minor criminal (and sometimes civil) matters, traffic offenses, and the like. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 635. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 204–205.]

military court. A court that has jurisdiction over members of the armed forces and that enforces the Code of Military Justice. See CODE OF MILITARY JUSTICE. [Cases: Armed Services 42.1; Military Justice 870. C.J.S. Military Justice §§ 138–139.]

military court of inquiry. A military court that has special and limited jurisdiction and that is convened to investigate specific matters and, traditionally, to determine whether further procedures are warranted. 10 USCA § 935. [Cases: Armed Services 41. C.J.S. Armed Services §§ 160, 163; Military Justice § 161.]

moot court. See MOOT COURT.

municipal court. A court having jurisdiction (usu. civil and criminal) over cases arising within the municipality in which it sits. • A municipal court's civil jurisdiction to issue a judgment is often limited to a small amount, and its criminal jurisdiction is limited to petty offenses. — Also termed city court. [Cases: Courts 42(5), 186; Municipal Corporations 634. C.J.S. Courts § 102; Municipal Corporations §§ 204–205.]

peacemaker's court. Native American law. A tribal court that adjudicates, arbitrates, or mediates some disputes, usu. according to traditional and statutory tribal law.

people's court. See PEOPLE'S COURT.

piepowder court. See PIEPOWDER COURT.

police court. See magistrate's court (1).

practice court. 1. MOOT COURT. 2. (cap.) BAIL COURT.

prerogative court. In New Jersey, a probate court. See probate court.

pretorial court. Hist. A colonial court in Maryland with jurisdiction of capital crimes, consisting of the lord pro-prietary or his lieutenant-general and the council.

prize court. A court having jurisdiction to adjudicate the captures made at sea in time of war. See PRIZE(2). [Cases: War and National Emergency 28(1). C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 29–39, 43, 45.]

probate court. A court with the power to declare wills valid or invalid, to oversee the administration of estates, and in some states to appoint guardians and approve the adoption of minors. — Also termed surrogate's court; surrogate court; court of ordinary; ordinary's court; county court; orphan's court (abbr. o.c.). See PROBATE. [Cases: Courts 42(4), 198.]

provisional court. A federal court with jurisdiction and powers governed by the order granting its authority, such as a temporary court established in a conquered or occupied territory.

Quarter Sessions Court. See COURT OF GENERAL QUARTER SESSIONS OF THE PEACE.

recorder's court. A court having jurisdiction over felony cases. • This court exists in only a few jurisdictions, such as Michigan, where the recorder's court hears felony cases arising within the Detroit city limits. [Cases: Criminal Law 90.]

register's court. Hist. A probate court in Pennsylvania. See probate court. [Cases: Courts 202.]

sheriff's court. Scots law. The principal inferior court in Scotland, having both civil and criminal jurisdiction.

small-claims court. A court that informally and expeditiously adjudicates claims that seek damages below a specified monetary amount, usu. claims to collect small accounts or debts. — Also termed small-debts court; conciliation court. [Cases: Courts 174.]

spiritual court. See ecclesiastical court.

state court. A court of the state judicial system, as opposed to a federal court.

superior court. 1. In some states, a trial court of general jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 118–158.1. C.J.S. Courts §§ 3, 23–31, 33–35.] 2. In Pennsylvania, an intermediate court between the trial court and the chief appellate court. [Cases: Courts 242(1).]

supreme court. See SUPREME COURT.

Supreme Court of the United States. See SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Supreme Judicial Court. The highest appellate court in Maine and Massachusetts. [Cases: Courts 225, 227.]

surrogate's court. See probate court.

tax court. See TAX COURT.

teen court. A group of teenagers who (1) hear cases involving juveniles, usu. first-time offenders, who have acknowledged their guilt or responsibility, and (2) impose sanctions within a fixed range, usu. involving counseling, community service, or restitution. • Some local jurisdictions in more than half the states have provided for this type of tribunal. The juvenile offender consents to the assessment of punishment by this jury of peers. The American Bar Association encourages the formation of these kinds of courts. — Also termed youth court.

Teind Court. See TEIND COURT.

territorial court. A U.S. court established in a U.S. territory (such as the Virgin Islands) and serving as both a federal and state court. • The Constitution authorizes Congress to create such courts. U.S. Const. art. IV, § 3, cl. 2. [Cases: Federal Courts 1021–1024.]

three-judge court. A court made up of three judges; esp., a panel of three federal judges convened to hear a trial in which a statute is challenged on constitutional grounds. • Three-judge courts were virtually abolished in 1976 when Congress restricted their jurisdiction to constitutional challenges to congressional reapportionments. Occasionally, Congress creates three-judge courts in special legislation, as with the 2002 campaign-finance law. Appeals from a three-judge court go directly to the Supreme Court. See 28 USCA § 2284. [Cases: Federal Courts 991–1013. C.J.S. Injunctions § 177.]

traffic court. A court with jurisdiction over prosecutions for parking violations and infractions of road law.

trial court. A court of original jurisdiction where the evidence is first received and considered. — Also termed court of first instance; instance court; court of instance.

Tribal Court. See TRIBAL COURT.

unified family court. In some jurisdictions, a court that hears all family matters, including matters of divorce, juvenile delinquency, adoption, abuse and neglect, and criminal abuse. • A unified family court also hears matters typically heard in family court (in jurisdictions that have statutory family courts) or in courts of general jurisdiction, such as divorce, paternity, and emancipation proceedings. Proponents of unified family courts cite the benefits of having all family-related matters heard by one court — for instance, the benefit of having a child testify only once rather than forcing the child to testify in one court in a divorce proceeding, in a different court in criminal proceedings against an abuser, and in yet another in a civil proceeding initiated by Child Protective Services.

COURT APPOINTED SPECIAL ADVOCATES

Court Appointed Special Advocates. A federally funded program in which trained laypersons act on behalf of children in abuse and neglect cases. • The CASA program began in 1977 in Seattle, Washington. In 1989, the American Bar Association endorsed using a combination of CASA volunteers and attorneys in abuse and neglect cases. CASA volunteers are sanctioned by the ABA as permissible guardians ad litem. — Abbr. CASA.

COURT A QUO

court a quo. See COURT.

COURT BARON

court baron. Hist. A manorial court with jurisdiction over amounts in controversy of 40 shillings or less. • According to some authorities, the court baron developed into two courts: the customary court baron for disputes involving copyholders, and the court baron proper (also known as the freeholders' court baron), in which freeholders were allowed to hold court concerning minor disputes. — Also termed freeholder's court baron.

“In Coke's day it was said that the lord of a manor had one court, ‘a court baron,’ for his freeholders and another court, ‘a customary court,’ for his copyholders, and that in the latter the lord or his steward was the judge. Now over his unfree men the lord had, according to the law of the king's court, almost unlimited power; short of maiming them he might do what he liked with them; and every tenant of an unfree tenement was a tenant at will. Nevertheless in the court rolls and the manuals for stewards which come to us from the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries we cannot discover two courts or two methods of constituting the court. Freeholders and serfs are said to owe suit to the same halimoot, and so far as we can see, the curia which pronounces judgment is always the same body.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 593 (2d ed. 1898).

courtesy supervision. Oversight of a parolee by a correctional agency located in a jurisdiction other than where the parolee was sentenced. • Courtesy supervision is usu. arranged informally between correctional authorities in cases in which the offense is not serious and the rehabilitative needs of the parolee are better served in another jurisdiction.

COURT FOR CONSIDERATION OF CROWN CASES RESERVED

Court for Consideration of Crown Cases Reserved. Hist. A court established in 1848 to review questions of law arising in criminal cases. • Trial judges posed the postverdict questions of law to the Court, which decided whether error had been committed. The Court was abolished in 1907, and its jurisdiction was transferred to the Court of Criminal Appeal. — Also termed Court for Crown Cases Reserved.

COURT FOR DIVORCE AND MATRIMONIAL CAUSES

Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes. Hist. A court exercising jurisdiction over family issues, such as legitimacy and divorce. • The Court, which was established in 1857, acquired the matrimonial jurisdiction previously exercised by the ecclesiastical courts. It consisted of the Lord Chancellor, the Chief Justices of the Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, the Chief Baron of Exchequer, the senior puisne judges of the last three courts, and the Judge Ordinary. In most instances, the Judge Ordinary heard the cases. The Judicature Act of 1873 abolished the Court and transferred its jurisdiction to the Probate Divorce and Admiralty Division (now Family Division) of the High Court of Justice.

COURT FOR THE CORRECTION OF ERRORS

Court for the Correction of Errors. A court having jurisdiction to review a lower court. • The name was formerly used in New York and South Carolina.

COURT FOR THE RELIEF OF INSOLVENT DEBTORS

Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors. Hist. A court located in London with jurisdiction over bankruptcy matters. • The Bankruptcy Act of 1861 abolished the Court.

COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF IMPEACHMENTS court for the trial of impeachments. A tribunal empowered to try a government officer or other person brought before it by the process of impeachment. • The U.S. Senate and the British House of Lords have this authority, as do the upper houses of most state legislatures. — Also termed impeachment court; court of impeachment.

COURT HAND

court hand. Hist. A script style used by English court clerks, the words being abbreviated and contracted according to a set of common principles for maintaining brevity and uniformity. • This type of writing, along with the use of Latin (except for technical or untranslatable phrases), was banned early in the 18th century in an effort to make court records more accessible to nonlawyers.

“[T]echnical Latin continued in use from the time of its first introduction, till the subversion of our ancient constitution under Cromwell; when, among many other innovations in the law, some for the better and some for the worse, the language of our records was altered and turned into English. But, at the restoration of king Charles, this novelty was no longer countenanced; the practicers finding it very difficult to express themselves so concisely or significantly in any other language but the Latin. And thus it continued without any sensible inconvenience till about the year 1730, when it was again thought proper that the proceedings at law should be done into English, and it was accordingly so ordered by statute 4 Geo. II. c. 26... What is said of the alteration of language by the statute 4 Geo. II. c. 26 will hold equally strong with respect to the prohibition of using the ancient immutable court hand in writing the records of other legal proceedings; whereby the reading of any record that is forty years old is now become the object of science, and calls for the help of an antiquarian.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 322–23 (1768).

COURTHOUSE

courthouse. See COURT(5).

COURTHOUSE STEPS

courthouse steps. The figurative location of settlement negotiations that occur shortly before trial commences, regardless of the literal location of the negotiations <the parties settled the lawsuit on the courthouse steps>.

COURT LANDS

court leet (kort leet). Hist. A feudal court responsible for receiving frankpledges and notices of criminal accusations. • Courts leet exercised both governmental and judicial powers, but declined after the justices in eyre began to take over serious criminal cases. The court met once or twice a year, and was presided over by the lord's steward, a lawyer who acted as judge.

COURT-MARTIAL

court-martial,n. An ad hoc military court convened under military authority to try someone accused of violating the Uniform Code of Military Justice, particularly a member of the armed forces. [Cases: Armed Services 42; Military Justice 870–898. C.J.S. Armed Services § 166; Military Justice §§ 13, 138–158.] Pl. courts-martial. — court-martial,vb.

“[C]ourts-martial are not a part of the federal judicial system, and the procedure in such courts is regulated by the Articles of War, Army Regulations, orders of the President, and military custom.” Altmayer v. Sanford, 148 F.2d 161, 162 (5th Cir. 1945).

BCD special court-martial.A special court-martial in which a possible punishment is a bad-conduct discharge (a “BCD”).

general court-martial.A proceeding that is presided over by a military judge, and no fewer than five members (who serve as jurors), and that has jurisdiction over all the members of the armed forces. • It is the highest military trial court.

special court-martial.A proceeding that is presided over by a military judge and no fewer than three members (who serve as jurors) to hear noncapital offenses and prescribe a sanction of hard labor, dismissal, or extended confinement (up to six months). • It is the intermediate level of courts-martial.

summary court-martial.A proceeding presided over by a single commissioned officer who is jurisdictionally limited in what sanctions can be imposed. • It is the lowest level of courts-martial.

COURT-MARTIAL ORDER

COURT OF APPEALS FOR VETERANS CLAIMS

Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims. The federal court that reviews decisions of the Board of Veterans Ap-peals.

COURT OF APPEALS IN CASES OF CAPTURE

Court of Appeals in Cases of Capture.Hist. A court responsible for reviewing state-court decisions concerning British ships captured by American privateers during the Revolution. • The Court was established by Congress under the Articles of Confederation and served as the chief U.S. court from 1780 to 1787. It was the first federal court in the United States.

COURT OF ARCHDEACON

Court of Archdeacon (ahrch-dee-k<<schwa>>n).Hist. Eccles. law. An inferior ecclesiastical court with juris-diction over cases arising within the archdeaconry and probate matters. • Appeal was to the Bishop's Court. The Court of Archdeacon was abolished in 1967. — Also termed Archdeacon's Court; Archdiaconal Court (ahr-k<<schwa>>-dl-ak<<schwa>>n<<schwa>>l).

COURT OF ARCHES

Court of Arches.Eccles. law. The ecclesiastical court of the province of Canterbury, responsible for appeals from provincial diocesan courts. • The Pope heard appeals from the Court of Arches until the break with Rome prompted a transfer of the appellate jurisdiction to the Court of Delegates. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council now hears certain appeals from the Court of Arches. — Also termed Arches Court of Canterbury; Court of Canterbury; Court of the Official Principal. Cf. CHANCERY COURT OF YORK.

“The Court of Arches is the provincial court of the Archbishop of Canterbury. It is held by a judge generally called the Dean of the Arches. Its jurisdiction was important while testamentary cases were dealt with in the Ecclesiastical Courts. The name is derived from the fact that the court was originally held in the Church of St. Mary-le-Bow (Ecclesia Beatae Mariae de Arcubus), the steeple of which is raised on stone pillars formed archwise like bent bows.” W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 184 n.11 (2d ed. 1949).

COURT OF ASSISTANTS

Court of Assistants.Hist. A colonial body organized in Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1630 to act as a legislature and court for the colony. Cf. GENERAL COURT .

“The court of assistants, made up of governor, deputy governor, and magistrates, heard appeals from lower courts, and took original jurisdiction in certain cases — for example, cases of divorce. Below it were the county courts.” Lawrence M. Friedman, A History of American Law 40 (2d ed. 1985).

COURT OF ATTACHMENTS

Court of Attachments.Hist. An inferior forest court with jurisdiction over trespasses of the royal forests. • The judges of this court (the verderers) met every 40 days to hear charges made by the royal foresters. Major trespass cases were heard by the justices in eyre. — Also termed wood-mote; forty-days court. See VERDERER.

COURT OF AUDIENCE

Court of Audience.Hist. Eccles. law. A court in which the Archbishop of York or Canterbury exercised personal jurisdiction. • This court was abolished in 1963.

“Just as the bishop did not deprive himself of all jurisdiction by delegation to an official or commissary, so the archbishop did not originally deprive himself of all jurisdiction by delegation to the official principal. He possessed a jurisdiction concurrent with that of the court of the Arches, which was exercised in the court of Audience. In later times this jurisdiction was exercised by the judge of the court of Audience. At one time the archbishop may have exercised a considerable part of this jurisdiction in this court." 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 601 (7th ed. 1956).

COURT OF AUGMENTATIONS

Court of Augmentations.Hist. A court established in 1536 by Henry VIII to determine controversies arising from the royal policy of taking over property owned by monasteries. • The court was merged into the Court of Ex-chequer in 1554.

COURT OF CANTERBURY

Court of Canterbury.See COURT OF ARCHES.

COURT OF CASSATION

Court of Cassation (ka-say-sh<<schwa>>n). The highest court of France. • The court's name derives from its power to quash (casser) the decrees of inferior courts. — Also termed (more formally) Cour de Cassation.

COURT OF CHANCERY

court of chancery.See CHANCERY(1).

COURT OF CHIVALRY

COURT OF CIVIL APPEALS

Court of Civil Appeals.An intermediate appellate court in some states, such as Alabama and (formerly) Texas. [Cases: Courts 210, 247.]

COURT OF CLAIMS

court of claims.1.COURT. 2. (cap.) UNITED STATES COURT OF FEDERAL CLAIMS.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS

Court of Common Pleas. 1.Hist. A superior court having jurisdiction of all real actions and common pleas (i.e., actions between subjects). • The Court was presided over by a chief justice with four (later five) puisne judges. In 1873 it became the Common Pleas Division of the High Court of Justice. In 1881 it merged into the Queen's Bench Division. 2. An intermediate-level court in some states, such as Arkansas. [Cases: Courts 211.] 3. A trial court of general jurisdiction in some states, such as Ohio, Pennsylvania, and South Carolina. [Cases: Courts 150, 151, 153.] — Also termed Court of Common Bench. — Abbr. C.P.

causes both reall and personall are, or were in former times, tryed in this court, according to the strict lawe of the realme: and by Fortescue, cap. 50 it seemeth to have bene the onely court for reall causes." John Cowell, The Interpreter (1607).

COURT OF COMPETENT JURISDICTION court of competent jurisdiction. See COURT.

COURT OF CONSCIENCE

court of conscience. Hist. A local English court with jurisdiction of small-debt cases. • The court was so called because its judgments were supposed to reflect equity and good conscience. County courts assumed the jurisdiction of the courts of conscience in 1846.

COURT OF CONVOCATION

Court of Convocation. Eccles. law. An assembly of high-ranking provincial officials and representatives of the lower clergy having jurisdiction over cases of heresy, schism, and other ecclesiastical matters.

COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEALS

Court of Criminal Appeals. 1. For each armed service, an intermediate appellate court that reviews court-martial decisions. • The court was established by the Military Justice Act of 1968. 10 USCA §§ 859–876. — Formerly termed Court of Military Review (abbr. CMR). [Cases: Armed Services 47.1(1); Military Justice 1411. C.J.S. Military Justice §§ 454, 457, 488–489, 491–492.] 2. In some jurisdictions, such as Texas and Oklahoma, the highest appellate court that hears criminal cases.

COURT OF CUSTOMS AND PATENT APPEALS

Court of Customs and Patent Appeals. Hist. An Article III court created in 1929 to hear appeals in customs and patent cases. • This court was abolished in 1982 and was superseded by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. — Abbr. CCPA. See UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FEDERAL CIRCUIT . [Cases: Patents 113. C.J.S. Patents §§ 188–189, 196, 199, 202.]

COURT OF DELEGATES

Court of Delegates. Hist. Eccles. law. A court serving as the final court of appeal for admiralty and ecclesiastical matters. • The Court was established in 1534 to serve in the stead of the Papal Curia when the English Church severed its ties with the Papacy. Six delegates, appointed to hear only one case, made up the Court, usu. three persons trained in common law and three in civil law. This mixture led to confused rulings and unreliable pre-cedents that hindered the Court's credibility and ultimately led to its dissolution. The Court was abolished in 1833 and its jurisdiction transferred to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. — Also termed High Court of Delegates.

“The crown had an absolute discretion as to the person to be appointed. But, as the lawyers of Doctors' Commons were the only lawyers acquainted with canon or civil law, certain of them were usually included in the commis-sion.... It is not surprising to find that the [Court of Delegates] was unsatisfactory. It was a shifting body, so that no general rules of procedure could be established. It did not as a rule give reasons for its decisions. Its members were only paid a guinea a day; and consequently it was usually composed of the junior civilians. On them, the judges of the common law courts, appointed as delegates, were obliged to rely for their law. In consequence of the dissatisfaction felt at its working the Ecclesiastical Commission of 1832, in a special report, recommended the transfer of its jurisdiction to the Privy Council" 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 605 (7th ed. 1956).

COURT OF ERROR

court of error. 1.Hist. Formerly, the Court of Exchequer Chamber and the House of Lords. • Appeals from common-law courts lay to the Court of Exchequer Chamber, and then to the House of Lords until 1873, when the Judicature Act gave jurisdiction of superior-court appeals to the Court of Appeal. Cf. COURT OF EXCHEQUER CHAMBER . 2. Generally, a court having jurisdiction to review a lower court's rulings.

COURT OF ERRORS AND APPEALS

Court of Errors and Appeals.Hist. Formerly, the court of last resort in New Jersey and New York. — Also termed High Court of Errors and Appeals.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER

Court of Exchequer (eks-chek-<<schwa>>r oreks-chek-<<schwa>>r).Hist. A former English superior court responsible primarily for adjudicating disputes about the collection of public revenue. • In 1873 it became the Exchequer Division of the High Court of Justice. In 1881 that Division was merged into the Queen's Bench Division. See QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION. Cf. CHAMBER OF ACCOUNTS.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER CHAMBER

Court of Exchequer Chamber.Hist. 1.An informal assembly of common-law judges who (sometimes with the Lord Chancellor) gathered to discuss important cases that had adjourned pending an opinion from the Court. • This body never became a court of law in a technical sense, but judges gave great weight to its decisions. The last reported decision of this body is from 1738.

2. A court created by statute in 1357 to hear appeals from the Court of Exchequer. 3. A court created by statute in 1585 to hear appeals from the King's Bench. • This court consisted of all the justices of the Common Pleas and the Barons of Exchequer who were serjeants. At least six judges were necessary to render a judgment. “Parliament was only occasionally summoned in the sixteenth century; and as Parliament was the only court which could amend errors of the King's Bench, the want of a court which could hold regular sessions was much felt. To supply this want a new court of Exchequer Chamber was created in 1585 for the purpose of amending the errors of the King's Bench.” 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 244 (7th ed. 1956).

4. A court charged with hearing appeals from the common-law courts of record. • This court was created in 1830 by combining the courts created by the statutes of 1357 and 1585. Appeals from one common-law court were heard by judges from the other two courts. “This complicated system of appellate courts was abolished in 1830, when a new Court of Exchequer Chamber was set up as the court of error from each of the three common law courts. It was composed of the judges of the two common law courts other than those of the court appealed from. At the same time the right of the King's Bench to hear error from the Common Pleas was abolished. From the judgment of this new court a further appeal still lay to the House of Lords. This court was thus, until the Judicature Act, 1873, a court of intermediate appeals. Its jurisdiction after the Judicature Act passed to the Court of Appeal which was then created.” W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 144 (2d ed. 1949).

COURT OF GENERAL QUARTER SESSIONS OF THE PEACE

Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace. Hist. 1. English law. A court of criminal jurisdiction held in each county (or borough) once in every quarter of a year. • The court was made up of a county's justices of the peace. It committed certain cases to the Assizes. Quarter Sessions were abolished in 1971, with most jurisdiction transferred to the Crown Court. — Often shortened to Quarter Sessions; Sessions.

2. A court held in some states four times a year with jurisdiction over misdemeanors and occasionally tasks of an administrative nature, such as the care of public roads and bridges. — Often shortened to Quarter Sessions Court. — Also termed Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace.

COURT OF GREAT SESSIONS IN WALES

Court of Great Sessions in Wales. Hist. A common-law court established in 1543 in Wales with jurisdiction equivalent to that of the English assizes. • The Court of Great Sessions was bound to follow English law, but not necessarily English case precedent. — Also termed King's Great Sessions in Wales.

“There was no outcry when, in 1536, ‘the sinister usages and customs’ of the Welsh were abrogated and Welsh subjects were granted the same laws and liberties as the English.... A new system of courts, called the Great Sessions in Wales, was set up. The courts were to sit twice a year in four circuits, each comprising three counties, and to each circuit were appointed justices ‘learned in the laws of this realm’. These courts operated alongside the English courts, and they had the same jurisdiction in Wales as the King's Bench and Common Pleas had in England.... In 1830 the Great Sessions were abolished, and by complete procedural assimilation England and Wales became at last one unified jurisdiction, two extra circuits being added to the English assize system.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 37–38 (3d ed. 1990).

COURT OF HIGH COMMISSION

Court of High Commission. Hist. Eccles. law. A tribunal responsible for inquiring into religious offenses such as the holding of heretical opinions, and absence from church. • Functioning as a court, the High Commission also prosecuted violations of the Acts of Supremacy and Uniformity (1559), the statutes that gave the Crown supreme power over the Church of England. The Commission's broad powers and use of civil-law procedures in ways counter to the common law (such as compelling suspects to testify against themselves) sparked opposition to its existence. Its close relationship with the Court of Star Chamber hastened its demise (along with the Star Chamber) in 1641. — Also termed High Commission Court.

“[T]he court of the king's high commission in causes ecclesiastical ... was intended to vindicate the dignity and peace of the church, by reforming, ordering, and correcting the ecclesiastical state and persons, and all manner of errors, heresies, schisms, abuses, offences, contempts, and enormities. Under the shelter of which very general words, means were found in that and the two succeeding reigns, to vest in the high commissioners extraordinary and almost despotic powers, of fining and imprisoning; which they exerted much beyond the degree of the offence itself, and frequently over offences by no means of spiritual cognizance. For these reasons this court was justly abolished by Statute 16 Car. I, c. 11. And the weak and illegal attempt that was made to revive it, during the reign of King James the second, served only to hasten that infatuated prince's ruin.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 67–68 (1768).

COURT OF HONOR

Court of Honor. Hist. 1. English law. A feudal court of the manor. 2. English law. A court with jurisdiction to hear complaints concerning either affronts to honor or encroachments in precedence rights, heraldry, or coat-armor. 3. A tribunal of army officers convened to review and punish any dereliction from a code of honor.

COURT OF HUSTINGS

Court of Hustings (h<<schwa>>s-tingz). Hist. 1. English law. A local court with jurisdiction over real and mixed actions, held in the Guildhall of London before the Recorder, the Lord Mayor, and Sheriff (the latter two officials serving as honorary judges). • This court dates from before the Conquest. 2. Formerly, a local court in Virginia. — Also termed curia burgi. See HUSTING.

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER

Court of Oyer and Terminer (oy-<<schwa>>r an[d] t*<<schwa>>r*-m*<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>r*).1.Hist. An assize court commissioned by the Crown to pass through the counties two or more times a year and hear felonies and treason cases. • The judges sat by virtue of several commissions, each of which, strictly speaking, created a separate and distinct court. A judge with an oyer and terminer commission, for example, was allowed to hear only cases of felony and treason; he could not try persons charged with other criminal offenses. But if the judge also carried a commission of gaol delivery (as most did), he could try all prisoners held in gaol for any offense; in this way most Courts of Oyer and Terminer gathered full criminal jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of the assize courts was taken over by the Crown Court in 1971. See ASSIZE(1); COMMISSION OF OYER AND TERMINER; COMMISSION OF GAOL DELIVERY. 2. In some states, a court of higher criminal jurisdiction.

COURT OF REGARD

Court of Regard.Hist. A forest court responsible for looking into matters of waste and encroachment onto forest land (i.e., purpresture). • The Court also ensured that the feet of all mastiffs — a breed allowed in royal forests as guard dogs — within the forest were declawed and cut so as to prevent them from chasing deer.

COURT OF REQUESTS

Court of Requests.Hist. A royal court whose jurisdiction was mainly civil, though it exercised quasi-criminal jurisdiction in offenses such as riot and forgery. • Dating from 1483, the Court of Requests was a part of the Privy Council. It was disbanded in 1641 when Parliament limited the Privy Council's judicial functions.

“The establishment of the court of Requests was due to the large increase in the judicial business of the Council and the Chancery under the Tudors.... It was related both to the judicial side of the Council, which, as we shall see, came, in the course of the Tudor period, to be known as the court of Star Chamber, and to the court of Chancery.... [F]rom the end of Henry VIII's reign onwards, the legal assessors of the court assumed entire control, with the result that it became a court which was quite separate from the court of Star Chamber. These legal assessors were styled Masters of Requests, and from their title the court got its name.” 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 412–13 (7th ed. 1956).

COURT OF REVIEW

court of review.See appellate court under COURT.

COURT OF SESSION

Court of Session. 1.Scots law. The supreme Scottish civil court. • Its jurisdiction corresponds generally to the English High Court of Justice. The Court of Session is divided into Outer House and Inner House. In Outer House, one judge hears cases of first instance. The Outer House's jurisdiction corresponds generally to the English High Court of Justice. The Outer House has two appellate chambers, the First and Second Division, in which three-judge panels sit. The Inner House's jurisdiction corresponds generally to the English Court of Appeal. The Court of Session also has several Lords Ordinary, who sit individually as trial judges. — Also termed Supreme Civil Court in Scotland. 2. In a few states, a court with jurisdiction over criminal cases.

COURT OF SHEPWAY

Court of Shepway.Hist. The Court of the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, exercising civil jurisdiction. • The civil jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports was abolished in 1855. See CINQUE PORTS.

COURT OF SWAINMOTE

Court of Swainmote.See COURT OF SWEINMOTE.

COURT OF SWEINMOTE

Court of Sweinmote (swayn-moht).Hist. A medieval forest court with jurisdiction over a variety of matters, esp. the right to graze animals during the summer when deer were fawning. • The forest freeholders (the sweins) made up the jury of the Court. By the 14th century, the Court's jurisdiction had expanded, and it acquired a form similar to the eyre courts. — Also spelled Court of Swainmote.

COURT OF TEINDS

Court of Teinds.See TEIND COURT.

COURT OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE IN EYRE

Court of the Chief Justice in Eyre (air).Hist. An eyre court responsible for trying offenses against the forest laws. • The jurisdiction of this Court was similar to that of the Court of Sweinmote. — Also termed Court of Justice Seat.

COURT OF THE LORD HIGH ADMIRAL

Court of the Lord High Admiral. See HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY.

COURT OF THE LORD HIGH CONSTABLE AND EARL MARSHAL

Court of the Lord High Constable and Earl Marshal. Hist. A court having jurisdiction over diverse military matters, such as treason, prisoners of war, and disputed coats of arms. • The Lord High Constable and the Earl Marshal were the top military officials of the Norman kings. After the office of Lord High Constable was forfeited in 1521, the court continued on as the Court of the Earl Marshal, but its jurisdiction was reduced to questions of chivalry only. Cf. HIGH COURT OF CHIVALRY.

COURT OF THE LORD HIGH STEWARD

Court of the Lord High Steward. Hist. A court commissioned to try a peer indicted for treason or a felony. • The Court met only if the House of Lords was not in session. The Lord High Steward sat as a judge and decided questions of law, and the peers decided facts only. The Court last sat in 1688.

COURT OF THE LORD HIGH STEWARD OF THE UNIVERSITIES

Court of the Lord High Steward of the Universities. Hist. A court convened to try scholars, esp. Oxford or Cambridge students, who have been indicted for treason, felony, or mayhem.

COURT OF THE MARSHALSEA

Court of the Marshalsea (mahr-sh<<schwa>>l-see). Hist. A court that moved about with the king, and had jurisdiction over certain cases arising within 12 miles of the king's residence (an area known as the verge). • The Court's steward and marshal acted as judges of the Court, and heard criminal cases and the common pleas of debt, covenant, and certain trespasses. The Court's migratory nature made it inconvenient for litigants, and prompted its abolition in 1849. — Also termed Court of the Steward and Marshal. Cf. PALACE COURT.

“Coke points out that all the Acts passed concerning this court restrained, or explained, but never added to its jurisdiction. He decided, in the Case of the Marshalsea, that it could not try the newer forms of action such as assumpsit and trover. Its once general jurisdiction had passed to the court of King's Bench, and the attitude of that court to the more limited court of the Marshalsea made the court of the Marshalsea almost useless. There were complaints in the seventeenth century of the conduct of its officials; and, as it was obliged to follow the king in his progresses, it was a court extremely inconvenient to use.” 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 208 (7th ed. 1956).

COURT OF THE OFFICIAL PRINCIPAL

COURT OF THE STEWARD AND MARSHAL

Court of the Steward and Marshal. See COURT OF THE MARSHALSEA.

COURT OF THE STEWARD OF THE KING'S HOUSEHOLD

Court of the Steward of the King's Household. Hist. A court having jurisdiction over criminal cases involving a member of the royal household. • This court's jurisdiction was at first limited to acts of violence by the king's servants toward a member of the king's council, but it was later given broader criminal authority. The Court was abolished in 1828.

COURT OF VERGE

Court of Verge. 1. VERGE(1). 2. VERGE(2).

COURT OF VETERANS APPEALS, U.S.

Court of Veterans Appeals, U.S. See UNITED STATES COURT OF VETERANS APPEALS.

COURT OF WARDS AND LIVERIES

Court of Wards and Liveries. Hist. A court created in 1540 to assert the Crown's right to income from a variety of feudal tenures. • The Court's unpopularity led to its abolition in 1660.

“[I]nquests of office were more frequently in practice than at present, during the continuance of the military tenures among us: when, upon the death of every one of the king's tenants, an inquest of office was held, called an inquisitio post mortem, to enquire of what lands he died seised, who was his heir, and of what age, in order to entitle the king to his marriage, wardship, relief, primer-seisin, or other advantages, as the circumstances of the case might turn out. To superintend and regulate these enquiries, the court of wards and liveries was instituted by statute 32 Hen. VIII c. 46 which was abolished at the restoration of king Charles the second, together with the oppressive tenures upon which it was founded.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 258 (1768).

cousin. 1. A child of one's aunt or uncle. — Also termed first cousin; full cousin; cousin-german. 2. A relative descended from one's ancestor (such as a grandparent) by two or more steps in a diverging line. 3. Any distant relative by blood or marriage; a kinsman or kinswoman.

cousin-german. A first cousin; a child of a full sibling of one's mother or father. See GERMAN.

cousin-in-law. 1. A husband or wife of one's cousin. 2. A cousin of one's husband or one's wife.

cousin once removed. 1. A child of one's cousin. 2. A cousin of one's parent.

cousin twice removed. 1. A grandchild of one's cousin. 2. A cousin of one's grandparent.

first cousin. See COUSIN(1).

second cousin. A person related to another by descending from the same great-grandfather or great-grandmother.

third cousin. A person related to another by descending from the same great-great-grandfather or great-great-grandmother.

COVENANT

covenant (k<<schwa>>v-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>nt), n.1. A formal agreement or promise, usu. in a contract.

absolute covenant. A covenant that is not qualified or limited by any condition. Cf. conditional covenant.

affirmative covenant. A covenant that obligates a party to do some act; esp., an agreement that real property will be used in a certain way. • An affirmative covenant is more than a restriction on the use of property. For the real-property sense, see affirmative covenant under COVENANT(4). [Cases: Covenants 49, 69.]

assertory covenant. One that affirmatively states certain facts; an affirming promise under seal.

auxiliary covenant (awg-zil-y<<schwa>>-ree). A covenant that does not relate directly to the primary subject of the agreement, but to something connected to it. Cf. principal covenant.

collateral covenant (k<<schwa>>-lat-<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>l). A covenant entered into in connection with the grant of something, but that does not relate immediately to the thing granted; esp., a covenant in a deed or other sealed instrument not pertaining to the conveyed property. Cf. inherent covenant.

concurrent covenant. A covenant that requires performance by one party at the same time as another's performance.

conditional covenant. A covenant that is qualified by a condition. Cf. absolute covenant.

continuing covenant. A covenant that requires the successive performance of acts, such as an agreement to pay rent in installments.

covenant in deed. See express covenant.

covenant in law. See implied covenant.

covenant not to compete. See noncompetition covenant.

covenant not to execute. A covenant in which a party who has won a judgment agrees not to enforce it. • This covenant is most common in insurance law.

covenant not to sue. A covenant in which a party having a right of action agrees not to assert that right in litigation. — Also termed contract not to sue. [Cases: Release 7, 37. C.J.S. Release §§ 4, 48–49, 54, 61–62.]

“A covenant not to sue is a promise by the creditor not to sue either permanently or for a limited period. If the promise is one never to sue it operates as a discharge just as does a release. The theory is that should the creditor sue despite his promise not to, the debtor has a counterclaim for damages for breach of the creditor's covenant not to sue which is equal to and cancels the original claim.... If the covenant is not to sue for a limited time, the modern view is that the covenant may be raised as an affirmative defense to any action brought in violation of the covenant.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 21-11, at 878–79 (3d ed. 1987).

dependent covenant. A covenant that imposes a duty that depends on the other party's prior performance. • Until the performance, the other party does not have to perform. Cf. concurrent covenant; independent covenant.

executed covenant. A covenant that has been fully performed.

executory covenant (eg-zek-y<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A covenant that remains unperformed in whole or in part.

express covenant. A covenant created by the words of the parties. — Also termed covenant in deed. Cf. implied covenant.

implied covenant. A covenant that can be inferred from the whole agreement and the conduct of the parties. — Also termed covenant in law. See implied term under TERM(2). Cf. express covenant.

implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. An implied covenant to cooperate with the other party to an agreement so that both parties may obtain the full benefits of the agreement; an implied covenant to refrain from any act that would injure a contracting party's right to receive the benefit of the contract. • Breach of this covenant is often termed bad faith. See BAD FAITH (2). [Cases: Contracts 168. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 346–347.]

implied negative covenant. A covenant binding a grantor not to permit use of any reserved right in a manner that might destroy the benefits that would otherwise inure to the grantee.

independent covenant. A covenant that imposes a duty that does not depend on the other party's prior performance.

inherent covenant. A covenant that relates directly to land, such as a covenant of quiet enjoyment. Cf. collateral covenant.

intransitive covenant. A covenant whose performance does not pass from the original covenantor to the covenantor's representatives. Cf. transitive covenant.

joint covenant. A covenant that binds two or more covenantors together. Cf. several covenant.

negative covenant. A covenant that requires a party to refrain from doing something; esp., in a real-estate financing transaction, the borrower's promise to the lender not to encumber or transfer the real estate as long as the loan remains unpaid.

noncompetition covenant. A promise, usu. in a sale-of-business, partnership, or employment contract, not to engage in the same type of business for a stated time in the same market as the buyer, partner, or employer. • Noncompetition covenants are valid to protect business goodwill in the sale of a company. In other contexts, they are generally disfavored as restraints of trade: courts generally enforce them for the duration of the business relationship, but provisions that extend beyond the termination of that relationship must be reasonable in scope, time, and territory. — Also termed noncompetition agreement; noncompete covenant; covenant not to compete; restrictive covenant; promise not to compete; contract not to compete. [Cases: Contracts 115. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 249–254, 257–260.]

positive covenant. A covenant that requires a party to do something (such as to erect a fence within a specified time).

principal covenant. A covenant that relates directly to the principal matter of an agreement. Cf. auxiliary covenant.

protection covenant. See PROTECTION COVENANT.

restrictive covenant. See noncompetition covenant. (For the real-property sense, see restrictive covenant under COVENANT(4).)

several covenant. A covenant that binds two or more covenantors separately. — Also termed separate covenant. Cf. joint covenant.

transitive covenant. A covenant whose duty of performance passes from the original covenantor to the covenantor's representatives. Cf. intransitive covenant.

2.TREATY. 3. A common-law action to recover damages for breach of contract under seal. 4. A promise made in a deed or implied by law; esp., an obligation in a deed burdening or favoring a landowner. See contract under seal under CONTRACT. [Cases: Covenants 1–84. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 2–37, 46–47.] — covenantal,adj.“A covenant is properly defined as a promise made in deed, although in practice the term is used rather more loosely to mean simply an obligation affecting a landowner whether created by deed or not.” Peter Butt, Land Law 334–35 (2d ed. 1988).

affirmative covenant.An agreement that real property will be used in a certain way. • An affirmative covenant is more than a restriction on the use of property. It requires the owner to undertake certain acts on the property. For a more general definition of this term, see affirmative covenant under COVENANT(1).

covenant against encumbrances.A grantor's promise that the property has no visible or invisible encumbrances. • In a special warranty deed, the covenant is limited to encumbrances made by the grantor. — Also termed general covenant against encumbrances. Cf. special covenant against encumbrances. [Cases: Covenants 42, 64. C.J.S. Covenants § 19.]

covenant appurtenant (<<schwa>>-p<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>nt). A covenant that is connected with the grantor's land; a covenant running with the land. Cf. covenant in gross. [Cases: Covenants 53–70. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 6, 25–31.]

covenant for further assurances.A covenant to do whatever is reasonably necessary to perfect the title conveyed if it turns out to be imperfect. See further assurance under ASSURANCE. [Cases: Covenants 44, 66. C.J.S. Covenants § 21.]

covenant for possession.A covenant giving a grantee or lessee possession of land.

covenant for quiet enjoyment. 1. A covenant insuring against the consequences of a defective title or any other disturbance of the title. [Cases: Covenants 43, 65. C.J.S. Covenants § 20.] 2. A covenant ensuring that the tenant will not be evicted or disturbed by the grantor or a person having a lien or superior title. • This covenant is sometimes treated as being synonymous with covenant of warranty. — Also termed covenant of quiet enjoyment.

covenant for title.A covenant that binds the grantor to ensure the completeness, security, and continuance of the title transferred. • This covenant usu. includes the covenants for seisin, against encumbrances, for the right to convey, for quiet enjoyment, and of warranty. [Cases: Covenants covenant in gross. A covenant that does not run with the land. Cf. covenant appurtenant.

covenant of good right to convey. See covenant of seisin.

covenant of habitability (hab-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>-bil-<<schwa>>-tee). See implied warranty of habitability under WARRANTY(2).

covenant of nonclaim. A covenant barring a grantor or the grantor's heirs from claiming title in the conveyed land.

covenant of quiet enjoyment. See covenant for quiet enjoyment.

covenant of seisin (see-zin). A covenant, usu. appearing in a warranty deed, stating that the grantor has an estate, or the right to convey an estate, of the quality and size that the grantor purports to convey. • For the covenant to be valid, the grantor must have both title and possession at the time of the grant. — Also termed covenant of good right to convey; right-to-convey covenant. [Cases: Covenants 40, 62. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 17, 29.]

covenant of warranty. A covenant by which the grantor agrees to defend the grantee against any lawful or rea-sonable claims of superior title by a third party and to indemnify the grantee for any loss sustained by the claim. • This covenant is sometimes treated as being synonymous with covenant for quiet enjoyment. The covenant is not breached if the grantor fails to defend the grantee against an invalid claim. See WARRANTY(1). [Cases: Cove-nants 46–48, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 22–24, 29.]

covenant running with the land. A covenant that, because it relates to the land, binds successor grantees indefi-nitely. • The land cannot be conveyed without the covenant. — Also termed real covenant; covenant running with the title. [Cases: Covenants 53–70. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 6, 25–31.]

covenant running with the title. 1. A covenant that relates to the land but has a specific or reasonably deter-minable expiration time. 2. See covenant running with the land.

covenant to convey. A covenant in which the covenantor agrees to transfer an estate's title to the covenantee.

covenant to renew. An executory contract that gives a lessee the right to renew the lease.

covenant to stand seised (seezd). Archaic. A covenant to convey land to a relative. • This covenant could not be used to convey land to a stranger; the only consideration that supported the covenant was the relationship by blood or marriage. [Cases: Deeds 24. C.J.S. Deeds § 15.]

future covenant. A covenant that can be breached only upon interference with the possession of the grantee or the grantee's successors. • The covenants in this class are the covenant for further assurances, the covenant for quiet enjoyment, and the covenant of warranty. The distinction between future and present covenants becomes important in determining when the statute of limitations begins to run. Cf. present covenant.

general covenant against encumbrances. See covenant against encumbrances.

implied reciprocal covenant. A presumption that a promisee has, in return for a promise made respecting land, impliedly made a promise to the promisor respecting other land. — Also termed implied reciprocal servitude.

personal covenant. A covenant that creates a personal right or obligation enforceable only between the covenanting parties and that is not binding on the heirs or assigns of the parties. Cf. covenant running with the land.

present covenant. A covenant that can be breached only at the time of conveyance. • The three covenants in this class are the covenant against encumbrances, the covenant of right to convey, and the covenant of seisin. Cf. future covenant.

real covenant. See covenant running with the land.

restrictive covenant. 1. A private agreement, usu. in a deed or lease, that restricts the use or occupancy of real property, esp. by specifying lot sizes, building lines, architectural styles, and the uses to which the property may be put. • Some restrictive covenants, such as race-based restrictions on transfers, are unenforceable but do not necessarily void the deed. — Also termed restrictive covenant in equity; equitable easement; equitable servitude. [Cases: Covenants 49–52, 69.] 2. See noncompetition covenant under COVENANT(1).

right-to-convey covenant. See covenant of seisin.

special covenant against encumbrances. A grantor's promise that the property is free of encumbrances created by the grantor only, not the grantor's predecessors. See special warranty deed under DEED. Cf. covenant against encumbrances. [Cases: Covenants 42, 64. C.J.S. Covenants § 19.]

covenant, vb. To promise or undertake in a covenant; to agree formally.

covenantee (k<<schwa>>v-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>n-tee). The person to whom a promise by covenant is made; one entitled to the benefit of a covenant.

COVENANT MARRIAGE

COVENANT TO PROTECT AGAINST DRAINAGE

covenant to protect against drainage. See PROTECTION COVENANT.

COVENTRY ACT

Coventry Act (k<<schwa>>v-<<schwa>>n-tree orkov-). An 1803 English statute establishing the death penalty for anyone who, with malice aforethought, did “cut out or disable the tongue, put out an eye, slit the nose, cut off a nose or lip, or cut off or disable any limb or member of any subject; with the intention in so doing to maim or disfigure him.”

“[At common law,] an injury such as cutting off [a man's] ear or nose did not constitute mayhem ... , because it did not result in permanent disablement, but merely disfigured the victim. This was corrected by an early English statute. It seems that an assault was made upon Sir John Coventry on the street by persons who waylaid him and slit his nose in revenge for obnoxious words uttered by him in Parliament. This emphasized the weakness of the law of mayhem, and the so-called ‘Coventry Act’ was passed [in 1803].” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 239–40 (3d ed. 1982).

coventurer (koh-ven-ch<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>r). A person who undertakes a joint venture with one or more persons. — Also termed co-adventurer. Cf. JOINT VENTURE . [Cases: Joint Ventures 1.1. C.J.S. Joint Ventures §§ 2–3, 20.]

cover, n. The purchase on the open market, by the buyer in a breach-of-contract dispute, of goods to substitute for those promised but never delivered by the seller. • Under UCC § 2-712, the buyer can recover from the seller the difference between the cost of the substituted goods and the original contract price. [Cases: Sales 418(7). C.J.S. Sales §§ 391–393, 403.]

COVERAGE

covert baron (k<<schwa>>v-<<schwa>>rt bar-<<schwa>>n). [Law French] Hist. The condition or status of a married woman at common law. — Also written cover-baron. — Also termed covert de baron.

“By marriage, the husband and wife are one person in law: that is, the very being or legal existence of the woman is suspended during the marriage, or at least is incorporated and consolidated into that of the husband: under whose wing, protection, and cover, she performs every thing; and is therefore called in our law-french a feme-covert; is said to be covert-baron, or under the protection and influence of her husband, her baron, or lord; and her condition during her marriage is called her coverture.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 430 (1765).

COVERT-ENTRY SEARCH WARRANT

covert-entry search warrant. See SEARCH WARRANT.

coverture (k<<schwa>>v-<<schwa>>r-ch<<schwa>>r also -tyoor), n. Archaic. The condition of being a married woman <under former law, a woman under coverture was allowed to sue only through the personality of her husband>. See feme covert under FEME. [Cases: Husband and Wife 55.] — covert (k<<schwa>>v-<<schwa>>rt), adj.

“Coverture, is a french word signifying any thing that covereth, as apparell, a coverlet It is particularly applied in our common lawe, to the estate and condition of a married woman, who by the lawes of our realme, is in (po-testate viri) and therefore disabled to contract with any, to the prejudice of her selfe or her husband, without his consent and privity; or at the least, without his allowance and confirmation.” John Cowell, The Interpreter (1607).

“Coverture is by law applied to the state and condition of a married woman, who is sub potestati viri, (under the power of her husband) and therefore unable to contract with any to the damage of herself or husband, without his consent and privity, or his allowance and confirmation thereof. When a woman is married she is called a Femme covert, and whatever is done concerning her during marriage is said to be done during coverture.” The Pocket Lawyer and Family Conveyancer 96 (3d ed. 1833).

craft union.See UNION.

cramdown,n. Court confirmation of a Chapter 11 bankruptcy plan despite the opposition of certain creditors. • Under the Bankruptcy Code, a court may confirm a plan — even if it has not been accepted by all classes of creditors — if the plan (1) has been accepted by at least one impaired class, (2) does not discriminate unfairly, and (3) is fair and equitable. 11 USCA § 1129(b). [Cases: Bankruptcy 3563. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 396.] — cram down,vb.

CRASHWORTHINESS DOCTRINE

crashworthiness doctrine.Products liability. The principle that the manufacturer of a product will be held strictly liable for injuries occurring in a collision, even if the collision results from an independent cause, to the extent that a defect in the product causes injuries above and beyond those that would have occurred in the collision itself. — Also termed second-collision doctrine; second-impact doctrine. [Cases: Products Liability 35.1, 36. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 409–411, 415–416, 418.]

CRASSA IGNORANTIA

create a blank.Parliamentary law. To amend a motion by striking out one or more terms and replacing them with blanks rather than different terms. See amendment by striking out and inserting under AMENDMENT(3). • This form allows a vote on several competing proposals at one time, rather than the usual process of voting separately on each proposal. See BLANK(2).

creationism. The teaching of the biblical version of the creation of the universe. • The United States Supreme Court held unconstitutional a Louisiana law that forbade the teaching of the theory of evolution unless biblical creation was also taught. The Court found that the law violated the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment because it lacked a “clear secular purpose.” Edwards v. Aguillard, 482 U.S. 578, 107 S.Ct. 2573 (1987). See ANTI-EVOLUTION STATUTE.

scientific creationism. A doctrine holding that the biblical account of creation is supported by scientific evidence.

CREATIVE WORK

creative work. See work of authorship under WORK(2).

CREATIVITY

creativity. Copyright. The degree to which a work displays imaginativeness beyond what a person of very ordinary talents might create. • Labor and expense are not elements of creativity; for that reason, they are not protected by copyright. Feist Pubs., Inc. v. Rural Tel. Serv. Co., 499 U.S. 340, 111 S.Ct. 1282 (1991). Cf. ORIGINALITY; SWEAT-OF-THE-BROW DOCTRINE . [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 12. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 19–20, 92.]

“Where creativity refers to the nature of the work itself, originality refers to the nature of the author's contribution to the work. Thus, a public domain painting may evince great creativity, but if a copyright claimant adds nothing of his own to it, by way of reproduction or otherwise, then copyright will be denied on the basis of lack of originality. Conversely, a work may be entirely the product of the claimant's independent efforts, and hence original, but may nevertheless be denied protection as a work of art if it is completely lacking in any modicum of creativity.” 1 Melville B. Nimmer & David Nimmer, Nimmer on Copyright § 2.08[B][2], at 2-88 (Supp. 1995).

preferred creditor. A creditor with a superior right to payment, such as a holder of a perfected security interest as compared to a holder of an unsecured claim. [Cases: Secured Transactions 138–140, 168. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 88, 90–92, 106–107, 119–124.] principal creditor. A creditor whose claim or demand greatly exceeds the claims of other creditors.

prior creditor.A creditor who is given priority in payment from the debtor's assets.

secondary creditor.A creditor whose claim is subordinate to a preferred creditor's.

secured creditor.A creditor who has the right, on the debtor's default, to proceed against collateral and apply it to the payment of the debt. UCC § 9-102(a)(72). — Also termed secured party.

“ ‘Secured party’ means (A) a person in whose favor a security interest is created or provided for under a security agreement, whether or not any obligation to be secured is outstanding; (B) a person that holds an agricultural lien; (C) a consignor; (D) a person to which accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes have been sold; or (E) if a security interest or agricultural lien is created or provided for in favor of a trustee, agent, collateral agent, or other representative, that representative.” UCC § 9-102(a)(72).

single creditor.In the marshaling of assets, a creditor with a lien on one fund. Cf. double creditor.

specialty creditor.A creditor to whom an heir is liable for a decedent's debts to the extent of the land inherited. • Historically, unless the creditor obtained a judgment against the debtor before the debtor's death, the creditor's right of action on the debt was limited to the decedent's lawful heir. If the debtor devised the land to a stranger, the creditor's claim was defeated. See HEIR(1).

“There were three exceptions to this rule that a fee simple estate was not liable to the creditors of the deceased. Debts due to the Crown and debts due to judgment creditors were enforceable against the land notwithstanding the death of the owner, and thirdly, if the fee simple tenant had in his lifetime executed a deed whereby he covenanted for himself and his heirs to pay a sum of money, the creditor (called a specialty creditor) could make the heir liable for the debt to the extent of the land which had descended to him. But this privilege of the specialty creditor was not at first enforceable against an equitable fee simple, and it was strictly limited to a right of action against the heir of the deceased, so that the creditor was defrauded of his money if the deceased devised his land to a stranger.” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 738 (3d ed. 1933).

subsequent creditor.A creditor whose claim comes into existence after a given fact or transaction, such as the recording of a deed or the execution of a voluntary conveyance.

unsecured creditor.A creditor who, upon giving credit, takes no rights against specific property of the debtor. — Also termed general creditor.

warrant creditor.A creditor of a municipal corporation who is given a municipal warrant for the amount of the claim because the municipality lacks the funds to pay the debt. Cf. certificate creditor. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 896. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 801, 1636.]

CREDIT SLIP

credit slip. A document that allows a store customer to either purchase another item or receive cash or credit for merchandise that the customer has returned to the store.

CREDIT UNION

credit union. A cooperative association that offers low-interest loans and other consumer banking services to persons sharing a common bond — often fellow employees and their family members. • Most credit unions are regulated by the National Credit Union Administration. State-chartered credit unions are also subject to regulation by the chartering state, and they may be regulated by state banking boards. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations 1–6, 24–40. C.J.S. Building and Loan Associations, Savings and Loan Associations, and Credit Unions §§ 2–7, 9–19, 31–32, 45, 66–113, 115, 144–145.]

“Credit unions were the last major thrift institutions developed in the United States What distinguished credit unions from mutual savings banks and savings and loan associations was their emphasis on a common bond of workers, church members, or people in a local area, wanting to borrow relatively small amounts at reasonable interest rates from each other, and help each other save to meet these short-term needs. Their goal was to provide a low interest rate alternative ... to loan sharks and pawnbrokers.” William A. Lovett, Banking and Financial Institutions Law in a Nutshell 284 (1997).

creditworthy,adj. (Of a borrower) financially sound enough that a lender will extend credit in the belief that default is unlikely; fiscally healthy. — creditworthiness,n.

cretion (kree-sh<<schwa>>n), n. [fr. Latin cernere “to decide”] Roman law. 1. A method or form of accepting an inheritance by an heir who is appointed in a testament. • Cretion usu. had to be declared within 100 days from the date on which an heir received notice of the appointment.

“In the old law it was the practice to fix a time limit, usually of one hundred days, within which the heir was to make a formal acceptance, with the addition that if he failed to do so, he was to be disinherited and a substitute was to take the inheritance in his place. This formal acceptance was known as cretio from the Latin verb cernere — to decide. The practice had fallen into disuse before Justinian, who formally abolished it.” R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 199 (4th ed. 1956).

2. The period within which an heir might decide whether to accept an inheritance. — Also termed (in Latin) cretio (kree-shee-oh). — cretionary (kree-sh<<schwa>>n-er-ee), adj.

CREW MEMBER

crier (krI-⟨schwa⟩r).1. An officer of the court who makes public pronouncements as required by the court. Cf. BAILIFF(1). — Also termed court crier. [Cases: Courts 58. C.J.S. Courts § 108.] 2. An auctioneer. — Also spelled cryer.

CRIEZ LA PEEZ

criez la peez (krI-eez l⟨schwa⟩ pees). [Law French] Hist. Rehearse the concord (or peace).
 • This phrase was used to confirm the conveyance of land by fine. The serjeant or countor in attendance read the phrase aloud in court. See FINE(1).

CRIM. CON.

crim. con.abbr.CRIMINAL CONVERSATION.

CRIME

crime. An act that the law makes punishable; the breach of a legal duty treated as the subject matter of a criminal proceeding. — Also termed criminal wrong. See OFFENSE(1).

“Understanding that the conception of Crime, as distinguished from that of Wrong or Tort and from that of Sin, involves the idea of injury to the State of collective community, we first find that the commonwealth, in literal conformity with the conception, itself interposed directly, and by isolated acts, to avenge itself on the author of the evil which it had suffered.” Henry S. Maine, Ancient Law 320 (17th ed. 1901).

“It is a curious fact that all the minor acts enumerated in the penal code of a state like, say, New York are in law called crimes, which term includes both murder and overparking. It is a strong term to use for the latter, and of course the law has for centuries recognized that there are more serious and less serious crimes. At the common law, however, only two classes were recognized, serious crimes or felonies, and minor crimes or misdemeanors.” Max Radin, The Law and You 91 (1948).

administrative crime.An offense consisting of a violation of an administrative rule or regulation that carries with it a criminal sanction.

commercial crime.A crime that affects commerce; esp., a crime directed toward the property or revenues of a commercial establishment. • Examples include robbery of a business, embezzlement, counterfeiting, forgery, prostitution, illegal gambling, and extortion. See 26 CFR § 403.38.

common-law crime.A crime that is punishable under the common law, rather than by force of statute. Cf. statutory crime.

complainantless crime.See victimless crime.

computer crime.A crime involving the use of a computer, such as sabotaging or stealing electronically stored data. — Also termed cybercrime. [Cases: Telecommunications 461.15. C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television § 221.]

consensual crime. See victimless crime.

constructive crime. A crime that is built up or created when a court enlarges a statute by altering or straining the statute's language, esp. to drawing unreasonable implications and inferences from it. — Also termed implied crime; presumed crime.

continuous crime. 1. A crime that continues after an initial illegal act has been consummated; a crime that involves ongoing elements. • An example is illegal U.S. drug importation. The criminal act is completed not when the drugs enter the country, but when the drugs reach their final destination. 2. A crime (such as driving a stolen vehicle) that continues over an extended period. Cf. instantaneous crime.

corporate crime. A crime committed by a corporation's representatives acting on its behalf. • Examples include price-fixing and consumer fraud. Although a corporation as an entity cannot commit a crime other than through its representatives, it can be named as a criminal defendant. — Also termed organizational crime. Cf. occupational crime. [Cases: Corporations 526. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 736–739.]

crime of passion. A crime committed in the heat of an emotionally charged moment, with no opportunity to reflect on what is happening. See HEAT OF PASSION.

crime of violence. See violent crime.

crime without victims. See victimless crime.

cybercrime. See computer crime.

economic crime. A nonphysical crime committed to obtain a financial gain or a professional advantage.

“There are two major styles of economic crime. The first consists of crimes committed by businessmen as an adjunct to their regular business activities. Businessmen's responsibilities give them the opportunity, for example, to commit embezzlement, to violate regulations directed at their areas of business activity, or to evade the payment of taxes. This style of economic crime is often called white-collar crime. The second style of economic crime is the provision of illegal goods and services or the provision of goods and services in an illegal manner. Illegal provision of goods and services requires coordinated economic activity similar to that of normal business, but all of those engaged in it are involved in crime. The madam operating a brothel has many concerns identical to the manager of a resort hotel, and the distributor of marijuana must worry about the efficacy of his distribution system just as does a distributor of any other product. This type of economic crime is often called organized crime because the necessity of economic coordination outside the law leads to the formation of criminal groups with elaborate organizational customs and practices." Edmund W. Kitch, "Economic Crime," in 2 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 670, 671 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

environmental crime. See ENVIRONMENTAL CRIME.

expressive crime. A crime committed for the sake of the crime itself, esp. out of frustration, rage, or other emotion, rather than for financial gain. Cf. instrumental crime.

federal crime. See FEDERAL CRIME.

general-intent crime. A crime that involves performing a particular act without intending a further act or a further result.

hate crime. A crime motivated by the victim's race, color, ethnicity, religion, or national origin. • Certain groups have lobbied to expand the definition by statute to include a crime motivated by the victim's disability, gender, or sexual orientation. Cf. hate speech under SPEECH. [Cases: Civil Rights 1808; Sentencing and Punishment 753. C.J.S. Civil Rights § 222; Criminal Law §§ 1495, 1527.]

high crime. A crime that is very serious, though not necessarily a felony. • Under the U.S. Constitution, a government officer's commission of a "high crime" is, along with treason and bribery, grounds for removal from office. U.S. Const. art. II, § 4. See IMPEACHABLE OFFENSE.

implied crime. See constructive crime.

inchoate crime. See inchoate offense under OFFENSE(1).

index crime. See index offense under OFFENSE(1).

infamous crime (in-f<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>s). 1. At common law, a crime for which part of the punishment was infamy, so that one who committed it would be declared ineligible to serve on a jury, hold public office, or testify. • Examples are perjury, treason, and fraud. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 31. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 28–30.] 2. A crime punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary. • The Fifth Amendment requires a grand-jury indictment for the prosecution of infamous (or capital) crimes, which include all federal felony offenses. See indictable offense under OFFENSE(1). Cf. noninfamous crime.

"At common law an infamous crime was one ... inconsistent with the common principles of honesty and humanity. Infamous crimes were treason, felony, all offenses found in fraud and which came within the general notion of the crimen falsi of the civil law, piracy, swindling, cheating, barratry, and the bribing of a witness to absent himself from a trial, in order to get rid of

instantaneous crime.A crime that is fully completed by a single act, as arson or murder, rather than a series of acts. • The statute of limitations for an instantaneous crime begins to run with its completion. Cf. continuous crime.

instrumental crime.A crime committed to further another end or result; esp., a crime committed to obtain money to purchase a good or service. Cf. expressive crime.

international crime.See INTERNATIONAL CRIME.

major crime.See FELONY(1).

noninfamous crime.A crime that does not qualify as an infamous crime. Cf. infamous crime.

occupational crime.A crime that a person commits for personal gain while on the job. Cf. corporate crime.

organizational crime.See corporate crime.

organized crime.See ORGANIZED CRIME.

personal-condition crime.See status crime.

personal crime.A crime (such as rape, robbery, or pickpocketing) that is committed against an individual's person.

political crime.See POLITICAL OFFENSE.

predatory crime.A crime that involves preying upon and victimizing individuals. • Examples include robbery, rape, and carjacking.

preliminary crime.See inchoate offense under OFFENSE(1).

presumed crime.See constructive crime.

quasi-crime.Hist. 1. An offense not subject to criminal prosecution (such as contempt or violation of a municipal ordinance) but for which penalties or forfeitures can be imposed. • The term includes offenses that give rise to qui tam actions and forfeitures for the violation of a public duty. 2. An offense for which someone other than the actual perpetrator is held liable, the perpetrator being presumed to act on the command of the responsible party. See quasi-delict (1) under DELICT.

serious crime.1. See serious offense under OFFENSE(1).2.FELONY(1).

signature crime.A distinctive crime so similar in pattern, scheme, or modus operandi to previous crimes that it identifies a particular defendant as the perpetrator.

spontaneous crime.A criminal act that occurs suddenly and without premeditation in response to an unforeseen stimulus. • For example, a husband who discovers his wife in bed with another man and shoots him could be said to have committed an affectively spontaneous crime.

status crime.A crime of which a person is guilty by being in a certain condition or of a specific character. • An example of a status crime is vagrancy. — Also termed status offense; personal-condition crime.

statutory crime.A crime punishable by statute. Cf. common-law crime.

street crime.Crime generally directed against a person in public, such as mugging, theft, or robbery. — Also termed visible crime.

strict-liability crime.A crime that does not require a mens rea element, such as traffic offenses and illegal sales of intoxicating liquor. [Cases: Criminal Law 21. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 31.]

substantive crime.See substantive offense under OFFENSE(1).

vice crime.A crime of immoral conduct, such as gambling or prostitution.

victimless crime.A crime that is considered to have no direct victim, usu. because only consenting adults are involved. • Examples are possession of illicit drugs and deviant sexual intercourse between consenting adults. — Also termed consensual crime; crime without victims; complainantless crime.

“When a man's house has been robbed or his brother murdered, he is likely to take this complaint vigorously to the police and demand action. His presence on the scene dramatizes the need for law enforcement and gives sense and purpose to the work of the police and district attorney. In contrast, the absence of a prosecuting witness surrounds ‘crimes without victims’ with an entirely different atmosphere. Here it is the police who must assume the initiative. If they attempt to work without the aid of informers, they must resort to spying, and this spying is rendered all the more distasteful because what is spied upon is sordid and pitiable.” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 44 (1968).

violent crime.A crime that has as an element the use, attempted use, threatened use, or substantial risk of use of physical force against the person or property of another. 18 USCA § 16; USSG § 2E1.3. — Also termed crime of violence.

visible crime.See street crime.

war crime.See WAR CRIME.

white-collar crime.See WHITE-COLLAR CRIME.

CRIME AGAINST HUMANITY

crime against humanity.Int'l law. A brutal crime that is not an isolated incident but that involves large and systematic actions, often cloaked with official authority, and that shocks the conscience of humankind. • Among the specific crimes that fall within this category are mass murder, extermination, enslavement, deportation, and other inhumane acts perpetrated against a population, whether in wartime or not. See Statute of the International Criminal Court, art. 3 (37 ILM 999).

CRIME AGAINST INTERNATIONAL LAW crime against international law. See CRIME AGAINST THE LAW OF NATIONS.

CRIME AGAINST PEACE

crime against peace. Int'l law. An international crime in which the offenders plan, prepare, initiate, or wage a war of aggression or a war in violation of international peace treaties, agreements, or assurances.

CRIME AGAINST THE LAW OF NATIONS

crime against the law of nations. Int'l law. 1. A crime punishable under internationally prescribed criminal law or defined by an international convention and required to be made punishable under the criminal law of the member states. 2. A crime punishable under international law; an act that is internationally agreed to be of a criminal nature, such as genocide, piracy, or engaging in the slave trade. — Also termed crime against international law.

CRIME AGAINST THE PERSON

crime against the person. See CRIMES AGAINST PERSONS.

CRIME-FRAUD EXCEPTION

crime-fraud exception. The doctrine that neither the attorney–client privilege nor the attorney–work-product privilege protects attorney–client communications that are in furtherance of a current or planned crime or fraud. Clark v. United States, 289 U.S. 1, 53 S.Ct. 465 (1933); In re Grand Jury Subpoena Duces Tecum, 731 F.2d 1032 (2d Cir. 1984). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1600(3); Witnesses 201(2). C.J.S. Witnesses § 336.]

CRIME INSURANCE

CRIME MALUM IN SE

CRIME MALUM PROHIBITUM

CRIMEN

crimen (krI-m<<schwa>>n), n. [Latin] 1. An accusation or charge of a crime. 2. A crime. Pl. crimina (krim-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>).

crimen expilatae hereditatis (krI-m<<schwa>>n eks-p<<schwa>>-lay-tee h<<schwa>>-red-i-tay-tis). Roman law. A false claimant's willful spoliation of an inheritance.

crimen falsi (krI-m<<schwa>>n fal-sIorfawl-sI). [Latin “the crime of falsifying”] 1. A crime in the nature of perjury. — Also termed falsum. 2. Any other offense that involves some element of dishonesty or false statement. See Fed. R. Evid. 609(a)(2). [Cases: Witnesses 337(12).]

“The starting point [for perjury] seems to have been the so-called crimen falsi — crime of falsifying. In the beginning, perhaps, one convicted of perjury was deemed too untrustworthy to be permitted to testify in any other case, and the idea grew until the term ‘crimen falsi’ included any crime involving an element of deceit, fraud or corruption.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 26 (3d ed. 1982).

crimen feloniae imposuit (krI-m<<schwa>>n f<<schwa>>-loh-nee-ee im-poz-y<<schwa>>-wit). To accuse or charge with a felony.

crimen furti (krI-m<<schwa>>n f<<schwa>>r-tI). [Latin “the crime of stealing”] See THEFT.

crimen incendii (krI-m<<schwa>>n in-sen-dee-I). [Latin “the crime of burning”] See ARSON.

crimen innominatum (krI-m<<schwa>>n i-nom-<<schwa>>-nay-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin “the nameless crime”] See SODOMY.

crimen majestatis (krI-m<<schwa>>n maj-<<schwa>>-stay-tis). [Latin “crime against majesty”] Hist. High treason; any crime against the king's person or dignity; LESE MAJESTY. • Under Roman law, crimen majestatis denoted any enterprise by a Roman citizen or other person against the republic or the emperor. — Also termed crimen laesae majestatis. See LESE MAJESTY. Cf. PERDUELLIO.

crimen plagii (krI-m<<schwa>>n play-jee-I). [Latin] Roman law. See PLAGIUM.

crimen raptus (krI-m<<schwa>>n rap-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin “the crime of rape”] See RAPE.

crimen repetundarum (krI-m<<schwa>>n rep-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>n-dair-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “accusation of (money) to be repaid”] Roman law. 1. A charge of extortion brought against a Roman provincial governor. 2. Any act of misgovernment or oppression on the part of a magistrate or official.

crimen roberiae (krI-m<<schwa>>n r<<schwa>>-beer-ee-ee). [Latin “the crime of robbery”] ROBBERY.

CRIME OF OMISSION

crime of omission. See CRIME.

CRIME OF PASSION

CRIMINAL CODE

criminal code. See PENAL CODE.

CRIMINAL COERCION

criminal coercion. See COERCION.

CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY

criminal conspiracy. See CONSPIRACY.

CRIMINAL CONTEMPT

criminal contempt. See CONTEMPT.

CRIMINAL CONVERSATION criminal conversation. Archaic. A tort action for adultery, brought by a husband against a third party who engaged in sexual intercourse with his wife. • Criminal conversation has been abolished in most jurisdictions. — Abbr. crim. con. See HEARTBALM STATUTE. [Cases: Husband and Wife 340–354.]

“An action (whether of trespass or case is uncertain, but probably trespass) formerly lay against one who had committed adultery with the wife of the plaintiff. It was known as an action for criminal conversation. The wife's consent was irrelevant. The action was distinct from that of enticement: one may commit adultery without enticing a wife away from her husband. The action was no doubt a necessity when divorce could only be obtained by Act of Parliament: as Parliament was not a tribunal suitable for trying allegations of adultery it was reasonable to require the petitioner to establish the truth of his allegations before a court of law. The action might also have been justified on the ground that the plaintiff is in substance complaining of the invasion of privacy of his marriage, and the insult thereby caused to his honour as a husband.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 358 (17th ed. 1977).

CRIMINAL COURT

criminal court. See COURT.

CRIMINAL-COURT JUDGE

criminal-court judge. See JUDGE.

CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY

criminal damage to property. 1. Injury, destruction, or substantial impairment to the use of property (other than by fire or explosion) without the consent of a person having an interest in the property. [Cases: Malicious Mischief 1. C.J.S. Malicious or Criminal Mischief or Damage to Property §§ 2–5.] 2. Injury, destruction, or substantial impairment to the use of property (other than by fire or explosion) with the intent to injure or defraud an insurer or lienholder. Cf. ARSON.

criminalistics (krim-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>-lis-tiks), n. The science of crime detection, usu. involving the subjection of physical evidence to laboratory analysis, including ballistic testing, blood-fluid and tissue analysis, and other tests. Cf. CRIMINOLOGY. — criminalistic, adj.

CRIMINALITY

criminality (krim-<<schwa>>-nal<<schwa>>-tee). 1. The state or quality of being criminal. 2. An act or practice that constitutes a crime. See DOUBLE CRIMINALITY.

CRIMINALIZATION

criminalization (krim-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>-zay-sh<<schwa>>-n), n. 1. The act or an instance of making a previously lawful act criminal, usu. by passing a statute. Cf. DECRIMINALIZATION; CIVILIZATION. [Cases: Criminal Law 3. C.J.S. Affray § 14; Criminal Law § 19.] 2. The process by which a person develops into a criminal.

CRIMINALIZE

criminalize (krim-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>l-Iz), vb. To make illegal; to outlaw.

CRIMINAL JURISDICTION

criminal jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE

criminal justice. 1. The methods by which a society deals with those who are accused of having committed crimes. See LAW ENFORCEMENT(1). 2. The field of study pursued by those seeking to enter law enforcement as a profession. • Many colleges offer degrees in criminal justice, typically after two to four years of study. — Also termed (in sense 2) police science; law enforcement.

CRIMINAL-JUSTICE SYSTEM

criminal-justice system. The collective institutions through which an accused offender passes until the accusations have been disposed of or the assessed punishment concluded. • The system typically has three components: law enforcement (police, sheriffs, marshals), the judicial process (judges, prosecutors, defense lawyers), and corrections (prison officials, probation officers, and parole officers). — Also termed law-enforcement system.

CRIMINAL LAW

criminal law. The body of law defining offenses against the community at large, regulating how suspects are investigated, charged, and tried, and establishing punishments for convicted offenders. — Also termed penal law.

“The criminal law represents the pathology of civilization.” Morris R. Cohen, Reason and Law 70 (1961).

“Often the term ‘criminal law’ is used to include all that is involved in ‘the administration of criminal justice’ in the broadest sense. As so employed it embraces three different fields, known to the lawyer as (1) the substantive criminal law, (2) criminal procedure, and (3) special problems in the administration and enforcement of criminal justice.... The phrase ‘criminal law’ is more commonly used to include only that part of the general field known as the substantive criminal law” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 1, 5 (3d ed. 1982).

CRIMINAL LAWYER

criminal lawyer. See LAWYER.

CRIMINAL OPERATION

criminal operation. Hist. ABORTION(1).

CRIMINAL PLEA

criminal plea. See PLEA(1).

CRIMINAL POLICY

criminal policy. The branch of criminal science concerned with protecting against crime. • It draws on information provided by criminology, and its subjects for investigation are (1) the appropriate measures of social organization for preventing harmful activities, and (2) the treatment to be accorded to those who have caused harm, whether the offenders are to be given warnings, supervised probation, or medical treatment, or whether they are to suffer serious deprivations of life or liberty, such as imprisonment or capital punishment.

CRIMINAL POSSESSION

criminal possession. See POSSESSION.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

criminal procedure. The rules governing the mechanisms under which crimes are investigated, prosecuted, ad-judicated, and punished. • It includes the protection of accused persons' constitutional rights.

CRIMINAL PROCEEDING

criminal proceeding. See PROCEEDING.

CRIMINAL PROCESS

criminal process. See PROCESS.

CRIMINAL PROSECUTION

criminal prosecution. See PROSECUTION(2).

CRIMINAL PROTECTOR

criminal protector. An accessory after the fact to a felony; one who aids or harbors a wrongdoer after the commission of a crime. [Cases: Compounding Offenses 3.5; Criminal Law 74. C.J.S. Compounding Offenses § 5; Criminal Law § 140.]

CRIMINAL-REFERRAL FORM

criminal-referral form. A form once required by federal regulatory authorities (from 1988 to 1996) for reporting every instance when a bank employee or affiliate committed or aided in committing a crime such as credit-card fraud, employee theft, or check-kiting. • This form, like the suspicious-transaction report, has since been super-seded by the suspicious-activity report. — Abbr. CRF. See SUSPICIOUS-ACTIVITY REPORT.

CRIMINAL REGISTRATION criminal registration. See REGISTRATION(1).

CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY criminal responsibility. See RESPONSIBILITY(2), (3).

CRIMINAL SANCTION

criminal sanction. See SANCTION.

CRIMINAL SCIENCE

criminal science. The study of crime with a view to discovering the causes of criminality, devising the most effective methods of reducing crime, and perfecting the means for dealing with those who have committed crimes. • The three main branches of criminal science are criminology, criminal policy, and criminal law.

CRIMINAL SEXUAL CONDUCT IN THE FIRST DEGREE

criminate, vb. See INCRIMINATE.

CRIMINATION crimination (krim-⟨schwa⟩-nay-sh⟨schwa⟩n), n. 1. INCRIMINATION. 2. An accusation or strong censure.

criminative (krim-⟨schwa⟩-nay-tiv), adj. Of, relating to, or involving incrimination or accusation. Cf. IN-FIRMATIVE.

CRIMINOGENIC

criminogenic (krim-⟨schwa⟩-n⟨schwa⟩-jen-ik), adj. Tending to cause crime or criminality. — crimino-genesis, n.

CRIMINOLOGY

criminology (krim-⟨schwa⟩-nol-⟨schwa⟩-jee), n. The study of crime and criminal punishment as social phenomena; the study of the causes of crime and the treatment of offenders, comprising (1) criminal biology, which examines causes that may be found in the mental and physical constitution of an offender (such as hereditary tendencies and physical defects), and (2) criminal sociology, which deals with inquiries into the effects of environment as a cause of criminality. — Also termed criminal anthropology. Cf. CRIMINALISTICS; PE-NOLOGY. — criminological (krim-⟨schwa⟩-n⟨schwa⟩-loj-⟨schwa⟩-k⟨schwa⟩l), adj. — crimi-nologist, n.

comparative criminology. The scholarly study of the similarities and differences between the criminal-justice systems of different nations.

environmental criminology. The scholarly study of areas where crime occurs and of why offenders are active in those areas. — Also termed geography of crime; ecology of crime.

CRIMPING

crimping.Hist. The offense of decoying and confining persons to force them into military service. Cf. IM-PRESSMENT(3).

CRIT

crit. An adherent to the critical-legal-studies school of thought. — Also termed CLSer; Critic; critter.

fem-crit. A feminist adherent of critical legal studies.

CRITICAL EVIDENCE

critical evidence.See EVIDENCE.

CRITICAL LEGAL STUDIES

Critical Legal Studies. 1. A school of thought advancing the idea that the legal system perpetuates the status quo in terms of economics, race, and gender by using manipulable concepts and by creating an imaginary world of social harmony regulated by law. • The Marxist wing of this school focuses on socioeconomic issues. Fem-crits emphasize gender hierarchy, whereas critical race theorists focus on racial subordination. See fem-crit under CRIT; CRITICAL RACE THEORY. 2. The body of work produced by adherents to this school of thought. — Abbr. CLS.

CRITICAL LIMITATION critical limitation.Patents. A limitation essential either to the operativeness of an invention or to the patentability of a patent claim for the invention. [Cases: Patents 165(2). C.J.S. Patents § 289.]

CRITICAL RACE THEORY

Critical Race Theory. 1. A reform movement within the legal profession, particularly within academia, whose adherents believe that the legal system has disempowered racial minorities. • The term first appeared in 1989. Critical race theorists observe that even if the law is couched in neutral language, it cannot be neutral because those who fashioned it had their own subjective perspectives that, once enshrined in law, have disadvantaged minorities and even perpetuated racism. 2. The body of work produced by adherents to this theory. — Abbr. CRT.

CRITICAL STAGE

critical stage.Criminal procedure. A point in a criminal prosecution when the accused's rights or defenses might be affected by the absence of legal representation. • Under the Sixth Amendment, a critical stage triggers the accused's right to appointed counsel. Examples of critical stages include preliminary hearings, jury selection, and (of course) trial. Cf. ACCUSATORY STAGE . [Cases: Criminal Law 641.3(2); Double Jeopardy 59.C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 213, 218, 282.]

CRITTER

critter. See CRIT.

CROP INSURANCE

crop insurance. See INSURANCE.

CROP RENT

crop rent. See RENT(1).

crops. Products that are grown, raised, and harvested. • Crops usu. are from the soil, but fruit grown on trees are also considered crops. [Cases: Crops 1. C.J.S. Crops §§ 1–5, 9.]

annual crops. 1. Crops that must be planted each year, such as cotton, wheat, barley, corn, carrots, potatoes, and melons. 2. Crops for which the produce in any single year is mainly the result of attention and care exerted in the same agricultural year, such as hops and sugar cane.

away-going crops. A tenant's crops that were sown and will not be ready to harvest before the tenancy expires. • The tenant retains the ownership of the crops after the tenancy expires.

basic crops. Crops (such as wheat and corn) that are usu. subject to government-price supports.

growing crops. Crops that are in the process of growth. • Growing crops are goods under UCC § 2-105(1). Judicial decisions vary on the growth stage at which a crop becomes a growing crop and on whether pasturage grass is a growing crop. Cf. FARM PRODUCT. [Cases: Crops 1. C.J.S. Crops §§ 1–5, 9.]

standing crops. Crops that have not been harvested or otherwise severed from the land.

CROSS

cross, n. 1. CROSS-EXAMINATION. 2. A sale of a large amount of publicly traded stock between two private parties. • Although the transaction does not happen on the exchange floor, it typically requires exchange permission.

CROSS-ACTION

cross-action. 1. ACTION(4). 2. CROSS-CLAIM.

CROSS-APPEAL

cross-appeal. See APPEAL.

CROSS-BILL

cross-bill. See BILL(2).

CROSS-CLAIM

cross-claim, n. A claim asserted between codefendants or coplaintiffs in a case and that relates to the subject of the original claim or counterclaim. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g). — Also termed cross-action; cross-suit. Cf. COUN-TERCLAIM. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 786; Pleading 147, 148, 149; Set-off and Counterclaim 10.] — cross-claim,vb. — cross-claimant,n.

“The courts have not always distinguished clearly between a cross-claim and a counterclaim, and have used one name where the other is proper under the rules, perhaps because in some states, and in the old equity practice, the term cross-complaint or cross-bill is used for what the rules regard as a counterclaim. Under Rule 13 a counterclaim is a claim against an opposing party, while a cross-claim is against a co-party. Further there is not the same freedom in asserting cross-claims that the rules provide for counterclaims. An unrelated claim against an opposing party may be asserted as a permissive counterclaim, but only claims related to the subject matter of the original action, or property involved therein, are appropriate as cross-claims.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 80, at 574 (5th ed. 1994).

CROSS-COLLATERAL

cross-collateral. See COLLATERAL.

CROSS-COLLATERAL CLAUSE

cross-collateral clause. An installment-contract provision allowing the seller, if the buyer defaults, to repossess not only the particular item sold but also every other item bought from the seller on which a balance remained due when the last purchase was made. — Also termed dragnet clause.

CROSS-COLLATERALIZATION

cross-collateralization. See cross-collateral under COLLATERAL.

CROSS-COMPLAINT

cross-complaint. 1. A claim asserted by a defendant against another party to the action. — Also termed (in some jurisdictions) cross-petition. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 786; Pleading 148, 149. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 203, 206.] 2. A claim asserted by a defendant against a person not a party to the action for a matter relating to the subject of the action.

CROSS-DEFAULT CLAUSE

cross-default clause. A contractual provision under which default on one debt obligation triggers default on another obligation.

CROSS-DEFENDANT

cross-defendant. The party against whom a cross-claim is asserted. Cf. CROSS-PLAINTIFF F.

CROSS-DEMAND

cross-demand. See DEMAND(1).

CROSSED CHECK

crossed check. See CHECK.

CROSS-ELASTICITY OF DEMAND

cross-elasticity of demand. Antitrust. A relationship between two products, usu. substitutes for each other, in which a price change for one product affects the price of the other.

CROSS-ERROR

cross-error. See ERROR(2).

CROSS-EXAMINATION

cross-examination, n. The questioning of a witness at a trial or hearing by the party opposed to the party who called the witness to testify. • The purpose of cross-examination is to discredit a witness before the fact-finder in any of several ways, as by bringing out contradictions and improbabilities in earlier testimony, by suggesting doubts to the witness, and by trapping the witness into admissions that weaken the testimony. The cross-examiner is typically allowed to ask leading questions but is traditionally limited to matters covered on direct examination and to credibility issues. — Also termed cross-interrogation. Cf. DIRECT EXAMINATION; RE-CROSS-EXAMINATION. [Cases: Witnesses 266–284, 330. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 445–498, 500–507, 579.] — cross-examine, vb.

cross-marriage. See MARRIAGE(1).

CROSS-MOTION

cross-motion. See MOTION(1).

CROSS-OFFER

cross-offer, n. Contracts. An offer made to another in ignorance that the offeree has made the same offer to the offeror. — cross-offer, vb. — cross-offeror, n.

CROSS-PETITION

cross-petition. See CROSS-COMPLAINT.

CROSS-PLAINTIFF

cross-plaintiff. The party asserting a cross-claim. Cf. CROSS-DEFENDANT.

CROSS-PURCHASE BUY-SELL AGREEMENT

cross-purchase buy-sell agreement. 1.BUY-SELL AGREEMENT(1).2. A partnership insurance plan in which each partner individually buys and maintains enough insurance on the life or lives of other partners to purchase a deceased or expelled partner's equity.

CROSS-QUESTION

cross-question. See QUESTION(1).

CROSS-RATE

cross-rate. The exchange rate between two currencies expressed as the ratio of two foreign exchange rates in terms of a common third currency (usu. the U.S. dollar). • Foreign-exchange-rate dealers use cross-rate tables to look for arbitrage opportunities. See ARBITRAGE.

CROSS-REFERENCE

cross-reference,n. An explicit citation to a related provision within the same or a closely related document; esp., the explicit citation in a continuing patent application to all interrelated applications, back to the original filing. • A cross-reference alone does not incorporate the disclosure of the parent application. Cf. INCORPORATION BY REFERENCE(1), (2). — cross-reference,vb.

CROSS-REMAINDER

cross-remainder. See REMAINDER.

CROSS-SUIT

cross-suit. See CROSS-CLAIM.

CRUELTY

cruelty. The intentional and malicious infliction of mental or physical suffering on a living creature, esp. a human; abusive treatment; outrage. Cf. ABUSE; INHUMAN TREATMENT; INDIGNITY.

“When William Blake opined that ‘Cruelty has a human heart’, he posited the physical and emotional forms which cruelty may take. But when is one party so cruel to the other that it goes to the heart of the marriage and justifies dissolution? A New York court defined cruelty as bodily harm, or a reasonable apprehension of bodily harm, which endangers life, limb, or health and renders marital cohabitation unsafe or improper. Some states are reluctant to permit divorce when there has been only emotional suffering without physical harm. And in a marriage of long duration, some courts require that the cruelty be more extreme to justify divorce than if the relationship has been brief. Acts constituting the ground must continue over an extended period of time unless they are so severe as to shock the conscience, or raise the probability that it would be unsafe for the innocent party if the couple remain together.” Walter Wadlington & Raymond C. O'Brien, Family Law in Perspective 73 (2001).

cruelty to a child. See child abuse under ABUSE.

cruelty to animals. A malicious or criminally negligent act that causes an animal to suffer pain or death. [Cases: Animals 38. C.J.S. Animals §§ 99–104, 108.]

extreme cruelty. As a ground for divorce, one spouse's physical violence toward the other spouse, or conduct that destroys or severely impairs the other spouse's mental health. — Also termed cruel and inhumane treatment. Cf. ABUSE (2). [Cases: Divorce 34. C.J.S. Divorce § 19.]

legal cruelty. Cruelty that will justify granting a divorce to the injured party; specif., conduct by one spouse that endangers the life, person, or health of the other spouse, or creates a reasonable apprehension of bodily or mental harm. [Cases: Divorce 27. C.J.S. Divorce § 22.]

mental cruelty. As a ground for divorce, one spouse's course of conduct (not involving actual violence) that creates such anguish that it endangers the life, physical health, or mental health of the other spouse. See EMOTIONAL DISTRESS. [Cases: Divorce 27. C.J.S. Divorce § 22.]

physical cruelty. As a ground for divorce, actual personal violence committed by one spouse against the other. [Cases: Divorce 27(3, 6). C.J.S. Divorce §§ 24, 27, 29–31.]

cui ante divortium (kI [or kwIor kwee] an-tee d<<schwa>>-vor-shee-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin “to whom before divorce”] Hist. A writ of entry enabling a divorced woman to recover land that she had held in fee but that her husband had sold without her permission during the marriage. • The name of this writ derives from the words within it: cui ipsa ante divortium inter eos celebratum, contradicere non potuit (“whom she, before the divorce between them, could not gainsay”). The writ was abolished in 1833. — Also termed sur cui ante divortium.

CUI BONO?

Cui bono?[Latin] For whose advantage?; Who benefits? • The exclamation may be used to ask who benefited from the results of a crime, usu. to cast suspicion without offering evidence of guilt. Despite the literal meaning, the term is more often used to mean “what's the good of it?” or “what benefits are there?”

CUI IN VITA

cui in vita (kI [or kwIor kwee] in vI-t<<schwa>>). [Law Latin “to whom in the life”] Hist. A writ of entry enabling a woman to recover land that she had held in fee but that her deceased husband had sold without her permission. • It is so called from the words of the writ: cui ipsa in vita sua contradicere non potuit (“whom she, in his lifetime, could not gainsay”). — Also termed sur cui in vita.

“Cui in vita, is a writ of entry, which a Widow hath against him, to whom her Husband alienated her Lands or Tenements in his life time, which must specifie, that During his life, she could not withstand it.” Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

CUJUS CONTRARIUM EST VERUM

cujus contrarium est verum (k[y]oo-j<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>n-trair-ee-<<schwa>>m est

CUJUS HAEREDIBUS MAXIME PROSPICITUR

cujus haeredibus maxime prospicitur (k[y]oo-j⟨schwa⟩s h⟨schwa⟩-red-i-b⟨schwa⟩s mak-s⟨schwa⟩-mee proh-spis-i-t⟨schwa⟩r). [Latin] Hist. Whose heirs are chiefly regarded.

culpa (k⟨schwa⟩l-p⟨schwa⟩). [Latin] 1.Roman & civil law. Fault, neglect, or negligence; unintentional wrong. See NEGLIGENCE. Cf. DILIGENTIA; CASUS (1); DOLUS(1).2.Roman law. Conduct that made a party to a contract, or quasi-contract, liable to the other party.

lata culpa (lay-t⟨schwa⟩ k⟨schwa⟩l-p⟨schwa⟩). [Latin “grave fault”] Gross negligence amounting to bad fath (dolus). • This phrase occurs most commonly in bailment law and in the law of the transport of persons. — Also termed culpa lata. See gross negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

levis culpa (lee-vis k⟨schwa⟩l-p⟨schwa⟩). [Latin “slight fault”] 1. Ordinary negligence. 2. Failure to act as the ideal paterfamilias should. — Also termed culpa levis; culpa levis in concreto. See ordinary negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

levissima culpa (l⟨schwa⟩-vis⟨schwa⟩-m⟨schwa⟩ k⟨schwa⟩l-p⟨schwa⟩). [Latin “the slightest fault”] Slight negligence. — Also termed culpa levissima. See slight negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

culpabilis (k⟨schwa⟩l-pay-b⟨schwa⟩-lis), adj.[Latin] Hist. Guilty.

CULPABILITY

culpability (k⟨schwa⟩l-p⟨schwa⟩-bil⟨schwa⟩-tee), n. Blameworthiness; the quality of being culpable. • Except in cases of absolute liability, criminal culpability requires a showing that the person acted purposely, knowingly, recklessly, or negligently with respect to each material element of the offense. See Model Penal Code § 2.02.

“The concept of culpability is used as a reference point to assess the defendant's guilt and punishment even though, in the two contexts, culpability denotes different aspects of the defendant and the murder. At the guilt phase, culpability is most often used to refer to the state of mind that the defendant must possess. Also at the guilt phase, culpability may reflect a broader judgment about the defendant: when he is culpable for his conduct, it means that he is blameworthy and deserves punishment. At the punishment phase, the concept of culpability stands as the benchmark for when the death penalty is an appropriate punishment.” Phyllis L. Crocker, Concepts of Culpability and Deathworthiness, 66 Fordham L. Rev. 21, 35–36 (1997).

CULPA-IN-CONTRAHENDO DOCTRINE

culpa-in-contrahendo doctrine.[Law Latin “fault in contracting”] The principle that parties must act in good faith during preliminary contract negotiations; esp., the principle that a breach by the offeror after the offeree has begun performance of a unilateral contract and is stopped by the offeror before completion will give rise to liability in tort. [Cases: Contracts 319(1); Torts 6, 12. C.J.S. Contracts § 593; Torts §§ 5, 16–22, 54, 59–65.]

culprit. 1. A person accused or charged with the commission of a crime. 2. A person who is guilty of a crime. • Culprit may be a running together of cul, shortened from the Latin culpabilis (“guilty”), and prit, from Old French prest (“ready”), two words formerly used to orally plead at the outset of a criminal case.

“When the prisoner hath thus pleaded not guilty, non culpabilis... the clerk of the assise, or clerk of the arraigns, on behalf of the crown replies, that the prisoner is guilty, and that he is ready to prove him so. This is done by two monosyllables in the same spirit of abbreviation, ‘cul. prit.’ which signifies first that the prisoner is guilty, (cul. culpable, or culpabilis) and then that the king is ready to prove him so; prêt, praesto sum, or paratus verificare.... How our courts came to express a matter of this importance in so odd and obscure a manner ... can hardly be pronounced with certainty. It may perhaps, however, be accounted for by supposing that these were at first short notes, to help the memory of the clerk, and remind him what he was to reply; or else it was the short method of taking down in court, upon the minutes, the replication and averment; ‘cul. prêt’: which afterwards the ignorance of succeeding clerks adopted for the very words to be by them spoken. But however it may have arisen, the joining of issue ... seems to be clearly the meaning of this obscure expression; which has puzzled our most ingenious etymologists, and is commonly understood as if the clerk of the arraigns, immediately on plea pleaded, had fixed an opprobrious name on the prisoner, by asking him, ‘culprit, how wilt thou be tried?’ ” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 333–34 (1769).

CULTURA

cultura (k<<schwa>>l-t[y]oor-<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] Hist. A piece of tillable land; tillage.

With courts, and the results or profits of the same. • The phrase appeared in reference to the right of the Baron courts to any of those courts' profits, as distinguished from the obligation of the King's courts to turn over all profits to the King.

CUM CURIIS ET BLOODWITIS

cum curiis et bloodwitis (k<<schwa>>m kyoor-ee-is et bl<<schwa>>d-wi-tis). [Law Latin] Scots law. With the power of holding courts and fining for blood. • Property disposed of cum curiis et bloodwitis entitled the purchaser of a barony to cumulative jurisdiction over barony matters.

CUM DECIMIS INCLUSIS ET NUNQUAM ANTEA SEPARATIS cum decimis inclusis et nunquam antea separatis (k<<schwa>>m des-<<schwa>>-mis in-kloo-sis et n<<schwa>>n-kwam an-tee-<<schwa>> sep-<<schwa>>-ray-tis). [Law Latin] Scots law. With the tithes included, and never before separated. • This phrase exempted conveyed land from the payment of tithes.

CUM DIVIDEND

cum dividend. With dividend. • Stocks purchased cum dividend entitle the buyer to any pending declared dividends. Cf. EX DIVIDEND.

CUM DOMIBUS, AEDIFICIIS cum domibus, aedificiis (k<<schwa>>m dom-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>s, ee-di-fish-ee-is). [Law Latin] Scots law. With houses, buildings. • These words in a conveyance included within the conveyance every structure erected on the conveyed land.

CUM EFFECTU

cum effectu (k<<schwa>>m i-fek-t[y]oo). [Latin] Hist. With effect; in effect.

“Prescription does not run against any one ... unless he is able to act in defence of his right cum effectu.... Under the old feudal system the casualty of ward was not incurred except where the vassal alienated his lands cum effectu. Thus, if the vassal was interdicted and disposed without the consent of his interdictors, his conveyance being reducible was not effectual, and the casualty was not incurred.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 127–28 (4th ed. 1894).

CUM EXCESSU MODERAMINIS

cum excessu moderaminis (k<<schwa>>m ek-ses-[y]oo mod-<<schwa>>-ray-m<<schwa>>-nis). [Law Latin] Scots law. In excess of the limits. • The phrase appeared in reference to the legal limits on the use of violence as a means of self-defense.

Since virginity or chastity once violated cannot be restored. • The phrase was used to explain the basis for imposing severe punishment for rape.

CUPOS

CUPOS. abbr. A cohabiting unmarried person of the opposite sex. • Although this term is intended to be synonymous with "POSSLQ" (a person of the opposite sex sharing living quarters), it is more literally precise because it excludes married persons. See POSSLQ.

CUR.

cur. abbr. CURIA(3).

CURA

cura (kyoor-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] Roman law. A guardianship that protects the interests of minors who are between puberty and the age of 25, or incapacitated persons. Pl. curae. Cf.

TUTELA.

“Cura was a form of guardianship indicated by the necessities of the case, with respect to persons who, though sui juris, were in need of protection. It was not regarded as a substitute for patria potestas as tutela was.... It extended to the person as well as the property, and in the latter respect is much the same as in the case of the tutela of infants.” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 122 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

cura furiosi (kyoor-<<schwa>> fyoor-ee-oh-sI). A guardianship for an insane person who was mentally inca-pacitated.

“The cura furiosi empowered and bound the curator to manage the property of the lunatic on the lunatic's behalf.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 492 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

cura minoris (kyoor-<<schwa>> mi-nor-is). A form of guardianship for a minor under 25 whose capacity of action was complete, but whose judgment might be defective. Pl. cura minorum.

cura prodigi (kyoor-<<schwa>> prah-d<<schwa>>-jI). A form of guardianship for a spendthrift, usu. at the request of the person's agnatic family.

“The cura prodigi differed from the cura furiosi in that the prodigus, unlike the furiosus, was himself capable of performing any act by which he acquired a right or benefit. The appointment of a curator, however, precluded the prodigus from performing any act which operated to alienate property or to subject him to a liability; any such act, in order to be effectual, had to be concluded either by the curator on behalf of the prodigus or by the prodigus with the approval of the curator.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 492 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

CURA ANIMARUM

curator (kyuur-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-t⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩r orkyuur-ay-t⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩r or kyuu-ray-tor), n.1. Roman law. (ital). A person who manages the affairs of another; a guardian. Pl. curatores (ky⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩r-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-tor-eez). See CURA.

“Although the control of a Tutor ceased when the Pupillus had attained manhood and become invested with his political rights, it must have frequently happened that the youth would be involved in business which he would be incapable of regulating with advantage at that early age, and would, at all events, if wealthy, be open to fraud and imposition. Hence arose the practice of nominating a Curator, whose authority extended to the twenty-fifth year of the ward, but who did not necessarily, like a Tutor, exercise a general superintendence, being frequently no-minated for one special purpose....Curatores were appointed also to manage the affairs of persons beyond the age of twenty-five, who, in consequence of being insane, deaf and dumb, or affected with some incurable disease, were incapable of attending to their own concerns.” William Ramsay, A Manual of Roman Antiquities 299–300 (Rodolfo Lanciani ed., 15th ed. 1894).

curator ad litem (kyuu-ray-tor ad II-t⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m). A curator appointed by a court to represent the interests of a youth, or an incapacitated or unborn person, during the proceedings before the court. [Cases: Infants 76. C.J.S. Infants § 222.]

curator bonis (kyuu-ray-tor boh-nis). [Latin “a guardian of property”] 1. Roman law. A guardian appointed to care for property, esp. for the benefit of creditors. 2. Scots law. A person appointed by a court to manage an estate, esp. of a minor or an insane person. — Also termed curator ad bona.

curator bonorum (kyuu-ray-tor b⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-nor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m). A person appointed by a court to administer the estate of an insolvent person.

2. A temporary guardian or conservator appointed by a court to care for the property or person of a minor or incapacitated person. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 13(6).]

interim curator. Archaic. A person appointed by a justice of the peace to hold a felon's property until a royal administrator could be assigned the task.

3.Civil law. A guardian who manages the estate of a minor, an absent person, or an incapacitated person. Pl. curatores.[Cases: Absentees 5; Guardian and Ward 1. C.J.S. Absentees §§ 7–14.]

curator ad hoc (kyuu-ray-tor ad hok). A court-appointed curator who manages a single matter or transaction. See special guardian under GUARDIAN. [Cases: Absentees 5; Infants 76. C.J.S. Absentees §§ 7–14; In-fants § 222.]

curator rei (kyuu-ray-tor ree-I). [Latin] Scots law. A guardian of an estate, as distinguished from a tutor, who is a guardian of a person. — Also termed curator datur rei.

4.Parliamentary law. An officer charged with custody of an organization's valuable property.

CURFEW

curfew (k<<schwa>>r-fyoo). 1.Hist. A law requiring that all fires be extinguished at a certain time in the evening, usu. announced by the ringing of a bell. 2. A regulation that forbids people (or certain classes of them, such as minors) from being outdoors or in vehicles during specified hours. [Cases: Infants 13. C.J.S. Infants §§ 5, 92–93, 95–98.]

curia (kyoor-ee-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] 1.Roman law. One of 30 divisions (three tribes of ten curiae) into which the Roman people were said to be divided by Romulus. See comitia curiata under COMITIA. 2.Roman law. A legislative gathering, esp. of the Roman Senate; the building used for the gathering. 3.Hist. A judicial tribunal held in the sovereign's palace; a royal court. — Abbr. cur. 4.Hist. A court. 5. The papal court, including its functionaries and officials.

“The word curia in classical Latin is used in a number of ways. Apparently, it meant at first a subdivision of the people. It was also used, by a transfer which is not too clear, for the building in which the Roman Senate met. By an almost inevitable development it became the word for the Senate itself and later the ordinary designation for the Council in municipalities of the later Empire.... How much of this was still recalled in Medieval times, we cannot tell, but ... in the early Middle Ages, curia was a common word to describe both the groups of men who generally were found in attendance on pope, emperor, king or prince, and the groups which were summoned by him to give him counsel. The curia in the latter sense, however, was not really a casual group of persons, summoned spas-modically to advise the king or any other person. It had come to be in Feudal Europe the ordinary Latin word for the general meeting of the lord's vassals, which itself grew out of the Germanic mot or thing.... The Curia of the king was in theory a larger and more important example of the same kind of assemblage.” Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 46–48 (1936).

CURIA ADMIRALITATIS

curia admiralitatis (kyoor-ee-<<schwa>> ad-m<<schwa>>-ral-<<schwa>>-tay-tis). [Law Latin] See HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY.

CURIA ADVISARI VULT

curia advisari vult (kyoor-ee-<<schwa>> ad-v<<schwa>>-sair-iv<<schwa>>lt). [Latin] The court will be advised; the court will consider. • This phrase signaled a court's decision to delay judgment pending further consideration. In England, the phrase is still used in all Court of Appeal decisions when the judgment is reserved; that is, not delivered after the hearing. — Abbr. cur. adv. vult; c.a.v.

CURIA BARONIS

curia baronis (kyoor-ee-<<schwa>> b<<schwa>>-roh-nis). [Law Latin] See COURT BARON .

CURIA REGIS

Curia Regis (kyoor-ee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩ ree-jis). [Latin “king's court”] Hist. (sometimes not cap.)
1. The chief court in early Norman England, established by William the Conqueror. • The curia regis was a body of advisers who traveled with the king, advising him on political matters and acting as an appellate court in important or complicated cases. Over time the functions of the curia regis became exclusively judicial in nature. — Also termed King's Court; aula regis. — Abbr. C.R.

“[W]e are tempted to use terms which are more precise than those that were current in the twelfth century. In particular we are wont to speak of the Curia Regis without remembering that the definite article is not in our documents. Any court held in the king's name by the king's delegates is Curia Regis. Thus the institution of what in course of time will be a new tribunal, a Court of King's Bench or a Court of Common Pleas, may be found in some small rearrangement, some petty technical change, which at the moment passes unnoticed.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 153 (2d ed. 1898).

“[A small] body collects round the king, a body of administrators selected from the ranks of the baronage and of the clergy. At its head stands the chief-justiciar, the king's right-hand man, his viceroy when the king is, as often he is, in his foreign dominions.... This body when it sits for financial purposes constitutes the Exchequer (Scaccarium), so called from the chequered cloth which lies on the table, convenient for the counting of money. Also it forms a council and court of law for the king; it is a curia Regis, the king's court, and its members are justitiiarii, justiciars or justices of this court. Under Henry I they are sent into the counties to collect taxes and to hold pleas; they are then justitiiarii errantes, justitiiarii itinerantes. During the whole period the term curia Regis seems loosely used to cover both the sessions of this permanent body and the assembly of the tenants in chief; the former may perhaps be regarded as a standing committee of the latter.” F.W. Maitland, The Constitutional History of England 63–64 (1908; repr. 1955).

“The focal point of royal government was the curia regis (king's court), the body of advisers and courtiers who attended the king and supervised the administration of the realm. It was not a specific court of law, any more than the eyre was, but rather was the descendant of the Anglo-Saxon witengemot (meeting with the witan, or royal advisers) and the ancestor of the king's council which later subdivided into parliament and the privy council.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 20 (3d ed. 1990).

2. The sessions of this court.

CURSITOR

cursor (k<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r). Hist. A chancery clerk responsible for making out original writs. • Cursor derives from the writs de cursu that the clerks wrote out.

CURSITOR BARON

cursor baron. Hist. An officer of the Court of Exchequer with administrative, but not judicial, duties. • Over time, as the Barons of the Exchequer took on more judicial rather than fiscal duties, the need for someone with financial experience became apparent. So in 1610 a cursor baron was appointed to sit alongside the judges. The office was abolished in 1856.

CURSOR

cursor (k<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>r). Eccles. law. An inferior officer of the papal court.

curtesy (k<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>-see). At common law, a husband's right, upon his wife's death, to a life estate in the land that his wife owned during their marriage, assuming that a child was born alive to the couple. • This right has been largely abolished. Traditionally, the full phrase was estate by the curtesy of England (or Scotland). — Also spelled (esp. in Scots law) courtesy. — Also termed tenancy by the curtesy. Cf. DOWER. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy 1. C.J.S. Dower §§ 2, 5–6, 136–138.]

curtesy consummate (k<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>-see k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>m-it orkahn-s<<schwa>>-mit). The interest the husband has in his wife's estate after her death.

curtesy initiate (k<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>-see i-nish-ee-it). The interest the husband has in his wife's estate after the birth of issue capable of inheriting, and before the death of the wife.

CUSTODIAL INTERFERENCE

custodial interference. Family law. 1. The abduction of a child or the inducement of a minor child to leave the parent legally entitled to custody or not to return to the parent entitled to legal custody. 2. Any hindrance to a parent's rightful access to a child. • The Restatement (Second) of Torts § 700 (1977) provides for an action in tort by the parent entitled to custody against one who, with knowledge that the parent does not consent, either takes the child or compels or induces the child to leave or not to return to the parent legally entitled to custody. — Also termed custody interference.

CUSTODIAL INTERROGATION custodial interrogation. See INTERROGATION.

CUSTODIAL PARENT

custodial parent. See PARENT.

CUSTODIAL RESPONSIBILITY

custodial responsibility. Family law. Physical child custody and supervision, usu. including overnight responsibility for the child. • This term encompasses visitation and sole, joint, and shared custody. Both parents share responsibility for the child regardless of the amount of time they spend with the child. See CUSTODY.

CUSTODIAL TRUST

custodial trust. See TRUST.

CUSTODIAN

custodian, n. 1. A person or institution that has charge or custody (of a child, property, papers, or other valuables); GUARDIAN. • In reference to a child, a custodian has either legal or physical custody. See CAREGIVER. 2. Bankruptcy. A prepetition agent who has taken charge of any asset belonging to the debtor. 11 USCA § 101(11). [Cases: Bankruptcy 2021.1.] — custodianship, n.

CUSTODIAN BANK

custodian bank. See BANK.

CUSTODIA TERRAE ET HAEREDIS custodia terrae et haeredis. See DE CUSTODIA TERRAE ET HAEREDIS.

CUSTODY

custody, n. 1. The care and control of a thing or person for inspection, preservation, or security. constructive custody. Custody of a person (such as a parolee or probationer) whose freedom is controlled by legal authority but who is not under direct physical control.

penal custody.Custody intended to punish a criminal offender. [Cases: Escape 1. C.J.S. Escape §§ 2–3, 5–10, 12, 27, 44.]

physical custody.See PHYSICAL CUSTODY(1).

preventive custody.Custody intended to prevent further dangerous or criminal behavior.

protective custody.The government's confinement of a person for that person's own security or well-being, such as a witness whose safety is in jeopardy or an incompetent person who may harm others. [Cases: Witnesses 20. C.J.S. Witnesses § 69.]

2.Family law. The care, control, and maintenance of a child awarded by a court to a responsible adult. • Custody involves legal custody (decision-making authority) and physical custody (caregiving authority), and an award of custody usu. grants both rights. In a divorce or separation proceeding between the parents, the court usu. awards custody to one of them, unless both are found to be unfit, in which case the court may award custody to a third party, typically a relative. In a case involving parental dereliction, such as abuse or neglect, the court may award custody to the state for placing the child in foster care if no responsible relative or family friend is willing and able to care for the child. — Also termed child custody; legal custody; managing conservatorship; parental functions. See managing conservator (2) under CONSERVATOR; PARENTING PLAN. [Cases: Child Custody 1–992. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 55–155, 157, 203, 321–325, 377.]

divided custody.An arrangement by which each parent has exclusive physical custody and full control of and responsibility for the child part of the time, with visitation rights in the other parent. • For example, a mother might have custody during the school year, and the father might have custody during the summer vacation. [Cases: Child Custody 210.]

joint custody.An arrangement by which both parents share the responsibility for and authority over the child at all times, although one parent may exercise primary physical custody. • In most jurisdictions, there is a rebuttable presumption that joint custody is in the child's best interests. Joint-custody arrangements are favored unless there is so much animosity between the parents that the child or children will be adversely affected by a joint-custody arrangement. An award of joint custody does not necessarily mean an equal sharing of time; it does, however, mean that the parents will consult and share equally in the child's upbringing and in decision-making about up-bringing. In a joint-custody arrangement, the rights, privileges, and responsibilities are shared, though not necessarily the physical custody. In a joint-custody arrangement, physical custody is usu. given to one parent. In fact, awards of joint physical custody, in the absence of extraordinary circumstances, are usu. found not to be in the best interests of the child. — Also termed shared custody; joint managing conservatorship. [Cases: Child Custody 120–155.]

“The statutes, and the cases as well, differ over the definition of joint custody. It is most often defined as meaning only that both parents will share in the decisions concerning the child's care, education, religion, medical treatment and general welfare.” Homer H. Clark Jr., The Law of Domestic Relations in the United States § 19.5, at 815 (2d ed. 1988).

physical custody.See PHYSICAL CUSTODY(2), (3).

residential custody.See PHYSICAL CUSTODY(2).

shared custody.See joint custody.

sole custody.An arrangement by which one parent has full control and sole decision-making responsibility — to the exclusion of the other parent — on matters such as health, education, religion, and living arrangements. [Cases: Child Custody 20–88. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 56–93.]

split custody.An arrangement in which one parent has custody of one or more children, while the other parent has custody of the remaining children. • Split custody is fairly uncommon, since most jurisdictions favor keeping siblings together.

3. The detention of a person by virtue of lawful process or authority. — Also termed legal custody. [Cases: Arrest 68(3). C.J.S. Arrest §§ 43–44.] — custodial,adj.

CUSTODY DECREE

customary law. Law consisting of customs that are accepted as legal requirements or obligatory rules of conduct; practices and beliefs that are so vital and intrinsic a part of a social and economic system that they are treated as if they were laws. — Also termed consuetudinary law.

custos placitorum coronae (k<<schwa>>s-tahs plas-<<schwa>>-tor-<<schwa>>m k<<schwa>>-roh-nee). [Law Latin] See CORONATOR.

CUSTOS ROTULORUM

Custos Rotulorum (k<<schwa>>s-tahs roch-y<<schwa>>-lor-<<schwa>>m or rot-y<<schwa>>-lor-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin “keeper of the pleas of the Crown”] Hist. The principal justice of the peace in a county, responsible for the rolls of the county sessions of the peace. — Also termed Keeper of the Rolls.

CUSTOS SIGILLI

Custos Sigilli. See KEEPER OF THE GREAT SEAL.

CUSTOS SPIRITUALIUM

custos spiritualium (k<<schwa>>s-tahs spir-i-choo-ay-lee-<<schwa>>m or -tyoo-ay-lee-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin “keeper of the spiritualities”] Eccles. law. A member of the clergy responsible for a diocese's spiritual jurisdiction during the vacancy of the see.

CUSTOS TERRAE

custos terrae (k<<schwa>>s-tahs ter-ee). [Law Latin “keeper of the land”] Hist. Guardian, warden, or keeper of the land.

CUSTUMA

custuma (k<<schwa>>s-ch<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>> or k<<schwa>>s-ty<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>). [French coustum “toll” or “tribute”] Hist. A duty or impost.

CUSTUMAL

custumal, n. See CUSTOMARY.

CUTPURSE

cutpurse.Hist. A person who steals by cutting purses; a pickpocket.

CYBERCRIME

cybercrime. See computer crime under CRIME.

cyberlaw (sI-b<<schwa>>r-law). The field of law dealing with the Internet, encompassing cases, statutes, regulations, and disputes that affect people and businesses interacting through computers. • Cyberlaw addresses issues of online speech and business because of the nature of the medium, including intellectual-property rights, free speech, privacy, e-commerce, and safety, as well as questions of jurisdiction. — Also termed cyberspace law.

“Much of the hoopla about ‘cyberspace law’ relates more to climbing the steep learning curve of [the Internet's] technological complexities than to changes in fundamental legal principles. To the extent there was ‘new’ law, it was almost entirely case-by-case development, in accordance with accepted and well-understood basic legal principles, albeit applied to new technology and new circumstances.” Jay Dratler Jr., Cyberlaw § 1.01, at 1–3 (2001).

CYBERPATENT

cyberpatent. See business-method patent under PATENT(3).2. See Internet patent under PATENT(3).

CYBERPAYMENT

cyberpayment. A transfer of money over the Internet, usu. through a payment service. — Also termed Internet payment.

CYBERPIRACY

cyberpiracy.Trademarks. The act of registering a well-known name or mark (or one that is confusingly similar) as a website's domain name, usu. for the purpose of deriving revenue. • One form of cyberpiracy is cybersquatting. Another is using a similar name or mark to mislead consumers. For example, a site called Nikee.com that sold Nikee-branded athletic shoes and sporting goods would draw customers away from the famous Nike brand. [Cases: Trade Regulation 350.1. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 119.] — cyberpirate,n.

CYBERSPACE LAW

cyberspace law.See CYBERLAW.

CYBERSQUATTING

cybersquatting. The act of reserving a domain name on the Internet, esp. a name that would be associated with a company's trademark, and then seeking to profit by selling or licensing the name to the company that has an interest in being identified with it. • The practice was banned by federal law in 1999. See ANTICYBERS-QUATTING CONSUMER PROTECTION ACT. [Cases: Telecommunications 461.15. C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television § 221.]

cyberstalking. The act of threatening, harassing, or annoying someone through multiple e-mail messages, as through the Internet, esp. with the intent of placing the recipient in fear that an illegal act or an injury will be inflicted on the recipient or a member of the recipient's family or household.

CYBERTERRORISM

cyberterrorism. See TERRORISM.

cybertheft. The act of using an online computer service, such as one on the Internet, to steal someone else's property or to interfere with someone else's use and enjoyment of property. • Examples of cybertheft are hacking into a bank's computer records to wrongfully credit one account and debit another, and interfering with a copyright by wrongfully sending protected material over the Internet. [Cases: Telecommunications 461.15. C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television § 221.]

CYCLICAL

cyclical (sI-kl<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>l orsik-l<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>l), adj. (Of a stock or an industry) characterized by large price swings that occur because of government policy, economic conditions, and seasonal changes.

CY PRES

cy pres (see prayor sI). [Law French “as near as”] 1. The equitable doctrine under which a court reforms a written instrument with a gift to charity as closely to the donor's intention as possible, so that the gift does not fail. • Courts use cy pres esp. in construing charitable gifts when the donor's original charitable purpose cannot be fulfilled. It is also used to distribute unclaimed portions of a class-action judgment or settlement funds to a charity that will advance the interests of the class. Cf. DOCTRINE OF APPROXIMATION . [Cases: Charities 37. C.J.S. Charities §§ 36–37.]

“The cy pres doctrine has been much discussed, if not a little severely criticised, and in many cases misunders-tood... The cy pres doctrine is one under which Courts of Chancery act, when a gift for charitable uses cannot be applied according to the exact intention of the donor. In such cases the courts will apply the gift, as nearly as possible (cy pres) in conformity with the presumed general intention of the donor; for it is an established maxim in the interpretation of wills, that a court is bound to carry the will into effect if it can see a general intention consistent with the rules of law, even if the particular mode or manner pointed out by the testator cannot be followed.” George T. Bispham, The Principles of Equity § 104, at 113–14 (11th ed. 1931).

“Although the reason for the adoption of the cy pres rule by the English chancery court in the middle ages is not known, various hypotheses as to the motives of the court have been suggested. The most plausible theory is that the chancellors, being ecclesiastics and trained in Roman law, resurrected this civil law doctrine in order to save gifts made for religious purposes and thereby subject the property to church control. Justification for the use of the doctrine was laid on the shoulders of the donor, the idea being that since the object of the testator in donating the money to charity was to obtain an advantageous position in the kingdom of heaven, he ought not to be frustrated in this desire because of an unexpected or unforeseen failure.” Edith L. Fisch, The Cy Pres Doctrine in the United States 4 (1950).

2. A statutory provision that allows a court to reform a will, deed, or other instrument to avoid violating the rule against perpetuities. See RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES.

cyrographarius (sI-roh-gr<<schwa>>-fair-ee-<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] Hist. See CHIROGRAPH(4).

CYROGRAPHUM

DAF.abbr. DELIVERED AT FRONTIER.

DAILIA

dailia. See DALUS.

DAILUS

dailus. See DALUS.

DAILY BALANCE

daily balance. The final daily accounting for a day on which interest is to be accrued or paid.

average daily balance. The average amount of money in an account (such as a bank account or credit-card account) during a given period. • This amount serves as the basis for computing interest or a finance charge for the period.

DAILY NEWSPAPER

daily newspaper. See NEWSPAPER.

DAISY CHAIN

daisy chain. A series of purchases and sales of the same stock by a small group of securities dealers attempting to drive up the stock's price to attract unsuspecting buyers' interest. • Once the buyers have invested (i.e., are caught up in the chain), the traders sell for a quick profit, leaving the buyers with overpriced stock. This practice is illegal.

DALUS

dalus (day-l<<schwa>>s), n. [Law Latin “a dale”] Hist. 1. A dale; a ditch. 2. A measure of land being a thin strip of pasture between two plowed furrows. — Also termed dailus; dailia.

DAMAGE

damage,adj. Of or relating to monetary compensation for loss or injury to a person or property  . — Also termed damages . Cf. DAMAGES.

damage,n. Loss or injury to person or property <actionable damage resulting from negligence>.

DAMAGE-CLEER

damage-cleer (dam-ij kleeer), n.[fr. Latin damna clericorum “clerk's compensation”] Hist. A set fee payable by a plaintiff to the Court of the Common Pleas, King's Bench, or Exchequer before execution on an award of damages. • The fee — later abolished by statute — was originally a gratuity to the court clerks for preparing special pleadings. It was later abolished by statute. — Also spelled damage cleere. — Also termed damna clericorum.

“Damage cleere, damna clericorum, was assessed by the tenth part in the common pleas, and by the twentieth part in the king's bench and exchequer, of all damages, exceeding five marks, recovered either by verdict, confession, or judgment of the court, in all actions upon the case, covenant, trespass, battery, false imprisonment, dower, and all others, wherein the damages were uncertain, which the plaintiff was obliged to pay to the prothonotary, or chief officer of that court, wherein they were recovered before he could have execution for them. But this is taken away by 17 Car. 2, c. 6.” Termes de la Ley 141 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

DAMAGE FEASANT

damage feasant (dam-ij fez-<<schwa>>nt orfee-z<<schwa>>nt), n.[fr. French faisant dommage] Hist. Doing damage. • This phrase usu. refers to injury to a person's land caused by another person's animals' trespassing on the property and eating the crops or treading the grass. By law, the owner of the damaged property could distrain and impound the animals until compensated by the animals' owner. But the impounder had to feed the animals and could not sell or harm them. The term was introduced during the reign of Edward III. — Also spelled damage faisant. — Also termed damnum facientes.

DAMAGE RULE

damage rule.See LEGAL-INJURY RULE.

DAMAGES

damages,n. pl. Money claimed by, or ordered to be paid to, a person as compensation for loss or injury <the plaintiff seeks $8,000 in damages from the defendant>. — damage,adj.

“Damages are the sum of money which a person wronged is entitled to receive from the wrongdoer as compensation for the wrong.” Frank Gahan, The Law of Damages 1 (1936).

accumulative damages.Statutory damages allowed in addition to amounts available under the common law. — Also termed enhanced damages.

actual damages.An amount awarded to a complainant to compensate for a proven injury or loss; damages that repay actual losses. — Also termed compensatory damages; tangible damages; real damages. [Cases: Damages 15. C.J.S. Damages §§ 21–22.]

added damages. See punitive damages.

additional damages. Damages usu. provided by statute in addition to direct damages. • Additional damages can include expenses resulting from the injury, consequential damages, or punitive damages.

benefit-of-the-bargain damages. Damages that a breaching party to a contract must pay to the aggrieved party, equal to the amounts that the aggrieved party would have received, including profits, if the contract had been fully performed. — Also termed loss-of-bargain damages. [Cases: Damages 117.]

compensatory damages (k<<schwa>>m-pen-s<<schwa>>-tor-ee). 1. Damages sufficient in amount to indemnify the injured person for the loss suffered. — Often shortened to compensatories. 2. See actual damages. [Cases: Damages 15. C.J.S. Damages §§ 21–22.]

consequential damages. Losses that do not flow directly and immediately from an injurious act but that result indirectly from the act. [Cases: Damages 15–25. C.J.S. Damages §§ 21–38, 42; Parent and Child § 344.]

contemptuous damages. See nominal damages.

continuing damages. 1. Damages arising from the same injury. 2. Damages arising from the repetition of similar acts within a definite period.

cosmetic damages. The amount awarded to compensate for personal disfigurement.

damages for lost expectations. See expectation damages.

damages ultra (<<schwa>>l-tr<<schwa>>). Additional damages claimed by a plaintiff who is not satisfied with the amounts the defendant paid into court.

direct damages. See general damages.

discretionary damages. Damages (such as mental anguish or pain and suffering) that are not precisely measurable but are determined by the subjective judgment of a jury. — Also termed indeterminate damages.

double damages. Damages that, by statute, are twice the amount that the fact-finder determines is owed or twice the amount of actual damages awarded. • In some cases, double damages are awarded in addition to actual damages, so the effect is the same as treble damages. [Cases: Damages 227. C.J.S. Damages §§ 218–219, 383.]

enhanced damages. 1. See accumulative damages. 2. Patents. Damages for patent infringement in an amount up to three times that of compensatory damages, at the discretion of the court, based on the egregiousness of the defendant's conduct, including the willfulness of the infringement. [Cases: Patents 319(3). C.J.S. Patents § 569.]

estimated damages. See liquidated damages.

excess damages. Damages awarded to an insured — beyond the coverage provided by an insurance policy — because the insurer did not settle the claim within policy limits. • If the insurer acted in bad faith in not settling, the insured may have a claim to recover the excess damages from the insurer. — Also termed excess-liability damages. [Cases: Insurance 3350. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1160–1163, 1342.]

excessive damages. A jury award that grossly exceeds the amount warranted by law based on the facts and circumstances of the case; unreasonable or outrageous damages, which are subject to reduction by remittitur. See REMITTITUR. [Cases: Damages 127–140. C.J.S. Damages §§ 384–385, 387–394; Parent and Child § 344.]

exemplary damages. See punitive damages.

expectation damages. Compensation awarded for the loss of what a person reasonably anticipated from a transaction that was not completed. — Also termed expectancy damages; lost-expectation damages; damages for lost expectations. [Cases: Damages 23. C.J.S. Damages §§ 28–33.]

fee damages. Damages awarded to the owner of abutting property for injury caused by the construction and operation of an elevated railroad. • The term is used because the damage is to the property owner's easements of light, air, and access, which are parts of the fee.

foreseeable damages. Damages that a breaching party knew or should have known would result from a breach when the contract was made. [Cases: Damages 21. C.J.S. Damages §§ 30–33.]

future damages. Money awarded to an injured party for an injury's residual or projected effects, such as those that reduce the person's ability to function. • Examples are expected pain and suffering, loss or impairment of earning capacity, and projected medical expenses. [Cases: Damages 25. C.J.S. Damages § 42.]

general damages. Damages that the law presumes follow from the type of wrong complained of; specif., compensatory damages for harm that so frequently results from the tort for which a party has sued that the harm is reasonably expected and need not be alleged or proved. • General damages do not need to be specifically claimed. — Also termed direct damages; necessary damages. [Cases: Damages 5. C.J.S. Damages §§ 3–6.]

gross damages. The total damages found before adjustments and offsets.

hedonic damages (hi-don-ik). Damages that attempt to compensate for the loss of the pleasure of being alive. • Such damages are not allowed in most jurisdictions. — Also termed (erroneously) hedonistic damages. [Cases: Damages 48–56.20. C.J.S. Damages §§ 94–104; Parent and Child § 344; Torts §§ 66–83.]

imaginary damages. See punitive damages.

inadequate damages. Damages insufficient to fully and fairly compensate the parties; damages bearing no reasonable relation to the plaintiff's injuries, indicating prejudice, mistake, or other fact to support setting aside a jury's verdict. [Cases: Damages 127–140. C.J.S. Damages §§ 384–385, 387–394; Parent and Child § 344.]

incidental damages. 1. Losses reasonably associated with or related to actual damages. 2. A seller's commercially reasonable expenses incurred in stopping delivery or in transporting and caring for goods after a buyer's breach. UCC § 2-710. [Cases: Sales 384(4).] 3. A buyer's expenses reasonably incurred in caring for goods after a seller's breach. UCC § 2-715(1). [Cases: Sales 418(19). C.J.S. Sales §§ 396, 400–401, 404–405.]

“What are incidental damages? The Code does not define incidental damages; rather 2–715(1) lists many expenses that are included as incidental damages. However, Comment 1 to 2–715 stresses that those listed ‘are not intended to be exhaustive’ but are merely illustrative of the typical kinds of incidental expenses that can be recovered under 2–715: (1) those associated with rightful rejection (for instance, inspection and storage); (2) those associated with a proper revocation of acceptance; and (3) those involved in effecting cover.” 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 10-3, at 561–62 (4th ed. 1995).

indeterminate damages. See discretionary damages.

intervening damages. Continuing damages that accrue during the pendency and prosecution of an unsuccessful appeal. • A lower court may include intervening damages in an award.

irreparable damages (i-rep-r-b*l*). Damages that cannot be easily ascertained because there is no fixed pecuniary standard of measurement, e.g., damages for a repeated public nuisance. — Also termed nonpecuniary damages.

land damages. See just compensation under COMPENSATION.

lawful damages. Those damages fixed by law and ascertained in a court of law.

liquidated damages. An amount contractually stipulated as a reasonable estimation of actual damages to be recovered by one party if the other party breaches. • If the parties to a contract have properly agreed on liquidated damages, the sum fixed is the measure of damages for a breach, whether it exceeds or falls short of the actual damages. — Also termed stipulated damages; estimated damages. See LIQUIDATED-DAMAGES CLAUSE. Cf. unliquidated damages; PENALTY CLAUSE. [Cases: Damages 74–84. C.J.S. Damages §§ 175–179, 184–194.]

“Where the terms of a contract specify a sum payable for non-performance, it is a question of construction whether this sum is to be treated as a penalty or as liquidated damages. The difference in effect is this: The amount recoverable in case of a penalty is not the sum named, but the damage actually incurred. The amount recoverable as liquidated damages is the sum named as such. In construing these terms a judge will not accept the phraseology of the parties; they may call the sum specified ‘liquidated damages,’ but if the judge finds it to be a penalty, he will treat it as such.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 470 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“The distinction between a penalty and genuine liquidated damages, as they are called, is not always easy to apply, but the Courts have made the task simpler by laying down certain guiding principles. In the first place, if the sum payable is so large as to be far in excess of the probable damage on breach, it is almost certainly a penalty. Secondly, if the same sum is expressed to be payable on any one of a number of different breaches of varying importance, it is again probably a penalty, because it is extremely unlikely that the same damage would be caused by these varying breaches. Thirdly, where a sum is expressed to be payable on a certain date, and a further sum in the event of default being made, this latter sum is prima facie a penalty, because mere delay in payment is unlikely to cause damage. Finally, it is to be noted that the mere use of the words ‘liquidated damages’ is not decisive, for it is the task of the Court and not of the parties to decide the true nature of the sum payable.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 316–17 (3d ed. 1981).

loss-of-bargain damages. See benefit-of-the-bargain damages.

lost-expectation damages. See expectation damages.

moratory damages (mor-<<schwa>>-tor-ee or mahr-). Civil law. Damages for a delay in performing an obligation. La. Civ. Code arts. 1989, 1994. • There must be a default before these damages can be recovered, while compensatory damages are recoverable both for a failure of performance and for a defective performance.

multiple damages. Statutory damages (such as double or treble damages) that are a multiple of the amount that the fact-finder determines to be owed. — Also termed multiplied damages. See double damages; treble damages. [Cases: Damages 227. C.J.S. Damages §§ 218–219, 383.]

“[T]he statutory multiple damages differ from the common law punitive damages in that punitive damages involved no fixed sum or limit. The fixed limit of multiple damages not only reduces their threat to the defendant and the potential for abuse, it also reduces the possibility of a measured deterrence. Likewise, because the enhancement of the award is fixed by the statutory multiple, there is no occasion for introducing evidence of the defendant's wealth as there is in the case of common law punitive damages Perhaps a more important distinction is that multiple damages statutes may be enacted for entirely non-punitive purposes. Specifically, some double or treble damages statutes, and also specified ‘civil penalties,’ are intended to provide a kind of liquidated damages for actual losses that cannot be proved or that are otherwise unrecognized by the law.” Dan B. Dobbs, Law of Remedies § 3.12, at 359 (2d ed. 1993).

necessary damages. See general damages.

nominal damages. 1. A trifling sum awarded when a legal injury is suffered but when there is no substantial loss or injury to be compensated. 2. A small amount fixed as damages for breach of contract without regard to the amount of harm. — Also termed contemptuous damages. Cf. substantial damages. [Cases: Damages 8–14. C.J.S. Damages §§ 3, 12–20.]

“Nominal damages are damages awarded for the infraction of a legal right, where the extent of the loss is not shown, or where the right is one not dependent upon loss or damage, as in the case of rights of bodily immunity or rights to have one's material property undisturbed by direct invasion. The award of nominal damages is made as a judicial declaration that the plaintiff's right has been violated." Charles T. McCormick, Handbook on the Law of Damages § 20, at 85 (1935).

"Nominal damages are awarded if the plaintiff establishes a breach of contract or a tort of the kind that is said to be 'actionable per se' but fails to establish a loss caused by the wrong. In the case of tort not actionable per se as, for example, negligence, if the plaintiff fails to establish a loss, the action will be dismissed. The practical significance of a judgment for nominal damages is that the plaintiff thereby establishes a legal right. The judgment has the effect of a declaration of legal rights and may deter future infringements or may enable the plaintiff to obtain an injunction to restrain a repetition of the wrong. The obtaining of nominal damages will also, in many cases, entitle a plaintiff to costs [Also,] nominal damages might serve as a peg upon which to hang an award of exemplary damages." S.M. Waddams, The Law of Damages 477–78 (3d ed. 1997).

nonpecuniary damages.Damages that cannot be measured in money. See irreparable damages.

particular damages.See special damages.

pecuniary damages (p<<schwa>>-kyoo-nee-er-ee). Damages that can be estimated and monetarily compensated. • Although this phrase appears in many old cases, it is now widely considered a redundancy — since damages are always pecuniary.

permanent damages.Damages for past, present, and future harm that cannot be avoided or remedied.

presumptive damages.See punitive damages.

prospective damages.Future damages that, based on the facts pleaded and proved by the plaintiff, can reasonably be expected to occur. [Cases: Damages 25. C.J.S. Damages § 42.]

proximate damages.Damages directly, immediately, and naturally flowing from the act complained of. Cf. speculative damages (1). [Cases: Damages 18. C.J.S. Damages §§ 23–25, 27.]

punitive damages.Damages awarded in addition to actual damages when the defendant acted with recklessness, malice, or deceit; specif., damages assessed by way of penalizing the wrongdoer or making an example to others. • Punitive damages, which are intended to punish and thereby deter blameworthy conduct, are generally not recoverable for breach of contract. The Supreme Court has held that three guidelines help determine whether a punitive-damages award violates constitutional due process: (1) the reprehensibility of the conduct being punished; (2) the reasonableness of the relationship between the harm and the award; and (3) the difference between the award and the civil penalties authorized in comparable cases. BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 116 S.Ct. 1589 (1996). — Also termed exemplary damages; vindictive damages; punitory damages; presumptive damages; added damages; aggravated damages; speculative damages; imaginary damages; smart money; punies. [Cases: Damages 87–94. C.J.S. Damages §§ 183, 195–217.]

“Although compensatory damages and punitive damages are typically awarded at the same time by the same decisionmaker, they serve distinct purposes. The former are intended to redress the concrete loss that the plaintiff has suffered by reason of the defendant's wrongful conduct. The latter, which have been described as ‘quasi-criminal,’ operate as ‘private fines’ intended to punish the defendant and to deter future wrongdoing. A jury's assessment of the extent of a plaintiff's injuries is essentially a factual determination, whereas its imposition of punitive damages is an expression of its moral condemnation.” Cooper Indus. v. Leatherman Tool, 532 U.S. 424, 432, 121 S.Ct. 1678, 1683 (2001)(per Stephens, J.).

real damages.See actual damages.

reliance damages.Damages awarded for losses incurred by the plaintiff in reliance on the contract. [Cases: Damages 22.]

“Reliance damages are ... ‘real’ losses in a much more tangible way than losses of expectations. The distinction is nicely illustrated by McRae v. Commonwealth Disposals Commission.... In this case, ... the defendants sold a shipwrecked tanker which they advertised as lying on a certain reef in the Pacific, and the plaintiffs spent a substantial sum of money equipping a salvage expedition to go in search of the ship. The ship was wholly non-existent, and the plaintiffs were held entitled to damages. Here it was clear that the plaintiffs had incurred substantial expenses — real losses — in reliance on the contract, and the Australian High Court awarded these reliance damages to the plaintiffs.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 311 (3d ed. 1981).

reliance-loss damages.A reimbursement for losses or expenses that the plaintiff suffers in reliance on the defendant's contractual promise that has been breached.

remote damages.See speculative damages (1).

rescissory damages (ri-sis-<<schwa>>-ree or ri-siz-). Damages contemplated to restore a plaintiff to the position occupied before the defendant's wrongful acts.

restitution damages.Damages awarded to a plaintiff when the defendant has been unjustly enriched at the plaintiff's expense.

“Suppose A pays money to B in pursuance of a contract which turns out to be void, or perhaps is subsequently frustrated: clearly A cannot sue B for breach of contract. B's promise to perform his side of the bargain is vitiated by the mistake or the frustrating event, so A's lost expectations are losses which he must just put up with. But his claim to repayment of the money is evidently much stronger: for this money is a tangible loss to A and a tangible enrichment to B. So in this sort of case the money will often be recoverable, though English lawyers think of this as a quasi-contractual claim to recover money as on a total failure of consideration, and not a contractual claim to restitution damages. There is, however, no strong reason for refusing to call this a contractual action, any more than there is a reason for calling an action for damages quasi-contractual.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 312 (3d ed. 1981).

severance damages.In a condemnation case, damages awarded to a property owner for diminution in the fair market value of land as a result of severance from the land of the property actually condemned; compensation awarded to a landowner for the loss in value of the tract that remains after a partial taking of the land. [Cases: Eminent Domain 95–96. C.J.S. Eminent Domain §§ 84, 86, 105, 126–127, 142, 147, 152–153.]

special damages. Damages that are alleged to have been sustained in the circumstances of a particular wrong. • To be awardable, special damages must be specifically claimed and proved. — Often shortened to specials. — Also termed particular damages. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(g). [Cases: Damages 5. C.J.S. Damages §§ 3–6.]

speculative damages. 1. Damages that are so uncertain to occur that they will not be awarded. — Also termed remote damages. 2. See punitive damages.

statutory damages. Damages provided by statute (such as a wrongful-death-and-survival statute), as distinguished from damages provided under the common law. [Cases: Death 80.]

stipulated damages. See liquidated damages.

substantial damages. A considerable sum awarded to compensate for a significant loss or injury. Cf. nominal damages. [Cases: Damages 6, 10. C.J.S. Damages §§ 38–41, 299.]

“Substantial damages ... are the result of an effort at measured compensation, and are to be contrasted with nominal damages which are in no sense compensatory, but merely symbolic.” Charles T. McCormick, Handbook on the Law of Damages § 20, at 85 (1935).

tangible damages. See actual damages.

temperate damages. Rare. Reasonable damages.

temporary damages. Damages allowed for an intermittent or occasional wrong, such as a real-property injury whose cause can be removed or abated. [Cases: Damages 39. C.J.S. Damages § 57.]

treble damages. Damages that, by statute, are three times the amount that the fact-finder determines is owed. — Also termed triple damages. [Cases: Damages 227. C.J.S. Damages §§ 218–219, 383.]

uncertain damages. Damages that are not clearly the result of a wrong. • The rule against allowing recovery of uncertain damages refers to these damages, not damages that are uncertain only in amount. [Cases: Damages 6. C.J.S. Damages §§ 38–41, 299.]

unliquidated damages. Damages that cannot be determined by a fixed formula and must be established by a judge or jury. Cf. liquidated damages. [Cases: Damages 1, 6, 194. C.J.S. Damages §§ 1–2, 4–6, 38–41, 299.]

vindictive damages. See punitive damages.

DAMAGES, MITIGATION OF

damages, mitigation of. See MITIGATION-OF-DAMAGES DOCTRINE.

DAMAGES CLAUSE

damages clause. See SURFACE-DAMAGE CLAUSE.

DAMAGES FOR DETENTION

damages for detention. See noncontract demurrage under DEMURRAGE.

DAME

dame. 1. The legal title of the wife of a knight or baronet. 2. The female equivalent of a knight. 3. A form of address to a woman of high rank. 4. A matron. 5. Slang. A woman. — Also termed (in senses 1 & 2) domina.

DAMNA

damna (dam-n<<schwa>>), n. [fr. Latin damnum “damage; loss”] Hist. 1. Damages, exclusive of costs. 2. Damages, inclusive of costs. 3. The abbreviation of damna clericorum, the Latin equivalent to damage-clear, being a portion of damages constituting the clerk's fee. See DAMAGE-CLEER.

DAMNA CLERICORUM

damna clericorum (dam-n<<schwa>> kler-<<schwa>>-kor-<<schwa>>m), n. See DAMAGE-CLEER R.

DAMNATUS

damnatus (dam-nay-t<<schwa>>s), n. [fr. Latin damnare “to condemn”] 1. Roman law. A person condemned, esp. in a capital case. 2. Hist. Something prohibited by law; something that is unlawful, as in damnatus coitus (“unlawful sexual connection”).

DAMN-FOOL DOCTRINE

damn-fool doctrine. Insurance. The principle that an insurer may deny (esp. liability) coverage when an insured engages in behavior that is so ill-conceived that the insurer should not be compelled to bear the loss resulting from the insured's actions. — Also termed damned-fool doctrine.

“The ‘damn foolish acts’ concept is not a perfect predictor of judicial decisions, both because of its own imprecision and because other considerations, such as a desire to assure an innocent third party a source of indemnification, may influence a court. However, especially when ... the insured who acted foolishly has sufficient resources to provide compensation to the injured persons, analysis of a coverage issue on the basis of a ‘damn fool’ doctrine is frequently a very effective approach both to predicting and to understanding outcomes.” Robert E. Keeton & Alan I. Widiss, Insurance Law: A Guide to Fundamental Principles, Legal Doctrines, and Commercial Practices § 5.4, at 541 (1988).

damnification, n. Something that causes damage <damnification in the form of a penalty>.

DAMNIFY

damnify, vb. To cause loss or damage to; to injure <the surety was damnified by the judgment obtained against it>.

DAMNI INJURIA ACTIO

damni injuria actio (dam-nĭ in-joor-ee-<<schwa>> ak-shee-oh). [Latin “an action for wrongful damage”] See actio damni injuria under ACTIO.

DAMNOSA AUT LUCROSA

damnosa aut lucrosa (dam-noh-s<<schwa>> awt loo-kroh-s<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. Disadvantageous or advantageous. • The heir to a succession had to determine whether it was hurtful or advantageous to him to take up the estate before actually doing so. See ANNUS DELIBERANDI.

DAMNOSA HEREDITAS

damnosa hereditas (dam-noh-s<<schwa>> h<<schwa>>-red-i-tas), n. [Latin “an injurious inheritance”] 1. Roman & civil law. An inheritance more onerous than beneficial, esp. because it is burdened with debt. 2. English law. A bankrupt debtor's property that creditors will disclaim under the bankruptcy laws because debt on the property will exceed revenues. 3. Generally, anything that is acquired but turns out to be disadvantageous. — Also spelled damnosa haereditas.

DAMNOUS

damnous (dam-n<<schwa>>s), adj. Causing loss or damage.

DAMNO VITANDO

damno vitando. See CERTANS DE DAMNO VITANDO; IN DAMNO VITANDO.

DAMNUM

damnum (dam-n<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] A loss; damage suffered. Pl. damna.

DAMNUM ABSQUE INJURIA

damnum absque injuria (dam-n<<schwa>>m ab-skwee in-joor-ee-<<schwa>>). See DAMNUM SINE INJURIA.

DAMNUM EMERGENS

damnum emergens (dam-n<<schwa>>m i-m<<schwa>>r-jenz). [Latin “damage arising”] Hist. An actual realized loss (such as a decline in the value of property) as opposed to an expected future loss (such as loss of profit); consequential loss.

“These kinds of damage are distinguished by the commentators as damnum emergens and lucrum cessans, which may be rendered ‘positive damage’ and ‘loss of profit.’ The first may be immediate (e.g., my slave is killed or has lost an eye), or consequential (I have lost his services — I have incurred medical expenses — he was one of a troupe of singers and the whole troupe is less valuable in consequence of his death or injury). Where there is no pecuniary loss there is no action. An action does not lie ... for striking a slave if his value to me has not been depreciated by the blow nor for trespass to land unattended by damage.” R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 394 (4th ed. 1956).

DAMNUM ET INTERESSE

damnum et interesse (dam-n<<schwa>>m et in-t<<schwa>>r-es-ee). [Latin] Scots law. The loss and damage sustained.

DAMNUM FACIENTES

damnum facientes (dam-n<<schwa>>m fay-shee-en-teez), n. See DAMAGE FEASANT.

DAMNUM FATALE

damnum fatale (dam-n<<schwa>>m f<<schwa>>-tay-lee). [Latin “unavoidable damage”] Roman law. Damage caused by an unavoidable circumstance, such as a storm or a shipwreck, for which bailees or others will not be held liable. • But an exception was made for damages resulting from theft.

“The liability of innkeepers, carriers, and stable keepers, at Roman law, was provided for in the praetor's edict. They were under an obligation to restore all goods which the guests or passengers had with them, or left in their charge, and they could not defend themselves by showing the utmost degree of diligence. Unavoidable accident, which no human prudence would avert or provide against, damnum fatale, or overwhelming force, vis maior, were, however, an adequate defense It was particularly noted that theft by a third person would not be permitted as a defense and the reason assigned was the fact that travelers have scarcely any chance to protect themselves against collusion between the innkeeper and the thief.” Max Radin, Handbook of Roman Law 254 (1927).

DAMNUM INFECTUM

damnum infectum (dam-n<<schwa>>m in-fek-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. Loss not yet suffered but threatened or apprehended, as when a neighbor's building is likely to collapse onto one's property.

DAMNUM INJURIA DATUM

damnum injuria datum (dam-n<<schwa>>m in-joor-ee-<<schwa>> day-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. Willful or negligent damage to corporeal property; damage for which compensation was given under the Aquilian law. • In this phrase, the word damnum refers to economic loss, not the physical damage (if any). See actio legis Aquiliae under ACTIO.

DAMNUM SINE INJURIA

damnum sine injuria (dam-n<<schwa>>m sI-nee in-joor-ee-<<schwa>> orsin-ay). [Latin “damage without wrongful act”] Loss or harm that is incurred from something other than a wrongful act and occasions no legal remedy. • An example is a loss from fair trade competition. — Also termed damnum absque injuria; absque injuria damnum; absque injuria. Cf. INJURIA ABSQUE DAMNO. [Cases: Damages 3. C.J.S. Damages § 7.]

“There are cases in which the law will suffer a man knowingly and wilfully to inflict harm upon another, and will not hold him accountable for it. Harm of this description — mischief that is not wrongful because it does not fulfil even the material conditions of responsibility — is called damnum sine injuria, the term injuria being here used in its true sense of an act contrary to law (in jus), not in its modern and corrupt sense of harm.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 372–73 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“There are many forms of harm of which the law takes no account. Damage so done and suffered is called damnum sine injuria, and the reasons for its permission by the law are various and not capable of exhaustive statement. For example, the harm done may be caused by some person who is merely exercising his own rights; as in the case of the loss inflicted on individual traders by competition in trade, or where the damage is done by a man acting under necessity to prevent a greater evil.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 13 (17th ed. 1977).

DAN

Dan (dan), n.[fr. Latin dominus] Archaic. In England, an honorable title for a man; the English equivalent of the Spanish Don. • The term was replaced by the terms Master, Mister, and Sir.

D & O LIABILITY INSURANCE

D & O liability insurance. See directors' and officers' liability insurance under INSURANCE.

danelaw (dayn-law). Hist. 1. A system of rules, introduced by the Danes during their invasions of England primarily in the ninth century and maintained principally in the midland and eastern counties where the invasions occurred. • Danelaw was the prevailing law in these regions from the reign of King Edgar to Edward the Confessor, who compiled a uniform law that included some Danelaw components. 2. The counties in England where the Danish law was enforced primarily in the ninth and tenth centuries. — Also termed danelage; lex Danorum; denelage.

“The Danish invasions of the ninth century subjected the eastern parts of the island to new Scandinavian influences. Where the Danes conquered, their ‘Danelaw’ prevailed. The very word ‘law’ is believed to have been given to the English language by the Danes.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 3 (3d ed. 1990).

danger. 1. Peril; exposure to harm, loss, pain, or other negative result. 2. A cause of peril; a menace.

apparent danger. 1. Obvious danger; real danger. — Also termed patent danger. 2. Criminal law. The perceived danger in one person's actions toward another, as a result of which it seems necessary for the threatened person to use force in self-defense. See SELF-DEFENSE. [Cases: Homicide 787.]

deterrent danger. An obvious danger that an occupier of land creates to discourage trespassers, such as a barbed-wire fence or spikes on the top of a wall.

extraordinary danger. See extraordinary hazard under HAZARD.

imminent danger. 1. An immediate, real threat to one's safety that justifies the use of force in self-defense. 2. Criminal law. The danger resulting from an immediate threatened injury sufficient to cause a reasonable and prudent person to defend himself or herself. [Cases: Homicide 789.]

patent danger. See apparent danger (1).

retributive danger. A concealed danger that an occupier of land creates to injure trespassers. • A retributive danger is lawful only to the extent that it could be justified if the occupier had inflicted the injury personally or directly to the trespasser. Thus, a spring gun or a land mine is an unlawful means of defending land against a trespasser.

seeming danger. Danger that a reasonable person would perceive to be real, even if it is not.

unavoidable danger. 1. Inescapable danger. 2. A danger that is unpreventable, esp. by a person operating a vessel.

DANGER-CREATION DOCTRINE danger-creation doctrine. The theory that if a state's affirmative conduct places a person in jeopardy, then the state may be liable for the harm inflicted on that person by a third party. • This is an exception to the general principle that the state is not liable for an injury that a third party inflicts on a member of the public. — Also termed danger-creation exception. Cf. SPECIAL-RELATIONSHIP DOCTRINE. [Cases: States 112.2(1).]

dangeria, n. Hist. Payment by forest tenants to the lord so that they can plow and sow in the same season as pannage. See PANNAGE.

DANGER-INVITES-RESCUE DOCTRINE danger-invites-rescue doctrine. See RESCUE DOCTRINE.

DANGER OF NAVIGATION

danger of navigation. See PERIL OF THE SEA.

DANGER OF RIVER

danger of river. See PERIL OF THE SEA.

DANGER OF THE SEA

danger of the sea. See PERIL OF THE SEA.

dangerous, adj. 1. (Of a condition, situation, etc.) perilous; hazardous; unsafe . 2. (Of a person, an object, etc.) likely to cause serious bodily harm  .

imminently dangerous. (Of a person, behavior, activity, or thing) reasonably certain to place life and limb in peril. • This term is relevant in several legal contexts. For example, if a mental condition renders a person imminently dangerous to self or others, he or she may be committed to a mental hospital. And the imminently dangerous behavior of pointing a gun at someone's head could subject the actor to criminal and tort liability. Further, the manufacturer of an imminently dangerous product may be held to a strict-liability standard in tort.

inherently dangerous. (Of an activity or thing) requiring special precautions at all times to avoid injury; dangerous per se. See DANGEROUS INSTRUMENTALITY; INHERENTLY DANGEROUS ACTIVITY.

DANGEROUS CONDITION

dangerous condition. See CONDITION(4).

DANGEROUS CONDUCT

dangerous conduct. See unreasonably dangerous conduct under CONDUCT.

DANGEROUS CRIMINAL

dangerous criminal. See CRIMINAL.

DANGEROUS DRUG

dangerous drug. See DRUG.

DANGEROUS EXPOSURE

dangerous exposure. See EXPOSURE.

DANGEROUS INSTRUMENTALITY dangerous instrumentality. An instrument, substance, or condition so inherently dangerous that it may cause serious bodily injury or death without human use or interference. • It may serve as the basis for strict liability. See ATTRACTIVE-NUISANCE DOCTRINE. Cf. deadly weapon under WEAPON. [Cases: Negligence 305–307, 1172–1178. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 170, 176–179, 399, 476–477, 494–526.]

DANGEROUS LUNATIC

dangerous lunatic. See LUNATIC.

DANGEROUS OCCUPATION

dangerous occupation. See OCCUPATION.

DANGEROUS-PROPENSITY TEST dangerous-propensity test. See DANGEROUS-TENDENCY TEST.

DANGEROUS-PROXIMITY TEST dangerous-proximity test. Criminal law. A common-law test for the crime of attempt, focusing on whether the defendant is dangerously close to completing the offense. • Factors include the gravity of the potential crime, the apprehension of the victim, and the uncertainty of the crime's occurrence. See ATTEMPT(2). [Cases: Criminal Law 44. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 114–123.]

DANGEROUS SITUATION

dangerous situation. Under the last-clear-chance doctrine, the circumstance in which a plaintiff operating a motor vehicle has reached a perilous position (as on the path of an oncoming train) that cannot be escaped by the exercise of ordinary care. — Also termed situation of danger. See LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Automobiles 227. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 963–970.]

DANGEROUS-TENDENCY TEST dangerous-tendency test. A propensity of a person or animal to inflict injury. • The test is used, esp. in dog-bite cases, to determine whether an owner will be held liable for injuries caused by the owner's animal. — Also termed dangerous-propensity test. [Cases: Animals 70. C.J.S. Animals §§ 172, 176–183, 186, 188–189, 198, 200.]

DANGEROUS WEAPON

dangerous weapon. See WEAPON.

DANGER-UTILITY TEST

danger-utility test. See RISK-UTILITY TEST.

on usury.

DARDEN<TT> HEARING

Darden hearing. Criminal procedure. An ex parte proceeding to determine whether disclosure of an informer's identity is pertinent to establishing probable cause when there is otherwise insufficient evidence to establish probable cause apart from the arresting officer's testimony about an informer's communications. • The defense attorney may be excluded from the hearing but can usu. submit questions to be used by the judge in the examination. People v. Darden, 313 N.E.2d 49 (N.Y. 1974). [Cases: Criminal Law 627.10. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 533–540.]

dare (dair-ee), vb. [Latin “to give”] Roman law. 1. To give; to transfer (something, esp. property). • The transfer can be made to discharge a debt, to create an obligation, or to make a gift. 2. To appoint a representative.

DARE AD REMANENTIAM

dare ad remanentiam (dair-ee ad rem-<<schwa>>-nen-shee-<<schwa>>m), vb. [Latin “to give in fee or forever”] To transfer (esp. a remainder) in fee or forever.

DARPA

darraign (d<<schwa>>-rayn), vb. [fr. Latin derationare; fr. French disrener] Hist. 1. To displace; to disarrange. 2. To respond to an accusation; to settle a dispute. — Also spelled deraigh; dereyne.

DARREIN

darrein (dar-ayn), adj. [fr. French dernier “the last”] The last, as in darrein presentment (“the last presentment”). See DARREIN CONTINUANCE; assize of darrein presentment under ASSIZE(8).

DARREIN CONTINUANCE

darrein continuance (dar-ayn k<<schwa>>n-tin-yoo-<<schwa>>nts), n. [fr. French dernier continuance “the last continuance”] Hist. Every plea of a new matter after the last entry of a plea on the record. • Every entry of a pleading after the first pleading on the record was called a continuance. — Also spelled dareyne continuance.

DARREIN PRESENTMENT

darrein presentment (dar-ayn pri-zent-m<<schwa>>nt), n. See assize of darrein presentment under ASSIZE(8).

DARREIN SEISIN

darrein seisin (dar-ayn see-zin), n.[French "last seisin"] Hist. A tenant's plea in a writ of right. See SEISIN.

database. A compilation of information arranged in a systematic way and offering a means of finding specific elements it contains, often today by electronic means. • Unless the information itself is original, a database is not protected by U.S. copyright law. Elsewhere, it may be protected as a distinct class of "literary works," or it may be the subject of sui generis intellectual-property laws. See SWEAT-OF-THE-BROW DOCTRINE. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 12(3).]

DATABASE DIRECTIVE

Database Directive.See DIRECTIVE ON THE LEGAL PROTECTION OF DATABASES.

DATA PROTECTION

data protection.Any method of securing information, esp. information stored on a computer, from being either physically lost or seen by an unauthorized person.

date. 1. The day when an event happened or will happen <date of trial>.2. A period of time in general <at a later date>.3. An appointment at a specified time <no dates are available>.

answer date.See answer day under DAY.

appearance date.See answer day under DAY.

date of bankruptcy.Bankruptcy. The date when a court declares a person to be bankrupt; the date of bankruptcy adjudication. • This date may coincide with the voluntary-filing date. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2202.]

date of cleavage.Bankruptcy. The filing date of a voluntary-bankruptcy petition. • With a few exceptions, only the debts existing at this time are dischargeable.

date of injury.Torts. The inception date of an injury; the date of an accident causing an injury.

date of invention.Patents. For purposes of a patent application, the date when the creation was reduced to practice. • If the invention has not been built, the date of invention is the date when the patent application is filed, since that is a constructive reduction to practice.

date of issue. 1.Commercial law. An arbitrary date (for notes, bonds, and other documents in a series) fixed as the beginning of the term for which they run; the date that a stock or bond bears on its face, not the date on which it is actually signed, delivered, or put into circulation. • When a bond is delivered to a purchaser, it is considered "issued." But this concept is distinguishable from the "date of issue," which remains fixed, regardless of the date of sale or delivery. 2.Insurance. The date specified in the policy as the "date of issue," not the date on which the policy is executed or delivered, and regardless of other dates that may be specified in the policy or elsewhere, such as the date that the policy is to “take effect.” [Cases: Insurance 3125(5). C.J.S. Insurance § 852.]

date of maturity.Commercial law. The date when a debt falls due, such as a debt on a promissory note or bond. [Cases: Bills and Notes 129. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 86–89, 91–99.]

declaration date.Corporations. The date when corporate directors declare a dividend. Cf. DIVIDEND DATE; EX-DIVIDEND DATE. [Cases: Corporations 152. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 295–299.]

dividend date.See DIVIDEND DATE.

effective filing date.Patents. The date that a patent application is considered to have been filed. • The actual filing date may be later, as for a continuing application. But under the doctrine of continuity, the child application is usu. entitled to the filing date of the parent application to prove priority. — Also termed parent filing date. See CONTINUITY. [Cases: Patents 110. C.J.S. Patents § 156.]

filing date. 1. Generally, the date when any document is delivered to the appropriate authority. 2.Patents. The date when a patent application is filed. • The filing date closes the door on prior art; starts the clock on the period of eligibility to file in other countries; sets the priority date for public use, disclosure, or sale; and (absent other evidence) establishes the date of constructive reduction to practice. 3.Trademarks. The date when a trademark application is filed.

parent filing date.See effective filing date.

payable date.Corporations. The official date on which shareholder dividends or distributions become payable. — Also termed record date.

payment date.Corporations. The date on which stock dividends or interest checks are paid to shareholders.

priority date.Patents. The date that will determine which applicant in an interference proceeding will get a patent. • The priority date is also the cutoff date for prior art. In the United States the priority date is the date of invention; in the rest of the world it is the date on which the patent application was filed. See FIRST-TO-FILE SYSTEM; FIRST-TO-INVENT SYSTEM.

record date.Corporations. The date on which a stockholder must own shares to be entitled to vote or receive a dividend. — Also termed date of record. See EX-DIVIDEND DATE. [Cases: Corporations 155(2), 194, 197. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 301, 364–367, 373, 375–378.]

settlement date.Securities. 1. The date on which an investor must pay the broker for securities purchased. 2. The date on which a seller must deliver negotiable certificates for securities sold.

submission date. 1. The date that a case is to be submitted to a court for determination. 2. The date on which an investor must pay the broker for securities purchased. 3. The date on which a seller must deliver negotiable certificates for securities sold.

DATE CERTAIN

date certain. A fixed or appointed day; a specified day, esp. a date fixed by an instrument such as a deed. Cf. TIME CERTAIN(1). — Also termed (in French law) date certaine (dat sair-tayn).

DATE OF RECORD

date of record. See record date under DATE.

DATE RAPE

date rape. See RAPE.

DATIO

datio (day-shee-oh), n. [fr. Latin dare “to give”] Roman law. 1. An act of giving, as in datio in solutum (“giving in payment”). 2. An appointment, as in datio tutoris (“appointment of a guardian”). Pl. dationes (day-shee-oh-nee-z).

DATIO IN SOLUTUM

datio in solutum (day-shee-oh in s<<schwa>>-l[y]oo-t<<schwa>>m). Roman law. The discharging of an obligation by the giving and acceptance of something other than the thing due.

DATION

dation (day-sh<<schwa>>n), n. [fr. Latin dare “to give”] Civil law. A grant of something the recipient is actually entitled to, such as an office.

DATION EN PAIEMENT

dation en paiement (day-sh<<schwa>>n in pay-m<<schwa>>nt or da-syon ahn pay-mon), n. [French “a giving in payment”] Civil law. 1. An exchange of something instead of money to satisfy a debt. See ACCORD AND SATISFACTION. [Cases: Accord and Satisfaction 13. C.J.S. Accord and Satisfaction §§ 25–27, 29.] 2. Louisiana law. A contract in which the obligor gives a thing to the obligee, who accepts it in payment of a debt. La. Civ. Code art. 2655. • Dation en paiement requires court approval after petition and notice. 3. A method of satisfying a mortgage debt by transferring the mortgaged property when the mortgage exceeds the property's value and the mortgage-holder is willing to accept the property in satisfaction of the debt. [Cases: Mortgages 304. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 451, 475.]

dative (day-tiv), n. [fr. French datif “of giving”] 1. Roman & civil law. An appointment made by judicial or magisterial authority; esp., something granted that is not provided by law or a will. • In Scotland, an executor-dative is a court-appointed executor. 2. Hist. Something that can be given or retracted at will, such as an appointment to a nonperpetual office. — Also spelled datif.

DATIVE CURATORSHIP

dative curatorship. See dative tutorship under TUTORSHIP.

DATIVE TUTORSHIP

datave tutorship. See TUTORSHIP.

DATUM

datum (day-t<<schwa>>m), n. [fr. Latin dare “to give”] 1. A piece of information. Pl. data. 2. Hist. Something given or executed. 3. A date.

DATUS BONIS

datus bonis (day-t<<schwa>>s boh-nis). [Latin] Scots law. (Of a person) appointed to manage an estate.

DAUBERT<TT> HEARING

Daubert hearing (dah-b<<schwa>>rt or doh-behr). A hearing conducted by federal district courts, usu. before trial, to determine whether proposed expert testimony meets the federal requirements for relevance and reliability, as clarified by the Supreme Court in Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharms., Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 113 S.Ct. 2786 (1993). [Cases: Evidence 508, 546, 555. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 527, 597–601, 609–610, 624–625, 627, 634, 649, 652, 677, 680, 682–684, 687–688, 713, 729.]

DAUBERT<TT> TEST

Daubert test. A method that federal district courts use to determine whether expert testimony is admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 702, which generally requires that expert testimony consist of scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge that will assist the fact-finder in understanding the evidence or determining a fact in issue. • In its role as “gatekeeper” of the evidence, the trial court must decide whether the proposed expert testimony meets the requirements of relevance and reliability. The court applies the test outside the jury's presence, usu. during a pretrial Daubert hearing. At the hearing, the proponent must show that the expert's underlying reasoning or methodology and its application to the facts are scientifically valid. In ruling on admissibility, the court considers a flexible list of factors, including (1) whether the theory can be or has been tested, (2) whether the theory has been subjected to peer review or publication, (3) the theory's known or potential rate of error and whether there are standards that control its operation, and (4) the degree to which the relevant scientific community has accepted the theory. Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharms., Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 113 S.Ct. 2786 (1993). Similar scrutiny must be applied to nonscientific expert testimony. Kumho Tire Co. v. Carmichael, 526 U.S. 137, 119 S.Ct. 1167 (1999). Variations of the Daubert test are applied in the trial courts of most states. [Cases: Evidence 508, 546, 555. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 527, 597–601, 609–610, 624–625, 627, 634, 649, 652, 677, 680, 682–684, 687–688, 713, 729.]

DAUGHTER

daughter. A parent's female child; a female child in a parent–child relationship.

DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

daughter-in-law. The wife of one's son.

DAVIS-BACON ACT

Davis-Bacon Act. A federal law originally enacted in 1931 to regulate the minimum-wage rates payable to employees of federal public-works projects. 40 USCA § 276a.

DAY

day. 1. Any 24-hour period; the time it takes the earth to revolve once on its axis <we have a day to prepare a mandamus petition>. [Cases: Time 8.C.J.S. Time §§ 8-10.] 2. The period between the rising and the setting of the sun <day or night>. — Also termed natural day. 3. Sunlight <we can see it in the day>. 4. The period when the sun is above the horizon, along with the period in the early morning and late evening when a person's face is discernible. 5. Any specified time period, esp. as distinguished from other periods <the good old days> . — Also termed (in senses 2-4) daytime. Cf. NIGHT.

adjournment day. 1. The day on which an organization, such as a court or legislature, adjourns. 2. Hist. A later day appointed by the judges at regular sittings at nisi prius to try an issue of fact not then ready for trial.

DEADBEAT

deadbeat. Slang. A person who does not pay debts or financial obligations (such as child-support payments, fines, and legal judgments), usu. with the suggestion that the person is also adept or experienced at evading creditors.

DEADBEAT DAD

deadbeat dad. Slang. A father who has not paid or who is behind in making child-support payments.

DEADBEAT MOM

deadbeat mom. Slang. 1. A mother who has not paid or who is behind in making child-support payments. • This term is used far less frequently than either deadbeat dad or deadbeat parent, probably because nearly ten times as many men as women fail to support (or are ordered to support) their children financially after divorce. 2. An able-bodied mother whose income is derived from welfare payments, not from gainful employment.

DEADBEAT PARENTS PUNISHMENT ACT

Deadbeat Parents Punishment Act. A 1998 federal statute that makes it a felony, punishable by up to two years in prison, for failure to pay child support if the obligor has crossed state lines in an attempt to avoid paying the support. • The Act provides felony penalties if (1) a person travels across state lines intending to evade a child-support obligation that is over $5,000 or that has remained unpaid longer than one year, or (2) a person willfully fails to pay support for a child living in a different state if that obligation is greater than $10,000 or if it remains unpaid for more than two years. The Act supersedes the Child Support Recovery Act of 1994. The greatest change in the new statute is the provision regarding the obligor's crossing of state lines in an effort to evade the support obligation. 42 USCA § 228. — Abbr. DPPA. See CHILD SUPPORT RECOVERY ACT OF 1994.

dead man's part. 1. Archaic. By custom in certain places, the portion of a dead man's estate set

“If the deceased leaves a widow and children, his substance ... is divided into three parts; one of which belongs to the widow, another to the children, and the third to the administrator: if only a widow, or only children, they shall respectively, in either case, take one moiety, and the administrator the other: if neither widow nor child, the administrator shall have the whole. And this portion, or dead man's part, the administrator was wont to apply to his own use, till the statute I Jac. II. c. 17 declared that the same should be subject to the statute of distributions.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 518 (1766).

“If a testator leaves neither wife nor child, he can give away the whole of his movable goods. If the testator leaves wife but no child, or child but no wife, his goods must, after his debts have been paid, be divided into two halves; one of these can be disposed of by his will, it is ‘the dead's part,’ the other belongs to the widow, or (as the case may be) to the child or children.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 349 (2d ed. 1899).

2.Scots law. The part of the movable estate that may be disposed of by will in any way the testator wishes; specif., the part of a dead man's personal estate not legally reserved for his spouse or children and capable of being bequeathed by will or falling upon intestacy to his next of kin. — Also termed dead's part.

DEAD MAN'S STATUTE

dead man's statute. A law prohibiting the admission of a decedent's statement as evidence in certain circumstances, as when an opposing party or witness seeks to use the statement to support a claim against the decedent's estate. — Also termed dead person's statute. [Cases: Witnesses 125.C.J.S. Witnesses § 215.]

DEAD MARRIAGE

de alode parentum (dee al-<<schwa>>-dee p*<<schwa>>-ren-t<<schwa>>*m). [Law Latin] Hist. From freehold of one's parents.

“De alode parentum. — Lands descending by inheritance from parents were said to be so acquired, in contradistinction to lands held in feu ... and to those acquired by a singular title. Subsequently the phrase acquired a more comprehensive signification, as all lands were, in process of time, termed allodial, in which the holder had a right of absolute property, without rendering any service therefor, or recognising any superior therein, and of which he had an unlimited power of disposal.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 137 (4th ed. 1894).

DE ALTO ET BASSO

de alto et basso (dee al-toh et bas-oh), n.[Law Latin “of high and low”] Hist. The total submission of all differences — great or small — to arbitration.

DE AMBITU

de ambitu (dee am-bi-tyoo). [Latin “of going around”] Of devious methods of securing a position, as through bribery. • Several Roman laws (such as the Lex Julia de Ambitu) dealt with these methods, such as prohibiting electoral bribery.

DE AMPLIORI GRATIA

de ampliori gratia (dee am-pli-or-Igray-shee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Of more abundant or more full grace.

DEAN

dean. 1.Eccles. law. An officer who leads a chapter, parish, or other subdivision of a diocese, usu. upon a bishop's request or appointment.

“A dean and chapter are the council of the bishop, to assist him with their advice in affairs of religion, and also in the temporal concerns of his see All ancient deans are elected by the chapter, by conge d'eslire from the king, and letters missive of recommendation; in the same manner as bishops: but in those chapters, that were founded by Henry VIII out of the spoils of the dissolved monasteries, the deanery is donative The chapter, consisting of canons or prebendaries, are sometimes appointed by the king, sometimes by the bishop, and sometimes elected by each other.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 370–71 (1765).

2. In a school, college, or university, the administrative or academic head. • In larger schools, there may be several kinds of deans, such as a dean of admissions and a dean of student affairs. DEATH death. The ending of life; the cessation of all vital functions and signs. — Also termed decease; demise.

accidental death. A death that results from an unusual event, one that was not voluntary, intended, expected, or foreseeable.

brain death. The bodily condition of showing no response to external stimuli, no spontaneous movements, no breathing, no reflexes, and a flat reading (usu. for a full day) on a machine that measures the brain's electrical activity. — Also termed legal death.

civil death. 1. Archaic. At common law, the loss of rights — such as the rights to vote, make contracts, inherit, and sue — by a person who has been outlawed or convicted of a serious crime, or who is considered to have left the temporal world for the spiritual by entering a monastery.

“In one large department of law the fiction [civil death] is elegantly maintained. A monk or nun can not acquire or have any proprietary rights. When a man becomes ‘professed in religion,’ his heir at once inherits from him any land that he has, and, if he has made a will, it takes effect at once as though he were naturally dead.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, History of English Law 434 (2d ed. 1898).

“Civil death arises from outlawry; it seems doubtful whether there are any other circumstances to which the phrase is now applicable.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 193 n.(b) (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

2. In some states, the loss of rights — such as the rights to vote and hold public office — by a person serving a life sentence. Cf. civil disability under DISABILITY(3). [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 31. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 28–30.] 3. The state of a corporation that has formally dissolved or become bankrupt, leaving an estate to be administered for the benefit of shareholders and creditors. — Also termed (in senses 2 & 3) legal death. [Cases: Corporations 617(1). C.J.S. Corporations § 852.]

compensable death. Workers' compensation. A death that, because it occurred in the course of employment, entitles the employee's heirs to compensation. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 408–510. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 245–287.]

death by one's own hand. See SUICIDE(1).

immediate death. 1. See instantaneous death. 2. A death occurring within a short time after an injury or seizure, but not instantaneously.

“A distinction has been made between ‘instantaneous’ and ‘immediate’ death As an example of ‘immediate’ rather than ‘instantaneous’ death ... the situation in which a blow on the head produces unconsciousness and renders the victim incapable of intelligent thought, speech, or action for several minutes until he dies.” 22A Am. Jur. 2d Death § 43, at 159 (1988).

instantaneous death. Death occurring in an instant or within an extremely short time after an injury or seizure. • It is a factor in determining an award of damages for the victim's pain and suffering. — Sometimes also termed immediate death.

“Although the possibility of a death that is truly simultaneous with the injury that caused it has been denied, it has been pointed out that death may be so contemporaneous with the fatal injury as to be instantaneous in the sense that there could be no recovery for the victim's pain and suffering. Ordinarily, death is not regarded as instantaneous if an appreciable length of time elapsed between the injury and the death. Indeed, even where the injury causing the death is necessarily fatal and death results therefrom in a few moments, it has been held that although it would commonly be called an instantaneous death, still if the injured person survives the injury for a brief period, it may not be said that the death is instantaneous In such case it is immaterial that the period of time between the injury and death is short.” 22A Am. Jur. 2d Death § 43, at 158 (1988).

legal death. 1. See brain death. 2. See civil death (2). 3. See CIVIL DEATH (3). natural death. 1. Bodily death, as opposed to civil death. 2. Death from causes other than accident or violence; death from natural causes. — Also termed mors naturalis. Cf. violent death. See NATURAL-DEATH ACT.

DEATH DUTY

death duty. 1. DUTY(4). 2. See estate tax under TAX.

DEATH-KNELL DOCTRINE

death-knell doctrine. A rule allowing an interlocutory appeal if precluding an appeal until final judgment would moot the issue on appeal and irreparably injure the appellant's rights. • Once recognized as an exception to the final-judgment rule, the doctrine was limited by the U.S. Supreme Court in Coopers & Lybrand v. Livesay, 437 U.S. 463, 98 S.Ct. 2454 (1978). There, the Court held that the death-knell doctrine does not permit an immediate appeal of an order denying class certification. But the doctrine still applies in some contexts. For example, the doctrine allows an immediate appeal of the denial of a temporary restraining order when the lack of an appeal would leave nothing to be considered in the trial court. Woratzek v. Arizona Bd. of Executive Clemency, 117 F.3d 400 (9th Cir. 1997). — Also termed death-knell exception. See FINAL-JUDGMENT RULE. [Cases: Appeal and Error 68, 73(2); Federal Courts 572.1. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 82–84, 94.]

DEATH ON THE HIGH SEAS ACT

Death on the High Seas Act. A federal law, enacted in 1920, permitting a wrongful-death action to be filed in U.S. district court for a death occurring on the high seas. 46 USCA app. §§ 761–767. — Abbr. DOHSA. [Cases: Death 7, 13. C.J.S. Death §§ 17–18, 28, 32, 36.]

DEATH PENALTY

debauchery (di-bawch-<<schwa>>-ree), n. Excessive indulgence in sensual pleasures; sexual immorality or excesses. — debauch,vb.

DEBELLATIO

debellatio (deb-<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh). [Latin] Int'l law. A means of ending a war and acquiring territory when one of the belligerent countries has been so soundly defeated that its adversary is able to decide alone the fate of the defeated country's territory; conquest followed by annexation. — Also termed subjugation.

“[There are] three possible alternative meanings of debellatio in international law. The first is that debellatio denotes the change wrought by the conquest and total subjugation of a State together with that State's annexation by the conqueror. The second view is that debellatio corresponds to the total defeat of an enemy State, its occupation, and the elimination of a vital component of Statehood; in this view, debellatio implies the extinction of the old State, but it leaves open the legal future of the occupied territory (annexation or the founding of one or more new States). The third view is that debellatio only describes a factual situation and that even the elimination of all the State organs combined with the occupation of the territory does not exclude the continuing existence of that State. It is mainly the second and the third meanings of debellatio which have been advocated for the situation of Germany since the end of World War II.” Karl-Ulrich Meyn, “Debellatio,” in 1 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 166 (1992).

DE BENE ESSE

de bene esse (dee bee-nee es-ee also day ben-ay es-ay), adv.[Law Latin “of well-being”] As conditionally allowed for the present; in anticipation of a future need <Willis's deposition was taken de bene esse>. [Cases: Pretrial Procedure 63. C.J.S. Pretrial Procedure §§ 3–10, 18–20, 35–54.] — Abbr. d.b.e. — de bene esse,adj.

debenture (di-ben-ch<<schwa>>r). [fr. L. debentur “there are owed”] 1. A debt secured only by the debtor's earning power, not by a lien on any specific asset. • Originally, this was the first word of a deed detailing sums acknowledged to be owed. 2. An instrument acknowledging such a debt. 3. A bond that is backed only by the general credit and financial reputation of the corporate issuer, not by a lien on corporate assets. — Also termed debenture bond; unsecured bond; naked debenture; plain bond. Cf. BOND(3). [Cases: Corporations 470. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 664–665.]

“The word ‘debenture’ in its archaic sense was applied to a form given under seal as an acknowledgment for goods supplied to the Royal Household, and as such probably meant a charge on Public Funds. The term was further applied to drawback certificates issued for repayment, on the exportation of goods, of duty which had already been paid upon them, and this term is still so used by H.M. Customs.... The word is now, however, generally used to indicate an acknowledgment of indebtedness given under seal by an incorporated company, containing a charge on assets of the company, and carrying an agreed rate of interest until payment, but the variety of the forms which a debenture may take makes it difficult to find a good general definition in any reported case.” Thomas Froude & Eric V.E. White, The Practice Relating to Debentures 1 (1935).

convertible debenture.A debenture that the holder may change or convert into some other security, such as stock. [Cases: Corporations 473. C.J.S. Corporations § 670.]

convertible subordinated debenture.A debenture that is subordinate to another debt but can be converted into a different security.

sinking-fund debenture.A debenture that is secured by periodic payments into a fund established to retire long-term debt.

subordinate debenture.A debenture that is subject to the prior payment of ordinary debentures and other indebtedness.

4.English law. A company's security for a monetary loan. • The security usu. creates a charge on company stock or property. 5. A customhouse certificate providing for a refund of the duties on imported goods when the importer reexports the goods rather than selling them in the country where they were imported.

DEBENTURE BOND

debenture bond.See DEBENTURE(3).

DEBENTURE INDENTURE

debenture indenture.An indenture containing obligations not secured by a mortgage or other collateral. • It is a long-term financing vehicle that places the debenture holder in substantially the same position as a bondholder secured by a first mortgage.

DEBENTURE STOCK

debenture stock. 1. Stock that is issued under a contract providing for periodic, fixed payments. [Cases: Corporations 470. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 664–665.] 2.English law. A type of bond representing money borrowed by a company using its property or other fixed assets as security.

DEBET ET DETINET

debet et detinet (dee-bet ordebet-et et det-i-net ordet-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>t). [Law Latin] Hist. He owes and detains. • This phrase was used in declarations in actions for debt when the original creditor sued the original debtor. The declaration stated that the defendant “owes to” as well as “detains from” the plaintiff the debt or thing in question; thus, the action was said to be “in the debet et detinet.” But if the action was brought against someone other than the original debtor (such as an executor, for a debt due from the testator), then the action was said to be “in the detinet alone.” Cf. DETINET.

DEBET SINE BREVE

debet sine breve (dee-bet ordebet-et sI-nee breevorbree-vee), n.[Law Latin “debt without a writ”] 1. An action for debt commenced under a bill rather than a writ. 2. A debt confessed by judgment. — Abbr. d.si.ib. — Also termed debitum sine breve; debit sans breve. See CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT.

DE BIEN ET DE MAL

de bien et de mal (d<<schwa>> byen ay d<<schwa>> mal). [Law French] See DE BONO ET MALO(1).

DE BONIS ASPORTATIS

de bonis asportatis (dee boh-nis as-p*<<schwa>>*r-tay-tis). See trespass de bonis asportatis under TRESPASS.

DE BONIS NON

de bonis non (dee boh-nis non). See administration de bonis non under ADMINISTRATION.

DE BONIS NON ADMINISTRATIS

de bonis non administratis (dee boh-nis non ad-min-<<schwa>>-stray-tis). [Law Latin] Hist. Of the goods not administered. • When the first administrator of an intestate estate dies or is removed, the second administrator is called an administrator bonis non, who administers the goods not administered by the previous executor.

DE BONIS NON AMOVENDIS

de bonis non amovendis (dee boh-nis non ay-moh-ven-dis), n.[Latin “of goods not to be moved”] Hist. A writ directing the sheriffs of London to make sure that a defendant's goods are not removed while the defendant's writ of error on a judgment is pending.

DE BONIS PROPRIIS

de bonis propriis (dee boh-nis proh-pree-is), n.[Law Latin “of his own goods”] Hist. A judgment allowing execution on an administrator's individual property rather than the property of an estate, as when the administrator mismanages the estate. Cf. DE BONIS TESTATORIS.

DE BONIS TESTATORIS

de bonis testatoris (dee boh-nis tes-t<<schwa>>-tor-is), n.[Law Latin “of the goods of the testator”] Hist. A judgment awarding execution on a testator's property, rather than the individual property of an administrator. Cf. DE BONIS PROPRIIS .

DE BONIS TESTATORIS AC SI de bonis testatoris ac si (dee boh-nis tes-t<<schwa>>-tor-is ak sI). [Law Latin “from the goods of the testator if he has any, and if not, from those of the executor”] Hist. A judgment holding an executor responsible if the testator's estate is insufficient or if the executor falsifies a pleading as a release.

DE BONNE MEMOIRE

de bonne memoire (d<<schwa>> bawn mem-wahr). [Law French] Of sound mind; of good memory. — Also spelled de bone memorie. See MIND AND MEMORY; COMPOS MENTIS .

DE BONO ET MALO

de bono et malo (dee boh-noh et mal-oh), n.[Law Latin “for good and evil”] Hist1.For good and evil. • A criminal defendant indicated full submission to the jury's verdict by placing himself or herself at the jury's mercy de bono et malo. — Also termed de bien et de mal. 2. A special writ of jail delivery issued by the justices of assize to enable them to try all criminal defendants who were in jail where the court traveled. • Formerly, the judges were required to issue a separate writ for every prisoner. This was replaced by a general commission of jail delivery.

“[T]hey have ... a commission of general gaol delivery; which empowers them to try and deliver every prisoner, who shall be in the gaol when the judges arrive at the circuit town, whenever indicted, or for whatever crime committed. It was anciently the course to issue special writs of gaol delivery for each particular prisoner, which were called the writs de bono et malo: but, these being found inconvenient and oppressive, a general commission for all the prisoners has long been established in their stead. So that, one way or other, the gaols are cleared, and all offenders tried, punished, or delivered, twice in every year: a constitution of singular use and excellence.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 267 (1769).

DE BONO GESTU

de bono gestu (dee boh-noh jes-t[y]oo). [Law Latin] For good behavior.

DEBT

debt. 1. Liability on a claim; a specific sum of money due by agreement or otherwise <the debt amounted to $2,500>.2. The aggregate of all existing claims against a person, entity, or state <the bank denied the loan application after analyzing the applicant's outstanding debt>.3. A nonmonetary thing that one person owes another, such as goods or services < her debt was to supply him with 20 international first-class tickets on the airline of his choice>.4. A common-law writ by which a court adjudicates claims involving fixed sums of money <he brought suit in debt>. — Also termed (in sense 4) writ of debt. [Cases: Debt, Action of 1. C.J.S. Debt, Action Of §§ 1–2, 7–11.]

“The action of debt lies where a party claims the recovery of a debt; that is, a liquidated or certain sum of money due him. The action is based upon contract, but the contract may be implied, either in fact or in law, as well as express; and it may be either a simple contract or a specialty. The most common instances of its use are for debts: (a) Upon unilateral contracts express or implied in fact. (b) Upon quasi-contractual obligations having the force and effect of simple contracts. (c) Upon bonds and covenants under seal. (d) Upon judgments or obligations of record. (e) Upon obligations imposed by statute.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 52, at 132 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

active debt.Civil law. A debt due to another person.

ancestral debt.An ancestor's debt that an heir can be compelled to pay.

antecedent debt. 1.Contracts. An old debt that may serve as consideration for a new promise if the statute of limitations has run on the old debt. See PREEXISTING-DUTY RULE. [Cases: Contracts 67. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 121–122.] 2.Bankruptcy. A debtor's prepetition obligation that existed before a debtor's transfer of an interest in property. • For a transfer to be preferential, it must be for or on account of an antecedent debt. See PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2612. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 142–143.]

bad debt.A debt that is uncollectible and that may be deductible for tax purposes. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3420. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 275.]

bonded debt.A debt secured by a bond; a business or government debt represented by issued bonds.

community debt. A debt that is chargeable to the community of husband and wife. See COMMUNITY PROPERTY. [Cases: Husband and Wife 268.]

consumer debt. A debt incurred by someone primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2185, 2254, 2618. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 55, 150, 348.]

“What are ‘consumer’ debts? Section 101(8) defines a consumer debt as follows: ‘consumer debt means debt incurred by an individual primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose.’ The touchstone is the debtor's use of the money. The nature of the collateral, the business of the creditor and the form of the loan are all irrelevant. A loan of $25,000 from a Credit Union to pay for a child's education is a consumer debt, but the same loan used to finance the opening of an accounting business is not a consumer debt. This is so irrespective of the nature of the collateral put up for the debt.” David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 7-45, at 579 (1993).

contingent debt. A debt that is not presently fixed but that may become fixed in the future with the occurrence of some event.

convertible debt. A debt whose security may be changed by a creditor into another form of security.

pure debt.See pure obligation under OBLIGATION.

secured debt.A debt backed by collateral.

short-term debt.Collectively, all debts and other liabilities that are payable within one year. — Also termed current liability.

simple-contract debt.A debt that is either oral or written but is not of record and not under seal. — Also termed debt by simple contract.

special-contract debt.A debt due, or acknowledged to be due, by an instrument under seal, such as a deed of covenant or sale, a lease reserving rent, or a bond. — Also termed debt by special contract; debt by specialty contract; specialty debt.

“Any contract in short whereby a determinate sum of money becomes due to any person, and is not paid but remains in action merely, is a contract of debt. And, taken in this light, it comprehends a great variety of acquisition; being usually divided into debts of record, debts by special, and debts by simple contract.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 464 (1766).

subordinate debt. A debt that is junior or inferior to other types or classes of debt.

unliquidated debt. A debt that has not been reduced to a specific amount, and about which there may be a dispute.

DEBT LIMITATION

debt limitation. A ceiling placed on borrowing by an individual, business, or government. • The constitutions of many states prohibit the states from incurring debt in excess of a stated amount. Other state constitutions allow states to incur debt above a stated amount only through a vote of the people. — Also termed limitation on indebtedness. [Cases: States 115. C.J.S. States §§ 216, 218–222.]

DEBT OF RECORD

debt of record. See DEBT.

DEBTOR

debtor. 1. One who owes an obligation to another, esp. an obligation to pay money.
2. Bankruptcy. A person who files a voluntary petition or against whom an involuntary petition is filed — Also termed bankrupt. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2221. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 45.]

“Section 101 [of the Bankruptcy Code] also introduces us to the language of modern bankruptcy practice. It tells us, for instance, that the person whom a bankruptcy case concerns is a debtor. A person or a firm in bankruptcy is no longer called a bankrupt. Although that word retains some currency among lay people, among bankruptcy lawyers it sounds old-fashioned and precious.” Douglas G. Baird, Elements of Bankruptcy 6 (2001).

3. Secured transactions. A person who either (1) has a property interest — other than a security interest or other lien — in collateral, even if the person is not an obligor, or (2) is a seller of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes. UCC § 9-102(a)(28). — Abbr. Dr. [Cases: Secured Transactions 12, 21. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 7, 10, 12, 19, 36.]

decenary.Hist. A town or district consisting of ten freeholding families. • A freeholder of the decenary (a decennarius) was bound by frankpledge to produce any wrongdoer living in the decenary. — Also spelled decennary. — Also termed decenna; tithing. Cf. FRANKPLEDGE.

decies tantum (desh-ee-eez ordee-shee-eez tan-t*<<schwa>>*m), n.[Law Latin “ten times as much”] Hist. A writ ordering a juror who accepted a bribe for a verdict to pay ten times the bribery amount, half to the suing party and half to the Crown.

“Decies tantum is a writ that lies where a juror in any inquest takes money of the one part or other, to give his verdict; then he shall pay ten times as much as he hath received: and every one that will sue may have this action, and shall have the one half, and the king the other And the same law is of all other actions popular, where one part is to the king, the other to the party that sues. Also the embracers, who procure such inquests, shall be punished in the same manner, and they shall have imprisonment a year. But no justice shall inquire thereof ex officio, but only at the suit of the party.” Termes de la Ley 146 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

decimae (des-<<schwa>>-mee), n.[fr. Latin decem “ten”] Eccles. law. 1. The tenth part of the annual profits of a benefice originally payable to the Pope, and later to the Crown by 26 Hen. 8, ch. 3.

“The tenths, or decimae, were the tenth part of the annual profit of each living ... which was also claimed by the holy see But this claim of the pope met with a vigorous resistance from the English parliament; and a variety of acts were passed to prevent and restrain it But the popish clergy, blindly devoted to the will of a foreign master, still kept it on foot; sometimes more secretly, sometimes more openly and avowedly And, as the clergy expressed this willingness to contribute so much of their income to the head of the church, it was thought proper (when in the same reign the papal power was abolished, and the king was declared the head of the church of England) to annex this revenue to the crown” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 274 (1765).

2. Tithes paid to the church, often in grain or wool.

dying declaration.A statement by a person who believes that death is imminent, relating to the cause or circumstances of the person's impending death. • The statement is admissible in evidence as an exception to the hearsay rule. — Also termed deathbed declaration; ante mortem statement. [Cases: Evidence 275.5; Homicide 1075. C.J.S. Evidence § 288.]

“[A] rule peculiar to criminal cases is the exception to the rule respecting hearsay evidence which renders dying declarations as to the cause of death admissible in trials for murder or manslaughter.... The earliest emphatic statement of it ... is to be found in Woodcock's case, decided in 1789 This case refers to a decision in 1720 ... and to the case of R. v Reason and Tranter, decided in 1722. That case, however, says nothing as to any limitation on the rule. A series of cases from 1678 to 1765 show that during that period declarations of deceased persons as to the cause of their death were admitted even though the declarants had hopes of recovery when they were made.” 1 James Fitzjames Stephen, A History of the Criminal Law of England 447–48 (1883).

self-disserving declaration. See declaration against interest.

self-serving declaration. An out-of-court statement made to benefit one's own interest. [Cases: Criminal Law 413; Evidence 271. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 877; Evidence § 289.]

7. Common-law pleading. The plaintiff's first pleading in a civil action. • It is an amplification of the original writ on which the action is founded, with the additional circumstances of the time and place of injury. In a real action, the declaration is called a count. Today the equivalent term in English law is statement of claim; in most American jurisdictions, it is called a petition or complaint. — Also termed narratio. See COUNT(2), (3). Cf. PLEA (2). [Cases: Pleading 41. C.J.S. Pleading § 96.] “The declaration is a statement of all material facts constituting the plaintiff's cause of action in a methodical and legal form. It consists of the following parts: (a) Statement of title of court. (b) Statement of venue in the margin. (c) The commencement. (d) The body, or statement of the cause of action. (e) The conclusion.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 76, at 192 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

declaration in chief. A declaration for the principal cause of action.

8. A formal, written statement — resembling an affidavit but not notarized or sworn to — that attests, under penalty of perjury, to facts known by the declarant. • Such a declaration, if properly prepared, is admissible in federal court with the same effect as an affidavit. 28 USCA § 1746. — Also termed declaration under penalty of perjury; unsworn declaration under penalty of perjury. Cf. AFFIDAVIT. 9. Int'l law. An oral or written statement, unilaterally made, by which a state expresses its will, intent, or opinion when acting in the field of international relations. 10. DECLARATION OF PARIS

Declaration of Paris. An international agreement, signed by Great Britain, France, Turkey, Sardinia, Austria, Prussia, and Russia in 1856 (at the end of the Crimean War), providing that (1) privateering is illegal, (2) with the exception of contraband, a neutral flag covers an enemy's goods, (3) with the exception of contraband, neutral goods cannot be confiscated under a hostile flag, and (4) a blockade must work to be binding. • The agreement was later adopted by most other maritime powers, except the United States and a few others.

“The Declaration of Paris is one of the greatest triumphs won by commercial interests over the strict rules of maritime warfare. Its importance resides in its first three articles. Article 4 did no more than formulate a principle acknowledged for more than a century. Construed strictly it requires an impossibility; for no blockade, however strict, can always ‘prevent access to the coast of the enemy.’ But it is clear that the words were meant to be understood in a reasonable sense as merely prohibitory of ineffective or ‘paper’ blockades Article 1 struck at a most objectionable practice. The current of opinion had long been running strongly against the use of privateers.... Article 2 ... has provoked an enormous amount of controversy. Together with Article 3 it amounted to a new departure in the law of maritime capture. Up to 1856 the great naval powers had been divided between the old principle that the liability of goods to capture should be determined by the character of their owner, and the more modern principle ... that the character of the ship in which the goods were laden should settle their fate.” 1 R.H. Inglis Palgrave, Palgrave's Dictionary of Political Economy 520–21 (Henry Higgs ed., 2d ed. 1925).

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS declaration of rights. 1. DECLARATORY PRECEDENT declaratory precedent.See PRECEDENT.

DECLARATORY STATUTE

declaratory statute.See STATUTE.

DECLARATORY THEORY

declaratory theory.The belief that judges' decisions never make law but instead merely constitute evidence of what the law is. • This antiquated view — held by such figures as Coke and Blackstone — is no longer accepted.

“There are ... at least three good reasons why the declaratory theory should have persisted for some time after the modern English doctrine [of precedent] had begun to take shape. In the first place, it appealed to believers in the separation of powers, to whom anything in the nature of judicial legislation would have been anathema. Secondly, it concealed a fact which Bentham was anxious to expose, namely, that judge-made law is retrospective in its effect. If in December a court adjudges that someone is liable, in consequence of his conduct during the previous January, it would certainly appear to be legislating retrospectively, unless the liability is based on an earlier Act of Parliament, or unless the court is simply following a previous decision. A way of disguising the retrospective character of such a judgment would be to maintain the doctrine that the court really was doing no more than state a rule which anyone could have deduced from well-known principles or common usage, for the conduct in question would then have been prohibited by the law as it stood in January. The third reason for the persistence of the declaratory theory may be thought to justify its retention in a revised form today. When confronted with a novel point, judges always tend to speak as though the answer is provided by the common law.” Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 30 (4th ed. 1991).

A writ issuing out of the Court of Chancery at the request of an ecclesiastical court that has found a person to be in contempt. • This writ came into use after the Ecclesiastical Courts Act of 1813 removed ecclesiastical courts' power to excommunicate litigants who failed to comply with a court order. Cf. EXCOMMUNICATO CAPIENDO .

“In 1812 the case of Mary Ann Dix — a woman not of age, who was imprisoned for two years on a writ de excommunicato capiendo for not paying costs in a suit for defamation — aroused the Legislature. In the following year it was enacted that excommunication should cease to exist as part of the process of the ecclesiastical courts to enforce appearance, and as a punishment for contempt.... [F]or the writ de excommunicato capiendo was substituted the writ de contumace capiendo; and the rules applying to the older writ were made applicable to the new.” 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 632 (7th ed. 1956).

decree, n. 1. Traditionally, a judicial decision in a court of equity, admiralty, divorce, or probate — similar to a judgment of a court of law < the judge's decree in favor of the will's beneficiary >. 2. A court's final judgment. 3. Any court order, but esp. one in a matrimonial case < divorce decree >. See JUDGMENT; ORDER(2); DECISION. [Cases: Divorce 152. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 222, 230–234.]

“The chief differences between decrees in equity and judgments at common law are as follows: The former are pronounced by courts of equity; the latter, by courts of law. The former result from an investigation and determination of the rights of the parties by the means provided and according to the principles recognized in equity jurisprudence; the latter result from an investigation and determination made by the more limited means and more inflexible rules of the common law. The former may be adjusted to all the varieties of interest and of circumstance, and may contain such directions as are needed to carry them into effect, both in letter and in spirit; the latter are in an invariable form, general in terms, and absolute for plaintiff or defendant. And the former often enforce rights not recognized by the common law The term ‘judgment’ is frequently used in a broad sense to include decrees in equity.” 1 A.C. Freeman, A Treatise of the Law of Judgments § 12, at 23–24 (Edward W. Tuttle ed., 5th ed. 1925).

agreed decree. A final judgment, the terms of which are agreed to by the parties.

consent decree. A court decree that all parties agree to. — Also termed consent order. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2397; Judgment 87. C.J.S. Judgments § 186.]

decree pro confesso (proh k<<schwa>>n-fes-oh).Equity practice. A decree entered in favor of the plaintiff as a result of the defendant's failure to timely respond to the allegations in the plaintiff's bill; esp., a decree entered when the defendant has defaulted by not appearing in court at the prescribed time. — Also termed decree taken pro confesso. [Cases: Equity 417–420.]

“A decree pro confesso in equity is similar to a default judgment in an action at law. If a defendant in an equity suit fails to answer the plaintiff's petition within the prescribed time period, the bill will be taken pro confesso, and a decree entered in favor of the plaintiff However, whereas a default judgment in an action at law effects an admission of pleaded facts and conclusions of law ... a decree pro confesso in an equity action admits only the material and well pleaded facts in the petition and does not admit the legal claims upon which the plaintiff seeks relief.” 27A Am. Jur. 2d Equity § 249, at 733–34 (1996).

dedication, n. Property. The donation of land or creation of an easement for public use. [Cases: Dedication 1–28. C.J.S. Dedication §§ 1–12, 14–30, 56–64.] — dedicate, vb. — dedicatory, adj.

common-law dedication. A dedication made without a statute, consisting in the owner's appropriation of land, or an easement in it, for the benefit or use of the public, and the acceptance, by or on behalf of the land or easement. — Often shortened to dedication. [Cases: Dedication 1–21. C.J.S. Dedication §§ 1–12, 14–26, 56–64.]

dedication by adverse user. A dedication arising from the adverse, exclusive use by the public with the actual or imputed knowledge and acquiescence of the owner. [Cases: Dedication 20. C.J.S. Dedication § 22.]

express dedication. A dedication explicitly manifested by the owner. [Cases: Dedication 17.]

implied dedication. A dedication presumed by reasonable inference from the owner's conduct. [Cases: Dedication 18–20. C.J.S. Dedication §§ 15, 17–22.]

statutory dedication. A dedication for which the necessary steps are statutorily prescribed, all of which must be substantially followed for an effective dedication. [Cases: Dedication 22. C.J.S. Dedication § 27.]

tacit dedication. A dedication of property for public use arising from silence or inactivity and without an express agreement.

DEDICATION AND RESERVATION

dedication and reservation. A dedication made with reasonable conditions, restrictions, and limitations.

DEDICATION DAY

dedication day. See DAY.

DE DIE IN DIEM

de die in diem (dee dI-ee in dI-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] From day to day; daily.

DEDI ET CONCESSI

dedi et concessi (dee-dI et k<<schwa>>n-ses-I). [Law Latin] I have given and conveyed. • These were the words generally used to convey a gift.

DEDIMUS ET CONCESSIMUS

dedimus et concessimus (ded-<<schwa>>m<<schwa>>s et k<<schwa>>n-ses-i-m<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] We have given and granted. • These words were used in a conveyance when there was more than one grantor or when the grant was from the Crown.

DEDIMUS POTESTATEM

dedimus potestatem (ded-⟨schwa⟩-m⟨schwa⟩s poh-tes-tay-t⟨schwa⟩m). [Law Latin “we have given power”] 1. A commission issuing from the court before which a case is pending, authorizing a person named in the commission to compel the attendance of certain witnesses, to take their testimony on the written interrogatories and cross-interrogatories attached to the commission, to reduce the answers to writing, and to send it sealed to the court issuing the commission. 2. In England, a chancery writ commissioning the persons named in the writ to take certain actions, including administering oaths to defendants and justices of the peace. • The writ was formerly used to commission a person to take action such as acknowledging a fine and appointing an attorney for representation in court. Before the Statute of Westminster (1285), an attorney could not appear on behalf of a party without this writ. — Also termed dedimus potestatem de attorno faciendo.

“Dedimus potestatem is a writ that lies where a man sues in the king's court, or is sued, and cannot well travel, then he shall have this writ directed to some justice, or other discreet person in the country, to give him power to admit some man for his attorney, or to levy a fine, or to take his confession, or his answer, or other examination, as the matter requires.” Termes de la Ley 148 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

dediticii (ded-i-tish-ee-I-or dee-di-tI-shee-I), n. pl.[Latin “those who have surrendered”] Roman law. The lowest class of freemen whose members were ineligible for Roman citizenship, including enemies granted freedom in exchange for surrender, or, under the Lex Aelia Sentia, manumitted slaves convicted of a crime in a court, or branded or put in chains by their former owners. • Dediticii who were formerly slaves were not allowed to live within 100 miles of Rome. Justinian abolished this status. — Also spelled dedititii. — Sing. dediticius, dedititius.

“Dediticii ... were not reduced to slavery, but to a condition quite analogous. They were not allowed to make a will, or to take under one; they never obtained Roman citizenship, and they could not come within one hundred miles of the city of Rome.” Andrew Stephenson, A History of Roman Law § 119, at 324 (1912).

“Slaves who before manumission had been subjected to degrading punishment (e.g. had been branded or made to fight in the arena) were given, on manumission, a special status, viz. that of enemies surrendered at discretion (dediticii). A dediticius, though free and not a slave, had none of the rights of a citizen, could never under any circumstances better his position (e.g. become a citizen), and was not allowed to live within 100 miles of Rome.” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 67 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1942).

dedition (di-dish-⟨schwa⟩n), n.[fr. Latin deditio “give up”] A surrender of something, such as property.

DE DIVERSIS REGULIS JURIS ANTIQUI de diversis regulis juris antiqui (dee di-v⟨schwa⟩r-sis reg-y⟨schwa⟩-lis joor-is an-tI-kwI). [Latin “of various rules of ancient law”] Roman law. The last title in the Digest, containing 211 maxims. See DIGEST(2).

DE DOLO MALO

de dolo malo (dee doh-loh mal-oh). [Latin] Of or based on fraud. See ACTIO DE DOLO MALO .

DE DOMO REPARANDA

de domo reparanda (dee doh-moh rep-<<schwa>>-ran-d<<schwa>>), n.[Law Latin “to repair a house”] Hist. A writ ordering a cotenant to contribute to the expenses of maintaining common property.

DE DONIS CONDITIONALIBUS

De Donis Conditionalibus (dee doh-nis k<<schwa>>n-dish-ee-<<schwa>>-nal-i-b<<schwa>>s). An English statute, enacted in 1285, that gave rise to the ability to create a fee tail. — Often shortened to De Donis. — Sometimes written de donis conditionalibus.

“[T]he statute de donis of 13 Edw. I... was intended to check the judicial construction, that had, in a great degree, discharged the conditional fee from the limitation imposed by the grant. Under that statute, fees conditional were changed into estates tail” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *444 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

“[A]fter De Donis, the formula ‘to A and the heirs of his body’ gave to A an estate known as an estate in fee tail. Because A had no power to transfer an estate in fee simple absolute, it became theoretically possible for persons like O to tie up the ownership of land in a single family for hundreds of years. We say theoretically possible because by 1472 a way would be found for the tenant in tail (as A was called) to transfer an estate in fee simple absolute despite De Donis.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 29 (2d ed. 1984).

DE DOTE ASSIGNANDA

de dote assignanda (dee doh-tee as-ig-nan-d<<schwa>>), n.[Law Latin “for assigning dower”] Hist. A writ ordering a royal escheater to provide dower to a widow of a tenant holding an estate directly from the Crown.

DE DOTE UNDE NIL HABET

de dote unde nil habet (dee doh-tee <<schwa>>n-dee nil hay-bet), n.[Law Latin “of dower whereof she has none”] A writ ordering a tenant interfering with a widow's right to dower to provide a reasonable dower. — Also termed writ of dower.

“DE DOTE UNDE NIL HABET. This is a writ of right in its nature It must be brought by the widow as demandant, against the tenant of the freehold, that is, the heir or his alienee, and its effect is to enable the former to recover from the latter the seisin of a third part of the tenements in demand, to be set forth to her in severalty by metes and bounds, together with damages and costs.”

DEDUCTIBLE

deductible,adj. Capable of being subtracted, esp. from taxable income. See DEDUCTION(2).

deductible,n.1. Under an insurance policy, the portion of the loss to be borne by the insured before the insurer becomes liable for payment. Cf. SELF-INSURED RETENTION N. [Cases: Insurance 2106, 2523.]

straight deductible.A deductible that is a specified, fixed amount.

2. The insurance-policy clause specifying the amount of this portion.

DEDUCTION

deduction,n.1. The act or process of subtracting or taking away. 2.Tax. An amount subtracted from gross income when calculating adjusted gross income, or from adjusted gross income when calculating taxable income. — Also termed tax deduction. Cf. EXEMPTION(3); TAX CREDIT. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3270–3516; Taxation 1031.1–1046. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 33, 55, 58, 63, 140, 146–205, 209–265, 267–268, 270–287, 329–330, 335, 409, 489, 671, 673, 799–800; Taxation §§ 1738–1755.]

additional standard deduction.The sum of the additional amounts that a taxpayer who turns 65 or becomes blind before the close of the taxable year is entitled to deduct. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3295; Taxation 1031.1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1738–1739.]

charitable deduction.A deduction for a contribution to a charitable enterprise that has qualified for tax-exempt status in accordance with IRC (26 USCA) § 501(c)(3) and is entitled to be deducted in full by the donor from the taxable estate or from gross income. See CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTION(2); CHARITABLE ORGANIZATION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3337; Taxation 1031.1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 186, 212, 215–222, 276; Taxation §§ 1738–1739.]

deduction in respect of a decedent.A deduction that accrues to the point of death but is not recognizable on the decedent's final income-tax return because of the accounting method used, such as an accrued-interest expense of a cash-basis debtor.

itemized deduction.An expense (such as a medical expense, home-mortgage interest, or a charitable contribution) that can be subtracted from adjusted gross income to determine taxable income.

marital deduction.A federal tax deduction allowed for lifetime and testamentary transfers from one spouse to another. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2056, 2523. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4169. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 535.]

miscellaneous itemized deduction.Generally, an itemized deduction of job or investment expenses; a deduction other than those allowable in computing adjusted gross income, those enumerated in IRC (26 USCA) § 67(b), and personal exemptions. • This type of deduction is allowed only to an itemizing taxpayer whose total miscellaneous itemized deductions exceed a statutory percentage of adjusted gross income.

standard deduction. A specified dollar amount that a taxpayer can deduct from adjusted gross income, instead of itemizing deductions, to determine taxable income. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3295; Taxation 1031.1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1738–1739.]

3. The portion of a succession to which an heir is entitled before a partition. 4. The act or process of reasoning from general propositions to a specific application or conclusion. Cf. INDUCTION(2). — deduct (for senses 1–3), vb. — deduce (for sense 4), vb.

DEDUCTION FOR NEW

deduction for new. See NEW-FOR-OLD(1).

DEDUCTION IN RESPECT OF A DECEDENT deduction in respect of a decedent. See DEDUCTION.

DEDUCTIS DEBITIS

deductis debitis (di-d<<schwa>>k-tis deb-i-tis). [Latin] Hist. The debts being deducted. • Before an estate could be ascertained, the debts had to be deducted.

DE EA RE ITA CENSUERE

de ea re ita censuere (dee ee-<<schwa>> ree I-t<<schwa>> sen-s[y]oo-<<schwa>>-ree). [Latin] Concerning that matter they have so decreed. • This phrase was used to record decrees of the Roman senate. — Abbr. d.e.r.i.c.

DEED

deed, n. 1. Something that is done or carried out; an act or action. 2. A written instrument by which land is conveyed. 3. At common law, any written instrument that is signed, sealed, and delivered and that conveys some interest in property. — Also termed (in senses 2 & 3) evidence of title. See contract under seal under CONTRACT. Cf. CONVEYANCE; BILL OF SALE. — deed, vb.

“A deed is a writing sealed and delivered. For if either a parchment without writing be delivered as one's deed, yet it is not his deed, though an obligation be afterwards written in it: or if it be a writing but not sealed at the time of the delivery of it as his deed, it is a scrole and not his deed. Or if I make and seal a deed, and the party take it without my delivery, I may plead it is not my deed.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 108 (1759).

“What then is a deed? Unfortunately the word is not free from ambiguity. In the original and technical sense a deed is a written instrument under the seal of the party executing it. Because, however, of the wide use of such instruments in the conveyance of real estate, it has come to mean in popular acceptance any formal conveyance for the transfer of land or of an interest therein. The dual use of the term has crept into the language of courts and law writers, so that in the reading of cases it is difficult to determine whether the word is used in the first and original sense, or whether it connotes a formal instrument of the type ordinarily employed for the conveyance of land.” Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 46, at 118–19 (2d ed. 1955).

“All deeds are documents, but not all documents are deeds. For instance, a legend chalked on a brick wall, or a writing tattooed on a sailor's back may be documents but they are not deeds. A deed is, therefore, a particular kind of document. It must be a writing and a writing on paper or its like, e.g., vellum or parchment. Any instrument under seal is a deed if made between private persons. It must be signed, sealed, and delivered. A deed must either (a) effect the transference of an interest, right or property, or (b) create an obligation binding on some person or persons, or (c) confirm some act whereby an interest, right, or property has already passed.” Gerald Dworkin, Odgers' Construction of Deeds and Statutes 1 (5th ed. 1967).

absolute deed.A deed that conveys title without condition or encumbrance. — Also termed deed absolute.

administrator's deed.A document that conveys property owned by a person who has died intestate.

bargain-and-sale deed.A deed that conveys property to a buyer for valuable consideration but that lacks any guarantee from the seller about the validity of the title. See BARGAIN AND SALE. [Cases: Deeds 22. C.J.S. Deeds § 16.]

composition deed.A deed reflecting the terms of an agreement between a debtor and a creditor to discharge or adjust a debt. [Cases: Debtor and Creditor 10. C.J.S. Assignments for Benefit of Creditors § 26; Creditor and Debtor §§ 84–94.]

counterdeed. A secret deed, executed either before a notary or under a private seal, that voids, invalidates, or alters a public deed.

deathbed deed.Rare. A deed executed by a grantor shortly before death. • The grantor need not be aware that he or she is near death when the deed is executed.

deed absolute.See absolute deed.

deed in fee.A deed conveying the title to land in fee simple, usu. with covenants.

deed in lieu of foreclosure.A deed by which a borrower conveys fee-simple title to a lender in satisfaction of a mortgage debt and as a substitute for foreclosure. • This deed is often referred to simply as “deed in lieu.” [Cases: Mortgages 293. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 441–443.]

deed of covenant.A deed to do something, such as a document providing for periodic payments by one party to another (usu. a charity) for tax-saving purposes. • The transferor can deduct taxes from the payment and, in some cases, the recipient can reclaim the deducted tax.

deed of distribution.A fiduciary's deed conveying a decedent's real estate.

deed of gift.A deed executed and delivered without consideration. — Also termed gratuitous deed.

deed of inspectorship.Hist. An instrument reflecting an agreement between a debtor and creditor to appoint a receiver to oversee the winding up of the debtor's affairs on behalf of the creditor.

deed of partition.A deed that divides land held by joint tenants, tenants in common, or coparceners. [Cases: Partition 96. C.J.S. Partition §§ 141–142.]

deed of release.A deed that surrenders full title to a piece of property upon payment or performance of specified conditions.

deed of separation.An instrument governing a spouse's separation and maintenance. [Cases: Husband and Wife 278.] deed of settlement. 1. A deed to settle something, such as the distribution of property in a marriage. 2.English law. A deed formerly used to form a joint-stock company.

deed of trust.A deed conveying title to real property to a trustee as security until the grantor repays a loan. • This type of deed resembles a mortgage. — Also termed trust deed; trust indenture; indemnity mortgage. — Also termed common-law mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages 8. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 5–6, 10.]

deed poll.A deed made by and binding on only one party, or on two or more parties having similar interests. • It is so called because, traditionally, the parchment was “polled” (that is, shaved) so that it would be even at the top (unlike an indenture). — Also spelled deed-poll. Cf. INDENTURE.

deed to lead uses.A common-law deed prepared before an action for a fine or common recovery to show the object of those actions.

deed without covenants.See quitclaim deed.

defeasible deed.A deed containing a condition subsequent causing title to the property to revert to the grantor or pass to a third party.

derivative deed.See secondary conveyance under CONVEYANCE.

disentailing deed.Hist. A tenant in tail's assurance that the estate tail will be barred and converted into an estate in fee. • The Fines and Recoveries Act (3 & 4 Will. 4 ch. 74) introduced this way of barring an entail. It authorized nearly every tenant in tail, if certain conditions were met, to dispose of the land in fee simple absolute and thus to defeat the rights of all persons claiming under the tenant.

donation deed.A deed granted by the government to a person who either satisfies the statutory conditions in a donation act or redeems a bounty-land warrant. See DONATION ACT; BOUNTY-LAND WARRANT.

full-covenant-and-warranty deed.See warranty deed.

general warranty deed.See warranty deed.

gift deed. A deed given for a nominal sum or for love and affection.

good deed. A deed that conveys good title as opposed to a deed that is merely good in form. — Also termed lawful deed.

grant deed. A deed containing, or having implied by law, some but not all of the usual covenants of title; esp., a deed in which the grantor warrants that he or she (1) has not previously conveyed the estate being granted, (2) has not encumbered the property except as noted in the deed, and (3) will convey to the grantee any title to the property acquired after the date of the deed.

gratuitous deed. See deed of gift.

inclusive deed. See inclusive grant under GRANT.

indented deed. See INDENTURE(2).

latent deed. A deed kept in a strongbox or other secret place, usu. for 20 years or more.

lawful deed. See good deed.

mineral deed. A conveyance of an interest in the minerals in or under the land. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 55. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 158–160, 169.]

mortgage deed. The instrument creating a mortgage. • A mortgage deed typically must contain (1) the name of the mortgagor, (2) words of grant or conveyance, (3) the name of the mortgagee, (4) a property description sufficient to identify the mortgaged premises, (5) the mortgagor's signature, and (6) an acknowledgment. To be effective and binding, a mortgage deed must also be delivered. [Cases: Mortgages 42. C.J.S. Mortgages § 93.]

onerous deed. Scots law. A deed given in exchange for a valuable consideration, often as part of a marriage settlement.

quitclaim deed. A deed that conveys a grantor's complete interest or claim in certain real property but that neither warrants nor professes that the title is valid. — Often shortened to quitclaim. — Also termed deed without covenants. Cf. warranty deed. [Cases: Deeds 25, 121. C.J.S. Deeds §§ 17, 261.]

release deed. A deed that is issued once a mortgage has been discharged, explicitly releasing and reconveying to the mortgagor the entire interest conveyed by an earlier deed of trust. [Cases: Mortgages 309. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 451, 465–466, 477–478.]

sheriff's deed. A deed that gives ownership rights in property bought at a sheriff's sale. [Cases: Execution 241. C.J.S. Executions § 224.]

special warranty deed. 1. A deed in which the grantor covenants to defend the title against only those claims and demands of the grantor and those claiming by and under the grantor. [Cases: Covenants 48, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 24, 29.] 2. In a few jurisdictions, a quitclaim deed. Cf. warranty deed. [Cases: Deeds 25, 121. C.J.S. Deeds §§ 17, 261.]

statutory deed. A warranty-deed form prescribed by state law and containing certain warranties and covenants even though they are not included in the printed form.

support deed. A deed by which a person (usu. a parent) conveys land to another (usu. a son or daughter) with the understanding that the grantee will support the grantor for life. • Support deeds often result in litigation.

tax deed. A deed showing the transfer of title to real property sold for the nonpayment of taxes. See office grant under GRANT; tax sale under SALE. Cf. TAX CERTIFICATE. [Cases: Taxation 774. C.J.S. Taxation § 1445.]

title deed. A deed that evidences a person's legal ownership of property. See TITLE.

trust deed. See deed of trust.

warranty deed. A deed containing one or more covenants of title; esp., a deed that expressly guarantees the grantor's good, clear title and that contains covenants concerning the quality of title, including warranties of seisin, quiet enjoyment, right to convey, freedom from encumbrances, and defense of title against all claims. — Also termed general warranty deed; full-covenant-and-warranty deed. See WARRANTY(1). Cf. quitclaim deed; special warranty deed. [Cases: Covenants 46–48, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 22–24, 29.]

wild deed. A recorded deed that is not in the chain of title, usu. because a previous instrument connected to the chain of title has not been recorded.

DEED BOX

deed box. Archaic. A box in which deeds of land title are traditionally kept. • Such a box is considered an heirloom in the strict sense. See HEIRLOOM(1).

DEED OF AGENCY

deed of agency. A revocable, voluntary trust for payment of a debt.

DEED OF CRIME

deed of crime. See ACTUS REUS.

DEED OF FEOFFMENT

deed of feoffment. See FEOFFMENT(3).

DE EJECTIONE CUSTODIAE

de ejectione custodiae (dee ee-jek-shee-oh-nee k<<schwa>>s-toh-dee-ee). [Latin “ejectment of a ward”] Hist. A writ available to a guardian after being ejected from the ward's land during the ward's minority. • The writ lay to recover the land or person of the ward, or both. The French equivalent was ejectment de garde.

DE EJECTIONE FIRMAE

de ejectione firmae (dee ee-jek-shee-oh-nee f<<schwa>>r-mee). [Latin “ejectment of farm”] Hist. A writ or action of trespass to obtain the return of lands or tenements to a lessee for a term of years that had been ousted by the lessor or by a reversioner, remainderman, or stranger. • The lessee was then entitled to a writ of ejection to recover, at first, damages for the trespass only, but later the term itself, or the remainder of it, with damages. This action is the foundation of the modern action of ejectment. See EJECTMENT.

“A writ then of ejectione firmae, or action of trespass in ejectment, lieth, where lands or tenements are let for a term of years; and afterwards the lessor, reversioner, remainder-man, or any stranger, doth eject or oust the lessee of his term. In this case he shall have his writ of ejection, to call the defendant to answer for entering on the lands so demised to the plaintiff for a term that is not yet expired, and ejecting him. And by this writ the plaintiff shall recover back his term, or the remainder of it, with damages.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 199 (1768).

DEEM

deem, vb. 1. To treat (something) as if (1) it were really something else, or (2) it had qualities that it does not have <although the document was not in fact signed until April 21, it explicitly states that it must be deemed to have been signed on April 14>. 2. To consider, think, or judge <she deemed it necessary>.

“ ‘Deem’ has been traditionally considered to be a useful word when it is necessary to establish a legal fiction either positively by ‘deeming’ something to be what it is not or negatively by ‘deeming’ something not to be what it is.... All other uses of the word should be avoided Phrases like ‘if he deems fit’ or ‘as he deems necessary’ or ‘nothing in this Act shall be deemed to ...’ are objectionable as unnecessary deviations from common language. ‘Thinks’ or ‘considers’ are preferable in the first two examples and ‘construed’ or ‘interpreted’ in the third.... ‘Deeming’ creates an artificiality and artificiality should not be resorted to if it can be avoided.” G.C. Thornton, Legislative Drafting 99 (4th ed. 1996).

DEEMED TRANSFEROR

deemed transferor. Tax. A person who holds an interest in a generation-skipping trust on behalf of a beneficiary, and whose death will trigger the imposition of a generation-skipping transfer tax. • A deemed transferor is often a child of the settlor. For example, a grandfather could establish a trust with income payable for life to his son (who, because he is only one generation away from his father, is also known as a nonskip person) with the remainder to his grandson, a beneficiary also known as the skip person. When the son dies, the trust will be included in his gross estate for determining the generation-skipping transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2601–2663. See GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER; generation-skipping transfer tax under TAX; generation-skipping trust under TRUST; SKIP PERSON; NONSKIP PERSON.

DEEP ISSUE

deep issue. See ISSUE(1).

DEEP LINK

deep link. Intellectual property. A webpage hyperlink that, when clicked, opens a page on another website other than that site's home page. • Some plaintiffs have argued, with mixed success, that bypassing their home pages in this manner deprives them of advertising revenue. Deep-linking does not violate copyright if the portal provided does not copy any of the linked page's content. And if there is no confusion about the source of the information, deep-linking does not constitute unfair competition.

DEEP POCKET

deep pocket. 1. (pl.) Substantial wealth and resources <the plaintiff nonsuited the individuals and targeted the corporation with deep pockets>. 2. A person or entity with substantial wealth and resources against which a claim may be made or a judgment may be taken <that national insurance company is a favorite deep pocket among plaintiff's lawyers>.

DEEP ROCK DOCTRINE

Deep Rock doctrine. Bankruptcy. The principle by which unfair or inequitable claims presented by controlling shareholders of bankrupt corporations may be subordinated to claims of general or trade creditors. • The doctrine is named for a corporation that made fraudulent transfers to its parent corporation in Taylor v. Standard Gas & Elec. Co., 306 U.S. 307, 59 S.Ct. 543 (1939). [Cases: Bankruptcy 2968. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 264.]

DE ESCAETA

de escaeta (dee es-kee-t<<schwa>>), n. [Law Latin “of escheat”] Hist. A writ authorizing a lord to recover land when the lord's tenant died without an heir. See ESCHEAT.

DE ESCAMBIO MONETAE

de escambio monetae (dee es-kam-bee-oh m<<schwa>>-nee-tee), n. [Law Latin “of exchange of money”] Hist. A writ authorizing a merchant to prepare a bill of exchange.

DE ESSENDO QUIETUM DE THEOLONIO de essendo quietum de theolonio (dee e-sen-doh kwI-ee-t<<schwa>>m dee thee-<<schwa>>-loh-nee-oh), n. [Law Latin “of being quit of toll”] Hist. A writ authorizing a person who is exempt from paying a toll to enforce the exemption without harassment. — Also spelled de essendo quietum de tolonio.

DE ESSENTIA

de essentia (dee e-sen-shee-<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] Hist. Of the essence; essential.

DE ESSONIO DE MALO LECTI

de essonio de malo lecti (dee e-soh-nee-oh dee mal-oh lek-tI), n.[Law Latin “of essoyn of malum lecti (sickness of bed)”] Hist. A writ ordering a determination whether a person is truly sick after the person has issued an essoyn claiming sickness as an excuse for not appearing in court.

DE ESTOVERIIS HABENDIS

de estoveriis habendis (dee es-t*<<schwa>>-veer-ee-is h<<schwa>>*-ben-dis), n.[Law Latin “for having estovers”] Hist. A writ allowing a wife divorced a mensa et thoro (“from bed and board”) to recover alimony or estovers. — Often shortened to estoveriis habendis.

“In case of divorce a mensa et thoro, the law allows alimony to the wife which is that allowance, which is made to a woman for her support out of her husband's estate; being settled at the discretion of the ecclesiastical judge, on consideration of all the circumstances of the case. This is sometimes called her estovers for which, if he refuses payment, there is; (besides the ordinary process of excommunication) a writ at common law de estoveriis habendis, in order to recover it It is generally proportioned to the rank and quality of the parties. But in case of elopement, and living with an adulterer, the law allows her no alimony.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 429 (1765).

DE ESTREPAMENTO

de estrepamento (dee e-strep-<<schwa>>-men-toh), n.[Law Latin “of enstrepment”] Hist. A writ to prevent waste by a tenant while a suit to recover the land is pending against the tenant. • Because this writ was only auxiliary to a real action to recover land, and because equity afforded the same relief by injunction, the writ fell into disuse and was abolished by 3 & 4 Will. 4, ch. 27. — Also termed writ of estrepement. See ESTREPEMENT.

DE EU ET TRENE

de eu et trene (d*<<schwa>>* yoo ay trayn). [French] Hist. Of water and whip of three cords. • This term referred to a neife who, as a servant, could be corporally punished. See NEIFE.

DEFAMACAST

defamacast (di-fam-<<schwa>>-kast). Defamation by television or radio broadcast. • The word was first used in American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc. v. Simpson, 126 S.E.2d 873, 879 (Ga. Ct. App. 1962). Although Prosser called it “a barbarous word” (William Prosser, The Law of Torts 753 [4th ed. 1971]), another authority has said that “[t]he word seems to be quite apt” (Laurence H. Eldredge, The Law of Defamation § 12, at 77 [1978]). See DEFAMATION.

DEFAMATION

defamation,n.1. The act of harming the reputation of another by making a false statement to a third person. • If the alleged defamation involves a matter of public concern, the plaintiff is constitutionally required to prove both the statement's falsity and the defendant's fault. 2. A false written or oral statement that damages another's reputation. See LIBEL; SLANDER. Cf. DISPARAGEMENT. [Cases: Libel and Slander 6–14. C.J.S. Libel and Slander, Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5–6, 10–12, 17–42, 47, 104.] — defame,vb.

“Defamation is the publication of a statement which tends to lower a person in the estimation of right-thinking members of society generally; or which tends to make them shun or avoid that person.” P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 72, at 242 (5th ed. 1950).

“The wrong of defamation consists in the publication of a false and defamatory statement concerning another person without lawful justification. That person must be in being. Hence not only does an action of defamation not survive for or against the estate of a deceased person, but a statement about a deceased or unborn person is not actionable at the suit of his relatives, however great their pain and distress, unless the statement is in some way defamatory of them.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 138 (17th ed. 1977).

“For entirely too long a period of time, English and American law have recognized two distinct kinds of defamation based solely on the form in which it is published. Oral defamation is slander; written defamation is libel. Libel is a crime and a tort which subjects the defamer to tort liability without proof of special damages. Slander is not a common law crime and, with certain exceptions, does not subject the defamer to liability unless there is proof of special damages. Under this distinction in form alone the defamatory letter read only by its addressee and burned to ashes after being read is a more serious defamation than a defamatory statement spoken to an audience of 3,000 community leaders and molders of public opinion. This is utterly absurd and completely indefensible” Laurence H. Eldredge, The Law of Defamation § 12, at 77 (1978).

“Defamation ... is involved in two related harms, libel and slander. A familiar statement is that libel is written whereas slander is oral. This covers the idea in a general way but tends to mislead because defamation may be published without the use of words and hence be neither written nor oral. Thus libel may be perpetrated by hanging a person in effigy and slander, by sign or gesture.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 489 (3d ed. 1982).

defamation per quod. Defamation that either (1) is not apparent but is proved by extrinsic evidence showing its injurious meaning or (2) is apparent but is not a statement that is actionable per se. [Cases: Libel and Slander 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander, Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

defamation per se. A statement that is defamatory in and of itself and is not capable of an innocent meaning. [Cases: Libel and Slander 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander, Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

trade defamation. The damaging of a business by a false statement that tends to diminish the reputation of that business. • Trade defamation may be trade libel if it is recorded, or trade slander if it is not. — Also termed commercial defamation. Cf. TRADE DISPARAGEMENT; TRADE LIBEL.

DEFAMATORY

defamatory, adj. (Of a statement or communication) tending to harm a person's reputation, usu. by subjecting the person to public contempt, disgrace, or ridicule, or by adversely affecting the person's business. [Cases: Libel and Slander 6–14. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5, 10–12, 17–42, 104.]

“A communication is defamatory if it tends so to harm the reputation of another as to lower him in the estimation of the community or to deter third persons from associating or dealing with him.” Restatement of Torts § 559 (1938).

“No exhaustive definition of ‘defamatory’ emerges from the cases for, as Lord Reid once said, it is not for the judges to ‘frame definitions or to lay down hard and fast rules. It is their function to enunciate principles and much that they say is intended to be illustrative or explanatory and not to be definitive’ [Cassell & Co. Ltd. v. Broome (1972) AC 1027, 1085]. One can nevertheless achieve a working description by combining two statements, namely: a defamatory statement is one which injures the reputation of another by exposing him to hatred, contempt, or ridicule, or which tends to lower him in the esteem of right-thinking members of society.” R.W.M. Dias & B.S. Markesinis, Tort Law 423–24 (2d ed. 1989).

DEFAMATORY COMMUNICATION

defamatory communication. See DEFAMATORY STATEMENT.

DEFAMATORY LIBEL

defamatory libel. See LIBEL(1).

DEFAMATORY PROPAGANDA

defamatory propaganda. See PROPAGANDA.

DEFAMATORY STATEMENT

defamatory statement. A statement that tends to injure the reputation of a person referred to in it. • The statement is likely to lower that person in the estimation of reasonable people and in particular to cause that person to be regarded with feelings of hatred, contempt, ridicule, fear, or dislike. — Also termed defamatory communication. [Cases: Libel and Slander 6–14. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5, 10–12, 17–42, 104.]

DEFEND

defend, vb. 1. To deny, contest, or oppose (an allegation or claim) <the corporation vigorously defended against the shareholder's lawsuit>. 2. To represent (someone) as an attorney <the accused retained a well-known lawyer to defend him>.

DEFENDANT

defendant (di-fen-d<<schwa>>nt). A person sued in a civil proceeding or accused in a criminal proceeding. — Abbr. D. Cf. PLAINTIFF.

John Doe defendant. An anonymous defendant labeled “John Doe” because the plaintiff does not, at the time of filing suit, know the person's name. • John Doe defendants are common in several situations, such as police-brutality lawsuits in which the plaintiff does not know the names of the officers allegedly at fault. See JOHN DOE.

DEFENDANT IN ERROR

defendant in error. Archaic. In a case on appeal, the prevailing party in the court below. See APPELLEE; RESPONDENT(1).

DEFENDANT SCORE

defendant score. A number taken from an established scale, indicating the relative seriousness of the defendant's criminal history. Cf. CRIME SCORE.

DEFENDANT'S GAIN

defendant's gain. The amount of money or the value of property that a criminal defendant has obtained by committing a crime. • Some states, such as New York, consider the defendant's gain when assessing a criminal fine or ordering restitution.

DEFENDEMUS

defendemus (di-fen-d<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>s). [fr. Latin defendere] We will defend. • This term was used in conveyancing to require the donor and the donor's heirs to defend the donee against any attempted encumbrance not specifically agreed to. Although defendeus was not a warranty, it became part of the warranty clause “shall and will warrant and forever defend.”

DEFENDER

defender. 1. One who defends, such as the defendant in a lawsuit, a person using self-defense, or defense counsel. 2. PUBLIC DEFENDER.

DEFENDERE

defendere (di-fen-d<<schwa>>-ree), vb. [Law Latin] To deny; to defend.

DEFENDERE SE PER CORPUS SUUM defendere se per corpus suum (di-fen-d<<schwa>>-ree see p<<schwa>>r kor-p<<schwa>>s s[y]oo-<<schwa>>m), vb. [Law Latin “to defend himself by his own body”] Hist. To agree to a trial by judicial combat; to agree to a duel.

DEFENSE

defense (di-fen[t]s).1. A defendant's stated reason why the plaintiff or prosecutor has no valid case; esp., a defendant's answer, denial, or plea < her defense was that she was 25 miles from the building at the time of the robbery>. [Cases: Criminal Law 31. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 15, 46–49, 88, 93–94.]

“Defence is defined to be that which is alleged by a party proceeded against in an action or suit, as a reason why the plaintiff should not recover or establish that which he seeks by his complaint or petition.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 240 (2d ed. 1899).

affirmative defense.A defendant's assertion of facts and arguments that, if true, will defeat the plaintiff's or prosecution's claim, even if all the allegations in the complaint are true. • The defendant bears the burden of proving an affirmative defense. Examples of affirmative defenses are duress (in a civil case) and insanity and self-defense (in a criminal case). — Also termed plea in avoidance; plea in justification. Cf. negative defense. [Cases: Criminal Law 31; Federal Civil Procedure 751; Pleading 78. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 15, 46–49, 88, 93–94; Pleading §§ 160–161.]

capacity defense.A defense based on the defendant's inability to be held accountable for an illegal act or the plaintiff's inability to prosecute a lawsuit (as when the plaintiff was a corporation, but has lost its corporate charter). See CAPACITY.

choice-of-evils defense.See lesser-evils defense.

collateral defense (k<<schwa>>-lat-<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>l).Criminal law. A defense of justification or excuse not involving a rebuttal of the allegation and therefore collateral to the elements that the prosecutor must prove. See EXCUSE(2); JUSTIFICATION(2). [Cases: Criminal Law 38. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 49–53.]

defense of habitation.The defense that conduct constituting a criminal offense is justified if an aggressor unjustifiably threatens the defendant's place of abode or premises and the defendant engages in conduct that is (1) harmful to the aggressor, (2) sufficient to protect that place of abode or premises, and (3) reasonable in relation to the harm threatened. — Also termed defense of premises. See CASTLE DOCTRINE.

defense of inequitable conduct.Patents. A defense to an action for patent infringement, made by charging the plaintiff with breaching the duty of candor and good faith. • To succeed, the defendant must show that, in the patent prosecution, the plaintiff intentionally withheld material information from or misled the examiner. Inequitable conduct is a combination of two former defenses: unclean hands and fraud on the Patent Office. [Cases: Patents 97. C.J.S. Patents §§ 135–138, 145, 178.]

derivative defense. A defense that rebuts the criminal elements that a prosecutor must establish to justify the submission of a criminal case to a jury.

designer defense. A novel defense based on diminished capacity attributed to stress or impairment. • The phrase derives from the fact that the defense is tailored to the defendant and the circumstances of the crime. Examples include extraordinary reactions to snack food (the Twinkie defense), unconsciousness or sleepwalking, and postpartum psychosis. See AUTOMATISM.

dilatory defense (dil-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A defense that temporarily obstructs or delays a lawsuit but does not address the merits. • Examples of dilatory defenses include misjoinder, nonjoinder, res judicata, misnomer, lack of capacity to sue, another action pending, statute of limitations, prematurity, unripeness, release, and settlement.

dwelling defense. See CASTLE DOCTRINE.

eleemosynary defense. See charitable immunity under IMMUNITY(2).

equitable defense. A defense formerly available only in a court of equity but now maintainable in a court of law. • Examples include mistake, fraud, illegality, failure of consideration, forum non conveniens, laches, estoppel, and unclean hands.

frivolous defense. A defense that has no basis in fact or law.

full defense. A technical common-law defensive plea, stated at length and without abbreviation. • The plea is obsolete because of the pleading requirements in federal and state rules of civil procedure.

general-justification defense. See lesser-evils defense.

imperfect defense. A defense that fails to meet all legal requirements and usu. results only in a reduction in grade or sentence rather than an acquittal, as when a defendant is charged with manslaughter rather than murder because the defendant, while defending another, used unreasonable force to repel the attack. See imperfect self-defense under SELF-DEFENSE. Cf. perfect defense.

inconsistent defense. A defense so contrary to another defense that the acceptance of one requires abandonment of the other. • A person accused of murder, for example, cannot claim both self-defense and the alibi of having been in a different city when the murder took place. [Cases: Criminal Law 43.5. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 54.]

innocent-owner defense. A forfeiture-action defense in which the owner of property (such as real estate or money) asserts that another person committed the wrongful act or omission while using the property without the owner's knowledge or consent. See 18 USCA § 981(a)(2); 21 USCA § 881. See civil forfeiture under FORFEITURE.

insanity defense. See INSANITY DEFENSE. issuable defense. Common-law pleading. A plea on the merits setting forth a legal defense. Cf. issuable plea under PLEA(3).

justification defense. See JUSTIFICATION DEFENSE.

legal defense. A complete and adequate defense in a court of law.

lesser-evils defense. The defense that, while the defendant may have caused the harm or evil that would ordinarily constitute a criminal offense, in the present case the defendant has not caused a net harm or evil because of justifying circumstances and therefore should be exculpated. — Also termed choice-of-evils defense; necessity; general-justification defense.

meritorious defense (mer-tor-ee). 1. A defense that addresses the substance or essentials of a case rather than dilatory or technical objections. [Cases: Judgment 145, 379, 447. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 341, 404, 445.] 2. A defense that appears likely to succeed or has already succeeded.

necessity defense. See JUSTIFICATION(2).

negative defense. A defendant's outright denial of the plaintiff's allegations without additional facts pleaded by way of avoidance. Cf. affirmative defense.

ostrich defense. A criminal defendant's claim not to have known of the criminal activities of an associate.

partial defense. A defense going either to part of the action or toward mitigation of damages.

pass-on defense. An antitrust defense that a member of the distributive chain who was overcharged or undercharged passed on the price adjustment to reflect the charge and thereby suffered no damage. — Also termed passing on.

peremptory defense (per-emp-tor-ee). A defense that questions the plaintiff's legal right to sue or contends that the right to sue has been extinguished.

perfect defense. A defense that meets all legal requirements and results in the defendant's acquittal. See perfect self-defense under SELF-DEFENSE. Cf. imperfect defense.

pretermitted defense (pre-tor-mit-id). A defense available to a party that must be pleaded at the right time or be waived.

sham defense. A fictitious, untrue defense, made in bad faith.

sleepwalking defense. See AUTOMATISM.

SODDI defense. See SODDI DEFENSE.

true defense. A defense admitting that a defendant committed the charged offense, but seeking to avoid punishment based on a legal excuse (such as insanity) or justification (such as self-defense).

unconsciousness defense. See AUTOMATISM.

xyy-chromosome defense. See XYY-CHROMOSOME DEFENSE.

2. A defendant's method and strategy in opposing the plaintiff or the prosecution; a doctrine giving rise to such a method or strategy <the lawyer advised her client to adopt a passive defense and to avoid taking the witness stand>.

empty-chair defense. See EMPTY-CHAIR DEFENSE.

Stalingrad defense. The strategy of wearing down the plaintiff by tenaciously fighting by whatever means anything the plaintiff presents and appealing every ruling favorable to the plaintiff, rather than presenting a meritorious case. • The tactic is named for the Russian city besieged by the Germans in World War II. The defenders refused to surrender and used every available tactic and tool to hold the attackers at bay until winter cut the enemy's supply lines, leaving the attackers with inadequate resources with which to continue the siege.

3. One or more defendants in a trial, as well as their counsel <the defense rests>. 4. Commercial law. A basis for avoiding liability on a negotiable instrument <the drawer asserted a real defense against the holder in due course>.

absolute defense. See real defense.

personal defense. An ordinary defense in a contract action — such as failure of consideration or nonperformance of a condition — that the maker or drawer of a negotiable instrument is precluded from raising against a person who has the rights of a holder in due course. • A personal defense can be asserted only against a transferee who is not a holder in due course. — Also termed limited defense.

real defense. A type of defense that is good against any possible claimant, so that the maker or drawer of a negotiable instrument can raise it even against a holder in due course. • The ten real defenses are (1) fraud in the factum, (2) forgery of a necessary signature, (3) adjudicated insanity that, under state law, renders the contract void from its inception, (4) material alteration of the instrument, (5) infancy, which renders the contract voidable under state law, (6) illegality that renders the underlying contract void, (7) duress, (8) discharge in bankruptcy, or any discharge known to the holder in due course, (9) a suretyship defense (for example, if the holder knew that one indorser was signing as a surety or accommodation party), and (10) a statute of limitations (generally three years after dishonor or acceptance on a draft and six years after demand or other due date on a note). — Also termed absolute defense; universal defense. [Cases: Bills and Notes 364. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 191.]

5. Measures taken by a country or individual to protect against an attack. See SELF-DEFENSE; NATIONAL DEFENSE(1).

self-defense. See SELF-DEFENSE.

6. A country's military establishment. See NATIONAL DEFENSE(2). — Also spelled (in all senses esp. in BrE) defence. 7. TAKEOVER DEFENSE.

DEFLATION

deflation, n. A general decline in the price of goods and services. Cf. INFLATION; DISINFLATION. — deflate, vb. — deflationary, adj.

deforce, vb. 1. To keep (lands) from the true owner by means of force. 2. To oust another from possession by means of force. 3. To detain (a creditor's money) unjustly and forcibly. — deforciant, n.

“The character of the action of debt is well illustrated by the form of the writ as given by Glanville. It directs the sheriff to order the debtor to render a stated sum which he owes to the plaintiff, ‘and whereof the plaintiff complains that the defendant unjustly deforces him,’ and, if he will not obey, he is to be summoned before the King's Court. The plaintiff is ‘deforced’ of money just as in a writ of right he is ‘deforced’ of land. It is true that the term ‘deforces’ disappeared from the writ shortly after Glanville's time, the word debet taking its place; but this seems to have been a matter of form, not of substance. The plaintiff sought to recover the money due as his property.” William F. Walsh, Outlines of the History of English and American Law 411 (1924).

deforcement. 1. An act of keeping lands from the true owner by force. 2. An act of ousting

A reduction in rank, degree, or dignity; specif., censure of a clergy member by divestiture of holy orders, either by word or by a solemn divestiture of robes and other insignia. Cf. DEPOSITION(4); DEPRIVATION(4). 2. A moral or intellectual decadence or degeneration; a lessening of a person's or thing's character or quality <degradation of resources>. 3. A wearing down of something, as by erosion.

DE GRATIA

de gratia (dee gray-shee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Of favor; by grace, as in de speciali gratia (“of special grace or favor”).

DEGREE

degree. 1. Generally, a classification or specification <degrees of proof>. 2. An incremental measure of guilt or negligence; a level based on the seriousness of an offense <murder in the first degree>. See DEGREE OF CRIME. 3. A stage in a process; a step in a series of steps toward an end <the statute went through several degrees of development>. 4. A stage in intensity . 5. In the line of descent, a measure of removal determining the proximity of a blood or marital relationship <the council member did not participate in the vote because he was related to one of the bidders within the first degree of consanguinity>. • In the civil law, and in the degree-of-relationship system used by many American jurisdictions, an intestate estate passes to the closest of kin, counting degrees of kinship. To calculate the degree of relationship of the decedent to the claimant, one counts the steps (one for each generation) up from the decedent to the nearest common ancestor of the decedent and the claimant, and on down to the claimant from the common ancestor. The total number of steps is the degree of relationship. For example, a decedent's cousin stands in the fourth degree of relationship. Degrees of relationship are used not only to determine who is the closest heir but also to establish the incest prohibition in marriage requirements. — Also termed degree of kin; degree of relationship; degree of descent. See AFFINITY(2); CONSANGUINITY. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 22. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 26.] equal degree.A relationship between two or more relatives who are the same number of steps away from a common ancestor. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 22. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 26.]

prohibited degree.A degree of relationship so close (as between brother and sister) that marriage between the persons is forbidden by law. • Generally, with slight variations from jurisdiction to jurisdiction, the law forbids marriages between all persons lineally related and within the third civil-law degree of relationship. That is, aunt–nephew and uncle–niece relations are prohibited. Prohibited degrees are also known as Levitical degrees, since the incest prohibition is pronounced in the Bible in Leviticus 18:6–18. — Also termed forbidden degree. [Cases: Marriage 10. C.J.S. Marriage § 17.]

6. A title conferred on a graduate of a school, college, or university, either after the completion of required studies or in honor of special achievements <she began studying for the bar exam the day after receiving her law degree>. Cf. DIPLOMA(3).

DEGREE OF CARE

degree of care.A standard of care to be exercised in a given situation. See CARE. [Cases: Negligence 230. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 34, 59, 114, 116–117.]

DEGREE OF CRIME

degree of crime. 1. A division or classification of a single crime into several grades of guilt, according to the circumstances surrounding the crime's commission, such as aggravating factors present or the type of injury suffered. [Cases: Criminal Law 28. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 9, 13.] 2. A division of crimes generally, such as felonies or misdemeanors. [Cases: Criminal Law 27. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 9–12.]

DEGREE OF DESCENT

degree of descent.See DEGREE(5).

DEGREE OF KIN

degree of kin.See DEGREE(5).

DEGREE OF NEGLIGENCE

degree of negligence. One of the varying levels of negligence typically designated as slight negligence, ordinary negligence, and gross negligence. See NEGLIGENCE. [Cases: Negligence 272–276. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 88–113.]

“Although the common law concept of degrees of negligence has been criticized or repudiated in many jurisdictions, the usefulness of the view at common law that degrees of negligence exist is still recognized in a number of jurisdictions, particularly in regard to the distinction between ordinary and gross negligence. Furthermore, legislators have not been dissuaded from using the degrees of negligence concept when it is helpful to achieve a legislative purpose.” 57A Am. Jur. 2d Negligence § 233, at 274 (1989).

DEGREE OF PROOF

degree of proof. 1. BURDEN OF PROOF. 2. BURDEN OF PRODUCTION.

DEGREE OF RELATIONSHIP

de haerede rapto et abducto (dee hi-ree-dee rap-toh et ab-d<<schwa>>k-toh), n. [Law Latin “of an heir ravished and carried away”] Hist. A writ allowing a lord to recover a ward who had been taken by another person.

DE HAERETICO COMBURENDO

de haeretico comburendo (dee hi-ret-i-koh kom-by<<schwa>>-ren-doh), n. [Law Latin “of burning a heretic”] Hist. 1. A writ ordering the execution by burning of a convicted heretic who refused to recant, or was convicted of heresy again after recanting. — Also termed writ de haeretico comburendo.

“[W]e find among our ancient precedents a writ de haeretico comburendo, which is thought by some to be as ancient as the common law itself. However, it appears from thence, that the conviction of heresy by the common law was not in any petty ecclesiastical court, but before the archbishop himself in a provincial synod; and that the delinquent was delivered over to the king to do as he should please with him: so that the crown had a control over the spiritual power, and might pardon the convict by issuing no process against him; the writ de haeretico comburendo being not a writ of course, but issuing only by the special direction of the king in council.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 46–47 (1769).

“But the case of Sawtre (1400) is a clear case in which the rule of the canon law was applied. He was convicted of heresy before the Bishop of Norwich and recanted his heresy. He fell again into heresy, and was condemned by the archbishop and his provincial Council, as a relapsed heretic. On this conviction the king issued a writ de haeretico comburendo. This case clearly shows that the common law recognized the rule of the canon law” 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 617 (7th ed. 1956).

2. The first English penal law against heresy, enacted in 1401 (2 Hen. 4, ch. 15). • The law authorized the burning of defendants who relapsed or refused to abandon their heretical opinions. “The first English statute that denounced the penalty of death against heretics was passed in the year 1401. Whether before that statute the law that was in force in our land demanded or suffered that such persons should be burnt is a question that has been eagerly debated; on it in the days of Elizabeth and James I depended the lives of Anabaptists and Arians; it has not yet lost its interest; but it is a question that buzzes in a vacuum, for until Lollardy became troublesome there was too little heresy in England to beget a settled course of procedure.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 544 (1899).

deherison (dee-her-i-z<<schwa>>n). See DISINHERITANCE.

See WITHERNAM.

DE HOMINE REPLEGIANDO

de homine replegiando (dee hom-<<schwa>>-nee ri-plee-jee-an-doh), n.[Law Latin “for replevying a man”] A writ to replevy a person out of jail or out of the custody of another person after giving security that the replevied person will answer any charge.

“The writ de homine replegiando lies to replevy a man out of prison, or out of the custody of any private person, (in the same manner that chattels taken in distress may be replevied ...) upon giving security to the sheriff that the man shall be forthcoming to answer any charge against him. And, if the person be conveyed out of the sheriff's jurisdiction, the sheriff may return that he is eloigned ... upon which a process issues ... to imprison the defendant himself, without bail ... till he produces the party. But this writ is guarded with so many exceptions, that it is not an effectual remedy in numerous instances, especially where the crown is concerned.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 129 (1768).

dehors (d<<schwa>>-horor d<<schwa>>-horz). [Law French] Outside; beyond the scope of <the court cannot consider the document because it is dehors the record>.

DELICT

delict (di-lik), n.[Latin delictum “an offense”] Roman & civil law. A violation of the law; esp., a wrongful act or omission giving rise to a claim for compensation; TORT. — Also termed (in Roman law) delictum; (in French law) délit. [Cases: Torts 1. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2–7.]

“A delict is a civil wrong. It is an infringement of another's interests that is wrongful irrespective of any prior contractual undertaking to refrain from it — though there may also be one. It entitles the injured party to claim compensation in civil proceedings — though criminal proceedings aimed at punishing the wrongdoer may also ensue.” 1 P.Q.R. Boberg, The Law of Delict 1 (1984).

private delict.A wrong regarded primarily as a matter of compensation between individuals.

public delict.A wrong for which the community as a whole takes steps to punish the offender. Cf. public tort under TORT.

quasi-delict. 1.Roman law. A residuary category of private wrongs, characterized by either vicarious or strict liability.

“QUASI-DELICT.... Justinian enumerates four cases of obligations said to arise quasi ex delicto. The implication seems to be that in all of them the law creates a liability though the defendant may not in fact be to blame. The cases are the following: — (1) The judge who ‘makes the case his own’ ... incurs a penalty fixed by the magistrate at discretion (2) If anything was thrown, or poured, from an upper room ... the occupier was liable for double the damage (3) If a thing was kept placed or suspended over a way used by the public ... there was a penalty ... which might be recovered from the occupier (4) Ship-owners, innkeepers and stable-keepers were liable for damage or theft committed by slaves or free persons in their employ" R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 401–02 (4th ed. 1956).

2. See quasi-offense under OFFENSE(2).3.Scots law. Tortious conduct that is negligent, as opposed to intentional.

A court's order directing that a person in custody be released; esp., such an order by an ecclesiastical court. — Also termed writ of deliverance. 4. Archaic. In a replevin action, a writ ordering the redelivery to the owner of goods.

second deliverance. Hist. A second replevin remedy after the plaintiff has been nonsuited and the distrained property has been returned to the defendant. — Also termed writ of second deliverance.

“And at the common law, the plaintiff might have brought another replevin, and so in infinitum, to the intolerable vexation of the defendant. Wherefore the statute of Westm. 2, c. 2 restrains the plaintiff, when nonsuited, from suing any fresh replevin, but allows him a judicial writ issuing out of the original record, and called a writ of second deliverance, in order to have the same distress again delivered to him, on giving the like security as before. And, if the plaintiff be a second time nonsuit, or if the defendant has judgment upon verdict ... he shall have a writ or return irreplevisable; after which no writ of second deliverance shall be allowed.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 150 (1767).

5. Such a release (as in sense 3) or redelivery (as in sense 4).

DELIVERED AT FRONTIER

delivered at frontier. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must (1) clear the goods for export, (2) arrange and pay for transportation, and (3) deliver the goods to a specified place on the importing nation's border. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods arrive at the designated point and are placed at the disposal of the buyer. This term is generally used when the delivery place is on land, but it places no explicit restrictions on the mode of carriage. If the delivery place is a border port and delivery is complete either onboard or alongside the vessel, the term delivered ex ship or delivered ex quay is preferred. — Abbr. DAF. Cf. DELIVERED EX SHIP; DELIVERED EX QUAY.

DELIVERED DUTY PAID

delivered duty paid. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must (1) clear the goods for export, (2) bear the costs of carriage, (3) pay the buyer's import duties, and (4) make the goods available to the buyer onboard the carrier at the destination. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the seller's carrier arrives at the agreed destination. This term is generally used when the delivery place is on land, but it places no explicit restrictions on the mode of carriage. If the delivery point is a port and delivery is complete either onboard or alongside the vessel, the term delivered ex ship or delivered ex quay is preferred. — Abbr. DDP. Cf. DELIVERED DUTY UNPAID; DELIVERED EX SHIP; DELIVERED EX QUAY.

DELIVERED DUTY UNPAID

delivered duty unpaid. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must (1) clear the goods for export, (2) bear the costs of carriage (apart from unloading charges and import duties), and (3) make the goods available to the buyer onboard the carrier at the destination. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the seller's carrier arrives at the agreed destination. The buyer is responsible for all import duties. This term is generally used when the delivery place is on land, but it places no explicit restrictions on the mode of carriage. If the delivery point is a port and delivery is complete either onboard or alongside the vessel, the term delivered ex ship or delivered ex quay is preferred. — Abbr. DDU. Cf. DELIVERED DUTY PAID ; DELIVERED EX SHIP; DELIVERED EX QUAY.

DELIVERED EX QUAY

delivered ex quay. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must (1) clear the goods for export, (2) bear the costs of transportation to the port named by the importing buyer, and (3) place the goods alongside the ship in the port of destination. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods are unloaded in the destination port. This term is used only when goods are transported by sea or inland waterway. — Abbr. DEQ. Cf. DELIVERED EX SHIP ; FREE ALONGSIDE SHIP.

DELIVERED EX SHIP

delivered ex ship. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must clear the goods for export and bear the costs of transportation (apart from unloading charges and import duties) to the importing nation's port of destination. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the seller's carrier arrives at the destination port. This term is used only when goods are transported by sea or inland waterway. — Abbr. DES. Cf. DELIVERED EX QUAY; FREE ON BOARD.

DELIVERY

delivery, n. 1. The formal act of transferring something, such as a deed; the giving or yielding possession or control of something to another. 2. The thing so transferred or conveyed. Cf. LIVERY. — deliver, vb.

The passing of property by descent or bequest .4. The death of a person or (figuratively) of a thing <the corporation's untimely demise>. See DEATH. — Abbr. dem. — demise,vb.

demise of the Crown.The immediate, automatic transfer of a kingdom to a successor upon a sovereign's death or long absence from the throne.

“The king never dies. Henry, Edward, or George may die; but the king survives them all. For immediately upon the decease of the reigning prince in his natural capacity, his kingship or imperial dignity, by act of law, without any ... interval, is vested at once in his heir; who is, eo instanti, king to all intents and purposes. And so tender is the law of supposing even a possibility of his death, that his natural dissolution is generally called his demise... an expression which signifies merely a transfer of property; for ... when we say the demise of the crown, we mean only that, in consequence of the disunion of the king's body natural from his body politic, the kingdom is transferred or demised to his successor; and so the royal dignity remains perpetual." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 242 (1765).

joint demise.In an ejectment action, a demise made by two or more persons in one declaration. [Cases: Ejectment 65. C.J.S. Ejectment § 61.]

demurrant (di-m<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>nt). A party who interposes a demurrer. See DEMURRER.

demurrer (di-m<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>r). [Law French demorer “to wait or stay”] A pleading stating that although the facts alleged in a complaint may be true, they are insufficient for the plaintiff to state a claim for relief and for the defendant to frame an answer. • In most jurisdictions, such a pleading is now termed a motion to dismiss, but the demurrer is still used in a few states, including California, Nebraska, and Pennsylvania. Cf. DENIAL(1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 658; Pleading 189. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 235–236, 239, 289–290, 292.]

“The word ‘demurrer,’ derived from the Latin demorari, or the French demorer, meaning to ‘wait or stay,’ imports that the party demurring waits or stays in his proceedings in the action until the judgment of the court is given whether he is bound to answer to so insufficient a pleading. Each party may demur to what he deems an insufficient pleading of the other. The demurrer was general when it was to matter of substance; it was special when it was made to matter of form, and must specifically point out the defect.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 15 (2d ed. 1899).

demurrer ore tenus. An oral demurrer. See ORE TENUS.

“The codes either expressly or by implication require all pleadings to be in writing. To this proposition there is the apparent exception that objections to the jurisdiction of the court, or to the sufficiency of a pleading, that it does not state a cause of action or defence, may be raised on the trial by what is sometimes called a demurrer ore tenus (that is, orally, — by word of mouth).” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 179 (2d ed. 1899).

general demurrer. See general exception (1) under EXCEPTION(1).

parol demurrer. Hist. A suspension of proceedings during the minority of an infant.

speaking demurrer. A demurrer that cannot be sustained because it introduces new facts not contained in the original complaint. [Cases: Pleading 210. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 289–290.]

special demurrer. An objection that questions the form of the pleading and states specifically the nature of the objection, such as that the pleading violates the rules of pleading or practice. [Cases: Pleading 206. C.J.S. Pleading § 233.]

DEMURRER BOOK

demurrer book. A record of the demurrer issue used by the court and counsel in argument.

DEMURRER TO EVIDENCE

demurrer to evidence. A party's objection or exception that the evidence is legally insufficient to make a case. • Its effect, upon joinder in the demurrer by the opposite party, is that the jury is discharged and the demurrer is entered on record and decided by the court. A demurrer to evidence admits the truth of all the evidence and the legal deductions from that evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 752; Trial 150. C.J.S. Trial §§ 384–386, 391.]

DEMURRER TO INTERROGATORIES

demurrer to interrogatories. The objection or reason given by a witness for failing to answer an interrogatory.

qualified general denial.A general denial of all the allegations except the allegations that the pleader expressly admits.

“The qualified general denial most frequently is used when a limited number of allegations in the complaint are to be admitted. This form of denial also is employed when defendant cannot expressly deny an averment in his opponent’s pleading and therefore cannot submit a general denial, although defendant wants to put plaintiff to his proof on that averment by interposing a denial of knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief or a denial on information and belief.” 5 Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1266, at 405 (2d ed. 1990).

specific denial. A separate response applicable to one or more particular allegations in a complaint. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 742; Pleading 124. C.J.S. Pleading § 188.]

de non decimando (dee non des-<<schwa>>-man-doh), n.[Law Latin “of not paying tithes”] Eccles. law. A claim for release from paying a tithe. — Also termed modus de non decimando.

“A prescription de non decimando is a claim to be entirely discharged of tithes, and to pay no compensation in lieu of them. Thus the king by his prerogative is discharged from all tithes. So a vicar shall pay no tithes to the rector, nor the rector to the vicar But these privileges are personal to both the king and the clergy; for their tenant or lessee shall pay tithes And from this original have sprung all the lands, which, being in lay hands, do at present claim to be tithe-free: for, if a man can show his lands to have been such abbey lands, and also immemorially discharged of tithes ... this is now a good prescription, de non decimando. But he must show both these requisites for abbey lands, without a special ground of discharge, are not discharged of course; neither will any prescription de non decimando avail in total discharge of tithes, unless it relates to such abbey lands.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 31–32 (1766).

DE NON PROCEDENDO AD ASSISAM de non procedendo ad assisam (dee non proh-s*<<schwa>>*-den-doh ad <<schwa>>-si-z*<<schwa>>*m), n.[Law Latin “of not proceeding to take an assize”] Hist. A writ ordering justices not to hold an assize in a particular case.

DENY THE APPEAL

deny the appeal. See AFFIRM(1).

deodand (dee-<<schwa>>-dand). Hist. Something (such as an animal) that has done wrong and must therefore be forfeited to the Crown. • This practice was abolished in 1846.

“In the oldest records, we see no attempt to distinguish the cases in which the dead man was negligent from those in which no fault could be imputed to him, and the large number of deodands collected in every eyre suggests that many horses and boats bore the guilt which should have been ascribed to beer. A drunken carter is crushed beneath the wheels of his cart; the cart, the cask of wine that was in it and the oxen that were drawing it are all deodand. Bracton apparently thought it an abuse to condemn as deodand a thing that had not moved; he would distinguish between the horse which throws a man and the horse off which a man stupidly tumbles, between the tree that falls and the tree against which a man is thrown. We do not see these distinctions in the practice of the courts.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 474 n.4 (2d ed. 1899).

“[W]hen in 1716 the coroner's jury of Yarmouth declared a stack of timber which had fallen on a child to be forfeited as a deodand, it was ransomed for 30s., which was paid over to the child's father.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 7 (16th ed. 1952).

DE ODIO ET ATIA

de odio et atia (dee oh-dee-oh et ay-shee-<<schwa>>), n.[Law Latin “of hatred and malice”] Hist. A writ ordering a sheriff to summon a 12-member jury to inquire whether a prisoner jailed for murder was charged for a good reason or only because of ill-will and to determine whether bail should be set. • If the prisoner was accused out of spite or had committed the crime in self-defense, then another writ called tradas in ballim would have been issued ordering the sheriff to release the prisoner on bail if the sheriff could find 12 good citizens of the county to vouch for the prisoner. This writ, similar to habeas corpus, was first mentioned in Magna Carta. — Also termed breve de bono et malo.

DE ONERANDO PRO RATA PORTIONE

de onerando pro rata portione (dee on-<<schwa>>-ran-doh proh ray-t<<schwa>>por-shee-oh-nee), n.[Law Latin “of charging according to a ratable proportion”] Hist. A writ for a joint tenant or cotenant who is distrained for more rent than is proportionately required.

DEPOSIT

deposit, n.1. The act of giving money or other property to another who promises to preserve it or to use it and return it in kind; esp., the act of placing money in a bank for safety and convenience. [Cases: Banks and Banking 119–155. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 193, 246, 248, 266–314, 316, 320–322, 326–381, 383–384, 393, 396–397, 399, 401–402, 404, 415–423, 425–444, 455.] 2. The money or property so given.

demand deposit. A bank deposit that the depositor may withdraw at any time without prior notice to the bank.

direct deposit. The payment of wages by transferring the payment directly into the employee's bank account, usu. by electronic transfer.

frozen deposit. A bank deposit that cannot be withdrawn, as when the financial institution is insolvent.

general deposit. 1. A bank deposit of money that is commingled with other depositors' money. 2. A bank deposit that is to the depositor's credit, thus giving the depositor a right to the money and creating a debtor–creditor relationship between the bank and the depositor. • A bank is not required to return the actual money deposited as a general deposit, as it must with a special deposit; the bank need return only an equivalent sum. [Cases: Banks and Banking 75–80, 119. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 161, 172, 175–196, 246, 248, 269–271, 274, 276, 279, 284.]

special deposit. A bank deposit that is made for a specific purpose, that is kept separately, and that is to be returned to the depositor. • The bank serves as a bailee or trustee for a special deposit. — Also termed specific deposit. [Cases: Banks and Banking 153. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 283–287, 290.]

time deposit. A bank deposit that is to remain for a specified period or on which notice must be given to the bank before withdrawal.

3. Money placed with a person as earnest money or security for the performance of a contract.

• The money will be forfeited if the depositor fails to perform. — Also termed security deposit.

4. Copyright. The placing of two copies of a published work with the Library of Congress within three months of publication. • This requirement is independent of copyright registration. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 50.10. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 38–39.]

5. Civil law. A contract by which a depositor delivers a thing to a depositary for safekeeping. La. Civ. Code arts. 2926, 2929. • A deposit may be either an onerous or a gratuitous contract. — Also termed depositum; naked deposit; gratuitous deposit. See gratuitous bailment under BAILMENT. [Cases: Bailment 2. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 5, 14, 16–18.]

involuntary deposit. A deposit made by accidentally leaving or placing personal property in another's possession. See involuntary bailment under BAILMENT.

necessary deposit. A bailment, usu. made by reason of emergency or other necessity, that prevents the depositor from freely choosing the depositary. • A necessary deposit occurs, for example, when a person entrusts goods to a stranger during a fire.

quasi-deposit. An involuntary deposit made when one party lawfully possesses property merely by finding it.

voluntary deposit. A deposit made by the mutual consent of the bailor and bailee.

6. Patents. The placing of a sample of microorganisms or cell lines with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to satisfy the enablement requirement. • The practice is not statutory but has been established by regulation and caselaw. 37 CFR §§ 1.801–1.809. — Also termed enablement by deposit. DEPOSITION deposition (dep-<<schwa>>-zish-<<schwa>>n). 1. A witness's out-of-court testimony that is reduced to writing (usu. by a court reporter) for later use in court or for discovery purposes. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30; Fed. R. Crim. P. 15. — Also termed examination before trial. [Cases: Criminal Law 627.2; Federal Civil Procedure 1311–1456; Pretrial Procedure 91–206. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 468; Discovery §§ 2, 4, 6–7, 9–10, 12–32, 34–61, 69, 77, 125; Pretrial Procedure §§ 4–6, 10–17, 24, 33, 35–54, 63–66, 70–72, 74, 76–77, 109–129, 132–138.] 2. The session at which such testimony is recorded.

apex deposition. The deposition of a person whose position is at the highest level of a company's hierarchy. • Courts often preclude an apex deposition unless (1) the person to be deposed has particular knowledge regarding the claim, and (2) the requesting party cannot obtain the requested — and discoverable — information through less intrusive means. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1325; Pretrial Procedure 101. C.J.S. Discovery § 17.]

deposition de bene esse (dee bee-nee es-ee also day ben-ay es-ay). A deposition taken from a witness who will likely be unable to attend a scheduled trial or hearing. • If the witness is not available to attend trial, the testimony is read at trial as if the witness were present in court. See testimony de bene esse under TESTIMONY. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1291–1299, 1311–1456; Pretrial Procedure 61–65. C.J.S. Pretrial Procedure §§ 1, 3–20, 34–54.]

deposition on written questions. A deposition given in response to a prepared set of written questions, as opposed to a typical oral deposition. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 31. — Formerly also termed deposition on written interrogatories. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1408; Pretrial Procedure 155. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 55–61.]

“The advantage of a deposition on written questions is that counsel for the parties need not go to some distant place to be present at the taking of the deposition. Instead they serve on each other questions and cross questions — and even redirect and recross questions — that they wish to have put to the deponent. These are then sent to the officer who is to take the deposition. The officer puts the questions to the witness, records the answers, and transcribes and files the deposition as with an oral deposition. The officer is merely to record what the witness says in response to the various questions propounded to him or her." Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 85, at 618–19 (5th ed. 1994).

oral deposition. A deposition given in response to oral questioning by a lawyer. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1381; Pretrial Procedure 151. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 30, 51–53.]

30(b)(6) deposition. Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the deposition of an organization, through the organization's designated representative. • Under Rule 30(b)(6), a party may take the deposition of an organization, such as a corporation. The notice of deposition (or subpoena) may name the organization and may specify the matters to be covered in the deposition. The organization must then designate a person to testify about those matters on its behalf. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6). Most states authorize a similar procedure under state-court procedural rules. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1325.]

3. The written record of a witness's out-of-court testimony. 4. Eccles. law. The involuntary release of a clergyman from the exercise of his office. Cf. DEGRADATION(1); DEPRIVATION(4).

accumulated depreciation.The total depreciation currently recorded on an asset. • On the balance sheet, an asset's total cost less accumulated depreciation reflects the asset's book value. — Also termed accrued depreciation.

annual depreciation.The annual loss to property due to regular wear and tear.

functional depreciation.Depreciation that results from the replacement of equipment that is not yet worn out, but that is obsolete in light of a new invention or improved machinery allowing more efficient and satisfactory production.

DEPRECIATION METHOD

depreciation method.A set formula used in estimating an asset's use, wear, or obsolescence over the asset's useful life. • This method is useful in calculating the allowable annual tax deduction for depreciation. See USEFUL LIFE . [Cases: Internal Revenue 3470–3505; Taxation 1044.C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 223–249, 252, 259–265, 278, 489, 671, 673, 799; Taxation §§ 1741–1742.]

accelerated depreciation method.A depreciation method that yields larger deductions in the earlier years of an asset's life and smaller deductions in the later years.

annuity depreciation method.A depreciation method that allows for a return of imputed interest on the undepreciated balance of an asset's value. • The imputed interest is subtracted from the current depreciation amount before it is credited to the accumulated depreciation accounts.

declining-balance depreciation method.A method of computing the annual depreciation allowance by multiplying the asset's undepreciated cost each year by a uniform rate that may not exceed double the straight-line rate or 150 percent.

double-declining depreciation method.A depreciation method that spreads over time the initial cost of a capital asset by deducting in each period twice the percentage recognized by the straight-line method and applying that double percentage to the undepreciated balance existing at the start of each period.

replacement-cost depreciation method.A depreciation method that fixes an asset's value by the price of its substitute.

sinking-fund depreciation method.A depreciation method that accounts for the time value of money by setting up a depreciation-reserve account that earns interest, resulting in a gradual yearly increase in the depreciation deduction.

straight-line depreciation method.A depreciation method that writes off the cost or other basis of the asset by deducting the expected salvage value from the initial cost of the capital asset, and dividing the difference by the asset's estimated useful life.

sum-of-the-years'-digits depreciation method.A method of calculating the annual depreciation allowance by multiplying the depreciable cost basis (cost minus salvage value) by a constantly decreasing fraction, which is represented by the remaining years of useful life at the beginning of each year divided by the total number of years of useful life at the time of acquisition. — Sometimes shortened to SYD method.

unit depreciation method.A depreciation method — directly related to the productivity of the asset — that divides the asset's value by the estimated total number of units to be produced, and then multiplies the unit cost by the number of units sold during the year, representing the depreciation expense for the year.

units-of-output depreciation method.A method by which the cost of a depreciable asset, minus salvage value, is allocated to the accounting periods benefited based on output (as miles, hours, number of times used, and the like).

DEPRECIATION RESERVE

depreciation reserve.An account, esp. of a public utility, built up to offset the depreciation of property because of time and use, so that at the end of the property's service, there is enough money to replace the property. [Cases: Public Utilities 127. C.J.S. Public Utilities § 28, 37.]

DEROGATION

derogation (der-⟨schwa⟩-gay-sh⟨schwa⟩n), n.1. The partial repeal or abrogation of a law by a later act that limits its scope or impairs its utility and force <statutes in derogation of the common law>. [Cases: Statutes 237, 239. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 380, 382.] 2. Disparagement; depreciation in value or estimation <some argue that the derogation of family values has caused an increase in crime>.3. Detraction, prejudice, or destruction (of a grant or right) <an attorney may be punished for derogation from professional integrity>. — derogate (der-⟨schwa⟩-gayt), vb.

DEROGATION CLAUSE

derogation clause. Int'l law. A reservation in a treaty allowing a signator to refuse to comply with certain provisions. • For example, a signator may be allowed to suspend some or all of its treaty obligations during a war or other national emergency. If a treaty lacks an express derogation clause, then general principles governing suspension or termination of treaties apply.

DEROGATION FROM GRANT

derogation from grant. A provision in an instrument of transfer (such as a deed) that diminishes, avoids, or otherwise operates against the grant itself.

DEROGATORY CLAUSE

derogatory clause. 1. A statutory or contractual provision proclaiming that the document in which it appears, or a part of the document, cannot be repealed or amended. • Such provisions are considered ineffective.

“The one thing a sovereign legislature cannot do is truncate its own sovereignty by restricting its successors. A parliament sovereign today must also be sovereign tomorrow. What is technically called a clausula derogatoria is therefore ineffective: non impedit clausula derogatoria quo minus ab eadem potestate res dissolvantur a qua constituuntur (a derogatory clause does not prevent things from being dissolved by the same power which created them).” F.A.R. Bennion, Statutory Interpretation § 140, at 313 (3d ed. 1997).

2. A clause that a testator inserts secretly in a will, containing a provision that any later will not having that precise clause is invalid. • A derogatory clause seeks to protect against a later will extorted by undue influence, duress, or violence. — Also termed clausula derogativa; clausula derogatoria.

DES

DES.abbr.DELIVERED EX SHIP.

DE SALVA GARDIA

de salva gardia (dee sal-v<<schwa>> gahr-dee-<<schwa>>), n.[Law Latin “of safeguard”] A writ issued to protect strangers from harm while pursuing their legal rights in England.

DE SALVO CONDUCTU

de salvo conductu (dee sal-voh k<<schwa>>n-d<<schwa>>k-t[y]oo). [Law Latin “of safe conduct”] A writ of safe conduct.

DE SA VIE

de sa vie (d<<schwa>> sa vee). [Law French] Of one's own life, as distinguished from pur autre vie (“for another's life”).

DESCEND

descend,vb. To pass (a decedent's property) by intestate succession.

DESCENDANT

descendant (di-sen-d<<schwa>>nt), n. One who follows in lineage, in direct (not collateral) descent from a person. • Examples are children and grandchildren. Cf. ASCENDANT. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 25. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 32.] — descendant,adj.

collateral descendant.Loosely, a blood relative who is not strictly a descendant, like a niece or nephew.

lineal descendant.A blood relative in the direct line of descent. • Children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren are lineal descendants.

DESCENDIBILITY OF FUTURE INTERESTS

descendibility of future interests.The legal possibility that a future interest (such as a remainder or an executory interest) can legally pass by inheritance.

DESCENDIBLE

descendible,adj. (Of property) capable of passing by descent or being inherited. See HERITABLE.

DESCENT

descent,n.1. The acquisition of real property by law, as by inheritance; the passing of intestate real property to heirs. See SUCCESSION(2). Cf. DISTRIBUTION(1); PURCHASE. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 1–19.C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 71, 84; Descent and Distribution §§ 1–22; Right of Privacy and Publicity§ 42.] 2. The fact or process of originating from a common ancestor. Cf. ASCENT. — descend,vb.

collateral descent.Descent in a collateral or oblique line, from brother to brother or cousin to cousin. • With collateral descent, the donor and donee are related through a common ancestor. Cf. collateral descendant under DESCENDANT. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 32–41. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 29, 38–49.]

direct-line descent. See lineal descent.

immediate descent. 1. A descent directly to an heir, as from a grandmother to granddaughter, brought about by the earlier death of the mother. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 25–36. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 29, 32–43.] 2. A direct descent without an intervening link in consanguinity, as from mother to daughter.

lineal descent. Descent in a direct or straight line, as from father or grandfather to son or grandson. — Also termed direct-line descent. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 25. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 32.]

maternal-line descent. Descent between two persons, traced through the mother of the younger.

mediate descent. 1. A descent not occurring immediately, as when a granddaughter receives land from her grandmother, which first passed to the mother. 2. A direct descent occurring through a link in consanguinity, as when a granddaughter receives land from her grandfather directly.

“The law categorizes descents as either lineal or collateral, and as mediate or immediate. The term mediate or immediate descent may denote either the passing of the estate, or the relationship between the intestate and the heir. The classification of descents as mediate or immediate describes the proximity of the descent, while the characterization as lineal or collateral refers to the direction of the descent.” 23 Am. Jur. 2d Descent and Distribution § 49, at 787–88 (1983).

paternal-line descent. Descent between two persons, traced through the father of the younger.

DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION descent and distribution. 1. See intestate succession under SUCCESSION(2). 2. Broadly, the rules by which a decedent's property is passed, whether by intestate succession or by will. See DISTRIBUTION(1).

DESCENT CAST

descent cast. Hist. The devolution of realty that has been acquired by disseisin, abatement, or intrusion, upon an heir whose ancestor died intestate. • This tolled the real owner's right of entry until the owner brought a legal action. — Also termed descent which tolls entry.

DESCRIPTION

description. 1. A delineation or explanation of something by an account setting forth the subject's characteristics or qualities <description of a patentable process>. 2. A representation by words or drawing of something seen or heard or otherwise experienced <description of the criminal> <description of the accident>. 3. An enumeration or specific identification of something < description of items in the estate>. 4. LEGAL DESCRIPTION. 5. Patents. In a U.S. patent application, the section that (1) comprehensively characterizes the invention in language that is clear and complete enough to enable anyone skilled in the relevant art to make and use the invention; (2) explains the best mode for using the invention; and (3) usu. includes an explanation of drawings that are part of the application. • The detailed description typically makes up the largest portion of the application's specification. — Also termed (in sense 5) enabling disclosure; enabling requirement; written description. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

descriptio personae (di-skrip-shee-oh p<<schwa>>r-soh-nee). [Law Latin] Description of the person. • This phrase, typically used to identify or describe a person in a contract or deed, is not essential to a document's validity. Cf. DESIGNATIO PERSONAE.

DESCRIPTIVE COMPARATIVE LAW

descriptive comparative law. See COMPARATIVE LAW.

DESCRIPTIVE MARK

descriptive mark. See descriptive trademark under TRADEMARK.

DESCRIPTIVE TRADEMARK

descriptive trademark. See TRADEMARK.

DESCRIPTIVE WORD

descriptive word. Trademarks. A term that portrays a general characteristic or function of a product or service. • A descriptive word may not be registered as a trademark unless it has acquired secondary meaning in the minds of consumers so that it is directly associated with one brand. [Cases: Trade Regulation 164. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 162.]

“A trader cannot appropriate to his exclusive use words or symbols which (in the application he is to make of them) are public property. The right of all to use descriptive words in their ordinary and usual meaning must not be restricted. No sign or form of words may be appropriated as a trade-mark, for use in its primary meaning, which, from the nature of the fact conveyed by that primary meaning, others may employ with equal truth, and with equal right, for the same purpose.” Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 524 (1929).

DE SCUTAGIO HABENDO

de scutagio habendo (dee skyoo-tay-jee-oh h<<schwa>>-ben-doh), n. [Law Latin “for having scutage”] Hist. 1. A writ ordering a tenant-in-chief by knight's service to serve in a war, send a substitute, or pay a sum of money. 2. A writ authorizing a lord who had served in the war or paid the required fine to recover the scutage from his knight's fees. See SCUTAGE.

“Such a baron, having proved that he fulfilled his contract or paid his fine, will have a royal writ de scutagio habendo, whereby the sheriff will be ordered to cause him to have the scutage due from his tenants. Still, before he can get his scutage, he has to obtain something that the king is apt to treat as a favour.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 270 (2d ed. 1898).

desecrate, vb. To divest (a thing) of its sacred character; to defile or profane (a sacred thing).

DE SECTA AD MOLENDINUM

de secta ad molendinum (dee sek-t<<schwa>> ad m<<schwa>>-len-di-n<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin “of suit at mill”] Hist. A writ forcing a person to continue grinding corn at a particular mill, as was customary, or to give a good reason why the custom should not be continued.

“There are also other services, due by ancient custom and prescription only. Such is that of doing suit to another's mill: where the persons, resident in a particular place, by usage time out of mind have been accustomed to grind their corn at a certain mill; and afterwards any of them go to another mill, and withdraw their suit ... from the ancient mill. This is not only a damage, but an injury, to the owner And for this injury the owner shall have a writ de secta ad molendinum commanding the defendant to do his suit at that mill ... or show good cause to the contrary: in which action the validity of the prescription may be tried, and if it be found for the owner, he shall recover damages against the defendant.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 234–35 (1768).

DE SECTIS NON FACIENDIS

de sectis non faciendis (dee sek-tis non fay-shee-en-dis), n.[Law Latin “of not doing services”] Hist. A writ exempting a ward or dowress from performing certain services.

DESEGREGATION

desegregation, n.1. The abrogation of policies that separate people of different races into different institutions and facilities (such as public schools). [Cases: Schools 13. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 108, 111, 121.] 2. The state of having had such policies abrogated. Cf. INTEGRATION (4). — desegregate, vb.

DE SEISINA HABENDA

de seisina habenda (dee see-zin-<<schwa>> h<<schwa>>-ben-d<<schwa>>), n.[Law Latin “of holding seisin”] Hist. A writ ordering the sovereign to deliver seisin of lands and tenements to a lord, after holding them for the allowed year and a day because the lord's tenant committed a felony.

DESERTER

deserter. Int'l law. A soldier who leaves national military service with the intention of reneging on military obligations either permanently or for the duration of a military operation; a person who illegally abandons a military force, often by seeking refuge in a foreign territory or by joining enemy forces. [Cases: Armed Services 38; Military Justice 661. C.J.S. Armed Services § 156; Military Justice § 55.]

desertion, n. The willful and unjustified abandonment of a person's duties or obligations, esp. to military service or to a spouse or family. • In family law, the five elements of spousal desertion are (1) a cessation of cohabitation, (2) the lapse of a statutory period, (3) an intention to abandon, (4) a lack of consent from the abandoned spouse, and (5) a lack of spousal misconduct that might justify the abandonment. — Also termed gross neglect of duty. Cf. ABANDONMENT. [Cases: Armed Services 38; Divorce 37; Military Justice 661. C.J.S. Armed Services § 156; Divorce §§ 20, 41; Military Justice § 55.] — desert, vb.

constructive desertion. One spouse's misconduct that forces the other spouse to leave the marital abode. • The actions of the offending spouse must be serious enough that the spouse who is forced from the home finds the continuation of the marriage to be unendurable or dangerous to his or her safety and well-being, and finds it necessary to seek safety outside the marital domicile. — Also termed constructive abandonment. [Cases: Divorce 37(22). C.J.S. Divorce §§ 41, 44, 78.]

criminal desertion. One spouse's willful failure without just cause to provide for the care, protection, or support of the other spouse who is in ill health or needy circumstances. [Cases: Husband and Wife 302, 304.]

obstinate desertion. Desertion by a spouse who persistently refuses to return to the marital home, so that the other spouse has grounds for divorce. • Before the advent of no-fault divorce, this term was commonly used in divorce statutes. The term was often part of the longer phrase willful, continued, and obstinate desertion. [Cases: Divorce 37(15). C.J.S. Divorce §§ 41, 78.]

willful, continued, and obstinate desertion. See obstinate desertion.

DESERTS

deserts. See JUST DESERTS.

DESIGN

design, n. 1. A plan or scheme. 2. Purpose or intention combined with a plan.

formed design. Criminal law. The deliberate and fixed intention to kill, though not necessarily a particular person. See PREMEDITATION. [Cases: Homicide 535.]

3. The pattern or configuration of elements in something, such as a work of art. 4. Patents. The drawing or the depiction of an original plan for a novel pattern, model, shape, or configuration that is chiefly decorative or ornamental. • If it meets other criteria, a design may also be protectable as a trademark. — design, vb.

DESIGN AROUND

design around,vb. Patents. To make something that performs the same function or has the same physical properties as (a patented product or process) but in a way different enough from the original that it does not infringe the patent. See DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS.

DESTINATION

destination. 1. The predetermined end of a course, as of a voyage or package shipment. 2. The act of appointment, esp. in a will; a designation. 3. Scots law. The nomination of heirs — esp. in a certain order — by law or under a will.

“The series of heirs called to the succession of heritable or moveable property, either by the provision of the law or by the will of the proprietor, is, generally speaking, termed a destination; but the term is usually applied, in a more limited sense, to a nomination of successors in a certain order, regulated by the will of the proprietor.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 320 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

4.Scots law. The line of successors so appointed.

DESTINATION BILL OF LADING destination bill of lading.See BILL OF LADING.

DESTINATION CONTRACT destination contract.See CONTRACT.

DESTINATION DU PÈRE DE FAMILLE destination du père de famille (des-tee-nah-syawm doo pair d<<schwa>> fa-mee). [French “destination of the father of the family”] 1.Civil law. The legal standing of the owner of two estates that would be subject to a servitude if they were not owned by the same person. • When the two estates cease to be owned by the same owner, a servitude comes into existence if (1) the servitude is apparent from external signs, such as a roadway or a pipeline, or (2) the common owner recorded a declaration establishing the destination. La. Civ. Code art. 741. 2.Hist. A property use that the owner has intentionally established on one part of the property in favor of another part.

DESTINATIONE

destinatione (des-ti-nay-shee-oh-nee). [Law Latin] Hist. By destination or appointment of an heir. • The phrase appeared in reference to the process, made possible through a destination clause, by which an heir was appointed to a succession in a certain order. See DESTINATION(2),(3).

DESTITUTE

destitute (des-ti-t[y]oot), adj.1. Deprived; bereft. 2. Not possessing the necessities of life; lacking possessions and resources; indigent.

DESTITUTIVE FACT

destitutive fact.See divestitive fact under FACT.

DESTRUCTIBILITY

destructibility,n. The capability of being destroyed by some action, turn of events, or operation of law. — destructible,adj.

DESTRUCTIBILITY OF CONTINGENT REMAINDERS destructibility of contingent remainders.Property. The common-law doctrine requiring a future interest to vest by the time it is to become possessory or else suffer total destruction (the interest then reverting to the grantor). The doctrine could be avoided by the use of trustees to preserve contingent remainders. • This doctrine has been abolished in all but a few American jurisdictions; the abolishing statutes are commonly termed anti-destructibility statutes. — Also termed destructibility rule. [Cases: Remainders 10. C.J.S. Estates §§ 88–89, 91–92.]

“The destructibility rule still exists in its old common-law form in Florida. Various authors have suggested that it also exists unchanged in Arkansas, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, and Tennessee; but there are no statutes or recent decisions to clarify the rule's status in these states.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 79 n.46 (2d ed. 1984).

DESTRUCTIBLE TRUST

destructible trust. See TRUST.

DESTRUCTION

destruction. 1. The act of destroying or demolishing; the ruining of something. 2. Harm that substantially detracts from the value of property, esp. personal property. 3. The state of having been destroyed.

DESUETUDE

desuetude (des-w<<schwa>>-t[y]ood). 1. Lack of use; obsolescence through disuse. 2. The doctrine holding that if a statute or treaty is left unenforced long enough, the courts will no longer regard it as having any legal effect even though it has not been repealed. [Cases: Statutes 173. C.J.S. Statutes § 292.]

“[T]he doctrine of desuetude has had in all legal systems a very limited and cautious application. For the anachronistic statute a better remedy may be found through reinterpretation in the light of new conditions; as Gray remarks with some irony. ‘It is not as speedy or as simple a process to interpret a statute out of existence as to repeal it, but with time and patient skill it can often be done.’ ” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 38 (1968) (quoting John Chipman Gray, The Nature and Sources of Law 192 (1921)).

“There is no doctrine of desuetude in English law, so a statute never ceases to be in force merely because it is obsolete. Normally there must be an express repeal, but the whole or part of an enactment may be impliedly repealed by a later statute.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 3 (1976).

DE SUPERONERATIONE PASTURAE

de superoneratione pasturae (dee soo-p<<schwa>>-roh-n<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh-nee pas-ty<<schwa>>-ree), n. [Law Latin “of surcharge of pasture”] Hist. A judicial writ against a person who was initially brought into county court for putting too many cattle on pasture, and later was impleaded in the same court on the same charge, and the cause was removed to the superior court at Westminster.

DE TABULIS EXHIBENDIS

de tabulis exhibendis (dee tab-y<<schwa>>-lis ek-si-ben-dis). [Latin] Roman law. Of producing the tablets of a will. • This was a subject covered under Roman exhibitory interdicts governing the production of documents. A will of a deceased person had to be produced and opened to determine whether the applicant had rights under it.

detainer. 1. The action of detaining, withholding, or keeping something in one's custody.

forcible detainer. See FORCIBLE DETAINDER.

unlawful detainer. The unjustifiable retention of the possession of real property by one whose original entry was lawful, as when a tenant holds over after lease termination despite the landlord's demand for possession. [Cases: Forcible Entry and Detainer 5.]

2. The confinement of a person in custody. 3. A writ authorizing a prison official to continue holding a prisoner in custody. [Cases: Extradition and Detainers 52.] 4. A person who detains someone or something.

DE TALLAGIO NON CONCEDENDO

de tallagio non concedendo (dee t<<schwa>>-lay-jee-oh non kon-s<<schwa>>-den-doh), n.[Law Latin "of not granting tallage"] Hist. The title of a statute declaring that no taxes will be imposed by the king or his heirs without the consent of the archbishops, bishops, earls, barons, knights, and other freemen of the realm. • The statute has been used to support the constitutional doctrine disallowing taxation except by Parliament. 34 Edw., st. 4.

DETECTION

detection. The act of discovering or revealing something that was hidden, esp. to solve a crime.

"There is a clear distinction between inducing a person to do an unlawful act and setting a trap to catch him in the execution of a criminal plan of his own conception. There is also a distinction between the terms 'detection' and 'entrapment,' as applied to the activities of law enforcement officers. Legitimate detection of crime occurs when officers test a suspected person by offering him an opportunity to transgress the law in such manner as is usual in the activity alleged to be unlawful. On the other hand, entrapment occurs when officers induce a person to violate the law when he would not otherwise do so." 21 Am. Jur. 2d Criminal Law § 202 (1981).

DE TEMPORE CUJUS CONTRARIUM MEMORIA HOMINUM NON EXISTIT de tempore cujus contrarium memoria hominum non existit (dee tem-p<<schwa>>-ree k[y]oo-j<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>n-trair-ee-<<schwa>>m m<<schwa>>-mor-ee-<< schwa>> hom-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>m non eg-zis-tit). [Latin] From time whereof the memory of man does not exist to the contrary. See LEGAL MEMORY.

DE TEMPORE IN TEMPUS ET AD OMNIA TEMPORA de tempore in tempus et ad omnia tempora (dee tem-p<<schwa>>-ree in tem-p<< schwa>>s et ad om-nee-<<schwa>> tem-p<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>). [Latin] From time to time, and at all times.

DE TEMPS DONT MEMORIE NE COURT

de temps dont memorie ne court (d<<schwa>> tahn dawnmem-<<schwa>>-ree n<< schwa>> koor). [Law French] From time whereof memory does not run; time out of human memory. • This Law French phrasing was a forerunner of Blackstone's classic formulation: "time whereof the memory of man does not run to the contrary." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 460–61 (1765). See LEGAL MEMORY.

DÉTENTE

détente (day-tahnt). [French] 1. The relaxation of tensions between two or more parties, esp. nations. 2. A policy promoting such a relaxation of tensions. 3. A period during which such tensions are relaxed. Cf. ENTENTE; ALLIANCE.

DETENTIO

detentio (di-ten-shee-oh), n.[Latin] 1.Roman law. See possessio naturalis under POSSESSIO. 2.Hist. Detention; detainment, as opposed to captio ("taking").

DETENTION

detention,n.1. The act or fact of holding a person in custody; confinement or compulsory delay. — detain,vb.

investigative detention.The holding of a suspect without formal arrest during the investigation of the suspect's participation in a crime. • Detention of this kind is constitutional only if probable cause exists.

pretrial detention. 1. The holding of a defendant before trial on criminal charges either because the established bail could not be posted or because release was denied. 2. In a juvenile-delinquency case, the court's authority to hold in custody, from the initial hearing until the probable-cause hearing, any juvenile charged with an act that, if committed by an adult, would be a crime. • If the court finds that releasing the juvenile would create a serious risk that before the return date the juvenile might commit a criminal act, it may order the juvenile detained pending a probable-cause hearing. Juveniles do not have a constitutional right to bail. The Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of such statutes in Schall v. Martin, 467 U.S. 253, 104 S.Ct. 2403 (1984). — Also termed temporary detention.

preventive detention.Confinement imposed usu. on a criminal defendant who has threatened to escape, poses a risk of harm, or has otherwise violated the law while awaiting trial, or on a mentally ill person who may cause harm.

2. Custody of property; esp., an employee's custody of the employer's property without being considered as having legal possession of it.

DETENTION HEARING

detention hearing. See HEARING.

DETENTION IN A REFORMATORY

DE TIGNO JUNCTO

de tigno juncto (dee tig-noh j<<schwa>>gnk-toh). See actio de tigno juncto under ACTIO.

DETINET

detinet (det-i-net). [Latin] He detains. • An action in debt may be in detinet when the plaintiff alleges that the defendant wrongfully kept goods, as distinguished from wrongfully taking them. An action in debt may also be in detinet when it is brought by or against someone other than an original party to the debt, such as an executor. An action of replevin is in detinet when the defendant retains possession of the property until after the judgment. Cf. DEBET ET DETINET.

DETINUE

detinue (det-i-nyoo or -noo). A common-law action to recover personal property wrongfully taken by another. Cf. REPLEVIN; TROVER. [Cases: Detinue 1.C.J.S. Detinue § 1.]

“A claim in detinue lies at the suit of a person who has an immediate right to the possession of the goods against a person who is in actual possession of them, and who, upon proper demand, fails or refuses to deliver them up without lawful excuse. Detinue at the present day has two main uses. In the first place, the plaintiff may desire the specific restitution of his chattels and not damages for their conversion. He will then sue in detinue, not in trover. In the second place, the plaintiff will have to sue in detinue if the defendant sets up no claim of ownership and has not been guilty of trespass; for the original acquisition in detinue sur bailment was lawful.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 111 (17th ed. 1977).

detinue of goods in frankmarriage.Hist. A writ allowing a divorced wife to obtain the goods given to her during the marriage.

detinue sur bailment (det-i-nyoo s<<schwa>>r bayl-m<<schwa>>nt). [Law French] Hist. An action to recover property that the defendant acquired by bailment but refuses to return.

DETINUIT

detinuit (di-tin-yoo-it). [Latin] He has detained. • An action is said to be in the detinuit when the plaintiff finally recovers possession of the property claimed under a writ of replevin.

DETOUR

detour,n. Torts. An employee's minor deviation from the employer's business for personal reasons. • Because a detour falls within the scope of employment, the employer is still vicariously liable for the employee's actions. Cf. FROLIC. [Cases: Master and Servant 302(6); Workers' Compensation 666. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 221–222; Workmen's Compensation § 399.]

DETOURNEMENT

DE TRANSGRESSIONE, AD AUDIENDUM ET TERMINANDUM

de transgressione, ad audiendum et terminandum (dee trans-gresh-ee-oh-nee, ad aw-dee-en-d<<schwa>>m et t<<schwa>>r-mi-nan-d<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin "of trespass, for determining and hearing a misdemeanor"] Hist. A commission for hearing and determining an outrage or misdemeanor.

DETRIMENT

detriment. 1. Any loss or harm suffered by a person or property. 2.Contracts. The relinquishment of some legal right that a promisee would have otherwise been entitled to exercise. — Also termed legal detriment. Cf. BENEFIT(2).

"A promise or an act may be a detriment although on balance the promisor is making a good bargain. Thus a promise to pay £10,000 for a Rolls Royce worth £12,000, is none the less a detriment, and a good consideration for a promise to deliver the car." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 101 (3d ed. 1981).

detriment to a promisee.Contracts. Consideration offered by a promisee to a promisor, esp. in a unilateral contract. [Cases: Contracts 52. C.J.S. Contracts § 90.]

devadiatus (di-vad-ee-ay-t<<schwa>>s), n.[Law Latin] Hist. A defendant without a surety. — Also termed divadiatus.

DEVALUATION

devaluation, n. The reduction in the value of one currency in relation to another currency. Cf. REVALUATION. — devalue, vb.

DEVASTATION devastation. 1. An executor's squandering or mismanagement of the deceased's estate. 2. An act of destruction. 3. WASTE(1).

DEVASTAVERUNT

devastaverunt (di-vas-t<<schwa>>-veer-<<schwa>>nt). [Latin pl. of devastavit “he (or she) has wasted”] They have wasted. • This word usu. referred to both an executor's waste of a decedent's property and the action against the executor for that waste.

DEVASTAVIT

devastavit (dev-<<schwa>>-stay-vit), n.[Latin “he (or she) has wasted”] A personal representative's failure to administer a decedent's estate promptly and properly, esp. by spending extravagantly or misapplying assets. • A personal representative who commits waste in this way becomes personally liable to those having claims on the assets, such as creditors and beneficiaries.

DE VASTO

de vasto (dee vas-toh), n.[Law Latin “of waste”] A writ allowing a reversioner or remainderman to compel a tenant for life or for years to appear and answer for the waste and resulting damage to the plaintiff's inheritance. See WASTE (1).

DEVELOPED WATER

developed water. See WATER.

DEVELOPING COUNTRY developing country. Int'l law. A country that is not as economically or politically advanced as the main industrial powers. • Developing countries are located mostly in Africa, Asia, Eastern Europe, the Middle East, and Latin and South America. — Also termed developing state; underdeveloped country; less-developed country; Third World country.

“Pertinent terminology has undergone extensive changes in the past 40 years. At the very start, before the category found its way into official texts, economic and political writings referred mainly to ‘poor’ or ‘backward’ countries. In the late 1940s, the term ‘underdeveloped countries’ came into common usage in economic literature and in the jargon of international organizations. It was replaced in the 1950s by the term ‘less developed countries,’ for which the current ‘developing countries’ was eventually substituted. These terms are essentially interchangeable as they refer to the same group and kind of countries. However, variations in the use of the term reflect significant changes in the perception of the central issue, namely, economic development, as well as responses to justified sensitivities on the part of the countries principally concerned.” A.A. Fatouros, “Developing States,” in 1 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 1017 (1992).

DEVELOPMENT

development. 1. A human-created change to improved or unimproved real estate, including buildings or other structures, mining, dredging, filing, grading, paving, excavating, and drilling. 2. An activity, action, or alteration that changes undeveloped property into developed property.

DE VENTRE INSPICIENDO

de ventre inspiciendo (dee ven-tree in-spish-ee-en-doh), n. [Law Latin “of (or for) inspecting the belly”] 1. A writ allowing a presumptive heir to summon a jury of matrons to verify the pregnancy of a widow suspected of feigning the pregnancy to produce a supposed heir. — Also termed ad ventrem inspiciendum. See venire facias tot matronas under VENIRE FACIAS.

“And this gives occasion to a proceeding at common law, where a widow is suspected to feign herself with child, in order to produce a supposititious heir to the estate: an attempt which the rigor of the Gothic constitutions esteemed equivalent to the most atrocious theft, and therefore punished with death. In this case with us the heir presumptive may have a writ de ventre inspiciendo to examine whether she be with child, or not ... and, if the widow be upon due examination found not pregnant, any issue she may afterwards produce, though within nine months, will be bastard.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 444 (1765).

2. A writ providing a temporary stay of execution if a jury of matrons determines that a woman scheduled for execution and claiming pregnancy is “quick with child.” • The execution would be postponed until after the birth, but if the woman became pregnant a second time before execution, she had no remedy. — Sometimes shortened to ventre inspiciendo. — Also spelled de ventre in spiciendo.

DE VERBO IN VERBUM

de verbo in verbum (dee v<<schwa>>r-boh in v<<schwa>>r-b<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] deviance, n. The quality or state of departing from established norms, esp. in social customs. — deviate (dee-vee-ayt), vb. — deviant, adj. & n. — deviate (dee-vee-<<schwa>>t), n.

DEVIANCE

DEVIATION

deviation. 1. Generally, a change from a customary or agreed-on course of action. 2. Employment law. A departure from one's course of employment to tend to a personal matter. • A deviation from the course of employment may be an issue in disputes about workers' compensation or about the employer's tort liability to third parties based on the employee's actions. See COURSE OF EMPLOYMENT. Cf. FROLIC. 3. Insurance. A departure by an insured party from a routine course of action, resulting in increased risk of some loss that the insured is indemnified against. [Cases: Insurance 3059. C.J.S. Insurance § 768.] 4. Maritime law. A departure from the terms expressed in a bill of lading or other transportation contract.

“For both geographic deviations and quasi-deviations, the contractual voyage is the benchmark against which the carrier's performance is to be measured. If the parties agreed to an indirect route, the carrier commits no deviation in following it; if the parties agreed to deck carriage, the carrier may stow the cargo on deck. All deviations ‘have one common, indispensable element — a violation of the terms of the bill of lading.’ ” Michael F. Sturley, “Deviation Defined,” in 2A Benedict on Admiralty 122 (7th rev. ed. 2002) (quoting Rockwell Int'l Corp. v. M/V Incotrans Spirit, 707 F.Supp. 272, 273 (S.D. Tex. 1989), aff'd, 998 F.2d 316 (5th Cir. 1993)).

quasi-deviation. A deviation from an agreed-on shipping term other than a deviation in course or destination (e.g., an unreasonable delay or the unauthorized carriage of cargo on deck).

reasonable deviation. A deviation that is justified by circumstances. • If a deviation is reasonable, the carrier does not lose its usual limitations and exemptions under the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act.

unreasonable deviation. A deviation that is not justified by circumstances. • An unreasonable deviation causes the carrier to lose the benefit of its usual limitations and exemptions under the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act.

DEVIATION DOCTRINE

deviation doctrine. 1. A principle allowing variation from a term of a will or trust to avoid defeating the document's purpose. 2. A principle allowing an agent's activity to vary slightly from the scope of the principal's permission. 3. Maritime law. The rule that a carrier loses the benefit of its limitations and exemptions under the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act if a deviation from the terms of the bill of lading is unreasonable, but does not if it is reasonable. [Cases: Insurance 3059. C.J.S. Insurance § 768.]

DEVIATION-WELL SURVEY

deviation-well survey. An examination to determine whether a well is bottomed under another person's land.

DEVICE

device. 1. Patents. A mechanical invention, as differentiated in patent law from a chemical discovery. • A device may be an apparatus or an article of manufacture. — Also termed machine. [Cases: Patents 11. C.J.S. Patents §§ 20, 25.] 2. A scheme to trick or deceive; a stratagem or artifice, as in the law relating to fraud. [Cases: Fraud 3.]

DE VICINETO

de vicineto (dee vi-sin-<<schwa>>-toh or -sI-n*<<schwa>>*-toh). [Law Latin] From a vicinage; from a neighborhood. • This term was generally used in reference to a jury pool. See DE CORPORE COMITATUS.

DE VI LAICA AMOVENDA

de vi laica amovenda (dee vI lay-<<schwa>>-k*<<schwa>>* ay-moh-ven-d*<<schwa>>*), n. [Law Latin “of removing a lay force”] Hist. A writ allowing a parson claiming rights to a church to order a sheriff to remove a group of laymen who, with another parson, had taken control of the church and prevented the new parson from entering.

DEVILING

deviling (dev-<<schwa>>-ling). 1. The act of a barrister's handing a brief over to another to handle a case. 2. The practice of a junior barrister (known as a “devil”) who drafts pleadings or other documents for a senior barrister who approves them, signs them, and is ultimately responsible for the work. — Also spelled devilling.

DEVIL ON THE NECK

devil on the neck. Hist. A torture device made of irons that fastened to a person's neck and legs and then wrenched together to either gradually or quickly break the person's back. • It was often used to coerce confessions.

DEVISABLE

devisable,adj.1. Capable of being bequeathed by a will. 2. Capable of being invented. 3. Feigned.

DEVISAVIT VEL NON

devisavit vel non (dev-<<schwa>>-say-vit [or -zay-vit] vel non), n. [Law Latin “he (or she) devises or not”] Hist. An issue directed from a chancery court to a court of law to determine the validity of a will that has been contested, as by an allegation of fraud or testamentary incapacity. See VEL NON .

DEVISE

devise (di-vIz), n. 1. The act of giving property by will. • Although this term traditionally referred to gifts of real property — and in British usage the term is still confined to real property — in American usage the term has been considerably broadened. In both the Restatement of Property and the Uniform Probate Code, a disposition of any property by will is a devise. In the United States today, it is pedantry to insist that the noun devise be restricted to real property. [Cases: Wills 1. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1, 3, 174.] 2. The provision in a will containing such a gift. 3. Property disposed of in a will. 4. A will disposing of property. Cf. TESTAMENT(1). Cf. BEQUEST; LEGACY. — devise,vb.

alternative devise.A devise that, under the terms of the will, is designed to displace another devise if one or more specified events occur. — Also termed secondary devise. See younger-generation devise.

conditional devise.A devise that depends on the occurrence of some uncertain event. [Cases: Wills 639–668. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1380–1424.]

demonstrative devise.A devise, usu. of a specific amount of money or quantity of property, that is primarily payable from a designated source, but that may be payable from the estate's general assets if the designated property is insufficient. See Restatement (Third) of Property: Wills and Other Donative Transfers § 5.1 (1999). Cf. pecuniary devise.

executory devise.An interest in land, created by will, that takes effect in the future and depends on a future contingency; a limitation, by will, of a future estate or interest in land when the limitation cannot, consistently with legal rules, take effect as a remainder. • An executory devise, which is a type of conditional limitation, differs from a remainder in three ways: (1) it needs no particular estate to support it, (2) with it a fee simple or lesser estate can be limited after a fee simple, and (3) with it a remainder can be limited in a chattel interest after a particular estate for life is created in that interest. See conditional limitation under LIMITATION. [Cases: Wills 7. C.J.S. Wills §§ 58, 63–64, 68.]

failed devise. See lapsed devise.

general devise. 1. A devise, usu. of a specific amount of money or quantity of property, that is payable from the estate's general assets. See Restatement (Third) of Property: Wills and Other Donative Transfers § 5.1 (1999). 2. A devise that passes the testator's lands without specifically enumerating or describing them. [Cases: Wills 583. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1090, 1105.]

lapsed devise. A devise that fails because the devisor outlives the named recipient. — Also termed failed devise; failed gift.

pecuniary devise. A demonstrative devise consisting of money. Cf. demonstrative devise.

primary devise. A devise to the first person named as taker. • For example, a devise of “Blackacre to A, but if A does not survive me then to B” names A as the recipient of the primary devise and B as the recipient of the secondary or alternative devise.

residuary devise. A devise of the remainder of the testator's property left after other specific devises are taken. [Cases: Wills 586. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1176–1179, 1184.]

secondary devise. See alternative devise.

specific devise. A devise that passes a particular piece of property. [Cases: Wills 751. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1662, 1667–1677, 1679–1683.]

younger-generation devise. An alternative devise to a descendant of the recipient of a primary devise. Unif. Probate Code § 2–603. • A devise of “Blackacre to A, but if A does not survive me then to A's child B” creates a younger-generation devise in A's descendant, B. See alternative devise.

devise, vb. To give (property) by will.

“The modern convention which sets apart ‘devise’ for ‘realty’ and ‘bequeath’ for ‘personalty’ is modern; in the middle ages, the English word ... is the equivalent of the French word.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 338 (2d ed. 1899).

DEVISEE

devisee (dev-<<schwa>>-zee or di-vI-zee). A recipient of property by will. Cf. LEGATEE.

first devisee. The first devisee designated to receive an estate under a will.

next devisee. The devisee who receives the remainder of an estate in tail, as distinguished from the first devisee. See FEE TAIL. [Cases: Wills 604. C.J.S. Wills § 1258.]

residuary devisee. The person named in a will who takes the testator's property that remains after the other devises.

DEVISER

deviser. One who invents or contrives <the deviser of these patents>.

DEVISOR

devisor. One who disposes of property (usu. real property) in a will. [Cases: Wills 1. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1, 3, 174.]

DEVOIR

devoir (d<<schwa>>-vwahrordev-wahr).Hist. A duty; a tax. — Also spelled devoire.

“Devoire is as much as to say a duty. It is used in the statute of 2 R. 2, cap. 3, where it is provided, that all the western merchants, being of the king's amity, shall pay all manner of customs and subsidies, and other devoire of Calais.” Termes de la Ley 168 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

DEVOLUTION

devolution (dev-<<schwa>>-loo-sh<<schwa>>n), n. The act or an instance of transferring one's rights, duties, or powers to another; the passing of such rights, duties, or powers by transfer or succession <the federal government's devolution of police power to the states>. — devolutionary,adj. — devolutionist,n.

DEVOLUTIVE APPEAL

devy (d<<schwa>>-vI), vb.[Law French] To die.

DE WARRANTIA CHARTAE

de warrantia chartae (dee w<<schwa>>-ran-shee-<<schwa>> kahr-tee), n. [Law Latin “of a warranty of charter”] Hist. A writ allowing a tenant enfeoffed with a warranty, who was impleaded in an assize or other action in which the tenant could not call upon the warranty, to compel the feoffor to assist the tenant with a plea or defense, or else to pay damages and the value of the land, if it is recovered against the tenant.

“This we still make use of in the form of common recoveries, which are grounded on a writ of entry; a species of action that we may remember relies chiefly on the weakness of the tenant's title, who therefore vouches another person to warrant it In assises indeed, where the principal question is whether the demandant or his ancestors were or were not in possession till the ouster happened, and the title of the tenant is little (if at all) discussed, there no voucher is allowed; but the tenant may bring a writ of warrantia chartae against the warrantor, to compel him to assist him with a good plea or defence, or else to render damages and the value of the land, if recovered against the tenant.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 299 (1768).

DE WARRANTIA DIEI

de warrantia diei (dee w<<schwa>>-ran-shee-<<schwa>> dI-ee-I), n. [Law Latin “of warranty of day”] Hist. A writ ordering a judge not to default a party for nonappearance because the Crown warranted that the party was busy in its service.

DEXTRARIUS

clinical diagnosis.A diagnosis from a study of symptoms only.

physical diagnosis.A diagnosis from physical examination only.

DIAGNOSTIC COMMITMENT

diagnostic commitment. See COMMITMENT.

DIALECTIC

dialectic (dī-lek-tik), n.1. A school of logic that teaches critical examination of the truth of an opinion, esp. by discussion or debate. • The method was applied by ancient philosophers, such as Plato and Socrates, primarily in the context of conversational discussions involving questions and answers, and also by more modern philosophers, such as Immanuel Kant, who viewed it as a theory of fallacies, and G.W.F. Hegel, who applied the term to his philosophy proceeding from thesis, to antithesis, to synthesis. 2. An argument made by critically examining logical consequences. 3. A logical debate. 4. A disputant; a debater. Pl. dialectics.

DIALLAGA

diallage (dī-al-jee), n.[fr. Greek diallag “interchange”] A rhetorical figure of speech in which arguments are placed in several points of view, and then brought to bear on one point.

DIALOGUS DE SCACCARIO

Dialogus de Scaccario (dī-al-g-s dee sk-kair-ee-oh), n.[Law Latin “a dialogue of or about the Exchequer”] Hist. A treatise, written during the reign of Henry II, on the Court of Exchequer, set up in imaginary dialogue form between a master and a disciple. • Although some originally attributed the work to Gervase of Tilbury, it was probably written by Richard Fitz Nigel, the bishop of London under Richard I, and the former Treasurer of the Exchequer.

“The Dialogus de Scaccario is an anonymous book, but there can be little doubt that we are right in ascribing it to Richard Fitz Neal: that is to say, to Richard the son of that Nigel, bishop of Ely The book stands out as an unique book in the history of medieval England, perhaps in the history of medieval Europe. A high officer of state, the trusted counsellor of a powerful king, undertakes to explain to all whom it may concern the machinery of government. He will not deal in generalities, he will condescend to minute details. Perhaps the book was not meant for the general public so much as for the numerous clerks who were learning their business in the exchequer, but still that such a book should be written, is one of the wonderful things of Henry's wonderful reign.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 161–62 (2d ed. 1898).

DIANATIC

dianatic (dī-nat-ik). See DIANOETIC.

DIANOETIC

dianoetic (dī-noh-et-ik), n.[Greek dianoetikos, fr. dia- “through” + noein “to revolve in the mind”] Archaic. A form of logical reasoning that proceeds from one subject to another. — Also termed (erroneously) dianatic.

DIARCHY

diarchy. [fr. Greek dy “two” + archein “rule”] A government jointly ruled by two people, such as William and Mary of England. — Also termed duarchy; dyarchy.

“Dyarchy. A term applied by Mommsen to the Roman principate ... a period in which he held that sovereignty was shared between the princes and the senate. The term has also been given to a system of government, promoted as a constitutional reform in India by Montagu and Chelmsford and introduced by the Government of India Act, 1919. It marked the introduction of democracy into the executive of the British administration of India by dividing the provincial executives into authoritarian and popularly responsible sections composed respectively of councillors appointed by the Crown and ministers appointed by the governor and responsible to the provincial legislative councils The system ended when full provincial autonomy was granted in 1935.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 386 (1980).

diarium (dI-air-ee-<<schwa>>m), n.[fr. Latin dies “day”] Roman law. An allowance (usu. of food) needed for a day; a daily allowance of food or pay. Pl. diaria (dI-air-ee-<<schwa>>).

DIATIM

diatim (dI-ay-t<<schwa>>m). [fr. Latin dies “day”] Every day; daily.

DICA

dica (dI-k<<schwa>>), n.[Law Latin] An account tally. See TALLY(1).

DICAST

dicast (dI-kast ordik-ast), n.[Greek dikastes] Hist. An ancient Greek officer sitting as both judge and juror. • Each dicast was generally a free citizen over the age of 30. The dicasts sat together in groups of 100 to 500, according to each case's importance, and decided cases by a majority.

DICIS CAUSA

dicis causa (dI-sis kaw-z<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. For form's sake; on the surface. • The phrase appeared in reference to transactions completed in a certain form to conceal their true purpose.

DICTATE

dictate, vb. 1. To pronounce orally for transcription. 2. To order; to command authoritatively.

DICTATION

dictation. 1. The act of speaking words to be transcribed. 2. The words so transcribed.

DICTATOR

dictator. 1. Roman law. An absolute ruler appointed in an emergency for a term of six months and subject to reappointment.

“In special emergencies, particularly in times of grave crisis, either consul might appoint a dictator who exercised supreme authority, but not beyond six months, unless reappointed. This was, in effect, a temporary reversion to monarchy.” R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 14 (4th ed. 1956).

2. A person, esp. a ruler, with absolute authority.

DICTUM

dictum (dik-t<<schwa>>m), n.1. A statement of opinion or belief considered authoritative because of the dignity of the person making it. 2. A familiar rule; a maxim. 3. OBITER DICTUM. Pl. dicta. [Cases: Courts 92.C.J.S. Courts §§ 142–143.]

“As a dictum is by definition no part of the doctrine of the decision, and as the citing of it as a part of the doctrine is almost certain to bring upon a brief maker adverse comment, lawyers are accustomed to speak of a dictum rather slightly, and sometimes they go so far as to intimate a belief that the pronouncing of a dictum is the doing of a wrong. Yet it must not be forgotten that dicta are frequently, and indeed usually, correct, and that to give an occasional illustration, or to say that the doctrine of the case would not apply to some case of an hypothetical nature, or to trace the history of a doctrine, even though it be conceded, as it must, that such passages are not essential to the deciding of the very case, is often extremely useful to the profession.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 307 (3d ed. 1914).

dictum proprium (dik-t<<schwa>>m proh-pree-<<schwa>>m). A personal or individual dictum that is given by the judge who delivers an opinion but that is not necessarily concurred in by the whole court and is not essential to the disposition. — Also termed (loosely) dictum propria.

gratis dictum (gray-tis dik-t<<schwa>>m). 1. A voluntary statement; an assertion that a person makes without being obligated to do so. 2. A court's stating of a legal principle more broadly than is necessary to decide the case. 3. A court's discussion of points or questions not raised by the record or its suggestion of rules not applicable in the case at bar.

judicial dictum. An opinion by a court on a question that is directly involved, briefed, and argued by counsel, and even passed on by the court, but that is not essential to the decision. Cf. OBITER DICTUM.

obiter dictum. See OBITER DICTUM.

simplex dictum (sim-pleks dik-t<<schwa>>m). An unproved or dogmatic statement. See IPSE DIXIT.

DICTUM DE KENILWORTH

dictum de Kenilworth (dik-t<<schwa>>m dee ken-<<schwa>>l-w<<schwa>>rth), n. [Law Latin “edict of Kenilworth”] Hist. A declaration of an agreement between Edward I and the barons who had opposed him under the leadership of Simon de Montfort. • The agreement, which concerned rent on the lands forfeited in the rebellion, was so called because it was made at Kenilworth castle in Warwickshire in A.D. 1266. It was published in the Statutes of the Realm and 52 Hen. 3.

DICTION PAGE

dictum page. See pinpoint citation under CITATION(3).

DICTION PROPRIA

dictum propria. See dictum proprium under DICTUM.

DIEBUS FERIATIS

diebus feriatis (dI-<<schwa>>-b*<<schwa>>*s feer-ee-ay-tis). [Latin] Hist. On holidays.

DIEI DICTIO

diei dictio (dI-ee-Idik-shee-oh). [Latin “appointing a day”] Roman law. 1. A magistrate's notice summoning the accused to appear on a fixed day for trial. 2. The service of a summons. — Also written diei dictio; diem dicere.

DIEM CLAUSIT EXTREMUM

diem clausit extremum (dI-*<<schwa>>m klaw-zit ek-stree-m<<schwa>>*m), n. [Law Latin “he closed his last day”] Hist. 1. A chancery writ, founded on the statute of Marlbury, ordering the county escheator, after the death of a chief tenant of the Crown, to summon a jury to determine the amount and value of land owned by the chief tenant, to determine the next heir, and to reclaim the property for the Crown. • It was a type of inquisition post mortem.

“Diem clausit extremum is a writ that lies where the king's tenant that holds in chief, dies; then this writ shall be directed to the excheator, to inquire of what estate he was seised, who is next heir, and his age, and of the certainty and value of the land, and of whom it is holden; and the inquisition shall be returned into the chancery, which is commonly called the office after the death of that person.” Termes de la Ley 169 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

2. An Exchequer writ ordering a sheriff to summon a jury to investigate a Crown debtor's place of death and amount of property owned, and to levy the property of the deceased's heirs and executors. • It was repealed by the Crown Proceedings Act of 1947. “And there is another writ of diem clausit extremum awarded out of the exchequer, after the death of an accomptant or debtor of his majesty, to levy the debt of his heir, executor, administrator's lands or goods.” Termes de la Ley 169 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

DIES

dies (dI-eez), n. [Latin] A day; days. Pl. dies.

dies ad quem (dI-eez ad kwem), n. [Latin “the day to which”] Civil law. An ending date for a transaction; the ending date for computing time, such as the day on which interest no longer accrues.

dies amoris (dI-eez <<schwa>>-mor-is), n.[Law Latin] Hist. A day of favor; esp., a day set by the court for the defendant to make an appearance. • This was usu. the fourth day of the term, which was the first day the court normally sat for business. In addition, the defendant usu. had three days of grace from the summons to appear, but an appearance on the fourth day quarto die post (“on the fourth day thereafter”) was usu. sufficient.

dies a quo (dI-eez ay kwoh), n.[Latin “the day from which”] Civil law. A transaction's commencement date; the date from which to compute time, such as a day when interest begins to accrue. La. Civ. Code art. 1784.

dies cedit (dI-eez see-dit). [Latin “the time begins to run”] Roman & Scots law. The day on which an interest, esp. a legacy, vests; the day on which a conditional obligation becomes due. • An interest usu., but not always, vested on the day of the testator's death. — Also termed dies cedens. Cf. dies venit.

“A legacy was due, or became a valid right, either at the death of the testator or the occurrence of a condition precedent. This vesting of the property or the accruing of an obligation determined the content and nature of the interests involved. What the legatary got was discovered by examining what the legacy actually carried with it on the day when it became vested. To express the fact that the legacy had become vested, the technical expression dies cedit was used.” Max Radin, Handbook of Roman Law 434–35 (1927).

dies comitiales (dI-eez k<<schwa>>-mish-ee-ay-leez). [Latin] Roman law. The 190 days in the year when an election could be held or the people could assemble as a legislative body. • The praetors could not hold court while a legislative assembly was in session.

dies communes in banco (dI-eez k<<schwa>>-myoo-nee in bang-koh), n.[Law Latin “common days before the bench”] 1. Regular appearance dates in court. — Also termed common-return days. 2. An enactment printed under the Statutes of Henry III, regulating continuances and writ return dates.

dies datus (dI-eez day-t<<schwa>>s), n.[Law Latin “a given day”] A continuance, esp. for a defendant before a declaration is filed; a time of respite in a case. • A continuance granted after the filing of the declaration is called an imparlance. See IMPARLANCE.

dies datus in banco (dI-eez day-t<<schwa>>s in bang-koh), n.[Law Latin] A day given before the bench, as distinguished from a day at nisi prius.

dies datus partibus (dI-eez day-t<<schwa>>s pahr-t<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>s), n.[Law Latin “a day given to the parties”] A continuance; an adjournment.

dies datus prece partium (dI-eez day-t<<schwa>>s pree-see pahr-shee-<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin “a day given at the prayer of the parties”] A day given at the parties' request.

dies Dominicus (dI-eez d<<schwa>>-min-i-k<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin] The Lord's day; Sunday.

dies excrescens (dI-eez ek-skree-s<<schwa>>nz), n.[Law Latin “the increasing day”] The additional day in a leap year.

dies fasti (dI-eez fas-tI). [Latin] Roman law. A day when justice could be administered; a day when the praetor could officially pronounce the three words “do,” “dico,” and “addico.” — Also called triverbial days. Cf. NEFASTUS.

dies feriati (dI-eez fer-ee-ay-tI), n.[Latin] Roman & civil law. A holiday; holidays.

dies gratiae (dI-eez gray-shee-ee), n.[fr. Law French jour de grace] Hist. A day of grace, usu. granted to the plaintiff.

dies in banco. See DAYS IN BANK.

dies intercesi (dI-eez in-t<<schwa>>r-sI-zI). [Latin “divided days”] Roman law. A day when the courts were open for only part of the day.

dies iudicis (dI-eez juu-rid-i-k<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin] A day when justice can be administered. • This term was derived from the civil-law term dies fasti. See dies fasti.

dies legitimus (dI-eez l<<schwa>>-jit-i-m<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. A lawful day; a law day.

dies marchiae (dI-eez mahr-kee-ee), n.[Law Latin “a day of the march”] Hist. In the reign of Richard II, the annual day set aside for the wardens of the English and Scottish borders to hold peace talks and resolve differences.

dies nefasti (dI-eez nee-fas-tI), n. See NEFASTUS; dies non iudicis.

dies non (dI-eez non). See dies non iudicis.

dies non iudicis (dI-eez non juu-rid-i-k<<schwa>>s), n.[Law Latin “a day not juridical”] A day exempt from court proceedings, such as a holiday or a Sunday. — Often shortened to dies non.

dies pacis (dI-eez pay-sis), n.[Law Latin “day of peace”] Hist. A day of peace. • The days were originally divided into two categories: dies pacis ecclesiae (“a day of the peace of the church”) and dies pacis regis (“a day of the Crown's peace”).

dies religiosi (dI-eez ri-lij-ee-oh-sI). [Latin] Roman law. Religious days on which it was unlawful to transact legal or political business.

dies solaris (dI-eez s<<schwa>>-lair-is), n.[Law Latin “a solar day”] See solar day under DAY.

dies solis (dI-eez soh-lis). [Latin “day of the sun”] Roman law. Sunday.

dies utiles (dI-eez yoo-t<<schwa>>-leez). [Latin “available days”] Roman law. A day when something can be legally done, such as an application to the praetor to claim an inheritance.

dies venit (dI-eez vee-nit). [Latin “the day has come”] Roman & Scots law. The date when an interest is both vested and actionable. • It is usu. the day when the heir accepts the inheritance and a legatee can claim payment of a legacy. — Also termed dies veniens. Cf. dies cedit.

dies votorum (dI-eez voh-tor-*<<schwa>>*m), n.[Latin “a day of vows”] A wedding day.

diet. 1. A regimen, esp. of food. 2. A governing body's meeting day for legislative, political, or religious purposes; specif., a national assembly of various European countries, such as the diet of the German empire, which was summoned by the emperor regularly to perform various functions, including levying taxes, enacting laws, and declaring war. 3.Scots law. A day to perform a duty, such as a court sitting day, an appearance day, and a criminal pleading or trial day. — Also spelled dyet.

“In procedure on indictment there are two diets, the pleading diet, when the accused is called to plead, and the trial diet when, if he has pled not guilty, he is tried.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 357 (1980).

DIETA

dieta (dI-ee-t*<<schwa>>*), n.[fr. Latin dies “day”] Hist. 1.A day's journey. 2. A day's work. 3. A day's expenses.

DIETARY LAW

dietary law.Any of the body of laws observed by members of various faiths regulating what foods may be eaten, how the foods must be prepared and served, and what combinations and contacts (e.g., between meat and milk) are prohibited.

di. et fi.(dI et fI).abbr.DILECTO ET FIDELI.

DIEU ET MON DROIT

Dieu et mon droit (dyuu ay mawndrwah). [French “God and my right”] The motto of the royal arms of England. • It was first used by Richard I and, with the exception of Elizabeth I, was continually used from Edward III to William III, who used the motto je maintiendrey. Queen Anne used Elizabeth I's motto, semper eadem, but Dieu et mon droit has been used since her death.

DIEU SON ACTE

Dieu son acte (dyuu sawnakt), n.[Law Latin “an act of God”] Hist. An act of God, beyond human control.

DIFFACERE

diffacere (di-fay-s<<schwa>>-ree), vb.[fr. Old French deffacer] Hist. To deface; to mutilate. — Also termed disfacere; defacere.

DIFFERENT-DEPARTMENT RULE different-department rule. A doctrine holding that people who work for the same employer are not fellow servants if they do not do the same work or do not work in the same department. • This rule, which creates an exception to the fellow-servant doctrine, has been rejected by many jurisdictions. See FELLOW-SERVANT DOCTRINE E; fellow servant under SERVANT.

DIFFERENTIAL PRICING differential pricing. The setting of the price of a product or service differently for different customers. See PRICE DISCRIMINATION.

DIFFORCIARE

difforciare (di-for-shee-air-ee), vb.[Law Latin “to deny”] Hist. To keep (something) from someone; to deny (something) to someone.

DIGAMY

digamy (dig-<<schwa>>-mee). See DEUTEROGAMY.

DIGEST

digest, n. 1. An index of legal propositions showing which cases support each proposition; a collection of summaries of reported cases, arranged by subject and subdivided by jurisdiction and court. • The chief purpose of a digest is to make the contents of reports available and to separate, from the great mass of caselaw, those cases bearing on some specific point. The American Digest System covers the decisions of all American courts of last resort, state and federal, from 1658 to present. — Abbr. D.; Dig.

“An important and numerous class of books included in the general division designated as books of secondary authority is the group known by the generic name of ‘Digests.’ A Digest is essentially an index to Cases. But it is much more than an ordinary index, for it indicates the holdings and (in some, though not all, publications) the facts of each case. Any particular digest is a summary of the case law coming within its scope, and its units are summaries of particular points of particular cases. What the syllabi of a reported case are to that case, a digest is to many cases. Were a digest simply a collection of citations to cases, arranged logically according to the contents of such cases, it would be a search book; but, being a summary of the case law, it is a book of secondary authority.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 68 (3d ed. 1914).

2.Civil law. (cap.) A compilation and systematic statement of the various areas of law; chiefly, the Pandects of Justinian in 50 books, known as the Digest. — Also termed digesta; digests. See PANDECT(2).

DIGITAL AGENDA

digital agenda.Copyright. A series of ten proposed changes to copyright law announced by WIPO in 1999 and designed to protect intellectual-property rights on the Internet while promoting e-commerce. — Also termed WIPO digital agenda.

DIGITAL CASH

digital cash.See e-money under MONEY.

DIGITAL CERTIFICATE

digital certificate.A publicly available computer-based record that identifies the certifying authority and the subscriber who was issued a digital signature for electronically transmitted documents and that also provides the person's public key for decrypting the digital signature. • Subscribers register with certification authorities to obtain digital signatures. Certificates may include additional information, including issuance and expiration dates, and recommended reliance limits for transactions relying on the certificate. The certificate also serves as an electronic notarization when attached to an electronic document by the sender.

DIGITAL FINGERPRINTING

digital fingerprinting.See STEGANOGRAPHY.

DIGITAL MILLENNIUM COPYRIGHT ACT

Digital Millennium Copyright Act.A 1998 federal law harmonizing United States copyright protection with international law, limiting copyright liability for Internet service providers, and expanding software owners' ability to copy programs. • Among many other provisions, the statute extends copyright protection to computer programs, movies, and other audiovisual works worldwide; attempts to regulate cyberspace; forbids devices whose purpose is to evade digital antipiracy tools; and bars the production or distribution of falsified copyright-management information. 17 USCA §§ 1301–1332. — Abbr. DMCA.

DIGITAL SAMPLING

digital sampling. See SAMPLING.

DIGITAL SIGNATURE

digital signature. See SIGNATURE.

DIGITAL WATERMARKING

digital watermarking. See STEGANOGRAPHY.

DIGNITARY

dignitary, adj. Of or relating to one's interest in personal dignity, as contrasted with one's interest in freedom from physical injury and property damage. • Tort actions that compensate a plaintiff for a dignitary insult rather than physical injury or property damage include false-light privacy and negligent infliction of emotional distress.

dignitary, n. 1. A person who holds a high rank or honor. 2. Eccles. law. A person who, by virtue of holding a superior office, stands above ordinary priests and canons.

DIGNITARY TORT

dignitary tort. See TORT.

DIGNITY

dignity, n. 1. The state of being noble; the state of being dignified. 2. An elevated title or position. 3. A person holding an elevated title; a dignitary. 4. A right to hold a title of nobility, which may be hereditary or for life.

“Dignities may be hereditary, such as peerages ..., or for life, such as life peerages and knighthoods. The dignities of peerages and baronetcies are created by writ or letters patent, that of knighthood by dubbing as knight. A dignity of inheritance may also exist by prescription. Dignities of inheritance are incorporeal hereditaments having been originally annexed to the possession of certain lands or created by a grant of those lands and are generally limited to the grantee and his heirs or his heirs of the body. If heirs are not mentioned, the grantee holds for life only. The heirs are determined by the rules which governed the descent of land prior to 1926.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 358 (1980).

dijudication (di-joo-d<<schwa>>-kay-sh<<schwa>>n). Archaic. A judicial determination.

DILAPIDATION

dilapidation. (often pl.) Damage to a building resulting from acts of either commission or omission. • A dilapidation may give rise to liability if it constitutes an act of waste, a breach of contract, or a statutory violation.

DILAPIDATIONS, ACTION FOR

dilapidations, action for (d<<schwa>>-lap-<<schwa>>-day-sh<<schwa>>nz).Hist. An action brought by a new incumbent of a benefice for damages rising from the disrepair of the houses or buildings on the benefice. • The incumbent — whether of a rectory, a vicarage, or a chapel — sued the executors or administrators of the incumbent's deceased predecessor (who was not liable for the disrepairs while living). The incumbent of a benefice was bound to maintain the parsonage, farm buildings, and chancel in good and substantial repair, restoring and rebuilding when necessary, according to the original plan. But the incumbent did not have to supply or maintain anything in the nature of ornament.

DILATORY

dilatory (dil-<<schwa>>-tor-ee), adj. Tending to cause delay <the judge's opinion criticized the lawyer's persistent dilatory tactics>.

DILATORY DEFENSE

dilatory defense.See DEFENSE(1).

DILATORY EXCEPTION

DILATORY PLEA

dilatory plea.See PLEA(3).

DILECTO ET FIDELI

dilecto et fideli (di-lek-toh et fi-dee-II). [Law Latin] To his beloved and faithful. • This phrase was used in various writs. — Abbr. di. et fi.

DILIGENCE

diligence. 1. A continual effort to accomplish something. 2. Care; caution; the attention and care required from a person in a given situation. • The Roman-law equivalent is diligentia. See DILIGENTIA.

“Care, or the absence of negligentia, is diligentia. The use of the word diligence in this sense is obsolete in modern English, though it is still retained as an archaism of legal diction. In ordinary usage, diligence is opposed to idleness, not to carelessness.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 393 n. (i) (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

common diligence. 1. See due diligence (1).2. See ordinary diligence.

due diligence. 1. The diligence reasonably expected from, and ordinarily exercised by, a person who seeks to satisfy a legal requirement or to discharge an obligation. — Also termed reasonable diligence; common diligence. 2. Corporations & securities. A prospective buyer's or broker's investigation and analysis of a target company, a piece of property, or a newly issued security. • A failure to exercise due diligence may sometimes result in liability, as when a broker recommends a security without first investigating it adequately. [Cases: Securities Regulation 25.21(4), 25.62(2). C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 87, 95.] extraordinary diligence. Extreme care that a person of unusual prudence exercises to secure rights or property.

great diligence. The diligence that a very prudent person exercises in handling his or her own property like that at issue. — Also termed high diligence.

low diligence. See slight diligence.

necessary diligence. The diligence that a person is required to exercise to be legally protected.

ordinary diligence. The diligence that a person of average prudence would exercise in handling his or her own property like that at issue. — Also termed common diligence.

reasonable diligence. 1. A fair degree of diligence expected from someone of ordinary prudence under circumstances like those at issue. 2. See due diligence (1).

slight diligence. The diligence that a person of less than common prudence takes with his or her own concerns. — Also termed low diligence.

special diligence. The diligence expected from a person practicing in a particular field of specialty under circumstances like those at issue.

3. Patents. Speed and perseverance in perfecting an invention. • Diligence is one factor in deciding which of two or more independent inventors will be granted a patent: if the first inventor cannot prove reasonable diligence in reducing the invention to practice, a later inventor may take priority. [Cases: Patents 90(3). C.J.S. Patents § 125.] 4. Scots law. A court-issued warrant to compel something, such as the attendance of a witness or the enforcement of an unpaid judgment debt. 5. Scots law. Any legal process available to a creditor to seize a debtor's property to compel the debtor to answer an action for debt, to preserve the property as security for a judgment that the creditor may obtain, or to liquidate the property in satisfaction of a judgment already obtained. • Forms of diligence include adjudication, arrestment, inhibition, poiding, and sequestration for rent. Until the mid-20th century, a debtor could also be imprisoned. The term diligence is also sometimes used to denote a warrant that may be granted to compel a witness's attendance or to compel production of documents. See EXECUTION(3).

DILIGENCE AGAINST THE HERITAGE

diligence against the heritage. Scots law. A writ of execution allowing a creditor to proceed against a debtor's real property.

DILIGENT

diligent,adj. Careful; attentive; persistent in doing something.

DILIGENTIA

diligentia (dil-⟨schwa⟩-jen-shee-⟨schwa⟩), n.[Latin] Roman law. Carefulness; diligence. • The failure to exercise diligentia might make a person liable if contractually obliged to look after another's interests, or it might result in tort liability. See DILIGENCE. Cf. NEGLIGENTIA.

“The texts distinguish two standards of diligence, a higher and a lower. The higher is the diligence which the good father of a family habitually exhibits in his own affairs (diligentia exacta or exactissima — diligentia boni patrisfamilias). The lower is the diligence which the person in question exhibits in his own affairs (diligentia quam suis rebus). This may, in fact, reach a high degree of diligence or it may not. But, at least, where this standard is applied nothing extraordinary is expected. It is a concrete standard. It is enough that the person in question pursues his normal course. According to a traditional terminology, where the first standard is applied, there is said to be liability for culpa levis in abstracto — slight negligence in the abstract; in the second case there is liability for culpa levis in concreto — slight negligence in the concrete.” R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 288 (4th ed. 1956).

diligentia exactissima (dil-⟨schwa⟩-jen-shee-⟨schwa⟩ eks-ak-tis-⟨schwa⟩-m⟨schwa⟩). [Latin] Extraordinary diligence that a head of a family habitually exercises in business. — Also termed diligentia exacta; diligentia boni patrisfamilias. See extraordinary diligence under DILIGENCE.

diligentia media (dil-i-jen-shee-⟨schwa⟩ mee-dee-⟨schwa⟩). [Law Latin] Scots law. Middle level of diligence; the level of diligence that a person of ordinary prudence exercises in his or her own affairs. — Also termed diligentia quam suis rebus (dil-⟨schwa⟩-jen-shee-⟨schwa⟩ kwam s[y]oo-is ree-b⟨schwa⟩s). See ordinary diligence under DILIGENCE.

diligentia quam suis rebus. See diligentia media.

exacta diligentia (eg-zak-t⟨schwa⟩ dil-⟨schwa⟩-jen-shee-⟨schwa⟩). [Latin] Roman law. Great care.

DILIGENT INQUIRY

diligent inquiry. A careful and good-faith probing to ascertain the truth of something.

DILIGIATUS

diligiatus (d⟨schwa⟩-lij-ee-ay-t⟨schwa⟩s), n.[fr. Latin dis- “apart” + ligius “under legal protection”] A person cast out of the law's protection; an outlaw.

DILLON'S RULE

Dillon's rule. The doctrine that a unit of local government may exercise only those powers that the state expressly grants to it, the powers necessarily and fairly implied from that grant, and the powers that are indispensable to the existence of the unit of local government. • For the origins of this rule, see 1 John F. Dillon, The Law of Municipal Corporations § 89, at 115 (3d ed. 1881). [Cases: Municipal Corporations 57. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 104, 106, 108, 110–115, 117–118, 122, 137–138, 143, 145–146.]

DILUTION

dilution. 1. The act or an instance of diminishing a thing's strength or lessening its value. 2. Corporations. The reduction in the monetary value or voting power of stock by increasing the total number of outstanding shares. 3. Constitutional law. The limitation of the effectiveness of a particular group's vote by legislative reapportionment or political gerrymandering. • Such dilution violates the Equal Protection Clause. — Also termed vote dilution. [Cases: Constitutional Law 225.3(2). C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 818.] 4. Trademarks. The impairment of a famous trademark's strength, effectiveness, or distinctiveness through the use of the mark on an unrelated product, usu. blurring the trademark's distinctive character or tarnishing it with an unsavory association. • Trademark dilution may occur even when the use is not competitive and when it creates no likelihood of confusion. The elements of trademark dilution are (1) ownership of a famous mark and (2) actual dilution. But a plaintiff does not have to prove actual loss of sales or profits. Moseley v. V Secret Catalogue, Inc., 537 U.S. 418, 123 S.Ct. 1115 (2003). See BLURRING; TARNISHMENT. [Cases: Trade Regulation 366. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 79.]

DILUTION ACT

Dilution Act. See FEDERAL TRADEMARK DILUTION ACT.

DILUTION DOCTRINE

dilution doctrine. Trademarks. The rule protecting a trademark from a deterioration in strength, as when a person seeks to use the mark for an unrelated product.

DIMIDIETAS

diplomacy, n. Int'l law. 1. The art and practice of conducting negotiations between national governments.

open diplomacy. Diplomacy carried on with free access to interested observers and members of the press.

parliamentary diplomacy. The negotiations and discussions carried out in international organizations according to their rules of procedure.

secret diplomacy. Diplomacy carried on behind closed doors. — Also termed quiet diplomacy.

shuttle diplomacy. Diplomatic negotiations assisted by emissaries, who travel back and forth between negotiating countries. • In legal contexts, the term usu. refers to a similar approach used by a mediator in negotiating the settlement of a lawsuit. The mediator travels back and forth between different rooms, one of which is assigned to each side's decision-makers and counsel. The mediator relays offers and demands between the rooms and, by conferring with the parties about their positions and about the uncertainty of litigation, seeks to reach an agreed resolution of the case. The mediator does not bring the parties together in the same room.

2. Loosely, foreign policy. 3. The collective functions performed by a diplomat. — diplomatic, adj. — diplomat, n.

DIPLOMATIC

DIPLOMATIC POUCH

diplomatic pouch. 1. A bag containing official correspondence, documents, or articles intended exclusively for official communications of a nation with its missions, consular posts, or delegations. 2. The contents of the bag. — Also termed diplomatic bag; valise diplomatique.

DIPLOMATIC PROTECTION

diplomatic protection. Protection given by one country's representatives to a person, usu. its citizen, against another country's alleged violation of international law.

“The term diplomatic protection is not altogether precise. First, not only diplomatic agents and missions and other foreign offices may and do exercise diplomatic protection, but also, at a different level, consuls, and, although very rarely, military forces. Secondly, the term diplomatic protection does not clearly denote the boundary line to other diplomatic activities for the benefit of individuals, such as mere promotion of interests in one's own nationals in a foreign State, or friendly intercessions with foreign authorities. Thus, diplomatic or consular actions to obtain concessions or other government contracts for nationals from the receiving State, or the arrangement of legal defense for a justly imprisoned national are not diplomatic protection in our sense; they are usually neither directed against the other State nor based on a real or alleged violation of international law. All these last-mentioned activities may be called diplomatic protection only if the term is taken in a very broad sense.” William Karl Geck, “Diplomatic Protection,” in 1 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 1046 (1992).

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS

diplomatic relations. Int'l law. The customary form of permanent contact and communication between sovereign countries. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls 3; International Law 10–10.2. C.J.S. Ambassadors and Consuls §§ 15–23; International Law §§ 9–12.]

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATION diplomatic representation. See REPRESENTATION(5).

diplomatics. The science of deciphering and authenticating ancient writings. • The principles were largely developed by the Benedictine Dom Mabillon in his 1681 work entitled De re diplomatica. — Also termed diplomatic (n.).

“Diplomatics, the science derived from the study of ancient diplomas, so called from being written on two leaves, or on double tablets. The Romans used the term more specially for the letters of license to use the public conveyances provided at the different stations, and generally for public grants. Subsequently it attained a more extended signification, and in more modern times has been used as a general term for ancient imperial and ecclesiastical acts and grants, public treaties, deeds of conveyance, letters, wills, and similar instruments, drawn up in forms and marked with peculiarities varying with their dates and countries. With the revival of literature, the importance of such documents in verifying facts and establishing public and private rights led to their being brought together from the historical works and the monastic registers in which they had been copied, or, in rarer instances, from public and ecclesiastical archives where the originals were still preserved. Then arose questions of authenticity, and doubts of the so-called originals; disputants defended or condemned them; and, in order to establish principles for distinguishing the genuine from the forged, treatises were written on the whole subject of these diplomas.” 7 Encyclopaedia Britannica 220 (9th ed. 1907).

DIPLOMATIC SECURITY SERVICE

Diplomatic Security Service. A bureau of the U.S. Department of State having responsibility for protecting the Secretary of State and domestic and foreign dignitaries, as well as for investigating criminal activities such as identity-document fraud involving U.S. passports and visas. • The Service now employs some 800 special agents (members of the U.S. Foreign Service), who are located throughout the United States and in scores of embassies worldwide.

DIPTYCH

diptych (dip-tik), n. [fr. Greek diptycha “two-leaved”] 1. Roman law. Two tablets usu. made of wood or metal and tied with string through holes at the edges so that they could fold over (like a book with two leaves). • Diptychs were often used to send letters, and the text was sometimes written using a stylus, once on the inside waxed leaves and again on the outside, so that it could be read without opening the tablets. 2. Hist. Eccles. law. Tablets used by the church, esp. to register names of those making supplication, and to record births, marriages, and deaths. 3. Hist. Eccles. law. The registry of those names.

“The recitation of the name of any prelate or civil ruler in the diptychs was a recognition of his orthodoxy; its omission, the reverse. The mention of a person after death recognized him as having died in the communion of the church, and the introduction of his name into the list of saints or martyrs constituted canonization. In liturgics the diptychs are distinguished as the diptychs of the living and the diptychs of the dead, the latter including also the commemoration of the saints In the Western Church the use of the diptychs died out between the ninth and the twelfth century; in the Eastern Church it still continues.” 2 The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia (1895).

“Diptychs were used in the time of the Roman empire for sending letters The consula and quaestors used, on assuming office, to send diptychs containing their names and portraits to their friends The early Christians used tablets thus made in the celebration of divine worship They were placed on ... the pulpits, or reading desks, which may still be seen in ancient basilicas at the west end of the choir or presbytery; and from them were read to the congregation of the faithful the names of the celebrating priests, of those who occupied the superior positions in the Christian hierarchy, of the saints, martyrs, and confessors, and, in process of time, also of those who had died in the faith... The inscription on the diptychs of deaths and baptisms, naturally led to the insertion of dates, and the diptychs seem thus to have grown into calendars, and to have been the germ from which necrologies, lists of saints, and almanacs have been developed.” 7 Encyclopaedia Britannica 223–24 (9th ed. 1907).

[Cases: Civil Rights 1019, 1218; Workers' Compensation 802.C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 2, 6–7, 9–10, 19, 21, 61.]

developmental disability.An impairment of general intellectual functioning or adaptive behavior.

partial disability.A worker's inability to perform all the duties that he or she could do before an accident or illness, even though the worker can still engage in some gainful activity on the job. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 856–859. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 562–564, 566.]

permanent disability.A disability that will indefinitely prevent a worker from performing some or all of the duties that he or she could do before an accident or illness. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 863–864. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 567–574.]

physical disability.An incapacity caused by a physical defect or infirmity, or by bodily imperfection or mental weakness.

temporary disability.A disability that exists until an injured worker is as far restored as the nature of the injury will permit. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 863–864. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 567–574.]

temporary total disability.Total disability that is not permanent.

total disability.A worker's inability to perform employment-related duties because of a physical or mental impairment. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 846–852. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 556–561.]

3. Incapacity in the eyes of the law <most of a minor's disabilities are removed when he or she turns 18>. — Also termed incapacity.

canonical disability.A canonical impediment (usu. impotence). See canonical impediment under IMPEDIMENT.

A declaration that a voidable contract (such as one entered into by a minor) is void. — Also termed disaffirmation. [Cases: Infants 58(1). C.J.S. Infants §§ 166, 172–174.]

“Disaffirmance is an operative act whereby the legal relations created by an infant's contract are terminated and discharged and other legal relations substituted. Inasmuch as the infant's executory promise does not operate to create any legal duty in him (the infant being at all times at liberty or privileged not to perform), his disaffirmance is not the discharge of such a duty. A return promise by an adult, however, creates a legal duty and the infant has a correlative right in personam. A disaffirmance terminates these.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 181 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

disafforest (dis-⟨schwa⟩-for-⟨schwa⟩st or -fahr-⟨schwa⟩st), vb.[fr. French desaforester] Hist. To free lands from the restrictions of the forest laws and return them to the status of ordinary lands. — Also termed deafforest.

DISASTER LOSS

disaster loss. See LOSS.

DISASTER RELIEF ACT

Disaster Relief Act. A federal statute that provides a means by which the federal government can help state and local governments to relieve suffering and damage resulting from disasters such as hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, landslides, mudslides, drought, fire, and explosions. • A 1974 amendment established a process for the President to declare affected communities disaster areas.

DISAVOW

disavow (dis- <<schwa>>-vow), vb. To disown; to disclaim knowledge of; to repudiate <the company disavowed the acts of its agent>. — disavowal, n.

DISBARMENT

disbarment, n. The action of expelling a lawyer from the bar or from the practice of law, usu. because of some disciplinary violation. • One who has passed the bar, been called to the bar, or been admitted to the bar is privileged to stand inside the wooden barrier that separates the gallery from the actual courtroom, particularly the judge's bench, and conduct business with the court. So this term literally describes the loss of the privilege. Although disbarment is typically a permanent removal from the practice of law, in some jurisdictions a disbarred attorney may (after a certain period) petition for readmission. In England and Wales, only a barrister is disbarred; a solicitor is struck off the roll, so the expulsion of a solicitor is termed striking off the roll. See STRUCK OFF. [Cases: Attorney and Client 58. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 116–118.] — disbar, vb.

DISBOCATIO

disbocatio (dis-b <<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh), n. [fr. Law Latin dis- + boscus “wood”] Hist. The conversion of forest to pasture.

DISCEPTATIO CAUSAE

disceptatio causae (di-sep-tay-shee-oh kaw-zee). [Latin “debate about a case”] Roman law. The argument by the advocates of both sides of a dispute.

DISCHARGE

discharge (dis-chahrj), n.1. Any method by which a legal duty is extinguished; esp., the payment of a debt or satisfaction of some other obligation. 2.Bankruptcy. The release of a debtor from monetary obligations upon adjudication of bankruptcy; DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY. Cf. RELEASE(1). [Cases: Bankruptcy 3251. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 288–290.] 3. The dismissal of a case. 4. The canceling or vacating of a court order. 5. The release of a prisoner from confinement.

unconditional discharge. 1. A release from an obligation without any conditions attached. 2. A release from confinement without any parole requirements to fulfill.

6. The relieving of a witness, juror, or jury from further responsibilities in a case. 7. The firing of an employee.

constructive discharge.A termination of employment brought about by making the employee's working conditions so intolerable that the employee feels compelled to leave. [Cases: Civil Rights 1123; Master and Servant 31(2). C.J.S. Civil Rights § 28; Employer–Employee Relationship § 53.]

“Most constructive discharges fall into one of two basic fact patterns. First, the employer can cause a constructive discharge by breaching the employee's contract of employment in some manner short of termination. Second, the employer can make working conditions so intolerable that the employee feels compelled to quit.” Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law § 9.7, at 539 (1994).

retaliatory discharge.A discharge that is made in retaliation for the employee's conduct (such as reporting unlawful activity by the employer to the government) and that clearly violates public policy. • Federal and state statutes may entitle an employee who is dismissed by retaliatory discharge to recover damages. [Cases: Civil Rights 1247, 1249(2); Master and Servant 30(6.5). C.J.S. Civil Rights § 66; Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 68, 70, 72, 79.]

wrongful discharge.A discharge for reasons that are illegal or that violate public policy. [Cases: Civil Rights 1122; Master and Servant 30. C.J.S. Civil Rights § 28; Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 35, 38–40, 42–43, 56, 60.]

8. The dismissal of a member of the armed services from military service <the sergeant was honorably discharged>. [Cases: Armed Services 11, 22.C.J.S. Armed Services §§ 37, 80–81, 83–103.]

administrative discharge.A military-service discharge given by administrative means and not by court-martial.

bad-conduct discharge.A punitive discharge that a court-martial can give a member of the military, usu. as punishment for repeated minor offenses. —Abbr. BCD.

dishonorable discharge.The most severe punitive discharge that a court-martial can give to a member of the military. • A dishonorable discharge may result from conviction for an offense recognized in civilian law as a felony or of a military offense requiring severe punishment. Only a general court-martial can give a dishonorable discharge.

general discharge.One of the administrative discharges given to a member of the military who does not qualify for an honorable discharge.

honorable discharge.A formal final judgment passed by the government on a soldier's entire military record, and an authoritative declaration that he or she has left the service in a status of honor. • Full veterans' benefits are given only to a person honorably discharged.

undesirable discharge.One of the administrative discharges given to a member of the military who does not qualify for an honorable discharge.

9.Parliamentary law. A motion by which a deliberative assembly, having referred a matter to a committee, takes the matter's further consideration out of the committee and back into its own hands. — Also termed discharge a committee; withdrawal. — discharge (dis-chahrj), vb.

DISCHARGEABILITY PROCEEDING dischargeability proceeding.Bankruptcy. A hearing to determine whether a debt is dischargeable or is subject to an exception to discharge. 11 USCA § 523. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3381. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 18, 337, 340.]

DISCHARGEABLE CLAIM

dischargeable claim.Bankruptcy. A claim that can be discharged in bankruptcy. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3341–3362. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 316–336, 344, 348.]

DISCHARGED CONTRACT

discharged contract.See void contract under CONTRACT.

DISCHARGE HEARING discharge hearing.Bankruptcy. A hearing at which the court informs the debtor either that a discharge has been granted or the reasons why a discharge has not been granted. See REAFFIRMATION HEARING. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3318.1.]

DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY discharge in bankruptcy. 1. The release of a debtor from personal liability for prebankruptcy debts; specif., discharge under the United States Bankruptcy Code. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3251. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 288–290.] 2. A bankruptcy court's decree releasing a debtor from that liability.

DISCHARGING BOND

discharging bond. See BOND(2).

DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDING disciplinary proceeding. An action brought to reprimand, suspend, or expel a licensed professional or other person from a profession or other group because of unprofessional, unethical, improper, or illegal conduct. • A disciplinary proceeding against a lawyer may result in the lawyer's being suspended or disbarred from practice. [Cases: Licenses 38. C.J.S. Agriculture § 4.5; Architects § 10; Licenses §§ 48, 50–63.]

DISCIPLINARY RULE

disciplinary rule. (often cap.) A mandatory regulation stating the minimum level of professional conduct that a professional must sustain to avoid being subject to disciplinary action. • For lawyers, the disciplinary rules are found chiefly in the Model Code of Professional Responsibility. — Abbr. DR. Cf. ETHICAL CONSIDERATION. [Cases: Licenses 25. C.J.S. Agriculture § 4.5; Licenses §§ 41, 45–46.]

DISCIPLINE

discipline, n. 1. Punishment intended to correct or instruct; esp., a sanction or penalty imposed after an official finding of misconduct. [Cases: Licenses 38. C.J.S. Agriculture § 4.5; Architects § 10; Licenses §§ 48, 50–63.] 2. The punishment or penalties (often termed “sanctions”) imposed by a disciplining agency on an attorney who has breached a rule of professional ethics. • Three types of discipline are common: disbarment, suspension, and reprimand (public or private). 3. Control gained by enforcing compliance or order. 4. Military law. A state of mind inducing instant obedience to a lawful order, no matter how unpleasant or dangerous such compliance might be. — discipline, vb. — disciplinary, adj.

DISCLAIMER

disclaimer, n. 1. A renunciation of one's legal right or claim; esp., a renunciation of a patent claim, usu. to save the remainder of the application from being rejected. 2. A repudiation of another's legal right or claim. 3. A writing that contains such a renunciation or repudiation. 4. RENUNCIATION (2). — disclaim, vb.

disclaimer of warranty. An oral or written statement intended to limit a seller's liability for defects in the goods sold. • In some circumstances, printed words must be specific and conspicuous to be effective. [Cases: Sales 267. C.J.S. Sales §§ 238, 263–270.]

patent disclaimer. See statutory disclaimer.

qualified disclaimer. 1. A disclaimer with a restriction or condition attached. • In this sense it is qualified because it carries the restriction or condition. 2. A person's refusal to accept an interest in property so that he or she can avoid having to pay estate or gift taxes. • To be effective under federal tax law, the refusal must be in writing and must be executed no later than nine months from the time when the interest was created. In this sense, it is qualified in the sense of being within the lawful exemption. IRC (26 USCA) § 2518. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4177.20, 4205.10; Taxation 866. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 500; Taxation §§ 1791, 1797–1799, 1824, 1859–1865.]

statutory disclaimer.Patents. A patent applicant's amendment of a specification to relinquish one or more claims to the invention. 35 USCA § 253. • Before the statute was enacted, a single invalid claim was grounds for denying a patent. — Also termed patent disclaimer. See SPECIFICATION(3). [Cases: Patents 149, 154. C.J.S. Patents §§ 261–263.]

terminal disclaimer.Patents. A patent applicant's statement shortening the term of the patent. • To revive an abandoned application for a design application or for a utility or plant application filed before June 8, 1995, the applicant must disclaim a period equal to the duration of abandonment. A terminal disclaimer may also be required in an application for an obvious variation on an existing patent: to avoid a double-patenting rejection, the inventor agrees that both patents will expire on the same day. [Cases: Patents 131. C.J.S. Patents § 236.]

DISCLOSED PRINCIPAL

disclosed principal.See PRINCIPAL(1).

DISCLOSURE

disclosure,n.1. The act or process of making known something that was previously unknown; a revelation of facts . See DISCOVERY.

defensive disclosure.See DEFENSIVE DISCLOSURE.

full disclosure.A complete revelation of all material facts.

public disclosure of private facts.The public revelation of some aspect of a person's private life without a legitimate public purpose. • The disclosure is actionable in tort if the disclosure would be highly objectionable to a reasonable person. See INVASION OF PRIVACY. [Cases: Torts 8.5(5.1). C.J.S. Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 17, 20–21, 23–27, 31, 33, 40–41.]

voluntary disclosure of offense.A person's uncoerced admission to an undiscovered crime. • Under the federal sentencing guidelines, a lighter sentence may be allowed. See USSG 5K2.16.

2. The mandatory divulging of information to a litigation opponent according to procedural rules. — Also termed compulsory disclosure; automatic disclosure. See DISCOVERY(2). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1261; Pretrial Procedure 11. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 2–4, 6–7; Pretrial Procedure §§ 2–6.] — disclose,vb. — disclosural,adj.“Rule 26(a) [of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure] reflects a shift away from the traditional method of obtaining discovery through the service of written demands toward requiring automatic disclosure by the parties of information that would invariably be requested. The goal of automatic disclosure is the creation of a more efficient and expeditious discovery process.... Rule 26(a)(1) provides for the initial disclosure of specified information relating to witnesses, documents, and insurance agreements. Rule 26(a)(2) provides for the disclosure of information regarding experts who may be used at trial. Rule 26(a)(3) provides for specified pretrial disclosures regarding witnesses, evidence, and objections.” Jay E. Grenig & Jeffrey S. Kinsler, Handbook of Federal Civil Discovery and Disclosure § 1.15, at 65–66 (2d ed. 2002).

accelerated disclosure. See accelerated discovery under DISCOVERY.

initial disclosure. Civil procedure. In federal practice, the requirement that parties make available to each other the following information without first receiving a discovery request: (1) the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of persons likely to have relevant, discoverable information, (2) a copy or description of all relevant documents, data compilations, and tangible items in the party's possession, custody, or control, (3) a damages computation, and (4) any relevant insurance agreements. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a)(1)(A)–(D). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1261, 1272.]

3. Patents. A document explaining how an invention works in sufficient detail for one skilled in the art to be able to understand and duplicate the invention; everything revealed about an invention in the patent application, including drawings, descriptions, specifications, references to prior art, and claims. • An invention disclosure statement is sometimes attested by a knowledgeable witness, who signs and dates the disclosure document to establish the inventor's identity and the date of the invention before the patent application is prepared. An inventor can file a disclosure document with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office before submitting a patent application, but the document's date has no relationship to the later application's effective filing date. See ENABLEMENT REQUIREMENT. Cf. ENABLING SOURCE; DEFENSIVE DISCLOSURE. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.] 4. Patents. PUBLICATION(2).

DISCLOSURE DOCUMENT PROGRAM

Disclosure Document Program. Patents. A U.S. Patent and Trademark Office program allowing an inventor to file a preliminary description of an invention and establish its date of conception before applying for a patent. • The document can help establish a date of inventive effort for use in a later interference. — Abbr. DDP. Cf. provisional application under PATENT APPLICATION. [Cases: Patents 97. C.J.S. Patents §§ 135–138, 145, 178.]

discommon (dis-kom-<<schwa>>n), vb. 1. To deprive of the right of common (e.g., the right to pasture). 2. To deprive (something, esp. land) of commonable character. • A person could discommon land by separating or enclosing it. 3. To deprive (someone) of the privileges of a place, such as the right to use common land or to enjoy a church fellowship.

DISCONFORMITY

disconformity. See NEW MATTER.

DISCONTINUANCE

discontinuance (dis-k<<schwa>>n-tin-yoo-<<schwa>>nts), n.1. The termination of a lawsuit by the plaintiff; a voluntary dismissal or nonsuit. See DISMISSAL; NONSUIT(1); judgment of discontinuance under JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1691; Pretrial Procedure 501. C.J.S. Dismissal and Nonsuit §§ 2–7, 9–10, 12, 14–16, 24.] 2. The termination of an estate-tail by a tenant in tail who conveys a larger estate in the land than is legally allowed. [Cases: Estates in Property 12.C.J.S. Estates §§ 22–27.]

“Such is ... the injury of discontinuance; which happens when he who hath an estate-tail, maketh a larger estate of the land than by law he is entitled to do: in which case the estate is good, so far as his power extends who made it, but no farther. As if tenant in tail makes a feoffment in fee-simple, or for the life of the feoffee, or in tail; all which are beyond his power to make, for that by the common law extends no farther than to make a lease for his own life: the entry of the feoffee is lawful during the life of the feoffer; but if he retains the possession after the death of the feoffor, it is an injury, which is termed a discontinuance; the ancient legal estate, which ought to have survived to the heir in tail, being gone, or at least suspended, and for a while discontinued.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 171–72 (1768).

DISCONTINUEE

discontinuee,n. A person whose acquisition of an entailed estate causes a discontinuance of the fee tail heirs' right to the estate. Cf. DISCONTINUOR.

DISCONTINUING EASEMENT discontinuing easement.See discontinuous easement under EASEMENT.

DISCONTINUOR

discontinuor,n. A tenant in tail whose conveyance of the entailed estate causes a discontinuance. Cf. DISCONTINUEE.

DISCONTINUOUS EASEMENT discontinuous easement.See EASEMENT.

DISCONTINUOUS SERVITUDE discontinuous servitude.See discontinuous easement under EASEMENT.

DISCONVENABLE

disconvenable (dis-k<<schwa>>n-vee-n<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj.[Law French] Archaic. Unfit; improper.

DISCOUNT

discount,n.1. A reduction from the full amount or value of something, esp. a price. 2. An advance deduction of interest when a person lends money on a note, bill of exchange, or other commercial paper, resulting in its present value. See PRESENT VALUE. 3. The amount by which a security's market value is below its face value. — Also termed bond discount. Cf. PREMIUM(3). — discount, vb.

bulk discount. See volume discount.

cash discount. 1. A seller's price reduction in exchange for an immediate cash payment. 2. A reduction from the stated price if the bill is paid on or before a specified date.

functional discount. 1. A supplier's price discount given to a purchaser based on the purchaser's role (such as warehousing or advertising) in the supplier's distributive system. • This type of discount typically reflects the value of services performed by the purchaser for the supplier. If a functional discount constitutes a reasonable reimbursement for the purchaser's actual marketing functions, it does not constitute unlawful price discrimination and does not violate antitrust laws. 2. A supplier's price discount based on the purchaser's relative distance from the supplier in the chain of distribution. • For example, a wholesaler or distributor usu. receives a greater discount than a retailer.

quantity discount. See volume discount.

trade discount. 1. A discount from list price offered to all customers of a given type — for example, a discount offered by a lumber dealer to building contractors. 2. The difference between a seller's list price and the price at which the dealer actually sells goods to the trade.

volume discount. A price decrease based on a large-quantity purchase. — Also termed bulk discount; quantity discount.

DISCOUNT BOND

discount bond. See BOND(3).

DISCOUNT BROKER

discount broker. See BROKER.

DISCOUNTED CASH FLOW

discounted cash flow. See CASH FLOW.

DISCOUNTED-CASH-FLOW METHOD discounted-cash-flow method. See discounted cash flow under CASH FLOW.

DISCOUNT INTEREST

discount interest. See INTEREST(3).

DISCOUNT LOAN

discount loan. See LOAN.

DISCOUNT MARKET

discount market. See MARKET.

DISCOUNT RATE

discount rate. See INTEREST RATE.

DISCOUNT SHARE

discount share. See discount stock under STOCK.

DISCOUNT STOCK

discount stock. See STOCK.

DISCOUNT YIELD

discount yield. See YIELD.

DISCOVERABLE

discoverable, adj. Subject to pretrial discovery <the defendant's attorney argued that the defendant's income-tax returns were not discoverable during the liability phase of the trial>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1272; Pretrial Procedure 27.]

DISCOVERED-PERIL DOCTRINE discovered-peril doctrine. See LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE.

DISCOVERT

discovert (dis-k<<schwa>>v-<<schwa>>rt), adj. 1. Archaic. Uncovered; exposed. 2. Not married, esp. a widow or a woman who has never married.

DISCOVERY

discovery, n. 1. The act or process of finding or learning something that was previously unknown <after making the discovery, the inventor immediately applied for a patent>. 2. Compulsory disclosure, at a party's request, of information that relates to the litigation <the plaintiff filed a motion to compel discovery>. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26–37; Fed. R. Crim. P. 16. • The primary discovery devices are interrogatories, depositions, requests for admissions, and requests for production. Although discovery typically comes from parties, courts also allow limited discovery from nonparties. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1261–1686; Pretrial Procedure 11–44. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 2–12, 14–22, 24–29, 31–47, 51–53, 56, 58–59, 69; Pretrial Procedure §§ 2–6.] 3. The facts or documents disclosed <the new associate spent all her time reviewing discovery>. 4. The pretrial phase of a lawsuit during which depositions, interrogatories, and other forms of discovery are conducted. — discover, vb. — discoverable, adj.

“Discovery has broad scope. According to Federal Rule 26, which is the model in modern procedural codes, inquiry may be made into ‘any matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the subject matter of the action.’ Thus, discovery may be had of facts incidentally relevant to the issues in the pleadings even if the facts do not directly prove or disprove the facts in question.”

Geoffrey C. Hazard Jr. & Michele Taruffo, American Civil Procedure: An Introduction 115 (1993).

accelerated discovery. A party's production of relevant evidence to an opponent at a time earlier than would otherwise be required by rule or standing order of the court. • The accelerated discovery is usu. carried out in compliance with a specific court order or the parties' agreement. — Also termed accelerated disclosure.

postjudgment discovery. Discovery conducted after judgment has been rendered, usu. to determine the nature of the judgment debtor's assets or to obtain testimony for use in future proceedings. — Also termed posttrial discovery. [Cases: Execution 373–400; Federal Civil Procedure 2707. C.J.S. Executions §§ 356, 359–389, 412.]

pretrial discovery. Discovery conducted before trial to reveal facts and develop evidence. • Modern procedural rules have broadened the scope of pretrial discovery to prevent the parties from surprising each other with evidence at trial. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1261; Pretrial Procedure 14, 25. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 2, 6, 10, 32, 36, 58.]

reciprocal discovery. See reverse Jencks material under JENCKS MATERIAL.

reverse discovery. See reverse Jencks material under JENCKS MATERIAL.

DISCOVERY ABUSE

discovery abuse. 1. The misuse of the discovery process, esp. by making overbroad requests for information that is unnecessary or beyond the scope of permissible disclosure or by conducting discovery for an improper purpose. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1261, 1278; Pretrial Procedure 28. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 2, 6–7, 21.]

“The term ‘discovery abuse’ has been used as if it were a single concept, but it includes several different things. Thus, it is useful to subdivide ‘abuse’ into ‘misuse’ and ‘overuse.’ What is referred to as ‘misuse’ would include not only direct violation of the rules, as by failing to respond to a discovery request within the stated time limit, but also more subtle attempts to harass or obstruct an opponent, as by giving obviously inadequate answers or by requesting information that clearly is outside the scope of discovery. By ‘overuse’ is meant asking for more discovery than is necessary or appropriate to the particular case. ‘Overuse,’ in turn, can be subdivided into problems of ‘depth’ and of ‘breadth,’ with ‘depth’ referring to discovery that may be relevant but is simply excessive and ‘breadth’ referring to discovery requests that go into matters too far removed from the case.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 81, at 580 (5th ed. 1994).

2. The failure to respond adequately to proper discovery requests. — Also termed abuse of discovery. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1278; Pretrial Procedure 44.1.]

discovery immunity. A (usu. statutory) prohibition that excludes certain documents or information from discovery.

DISCOVERY POLICY

discovery policy. See claims-made policy under INSURANCE POLICY.

DISCOVERY RULE

discovery rule. Civil procedure. The rule that a limitations period does not begin to run until the plaintiff discovers (or reasonably should have discovered) the injury giving rise to the claim. • The discovery rule usu. applies to injuries that are inherently difficult to detect, such as those resulting from medical malpractice. See STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. Cf. OCCURRENCE RULE. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 95, 100. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship § 87; Limitations of Actions §§ 87, 131, 138, 142, 164–165, 167–168, 170–173, 175–176, 183, 192, 198–205; Physicians, Surgeons, and Other Health-Care Providers § 108; RICO (Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations) § 16.]

DISCOVERY VEIN

discovery vein. See VEIN.

DISCREDIT

discredit, vb. To destroy or impair the credibility of (a witness, a piece of evidence, or a theory); to lessen the degree of trust to be accorded to (a witness or document). [Cases: Witnesses 330. C.J.S. Witnesses § 579.] — discredit, n.

DISCRETION

discretion (di-skresh-<<schwa>>n). 1. Wise conduct and management; cautious discernment; prudence. 2. Individual judgment; the power of free decision-making.

sole discretion. An individual's power to make decisions without anyone else's advice or consent.

3. Criminal & tort law. The capacity to distinguish between right and wrong, sufficient to make a person responsible for his or her own actions. [Cases: Criminal Law 46. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 96–98, 113.] 4. A public official's power or right to act in certain circumstances according to personal judgment and conscience, often in an official or representative capacity. — Also termed discretionary power.

administrative discretion. A public official's or agency's power to exercise judgment in the discharge of its duties. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 324, 754. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 60, 206, 223.]

judicial discretion. The exercise of judgment by a judge or court based on what is fair under the circumstances and guided by the rules and principles of law; a court's power to act or not act when a litigant is not entitled to demand the act as a matter of right. — Also termed legal discretion. [Cases: Courts 26. C.J.S. Courts §§ 3, 64–65, 67.]

prosecutorial discretion.A prosecutor's power to choose from the options available in a criminal case, such as filing charges, prosecuting, not prosecuting, plea-bargaining, and recommending a sentence to the court. [Cases: Criminal Law 29(3); District and Prosecuting Attorneys 8. C.J.S. District and Prosecuting Attorneys §§ 20–21, 29–30.]

DISCRETION, ABUSE OF

discretion, abuse of.See ABUSE OF DISCRETION.

DISCRETIONARY

discretionary (di-skresh-<<schwa>>-ner-ee), adj. (Of an act or duty) involving an exercise of judgment and choice, not an implementation of a hard-and-fast rule. • Such an act by a court may be overturned only after a showing of abuse of discretion.

DISCRETIONARY ACCOUNT

discretionary account.An account that allows a broker access to a customer's funds to purchase and sell securities or commodities for the customer based on the broker's judgment and without first having to obtain the customer's consent to the purchase or sale. [Cases: Brokers 19. C.J.S. Brokers §§ 5, 25–26, 50, 56–57, 59.]

DISCRETIONARY ACT

DISCRETIONARY REVIEW

discretionary review. See REVIEW.

DISCRETIONARY-TRANSFER STATUTE discretionary-transfer statute. See TRANSFER STATUTE.

DISCRETIONARY TRUST

discretionary trust. See TRUST.

DISCRIMINANT FUNCTION

discriminant function (di-skrim-n). An IRS method of selecting tax returns to be audited. • The method consists of (1) using a computer program to identify returns with a high probability of error (such as those showing a disproportionate amount of deductible expenses), and (2) having examiners manually review the selected returns to determine which ones should be audited. — Also termed DIF system. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4443. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 616, 618.]

DISCRIMINATEE

discriminatee (di-skrim-n-tee). A person unlawfully discriminated against. [Cases: Civil Rights 1007. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 2–5, 7–9, 11–13, 18, 44.]

DISCRIMINATION

discrimination, n. 1. The effect of a law or established practice that confers privileges on a certain class or that denies privileges to a certain class because of race, age, sex, nationality, religion, or handicap. • Federal law, including Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, prohibits employment discrimination based on any one of those characteristics. Other federal statutes, supplemented by court decisions, prohibit discrimination in voting rights, housing, credit extension, public education, and access to public facilities. State laws provide further protections against discrimination. [Cases: Civil Rights 1001–1263. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 2–37, 39–67, 85–86, 88, 102–104, 107, 122, 144, 219–221.] 2. Differential treatment; esp., a failure to treat all persons equally when no reasonable distinction can be found between those favored and those not favored. [Cases: Civil Rights 1033, 1138. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 18, 20, 23–24, 34, 39–40.]

“The dictionary sense of ‘discrimination’ is neutral while the current political use of the term is frequently non-neutral, pejorative. With both a neutral and a non-neutral use of the word having currency, the opportunity for confusion in arguments about racial discrimination is enormously multiplied. For some, it may be enough that a practice is called discriminatory for them to judge it wrong. Others may be mystified that the first group condemns the practice without further argument or inquiry. Many may be led to the false sense that they have actually made a moral argument by showing that the practice discriminates (distinguishes in favor of or against). The temptation is to move from 'X distinguishes in favor of or against' to 'X discriminates' to 'X is wrong' without being aware of the equivocation involved." Robert K. Fullinwider, The Reverse Discrimination Controversy 11–12 (1980).

age discrimination. Discrimination based on age. • Federal law prohibits discrimination in employment against people who are age 40 or older. [Cases: Civil Rights 1014, 1199. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 2, 6–7, 9–10, 19, 21, 56–58.]

content-based discrimination. A state-imposed restriction on the content of speech, esp. when the speech concerns something of slight social value and is vastly outweighed by the public interest in morality and order. • Types of speech subject to content-based discrimination include obscenity, fighting words, and defamation. R.A.V. v. City of St. Paul, 505 U.S. 377, 383–84, 112 S.Ct. 2538, 2543 (1992).

gender discrimination. See sex discrimination.

invidious discrimination (in-vid-ee-<<schwa>>s). Discrimination that is offensive or objectionable, esp. because it involves prejudice or stereotyping.

racial discrimination. Discrimination based on race. [Cases: Civil Rights 1009, 1107. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 2–5, 7–9, 11–13, 18, 22, 26–27, 30–31, 33–34, 37, 41–42, 44, 67.]

reverse discrimination. Preferential treatment of minorities, usu. through affirmative-action programs, in a way that adversely affects members of a majority group. See AFFIRMATIVE ACTION. [Cases: Civil Rights 1033(3), 1232. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 18, 20, 23–24, 64–65.]

sex discrimination. Discrimination based on gender, esp. against women. • The Supreme Court has established an intermediate-scrutiny standard of review for gender-based classifications, which must serve an important governmental interest and be substantially related to the achievement of that objective. Craig v. Boren, 429 U.S. 190, 97 S.Ct. 451 (1976). — Also termed gender discrimination. [Cases: Civil Rights 1011, 1164, 1236. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 2, 6–7, 9–10, 19, 21, 35, 64–65, 88.]

viewpoint discrimination. Content-based discrimination in which the government targets not a particular subject, but instead certain views that speakers might express on the subject; discrimination based on the content of a communication. • If restrictions on the content of speech are reasonable and not calculated to suppress a particular set of views or ideas, a governmental body may limit speech in a nonpublic forum to expressions that serve a specific purpose. For example, an agency holding a workshop to inform state employees of laws related to the agency's functions may reasonably prohibit the expression of opinions regarding the motives of the legislators. But if speech favorable to the legislators' intent is allowed and opponents are denied the opportunity to respond, the restriction would constitute viewpoint discrimination. — Also termed viewpoint-based discrimination. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90(3), 90.1(1).]

3. The effect of state laws that favor local interests over out-of-state interests. • Such a discriminatory state law may still be upheld if it is narrowly tailored to achieve an important state interest. Cf. FAVORITISM. [Cases: Commerce 54.1. C.J.S. Commerce § 51.] — discriminate, vb. — discriminatory, adj.

DISCRIMINATORY TARIFF

discriminatory tariff. See TARIFF(2).

DISCUSSION

disgrading.Hist. 1. The act of degrading. 2. The depriving of an order; the depriving of a dignity.

“Disgrading, or degrading, is when a man having taken upon him a dignity temporal or spiritual, is afterwards thereof deprived, be he knight, clerk or other. Whereof if a clerk be delivered to his ordinary, and cannot clear himself of the offence whereof he is convicted by the jury, he shall be disgraded for it; which is nothing else but the deprivation of him from those orders he hath taken upon him, as priesthood, deaconship, or otherwise.... In like manner there is disgrading of a knight And it is worthy the observation, that by the canon law there are two kinds of disgradings; the one summary, by word only, and the other solemn, by devesting the party disgraded from those ornaments and rites which are the ensigns of his order or degree.” Termes de la Ley 175–76 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

DISORDERLY HOUSE

disorderly house. 1. A dwelling where people carry on activities that are a nuisance to the neighborhood. [Cases: Disorderly House 1. C.J.S. Disorderly Houses § 2.] 2. A dwelling where people conduct criminal or immoral activities. • Examples are brothels and drug houses. — Also termed (more narrowly) bawdy house; house of prostitution; house of ill fame; lewd house; assignation house; house of assignation.

“The keeping of one type of disorderly house — the bawdy house — is punished because it violates the social interest in maintaining proper standards of morality and decency.... As included here a house may be disorderly for other reasons. Any house in which disorderly persons are permitted to congregate, and to disturb the tranquillity of the neighborhood by fighting, quarreling, swearing or any other type of disorder, is a disorderly house; and the keeping thereof is a misdemeanor at common law.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 487 (3d ed.

1982).

DISORDERLY PERSON

disorderly person. 1. A person guilty of disorderly conduct. [Cases: Disorderly Conduct 3. C.J.S. Disorderly Conduct § 7.] 2. A person who breaches the peace, order, decency, or safety of the public, as defined by statute.

“Ordinarily, a person who is guilty of disorderly conduct is a ‘disorderly person,’ but where statutes define ‘a disorderly person’ and distinguish acts which may constitute the offense of disorderly conduct, the distinction is to be preserved and the different provisions relative to the different offenses particularly followed.” 27 C.J.S. Disorderly Conduct § 1(1), at 509 (1959).

DISPARAGARE

disparagare (di-spar-<<schwa>>-gair-ee), vb.[Law Latin fr. Law French disparager “to disparage”] Hist. 1.To disparage. 2. To bring together unequal persons, as in a marriage between persons of unequal lineage. Cf. PARAGE.

DISPARAGING TRADEMARK

disparaging trademark. See TRADEMARK.

DISPARATE IMPACT

disparate impact (dis-p<<schwa>>-rit). The adverse effect of a facially neutral practice (esp. an employment practice) that nonetheless discriminates against persons because of their race, sex, national origin, age, or disability and that is not justified by business necessity. • Discriminatory intent is irrelevant in a disparate-impact claim. — Also termed adverse impact. [Cases: Civil Rights 1033, 1140. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 18, 20, 23–24, 29, 144.]

DISPARATE TREATMENT

disparate treatment. The practice, esp. in employment, of intentionally dealing with persons differently because of their race, sex, national origin, age, or disability. • To succeed on a disparate-treatment claim, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant acted with discriminatory intent or motive. [Cases: Civil Rights 1033, 1138. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 18, 20, 23–24, 34, 39–40.]

“Claims brought on behalf of a group of employees come in two varieties: claims of intentional discrimination (or disparate treatment) and claims of discriminatory impact (or disparate impact). The difference between these types of claims is significant, so much so that constitutional law only recognizes claims of disparate treatment, not disparate impact. Yet these two kinds of claims resemble one another, especially in the statistical evidence that the plaintiff must present in order to establish liability... [C]lass claims of disparate treatment emphasize the historical perspective and its negative conception of equality as colorblindness, while class claims of disparate impact emphasize the remedial perspective and its goal of eliminating the effects of past discrimination.” George Rutherglen, Employment Discrimination Law 56 (2001).

DISPARITY

disparity (di-spar-<<schwa>>-tee). Inequality; a difference in quantity or quality between two or more things.

DISPATCH

Something quickly sent <the dispatch was mailed>.4. Maritime law. The required diligence in discharging cargo <dispatch is required on all charters>. [Cases: Shipping 49(6). C.J.S. Shipping § 108.]

customary dispatch. Dispatch that follows the rules, customs, and usages of the port where cargo is discharged. [Cases: Shipping 49(6). C.J.S. Shipping § 108.]

quick dispatch. A speedy dispatch that does not strictly follow the customs of the port, esp. to avoid delays resulting from a crowded wharf. [Cases: Shipping 49(6). C.J.S. Shipping § 108.]

5. Maritime law. DISPATCH MONEY.

DISPATCH MONEY

dispatch money. Maritime law. An amount paid by a shipowner to a vessel's charterer if the vessel's cargo is unloaded at the port sooner than provided for in the agreement between the charterer and the shipowner. — Also termed dispatch. Cf. contract demurrage under DEMURRAGE. [Cases: Shipping 49(6). C.J.S. Shipping § 108.]

“Some charters contain a provision for ‘dispatch money,’ which is in the nature of a reward to the charterer for loading or unloading more rapidly than provided for — i.e., in less time than the stipulated ‘lay days.’ Dispatch, where payable, is usually stated, just as is demurrage, in terms of a rate per day and pro rata part thereof.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 4–8, at 212 (2d ed. 1975).

DISPATCH RULE

dispatch rule. See MAILBOX RULE.

A mechanism for resolving international grievances over intellectual-property protection, conducted by the World Trade Organization under the TRIPs Agreement. • The procedure begins with a complaint by one nation against another, followed by consultations between the nations, a WTO panel report on the issue, and (potentially) trade sanctions against one of the nations.

DISQUALIFICATION

disqualification,n.1. Something that makes one ineligible; esp., a bias or conflict of interest that prevents a judge or juror from impartially hearing a case, or that prevents a lawyer from representing a party. [Cases: Judges 39; Jury 97. C.J.S. Judges §§ 62, 98, 100–102, 107; Juries §§ 225, 248, 370–373, 378–379, 398–399, 415, 417–418, 420.]

vicarious disqualification.Disqualification of all the lawyers in a firm or in an office because one of the lawyers is ethically disqualified from representing the client at issue. — Also termed imputed disqualification. [Cases: Attorney and Client 21.15. C.J.S. Attorney and Client § 164.]

“In general, disqualification of a lawyer from representation, at least in multiple client-conflict scenarios, means disqualification of that lawyer's entire firm from the same representation. When a lawyer has been exclusively or chiefly responsible for the representation of a client and that lawyer changes jobs, there is little question but that the imputed-disqualification rule will apply to disqualify the new firm from representing the opponent of the first client. But because lawyers often work for large organizations, ... a question may arise about the application of the imputation rule when a lawyer has left employment If the lawyer had little or no responsibility in the first organization for the representation or if the lawyer can be effectively shielded from the representation in the new organization, or both, there may be no useful purpose served by imputing the lawyer's disqualification to the new organization” James E. Moliterno & John M. Levy, Ethics of the Lawyer's Work 151 (1993).

2. The act of making ineligible; the fact or condition of being ineligible. Cf. RECUSAL. — disqualify,vb.

DISTRESS distress,n.1. The seizure of another's property to secure the performance of a duty, such as the payment of overdue rent. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 263–270. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 674–681, 683–696, 699–711.] 2. The legal remedy authorizing such a seizure; the procedure by which the seizure is carried out.

“Distress ... may be defined as the taking, either with legal process, or extra-judicially subject to the performance of some necessary condition precedent, by a private individual or by an officer of the court, of a personal chattel, out of the possession of a wrongdoer or defaulter and into the custody of the law to be impounded as a pledge in order to bring pressure to bear upon the owner of the chattel to redress an injury, to perform a duty, or to satisfy a lawful demand, subject, however, to the right of the owner to have the chattel returned to him [up]on the injury being redressed, or the duty performed, or the demand satisfied or [up]on security being given so to do.” F.A. Enever, History of the Law of Distress 7–8 (1931).

“The word distress is derived from distringere, meaning to put into a strait or pound. In early English customals the word used is nam, which is of Scandinavian derivation and indicates a taking. In the Latin legal documents of early medieval times pignorare is used as well as distringere to denote the act of distraining, but whereas distringere is used in relation to distress for rent and services, pignorare is applied to distress for debts.” Id. at 3.

distress damage feasant.The right to seize animals or inanimate chattels that are damaging or encumbering land and to keep them as security until the owner pays compensation. [Cases: Animals 95. C.J.S. Animals §§ 250, 252.]

distress infinite.A distress that the sheriff can repeat from time to time to enforce the performance of something, as in summoning a juror or compelling a party to appear in court. • The goods must be returned after the delinquent person performs his or her duty.

“[F]or the most part it is provided that distresses be reasonable and moderate; but, in the case of distress for fealty or suit of court, no distress can be unreasonable, immoderate, or too large: for this is the only remedy to which the party aggrieved is entitled, and therefore it ought to be such as is sufficiently compulsory; and, be it of what value it will, there is no harm done, especially as it cannot be sold or made away with, but must be restored immediately on satisfaction made. A distress of this nature, that has no bounds with regard to its quantity, and may be repeated from time to time until the stubbornness of the party is conquered, is called a distress infinite.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 231 (1768).

grand distress.Hist. In a quare impedit action in which the defendant has failed to appear, a distress of the defendant's goods and lands to compel the defendant's appearance.

DISTRIBUTIVE CLAUSE

distributive clause. A will or trust provision governing the distribution of income and gifts. [Cases: Wills 492–535. C.J.S. Wills §§ 902–1028.]

DISTRIBUTIVE DEVIATION

distributive deviation. A trustee's authorized or unauthorized departure from the express distributional terms of a trust. • A trustee must apply to the court for authority to deviate from the terms of a trust. In American law, courts rarely authorize deviation unless all the beneficiaries consent and there is no material purpose of the settlor yet to be served. Some state statutes provide that deviation is permitted if the court finds that deviation would effectuate the settlor's intention, though the modification is not expressly authorized by the trust's provisions. The Pulitzer trust illustrates the possibility that extraordinary circumstances not anticipated by the settlor may justify deviation, even despite an express prohibition within the trust. Joseph Pulitzer set up a testamentary trust with shares of World newspaper stock; his will directed that the sale of these shares was not authorized under any circumstances. Nonetheless, the court later approved the stock sale when given evidence that because of hemorrhaging losses, the trust's continuation was jeopardized. In re Pulitzer's Estate, 249 N.Y.S. 87 (Sur. Ct. 1931).

DIVIDED CUSTODY

divided custody. See CUSTODY(2).

DIVIDED-DAMAGES RULE

divided-damages rule. Maritime law. The obsolete principle that when two parties are jointly liable to a third party for a tort, each party is liable for only half the damages. • The courts now apply a comparative-negligence standard. [Cases: Collision 143. C.J.S. Collision §§ 242, 245, 259, 261–262.]

“For over a hundred years admiralty law embraced the rule of ‘divided damages’ in collision cases In 1975, in United States v. Reliable Transfer Co., 421 U.S. 397, 95 S.Ct. 1708, 44 L.Ed.2d 251 (1975), the Supreme Court jettisoned that inequitable and illogical rule in favor of proportionate allocation of fault among joint-tortfeasors in collision cases. Each vessel now is liable to the other offending vessel in contribution for that part of the total damages proportionate to its fault, and is liable for its per capita (virile) share only when the respective faults of the vessels are equal, or when proportionate fault can not be ascertained.” Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 165 (2d ed. 1988).

DIVISION OF POWERS

division of powers. The allocation of power between the national government and the states. • Under the Tenth Amendment, powers not delegated to the federal government are reserved to the states or to the people. But today the Tenth Amendment provides only a limited check on Congress's power to regulate the states. Cf. SEPARATION OF POWERS. [Cases: States 4.16. C.J.S. States §§ 25–26.]

DIVISION OF PROPERTY

division of property. See PROPERTY SETTLEMENT(1).

DIVISION OF THE ASSEMBLY division of the assembly. See DIVISION(1).

DIVISION OF THE HOUSE

division of the house. See DIVISION(1).

DIVISION OF THE QUESTION

division of the question. See DIVISION(2).

DIVISION ORDER

division order. Oil & gas. A contract for the sale of oil or gas, specifying how the payments are to be distributed. • Royalty owners enter into division orders to sell minerals and to instruct how payments are to be made under a mineral lease. Working-interest owners also commonly sign division orders to instruct purchasers how payments are to be divided. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 79.1(3). C.J.S. Mines and Minerals § 294.]

DIVISION VOTE

division vote. See DIVISION(1).

 DIVISUM IMPERIUM

divisum imperium (di-vI-z<<schwa>>m im-peer-ee-<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin “a divided empire”] Divided jurisdiction; alternate jurisdiction, as of courts.

“This main sea begins at the low-water-mark. But between the high-water-mark and the low-water-mark, where the sea ebbs and flows, the common law and admiralty have divisum imperium, an alternate jurisdiction; one upon the water, when it is full sea; the other upon the land, when it is an ebb.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 107 (1765).

DIVORCE

divorce. The legal dissolution of a marriage by a court. — Also termed marital dissolution; dissolution of marriage. Cf. ANNULMENT. [Cases: Divorce 1–420. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 2–138, 140–167, 169–196, 198–211, 213–610, 731, 757–766, 768–825, 837–844, 851–861.] — divorce,vb.

“When used without qualification, the term [divorce] imports a dissolution of the marriage relation between husband and wife, that is, a complete severance of the tie by which the parties were united. However, in its common and wider use, the term includes the dissolution of a valid marriage, a formal separation of married persons, and the annulment of a marriage void from the beginning.

“So, while the term ‘divorce’ has sometimes been broadly defined or applied to include both decrees of nullity and decrees of dissolution of marriage, especially where the marriage was not void but only voidable at the option of the injured party, this has been declared to be not in accord with modern usage, and generally, the term denotes only dissolution or suspension of a marital relation, and does not include annulment of an invalid marriage.” 27A C.J.S. Divorce § 2, at 31–32 (1986).absolute divorce.See divorce a vinculo matrimonii.

bifurcated divorce.See divisible divorce.

conditional divorce.See conversion divorce.

contested divorce. 1. A divorce that one spouse opposes in court. 2. A divorce in which the spouses litigate. • In this sense, although both spouses may want the divorce, they disagree on the terms of the divorce decree. Cf. uncontested divorce.

conversion divorce.A divorce granted after (1) a legal separation has been granted or the parties have signed a separation agreement, and (2) the parties have lived separately for a statutorily prescribed period. — Also termed convertible divorce; conditional divorce.

divisible divorce.A divorce whereby the marriage itself is dissolved but the issues incident to the divorce, such as alimony, child custody, and visitation, are reserved until a later proceeding. • This type of divorce can be granted when the court has subject-matter jurisdiction but lacks personal jurisdiction over the defendant-spouse. The doctrine of divisible divorce was recognized by the Supreme Court in Estin v. Estin, 334 U.S. 541, 68 S.Ct. 1213 (1948), and Vanderbilt v. Vanderbilt, 354 U.S. 416, 77 S.Ct. 1360 (1957). — Also termed bifurcated divorce. [Cases:

Divorce 146. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 209–210.]

divorce a mensa et thoro (ay men-s<<schwa>> et thor-oh). [Latin “(divorce) from board and hearth”] Hist. A partial or qualified divorce by which the parties were separated and allowed or ordered to live apart, but remained technically married. • This type of divorce, abolished in England in 1857, was the forerunner of modern judicial separation. — Also termed separation a mensa et thoro; separation from bed and board; limited divorce; legal separation; judicial separation. [Cases: Divorce 155. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 223–225.]

“[The Ecclesiastical Courts] grant also what is called a divorce a mensa et thoro, or rather what we should call a judicial separation, i.e. they release the parties from the duty of living together on grounds of cruelty or misconduct” William Geldart, Introduction to English Law 38 (D.C.M. Yardley ed., 9th ed. 1984).

divorce a vinculo matrimonii (ay ving-ky<<schwa>>-loh ma-tr<<schwa>>-moh-nee-I). [Latin “(divorce) from the chains of marriage”] A total divorce of husband and wife, dissolving the marriage tie and releasing the parties wholly from their matrimonial obligations. • At common law, but not always in canon law, this type of divorce bastardized any children from the marriage and was granted on grounds that existed before the marriage. In England, the Matrimonial Causes Act of 1857 introduced statutory divorce a vinculo matrimonii. — Usu. shortened to divorce. — Also termed absolute divorce. Cf. limited divorce. [Cases: Divorce 157. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 223–225.]

Dominican divorce. See Mexican divorce.

ex parte divorce (eks pahr-tee). A divorce proceeding in which only one spouse participates or appears in court. [Cases: Divorce 146. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 209–210.]

fault divorce. A divorce granted to one spouse on the basis of some proven wrongful act (grounds for divorce) by the other spouse. • Although all states now have some form of no-fault divorce, some jurisdictions still consider a spouse's fault in precipitating the divorce, esp. when dividing marital property or when awarding alimony. Traditionally, the common grounds for a fault divorce were adultery, abandonment, imprisonment, and physical or mental cruelty; the defenses to alleged fault in a petition for divorce were condonation, connivance, collusion, recrimination, and insanity. Section 303(e) of the Uniform Marriage and Divorce Act has abolished the defenses to divorce. Cf. no-fault divorce.

foreign divorce. A divorce obtained outside the state or country in which one spouse resides. [Cases: Divorce 351–420. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 769–825, 837–844, 851–861.]

Haitian divorce. See Mexican divorce.

hotel divorce. Slang. A form of collusive divorce — occurring before widespread passage of no-fault divorce laws — in which the spouses agree to fake an adultery scene to create “fault.” Cf. no-fault divorce.

'hotel divorces,' prevalent in jurisdictions where adultery is the only ground for divorce, and based on the principle that intercourse will be presumed from apparently uninhibited opportunity." Henry S. Drinker, Legal Ethics 123–24 (1953).

legislative divorce. Hist. The legal termination of a particular marriage, enacted by the legislature rather than by a court. • In the 18th century, Colonial American legislatures granted these special statutes. In 1816, the House of Burgesses of Virginia granted a divorce to Rachel Robards Jackson, the wife of then President Andrew Jackson, from a former spouse. Mrs. Jackson's untimely death was attributed to her reaction to the scandal that she had married Jackson before the divorce was procured. Now only state courts have authority to grant decrees of divorce. — Also termed parliamentary divorce. [Cases: Divorce 5. C.J.S. Divorce § 4.] limited divorce. 1. A divorce that ends the legal relationship of marriage by court order but does not address financial support, property distribution, or care and custody of children. • In the days before no-fault divorce, a spouse might seek a quick divorce in a state with a short residency requirement (such as Nevada). Then courts in the home state would give full faith and credit only to the dissolution of the marital res, while maintaining sole jurisdiction over property-division, support, and custody issues. [Cases: Divorce 155. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 223–225.] 2. Loosely, a legal separation. 3. See divorce a mensa et thoro. Cf. divorce a vinculo matrimonii.

mail-order divorce. Slang. A divorce obtained by parties who are not physically present or domiciled in the jurisdiction purporting to grant the divorce. • Such a divorce is not recognized in the United States because of the absence of the usual bases for jurisdiction.

Mexican divorce. A divorce obtained in Mexico by mail order or by the appearance of one spouse who does not have a Mexican domicile. • Neither type is recognized in the United States. — Also termed Dominican divorce (if granted in the Dominican Republic); Haitian divorce (if granted in Haiti).

migratory divorce. A divorce obtained in a jurisdiction other than the marital domicile; esp., a divorce obtained by a spouse who moves to, or temporarily resides in, another state or country to get the divorce.

no-fault divorce. A divorce in which the parties are not required to prove fault or grounds beyond a showing of the irretrievable breakdown of the marriage or irreconcilable differences. • The system of no-fault divorce has been adopted throughout the United States. By 1974, 45 states had adopted no-fault divorce; by 1985, every state but New York had adopted some form of it. In New York — one of the last bastions of fault grounds for divorce — the closest equivalent is a conversion divorce one year after legal separation or a legal-separation agreement. Cf. fault divorce; hotel divorce. [Cases: Divorce 12. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 13–18, 70.] parliamentary divorce. See legislative divorce.

pro-con divorce. Slang. An uncontested divorce granted after only the plaintiff appears at the proceeding (since the defendant contests nothing).

quickie divorce. Slang. A fast divorce granted with minimal paperwork. — Also termed quick divorce.

rabbinical divorce. A divorce granted under the authority of a rabbi. • This type of divorce affects the relationship of the parties under the tenets of Judaism. It affects particularly a Jewish woman's ability to remarry in accordance with Judaic law. In the United States, it is not generally a divorce recognized in civil courts. — Also termed get.

uncontested divorce. A divorce that is unopposed by the spouse who did not initiate it. Cf. contested divorce.

DIVORCE AGREEMENT

divorce agreement. A contractual agreement that sets out divorcing spouses' rights and responsibilities regarding property, alimony, custody, visitation, and child support. • The divorce agreement usu. becomes incorporated by court order as a part of the divorce decree and thus is enforceable by contempt, among other remedies. — Also termed agreement incident to divorce; marital settlement agreement; separation agreement. Cf. PROPERTY SETTLEMENT.

DIVORCE DECREE

divorce decree. See DECREE.

DIVORCE PROCTOR

divorce proctor. A person (such as a guardian) who is appointed to protect the interest of the state or children in a divorce action. — Sometimes shortened to proctor. [Cases: Infants 76. C.J.S. Infants § 222.]

DIVORTIUM

divortium (di-vor-shee-*<<schwa>>*m), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. Divorce; a severance of the marriage tie. • In classical law, no grounds were required. Cf. REPUDIUM. 2. Eccles. law. A decree allowing spouses to separate or declaring their marriage invalid.

“Owing to the fact that the church had but slowly made up her mind to know no such thing as a divorce in our acceptation of that term (i.e., the dissolution of a valid marriage) the term divortium is currently used to signify two very different things, namely (1) the divortium quoad torum, which is the equivalent of our ‘judicial separation,’ and (2) what is very often called the divortium quoad vinculum but is really a declaration of nullity. The persistence of the word divortium in the latter case is a trace of an older state of affairs, but in medieval practice the decree of nullity often served the purpose of a true divorce; spouses who had quarrelled began to investigate their pedigrees and were unlucky if they could discover no impedimentum dirimens.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 393 n.5 (2d ed. 1899).

DOCTRINE OF CONTRA PROFERENTEM doctrine of contra proferentem. See CONTRA PROFERENTEM.

DOCTRINE OF CURATIVE ADMISSIBILITY doctrine of curative admissibility. A rule allowing a party to introduce otherwise inadmissible evidence to remove the prejudice caused by the improper admission of evidence that was offered by the opposing party. • The doctrine applies when a motion to strike cannot cure the prejudice created by the adverse party. — Also termed curative-admissibility doctrine. [Cases: Criminal Law 396; Evidence 155. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 758; Evidence §§ 248–250.]

DOCTRINE OF ELECTION

doctrine of election. A doctrine holding that when a person has contracted with an agent without knowing of the agency and later learns the principal's identity, the person may enforce the contract against the agent or the principal, but not both. See ELECTION(1). [Cases: Principal and Agent 145(4). C.J.S. Agency §§ 416–417.]

DOCTRINE OF ENTIRETIES doctrine of entireties (en-tī-<<schwa>>-teez). In customs law, the rule that when an entry consists of parts that assemble to form an article different from any of the parts, the proper classification will be of the whole article, rather than the individual components.

DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS doctrine of equivalents. Patents. A judicially created theory for finding patent infringement when the accused process or product falls outside the literal scope of the patent claims. • The doctrine evolved to prevent parties from evading liability for patent infringement by making trivial changes to avoid the literal language of the patent claims. Graver Tank & Mfg. Co. v. Linde Air Prods. Co., 339 U.S. 605, 70 S.Ct. 854 (1950). In determining whether infringement exists under the doctrine, the court must first determine whether “the accused product or process contain[s] an element identical or equivalent to each claimed element of the patented invention.” Warner-Jenkinson Co. v. Hilton Davis Chem. Co., 520 U.S. 17, 39–40, 117 S.Ct. 1040, 1054 (1997). If it does, it infringes on the patent if the differing element performs substantially the same function in substantially the same way to get the same result as the patented product or process. Prosecution-history estoppel is not an absolute bar to a patentee who seeks to invoke the doctrine of equivalents to prove infringement on a claim that was voluntarily amended. Festo v. Shoketsu Kinzoku Kogyo Kabushiki Co., 535 U.S. 722, 122 S.Ct. 1831 (2002). — Also termed equivalents doctrine; doctrine of equivalence; doctrine of equivalency; doctrine of substantial equivalents; nonliteral infringement. Cf. literal infringement under INFRINGEMENT. [Cases: Patents 237. C.J.S. Patents §§ 425–426.] reverse doctrine of equivalents. The doctrine preventing infringement liability when the invention is substantially described by the claims of another's patent but performs the same or similar function in a substantially different way.

DOCTRINE OF ESTATES

doctrine of estates.Hist. The rule that a person cannot own land, but can merely own an estate in it, authorizing the person to hold it for some period of time. • This doctrine answers the question of the duration of an estate. Cf. DOCTRINE OF TENURES.

DOCTRINE OF FINALITY doctrine of finality.See FINALITY DOCTRINE.

DOCTRINE OF GENERAL AVERAGE doctrine of general average.Maritime law. A rule allowing a carrier to require cargo owners and the shipowner to contribute pro rata to the cost of protecting the ship and its cargo. [Cases: Shipping 186. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 458–459.]

DOCTRINE OF IDENTIFICATION

doctrine of identification.Hist. English law. The rule that if a person traveling in a conveyance is injured in an accident that occurs because of someone else's negligence, and the driver of the conveyance is contributorily negligent, the passenger cannot claim damages against the tortfeasor since the passenger is “identified” with the contributorily negligent driver. • The leading authority for this doctrine was Thorogood v. Bryan, 8 C.B. 115 (1849), but the Court of Appeal repudiated the doctrine as unsound in The Bernina [1887], 13 App. Cas. 1 (1888).

DOCTRINE OF ILLUSORY COVERAGE doctrine of illusory coverage.A rule requiring an insurance policy to be interpreted so that it is not merely a delusion to the insured. [Cases: Insurance 2090. C.J.S. Insurance § 58.]

DOCTRINE OF MARITAL PRIVACY doctrine of marital privacy.See MARITAL-PRIVACY DOCTRINE.

DOCTRINE OF NECESSARIES doctrine of necessities. 1. The rule holding a parent or spouse liable to anyone who sells goods or provides medical services to that person's child or spouse if the goods or services are required for sustenance, support, or healthcare. 2.Archaic. The common-law rule holding a husband or father liable to anyone who sells goods to his wife or child if the goods are required for sustenance or support. See NECESSARIES. [Cases: Husband and Wife 19.]

DOCTRINE OF NOTICE

doctrine of notice.See NOTICE DOCTRINE.

DOCTRINE OF OBLIGATION

doctrine of obligation.English law. The rule that if a foreign court of competent jurisdiction has adjudicated a certain sum to be due from one person to another, the liability to pay that sum becomes a legal obligation enforceable domestically by a debt action. • Once the plaintiff proves the judgment, the burden shifts to the defendant to show why the obligation should not be performed. The doctrine was established by Baron Parke in Russell v. Smyth, 9 M. & W. 810, 819 (1842). — Often shortened to obligation.

DOCTRINE OF OPTIONAL COMPLETENESS doctrine of optional completeness.See RULE OF OPTIONAL COMPLETENESS.

DOCTRINE OF PARENS PATRIAE doctrine of parens patriae.See PARENS PATRIAE(2).

DOCTRINE OF PRACTICAL LOCATION doctrine of practical location.See AGREED-BOUNDARY DOCTRINE.

DOCTRINE OF PRECEDENT

doctrine of precedent. 1. The rule that precedents not only have persuasive authority but also must be followed when similar circumstances arise. • This rule developed in the 19th century and prevails today. See STARE DECISIS. [Cases: Courts 88. C.J.S. Courts § 139; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition§ 187.] 2. A rule that precedents are reported, may be cited, and will probably be followed by courts. • This is the rule that prevailed in England until the 19th century.

DOCTRINE OF PRECLUSION OF INCONSISTENT POSITIONS doctrine of preclusion of inconsistent positions.See judicial estoppel under ESTOPPEL.

DOCTRINE OF RELATION BACK doctrine of relation back. See RELATION BACK.

DOCTRINE OF RES JUDICATA doctrine of res judicata. See RES JUDICATA.

DOCTRINE OF REVESTMENT doctrine of revestment. A rule by which a court regains jurisdiction after the entry of final judgment when the former opposing parties have actively participated in proceedings inconsistent with the court's judgment. [Cases: Courts 30. C.J.S. Courts §§ 71–73.]

DOCTRINE OF SCRIVENER'S ERROR

doctrine of scrivener's error. A rule permitting a typographical error in a document to be reformed by parol evidence, if the evidence is precise, clear, and convincing. See clerical error under ERROR(2). [Cases: Reformation of Instruments 17(2). C.J.S. Reformation of Instruments § 25.]

DOCTRINE OF SEPARATE SPHERES doctrine of separate spheres. See SEPARATE-SPHERES DOCTRINE.

DOCTRINE OF SPECIALTY

doctrine of specialty. Int'l law. The principle, included as a provision in most extradition treaties, under which a person who is extradited to a country to stand trial for certain criminal offenses may be tried only for those offenses and not for any other pre-extradition offenses. — Also termed specialty doctrine. See EXTRADITION. [Cases: Extradition and Detainers 19.]

DOCTRINE OF SPOUSAL UNITY doctrine of spousal unity. See SPOUSAL-UNITY DOCTRINE(1).

DOCTRINE OF SUBSTANTIAL EQUIVALENTS doctrine of substantial equivalents. See DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS.

DOCTRINE OF SUBSTITUTED JUDGMENT doctrine of substituted judgment. See SUBSTITUTED-JUDGMENT DOCTRINE.

DOCTRINE OF SUPERIOR EQUITIES doctrine of superior equities. Insurance. A rule by which an insurer is unable to recover from anyone whose equities are equal or superior to the insurer's; esp., a rule that a right of subrogation may be invoked against another party only if that party's guilty conduct renders the party's equity inferior to that of the insured. — Also termed risk-stops-here rule. [Cases: Insurance 3517; Subrogation 1. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1476, 1482, 1484, 1487; Subrogation §§ 2–15, 19, 91.]

DOLE<TT> TEST

Dole test. A four-part test used to determine the constitutionality of a condition attached by Congress under its Spending Clause power to the receipt of federal money. • The spending must be in pursuit of the general welfare, and the condition must be unambiguous, related to some federal interest, and not barred by any other provision of the Constitution. South Dakota v. Dole, 483 U.S. 203, 107 S.Ct. 2793 (1987).

DOLI CAPAX

doli capax (doh-llkay-paks), adj.[Latin “capable of wrong”] Roman law. Capable of committing a crime or tort; esp., old enough to determine right from wrong. — Also termed capax doli. Cf. DOLI INCAPAX.

“In criminal cases, an infant of the age of fourteen years may be capitally punished for any capital offence: but under the age of seven he cannot. The period between seven and fourteen is subject to much uncertainty: for the infant shall, generally speaking, be judged prima facie innocent; yet if he was doli capax, and could discern between good and evil at the time of the offence committed, he may be convicted and undergo judgment and execution of death, though he hath not attained to years of puberty or discretion.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 452–53 (1765).

DOLI INCAPAX

doli incapax (doh-II in-kay-paks), adj.[Latin “incapable of wrong”] Roman law. Incapable of committing a crime or tort. — Also termed incapax doli. Cf. DOLI CAPAX.

DOLUS

dolus (doh-l<<schwa>>s). [Latin “device; artifice”] Roman & civil law. 1. Fraud or deceit; conduct intended to deceive someone; bad faith. • Although there may be dolus without fraud, fraud always includes dolus. Cf. CASUS(1); CULPA(1).2. Intentional aggression; willful injury, esp. to another's property. — Also termed dolus malus; fraus.

“In the twelfth century the resuscitated Roman law introduced some new ideas. Men began to contrast, as Glanvill does, civil with criminal causes, to speak of dolus and culpa and casus, and to lay stress on the psychical element in crime.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 477 (2d ed. 1899).

“Although the word malitia is not unknown to the Roman lawyers, the usual and technical name for wrongful intent is dolus, or more specifically dolus malus. Dolus and culpa are two forms of mens rea. In a narrower sense, however, dolus includes merely that particular variety of wrongful intent which we term fraud — that is to say, the intent to deceive. From this limited sense it was extended to cover all forms of wilful wrongdoing. The English term fraud has never received an equally wide extension.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 385 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

dolus bonus (doh-l<<schwa>>s boh-n<<schwa>>s). [Latin “good deceit”] Shrewdness or justifiable deceit, as when a person lies to an attacker to prevent an assault. • Dolus bonus does not produce any legal consequences.

DOMBROWSKI<TT> DOCTRINE

Dombrowski doctrine. A short-lived rule that entitled a person to seek a federal-court injunction to prevent prosecution under a broad or vague state statute that affects rights guaranteed by the First Amendment. Dombrowski v. Pfister, 380 U.S. 479, 85 S.Ct. 1116 (1965). • The doctrine was greatly cut back six years after it was announced, when the Supreme Court ruled that a speculative First Amendment chilling effect does not justify federal-court intervention in state affairs. Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37, 91 S.Ct. 746 (1971). [Cases: Courts 508. C.J.S. Courts §§ 216, 218–219.]

DOMESDAY BOOK

Domesday Book (doomz-day). The census or survey, ordered by William the Conqueror and substantially completed in 1086, of England's landholdings, buildings, people, and livestock. — Abbr. D.B. — Also spelled Doomsday Book.

“Domesday Book had several variant names — Liber de Wintonia, Rotulus Wintoniae, Scriptura Thesauri Regis, Liber Regis, Liber Judiciarius, Censualis Angliae, Angliae Notitia et Lustratio, Rotulus Regis, Liber de Thesauro, Exchequer Domesday....Domesday Book had as its main object a fiscal one, and a limited fiscal one at that. Beyond that it does not profess to go, and if we get any further information from it as to contemporary law and society, we get it as an indirect consequence.” Percy H. Winfield, The Chief Sources of English Legal History 110–11 (1925).

domestic,adj.1. Of or relating to one's own country <domestic affairs>.2. Of or relating to one's own jurisdiction <in Alaska, a domestic corporation is an Alaskan one>.3. Of or relating to the family or the household .

DOMESTIC-RELATIONS COURT

domestic-relations court. See family court under COURT.

DOMESTIC-RELATIONS EXCEPTION

domestic-relations exception. The exclusion of suits regarding the granting of divorce, alimony, and child custody from federal diversity jurisdiction. • The domestic-relations exemption to federal diversity jurisdiction originated as dictum in Barber v. Barber, 62 U.S. (21 How.) 582 (1858). Federal courts do not have jurisdiction to grant divorces, award alimony, or determine child custody. In general, matters of domestic relations are left to the states. But the federal courts may hear other diversity matters involving family members, such as tort claims or suits seeking to enforce alimony orders. Ankenbrandt v. Richards, 504 U.S. 689, 112 S.Ct. 2206 (1992).

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

domestic violence. See VIOLENCE.

DOMICELLUS

domicellus (dom-<<schwa>>-sel-<<schwa>>s), n. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. A king's natural son in France. 2. A young lord.

“Domicellus, Is an old obsolete ... Word, anciently given as an Appellation or Addition to the King's natural Sons in France, and sometimes to the eldest Sons of Noblemen there; from whence we borrowed these Additions: As several natural Children of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, are stiled Domicelli by the Charter of Legitimation.... But according to Thorn, the Domicelli were only the better Sort of Servants in Monasteries.” Giles Jacob, A New Law-Dictionary (8th ed. 1762).

DOMICILE

domicile (dom-<<schwa>>-sII), n.1. The place at which a person has been physically present and that the person regards as home; a person's true, fixed, principal, and permanent home, to which that person intends to return and remain even though currently residing elsewhere. • A person has a settled connection with his or her domicile for legal purposes, either because that place is home or because the law has so designated that place. — Also termed permanent abode. [Cases: Domicile 1. C.J.S. Domicile §§ 2–3, 5, 11.]

“By domicile we mean home, the permanent home; and if you do not understand your permanent home, I am afraid that no illustration drawn from foreign writers or foreign languages will very much help you to it.” Whicker v. Hume [1858] 7 H.L.C. 124, 160(per Lord Cranworth).

“It is difficult to give a definition of domicil that will cover at once domicil by operation of law and domicil by choice. The idea of domicil certainly includes the idea of place and the idea of settled connection with the place. Domicil of choice is so closely connected with the idea of home that it seems desirable to include that idea in any definition, and yet the idea is not applicable to many kinds of domicil by operation of law. It has therefore seemed best to state this element in the alternative. If a home is in the place, that is sufficient. If there is no home, or if the party is not sui juris, then the place is assigned by law without his will.” 1 Joseph H. Beale, A Treatise on the Conflict of Laws § 9.1, at 89–90 (1935).

“A person's domicile is the place with which that person is most closely associated — his or her ‘home’ with all the connotations of that word. A person can be domiciled in a nation, a state of the United States, a city, or a house within a city. He or she can have a domicile within a broader geographical designation without having a domicile in a narrower geographical designation. For example, a person may be domiciled in a state without being domiciled within any particular city within the state. For interstate choice-of-law purposes, it is the state in which a person is domiciled that is significant.” Russell J. Weintraub, Commentary on the Conflict of Laws § 2.2, at 14 (4th ed. 2001).

2. The residence of a person or corporation for legal purposes. — Also termed (in sense 2) legal residence; domicile by operation of law. Cf. RESIDENCE; PLACE OF BUSINESS. — Also spelled (in BrE) domicil. “Tax statutes frequently speak in terms of residence, intending it to be the equivalent of domicile. For example, the New York estate tax speaks in terms of residence and non-residence. Similarly ..., the United States imposes an estate tax on any resident or citizen of the U.S. Although both statutes use the term ‘residence,’ its usage has been construed to mean ‘domicile.’ ” Robert C. Lawrence III, International Tax and Estate Planning § 1.03(a)(4), at 8–9 (1989).

after-acquired domicile. A domicile established after the facts relevant to an issue arose. • An after-acquired domicile cannot be used to establish jurisdiction or choice of law.

commercial domicile. 1. A domicile acquired by a nonresident corporation conducting enough activities to permit taxation of the corporation's property or activities located outside the bounds of the taxing state. 2. A domicile acquired by a person or company freely residing or carrying on business in enemy territory or enemy-occupied territory. — Also termed quasi-domicile.

corporate domicile. The place considered by law as the center of corporate affairs, where the corporation's functions are discharged; the legal home of a corporation, usu. its state of incorporation or the state in which it maintains its principal place of business. • For purposes of determining whether diversity jurisdiction exists in federal court, a corporation is considered a citizen of both its state of incorporation and the state of its principal place of business. See DIVERSITY OF CITIZENSHIP. [Cases: Corporations 52, 503(1); Taxation 397, 1016. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 107–109, 717, 886; Taxation §§ 577–579, 1708.]

domicile of birth. See domicile of origin.

domicile of choice. 1. A domicile established by physical presence within a state or territory, coupled with the intention to make it home. [Cases: Domicile 4. C.J.S. Domicile § 8.] 2. The domicile that a person chooses after reaching majority or being emancipated.

domicile of origin. The domicile of a person at birth, derived from the custodial parent or imposed by law. — Also termed natural domicile; domicile of birth; original domicile. See necessary domicile. [Cases: Domicile 3. C.J.S. Domicile §§ 6–7.]

“Domicil is sometimes divided into domicil of birth, that by operation of law, and that of choice. Domicil of origin in modern times is domicil in the place where his parents at his birth were domiciled.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 71, at 105 n.2 (5th ed. 1878).

“Domicile of origin is the domicile the law assigns to each person at birth, usually the domicile of the father in the case of a legitimate child and of the mother in the case of an illegitimate child. Domicile of origin has particular significance in English law. If one abandons one's domicile of choice without attaining a new one, the domicile of origin ‘revives’ until a new domicile of choice is attained. In contrast, U.S. jurisdictions generally will not find a domicile abandoned until a new one has been adopted.” Robert C. Lawrence III, International Tax and Estate Planning § 1.03(a)(1), at 4 (1989).

domicile of succession. The domicile that determines the succession of a person's estate.

domicile of trustee. The domicile where a trustee is appointed. [Cases: Trusts 113. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 220–223.]

elected domicile. A contractually agreed domicile between parties for purposes of the contract.

foreign domicile. A domicile established by a citizen or subject of one sovereignty within the territory of another.

matrimonial domicile. A domicile that a husband and wife, as a married couple, have established as their home. — Also termed marital domicile; matrimonial home. [Cases: Divorce 62. C.J.S. Divorce § 99.]

municipal domicile. A person's residence in a county or municipality, as distinguished from the person's state or national domicile.

national domicile. A domicile considered in terms of a particular nation rather than a locality or subdivision of a nation.

natural domicile. See domicile of origin.

necessary domicile. A domicile legally fixed and independent of choice, as in the domicile of origin. See domicile of origin.

original domicile. See domicile of origin.

quasi-domicile. See commercial domicile.

quasi-national domicile. A person's state of residence, as distinguished from the person's national or local domicile.

DOMINATION

domination.Patents. The effect that an earlier patent (usu. a basic one) has on a later patent (esp. one for improvements on the patented device) because the earlier patent's claims are so broad or generic that the later patent's invention will always read on the earlier patent's claims, resulting in infringement. • Because the patent system is based on exclusion of others from an invention's subject matter, the earlier, basic patent's claims "dominate" the later-invented improvement. If the improvement is patented and worked, it infringes the basic patent. But the basic patent's owner cannot practice the improvement without infringing on the improvement's patent. This standoff effect encourages improvement- and basic-patentees to seek licenses or cross-licenses with each other. See blocking patent under PATENT(3).

DOMINICAL

dominical (d<<schwa>>-min-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>l), adj. Of or relating to a Sunday; of or relating to the Lord's day.

DOMINIUM

dominium (d<<schwa>>-min-ee-<<schwa>>m), n. [fr. Latin dominus "lord"] 1. Roman & civil law. Absolute ownership including the right to possession and use; a right of control over property that the holder might retain or transfer at pleasure. • Dominium was subject to any servitudes, planning restrictions, etc. This term gradually came to also mean merely ownership of property, as distinguished from the right to possession or use.

"Dominium is the Roman term for the rights of an owner against all the world: and the contrast of dominium and obligatio is the nearest approach that can be made, in classical Roman language, to the distinction marked by the modern terms in rem and in personam." Frederick Pollock, A First Book of Jurisprudence 83 (1896).

"The one word dominium has to assume so many shades of meaning. The tenant qui tenet terram in dominio, is dominus rei and has dominium rei; but then he has above him one who is his dominus, and for the rights of this lord over him and over his land there is no other name than dominium." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 4 (2d ed. 1899).

dominium directum (d<<schwa>>-min-ee-<<schwa>>m di-rek-t<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin] 1.Civil law. Legal, not equitable, ownership. 2.Feudal law. The right of the superior of land over a tenant.

dominium ex jure quiritium (d<<schwa>>-min-ee-<<schwa>>m eks joor-ee kwI-rish-ee-<<schwa>>m).Roman law. Ownership exercised by Roman citizens in the most complete manner (pleno jure), the property being domestic (not foreign) and having been acquired according to all the forms of law. — Also termed dominium quiritarium; dominium legitimum.

dominium legitimum (l<<schwa>>-jit-i-m<<schwa>>m). See dominium ex jure quiritium.

dominium plenum (d<<schwa>>-min-ee-<<schwa>>m plee-n<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin] Civil law. Full ownership combining dominium directum and dominium utile. — Also termed plenum dominium.

dominium quiritarium (d<<schwa>>-min-ee-<<schwa>>m kwI-r<<schwa>>-tair-ee-<<schwa>>m). See dominium ex jure quiritium.

dominium utile (d<<schwa>>-min-ee-<<schwa>>m yoo-t<<schwa>>-lee), n.[Law Latin] Civil law. Equitable ownership; a beneficial right to use property; the right of a tenant to use the soil and its profits.

“The special characteristic of Feudal land was that ownership in it was split into two kinds, the dominium directum of the superior (lord) and the dominium utile of the vassal. The feudists correctly insisted that this was not a form of joint ownership, not yet of ownership burdened with an easement or a ‘usufruct,’ but that two kinds of ownership were present, and that each of these persons, the lord and the vassal, was properly called ‘owner’ or dominus. The lord's dominium directum gave him a reversion in the case of forfeiture of failure of issue and the enjoyment of whatever the naturalia and accidentalia were. The vassal's dominium utile gave him the immediate enjoyment of the land itself.” Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 148 (1936).

nudum dominium (n[y]oo-d<<schwa>>m d<<schwa>>-min-ee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “bare ownership”] Roman law. Ownership divorced from present possession or use.

plenum dominium.See dominium plenum.

2.Hist. Lordship; sovereignty.“The Latin word for ownership, dominium, is particularly confusing, since in medieval times it is also the word for lordship.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 255 (3d ed. 1990).

DOMINO VOLENTE

doom, n. Hist. 1.A statute or law. 2. A judgment; esp., a sentence in a criminal matter. 3. Justice; fairness. 4. A trial; the process of adjudicating.

“The word ‘doom’ is, perhaps, best translated as ‘judgment.’ It survived in occasional use until the fourteenth century. Wyclif’s translation of the Bible, rendering the verse, ‘For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged,’ as ‘For in what dome ye demen, ye schuln be demed.’ The distinction which we make to-day between the legislator, who makes the law, and the judge, who interprets, declares and applies it, was not known to our Anglo-Saxon ancestors. The dooms were judgments in the sense that they were declarations of the law of the people.” W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 1 (2d ed. 1949).

DOTALITIUM

dotalitium (doh-t-<<schwa>>-lish-ee-*<<schwa>>*m), n.[Law Latin] Hist. Dower.

“[S]ome have ascribed the introduction of dower to the Normans, as a branch of their local tenures; though we cannot expect any feudal reason for its invention, since it was not a part of the pure, primitive, simple law of feuds, but was first of all introduced into that system (wherein it was called ...dotalitium) by the emperor Frederick the second; who was contemporary with our king Henry III. It is possible therefore that it might be with us the relic of a Danish custom: since, according to the historians of that country, dower was introduced into Denmark by Swein, the father of our Canute the great, out of gratitude to the Danish ladies, who sold all their jewels to ransom him when taken prisoner by the Vandals.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 129–30 (1766).

DOUBLE VALUE

double value. Twice the value of something; specif., a penalty payable by a tenant to a landlord of twice the yearly value of lands held by the tenant, who refused to leave when the landlord provided written notice of intent to possess the property. • The penalty was provided under the Landlord and Tenant Act (1730). St. 4 Geo. 2. ch. 28, § 1. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 216. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 547–551.]

double voucher. In a common-recovery suit, a voucher first by the fictitious tenant to the real tenant, and then by the real tenant to the common vouchee. See COMMON RECOVERY.

“The recovery, here described, is with a single voucher only; but sometimes it is with double... or farther voucher, as the exigency of the case may require. And indeed it is now usual always to have a recovery with double voucher at the least; by first conveying an estate of freehold to any indifferent person, against whom the praecipe is brought; and then he vouches the tenant in tail, who vouches over the common vouchee. For, if a recovery be had immediately against tenant in tail, it bars only such estate in the premises of which he is then actually seised; whereas if the recovery be had against another person, and the tenant in tail be vouched, it bars every latent right and interest which he may have in the lands recovered.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 359 (1766).

DOUBLE WASTE

double waste. See WASTE(1).

DOUBLE WILL

double will. See mutual will under WILL.

DOWAGER-QUEEN

dowager-queen. The widow of the king of England. — Also termed queen dowager. See QUEEN MOTHER.

“A queen dowager is the widow of the king, and as such enjoys most of the privileges belonging to her as queen consort. But it is not high treason to conspire her death; or to violate her chastity ... because the succession to the crown is not thereby endangered. Yet still, ... no man can marry a queen dowager without special licence from the king, on pain of forfeiting his lands and goods.... A queen dowager, when married again to a subject, doth not lose her regal dignity, as peeresses dowager do their peerage when they marry commoners.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 217 (1765).

dower (dow-<<schwa>>r). At common law, a wife's right, upon her husband's death, to a life estate in one-third of the land that he owned in fee. • With few exceptions, the wife could not be deprived of dower by any transfer made by her husband during his lifetime. Although most states have abolished dower, many states retaining the concept have expanded the wife's share to a life estate in all the land that her husband owned in fee. — Also termed dowment; maritagium. Cf.

CURTESY. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy 1–118.C.J.S. Dower §§ 2–170.]

consummate dower (k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>m-it orkahn-s<<schwa>>-mit). A wife's interest in her deceased husband's estate until that interest is legally assigned to her. — Also termed dower consummate. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy 54. C.J.S. Dower §§ 64–84.]

dower ad ostium ecclesiae (ad ahs-tee-<<schwa>>m e-klee-z[h]ee-ee), n.[Law Latin “dower at the church door”] Hist. An endowment of dower made by a man to his wife at the church door or porch, usu. as part of the marriage ceremony.

“DOWER AD OSTIUM ECCLESIAE.... This appears to have been the original English dower It was formerly the most usual species of dower, and, though latterly fallen into disuse, was not abolished until the statute of 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 105, s. 13 The wife might be endowed of personalty or goods as well as of lands, and a trace of this ancient kind of dower is still distinctly preserved in the marriage ritual of the church of England, in the expression ‘with all my worldly goods I thee endow.’ ” 1 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 520 (2d ed. 1867).

dower by custom.Hist. Dower that is determined by custom rather than the general law. — Also termed dower by particular custom.

“Dower by ...custom; as that the wife shall have half the husband's lands, or in some places the whole, and in some only a quarter.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 132 (1766).

dower by particular custom.See dower by custom.

dower by the common law.The regular dower, consisting of a life interest in one-third of the lands that the husband held in fee. — Also termed dos rationabilis (dos rash-[ee]-<<schwa>>-nab-<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>s). [Cases: Dower and Curtesy 10, 11. C.J.S. Dower §§ 10, 12–29, 140, 147–152.]

dower consummate.See consummate dower.

dower ex assensu patris (eks <<schwa>>-sen-s[y]oo pa-tris), n.[Law Latin “dower by the father's assent”] Hist. A type of dower ad ostium ecclesiae made while the husband's father is alive and consents to the endowment to his son's wife.

DRAGO DOCTRINE

Drago doctrine.The principle asserted by Luis Drago, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Argentine Republic, in a December 29, 1902 letter to the Argentine Minister in Washington, in which Drago, in response to the forcible coercion of Venezuela's unpaid loans by Great Britain and others, argued that no public debt should be collected from a sovereign state by force or through the occupation of American territory by a foreign power. • The subject was presented at the Hague Conference of 1907, when a modified version of the Drago doctrine was adopted.

DRAIN

drain,n.1. The act of drawing a liquid off gradually; the act of emptying. 2. The act of gradually exhausting. 3. A conduit for draining liquid, as a ditch or a pipe.

drain,vb.1. To draw (a liquid) off gradually <the farmer drained water from the property>.2.

To exhaust gradually <the facility has drained the area's natural resources>.3. To empty gradually <the water drained>.

DRAINAGE DISTRICT

drainage district.A political subdivision authorized to levy assessments for making drainage improvements within its area. [Cases: Drains 12.C.J.S. Drains § 8.]

“In the United States there are numerous special districts that administer drainage projects. They are typically formed under state law after a local election or petition showing consent of a majority of affected landowners. The projects are usually publicly financed, and assessments are made against all property benefited, whether or not all individual landowners have consented. Such projects can increase the agricultural capacity of drained lands and provide ‘new’ land for buildings and other improvements Special statutes governing drainage districts generally exempt them from restraints But if private property rights are taken or if others are damaged, compensation must be paid.” David H. Getches, Water Law in a Nutshell 301 (3d ed. 1997).

DRAINAGE RIGHTS

drainage rights.The interest that a property owner has in the natural drainage and flow of water on the land. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 116.C.J.S. Waters §§ 255, 277–279.]

DRAM

dram (dram).1. An apothecary measurement of fluid equal to an eighth of an ounce. [Cases: Weights and Measures 3. C.J.S. Weights and Measures § 3.] 2. A small amount of anything, esp. liquor.

DRAMA

drama,n.1. A presentation of a story portrayed by words and actions or actions alone; a play. Cf. DRAMATIC COMPOSITION.

“The term [drama] is applied to compositions which imitate action by representing the personages introduced in them as real and as employed in the action itself. The varieties of the drama differ more or less widely, both as to the objects imitated and as to the means used in the imitation. But they all agree as to the method or manner which is essential to the dramatic art, viz., imitation in the way of action.” 7 Encyclopaedia Britannica 338 (9th ed. 1907).

2. An event or series of events having conflicting and exciting elements that capture people's attention.

DRAMATIC COMPOSITION

dramatic composition.Copyright. A literary work setting forth a story, incident, or scene intended to be performed by actors, often with a musical accompaniment. Cf. DRAMA(1). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 7. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 13.]

DRAMATIC WORK

dramatic work. See WORK(2).

DRAM SHOP

dram shop. Archaic. A place where alcoholic beverages are sold; a bar or saloon. — Also spelled dram-shop; dramshop. — Also termed grog-shop; drinking shop.

DRAM-SHOP ACT

dram-shop act. A statute allowing a plaintiff to recover damages from a commercial seller of alcoholic beverages for the plaintiff's injuries caused by a customer's intoxication. — Also termed civil-liability act; civil-damage law. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors 282–324. C.J.S. Intoxicating Liquors §§ 428–463.]

“Largely at the behest of the temperance movement, statutes (called ‘dram shop acts’) were enacted in many states which imposed some form of civil liability on those engaged in the business of selling such beverages in favor of third persons injured thereby At one time, almost half the states had such laws; today, that number seems to be declining.... A growing minority of states have overthrown the common law rule and have created a common law dram shop action. In most of these jurisdictions, liability is predicated on statutes which regulate the liquor business and prohibit certain sales by liquor licensees (to minors, intoxicated persons, etc.) thus, where the sale is unlawful, it is negligence per se” Edward J. Kionka, Torts in a Nutshell 293–94 (2d ed. 1992).

DRAM-SHOP LIABILITY

dram-shop liability. Civil liability of a commercial seller of alcoholic beverages for personal injury caused by an intoxicated customer. • Claims based on a similar type of liability have been brought against private citizens for personal injury caused by an intoxicated social guest. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors 282–324. C.J.S. Intoxicating Liquors §§ 428–463.]

draw, vb. 1. To create and sign (a draft) <draw a check to purchase goods>. 2. To prepare or frame (a legal document) <draw up a will>. 3. To take out (money) from a bank, treasury, or depository <she drew $6,000 from her account>. 4. To select (a jury) <the lawyers began voir dire and had soon drawn a jury>.

drawback. A government allowance or refund on import duties when the importer reexports imported products rather than selling them domestically. 19 USCA § 1313. [Cases: Customs Duties 100. C.J.S. Customs Duties §§ 127–134.]

drawee (draw-ee). The person or entity that a draft is directed to and that is requested to pay the amount stated on it. • The drawee is usu. a bank that is directed to pay a sum of money on an instrument. — Also termed payor. [Cases: Banks and Banking 137; Bills and Notes 24. C.J.S.

Banks and Banking §§ 328, 330; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 19.]

drawee bank. See payor bank under BANK.

DRAWER

drawer. One who directs a person or entity, usu. a bank, to pay a sum of money stated in an instrument — for example, a person who writes a check; the maker of a note or draft. See MAKER. [Cases: Banks and Banking 137; Bills and Notes 23. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 328, 330; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 9, 18, 20–21.]

DRAWING

drawing. 1. Patents. A specially prepared figure included with a patent application to explain and describe the invention. • A drawing is required when necessary to understand the invention. 35 USCA § 113. [Cases: Patents 100. C.J.S. Patents § 143.] 2. Trademarks. A graphic or textual depiction of a trademark, filed as part of an application for the mark to be placed on the primary register. • The drawing serves as the element that is published in the Official Gazette. It must include the applicant's name and address, the type of goods or services it will identify, and the date of first use or a statement of intent to use it in commerce. [Cases: Trade Regulation 212. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 176–177.]

formal drawing. A drawing that complies with the formatting requirements of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, as set forth in 37 CFR § 1.84, and is stamped “Approved” by the PTO Drafter. Cf. informal drawing.

front-page drawing. A drawing submitted with the patent application and selected by the examiner as the application's representative drawing. • The drawing is reproduced on the front page of the published application or patent. [Cases: Patents 100. C.J.S. Patents § 143.]

informal drawing. A drawing that does not comply with the formatting requirements of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • A drawing may be submitted as informal by the patent applicant, or declared informal by the PTO Drafter. Cf. formal drawing.

original drawing. A drawing submitted with the original application.

special-form drawing. A drawing of a trademark that contains some graphical element, such as a logo, a picture, or a special type style. • A stylized or special-form drawing must be submitted in black-and-white, with a description of the colors to be used on the final mark. — Also termed stylized drawing.

substitute drawing. A drawing submitted after the original application has been filed. • A substitute drawing is often a formal drawing filed to replace an informal drawing.

typed drawing. A drawing of a trademark that is purely textual, with no graphical component. • A typed drawing consists solely of the words, letters, and numbers that make up the mark, typed in all capitals. — Also termed typed-form drawing.

DRAWING LOTS

drawing lots. An act of selection or decision-making based on pure chance, with the result depending on the particular lot drawn. • Jurors are usu. instructed by the court not to base their verdict on drawing lots or similar methods of chance.

DRIFT OF THE FOREST

drift of the forest. Hist. A periodic examination of forest cattle by officers who drive them to an enclosed place to determine their ownership or common status.

“Drift of the forest is nothing else but an exact view or examination taken once, twice, or oftener in a year as occasion shall require, what beasts there are in the forest, to the end that the common in the forest be not overcharged, that the beasts of foreigners that have no common there be not permitted, and that beasts not commonable may be put out.” Termes de la Ley 185–87 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

DRIFT-STUFF

drift-stuff. Any material floating at random in water without a discoverable source. • Drift-stuff is usu. the property of the riparian owner.

DRILLING CONTRACT

drilling contract. Oil & gas. A well-drilling agreement between a drilling contractor, who owns drilling rigs and associated equipment, and the owner or lessor of the mineral rights. • The contract spells out the rights and duties of the parties. In general, the more control the interest-owner retains over the contractor, the more liability the owner is exposed to for damages the drilling causes.

daywork drilling contract. Oil & gas. A contract under which the lease operator hires a drilling rig and oilfield workers, pays an amount based on the time spent in drilling operations, and retains the right to direct drilling operations. • This type of contract gives the lease operator broad control over the drilling contractor, so courts in turn impose broad liability on the lease operator for any damages that result from the drilling. Cf. footage drilling contract; turnkey drilling contract.

footage drilling contract. Oil & gas. A drilling contract under which the drilling contractor is paid to drill to a specified formation or depth, is paid a set amount per foot drilled, and is given broad control over how to do the work. • The risk of unexpected delays, as well as most liabilities, is on the contractor rather than the lease operator under this type of contract. Cf. daywork drilling contract; turnkey drilling contract.

turnkey drilling contract. Oil & gas. A drilling contract under which the drilling contractor promises to perform specified functions for an agreed price. • The lease operator has little or no discretion to control the drilling contractor, and so assumes little or no liability for damages that the drilling may cause. Cf. daywork drilling contract; footage drilling contract.

DRILLING-DELAY RENTAL CLAUSE drilling-delay rental clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease giving the lessee the right to maintain the lease from period to period during the primary term by paying delay rentals instead of starting drilling operations. • Lessees use drilling-delay rental clauses because courts have said that they obviate any implied covenant to drill a test well on the premises. They are accepted by lessors because they provide for periodic income from the lease. See “or”lease, “unless”lease under LEASE. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 78.1(3). C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 269–270.]

“The purpose of the lease drilling-delay rental clause is to ensure that the lessee has no obligation to drill during the primary term by negating any implied obligation to test the premises. Before drilling-delay rental clauses became common in oil and gas leases, many courts held that lessees had an implied duty to drill a test well on the leased premises within a reasonable time after grant of the lease. The rationale for the implied covenant was that the major consideration for the grant of the lease by the lessor was the expectation that the property would be tested within a reasonable time. The courts' determination of what was a reasonable time ranged from a few months to several years, depending upon the circumstances. Lessees found that they could not rely upon a long stated term alone to preserve their rights.” John S. Lowe, Oil and Gas Law in a Nutshell 195–96 (3d ed. 1995).

droit d'accession (drwah dak-ses-syawn), n.[French "right of accession"] Civil law. The right of the owner of a thing to whatever is produced by it or is united with it, either naturally or artificially. La. Civ. Code arts. 483, 490, 507. • The equivalent of the Roman specificatio, the right includes, for example, the right of a landowner to new land deposited on a riverbank and the right of an orchard owner to the fruit of the trees in the orchard. See ACCESSION(3).

"DROIT D'ACCESSION.... The civil law rule is that if the thing can be reduced to the former matter it belongs to the owner of the matter, e.g. a statue made of gold; but if it cannot so be reduced it belongs to the person who made it, e.g. a statue made of marble." 1 John Bouvier, Bouvier's Law Dictionary 941 (8th ed. 1914).

DROIT D'ACCROISSEMENT

droit d'accroissement (drwah da-krwas-mawn), n.[French] French law. A right of survivorship by which an heir's interest is combined with the interest of a coheir who either has refused or is unable to accept the interest.

DROIT D'AUBAINE

droit d'aubaine (drwah doh-ben), n.[Law French "right of alienage"] Hist. With certain exceptions, a sovereign's right to a deceased alien's property, regardless of whether the alien had a will. • This right was primarily exercised in France, where it was revived in some form by Napoleon after its initial abolishment in 1790. It was ultimately abolished in 1819. — Also spelled droit d'aubaine; droit d'aubinage. — Also termed jus albanagii; jus albinatus.

“Under the French rule of law, known as the droit d'aubaine..., the whole property of an alien dying in France without leaving children born in that country escheated to the crown. The royal right was not universally exacted, and at a very early period special exceptions were introduced in favour of certain classes. Thus Louis XI exempted merchants of Brabant, Flanders, Holland, and Zealand from the operation of the law, and a similar privilege was extended by Henri II to merchants of the Hanse towns, and from Scotland.” 1 R.H. Inglis Palgrave, Palgrave's Dictionary of Political Economy 68 (Henry Higgs ed., 2d ed. 1925).

“In France by the fourteenth century it was accepted that a stranger might acquire and possess but not inherit or transmit by will or on intestacy. In 1386 the French king assumed the seigniorial droit d'aubaine or right to inherit. In treaties in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries the right was frequently renounced. Louis XVI in 1787 abolished the right as against subjects of Great Britain without reciprocity. The constituent Assembly abolished the right in 1790 and it was commonly abolished elsewhere in the early nineteenth century.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 378 (1980).

DROIT D'AUTEUR

droit d'auteur (drwah doh-t<<schwa>>r), n. [French “author's right”] The copyright system used in France and other civil-law nations and differing from common-law copyright by giving more protection to an author's moral right. See AUTHOR'S RIGHT.

DROIT DE BRIS

droit de bris (drwah d<<schwa>> bree), n. [Law French “right of a wreck”] Hist. A right claimed by lords of the coasts of France to fragments of shipwrecks, including persons or property that had washed ashore. • The right was exercised primarily in Bretagne but was abrogated by Henry III as duke of Normandy, Aquitaine, and Guienne, in a charter granted in A.D. 1226. — Also termed droit de bris sur le naufrages. Cf. DROIT DE NAUFRAGE.

DROIT DE DÉTRACTION

droit de détraction (drwah d<<schwa>> day-trak-syawn), n. [French “the right of withdrawal”] Int'l law. A tax on property acquired by succession or by will and then removed to another state or country.

DROIT DE GARDE

droit de garde (drwah d<<schwa>> gahrd), n. [French “right of ward”] Hist. French law. A king's right to wardship of a noble vassal who has not reached majority.

DROIT DE GITE

droit de gite (drwah d<<schwa>> zheet), n. [French “right of lodging”] Hist. French law. A duty of a commoner holding land in the royal domain to provide lodging and food to a royal party traveling on royal business.

DROIT DE GREFFE

DROIT DE SUITE

droit de suite (drwah d<<schwa>> sweet), n.[French “right to follow”] 1. A creditor's right to recover a debtor's property after it passes to a third party. 2. Copyright. An artist's resale royalty; the right of a work's creator to benefit from appreciation in the value of the work by receiving a portion of the profit from its later resales. • A droit de suite is recognized in some European nations.

“The droit de suite (literally translated as the right to follow the work) enables artists to claim a portion of the price for which a work is resold. The idea is that an artist may sell a painting for a low price at a time when they are unknown and have little bargaining power. In due course, as the artist's reputation develops, the painting may be resold for continually increasing sums.... The right is seen to be justified not only because it encourages creation, but also because the artist is conceived (through the authorial link) as being responsible for the increase in value (economic success of their works).” Lionel Bently & Brad Sherman, Intellectual Property Law 281 (2001).

DROIT D'EXÉCUTION

droit d'exécution (drwah dek-say-kyoo-syawn), n.[French “right of execution”] French law. 1. A stockbroker's right to sell the stock bought for a client who later refuses it. 2. A stockbroker's right to sell deposited securities to secure the broker against a loss in buying for a client.

DROIT-DROIT

droit-droit (drwah-drwah), n.[Law French “double right”] Hist. The unification of the right of possession with the right of property. — Also termed jus duplicatum; dreit dreit.

“A complete title to lands, tenements, and hereditaments. For it is an ancient maxim of the law, that no title is completely good, unless the right of possession be joined with the right of property; which right is then denominated a double right, jus duplicatum, or droit droit. And when to this double right the actual possession is also united ... then, and then only, is the title completely legal.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 199 (1766).

DROIT DU SEIGNEUR

droit du seigneur (drwah d<<schwa>> sen-yuur). [French “right of the lord”] Hist. 1.A supposed customary right of a feudal lord to have sexual intercourse with a tenant's bride on her wedding night. 2. A supposed custom requiring sexual abstinence by a couple on their wedding night. — Also spelled droit de seigneur. — Also termed jus primae noctis.

reciprocity with the foreigner's home country.

DROITS OF ADMIRALTY

droits of admiralty (droys), n. The Lord High Admiral's rights in connection with the sea, such as the right to recover proceeds from shipwrecks, enemy goods confiscated at the beginning of hostilities, jetsam, flotsam, treasure, deodand, fines, forfeitures, sturgeons, whales, and other large fishes. • The droit proceeds are paid to the Exchequer's office for the public's use. See PRIZE(2).

“The crown had originally certain rights to property found upon the sea, or stranded upon the shore. The chief kinds of property to which the crown was thus entitled were, great fish (such as whales or porpoises), deodands, wreck of the sea, flotsam, jetsam, and lagan, ships or goods of the enemy found in English ports or captured by uncommissioned vessels, and goods taken or retaken from pirates After the rise of the court of Admiralty the Lord High Admiral became entitled to these droits by royal grant The right to droits carried with it a certain jurisdiction. Inquisitions were held into these droits at the ports, or the Vice-Admirals or droit gatherers reported them to the Admiral. The large terms of the Admiral's Patents incited them, or their grantees, to frequent litigation with private persons or other grantees of the crown The Admiralty droits ... are now transferred to the consolidated fund.” 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 559–61 (7th ed. 1956).

[Cases: Workers' Compensation 2162.]

DUAL-PRIORITIES RULE

dual-priorities rule. The principle that partnership creditors have priority for partnership assets and that individual creditors have priority for a partner's personal assets. • This rule has been abandoned by the bankruptcy laws and the Revised Uniform Partnership Act. The Bankruptcy Code now allows partnership creditors access to all assets of bankrupt partners, not just those remaining after payment to individual creditors. — Also termed jingle rule. [Cases: Partnership 178, 186. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 174, 181.]

DUAL-PROSECUTION RULE

dual-prosecution rule. The principle that the federal government and a state government may both prosecute a defendant for the same offense because both governments are separate and distinct entities. See DUAL-SOVEREIGNTY DOCTRINE . [Cases: Double Jeopardy 186. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 258.]

DUAL-PURPOSE DOCTRINE

dual-purpose doctrine. The principle that an employer is liable for an employee's injury that occurs during a business trip even though the trip also serves a personal purpose. Cf. DUAL-CAPACITY DOCTRINE. [Cases: Master and Servant 302(2, 6); Workers' Compensation 661. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 204–217, 221–223; Workmen's Compensation §§ 401–402.]

DUAL-PURPOSE FUND

dual-purpose fund. See dual fund under MUTUAL FUND.

DUAL-RESIDENTIAL PARENT

dual-residential parent. See PARENT.

DUAL-SOVEREIGNTY DOCTRINE

dual-sovereignty doctrine. The rule that the federal and state governments may both prosecute someone for a crime, without violating the constitutional protection against double jeopardy, if the person's act violated both jurisdictions' laws. See DUAL-PROSECUTION RULE. [Cases: Double Jeopardy 186. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 258.]

DUEL

duel. 1. TRIAL BY COMBAT. 2. A single combat; specif., a prearranged combat with deadly weapons fought between two or more persons under prescribed rules, usu. in the presence of at least two witnesses, to resolve a previous quarrel or avenge a deed. • In England and the United States, death resulting from a duel is treated as murder, and seconds may be liable as accessories. — Also termed monomachy; single combat. Cf. MUTUAL COMBAT. [Cases: Homicide 537.]

“[A] duel which did not end in death was only a misdemeanour, till the passing of Lord Ellenborough's Act, 43 Geo. 3, c. 58, passed in 1803 A duel which did end fatally might be either murder or manslaughter, according to the following distinctions: — If the duel was on a sudden falling out, if the parties fought in hot blood and on the spot and one was killed, the offence was only manslaughter, however aggravated the case might be.... If a fatal duel took place when the parties were in cool blood, it was held to be murder, and of this there has never been any doubt whatever in this country, though juries not unfrequently acquitted in such cases if they sympathized with the prisoner.” 3 James Fitzjames Stephen, A History of the Criminal Law of England 100 (1883).

“Duelling is distinguished from other offenses in that it has none of the elements of sudden heat and passion, and is usually carried out with some formality. A duel has been distinguished from an ‘affray’ in that an affray occurs on a sudden quarrel while a duel is always the result of design.” 28A C.J.S. Duelling § 2, at 154 (1996).

dueling, n. The common-law offense of fighting at an appointed time and place after an earlier disagreement. • If one of the participants is killed, the other is guilty of murder, and all who are present, abetting the crime, are guilty as principals in the second degree. [Cases: Criminal Law 45.30. C.J.S. Duelling §§ 2–3.]

“Duelling is prearranged fighting with deadly weapons, usually under certain agreed or prescribed rules.... It is a misdemeanor at common law to fight a duel, even though no death result, to challenge another to a duel, intentionally to provoke such a challenge, or knowingly to be the bearer of such a challenge.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 243 (3d ed. 1982).

DUELLUM

DUE NOTICE

due notice. See NOTICE.

DUE-ON-ENCUMBRANCE CLAUSE

due-on-encumbrance clause. A mortgage provision giving the lender the option to accelerate the debt if the borrower further mortgages the real estate without the lender's consent. • All state laws on the enforcement of due-on-sale clauses have been preempted, and the subject is now governed exclusively by the Garn Act. 12 USCA § 1701j-3. [Cases: Mortgages 403. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 102, 506, 509-510, 512, 519, 521.]

DUE-ON-SALE CLAUSE

due-on-sale clause. A mortgage provision that gives the lender the option to accelerate the debt if the borrower transfers or conveys any part of the mortgaged real estate without the lender's consent. [Cases: Mortgages 403. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 102, 506, 509-510, 512, 519, 521.]

DUE POSTING

due posting. 1. The stamping and placing of letters or packages in the U.S. mail. [Cases: Postal Service 15. C.J.S. Postal Service and Offenses Against Postal Laws §§ 18-19.] 2. The proper entry of an item into a ledger. 3. Proper publication; proper placement of an item (such as an announcement) in a particular place, as on a particular wall.

DUE PROCESS

due process. The conduct of legal proceedings according to established rules and principles for the protection and enforcement of private rights, including notice and the right to a fair hearing before a tribunal with the power to decide the case. — Also termed due process of law; due course of law. See FUNDAMENTAL-FAIRNESS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 251-320.5. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 455, 461-467, 470, 501, 503, 513, 518, 540, 557, 576-581, 585, 587, 596, 612, 614-618, 704, 883, 945-1348, 1350-1396, 1399-1401, 1405-1427; Right to Die § 2; Zoning and Land Planning § 23.]

“The words ‘due process’ have a precise technical import, and are only applicable to the process and proceedings of the courts of justice; they can never be referred to an act of legislature.” Alexander Hamilton, Remarks on an Act for Regulating Elections, New York Assembly, 6 Feb. 1787, in 4 Papers of Alexander Hamilton 34, 35 (Harold C. Syrett ed., 1962).

“The words, ‘due process of law,’ were undoubtedly intended to convey the same meaning as the words, ‘by the law of the land,’ in Magna Charta.” Murray's Lessee v. Hoboken Land & Improvement Co., 59 U.S. (18 How.) 272, 276 (1855) (Curtis, J.).

“Due process of law in each particular case means, such an exertion of the powers of government as the settled maxims of law sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs.” Thomas M. Cooley, A Treatise on the Constitutional Limitations 356 (1868).

“An elementary and fundamental requirement of due process in any proceeding which is to be accorded finality is notice reasonably calculated, under all the circumstances, to apprise interested parties of the pendency of the action and afford them an opportunity to present their objections.... The notice must be of such nature as reasonably to convey the required information.” Mullane v. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 339 U.S. 306, 314, 70 S.Ct. 652, 657 economic substantive due process. The doctrine that certain social policies, such as the freedom of contract or the right to enjoy property without interference by government regulation, exist in the Due Process Clause of the 14th Amendment, particularly in the words “liberty” and “property.”

procedural due process. The minimal requirements of notice and a hearing guaranteed by the Due Process Clauses of the 5th and 14th Amendments, esp. if the deprivation of a significant life, liberty, or property interest may occur. • The Supreme Court has ruled that the fundamental guarantees of due process apply to children as well as to adults and that they apply in situations in which a juvenile may be deprived of liberty even though the juvenile proceedings may be labeled civil rather than criminal. In re Gault, 387 U.S. 1, 87 S.Ct. 1428 (1967). In that case, the Court held that an accused child was entitled to notice of the charges, the privilege against self-incrimination, the right to confront witnesses, and the right to summon witnesses on his or her own behalf. Justice Abe Fortas wrote the majority opinion in Gault, and Chief Justice Earl Warren predicted that it would come to be called the “Magna Carta for juveniles.” [Cases: Constitutional Law 251.5. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 946, 968–969.]

substantive due process. The doctrine that the Due Process Clauses of the 5th and 14th Amendments require legislation to be fair and reasonable in content and to further a legitimate governmental objective. [Cases: Constitutional Law 251.2. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 964, 970–975.]

DUE PROCESS CLAUSE

Due Process Clause. The constitutional provision that prohibits the government from unfairly or arbitrarily depriving a person of life, liberty, or property. • There are two Due Process Clauses in the U.S. Constitution, one in the 5th Amendment applying to the federal government, and one in the 14th Amendment applying to the states (although the 5th Amendment's Due Process Clause also applies to the states under the incorporation doctrine). Cf. EQUAL PROTECTION CLAUSE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 251–320.5. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 455, 461–467, 470, 501, 503, 513, 518, 540, 557, 576–581, 585, 587, 596, 612, 614–618, 704, 883, 945–1348, 1350–1396, 1399–1401, 1405–1427; Right to Die § 2; Zoning and Land Planning § 23.]

DUE PROCESS OF LAW

due process of law. See DUE PROCESS.

DUE-PROCESS RIGHTS

due-process rights. The rights (as to life, liberty, and property) so fundamentally important as to require compliance with due-process standards of fairness and justice. See DUE PROCESS; DUE PROCESS CLAUSE; FUNDAMENTAL-FAIRNESS DOCTRINE E.

DUE PROOF

due proof. Sufficient and properly submitted evidence to produce a result or support a conclusion, such as an entitlement to benefits supported by an insurance policy.

DUHIG<TT> RULE

Duhig rule.Oil & gas. A rule of title interpretation developed to deal with the common problem of overconveyance of fractional interests by giving priority to the granted interest over the reserved interest. Duhig v. Peavy-Moore Lumber Co., Inc., 144 S.W.2d 878 (Tex. 1940). • The rule is not accepted in all states and is generally limited to conveyances by warranty deed.

DUKE

duke. 1. A sovereign prince; a ruler of a duchy. 2. The first order of nobility in Great Britain below the royal family.

“But after the Norman conquest, which changed the military policy of the nation, the kings themselves continuing for many generations dukes of Normandy, they would not honour any subjects with that title, till the time of Edward III; who, claiming to be the king of France, and thereby losing the ducal in the royal dignity, in the eleventh year of his reign created his son, Edward the black prince, duke of Cornwall: and many, of the royal family especially, were afterwards raised to the honour. However, in the reign of queen Elizabeth, A.D. 1572, the whole order became utterly extinct: but it was revived about fifty years afterwards by her successor, who was remarkably prodigal of honours, in the person of George Villiers duke of Buckingham.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 385 (1765).

DUKE OF EXETER'S DAUGHTER

Duke of Exeter's Daughter.A torture rack in the Tower of London, named after the Duke of Exeter, Henry VI's minister who assisted in introducing it to England. — Also termed brake.

“The rack ... to extort a confession from criminals, is a practice of a different nature And the trial by rack is utterly unknown to the law of England; though once when the dukes of Exeter and Suffolk ... had laid a design to introduce the civil law into this kingdom as the rule of government, for a beginning thereof they erected a rack for torture; which was called in derision the duke of Exeter's daughter, and still remains in the tower of London: where it was occasionally used as an engine of state, not of law, more than once in the reign of queen Elizabeth.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 320–21 (1769).

DUKE OF YORK'S LAWS

Duke of York's Laws.A body of laws compiled in 1665 by Governor Nicholls for the more orderly government of the New York colony. • The laws were gradually extended to the entire province.

DULOCRACY

dulocracy (d[y]oo-lok-r<<schwa>>-see), n.[fr. Greek doulos “servant” + kratein “to rule”] A government in which servants or slaves have so many privileges that they essentially rule. — Also spelled doulocracy.

DULY

duly,adv. In a proper manner; in accordance with legal requirements.

DUM

dum (d<<schwa>>m). [Latin] While; provided that.

DUMB BIDDING

dumb bidding.An auction bidding process in which the minimum acceptance price is placed under the object for sale — unbeknownst to the bidders — and no bids are accepted until they meet that price. • Dumb bidding was initially intended to avoid the taxes imposed on auction sales by the statute of 1779, 19 Geo. 3, ch. 56, §§ 5–6, but the courts determined that the practice was fraudulent. [Cases: Auctions and Auctioneers 7. C.J.S. Auctions and Auctioneers §§ 2, 8–17.]

DUM FERRET OPUS

dum fervet opus (d<<schwa>>m f<<schwa>>r-vet oh-p<<schwa>>s). [Latin] While the action is fresh; in the heat of action. • This term usu. referred to matters of testimony.

DUM FUT INFRA AETATEM

dum fuit infra aetatem (d<<schwa>>m fyoo-it in-fr<<schwa>> ee-tay-t<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin “while he was within age”] Hist. A writ allowing a person of full age to recover lands feoffed while the person was an infant. • The remedy was also available to the person's heirs. It was later replaced by the action of ejectment. See EJECTMENT.

DUM FUT IN PRISONA

dum fuit in prisona (d<<schwa>>m fyoo-it in priz-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>), n.[Law Latin “while he was in prison”] Hist. A writ restoring a man to his estate after he transferred the estate under duress of imprisonment. See duress of imprisonment under DURESS.

DUMMODO

dummodo (d<<schwa>>m-<<schwa>>-doh). [Latin] So that; provided that. • This term was used as a limitation in conveyances, as in dummodo solverit talem redditum (d<<schwa>>m-<<schwa>>-doh sol-v<<schwa>>-rit tay-lem red-i-t<<schwa>>m), meaning “provided he shall pay such a rent.”

DUMMODO CONSTET DE PERSONA

dummodo constet de persona (d<<schwa>>m-<<schwa>>-doh kon-stet dee p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. Provided it be evident who is the person meant. See CONSTAT DE PERSONA.

DUMMODO VASSALLI CONDITIO NON SIT DETERIOR dummodo vassalli conditio non sit deterior (d<<schwa>>m-<<schwa>>-doh vas-<<schwa>>-II k<<schwa>>n-dish-ee-oh non sit di-teer-ee-or). [Law Latin] Hist. Provided the vassal's condition be not made worse. • The phrase was used as a limitation in a conveyance. See DUMMODO.

DUMMY

dummy,adj. Sham; make-believe; pretend <dummy corporation>.

dummy,n.1. A party who has no interest in a transaction, but participates to help achieve a legal goal. 2. A party who purchases property and holds legal title for another. Cf. STRAW MAN(3).

DUMMY CORPORATION

DUM NON FUIT COMPOS MENTIS

dum non fuit compos mentis (d<<schwa>>m non fyoo-it kom-p<<schwa>>s men-tis), n.[Law Latin “while he was of unsound mind”] Hist. A writ allowing heirs to recover an estate transferred by someone of unsound mind.

DUMP

dump,vb.1. To drop (something) down, esp. in a heap; to unload. 2. To sell (products) at an extremely low price; specif., to sell (products) in a foreign market at a lower price than at home.

DUMPING

dumping. 1. The act of selling a large quantity of goods at less than fair value. 2. Selling goods abroad at less than the market price at home. See ANTIDUMPING LAW. [Cases: Customs Duties 21.5. C.J.S. Customs Duties §§ 135–152.]

“Dumping involves selling abroad at a price that is less than the price used to sell the same goods at home (the ‘normal’ or ‘fair’ value). To be unlawful, dumping must threaten or cause material injury to an industry in the export market, the market where prices are lower. Dumping is recognized by most of the trading world as an unfair practice (akin to price discrimination as an antitrust offense).” Ralph H. Folsom & Michael W. Gordon, International Business Transactions § 6.1 (1995).

3. The disposal of waste matter into the environment. [Cases: Environmental Law 341.]

DUMPING ACT

Dumping Act. A federal antidumping law requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to notify the U.S. International Trade Commission (USITC) whenever the Secretary determines that goods are likely to be sold abroad at less than their fair value, so that the USITC can take appropriate action. 19 USCA § 1673. [Cases: Customs Duties 21.5. C.J.S. Customs Duties §§ 135–152.]

DUMP-TRUCK LAWYER

dump-truck lawyer. Slang. A public defender who spends little time or effort and exhibits little skill mounting a defense on behalf of an indigent defendant. • This derogatory term arises from criminal defendants' common perception (typically a misperception) that public defenders prefer to dump cases by making plea bargains rather than spend time preparing for trial.

DUM SE BENE GESSERIT

dum se bene gesserit (d<<schwa>>m see bee-nee jes-<<schwa>>r-it). [Latin “while he behaves himself properly”] Hist. During good conduct. Cf. QUAMDIU BENE SE GESSERINT .

DUM SOLA

dum sola (d<<schwa>>m soh-l<<schwa>>). [Latin] While single. • This phrase was used to limit conveyances, esp. to women, as in dum sola fuerit (“while she remains single”), dum sola et casta vixerit (“while she remains single and chaste”), and dum sola et casta (“while she is unmarried and lives chastely”).

DUN

dun (d<<schwa>>n), vb. To demand payment from (a delinquent debtor) <his creditors are dunning him daily>. — dun,n.

DUNAWAY HEARING

Dunaway hearing. A hearing to determine whether evidence has been seized from an accused in violation of his or her Fourth Amendment rights, as by a search conducted without probable cause. Dunaway v. New York, 442 U.S. 200, 99 S.Ct. 2248 (1979). See FOURTH AMENDMENT.

DUNGEON

dungeon. 1. The bottom part of a fortress or tower, often used as a prison. — Also termed dungeon-keep. 2. A dark underground prison.

DUNNAGE

dunnage (d<<schwa>>n-ij). Anything, esp. pieces of wood, that is put underneath or between cargo on a vessel to prevent the cargo from bruising or getting wet from water leaking into the hold. [Cases: Shipping 110. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 326, 328.]

DUODECEMVIROLE JUDICIUM

duodecemvirale judicium (d[y]oo-oh-des-<<schwa>>m-v<<schwa>>-ray-lee joo-dish-ee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] A trial by 12 persons; a trial by jury.

DUODECIMA MANUS

duodecima manus (d[y]oo-oh-des-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>> man-<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Twelve men.

“The manner of waging and making law is this. He that has waged, or given security, to make his law, brings with him into court eleven of his neighbours: ... for by the old Saxon constitution every man's credit in courts of law depended upon the opinion which his neighbours had of his veracity. The defendant then, standing at the end of the bar, is admonished by the judges of the nature and danger of a false oath.... And thereupon his eleven neighbours or compurgators shall avow upon their oaths that they believe in their consciences that he saith the truth It is held indeed by later authorities ... that fewer than eleven compurgators will do: but Sir Edward Coke is positive that there must be this number ... for as wager of law is equivalent to a verdict in the defendant's favor, it ought to be established by the same or equal testimony, namely, by the oath of twelve men. And so indeed Glanvil expresses it, ... ‘jurabit duodecima manu’....” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 343 (1768).

DUODENA

duodena (d[y]oo-<<schwa>>-dee-n<<schwa>>). [Latin] 1. A jury of 12. 2. A dozen of anything.

DUOPOLY

duoviri (d[y]oo-oh-v<<schwa>>-rIor d[y]oo-oh vI-rI). See DUUMVIRI(2).

DUPLEX QUERELA

duplex querela (d[y]oo-pleks kw<<schwa>>-ree-l<<schwa>>). 1.Hist. Eccles. law. An appeal by a clerk to the archbishop in response to the bishop's delaying or wrongfully refusing to do justice. 2.Eccles. law. An appeal to a person's immediate superior, as when a bishop appeals to an archbishop. — Also termed double quarrel; double complaint.

 DUPLEX VALOR MARITAGII

duplex valor maritagii (d[y]oo-pleks val-*<<schwa>>r mar-<<schwa>>*-tay-jee-I), n.[Law Latin “double the value of a marriage”] Hist. A ward's forfeiture of double the value of a marriage made without the guardian's consent. • In the quotation that follows, Blackstone uses the accusative form (duplicem valorem maritagii) because the phrase follows the verb forfeited.

“For, while the infant was in ward, the guardian had the power of tendering him or her a suitable match, without disparagement, or inequality: which if the infants refused, they forfeited the value of the marriage ... to their guardian; that is, so much as a jury would assess, or any one would bona fide give to the guardian for such an alliance: ... and, if the infants married themselves without the guardian's consent, they forfeited double the value, duplicem valorem maritagii. This seems to have been one of the greatest hardships of our ancient tenures.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 70 (1766).

DUPLICATE

duplicate (d[y]oo-pli-kit), n.1. A reproduction of an original document having the same particulars and effect as the original. See Fed. R. Evid. 101(4). 2. A new original, made to replace an instrument that is lost or destroyed. — Also termed (in sense 2) duplicate original. [Cases: Criminal Law 399; Evidence 173. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1074, 1114.] — duplicate (d[y]oo-pli-kit), adj.

“A ‘duplicate’ is defined for purposes of the best evidence rule as a counterpart produced by the same impression as the original, or from the same matrix, or by means of photography including enlargements and miniatures, by mechanical or electronic recording, by chemical reproduction, or by other equivalent techniques which accurately reproduce the original; copies subsequently produced manually, either handwritten or typed, are not within this definition.” 29A Am. Jur. 2d Evidence § 1085 (1994).

duplicate (d[y]oo-pli-kayt), vb.1. To copy exactly <he duplicated the original document>.2. To double; to repeat <she duplicated the performance>.

DUPLICATE-CLAIMING REJECTION duplicate-claiming rejection. See REJECTION.

DUPLICATE TAXATION

duplicate taxation. See double taxation under TAXATION.

DUPLICATE WILL

duplicate will. See WILL.

DUPLICATIO

duplicatio (d[y]oo-pli-kay-shee-oh), n.[fr. Latin duplicare “to double”] 1. Roman & civil law. A defendant's answer to the plaintiff's replication, similar to a rejoinder in common law. — Also termed (in Scots law) duply. See REPLICATION. 2. The fourth in a series. 3. A duplication of a transaction.

DUPLICATIVE

duplicative (doo-plik-<<schwa>>-tiv alsodoo-pli-kay-tiv), adj.1. Having or characterized by having overlapping content, intentions, or effect < duplicative sources> <duplicative evidence> <duplicative regulations>. 2. Duplicate; having or characterized by having identical content <duplicative database> <duplicative backup>.

DUPLICATUM JUS

duplicatum jus (d[y]oo-pli-kay-t<<schwa>>m j<<schwa>>s), n.[Law Latin “double right”] A double right, such as droit-droit (both the “right of possession and right of property”).

DUPLICITOUS

duplicitous (d[y]oo-plis-i-t<<schwa>>s), adj.1. (Of a person) deceitful; double-dealing. 2. (Of a pleading, esp. an indictment) alleging two or more matters in one plea; characterized by double pleading.

DUPLICITOUS APPEAL

duplicitous appeal. See APPEAL.

DUPLICITOUS INDICTMENT

duplicitous indictment. See INDICTMENT.

DUPLICITOUS INFORMATION

duplicitous information. See INFORMATION.

DUPLICITY

duplicity (d[y]oo-plis-i-tee), n.1. Deceitfulness; double-dealing. 2. The charging of the same offense in more than one count of an indictment. 3. The pleading of two or more distinct grounds of complaint or defense for the same issue. • In criminal procedure, this takes the form of joining two or more offenses in the same count of an indictment. — Also termed double pleading. Cf. alternative pleading under PLEADING(2); double plea under PLEA(3). [Cases: Indictment and Information 125; Pleading 64. C.J.S. Indictments and Informations §§ 146–148; Pleading § 152.]

DUPLUM

duplum (d[y]oo-pl<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman & civil law. Double the price of something; esp., a measure of damages equal to double a thing's value. • This measure was used for certain delicts. Cf. SIMPLUM.

DUPLY

duply. See DUPLICATIO(1).

DURABLE GOODS

durable goods. See GOODS.

DURABLE LEASE

durable lease. See LEASE.

DURABLE POWER OF ATTORNEY durable power of attorney. See POWER OF ATTORNEY.

DURABLES

durables. See durable goods under GOODS.

DURANTE

durante (d[y]<<schwa>>-ran-tee). [Law Latin] While; during, as in durante minore aetate (“during minority”), durante viduitate (“during widowhood”), durante virginitate (“during virginity”), and durante vita (“during life”). • The term was often used in conveyancing.

DURANTE ABSENTIA

durante absentia (d[y]<<schwa>>-ran-tee ab-sen-shee-<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] During absence. • This term referred to the administration of an estate while the executor was out of the county or otherwise absent. During the executor's absence, the administration sometimes continued because a delay until the executor's return would impair the estate settlement.

DURANTE BENE PLACITO

durante bene placito (d[y]<<schwa>>-ran-tee bee-nee plas-<<schwa>>-toh). [Law Latin] During good pleasure. • This phrase was used in the royal writ granting tenure durante bene placito to the king's judges.

DURANTE FURORE

durante furore (d[y]<<schwa>>-ran-tee fyuu-ror-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. While the insanity endures. • The phrase appeared in reference to the rule prohibiting the state from prosecuting an insane person. The state could, however, prosecute the person once the insanity ended.

DURATION

duration. 1. The length of time that something lasts <the duration of the lawsuit>.

duration of interest. The length of time that a property interest lasts.

duration of trust. The length of time that a trust exists. [Cases: Trusts 60. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 117.]

2. A length of time; a continuance in time <an hour's duration>.

DURATIONAL-RESIDENCY REQUIREMENT

durational-residency requirement. The requirement that one be a state resident for a certain time, such as one year, as a precondition to the exercise of a specified right or privilege. • When applied to voting, this requirement has been held to be an unconstitutional denial of equal protection because it burdens voting rights and impairs the fundamental personal right of travel.

DURATION DIRECTIVE

Duration Directive. See DIRECTIVE HARMONIZING THE TERM OF COPYRIGHT AND CERTAIN RELATED RIGHTS .

DUREN<TT> TEST

Duren test. Constitutional law. A test to determine whether a jury's composition violates the fair-cross-section requirement and a criminal defendant's Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury. • Under the test, a constitutional violation occurs if (1) a distinctive group is not fairly and reasonably represented in the jury pool in relation to its population in the community, (2) the underrepresentation is the result of a systematic exclusion of the group from the jury-selection process, and (3) the government cannot reasonably justify the discrepancy. Duren v. Missouri, 439 U.S. 357, 99 S.Ct. 664 (1979). See FAIR-CROSS-SECTION REQUIREMENT; STATISTICAL-DECISION THEORY; ABSOLUTE DISPARITY; COMPARATIVE DISPARITY. [Cases: Jury 33(1.1). C.J.S. Juries §§ 269–273, 279, 306.]

duress (d[y]uu-res). 1. Strictly, the physical confinement of a person or the detention of a contracting party's property. • In the field of torts, duress is considered a species of fraud in which compulsion takes the place of deceit in causing injury.

“Duress consists in actual or threatened violence or imprisonment; the subject of it must be the contracting party himself, or his wife, parent, or child; and it must be inflicted or threatened by the other party to the contract, or else by one acting with his knowledge and for his advantage.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 261–62 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“Few areas of the law of contracts have undergone such radical changes in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries as has the law governing duress. In Blackstone's time relief from an agreement on grounds of duress was a possibility only if it was coerced by actual (not threatened) imprisonment or fear of loss of life or limb. ‘A fear of battery ... is no duress; neither is the fear of having one's house burned, or one's goods taken away or destroyed’; he wrote, ‘because in these cases, should the threat be performed, a man may have satisfaction by recovering equivalent damages: but no suitable atonement can be made for the loss of life, or limb.’ Today the general rule is that any wrongful act or threat which overcomes the free will of a party constitutes duress. This simple statement of the law conceals a number of questions, particularly as to the meaning of ‘free will’ and ‘wrongful.’ ” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 9-2, at 337 (3d ed. 1987).

2. Broadly, a threat of harm made to compel a person to do something against his or her will or judgment; esp., a wrongful threat made by one person to compel a manifestation of seeming assent by another person to a transaction without real volition. • A marriage that is induced by duress is generally voidable. 3. The use or threatened use of unlawful force — usu. that a reasonable person cannot resist — to compel someone to commit an unlawful act. • Duress is a recognized defense to a crime, contractual breach, or tort. See Model Penal Code § 2.09. See COERCION. “[In most states,] the age-old rule of duress — that the doing of a prohibited act is not a crime if reasonably believed to be necessary to save from death or great bodily injury — together with the equally ancient exception in the form of the ‘inexcusable choice,’ are as firm today as ever except for the realization that they cover only part of the field.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 1064 (3d ed. 1982).

“Among defenses, necessity needs to be distinguished from duress. Necessity is generally regarded as a justification, while duress is held to be an excuse. This means that the person who acts under necessity chooses to act in a way that the law ultimately approves. The person who acts under duress acts in a way that the law disapproves and seeks to discourage, but he acts under circumstances which make conviction and punishment inappropriate and unfair. This is so because to act under duress is to act under pressures that a person of reasonable firmness would not be able to resist. Thus, both the theory of necessity and the theory of duress refer to the pressure of exigent and extraordinary situations, but they do so in different ways.” Thomas Morawetz, “Necessity,” in 3 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 957, 959 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

duress of circumstances. See NECESSITY(1).

duress of goods. 1. The act of seizing personal property by force, or withholding it from an entitled party, and then extorting something as the condition for its release. 2. Demanding and taking personal property under color of legal authority that either is void or for some other reason does not justify the demand.

duress of imprisonment. The wrongful confining of a person to force the person to do something.

duress of the person. Compulsion of a person by imprisonment, by threat, or by a show of force that cannot be resisted.

duress per minas (p<<schwa>>r mI-n<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] Duress by threat of loss of life, loss of limb, mayhem, or other harm to a person.

“Duress per minas is either for fear of loss of life, or else for fear of mayhem, or loss of limb. And this fear must be upon sufficient reason A fear of battery, or being beaten, though never so well grounded, is no duress; neither is the fear of having one's house burned, or one's goods taken away and destroyed; because in these cases, should the threat be performed, a man may have satisfaction by recovering equivalent damages: but no suitable atonement can be made for the loss of life, or limb.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 127 (1765).

“Duress per minas is a very rare defence; so rare that Sir James Stephen, in his long forensic experience, never saw a case in which it was raised. It has, however, been thought that threats of the immediate infliction of death, or even of grievous bodily harm, will excuse some crimes that have been committed under the influence of such threats." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 58 (16th ed. 1952).

economic duress. An unlawful coercion to perform by threatening financial injury at a time when one cannot exercise free will. — Also termed business compulsion.

"Courts have shown a willingness to recognize the concept of 'economic duress.' For instance it has been held that a defence on these grounds may be available to the purchaser of a ship from a shipbuilder, if the latter extracts a promise of extra payment as a condition of delivery of the ship." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 230 (3d ed. 1981).

moral duress. An unlawful coercion to perform by unduly influencing or taking advantage of the weak financial position of another. • Moral duress focuses on the inequities of a situation while economic duress focuses on the lack of will or capacity of the person being influenced.

DURESSOR

duressor (d[y]<<schwa>>-res-<<schwa>>r). A person who coerces another person to do something against his or her will or judgment.

DURHAM

Durham (d<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>m). One of the three remaining county palatines in England, the others being Chester and Lancaster. • Its jurisdiction was vested in the Bishop of Durham until the statute 6 & 7 Will. 4, ch. 19 vested it as a separate franchise and royalty in the Crown. The jurisdiction of the Durham Court of Pleas was transferred to the Supreme Court of Judicature by the Judicature Act of 1873, but Durham continued to maintain a Chancery Court according to the Palatine Court of Durham Act of 1889. See COUNTY PALATINE.

DURHAM<TT> RULE

Durham rule. Criminal law. A test for the insanity defense, holding that a defendant is not criminally responsible for an act that was the product of mental disease or defect (Durham v. United States, 214 F.2d 862 (D.C. Cir. 1954)). • Formerly used in New Hampshire and the District of Columbia, the Durham rule has been criticized as being too broad and is no longer accepted in any American jurisdiction. — Also termed product test. See INSANITY DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law 48.]

DURRETT<TT> RULE

Durrett rule. Bankruptcy. The principle that a transfer of property in exchange for less than 70% of the property's value should be invalidated as a preferential transfer. Durrett v. Washington Nat'l Ins. Co., 621 F.2d 201 (5th Cir. 1980); 11 USCA § 548. • This rule has been applied most frequently to foreclosure sales. But it has essentially been overruled by the U.S. Supreme Court, which has held that, at least for mortgage foreclosure sales, the price received at a regularly conducted, noncollusive sale represents a reasonably equivalent value of the property, and the transfer is presumed valid. BFP v. Resolution Trust Corp., 511 U.S. 531, 114 S.Ct. 1757 (1994).

DUTIABLE

dutiable (d[y]oo-tee-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. Subject to a duty <dutiable goods>.

duty. 1. A legal obligation that is owed or due to another and that needs to be satisfied; an obligation for which somebody else has a corresponding right.

“There is a duty if the court says there is a duty; the law, like the Constitution, is what we make it. Duty is only a word with which we state our conclusion that there is or is not to be liability; it necessarily begs the essential question... [M]any factors interplay: the hand of history, our ideas of morals and justice, the convenience of administration of the rule, and our social ideas as to where loss should fall.” William L. Prosser, Palsgraf Revisited, 52 Mich. L. Rev. 1, 15 (1953).

“A classic English definition [of duty] from the late nineteenth century holds that, when circumstances place one individual in such a position with regard to another that thinking persons of ordinary sense would recognize the danger of injury to the other if ordinary skill and care were not used, a duty arises to use ordinary skill and care to avoid the injury. A much quoted American judicial definition of duty emphasizes its relational aspects, with a focus on the foreseeability of risk to those ‘within the range of apprehension.’ At about the same time, one of the most creative of American law teachers defined duty as a complex of factors, including administrative, economic, and moral ones, to be applied by judges in their analyses of the legal strength of personal injury cases.” Marshall S. Shapo, The Duty to Act xi–xii (1977).

“While courts frequently say that establishing ‘duty’ is the first prerequisite in an individual tort case, courts commonly go on to say that there is a ‘general duty’ to ‘exercise reasonable care,’ to avoid subjecting others to ‘an unreasonable risk of harm,’ or to comply with the ‘legal standard of reasonable conduct.’ Though cast in the language of duty, these formulations merely give the expression to the point that negligence is the standard of liability.” Restatement (Third) of Torts § 6 cmt. a (Discussion Draft 1999).

absolute duty. 1. A duty to which no corresponding right attaches. • According to John Austin's legal philosophy, there are four kinds of absolute duties: (1) duties not regarding persons (such as those owed to God and to lower animals), (2) duties owed to persons indefinitely (i.e., to the community as a whole), (3) self-regarding duties (such as the duty not to commit suicide), and (4) duties owed to the sovereign. 1 John Austin, The Providence of Jurisprudence Determined 400 (Sarah Austin ed., 2d ed. 1861). 2. A duty as to which nothing but lapse of time remains necessary to make immediate performance by the promisor obligatory.

active duty. See positive duty.

affirmative duty. A duty to take a positive step to do something.

conditional duty. A duty that is conditioned on the occurrence of an event other than the lapse of time.

contractual duty. 1. A duty arising under a particular contract. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.] 2. A duty imposed by the law of contracts.

delegable duty. A duty that may be transferred to another to perform. See ASSIGNMENT.

duty to act. A duty to take some action to prevent harm to another, and for the failure of which one may be liable depending on the relationship of the parties and the circumstances. [Cases: Negligence 210. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 32–33, 36, 39–40, 60, 79.]

duty to defend. Insurance. The obligation of an insurer to provide an insured with a legal defense against claims of liability, within the terms of the policy. • The duty to defend applies if the terms of the policy and the facts of the claim allow an ambiguity about whether the insurer will have a duty to indemnify the insured. It does not apply if no such ambiguity exists.

duty to indemnify. An obligation to compensate another for the other's loss. • The duty arises under the terms of an agreement, which governs the extent of the duty. An insurance policy is fundamentally an indemnification agreement, but the duty is often made a part of other contracts as well.

duty to settle. Insurance. The obligation of an insurer to negotiate and settle third-party claims against an insured in good faith.

duty to speak. A requirement (not strictly a duty) to say something to correct another's false impression. • For example, a duty to speak may arise when a person has, during the course of negotiations, said something that was true at the time but that has ceased to be true before the contract is signed. [Cases: Fraud 17.]

equitable duty. A duty enforceable in a court of chancery or in a court having the powers of a court in chancery.

imperfect duty. 1. A duty that, though recognized by law, is not enforceable against the person who owes it. 2. A duty that is not fit for enforcement but should be left to the discretion and conscience of the person whose duty it is.

implied duty of cooperation. A duty existing in every contract, obligating each party to cooperate with, or at least not to wrongfully hinder, the other party's performance. • Breach of this implied duty excuses performance. [Cases: Contracts 168. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 346–347.]

legal duty.A duty arising by contract or by operation of law; an obligation the breach of which would give a legal remedy <the legal duty of parents to support their children>.

moral duty.A duty the breach of which would be a moral wrong. — Also termed natural duty.

negative duty.A duty that forbids someone to do something; a duty that requires someone to abstain from something. — Also termed passive duty.

noncontractual duty.A duty that arises independently of any contract.

nondelegable duty (non-del-~~<<schwa>>-g<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l~~).1.Contracts. A duty that cannot be delegated by a contracting party to a third party. • If a contracting party purports to delegate the duty, the other party can rightfully refuse to accept performance by the third party. [Cases: Assignments 19; Principal and Agent 27. C.J.S. Agency § 49; Assignments §§ 32–33.] 2.Torts. A duty that may be delegated to an independent contractor by a principal, who retains primary (as opposed to vicarious) responsibility if the duty is not properly performed. • For example, a landlord's duty to maintain common areas, though delegated to a service contractor, remains the landlord's responsibility if someone is injured by improper maintenance. [Cases: Master and Servant 315; Negligence 1204. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 231–235, 242, 244–246, 248, 251–252, 254–255; Negligence §§ 532–535.]

perfect duty.A duty that is not merely recognized by the law but is actually enforceable.

positive duty.A duty that requires a person either to do some definite action or to engage in a continued course of action. — Also termed active duty.

preexisting duty.A duty that one is already legally bound to perform. See PREEXISTING-DUTY RULE.

quasi-judicial duty.A discretionary judicial duty that a nonjudicial officer may perform under some circumstances.

2. Any action, performance, task, or observance owed by a person in an official or fiduciary capacity.

discretionary duty.A duty that allows a person to exercise judgment and choose to perform or not perform. Cf. ministerial duty.

duty of candor (kan-d<<schwa>>r). A duty to disclose material facts; esp., a duty of a director seeking shareholder approval of a transaction to disclose to the shareholders all known material facts about the transaction. [Cases: Corporations 307, 312(5). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 476–479, 500–501, 503, 524.]

duty of candor and good faith.Patents. A patent applicant's responsibility to disclose to the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office all known information relevant to the invention's patentability, esp. prior art, novelty, and embodiment. • If an applicant fails to be candid in disclosing all relevant information, the PTO may reject the application. If the patent issues and undisclosed but relevant information is discovered later, the patent may be invalidated, and the applicant charged with fraud on the PTO, even if the undisclosed information might not have barred the patent's issuance. [Cases: Patents 97. C.J.S. Patents §§ 135–138, 145, 178.]

duty of fair representation.A labor union's duty to represent its member employees fairly, honestly, and in good faith. [Cases: Labor Relations 219. C.J.S. Labor Relations § 213.]

duty of good faith and fair dealing.A duty that is implied in some contractual relationships, requiring the parties to deal with each other fairly, so that neither prohibits the other from realizing the agreement's benefits. See GOOD FAITH; BAD FAITH. [Cases: Contracts 168, 189. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 341–342, 346–347.]

duty of loyalty.A person's duty not to engage in self-dealing or otherwise use his or her position to further personal interests rather than those of the beneficiary. • For example, directors have a duty not to engage in self-dealing to further their own personal interests rather than the interests of the corporation.

fiduciary duty (fi-d[y]oo-shee-er-ee). A duty of utmost good faith, trust, confidence, and candor owed by a fiduciary (such as a lawyer or corporate officer) to the beneficiary (such as a lawyer's client or a shareholder); a duty to act with the highest degree of honesty and loyalty toward another person and in the best interests of the other person (such as the duty that one partner owes to another). See FIDUCIARY; fiduciary relationship under RELATIONSHIP. [Cases: Fraud 7.]

ministerial duty.A duty that requires neither the exercise of official discretion nor judgment. Cf. discretionary duty.

proprietary duty.A duty owed by a governmental entity while engaged in a proprietary, rather than governmental, activity. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 725. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations § 664.]

3.Torts. A legal relationship arising from a standard of care, the violation of which subjects the actor to liability. — Also termed duty of care. [Cases: Negligence 210. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 32–33, 36, 39–40, 60, 79.] 4. A tax imposed on a commodity or transaction, esp. on imports; IMPOST. • A duty in this sense is imposed on things, not persons.

account duty.An inheritance tax payable by a decedent's beneficiary.

ad valorem duty.A tax calculated as a percentage of an imported product's value. Cf. compound duty; specific duty.

compound duty.A tax based on a combination of imported goods' weight, volume, or item count, plus a percentage of their value. Cf. ad valorem duty; specific duty.

countervailing duty.A tax imposed on manufacturers of imported goods to protect domestic industry by offsetting subsidies given by foreign governments to those manufacturers. [Cases: Customs Duties 21.5. C.J.S. Customs Duties §§ 135–152.]

customs duty.A tax levied on an imported or exported commodity; esp., the federal tax levied on goods shipped into the United States.

death duty.An estate tax or inheritance tax. — Also termed estate duty.

duty of detraction.A tax on property acquired by succession or will and then removed from one state to another.

estate duty.Hist. English law. A tax imposed on the principal value of all property that passed on death. • Estate duties were first imposed in 1889. A capital transfer tax replaced it in 1975. Since 1986, an inheritance tax has applied instead, with exceptions for certain transactions entered into before then. See death duty.

import duty.A tax on the importation of a product. — Also termed duty on import.

legacy duty.See legacy tax under TAX.

probate duty.A tax assessed by the government either on every will admitted to probate or on the gross value of the decedent's personal property.

specific duty.A tax calculated on an import's weight, volume, or item count. Cf. ad valorem duty; compound duty.

succession duty.A tax payable by the successor to real property, esp. when the successor has not purchased the property for value but has succeeded to the property in some other way.

tonnage duty.A charge imposed on a commercial vessel for entering, remaining in, or leaving a port, usu. assessed on the basis of the ship's weight. • U.S. Const. art. I, § 10, cl. 3 prohibits the states from levying tonnage duties. — Also termed tonnage tax; tonnage. [Cases: Commerce 78; Shipping 7. C.J.S. Commerce § 120; Shipping §§ 18–20.]

unascertained duty.A preliminary, estimated payment to a customs collector of the duty that will be due on final accounting. • An importer pays this duty to receive permission to land and sell the goods.

DUTY-BOUND

duty-bound,adj. Required by legal or moral obligation to do something <Jones is duty-bound to deliver the goods by Friday>.

DUTY-FREE

duty-free,adj. Of or relating to products of foreign origin that are not subject to import or export taxes.

DUTY JUDGE

duty judge.See JUDGE.

DUTY OF CARE

duty of care. See DUTY(3).

DUTY OF THE FLAG

duty of the flag. Hist. A maritime ceremony by which a foreign vessel struck her flag and lowered her topsail upon meeting the British flag. • The ceremony was an acknowledgment of British sovereignty over the British seas.

DUTY OF TONNAGE

duty of tonnage (t<<schwa>>n-ij). See tonnage duty under DUTY(4).

DUTY OF WATER

duty of water. The amount of water necessary to irrigate a given tract.

DUTY ON IMPORT

duty on import. See import duty under DUTY(4).

DUTY-TO-DEFEND CLAUSE

duty-to-defend clause. Insurance. A liability-insurance provision obligating the insurer to take over the defense of any lawsuit brought by a third party against the insured on a claim that falls within the policy's coverage. See duty to defend under DUTY(1). [Cases: Insurance 2911. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1144–1145.]

DUTY TO MITIGATE

duty to mitigate (mit-i-gayt). A nonbreaching party's or tort victim's duty to make reasonable efforts to limit losses resulting from the other party's breach or tort. • Not doing so precludes the party from collecting damages that might have been avoided. See MITIGATION-OF-DAMAGES DOCTRINE. [Cases: Sales 384(1), 418(7). C.J.S. Sales §§ 363, 365–366, 391–393, 403.]

duumviri (d[y]oo-<<schwa>>m-v<<schwa>>-rI), n. pl. [fr. Latin due “two” + viri “men”] 1. Roman law. Magistrates elected or appointed in pairs to hold an office or perform a function.

duumviri municipales (d[y]oo-<<schwa>>m-v<<schwa>>-rI myoo-nis-<<schwa>>-pay-leez). [Latin] Two judicial magistrates annually elected in towns and colonies.

duumviri navales (d[y]oo-<<schwa>>m-v<<schwa>>-rI n<<schwa>>-vay-leez). [Latin] Two officers appointed to man, equip, and refit the navy.

2. Two peers in authority. — Also termed duoviri.

dux (d<<schwa>>ks), n. [fr. Latin ducere “to lead”] 1. Roman law. An army commander. 2. Roman law. A military governor of a province. • This term was eventually used also as a title of distinction. 3.Hist. (cap.) Duke; a title of nobility. See DUKE.

DWELL

dwel, vb. 1. To remain; to linger <the case dwelled in her memory>. 2. To reside in a place permanently or for some period <he dwelled in California for nine years>.

DWELLING DEFENSE

DWELLING HOUSE

dwelling house. 1. The house or other structure in which a person lives; a residence or abode. 2. Real estate. The house and all buildings attached to or connected with the house. 3. Criminal law. A building, a part of a building, a tent, a mobile home, or another enclosed space that is used or intended for use as a human habitation. • The term has referred to connected buildings in the same curtilage but now typically includes only the structures connected either directly with the house or by an enclosed passageway. — Often shortened to dwelling. — Also termed (archaically) mansion house; (more broadly) dwelling place. [Cases: Burglary 4.C.J.S. Burglary §§ 27–28, 30–37.]

“A ‘dwelling house’ or ‘dwelling’ has been defined in connection with the crime of arson as any house intended to be occupied as a residence, or an enclosed space, permanent or temporary, in which human beings usually stay, lodge, or reside. If a building is not used exclusively as a dwelling, it is characterized as a dwelling if there is internal communication between the two parts of the building. Dwellings include mobile homes and a boat, if the person resides on it.” 5 Am. Jur. 2d Arson and Related Offenses § 13, at 789 (1995).

quasi-dwelling-house.Hist. Any outbuilding, such as a barn, that is in proximity to the building used as a residence. See BURGLARY(1).

E.EADEM PERSONA CUM DEFUNCTO

eadem persona cum defuncto (ee-ay-d<<schwa>>m p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>> k<<schwa>>m di-f<<schwa>>ngk-toh). [Law Latin] Hist. The same person as the decedent. • An heir having full title to the decedent's property was legally viewed to be the same person as the decedent.

EA INTENTIONE

ea intentione (ee-<<schwa>> in-ten-shee-oh-nee). [Latin] With that intent.

EAJA

EAJA.abbr.EQUAL ACCESS TO JUSTICE ACT.

E&O INSURANCE

E&O insurance.See errors-and-omissions insurance under INSURANCE.

EARL

earl. A title of nobility, formerly the highest in England but now the third highest, ranking between a marquis and a viscount. • This title corresponds with the French comte and the German graf. Originating with the Saxons, this title is the most ancient of the English peerage. William the Conqueror first made the title hereditary, giving it in fee to his nobles. No territorial, private, or judicial rights now accompany the title; it merely confers nobility and a hereditary seat in the House of Lords.

EARLDOM

earldom. The dignity or jurisdiction of an earl. • Only the dignity remains now, the jurisdiction having been given over to the sheriff. See DIGNITY.

EARLES-PENNY

earles-penny.Hist. Money given in part payment; EARNEST. — Also termed earl's penny.

EARL MARSHAL OF ENGLAND

Earl Marshal of England.A great officer of state, who historically had jurisdiction over several courts, including the court of chivalry and the court of honor. • Under this office is the herald's office, or college of arms. The Earl Marshal was also a judge of the Marshalsea court, now abolished. This office is quite ancient. Since 1672, it has been hereditary in the family of Howards, Dukes of Norfolk. — Often shortened to Earl Marshal.

EARL'S PENNY

earl's penny. See EARLES-PENNY.

EARMARK

earmark, n. 1. Originally, a mark upon the ear — a mode of marking sheep and other animals. [Cases: Animals 5. C.J.S. Animals § 15.]

“When now-a-days we say that ‘money has no ear-mark,’ we are alluding to a practice which in all probability played a large part in ancient law. Cattle were ear-marked or branded, and this enabled their owner to swear that they were his in whosoever hands he might find them. The legal supposition is, not that one ox is indistinguishable from another ox, but that all oxen, or all oxen of a certain large class, are equivalent. The possibility of using them as money has rested on this supposition.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 151–52 (2d ed. 1899).

2. A mark put on something (such as a coin) to distinguish it from another.

earmark, vb. 1. To mark with an earmark. 2. To set aside for a specific purpose or recipient.

EARMARKING DOCTRINE

earmarking doctrine. Bankruptcy. An equitable principle that when a new lender makes a loan to enable a debtor to pay off a specified creditor, the funds are specifically set aside for that creditor so that, if the debtor lacks control over the disposition of the funds, they do not become part of the debtor's estate and thus subject to a preference. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2610. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 136.]

EARN

earn, vb. 1. To acquire by labor, service, or performance. 2. To do something that entitles one to a reward or result, whether it is received or not.

EARNED INCOME

earned income. See INCOME.

EARNED-INCOME CREDIT

earned-income credit. See TAX CREDIT.

EARNED LAND

earned land. See LAND.

EARNED PREMIUM

earned premium. See PREMIUM(1).

EARNED SURPLUS

earned surplus. See retained earnings under EARNINGS.

EARNED TIME

earned time. See TIME.

EARNER

earner. 1. One who produces income through personal efforts or property or both. 2. Property or an asset that produces income for its owner.

EARNEST

earnest, n. 1. A nominal payment or token act that serves as a pledge or a sign of good faith, esp. as the partial purchase price of property. • Though not legally necessary, an earnest may help the parties come to an agreement. 2. EARNEST MONEY.

EARNEST MONEY

earnest money. A deposit paid (often in escrow) by a prospective buyer (esp. of real estate) to show a good-faith intention to complete the transaction, and ordinarily forfeited if the buyer defaults. • Although earnest money has traditionally been a nominal sum (such as a nickel or a dollar) used in the sale of goods, it is not a mere token in the real-estate context: it may amount to many thousands of dollars. — Also termed earnest; bargain money; caution money; hand money. Cf. BINDER(2); down payment under PAYMENT. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 69.1, 182. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 135, 137–138, 425.]

“The amount of earnest money deposited rarely exceeds 10 percent of the purchase price, and its primary purpose is to serve as a source of payment of damages should the buyer default. Earnest money is not essential to make a purchase agreement binding if the buyer's and seller's exchange of mutual promises of performance (that is, the buyer's promise to purchase and the seller's promise to sell at a specified price and terms) constitutes the consideration for the contract.” John W. Reilly, The Language of Real Estate 131 (4th ed. 1993).

EARNEST-PENNY

earnest-penny. See GOD'S PENNY.

EARNING ASSET

earning asset. See ASSET.

EARNING CAPACITY

earning capacity. A person's ability or power to earn money, given the person's talent, skills, training, and experience. • Earning capacity is one element considered when measuring the damages recoverable in a personal-injury lawsuit. And in family law, earning capacity is considered when awarding child support and spousal maintenance (or alimony) and in dividing property between spouses upon divorce. — Also termed earning power. See LOST EARNING CAPACITY.

EARNINGS

earnings. Revenue gained from labor or services, from the investment of capital, or from assets. See INCOME.

appropriated retained earnings. Retained earnings that a company's board designates for a distinct use, and that are therefore unavailable to pay dividends or for other uses. — Also termed appropriated surplus; surplus revenue; suspense reserve.

future earnings. See lost earnings.

gross earnings. See gross income under INCOME.

lost earnings. Wages, salary, or other income that a person could have earned if he or she had not lost a job, suffered a disabling injury, or died. • Lost earnings are typically awarded as damages in personal-injury and wrongful-termination cases. There can be past lost earnings and future lost earnings. Both are subsets of this category, though legal writers sometimes loosely use future earnings as a synonym for lost earnings. Cf. LOST EARNING CAPACITY. [Cases: Damages 37. C.J.S. Damages §§ 54–55.]

net earnings. See net income under INCOME.

ongoing earnings. See operating earnings.

operating earnings. Business income calculated in violation of generally accepted accounting principles by including income items and excluding various business expenses. • Many companies use operating earnings to favorably skew their price-earnings (P/E) ratios. Because the rationales for the underlying calculations vary from company to company, and from period to period within a company, operating earnings are almost always artificially inflated and unreliable. The term operating earnings is meaningless under generally accepted accounting principles. — Also termed pro forma earnings; economic earnings; core earnings; ongoing earnings; earnings excluding special items. See PRICE-EARNINGS RATIO.

pretax earnings. Net earnings before income taxes.

pro forma earnings. See operating earnings.

real earnings. Earnings that are adjusted for inflation so that they reflect actual purchasing power.

retained earnings. A corporation's accumulated income after dividends have been distributed. — Also termed earned surplus; undistributed profit. [Cases: Corporations 151. C.J.S. Corporations § 293.]

surplus earnings. The excess of corporate assets over liabilities within a given period, usu. a year. [Cases: Corporations 152. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 295–299.]

EARNINGS AND PROFITS

earnings and profits. Corporations. In corporate taxation, the measure of a corporation's economic capacity to make a shareholder distribution that is not a return of capital. • The distribution will be dividend income to the shareholders to the extent of the corporation's current and accumulated earnings and profits. Cf. accumulated-earnings tax under TAX; accumulated taxable income under INCOME. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3830.1–3845. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 381–382.]

earnings excluding special items. See operating earnings under EARNINGS.

EARNINGS PER SHARE

earnings per share. Corporations. A measure of corporate value by which the corporation's net income is divided by the number of outstanding shares of common stock. • Investors benefit from calculating a corporation's earnings per share, because it helps the investor determine the fair market value of the corporation's stock. — Abbr. EPS.

fully diluted earnings per share. A corporation's net income — assuming that all convertible securities had been transferred to common equity and all stock options had been exercised — divided by the number of shares of the corporation's outstanding common stock.

EARNINGS-PRICE RATIO

earnings-price ratio. See earnings yield under YIELD.

EARNINGS REPORT

earnings report. See INCOME STATEMENT.

EARNINGS YIELD

earnings yield. See YIELD.

EARNOUT AGREEMENT

earnout agreement. An agreement for the sale of a business whereby the buyer first pays an agreed amount up front, leaving the final purchase price to be determined by the business's future profits. • The seller usu. helps manage the business for a period after the sale. — Sometimes shortened to earnout.

EARWITNESS

earwitness. A witness who testifies about something that he or she heard but did not see. Cf. EYEWITNESS.

EASEMENT

easement (eez-m<<schwa>>nt). An interest in land owned by another person, consisting in the right to use or control the land, or an area above or below it, for a specific limited purpose (such as to cross it for access to a public road). • The land benefiting from an easement is called the dominant estate; the land burdened by an easement is called the servient estate. Unlike a lease or license, an easement may last forever, but it does not give the holder the right to possess, take from, improve, or sell the land. The primary recognized easements are (1) a right-of-way, (2) a right of entry for any purpose relating to the dominant estate, (3) a right to the support of land and buildings, (4) a right of light and air, (5) a right to water, (6) a right to do some act that would otherwise amount to a nuisance, and (7) a right to place or keep something on the servient estate. See SERVITUDE(1). Cf. PROFIT à PRENDRE. — Also termed private right-of-way. [Cases: Easements 1. C.J.S. Easements §§ 2–8, 13–14, 21–22, 24, 53–55, 57–58, 89.]

access easement.An easement allowing one or more persons to travel across another's land to get to a nearby location, such as a road. • The access easement is a common type of easement by necessity. — Also termed easement of access; easement of way; easement of passage.

adverse easement.See prescriptive easement.

affirmative easement.An easement that forces the servient-estate owner to permit certain actions by the easement holder, such as discharging water onto the servient estate. — Also termed positive easement. Cf. negative easement.

“Positive easements give rights of entry upon the land of another, not amounting to profits, to enable something to be done on that land. Some are commonplace, examples being rights of way across the land of another and rights to discharge water on to the land of another. Others are more rare, such as the right to occupy a pew in a church, the right to use a kitchen situated on the land of another for the purpose of washing and drying clothes, and the right to use a toilet situated on the land of another.” Peter Butt, Land Law 305 (2d ed. 1988).

apparent easement.A visually evident easement, such as a paved trail or a sidewalk. [Cases: Easements 22. C.J.S. Easements §§ 113–115.]

appendant easement.See easement appurtenant.

appurtenant easement.See easement appurtenant.

avigational easement.An easement permitting unimpeded aircraft flights over the servient estate. — Also termed avigation easement; aviation easement; flight easement; navigation easement. [Cases: Aviation 3. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace §§ 7–9.]

common easement.An easement allowing the servient landowner to share in the benefit of the easement. — Also termed nonexclusive easement. [Cases: Easements 38. C.J.S. Easements §§ 57, 143–144, 146–147, 165–167.]

continuous easement.An easement that may be enjoyed without a deliberate act by the party claiming it, such as an easement for drains, sewer pipes, lateral support of a wall, or light and air. — Also termed (in Louisiana) continuous servitude. Cf. discontinuous easement. [Cases: Easements 38. C.J.S. Easements §§ 57, 143–144, 146–147, 165–167.]

determinable easement.An easement that terminates on the happening of a specific event.

discontinuous easement.An easement that can be enjoyed only if the party claiming it deliberately acts in some way with regard to the servient estate. • Examples are a right-of-way and the right to draw water. — Also termed discontinuing easement; noncontinuous easement; nonapparent easement; (in Louisiana) discontinuous servitude. Cf. continuous easement. [Cases: Easements 38. C.J.S. Easements §§ 57, 143–144, 146–147, 165–167.]

easement appurtenant. An easement created to benefit another tract of land, the use of easement being incident to the ownership of that other tract. — Also termed appurtenant easement; appendant easement; pure easement; easement proper. Cf. easement in gross. [Cases: Easements 3. C.J.S. Easements §§ 4, 10–11, 20.]

easement by estoppel. A court-ordered easement created from a voluntary servitude after a person, mistakenly believing the servitude to be permanent, acted in reasonable reliance on the mistaken belief. [Cases: Estoppel 82. C.J.S. Estoppel § 90.]

easement by implication. See implied easement.

easement by necessity. An easement created by operation of law because the easement is indispensable to the reasonable use of nearby property, such as an easement connecting a parcel of land to a road. — Also termed easement of necessity; necessary way. [Cases: Easements 18. C.J.S. Easements §§ 63, 69, 75–77, 91–97, 99–101, 103–109.]

easement by prescription. See prescriptive easement.

easement in gross. An easement benefiting a particular person and not a particular piece of land. • The beneficiary need not, and usu. does not, own any land adjoining the servient estate. Cf. easement appurtenant. [Cases: Easements 3. C.J.S. Easements §§ 4, 10–11, 20.]

easement of access. See access easement.

easement of convenience. An easement that increases the facility, comfort, or convenience of enjoying the dominant estate or some right connected with it.

easement of natural support. See lateral support under SUPPORT(3).

easement of necessity. See easement by necessity.

easement of passage. See access easement.

easement of way. See access easement.

easement proper. See easement appurtenant.

equitable easement. 1. An implied easement created by equity when adjacent lands have been created out of a larger tract. • Such an easement is usu. created to allow implied privileges to continue. [Cases: Easements 16. C.J.S. Easements §§ 3, 61–65, 68–71, 74, 79–81, 88.] 2. See restrictive covenant (1) under COVENANT(4).

exclusive easement. An easement that the holder has the sole right to use. Cf. common easement. [Cases: Easements 52. C.J.S. Easements §§ 164–167.]

flight easement. See avigational easement.

floating easement. An easement that, when created, is not limited to any specific part of the servient estate. [Cases: Easements 46. C.J.S. Easements § 152.]

flowage easement. A common-law easement that gives the dominant-estate owner the right to flood a servient estate, as when land near a dam is flooded to maintain the dam or to control the water level in a reservoir. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 165. C.J.S. Waters §§ 38–42.]

implied easement. An easement created by law after an owner of two parcels of land uses one parcel to benefit the other to such a degree that, upon the sale of the benefited parcel, the purchaser could reasonably expect the use to be included in the sale. — Also termed easement by implication; way of necessity. [Cases: Easements 15–19. C.J.S. Easements §§ 3, 13, 61–88, 90–109, 149.]

intermittent easement. An easement that is usable or used only from time to time, not regularly or continuously.

light-and-air easement. A negative easement preventing an adjoining landowner from constructing a building that would prevent light or air from reaching the dominant estate. See negative easement. Cf. solar easement. [Cases: Easements 11, 19, 45. C.J.S. Easements §§ 51–52, 85–87, 151.]

mineral easement. An easement that permits the holder to enter the property to remove minerals from it. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 55(6). C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 177, 180, 182–185, 428, 434–435.]

navigation easement. 1. An easement giving the federal government the right to regulate navigable waters, even when the regulation interferes with private water rights. [Cases: Navigable Waters 16. C.J.S. Navigable Waters §§ 40–44, 46.] 2. See avigational easement.

negative easement. An easement that prohibits the servient-estate owner from doing something, such as building an obstruction. Cf. affirmative easement. [Cases: Covenants 20; Easements 13. C.J.S. Easements § 59.]

“Negative easements ... confer no right of entry, but consist essentially of the right to prevent something being done; examples are the right to the flow of air through defined aperture, the right to receive light for a building, the right to the support of a building, and (possibly) the right to require a neighbouring landowner to repair fences.” Peter Butt, Land Law 305 (2d ed. 1988).

nonapparent easement. See discontinuous easement.

noncontinuous easement. See discontinuous easement.

nonexclusive easement. See common easement.

positive easement. See affirmative easement.

prescriptive easement. An easement created from an open, adverse, and continuous use over a statutory period. — Also termed easement by prescription; adverse easement. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. [Cases: Easements 5–11. C.J.S. Easements §§ 13–51.]

private easement. An easement whose enjoyment is restricted to one specific person or a few specific people. [Cases: Easements 52. C.J.S. Easements §§ 164–167.]

public easement. An easement for the benefit of an entire community, such as the right to travel down a street or a sidewalk.

pure easement. See easement appurtenant.

quasi-easement. 1. An easement-like right occurring when both tracts of land are owned by the same person. • A quasi-easement may become a true easement if the landowner sells one of the tracts. 2. An obligation or license that relates to land but that is not a true easement — for example, a landowner's obligation to maintain the fence between the landowner's tract and someone else's tract.

reciprocal negative easement. An easement created when a landowner sells part of the land and restricts the buyer's use of that part, and, in turn, that same restriction is placed on the part kept by the landowner. • Such an easement usu. arises when the original landowner creates a common scheme of development for smaller tracts that are carved out of the original tract. [Cases: Covenants 20; Easements 13. C.J.S. Easements § 59.]

reserved easement. An easement created by the grantor of real property to benefit the grantor's retained property and to burden the granted property. [Cases: Easements 14. C.J.S. Easements § 60.]

secondary easement. An easement that is appurtenant to the primary or actual easement; the right to do things that are necessary to fully enjoy the easement itself. [Cases: Easements 38. C.J.S. Easements §§ 57, 143–144, 146–147, 165–167.]

solar easement. An easement created to protect the dominant estate's exposure to the direct rays of the sun. • A solar easement is often created to prevent the servient-estate owner from constructing any building that would cause shadows on the dominant estate, thus interfering with the use of a solar-energy system. Cf. light-and-air easement. [Cases: Easements 11, 19, 45. C.J.S. Easements §§ 51–52, 85–87, 151.]

“Solar easements ... remain difficult to describe because of the relationship of the sun to the earth. Shadow variables include land slope, terrain, solar orientation, latitude, time of day, and height of potential obstructions. Lawyers, engineers, land planners, title companies and others have expressed concern over the complexity required to write a solar easement containing highly detailed, technical information often included in these easements.” Sandy F. Kraemer, Solar Law 42 (1978).

timber easement. An easement that permits the holder to cut and remove timber from another's property. — Also termed timber rights. [Cases: Logs and Logging 3. C.J.S. Logs and Logging §§ 9, 20.]

EASTER-OFFERINGS

Easter-offerings. Eccles. law. Small sums of money paid as personal tithes to the parochial clergy by the parishioners at Easter. • Under the Recovery of Small Tithes Act (1695), Easter-offerings were recoverable before justices of the peace. St. 7 & 8 Will. 3, ch. 6. — Also termed Easter-dues.

EASTER SITTINGS

Easter sittings. A term of court beginning on April 15 of each year and usu. ending on May 8, but sometimes extended to May 13. • This was known until 1875 as Easter term. Cf. HILARY SITTINGS; MICHAELMAS SITTINGS; TRINITY SITTINGS .

EAST GREENWICH

East Greenwich (eest gren-ich). Hist. The name of a royal manor in the county of Kent, England. • Historically, this manor was mentioned in royal grants or patents as descriptive of the tenure of free socage.

EAST INDIA COMPANY

East India Company. Hist. The company that was originally established to pursue exclusive trade between England and India, and that later became more active in political affairs than in commerce. • In 1858, by the Government of India Act, the government of the company's territories was transferred to the Crown. The company was dissolved in 1874. St. 21 & 22 Vict., ch. 106.

leading economic indicator. An economic indicator (such as interest rates) that tends to predict the future direction of the economy. — Often shortened to leading indicator.

ECONOMIC LIFE

economic life. The duration of an asset's profitability, usu. shorter than its physical life.

ECONOMIC LOSS

economic loss. A monetary loss such as lost wages or lost profits. • The term usu. refers to a type of damages recoverable in a lawsuit. For example, in a products-liability suit, economic loss includes the cost of repair or replacement of defective property, as well as commercial loss for the property's inadequate value and consequent loss of profits or use. [Cases: Damages 36, 40(1). C.J.S. Damages §§ 53, 58, 61; Torts § 26.]

consequential economic loss. Economic loss that proximately results from a defective product and that is beyond direct economic loss. • Examples include lost profits and loss of goodwill or business reputation. [Cases: Damages 36; Products Liability 17.1. C.J.S. Damages § 53; Torts § 26.]

direct economic loss. Economic loss flowing directly from insufficient product quality. • The most common type is loss-of-bargain damages — the difference between the actual value of goods accepted and the value they would have had if they had been delivered as promised or warranted. [Cases: Products Liability 17.1; Torts 5. C.J.S. Torts §§ 24–26.]

ECONOMIC-LOSS RULE

economic-loss rule. Torts. The principle that a plaintiff cannot sue in tort to recover for purely monetary loss — as opposed to physical injury or property damage — caused by the defendant. • Many states recognize an exception to this rule when the defendant commits fraud or negligent misrepresentation, or when a special relationship exists between the parties (such as an attorney–client relationship). — Also termed economic-harm rule; economic-loss doctrine.

“One way the courts have attempted to draw a line between tort and warranty is to bar recovery for ‘economic loss’ in tort. In some states this common law doctrine has achieved the status of the ‘economic loss doctrine,’ meaning that once loss is defined as ‘economic’ it cannot be recovered at least in negligence or strict tort and perhaps not in fraud or misrepresentation.” 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 10-5, at 581 (4th ed. 1995).

ECONOMIC OBSOLESCENCE economic obsolescence. See OBSOLESCENCE.

EDICTS OF JUSTINIAN

Edicts of Justinian.Roman law.Thirteen constitutions or laws of Justinian, appended to the Greek collection of the Novels in the Venetian manuscript. • The Edicts were confined to administrative matters in the provinces of the Roman Empire. They were not known to the glossators.

EDICTUM

edictum (ee-dik-t<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin] Roman law.1. In imperial Rome, an edict or mandate; an ordinance or law proclaimed by the emperor. • An edict was a constitution of the emperor acting on his own initiative, differing from a rescript in not being returned in the way of answer; from a decree in not being given in judgment; and from both in not being founded upon solicitation. As an imperial constitution, it had the force of law. 2. A declaration by a magistrate relevant to his jurisdiction or area of competence; esp., the pronouncement of a magistrate of the principles by which he proposed to act in office. See edictum annuum; FORMULA(1). Pl. edicta.

edictum aedilicium (ee-d<<schwa>>-lish-ee-<<schwa>>m). A curule aedile's edict regarding sales in the public market; esp., an edict giving remedies for sales of defective goods, animals, or slaves. • An aedile could, for instance, declare that sellers would be strictly liable for latent defects in goods, and dictate how dogs and wild animals for sale should be confined to protect the public. — Also written aedilitium edictum. Pl. edicta aedilicia.

edictum annuum (an-yoo-<<schwa>>m). An edict issued by a praetor at the beginning of the one-year term of office. Pl. edicta annua.

edictum perpetuum (p<<schwa>>r-pech-oo-<<schwa>>m). The urban praetor's edict in its permanent form, edited by Julian in A.D. 131 and given legislative force. • This term originally had the narrower sense of the praetors' general edicts as opposed to edicts issued in specific cases.

— Also termed perpetual edict. Pl. edicta perpetua.

edictum praetoris (pri-tor-<<schwa>>s). The proclamation issued by a praetor at the start of the year's term, explaining the grounds on which a formula would be granted. — Also termed praetorian edict. See edictum annum; FORMULA (1).

edictum provinciale (pr<<schwa>>-vin-shee-ay-lee). An edict or system of rules for the administration of justice, modeled on edictum praetoris, issued by the provincial governors in the Roman Empire. Pl. edicta provincialia.

edictum repentinum (rep-<<schwa>>n-tI-n<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. A supplementary edict issued to deal with some emergency. • This term was contrasted with edictum perpetuum. Pl. edicta repentina.

Edictum Theodorici (thee-<<schwa>>-d<<schwa>>-rI-sI). A collection of laws applicable to both Romans and Goths, issued by Theodoric, king of the Ostrogoths, at Rome about A.D. 500, or perhaps by Theodoric III, king of the Visigoths in Gaul about A.D. 460.

edictum tralatitium (tral-<<schwa>>-tish-ee-<<schwa>>m). A praetor's edict that retained all or a principal part of the predecessor's edict, with only such additions as appeared necessary to adapt it to changing social conditions or juristic ideas. • This had become standard practice by the end of the Republic. — Also spelled edictum tralacticium (tral-<<schwa>>k-tish-ee-<<schwa>>m). Pl. edicta tralatitia.

EJECT

eject,vb.1. To cast or throw out. 2. To oust or dispossess; to put or turn out of possession. 3. To expel or thrust out forcibly (e.g., disorderly patrons). — ejector,vb.

EJECTION

ejection,n.1. An expulsion by action of law or by actual or threatened physical force. See OUSTER. 2.EJECTMENT(2).

EJECTIONE CUSTODIAE

ejectione custodiae.See DE EJECTIONE CUSTODIAE.

EJECTIONE FIRMAE

ejectione firmae.See DE EJECTIONE FIRMAE.

EJECTMENT

ejectment.1. The ejection of an owner or occupier from property. 2. A legal action by which a person wrongfully ejected from property seeks to recover possession, damages, and costs. 3. The writ by which such an action is begun. • The essential allegations in an action for ejectment are that (1) the plaintiff has title to the land, (2) the plaintiff has been wrongfully dispossessed or ousted, and (3) the plaintiff has suffered damages. — Also termed action of ejectment; action for the recovery of land; ejection. See FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER. Cf. EVICTION; OUSTER. [Cases: Ejectment 1. C.J.S. Ejectment §§ 2–3, 5.]

“The evolution of the action of ejectment from its primitive form as a mere action of trespass, enabling a lessee of lands to recover damages when ousted of his possession, through a series of most ingenious fictions, which were afterwards added to enable him to recover possession as well, until its final establishment as the proper method of trying all disputed titles to real property, presents to the student of legal science one of the most interesting studies that the history of the law affords. Few remedies have passed through so many changes of form, both in pleading and practice, and yet retained the same distinctive character that marked their origin.” George W. Warvelle, A Treatise on the Principles and Practice of the Action of Ejectment § 4, at 4–5 (1905).

“Any person wrongfully dispossessed of land may sue for the specific restitution of it in an action of ejectment. Originally this action was a special variety of trespass and available only to leaseholders. But in time and by the aid of the most elaborate fictions it came to be used by freeholders also. All these fictions have now been swept away; in theory even the term ejectment has been replaced by the term action for the recovery of land. The older term is, however, replaced in practice.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 41 (17th ed. 1977).

equitable ejectment.A proceeding brought to enforce specific performance of a contract for the sale of land and for other purposes. • Though in the form of an ejectment action, this proceeding is in reality a substitute for a bill in equity. [Cases: Ejectment 156.]

justice ejectment.A statutory proceeding to evict a tenant who has held over after termination of the lease or breach of its conditions.

EJECTMENT BILL

ejectment bill.Equity practice. A bill in equity brought to recover real property and an accounting of rents and profits, without setting out a distinct ground of equity jurisdiction (and thus demurrable). [Cases: Ejectment 62. C.J.S. Ejectment § 59.]

EJECTMENT DE GARDE

ejectment de garde. See DE EJECTIONE CUSTODIAE.

EJECTOR

ejector, n. One who ejects, puts out, or dispossesses another.

casual ejector. The nominal defendant in an ejectment action who, under a legal fiction, is supposed to come casually or by accident upon the premises and to eject the lawful possessor. [Cases: Ejectment 46.]

EJERCITORIA

ejercitoria (ay-hair-see-tor-ee-<<schwa>>), n. [Spanish] Spanish law. An action lying against a ship's owner upon the contracts or obligations made by the master for repairs or supplies. • This action corresponds to the actio exercitoria of Roman law. See actio exercitoria under ACTIO.

EJIDO

ejido (ay-hee-doh), n. [fr. Latin exitus “a going out”] Spanish law. Common land or pasture; esp., land used in common by inhabitants of a city, pueblo, or town for such things as pasture, wood, and threshing-ground; commons. — Also termed exidos; exedos. See COMMON(2).

EJURATION

ejuration (ej-<<schwa>>-ray-sh<<schwa>>n). The renouncing or resigning of one's place.

EJUSDEM GENERIS

eiusdem generis (ee-j<<schwa>>s-d<<schwa>>m jen-<<schwa>>-ris also ee-joos- or ee-yoos-). [Latin “of the same kind or class”] A canon of construction that when a general word or phrase follows a list of specifics, the general word or phrase will be interpreted to include only items of the same type as those listed. • For example, in the phrase horses, cattle, sheep, pigs, goats, or any other farm animal, the general language or any other farm animal — despite its seeming breadth — would probably be held to include only four-legged, hooved mammals typically found on farms, and thus would exclude chickens. — Also spelled eiusdem generis. — Also termed eiusdem generis rule; Lord Tenterden's rule. Cf. EXPRESSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS; NOSCITUR A SOCIIS; RULE OF RANK. [Cases: Contracts 156;

Statutes 194. C.J.S. Contracts § 328; Statutes § 329.]

ejusdem negotii (ee-j<<schwa>>s-d<<schwa>>m ni-goh-shee-I). [Latin] Hist. Part of the same transaction.

ELECTEE

electee.1. A person chosen or elected. 2. A person to whom the law gives a choice about status.

ELECTIO EST CREDITORIS

electio est creditoris (i-lek-shee-oh est kred-i-tor-is). [Law Latin] Scots law. The creditor has the election or choice. • The phrase appeared in reference to the creditor's right to apply payments to one debt or another. Cf. ELECTIO EST DEBITORIS.

“Electio est creditoris.... This has reference to a creditor's right to apply indefinite payments, made by his debtor, to that debt or obligation which is least secured; but where the debtor at the time of payment appropriates the sum paid, towards extinction of a particular debt, it must be so applied.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 184 (4th ed. 1894).

ELECTIO EST DEBITORIS

electio est debitoris (i-lek-shee-oh est deb-i-tor-is). [Law Latin] Scots law. The debtor has the election or choice. • If the law provided alternative methods of fulfilling an obligation, the debtor could choose the method of payment. Cf. ELECTIO EST CREDITORIS.

ELECTION

election,n.1. The exercise of a choice; esp., the act of choosing from several possible rights or remedies in a way that precludes the use of other rights or remedies <the taxpayers' election to file jointly instead of separately>. See ELECTION OF REMEDIES. 2. The doctrine by which a person is compelled to choose between accepting a benefit under a legal instrument and retaining some property right to which the person is already entitled; an obligation imposed on a party to choose between alternative rights or claims, so that the party is entitled to enjoy only one <the prevailing plaintiff was put to an election between out-of-pocket damages and lost profits>. — Also termed equitable election. See RIGHT OF ELECTION. [Cases: Election of Remedies 1. C.J.S. Election of Remedies §§ 2–3.] 3. The process of selecting a person to occupy an office (usu. a public office), membership, award, or other title or status <the 2004 congressional election>. [Cases: Elections 1. C.J.S. Elections §§ 1(1, 10), , 2.] — elect,vb. — elective,adj.

by-election. An election specially held to fill a vacant post. — Also spelled bye-election. Cf. general election.

election at large.An election in which a public official is selected from a major election district rather than from a subdivision of the larger unit. — Also termed at-large election. [Cases: Elections 12(7).]

free election.An election in which the political system and processes guarantee that each voter will be allowed to vote according to conscience.

general election. 1. An election that occurs at a regular interval of time. — Also termed regular election. 2. An election for all seats, as contrasted with a by-election. Cf. by-election. [Cases: Elections 215.]

municipal election.The election of municipal officers. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 129. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 350, 353, 367.]

off-year election.An election conducted at a time other than the presidential election year.

popular election.An election by people as a whole, rather than by a select group.

primary election.A preliminary election in which a political party's registered voters nominate the candidate who will run in the general election. — Often shortened to primary. [Cases: Elections 126. C.J.S. Elections § 111(1).]

recall election. An election in which voters have the opportunity to remove a public official from office.

regular election. See general election.

representation election. An election held by the National Labor Relations Board to decide whether a certain union will represent employees in a bargaining unit. See BARGAINING UNIT. [Cases: Labor Relations 210. C.J.S. Labor Relations §§ 191–192, 195–197, 203, 207–209.]

runoff election. An election held after a general election, in which the two candidates who received the most votes — neither of whom received a majority — run against each other so that the winner can be determined. Cf. two-round voting under VOTING.

special election. An election that occurs in an interim between general elections, usu. to fill a sudden vacancy in office. Cf. by-election.

4. Patents. A patent applicant's choice of a single invention to continue prosecuting under the original application, after an examiner has required a restriction. See RESTRICTION(4).

election of species. A patent applicant's choice of one alternative over others after an examiner determines that a generic claim is not allowable.

ELECTION BOARD

election board. 1. A board of inspectors or commissioners appointed for each election precinct to determine voter qualification, to supervise the polling, and often to ascertain and report the results. 2. A local agency charged with the conduct of elections. [Cases: Elections 49–58. C.J.S. Elections §§ 55–56, 59–60, 63–65.]

ELECTION BY SPOUSE

election by spouse. See RIGHT OF ELECTION.

ELECTION CONTEST

election contest. A challenge by an election's loser against the winner, calling for an analysis of the election returns, which may include reviewing voter qualifications or re-counting the ballots. [Cases: Elections 148, 269–306. C.J.S. Elections §§ 1(10), 120, 139, 219, 245–267, 269–270, 272–277, 279, 281, 283–284, 288–292, 295–296, 298–301, 305–306, 308, 310, 312, 314, 317–318.]

ELECTION DISTRICT

election district.See DISTRICT.

ELECTION DOWER

election dower.See DOWER.

ELECTION FRAUD

election fraud.Illegal conduct committed in an election, usu. in the form of fraudulent voting.

- Examples include voting twice, voting under another person's name (usu. a deceased person), and voting while ineligible. [Cases: Elections 318. C.J.S. Elections § 331.]

ELECTION JUDGE

election judge.1. A person appointed to supervise an election at the precinct level; a local representative of an election board. [Cases: Elections 49. C.J.S. Elections § 56.] 2.English law. One of two puisne judges of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court selected to try election petitions.

ELECTION OF REMEDIES

election of remedies.1. A claimant's act of choosing between two or more concurrent but inconsistent remedies based on a single set of facts. [Cases: Election of Remedies 1. C.J.S. Election of Remedies §§ 2–3.] 2. The affirmative defense barring a litigant from pursuing a remedy inconsistent with another remedy already pursued, when that other remedy has given the litigant an advantage over, or has damaged, the opposing party. • This doctrine has largely fallen into disrepute and is now rarely applied. 3. The affirmative defense that a claimant cannot simultaneously recover damages based on two different liability findings if the injury is the same for both claims, thus creating a double recovery. Cf. alternative relief under RELIEF.

ELECTION OF SPECIES

election of species.See ELECTION(4).

ELECTION PETITION

election petition.English law. A petition for inquiry into the validity of a Parliament member's election, when the member's return is allegedly invalid for bribery or other reason.

ELECTION RETURNS

election returns.The report made to the board of canvassers or the election board, by those charged with tallying votes, of the number of votes cast for a particular candidate or proposition. [Cases: Elections 126(7), 246. C.J.S. Elections § 119(1).]

elective office. An office that is filled by popular election rather than by appointment.

ELECTIVE SHARE

elective share. Wills & estates. The percentage of a deceased spouse's estate, set by statute, that a surviving spouse (or sometimes a child) may choose to receive instead of taking under a will or in the event of being unjustifiably disinherited. — Also termed forced share; statutory share; statutory forced share. See RIGHT OF ELECTION. [Cases: Wills 778–803. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1841–1879.]

“In many states today, common-law dower and curtesy have been wholly replaced by statutes that make the surviving spouse an ‘heir’ of the deceased spouse and fix a minimum percentage of the decedent's estate (real and personal) to which the survivor will be entitled regardless of efforts of the deceased spouse to prevent it by will. This statutory minimum — called the statutory forced share — is typically an estate in fee simple, not merely a life estate. A serious disadvantage to the surviving spouse under many of these statutes, however, is that the minimum percentage applies only to property owned by the decedent at death. Both husbands and wives can, under such statutes, defeat their spouses' forced shares by inter vivos transfer.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 37–38 (2d ed. 1984).

ELECTOR

elector. 1. A member of the electoral college chosen to elect the President and Vice President. — Also termed presidential elector. [Cases: United States 25. C.J.S. United States § 46.] 2. A voter. [Cases: Elections 59. C.J.S. Elections § 16.]

qualified elector. A legal voter; a person who meets the voting requirements for age, residency, and registration and who has the present right to vote in an election. See VOTER. [Cases: Elections 59–87. C.J.S. Elections §§ 15–19, 26, 28–29, 32.]

elegit (⟨schwa⟩-lee-jit). [Latin “he has chosen”] Hist. A writ of execution (first given by 13 Edw., ch. 18) either upon a judgment for a debt or damages or upon the forfeiture of a recognizance taken in the king's court. • Under it, the defendant's goods and chattels were appraised and, except for plow beasts, delivered to the plaintiff to satisfy the debt. If the goods were not sufficient to pay the debt, then the moiety of the defendant's freehold lands held at the time of judgment was also delivered to the plaintiff, to hold until the debt was satisfied out of rents and profits or until the defendant's interest expired. During this period the plaintiff was called tenant by elegit, and the estate an estate by elegit. The writ was abolished in England in 1956, and it is no longer used anywhere in the United States.

ELEMENT

element.1. A constituent part of a claim that must be proved for the claim to succeed <Burke failed to prove the element of proximate cause in prosecuting his negligence claim>.2.Patents. A discretely claimed component of a patent claim. • For a prior-art reference to anticipate a claim, it must teach each and every claim element. To recover for patent infringement, the plaintiff must prove that the accused product infringes every element of at least one claim, either literally or under the doctrine of equivalents. — Also termed (in sense 2) limitation. See DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS. [Cases: Patents 101(1). C.J.S. Patents §§ 140–142.]

ELEMENTAL FACT

elemental fact.See ultimate fact under FACT.

ELEMENTS OF CRIME

elements of crime.The constituent parts of a crime — usu. consisting of the actus reus, mens rea, and causation — that the prosecution must prove to sustain a conviction. • The term is more broadly defined by the Model Penal Code in § 1.13(9) to refer to each component of the actus reus, causation, the mens rea, any grading factors, and the negative of any defense.

ELEVENTH AMENDMENT

embargo,n.1. A government's wartime or peacetime detention of an offending nation's private ships found in the ports of the aggrieved nation <the President called off the embargo of Iraq's ships after the war ended>. — Also spelled imbargo. — Also termed hostile embargo. [Cases: War and National Emergency 12. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 8, 13, 16–22, 84–85.]

“A hostile embargo is a kind of reprisal by one nation upon vessels within its ports belonging to another nation with which a difference exists, for the purpose of forcing it to do justice. If this measure should be followed by war, the vessels are regarded as captured, if by peace, they are restored.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 118, at 187 (5th ed. 1878).

3. The unilateral or collective restrictions on the import or export of goods, materials, capital, or services into or from a specific country or group of countries for political or security reasons <for a time, the industrialized nations placed an embargo on all goods from Libya>. — Also termed trade embargo; economic-cure trade embargo. 4. The conscription of private property for governmental use, such as to transport troops <the Army's embargo of the company jet to fly General White to Washington>.5. A temporary prohibition on disclosure <the embargo on the press release expired at 11:59 p.m.>. — embargo,vb.

EMBASSADOR

ambassador. See AMBASSADOR.

EMBASSY

embassy.1. The building in which a diplomatic body is located; esp., the residence of the ambassador. 2. A body of diplomatic representatives headed by an ambassador; a diplomatic mission on the ambassadorial level. 3. The mission, business, and function of an ambassador. Cf. LEGATION. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls 3. C.J.S. Ambassadors and Consuls §§ 15–23.]

EMBER DAYS

Ember Days.Eccles. law. The days — which the ancient church fathers called quatuor tempora jejunii — that are observed on the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday following (1) Quadragesima Sunday (the first Sunday in Lent), (2) Whitsuntide, or Holyrood Day, in September, and (3) St. Lucy's day, about the middle of December. • Almanacs refer to the weeks in which these days fall as Ember Weeks; they are now chiefly noticed because, by tradition, the Sundays following Ember Days are used to ordain priests and deacons, although the canon law allows bishops to ordain on any Sunday or holiday.

EMBEZZLEMENT

embezzlement,n. The fraudulent taking of personal property with which one has been entrusted, esp. as a fiduciary. • The criminal intent for embezzlement — unlike larceny and false pretenses — arises after taking possession (not before or during the taking). — Also termed defalcation; peculation. See LARCENY; FALSE PRETENSES. [Cases: Embezzlement 1.C.J.S. Embezzlement §§ 2–3, 5.] — embezzle,vb. — embezzler,n.

“Embezzlement is not a common-law crime. It is the result of legislative efforts to make provision for an unreasonable gap which appeared in the law of larceny as it developed. Under the early English statute embezzlement was made a misdemeanor, but under most modern American statutes it is either a felony or a misdemeanor depending upon the value of the property converted.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 351 (3d ed. 1982).

“Embezzlement can be defined as the fraudulent conversion of the property of another by one who has lawful possession of the property and whose fraudulent conversion has been made punishable by the statute.” Arnold H. Loewy, Criminal Law in a Nutshell 94 (2d ed. 1987).

EMBLEM

emblem.1. A flag, armorial bearing, or other symbol of a country, organization, or movement. 2. Loosely, something that is used to symbolize something else.

EMBLEMATA TRIBONIANI emblemata Triboniani (em-blee-m<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>> tr<<schwa>>-boh-nee-ay-n I). [Latin] Roman law. Alterations, modifications, and additions to the writings of the older jurists that were combined to form the Digest or Pandects, and generally termed interpolations. •

Justinian appointed a commission over which Tribonian presided to harmonize contradictions, delete obsolete matter, and bring the law up to date. This term is considered old-fashioned by modern Romanists. See INTERPOLATION(2).

EMBLEMENTS

emblems (em-bl<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>nts). 1. The growing crop annually produced by labor, as opposed to a crop occurring naturally. • Emblems are considered personal property that the executor or administrator of a deceased tenant may harvest and take regardless of who may have since occupied the land. — Also termed fructus industriales. [Cases: Crops 1. C.J.S. Crops §§ 1–5, 9.] 2. The tenant's right to harvest and take away such crops after the tenancy has ended. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 139(2). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 349.]

“At common law those products of the earth which are annual, and are raised by yearly manurance and labor, and essentially owe their annual existence to the cultivation by man, [are] termed ‘emblems’ and sometimes ‘fructus industriales.’ ” Sparrow v. Pond, 52 N.W. 36, 36 (Minn. 1892).

“The law of emblems has its origin and matrix, in the privilege, recognized at least as early as the fifteenth century, of the tenant for an uncertain term, to harvest and remove, even after the tenancy had terminated, the annual crop, which he had planted and nurtured.” Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 159, at 806 (2d ed. 1955).

EMBLERS DE GENTZ

emblers de gentz (em-bl<<schwa>>rz d<<schwa>> jents). [Law French] A theft from the people. • The phrase occurs in the old English rolls of Parliament — for example, “Whereas divers murders, emblers de gentz, and robberies are committed...”

EMBODIED TECHNOLOGY

embodied technology. Know-how or knowledge that is manifest in products and equipment, including software. Cf. DISEMBODIED TECHNOLOGY.

EMBODIMENT

embodiment. Patents. 1. The tangible manifestation of an invention. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.] 2. The method for using this tangible form. 3. The part of a patent application or patent that describes a concrete manifestation of the invention. • Embodiments are less common in software or process patents than in manufacturing-related patents.

EMBOSSSED SEAL

embossed seal. See NOTARY SEAL.

EMBRACE

embrace, vb. To attempt to influence (a judge or juror) by corruption, or to behave in a way that might have a corrupting influence on a judge or juror; to engage in embracery.

EMBRACEE

embracee (em-bray-see). The bribe-taker in the offense of embracery.

EMBRACER

embracer (im-brays-<<schwa>>r). [fr. Old French embraseor “one who kindles or instigates,” fr. embraser “to set fire to”] The bribe-giver in the offense of embracery; one who attempts to influence a judge or a juror by means of corruption. — Also spelled embraceor.

EMBRACERY

embracery (im-brays-<<schwa>>-ree), n. The attempt to corrupt or wrongfully influence a judge or juror, esp. by threats or bribery. — Also spelled imbracery. — Also termed jury-tampering; laboring a jury. Cf. JURY-FIXING; JURY-PACKING. [Cases: Criminal Law 45.35.]

“The word ‘embracery’ ... has tended to disappear. It is included in some of the codes but the tendency has been to divide this common-law offense into two parts, placing that which is appropriate thereto in sections on bribery and the remainder in provisions dealing with obstruction of justice.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 552 (3d ed. 1982).

EMBRYO

embryo (em-bree-oh). A developing but unborn or unhatched animal; esp., an unborn human from conception until the development of organs (i.e., until about the eighth week of pregnancy). Cf. FETUS; ZYGOTE.

embryo formatus (for-may-t<<schwa>>s).Eccles. law. A human embryo organized into human shape and endowed with a soul. • Though rejected in the early doctrine of the Christian church, the distinction between the embryo formatus and informatus was accepted by Gratian (regarded as the founder of canon law) in his Decretum (ca. 1140), in which he said that abortion is not murder if the fetus has not yet been infused with a soul. Though he did not specify the time of formation or animation, by the 16th century canonists accepted that the time of formation and animation was the 40th day after conception for the male fetus and the 80th day for the female. — Also termed embryo animatus.

embryo informatus (in-for-may-t<<schwa>>s).Eccles. law. A human embryo before it has been endowed with a soul. — Also termed embryo inanimatus.

EMBRYO ADOPTION

embryo adoption. See ADOPTION.

Emergency Court of Appeals.Hist. A temporary court, established during World War II, whose purpose was to review wage- and price-control matters. • The court was created in 1942 and abolished in 1962. Cf. TEMPORARY EMERGENCY COURT OF APPEALS . [Cases: War and National Emergency 108, 206.]

EMERGENCY DOCTRINE

emergency doctrine.1. A legal principle exempting a person from the ordinary standard of reasonable care if that person acted instinctively to meet a sudden and urgent need for aid. — Also termed imminent-peril doctrine; sudden-emergency doctrine; sudden-peril doctrine. [Cases: Negligence 291. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 69–73.] 2. A legal principle by which consent to medical treatment in a dire situation is inferred when neither the patient nor a responsible party can consent but a reasonable person would do so. — Also termed (in sense 2) emergency-treatment doctrine. Cf. GOOD SAMARITAN DOCTRINE ; RESCUE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Health 909.] 3. The principle that a police officer may conduct a search without a warrant if the officer has probable cause and reasonably believes that immediate action is needed to protect life or property. — Also termed emergency exception. See exigent circumstances under CIRCUMSTANCE.

EMERGENCY-EMPLOYMENT DOCTRINE emerita. See EMERITUS.

EMERITUS

emeritus. An honorary title conferred on a former officer who has honorably retired, usu. after serving for an extended period well beyond the norm. • The term is loosely used as an adjective meaning “honored,” but it is not a synonym for “former,” “retired,” or “immediate past” (as in “immediate past president”). Pl. emeriti. Fem. emerita. Fem. pl. emeritae. See HONORARY.

EMIGRANT

emigrant (em-<<schwa>>-gr<<schwa>>nt), n. One who leaves his or her country for any reason with the intent to establish a permanent residence elsewhere. Cf. IMMIGRANT.

EMIGRANT AGENT

emigrant agent. See AGENT(2).

EMIGRATION

emigration (em-<<schwa>>-gray-sh<<schwa>>n), n. The act of leaving a country with the intent not to return and to reside elsewhere. Cf. IMMIGRATION. — emigrate, vb.

“Emigration is usually defined as the voluntary removal of an individual from his home State with the intention of residing abroad. However, not all emigration is voluntary; there sometimes exists forced emigration, even mass emigration. Emigration may also be due to flight for political reasons or expulsion. One then speaks of refugees or exiles.” Paul Weis, “Emigration,” in 2 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 76 (1995).

EMIGRÉ

émigré (em-<<schwa>>-gray or em-<<schwa>>-gray), n. [French] One who is forced to leave his or her country for political reasons. — Also spelled émigré.

EMINENCE

eminent domain. The inherent power of a governmental entity to take privately owned property, esp. land, and convert it to public use, subject to reasonable compensation for the taking. — Also (rarely) termed compulsory purchase; (in Scots law) compulsory surrender. See CONDEMNATION(2); EXPROPRIATION; TAKING(2). [Cases: Eminent Domain 1, 69. C.J.S. Eminent Domain §§ 2–3, 71–72, 198–199.]

“The term ‘eminent domain’ is said to have originated with Grotius, the seventeenth century legal scholar. Grotius believed that the state possessed the power to take or destroy property for the benefit of the social unit, but he believed that when the state so acted, it was obligated to compensate the injured property owner for his losses. Blackstone, too, believed that society had no general power to take the private property of landowners, except on the payment of a reasonable price. The just compensation clause of the fifth amendment to the Constitution was built upon this concept of a moral obligation to pay for governmental interference with private property.... No provision for the power of eminent domain appears in the federal Constitution. The Supreme Court, however, has said that the power of eminent domain is an incident of federal sovereignty and an ‘offspring of political necessity.’ The Court has also noted that the fifth amendment’s limitation on taking private property is a tacit recognition that the power to take private property exists.” John E. Nowak & Ronald D. Rotunda, Constitutional Law § 11.11, at 424–25 (4th ed. 1991) (quoting Bauman v. Ross, 167 U.S. 548, 574, 17 S.Ct. 966, 976 (1897)).

EMINENT DOMAIN CLAUSE

Eminent Domain Clause. The Fifth Amendment provision providing that private property cannot be taken for public use without just compensation. See TAKINGS CLAUSE. [Cases: Eminent Domain 70. C.J.S. Eminent Domain § 72.]

EMISSARY

emissary. One sent on a special mission as another's agent or representative, esp. to promote a cause or to gain information.

EMIT

emit,vb. 1. To give off or discharge into the air <emit light>.2. To issue with authority <emit a new series of currency>. — emission,n.

EMOLUMENT

emolument (i-mol-y<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>nt), n. (usu. pl.) Any advantage, profit, or gain received as a result of one's employment or one's holding of office. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 94. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 130, 270–274, 286, 313–320.]

EMOLUMENT CLAUSE

Emolument Clause.The clause of the U.S. Constitution prohibiting titles of nobility and the acceptance of a gift, title, or other benefit from a foreign power. U.S. Const. art. I, § 9, cl. 8.

E-MONEY

e-money. See MONEY.

EMOTIONAL ABUSE

emotional abuse.See ABUSE.

EMOTIONAL DISTRESS

emotional distress.A highly unpleasant mental reaction (such as anguish, grief, fright, humiliation, or fury) that results from another person's conduct; emotional pain and suffering. • Emotional distress, when severe enough, can form a basis for the recovery of tort damages. — Also termed emotional harm; mental anguish; mental distress; mental suffering. See INTENTIONAL INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS; NEGLIGENT INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS . Cf. mental cruelty under CRUELTY. [Cases: Damages 48–56.20. C.J.S. Damages §§ 94–104; Parent and Child § 344; Torts §§ 66–83.]

“Emotional distress passes under various names, such as mental suffering, mental anguish, mental or nervous shock, or the like. It includes all highly unpleasant mental reactions, such as fright, horror, grief, shame, humiliation, embarrassment, anger, chagrin, disappointment, worry, and nausea. It is only where it is extreme that the liability arises. Complete emotional tranquility is seldom attainable in this world, and some degree of transient and trivial emotional distress is a part of the price of living among people. The law intervenes only where the distress inflicted is so severe that no reasonable man could be expected to endure it. The intensity and the duration of the distress are factors to be considered in determining its severity. Severe distress must be proved; but in many cases the extreme and outrageous character of the defendant's conduct is in itself important evidence that the distress has existed.” Restatement (Second) of Torts § 46 cmt. j (1965).

EMOTIONAL HARM

emotional harm. See EMOTIONAL DISTRESS.

EMOTIONAL INCAPACITY emotional incapacity. 1. The inability to control one's emotions or express appropriate emotions because of a mental disorder. 2. Hist. Evidence. (Of a witness) hostility or partiality rooted in bias, corruption, or interest. • At common law, an interested witness was not competent to testify on grounds of emotional incapacity. See State v. Craft, 41 So. 550, 551 (La. 1906).

EMOTIONAL INSANITY emotional insanity. See INSANITY.

EMPANEL

empanel, vb. To swear in (a jury) to try an issue or case. — Also spelled impanel. [Cases: Jury 146. C.J.S. Juries §§ 492–493.] — empanelment, empaneling, n.

EMPANELED JURY

empaneled jury. See JURY.

EMPARNOURS

emparnours (em-pahr-n<<schwa>>rz), n. pl. [French] Hist. Persons who undertook lawsuits on behalf of others.

EMPEROR

emperor. 1. The title of the sovereign ruler of an empire. 2. The chief of a confederation of states of which kings are members. • The rulers of the Roman world adopted the designation emperor after the fall of the republic. The title was later assumed by those — including Napoleon — who claimed to be their successors in the Holy Roman Empire. The sovereigns of Japan and Morocco are often called emperors, as were, in Western speech, the former sovereigns of Turkey and China. The title denotes a power and dignity superior to that of a king. It appears to be the appropriate style of the executive head of a federal government constructed on the monarchical principle and comprising several distinct kingdoms or other quasi-sovereign states, as with the German empire from 1871 to 1918.

EMPHASIS ADDED

emphasis added. A citation signal indicating that the writer quoting another's words has italicized or otherwise emphasized some of them. — Also termed emphasis supplied.

EMPHYTEUSIS

emphyteusis (em-fi-t[y]oo-sis), n.[Greek "implanting"] Greek, Roman & civil law. A contract by which one person delivered to another (the emphyteuta) a tract of land, either in perpetuity or for a long period of time, in exchange for the obligation to cultivate the land and to pay annual rental. • In Roman law, the land was state-owned (ager vectigalis). In the 5th century, emphyteusis was officially recognized as distinct from ownership or a lease. The land's lessee or tenant, called an emphyteuta, had to bear any burdens imposed on the land. Although the emphyteusis was alienable, the owner had to consent to the sale. (Cf. SUPERFICIARIUS.) Unlike a usufruct, emphyteusis did not terminate with the death of the emphyteuta. Perpetual emphyteusis was abolished in the 18th century.

EMPHYTEUTA

emphyteuta (em-fi-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>), n.[Latin] Roman & civil law. The person to whom an emphyteusis is granted; the lessee or tenant under a contract of emphyteusis. See FEE FARM.

EMPHYTEUTIC

emphyteutic (em-fi-t[y]oo-tik), adj.[Latin] Civil law. Founded on, growing out of, or having the character of an emphyteusis; held under an emphyteusis.

EMPIRE

empire. The dominion or jurisdiction of an emperor; the region over which an emperor's dominion extends.

EMPIRICAL

empirical (em-pir-i-k<<schwa>>l), adj. Of, relating to, or based on experience, experiment, or observation <the expert's theory was not supported by empirical data>. — Also termed empiric.

EMPLAZAMIENTO

emplazamiento (em-plah-zah-myen-toh), n.[Spanish] Spanish law. A summons; esp., a court-issued citation requiring the addressee to appear at a designated time and place.

EMPLOI

emploi (om-plwah), n.[French] French law. Equitable conversion. • When property covered by the régime dotal is sold, the purchaser must ensure that the sale proceeds are reinvested for the wife's benefit. See régime dotal under REGIME.

EMPLOY

employ,vb. 1. To make use of. 2. To hire. 3. To use as an agent or substitute in transacting business. 4. To commission and entrust with the performance of certain acts or functions or with the management of one's affairs.

EMPLOYEE

employee. A person who works in the service of another person (the employer) under an express or implied contract of hire, under which the employer has the right to control the details of work performance. — Also spelled employe. Cf. AGENT(1); INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR. [Cases: Master and Servant 1. C.J.S. Apprentices §§ 2, 11; Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 2–3, 6–12.]

borrowed employee. An employee whose services are, with the employee's consent, lent to another employer who temporarily assumes control over the employee's work. • Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, the borrowing employer is vicariously liable for the employee's acts. But the employer may also be entitled to assert immunity under workers'-compensation laws. — Also termed borrowed servant; loaned employee; loaned servant; employee pro hac vice; special employee. See RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR. [Cases: Master and Servant 301(4); Workers' Compensation 202. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 197–200; Workmen's Compensation § 122.] probationary employee. A recently hired employee whose ability and performance are being evaluated during a trial period of employment.

statutory employee. Workers' compensation. An employee who is covered, or required to be covered, by the employer's workers'-compensation insurance and who therefore has no independent tort claim against the employer for unintentional injuries suffered on the job. See statutory employer under EMPLOYER. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 187. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 121, 132.]

EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN

defined-benefit plan. A plan established and maintained by an employer primarily to provide systematically for the payment of definitely determinable benefits to employees over a period of years, usu. for life, after retirement; any pension plan that is not a defined-contribution plan. • Retirement benefits under a defined-benefit plan are generally based on a formula that included such factors as years of service and compensation. If the trust funding the plan lacks sufficient assets to pay the promised benefits, ERISA requires the employer to cover the shortfall. 29 USCA § 1002(35). Cf. defined-contribution plan. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

defined-contribution plan. Under ERISA, an employee retirement plan in which each participant has a separate account — funded by the employee's contributions and the employer's contributions (usu. in a preset amount) — and each participant's benefits are based solely on what has accumulated in the participant's account. 29 USCA § 1002(34). — Also termed defined-contribution pension plan; individual account plan. Cf. defined-benefit plan. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

disability retirement plan. 1. A plan that is invoked when a covered person is disabled from working to normal retirement age. 2. A plan that provides increased benefits if a person retires because of a disability. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

employee-stock-ownership plan. A type of profit-sharing plan that invests primarily in the employer's stock. • Employee-stock-ownership plans receive special tax benefits and can borrow money to fund employee stock purchases, which makes them a useful corporate finance tool. IRC (26 USCA) § 4975(e)(7). — Abbr. ESOP. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3578, 4297. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 294–295, 302–304.]

excess-benefit plan. An employee benefit plan maintained by an employer solely for the purpose of providing benefits for certain employees in excess of limitations on contributions and benefits imposed by the Internal Revenue Code. 29 USCA § 1002(36). [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

401(k) plan. A retirement and savings plan that allows an employee to elect to have a portion of his or her pretax salary contributed to a defined contribution plan. • Employers often match all or part of the employee's contributions. Employees usu. can choose investments from a list of options. IRC (26 USCA) § 401(k). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3575. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 160, 291, 299, 306, 327.]

403(b) plan. A retirement plan for employees of public educational systems and certain tax-exempt organizations that is funded by pretax employee contributions much like a 401(k) plan, but may also provide for employer contributions. IRC (26 USCA) § 403(b). — Also termed tax-sheltered annuity; tax-deferred annuity. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3587. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 313.]

457 plan. A type of deferred-compensation plan for employees of state and local governments and tax-exempt organizations that operates much like a 401(k) plan, but (except for governmental plans) is unfunded. IRC (26 USCA) § 457.

governmental plan. Under ERISA, an employee benefit plan established or maintained for its employees by the federal government, state or local governments, or their agencies or instrumentalities. 29 USCA § 1002(32). • If a collective-bargaining agreement between a labor union and a governmental entity includes a benefit plan, that plan may be a governmental plan if it is funded by and covers only employees of the governmental entity. — Also termed governmental employee benefit plan; government plan.

individual account plan. See defined-contribution plan.

Keogh plan. See KEOGH PLAN.

money-purchase plan. A defined-contribution plan that provides for mandatory employer contributions without regard to employer profits. • Contributions are frequently stated as a percentage of employee compensation. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

nonqualified deferred-compensation plan. An unfunded compensation arrangement, frequently offered to executives, that defers compensation and the recognition of its accompanying taxable income to a later date. • It is termed “nonqualified” because it does not qualify for favorable tax treatment under IRC (26 USCA) § 401(a). The plan avoids the restrictions on qualified plans, esp. the limits on contributions and benefits and rules against discrimination in favor of highly compensated employees. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3596.]

pension plan. See PENSION PLAN.

profit-sharing plan. See PROFIT-SHARING PLAN.

qualified plan. 1. See qualified pension plan under PENSION PLAN. 2. See qualified profit-sharing plan under PROFIT-SHARING PLAN.

retirement plan. An employee benefit plan — such as a pension plan or Keogh plan — provided by an employer (or a self-employed person) for an employee's retirement. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

SIMPLE plan. An arrangement under which an individual retirement account or annuity is established for each eligible employee and funded by elective pretax employee contributions, much as with a 401(k) plan, and certain matching or minimum employer contributions. • The plan can be attractive to employers because it is easier to administer than a 401(k) plan. The name is a loose acronym for “Savings Incentive Match Plan for Employees.” IRC (26 USCA) § 408(p).

simplified employee pension plan. An arrangement under which an individual retirement account or annuity is established for each eligible employee and funded by discretionary employer contributions. IRC (26 USCA) § 408(k). • A simplified employee pension plan operates much like a 401(k) plan, in that the employee contributions can be made by deferred compensation and the employer can contribute. But the plan is attractive to small employers because it is much easier to administer than a 401(k) plan and gives the employer complete discretion on whether to make an annual contribution. IRC (26 USCA) § 408(k). — Abbr. SEP or SEP-IRA. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.] split-funded plan. A retirement plan combining elements of both life-insurance and investment plans.

target benefit plan. A money-purchase plan that sets a “target” benefit for each participant and mandates employer contributions determined by an actuarial cost method designed to fund the target benefit.

welfare plan. Under ERISA, any plan, fund, or program established or maintained by an employer or an employee organization for the purpose of providing to participants or their beneficiaries any number of potential benefits: medical, surgical, or hospital care or benefits; benefits in the event of sickness, accident, disability, death, or unemployment; vacation benefits; apprenticeship or other training programs; daycare centers; scholarship funds; prepaid legal services; or holiday and severance benefits. 29 USCA § 1002(1).

EMPLOYEE GIVEBACKS

employee givebacks. See CONCESSION BARGAINING.

EMPLOYEE-LIABILITY EXCLUSION

employee-liability exclusion. See EXCLUSION(3).

EMPLOYEE PRO HAC VICE

employee pro hac vice. See borrowed employee under EMPLOYEE.

EMPLOYEE RETIREMENT INCOME SECURITY ACT

Employee Retirement Income Security Act. A federal statute that regulates private pension plans and employee benefit plans and that established the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation. 29 USCA §§ 1001 et seq. — Abbr. ERISA. [Cases: Pensions 21–23. C.J.S. Insurance § 34; Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 7–10.]

“ERISA was adopted in 1974 in response to highly publicized instances of fraud and mismanagement in employee pension funds, which had resulted in thousands of workers losing retirement benefits accumulated over a lifetime of work. ERISA was intended primarily as an instrument for regulating pensions, as its title suggests, and most of its substantive provisions address protection of retirement benefits. ERISA also, however, applies to employee welfare benefit plans, and thus covers employer provided health insurance, the dominant vehicle for private finance of health care in the United States.” Barry R. Furrow et al., Health Law § 2–9, at 48 (2d ed. 2000).

EMPLOYEE STOCK OPTION

employee stock option. See STOCK OPTION(2).

EMPLOYEE-STOCK-OWNERSHIP PLAN employee-stock-ownership plan. See EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

EMPLOYEE'S WITHHOLDING ALLOWANCE CERTIFICATE

Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate. See W-4 FORM.

EMPLOYER

employer. A person who controls and directs a worker under an express or implied contract of hire and who pays the worker's salary or wages. Cf. PRINCIPAL(1). [Cases: Master and Servant

 1. C.J.S. Apprentices §§ 2, 11; Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 2–3, 6–12.]

equal-opportunity employer. An employer who agrees not to discriminate against any job applicant or employee on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, natural origin, age, or disability. — Abbr. EOE. [Cases: Civil Rights 1101. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 22, 26–27, 30–31, 33–34, 37, 41–42, 67.]

general employer. An employer who transfers an employee to another employer for a limited period. See borrowed employee under EMPLOYEE.

special employer. An employer who has borrowed an employee for a limited period and has temporary responsibility for and control over the employee's work.

statutory employer. Workers' compensation. One who employs a statutory employee. See statutory employee under EMPLOYEE. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 187. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 121, 132.]

EMPLOYER–EMPLOYEE RELATIONSHIP employer–employee relationship. See RELATIONSHIP.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY

employers' liability. See WORKERS' COMPENSATION.

EMPLOYERS'-LIABILITY INSURANCE employers'-liability insurance. See INSURANCE.

EMPLOYMENT

employment. 1. The relationship between master and servant. See MASTER AND SERVANT . 2. The act of employing. 3. The state of being employed. 4. Work for which one has been hired and is being paid by an employer.

casual employment. Work that is occasional, irregular, or for a short time.

employment at will. Employment that is usu. undertaken without a contract and that may be terminated at any time, by either the employer or the employee, without cause. — Also termed at-will employment; hiring at will. [Cases: Master and Servant 20. C.J.S. Apprentices § 10; Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 40, 42–43.]

“Surprisingly, the employment at will doctrine is not an ancient one. On the contrary, it dates only from the period in the mid-nineteenth century that saw the transformation of the employment relation from one of status to one of contract. The relentless logic of the contract approach dictated the rule that the employee had only such rights as were expressly agreed to in his contract of employment — no more and no less. This meant that there was no implication that an indefinite hiring would last for a year or any other presumed period, since if the parties had wanted a particular term they would have expressly agreed to it.” 1 Lex K. Larson, Unjust Dismissal § 1.01, at 1–3 (1992).

“The doctrine of employment at will prescribed that an employee without a contract for a fixed term could be hired or fired for any reason or no reason at all.... [The] rule provided that employees categorized as ‘at will’ had no legal interest in continuing job security. Whereas early American masters had some responsibility to the public as well as to their servants when they turned dependent servants out on the world, under [this] formulation, masters could simply fire employees who had no contracts.” Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law § 1.4, at 9–10 (1994).

gainful employment. Work that a person can pursue and perform for money.

hazardous employment. High-risk work; work involving extra peril. • In the context of workers' compensation, hazardous employment often requires an employer to carry workers'-compensation coverage or its equivalent, regardless of the number of employees.

joint employment. A job in which the essential terms and conditions of the employee's work are controlled by two or more entities, as when a company hires a contractor to perform a task and retains control over the contractor's employees in matters such as hiring, firing, discipline, conditions of employment, promulgation of work rules, assignment of day-to-day job duties, and issuance of operating instructions.

permanent employment. Work that, under a contract, is to continue indefinitely until either party wishes to terminate it for some legitimate reason.

seasonal employment. An occupation possible only during limited parts of the year, such as a summer-camp counselor, a baseball-park vendor, or a shopping-mall Santa.

EMPLOYMENT AGENCY

employment agency. A business that procures, for a fee, employment for others and employees for employers. • Whether the employer or the employee pays the fee depends on the terms of the agreement. See FINDER(1). [Cases: Labor Relations 17. C.J.S. Kidnapping § 25; Labor Relations § 19.]

EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING ADMINISTRATION

Employment and Training Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Labor responsible for developing plans for training dislocated and unemployed workers, including young people and those who are disabled; and for interpreting federal workforce-security laws as they apply to the states.

EMPLOYMENT CONTRACT

employment contract. See CONTRACT.

EMPLOYMENT-PRACTICES-LIABILITY INSURANCE

employment-practices-liability insurance. See INSURANCE.

EMPLOYMENT-RELATED-PRACTICES EXCLUSION employment-related-practices exclusion. See EXCLUSION(3).

EMPLOYMENT STANDARDS ADMINISTRATION

Employment Standards Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Labor responsible for administering various laws and programs pertaining to minimum-wage and overtime standards, registration of farm-labor contractors, wage rates to be paid and the nondiscrimination and affirmative-action programs to be followed by government contractors and subcontractors, workers'-compensation programs for federal and certain private employers, financial integrity and the internal organizational practices of labor unions, and certification of employee protection for federally sponsored transportation programs. • The Administration operates through four divisions that have regional offices or administrators in various cities: the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs, the Wage and Hour Division, the Office of Labor-Management Standards, and the Office of Workers' Compensation Programs. — Abbr. ESA.

EMPORIUM

emporium (em-por-ee-*<<schwa>>*m), n.1. A place for wholesale trade in commodities carried by sea. • The term is sometimes applied to a seaport town, but properly signifies only a particular place in such a town. 2. An important marketplace. 3. A large retail store that sells a wide variety of goods.

EMPRESARIO

empresario (em-pre-sahr-ee-oh), n.[Spanish] 1.Spanish law. A businessperson; one who invests in or manages a business; esp., a land developer. 2.Hist. A person receiving extensive land grants as consideration for bringing people into Mexico (esp. into what would become Texas) and settling them on the land for the purpose of increasing the population, developing the country's resources, and controlling the aboriginal peoples.

EMPTIO

emptio (emp-shee-oh), n.[Latin "purchase"] Roman & civil law. The act of buying; a purchase. — Also spelled emtio. Pl. emptiones.

emptio bonorum (b*<<schwa>>-nor-<<schwa>>*m). [Latin "purchase of goods"] A type of forced assignment for the benefit of creditors, involving a public sale of an insolvent debtor's estate whereby the purchaser succeeded to all the debtor's property, rights, and claims, and became responsible for the debtor's debts and liabilities to an extent fixed before the transfer.

emptio et venditio (et ven-dish-ee-oh). [Latin "purchase and sale"] A contract of sale. • The double name reflects that both the buyer and seller had duties and rights in the transaction. In Roman law, agreement on the thing to be sold and its price were essential. The buyer could enforce the contract by actio empti, and the seller could enforce by actio venditi. — Also termed emptio venditio. See VENDITIO.

emptio rei facta a pluribus ementibus (ree-Ifak-t*<<schwa>>* ay pluur-<<schwa>>-b*<<schwa>>s i-men-t<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>*s). [Latin] Hist. A purchase made by many buyers. La. Civ. Code art. 2450. • An emptio rei facta a pluribus ementibus did not automatically create a partnership among the purchasers.

emptio rei speratae (ree-I sp<<schwa>>-ray-tee). [Latin “purchase of a hoped-for thing”] The purchase of a thing not yet in existence or not yet in the seller's possession; e.g., a future crop. La. Civ. Code art. 2451. • The price of such a purchase typically depended on the actual yield and thus could fluctuate.

emptio spei (spee-I). [Latin “purchase of a hope”] An emptio rei speratae in which the price is fixed, regardless of actual gain. • Even if the future event, such as the casting of a net, produced nothing, the buyer had to pay.

emptio venditio. See emptio et venditio.

EMPTOR

emptor (emp-tor or -t<<schwa>>r), n. [Latin] Civil law. A buyer; purchaser. — Also spelled emtor. Pl. emptores. See caveat emptor under CAVEAT.

EMPTOR FAMILIAE emptor familiae. See FAMILIAE EMPTOR.

EMPTRIX

emptrix (em[p]-tr<<schwa>>ks), n. [Latin] Civil law. A female buyer. — Also spelled emtrix. Pl. emptrices.

EMPTY-CHAIR DEFENSE

empty-chair defense. A trial tactic in a multiparty case whereby one defendant attempts to put all the fault on a defendant who plea-bargained or settled before trial or on a person who was neither charged nor named as a party.

EMPTY-CHAIR DOCTRINE empty-chair doctrine. See ADVERSE-INTEREST RULE.

EMTIO

emtio. See EMPTIO.

EMTOR

emtor. See EMPTOR.

EMTRIX

emtrix. See EMPTRIX.

ENABLE

enable, vb. To give power to do something; to make able.

ENABLEMENT

enablement.Patents. The disclosure in a patent application; specif., the description of the subject matter clear and complete enough to teach a person with ordinary skill in the art how to make and use the invention. • If the artisan would still be unable to work the invention without undue experimentation after reading the description — in light of the information known in the art as of the filing date of the patent application — the patent application will be rejected for lack of enablement. 35 USCA § 112. Cf. NONENABLEMENT. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

ENABLEMENT BY DEPOSIT

enablement by deposit.See DEPOSIT(6).

ENABLEMENT REQUIREMENT

enablement requirement.Patents. The rule that the specification of a patent application must describe the invention so that a person with ordinary skill in the art could make and use the invention without undue experimentation. • A specification that meets this requirement is referred to as enabling. Cf. ENABLING SOURCE. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

ENABLING ACT

enabling act.See enabling statute under STATUTE.

ENABLING CLAUSE

enabling clause.The part of a statute or constitution that gives governmental officials the power and authority to put the law into effect and enforce it. See ENACTING CLAUSE.

ENABLING DISCLOSURE enabling disclosure.See DESCRIPTION(5).

ENABLING POWER

enabling power.See POWER OF APPOINTMENT.

ENABLING SOURCE

enabling source.Patents. A document that defeats the patentability of an invention because the information provided made it possible — before the patent application was filed — for a person skilled in the art to make the invention. Cf. ENABLEMENT REQUIREMENT.

ENABLING STATUTE

enabling statute.1. See STATUTE. 2.Hist. (cap.) The Lease Act (1540), by which tenants in tail, husbands seised in right of their wives, and others were empowered to make leases for their lives or for 21 years. St. 32 Hen. 8, ch. 28.

ENTICE

entice,vb. To lure or induce; esp., to wrongfully solicit (a person) to do something.

ENTICEMENT

enticement,n.1. The act or an instance of wrongfully soliciting or luring a person to do something. 2.Hist. The tort of inducing a man's wife to leave him or to remain away from him against his will. [Cases: Seduction 1–26. C.J.S. Torts §§ 88–89.]

ENTICEMENT OF A CHILD

enticement of a child.Criminal law. The act or offense of inviting, persuading, or attempting to persuade a child to enter a vehicle, building, room, or secluded place with the intent of committing an unlawful sexual act against the child. — Often shortened to enticement. [Cases: Infants 13. C.J.S. Infants §§ 5, 92–93, 95–98.]

ENTICEMENT OF A PARENT

enticement of a parent.Torts. Rare. The tortious interference with a child's rights and interests in maintaining the parent–child relationship, usu. caused by a third person who induces a parent to abandon the child. • Actions based on enticement, where they are recognized, are rarely successful because many states do not recognize a child's legal right to a parent's consortium or affection.

ENTIRE entire,adj.1. Whole; complete in all its parts. 2. Not divisible into parts.

ENTIRE-AGREEMENT CLAUSE entire-agreement clause.1.INTEGRATION CLAUSE. 2. A provision in an insurance contract stating that the entire agreement between the insured and insurer is contained in the contract, often including the application (if attached), declarations, insuring agreement, exclusions, conditions, and endorsements. — Also termed entire-contract clause. [Cases: Insurance 1838, 1856. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 373–375.]

entirety, tenancy by the. See estate by entirety under ESTATE(1).

ENTIRETY CLAUSE

entirety clause. Oil & gas. A mineral-lease or deed provision specifying that royalties must be apportioned if the property is subdivided after the lease is granted. • For the lessee, the clause makes it clear that the lessee's duties will increase if the lessor transfers a part of the leased premises. For the lessor, the clause avoids the nonapportionment rule.

ENTIRE USE

entire use. See USE(4).

ENTITLED

entitle, vb. 1. To grant a legal right to or qualify for. 2. Eccles. law. To ordain as a minister. — Formerly also spelled intitle.

ENTITLEMENT

entitlement. An absolute right to a (usu. monetary) benefit, such as social security, granted immediately upon meeting a legal requirement. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 4.10. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 11, 18.]

ENTITY

entity. An organization (such as a business or a governmental unit) that has a legal identity apart from its members.

corporate entity. A corporation's status as an organization existing independently of its shareholders. • As a separate entity, a corporation can, in its own name, sue and be sued, lend and borrow money, and buy, sell, lease, and mortgage property. [Cases: Corporations 1.3. C.J.S. Corporations § 8.]

public entity. A governmental entity, such as a state government or one of its political subdivisions.

ENTITY ASSUMPTION

entity assumption. The presumption that a business is a unit separate from its owners and from other firms. [Cases: Corporations 1.3. C.J.S. Corporations § 8.]

ENTITY THEORY OF PARTNERSHIP

The theory that a partnership is an entity with a legal existence apart from the partners who make it up. • Under the Uniform Partnership Act, “[a] partnership is an entity distinct from its partners.” UPA § 201 (1994). Cf. AGGREGATE THEORY OF PARTNERSHIP. [Cases: Partnership 63. C.J.S. Partnership § 68.]

entrapment, n. 1. A law-enforcement officer's or government agent's inducement of a person to commit a crime, by means of fraud or undue persuasion, in an attempt to later bring a criminal prosecution against that person. [Cases: Criminal Law 37. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 58.] 2. The affirmative defense of having been so induced. • To establish entrapment (in most states), the defendant must show that he or she would not have committed the crime but for the fraud or undue persuasion. — entrap, vb.

derivative entrapment. Entrapment in which the government uses a private person, acting either as an agent of the government or as an unwitting participant, to induce the subject of the entrapment to commit a crime. [Cases: Criminal Law 37(5). C.J.S. Criminal Law § 61.]

objective entrapment. Entrapment as judged by focusing on egregious law-enforcement conduct, not on the defendant's predisposition.

sentencing entrapment. Entrapment of a defendant who is predisposed to commit a lesser offense but who is unlawfully induced to commit a more serious offense that carries a more severe sentence. — Also termed sentence-factor manipulation.

ENTRYMAN

entryman (en-tree-m<<schwa>>n), n. Archaic. A person who enters public land and stakes a claim with the intention of settling.

ENTRY OF JUDGMENT

entry of judgment. The ministerial recording of a court's final decision, usu. by noting it in a judgment book or civil docket. Cf. RENDITION OF JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2621; Judgment 270–284. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 90, 93, 112–115, 117–132, 135.]

ENTRY ON THE ROLL

entry on the roll. Hist. 1. A clerk's notation on a parchment roll of the proceedings and issues in a particular case. • Before parties began submitting written pleadings, they would appear (in person or through counsel) in open court and state their respective contentions orally until they settled on the issue or precise point in dispute. During the progress of these oral statements, an appointed officer of the court would make minutes of the various proceedings on a parchment roll that then became the official record of the suit. Even after the practice of oral pleadings had fallen into disuse, proceedings continued to be entered “on the roll.” This practice was abolished early in the 19th century. 2. A future interest created in a transferor who conveys an estate on condition subsequent.

ENUMERATE

enumerate (i-n[y]oo-m<<schwa>>-rayt), vb. To count off or designate one by one; to list. — enumeration, n.

EN VENTRE SA MERE

en ventre sa mere (oni voin-tr<<schwa>> sa mair). [Law French “in utero”] (Of a fetus) in the mother's womb <child en ventre sa mere>. • This phrase refers to an unborn child, usu. in the context of a discussion of that child's rights. If the child is en ventre sa mere at the time of a decedent's death and is subsequently born alive, the child is treated as having been in existence at the time of the decedent's death for purposes of inheritance. — Also spelled in ventre sa mere. See VENTER.

“An infant in ventre sa mere, or in the mother's womb, is supposed in law to be born for many purposes.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 126 (1765).

EN VIE

en vie (onvee). [Law French “in life”] Alive.

ENVIRONMENTAL AUDIT

environmental audit. See AUDIT.

ENVIRONMENTAL CRIME

environmental crime. A statutory offense involving harm to the environment, such as a violation of the criminal provisions in the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1970, the Federal Water Pollution Control Act of 1972 (commonly called the Clean Water Act), or the Endangered Species Act of 1973. • Although the most significant environmental-crime statutes were passed in the 1970s, they date back to the late 19th century, with statutes such as the Pure Food and Drug Act of 1896 and the assorted statutes that ultimately became the Rivers and Harbors Act of 1899. — Also termed crime against the environment.

ENVIRONMENTAL CRIMINOLOGY environmental criminology. See CRIMINOLOGY.

ENVIRONMENTAL EFFECT

environmental effect.Environmental law. A natural or artificial disturbance of the physical, chemical, or biological components that make up the environment.

ENVIRONMENTAL-IMPACT STATEMENT environmental-impact statement.Environmental law. A document that the National Environmental Policy Act (42 USCA § 4332(2)(c)) requires a federal agency to produce for a major project or legislative proposal so that better decisions can be made about the positive and negative environmental effects of an undertaking. — Abbr. EIS. — Also termed environmental-impact report (EIR). [Cases: Environmental Law 571–615.]

ENVIRONMENTAL LAW

environmental law.The field of law dealing with the maintenance and protection of the environment, including preventive measures such as the requirements of environmental-impact statements, as well as measures to assign liability and provide cleanup for incidents that harm the environment. • Because most environmental litigation involves disputes with governmental agencies, environmental law is heavily intertwined with administrative law. [Cases: Environmental Law 1.]

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY

Environmental Protection Agency.An independent federal agency in the executive branch responsible for setting pollution-control standards in the areas of air, water, solid waste, pesticides, radiation, and toxic materials; enforcing laws enacted to protect the environment; and coordinating the antipollution efforts of state and local governments. • The commission was created by Reorganization Plan No. 3 of 1970. — Abbr. EPA. [Cases: Environmental Law 15.]

EQUAL ACCESS ACT OF 1984

Equal Access Act of 1984.A federal law that prohibits school districts receiving federal funds and allowing extracurricular activities to be held in its facilities from denying secondary-school students the right to meet for religious and other purposes in public-school facilities. 20 USCA § 4071. • The constitutionality of the Act was upheld in Board of Education of Westside Community Schools v. Mergens, 496 U.S. 226, 110 S.Ct. 2356 (1990).

EQUAL-ACCESS RULE

equal-access rule.Criminal law. The doctrine that contraband found on a defendant's premises will not support a conviction if other persons have the same access to the premises as the defendant. • To invoke this defense successfully, the defendant must show that other persons did in fact have equal access to the premises; speculative evidence that trespassers might have come onto the premises will not bar a conviction. [Cases: Controlled Substances 30.]

EQUAL ACCESS TO JUSTICE ACT

Equal Access to Justice Act. A 1980 federal statute that allows a prevailing party in certain actions against the government to recover attorney's fees and expert-witness fees. Pub. L. No. 96-481, title II, 94 Stat. 2325 (codified as amended in scattered sections of 5, 15, and 28 USCA). — Abbr. EAJA. [Cases: United States 147. C.J.S. United States §§ 193, 268–269.]

EQUAL AND UNIFORM TAXATION

equal and uniform taxation. See TAXATION.

EQUAL CREDIT OPPORTUNITY ACT

Equal Credit Opportunity Act. A federal statute that prohibits creditors from discriminating against credit applicants on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, age, sex, or marital status with respect to any aspect of a credit transaction. 15 USCA §§ 1691 et seq. — Abbr. ECOA. [Cases: Consumer Credit 31. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 345–347.]

EQUAL DEGREE

equal degree. See DEGREE.

EQUAL-DIGNITIES RULE

equal-dignities rule. Agency. The doctrine that an agent can perform all acts requiring a writing signed by the principal only if the agent's authority is set forth in a writing. • This rule is an adjunct to the statute of frauds and applies when one or more of the signatories to a contract acted through an agent. [Cases: Principal and Agent 12. C.J.S. Agency § 43.]

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY COMMISSION

Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. An independent federal commission that investigates claims of employment discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or age and enforces antidiscrimination statutes through lawsuits. • It was created by Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The EEOC encourages mediation and other nonlitigious means of resolving employment disputes. A claimant must file a charge of discrimination with the EEOC before pursuing a claim under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act and certain other employment-related statutes. — Abbr. EEOC. [Cases: Civil Rights 1503. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 159, 165.]

EQUAL-FOOTING DOCTRINE

equal-footing doctrine. The principle that a state admitted to the Union after 1789 enters with the same rights, sovereignty, and jurisdiction within its borders as did the original 13 states.

EQUALITY

equality. The quality or state of being equal; esp., likeness in power or political status. See EQUAL PROTECTION.

“We need not repeat the burning irony of Anatole France: ‘The law in its majesty draws no distinction but forbids rich and poor alike from begging in the streets or from sleeping in the public parks.’ Equality is meaningless under unequal conditions.” Morris R. Cohen, Reason and Law 101 (1961).

political equality. The sharing of governmental decisions in such a way that, in the setting of governmental policies, the preference of each citizen is assigned an equal value.

EQUALITY BEFORE THE LAW

equality before the law. The status or condition of being treated fairly according to regularly established norms of justice; esp., in British constitutional law, the notion that all persons are subject to the ordinary law of the land administered by the ordinary law courts, that officials and others are not exempt from the general duty of obedience to the law, that discretionary governmental powers must not be abused, and that the task of superintending the operation of law rests with an impartial, independent judiciary.

“A number of distinct meanings are normally given to the provision that there should be equality before the law. One meaning is that equality before the law only connotes the equal subjection of all to a common system of law, whatever its content.... A second theory asserts that equality before the law is basically a procedural concept, pertaining to the application and enforcement of laws and the operation of the legal system.... A third meaning normally borne by declarations that all are equal before the law, perhaps no more than a variant of the second, is that State and individual before the law should be equal.” Polyvios G. Polyviou, The Equal Protection of the Laws 1–2 (1980).

EQUALITY OF STATES

equality of states. Int'l law. The doctrine that all fully independent nations are equal under international law. • This doctrine does not, of course, mean that all nations are equal in power or influence, but merely that, as nations, they all have the same legal rights.

EQUALIZATION

equalization, n. 1. The raising or lowering of assessed values to achieve conformity. 2. Tax. The adjustment of an assessment or tax to create a rate uniform with another. — Also termed equalization of taxes; fair and proper legal assessment. [Cases: Taxation 446.5–450. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 621–641, 643, 724–725.]

EQUALIZATION BOARD

equalization board. A local governmental agency responsible for adjusting the tax rates in different districts to ensure an equitable distribution of the tax burden. — Also termed board of equalization. [Cases: Taxation 446.5–450. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 621–641, 643, 724–725.]

EQUALIZATION OF TAXES

equalization of taxes. See EQUALIZATION(2).

EQUALIZE

equalize,vb. To make equal; to cause to correspond or be the same in amount or degree.

EQUALLY DIVIDED

equally divided.1. (Of property) apportioned per capita — not per stirpes — among heirs on the testator's death. • A provision in a will calling for property to be divided “share and share alike” has the same effect. [Cases: Wills 530. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1015–1016.] 2. (Of a court, legislature, or other group) having the same number of votes on each side of an issue or dispute.

EQUAL-MANAGEMENT RULE

equal-management rule.The doctrine that each spouse alone may manage community property unless the law provides otherwise. Cf. HEAD-AND-MASTER RULE.

EQUAL-OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER equal-opportunity employer.See EMPLOYER.

EQUAL PAY ACT

Equal Pay Act.A federal law mandating that all who perform substantially the same work must be paid equally. 29 USCA § 206. [Cases: Labor Relations 1333. C.J.S. Labor Relations § 1184.]

EQUAL PROTECTION

equal protection.The 14th Amendment guarantee that the government must treat a person or class of persons the same as it treats other persons or classes in like circumstances. • In today's constitutional jurisprudence, equal protection means that legislation that discriminates must have a rational basis for doing so. And if the legislation affects a fundamental right (such as the right to vote) or involves a suspect classification (such as race), it is unconstitutional unless it can withstand strict scrutiny. — Also termed equal protection of the laws; equal protection under the law. See RATIONAL-BASIS TEST T; STRICT SCRUTINY. [Cases: Constitutional Law 209–250.5.C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 700–773, 775–912, 916–917, 919–944; Zoning and Land Planning § 23.]

“Equal protection does not require that all persons be dealt with identically, but it does require that a distinction made have some relevance to the purpose for which the classification is made.” Baxstrom v. Herold, 383 U.S. 107, 111, 86 S.Ct. 760, 763 (1966).

“As in all equal protection cases, ... the crucial question is whether there is an appropriate governmental interest suitably furthered by the differential treatment.” Police Dep't v. Mosley, 408 U.S. 92, 95, 92 S.Ct. 2286, 2290 (1972).

“[T]he equal protection principle is exclusively associated with written Constitutions and embodies guarantees of equal treatment normally applied not only to the procedural enforcement of laws but also to the substantive content of their provisions. In other words, the equal protection of the laws is invariably treated as a substantive constitutional principle which demands that laws will only be legitimate if they can be described as just and equal.” Polyvios G. Polyviou, The Equal Protection of the Laws 4 (1980).

EQUAL PROTECTION CLAUSE

Equal Protection Clause.The 14th Amendment provision requiring the states to give similarly situated persons or classes similar treatment under the law. Cf. DUE PROCESS CLAUSE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 209–250.5.C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 700–773, 775–912, 916–917, 919–944; Zoning and Land Planning § 23.]

EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS equal protection of the laws.See EQUAL PROTECTION.

EQUAL PROTECTION UNDER THE LAW equal protection under the law.See EQUAL PROTECTION.

EQUAL RIGHTS AMENDMENT

Equal Rights Amendment.A failed constitutional amendment that, had it been ratified, would have constitutionally prohibited sex-based discrimination. • Congress passed the Amendment in 1972, but it failed in 1982, having been ratified by only 35 of the required 38 states. — Abbr. ERA.

EQUAL-SHARES CLAUSE

equal-shares clause.Insurance. A clause requiring an insurer to pay its proportionate share of a claimed loss.

EQUAL TIME ACT

Equal Time Act.A federal law requiring that a broadcasting-facility licensee who permits a legally qualified candidate for public office to use the facility for broadcasting must afford an equal opportunity to all other candidates for the office. 47 USCA § 315. [Cases: Telecommunications 435. C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television §§ 178–179, 183–187.]

EQUINOX

equinox (ee-kw<<schwa>>-noks orek-w<<schwa>>-noks), n. One of the two periods of the year when the time from the sun's rising to its setting is equal to that from its setting to its rising. • The vernal equinox is about March 21, and the autumnal equinox is about September 22.

EQUIP

equip,vb. To furnish for service or against a need or exigency; to fit out; to supply with whatever is necessary for efficient action.

EQUIPMENT

equipment,n. The articles or implements used for a specific purpose or activity (esp. a business operation). • Under the UCC, equipment includes goods if (1) the goods are used in or bought for a business enterprise (including farming or a profession) or by a debtor that is a nonprofit organization or a governmental subdivision or agency, and (2) the goods are not inventory, farm products, or consumer goods. UCC § 9-102(a)(33). [Cases: Secured Transactions 16. C.J.S. Secured Transactions § 15.]

EQUIPMENT TRUST

equipment trust.A financing device commonly used by railroads in which a trustee and the railroad together buy equipment from a manufacturer, with the trustee providing most of the purchase price, and the trustee then leases the equipment to the railroad, which pays a rental fee comprising interest, amortization for serial retirement, and the trustee's fee.

EQUIPMENT TRUST BOND

equipment trust bond.See BOND(3).

EQUIPMENT TRUST CERTIFICATE

equipment trust certificate.A security, usu. issued by a railroad, to pay for new equipment. • Title to the equipment is held by a trustee until the note has been paid off. — Also termed car trust certificate; trust certificate.

EQUITABLE DISSEISIN equitable disseisin.See DISSEISIN.

EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION

equitable distribution.Family law. The division of marital property by a court in a divorce proceeding, under statutory guidelines that provide for a fair, but not necessarily equal, allocation of the property between the spouses. • With equitable distribution, when a marriage ends in divorce, property acquired during the marriage is divided equitably between the spouses regardless of who holds title to the property. The courts consider many factors in awarding property, including a spouse's monetary contributions, nonmonetary assistance to a spouse's career or earning potential, the efforts of each spouse during the marriage, and the length of the marriage. The court may take into account the relative earning capacity of the spouses and the fault of either spouse. Equitable distribution is applied in 47 states (i.e., all the states except California, Louisiana, and New Mexico, which are “equal division” community-property states). — Also termed equitable division; assignment of property. Cf. TITLE DIVISION; COMMUNITY PROPERTY. [Cases: Divorce 248. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 508–511, 580–582.]

EQUITABLE LIEN

equitable lien. See LIEN.

EQUITABLE LIFE ESTATE

equitable life estate. An interest in real or personal property that lasts for the life of the holder of the estate and that is equitable as opposed to legal in its creation. • An example is a life estate held by a trust beneficiary. [Cases: Life Estates 21. C.J.S. Estates §§ 138–147, 150.]

EQUITABLE LIFE TENANT

equitable life tenant. See LIFE TENANT.

EQUITABLE MORTGAGE

equitable mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

EQUITABLE OWNER

equitable owner. See beneficial owner (1) under OWNER.

EQUITABLE OWNERSHIP

equitable ownership. See beneficial ownership (1) under OWNERSHIP.

EQUITABLE PARENT

equitable parent. See PARENT.

EQUITABLE-PARENT DOCTRINE

equitable-parent doctrine. Family law. The principle that a spouse who is not the biological parent of a child born or conceived during the marriage may, in a divorce action, be considered the child's natural father or mother if (1) the other spouse and the child both acknowledge a parent–child relationship, esp. when that other spouse has cooperated in the development of this relationship before the divorce action, (2) the nonbiologically related spouse wants parental rights, and (3) he or she is willing to take on the responsibility of paying support. • The doctrine sometimes applies to nonspousal partners as well. Very few jurisdictions apply the doctrine. See Carolee Kvorik Lezuch, Michigan's Doctrine of Equitable Parenthood, 45 Wayne L. Rev. 1529 (1999). — Also termed equitable-parenthood doctrine.

EQUITABLE RECOUPMENT

equitable recoupment. 1. Tax. A doctrine allowing a taxpayer to offset previously overpaid taxes against current taxes due, even though the taxpayer is time-barred from claiming a refund on the previous taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4829.10. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 728, 738.]

2. Tax. A doctrine allowing the government to offset taxes previously uncollected from a taxpayer against the taxpayer's current claim for a refund, even though the government is time-barred from collecting the previous taxes. • In both senses, this type of recoupment can be asserted only if the statute of limitations has created an inequitable result. See RECOUPMENT(2). [Cases: Internal Revenue 4845. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 738.] 3. A principle that diminishes a party's right to recover a debt to the extent that the party holds money or property of the debtor to which the party has no right. • This doctrine is ordinarily a defensive remedy going only to mitigation of damages. The doctrine is sometimes applied so that a claim for a tax refund that is barred by limitations may nonetheless be recouped against a tax claim of the government. — Also termed equitable-recoupment doctrine. See SETOFF(2); RECOUPMENT(3). [Cases: Set-off and Counterclaim 6. C.J.S. Set-off and Counterclaim §§ 2, 11.]

EQUITABLE RELIEF

EQUITABLE REVERSION

equitable reversion. See REVERSION.

EQUITABLE RIGHT

EQUITABLE RIGHT TO SETOFF equitable right to setoff. The right to cancel cross-demands, usu. used by a bank to take from a customer's deposit accounts the amount equal to the customer's debts that have matured and that are owed to that bank. See SETOFF. [Cases: Banks and Banking 134; Set-off and Counterclaim 8. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 301–305, 312–313, 316; Set-off and Counterclaim §§ 3, 6.]

EQUITABLE SEISIN

equitable seisin. See SEISIN.

EQUITABLE SERVITUDE

equitable servitude. See restrictive covenant under COVENANT(4).

EQUITABLE SUBROGATION

equitable subrogation. See legal subrogation under SUBROGATION.

EQUITABLE TITLE

equitable title. See TITLE(2).

EQUITABLE TOLLING

equitable tolling. 1. The doctrine that the statute of limitations will not bar a claim if the plaintiff, despite diligent efforts, did not discover the injury until after the limitations period had expired. • Equitable tolling does not require misconduct by the defendant. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 104.5. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 85–86, 121.] 2. The doctrine that if a plaintiff files a suit first in one court and then refiles in another, the statute of limitations does not run while the litigation is pending in the first court if various requirements are met. • Among those requirements are (1) timely notice to the defendant; (2) no prejudice to the defendant; and (3) reasonable and good-faith conduct on the part of the plaintiff.

EQUITABLE WASTE

equitable waste. See WASTE(1).

EQUITY

equity, n. 1. Fairness; impartiality; evenhanded dealing <the company's policies require managers to use equity in dealing with subordinate employees>. 2. The body of principles constituting what is fair and right; natural law <the concept of “inalienable rights” reflects the influence of equity on the Declaration of Independence>.

“In its popular sense it [equity] is practically equivalent to natural justice. But it would be a mistake to suppose that equity, as administered by the Courts, embraces a jurisdiction as wide and extensive as that which would result from carrying into operation all the principles of natural justice. There are many matters of natural justice wholly unprovided for, from the difficulty of framing any general rules to meet them, and from the doubtful wisdom of a policy of attempting to give a legal sanction to duties of imperfect obligation, such as charity, gratitude and kindness. A large proportion of natural justice in its widest sense is thus not judicially enforced, but is left to the conscience of each individual.” R.E. Megarry, Snell's Principles of Equity 1 (23d ed. 1947).

3. The recourse to principles of justice to correct or supplement the law as applied to particular circumstances <the judge decided the case by equity because the statute did not fully address the issue>. — Also termed natural equity. [Cases: Equity 1. C.J.S. Equity §§ 2–5, 7–8, 10.] 4. The system of law or body of principles originating in the English Court of Chancery and superseding the common and statute law (together called “law” in the narrower sense) when the two conflict <in appealing to the equity of the court, she was appealing to the “king's conscience”>; CHANCERY(2). “Equity is that system of justice which was developed in and administered by the High Court of Chancery in England in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction. This definition is rather suggestive than precise; and invites inquiry rather than answers it. This must necessarily be so. Equity, in its technical and scientific legal sense, means neither natural justice nor even all that portion of natural justice which is susceptible of being judicially enforced. It has, when employed in the language of English law, a precise, definite and limited signification, and is used to denote a system of justice which was administered in a particular court — the nature and extent of which system cannot be defined in a single sentence, but can be understood and explained only by studying the history of that court, and the principles upon which it acts. In order to begin to understand what equity is, it is necessary to understand what the English High Court of Chancery was, and how it came to exercise what is known as its extraordinary jurisdiction. Every true definition of equity must, therefore, be, to a greater or less extent, a history.” George T. Bispham, The Principles of Equity 1–2 (Joseph D. McCoy ed., 11th ed. 1931).

“In its technical sense, equity may ... be defined as a portion of natural justice which, although of a nature more suitable for judicial enforcement, was for historical reasons not enforced by the Common Law Courts, an omission which was supplied by the Court of Chancery. In short, the whole distinction between equity and law is not so much a matter of substance or principle as of form and history.” R.E. Megarry, Snell's Principles of Equity 2 (23d ed. 1947).

“The term ‘equity’ is an illustration of Mr. Towkington's proposition that some words have a legal meaning very unlike their ordinary one. In ordinary language ‘equity’ means natural justice; but the beginner must get that idea out of his head when dealing with the system that the lawyers call equity. Originally, indeed, this system was inspired by ideas of natural justice, and that is why it acquired its name; but nowadays equity is no more (and no less) natural justice than the common law, and it is in fact nothing else than a particular branch of the law of England. Equity, therefore, is law. The student should not allow himself to be confused by the lawyer's habit of contrasting ‘law’ and ‘equity,’ for in this context ‘law’ is simply an abbreviation for the common law. Equity is law in the sense that it is part of the law of England; it is not law only in the sense that it is not part of the common law.” Glanville Williams, Learning the Law 25–26 (11th ed. 1982).

5. A right, interest, or remedy recognizable by a court of equity <there was no formal contract formation, so they sued for breach in equity>. [Cases: Equity 1. C.J.S. Equity §§ 2–5, 7–8, 10.]

contravening equity (kon-tr<<schwa>>-veen-ing). A right or interest that is inconsistent with or contrary to a right sought to be enforced.

countervailing equity (kown-t<<schwa>>r-vayl-ing). A contrary and balancing equity, equally deserving of consideration.

latent equity (lay-t<<schwa>>nt). An equitable claim or right known only by the parties for and against whom it exists, or that has been concealed from one who is interested in the subject matter. — Also termed secret equity.

perfect equity. An equitable title or right that, to be a legal title, lacks only the formal conveyance or other investiture that would make it cognizable at law; esp., the equity of a real-estate purchaser who has paid the full amount due but has not yet received a deed.

secret equity. See latent equity.

6. The right to decide matters in equity; equity jurisdiction <the court decided that the wrong was egregious enough to ignore the statute of limitations and decide the case in equity>. [Cases: Equity 1. C.J.S. Equity §§ 2–5, 7–8, 10.] 7. The amount by which the value of or an interest in property exceeds secured claims or liens; the difference between the value of the property and all encumbrances upon it <thanks to the real-estate boom, the mortgaged house still had high equity>. — Also termed cushion. 8. An ownership interest in property, esp. in a business <the founders gave her equity in the business in return for all her help>. See OWNERS' EQUITY; BOOK EQUITY; MARKET EQUITY. 9. A share in a publicly traded company <he did not want to cash in his equity>.

EQUITY CONTRA LEGEM

equity contra legem (kon-tr<<schwa>> lee-j<<schwa>>m). Int'l law. The use of equity in derogation of the law, where, under the circumstances of the case, an exception to the law is needed to achieve an equitable and just result. — Sometimes shortened to contra legem. See EX AEQUO ET BONO. Cf. EQUITY INTRA LEGEM .

EQUITY FINANCING

equity financing. See FINANCING.

EQUITY INSOLVENCY

equity insolvency. See INSOLVENCY.

EQUITY INTRA LEGEM

equity intra legem (in-tr<<schwa>> lee-j<<schwa>>m). A court's power to interpret and apply the law to achieve the most equitable result. — Sometimes shortened to intra legem. — Also written equity infra legem. Cf. EQUITY CONTRA LEGEM.

EQUITY JURISDICTION

equity jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

EQUITY JURISPRUDENCE

equity jurisprudence. See JURISPRUDENCE.

EQUITY KICKER

equity kicker. See EQUITY PARTICIPATION.

EQUITY LOAN

equity loan. See home equity loan under LOAN.

EQUITY OF EXONERATION

equity of exoneration (eg-zon-<<schwa>>-ray-sh<<schwa>>n). The right of a person who is secondarily liable on a debt to make the primarily liable party discharge the debt or reimburse any payment that the secondarily liable person has made. • One example is the right of a surety to call on the principal for reimbursement after the surety has paid the debt. Unlike contribution, which exists when the parties are equally liable, the equity of exoneration exists when parties are successively liable. — Also termed right of exoneration. See EXONERATION.

EQUITY OF PARTNERS

equity of partners. The right of each partner to have the firm's property applied to the firm's debts. [Cases: Partnership 179. C.J.S. Partnership § 176.]

EQUITY OF REDEMPTION

equity of redemption. Real estate. The right of a mortgagor in default to recover property before a foreclosure sale by paying the principal, interest, and other costs that are due. • A defaulting mortgagor with an equity of redemption has the right, until the foreclosure sale, to reimburse the mortgagee and cure the default. In many jurisdictions, the mortgagor also has a statutory right to redeem within six months after the foreclosure sale, and the mortgagor becomes entitled to any surplus from the sale proceeds above the amount of the outstanding mortgage. — Also termed right of redemption. See CLOG ON THE EQUITY OF REDEMPTION; REDEMPTION(4); STATUTORY RIGHT OF REDEMPTION . [Cases: Mortgages 591, 600. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 57, 991, 993, 995, 998–999, 1005, 1040–1043, 1045–1046, 1065, 1068.]

“A mortgage is technically a conveyance of title to property as security for a debt. The law courts, with typical technicality, early adopted the rule that if the debt was not paid on the very day it was due, the debtor lost his land. The equity courts, however, with more liberality, and with more of a recognition of the real purpose of the transaction, recognized the fact that the securing of the debt, rather than the act of conveyance of title was the principal thing giving character to the transaction. Accordingly they alleviated the severity of the legal rule by, in effect, giving the land back to the debtor if he would pay the debt, even though it had not been paid on time. This equitable right to redeem, even after default in paying the debt when it was due, was called the ‘equity of redemption.’ ” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 309 (2d ed. 1952).

EQUITY OF SUBROGATION

equity of subrogation. The right of a person who is secondarily liable on a debt, and who pays the debt, to personally enforce any right that the original creditor could have pursued against the debtor, including the right to foreclose on any security held by the creditor and any right that the creditor may have to contribution from others who are liable for the debt. — Also termed right of subrogation; (in Scots law) right of relief. See SUBROGATION. [Cases: Subrogation 1. C.J.S. Subrogation §§ 2–15, 19, 91.]

EQUITY-OF-THE-STATUTE RULE

equity-of-the-statute rule. In statutory construction, the principle that a statute should be interpreted according to the legislators' purpose and intent, even if this interpretation goes beyond the literal meaning of the text. • Under this little-used rule, for example, if a statute defines jury-tampering to include a party's "giving a juror food or drink," the giving of cigars to a juror would also fall within that definition. Cf. GOLDEN RULE; MISCHIEF RULE; PLAIN-MEANING RULE. [Cases: Statutes 189. C.J.S. Statutes § 324.]

EQUITY PARTICIPATION

equity participation. The inclusion of a lender in the equity ownership of a project as a condition of the lender's granting a loan. — Also termed equity kicker.

EQUITY PLEADING

equity pleading. See PLEADING(2).

EQUITY PRAETER LEGEM

EQUITY TO A SETTLEMENT

equity to a settlement. A wife's equitable right, arising when her husband sues in equity for the reduction of her equitable estate to his own possession, to have all or part of that estate settled upon herself and her children. — Also termed wife's equity; wife's settlement. [Cases: Husband and Wife 12.]

EQUIVALENCE OF ADVANTAGES

equivalence of advantages. See RECIPROCITY(2).

EQUIVALENT

equivalent, adj. 1. Equal in value, force, amount, effect, or significance. 2. Corresponding in effect or function; nearly equal; virtually identical.

equivalent, n. Patents. An element that (1) existed before another element; (2) can perform the same function as the other element; and (3) is recognizable as a substitute for the other element. • For instance, mechanical devices are equivalents when one skilled in the art would have recognized that each device would produce the same result. If the equivalent is known at the time an invention is conceived, the invention's patentability may be questioned. See ANALOG. [Cases: Patents 237. C.J.S. Patents §§ 425–426.]

“If a given substitute is an equivalent under certain circumstances or in certain settings, and is not an equivalent under certain other circumstances or in certain other settings, then the substitution is patentable, provided the claim contains express limitations to the circumstances or settings in which the substitution is nonequivalent.” Roger Sherman Hoar, Patent Tactics and the Law 43 (3d ed. 1950).

EQUIVALENTS DOCTRINE

equivalents doctrine. See DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS.

EQUIVOCAL

2. A mistake of law or of fact in a tribunal's judgment, opinion, or order. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2653; Judgment 355–356. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 314–315.]

assigned error.An alleged error that occurred in a lower court and is pointed out in an appellate brief as grounds for reversal <appellants' two assigned errors appeared to the court to be harmless errors>. See ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR.

Caldwell error.The constitutionally impermissible error of resting a death sentence on a determination made by a sentencer who has been led to believe that the responsibility for determining the appropriateness of the defendant's death sentence lies elsewhere. Caldwell v. Mississippi, 472 U.S. 320, 105 S.Ct. 2633 (1985). • The error most often occurs when the prosecutor or the judge tells the jury that the death sentence, if inappropriate, may be overturned on appeal.

clear error.A trial judge's decision or action that appears to a reviewing court to have been unquestionably erroneous. • Even though a clear error occurred, it may not warrant reversal. [Cases: Appeal and Error 999(1), 1008.1(5). C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 784, 805, 810.]

clerical error.An error resulting from a minor mistake or inadvertence, esp. in writing or copying something on the record, and not from judicial reasoning or determination. • Among the boundless examples of clerical errors are omitting an appendix from a document; typing an incorrect number; mistranscribing a word; and failing to log a call. A court can correct a clerical error at any time, even after judgment has been entered. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(a); Fed. R. Crim. P. 36. — Also termed scrivener's error; vitium clerici. See VITIUM SCRIPTORIS. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2653; Judgment 306. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 280–281.]

cross-error. An error brought by the party responding to a writ of error.

cumulative error.The prejudicial effect of two or more trial errors that may have been harmless individually. • The cumulative effect of multiple harmless errors may amount to reversible error. See CUMULATIVE-ERROR ANALYSIS.

error apparent of record.See plain error.

fatal error.See reversible error.

fundamental error.See plain error.

harmful error.See reversible error.

harmless error.An error that does not affect a party's substantive rights or the case's outcome. • A harmless error is not grounds for reversal. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 61; Fed. R. Crim. P. 52. — Also termed technical error; error in vacuo. Cf. substantial error. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 764; Appeal and Error 1025–1074. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 825–830; Juries §§ 421–422; Justices of the Peace § 240; Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 225.]

invited error.An error that a party cannot complain of on appeal because the party, through conduct, encouraged or prompted the trial court to make the erroneous ruling. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 742; Appeal and Error 882; Criminal Law 1137. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 745–747; Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 214.]

manifest constitutional error.An error by the trial court that has an identifiably negative impact on the trial to such a degree that the constitutional rights of a party are compromised. • A manifest constitutional error can be reviewed by a court of appeals even if the appellant did not object at trial.

manifest error.An error that is plain and indisputable, and that amounts to a complete disregard of the controlling law or the credible evidence in the record. [Cases: Appeal and Error 999(1), 1008.1(7). C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 784, 805, 810.]

obvious error. See OBVIOUS ERROR.

plain error. An error that is so obvious and prejudicial that an appellate court should address it despite the parties' failure to raise a proper objection. • A plain error is often said to be so obvious and substantial that failure to correct it would infringe a party's due-process rights and damage the integrity of the judicial process. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(d). — Also termed fundamental error; error apparent of record. [Cases: Appeal and Error 181; Criminal Law 1030. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 202, 207; Criminal Law § 1682.]

reversible error. An error that affects a party's substantive rights or the case's outcome, and thus is grounds for reversal if the party properly objected. — Also termed harmful error; prejudicial error; fatal error. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 764; Appeal and Error 1025–1074; Criminal Law 1162. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 825–830; Criminal Law §§ 1713–1715; Juries §§ 421–422; Justices of the Peace § 240; Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 225.]

scrivener's error. See clerical error.

substantial error. An error that affects a party's substantive rights or the outcome of the case. • A substantial error may require reversal on appeal. Cf. harmless error.

technical error. See harmless error.

3. An appeal .

ERROR CALCULI

error calculi (er-or kal-kyuu-II). [Latin] Roman & civil law. An error in calculation.

“If it occurs in a judgment and is fully evident, no appeal is necessary. The judge himself may correct it. In public administration, error calculi is without any legal effect. A reexamination and correction (retractatio) is admissible even after ten or twenty years.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 456 (1953).

ERROR E PERSONA

error de persona (dee p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>). [Latin “error of the person”] A mistake about a person's identity. Cf. ERROR NOMINIS.

ERRORE ACERRIMO NON AFFECTATO INSIMULATOVE

errore acerrimo non affectato insimulato (e-ror-ee <<schwa>>-ser-i-moh non af-ek-tay-toh in-sim-yuu-l<<schwa>>-toh-vee). [Latin] Hist. Through error of the most pointed or positive character, not merely pretended or feigned.

ERRORE LAPSUS

errore lapsus (e-ror-ee lap-s<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Hist. Mistaken through error. • This type of mistake was usu. not sufficient to invalidate a contract.

ERROR IN FACT

error in fact. See mistake of fact (1) under MISTAKE.

ERROR IN LAW

error in law. See mistake of law (1) under MISTAKE.

ERROR IN VACUO

error in vacuo (in vak-yoo-oh). [Latin “error in a void”] See harmless error under ERROR.

ERROR NOMINIS

error nominis (nahm-<<schwa>>-nis). [Latin “error of name”] A mistake of detail in a person's name. Cf. ERROR DE PERSONA.

ERROR OF FACT

error of fact. See mistake of fact (1) under MISTAKE.

ERROR-OF-JUDGMENT RULE

error-of-judgment rule. The doctrine that a professional is not liable to a client for advice or an opinion given in good faith and with an honest belief that the advice was in the client's best interests, but that was based on a mistake either in judgment or in analyzing an unsettled area of the professional's business. • For example, an attorney who makes an error in trial tactics involving an unsettled area of the law may, under certain circumstances, defeat a malpractice claim arising from the tactical error. — Also termed judgmental immunity.

ERROR OF LAW

ESCALATION CLAUSE

escalation clause. See ESCALATOR CLAUSE.

ESCALATOR CLAUSE

escalator clause. 1. A contractual provision that makes pricing flexible by increasing or decreasing the contract price according to changing market conditions, such as higher or lower taxes or operating costs. [Cases: Contracts 229, 231. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 378, 385, 387–391, 393–398.] 2. A provision in a divorce decree or divorce agreement providing for the automatic increase of alimony payments upon the occurrence of any of various triggering events, such as cost-of-living increases or an increase in the obligor's salary. • Escalation clauses for child support are often unenforceable. 3. Oil & gas. A provision in a long-term gas contract allowing the base price of the gas to be adjusted as the market changes. • The actual adjustment may be up or down. — Also termed escalation clause; fluctuating clause.

ESCAMBIUM

escambium. See CAMBIUM(2).

ESCAPE

escape, n. 1. The act or an instance of breaking free from confinement, restraint, or an obligation. 2. An unlawful departure from legal custody without the use of force. — Also termed actual escape. Cf. PRISON BREACH. [Cases: Escape 1. C.J.S. Escape §§ 2–3, 5–10, 12, 27, 44.]

“In the technical sense an ‘escape’ is an unauthorized departure from legal custody; in a loose sense the word is used to indicate either such an unlawful departure or an avoidance of capture. And while the word is regularly used by the layman in the broader sense it usually is limited to the narrower meaning when used in the law, — although this is not always so.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 559 (3d ed. 1982).

constructive escape. A prisoner's obtaining more liberty than the law allows, while not fully regaining freedom.

3. At common law, a criminal offense committed by a peace officer who allows a prisoner to depart unlawfully from legal custody. — Also termed voluntary escape. [Cases: Escape 3. C.J.S. Escape §§ 3, 5–6.] — escape, vb.

negligent escape. The offense committed by a peace officer who negligently allows a prisoner to depart from legal custody.

“Escapes are either voluntary, or negligent. Voluntary are such as are by the express consent of the keeper, after which he never can retake his prisoner again, (though the plaintiff may retake him at any time) but the sheriff must answer for the debt. Negligent escapes are where the prisoner escapes without his keeper's knowledge or consent; and then upon fresh pursuit the defendant may be retaken, and the sheriff shall be excused, if he has him again before any action brought against himself for the escape.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 415–16 (1768).

ESCAPE CLAUSE

escape clause. A contractual provision that allows a party to avoid performance under specified conditions; specif., an insurance-policy provision — usu. contained in the “other insurance” section of the policy — requiring the insurer to provide coverage only if no other coverage is available. Cf. EXCESS CLAUSE; PRO RATA CLAUSE.

ESCAPEE

escapee. A prisoner or other inmate who has escaped from lawful custody. [Cases: Escape 1. C.J.S. Escape §§ 2–3, 5–10, 12, 27, 44.]

“The word ‘escapee’ is employed at times by those who are not careful in the use of language. They probably think this word is comparable to ‘arrestee’ or ‘employee.’ But the arrestee did not do the arresting and the employee did not do the employing. The employee does the work but that makes him a worker, not a workee.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 560 (3d ed. 1982).

ESCAPE PERIOD

escape period. Labor law. A time agreed upon in some union contracts during which workers may withdraw from the union near the end of one term covered by the contract and before the start of the next.

ESCAPE WARRANT

escape warrant. See WARRANT(1).

ESCAPIUM

escapium (e-skay-pee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Law Latin] That which comes by chance or accident. • In medieval Latin, the term often referred to the escape of a prisoner or the straying of cattle.

escheat (es-cheet), n. 1. Hist. The reversion of land ownership back to the lord when the immediate tenant dies without heirs. See WRIT OF ESCHEAT. 2. Reversion of property (esp. real property) to the state upon the death of an owner who has neither a will nor any legal heirs. [Cases: Escheat 1–8. C.J.S. Escheat §§ 2–23.] 3. Property that has so reverted. See heirless estate under ESTATE(3). — escheat, vb.

“All escheats, under the English law, are declared to be strictly feudal, and to import the extinction of tenure.... The rule [was] that if lands were held in trust and the cestui que trust without heirs, the lands did not escheat to the crown, but the trustee, being in esse and in the legal seisin of the land, took the land discharged of the trust, and bound as owner for the feudal services. But as the feudal tenures do not exist in this country, there are no private persons who succeed to the inheritance by escheat; and the state steps in the place of the feudal lord, by virtue of its sovereignty, as the original and ultimate proprietor of all the lands within its jurisdiction.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *423–24 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

ESCHEAT GRANT

escheat grant. See GRANT.

ESCHEATOR

escheator (es-cheet-<<schwa>>r). Hist. A royal officer appointed to assess the value of property escheating to the Crown. • Corrupt officers led many to associate the escheator with fraudulent conduct, giving rise to the word cheat as used in the modern sense. — Also termed cheater.

ESCROW

escrow (es-kroh), n.1. A legal document or property delivered by a promisor to a third party to be held by the third party for a given amount of time or until the occurrence of a condition, at which time the third party is to hand over the document or property to the promisee <the agent received the escrow two weeks before the closing date>. [Cases: Deposits and Escrows 11–26. C.J.S. Depositaries §§ 4–5, 8–10, 13–25, 27; Escrows §§ 2–15.] 2. An account held in trust or as security <the earnest money is in escrow>. — Also termed escrow account; impound account; reserve account. See escrow account under ACCOUNT. [Cases: Deposits and Escrows 11. C.J.S. Depositaries §§ 4–5, 8–9; Escrows §§ 2–3, 6.] 3. The holder of such a document, property, or deposit <the attorney performed the function of escrow>. — Also termed escrow agent. [Cases: Deposits and Escrows 13. C.J.S. Depositaries §§ 15–17; Escrows §§ 8–10.] 4. The general arrangement under which a legal document or property is delivered to a third person until the occurrence of a condition <creating an escrow>. — escrow,vb.

essoin (e-soyn), n. [fr. Old French essoi(g)ne “excuse”] Hist. 1. An excuse for not appearing in court on an appointed day in obedience to a summons. 2. The offering or presentation of such an excuse. — Also spelled essoign.

essoin, vb. [fr. Old French essoi(g)nier “to excuse”] Hist. To present an excuse for not appearing in court as ordered.

ESSOIN DAY

essoin day. Hist. English law. The first general return day of the term, when the courts sat to receive essoins. • By the Law Terms Act (1830), essoin days were eliminated as a part of the term. St. 11 Geo. 4; 1 Will. 4, ch. 70, § 6.

ESSOINDE MALO VILLAE essoin de malo villae (dee mal-oh vil-ee). Hist. A procedure by which a defendant, who was in court the first day but was then taken ill without pleading, would send two essoiners to state in court that the defendant was detained by sickness in a particular village and thus unable to attend. • This essoin would be accepted unless the plaintiff could show its falsity.

ESSOINER

essoiner (e-soyn-<<schwa>>r), n. Hist. A person making an essoin. — Also termed essoinator (e-soyn-ee-ay-t*<<schwa>>r*).

The time for which the party who has chartered a vessel, or is bound to receive the cargo, must pay demurrage because of a delay in performing the contract. — Also termed sobrestadía (soh-bray-stah-dee-ah).

ESTANDARD

estandard (<<schwa>>-stan-d<<schwa>>rd), n.[Law French] A standard of weights and measures.

EST A SCAVOIR

est a scavoir (ay ah skah-vwahr). [Law French, prob. fr. Latin est sciendum “it is to be known”] It is to be understood or known; to wit. • This expression is common in Sir Thomas de Littleton's 15th-century Treatise on Tenures, written in Law French. See SCIENDUM EST.

ESTATE

estate. 1. The amount, degree, nature, and quality of a person's interest in land or other property; esp., a real-estate interest that may become possessory, the ownership being measured in terms of duration. See periodic tenancy under TENANCY.

“The word ‘estate’ was probably adopted because in early days it was possible to ascertain a man's status or position in life by discovering the particular kind of tenure by which he held his lands. The quality of his tenure gave a clue to his status. The baron for example ought in theory to be the holder of a barony; he has the status of a baron because he has the estate of a baron.... [O]ne of the distinguishing marks of [the] freehold estates was the uncertainty of their duration. They were invariably held either for life, or for some other space of time dependent upon an event which might not happen within a lifetime, and thus a freehold estate came to be regarded as one which involved the performance of free services only, but as one which endured for an uncertain time. In this way, the word ‘estate’ came to denote the quantity of a man's interest in land.” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 26 (3d ed. 1933).

absolute estate. A full and complete estate that cannot be defeated.

“The epithet absolute is used to distinguish an estate extended to any given time, without any condition to defeat or collateral limitation to determine [i.e., terminate] the estate in the mean time, from an estate subject to a condition or collateral limitation. The term absolute is of the same signification with the word pure or simple, a word which expresses that the estate is not determinable by any event besides the event marked by the clause of limitation.” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 54 (3d ed. 1933).

ancestral estate. An estate that is acquired by descent or by operation of law with no other consideration than that of blood.

bankruptcy estate. See BANKRUPTCY ESTATE.

base estate. Hist. An estate held at the will of the lord, as distinguished from a freehold.

concurrent estate. Ownership or possession of property by two or more persons at the same time. • In modern practice, there are three types of concurrent estates: tenancy in common, joint tenancy, and tenancy by the entirety. — Also termed concurrent interest.

“A concurrent estate is simply an estate — whether present or future, defeasible or non-defeasible, in fee simple, in tail, for life, or for years — that is owned by two or more persons at the same time. O transfers ‘to A and B and their heirs.’ A and B own a present concurrent estate in fee simple absolute.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 53 (2d ed. 1984).

conditional estate. See estate on condition.

contingent estate. An estate that vests only if a certain event does or does not happen. Cf. estate on condition.

defeasible estate. An estate that may come to an end before its maximum duration has run because of the operation of a special limitation, a condition subsequent, or an executory limitation. • If an estate is defeasible by operation of a special limitation, it is called a determinable estate.

derivative estate. A particular interest that has been carved out of another, larger estate. Cf. original estate.

determinable estate. An estate that is defeasible by operation of a special limitation. — Also termed determinable freehold.

equitable estate. An estate recognized in equity, such as a trust beneficiary's interest. See EQUITY.

“[A] legal estate was a right in rem, an equitable estate a right in personam, that is to say, the former conferred a right enforceable against the whole world, the latter one which could be enforced only against a limited number of persons.” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 54 (3d ed. 1933).

estate ad remanentiam (ad rem-<<schwa>>-nen-shee-<<schwa>>m). An estate in fee simple.

estate at sufferance. See tenancy at sufferance under TENANCY.

estate at will. See tenancy at will under TENANCY.

estate by curtesy. An estate owned by a wife, to which the husband is entitled upon her death. See CURTESY.

estate by elegit. An estate held by a judgment creditor, entitling the creditor to the rents and profits from land owned by the debtor until the debt is paid. See ELEGIT.

estate by entirety. A common-law estate in which each spouse is seized of the whole of the property. • An estate by entirety is based on the legal fiction that a husband and wife are a single unit. The estate consists of five unities: time, title, interest, possession, and marriage. The last of these unities distinguishes the estate by entirety from the joint tenancy. A joint tenancy can exist with any number of persons, while an estate by entirety can be held only by a husband and wife and is not available to any other persons. And it can be acquired only during the marriage. This estate has a right of survivorship, but upon the death of one spouse, the surviving spouse retains the entire interest rather than acquiring the decedent's interest. Most jurisdictions have abolished this estate. — Also termed estate by the entirety; estate by entireties; estate by the entireties; tenancy by the entirety; tenancy by the entireties. Cf. joint tenancy and tenancy in common under TENANCY.

estate by purchase. An estate acquired in any manner other than by descent. See PURCHASE.

estate by statute staple. An estate in a defendant's land held by a creditor under the statute staple until the debt was paid. See STATUTE STAPLE.

estate by the curtesy of England. See CURTESY.

estate for a term. See tenancy for a term under TENANCY.

estate for life. See life estate.

estate for years. See tenancy for a term under TENANCY.

estate in common. See tenancy in common under TENANCY.

estate in fee simple. See FEE SIMPLE.

estate in fee tail.See FEE TAIL.

estate in gage.An estate that has been pledged as security for a debt. See MORTGAGE.

estate in partnership.A joint estate that is vested in the members of a partnership when real estate is purchased with partnership funds and for partnership purposes. [Cases: Partnership 76. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 86–87.]

estate in possession.An estate in which a present interest passes to the tenant; an estate in which the tenant is entitled to receive the rents and other profits arising from the estate. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.]

estate in reversion.See REVERSION.

estate in severalty (sev-<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>l-tee). An estate held by a tenant separately, without any other person being joined or connected in interest.

estate in tail.See FEE TAIL.

estate in vadio (in vad-ee-oh). An estate in gage or pledge. See MORTGAGE.

estate less than freehold.An estate for years, an estate at will, or an estate at sufferance.

estate of inheritance.An estate that may descend to heirs.

estate on condition.An estate that vests, is modified, or is defeated upon the occurrence or nonoccurrence of some specified event. • While an estate on limitation can revert without any action by the grantor or the grantor's heirs, an estate on condition requires the entry of the grantor or the grantor's heirs to end the estate whenever the condition occurs. — Also termed estate on conditional limitation; conditional estate.

estate on conditional limitation.See estate on condition.

estate on condition expressed.A contingent estate in which the condition upon which the estate will fail is stated explicitly in the granting instrument.

estate on condition implied.A contingent estate having some condition that is so inseparable from the estate's essence that it need not be expressed in words.

estate on limitation.An estate that automatically reverts back to the grantor according to a provision, usu. regarding the passage of a determined time period, designated by words such as “during,” “while,” and “as long as.” See fee simple determinable under FEE SIMPLE.

estate pur autre vie.See life estate pur autre vie.

estate tail.See FEE TAIL.

estate tail quasi.An estate granted by a life tenant, who, despite using language of conveyance that is otherwise sufficient to create an estate tail, is unable to grant in perpetuity.

executed estate.See REMAINDER(1). expectant estate. See FUTURE INTEREST.

freehold estate. See FREEHOLD.

future estate. See FUTURE INTEREST.

joint estate. Any of the following five types of estates: (1) a joint tenancy, (2) a tenancy in common, (3) an estate in coparcenary (a common-law estate in which coheirs hold as tenants in common), (4) a tenancy by the entirety, or (5) an estate in partnership. [Cases: Husband and Wife 14.2–14.7; Joint Tenancy 1; Tenancy in Common 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Joint Tenancy §§ 2, 4, 7–9; Tenancy in Common §§ 2–5.]

landed estate. An interest in real property, esp. suburban or rural land, as distinguished from real estate situated in a city. — Also termed landed property.

leasehold estate. See LEASEHOLD.

legal estate. An interest enforced in law rather than in equity.

legal life estate. See life estate.

life estate. An estate held only for the duration of a specified person's life, usu. the possessor's. • Most life estates — created, for example, by a grant “to Jane for life” — are beneficial interests under trusts, the corpus often being personal property, not real property. — Also termed estate for life; legal life estate; life tenancy. See LIFE TENANT. [Cases: Life Estates 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 28–29, 31, 34.]

life estate pur autre vie (p<<schwa>>r oh-tr<<schwa>> vee). A life estate for which the measuring life — the life whose duration determines the duration of the estate — is someone other than the possessor's. — Also spelled life estate per autre vie. [Cases: Life Estates 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 28–29, 31, 34.]

minor's estate. A minor's property that must be administered by a court-appointed fiduciary. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 36.]

next eventual estate. An estate taking effect upon an event that terminates the accumulation of undisposed rents and profits; an estate taking effect when the existing estate terminates.

nonancestral estate. An estate from any source other than the owner's ancestors. — Also termed nonancestral property.

nonfreehold estate. Any estate in real property without seisin, such as an estate for years, from period to period, at will, or at sufferance; any estate except a fee simple, fee tail, or life estate.

original estate. An estate that is the first of one or more derivative estates, bearing to each other the relation of a particular estate and a reversion.

particular estate. An estate or interest less than a fee simple, such as a fee tail, a life estate, or a term for years. • It is so called because the estate is a mere part (particula) of the fee simple.

periodic estate. See periodic tenancy under TENANCY.

possessory estate. An estate giving the holder the right to possess the property, with or without an ownership interest in the property.

present estate. An estate in immediate possession; one vested at the present time, as distinguished from a future estate. See present interest under INTEREST(2).

qualified estate. Any estate that is not absolute and unconditional; a limited or conditional estate.

reversionary estate. See REVERSION.

settled estate. An estate created or limited under a settlement; an estate in which the powers of alienation, devising, and transmission according to the ordinary rules of descent are restrained by the settlement's terms.

stipendiary estate (stĭ-pen-dee-er-ee). Hist. An estate granted in return for services, usu. of a military kind.

vested estate. An estate with a present right of enjoyment or a present fixed right of future enjoyment.

2. All that a person or entity owns, including both real and personal property. 3. The property that one leaves after death; the collective assets and liabilities of a dead person. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 38–73. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 2, 121–127, 129–162.]

adjusted gross estate. 1. The total value of a decedent's property after subtracting administration expenses, funeral expenses, creditors' claims, and casualty losses. • The value of the adjusted gross estate is used in computing the federal estate tax. Cf. net probate estate under PROBATE ESTATE. 2. See gross estate (1).

augmented estate. A refinement of the elective share to which a surviving spouse is entitled, whereby the “fair share” is identified as something other than the traditional one-third of the probate estate. • The current version of the Uniform Probate Code uses a sliding scale that increases with each year of marriage. Under the UPC, a surviving spouse has accrued full marital-property rights after 15 years of marriage. This percentage of spousal entitlement is applied to a reconceptualization of the decedent's estate to take into account more than just the assets remaining in the probate estate at death. Also added into the calculation are the value of certain inter vivos transfers that the decedent made to others in a way that depleted the probate estate; the value of similar transfers made to others by the spouse as well as the value of the marital property owned by the spouse at the decedent's death; and the value of inter vivos transfers of property made by the decedent to the spouse. The Uniform Probate Code adopted this version of the augmented-estate concept in an attempt to equalize the treatment of surviving spouses in non-community-property states vis-à-vis community-property states. Unif. Probate Code § 2-202. See ELECTIVE SHARE. [Cases: Wills 778–803. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1841–1879.]

decedent's estate. The real and personal property that a person possesses at the time of death and that passes to the heirs or testamentary beneficiaries. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 38–73. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 2, 121–127, 129–162.]

gross estate. 1. The total value of a decedent's property without any deductions. 2. Loosely, adjusted gross estate.

heirless estate. The property of a person who dies intestate and without heirs. See ESCHEAT.

marital estate. See marital property under PROPERTY.

separate estate. The individual property of one of two persons who stand in a marital or business relationship. See SEPARATE PROPERTY. [Cases: Husband and Wife 110–202.]

net estate. See net probate estate under PROBATE ESTATE.

net probate estate. See PROBATE ESTATE.

probate estate. See PROBATE ESTATE.

receivership estate. See RECEIVERSHIP ESTATE.

residuary estate. The part of a decedent's estate remaining after payment of all debts, expenses, statutory claims, taxes, and testamentary gifts (special, general, and demonstrative) have been made. — Also termed residual estate; residue; residuary; residuum. [Cases: Wills 586. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1176–1179, 1184.]

taxable estate. A decedent's gross estate reduced by allowable deductions (such as administration costs and ESOP deductions). IRC (26 USCA) § 2051. • The taxable estate is the amount that is subject to the federal unified transfer tax at death. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4168–4182.30. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 500, 512, 525–538, 541–546.]

4. A tract of land, esp. one affected by an easement. “The old definitions of this word [estate] generally confine it to lands or realty. Thus, according to Lord Coke, ‘state or estate signifieth such inheritance, freehold, term for years, & c., as any man hath in lands or tenements.’ Co.Litt. 345a. So Cowell defines it to be ‘that title or interest which a man hath in lands or tenements,’ and the same definition is given in the Termes de la Ley. And this limited sense of the word has been relied on, in argument, in some cases But, according to the settled modern doctrine, the term estate is of much more extensive import and application, being indeed genus generalissimum, and clearly comprehending things personal as well as real; person as well as real estate.” 1 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 561 (2d ed. 1867).

dominant estate. An estate that benefits from an easement. — Also termed dominant tenement; dominant property; upper estate. Cf. servient estate. [Cases: Easements 1, 38. C.J.S. Easements §§ 2–8, 13–14, 21–22, 24, 53–55, 57–58, 89, 143–144, 146–147, 165–167.]

lower estate. See servient estate.

real estate. See real property under PROPERTY.

servient estate (s<<schwa>>r-vee-<<schwa>>nt). An estate burdened by an easement. — Also termed servient tenement; servient property; lower estate. Cf. dominant estate. [Cases: Easements 1, 38. C.J.S. Easements §§ 2–8, 13–14, 21–22, 24, 53–55, 57–58, 89, 143–144, 146–147, 165–167.]

upper estate. See dominant estate.

ESTATE DUTY

estate duty. See DUTY(4).

ESTATE FREEZE

estate freeze. An estate-planning maneuver whereby an owner of a closely held business exchanges common stock for dividend-paying preferred stock and gives the common stock to his or her children, thus seeking to guarantee an income in retirement and to avoid estate tax on future appreciation in the business's value.

ESTATE FROM PERIOD TO PERIOD estate from period to period. See periodic tenancy under TENANCY.

ESTATE IN EXPECTANCY estate in expectancy. See FUTURE INTEREST.

ESTATE IN FREEHOLD

estate in freehold. See FREEHOLD.

ESTATE IN LANDS

estate in lands. 1. Property that one has in lands, tenements, or hereditaments. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.] 2. The conditions or circumstances under which a tenant stands in relation to the leased property.

ESTATE IN REMAINDER estate in remainder. See REMAINDER(1).

ESTATE PLANNING

estate planning. 1. The preparation for the distribution and management of a person's estate at death through the use of wills, trusts, insurance policies, and other arrangements, esp. to reduce administration costs and transfer-tax liability. [Cases: Wills 1–20. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws § 72; Wills §§ 1–3, 53–87, 93–95, 97–98, 103–104, 106–132, 172, 174, 381.] 2. A branch of law that involves the arrangement of a person's estate, taking into account the laws of wills, taxes, insurance, property, and trusts.

ESTATES OF THE REALM estates of the realm. 1. The lords spiritual, the lords temporal, and the commons of Great Britain. — Also termed the three estates. 2. In feudal Europe, the clergy, nobles, and commons. • Because the lords spiritual had no separate assembly or negative in their political capacity, some authorities reduce the estates in Great Britain to two, the lords and commons. In England (until about the 14th century), the three estates of the realm were the clergy, barons, and knights. In legal practice, the lords spiritual and lords temporal are usu. collectively designated simply as lords.

ESTATE'S PROPERTY

estate's property. See PROPERTY OF THE ESTATE.

ESTATE TAX

estate tax. See TAX.

ESTATE TRUST

estate trust. See TRUST.

ESTER IN JUDGMENT

ester in judgment (es-t<<schwa>>r). [Law French] To appear before a tribunal, as either plaintiff or defendant.

ESTIMATED DAMAGES

estimated damages. See liquidated damages under DAMAGES.

ESTIMATED TAX

estimated tax. See TAX.

ESTOP

estop (e-stop), vb. To bar or prevent by estoppel.

ESTOPPAGE

estoppage (e-stop-ij), n. The state or condition of being estopped.

estoppel (e-stop-<<schwa>>l), n.1. A bar that prevents one from asserting a claim or right that contradicts what one has said or done before or what has been legally established as true. [Cases: Estoppel 52–59. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 2–4, 58–64, 66–81, 83–89, 120–121, 153–155, 157, 159–160, 167.] 2. A bar that prevents the relitigation of issues. 3. An affirmative defense alleging good-faith reliance on a misleading representation and an injury or detrimental change in position resulting from that reliance. Cf. WAIVER(1). [Cases: Estoppel 83–87. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 90–95.] — estop, vb.

“In using the term ‘estoppel,’ one is of course aware of its kaleidoscopic varieties. One reads of estoppel by conduct, by deed, by laches, by misrepresentation, by negligence, by silence, and so on. There is also an estoppel by judgment and by verdict; these, however, obviously involve procedure. The first-named varieties have certain aspects in common. But these aspects are not always interpreted by the same rules in all courts. The institution seems to be flexible.” John H. Wigmore, “The Scientific Role of Consideration in Contract,” in Legal Essays in Tribute to Orrin Kip McMurray 641, 643 (1935).

administrative collateral estoppel. See COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL.

assignor estoppel. Patents. Estoppel barring someone who has assigned the rights to a patent from later attacking the patent's validity. Westinghouse Elec. & Mfg. Co. v. Formica Insulation Co., 266 U.S. 342, 45 S.Ct. 117 (1924). • The doctrine was narrowed by Diamond Scientific Co. v. Ambico, Inc., 848 F.2d 1220 (Fed. Cir. 1988), in which the court held that in some circumstances equity may outweigh the public-policy reasons behind the estoppel doctrine. [Cases: Patents 129(2). C.J.S. Patents § 227.] collateral estoppel. See COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL.

equitable estoppel. 1. A defensive doctrine preventing one party from taking unfair advantage of another when, through false language or conduct, the person to be estopped has induced another person to act in a certain way, with the result that the other person has been injured in some way. • This doctrine is founded on principles of fraud. The five essential elements of this type of estoppel are that (1) there was a false representation or concealment of material facts, (2) the representation was known to be false by the party making it, or the party was negligent in not knowing its falsity, (3) it was believed to be true by the person to whom it was made, (4) the party making the representation intended that it be acted on, or the person acting on it was justified in assuming this intent, and (5) the party asserting estoppel acted on the representation in a way that will result in substantial prejudice unless the claim of estoppel succeeds. — Also termed estoppel by conduct; estoppel in pais. [Cases: Estoppel 52–96. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 2–4, 55–155, 157, 159–160, 165, 167–200.] 2. See promissory estoppel.

estoppel by conduct. See equitable estoppel.

estoppel by contract. A bar that prevents a person from denying a term, fact, or performance arising from a contract that the person has entered into.

estoppel by deed. Estoppel that prevents a party to a deed from denying anything recited in that deed if the party has induced another to accept or act under the deed; esp., estoppel that prevents a grantor of a warranty deed, who does not have title at the time of the conveyance but who later acquires title, from denying that he or she had title at the time of the transfer. — Also termed estoppel by warranty. See AFTER-ACQUIRED-TITLE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Estoppel 12–51. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 3, 10–54, 201–204, 206–208, 210–211.]

“The apparent odiousness of some classes of estoppel, chiefly estoppels by deed, seems to result not so much from the nature of an estoppel, as from the highly technical rules of real property law upon which it operated, and with which it was associated. Estoppels by record, indeed, stand upon a considerably higher footing than estoppels by deed” Lancelot Feilding estoppel by election.The intentional exercise of a choice between inconsistent alternatives that bars the person making the choice from the benefits of the one not selected.

estoppel by inaction.See estoppel by silence.

estoppel by judgment.See COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL.

estoppel by laches.An equitable doctrine by which some courts deny relief to a claimant who has unreasonably delayed or been negligent in asserting a claim. [Cases: Equity 67. C.J.S. Equity §§ 128–132.]

estoppel by misrepresentation.An estoppel that arises when one makes a false statement that induces another person to believe something and that results in that person's reasonable and detrimental reliance on the belief. [Cases: Estoppel 82–87. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 90–95.]

estoppel by negligence.An estoppel arising when a negligent person induces someone to believe certain facts, and then the other person reasonably and detrimentally relies on that belief. [Cases: Estoppel 96. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 68, 114.]

estoppel by record.See COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL.

estoppel by representation.An estoppel that arises when one makes a statement or admission that induces another person to believe something and that results in that person's reasonable and detrimental reliance on the belief; esp., equitable estoppel. [Cases: Estoppel 82–87. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 90–95.]

estoppel by silence.Estoppel that arises when a party is under a duty to speak but fails to do so. — Also termed estoppel by standing by; estoppel by inaction. [Cases: Estoppel 95. C.J.S. Estoppel § 99.]

estoppel by standing by. See estoppel by silence.

estoppel by verdict.See COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL.

estoppel by warranty.See estoppel by deed.

estoppel in pais.See equitable estoppel.

estoppel on the record.See prosecution-history estoppel.

file-wrapper estoppel.See prosecution-history estoppel.

judicial estoppel.Estoppel that prevents a party from contradicting previous declarations made during the same or an earlier proceeding if the change in position would adversely affect the proceeding or constitute a fraud on the court. — Also termed doctrine of preclusion of inconsistent positions; doctrine of the conclusiveness of the judgment. [Cases: Estoppel 68. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 138–141, 143–144.]

legal estoppel.Estoppel recognized in law (as distinguished from equitable estoppel or estoppel in pais), such as an estoppel resulting from a recital or other statement in a deed or official record, and precluding any denial or assertion concerning a fact. [Cases: Estoppel 1–51. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 3, 5–54, 201–204, 206–208, 210–211.]

marking estoppel. Patents. Estoppel that prevents a party from asserting that a product is not covered by a patent if that party has marked the product with a patent number. • This type of estoppel has been questioned in recent years, and has been sharply limited by some courts. [Cases: Patents 222. C.J.S. Patents §§ 394–395.]

promissory estoppel. The principle that a promise made without consideration may nonetheless be enforced to prevent injustice if the promisor should have reasonably expected the promisee to rely on the promise and if the promisee did actually rely on the promise to his or her detriment. — Also termed (inaccurately) equitable estoppel. [Cases: Estoppel 85. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 92–93.]

“The doctrine of promissory estoppel is equitable in origin and nature and arose to provide a remedy through the enforcement of a gratuitous promise. Promissory is distinct from equitable estoppel in that the representation at issue is promissory rather than a representation of fact. ‘Promissory estoppel and estoppel by conduct are two entirely distinct theories. The latter does not require a promise.’ ” Ann Taylor Schwing, California Affirmative Defenses § 34:16, at 35 (2d ed. 1996) (quoting Division of Labor Law Enforcement v. Transpacific Transp. Co., 88 Cal. App. 3d 823, 829 (1979)).

prosecution-history estoppel. Patents. The doctrine limiting a patentee's invocation of the doctrine of equivalents by eliminating from the claims those elements that the holder surrendered or abandoned during the prosecution of the patent. — Also termed estoppel on the record; file-wrapper estoppel. See DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS. [Cases: Patents 168(2.1). C.J.S. Patents § 296.]

quasi-estoppel. An equitable doctrine preventing one from repudiating an act or assertion if it would harm another who reasonably relied on the act or assertion.

technical estoppel. 1. An estoppel arising from a matter of record or from a deed made by the party who is claimed to be estopped. • Estoppels by deed or by record are called “technical” because the rules of estoppel apply with certainty in appropriate cases. 2. COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL. See estoppel by deed.

ESTOPPEL CERTIFICATE

estoppel certificate. 1. A signed statement by a party (such as a tenant or a mortgagee) certifying for another's benefit that certain facts are correct, as that a lease exists, that there are no defaults, and that rent is paid to a certain date. • A party's delivery of this statement estops that party from later claiming a different state of facts. 2. WAIVER OF DEFENSES.

ESTOPPEL PER REM JUDICATAM estoppel per rem judicatam (p<<schwa>>r rem joo-di-kay-t<<schwa>>m). See COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL.

ESTOVER

estover (e-stoh-v<<schwa>>r). (usu. pl.) 1. Wood that a tenant is allowed to take for fuel, the manufacture or repair of agricultural instruments, and the erection and maintenance of fences and hedges; necessary supplies. See common of estovers under COMMON. — Also termed botes. See BOTE(1).2. The tenant's right to obtain that wood. 3.ALIMONY.

ESTOVERIIS HABENDIS estoveriis habendis (es-t<<schwa>>-veer-ee-is h<<schwa>>-ben-dis). [Latin] Hist. See DE ESTOVERIIS HABENDIS.

estrangle,vb. 1. To separate, to keep away (a person or thing), or to keep away from (a person or thing).2. To destroy or divert affection, trust, and loyalty. — estrangement,n.

ESTRAY

estray (e-stray), n.1. A valuable tame animal found wandering and ownerless; an animal that has escaped from its owner and wanders about. • At common law, an estray belonged to the Crown or to the lord of the manor, but today the general rule is that it passes to the state in trust for the true owner, who may regain it by proving ownership. An animal cannot be an estray when on the range where it was raised and where its owner permits it to run, and esp. when the owner is known to the party who takes the animal. [Cases: Animals 58. C.J.S. Animals § 123.] 2.FLOTSAM.

estreat (e-street), n.1. A copy or duplicate of some original writing or record, esp. of a fine or amercement imposed by a court, extracted from the record, and certified to one who is authorized and required to collect it. — Also termed (in Scots law) extract. 2. GREEN WAX.

estreat,vb. To take out a forfeited recognizance from the recordings of a court and return it to the court to be prosecuted.

estrep (e-streep), vb.1. To strip; to despoil; to commit waste upon an estate, as by cutting down trees or removing buildings. 2. To injure the value of a reversionary interest by stripping or spoiling the estate. See WASTE(1).

ESTREPEMENT

estrepement (e-streep-m<<schwa>>nt), n. A species of aggravated waste, by stripping or devastating land to the injury of the reversioner, esp. pending a suit for possession. See DE ESTREPAMENTO. [Cases: Waste 16.C.J.S. Waste § 23.]

ET

et,conj.[Latin] And. • This conjunction was the introductory word of several Latin and Law French phrases that were once common.

ET ADJOURNATUR

et adjournatur (et aj-<<schwa>>r-nay-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin] Hist. And it is adjourned. • This phrase was used in the old reports, when argument of a case was adjourned to another day, or where a second argument was had.

ETC.

etc.abbr.ET CETERA.

ET CETERA

et cetera (et set-<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>). [Latin “and others”] And other things. • The term usu. indicates additional, unspecified items in a series. — Abbr. etc.

ET DE CEO SE METTENT EN LE PAYS

et de ceo se mettent en le pays (ay d<<schwa>> say-oh s<<schwa>> me-tawni oin l<<schwa>> pay). [Law French] Hist. And of this they put themselves upon the country. See CONCLUSION TO THE COUNTRY; GOING TO THE COUNTRY.

ET DE HOC PONIT SE SUPER PATRIAM et de hoc ponit se super patriam (et dee hok poh-nit see s[y]oo-p<<schwa>>r pay-tree-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. And of this he puts himself upon the country. • This was the formal conclusion of a common-law plea in bar by way of traverse.

ET EI LEGITUR IN HAEC VERBA et ei legitur in haec verba (et ee-lee-j<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r in heekv<<schwa>>r-b<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. And it is read to him in these words. • This phrase was formerly used in entering the prayer of oyer on the record.

ETERNAL LAW

eternal law. See NATURAL LAW.

ET HABEAS IBI TUNC HOC BREVE et habeas ibi tunc hoc breve (et hay-bee-<<schwa>>s ib-I t<<schwa>>ngk hok bree-vee). [Latin] Hist. And that you have then and there this writ. • These were the formal words directing the return of a writ. The literal translation was retained in the later form of a considerable number of writs.

ET HABUIT

et habuit (et hab-yoo-it). [Latin “and he had [it]”] Hist. A common phrase in the Year Books, indicating that a party's application or demand was granted.

ETHICAL

ethical, adj. 1. Of or relating to moral obligations that one person owes another; esp., in law, of or relating to legal ethics <the ethical rules regarding confidences>. See LEGAL ETHICS. 2. In conformity with moral norms or standards of professional conduct <the judge's recusal was a perfectly ethical act>.

ETHICAL ABSOLUTISM

ethical absolutism. See MORAL ABSOLUTISM.

ETHICAL CONSIDERATION

ethical consideration. (often cap.) An aspirational goal or principle intended to guide a lawyer's professional conduct. • A lawyer's violation of these considerations (which are contained in the Model Code of Professional Responsibility) does not necessarily subject the lawyer to discipline. — Abbr. EC. Cf. DISCIPLINARY RULE. [Cases: Attorney and Client 32.C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 6, 43–58, 86.]

ETHICAL DRUG

ethical drug. See DRUG.

ETHICAL JURISPRUDENCE ethical jurisprudence. See JURISPRUDENCE.

ETHICAL RELATIVISM

ethical relativism. See MORAL RELATIVISM.

ETHICAL WALL

ethical wall. A screening mechanism that protects a client from a conflict of interest by preventing one or more lawyers within an organization from participating in any matter involving that client. • This mechanism is designed to allow a lawyer to move to a new job without the fear of vicariously disqualifying the new employer from representing certain clients. Creating an ethical wall generally entails (1) prohibiting certain lawyers and paralegals from having any connection with the matter; (2) banning discussions with or the transfer of documents to those individuals; (3) restricting access to files; and (4) educating all members of the firm, corporation, or entity about the separation of the lawyers and paralegals (both organizationally and physically) from the pending matter. — Also termed Chinese wall; screening mechanism. [Cases: Attorney and Client 21.15. C.J.S. Attorney and Client § 164.]

ethics. See LEGAL ETHICS.

ETHNIC CLEANSING

ethnic cleansing. The officially sanctioned forcible and systematic diminution or elimination of targeted ethnic minorities from a geographic area, usu. by confiscating real and personal property, ordering or condoning mass murders and mass rapes, and expelling the survivors. • In theory, the purpose of ethnic cleansing is to drive all members of the victimized group out of a territory. In practice, ethnic cleansing is nearly synonymous with genocide because mass murder is a characteristic of both. Ethnic cleansing additionally includes mass rapes for two cultural reasons: (1) the victims are often put to death by their relatives or commit suicide, and (2) any children born are regarded as belonging to the father's ethnic group, not the mother's. Both acts — murder and rape — are intended to diminish or extinguish the victimized minority. Cf. GENOCIDE.

ETHNIC PROFILING

ethnic profiling. See RACIAL PROFILING.

ET HOC PARATUS EST VERIFICARE et hoc paratus est verificare (et hok p<<schwa>>-ray-t<<schwa>>s est ver-<<schwa>>-fi-kair-ee). [Latin] And this he is prepared to verify. • This phrase traditionally concluded a plea in confession and avoidance, or any pleading that contained new affirmative matter. A pleading containing this phrase was technically said to “conclude with a verification,” as opposed to a simple denial.

ET HOC PETIT QUOD INQUIRATUR PER PATRIAM et hoc petit quod inquiratur per patriam (et hok pet-it kwod in-kw<<schwa>>-ray-t<<schwa>>r p<<schwa>>r pay-tree-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “and this he prays may be inquired of by the country”] Archaic. The conclusion of a plaintiff's pleading that tendered an issue to the country. See CONCLUSION TO THE COUNTRY .

ETIAM CAUSA NON COGNITA

etiam causa non cognita (ee-shee-<<schwa>>m kaw-z<<schwa>> non kog-ni-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. Even where the cause is not known; absent an investigation. • Some decrees could be issued without a full factual inquiry or trial.

ETIAM IN ARTICULO MORTIS

etiam in articulo mortis (ee-shee-<<schwa>>m in ahr-tik-y<<schwa>>-loh mor-tis). [Latin]

Scots law. Even at the point of death. • The phrase appeared in reference to a circumstance under which one could revoke a will.

ETIAM IN LECTO

etiam in lecto (ee-shee-*<<schwa>>*m in lek-toh). [Law Latin] Hist. Even upon deathbed.

ET INDE PETIT JUDICIUM

et inde petit judicium (et in-dee pet-it joo-dish-ee-*<<schwa>>*m). [Latin “and thereupon he prays judgment”] Archaic. A clause found at the end of a pleading, requesting judgment in that party's favor.

ETIQUETTE OF THE PROFESSION

etiquette of the profession. See LEGAL ETHICS(1).

ET MODO AD HUNC DIEM

et modo ad hunc diem (et moh-doh ad h*<<schwa>>ngk d<<schwa>>*m). [Latin “and now at this day”] Archaic. The formal beginning of an entry of appearance or of a continuance.

ET NON

et non (et non). [Latin “and not”] Archaic. A phrase formerly used in pleading to introduce the negative averments of a special traverse. See ABSQUE HOC.

ET SEQ

et seq. (et sek). abbr. [Latin et sequens “and the following one,” et sequentes (masc.) “and the following ones,” or et sequentia (neuter) “and the following ones”] And those (pages or sections) that follow <11 USCA §§ 101 et seq.>.

ET SIC

et sic (et sik). [Latin “and so”] Archaic. The introductory words of a special conclusion to a plea in bar, intending to render the plea positive and not argumentative.

ET SIC AD JUDICIUM

et sic ad judicium (et sik ad joo-dish-ee-*<<schwa>>*m). [Latin] Archaic. And so to judgment.

ET SIC AD PATRIAM

et sic ad patriam (et sik ad pay-tree-*<<schwa>>*m). [Latin] Hist. And so to the country. • This phrase was used in the Year Books to record an issue to the country.

ET SIC DE ANNO IN ANNUM QUAMDIU AMBOBUS PARTIBUS PLACUERIT et sic de anno in annum quamdiu ambobus partibus placuerit (et sik dee an-oh in an-*<<schwa>>m kwam-dee-yoo am-b<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>s pahr-t<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>*s plak-yoo-air-it). Hist. And so, from year to year, so long as both parties please, or are agreed. • The phrase appeared in reference to tacit relocation. See TACIT RELOCATION.

ET SIC FECIT

et sic fecit (et sik fee-sit). [Latin] Archaic. And he did so.

ET SIC PENDET

et sic pendet (et sik pen-dit). [Latin] Hist. And so it hangs. • This phrase was used in the old reports to signify that a point was left undetermined.

ET SIC ULTERIUS

et sic ulterius (et sik <<schwa>>l-teer-ee-<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Archaic. And so on; and so further; and so forth.

ET UXOR

et uxor (et <<schwa>>k-sor). [Latin] Archaic. And wife. • This phrase was formerly common in case names and legal documents (esp. abstracts of title) involving a husband and wife jointly. It usu. appears in its abbreviated form, et ux. <conveyed the land to Donald Baird et ux.>. See UXOR.

ET VIR

et vir (et veer). [Latin] Archaic. And husband. See VIR.

EU

EU.abbr.EUROPEAN UNION.

EUCLIDEAN ZONING

Euclidean zoning.See ZONING.

EUNDO ET REDEUNDO

eundo et redeundo (ee-<<schwa>>n-doh et red-ee-<<schwa>>n-doh). [Latin] Hist. Going and returning. • This phrase was once used to describe vessels in transit.

EUNDO, MORANDO, ET REDEUNDO eundo, morando, et redeundo (ee-<<schwa>>n-doh, m<<schwa>>-ran-doh, et red-ee-<<schwa>>n-doh). [Latin] Hist. Going, remaining, and returning. • This phrase was once used to describe a person (for example, a witness or legislator) who is privileged from arrest while traveling to the place where assigned duties are to be performed, while remaining there, and while returning.

EUNOMY

eunomy (yoo-n<<schwa>>-mee), n. A system of good laws that lead to civil order and justice. — Also termed eunomia. Cf. DYSNOMY. — eunomic,adj.

EURATOM

Euratom. A European Union organization that coordinates the development and use of nuclear energy in Europe. • It was created in 1958 and merged with the European Economic Community in 1967. It is governed by the Council of the European Union.

EUREKA MODEL

eureka model. Patents. The view that the inventive process is the product of a stroke of luck rather than labor. • The notion is used to counter labor-based theories justifying intellectual-property rights, since no labor is involved in a “eureka” discovery. Cf. LABOR-DESERT MODEL; LABOR MODEL.

EUREKA MOMENT

eureka moment. Slang. The instant when an inventor realizes the answer to a question or the significance of a discovery. — Also termed flash of genius.

EURIBOR

Euribor. abbr. EURO INTERBANK OFFERED RATE.

EURO

euro (yuur-oh). The official currency of most countries in the European Union. • On January 1, 1999, the euro became the single currency of the participating countries. The present participants are Austria, Belgium, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal, and Spain. Euro notes and coins were issued on January 1, 2002.

EURODOLLAR

Eurodollar. United States currency held in a bank outside the U.S., usu. in Europe, and used to settle international transactions.

EURO INTERBANK OFFERED RATE

Euro Interbank Offered Rate. A measure of what major international banks charge each other for large-volume, short-term loans of euros, based on interest-rate data provided daily by a panel of representative banks across Europe. — Abbr. Euribor. Cf. LONDON INTERBANK OFFERED RATE.

EUROPEAN COMMISSION FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

European Commission for Human Rights. A body of the Council of Europe charged with overseeing the operation of the European Convention on Human Rights. • The commission is based in Strasbourg.

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

European Community. See EUROPEAN UNION.

EUROPEAN CONVENTION ON HUMAN RIGHTS

European Convention on Human Rights. A 1950 international agreement to protect human rights. • The European Commission for Human Rights and the European Court for Human Rights were created under the convention's terms.

EUROPEAN COPYRIGHT DIRECTIVE

European Copyright Directive. An official instruction of the European Union designed to promote uniformity in certain aspects of copyright law and related rights, esp. on the Internet. • Officially titled Directive 2001/29 on the Harmonisation of Certain Aspects of Copyright and Related Rights in the Information Society, this is the European Union equivalent of the Digital Millennium Copyright Act. Among other provisions, the directive provides broad exclusive rights of reproduction and distribution to copyright holders, and requires EU member nations to prohibit the circumvention of technical measures and devices intended to prevent the alteration or reproduction of copyrighted works.

EUROPEAN COURT OF HUMAN RIGHTS

European Court of Human Rights. The judicial body of the Council of Europe. • The court was set up in 1959 and was substantially changed in 1994–1998. As of 2003, the court had 41 judges, each elected by the Council of Europe's Parliamentary Assembly. The court adjudicates alleged violations of the civil and political rights enumerated in the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

EUROPEAN CURRENCY UNIT

European Currency Unit. A monetary unit that was the precursor of the euro. • Created in 1979, it was an artificial currency used by the members of the European Union as their internal accounting unit. It ceased to exist in January 1999, when it was replaced by the euro. — Abbr. ECU; ecu.

EUROPEAN ECONOMIC COMMUNITY

European Economic Community. See EUROPEAN UNION.

EUROPEAN LAW

European law. 1. The law of the European Union. 2. More broadly, the law of the European Union, together with the conventions of the Council of Europe, including the European Convention on Human Rights. 3. More broadly still, all the law current in Europe, including the law of European organizations, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and all the bilateral and multilateral conventions in effect, as well as European customary law.

EUROPEAN OPTION

European option. See OPTION.

EUROPEAN PATENT CONVENTION

European Patent Convention. A 1973 treaty allowing a patent applicant to obtain patent protection in all signatory nations, mostly European Union members, through a single blanket filing and examination procedure. • The Community patent is valid in any member nation in which it is registered. The procedure is administered through the European Patent Office in Munich, Germany, and The Hague, Netherlands. — Abbr. EPC. — Also termed Convention on the Grant of European Patent.

EUROPEAN PATENT OFFICE

European Patent Office. The office that receives filings, conducts examinations, and issues Community patents applied for under the European Patent Convention. • The office is located in Munich, Germany, and The Hague, Netherlands. — Abbr. EPO.

EUROPEAN PATENT ORGANIZATION

European Patent Organization. A centralized patent-grant system, established in 1978, comprising a legislative body (the Administrative Council) and an executive body (the European Patent Office).

EUROPEAN-STYLE OPTION

European-style option. See European option under OPTION.

EUROPEAN UNION

European Union. An association of European nations whose purpose is to achieve full economic unity (and eventual political union) by agreeing to eliminate barriers to the free movement of capital, goods, and labor among the member-nations. • The European Union was formed as the European Economic Community (EEC) by the Treaty of Rome in 1957, and later renamed the European Community (EC). The European Community became the European Union when the Maastricht Treaty on European Union took effect in November 1993. — Abbr. EU.

EUTHANASIA

euthanasia (yoo-th<<schwa>>-nay-zh<<schwa>>), n. The act or practice of killing or bringing about the death of a person who suffers from an incurable disease or condition, esp. a painful one, for reasons of mercy. • Euthanasia is sometimes regarded by the law as second-degree murder, manslaughter, or criminally negligent homicide. In 2001, the Netherlands became the first nation to legalize euthanasia. — Also termed mercy killing. See LIVING WILL; ADVANCE DIRECTIVE. Cf. assisted suicide under SUICIDE; DYATHANASIA. [Cases: Homicide 765.] — euthanasic (yoo-th<<schwa>>-nay-zik), adj.

“The translation of the Greek word euthanasia — ‘easy death’ — contains an ambiguity. It connotes that the means responsible for death are painless, so that the death is an easy one. But it also suggests that the death sought would be a relief from a distressing or intolerable condition of living (or dying), so that death, and not merely the means through which it is achieved, is good or right in itself. Usually, both aspects are intended when the term euthanasia is used; but when that is not the case, there can be consequences in legal analysis.” Alexander Morgan Capron, “Euthanasia,” in 2 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 709, 709 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

active euthanasia. Euthanasia performed by a facilitator (such as a healthcare practitioner) who not only provides the means of death but also carries out the final death-causing act.

involuntary euthanasia.Euthanasia of a competent, nonconsenting person.

nonvoluntary euthanasia.Euthanasia of an incompetent, and therefore nonconsenting, person.

passive euthanasia.The act of allowing a terminally ill person to die by either withholding or withdrawing life-sustaining support such as a respirator or feeding tube.

voluntary euthanasia.Euthanasia performed with the terminally ill person's consent. [Cases: Health 913.]

euthanize (yoo-th<<schwa>>-nIz), vb. To put to death by euthanasia. • This term is used chiefly in reference to animals. — Also termed euthanatize.

EVALUATIVE FACT

evaluative fact.See FACT.

EVARTS ACT

Evarts Act (ev-<<schwa>>rts). An 1891 federal statute that established the circuit courts of appeals (now U.S. courts of appeals) and fixed the contemporary method of federal appellate review.

EVASION

evasion. See TAX EVASION.

EVASIVE

evasive,adj. Tending or seeking to evade; elusive; shifting. • If a pleading requiring a response is evasive, the responding party may move for a more definite statement. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e).

EVASIVE ANSWER

evasive answer.See ANSWER.

EVEN DATE

even date.The same date. • This jargonistic phrase is sometimes used in one instrument to refer to another instrument with the same date, esp. when both relate to the same transaction (as a deed and a mortgage).

EVENINGS

evenings.Hist. The delivery at evening or night to a customary tenant of a gratuity in the form of a portion of the grass, corn, or other crop that the tenant cuts, mows, or reaps for the lord.

EVEN LOT

even lot.See round lot under LOT(3).

EVENT-DRIVEN AUDIT

event-driven audit. See AUDIT.

EVERGREEN CONTRACT

evergreen contract. See CONTRACT.

EVICT

evict, vb. 1. To expel (a person, esp. a tenant) from real property, usu. by legal process. — Also termed put out. 2. Archaic. To recover (property or title) from a person by legal process. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 171(1). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 445.] — evictor, n.

EVICION

eviction. The act or process of legally dispossessing a person of land or rental property. See FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER. Cf. EJECTMENT. [Cases: Forcible Entry and Detainer 6; Landlord and Tenant 287.]

actual eviction. A physical expulsion of a person from land or rental property. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 171(1). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 445.]

constructive eviction. 1. A landlord's act of making premises unfit for occupancy, often with the result that the tenant is compelled to leave. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 172. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 447, 450–451, 453, 455–456, 458.] 2. The inability of a land purchaser to obtain possession because of paramount outstanding title. • Such an eviction usu. constitutes a breach of the covenants of warranty and quiet enjoyment.

eviction by paramount title. An eviction by judicially establishing title superior to that under which the possessor claims. — Also termed eviction by title paramount.

eviction by title paramount. See eviction by paramount title.

partial eviction. An eviction, either constructive or actual, from a portion of a tenant's premises. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 171(1). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 445.]

retaliatory eviction. An eviction — nearly always illegal — commenced in response to a tenant's complaints or involvement in activities with which the landlord does not agree. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 171(1). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 445.]

summary eviction. An eviction accomplished through a simplified legal procedure, without the formalities of a full trial. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 293.]

total eviction. An eviction that wholly deprives the tenant of any right in the premises. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 171(1). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 445.]

EVIDENCE

evidence, n. 1. Something (including testimony, documents, and tangible objects) that tends to prove or disprove the existence of an alleged fact < the bloody glove is the key piece of evidence for the prosecution>. [Cases: Criminal Law 661; Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Trial 43. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 656, 751, 1202; Trial § 162.] 2. See fact in evidence under FACT. 3. The collective mass of things, esp. testimony and exhibits, presented before a tribunal in a given dispute <the evidence will show that the defendant breached the contract>. 4. The body of law regulating the admissibility of what is offered as proof into the record of a legal proceeding <under the rules of evidence, the witness's statement is inadmissible hearsay that is not subject to any exception>. — Also termed (in sense 4) rules of evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 661; Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Trial 43. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 656, 751, 1202; Trial § 162.] — evidence,vb.

“Evidence is any matter of fact which is furnished to a legal tribunal, otherwise than by reasoning or a reference to what is noticed without proof, as the basis of inference in ascertaining some other matter of fact.” James B. Thayer, Presumptions and the Law of Evidence, 3 Harv. L. Rev. 141, 142 (1889).

“Evidence, broadly defined, is the means from which an inference may logically be drawn as to the existence of a fact; that which makes evident or plain. Evidence is the demonstration of a fact; it signifies that which demonstrates, makes clear, or ascertains the truth of the very fact or point in issue, either on the one side or on the other. In legal acceptance, the term ‘evidence’ includes all the means by which any alleged matter of fact, the truth of which is submitted to investigation, is established or disproved. ‘Evidence’ has also been defined to mean any species of proof legally presented at the trial of an issue, by the act of the parties and through the medium of witnesses, records, documents, concrete objects, and the like.” 31A C.J.S. Evidence § 3, at 67–68 (1996).

adminicular evidence. Rare. Corroborating or auxiliary evidence presented for the purpose of explaining or completing other evidence.

admissible evidence. Evidence that is relevant and is of such a character (e.g., not unfairly prejudicial, based on hearsay, or privileged) that the court should receive it. — Also termed competent evidence; proper evidence; legal evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 661; Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Trial 43. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 656, 751, 1202; Trial § 162.]

autoptic evidence. See demonstrative evidence.

best evidence. Evidence of the highest quality available, as measured by the nature of the case rather than the thing being offered as evidence. • The term is usu. applied to writings and recordings. If the original is available, it must be offered rather than a copy or oral rendition. Fed. R. Evid. 1002. — Also termed primary evidence; original evidence. See BEST-EVIDENCE RULE. Cf. secondary evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 398–403; Evidence 157–187. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 833–845; Evidence §§ 1054–1131.]

“In some circumstances, ‘best evidence’ may mean that evidence which is more specific and definite as opposed to that which is merely general and indefinite or descriptive. However, ‘best evidence’ or ‘primary evidence’ is variously defined as that particular means of proof which is indicated by the nature of the fact under investigation as the most natural and satisfactory, or as that kind of proof which under any possible circumstances affords the greatest certainty of the fact in question; or as evidence which carries on its face no indication that better remains behind.” 32A C.J.S. Evidence § 1054, at 417 (1996).

character evidence. Evidence regarding someone's general personality traits or propensities, of a praiseworthy or blameworthy nature; evidence of a person's moral standing in a community. Fed. R. Evid. 404, 405, 608. • Character evidence is usu., but not always, prohibited if offered to show that the person acted in conformity with that character. [Cases: Criminal Law 375; Evidence 106; Witnesses 333–362. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 816–818; Evidence §§ 495–497, 499–502, 504–506; Witnesses §§ 566, 585–617.]

circumstantial evidence. 1. Evidence based on inference and not on personal knowledge or observation. — Also termed indirect evidence; oblique evidence. Cf. direct evidence (1). [Cases: Criminal Law 338(2), 552; Evidence 100, 587. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 718, 1103; Evidence §§ 3, 205, 245, 1330.] 2. All evidence that is not given by eyewitness testimony.

“Some circumstantial evidence is very strong, as when you find a trout in the milk.” Henry David Thoreau, Journal, 11 Nov. 1850, in 2 Journal of Henry D. Thoreau 94 (Bradford Torrey & Francis H. Allen eds., 1962).

“Indirect evidence (called by the civilians, oblique, and more commonly known as circumstantial evidence) is that which is applied to the principal fact, indirectly, or through the medium of other facts, by establishing certain circumstances or minor facts, already described as evidentiary, from which the principal fact is extracted and gathered by a process of special inference” Alexander M. Burrill, A Treatise on the Nature, Principles and Rules of Circumstantial Evidence 4 (1868).

“Evidence of some collateral fact, from which the existence or non-existence of some fact in question may be inferred as a probable consequence, is termed circumstantial evidence.” William P. Richardson, The Law of Evidence § 111, at 68 (3d ed. 1928).

“Testimonial evidence readily defines itself by its name; it is any assertion by a human being, offered to evidence the truth of the matter asserted. Circumstantial evidence is any and all other evidence. Scientifically the term ‘circumstantial’ is indefensible, for it does not correlate with ‘testimonial’; a more correct equivalent would be ‘nontestimonial.’ But no one has yet invented an acceptable substitute for ‘circumstantial.’ ” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 38 (1935).

clear and convincing evidence. Evidence indicating that the thing to be proved is highly probable or reasonably certain. • This is a greater burden than preponderance of the evidence, the standard applied in most civil trials, but less than evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, the norm for criminal trials. — Also termed clear and convincing proof. See REASONABLE DOUBT. Cf. PREPONDERANCE OF THE EVIDENCE. [Cases: Evidence 596(1). C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1299, 1304–1306, 1308, 1310–1311, 1315–1317.] communicative evidence. See testimonial evidence.

competent evidence. 1. See admissible evidence. 2. See relevant evidence.

conclusive evidence. 1. Evidence so strong as to overbear any other evidence to the contrary. — Also termed conclusive proof. [Cases: Criminal Law 549; Evidence 584(1). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 655, 1094–1095, 1097, 1102; Evidence §§ 226, 729, 1300–1305, 1320, 1324, 1326–1327, 1342, 1345.] 2. Evidence that so preponderates as to oblige a fact-finder to come to a certain conclusion.

concomitant evidence. Evidence that, at the time of the act, the alleged doer of the act was present and actually did it.

conflicting evidence. Evidence that comes from different sources and is often irreconcilable.

corroborating evidence. Evidence that differs from but strengthens or confirms what other evidence shows (esp. that which needs support). — Also termed corroborative evidence. Cf. cumulative evidence.

credible evidence. Evidence that is worthy of belief; trustworthy evidence.

critical evidence. Evidence strong enough that its presence could tilt a juror's mind. • Under the Due Process Clause, an indigent criminal defendant is usu. entitled to an expert opinion of the merits of critical evidence. — Also termed crucial evidence.

crucial evidence. See critical evidence.

cumulative evidence. Additional evidence that supports a fact established by the existing evidence (esp. that which does not need further support). Cf. corroborating evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 675; Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Trial 56. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1212; Trial § 183.]

demeanor evidence. The behavior and appearance of a witness on the witness stand, to be considered by the fact-finder on the issue of credibility. [Cases: Criminal Law 553; Evidence 588. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1099, 1101–1102; Evidence §§ 1318–1320, 1322, 1329.]

demonstrative evidence (di-mon-str<<schwa>>-tiv). Physical evidence that one can see and inspect (i.e., an explanatory aid, such as a chart, map, and some computer simulations) and that, while of probative value and usu. offered to clarify testimony, does not play a direct part in the incident in question. • This term sometimes overlaps with and is used as a synonym of real evidence. — Also termed illustrative evidence; autoptic evidence; autoptic proference; real evidence; tangible evidence. See nonverbal testimony under TESTIMONY. Cf. real evidence; testimonial evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 404.5–404.85; Evidence 188–198. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 846–855; Evidence §§ 789–802.]

“There remains a source of proof, distinct from either circumstantial or testimonial evidence, viz., what the tribunal sees or hears by its own senses. Whether this should be termed ‘evidence’ or not is a question of words, open to difference of view. But it is universally conceded to be an available source of proof. Bentham's term for it, ‘real evidence,’ came into wide vogue, but is ambiguous. The term ‘autoptic proference’ (etymologically meaning ‘showing to the tribunal's own vision') is preferable." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 39 (1935).

derivative evidence. Evidence that is discovered as a result of illegally obtained evidence and is therefore inadmissible because of the primary taint. See EXCLUSIONARY RULE; FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Criminal Law 394.1(3). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 771, 773–775.]

direct evidence. 1. Evidence that is based on personal knowledge or observation and that, if true, proves a fact without inference or presumption. — Also termed positive evidence. Cf. circumstantial evidence; negative evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 549; Evidence 587. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 655, 1094–1095, 1097, 1102; Evidence § 1330.] 2. See original evidence (1).

“A little reflection shows that no disputed case will ordinarily be proved solely by circumstantial or solely by testimonial evidence. Ordinarily there is evidence of both kinds. The matter has been obscured by the use of the term ‘direct evidence,’ — a term sometimes used to mean testimonial evidence in general, but sometimes also limited to apply only to testimony directly asserting the fact-in-issue.... The term ‘direct’ evidence has no utility.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 40 (1935).

documentary evidence. Evidence supplied by a writing or other document, which must be authenticated before the evidence is admissible. [Cases: Criminal Law 429–446; Evidence 325–383. C.J.S. Attachment § 145; Criminal Law §§ 1025–1049; Evidence §§ 813–815, 818–822, 824–1036, 1065; Patents § 179.]

downright evidence. See DOWNRIGHT EVIDENCE.

evidence aliunde. See extrinsic evidence (1).

evidence-in-chief. Evidence used by a party in making its case-in-chief. [Cases: Criminal Law 682; Federal Civil Procedure 2015; Trial 61. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1218; Trial §§ 193–194.]

exclusive evidence. The only facts that have, or are allowed by law to have, any probative force at all on a particular matter in issue.

“[T]here is an important class of rules declaring certain facts to be exclusive evidence, none other being admissible. The execution of a document which requires attestation can be proved in no other way than by the testimony of an attesting witness, unless owing to the death or some other circumstance his testimony is unavailable. A written contract can generally be proved in no other way than by the production of the writing itself, whenever its production is possible.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 485 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

exculpatory evidence (ek-sk<<schwa>>l-p<<schwa>>-tor-ee). Evidence tending to establish a criminal defendant's innocence. Fed. R. Crim. P. 16. • The prosecution has a duty to disclose exculpatory evidence in its possession or control when the evidence may be material to the outcome of the case. See BRADY MATERIAL. [Cases: Criminal Law 359, 700(2.1). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 728–729.]

expert evidence.Evidence about a scientific, technical, professional, or other specialized issue given by a person qualified to testify because of familiarity with the subject or special training in the field. — Also termed expert testimony. Fed. R. Evid. 702–705. See DAUBERT TEST. [Cases: Criminal Law 469–494; Evidence 505–574. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 853, 1059–1072, 1076–1088; Evidence §§ 223, 510, 513–514, 521, 523–527, 597–632, 634–660, 662–668, 670–671, 673–688, 691–709, 713–759, 800–812.]

extrajudicial evidence.Evidence that does not come directly under judicial cognizance but nevertheless constitutes an intermediate link between judicial evidence and the fact requiring proof. • It includes all facts that are known to the tribunal only by way of inference from some form of judicial evidence. See JUDICIAL NOTICE. Cf. judicial evidence.

extrinsic evidence. 1. Evidence relating to a contract but not appearing on the face of the contract because it comes from other sources, such as statements between the parties or the circumstances surrounding the agreement. • Extrinsic evidence is usu. not admissible to contradict or add to the terms of an unambiguous document. — Also termed extraneous evidence; parol evidence; evidence aliunde. [Cases: Evidence 384–469. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1132–1186, 1188–1298.] 2. Evidence that is not legitimately before the court. Cf. intrinsic evidence. 3. Evidence that is calculated to impeach a witness's credibility, adduced by means other than cross-examination of the witness. • The means may include evidence in documents and recordings and the testimony of other witnesses. See Fed. R. Evid. 608(b) & note.

“Under [Federal Rule of Evidence] 608(b), if the witness denies engaging in untruthful misconduct, the cross-examiner must ‘take the witness’ answer,’ meaning the questioner may not introduce extrinsic evidence to contradict the witness’ denial through other witness testimony or the introduction of impeaching documents, or indeed any other evidence than the cross-examination, even if the questioner waits until it is his turn to put on evidence.” Paul F. Rothstein, The Federal Rules of Evidence 312 (3d ed. 2003).

fabricated evidence.False or deceitful evidence that is unlawfully created, usu. after the relevant event, in an attempt to achieve or avoid liability or conviction. — Also termed fabricated fact.

false evidence.See false testimony under TESTIMONY.

forensic evidence.Evidence used in court; esp., evidence arrived at by scientific or technical means, such as ballistic or medical evidence. [Cases: Evidence 150. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 216–226.]

foundational evidence.Evidence that determines the admissibility of other evidence.

habit evidence.Evidence of one's regular response to a repeated specific situation. Fed. R. Evid. 406. [Cases: Evidence 138. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 763–765, 768–769, 785.]

hearsay evidence.See HEARSAY.

illegally obtained evidence.Evidence obtained by violating a statute or a person's constitutional or other right, esp. the Fourth Amendment guarantee against unreasonable searches, the Fifth Amendment right to remain silent, or the Sixth Amendment right to counsel. [Cases: Criminal Law 394.1–394.6; Evidence 154. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 770–797; Evidence §§ 252–258.]

illustrative evidence. See demonstrative evidence.

immaterial evidence. 1. Evidence lacking in probative value. 2. Evidence offered to prove a matter that is not in issue. [Cases: Criminal Law 382; Evidence 143. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 749; Evidence §§ 197, 201–204.]

impeachment evidence. Evidence used to undermine a witness's credibility. Fed. R. Evid. 607–610. [Cases: Witnesses 311–409. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 559–775.]

impertinent evidence. See irrelevant evidence.

incompetent evidence. Evidence that is for any reason inadmissible. [Cases: Criminal Law 385; Evidence 148. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 656, 753; Evidence §§ 3–5, 197, 246–247.]

incriminating evidence. Evidence tending to establish guilt or from which a fact-trier can infer guilt.

inculpatory evidence (in-k<<schwa>>l-p<<schwa>>-tor-ee). Evidence showing or tending to show one's involvement in a crime or wrong.

indirect evidence. See circumstantial evidence (1).

indispensable evidence. Evidence without which a particular fact cannot be proved.

insufficient evidence. Evidence that is inadequate to prove or support a finding of something. • This term usu. describes a case that is not strong enough to even get to the fact-finder. [Cases: Evidence 584–601. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 226, 339, 729, 1299–1343, 1345.]

intrinsic evidence. 1. Evidence brought out by the examination of the witness testifying. 2. Evidence existing within a writing. Cf. extrinsic evidence (2).

irrelevant evidence. Evidence not tending to prove or disprove a matter in issue. Fed. R. Evid. 401–403. — Also termed impertinent evidence. See IRRELEVANT. [Cases: Criminal Law 338; Evidence 99. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 710, 730; Evidence §§ 2–5, 197–199, 204, 206.]

judicial evidence. Evidence produced in court, consisting of all facts brought to the attention of or admitted into evidence before the tribunal. Cf. extrajudicial evidence.

legal evidence. 1. See admissible evidence. 2. All admissible evidence, both oral and documentary, of such a character that it reasonably and substantially proves the point rather than merely raising suspicion or conjecture.

material evidence. Evidence having some logical connection with the facts of consequence or the issues. Cf. relevant evidence; immaterial evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 382; Evidence 143. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 749; Evidence §§ 197, 201–204.]

mathematical evidence. 1. Loosely, evidence that establishes its conclusions with absolute certainty. 2. Evidence pertaining to mathematical or statistical matters, or probabilities.

mediate evidence. See secondary evidence.

medical evidence. Evidence furnished by a doctor, nurse, or other qualified medical person testifying in a professional capacity as an expert, or by a standard treatise on medicine or surgery. [Cases: Evidence 555.10. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 639–643.]

moral evidence. Loosely, evidence that depends on a belief, rather than complete and absolute proof. • Generally, moral evidence is testimonial.

multiple evidence. Evidence with probative or other value on more than one issue but usually admitted into evidence for one specific purpose. • Impeachment evidence, for example, may not be probative on a particular issue but may nonetheless affect the jury's perceptions of several issues.

negative evidence. Evidence suggesting that an alleged fact does not exist, such as a witness's testifying that he or she did not see an event occur. • Negative evidence is generally regarded as weaker than positive evidence because a positive assertion that a witness saw an event is a stronger statement than an assertion that a witness did not see it. But a negative assertion will sometimes be considered positive evidence, depending on the witness's opportunity to see the event. For instance, testimony that the witness watched the entire game and saw no riot in the stands is stronger than testimony stating only that the witness did not see a riot. — Also termed negative testimony. Cf. direct evidence (1). [Cases: Criminal Law 387; Evidence 147, 586. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 752, 819; Evidence §§ 3, 209, 339, 508, 1309, 1328.] newly discovered evidence. Evidence existing at the time of a motion or trial but then unknown to a party, who, upon later discovering it, may assert it as grounds for reconsideration or a new trial. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b). [Cases: Criminal Law 938; Federal Civil Procedure 2350, 2655; New Trial 99. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1447; New Trial §§ 130, 259.]

no evidence. See NO EVIDENCE.

oblique evidence. See circumstantial evidence (1).

opinion evidence. A witness's belief, thought, inference, or conclusion concerning a fact or facts. Fed. R. Evid. 701–705. See OPINION(3); OPINION RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law 448; Evidence 470–574. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1050; Evidence §§ 223, 509–759, 800–812; Executions § 435.]

“In a sense all testimony to matter of fact is opinion evidence; i.e. it is a conclusion formed from phenomena and mental impressions.” James B. Thayer, A Preliminary Treatise on Evidence at the Common Law 524 (1898).

oral evidence. See testimonial evidence.

original evidence. 1. A witness's statement that he or she perceived a fact in issue by one of the five senses, or that the witness was in a particular physical or mental state. — Also termed direct evidence. Cf. HEARSAY. 2. See best evidence.

parol evidence (p<<schwa>>-rohlorpar-<<schwa>>l).1. Evidence of oral statements. [Cases: Criminal Law 447; Witnesses 228. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 396–398, 404–405.] 2. See extrinsic evidence (1). See PAROL-EVIDENCE RULE.

partial evidence.Evidence that establishes one of a series of facts.

personal evidence.See TESTIMONY.

positive evidence.See direct evidence (1). preappointed evidence.Evidence prescribed in advance (as by statute) for the proof of certain facts.

preliminary evidence.Evidence that is necessary to begin a hearing or trial and that may be received conditionally in anticipation of other evidence linking it to issues in the case. Fed. R. Evid. 104. [Cases: Evidence 117; Federal Civil Procedure 2014. C.J.S. Evidence § 208.]

presumptive evidence. 1. Evidence deemed sufficient to establish another fact unless discredited by other evidence. [Cases: Evidence 53–89. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2, 130–196, 1341.] 2.Archaic.Circumstantial evidence as distinct from testimonial evidence. — Also termed probable evidence.

prima facie evidence (prI-m<<schwa>> fay-sh<<schwa>>). Evidence that will establish a fact or sustain a judgment unless contradictory evidence is produced. [Cases: Evidence 584(1). C.J.S. Evidence §§ 226, 729, 1300–1305, 1320, 1324, 1326–1327, 1342, 1345.]

“The legislative branch may create an evidential presumption, or a rule of ‘prima facie’ evidence, i.e., a rule which does not shut out evidence, but merely declares that certain conduct shall suffice as evidence until the opponent produces contrary evidence.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 237 (1935).

primary evidence.See best evidence.

privileged evidence.Evidence that is exempt from production to an opposing party or tribunal (with certain limited exceptions) because it is covered by one or more statutory or common-law protections, such as the attorney–client privilege. See privileged communication under COMMUNICATION. [Cases: Witnesses 184–223. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 297–389.]

probable evidence.See presumptive evidence.

probative evidence (proh-b<<schwa>>-tiv). Evidence that tends to prove or disprove a point in issue. [Cases: Evidence 99. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2–5, 197–199, 204, 206.]

proffered evidence (prof-<<schwa>>rd).1. Evidence that is offered to the court to obtain a ruling on its admissibility. 2. Evidence whose admissibility depends on the existence or nonexistence of a preliminary fact. [Cases: Evidence 117; Federal Civil Procedure 2011. C.J.S. Evidence § 208.]

proper evidence.See admissible evidence.

prospectant evidence (pr<<schwa>>-spek-t<<schwa>>nt). Evidence that, before someone does an act, suggests that the person might or might not do the act. • This evidence typically falls into any of five categories: (1) moral character or disposition, (2) physical and mental capacity, (3) habit or custom, (4) emotion or motive, and (5) plan, design, or intention.

Queen's evidence.English law. Testimony provided by one criminal defendant, usu. under a promise of pardon, against another criminal defendant. — Also termed (when a king reigns) King's evidence. See state's evidence.

real evidence. 1. Physical evidence (such as clothing or a knife wound) that itself plays a direct part in the incident in question. — Also termed physical evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 405; Evidence 188. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 877; Evidence §§ 789–791, 794, 796.] 2. See demonstrative evidence.

“Anything which is believed for any other reason than that someone has said so, is believed on real evidence.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 480 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

rebuttal evidence.Evidence offered to disprove or contradict the evidence presented by an opposing party. • Rebuttal evidence is introduced in the rebutting party's answering case; it is not adduced, e.g., through cross-examination during the case-in-chief of the party to be rebutted. — Also termed rebutting evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 683; Federal Civil Procedure 2015; Trial 62. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1219; Trial § 195.]

relevant evidence.Evidence tending to prove or disprove a matter in issue. • Relevant evidence is both probative and material and is admissible unless excluded by a specific statute or rule. Fed. R. Evid. 401–403. — Also termed competent evidence. Cf. material evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 338; Evidence 99. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 710, 730; Evidence §§ 2–5, 197–199, 204, 206.]

reputation evidence.Evidence of what one is thought by others to be. • Reputation evidence may be introduced as proof of character when character is in issue or is used circumstantially. Fed. R. Evid. 405(a). — Also termed reputational evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 375; Evidence 106; Witnesses 333–362. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 816–818; Evidence §§ 495–497, 499–502, 504–506; Witnesses §§ 566, 585–617.]

retrospectant evidence (re-tr<<schwa>>-spek-t<<schwa>>nt). Evidence that, although it occurs after an act has been done, suggests that the alleged doer of the act actually did it <when goods have been stolen, and the thief is sought, a person's later possession of those goods amounts to retrospectant evidence that this person took them>. — Also termed traces.

satisfactory evidence.Evidence that is sufficient to satisfy an unprejudiced mind seeking the truth. — Also termed sufficient evidence; satisfactory proof. [Cases: Evidence 584(1). C.J.S. Evidence §§ 226, 729, 1300–1305, 1320, 1324, 1326–1327, 1342, 1345.]

scientific evidence.Fact or opinion evidence that purports to draw on specialized knowledge of a science or to rely on scientific principles for its evidentiary value. See DAUBERT TEST. [Cases: Criminal Law 388; Evidence 150, 505–574. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 761; Evidence §§ secondary evidence.Evidence that is inferior to the primary or best evidence and that becomes admissible when the primary or best evidence is lost or inaccessible. • Examples include a copy of a lost instrument and testimony regarding a lost instrument's contents. — Also termed mediate evidence; mediate testimony; substitutionary evidence. See Fed. R. Evid. 1004. Cf. best evidence. [Cases: Evidence 157–187. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1054–1131.]

secondhand evidence.See HEARSAY.

secret evidence.Classified information that may be used against a defendant in an immigration proceeding but withheld from the defendant, the defendant's lawyer, and the public on national-security grounds. • The use of secret evidence was made easier under the Anti-Terrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996.

signature evidence.Highly distinctive evidence of a person's prior bad acts. • While ordinarily inadmissible, signature evidence will be admitted if it shows, for example, that two crimes were committed through the same planning, design, scheme, or modus operandi, and in such a way that the prior act and the current act are uniquely identifiable as those of the defendant. See Fed. R. Evid. 404(b). [Cases: Criminal Law 369.15; Evidence 129(5), 133. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 827; Evidence §§ 764–766.]

slight evidence.A small quantity of evidence; esp., the small amount of evidence sufficient to remove a presumption from a case or for a rational fact-finder to conclude that something essential has not been established beyond a reasonable doubt. See SLIGHT-EVIDENCE RULE.

state's evidence.Testimony provided by one criminal defendant — under a promise of immunity or reduced sentence — against another criminal defendant. See TURN STATE'S EVIDENCE.

substantial evidence. 1. Evidence that a reasonable mind could accept as adequate to support a conclusion; evidence beyond a scintilla. See SUBSTANTIAL-EVIDENCE RULEE. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 791; Evidence 597. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1301, 1304, 1306, 1339; Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 213, 237–238.] 2. The product of adequately controlled investigations, including clinical studies, carried out by qualified experts that establish the effectiveness of a drug under FSA regulations. 21USCA § 355(e).

substantive evidence (s<<schwa>>b-st<<schwa>>n-tiv). Evidence offered to help establish a fact in issue, as opposed to evidence directed to impeach or to support a witness's credibility. [Cases: Evidence 226. C.J.S. Evidence § 415.]

substitutionary evidence.See secondary evidence.

sufficient evidence.See satisfactory evidence.

tainted evidence.Evidence that is inadmissible because it was directly or indirectly obtained by illegal means. See FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Criminal Law

394; Evidence 154. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 770; Evidence §§ 252–258.]

tangible evidence. Physical evidence that is either real or demonstrative. See demonstrative evidence; real evidence.

testimonial evidence. A person's testimony offered to prove the truth of the matter asserted; esp., evidence elicited from a witness. — Also termed communicative evidence; oral evidence. Cf. demonstrative evidence. [Cases: Trial 43. C.J.S. Trial § 162.]

“An assertion is testimonial evidence whether made out of court or in court, if it is offered with a view to persuading the tribunal of the matter asserted.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 120 (1935).

traditionary evidence. Evidence derived from a deceased person's former statements or reputation. • Traditionary evidence is admissible to prove ancestry, ancient boundaries, or similar facts, usu. when no living witnesses are available to testify. [Cases: Boundaries 35(2); Evidence 274, 302. C.J.S. Boundaries § 120; Evidence §§ 306, 322.]

unwritten evidence. Evidence given orally, in court or by deposition.

EVIDENCE BY INSPECTION

evidence by inspection. See demonstrative evidence under EVIDENCE.

EVIDENCE CODE

evidence code. A relatively comprehensive set of statutory provisions or rules governing the admissibility of evidence at hearings and trials.

EVIDENCE OF DEBT

evidence of debt. See SECURITY(4).

EVIDENCE OF INDEBTEDNESS evidence of indebtedness. See SECURITY(4).

EVIDENCE OF INSURABILITY evidence of insurability. Information — such as medical records or a medical examination — that an insurer may require to establish a potential insured's qualification for a particular insurance policy. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1973; Trial 127. C.J.S. Trial §§ 136–139, 262, 317.]

EVIDENCE OF TITLE

evidence of title. The means by which the ownership of land is satisfactorily demonstrated within a given jurisdiction. See DEED. [Cases: Property 9. C.J.S. Property §§ 35–37.]

“There are four kinds of evidence of title: abstract and opinion, certificate of title, title insurance and Torrens certificate. The certificate of title is used extensively in the Eastern states, and some Southern states. In urban centers in a great many sections of the country, title insurance occupies a dominant position in real estate transactions. In farm areas the abstract and opinion method is common. To a great extent, the acceptability of a particular kind of evidence of title depends on the local custom.” Robert Kratovil, Real Estate Law 170 (6th ed. 1974).

EVIDENCE RULES

evidence rules. See EVIDENCE(4).

EVIDENCING FEATURE

evidencing feature. Evidence. A group of circumstances that, when taken as a whole, form a composite feature that can be reliably associated with a single object. • This term appears more frequently in criminal cases than in civil. In criminal cases, it usu. refers to evidence that establishes a perpetrator's identity, but in civil cases it often refers to evidence that an event did or did not occur. — Also termed evidencing mark; evidential mark.

EVIDENCING MARK

evidencing mark. See EVIDENCING FEATURE.

EVIDENTIA

evidentia (ev-i-den-shee-<<schwa>>), n. [Law Latin] Evidence.

EVIDENTIAL

evidential, adj. Of, relating to, relying on, or constituting evidence; EVIDENTIARY(1).

EVIDENTIAL FACT

evidential fact. See evidentiary fact (2) under FACT.

EVIDENTIAL MARK

evidential mark. See EVIDENCING FEATURE.

EVIDENTIARY

evidentiary (ev-i-den-sh*<<schwa>>*-ree), adj. 1. Having the quality of evidence; constituting evidence; evidencing. 2. Pertaining to the rules of evidence or the evidence in a particular case.

EVIDENTIARY FACT

evidentiary fact. See FACT.

EVIDENTIARY HEARING

evidentiary hearing. See HEARING.

EVINCE

evince, vb. To show, indicate, or reveal <in abstaining from the vote, Hariden evinced misgivings about the nomination>.

EVOCATION

evocation (ev-<<schwa>>-kay-sh<<schwa>>n). French law. The act of withdrawing a case from an inferior court and bringing it before a superior court.

EVOCATIVE TRADEMARK evocative trademark. See suggestive trademark under TRADEMARK.

EVOLUTION STATUTE

evolution statute. See ANTI-EVOLUTION STATUTE.

EWAGE

ewage (yoo-ij), n. [Law French] Hist. A toll paid for water passage.

EX

ex. 1. Former <ex-wife>. 2. Without <ex rights>. 3. From <ex cathedra>. 4. (usu. cap.) abbr. Exhibit <Ex. 4>. 5. abbr. Example <this is but one ex. of several that might be cited>. 6. (cap.) abbr. EXCHEQUER.

EX ABUNDANTI

ex abundanti (eks ab-<<schwa>>n-dan-tI). [Latin "out of abundance"] Archaic. Abundantly; superfluously.

EX ABUNDANTI CAUTELA

ex abundanti cautela (eks ab-<<schwa>>n-dan-tI kaw-tee-l<<schwa>>). [Latin] Archaic. Out of abundant caution; to be on the safe side.

EXACTA DILIGENTIA

exacta diligentia. See DILIGENTIA.

EXACTION

exaction, n. 1. The act of demanding more money than is due; extortion. 2. A fee, reward, or other compensation arbitrarily or wrongfully demanded. [Cases: Extortion and Threats 7, 25.1. C.J.S. Threats and Unlawful Communications §§ 2–20.] — exact, vb.

EXACTOR

exactor. 1. Civil law. A tax collector; a gatherer or receiver of money. 2. Hist. A collector of public funds; a tax collector.

EX ADVERSO

ex adverso (eks ad-v-<<schwa>>r-soh). [Latin] On the other side. • This term is sometimes applied to opposing counsel.

EX AEQUITATE

ex aequitate (eks ee-kw-<<schwa>>-tay-tee). [Latin] According to equity; in equity. [Cases:

Equity 3.]

EX AEQUO ET BONO

ex aequo et bono (eks ee-kwoh et boh-noh). [Latin] According to what is equitable and good.

- A decision-maker (esp. in international law) who is authorized to decide ex aequo et bono is not bound by legal rules and may instead follow equitable principles. For example, article 38(2) of the Statute of the International Court of Justice provides that the Court may “decide a case ex aequo et bono if the parties agree thereto.” 37 ILM 999. [Cases: Equity 54.]

EX ALTERA PARTE

ex altera parte (eks al-t<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>> [orawl-] pahr-tee). [Latin] Of the other part.

EXAMEN

examen (eg-zay-m<<schwa>>n), n.[Law Latin] A trial; investigation.

EXAMEN COMPUTI

examen computi (eg-zay-m<<schwa>>n k<<schwa>>m-pyoo-ti). [Latin] The balance of an account.

EXAMINATION

examination.1. The questioning of a witness under oath. See DIRECT EXAMINATION ; CROSS-EXAMINATION. [Cases: Witnesses 224–228. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 390–394, 396–398, 404–405.] 2.Bankruptcy. The questioning of a debtor, esp. at the first meeting of creditors, concerning such matters as the bankrupt's debts and assets. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3040. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 204.] 3. An inquiry made at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, upon application for a patent, into the alleged invention's novelty and utility, and whether it interferes with any other pending application or in-force patent. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.]

preliminary examination.Patents. A patent office's initial review of an application, usu. to see whether the specification is properly set out and to prepare a search report. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.]

4.PRELIMINARY HEARING. 5. A test, such as a bar examination.

EXAMINATION BEFORE TRIAL examination before trial.See DEPOSITION(1).

EXAMINATION-IN-CHIEF

examination-in-chief. See DIRECT EXAMINATION.

EXAMINATION ON THE VOIR DIRE examination on the voir dire.See VOIR DIRE.

EXAMINATIONPRO INTERESSE SUO examination pro interesse suo (proh in-t<<schwa>>r-es-ee s[y]oo-oh). [Latin “according to his interest”] A judicial inquiry into the merits of a person's claim to sequestered property. [Cases: Sequestration 18. C.J.S. Sequestration §§ 31–32.]

“In practice, an examination pro interesse suo is an inquiry described as follows: When any person claims to be entitled to an estate or other property sequestered, whether by mortgage or judgment, lease or otherwise, or has a title paramount to the sequestration, he should apply to the court to direct an inquiry whether the applicant has any and what interest in the property sequestered.” 79A C.J.S. Sequestration § 31, at 589 (1995).

EXAMINATION SYSTEM

examination system.Patents. A patent system in which an invention is subjected to official scrutiny to determine whether it qualifies for patent protection. Cf. REGISTRATION SYSTEM.

EXAMINED COPY

examined copy.See COPY.

EXAMINER

examiner.1. One authorized to conduct an examination; esp., a person appointed by the court, esp. a court of equity, to administer an oath and take testimony. See MASTER(2). — Also formerly termed examiner in chancery. 2. A patent officer responsible for determining the patentability of an invention submitted to the patent office. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.] 3.MEDICAL EXAMINER.

EXAMINER IN CHANCERY

examiner in chancery.See EXAMINER(1).

EXAMINER-IN-CHIEF

examiner-in-chief.Hist. Patents. 1. A member of the quasi-judicial body in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that formerly heard appeals of interference decisions and patent-application rejections. 2. (pl. cap.) The body comprising those members; the predecessor of the Board of Appeals, the Board of Patent Interferences, and the present-day Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences.

EXAMINER'S AMENDMENT

examiner's amendment.Patents & trademarks. Minor changes in the form of a patent or trademark application, made by the examiner rather than the applicant. • For example, the examiner may correct spelling and grammar rather than wait for the applicant to respond. A patent examiner may also amend or cancel claims if authorized by the applicant.

EXAMINER'S ANSWER

examiner's answer.Patents. The brief filed by a patent examiner with the Board of Patent ex causa mandati (eks kaw-z<<schwa>> man-day-tI). [Latin] Scots law. On account of the mandate; because of the mandate.

EX CAUSA MANDATI

"A mandatory is entitled to claim from the mandant reimbursement of all moneys disbursed, as well as relief from all obligations incurred, ex causa mandati — i.e., on account of the matter which the mandate authorised to be done or performed." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 195 (4th ed. 1894).

EX CAUSA POTESTATIS

ex causa potestatis (eks kaw-z<<schwa>> poh-tes-tay-tis). Roman law. Because of his position of authority. • Certain men could not marry women who were subject to their guardianship or control, and the reason was said to be ex causa potestatis.

“Certain impediments to marriage in the civil law were described as being ex causa potestatis. Thus a tutor or curator could not marry his female ward until his office had terminated, or unless his accounts had been passed. A person administering a government or public office in a province, and the members of his family, were not permitted to intermarry with a person domiciled in his province, unless they had been betrothed to each other before he had accepted the office.” Alexander Wood Renton & George Grenville Phillimore, The Comparative Law of Marriage and Divorce 6 (1910).

EXCELLENCY

excellency. (usu. cap.) A title of honor given to certain high officials or dignitaries, such as governors, ambassadors, and Roman Catholic bishops or archbishops.

EXCEPTIO

exceptio (ek-sep-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Hist. 1. An exception, plea, or objection. 2. Roman & civil law. A defendant's plea admitting the claim in principle but alleging facts or legal provisions that negate it in this instance. 3. A defense to a claim that is justly brought but that unjustly accuses the particular defendant named. Pl. exceptiones (ek-sep-shee-oh-nee-z).

exceptio dilatoria (dil-<<schwa>>-tor-ee-<<schwa>>). A dilatory exception; an exception that defeated the action for a time and created a delay, such as an agreement not to sue within a certain time.

exceptio doli mali (doh-lmal-I). An exception, defense, or plea of fraud. — Sometimes shortened to exceptio doli.

exceptio dominii (d<<schwa>>-min-ee-I). A claim of ownership by the defendant in an action to recover property.

exceptio dotis cautae non numeratae (doh-tis kaw-tee non n[y]oo-m<<schwa>>-ray-tee). A defense to an action for the restitution of dowry, asserting that, although promised, dowry was never paid.

exceptio in factum (in fak-t<<schwa>>m). An exception on the facts; an exception or plea founded on the peculiar circumstances of a case.

exceptio in personam (in p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>m). A plea or defense of a personal nature that only the person to whom it is granted by law may assert.

exceptio in rem (in rem). A plea or defense that is not of a personal nature but is connected with the legal circumstances on which the suit is founded, and that may therefore be alleged by any party in interest, such as an heir or surety of the proper or original debtor.

exceptio jurisjurandi (joor-is-juu-ran-dI). An exception of oath; an exception or plea that the matter had been sworn to. • This kind of exception was allowed if a debtor, at a creditor's instance, had sworn that nothing was due the creditor, but the creditor sued anyway.

exceptio metus (met-<<schwa>>s). An exception, defense, or plea of fear or compulsion.

exceptio non adimpleti contractus (non ad-im-plee-tI k<<schwa>>n-trak-t<< schwa>>s). An exception in a contract action involving mutual duties or obligations, to the effect that the plaintiff may not sue if the plaintiff's own obligations have not been performed.

exceptio non numeratae pecuniae (ek-sep-shee-oh non n[y]oo-m<<schwa>>-ray-tee pi-kyoo-nee-ee). [Latin] Roman law. An exception or defense that money was not paid.

“This was one of the Roman law exceptions, founded on the obligatio literarum of the Romans. The obligatio literarum was constituted by a writing, the granter of which acknowledged receipt from the creditor of a certain sum of money. But as the obligation was sometimes granted before the money was advanced, spe numerandae pecuniae, by the Roman law, the obligation, until the lapse of two years after its date and delivery, did not prove the receipt of the money; and the debtor against whom, within that time, a demand for repayment was made, might plead the exceptio non numeratae pecuniae; that is, that the money of which repayment was demanded, was truly never advanced. The exception was sufficient to elide the demand, unless the creditor proved that he had advanced the money.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 426 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

exceptio non solutae pecuniae (non s<<schwa>>-loo-tee pi-kyoo-nee-ee). A plea that the debt at issue in the suit had not been discharged by payment (as the adverse party alleged), notwithstanding the existence of a receipt or acquittance reflecting payment. Cf. exceptio pecuniae non numeratae.

exceptio pacti conventi (pak-tI-k<<schwa>>n-ven-tI). An exception of compact; a defense or plea that the plaintiff had agreed not to sue.

exceptio pecuniae non numeratae (pi-kyoo-nee-ee non n[y]oo-m<<schwa>>-ray-tee). An exception or plea of money not paid; a defense by a party who was sued on a promise to repay money that was never received from the plaintiff. Cf. exceptio non solutae pecuniae; PECUNIA NON NUMERATA.

exceptio peremptoria (p<<schwa>>r-emp-tor-ee-<<schwa>>). A peremptory exception that forever destroyed the subject matter or ground of the action, such as the exceptio doli mali and the exceptio metus. — Also termed exceptio perpetua.

exceptio plurium concubentium (ploor-ee-<<schwa>>m kon-kyoo-ben-shee-<< schwa>>m). The plea or defense in a paternity action that the plaintiff had several lovers.

exceptio rei judicatae (ree-I joo-d<<schwa>>-kay-tee). An exception or plea of matter adjudged; a plea that the subject matter of the action had been determined in a previous action.

exceptio rei venditae et traditae (ree-Iven-d<<schwa>>-tee et trad-<< schwa>>-tee). An exception or plea of the sale and delivery [of a thing]. • This exception presumes a valid sale but, because no one can transfer a right greater than what is possessed, no valid transfer of property occurred, yet the real owner is nonetheless estopped from contesting the sale.

exceptio senatusconsulti Macedoniani (s<<schwa>>-nay-t<<schwa>>s-k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>l-tI mas-<<schwa>>-doh-nee-ay-nI). A defense to an action for the recovery of money loaned, on the ground that the loan was made to a person who was under another person's paternal power. • This defense is so named from the decree of the senate that forbade the recovery of such loans.

exceptio senatusconsulti Velleiani (s<<schwa>>-nay-t<<schwa>>s-k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>l-tI vel-ee-ay-nI). A defense to an action on a contract of suretyship, on the ground that the surety was a woman and thus incapable of becoming bound for another. • This defense is so named from the decree of the senate forbidding such sureties.

exceptio temporis (tem-p<<schwa>>-ris). An exception or plea that the time prescribed by law for bringing a particular action has expired.

EXCEPTION

exception, n.1. A formal objection to a court's ruling by a party who wants to preserve an overruled objection or rejected proffer for appeal <the prosecutor stated her exception to the court's ruling disallowing the witness's testimony>. • To make an exception or objection, attorneys sometimes say, "I except" or "I object." Exception properly refers only to an objection made after an initial objection or proffer is made and overruled. In most courts, an exception is no longer required to preserve the initial objection. [Cases: Criminal Law 1048–1060; Pleading 228–228.23. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 230–233, 236, 238, 240–242, 256–264, 268, 270–271, 289–291, 307, 317–322.]

The following quotation reflects former practice: "The exception must be distinguished from the objection. Many counsel are heard carelessly saying 'I except' when the thing they are doing is 'I object.' The exception serves an entirely distinct purpose from the objection, — a double purpose, in fact. It warns the judge and the other party that the excepter is not satisfied with the ruling and takes issue with a view to appeal; and it sums up and preserves the precise terms of the ruling. The proponent of the evidence is the excepter if the ruling excludes the evidence; but if it admits the evidence, the opponent of the evidence is the excepter. Thus the excepter and the objector are not necessarily the same parties." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 421 (1935).

declinatory exception (di-klIn-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). An exception to a court's jurisdiction. • Grounds for refusing to submit to a court's jurisdiction include lack of personal jurisdiction and insufficient service of process.

dilatory exception (dil-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). An exception intended to delay but not dismiss an action. [Cases: Pleading 228.6, 228.7. C.J.S. Pleading § 271.]

general exception. 1. An objection pointing out a substantive defect in an opponent's pleading, such as the insufficiency of the claim or the court's lack of subject-matter jurisdiction; an objection to a pleading for want of substance. — Also termed general demurrer. Cf. SPECIAL EXCEPTION(1). [Cases: Pleading 228.13. C.J.S. Pleading § 232.] 2. An objection in which the excepting party does not specify the grounds of the objection.

peremptory exception. A defensive pleading asserting that no legal remedy exists for the plaintiff's alleged injury, that res judicata or prescription bars the claim, or that an indispensable party has not been included in the litigation. [Cases: Pleading 228.8.]

special exception. See SPECIAL EXCEPTION.

2. Something that is excluded from a rule's operation <employers with fewer than five employees are an exception to the rule>.

exclusion. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3110; Taxation 979. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 59–60.]

annual exclusion. The amount (currently as much as $10,000) allowed as nontaxable gift income during the calendar year. • The purpose of the annual exclusion is both to serve as an estate-planning mechanism (so that gifts made during the donor's lifetime remain nontestamentary and nontaxable) and to eliminate the administrative inconvenience of taxing relatively small gifts. For an individual, the first $10,000 in gifts can be excluded; for married persons, the exclusion is $20,000 per donee for joint gifts, regardless of which spouse supplied the donated property. IRC (26 USCA) § 2503. — Also termed annual gift-tax exclusion. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4206.10. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 566–568.]

2. Evidence. A trial judge's determination that an item offered as evidence may not be presented to the trier of fact (esp. the jury). 3. Insurance. An insurance-policy provision that excepts certain events or conditions from coverage. [Cases: Insurance 2098.] — exclude, vb. — exclusionary, adj.

automobile exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for damages arising from the use (including loading and unloading) of an automobile, aircraft, or other motor vehicle owned, operated, rented, or borrowed by the insured. [Cases: Insurance 2278(13). C.J.S. Insurance § 938.]

business-risk exclusion. An exclusion in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for common risks of doing business, including harm to the insured's product or work, damages arising from a product recall, damages arising from the insured's failure to perform under a contract, or damages arising from a failure of the insured's product to perform as intended. [Cases: Insurance 2278(20).]

design-defect exclusion. A provision in some umbrella policies and some older commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for bodily injury arising from the failure of the insured's product to perform its intended function because of a defect or deficiency in its design, formula, specifications, instructions, or advertising materials. [Cases: Insurance 2278(21).]

employee-liability exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for injury to an employee (or a member of the employee's family), arising from and in the course of employment with the insured. • This exclusion is generally intended to exclude from coverage all injuries covered by the workers'-compensation laws. [Cases: Insurance 2278(11–12).]

employment-related-practices exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for damages arising from an insured's employment practices, including any policy, action, or omission — such as coercion, demotion, evaluation, reassignment, discipline, defamation, harassment, humiliation, or discrimination — that is directed at the person injured. [Cases: Insurance 2278(11).]

expected/intended exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for property damage or bodily injury that is expected or intended by the insured, except any harm arising from the use of reasonable force to protect a person or property. •

This exclusion is sometimes referred to as “exclusion a” because it is the first exclusion listed on most policies. — Also termed exclusion a; intentional-injury exclusion. [Cases: Insurance 2278(3).]

failure-to-perform exclusion.A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for (1) the loss of use of undamaged property resulting from the insured's delay or failure in performing an obligation, or (2) a design defect or failure in the insured's product. — Also termed loss-of-use exclusion. [Cases: Insurance 2278(21).]

knowledge-of-falsity exclusion.A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for damages arising from an oral or written communication made by the insured with knowledge that it is false. [Cases: Insurance 2303(2), 2313(2).]

named-insured exclusion.An exclusion limiting liability-insurance coverage to a named insured whose injuries were caused by another named insured under the same insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance 2278(1), 2745–2747.]

owned-property exclusion.Insurance. A provision in a comprehensive general liability insurance policy allowing only third parties who are injured on or by the insured's property to make liability claims against the insurer. • The provision ordinarily excludes coverage for (1) property owned, rented, occupied, sold, given away, or abandoned by the insured, (2) personal property in the care, custody, or control of the insured, and (3) property located where the insured and its employees work. [Cases: Insurance 2278(25). C.J.S. Insurance § 947.]

own-product exclusion.A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for property damage to a product that is manufactured, sold, handled, distributed, or disposed of by the insured. [Cases: Insurance 2278(21).]

own-work exclusion.A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for damage to the work or services performed by the insured. [Cases: Insurance 2278(21).]

pollution exclusion.A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for bodily injury or property damages arising from the discharge, dispersal, release, or escape of chemicals, waste, acid, and other pollutants. • Pollution-exclusion clauses may take one of two forms: (1) sudden and accidental, and (2) absolute. The sudden-and-accidental clause, usually limited to policies issued before 1985, contains an exception under which the damages are covered (i.e., exempted from the exclusion) if the discharge or other release was sudden and accidental. The absolute pollution exclusion, in most policies issued since 1985, does not contain this exception. [Cases: Insurance 2278(17). C.J.S. Insurance §§ 954, 1127.]

sistership exclusion.A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for damages arising from the withdrawal, inspection, repair, replacement, or loss of use of the insured's product or work, to the extent that the product or work is withdrawn or recalled from the market because of a known or suspected defect or deficiency. — Also termed recall exclusion. [Cases: Insurance 2278(24).]

EXCLUSIONARY HEARING

exclusionary hearing. See HEARING.

EXCLUSIONARY RULE

exclusionary rule. 1. Evidence. Any rule that excludes or suppresses evidence < despite many exceptions, hearsay has long been inadmissible under an exclusionary rule>. — Also termed exclusionary evidence rule. [Cases: Evidence 154. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 252–258.] 2. Criminal procedure. A rule that excludes or suppresses evidence obtained in violation of an accused person's constitutional rights <in accordance with the exclusionary rule, the court did not admit the drugs into evidence because they had been obtained during a warrantless search of the defendant's home>. See FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE; GOOD-FAITH EXCEPTION. [Cases: Criminal Law 394. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 770.]

“The deterrence of unreasonable searches and seizures is a major purpose of the exclusionary rule.... But the rule serves other purposes as well. There is, for example, ... ‘the imperative of judicial integrity,’ namely, that the courts do not become ‘accomplices in willful disobedience of a Constitution they are sworn to uphold.’ ... A third purpose of the exclusionary rule ... is that of ‘assuring the people — all potential victims of unlawful government conduct — that the government would not profit from its lawless behavior, thus minimizing the risk of seriously undermining popular trust in government.’ ” Wayne R. LaFare & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 3.1, at 107 (2d ed. 1992) (quoting Elkins v. United States, 364 U.S. 206, 222, 80 S.Ct. 1437, 1447 (1960); United States v. Calandra, 414 U.S. 338, 357, 94 S.Ct. 613, 626 (1974) (Brennan, J., dissenting)).

“In the simplest of exclusionary rule cases, the challenged evidence is quite clearly ‘direct’ or ‘primary’ in its relationship to the prior arrest, search, interrogation, lineup or other identification procedure. Such is the case when that evidence is an identification occurring at the confrontation between suspect and victim or witness, a confession or admission made in response to questioning, or physical evidence obtained by search or arrest. Not infrequently, however, challenged evidence is ‘secondary’ or ‘derivative’ in character. This occurs when, for example, a confession is obtained after an illegal arrest, physical evidence is located after an illegally obtained confession, or an in-court identification is made following an illegally conducted pretrial identification. In these situations, it is necessary to determine whether the derivative evidence is ‘tainted’ by the prior constitutional or other violation.” Id. § 9.3, at 471.

excommunication, n. Eccles. law. A sentence of censure pronounced by a spiritual court for an offense falling under ecclesiastical cognizance; expulsion from religious society or community. • In England, an excommunicated person was formerly subject to various civil disabilities, such as an inability to be a juror, to be a witness in any court, or to sue to recover lands or money due. These penalties were abolished by the Ecclesiastical Courts Act (1813). St. 53 Geo. 3, ch. 127. —

Also termed excommengement. — excommunicate,vb.

“Closely allied to outlawry is excommunication; it is in fact an ecclesiastical outlawry, and, like temporal outlawry, though once it was the law's last and most terrible weapon against the obstinate offender, it is now regarded as a normal process for compelling the appearance in court of those who are accused. Indeed as regards the laity, since the spiritual courts can not direct a seizure of the body, lands, or goods, those courts must, if mere citations fail to produce an appearance, at once have recourse to their last weapon. Then, as ordained by William the Conqueror, the lay power comes to their aid. If the excommunicate does not seek absolution within forty days (this period seems to be fixed already in the twelfth century), the ordinary will signify this to the kind; a writ for the arrest of the offender will be issued, and he will be kept in prison until he makes his submission.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 500 (2d ed. 1899).

EXCOMMUNICATO CAPIENDO

excommunicato capiendo (eks-k<<schwa>>-myoo-ni-kay-toh kap-ee-en-doh). [Latin] Hist. EXCULPATORY CLAUSE exculpatory clause. A contractual provision relieving a party from liability resulting from a negligent or wrongful act. • A will or a trust may contain an exculpatory clause purporting to immunize a fiduciary from a breach of duty; the clause may reduce the degree of care and prudence required of the fiduciary. But courts generally find that if an exculpatory clause in a will or trust seeks to confer absolute immunity, it is void as being against public policy. See EXEMPTION CLAUSE. [Cases: Contracts 114. C.J.S. Contracts § 271.]

EXCULPATORY EVIDENCE

exculpatory evidence. See EVIDENCE.

EXCULPATORY-NO DOCTRINE

exculpatory-no doctrine. Criminal law. The principle that a person cannot be charged with making a false statement for falsely denying guilt in response to an investigator's question. • This doctrine is based on the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. But the U.S. Supreme Court has overruled this doctrine in federal law. Brogan v. United States, 522 U.S. 398, 118 S.Ct. 805 (1998). [Cases: Fraud 68.10(1).]

“Formerly all writs which passed the signet were procured by presentation of a bill (or petition) for such writ. The bill was perused and considered by the Lord Ordinary on the Bills, and if he was satisfied, the bill was passed and the writ issued: the latter bearing the words ex deliberatione Dominorum Concilii to signify that the bill had been considered. These words are still appended to almost all writs which pass the signet, but they are now only words of style, since the writs are now passed periculo petentis without being submitted to the Lords.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 196–97 (4th ed. 1894).

EX DELICTO

ex delicto (eks d<<schwa>>-lik-toh), adj. & adv.[Latin “from a wrong”] 1. Arising from a crime or tort <action ex delicto>. • Although ex delicto refers most commonly to a tort in modern usage, it referred historically to both torts and crimes. Cf. IN DELICTO; EX CONTRACTU. 2.Int'l law. Rare. As a consequence of a crime or tort <because they were counterfeit, the goods were seized and condemned ex delicto>.

Validation of a written instrument, such as a contract or will, by fulfilling the necessary legal requirements <delivery of the goods completed the contract's execution>. [Cases: Contracts 34; Sales 61; Vendor and Purchaser 23; Wills 108–129.] 3. Judicial enforcement of a money judgment, usu. by seizing and selling the judgment debtor's property <even if the plaintiff receives a judgment against the foreign debtor, execution is unlikely>. — Also termed (in Scots law) diligence. [Cases: Execution 1; Federal Civil Procedure 2691.C.J.S. Executions §§ 2, 15.] 4. A court order directing a sheriff or other officer to enforce a judgment, usu. by seizing and selling the judgment debtor's property <the court issued the execution authorizing seizure of the car>. — Also termed writ of execution; judgment execution; general execution. [Cases: Execution 74; Federal Civil Procedure 2691.C.J.S. Executions § 63.]

“A writ of execution is an authorization to an executive officer, issued from a court in which a final judgment has been rendered, for the purpose of carrying such judgment into force and effect. It is founded upon the judgment, must generally be conformed to it in every respect, and the plaintiff is always entitled to it to obtain a satisfaction of his claim, unless his right has been suspended by proceedings in the nature of an appeal or by his own agreement.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 26, at 50 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

executor to the tenor. Eccles. law. A person who is not named executor in the will but who performs duties similar to those of an executor.

general executor. An executor who has the power to administer a decedent's entire estate until its final settlement.

independent executor. An executor who, unlike an ordinary executor, can administer the estate with very little supervision by the probate court. • Only a few states — mostly in the West and Southwest — allow testators to designate independent executors. But lawyers routinely write wills that relieve a trusted executor from obtaining appraisals, from providing inventories and surety bonds, and from obtaining court approval “to the maximum extent permitted by law.” The Uniform Probate Code endorses independent administration, and it is the usual process unless a party demands court-supervised administration. — Also termed nonintervention executor.

joint executor. One of two or more persons named in a will as executor of an estate. — Also termed coexecutor. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 123. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators § 961.]

EXECUTORY INTEREST

executory interest. A future interest, held by a third person, that either cuts off another's interest or begins after the natural termination of a preceding estate. Cf. REMAINDER. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.]

“What is an executory interest? Here is a pretty good definition: An executory interest is any future interest created in a person other than the transferor that is not a remainder. Here are five classic examples of executory interest: (1) O transfers ‘to A for life; then, one day after A's death, to the heirs of A.’ The transfer creates a springing executory interest in those who will be A's heirs. (2) O transfers ‘to A for 200 years if he shall so long live, then to the heirs of A.’ This transfer also creates a springing executory interest in A's prospective heirs. (3) O transfers ‘to A and his heirs five years from the date of this deed.’ A owns a springing executory interest. (4) O, when B is fifteen, transfers ‘to A for life; then no sooner than one day after A's death, to B and his heirs if B ever reaches 21.’ B owns a springing executory interest. (5) O transfers ‘to A and his heirs; but if A marries X, to B and his heirs.’ B owns a shifting executory interest.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 80 (2d ed. 1984).

EXEMPTION CLAUSE

exemption clause. A contractual provision providing that a party will not be liable for damages for which that party would otherwise have ordinarily been liable. Cf. EXCEPTION CLAUSE; EXCULPATORY CLAUSE; INDEMNITY CLAUSE. [Cases: Contracts 114. C.J.S. Contracts § 271.]

“An exemption clause may take many forms, but all such clauses have one thing in common in that they exempt a party from a liability which he would have borne had it not been for the clause. In some cases an exemption clause merely relieves a party from certain purely contractual obligations, for example, the duties of a seller in a contract of sale regarding the quality and fitness of the goods. In other cases exemption clauses go further and protect the party not merely from contractual liability but even from liability which would otherwise have arisen in tort. For example, a shipping company's ticket may exempt the company from liability to the passenger for any injuries, however caused. Now if the passenger is injured as a result of the negligence of the company's employees, that would, in the normal way, give rise to an action in tort for negligence, quite apart from the contract.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 167 (3d ed. 1981).

EXEMPTION EQUIVALENT

exemption equivalent. The maximum value of assets that one can transfer to another before incurring a federal gift and estate tax.

EXHAUSTION OF REMEDIES exhaustion of remedies. The doctrine that, if an administrative remedy is provided by statute, a claimant must seek relief first from the administrative body before judicial relief is available. • The doctrine's purpose is to maintain comity between the courts and administrative agencies and to ensure that courts will not be burdened by cases in which judicial relief is unnecessary. — Also termed exhaustion of administrative remedies. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 229. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 38–42.]

“The traditional rule can ... be fairly simply stated. A litigant must normally exhaust state ‘legislative’ or ‘administrative’ remedies before challenging the state action in federal court. He or she need not normally exhaust state ‘judicial’ remedies. The rationale for this distinction is that until the administrative process is complete, it cannot be certain that the party will need judicial relief, but when the case becomes appropriate for judicial determination, he or she may choose whether to resort to a state or federal court for that relief. The word ‘normally’ is required in both branches of the rule.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 49, at 313 (5th ed. 1994).

vicarious exhaustion of remedies. The rule that if one member of a class satisfies a requirement to exhaust administrative remedies, that is enough for all others similarly situated to be considered as having exhausted the remedies. — Often shortened to vicarious exhaustion. [Cases: Administrative Law 229.]

EXHAUSTION-OF-RIGHTS DOCTRINE

exhaustion-of-rights doctrine. Int'l law. The principle that once the owner of an intellectual-property right has placed a product covered by that right into the marketplace, the right to control how the product is resold within that internal market is lost. • Within a common market, such as the European Union, the doctrine also applies to the import and export of the goods between member nations. Cf. PATENT-EXHAUSTION DOCTRINE.

EXHAUSTION OF STATE REMEDIES exhaustion of state remedies. The doctrine that an available state remedy must be exhausted in certain types of cases before a party can gain access to a federal court. • For example, a state prisoner must exhaust all state remedies before a federal court will hear a petition for habeas corpus. [Cases: Habeas Corpus 319–352.]

ex lege (eks lee-jee orlay-gay). [Latin] By virtue of law; as a matter of law <property forfeited ex lege>.

“Antecedent rights ‘in personam’ ... either arise or do not arise out of a contract.... In the latter case, since they arise from facts of various kinds to which it pleases the Law to affix similar results, we shall describe them as rights ‘ex lege’; and it will be convenient to consider the rights which arise thus variously before treating of those which arise solely from contract.... The rights which we describe as arising ‘ex lege’ were described by the Roman lawyers as arising ‘quasi ex contractu,’ and more simply, ‘ex variis causarum figuris.’ ” Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 246–47 (13th ed. 1924).

EX LEGIBUS

ex legibus (eks lee-j<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>s). [Latin “according to the laws”] Hist. To be interpreted according to both the letter and the spirit of the law.

EX NOBILI OFFICIO

ex nobili officio (eks nob-i-II <<schwa>>-fish-ee-oh). [Latin “by virtue of its noble office”] Scots law. (Of a judicial act) done as a matter of equity. See NOBILI OFFICIUM.

EX OFFICIO

ex officio (eks <<schwa>>-fish-ee-oh), adv. & adj. [Latin] By virtue or because of an office; by virtue of the authority implied by office. • The term is often misused as a synonym for “nonvoting.” Some meetings mistakenly label their regularly invited guests as “ex officio members” when in fact they are not members at all; others mistakenly refer to the nonvoting members as “ex officio members” even though some nonvoting members are present only in an individual capacity and not by virtue of office, or even though some voting members also serve ex officio. But an ex officio member is a voting member unless the applicable governing document provides otherwise.

“Frequently boards include ex-officio members — that is, persons who are members of the board by virtue of an office or committee chairmanship held in the society, or in the parent state or national society or federation or some allied group; or — sometimes in boards outside of organized societies — by virtue of a public office. In the executive board of a society, if the ex-officio member of the board is under the authority of the society (that is, if he is a member, officer, or employee of the society), there is no distinction between him and the other board members. If the ex-officio member is not under the authority of the society, he has all the privileges of board membership, including the right to make motions and to vote, but none of the obligations — just as in a case, for example, where the governor of a state is ex officio a trustee of a private academy.” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 49, at 466 (10th ed. 2000).

EX OFFICIO INFORMATION

ex officio information. English law. A criminal information filed by the attorney general ex officio on behalf of the Crown, in the Court of King's Bench, for offenses more immediately affecting the government, as distinguished from informations in which the Crown is the nominal prosecutor.

EX OFFICIO JUSTICE

ex officio justice. A judge who serves on a commission or board only because the law requires the presence of a judge rather than because the judge was selected for the position.

EX OFFICIO MEMBER

ex officio member. See member ex officio under MEMBER.

EX OFFICIO SERVICE

ex officio service (eks <<schwa>>-fish-ee-oh). A service that the law imposes on an official by virtue of the office held, such as a local sheriff's duty to perform marriage ceremonies. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 110. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 234–245.]

EXONERATE

exonerate (eg-zon-<<schwa>>-rayt), vb. 1. To free from responsibility < exonerate from the payment of the debt>. Cf. EXCULPATE. 2. To free from encumbrances < exonerate the property from the mortgage lien>. — exonerative (eg-zon-<<schwa>>-r-ay-tiv or -<<schwa>>-tiv), adj.

EXONERATION

exoneration (eg-zon-<<schwa>>-ray-sh<<schwa>>n). 1. The removal of a burden, charge, responsibility, or duty. 2. The right to be reimbursed by reason of having paid money that another person should have paid. 3. The equitable right of a surety — confirmed by statute in many states — to proceed to compel the principal debtor to satisfy the obligation, as when, even though the surety would have a right of reimbursement, it would be inequitable for the surety to be compelled to perform if the principal debtor can satisfy the obligation. • When a testator leaves a gift of property encumbered by a mortgage or lien, the doctrine of exoneration operates to satisfy the encumbrance from the general assets of the estate. Many states have abandoned the common-law rule in favor of exoneration. See EQUITY OF EXONERATION; QUIA TIMET. [Cases: Principal and Surety 179. C.J.S. Principal and Surety § 227.]

EXONERATION, SUIT FOR

exoneration, suit for. See SUIT FOR EXONERATION.

EX PARTE

ex parte (eks pah-tee), adv. [Latin "from the part"] On or from one party only, usu. without notice to or argument from the adverse party <the judge conducted the hearing ex parte>.

ex parte, adj. Done or made at the instance and for the benefit of one party only, and without notice to, or argument by, any person adversely interested; of or relating to court action taken by one party without notice to the other, usu. for temporary or emergency relief <an ex parte hearing> <an ex parte injunction>. • Despite the traditional one-sidedness of ex parte matters, some courts now require notice to the opposition before what they call an “ex parte hearing.” — Sometimes spelled exparte. — ex parte,adv.

EX PARTE APPLICATION

ex parte application.See ex parte motion under MOTION(1).

EX PARTE COMMUNICATION

ex parte communication.See COMMUNICATION.

EXPRESSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS

expressio unius est exclusio alterius (ek-spres[h]-ee-oh yoo-nI-*<<schwa>>s est eks-kloo-zhee-oh al-t<<schwa>>-rI-<<schwa>>*s). [Law Latin] A canon of construction holding that to express or include one thing implies the exclusion of the other, or of the alternative. • For example, the rule that “each citizen is entitled to vote” implies that noncitizens are not entitled to vote. — Also termed inclusio unius est exclusio alterius; expressum facit cessare tacitum. Cf. EJUSDEM GENERIS; NOSCITUR A SOCIIS; RULE OF RANK. [Cases: Contracts 152; Statutes 195. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 307, 318–322, 327, 331; Statutes § 323.]

“Several Latin maxims masquerade as rules of interpretation while doing nothing more than describing results reached by other means. The best example is probably expressio unius est exclusio alterius, which is a rather elaborate, mysterious sounding, and anachronistic way of describing the negative implication. Far from being a rule, it is not even lexicographically accurate, because it is simply not true, generally, that the mere express conferral of a right or privilege in one kind of situation implies the denial of the equivalent right or privilege in other kinds. Sometimes it does and sometimes it does not, and whether it does or does not depends on the particular circumstances of context. Without contextual support, therefore, there is not even a mild presumption here. Accordingly, the maxim is at best a description, after the fact, of what the court has discovered from context.” Reed Dickerson, The Interpretation and Application of Statutes 234–35 (1975).

“The canon expressio unius est exclusio alterius is ... based on the assumption of legislative omniscience, because it would make sense only if all omissions in legislative drafting were deliberate. Although this canon seemed dead for a while, it has been resurrected by the Supreme Court to provide a basis for refusing to create private remedies for certain statutory violations. Its recent disparagement by a unanimous Court [in Herman & MacLean v. Huddleston, 459 U.S. 375, 386 n.23, 103 S.Ct. 683, 690 n. 23 (1983)] puts its future in some doubt but more likely confirms that judicial use of canons of construction is opportunistic.” Richard A. Posner, The Federal Courts: Crisis and Reform 282 (1985).

“Where it is desired not only to rescind an action but to express very strong disapproval, legislative bodies have voted to rescind the objectionable action and expunge it from the record. When a record has been expunged, the chief legislative officer should cross out the words or draw a line around them in the original minutes and write across them the words, ‘Expunged by order of the senate (or house),’ giving the date of the order. This statement should be signed by the chief legislative officer. The word ‘expunged’ must not be so blotted as not to be readable, as otherwise it would be impossible to determine whether more was expunged than ordered. When the minutes are printed or published, the expunged portion is omitted.” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 444, at 296–97 (2000).

extortion,n.1. The offense committed by a public official who illegally obtains property under the color of office; esp., an official's collection of an unlawful fee. — Also termed common-law extortion. [Cases: Extortion and Threats 1.]

“The dividing line between bribery and extortion is shadowy. If one other than the officer corruptly takes the initiative and offers what he knows is not an authorized fee, it is bribery and not extortion. On the other hand, if the officer corruptly makes an unlawful demand which is paid by one who does not realize it is not the fee authorized for the service rendered, it is extortion and not bribery. In theory it would seem possible for an officer to extort a bribe under such circumstances that he would be guilty of either offense whereas the outraged citizen would be excused.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 538 (3d ed. 1982).

2. The act or practice of obtaining something or compelling some action by illegal means, as by force or coercion. — Also termed statutory extortion. [Cases: Extortion and Threats 25.1. C.J.S. EXTRAVAGANTES Extravagantes (ek-strav-<<schwa>>-gan-teez), n. pl. [Law Latin “wanderings”] Eccles. law. Papal constitutions and decretal epistles of Pope John XXII and certain of his successors. • These epistles were so called because they were not digested or arranged with the other papal decretals, but appeared detached from canon law. The term remained even after the epistles were later included in the body of canon law.

EXTRA VIAM

extra viam (eks-tr<<schwa>> vI-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “out of the way”] A plaintiff’s responsive pleading in a trespass action, asserting that the defendant’s claim of a right-of-way across the plaintiff’s land is not a defense to the action because the defendant strayed from the supposed right-of-way. [Cases: Trespass 42. C.J.S. Trespass § 90.]

EXTRA VIRES

extra vires (eks-tr<<schwa>> vI-reez or veer-eez). See ULTRA VIRES.

EXTRINSIC FRAUD

extrinsic fraud. See FRAUD.

EX TURPI CAUSA

ex turpi causa (eks t<<schwa>>r-plkaw-z<<schwa>>). [Latin] From an immoral consideration. • This phrase, a shortened form of the maxim ex turpi causa non oritur actio (“from an immoral consideration an action does not arise”), expresses the principle that a party does not have a right to enforce performance of an agreement founded on a consideration that is contrary to the public interest. [Cases: Action 4; Contracts 138(1). C.J.S. Actions §§ 29–30; Contracts §§ 280–281, 283–284, 290, 292, 300.]

“The doctrine ex turpi causa has made its way into the law as an extension of a moral principle. If it is misused, the principle suffers. Moreover, its misuse is a symptom of a disease of thought that debilitates the law and morals. This is the failure to recognize that there is a fundamental difference between the law that expresses a moral principle and the law that is only a social regulation. If only in the growth of English law that distinction had been maintained, much of the arbitrariness and the absurdities in the cases I have cited would have been avoided. There is a dictum of Lord Wright's which may some day be used as a foundation for a change of heart. Speaking of the maxim ex turpi causa, he said: ‘In these days there are many statutory offences which are the subject of the criminal law and in that sense are crimes, but which would, it seems, afford no moral justification for a court to apply the maxim’. Beresford v. Royal Insurance (1937), 2 KB. at 220.” Patrick Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals 60 (1968).

EXUERE PATRIAM

exuere patriam (eg-z[y]oo<<schwa>>-ree pay-tree<<schwa>>m), vb. [Latin] To renounce

EX VISCERIBUS VERBORUM

ex visceribus verborum (eks vi-ser-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>s v<<schwa>>r-bor-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] From the mere words (and nothing else); from the words themselves.

EX VISITATIONE DEI

ex visitatione Dei (eks viz-<<schwa>>-tay-shee-oh-nee dee-I). [Latin] 1. By the dispensation of God; by reason of physical incapacity. • Anciently, when a prisoner who was being arraigned stood silently instead of pleading, a jury was impaneled to inquire whether the prisoner obstinately stood mute or was dumb ex visitatione Dei. 2. By natural causes as opposed to violent ones. • This phrase sometimes appears in a coroner's report when death results from a disease or another natural cause.

EX VISU SCRIPTIONIS

ex visu scriptionis (eks vI-s[y]oo [or -z[y]oo] skrip-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] From the sight of the writing; from having seen a person write. • This phrase describes a method of proving handwriting.

EX VI TERMINI

ex vi termini (eks vIt<<schwa>>r-m<<schwa>>-nI). [Law Latin] From or by the force of the term; from the very meaning of the expression used.

EX VOLUNTATE

ex voluntate (eks vol-<<schwa>>n-tay-tee). [Latin] Voluntarily; from free will or choice.

EYRE

eyre (air). [Old French eire “journey, march”] Hist. A system of royal courts sent out into the counties by the Crown to investigate allegations of wrongdoing, to try cases, and to raise revenue for the Crown through the levy of fines. • The eyre system was abolished in the 14th century. See ARTICLES OF THE EYRE ; JUSTICE IN EYRE.

“In 1176 the itinerant justices were organised into six circuits.... The justices assigned to these circuits, who numbered as many as twenty or thirty at a time in the 1180s, were known as justiciae errantes (later justiciarii in itinere, justices in eyre); and the French word ‘eyre’ became the name of one of the most prominent forms of royal justice until the time of Edward III. Every so often a ‘general eyre’ would visit a county, bringing the king’s government with it.... The general eyres were not merely law courts; they were a way of supervising local government through itinerant central government.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 19 (3d ed. 1990).

eyrer (air-⟨schwa⟩r), vb. [Law French] Hist. To travel or journey; to go about.

FACIAL CHALLENGE

facial challenge. See CHALLENGE(1).

FACIALLY SUFFICIENT

facially sufficient, adj. (Of a document) appearing valid on its face. • A search-warrant affidavit's facial sufficiency will not protect it from attack if the affidavit is based on false testimony by the officer making the affidavit. See FRANKS HEARING.

FACIALLY VOID

facially void. See VOID.

FACIAS

facias (fay-shee-<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] That you cause. • Facias is used in writs as an emphatic word. See FIERI FACIAS; LEVARI FACIAS; SCIRE FACIAS. It also appears in the phrase ut facias (“so that you do”). See DO UT FACIAS; FACIO UT DES; FACIO UT FACIAS.

FACIES

facies (fay-shee-eez). [Latin] The outward appearance or surface (of a thing).

FACILE

facile (fas-<<schwa>>l), adj. Scots law. (Of a mentally deficient person) so susceptible to outside influence as to need legal protection (such as a guardian).

FACILITATE

facilitate, vb. Criminal law. To make the commission of a crime easier. • Property (such as a vehicle or home) that facilitates the commission of certain offenses may be forfeited. — facilitator, n.

FACILITATED NEGOTIATION

facilitated negotiation. See MEDIATION.

FACILITATION

facilitation, n. 1. The act or an instance of aiding or helping; esp., in criminal law, the act of making it easier for another person to commit a crime. 2. CONCILIATION.

FACILITY AND CIRCUMVENTION facility and circumvention. Scots law. Conduct intended to persuade a person vulnerable to outside influence to act against his or her own interest. • Any contract brought under conditions of facility and circumvention would be void. — Sometimes shortened to facility.

FACILITY-OF-PAYMENT CLAUSE

[Cases: Insurance 3468.] 2. Trusts. A trust provision that allows anyone who owes money to an incapacitated trust beneficiary to discharge the debt by paying the money owed to the custodial trustee.

FACIO UT DES

facio ut des (fay-shee-oh <<schwa>>t deez). [Latin "I do so that you give"] Civil law. 1. An innominate contract in which a person agrees to do something for recompense. See innominate contract under CONTRACT. 2. The consideration in such a contract.

FACIO UT FACIAS

facio ut facias (fay-shee-oh <<schwa>>t fay-shee-<<schwa>>s). [Latin "I do that you may do"] Civil law. 1. An innominate contract in which a person agrees to do something for another person who agrees to do something in return, such as an agreement to marry. 2. The consideration in such a contract. See innominate contract under CONTRACT.

"These valuable considerations are divided by the civilians into four species.... The second species is, facio, ut facias: as when I agree with a man to do his work for him, if he will do mine for me; or if two persons agree to marry together; or to do any positive acts on both sides. Or, it may be to forbear on one side in consideration of something done on the other; as, that in consideration A, the tenant, will repair his house, B, the landlord, will not sue him for waste." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 444 (1766).

FACSIMILE

facsimile (fak-sim-<<schwa>>-lee). 1. An exact copy. 2. FAX.

FACSIMILE SIGNATURE

facsimile signature. See SIGNATURE.

FACSIMILE TRANSMISSION

facsimile transmission. 1. FAX(1), 2. FAX(3).

FACT

fact. 1. Something that actually exists; an aspect of reality <it is a fact that all people are mortal>. • Facts include not just tangible things, actual occurrences, and relationships, but also states of mind such as intentions and opinions. 2. An actual or alleged event or circumstance, as distinguished from its legal effect, consequence, or interpretation <the jury made a finding of fact>.3. An evil deed; a crime <an accessory after the fact>.

“A fact is any act or condition of things, assumed (for the moment) as happening or existing.”
John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 7 (1935).

ablative fact. See divestitive fact.

adjudicative fact (<<schwa>>-joo-di-kay-tiv or -k<<schwa>>-tiv). A controlling or operative fact, rather than a background fact; a fact that concerns the parties to a judicial or administrative proceeding and that helps the court or agency determine how the law applies to those parties. • For example, adjudicative facts include those that the jury weighs. Cf. legislative fact. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 442. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 115.]

alienative fact (ay-lee-<<schwa>>-nay-tiv or ay-lee-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>-tiv). A fact that divests a person of a right by transferring it to another.

ancient fact. A fact about a person, thing, or event that existed or occurred a very long time ago, and about which no living person has firsthand knowledge. — Also termed fact in pais.

collateral fact. A fact not directly connected to the issue in dispute, esp. because it involves a different transaction from the one at issue. [Cases: Evidence 99. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2–5, 197–199, 204, 206.]

collative fact. See investitive fact.

denotative fact (dee-noh-tay-tiv or di-noh-t<<schwa>>-tiv). A fact relevant to the use of a nonlegal term in a legal rule.

destitutive fact. See divestitive fact.

dispositive fact (dis-poz-<<schwa>>-tiv). 1. A fact that confers rights or causes the loss of rights. • A dispositive fact may be either an investitive or a divestitive fact. — Also termed vestitive fact (ves-t<<schwa>>-tiv). 2. A fact that is decisive of a legal matter; evidence that definitively resolves a legal issue or controversy. See DISPOSITION.

divestitive fact (di-ves-t<<schwa>>-tiv or dI-). A fact that causes the loss of rights; an act or event modifying or extinguishing a legal relation. — Also termed extinctive fact; destitutive fact; ablative fact.

elemental fact. See ultimate fact.

evaluative fact. A fact used to assess an action as being reasonable or negligent.

evidentiary fact (ev-i-den-sh<<schwa>>-ree). 1. A fact that is necessary for or leads to the determination of an ultimate fact. — Also termed predicate fact. 2. A fact that furnishes evidence of the existence of some other fact. — Also termed evidential fact. 3. See fact in evidence.

exonerative fact (eg-zon-<<schwa>>-<<schwa>>-tiv or -ay-tiv). A divestitive fact that extinguishes a duty.

extinctive fact. See divestitive fact.

fact in evidence. A fact that a tribunal considers in reaching a conclusion; a fact that has been admitted into evidence in a trial or hearing. — Also written fact-in-evidence. — Also termed evidentiary fact.

“A fact-in-evidence, or, briefly, evidence, signifies any facts considered by the tribunal as data to persuade them to reach a reasoned belief upon a probandum. This process of thought by which the tribunal reasons from fact to probandum is termed inference.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 7 (1935).

fact in issue. (usu. pl.) 1. Hist. A fact that one party alleges and that the other controverts. 2. A fact to be determined by a fact-trier; PROBANDUM. — Also written fact-in-issue. — Also termed principal fact.

“A fact-in-issue is a fact as to the correctness of which the tribunal, under the law of the case, must be persuaded; the term ‘probandum’ (thing to be proved) will here be used as the convenient single word.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 7 (1935).

fact in pais. See ancient fact.

fact material to risk. Insurance. A fact that may increase the risk and that, if disclosed, might induce the insurer either to decline to insure or to require a higher premium. [Cases: Insurance 2958, 2963. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 549, 565, 580, 582, 586, 760.]

foundational fact. See predicate fact.

immaterial fact. A fact that is not relevant to a matter in issue.

impositive fact. An investitive fact that imposes duties.

inferential fact. A fact established by conclusions drawn from other evidence rather than from direct testimony or evidence; a fact derived logically from other facts. [Cases: Evidence 595. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1300, 1341.]

investitive fact (in-ves-t*<<schwa>>-tiv). A fact that confers rights. — Also termed collative fact (k<<schwa>>*-lay-tiv).

judicial fact. A fact that the court accepts as proved without hearing evidence. See JUDICIAL NOTICE. [Cases: Criminal Law 304; Evidence 1. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 657; Evidence §§ 8–11, 106.]

jurisdictional fact. (usu. pl.) A fact that must exist for a court to properly exercise its jurisdiction over a case, party, or thing. See JURISDICTIONAL-FACT DOCTRINE.

legal fact.A fact that triggers a particular legal consequence.

legislative fact.A fact that explains a particular law's rationality and that helps a court or agency determine the law's content and application. • Legislative facts are not ordinarily specific to the parties in a proceeding. Cf. adjudicative fact.

“[L]egislative fact includes matters needed to construe statutes or regulations, and factual assumptions a court makes when called upon to ‘legislate.’ Examples of the latter might include the fact that spouses will communicate less if they are not granted a privilege covering their confidences, or that marital harmony will be strained if spouses can be compelled to testify against each other — facts which might be useful in helping a court decide whether to create or continue a common-law marital privilege Obviously, legislative facts of this nature do not and cannot meet the indisputability criterion of the Rule [Fed. R. Evid. 201], nor are they required to.” Paul F. Rothstein, The Federal Rules of Evidence 35–36 (3d ed. 2003).

material fact.A fact that is significant or essential to the issue or matter at hand. [Cases: Evidence 143; Federal Civil Procedure 2470.1; Judgment 181(2). C.J.S. Evidence §§ 197, 201–204.]

minor fact.A subordinate fact or circumstance.

operative fact. 1. A fact that affects an existing legal relation, esp. a legal claim. • When applying the hearsay rule, this term distinguishes between out-of-court statements that are operative facts (e.g., a party's saying “I agree to reimburse you” in a case for breach of oral contract), and hearsay, out-of-court statements that only relate to operative facts (e.g., “Joel told me Mike said he would reimburse me”).2. A fact that constitutes the transaction or event on which a claim or defense is based.

physical fact.A fact having a physical existence, such as a fingerprint left at a crime scene.

predicate fact (pred-<<schwa>>-kit).1. A fact from which a presumption or inference arises. 2. A fact necessary to the operation of an evidentiary rule. • For example, there must actually be a conspiracy for the co-conspirator exception to the hearsay rule to apply. — Also termed foundational fact; evidentiary fact. [Cases: Evidence 53. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2, 130–132, 134, 1341.]

primary fact.A fact that can be established by direct testimony and from which inferences are made leading to ultimate facts. See ultimate fact.

principal fact.See fact in issue, ultimate fact.

private fact.A fact that has not been made public. • Whether a fact is private often arises in invasion-of-privacy claims. Cf. public fact.

probative fact (proh-b<<schwa>>-tiv). A fact in evidence used to prove an ultimate fact, such as skid marks used to show speed as a predicate to a finding of negligence.

psychological fact.A fact that is related to mental state, such as motive or knowledge.

public fact. For the purpose of an invasion-of-privacy claim, a fact that is in a public record or in the public domain. Cf. private fact. [Cases: Torts 8.5(7). C.J.S. Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 6, 12–14, 16, 22–24, 26–27, 29, 31, 39, 42.]

relative fact. A fact incidental to another fact; a minor fact.

simulated fact. A fabricated fact intended to mislead; a lie.

translative fact (trans- or tranz-lay-tiv). A fact by means of which a right is transferred from one person to another; a fact that fulfills the double function of terminating one person's right to an object and of originating another's right to it.

transvestitive fact. A fact that is simultaneously investitive and divestitive.

“When a person transfers the rights he has to another, the transfer divests him of the potestas, and invests that other with it. This is quite distinct from the creation or extinction of the potestas. A new descriptive term is wanted, and after the analogy of the other words, ‘transvestitive’ has been coined for the purpose.” W.A. Hunter, A Systematic and Historical Exposition of Roman Law 141 (4th ed. 1902).

ultimate fact. A fact essential to the claim or the defense. — Also termed elemental fact; principal fact.

undisputed fact. An uncontested or admitted fact.

vestitive fact. See dispositive fact (1).

FACTA

facta (fak-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] pl. FACTUM.

FACT-FINDER

fact-finder. One or more persons — such as jurors in a trial or administrative-law judges in a hearing — who hear testimony and review evidence to rule on a factual issue. — Also termed finder of fact; fact-trier or trier of fact (in a judicial proceeding); fact-finding board (for a group or committee). See FINDING OF FACT.

FACT-FINDING

fact-finding. 1. The process of taking evidence to determine the truth about a disputed point of fact. 2. Int'l law. The gathering of information for purposes of international relations, including the peaceful settlement of disputes and the supervision of international agreements. • Examples of fact-finding include legislative tours and the acquisition of information required for making decisions at an international level. — Also termed inquiry.

“[F]act-finding must be as impartial and as fair to the parties as procedural and evidentiary rules can render it without making the inquiry's task impossible, not merely for ethical reasons, but in order to maximize the credibility and impact of the facts found. To this end, fact-finders must develop procedures that sharply distinguish them from those bodies that assemble prosecutorial evidence.” Thomas M. Franck & H. Scott Fairley, Procedural Due Process in Human Rights Fact-Finding by International Agencies, 74 Am. J. Int'l L. 308, 310 (1980).

3. A method of alternative dispute resolution in which an impartial third party determines and studies the facts and positions of disputing parties that have reached an impasse, with a view toward clarifying the issues and helping the parties work through their dispute. [Cases: Arbitration 1. C.J.S. Arbitration §§ 2–3.]

FACT-FINDING BOARD

fact-finding board. See FACT-FINDER.

FACTION

faction. A number of citizens, whether a majority or a minority, who are united and motivated by a common impulse or interest that is adverse to the rights of others or to the permanent or aggregate interests of the community. • This definition is adapted from The Federalist, No. 10.

FACTIO TESTAMENTI

factio testamenti (fak-shee-oh tes-t<<schwa>>-men-tl). See TESTAMENTI FACTIO.

FACT ISSUE

fact issue. See issue of fact under ISSUE(1).

FACTO

facto (fak-toh), adj. In or by the fact. See DE FACTO; IPSO FACTO.

FACTO ET ANIMO

facto et animo (fak-toh et an-<<schwa>>-moh). [Latin] In fact and intent < taking possession facto et animo>.

FACTOR

factor, n. 1. An agent or cause that contributes to a particular result < punishment was a factor in the court's decision>. 2. An agent who is employed to sell property for the principal and who possesses or controls the property; a person who receives and sells goods for a commission < a factor was employed to sell goods for the company>. • A factor differs from a broker because the factor possesses or controls the property. — Also termed commission merchant; del credere bailiff. Cf. BROKER. [Cases: Factors 1. C.J.S. Agriculture §§ 163, 165, 178.]

“A factor by the rules of common law and of mercantile usage is an agent to whom goods are consigned for the purpose of sale, and he has possession of the goods, power to sell them in his own name, and a general discretion as to their sale. He may sell them on the usual terms of credit, may receive the price, and give a good discharge to the buyer.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 523 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

3. One who buys accounts receivable at a discount < the company sold its receivables to a factor at only 5% of their stated value>.4. A garnishee <the factor held $400 of the debtor's property when the writ of garnishment was served>. [Cases: Garnishment 13–24.] 5. A person in charge of managing property, esp. real property.

judicial factor.Scots law. An administrator or factor specially appointed by the Court of Session to manage an estate.

FACTORAGE

factorage. 1. The compensation paid to a factor for his or her services. [Cases: Factors 44. C.J.S. Agriculture §§ 171–173, 176–177.] 2. The business of a factor. [Cases: Factors 1, 5.C.J.S. Agriculture §§ 163, 165, 178.]

FACTORING

factoring,n. The buying of accounts receivable at a discount. • The price is discounted because the factor (who buys them) assumes the risk of delay in collection and loss on the accounts receivable. [Cases: Factors 1, 5, 10. C.J.S. Agriculture §§ 163, 165, 178.]

FACTORIZE

factorize (fak-t<<schwa>>-rIz), vb.1.GARNISH(2).2.GARNISH(3).

FACTORIZING PROCESS

factorizing process.A procedure or legal process by which a third party, rather than the creditor, attaches a debtor's property; GARNISHMENT. — Also termed trustee process; process by foreign attachment. [Cases: Garnishment 1.]

“In Vermont and Connecticut, the [garnishee] is also sometimes called the factor, and the process [of garnishing], factorizing process.” Charles D. Drake, A Treatise on the Law of Suits by Attachment in the United States § 451, at 386 (7th ed. 1891).

FACTOR'S ACT

factor's act.A statute protecting one who buys goods from a factor or agent by creating the presumption that the agent was acting on the owner's behalf and with the owner's approval. [Cases: Factors 58.]

FACTOR'S LIEN

factor's lien.See LIEN.

FACTORY ACT

factory act.A statute that regulates workers' hours, health, and safety. See FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT.

FACTUAL CAUSE

factual cause. See but-for cause under CAUSE(1).

FACTUAL IMPOSSIBILITY factual impossibility. See IMPOSSIBILITY.

FACTUAL PRESUMPTION

factual presumption. See presumption of fact under PRESUMPTION.

FACTUM

factum (fak-t<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] 1. A fact, such as a person's physical presence in a new domicile. 2. An act or deed, such as the due execution of a will. • Over time, factum in this sense came to mean “charter” — that is, the act or deed of conveying land, reduced to written form. See fraud in the factum under FRAUD.

“[I]t is only a short step to holding as a matter of law that a ‘deed’ — and by a deed (fet, factum) men are beginning to mean a sealed piece of parchment — has an operative force of its own which intentions expressed, never so plainly, in other ways have not. The sealing and delivering of the parchment is the contractual act. Further, what is done by ‘deed’ can only be undone by ‘deed.’ ” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 220 (2d ed. 1899).

factum imprestabile (fak-t<<schwa>>m im-pres-tay-b<<schwa>>-lee). [Law Latin] Hist. An act that cannot be performed; an impossibility.

factum juridicum (fak-t<<schwa>>m juu-rid-i-k<<schwa>>m). [Latin] A juridical fact.

factum probandum (fak-t<<schwa>>m pr<<schwa>>-ban-d<<schwa>>m). [Latin] A fact to be proved.

“Evidence is always a relative term. It signifies a relation between two facts, the factum probandum, or proposition to be established, and the factum probans, or material evidencing the proposition. The former is necessarily to be conceived of as hypothetical; it is that which the one party affirms and the other denies, the tribunal being as yet not committed in either direction. The latter is conceived of for practical purposes as existent and is offered as such for the consideration of the tribunal. The latter is brought forward as a reality for the purpose of convincing the tribunal that the former is also a reality.” John Henry Wigmore, Evidence in Trials at Common Law § 2, at 14–15 (Peter Tillers ed., 1983).

factum probans (fak-t<<schwa>>m proh-banz). [Latin] A probative or evidentiary fact; a subsidiary fact tending to prove a principal fact in issue.

factum proprium et recens (fak-t<<schwa>>m proh-pree-<<schwa>>m et ree-senz). [Law Latin] Hist. One's own act recently performed.

3. A statement of facts. 4.BRIEF(1). Pl. facta.

FACTUM OF A WILL

factum of a will.The formal ceremony of making a will; a will's execution by the testator and attestation by the witnesses.

FACT WORK PRODUCT

fact work product.See WORK PRODUCT.

FACULTATIVE CERTIFICATE

facultative certificate (fak-<<schwa>>l-tay-tiv).Insurance. A contract of reinsurance separately negotiated to cover risks under a single insurance policy. • Facultative reinsurance allows the reinsurer the “faculty” of assessing and possibly rejecting a particular risk (esp. if underwriting information is inadequate). [Cases: Insurance 3605. C.J.S. Insurance § 1504.]

FACULTATIVE REINSURANCE facultative reinsurance.See REINSURANCE.

FACULTIES

faculties.Hist. Eccles. law. 1. An authorization granted to a person to do what otherwise would not be allowed. 2. The extent of a husband's estate; esp., the ability to pay alimony. See ALLEGATION OF FACULTIES.

FAILED LEGACY

failed legacy.See lapsed legacy under LEGACY.

FAILING CIRCUMSTANCES

failing circumstances.See INSOLVENCY.

FAILING-COMPANY DOCTRINE

failing-company doctrine.Antitrust. The rule that allows an otherwise proscribed merger or acquisition between competitors when one is bankrupt or near failure. 15 USCA §§ 12–27. — Also termed failing-firm defense. [Cases: Monopolies 20(1). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 106–111, 115–116, 125.]

“The 1992 guidelines provide a limited defense for failing firms and failing divisions of firms. The defense is available if impending failure would cause the assets of one party to leave the market if the merger does not occur. Thus to establish a failing firm defense, the parties must show that the failing firm cannot (1) meet its financial obligations, (2) reorganize in bankruptcy, and (3) find another buyer whose purchase of the firm would pose lesser anticompetitive risks. The parties must further show that (4) without the merger, the failing firm's assets will exit the market." Ernest Gellhorn & William E. Kovacic, Antitrust Law and Economics in a Nutshell 398–99 (4th ed. 1994).

FAIL POSITION

fail position. A situation existing when, after all transactions in a security have been netted out, a broker owes another broker more securities than it has coming in from other firms.

FAILURE

failure. 1. Deficiency; lack; want. 2. An omission of an expected action, occurrence, or performance. See LAPSE(2).

failure of a condition. The nonoccurrence of an event that has been made a condition of the contract. • The usual result is that one or both of the parties do not have to perform because of the failure of the condition.

failure of consideration. See FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION.

failure of good behavior. A civil servant's act that is ground for removal. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 69.7. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 133, 164–166.]

failure of issue. See FAILURE OF ISSUE.

failure of justice. See MISCARRIAGE OF JUSTICE.

failure of proof. A party's not having produced evidence establishing a fact essential to a claim or defense.

failure of title. A seller's inability to establish a good claim to the property contracted for sale. Cf. clear title under TITLE(2). [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 129(1). C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 314–319, 321–322.]

failure of trust. The invalidity of a trust because the instrument creating it has a defect or because of its illegality or other legal impediment. [Cases: Trusts 68. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 129, 137.]

failure of will. The invalidity of a will that was not executed with necessary statutory formalities.

failure otherwise than on the merits. The defeat of a plaintiff's claim by a procedural device without a decision on the existence of the claim's elements.

failure to bargain collectively. An employer's refusal to discuss labor issues with a union. [Cases: Labor Relations 388. C.J.S. Labor Relations §§ 153–154, 159–160, 391–395, 397.]

failure to claim. Patents. A finding by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office or by a court that a patent applicant or patentee has forfeited the right to broader protection by not seeking protection for some disclosed subject matter. • Any art outside the explicit claims, including foreseeable alteration of the claimed structure, is considered dedicated to the public domain.

failure to make delivery. Nondelivery or misdelivery.

failure to meet obligations. 1. BANKRUPTCY(4). 2. INSOLVENCY.

failure to perform. A party's not meeting its obligations under a contract. See CONTRACT(4). [Cases: Contracts 261(1), 312(1), 315. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 467, 470, 472, 480, 561.]

failure to state a cause of action. A plaintiff's not having alleged facts in the complaint sufficient to maintain a claim. • This failure warrants dismissal of the complaint. [Cases: Pleading 48. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 116–124, 132–133.]

failure to testify. A party's — esp. a criminal defendant's — decision not to testify. • Under the Fifth Amendment, the prosecutor and the judge cannot comment to the jury on a criminal defendant's failure to testify. But comments on the failure are usu. permissible in a civil case. [Cases: Criminal Law 317; Evidence 76; Witnesses 88. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 641–644, 705–706; Evidence §§ 174–175.]

FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION

failure of consideration. A seriously deficient contractual performance that causes a contract's basis or inducement to cease to exist or to become worthless. • Scholars disapprove of this term as misleading, since failure of performance is more accurate. Unlike consideration, the phrase failure of consideration relates not to the formation of a contract but to its performance. See CONSIDERATION(1). Cf. WANT OF CONSIDERATION. [Cases: Contracts 83, 260, 309(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 133, 466, 520–522, 524.]

“An illustration will help indicate how the term is used. If C promises to build a structure for O and O promises to make payment when the work is completed, it is clear that there is consideration on both sides of this contract and that therefore a contract was formed upon the exchange of promises. If C fails to perform, the result is sometimes described as a ‘failure of consideration.’ ‘Failure of consideration’ simply means a failure to perform and as used covers both a material breach of constructive conditions and a failure to perform an express condition. The use of the term ‘failure of consideration’ in this sense appears to be an unnecessary invitation to confusion because the word consideration is being used in two different senses. Fortunately, the use of this phrase has gradually fallen into disuse. It is, however, still sufficiently widespread to be mentioned here. This volume nowhere utilizes ‘failure of consideration’ as an operative concept.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 11-21, at 474–75 (3d ed. 1987).

partial failure of consideration. A party's incomplete performance of a contract with multiple, severable performances, so that if some of the performances are not accomplished, the appropriate part of the agreement can be apportioned to whatever has been completed. [Cases: Contracts 86, 260. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 84, 133, 135, 466.]

total failure of consideration. A situation in which the contract is indivisible so that a complete lack of consideration voids the contract. [Cases: Contracts 85, 260. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 134–135, 466.]

FAILURE OF GOOD BEHAVIOR

failure of good behavior. See FAILURE.

FAILURE OF ISSUE

failure of issue. The fact of a person's dying when the person has no surviving children or other descendants who are eligible to inherit the person's estate. — Also termed dying without issue; definite failure of issue; default of issue. See ISSUE(3). [Cases: Descent and Distribution 14–16. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 14–15, 20–21.]

“There has been considerable litigation during the past several centuries over the meaning of a gift to ‘A and his heirs, but if A shall die without issue, to B and his heirs.’ First of all, what does ‘die without issue’ mean? The answer appears simple — you look to the time of A's death to determine whether or not he has any children or grandchildren. But that is not the way the English courts originally construed this language. The English adopted the so-called ‘indefinite failure of issue’ construction — if at any time in the future A's line of descent should come to an end, then there was a gift over to B and his heirs. The effect of this was a fee tail in A and a remainder in B. This seems a distortion of the language, and particularly unsuited to American circumstances since the fee tail never found a real home here. Most of our jurisdictions, by judicial decision or statute, adopted the so-called ‘definite failure of issue’ construction — you look to the date of A's death to determine whether he has issue, and to that time alone. If A has issue at that time, then the gift over to B fails. This seems to be the literal meaning of the words, and it is the only sensible conclusion in a system where the fee tail is virtually a dead letter. The English also struck down the constructional preference for indefinite failure by statute in the nineteenth century.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 236–37 (2d ed. 1984).

indefinite failure of issue. A failure of issue whenever it happens, without any certain period within which it must happen. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 14, 57, 58. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 14–15, 63.]

FAILURE OF JUSTICE

FAILURE OF PROOF

failure of proof. See FAILURE.

FAILURE-OF-PROOF DEFENSE

failure-of-proof defense. The defense that a party's proof does not establish a fact essential to a claim or defense.

FAILURE OF RECORD

failure of record. Hist. In a trial by record, a party's inability to produce the record and thereby prove a pleading; an absence of proof to support a party's pleading. • The other party was entitled to summary judgment. See trial by record under TRIAL.

FAILURE TO TESTIFY

failure to testify.See FAILURE.

FAILURE TO THRIVE

failure to thrive.Family law. 1. A medical and psychological condition in which a child's height, weight, and motor development fall significantly below average growth rates. • Failure to thrive is sometimes asserted as a ground for alleging abuse or neglect by a parent or caregiver. 2. A condition, occurring during the first three years of a child's life, in which the child suffers marked retardation or ceases to grow. — Abbr. FTT.

FAINT ACTION

faint action.See FEIGNED ACTION.

FAINT PLEADER

faint pleader.A false, fraudulent, or collusive manner of pleading.

FAIR

fair,adj.1. Impartial; just; equitable; disinterested <everyone thought that Judge Jones was fair>.2. Free of bias or prejudice <in jury selection, the lawyers tried to select a fair and impartial jury>.

fair,n. Hist. A privileged market for the buying and selling of goods. • A fair was an incorporeal hereditament granted to a town by royal patent or franchise or established by prescription. The franchise to hold a fair conferred important privileges, and a fair, as a legally recognized institution, possessed distinctive legal characteristics, most of which are now obsolete. Cf. market overt under MARKET.

FAIR-AND-EQUITABLE REQUIREMENT fair-and-equitable requirement.Bankruptcy. A Bankruptcy Code standard requiring a forced, nonconsensual Chapter 11 plan (a “cramdown” plan) to provide adequately for each class of interests that has not accepted the plan. • In determining whether a cramdown plan is fair and equitable and thus can be confirmed, a bankruptcy court must apply the Code's detailed statutory criteria, consider the plan as a whole, and weigh all the circumstances surrounding the treatment of each impaired class of interests. In addition to the fair-and-equitable requirement, the Chapter 11 cramdown plan must (1) be accepted by at least one impaired class of claims, and (2) not discriminate unfairly among impaired classes that have not accepted the plan. 11 USCA § 1129(b). See CRAMDOWN. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3563. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 396.]

FAIR COMMENT

fair comment. A statement based on the writer's or speaker's honest opinion about a matter of public concern. • Fair comment is a defense to libel or slander. [Cases: Libel and Slander 48(1). C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 91–92, 96, 98, 102–104.]

FAIR COMPETITION

fair competition. See COMPETITION.

FAIR CONSIDERATION

fair consideration. See CONSIDERATION(1).

FAIR CREDIT BILLING ACT

Fair Credit Billing Act. A federal law that facilitates the correction of billing errors by credit-card companies and makes those companies more responsible for the quality of goods purchased by cardholders. 15 USCA §§ 1666–1666j. [Cases: Consumer Credit 30. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 317–318.]

FAIR-CREDIT-REPORTING ACT fair-credit-reporting act. A federal or state law that regulates the keeping of credit reports and ensures the right of consumers to get and correct their credit reports. • The federal Fair Credit Reporting Act was enacted in 1970. 15 USCA §§ 1681–1681u. [Cases: Credit Reporting Agencies 1–4. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 2–22.]

FAIR-CROSS-SECTION REQUIREMENT fair-cross-section requirement. Constitutional law. The principle that a person's right to an impartial jury, guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment, includes a requirement that the pool of potential jurors fairly represent the composition of the jurisdiction's population. • The pool of potential jurors need not precisely match the composition of the jurisdiction. But the representation of each group must be fair — no group should be systematically excluded or underrepresented. A minimal disparity in a particular group's representation, such as an absolute disparity of 10%, will not ordinarily violate this principle unless some aggravating factor exists. See DUREN TEST; ABSOLUTE DISPARITY; COMPARATIVE DISPARITY; STATISTICAL-DECISION THEORY Y. [Cases: Jury 33(1.1). C.J.S. Juries §§ 269–273, 279, 306.]

FAIR DEALING

fair dealing.n.1. The conduct of business with full disclosure, usu. by a corporate officer with the corporation. [Cases: Corporations 314, 316. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 507, 510.] 2. A fiduciary's transacting of business so that, although the fiduciary might derive a personal benefit, all interested persons are fully apprised of that potential and of all other material information about the transaction. Cf. SELF-DEALING. 3. Canadian law. FAIR USE.

FAIR HEARING

fair hearing. See HEARING.

FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT

Fair Labor Standards Act. A federal law, enacted in 1938, that regulates minimum wages, overtime pay, and the employment of minors. 29 USCA §§ 201–219. — Abbr. FLSA. [Cases: Labor Relations 1102. C.J.S. Labor Relations § 1018.]

FAIRLY-DEBATABLE RULE fairly-debatable rule. 1. Insurance. In some states, a test that requires an insurer to have a plausible basis for denying a claim to avoid bad-faith liability. [Cases: Insurance 3336. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1163, 1342, 1576, 1578–1581.] 2. Zoning. A doctrine that bars a court from interfering with a zoning decision that is supported by substantial evidence, although it is one on which reasonable minds can differ. • A court will not interfere with a decision supported by substantial evidence. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 602, 605, 703. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 273.]

FAIR MARKET PRICE

fair market price. See fair market value under VALUE(2).

FAIR MARKET VALUE

FAIR TRADE

fair trade, n. Commerce conducted under a fair-trade agreement.

FAIR-TRADE AGREEMENT

fair-trade agreement. A commercial agreement that a seller will sell all of a producer's goods at or above a specified minimum price. • Fair-trade agreements were valid until 1975, when the Consumer Goods Pricing Act made them illegal. 15 USCA §§ 1, 45.

FAIR-TRADE LAW

fair-trade law. A state statute that protects and enforces fair-trade agreements. • At one time, many states had fair-trade laws. But when applied to interstate commerce, the laws may violate the Sherman Antitrust Act, so most states have repealed them.

FAIR TRIAL

fair trial. A trial by an impartial and disinterested tribunal in accordance with regular procedures; esp., a criminal trial in which the defendant's constitutional and legal rights are respected. — Also termed fair and impartial trial.

FAIR USE

fair use. Copyright. A reasonable and limited use of a copyrighted work without the author's permission, such as quoting from a book in a book review or using parts of it in a parody. • Fair use is a defense to an infringement claim, depending on the following statutory factors: (1) the purpose and character of the use, (2) the nature of the copyrighted work, (3) the amount of the work used, and (4) the economic impact of the use. 17 USCA § 107. — Also termed private-use exception; (in Canadian law) fair dealing. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 53.2. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 45–46, 48–50.]

“[Fair use is] the most troublesome [problem] in the whole law of copyright.” Dellar v. Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., 104 F.2d 661, 662 (2d Cir. 1939)(per curiam).

“Fair use is a judicial safety valve, empowering courts to excuse certain quotations or copies of copyrighted material even though the literal terms of the Copyright Act prohibit them.” Paul Goldstein, Copyright's Highway 84 (1994).

FAITH-HEALING EXEMPTION faith-healing exemption. Family law. In a child-abuse or child-neglect statute, a provision that a parent who provides a child with faith healing (in place of standard medical treatment) will not, for that reason alone, be charged with abuse or neglect. • Nearly all states have enacted some form of faith-healing exemption. But the statutes differ greatly. For example, they differ on whether the exemption is available as a defense to manslaughter or murder charges brought against a parent whose child dies as a result of the parent's having refused to consent to medical treatment. — Also termed religious-exemption statute; spiritual-treatment exemption. Cf. medical neglect under NEGLECT.

FAKE

fake, n. Something that is not what it purports to be. See FORGERY (2); IMPOSTOR.

fake, vb. To make or construct falsely. See COUNTERFEIT.

FALCIDIAN LAW

Falcidian law (fal-sid-ee-<<schwa>>n). Roman law. A law prescribing that one could give no more than three-fourths of one's property in legacies and that the heirs should receive at least one-fourth (the Falcidian portion). • If the testator violated this law, the heir had the right to deduct proportionally from each legatee as necessary. The law, proposed by the Roman tribune Falcidius, was enacted in 40 B.C. — Also termed lex Falcidia. See LEGITIME.

“A large number of small legacies might [either] leave nothing for the heir ... [or] make his part so small as to seem valueless in his eyes. But a Falcidian law, passed in the year 40 B.C., put an end to the whole difficulty. This law secured to the heir a quarter of the net value of the estate; the legatees could obtain only three-quarters: if the legatees named in the will amounted to more than this, they were diminished by proportional reductions.... Few measures have accomplished their purpose more satisfactorily than the Falcidian law, which remained in force through the history of the empire, and holds an important place in the system of Justinian.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 321–22 (1881).

FALCIDIAN PORTION

Falcidian portion. Roman law. The one-fourth part of an estate that one or more instituted heirs are entitled to retain. La. Civ. Code art. 1494. — Also termed quarta Falcidiana. See forced heir under HEIR; LEGITIME. Cf. QUARTA TREBELLIANICA .

FALCONER ERROR

Falconer error. A trial court's failure to instruct the jury that a guilty finding on a manslaughter charge requires acquittal on a murder charge. Falconer v. Lane, 905 F.2d 1129 (7th Cir. 1990).

FALDAGE

faldage (fahl-dij), n. Hist. 1. A landowner's right to require tenants to graze their sheep in designated temporary folds so that the manure will fertilize the field. — Also termed foldage; fold soc. 2. A sum of money paid to the landowner by a sheep-owning tenant in lieu of keeping the animals in the landowner's temporary fold. — Also termed faldfee.

FALDFEE

faldfee (fahld-fee), n. Hist. See FALDAGE(2).

FALDWORTH

faldworth (fahld-w<<schwa>>rth), n. Hist. A person who resides in a rural community where everyone above a certain age is responsible for the good conduct of all other members of the community and who has reached that age of responsibility. • This was part of the frankpledge system. See DECENARY; FRANKPLEDGE.

FALSE ADVERTISING

false advertising, n. 1. The tortious and sometimes criminal act of distributing an advertisement that is untrue, deceptive, or misleading; esp., under the Lanham Trademark Act, an advertising statement that tends to mislead consumers about the characteristics, quality, or geographic origin of one's own or someone else's goods, services, or commercial activity. • Under § 43(a) of the Lanham Act, false advertising is actionable by anyone who reasonably believes that he or she has been or is likely to be damaged by the statement. An exaggerated opinion ("puffing") is an immaterial statement and therefore not actionable. [Cases: Consumer Protection 7; Fraud 1; Trade Regulation 870. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection § 59.] 2. At common law, a statement in a defendant's advertising about its own goods or services intended to deceive or confuse customers into buying those goods or services instead of the plaintiff's, and causing actual damage to the plaintiff, esp. the loss of sales. — Also termed (in both senses) deceptive advertising.

FALSEHOOD

falsehood. A lie. See LIE; PERJURY.

FALSE IMPERSONATION

false impersonation. See IMPERSONATION.

FALSE-IMPLICATION LIBEL false-implication libel. See LIBEL.

FALSE IMPRISONMENT

false imprisonment. A restraint of a person in a bounded area without justification or consent. • False imprisonment is a common-law misdemeanor and a tort. It applies to private as well as governmental detention. Cf. false arrest under ARREST. [Cases: False Imprisonment 2.]

“[In the phrase false imprisonment,] false is ... used not in the ordinary sense of mendacious or fallacious, but in the less common though well-established sense of erroneous or wrong; as in the phrases false quantity, false step, false taste, etc.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 123 n.38 (17th ed. 1977).

“False imprisonment was a misdemeanor at common law and is recognized by some states today. It differs from kidnapping in that asportation is not required. If the imprisonment is secret, some jurisdictions treat it as kidnapping.” Arnold H. Loewy, Criminal Law in a Nutshell 65 (2d ed. 1987).

“Some courts have described false arrest and false imprisonment as causes of action which are distinguishable only in terminology. The two have been called virtually indistinguishable, and identical. However, the difference between them lies in the manner in which they arise. In order to commit false imprisonment, it is not necessary either to intend to make an arrest or actually to make an arrest. By contrast, a person who is falsely arrested is at the same time falsely imprisoned.” 32 Am. Jur. 2d False Imprisonment § 3 (1995).

FALSE JUDGMENT

false judgment.Hist. A writ filed to obtain review of a judgment of a court not of record.

“After judgment given, a writ also of false judgment lies to the courts at Westminster to rehear and review the cause, and not a writ of error; for this is not a court of record” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 34 (1768).

FALSE LIGHT

false light. 1.Torts. In an invasion-of-privacy action, a plaintiff's allegation that the defendant attributed to the plaintiff views that he or she does not hold and placed the plaintiff before the public in a highly offensive and untrue manner. • If the matter involves the public interest, the plaintiff must prove the defendant's malice. See invasion of privacy by false light under INVASION OF PRIVACY. [Cases: Torts 8.5. C.J.S. Right of Privacy and Publicity § 2.] 2. (usu. pl.) Maritime law. A signal displayed intentionally to lure a vessel into danger. 18 USCA § 1658(b). — Also termed false light or signal.

FALSE MAKING

false making.See FORGERY(1).

FALSE-MEMORY SYNDROME

false-memory syndrome.The supposed recovery of memories of traumatic or stressful episodes that did not actually occur, often in session with a mental-health therapist. • This term is most frequently applied to claims by adult children that repressed memories of prolonged and repeated child sexual abuse, usu. by parents, have surfaced, even though there is no independent evidence to substantiate the claims. Cf. REPRESSED-MEMORY SYNDROME.

FALSE MEMORY SYNDROME FOUNDATION

False Memory Syndrome Foundation.An organization of parents who claim that their adult children have falsely accused them of childhood sexual abuse. • The organization was formed for the purpose of aiding persons who claim to have been wrongly accused as a result of the recovery of repressed memories. — Abbr. FMSF. Cf. VICTIMS OF CHILD ABUSE LAWS.

FALSE MISREPRESENTATION false misrepresentation.See MISREPRESENTATION. • This phrase is redundant, since misrepresentation includes the idea of falsity.

FALSE PRETENSES

false pretenses. The crime of knowingly obtaining title to another's personal property by misrepresenting a fact with the intent to defraud. • Although unknown to English common law, false pretenses became a misdemeanor under a statute old enough to make it common law in the United States. Modern American statutes make it either a felony or a misdemeanor, depending on how valuable the property is. — Also termed obtaining property by false pretenses; fraudulent pretenses. Cf. larceny by trick under LARCENY; EMBEZZLEMENT. [Cases: False Pretenses 1.]

FALSE PROMISE

false promise. See PROMISE.

FALSE REPORT

false report. Criminal law. The criminal offense of informing law enforcement about a crime that did not occur. [Cases: Obstructing Justice 7.C.J.S. Obstructing Justice or Governmental Administration §§ 4, 10, 12–29, 31–32, 38.]

FALSE REPRESENTATION

false representation. See MISREPRESENTATION.

FALSE RETURN

false return. 1. A process server's or other court official's recorded misrepresentation that process was served, that some other action was taken, or that something is true. See RETURN(2). [Cases: Process 132–144, 153, 160. C.J.S. Process §§ 79–85, 87–91, 94, 96–97.] 2. A tax return on which taxable income is incorrectly reported or the tax is incorrectly computed. See TAX RETURN. FALSUS IN UNO DOCTRINE falsus in uno doctrine (fal-s<<schwa>>s [orfawl-s<<schwa>>s] in yoo-noh). [fr. Latin falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus “false in one thing, false in all”] The principle that if the jury believes that a witness's testimony on a material issue is intentionally deceitful, the jury may disregard all of that witness's testimony. [Cases: Trial 187, 210; Witnesses 317.C.J.S. Trial §§ 505, 571; Witnesses § 570.]

“[T]here is an old maxim ‘falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus’ (false in one thing, false in all), which is often much overemphasized by counsel, though it is recognized by many courts in their charges to the jury. But this is only primitive psychology, and should be completely discarded.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 181 (1935).

FALTERING-COMPANY EXCEPTION

faltering-company exception. A provision in the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act exempting an employer from giving the required 60-day notice for a plant shutdown if (1) at the time notice was due, the employer was seeking capital or resources that would have allowed the employer to avoid a shutdown, and (2) the employer reasonably believed that providing the notice would have precluded the employer from obtaining the necessary capital or other resources. 29 USCA § 2102(b)(1). See WORKER ADJUSTMENT AND RETRAINING NOTIFICATION ACT .

FAMA PUBLICA

fama publica (fay-m<<schwa>> p<<schwa>>b-li-k<<schwa>>). [Latin “public repute”] Hist. A person's reputation in the community. • A person's fama publica could be used against him or her in a criminal proceeding. Cf. ILL FAME .

“Now in the thirteenth century we find in the sheriff's turn a procedure by way of double presentment, and we may see it often, though not always, when a coroner is holding an inquest over the body of a dead man. The fama publica is twice distilled. The representatives of the villis make presentments to a jury of twelve freeholders which represents the hundred, and then such of these presentments as the twelve jurors are willing to ‘avow,’ or make their own, are presented by them to the sheriff... From the very first the legal forefathers of our grand jurors are not in the majority of cases supposed to be reporting crimes that they have witnessed, or even to be the originators of the fama publica. We should be guilty of an anachronism if we spoke of them as ‘endorsing a bill’ that is ‘preferred’ to them; but still they are handing on and ‘avowing’ as their own a rumour that has been reported to them by others.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 643 (2d ed. 1899).

FAMILIA

familia (f<<schwa>>-mil-ee-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. All persons, free and slave, in the power of a paterfamilias. See PATERFAMILIAS. 2. One's legal relations through and with one's family, including all property, ancestral privileges, and duties.

“The testator conveyed to him outright his whole ‘familia,’ that is, all the rights he enjoyed over and through the family; his property, his slaves, and all his ancestral privileges, together, on the other hand, with all his duties and obligations.” Henry S. Maine, Ancient Law 170 (17th ed. 1901).

3. A family, including household servants. “Familia.... A family or household, including servants, that is, hired persons (mercenarii or conductitii,) as well as bondsmen, and all who were under the authority of one master, (dominus.) Bracton uses the word in the original sense, as denoting servants or domestics.” 1 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 603–04 (2d ed. 1867).

FAMILIAE EMPTOR

familiae emptor (f<<schwa>>-mil-ee-ee emp-tor). [Latin “estate purchaser”] Roman law. A trustee who received an inheritance by a fictitious purchase and distributed it as the testator instructed. — Also termed emptor familiae. See mancipatory will under WILL.

“At some date, probably long before the XII Tables, men on the point of death, unable to make a true will because there was no imminent sitting of the Comitia, adopted the practice of conveying all their property ... to a person who is described as the familiae emptor, and who is said by Gaius to be in loco heredis. Instructions were no doubt given to him as to the disposal of the property or part of it, but it is not clear that these were enforceable” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 175 (2d ed. 1953).
