POSTLIMINIUM

postliminium (pohst-l<<schwa>>-min-ee-<<schwa>>m), n. [fr. Latin post “after” + limen “threshold”] 1. Roman & civil law. The reentering of one's residence. 2. Roman & civil law. The doctrine that a restoration of a person's lost rights or status relates back to the time of the original loss or deprivation, esp. in regard to the restoration of the status of a prisoner of war.

“[A] person who is taken captive and comes back within the limits of the Empire is correctly described as returning by postliminium. By ‘limen’ (threshold) we mean the frontier of a house, and the old lawyers applied the word to the frontier of the Roman State; so that the word postliminium conveys the idea of recrossing the frontier. If a prisoner is recovered from a beaten foe he is deemed to have come back by postliminium.” R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 85–86 (4th ed. 1956).

3. Int'l law. The act of invalidating all of an occupying force's illegal acts, and the post-occupation revival of all illegitimately modified legal relations to their former condition, esp. the restoration of property to its rightful owner. — Also termed postliminy.

potestas (p<<schwa>>-tes-t<<schwa>>s or -tas), n. [Latin "power"] Roman law. Authority or power, such as the power of a magistrate to enforce the law, or the authority of an owner over a slave.

patria potestas (pay-tree-<<schwa>> orpa-tree-<<schwa>>). [Latin "paternal power"] The authority held by the male head of a family (the senior ascendant male) over his legitimate and adopted children, as well as further descendants in the male line, unless emancipated. • Initially, the father had extensive powers over the family, including the power of life and death; until Justinian's time, the father alone in his familia had proprietary capacity but he could give a son or slave a peculium. Over time, the broad nature of the patria potestas gradually became more in the nature of a responsibility to support and maintain family members. But except in early Roman history, a wife did not fall into her husband's power but remained in her father's until she became sui juris by his death. — Also termed fatherly power.

“The power of the father continued ordinarily to the close of his life, and included not only his own children, but also the children of his sons, and those of his sons' sons, if any such were born during his lifetime.... Originally and for a long time the patria potestas had a terribly despotic character. Not only was the father entitled to all the service and all the acquisitions of his child, as much as to those of a slave, but he had the same absolute control over his person. He could inflict upon him any punishment however severe.... Consider now that the patria potestas had this character and extent down to the Christian era: that, in general, every citizen of the republic who had a living father was in this condition, unable to hold property, unable to acquire any thing for himself, wholly dependent on his father in property and person ... without help or vindication from the law.... The reason which caused the Romans to accept and uphold the patria potestas, to maintain it with singular tenacity against the influence of other systems with which they came in contact, must have been the profound impression of family unity, the conviction that every family was, and of right ought to be, one body, with one will and one executive." James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 119–21 (1881).

"Nature and Extent of Patria Potestas. — From the most remote ages the power of a Roman father over his children, including those by adoption as well as by blood, was unlimited. A father might, without violating any law, scourge or imprison his son, or sell him for a slave, or put him to death, even after that son had risen to the highest honours in the state. This jurisdiction was not merely nominal, but, in early times, was not infrequently exercised to its full extent, and was confirmed by the laws of the XII Tables.... By degrees the right of putting a child to death (ius vitae et necis) fell into desuetude; and long before the close of the republic, the execution of a son by order of his father, although not forbidden by any positive statute, was regarded as something strange, and, unless under extraordinary circumstances, monstrous. But the right continued to exist in theory ... after the establishment of the empire. [In the Christian empire, these extreme punishments were forbidden and disciplinary powers were reduced to those of reasonable chastisement. — Ed.]" William Ramsay, A Manual of Roman Antiquities 291–92 (Rodolfo Lanciani ed., 15th ed. 1894).

potestas gladii (glad-ee-I). [Latin "the power of the sword"] Roman law. See JUS GLADII.

potestas maritalis (mar-<<schwa>>-tay-lis). [Latin] Hist. The marital power. • In Roman law, this was an institution, one that was decaying by the end of the Republic.

power. 1. The ability to act or not act; esp., a person's capacity for acting in such a manner as to control someone else's responses. 2. Dominance, control, or influence over another; control over one's subordinates. 3. The legal right or authorization to act or not act; a person's or organization's ability to alter, by an act of will, the rights, duties, liabilities, or other legal relations either of that person or of another.

“A power is the capacity to change a legal relationship. In this terminology the offeree has, before the contract is made, a power to create a contract by means of acceptance.” E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 3.4, at 114 n.3 (3d ed. 1999).

agent's power.The ability of an agent or apparent agent to act on behalf of the principal in matters connected with the agency or apparent agency.

concurrent power.A political power independently exercisable by both federal and state governments in the same field of legislation.

congressional power.The authority vested in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives to enact laws and take other constitutionally permitted actions. U.S. Const. art. I. [Cases: United States 22. C.J.S. United States §§ 30, 33.]

delegated power.Power normally exercised by an authority that has temporarily conferred the power on a lower authority.

derivative power.Power that arises only from a grant of authority. • Power may be derived, for example, by an agent from a principal, or by a head of state from a constitution.

discretionary power.A power that a person may choose to exercise or not, based on the person's judgment.

enumerated power.A political power specifically delegated to a governmental branch by a constitution. — Also termed express power. [Cases: Constitutional Law 25. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 53.]

faterly power.See patria potestas under POTESTAS.

implied power.A political power that is not enumerated but that nonetheless exists because it is needed to carry out an express power. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 325. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 51.]

incident power.A power that, although not expressly granted, must exist because it is necessary to the accomplishment of an express purpose. — Also termed incidental power.

inherent power.A power that necessarily derives from an office, position, or status.

naked power.The power to exercise rights over something (such as a trust) without having a corresponding interest in that thing. Cf. power coupled with an interest.

particular power.See special power.

plenary power (plee-n<<schwa>>-ree or plen-<<schwa>>-ree). Power that is broadly construed; esp., a court's power to dispose of any matter properly before it. [Cases: Courts 1, 26, 30, 207.1. C.J.S. Courts §§ 2–3, 6, 9, 12–15, 64–65, 67, 71–73.]

police power.See POLICE POWER.

power coupled with an interest.A power to do some act, conveyed along with an interest in the subject matter of the power. • A power coupled with an interest is not held for the benefit of the principal, and it is irrevocable due to the agent's interest in the subject property. For this reason, some authorities assert that it is not a true agency power. — Also termed power given as security; proprietary power. See irrevocable power of attorney under POWER OF ATTORNEY. Cf. naked power. [Cases: Powers 27. C.J.S. Powers § 6.]

“[S]uppose that the principal borrows money from the agent and by way of security authorizes the agent to sell Blackacre if the loan is not repaid and pay himself out of the proceeds.

In such case there is no more reason why the principal should be permitted to revoke than if he had formally conveyed or mortgaged Blackacre to the agent. Hence it would be highly unfair to the agent to allow his principal to revoke. The reason why such a case is not properly governed by the considerations usually making an agency revocable is that this is in reality not a case of agency at all. In a normal agency case the power is conferred upon the agent to enable him to do something for the principal while here it is given to him to enable him to do something for himself. Coupled with an interest means that the agent must have a present interest in the property upon which the power is to operate.” Harold Gill Reuschlein & William A. Gregory, The Law of Agency and Partnership § 47, at 99 (1990).

power given as security. See power coupled with an interest.

power of acceptance. An offeree's power to bind an offeror to a contract by accepting the offer. [Cases: Contracts 16, 22(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 37–41, 44, 46–51, 53–56, 58; Trading Stamps and Coupons § 7–9.]

power of revocation (rev-<<schwa>>-kay-sh<<schwa>>n). A power that a person reserves in an instrument (such as a trust) to revoke the legal relationship that the person has created. [Cases: Contracts 217; Powers 19; Trusts 59. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 436–443, 446, 448–449, 500–501; Powers § 15–16; Trover and Conversion §§ 103–116.]

power of sale. A power granted to sell the property that the power relates to. • The power's exercise is often conditioned on the occurrence of a specific event, such as nonpayment of a debt. [Cases: Powers 20. C.J.S. Powers §§ 17–18.]

power over oneself. See CAPACITY(2).

power over other persons. See AUTHORITY(1).

primary powers. See PRIMARY POWERS.

private power. A power vested in a person to be exercised for personal ends and not as an agent for the state.

quasi-judicial power. An administrative agency's power to adjudicate the rights of those who appear before it. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 108. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 10–11.]

quasi-legislative power. An administrative agency's power to engage in rulemaking. 5 USCA § 553. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 106, 385. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 10, 88, 91.]

reserved power.A political power that is not enumerated or prohibited by a constitution, but instead is reserved by the constitution for a specified political authority, such as a state government. See TENTH AMENDMENT.

restraining power.A power to restrict the acts of others.

resulting power.A political power derived from the aggregate powers expressly or impliedly granted by a constitution.

special power. 1. An agent's limited authority to perform only specific acts or to perform under specific restrictions. [Cases: Powers 19. C.J.S. Powers §§ 15–16.] 2. See limited power of appointment under POWER OF APPOINTMENT. — Also termed particular power.

spending power.The power granted to a governmental body to spend public funds; esp., the congressional power to spend money for the payment of debt and provision of the common defense and general welfare of the United States. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 1. [Cases: United States 82. C.J.S. United States § 155.]

taxing power.The power granted to a governmental body to levy a tax; esp., the congressional power to levy and collect taxes as a means of effectuating Congress's delegated powers. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 1. See SIXTEENTH AMENDMENT. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3001–3008; Taxation 2–36. C.J.S. Indians §§ 131–133; Internal Revenue §§ 2, 4; Taxation §§ 4, 7–11, 13–18, 20–25, 170, 198, 200–205, 227–228, 242–243, 250, 252–255, 260, 299, 1094.]

trust power.See beneficial power.

visitatorial power.The power to inspect or make decisions about an entity's operations. — Also termed visitorial power.

4. A document granting legal authorization. See AUTHORITY. 5. An authority to affect an estate in land by (1) creating some estate independently of any estate that the holder of the authority possesses, (2) imposing a charge on the estate, or (3) revoking an existing estate. See POWER OF APPOINTMENT. [Cases: Powers 1. C.J.S. Powers § 2.]“The word ‘power’ is normally used in the sense of an authority given to a person to dispose of property which is not his. The person giving the power is called the donor and the person to whom it is given the donee.” Robert E. Megarry & P.V. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 253 (4th ed. 1969).

appendant power (<<schwa>>-pen-d<<schwa>>nt).1. A power that gives the donee a right to appoint estates that attach to the donee's own interest. 2. A power held by a donee who owns the property interest in the assets subject to the power, and whose interest can be divested by the exercise of the power. • The appendant power is generally viewed as adding nothing to the ownership and thus is not now generally recognized as a true power. — Also termed power appendant; power appurtenant. [Cases: Powers 23. C.J.S. Powers § 5.] avoiding power.Bankruptcy. The power of a bankruptcy trustee or debtor in possession to void certain transfers made or obligations incurred by a debtor, including fraudulent conveyances, preferences transferred to creditors, unperfected security interests in personal property, and unrecorded mortgages. 11 USCA §§ 544–553.

beneficial power.A power that is executed for the benefit of the power's donee, as distinguished from a trust power, which is executed for the benefit of someone other than the power's donee (i.e., a trust beneficiary). [Cases: Powers 25. C.J.S. Powers § 19.]

collateral power.A power created when the donee has no estate in the land, but simply the authority to appoint. [Cases: Powers 25. C.J.S. Powers § 19.]

general power.See POWER OF APPOINTMENT.

limited power.See POWER OF APPOINTMENT.

mandatory power.A power that the donee must exercise and must do so only as instructed, without discretion.

power appendant.See appendant power.

power appurtenant.See appendant power.

power collateral.See power in gross.

power in gross.A power held by a donee who has an interest in the assets subject to the power but whose interest cannot be affected by the exercise of the power. • An example is a life tenant with a power over the remainder. — Also termed power collateral. [Cases: Powers 23. C.J.S. Powers § 5.]

PRACTICE COURT

practice court. 1. MOOT COURT. 2. (cap.) BAIL COURT.

PRACTICE GUIDE

practice guide. A written explanation of how to proceed in a particular area of law or in a particular court or locality.

PRACTICE OF LAW

practice of law. The professional work of a duly licensed lawyer, encompassing a broad range of services such as conducting cases in court, preparing papers necessary to bring about various transactions from conveying land to effecting corporate mergers, preparing legal opinions on various points of law, drafting wills and other estate-planning documents, and advising clients on legal questions. • The term also includes activities that comparatively few lawyers engage in but that require legal expertise, such as drafting legislation and court rules. — Also termed legal practice. Cf. LAW PRACTICE . [Cases: Attorney and Client 11. C.J.S. Attorney and Client § 30.]

unauthorized practice of law. The practice of law by a person, typically a nonlawyer, who has not been licensed or admitted to practice law in a given jurisdiction. — Abbr. UPL. [Cases: Attorney and Client 11. C.J.S. Attorney and Client § 30.]

“The definitions and tests employed by courts to delineate unauthorized practice by non-lawyers have been vague or conclusory, while jurisdictions have differed significantly in describing what constitutes unauthorized practice in particular areas.

proscribed. Even in that area, many jurisdictions recognize exceptions for such matters as small-claims and landlord-tenant tribunals and certain proceedings in administrative agencies. Moreover, many jurisdictions have authorized law students and others not locally admitted to represent indigent persons or others as part of clinical legal education programs. "Controversy has surrounded many out-of-court activities such as advising on estate planning by bank trust officers, advising on estate planning by insurance agents, stock brokers, or benefit-plan and similar consultants, filling out or providing guidance on forms for property transactions by real estate agents, title companies, and closing-service companies, and selling books or individual forms containing instructions on self-help legal services accompanied by personal, non-lawyer assistance on filling them out in connection with legal procedures such as obtaining a marriage dissolution. The position of bar associations has traditionally been that non-lawyer provisions of such services denies the person served the benefit of such legal measures as the attorney-client privilege, the benefits of such extraordinary duties as that of confidentiality of client information and the protection against conflicts of interest, and the protection of such measures as those regulating lawyer trust accounts and requiring lawyers to supervise non-lawyer personnel. Several jurisdictions recognize that many such services can be provided by non-lawyers without significant risk of incompetent service, that actual experience in several states with extensive non-lawyer provision of traditional legal services indicates no significant risk of harm to consumers of such services, that persons in need of legal services may be significantly aided in obtaining assistance at a much lower price than would be entailed by segregating out a portion of a transaction to be handled by a lawyer for a fee, and that many persons can ill afford, and most persons are at least inconvenienced by, the typically higher cost of lawyer services." RESTATEMENT (THIRD) OF THE LAW GOVERNING LAWYERS § 4 cmt. c (1998).

practicks (prak-tiks). Hist. Scots law. (usu. pl.) An old collection of notes about points of practice, decisions of the Court of Sessions, statutes, and forms, compiled by members of the court.

- An example is Balfour's Practicks (1469–1579). A precursor of law reports, the notes remain historical legal literature of some authority.

PRACTITIONER

practitioner. A person engaged in the practice of a profession, esp. law or medicine.

PRAEBENTES CAUSAM MORTIS praebentes causam mortis (pri-ben-teez kaw-z<<schwa>>m mor-tis). [Latin] Hist. (Persons) occasioning the cause of death.

PRAECEPTIO HAEREDITATIS praeceptio haereditatis (pri-sep-shee-oh h<<schwa>>-red-i-tay-tis). [Law Latin] Scots law. A taking of the inheritance in advance. — Also termed lucrative succession.

"Praeceptio haereditatis This is one of the passive titles known in law, which, if incurred by the heir, renders him in some measure liable for his ancestor's debts. It was introduced to prevent an heir from receiving and enjoying, under a gratuitous disposition inter vivos from his ancestor, that heritable estate to which he would be entitled to succeed on the ancestor's death, and of thus avoiding responsibility for his ancestor's debts and other obligations." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 466–67 (4th ed. 1894).

PRAECEPTORES

praeceptores (pree-sep-tor-eez). [Law Latin "masters"] Hist. The chief clerks of Chancery, responsible for preparing remedial writs.

praecipue (pree-s<<schwa>>-pee or pres-<<schwa>>-pee), n. [Latin "command"] 1. At common law, a writ ordering a defendant to do some act or to explain why inaction is appropriate. — Also termed writ of praecipue. 2. A written motion or request seeking some court action, esp. a trial setting or an entry of judgment. — Also spelled precipue. — praecipue, vb.

praecipue quod reddat (pree-s<<schwa>>-pee or pres-<<schwa>>-pee kwod red-at). [Latin "command that he render"] Hist. A writ directing the defendant to return certain property. • An action for common recovery was often begun with this writ. When the writ was brought to recover land, it was termed ingressu. See COMMON RECOVERY.

"The praecipue quod reddat was the proper writ when the plaintiff's action was for a specific thing; as for the recovery of a debt certain, or for the restoration of such a chattel, or for giving up such a house, or so much land, specifying the nature and quantity of it. By this writ the sheriff was commanded to summon the tenant or defendant to appear at Westminster, at such a day in term." 1 George Crompton, Rules and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas xxxix (3d ed. 1787).

PRAECIPITIUM

praefectura (pri-fek-ch⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩r-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. The office of prefect. 2. A town or territory administered by a prefect.

PRAEFECTUS URBI

praefectus urbi (pri-fek-t<<schwa>>s <<schwa>>r-bI). [Latin “prefect of the city”] Roman law. A senator charged with keeping law and order in the city of Rome. • This duty originated in the early Empire. The praefectus had both criminal and civil jurisdiction; the latter was gradually taken over from the praetor, although the praefectus's civil jurisdiction was always cognitio. — Also termed urban prefect; prefect of the city.

“Praefectus urbi. The prefect of the city was originally a mere delegate appointed in case of the temporary absence of the emperor, but the office became a permanency owing to Tiberius' continued residence away from Rome in the latter part of his reign, and under subsequent emperors the prefect remained in office even when the emperor was present. His duties included generally the maintenance of order in the city, and he had under his command the urban cohorts, in effect a police force numbering between 4,000 and 6,000 men. He early assumed criminal jurisdiction, and in the end became the chief criminal court not only for Rome but for the district within 100 miles.” H.F. Jolowicz, Historical Introduction to the Study of Roman Law 345–46 (1952).

PRAEFECTUS VIGILUM

praefectus vigilum (pri-fek-t<<schwa>>s vi-jil-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “prefect of the watch”] Roman law. An officer, immediately subordinate to the praefectus urbi, with police and fire-prevention duties. • This officer had the authority to punish offenses relating to the public peace. See PRAEFECTUS URBI .

PRAEFECTUS VILLAE

praemium emancipationis (pree-mee-<<schwa>>m i-man-s<<schwa>>-pay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin “reward for emancipation”] Roman law. A compensation allowed by Constantine to a father on the emancipation of his child, consisting of one-third of the property that came to the child from his mother's side. • Justinian replaced this with the usufruct of half the child's separate property.

PRAEMIUM PUDICITIAE

praemium pudicitiae (pree-mee-<<schwa>>m pyoo-d<<schwa>>-sish-ee-ee. [Latin “the price of chastity”] Hist. Compensation paid by a man who seduced a chaste woman. — Also written premium pudicitiae. — Also termed praemium pudoris.

PRAEMUNIRE

praemunire (pree-myoo-nI-ree), n. [Latin praemoneri “to be forewarned”] Hist. The criminal offense of obeying an authority other than the king. • Praemunire stems from the efforts of Edward I (1272–1307) to counter papal influence in England, and takes its name from the writ's initial words: praemunire facias (“that you cause to be forewarned”). One type of praemunire was to appeal to the pope rather than the monarch. Another was to bring a suit in a temporal court instead of a royal court, in part because the monarch wanted all fines levied as punishment to go to the royal coffers, not those of the church.

praenomen (pree-noh-m<<schwa>>n), n. [Latin] Roman law. The first of a person's three names, given to distinguish the person from family members.

PRAEPOSITA NEGOTIIS VEL REBUS DOMESTICIS

praeposita negotiis vel rebus domesticis (pri-poz-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>> ni-goh-shee-is vel ree-b<<schwa>>s d<<schwa>>-mes-ti-sis). [Latin] Hist. Set over domestic affairs. • The phrase usu. referred to a wife's status.

PRAEPOSITOR

praepositor (pri-poz-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r or -tor), n. [Law Latin “supervisor, reeve”] Hist. One who delegates duties (esp. of a business's management) to another; one who places (another) in a position over others.

praepositura (pri-poz-<<schwa>>-t[y]uur-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin “management” or “supervisory office”] Hist. 1. One to whom management duties are delegated. 2. The area of responsibility delegated to a person to manage, esp. a wife's authority to manage the household.

PRAEPOSITUS

praepositus negotiis societatis (pri-poz-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>s ni-goh-shee-is s<<schwa>>-sI<<schwa>>-tay-tis). [Latin] Hist. Put in charge of a partnership's business.

PRAEPOSITUS VILLAE

praepositus villae (pree-poz-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>s vil-ee). [Latin] Hist. A constable of a town; a petty constable.

PRAEROGATIVA REGIS

praerogativa regis (pree-rog-<<schwa>>-tI-v<<schwa>> ree-jis). [Law Latin “of the Crown's prerogative”] Hist. A declaration made at the time of Edward I (1272–1307) defining certain feudal and political rights of the Crown, including the right to wardship of an idiot's lands to protect the idiot's heirs from disinheritance or alienation. — Also termed de praerogativa regis (dee pree-rog-<<schwa>>-tI-v<<schwa>> ree-jis).

“The king's right is distinctly stated in the document known as praerogativa Regis, which we believe to come from the early years of Edward I. The same document seems to be the oldest that gives us any clear information about a wardship of lunatics. The king is to provide that the lunatic and his family are properly maintained out of the income of his estate, and the residue is to be handed over to him upon his restoration to sanity, or, should he die without having recovered his wits, is to be administered by the ordinary for the good of his soul; but the king is to take nothing to his own use.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 481 (2d ed. 1898).

praescriptio (pri-skip-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Roman law. 1. A preliminary portion of a formula that defines the scope of action. 2. A defensive plea in an action to recover land by which the defendant asserts ownership based on continuous possession for a prescribed time. — Also termed (in sense 2) praescriptio longi temporis. Pl. praescriptiones (pri-skip-shee-oh-nee-z).

PRAESCRIPTIO FORI

praescriptio fori (pri-skip-shee-oh for-I). [Latin] Roman law. An objection on the ground that the person objecting is not subject to the court's jurisdiction.

PRAESCRIPTIS VERBIS

praescriptis verbis (pri-skrip-tis v<<schwa>>r-bis). [Latin "in the words before written"] 1.Roman law. An action on a bilateral agreement under which one party had performed and required the other to perform in turn. 2.Roman law. The grounds given for the existence of a contract that falls into the class later described as innominate. • Innominate contracts were developed and recognized late in classical law. See innominate contract under CONTRACT.
 3.Hist. (Of a clause) restricted in scope by introductory words — esp., in a pleading, words defining the issue.

praeses (pree-seez), n.[Latin] 1.Roman law. A governor of a province. 2. The president of a college or university.

PRAESTARE

praestare (pree-stair-ee), vb.[Latin] Roman law. 1. To perform an obligation. 2. To undertake liability.

PRAESTATIO CULPAE LEVIS praestatio culpae levis (pri-stay-shee-oh k<<schwa>>l-pee lee-vis). [Law Latin] Hist. An obligation for the middle degree of diligence — that is, the diligence and care required by a person of ordinary prudence. • This phrase was a forerunner of the modern terms reasonable care and reasonable person.

PRAESUMITUR PRO NEGANTE

praesumitur pro negante (pri-zyoo-m<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r proh ni-gan-tee). [Latin] It is presumed for the negative. • This is the rule of the House of Lords when the votes are equal on a motion.

PRAESUMPTIO

praesumptio (pri-z<<schwa>>mp-shee-oh), n. [Latin] A presumption. Pl. praesumptiones (pri-z<<schwa>>mp-shee-oh-nee-z).

praesumptio fortior (pri-z<<schwa>>mp-shee-oh for-shee-<<schwa>>r or -or). [Latin] A strong presumption (of fact); a presumption strong enough to shift the burden of proof to the opposing party.

praesumptio hominis (pri-z<<schwa>>mp-shee-oh hom-<<schwa>>-nis). [Latin] The presumption of an individual; that is, a natural presumption unfettered by rules.

praesumptio juris (pri-z<<schwa>>mp-shee-oh joor-is). [Latin] A presumption of law; that is, one in which the law assumes the existence of something until it is disproved. See presumption of law, rebuttable presumption under PRESUMPTION.

praesumptio Muciana (pri-z<<schwa>>mp-shee-oh myoo-shee-ay-n<<schwa>>). [Latin]

Roman law. The rebuttable presumption that in case of doubt a thing possessed by a married woman had been given to her by her husband. • The presumption was named after the jurist Quintus Mucius.

PRAETER DOTE M

praeter dotem (pree-t<<schwa>>r doh-t<<schwa>>m or -tem). [Latin] Hist. Over and above the dowry.

PRAETERITIO

praeteritio (pree-t<<schwa>>-rish-ee-oh or pret-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] Roman law. A testator's exclusion of an heir by passing the heir over. • In Roman law, passing over sui heredes usu. invalidated the will. See SUI HEREDES.

PRAETER LEGEM

praeter legem. See EQUITY PRAETER LEGEM.

PRAETOR

praetor (pree-t<<schwa>>r), n. [Latin] Roman law. The magistrate responsible for identifying and framing the legal issues in a case and for ordering a lay judge (judex) to hear evidence and decide the case in accordance with the formula. See FORMULA(1).

praetor fideicommissarius (pree-t<<schwa>>r fi-dee-I-kom-<<schwa>>-sair-ee-<<schwa>>s). A special praetor having jurisdiction over cases involving trusts.

PRAETORIAN EDICT

praetorian edict. See edictum praetoris under EDICTUM.

PRAEVARICATIO

praevaricatio (pri-var-<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh), n. [Latin “collusion with an opponent”] Roman law. An accuser's colluding with the defense in such a way that the accused will be acquitted. • An accuser might do this in various ways, as by deemphasizing the most important charges, refraining from calling the most important witnesses, or refraining from exercising peremptory challenges against jurors who would tend to favor the accused. See CALUMNIA. Cf. TERGIVERSATIO.

PRAEVARICATOR

praevaricator (pree-var-<<schwa>>-kay-t<<schwa>>r). See PREVARICATOR.

PRAEVENTO TERMINO

praevento termino (pri-ven-toh t<<schwa>>r-m<<schwa>>-noh). [Law Latin “by anticipating the term”] Scots law. An action in the Court of Session to prevent a delay in a suspension or an appeal. See SUSPENSION(6).

PRAYER CONFERENCE

prayer conference.See CHARGE CONFERENCE.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

prayer for relief.A request addressed to the court and appearing at the end of a pleading; esp., a request for specific relief or damages. — Often shortened to prayer. — Also termed demand for relief. See AD DAMNUM CLAUSE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 680; Pleading 72. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 110–115.]

general prayer.A prayer for additional unspecified relief, traditionally using language such as, “Plaintiff additionally prays for such other and further relief to which she may show herself to be justly entitled.” • The general prayer typically follows a special prayer. [Cases: Judgment 252; Pleading 72. C.J.S. Judgments § 53; Pleading §§ 110–115.]

special prayer.A prayer for the particular relief to which a plaintiff claims to be entitled. [Cases: Judgment 252; Pleading 72. C.J.S. Judgments § 53; Pleading §§ 110–115.]

PRAYER IN AID

prayer in aid.See AID PRAYER.

PRC

PRC.abbr. POSTAL RATE COMMISSION.

PREAMBLE

preamble (pree-am-b<<schwa>>l), n.1. An introductory statement in a constitution, statute, or other document explaining the document's basis and objective; esp., a statutory recital of the inconveniences for which the statute is designed to provide a remedy. • A preamble often consists of a series of clauses introduced by the conjunction whereas. Such a preamble is sometimes called the whereas clauses. [Cases: Statutes 210.]

“The preamble cannot control the enacting part of the statute, in cases where the enacting part is expressed in clear, unambiguous terms; but in case any doubt arises on the enacting part, the preamble may be resorted to to explain it, and show the intention of the law maker.” Den v. Urison, 2 N.J.L. 212 (1807).

2.Patents. The first words of a patent claim, often a single phrase indicating the field of art. • The preamble is typically nonlimiting unless it “breathes life and meaning into the claims.” Corning Glass Works v. Sumitomo Elec. U.S.A., Inc., 868 F.2d 1251, 1257 (Fed. Cir. 1989). Elements, the later parts of the claim, narrow this broad identification more and more specifically. Cf. BODY OF A CLAIM; TRANSITION PHRASE. — preambulatory (pree-am-by<<schwa>>-ler-ee), preambular (pree-am-by<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>r), adj.

precedence (pres-<<schwa>>-d<<schwa>>nts or pr<<schwa>>-seed-<<schwa>>nts), n.1. The order or priority in place or time observed by or for persons of different statuses (such as political dignitaries) on the basis of rank during ceremonial events. 2. Generally, the act or state of going before something else according to some system of priorities. 3.Parliamentary law. The ranked priority that determines whether a motion is in order while another motion is pending, or whether a pending motion yields to another motion.

“There is a principle that determines the precedence of motions. The closer a motion is to final disposition of the matter under consideration, the lower it is in the order of precedence. The further removed the motion is from final disposition of the matter, the higher it is in the order of precedence.” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure 6 (2000).

4.Parliamentary law. The priority in which a member is entitled to the floor. — Also termed precedence in recognition; preference in being recognized. 5. The order in which persons may claim the right to administer an intestate's estate. • The traditional order is (1) surviving spouse, (2) next of kin, (3) creditors, and (4) public administrator. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 17. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators § 34.]

precedent (pr<<schwa>>-seed-<<schwa>>nt alsopres-<<schwa>>-d<<schwa>>nt), adj. Preceding in time or order <condition precedent>.

precedent (pres-<<schwa>>-d<<schwa>>nt), n.1. The making of law by a court in recognizing and applying new rules while administering justice. [Cases: Courts 87. C.J.S. Courts §§ 135–136.] 2. A decided case that furnishes a basis for determining later cases involving similar facts or issues. See STARE DECISIS. [Cases: Courts 89. C.J.S. Courts §§ 139–140, 144–146, 161–164, 166–167.] — precedential,adj.

“In law a precedent is an adjudged case or decision of a court of justice, considered as furnishing a rule or authority for the determination of an identical or similar case afterwards arising, or of a similar question of law. The only theory on which it is possible for one decision to be an authority for another is that the facts are alike, or, if the facts are different, that the principle which governed the first case is applicable to the variant facts.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 288 (3d ed. 1914).

“One may say, roughly, that a case becomes a precedent only for such a general rule as is necessary to the actual decision reached, when shorn of unessential circumstances.” 1 James Parker Hall, Introduction, American Law and Procedure xlviii (1952).

“One may often accord respect to a precedent not by embracing it with a frozen logic but by drawing from its thought the elements of a new pattern of decision.” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 151 (1968).

binding precedent.A precedent that a court must follow. • For example, a lower court is bound by an applicable holding of a higher court in the same jurisdiction. — Also termed authoritative precedent; binding authority. Cf. imperative authority under AUTHORITY(4). [Cases: Courts 88, 107. C.J.S. Courts §§ 139, 165, 175; Criminal Law § 1665; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 187.]

declaratory precedent.A precedent that is merely the application of an already existing legal

original precedent.A precedent that creates and applies a new legal rule.

persuasive precedent.A precedent that is not binding on a court, but that is entitled to respect and careful consideration. • For example, if the case was decided in a neighboring jurisdiction, the court might evaluate the earlier court's reasoning without being bound to decide the same way. [Cases: Courts 89, 96(5), 97(1, 5). C.J.S. Courts §§ 139–140, 144–146, 152–153, 158–159, 161–164, 166–167.]

precedent sub silentio (s<<schwa>>b s<<schwa>>-len-shee-oh). A legal question that was neither argued nor explicitly discussed in a judicial decision but that seems to have been silently ruled on and might therefore be treated as a precedent.

3.DOCTRINE OF PRECEDENT. 4. A form of pleading or property-conveyancing instrument. • Precedents are often compiled in book form and used by lawyers as guides for preparing similar documents.“Collections of Precedents have existed from very early times. In this connection precedents must not be confused with judicial precedents or case law. We refer here simply to common-form instruments compiled for use in practice, whereby the lawyer can be more or less certain that he is using the correct phraseology for the particular case before him. They were used both in conveyancing and litigation.... It is interesting to note that these precedents were apparently among the first legal works to be published after printing was introduced. Collections of conveyancing precedents continued to be brought up to date or new volumes issued ...” A.K.R. Kiralfy, Potter's Outlines of English Legal History 42–43 (5th ed. 1958).

prece partium (pree-see pah-r-shee-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] On the prayer of the parties.

PRECEPT

precept (pree-sept).1. A standard or rule of conduct; a command or principle < several legal precepts govern here>. [Cases: Courts 87–100. C.J.S. Courts §§ 135–136, 139–164, 166–169; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition§ 187.] 2. A writ or warrant issued by an authorized person demanding another's action, such as a judge's order to an officer to bring a party before the court <the sheriff executed the precept immediately>. [Cases: Courts 189.]

PRECEPTIVE STATUTE

preceptive statute.See STATUTE.

PRECEPTUM AMISSIONIS SUPERIORITATIS

preceptum amissionis superioritatis (pri-sep-t<<schwa>>m <<schwa>>-mis[h]-ee-oh-nis suu-peer-ee-or-<<schwa>>-tay-tis). [Law Latin “a precept of a lost superiority”] Hist. A precept to force a superior to give a vassal's disponee entry to the land.

preces (pree-seez), n. [Latin “prayers”] Roman law. A petition, esp. one addressed to the emperor by a private person. Cf. RESCRIPT(3).

PRECES PRIMARIAE

preces primariae (pree-seez prI-mair-ee-ee). [Latin] Hist. The right of the sovereign to appoint a person to fill a vacant prebendary office after the sovereign's accession. • This right was exercised during the reign of Edward I. — Also termed primae preces. See PREBENDARY.

PRECINCT

precinct. A geographical unit of government, such as an election district, a police district, or a judicial district. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 40.]

magisterial precinct. A county subdivision that defines the territorial jurisdiction of a magistrate, constable, or justice of the peace. — Also termed magisterial district. [Cases: Justices of the Peace 52. C.J.S. Justices of the Peace § 41.]

precipe (pre-s<<schwa>>-pee). See PRAECIPE.

PRÉCIS

précis (pray-seeorpray-see), n.[French] A concise summary of a text's essential points; an abstract. Pl. précis (pray-seezorpray-seez).

PRECLUDI NON DEBET

precludi non debet (pri-kloo-dI non dee-bet ordebet). [Latin “he ought not to be barred”] Hist. The beginning of a plaintiff's reply to a plea in bar in which the plaintiff objects to being barred from maintaining the action. — Sometimes shortened to precludi non.

PRECLUSION ORDER

preclusion order. See ORDER(2).

PRECOGNITION

precognition (pree-kog-nish-<<schwa>>n). Scots law. 1. A preliminary examination under oath of persons believed to have knowledge about the facts of a case, esp., in a criminal case, to determine whether there is sufficient evidence for a trial. 2. The written record of the statement that a prospective witness can give as evidence.

PRECOMPOUNDED PRESCRIPTION DRUG

precompounded prescription drug. See DRUG.

PRECONCEIVED MALICE

preconceived malice. See MALICE AFORETHOUGHT.

PRECONTRACT

precontract. See CONTRACT.

PREDATE

predate,vb. See ANTEDATE.

PREDATOR

predator. See SEXUAL PREDATOR.

PREDATORY CRIME

predatory crime. See CRIME.

PREDATORY INTENT

predatory intent. See INTENT(1).

PREDATORY PRICING

predatory pricing. Unlawful below-cost pricing intended to eliminate specific competitors and reduce overall competition; pricing below an appropriate measure of cost for the purpose of eliminating competitors in the short run and reducing competition in the long run. See ANTITRUST. [Cases: Monopolies 17(1.7). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 83–85, 87.]

“In its most orthodox form, ‘predatory pricing’ refers to a practice of driving rivals out of business by selling at a price below cost. The predator's intent — and the only intent that can make predatory pricing rational, profit-maximizing behavior — is to charge monopoly prices after rivals have been dispatched or disciplined. Predatory pricing is analyzed under the antitrust laws as illegal monopolization or attempt to monopolize under § 2 of the Sherman Act, or sometimes as a violation of the Clayton Act § 2, generally called the Robinson–Patman Act.” Herbert Hovenkamp, Federal Antitrust Policy 335 (2d ed. 1999).

predecease,vb. To die before (another) <she predeceased her husband>.

PREDECESSOR

predecessor. 1. One who precedes another in an office or position. 2. An ancestor.

PREDECISIONAL

predecisional,adj. Of, relating to, or occurring during the time before a decision.

PREDIAL

predial (pree-dee-<<schwa>>l), adj. Of, consisting of, relating to, or attached to land <predial servitude>. — Also spelled praedial.

PREDIAL SERVITUDE

predial servitude. See servitude appurtenant under SERVITUDE(2).

PREDIAL TITHE

predial tithe. See TITHE.

PREDICATE ACT

predicate act. 1. See predicate offense under OFFENSE(1). 2. See lesser included offense under OFFENSE(1). 3. Under RICO, one of two or more related acts of racketeering necessary to establish a pattern. See RACKETEER INFLUENCED AND CORRUPT ORGANIZATIONS ACT. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 5, 103.]

PREDICATE FACT

predicate fact. See FACT.

PREDICATE OFFENSE

predicate offense. 1. See lesser included offense under OFFENSE(1).

PREDICTION THEORY prediction theory. 1. BAD-MAN THEORY. 2. PREDICTIVE THEORY OF LAW.

PREDICTIVE THEORY OF LAW

predictive theory of law. The view that the law is nothing more than a set of predictions about what the courts will decide in given circumstances. • This theory is embodied in Holmes's famous pronouncement, "The prophecies of what the courts will do in fact, and nothing more pretentious, are what I mean by the law." Oliver Wendell Holmes, The Path of the Law, 10 Harv. L. Rev. 457, 460–61 (1897). — Also termed prediction theory. Cf. BAD-MAN THEORY.

PREDISPOSITION

predisposition. A person's inclination to engage in a particular activity; esp., an inclination that vitiates a criminal defendant's claim of entrapment. [Cases: Criminal Law 37(4); C.J.S. Criminal Law § 62.]

PREDOMINANT-ASPECT TEST predominant-aspect test. See PREDOMINANT-PURPOSE TEST.

PREDOMINANT-PURPOSE TEST

predominant-purpose test. An assessment of whether Article 2 of the UCC applies to an exchange, conducted by considering whether the exchange's chief aspect, viewed in light of all the circumstances, is the sale of goods. • If goods account for most of the exchange's value, it is probably a sale; if services account for most of the value, it probably is not. The leading case is Bonebrake v. Cox, 499 F.2d 951, 960 (8th Cir. 1974). — Also termed predominant-aspect test.

PREEMPTION

preemption (pree-emp-sh<<schwa>>n), n. 1. The right to buy before others. See RIGHT OF PREEMPTION. [Cases: Contracts 16; Sales 24; Vendor and Purchaser 18(.5). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 37–41, 44, 46, 55–56, 58; Sales §§ 41–42; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 98–100, 103–106, 115–116.] 2. The purchase of something under this right. 3. An earlier seizure or appropriation. 4. The occupation of public land so as to establish a preemptive title. [Cases: Public Lands 34. C.J.S. Public Lands § 50.] 5. Constitutional law. The principle (derived from the Supremacy Clause) that a federal law can supersede or supplant any inconsistent state law or regulation. — Also termed (in sense 5) federal preemption. See COMPLETE-PREEMPTION DOCTRINE. [Cases: States 18.3. C.J.S. States § 22.] — preempt,vb. — preemptive,adj.

conflict preemption. See obstacle preemption.

Garmon preemption. Labor law. A doctrine prohibiting state and local regulation of activities that are actually or arguably (1) protected by the National Labor Relations Act's rules relating to the right of employees to organize and bargain collectively, or (2) prohibited by the National Labor Relations Act's provision that governs unfair labor practices. San Diego Bldg. Trades Council v. Garmon, 359 U.S. 236, 79 S.Ct. 773 (1959). — Also termed Garmon doctrine. See COLLECTIVE BARGAINING; UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICE. [Cases: Labor Relations 45. C.J.S. Labor Relations § 23.]

Machinists preemption. Labor law. The doctrine prohibiting state regulation of an area of labor activity or management–union relations that Congress has intentionally left unregulated. Lodge 76, Int'l Ass'n of Machinists v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Comm'n, 427 U.S. 132, 96 S.Ct. 2548 (1976). [Cases: Labor Relations 45. C.J.S. Labor Relations § 23.]

obstacle preemption. The principle that federal or state law can supersede or supplant state or local law that stands as an obstacle to accomplishing the full purposes and objectives of the overriding federal or state law. — Also termed conflict preemption.

PREEMPTION CLAIMANT

preemption claimant. One who has settled on land subject to preemption, intending in good faith to acquire title to it.

PREEMPTION RIGHT

preemption right. The privilege to take priority over others in claiming land subject to preemption. • The privilege arises from the holder's actual settlement of the land. See PREEMPTION(3).

PREEMPTIVE RIGHT

preemptive right. A shareholder's privilege to purchase newly issued stock — before the shares are offered to the public — in an amount proportionate to the shareholder's current holdings in order to prevent dilution of the shareholder's ownership interest. • This right must be exercised within a fixed period, usu. 30 to 60 days. — Also termed subscription privilege. See SUBSCRIPTION RIGHT. Cf. rights offering under OFFERING. [Cases: Corporations 158. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 133–137.]

PREEXISTING CONDITION

preexisting condition. See CONDITION(2).

PREEXISTING DUTY

preexisting duty. See DUTY(1).

PREEXISTING-DUTY RULE

preexisting-duty rule. Contracts. The rule that if a party does or promises to do what the party is already legally obligated to do — or refrains or promises to refrain from doing what the party is already legally obligated to refrain from doing — the party has not incurred detriment. • This rule's result is that the promise does not constitute adequate consideration for contractual purposes. For example, if a builder agrees to construct a building for a specified price but later threatens to walk off the job unless the owner promises to pay an additional sum, the owner's new promise is not enforceable because, under the preexisting-duty rule, there is no consideration for that promise. — Also termed preexisting-legal-duty rule. [Cases: Contracts 75. C.J.S. Contracts § 120.]

prefect (pree-fekt), n.1. A high official or magistrate put in charge of a particular command, department, or region. 2. In New Mexico, a probate judge.

PREFECT OF THE CITY

prefect of the city. See PRAEFECTUS URBI.

PREFER

prefer, vb.1. To put forward or present for consideration; esp. (of a grand jury), to bring (a charge or indictment) against a criminal suspect <the defendant claimed he was innocent of the charges preferred against him>.2. To give priority to, such as to one creditor over another <the statute prefers creditors who are first to file their claims>.

PREFERENCE

preference. 1. The act of favoring one person or thing over another; the person or thing so favored. 2. Priority of payment given to one or more creditors by a debtor; a creditor's right to receive such priority. 3. Bankruptcy. PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER.

insider preference. A transfer of property by a bankruptcy debtor to an insider more than 90 days before but within one year after the filing of the bankruptcy petition. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2608(2). C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 138–139.]

liquidation preference. A preferred shareholder's right, once the corporation is liquidated, to receive a specified distribution before common shareholders receive anything. [Cases: Corporations 629. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 875–878.]

voidable preference. See PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER.

PREFERENCE CASE

preference case. See preferred cause under CAUSE(3).

PREFERENCE CAUSE

preference cause. See preferred cause under CAUSE(3).

PREFERENCE IN BEING RECOGNIZED preference in being recognized. See PRECEDENCE(4).

PREFERENCE SHARES

preference shares. See preferred stock under STOCK.

PREFERENTIAL ASSIGNMENT

preferential assignment. See PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER.

PREFERENTIAL BALLOT

preferential ballot. See preferential vote under VOTE(1).

PREFERENTIAL DEBT

preferential debt. See DEBT.

PREFERENTIAL NONUNION SHOP

preferential nonunion shop. See SHOP.

PREFERENTIAL RULE

preferential rule. Evidence. A rule that prefers one kind of evidence to another. • It may work provisionally, as when a tribunal refuses to consider one kind of evidence until another kind (presumably better) is shown to be unavailable, or it may work absolutely, as when the tribunal refuses to consider anything but the better kind of evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 398. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 833–836, 843–844.]

“There are only three or four ... sets of [preferential] rules. There is a rule preferring the production of the original of a document, in preference to a copy. There is a rule requiring the attesting witness to a will to be summoned to evidence its execution. And there is a rule preferring the magistrate's official report of testimony taken before him. Then there are a few miscellaneous rules, such as the officially certified enrollment of a statute, etc.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 219 (1935).

PREFERENTIAL SHOP

preferential shop. See preferential union shop under SHOP.

PREFERENTIAL TARIFF

preferential tariff. See TARIFF(2).

PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER preferential transfer. Bankruptcy. A prebankruptcy transfer made by an insolvent debtor to or for the benefit of a creditor, thereby allowing the creditor to receive more than its proportionate share of the debtor's assets; specif., an insolvent debtor's transfer of a property interest for the benefit of a creditor who is owed on an earlier debt, when the transfer occurs no more than 90 days before the date when the bankruptcy petition is filed or (if the creditor is an insider) within one year of the filing, so that the creditor receives more than it would otherwise receive through the distribution of the bankruptcy estate. • Under the circumstances described in 11 USCA § 547, the bankruptcy trustee may recover — for the estate's benefit — a preferential transfer from the transferee. — Also termed preference; voidable preference; voidable transfer; preferential assignment. Cf. FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE(2). [Cases: Bankruptcy 2601–2623. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 135–151, 166.]

PREFERENTIAL UNION SHOP

preferential union shop. See SHOP.

PREFERENTIAL VOTE

preferential vote. See VOTE(1).

PREFERENTIAL VOTING

preferential voting. See VOTING.

PREFERRED

preferred, adj. Possessing or accorded a priority or privilege .

PREFERRED CAUSE

preferred cause. See CAUSE(3).

PREFERRED CREDITOR

preferred creditor. See CREDITOR.

PREFERRED DIVIDEND

preferred dividend. See DIVIDEND.

PREFERRED DOCKET preferred docket. See DOCKET(2).

PREFERRED-PROVIDER ORGANIZATION preferred-provider organization. A group of healthcare providers (such as doctors, hospitals, and pharmacies) that agree to provide medical services at a discounted cost to covered persons in a given geographic area. — Abbr. PPO. Cf. HEALTH-MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATION. [Cases: Health 294; Insurance 1259, 2501.]

PREFERRED STOCK

preferred stock. See STOCK.

PREFERRING OF CHARGES

preferring of charges. Military law. The formal completion of a charge sheet, which includes signing and swearing to the charges and specifications. • Only a person subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice can prefer charges. Cf. INITIATION OF CHARGES. [Cases: Armed Services 47(2); Military Justice 951. C.J.S. Armed Services § 164; Military Justice § 180.]

PREFILED BILL

prefiled bill. See BILL(3).

PREGNANCY-DISCRIMINATION ACT

Pregnancy-Discrimination Act. A federal statute that prohibits workplace discrimination against a pregnant woman or against a woman affected by childbirth or a related medical condition. 42 USCA § 2000. • The Pregnancy-Discrimination Act is part of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. — Abbr. PDA.

PREGNANT CHAD

pregnant chad. See dimpled chad under CHAD.

prehearing conference. An optional conference for the discussion of procedural and substantive matters on appeal, usu. held in complex civil, criminal, tax, and agency cases. • Those attending are typically the attorneys involved in the case as well as a court representative such as a judge, staff attorney, or deputy clerk. Fed. R. App. P. 33. [Cases: Appeal and Error 808; Criminal Law 632(5); Federal Courts 741. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 662–663; Criminal Law §§ 448–450, 458.]

“The prehearing conference, if held, generally is scheduled after the time for appeal and cross-appeal has passed, and as soon as it becomes apparent that the case is complex due to the legal issues, the length of the record, or the number of parties. In a complex or multiparty case, the conference provides a forum in which to discuss briefing responsibilities, timing, and handling the record and joint appendix. There may be some discussion of the amount of oral argument the parties desire and how that argument will be divided” Michael E. Tigar, Federal Appeals: Jurisdiction and Practice § 8.06, at 309–10 (2d ed. 1993).

PREHIRE AGREEMENT

prehire agreement. An employment contract between a union and an employer, in which the employer agrees to hire union members. See closed shop under SHOP.

PREJUDGMENT ATTACHMENT

prejudgment attachment. See provisional attachment under ATTACHMENT.

PREJUDGMENT INTEREST

prejudgment interest. See INTEREST(3).

PREJUDICE

prejudice, n.1. Damage or detriment to one's legal rights or claims. See dismissal with prejudice, dismissal without prejudice under DISMISSAL.

legal prejudice. A condition that, if shown by a party, will usu. defeat the opposing party's action; esp., a condition that, if shown by the defendant, will defeat a plaintiff's motion to dismiss a case without prejudice. • The defendant may show that dismissal will deprive the defendant of a substantive property right or preclude the defendant from raising a defense that will be unavailable or endangered in a second suit. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1700; Pretrial Procedure 510. C.J.S. Dismissal and Nonsuit §§ 24–27.]

undue prejudice. The harm resulting from a fact-trier's being exposed to evidence that is persuasive but inadmissible (such as evidence of prior criminal conduct) or that so arouses the emotions that calm and logical reasoning is abandoned.

2. A preconceived judgment formed without a factual basis; a strong bias. [Cases: Judges 49. C.J.S. Judges § 108.] — prejudice, vb. — prejudicial, adj.

PREJUDICIAL ERROR

prejudicial error. See reversible error under ERROR(2).

PREJUDICIAL PUBLICITY prejudicial publicity. Extensive media attention devoted to an upcoming civil or criminal trial. • Under the Due Process Clause, extensive coverage of a criminal trial may deprive the defendant of a fair trial. [Cases: Criminal Law 633(1); Federal Civil Procedure 1951; Trial 20. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 564, 1134, 1140, 1145–1149, 1191; Trial § 97.]

PRELIMINARY

preliminary, adj. Coming before and usu. leading up to the main part of something <preliminary negotiations>.

PRELIMINARY AMENDMENT

preliminary amendment. See PATENT-APPLICATION AMENDMENT.

PRELIMINARY AVAILABILITY SEARCH

preliminary availability search. Trademarks. A cursory or moderate search of registered trademarks and common-law uses of proposed trademark names or phrases, done to narrow the list of names or phrases before conducting a thorough search.

PRELIMINARY COMPLAINT

preliminary complaint. See COMPLAINT.

PRELIMINARY CRIME

preliminary crime. See inchoate offense under OFFENSE(1).

PRELIMINARY EVIDENCE

preliminary evidence. See EVIDENCE.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION

preliminary examination. 1. EXAMINATION(3). 2. PRELIMINARY HEARING.

PRELIMINARY HEARING

preliminary hearing. A criminal hearing (usu. conducted by a magistrate) to determine whether there is sufficient evidence to prosecute an accused person. • If sufficient evidence exists, the case will be set for trial or bound over for grand-jury review, or an information will be filed in the trial court. — Also termed preliminary examination; probable-cause hearing; bindover hearing; examining trial. Cf. ARRAIGNMENT. [Cases: Criminal Law 222–238. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 282, 339–350.]

PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

preliminary injunction. See INJUNCTION.

PRELIMINARY INQUIRY

preliminary inquiry. Military law. The initial investigation of a reported or suspected violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Cf. PRETRIAL INVESTIGATION .

PRELIMINARY-INQUIRY OFFICER

preliminary-inquiry officer. See OFFICER(2).

PRELIMINARY LETTER

preliminary letter. See INVITATION TO NEGOTIATE.

PRELIMINARY OBJECTION

preliminary objection. Int'l law. In a case before an international tribunal, an objection that, if upheld, would render further proceedings before the tribunal impossible or unnecessary. • An objection to the court's jurisdiction is an example of a preliminary objection.

PRELIMINARY PROOF

preliminary proof. See PROOF.

PRELIMINARY PROSPECTUS

preliminary prospectus. See PROSPECTUS.

PRELIMINARY PROTECTIVE HEARING

preliminary protective hearing. See shelter hearing under HEARING.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

preliminary statement. The introductory part of a brief or memorandum in support of a motion, in which the advocate summarizes the essence of what follows. • In at least two jurisdictions, New York and New Jersey, the preliminary statement is a standard part of court papers. In many other jurisdictions, advocates do not routinely include it. But preliminary statements are typically allowed, even welcomed, though not required. — Also termed summary of argument.

PRELIMINARY WARRANT

preliminary warrant. See WARRANT(1).

PREMARITAL

premarital, adj. Of, relating to, or occurring before marriage. Cf. POSTMARITAL.

PREMARITAL AGREEMENT

premarital agreement. See PRENUPTIAL AGREEMENT.

PREMARITAL ASSET

premarital asset. See ASSET.

PREMATURITY

prematurity. 1. The circumstance existing when the facts underlying a plaintiff's complaint do not yet create a live claim. Cf. RIPENESS. [Cases: Action 6, 62; Federal Courts 12.1. C.J.S. Actions §§ 38–45, 238.] 2. The affirmative defense based on this circumstance.

PREMEDITATED

premeditated, adj. Done with willful deliberation and planning; consciously considered beforehand . [Cases: Homicide 535; Sentencing and Punishment 1676.]

PREMEDITATED MALICE

premeditated malice. See MALICE AFORETHOUGHT.

PREMEDITATION

premeditation, n. Conscious consideration and planning that precedes some act (such as committing a crime). [Cases: Homicide 535; Sentencing and Punishment 1676.] — premeditate, vb.

PREMIER SERJEANT

premier serjeant. See SERJEANT-AT-LAW.

PREMISE

premise (prem-is), n. A previous statement or contention from which a conclusion is deduced. — Also spelled (in BrE) premiss. — premise (prem-is or pri-mĭz), vb.

premises (prem-<<schwa>>-siz). 1. Matters (usu. preliminary facts or statements) previously referred to in the same instrument <wherefore, premises considered, the plaintiff prays for the following relief>. 2. The part of a deed that describes the land being conveyed, as well as naming the parties and identifying relevant facts or explaining the reasons for the deed. 3. A house or building, along with its grounds <smoking is not allowed on these premises>.

“Premises (= a house or building) has a curious history in legal usage. Originally, in the sense of things mentioned previously, it denoted the part of a deed that sets forth the names of the grantor and grantee, as well as the things granted and the consideration. Then, through hypallage in the early 18th century, it was extended to refer to the subject of a conveyance or bequest as specified in the premises of the deed. Finally, it was extended to refer to a house or building along with its grounds. In short, someone who says, ‘No alcohol is allowed on these premises,’ is engaging unconsciously in a popularized legal technicality.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 685 (2d ed. 1995).

demised premises. Leased property. — Also termed premises demised.

PREMISES LIABILITY premises liability. A landowner's or landholder's tort liability for conditions or activities on the premises. [Cases: Negligence 1000, 1001. C.J.S. Negligence § 381.]

PREMISES RULE

premises rule. See PARKING-LOT RULE.

PREMIUM

premium, n. 1. The periodic payment required to keep an insurance policy in effect. — Also termed insurance premium. [Cases: Insurance 2000. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 436–437.]

advance premium. A payment made before the start of the period covered by the insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance 1760.]

earned premium. The portion of an insurance premium applicable to the coverage period that has already expired. • For example, if the total premium for a one-year insurance policy is $1,200, the earned premium after three months is $300. [Cases: Insurance 2000. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 436–437.]

gross premium. 1. The net premium plus expenses (i.e., the loading), less the interest factor. See LOADING; INTEREST FACTOR. [Cases: Insurance 1127, 2005. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 48, 438–439.] 2. The premium for participating life insurance. See participating insurance under INSURANCE. natural premium. The actual cost of life insurance based solely on mortality rates. • This amount will be less than a net premium. See net premium.

net level annual premium. A net premium that stays the same each year.

net premium. 1. Generally, the premium amount for an insurance policy less agent commissions. [Cases: Insurance 1652, 2000. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 205, 436–437.] 2. The portion of the premium that covers the estimated cost of claims. 3. The money needed to provide benefits under an insurance policy. • The net premium in a life-insurance policy is calculated by using an assumed interest and mortality-table rate; it does not include additional expense amounts that will be charged to the policyholder. — Also termed net valuation premium.

net single premium. The money that must be collected from a policyholder at one time to guarantee enough money to pay claims made on an insurance policy. • This amount assumes that interest accrues at an expected rate and is based on a prediction of the likelihood of certain claims. [Cases: Insurance 2037. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 518–519, 742–745, 749–754.]

net valuation premium. See net premium.

unearned premium. The portion of an insurance premium applicable to the coverage period that has not yet occurred. • In the same example as above under earned premium, the unearned premium after three months is $900. [Cases: Insurance 1371, 1930, 2046. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 500–501.]

2. A sum of money paid in addition to a regular price, salary, or other amount; a bonus. 3. The amount by which a security's market value exceeds its face value. — Also termed (specif.) bond premium. Cf. DISCOUNT(3).

control premium. A premium paid for shares carrying the power to control a corporation. • The control premium is often computed by comparing the aggregate value of the controlling block of shares with the cost that would be incurred if the shares could be acquired at the going market price per share. [Cases: Corporations 174. C.J.S. Corporations § 312.]

4. The amount paid to buy a securities option. — Also termed (in sense 4) option premium.

PREMIUM BOND

premium bond. See BOND(3).

PREMIUM LOAN

premium loan. See LOAN.

PREMIUM NOTE

premium note. See NOTE(1).

PREMIUM ON CAPITAL STOCK

premium on capital stock. See paid-in surplus under SURPLUS.

PREMIUM PUDORIS

premium pudoris. See PRAEMIUM PUDICITIAE.

PREMIUM RATE

premium rate. Insurance. The price per unit of life insurance. • It is usu. expressed as a cost per thousands of dollars of coverage. Life insurers use three factors — the interest factor, the mortality factor, and the risk factor — to calculate premium rates. — Sometimes shortened to rate. See INTEREST FACTOR; MORTALITY FACTOR; RISK FACTOR. [Cases: Insurance 1541–1546. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 66–69, 71–73.]

premium stock. See STOCK.

PREMIUM TAX

premium tax. See TAX.

PRENATAL INJURY

prepaid income. See INCOME.

PREPAID INTEREST

prepaid interest. See INTEREST(3).

PREPAID LEGAL SERVICES

prepaid legal services. An arrangement — usu. serving as an employee benefit — that enables a person to make advance payments for future legal services. [Cases: Attorney and Client 137. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 282, 331.]

preparation. Criminal law. The act or process of devising the means necessary to commit a crime. Cf. ATTEMPT.

PREPAYMENT CLAUSE

prepayment clause. A loan-document provision that permits a borrower to satisfy a debt before its due date, usu. without paying a penalty. [Cases: Bills and Notes 129, 429. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 86–89, 91–100, 234–236, 238.]

PREPAYMENT PENALTY

prepayment penalty. See PENALTY(2).

PREPENSE

prepen (pree-pens), adj. Rare. Planned; deliberate <malice prepen>.

PREPETITION

prepetition (pree-p<<schwa>>-tish-<<schwa>>n), adj. Occurring before the filing of a petition (esp. in bankruptcy) <prepetition debts>.

PREPONDERANCE

preponderance (pri-pon-d<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>nts), n. Superiority in weight, importance, or influence. — preponderate (pri-pon-d<<schwa>>r-ayt), vb. — preponderant (pri-pon-d<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>nt), adj.

PREPONDERANCE OF THE EVIDENCE

preponderance of the evidence. The greater weight of the evidence, not necessarily established by the greater number of witnesses testifying to a fact but by evidence that has the most convincing force; superior evidentiary weight that, though not sufficient to free the mind wholly from all reasonable doubt, is still sufficient to incline a fair and impartial mind to one side of the issue rather than the other. • This is the burden of proof in most civil trials, in which the jury is instructed to find for the party that, on the whole, has the stronger evidence, however slight the edge may be. — Also termed preponderance of proof; balance of probability. See REASONABLE DOUBT. Cf. clear and convincing evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Evidence 598. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1310–1312, 1315.]

“Criminal convictions are so serious in their consequences that it is felt that an accused person should be freed, if there is any fair or reasonable doubt about his guilt, even though there seems to be considerable likelihood that he did commit the crime.... In civil cases, however, the consequence of losing a case, although serious enough in many cases, is not considered to be such as to require so stringent a rule. Accordingly the plaintiff is entitled to a verdict if he proves the case ‘by the preponderance of the evidence.’ In other words, he is entitled to a verdict even though there may be a reasonable doubt as to the liability of the accused, if the jury is satisfied nevertheless that the plaintiff has proved his case.” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 562 (2d ed. 1952).

prerogative of mercy. The limited discretionary power of a supreme authority, such as a state governor, national president, or sovereign, to commute a death sentence, change the method of execution, or issue a pardon, esp. for a person convicted of a capital crime.

PREROGATIVE COURT

prerogative court. See COURT.

PREROGATIVE WRIT

prerogative writ. See extraordinary writ under WRIT.

PRES

pres (pray). [Law French] Near. See CY PRES.

presale. The sale of real property (such as condominium units) before construction has begun. [Cases: Condominium 4. C.J.S. Estates §§ 201, 207–209, 244.]

prescribable (pri-skrĭb-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. (Of a right) that can be acquired or extinguished by prescription.

PRESCRIBE

prescribe,vb.1. To dictate, ordain, or direct; to establish authoritatively (as a rule or guideline).2. To claim ownership through prescription. 3. To invalidate or otherwise make unenforceable through prescription. 4. To become invalid or otherwise unenforceable through prescription.

prescript,adj. Having the nature of a rule or command.

prescript,n. Archaic. A rule, law, command, or ordinance; PRESCRIPTION(2). • A general term, prescript may also apply to an edict, a regulation, or any instructive guideline.

PRESCRIPTION

prescription,n.1. The act of establishing authoritative rules. Cf. PROSCRIPTION. 2. A rule so established. — Also termed (archaically) prescript. 3. The effect of the lapse of time in creating and destroying rights. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 1. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 2–4.] 4. The extinction of a title or right by failure to claim or exercise it over a long period. — Also termed negative prescription; extinctive prescription. 5. The acquisition of title to a thing (esp. an intangible thing such as the use of real property) by open and continuous possession over a statutory period. — Also termed positive prescription; acquisitive prescription. Cf. ADVERSE POSSESSION. See (for senses 3–5) PERIOD OF PRESCRIPTION . [Cases: Adverse Possession 1–95. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 2–225, 263–299, 327–338; Conflict of Laws§ 76.] 6.Int'l law. The acquisition of a territory through a continuous and undisputed exercise of sovereignty over it. 7.Oil & gas. A Louisiana doctrine that extinguishes unused mineral servitudes after ten years if there is no effort to discover or produce on the land or the land pooled with it.

acquisitive prescription (<<schwa>>-kwiz-<<schwa>>-tiv).1.PRESCRIPTION(5).2.Civil law. A mode of acquiring ownership or other legal rights through possession for a specified period of time.

liberative prescription (lib-<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>-tiv).Civil law. A bar to a lawsuit resulting from its untimely filing. La. Civ. Code art. 3447. • This term is essentially the civil-law equivalent of a statute of limitations. See STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 1. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 2–4.]

prescription in a que estate (ah kee). [Law French “prescription in whose estate”] A claim of prescription based on the immemorial enjoyment of the right by the claimant and the former owners whose estate the claimant has succeeded to.

prescription of nonuse.Civil law. A mode of extinction of a real right other than ownership (such as a servitude) as a result of failure to exercise the right for a specified period of time.

PRESCRIPTIVE EASEMENT

prescriptive easement.See EASEMENT.

PRESCRIPTIVE RIGHT

prescriptive right.A right obtained by prescription <after a nuisance has been continuously in existence for 20 years, a prescriptive right to continue it is acquired as an easement appurtenant to the land on which it exists>. [Cases: Nuisance 11–17. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 77, 79–82.]

presence,n.1. The state or fact of being in a particular place and time <his presence at the scene saved two lives>.2. Close physical proximity coupled with awareness <the agent was in the presence of the principal>.

constructive presence. 1.Criminal law. Legal imputation of having been at a crime scene, based on having been close enough to the scene to have aided and abetted the crime's commission. See CONSPIRACY. 2.Wills & estates. Legal imputation of a witness's having been in the room when a will was signed, based on the fact that the testator and the witness were able to see each other at the time of the signing. • This principle was commonly employed until the 20th century, when the presence-of-the-testator rule became dominant. See PRESENCE-OF-THE-TESTATOR RULEE.

PRESENCE-OF-DEFENDANT RULE presence-of-defendant rule.The principle that a felony defendant is entitled to be present at every major stage of the criminal proceeding. Fed. R. Crim. P. 43. [Cases: Criminal Law 636. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1161.]

presence of the court.The company or proximity of the judge or other courtroom official. • For purposes of contempt, an action is in the presence of the court if it is committed within the view of the judge or other person in court and is intended to disrupt the court's business.

“Some decisions indicate that the term ‘in the presence of the court’ is to be given a liberal interpretation, that ‘the court’ consists not of the judge, the courtroom, the jury, or the jury room individually, but of all of these combined, and that the court is present wherever any of its constituent parts is engaged in the prosecution of the business of the court according to law.” 17 Am. Jur. 2d Contempt § 19 (1990).

PRESENCE-OF-THE-TESTATOR RULE presence-of-the-testator rule. The principle that a testator must be aware (through sight or other sense) that the witnesses are signing the will. • Many jurisdictions interpret this requirement liberally, and the Uniform Probate Code has dispensed with it. [Cases: Wills 117. C.J.S. Wills §§ 285–293.]

present, adj. 1. Now existing; at hand . 2. Being considered; now under discussion <the present appeal does not deal with that issue>. 3. In attendance; not elsewhere <all present voted for him>.

PRESENT ABILITY

present ability. See ABILITY.

PRESENT AND VOTING

present and voting. Parliamentary law. (Of a member) casting a vote. • The result of a vote is ordinarily determined with reference to the members voting (often termed, somewhat redundantly, as “present and voting”). An answer of “present” when casting a vote amounts to an abstention because the voter is indicating that he or she is present but not voting. See ABSTAIN (1).

PRESENTATION

presentation. 1. The delivery of a document to an issuer or named person for the purpose of initiating action under a letter of credit; PRESENTMENT(3). [Cases: Banks and Banking 191. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 341–366, 368–370, 372–376.] 2. Hist. Eccles. law. A benefice patron's nomination of a person to fill a vacant benefice. • If the bishop rejected the appointee, the patron could enforce the right to fill the vacancy by writ of quare impedit in the Court of Common Pleas. See QUARE IMPEDIT . Cf. ADVOWSON; INSTITUTION(5).

next presentation. Hist. Eccles. law. In the law of advowsons, the right to present to the bishop a clerk to fill the first vacancy that arises in a church or other ecclesiastical office.

PRESENT CASE

present case. See case at bar under CASE.

PRESENT CONVEYANCE

present conveyance. See CONVEYANCE.

PRESENT COVENANT

present covenant. See COVENANT(4).

PRESENTENCE HEARING

presentence hearing. A proceeding at which a judge or jury receives and examines all relevant information regarding a convicted criminal and the related offense before passing sentence. — Also termed sentencing hearing. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 325. C.J.S. Criminal Law

PRESENTENCE-INVESTIGATION REPORT

presentence-investigation report. A probation officer's detailed account of a convicted defendant's educational, criminal, family, and social background, conducted at the court's request as an aid in passing sentence. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 32(c). — Often shortened to presentence report. — Abbr. PSI; PIR. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 275–301. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1488, 1491, 1506–1510, 1544, 1554, 1565.]

present enjoyment. See ENJOYMENT.

PRESENTER

presenter. Commercial law. Any person presenting a document (such as a draft) to an issuer for honor. UCC § 5-102(13).

PRESENT ESTATE

present estate. See present interest under INTEREST(2).

PRESENTING BANK

presenting bank. See BANK.

PRESENTING JURY

presenting jury. See GRAND JURY.

PRESENT INTEREST

present interest. See INTEREST(2).

PRESENTMENT

presentment (pri-zent-m<<schwa>>nt). 1. The act of presenting or laying before a court or other tribunal a formal statement about a matter to be dealt with legally. 2. Criminal procedure. A formal written accusation returned by a grand jury on its own initiative, without a prosecutor's previous indictment request. • Presentments are obsolete in the federal courts. [Cases: Grand Jury 42.]

“A grand jury has only two functions, either to indict or to return a ‘no bill.’ The Constitution speaks also of a ‘presentment,’ but this is a term with a distinct historical meaning now not well understood. Historically presentment was the process by which a grand jury initiated an independent investigation and asked that a charge be drawn to cover the facts should they constitute a crime. With United States attorneys now always available to advise grand juries, proceeding by presentment is an outmoded practice.” 1 Charles Alan Wright, Federal Practice and Procedure § 110, at 459 (3d ed. 1999).

3. The formal production of a negotiable instrument for acceptance or payment. [Cases: Bills and Notes 385–407. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 4, 97–98, 202, 204–209, 212, 257.]“Presentment and dishonor occur, for instance, when the holder of a check attempts to cash it at the drawee bank, but payment is refused because the drawer lacks sufficient funds on deposit. The demand for payment is presentment. The bank's refusal to pay is dishonor.” 2 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 16-8, at 100 (4th ed. 1995).

presentment for acceptance.Production of an instrument to the drawee, acceptor, or maker for acceptance. • This type of presentment may be made anytime before maturity, except that with bills payable at sight, after demand, or after sight, presentment must be made within a reasonable time. [Cases: Bills and Notes 388.]

presentment for payment.Production of an instrument to the drawee, acceptor, or maker for payment. • This type of presentment must be made on the date when the instrument is due. [Cases: Bills and Notes 399. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 205.]

presentment of Englishry.Hist. The offering of proof that a slain person was English rather than (before the Conquest) a Dane or (after the Conquest) a Norman. • This requirement was issued first by the conquering Danes and then by the Normans to protect these groups from the English by the threat of a village- or hundred-wide amercement if the inhabitants failed to prove that a dead person found among them was English.

PRESENTMENT WARRANTY

presentment warranty.See WARRANTY(2).

PRESENT RECOLLECTION REFRESHED present recollection refreshed.Evidence. A witness's memory that has been enhanced by showing the witness a document that describes the relevant events. • The document itself is merely a memory stimulus and is not admitted in evidence. Fed. R. Evid. 612. — Also termed refreshing recollection; refreshing memory; present recollection revived. Cf. PAST RECOLLECTION RECORDED . [Cases: Witnesses 253. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 435, 499.]

PRESENTS

presents,n. pl. Archaic. The instrument under consideration. • This is usu. part of the phrase these presents, which is part of the longer phrase know all men by these presents (itself a loan translation from the Latin noverint universi per praesentes). See KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS.

PRESENT SALE

present sale.See SALE.

PRESENT SENSE IMPRESSION

present sense impression.Evidence. One's perception of an event or condition, formed during or immediately after the fact. • A statement containing a present sense impression is admissible even if it is hearsay. Fed. R. Evid. 803(1). Cf. EXCITED UTTERANCE. [Cases: Criminal Law 419(2.15); Evidence 120. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 868; Evidence § 349.]

PRESENT USE

present use. See USE(4).

PRESENT VALUE

present value. The sum of money that, with compound interest, would amount to a specified sum at a specified future date; future value discounted to its value today. — Also termed present worth.

adjusted present value. An asset's value determined by adding together its present value and the value added by capital-structure effects. — Abbr. APV.

net present value. The present value of net cash flow from a project, discounted by the cost of capital. • This value is used to evaluate the project's investment potential. — Abbr. NPV.

PRESERVATION ORDER

preservation order. A direction to a property owner to maintain a historic building or conserve a natural habitat.

PRESIDE

preside, vb. 1. To occupy the place of authority, esp. as a judge during a hearing or trial <preside over the proceedings>. 2. To exercise management or control <preside over the estate>.

PRESIDENT

president, n. 1. The chief political executive of a government; the head of state. [Cases: United States 26. C.J.S. United States §§ 45–47.] 2. The chief executive officer of a corporation or other organization. 3. CHAIR(1). 4. See CHAIR(3). See (in senses 3 & 4) presiding officer (3) under OFFICER(2). — presidential, adj.

immediate past president. The last president who held office before the incumbent. See EMERITUS.

president-elect. An officer who automatically succeeds to the presidency when the incumbent president's term expires. • If the organization's governing documents so provide, the president-elect may act as president in the incumbent president's absence, or may assume the presidency early if the incumbent does not finish the term.

PRESIDENT EMERITUS

PRESIDENT OF A COURT-MARTIAL

president of a court-martial. Military law. The senior member in rank present at a court-martial trial. [Cases: Armed Services 43; Military Justice 870. C.J.S. Armed Services §§ 158–160, 166–168; Military Justice §§ 138–139, 143, 145, 147, 153.]

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

President of the United States. The highest executive officer of the federal government of the United States. • The President is elected to a four-year term by a majority of the presidential electors chosen by popular vote from the states. The President must be a natural citizen, must be at least 35 years old, and must have been a resident for 14 years within the United States. U.S. Const. art. II, § 1. [Cases: United States 26. C.J.S. United States §§ 45–47.]

PRESIDING JUDGE

presiding judge. See JUDGE.

PRESIDING JUROR

presiding juror. See JUROR.

PRESIDING OFFICER

presiding officer. See OFFICER(2).

PRESS

press, n.1. The news media; print and broadcast news organizations collectively. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90(2). C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 539.]

“The Constitution specifically selected the press, which includes not only newspapers, books, and magazines, but also humble leaflets and circulars, to play an important role in the discussion of public affairs.” Mills v. Alabama, 384 U.S. 214, 219, 86 S.Ct. 1434, 1437 (1966).

and 'newsgathering' as possible objects of protection. The most famous discussion of the meaning of the Press Clause, a 1974 speech by Justice Stewart, identified its beneficiaries as 'the daily newspapers and other established media,' or 'newspapers, television, and magazines.' " David A. Anderson, Freedom of the Press, 80 Texas L. Rev. 429, 436 (2002).

2.Hist. A piece of parchment, as one sewed together to make up a roll or record of judicial proceedings.

PRESS CLAUSE

Press Clause.The First Amendment provision that "Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom ... of the press." U.S. Const. amend I. — Also termed Freedom of the Press Clause.

prest (prest).Hist. A duty to be paid by the sheriff upon his account in the Exchequer or for money remaining in his custody.

prestable (pres-t<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. Scots law. 1. Payable. 2. Enforceable; exigible. • This term appears generally in reference to a debt. Cf. EXIGIBLE.

PRESTATION

prestation (pre-stay-sh<<schwa>>n).Hist. 1. A payment (or presting) of money. 2. The rendering of a service.

PREST MONEY

prest money.Hist. A monetary payment made to a soldier or sailor on enlistment.

PRESUME

presume,vb. To assume beforehand; to suppose to be true in the absence of proof.

PRESUMED BIAS

presumed bias.See implied bias under BIAS.

PRESUMED CRIME

presumed crime.See constructive crime under CRIME.

PRESUMED FATHER

presumed father.See FATHER.

PRESUMED-SELLER TEST presumed-seller test.A method of imposing product liability on a manufacturer if the manufacturer, having full knowledge of the product's dangerous propensities, would be negligent in placing the product on the market.

PRESUMPTION

presumption. A legal inference or assumption that a fact exists, based on the known or proven existence of some other fact or group of facts. • Most presumptions are rules of evidence calling for a certain result in a given case unless the adversely affected party overcomes it with other evidence. A presumption shifts the burden of production or persuasion to the opposing party, who can then attempt to overcome the presumption. See BURDEN OF PRODUCTION . [Cases: Criminal Law 305; Evidence 53–89. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 695; Evidence §§ 2, 130–196, 1341.]

“A presumption may be defined to be an inference as to the existence of one fact from the existence of some other fact founded upon a previous experience of their connection.” William P. Richardson, The Law of Evidence § 53, at 25 (3d ed. 1928).

absolute presumption. See conclusive presumption.

adverse presumption. See adverse inference under INFERENCE.

artificial presumption. See presumption of law.

conclusive presumption. A presumption that cannot be overcome by any additional evidence or argument <it is a conclusive presumption that a child under the age of seven is incapable of committing a felony>. — Also termed absolute presumption; irrebuttable presumption; mandatory presumption; presumption juris et de jure. Cf. rebuttable presumption. [Cases: Constitutional Law 253(5); Evidence 53–89. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 972; Evidence §§ 2, 130–196, 1341.]

“ ‘Conclusive presumptions’ or ‘irrebuttable presumptions’ are usually mere fictions, to disguise a rule of substantive law (e.g., the conclusive presumption of malice from an unexcused defamation); and when they are not fictions, they are usually repudiated by modern courts.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 454 (1935).

“Conclusive presumptions, sometimes called irrebuttable presumptions of law, are really rules of law. Thus it is said that a child under the age of fourteen years is conclusively presumed to be incapable of committing rape. This is only another way of saying that such a child cannot be found guilty of rape.” Richard Eggleston, Evidence, Proof and Probability 92 (1978).

conditional presumption. See rebuttable presumption.

conflicting presumption. One of two or more presumptions that would lead to opposite results. — Also termed inconsistent presumption. [Cases: Evidence 88. C.J.S. Evidence § 136.]

disputable presumption. See rebuttable presumption.

dry presumption. A presumption that has no probative value unless the party with the burden of proof presents evidence to support the presumption.

factual presumption. See presumption of fact.

heeding presumption. A rebuttable presumption that an injured product user would have followed a warning label had the product manufacturer provided one. [Cases: Products Liability 75. C.J.S. Products Liability § 72.]

inconsistent presumption. See conflicting presumption.

irrebuttable presumption. See conclusive presumption.

legal presumption. See presumption of law.

mandatory presumption. See conclusive presumption.

McClanahan presumption. See MCCLANAHAN PRESUMPTION.

mixed presumption. A presumption containing elements of both law and fact.

Morgan presumption. See MORGAN PRESUMPTION.

natural presumption. A deduction of one fact from another, based on common experience. [Cases: Evidence 53. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2, 130–132, 134, 1341.]

permissive presumption. A presumption that a trier of fact is free to accept or reject from a given set of facts. — Also termed permissive inference. [Cases: Evidence 53, 87. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2, 130–135, 152–154, 156, 173, 1341.]

presumption juris et de jure. See conclusive presumption.

presumption of a quorum. Parliamentary law. The presumption that a quorum, once established, is present until the chair or a member notices otherwise.

presumption of fact. A type of rebuttable presumption that may be, but as a matter of law need not be, drawn from another established fact or group of facts <the possessor of recently stolen goods is, by presumption of fact, considered the thief>. — Also termed factual presumption. [Cases: Evidence 53, 87. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2, 130–135, 152–154, 156, 173, 1341.]

presumption of general application. A presumption that applies across the board to all legislation, as a result of which lawmakers need not list each such presumption in all bills. [Cases: Evidence 53–89. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2, 130–196, 1341.]

“One function of the word ‘presumption’ in the context of statutory interpretation is to state the result of this legislative reliance (real or assumed) on firmly established legal principles. There is a ‘presumption’ that mens rea is required in the case of statutory crimes, and a ‘presumption’ that statutory powers must be exercised reasonably. These presumptions apply although there is no question of linguistic ambiguity in the statutory wording under construction, and they may be described as 'presumptions of general application.' At the level of interpretation, their function is the promotion of brevity on the part of the draftsman. Statutes make dreary enough reading as it is, and it would be ridiculous to insist in each instance upon an enumeration of the general principles taken for granted." Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 142–43 (1976).

presumption of innocence. See PRESUMPTION OF INNOCENCE.

presumption of intent. A permissive presumption that a criminal defendant who intended to commit an act did so. [Cases: Criminal Law 312. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 40.]

presumption of law. A legal assumption that a court is required to make if certain facts are established and no contradictory evidence is produced <by presumption of law, a criminal defendant is considered innocent until proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt>. — Also termed legal presumption; artificial presumption; praesumptio juris; pseudopresumption of law. [Cases: Evidence 86. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 131, 134.]

presumption of maternity. See PRESUMPTION OF MATERNITY.

presumption of natural and probable consequences. See PRESUMPTION OF NATURAL AND PROBABLE CONSEQUENCES.

presumption of paternity. See PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY.

presumption of survivorship. See PRESUMPTION OF SURVIVORSHIP.

presumption of validity. See PRESUMPTION OF VALIDITY.

prima facie presumption. See rebuttable presumption.

procedural presumption. A presumption that may be rebutted by credible evidence. [Cases: Evidence 53. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2, 130–132, 134, 1341.]

pseudopresumption of law. See presumption of law.

rebuttable presumption. An inference drawn from certain facts that establish a prima facie case, which may be overcome by the introduction of contrary evidence. — Also termed prima facie presumption; disputable presumption; conditional presumption; praesumptio juris. Cf. conclusive presumption. [Cases: Evidence 89. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 131, 135, 152–156, 160.]

statutory presumption. A rebuttable or conclusive presumption that is created by statute. [Cases: Evidence 53. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2, 130–132, 134, 1341.]

Thayer presumption. See THAYER PRESUMPTION.

PRESUMPTION OF DEATH

presumption of death. A presumption that arises on the unexpected disappearance and continued absence of a person for an extended period, commonly seven years. [Cases: Damages 2. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace §§ 272–273; Damages §§ 10–11.]

PRESUMPTION-OF-FERTILITY RULE presumption-of-fertility rule. See FERTILE-OCTOGENARIAN RULE.

PRESUMPTION-OF-IDENTITY RULE presumption-of-identity rule. The common-law rule that unless there is a specific, applicable statute in another state, a court will presume that the common law has developed elsewhere identically with how it has developed in the court's own state, so that the court may apply its own state's law. • Today this rule applies primarily in Georgia. See Shorewood Packaging Corp. v. Commercial Union Ins., 865 F. Supp. 1577 (N.D. Ga. 1994). [Cases: Evidence 80. C.J.S. Evidence § 149.]

PRESUMPTION OF INNOCENCE

presumption of innocence. Criminal law. The fundamental principle that a person may not be convicted of a crime unless the government proves guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, without any burden placed on the accused to prove innocence. [Cases: Criminal Law 308; Evidence 60. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 697; Evidence §§ 146, 150, 179.]

PRESUMPTION OF LEGITIMACY

presumption of legitimacy. See PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY.

PRESUMPTION OF MATERNITY

presumption of maternity. Family law. The presumption that the woman who has given birth to a child is both the genetic mother and the legal mother of the child. — Also termed maternity presumption. Cf. PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY.

PRESUMPTION OF NATURAL AND PROBABLE CONSEQUENCES presumption of natural and probable consequences. Criminal law. The presumption that mens rea may be derived from proof of the defendant's conduct. [Cases: Criminal Law 312. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 40.]

PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY presumption of paternity. Family law. The presumption that the father of a child is the man who (1) is married to the child's mother when the child was conceived or born (even though the marriage may have been invalid), (2) married the mother after the child's birth and agreed either to have his name on the birth certificate or to support the child, or (3) welcomed the child into his home and later held out the child as his own. — Also termed paternity presumption; presumption of legitimacy; legitimacy presumption. See presumed father under FATHER. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock 3. C.J.S. Children Out-of-Wedlock §§ 13–17.]

PRESUMPTION OF SURVIVORSHIP presumption of survivorship. The presumption that one of two or more victims of a common disaster survived the others, based on the supposed survivor's youth, good health, or other reason rendering survivorship likely. [Cases: Death 5. C.J.S. Death §§ 6, 15.]

PRESUMPTION OF VALIDITY

presumption of validity.Patents. The doctrine that the holder of a patent is entitled to a statutory presumption that the patent is valid and that the burden is on a challenger to prove invalidity. See BORN VALID. [Cases: Patents 112.1. C.J.S. Patents §§ 194, 203–205, 207.]

presumptive (pri-z<<schwa>>mp-tiv), adj.1. Giving reasonable grounds for belief or presumption. 2. Based on a presumption. [Cases: Evidence 53. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2, 130–132, 134, 1341.] — presumptively,adv.

PRET A USAGE

pret a usage.Civil law. A gratuitous loan for use.

pretax,adj. Existing or occurring before the assessment or deduction of taxes <pretax income>. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3110; Taxation 978. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 59–60; Taxation §§ 1715–1716, 1721–1722, 1727.]

PRETAX EARNINGS

pretax earnings.See EARNINGS.

PRÊTE-NOM

prête-nom (pret-nohm). [French] One who lends his name.

PRETENSIVE JOINDER

pretensive joinder.See JOINDER.

PRETERLEGAL

preterlegal (pree-t<<schwa>>r-lee-g<<schwa>>l), adj. Rare. Beyond the range of what is legal; not according to law <preterlegal customs>.

PRETERMISSION

pretermission (pree-t<<schwa>>r-mish-<<schwa>>n).1. The condition of one who is pretermitted, as an heir of a testator. 2. The act of omitting an heir from a will. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 47. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 51–54.]

PRETERMISSION STATUTE

pretermission statute.See PRETERMITTED-HEIR STATUTE.

PRETERMIT

pretermit (pree-t<<schwa>>r-mit), vb.1. To ignore or disregard purposely <the court pretermitted the constitutional question by deciding the case on procedural grounds>.2. To neglect, overlook, or omit accidentally <the third child was pretermitted in the will>. • Although in ordinary usage sense 1 prevails, in legal contexts (esp. involving heirs) sense 2 is usual. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 47. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 51–54.]

PRETERMITTED CHILD

pretermitted child.See pretermitted heir under HEIR.

PRETERMITTED DEFENSE

pretermitted defense.See DEFENSE(1).

PRETERMITTED HEIR

pretermitted heir. See HEIR.

PRETERMITTED-HEIR STATUTE

pretermitted-heir statute. A state law that, under certain circumstances, grants an omitted heir the right to inherit a share of the testator's estate, usu. by treating the heir as though the testator had died intestate. • Most states have a pretermitted-heir statute, under which an omitted child or spouse receives the same share of the estate as if the testator had died intestate, unless the omission was intentional. The majority rule, and that found in the Uniform Probate Code, is that only afterborn children — that is, children born after the execution of a will — receive protection as pretermitted heirs. Under that circumstance, an inference arises that their omission was inadvertent rather than purposeful. — Also termed pretermittance statute. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 47. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 51–54.]

PRETERMITTED SPOUSE

pretermitted spouse. See pretermitted heir under HEIR.

PRETEXT

pretext (pree-tekst), n. A false or weak reason or motive advanced to hide the actual or strong reason or motive. [Cases: Civil Rights 1137. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 34, 39–40.] — pretextual (pree-tekst-choo-<<schwa>>l), adj.

PRETEXTUAL ARREST

pretextual arrest. See ARREST.

pretextus (pree-tekst-t*<<schwa>>s*). [Latin] A pretext.

pretium (pree-shee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Price; value; worth.

pretium affectionis (pree-shee-<<schwa>>m <<schwa>>-fek-shee-oh-nis). An enhanced value placed on a thing by the fancy of its owner, growing out of an attachment for the specific article and its associations; sentimental value. • This value is not taken as a basis for measuring damages.

pretium periculi (pree-shee-<<schwa>>m p<<schwa>>-rik-y<<schwa>>-II). The price of the risk, such as the premium paid on an insurance policy.

pretorial court (pri-tor-ee-<<schwa>>l). See COURT.

PRETRIAL CONFERENCE

pretrial conference. An informal meeting at which opposing attorneys confer, usu. with the judge, to work toward the disposition of the case by discussing matters of evidence and narrowing the issues that will be tried. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16; Fed. R. Crim. P. 17.1. • The conference takes place shortly before trial and ordinarily results in a pretrial order. — Often shortened to pretrial. — Also termed pretrial hearing. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1921; Pretrial Procedure 741. C.J.S. Trial §§ 43–46.]

PRETRIAL DETENTION

pretrial detention. See DETENTION.

PRETRIAL DISCOVERY

pretrial discovery. See DISCOVERY.

PRETRIAL DIVERSION

pretrial diversion. See DIVERSION PROGRAM(1).

PRETRIAL HEARING

pretrial hearing. See PRETRIAL CONFERENCE.

PRETRIAL INTERVENTION

pretrial intervention. 1. DIVERSION PROGRAM(1). 2. See deferred judgment under JUDGMENT.

PRETRIAL INVESTIGATION

pretrial investigation. Military law. An investigation to decide whether a case should be recommended for forwarding to a general court-martial. [Cases: Armed Services 47(3); Military Justice 921. C.J.S. Armed Services § 165; Military Justice §§ 166–169.]

PRETRIAL ORDER

pretrial order. A court order setting out the claims and defenses to be tried, the stipulations of the parties, and the case's procedural rules, as agreed to by the parties or mandated by the court at a pretrial conference. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e). • In federal court, a pretrial order supersedes the pleadings. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1935; Pretrial Procedure 747. C.J.S. Trial § 47.]

prevail, vb. 1. To obtain the relief sought in an action; to win a lawsuit <the plaintiff prevailed in the Supreme Court>. 2. To be commonly accepted or predominant <it's unclear which line of precedent will prevail>.

PREVAILING PARTY

prevailing party. See PARTY(2).

prevarication (pri-var-<<schwa>>-kay-sh<<schwa>>n), n. The act or an instance of lying or avoiding the truth; equivocation. — prevaricate (pri-var-<<schwa>>-kayt), vb.

PREVARICATOR

prevaricator (pri-var-<<schwa>>-kay-t<<schwa>>r), n. [Latin] 1. A liar; an equivocator. 2. Roman law. One who betrays another's trust, such as an advocate who aids the opposing party by betraying the client. — Also spelled (in sense 2) praevaricator.

PREVENT

prevent, vb. To hinder or impede .

PREVENTION

prevention. Civil law. The right of one of several judges having concurrent jurisdiction to exercise that jurisdiction over a case that the judge is first to hear.

PREVENTION DOCTRINE

prevention doctrine. Contracts. The principle that each contracting party has an implied duty to not do anything that prevents the other party from performing its obligation. — Also termed prevention-of-performance doctrine. [Cases: Contracts 168, 303(4). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 346–347, 528–530.]

PREVENTIVE CUSTODY

preventive custody. See CUSTODY(1).

PREVENTIVE DETENTION

preventive detention. See DETENTION.

PREVENTIVE INJUNCTION

preventive injunction. See INJUNCTION.

PREVENTIVE JUSTICE

preventive justice. See JUSTICE(1).

PREVENTIVE LAW

preventive law. A practice of law that seeks to minimize a client's risk of litigation or secure more certainty with regard to the client's legal rights and duties. • Emphasizing planning, counseling, and the nonadversarial resolution of disputes, preventive law focuses on the lawyer's role as adviser and negotiator.

PREVENTIVE PUNISHMENT

preventive punishment. See PUNISHMENT.

PREVIOUSLY TAXED INCOME

previously taxed income. See INCOME.

PREVIOUS NOTICE

previous notice. See NOTICE(6).

PREVIOUS QUESTION

previous question. See CLOSE DEBATE.

price. The amount of money or other consideration asked for or given in exchange for something else; the cost at which something is bought or sold. [Cases: Contracts 229(1); Sales 74.1. C.J.S. Contracts § 379; Sales § 94–96.]

agreed price. The price for a sale, esp. of goods, arrived at by mutual agreement. Cf. open price. [Cases: Sales 75.]

arm's-length price. The price at which two unrelated, unaffiliated, and nondesperate parties would freely agree to do business. See arm's-length transaction under TRANSACTION; fair market value under VALUE.

asked price. The lowest price at which a seller is willing to sell a security at a given time. See SPREAD(2).

asking price. The price at which a seller lists property for sale, often implying a willingness to sell for less. — Also termed ask price; offering price.

at-the-market price. A retail price that store owners in the same vicinity generally charge.

bid price. The highest price that a prospective buyer is willing to pay for a security at a given time. See SPREAD(2).

call price. 1. The price at which a bond may be retired before its maturity. [Cases: Corporations 468.1.] 2. See strike price.

ceiling price. 1. The highest price at which a buyer is willing to buy. 2. The highest price allowed by a government agency or by some other regulatory institution. [Cases: War and National Emergency 108.]

closing price. The price of a security at the end of a given trading day. — Also termed close.

exercise price. See strike price.

ex-works price. The price of goods as they leave the factory. See EX WORKS.

fixed price. A price that is agreed upon by a wholesaler and a retailer for the later sale or resale of an item. • Agreements to fix prices are generally prohibited by state and federal statutes.

floor price. The lowest price at which a seller is willing to sell.

liquidation price. A price that is paid for property sold to liquidate a debt. • Liquidation price is usu. below market price. — Also termed liquidation value.

list price.A published or advertised price of goods; retail price.

market price.The prevailing price at which something is sold in a specific market. See fair market value under VALUE(2).

mean trading price.Securities. The average of the daily trading price of a security determined at the close of the market each day during a 90-day period.

net price.The price of something, after deducting cash discounts.

offering price.See asking price.

open price.The price for a sale, esp. of goods, that has not been settled at the time of a sale's conclusion. UCC § 2-305. Cf. agreed price. [Cases: Sales 78. C.J.S. Sales § 94.]

put price.See strike price.

redemption price. 1. The price of a bond that has not reached maturity, purchased at the issuer's option. 2. The price of shares when a mutual-fund shareholder sells shares back to the fund. — Also termed liquidating price; repurchase price. [Cases: Corporations 468.1.]

reserve price.In an auction, the amount that a seller of goods stipulates as the lowest acceptable offer. • The reserve price may or may not be announced. See WITH RESERVE; WITHOUT RESERVE.

sales price.The total amount for which property is sold, often including the costs of any services that are a part of the sale. • Under sales-tax statutes, the amount is typically valued in money even if the value is not received in money. — Also termed selling price.

spot price.The amount for which a commodity is sold in a spot market.

strike price.Securities. The price for which a security will be bought or sold under an option contract if the option is exercised. — Also termed striking price; exercise price; call price; put price. See OPTION.

subscription price.See SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

suggested retail price.The sales price recommended to a retailer by a manufacturer of the product.

support price.A minimum price set by the federal government for a particular agricultural commodity. [Cases: Agriculture 3.5.]

target price.A price set by the federal government for particular agricultural commodities. • If the market price falls below the target price, farmers receive a subsidy from the government for the difference. [Cases: Agriculture 3.5.]

trade price.The price at which a manufacturer or wholesaler sells to others in the same business or industry.

transfer price. The price charged by one segment of an organization for a product or service supplied to another segment of the same organization; esp., the charge assigned to an exchange of goods or services between a corporation's organizational units.

unit price. A price of a food product expressed in a well-known measure such as ounces or pounds.

upset price. The lowest amount that a seller is willing to accept for property or goods sold at auction. [Cases: Auctions and Auctioneers 10. C.J.S. Auctions and Auctioneers §§ 21–22.]

wholesale price. The price that a retailer pays for goods purchased (usu. in bulk) from a wholesaler for resale to consumers at a higher price.

PRICE AMENDMENT

price amendment. Securities. A change in a registration statement, prospectus, or prospectus supplement affecting the offering price, the underwriting and selling discounts or commissions, the amount of proceeds, the conversion rates, the call prices, or some other matter relating to the offering price.

PRICE/COST ANALYSIS

price/cost analysis. A technique of determining, for antitrust purposes, whether predatory pricing has occurred by examining the relationship between a defendant's prices and either its average variable cost or its average total cost.

PRICE DISCRIMINATION

price discrimination. The practice of offering identical or similar goods to different buyers at different prices when the costs of producing the goods are the same. • Price discrimination can violate antitrust laws if it reduces competition. It may be either direct, as when a seller charges different prices to different buyers, or indirect, as when a seller offers special concessions (such as favorable credit terms) to some but not all buyers. [Cases: Monopolies 17(2.9). C.J.S. Monopolies § 96.]

persistent price discrimination. A monopolist's systematic policy of obtaining different rates of return from different sales groupings.

PRICE-EARNINGS RATIO

price-earnings ratio. The ratio between a stock's current share price and the corporation's earnings per share for the last year. • Some investors avoid stocks with high price-earnings ratios because those stocks may be overpriced. — Abbr. P/E ratio. Cf. earnings yield under YIELD.

PRICE-EROSION THEORY

price-erosion theory. Patents. A theory of lost-profits remedy that measures the difference between what an item could have sold for with patent protection and what it actually sold for while having to compete against an infringing item. [Cases: Patents 318(3). C.J.S. Patents §§ 564, 566.]

PRICE EXPECTANCY

price expectancy. See EXHIBITION VALUE.

PRICE-FIXING

price-fixing. The artificial setting or maintenance of prices at a certain level, contrary to the workings of the free market. • Price-fixing is usu. illegal per se under antitrust law. See FIX(3). [Cases: Monopolies 17(1.7). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 83–85, 87.]

“Price-fixing agreements may or may not be aimed at complete elimination of price competition. The group making those agreements may or may not have the power to control the market. But the fact that the group cannot control the market prices does not necessarily mean that the agreement as to prices has no utility to the members of the combination. The effectiveness of price-fixing agreements is dependent on many factors, such as competitive tactics, position in the industry, the formula underlying price policies. Whatever economic justification particular price-fixing agreements may be thought to have, the law does not permit an inquiry into their reasonableness. They are all banned because of their actual or potential threat to the central nervous system of the economy.” United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U.S. 150, 225–26 n.59, 60 S.Ct. 811, 845 n.59 (1940).

horizontal price-fixing. Price-fixing among competitors on the same level, such as retailers throughout an industry. [Cases: Monopolies 17(1.7). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 83–85, 87.] vertical price-fixing. Price-fixing among parties in the same chain of distribution, such as manufacturers and retailers attempting to control an item's resale price. [Cases: Monopolies 17(1.7). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 83–85, 87.]

PRICE INDEX

PRICE LEADERSHIP

price leadership. A market condition in which an industry leader establishes a price that others in the field adopt as their own. • Price leadership alone does not violate antitrust laws without other evidence of an intent to create a monopoly.

PRICE-LEVEL-ADJUSTED MORTGAGE

price-level-adjusted mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

PRICE MEMORANDUM

price memorandum. Securities. A document created by an underwriter to explain how securities are priced for a public offering and, typically, to show estimates and appraisals that are not allowed as part of the offering documents.

PRICE-RENEGOTIATION CLAUSE

price-renegotiation clause.Oil & gas. A provision in a gas contract allowing for price renegotiation from time to time or upon election of one of the parties.

PRICE SUPPORT

price support.The artificial maintenance of prices (as of a particular commodity) at a certain level, esp. by governmental action (as by subsidy). [Cases: Agriculture 3.5.]

PRICE WAR

price war.A period of sustained or repeated price-cutting in an industry (esp. among retailers), designed to undersell competitors or force them out of business.

PRIMARY CAREGIVER primary caregiver. Family law. 1. The parent who has had the greatest responsibility for the daily care and rearing of a child. See TENDER-YEARS DOCTRINE ; PRIMARY-CAREGIVER DOCTRINE. 2. The person (including a nonparent) who has had the greatest responsibility for the daily care and rearing of a child. — Also termed primary caretaker.

PRIMARY-CAREGIVER DOCTRINE

primary-caregiver doctrine.Family law. The presumption that, in a custody dispute, the parent who is a child's main caregiver will be the child's custodian, assuming that he or she is a fit parent.

- This doctrine includes the quality and the quantity of care that a parent gives a child — but excludes supervisory care by others while the child is in the parent's custody. Under this doctrine, courts sometimes divide children into three age groups: those under the age of 6, those 6 to 14, and those 14 and older. For children under the age of 6, an absolute presumption exists in favor of the primary caretaker as custodian. For those 6 to 14, the trial court may hear the child's preference on the record but without the parents being present. For those 14 and older, the child may be allowed to choose which parent will be the custodian, assuming that both parents are fit. — Also termed primary-caretaker doctrine; primary-caregiver presumption; primary-caretaker presumption; primary-caregiver preference. Cf. MATERNAL-PREFERENCE PRESUMPTION ; TENDER-YEARS DOCTRINE.

PRIMARY CARETAKER

primary caretaker.See PRIMARY CAREGIVER.

PRIMARY-LINE COMPETITION

primary-line competition. See horizontal competition under COMPETITION.

PRIMARY-LINE INJURY

primary-line injury. Antitrust. Under the price-discrimination provisions of the Robinson-Patman Act, the practice of charging below-cost, predatory prices in an attempt to eliminate the seller's competition in the market. 15 USCA § 13(a). • A primary-line injury, which hinders or seeks to hinder competition among the seller's competitors, is distinguishable from a secondary-line injury, which refers to discriminatory pricing that hinders or seeks to hinder competition among the seller's customers, by favoring one customer over another in the prices the seller charges. Cf. SECONDARY-LINE INJURY .

“Liggett contends that Brown & Williamson's discriminatory volume rebates to wholesalers threatened substantial competitive injury by furthering a predatory pricing scheme designed to purge competition from the economy segment of the cigarette market. This type of injury, which harms direct competitors of the discriminating seller, is known as a primary-line injury.” Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209, 220, 113 S.Ct. 2578, 2586 (1993).

PRIMARY POWERS

primary powers. The chief powers given by a principal to an agent to accomplish the agent's tasks. Cf. MEDIATE POWERS.

PRIMARY PURPOSE OR EFFECT

primary purpose or effect. Copyright. The main reason for or consequence of using a product, as a test for whether its sale amounts to contributory negligence. • The Supreme Court rejected the test in a landmark copyright case, but four justices said that if the primary purpose or effect of the product's sale or use infringes the copyrights of others, its manufacturer could be enjoined from selling the product or required to pay a reasonable royalty to the copyright owners. Sony Corp. of Am. v. Universal City Studios, Inc., 464 U.S. 417, 457–500, 104 S.Ct. 774, 796–818 (1984) (Blackmun, J., dissenting). Cf. COMMERCIALY SIGNIFICANT NONINFRINGING USE .

PRIMO FRONTE

primo fronte (prI-moh fron-tee). [Latin] Hist. At first sight.

PRIMOGENITURE

primogeniture (prI-m<<schwa>>-jen-<<schwa>>-ch<<schwa>>r). 1. The state of being the firstborn child among siblings. 2. The common-law right of the firstborn son to inherit his ancestor's estate, usu. to the exclusion of younger siblings. — Also termed (in sense 2) primogenitureship. See BOROUGH ENGLISH . [Cases: Descent and Distribution 7.]

references. But primogeniture embraces all the cases of single inheritance, and may indeed be defined as the prerogative enjoyed by an eldest son or occasionally an eldest daughter, through law or custom, to succeed to their ancestor's inheritance in preference to younger children. Nay, we might even make it more comprehensive, extending it to all cases of single succession depending upon priority in birth." Radhabinod Pal, The History of the Law of Primogeniture 11 (1929).

"We might note here, parenthetically, that the English preference for single-file male descent — that is, the system of descent known as primogeniture — was never cordially received in this country. Our statutes of descent and distribution uniformly provide for sons' and daughters' sharing the inheritance equally. Although this seems a fairer method than primogeniture, which was finally abolished in Britain with the 1925 reforms, the descent of property to an ever-expanding group of heirs can seriously complicate the clearing of old titles." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 9 (2d ed. 1984).

primogenitureship. See PRIMOGENTURE(2).

PRIMO LOCO

primo loco (prI-moh loh-koh). [Latin] Hist. In the first place.

PRIMO VENIENTI

primo venienti (prI-moh ven-ee-en-tI). [Latin] To the one first coming. • This refers to the former practice by estate executors of paying debts as they were presented without regard to whether the estate had enough assets to pay all the debts.

PRIMUM DECRETUM

primum decretum (prI-m<<schwa>>m di-kree-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin "first decree"] 1.Hist. Eccles. law. A preliminary decree granted in favor of the plaintiff on the nonappearance of a defendant. 2.Maritime law. A provisional decree.

PRINCEPS

princeps (prin-seps), n. [Latin] Roman law. A leading person, esp. the emperor.

PRINCIPAL

principal,adj. Chief; primary; most important.

principal,n.1. One who authorizes another to act on his or her behalf as an agent. Cf. AGENT. [Cases: Principal and Agent 1, 130. C.J.S. Agency §§ 2, 4–6, 23, 25–27, 33, 38–40, 58, 391; Architects§ 21.]

apparent principal.A person who, by outward manifestations, has made it reasonably appear to a third person that another is authorized to act as the person's agent.

disclosed principal.A principal whose identity is revealed by the agent to a third party. • A disclosed principal is always liable on a contract entered into by the agent with the principal's authority, but the agent is usu. not liable. [Cases: Principal and Agent 92–137. C.J.S. Agency §§ 44, 47, 73, 143–165; Architects § 21–22, 24.]

partially disclosed principal. A principal whose existence — but not actual identity — is revealed by the agent to a third party. [Cases: Principal and Agent 138–146. C.J.S. Agency §§ 166, 369–371, 385, 387–388, 393, 412–419, 448–451.]

undisclosed principal. A principal whose identity is kept secret by the agent; a principal for whom the other party has no notice that the agent is acting. • An undisclosed principal and the agent are both liable on a contract entered into by the agent with the principal's authority. [Cases: Principal and Agent 138–146. C.J.S. Agency §§ 166, 369–371, 385, 387–388, 393, 412–419, 448–451.]

2. One who commits or participates in a crime. Cf. ACCESSORY(2); ACCOMPLICE (2). [Cases: Criminal Law 59–67. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 127–136, 143, 998–999, 1002.] “The student should notice that in criminal law the word ‘principal’ suggests the very converse of the idea which it represents in mercantile law. In the former, as we have seen, an accessory proposes an act, and the ‘principal’ carries it out. But in the law of contract, and in that of tort, the ‘principal’ only authorizes an act, and the ‘agent’ carries it out. Where the same transaction is both a tort and a crime, this double use of the word may cause confusion. For example, if, by an innkeeper's directions, his chamber-maid steals jewels out of a guest's portmanteau, the maid is the ‘principal’ in a crime, wherein her master is an accessory before the fact; whilst she is also the agent in a tort, wherein her master is the ‘principal’.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 89 (16th ed. 1952).

principal in the first degree. The perpetrator of a crime. — Also termed first-degree principal. [Cases: Criminal Law 61, 78. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 130, 143–144, 148.]

principal in the second degree. One who helped the perpetrator at the time of the crime. — Also termed accessory at the fact; second-degree principal. See ABETTOR. [Cases: Criminal Law 63, 78. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 132, 143–144, 148.]

“The distinction between principals in the first and second degrees is a distinction without a difference except in those rare instances in which some unusual statute has provided a different penalty for one of these than for the other. A principal in the first degree is the immediate perpetrator of the crime while a principal in the second degree is one who did not commit the crime with his own hands but was present and abetting the principal. It may be added, in the words of Mr. Justice Miller, that one may perpetrate a crime, not only with his own hands, but ‘through the agency of mechanical or chemical means, as by instruments, poison or powder, or by an animal, child, or other innocent agent’ acting under his direction.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 736 (3d ed. 1982) (quoting Beausoliel v. United States, 107 F.2d 292, 297 (D.C. Cir. 1939)).

3. One who has primary responsibility on an obligation, as opposed to a surety or indorser.
4. The corpus of an estate or trust. [Cases: Trusts 1. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18.]
5. The amount of a debt, investment, or other fund, not including interest, earnings, or profits.

distinctive stamped or printed mark or design. 2.FINGERPRINT.

PRINTED-MATTER DOCTRINE printed-matter doctrine.Patents. The rule that printed matter may not be patented unless it is a physical part of a patentable invention. • For example, the doctrine has been used to deny patents for systems of representing sheet music and for methods of compiling directories. But it cannot be used to deny a patent for computer software. [Cases: Patents 5. C.J.S. Patents §§ 13–14, 16.]

PRINTERS INK STATUTE

Printers Ink Statute.A model statute drafted in 1911 and adopted in a number of states making it a misdemeanor to print an advertisement that contains a false or deceptive statement.

PRIOR

prior,adj.1. Preceding in time or order <under this court's prior order>.2. Taking precedence .

prior,n. Criminal law. Slang. A previous conviction <because the defendant had two priors, the judge automatically enhanced his sentence>.

PRIOR-APPROPRIATION DOCTRINE

prior-appropriation doctrine.The rule that, among the persons whose properties border on a waterway, the earliest users of the water have the right to take all they can use before anyone else has a right to it. Cf. RIPARIAN-RIGHTS DOCTRINE . [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 140. C.J.S. Waters §§ 376, 380, 391–393.]

PRIOR ART

prior art. See ART.

prior-claim rule.The principle that before suing for a tax refund or abatement, a taxpayer must first assert the claim to the Internal Revenue Service. [Cases: Internal Revenue 5003.]

PRIOR CONSISTENT STATEMENT

prior consistent statement.See STATEMENT.

PRIOR CREDITOR

prior creditor.See CREDITOR.

PRIOR-EXCLUSIVE-JURISDICTION DOCTRINE

prior-exclusive-jurisdiction doctrine.The rule that a court will not assume in rem jurisdiction over property that is already under the jurisdiction of another court of concurrent jurisdiction.

PRIOR INCONSISTENT STATEMENT

prior inconsistent statement. See STATEMENT.

PRIORI PETENTI

priori petenti (prĪ-or-I p<<schwa>>-ten-tĪ). [Latin “to the first person applying”] Wills & estates. The principle that when two or more persons are equally entitled to administer an estate, the court will appoint the person who applies first.

PRIORITY

priority. 1. The status of being earlier in time or higher in degree or rank; precedence. 2. Commercial law. An established right to such precedence; esp., a creditor's right to have a claim paid before other creditors of the same debtor receive payment. [Cases: Secured Transactions 138–145. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 88, 90–102, 106–107, 118.] 3. The doctrine that, as between two courts, jurisdiction should be accorded the court in which proceedings are first begun. [Cases: Courts 475, 493, 514; Federal Courts 1145. C.J.S. Courts §§ 188, 211, 224.] 4. Patents & trademarks. The status of being first to invent something (and therefore be potentially eligible for patent protection) or to use a mark in trade (and therefore be potentially eligible for trademark registration). [Cases: Patents 90; Trade Regulation 66. C.J.S. Patents §§ 120–125; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 29–30.]

priority of adoption. Trademarks. Priority in designing or creating a trademark. • Priority of adoption does not in itself confer the right to exclusive use of a mark if someone else was first to use it in commerce. — Also termed priority of appropriation; priority of invention. Cf. priority of use.

priority of appropriation. Trademarks. See priority of adoption.

priority of invention. 1. Patents. The determination that one among several patent applications, for substantially the same invention, should receive the patent when the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office has declared interference. • This determination depends on the date of conception, the date of reduction to practice, and diligence. [Cases: Patents 90, 106. C.J.S. Patents §§ 120–125, 159–162, 165.] 2. Trademarks. See priority of adoption.

priority of use. Trademarks. Priority in using a mark in actual commerce. • The priority of use, not the priority of adoption, determines who has the right to protection. Cf. priority of adoption. [Cases: Trade Regulation 66. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 29–30.]

priority award. Patents. A final judgment by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office designating one party in an interference contest as the first inventor. — Also termed award in interference.

PRIORITY CLAIM

priority claim. See CLAIM(5).

PRIORITY CONTEST

PRIORITY OF LIENS

priority of liens. The ranking of liens in the order in which they are perfected.

PRIOR LAESIT

prior laesit (prĭ-lee-sit). [Law Latin] Scots law. He (or she) first injured. • The phrase usu. referred to the provocation for an assault.

PRIOR LIEN

prior lien. See LIEN.

PRIOR PETENS

prior petens (prĭ-pet-enz). [Latin] The person first applying.

PRIOR PREFERRED STOCK

prior preferred stock. See STOCK.

PRIOR PUBLICATION

prior publication. Patents. Public disclosure of the basis for or existence of an invention, made before filing a patent application for the invention. • If the publication was made more than a year before the application is filed, the patent is barred by statute. Publication occurs when the information is made available to any member of the general public. See limited publication under PUBLICATION. [Cases: Patents 67. C.J.S. Patents § 52.]

PRIOR-RELATIONSHIP RAPE

prior-relationship rape. See relationship rape under RAPE.

PRIOR RESTRAINT

prior restraint. A governmental restriction on speech or publication before its actual expression. • Prior restraints violate the First Amendment unless the speech is obscene, is defamatory, or creates a clear and present danger to society. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90(3). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 502, 542, 546–550.]

“The legal doctrine of prior restraint (or formal censorship before publication) is probably the oldest form of press control. Certainly it is one of the most efficient, since one censor, working in the watershed, can create a drought of information and ideas long before they reach the fertile plain of people's minds. In the United States, the doctrine of prior restraint has been firmly opposed by the First Amendment to the Constitution, and by the Supreme Court, perhaps most notably in the case of Near v. Minnesota, decided in 1931. But the philosophy behind that doctrine lives zestfully on, and shows no signs of infirmities of age.” David G. Clark & Earl R. Hutchinson, Mass Media and the Law 11 (1970).

PRIOR SALE

prior sale. Patents. Sale or offer of sale of an invention before a patent is applied for. • If the sale occurred more than one year before the application is filed, the patent is barred by statute. 35 USCA § 102(b). [Cases: Patents 76. C.J.S. Patents §§ 107, 110–111.]

PRIOR SENTENCE

prior sentence. See SENTENCE.

PRIOR-USE BAR

prior-use bar. See PUBLIC-USE BAR.

PRIOR-USE DOCTRINE

prior-use doctrine. The principle that, without legislative authorization, a government agency may not appropriate property already devoted to a public use. [Cases: Eminent Domain 47. C.J.S. Eminent Domain § 58.]

PRIOR-USER RIGHT

prior-user right. Patents. The right of a first inventor to continue using an invention after someone else has patented it. • This right protects first inventors in most countries from the harsh effects of a first-to-file system. See PRIVATE-USE EXCEPTION(2).

PRISAGE

prisage (prĭ-zij). Hist. A royal duty on wine imported into England. • Prisage was replaced by butlerage in the reign of Edward I. Cf. BUTLERAGE.

PRISEL EN AUTER LIEU

prisel en auter lieu (prĭ-z<<schwa>>l awn oh-tayl-yoo). [Law French “a taking in another place”] A plea in abatement in a replevin action.

PRISON

prison. A state or federal facility of confinement for convicted criminals, esp. felons. — Also termed penitentiary; penal institution; adult correctional institution. Cf. JAIL. [Cases: Prisons 1. C.J.S. Prisons and Rights of Prisoners §§ 2–3.]

private prison.A prison that is managed by a private company, not by a governmental agency.

PRISON BREACH prison breach.A prisoner's forcible breaking and departure from a place of lawful confinement; the offense of escaping from confinement in a prison or jail. • Prison breach has traditionally been distinguished from escape by the presence of force, but some jurisdictions have abandoned this distinction. — Also termed prison breaking; breach of prison. Cf. ESCAPE(2). [Cases: Escape 4. C.J.S. Escape §§ 8, 16–18.]

“Breach of prison by the offender himself, when committed for any cause, was felony at the common law: or even conspiring to break it. But this severity is mitigated by the statute de frangentibus prisonam, I Edw. II, which enacts that no person shall have judgment of life or member, for breaking prison, unless committed for some capital offence. So that to break prison, when lawfully committed for any treason or felony, remains still a felony as at the common law; and to break prison, when lawfully confined upon any other inferior charge, is still punishable as a high misdemeanor by fine and imprisonment.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 130–31 (1769).

PRISON CAMP

prison camp.A usu. minimum-security camp for the detention of trustworthy prisoners who are often employed on government projects.

PRISONER

prisoner. 1. A person who is serving time in prison. 2. A person who has been apprehended by a law-enforcement officer and is in custody, regardless of whether the person has yet been put in prison. Cf. CAPTIVE(1).

“While breach of prison, or prison breach, means breaking out of or away from prison, it is important to have clearly in mind the meaning of the word ‘prison.’ If an officer arrests an offender and takes him to jail the layman does not think of the offender as being ‘in prison’ until he is safely behind locked doors, but no one hesitates to speak of him as a ‘prisoner’ from the moment of apprehension. He is a prisoner because he is ‘in prison ... whether he were actually in the walls of a prison, or only in the stocks, or in the custody of any person who had lawfully arrested him ...’ ” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 566 (3d ed. 1982) (quoting 2 Hawk. P.C. ch. 18, § 1 (6th ed. 1788)).

PRISONER AT THE BAR

prisoner at the bar.Archaic. An accused person who is on trial.

PRISONER OF CONSCIENCE

prisoner of conscience.Int'l law.A person who, not having used or advocated the use of violence, has been imprisoned by reason of a political, religious, or other conscientiously held belief or by reason of ethnic origin, sex, color, or language.

PRISONER OF WAR

prisoner of war. A person, usu. a soldier, who is captured by or surrenders to the enemy in wartime. — Also termed captive. — Abbr. POW.

PRISONER'S DILEMMA

prisoner's dilemma. A logic problem — often used by law-and-economics scholars to illustrate the effect of cooperative behavior — involving two prisoners who are being separately questioned about their participation in a crime: (1) if both confess, they will each receive a 5-year sentence; (2) if neither confesses, they will each receive a 3-year sentence; and (3) if one confesses but the other does not, the confessing prisoner will receive a 1-year sentence while the silent prisoner will receive a 10-year sentence. See EXTERNALITY.

PRIST

prist (prist). [Law French] Hist. Ready. • In oral pleading, this term was used to express a joinder of issue.

privacy. The condition or state of being free from public attention to intrusion into or interference with one's acts or decisions.

autonomy privacy. An individual's right to control his or her personal activities or intimate personal decisions without outside interference, observation, or intrusion. • If the individual's interest in an activity or decision is fundamental, the state must show a compelling public interest before the private interest can be overcome. If the individual's interest is acknowledged to be less than fundamental or is disputed, then a court must apply a balancing test. Hill v. NCAA, 865 P.2d 633, 653, 654 (Cal. 1994).

informational privacy. Tort. A private person's right to choose to determine whether, how, and to what extent information about oneself is communicated to others, esp. sensitive and confidential information.

PRIVACY ACT OF 1974

Privacy Act of 1974. An act that regulates the government's creation, collection, use, and dissemination of records that can identify an individual by name, as well as other personal information. • The Act was amended in 1990 and in 1994. 18 USCA § 552a.

PRIVACY LAW

privacy law. 1. A federal or state statute that protects a person's right to be left alone or that restricts public access to personal information such as tax returns and medical records. — Also termed privacy act. [Cases: Records 31. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 449–450; Records §§ 74–92.] 2. The area of legal studies dealing with a person's right to be left alone and with restricting public access to personal information such as tax returns and medical records.

PRIVACY PRIVILEGE

privacy privilege. See PRIVILEGE(3).

PRIVATA DELICTA

privata delicta (prI-vay-t<<schwa>> di-lik-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. Private wrongs; torts. See DELICT. Cf. PUBLICA DELICTA.

PRIVATAE LEGES

private judging.A type of alternative dispute resolution whereby the parties hire a private individual to hear and decide a case. • This process may occur as a matter of contract between the parties or in connection with a statute authorizing such a process. — Also termed rent-a-judging.

“In contrast [to arbitration], private judging is a less contractual, less privatized process. Party agreement, usually formed post-dispute, does send a case to private judging. And the parties have the freedom of contract to determine the time and place of trial, as well as the identity of the judge. Unlike arbitration, however, privately judged trials may ... be: (1) required to use the same rules of procedure and evidence used in ordinary litigation, (2) exposed to public view by court order, (3) adjudicated only by a former judge, and (4) subject to appeal in the same manner as other trial verdicts. In sum, private judging is essentially an ordinary bench trial except that the parties select, and pay for, the judge.” Stephen J. Ware, Alternative Dispute Resolution § 2.54, at 113 (2001).

privilege. 1. A special legal right, exemption, or immunity granted to a person or class of persons; an exception to a duty. • A privilege grants someone the legal freedom to do or not to do a given act. It immunizes conduct that, under ordinary circumstances, would subject the actor to liability.

absolute privilege.A privilege that immunizes an actor from suit, no matter how wrongful the action might be, and even though it is done with an improper motive. Cf. qualified privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander 36; Torts 16. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 58, 65, 69; Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 20, 28, 31–33, 44; Torts § 7, 12, 14–15, 51, 64, 92–93.]

audit privilege.See AUDIT PRIVILEGE.

conditional privilege.See qualified privilege.

courtroom privilege.See judicial privilege.

deliberative-process privilege.A privilege permitting the government to withhold documents relating to policy formulation to encourage open and independent discussion among those who develop government policy. [Cases: Witnesses 216(1). C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 361–364, 366–367.]

judicial privilege.Defamation. The privilege protecting any statement made in the course of and with reference to a judicial proceeding by any judge, juror, party, witness, or advocate. — Also termed courtroom privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander 38. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 71.]

legislative privilege.Defamation. The privilege protecting (1) any statement made in a legislature by one of its members, and (2) any paper published as part of legislative business. — Also termed (in a parliamentary system) parliamentary privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander 37. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 76.]

litigation privilege.A privilege protecting the attorneys and parties in a lawsuit from defamation claims arising from statements made in the course of the suit. [Cases: Libel and Slander 38. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 71.]

official privilege. The privilege immunizing from a defamation lawsuit any statement made by one state officer to another in the course of official duty. [Cases: Libel and Slander 39, 42. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 69–70, 99–100, 103.]

privilege from arrest. An exemption from arrest, as that enjoyed by members of Congress during legislative sessions. U.S. Const. art. I, § 6, cl. 1. [Cases: Arrest 59. C.J.S. Arrest § 5.]

qualified privilege. A privilege that immunizes an actor from suit only when the privilege is properly exercised in the performance of a legal or moral duty. — Also termed conditional privilege. Cf. absolute privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander 41; Officers and Public Employees 114; Torts 16. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 59, 62–65, 83–87, 90; Officers and Public Employees § 247–248, 251–258; Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 20, 28, 31–33, 44; Torts §§ 7, 12, 14–15, 51, 64, 92–93.]

“Qualified privilege ... is an intermediate case between total absence of privilege and the presence of absolute privilege.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 165 (17th ed. 1977).

special privilege. 1. A privilege granted to a person or class of persons to the exclusion of others and in derogation of the common right. 2. See personal privilege under PRIVILEGE(5).

testimonial privilege. A right not to testify based on a claim of privilege; a privilege that overrides a witness's duty to disclose matters within the witness's knowledge, whether at trial or by deposition. [Cases: Witnesses 297. C.J.S. Witnesses § 522.]

viatorial privilege (vī-<<schwa>>-tor-ee-*<<schwa>>*l). A privilege that overrides a person's duty to attend court in person and to testify.

work-product privilege. See WORK-PRODUCT RULE.

2. An affirmative defense by which a defendant acknowledges at least part of the conduct complained of but asserts that the defendant's conduct was authorized or sanctioned by law; esp., in tort law, a circumstance justifying or excusing an intentional tort. See JUSTIFICATION(2). Cf. IMMUNITY(2). [Cases: Torts 16. C.J.S. Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 20, 28, 31–33, 44; Torts §§ 7, 12, 14–15, 51, 64, 92–93.] 3. An evidentiary rule that gives a witness the option to not disclose the fact asked for, even though it might be relevant; the right to prevent disclosure of certain information in court, esp. when the information was originally communicated in a professional or confidential relationship. • Assertion of a privilege can be overcome by proof that an otherwise privileged communication was made in the presence of a third party to whom the privilege would not apply. [Cases: Witnesses 184–223. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 297–389.]

accountant–client privilege. The protection afforded to a client from an accountant's unauthorized disclosure of materials submitted to or prepared by the accountant. • The privilege is not widely recognized. [Cases: Witnesses 196.2. C.J.S. Witnesses § 356.]

antimarital-facts privilege. See marital privilege (2).

attorney–client privilege. The client's right to refuse to disclose and to prevent any other person from disclosing confidential communications between the client and the attorney. — Also termed lawyer–client privilege; client's privilege. [Cases: Witnesses 197. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 316–340.]

“There are a number of ways to organize the essential elements of the attorney–client privilege to provide for an orderly analysis. One of the most popular is Wigmore's schema: ‘(1) Where legal advice of any kind is sought (2) from a professional legal adviser in his capacity as such, (3) the communications relating to that purpose (4) made in confidence (5) by the client (6) are at his instance permanently protected (7) from disclosure by himself or by the legal adviser, (8) except the privilege be waived.’ Though this organization has its virtues, there is some question as to whether it completely states the modern privilege.” 24 Charles Alan Wright & Kenneth W. Graham Jr., Federal Practice and Procedure § 5473, at 103–04 (1986) (quoting 8 John Henry Wigmore, Evidence § 2292, at 554 (John T. McNaughton rev., 1961)).

“At the present time it seems most realistic to portray the attorney–client privilege as supported in part by its traditional utilitarian justification, and in part by the integral role it is perceived to play in the adversary system itself. Our system of litigation casts the lawyer in the role of fighter for the party whom he represents. A strong tradition of loyalty attaches to the relationship of attorney and client, and this tradition would be outraged by routine examination of the lawyer as to the client's confidential disclosures regarding professional business. To the extent that the evidentiary privilege, then, is integrally related to an entire code of professional conduct, it is futile to envision drastic curtailment of the privilege without substantial modification of the underlying ethical system to which the privilege is merely ancillary.” John W. Strong, McCormick on Evidence § 87, at 121–22 (4th ed. 1992).

clergyman–penitent privilege. See priest–penitent privilege.

client's privilege. See attorney–client privilege.

doctor–patient privilege. The right to exclude from discovery and evidence in a legal proceeding any confidential communication that a patient makes to a physician for the purpose of diagnosis or treatment, unless the patient consents to the disclosure. — Also termed patient–physician privilege; physician–patient privilege; physician–client privilege. [Cases: Witnesses 207. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 341–355.]

editorial privilege. See journalist's privilege (2).

executive privilege. A privilege, based on the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers, that exempts the executive branch of the federal government from usual disclosure requirements when the matter to be disclosed involves national security or foreign policy. Cf. executive immunity under IMMUNITY(1). [Cases: Witnesses 216. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 361–364.]

husband–wife privilege. See marital privilege.

informant's privilege. The qualified privilege that a government can invoke to prevent disclosure of the identity and communications of its informants. • In exercising its power to formulate evidentiary rules for federal criminal cases, the U.S. Supreme Court has consistently declined to hold that the government must disclose the identity of informants in a preliminary hearing or in a criminal trial. McCray v. Illinois, 386 U.S. 300, 312, 87 S.Ct. 1056, 1063 (1967). A party can, however, usu. overcome the privilege by demonstrating that the need for the information outweighs the public interest in maintaining the privilege. — Also termed informer's privilege. [Cases: Criminal Law 627.6; Witnesses 216(4). C.J.S. Criminal Law § 495; Witnesses § 365.]

joint-defense privilege.The rule that a defendant can assert the attorney–client privilege to protect a confidential communication made to a codefendant's lawyer if the communication was related to the defense of both defendants. — Also termed common-interest doctrine. [Cases: Witnesses 199(2). C.J.S. Witnesses § 325.]

journalist's privilege. 1. A reporter's protection, under constitutional or statutory law, from being compelled to testify about confidential information or sources. — Also termed reporter's privilege; newsman's privilege. See SHIELD LAW(1). [Cases: Witnesses 196.1. C.J.S. Witnesses § 358.] 2. A publisher's protection against defamation lawsuits when the publication makes fair comment on the actions of public officials in matters of public concern. — Also termed editorial privilege. See FAIR COMMENT. [Cases: Libel and Slander 49. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 98, 102–104.]

lawyer–client privilege.See attorney–client privilege.

marital privilege. 1. The privilege allowing a spouse not to testify, and to prevent another person from testifying, about confidential communications between the spouses during the marriage. — Also termed marital-communications privilege. [Cases: Witnesses 187. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 299–315.] 2. The privilege allowing a spouse not to testify in a criminal case as an adverse witness against the other spouse, regardless of the subject matter of the testimony. — Also termed (in sense 2) privilege against adverse spousal testimony; antimarital-facts privilege. [Cases: Witnesses 51. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 147, 159, 163–164, 171, 173.] 3. The privilege immunizing from a defamation lawsuit any statement made between husband and wife. — Also termed (in all senses) spousal privilege; husband–wife privilege.

national-security privilege.See state-secrets privilege.

newsman's privilege.See journalist's privilege (1). parliamentary privilege. 1. See legislative privilege under PRIVILEGE(1).2.PRIVILEGE(5).

patient–physician privilege.See doctor–patient privilege.

peer-review privilege.A privilege that protects from disclosure the proceedings and reports of a medical facility's peer-review committee, which reviews and oversees the patient care and medical services provided by the staff. [Cases: Witnesses 184(1). C.J.S. Witnesses § 297.]

physician–client privilege.See doctor–patient privilege.

political-vote privilege.A privilege to protect from compulsory disclosure a vote cast in an election by secret ballot.

priest–penitent privilege. The privilege barring a clergy member from testifying about a confessor's communications. — Also termed clergyman–penitent privilege. [Cases: Witnesses 215. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 359–360.]

privacy privilege. A defendant's right not to disclose private information unless the plaintiff can show that (1) the information is directly relevant to the case, and (2) the plaintiff's need for the information outweighs the defendant's need for nondisclosure. • This privilege is recognized in California but in few other jurisdictions.

privilege against adverse spousal testimony. See marital privilege (2).

privilege against self-incrimination. Criminal law. 1. RIGHT AGAINST SELF-INCRIMINATION. 2. A criminal defendant's right not to be asked any questions by the judge or prosecution unless the defendant chooses to testify. — Also termed right not to be questioned.

“According to the rule, neither the judge nor the prosecution is entitled at any stage to question the accused unless he chooses to give evidence.... This rule may be called the accused's right not to be questioned; in America it is termed the privilege against self-incrimination. The latter expression is more apt as the name for another rule, the privilege of any witness to refuse to answer an incriminating question; this is different from the rule under discussion, which, applying only to persons accused of crime, prevents the question from being asked. The person charged with crime has not merely the liberty to refuse to answer a question incriminating himself; he is freed even from the embarrassment of being asked the question.” Glanville Williams, The Proof of Guilt 37–38 (3d ed. 1963).

psychotherapist–patient privilege. A privilege that a person can invoke to prevent the disclosure of a confidential communication made in the course of diagnosis or treatment of a mental or emotional condition by or at the direction of a psychotherapist. • The privilege can be overcome under certain conditions, as when the examination is ordered by a court. — Also termed psychotherapist–client privilege. [Cases: Witnesses 214.5. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 342, 349.]

reporter's privilege. See journalist's privilege (1).

self-critical-analysis privilege. A privilege protecting individuals and entities from divulging the results of candid assessments of their compliance with laws and regulations, to the extent that the assessments are internal, the results were intended from the outset to be confidential, and the information is of a type that would be curtailed if it were forced to be disclosed. • This privilege is founded on the public policy that it is beneficial to permit individuals and entities to confidentially evaluate their compliance with the law, so that they will monitor and improve their compliance with it. — Also termed self-policing privilege; self-evaluation privilege. [Cases: Witnesses 184(1). C.J.S. Witnesses § 297.]

spousal privilege. See marital privilege.

state-secrets privilege. A privilege that the government may invoke against the discovery of a material that, if divulged, could compromise national security. — Also termed national-security

tax-return privilege. A privilege to refuse to divulge the contents of a tax return or certain related documents. • The privilege is founded on the public policy of encouraging honest tax returns.

4. Civil law. A creditor's right, arising from the nature of the debt, to priority over the debtor's other creditors. 5. Parliamentary law. The status of a motion as outranking other business because of its relationship to the meeting's or a member's rights. — Also termed parliamentary privilege. See question of privilege under QUESTION(3).

general privilege. A privilege that concerns the deliberative assembly as a body, rather than any particular member or members. — Also termed privilege of the assembly; privilege of the house. Cf. personal privilege.

parliamentary privilege. 1. A privilege under parliamentary law. 2. See legislative privilege under PRIVILEGE(1).

personal privilege. A privilege that concerns an individual member or members (e.g., a member's reputation or physical ability to hear the proceedings) rather than the deliberative assembly generally. — Also termed special privilege. See procedural point under POINT. Cf. general privilege.

privilege of the assembly. See general privilege.

privilege of the floor. Parliamentary law. (usu. pl.) The right of entering, passing through, and sitting on the floor during a meeting. See FLOOR(1).

“The expression ‘privileges of the floor,’ sometimes used in legislative bodies or conventions, has nothing to do with having the floor, but means merely that a person is permitted to enter the hall. It carries no right to speak or any other right of membership, except as may be determined by rules or action of the body.” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 3, at 28 n. (10th ed. 2000).

privilege of the house. See general privilege.

special privilege. See personal privilege.

PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES CLAUSE

Privileges and Immunities Clause. The constitutional provision (U.S. Const. art. IV, § 2, cl. 1) prohibiting a state from favoring its own citizens by discriminating against other states' citizens who come within its borders. [Cases: Constitutional Law 207. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 649.]

PRIVILEGES OR IMMUNITIES CLAUSE

Privileges or Immunities Clause. The constitutional provision (U.S. Const. amend. XIV, § 1) prohibiting state laws that abridge the privileges or immunities of U.S. citizens. • The clause was effectively nullified by the Supreme Court in the Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36 (1873). Cf. DUE PROCESS CLAUSE; EQUAL PROTECTION CLAUSE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 206. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 649.]

PRIVILEGE TAX

privilege tax. See TAX.

PRIVILEGIUM

privilegium (priv-<<schwa>>-lee-jee-*<<schwa>>*m), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A law passed against or in favor of a specific individual. 2. Roman law. A special right, esp. one giving priority to a creditor. 3. Civil law. Every right or favor that is granted by the law but is contrary to the usual rule.

PRIVILEGIUM CLERICALE privilegium clericale (priv-<<schwa>>-lee-jee-<<schwa>>m kler-*<<schwa>>-kay-lee). [Law Latin] See BENEFIT OF CLERGY.

PRIVITY

privity (priv-<<schwa>>-tee).1. The connection or relationship between two parties, each having a legally recognized interest in the same subject matter (such as a transaction, proceeding, or piece of property); mutuality of interest <privity of contract>. [Cases: Judgment 678(2). C.J.S. Judgments §§ 830, 861, 866.]

horizontal privity.Commercial law. The legal relationship between a party and a nonparty who is related to the party (such as a buyer and a member of the buyer's family). [Cases: Sales 255. C.J.S. Sales §§ 240–241, 284, 288–289.]

privity of blood. 1. Privity between an heir and an ancestor. 2. Privity between coparceners.

privity of contract.The relationship between the parties to a contract, allowing them to sue each other but preventing a third party from doing so. • The requirement of privity has been relaxed under modern laws and doctrines of implied warranty and strict liability, which allow a third-party beneficiary or other foreseeable user to sue the seller of a defective product. [Cases: Contracts 186; Sales 255. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 610–611; Sales § 240–241, 284, 288–289.]

“To many students and practitioners of the common law privity of contract became a fetish. As such, it operated to deprive many a claimant of a remedy in cases where according to the mores of the time the claim was just. It has made many learned men believe that a chose in action could not be assigned. Even now, it is gravely asserted that a man cannot be made the debtor of another against his will. But the common law was gradually influenced by equity and by the law merchant, so that by assignment a debtor could become bound to pay a perfect stranger to himself, although until the legislature stepped in, the common-law courts characteristically made use of a fiction and pretended that they were not doing that which they really were doing.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 335 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“It is an elementary principle of English law — known as the doctrine of ‘Privity of Contract’ — that contractual rights and duties only affect the parties to a contract, and this principle is the distinguishing feature between the law of contract and the law of property. True proprietary rights are ‘binding on the world’ in the lawyer's traditional phrase. Contractual rights, on the other hand, are only binding on, and enforceable by, the immediate parties to the contract. But this distinction, fundamental though it be, wears a little thin at times. On the one hand, there has been a constant tendency for contractual rights to be extended in their scope so as to affect more and more persons who cannot be regarded as parties to the transaction. On the other hand, few proprietary rights are literally ‘binding on the world’.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 265 (3d ed. 1981).

“The doctrine of privity means that a person cannot acquire rights or be subject to liabilities arising under a contract to which he is not a party. It does not mean that a contract between A and B cannot affect the legal rights of C indirectly.” G.H. Treitel, The Law of Contract 538 (8th ed. 1991).

privity of estate. A mutual or successive relationship to the same right in property, as between grantor and grantee or landlord and tenant. — Also termed privity of title; privity in estate. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.]

privity of possession. Privity between parties in successive possession of real property. • The existence of this type of privity is often at issue in adverse-possession claims. [Cases: Adverse Possession 43. C.J.S. Adverse Possession § 154.]

privity of title. See privity of estate.

vertical privity. 1. Commercial law. The legal relationship between parties in a product's chain of distribution (such as a manufacturer and a seller). [Cases: Sales 255. C.J.S. Sales §§ 240–241, 284, 288–289.] 2. Privity between one who signs a contract containing a restrictive covenant and one who acquires the property burdened by it.

2. Joint knowledge or awareness of something private or secret, esp. as implying concurrence or consent <privity to a crime>.

privy (priv-ee), n. pl. A person having a legal interest of privity in any action, matter, or property; a person who is in privity with another. • Traditionally, there were six types of privies: (1) privies in blood, such as an heir and an ancestor; (2) privies in representation, such as an executor and a testator or an administrator and an intestate person; (3) privies in estate, such as grantor and grantee or lessor and lessee; (4) privies in respect to a contract — the parties to a contract; (5) privies in respect of estate and contract, such as a lessor and lessee where the lessee assigns an interest, but the contract between lessor and lessee continues because the lessor does not accept the assignee; and (6) privies in law, such as husband and wife. The term also appears in the context of litigation. In this sense, it includes someone who controls a lawsuit though not a party to it; someone whose interests are represented by a party to the lawsuit; and a successor in interest to anyone having a derivative claim. Pl. privies.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Privy Council. In Britain, the principal council of the sovereign, composed of the cabinet ministers and other persons chosen by royal appointment to serve as privy councillors. • The functions of the Privy Council are now mostly ceremonial. See JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRIVY COUNCILLOR privy councillor. A member of the Privy Council. — Abbr. P.C.

PRIVY PURSE

privy purse. English law. The income set apart for the sovereign's personal use.

PRIVY SEAL

privy seal. 1. A seal used in making out grants or letters patent before they are passed under the great seal. 2. (cap.) LORD PRIVY SEAL.

PRIVY SIGNET

privy signet.Hist. The signet or seal used by the sovereign in making out grants and private letters.

PRIVY VERDICT

privy verdict.See VERDICT.

prize. 1. Something of value awarded in recognition of a person's achievement. 2. A vessel or cargo captured at sea or seized in port by the forces of a nation at war, and therefore liable to being condemned or appropriated as enemy property. [Cases: War and National Emergency 28. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 29–32, 34–45.]

prize court.See COURT.

PRIZE FIGHTING

prize fighting.Fighting for a reward or prize; esp., professional boxing. [Cases: Theaters and Shows 3.60. C.J.S. Entertainment and Amusement; Sports §§ 24, 48.]

“Prize fighting ... was not looked upon with favor by the common law as was a friendly boxing match or wrestling match. On the other hand it was not punishable by the common law unless it was fought in a public place, or for some other reason constituted a breach of the peace.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 480 (3d ed. 1982).

PRIZE GOODS

prize goods.See GOODS.

PRIZE LAW

prize law.The system of laws applicable to the capture of prize at sea, dealing with such matters as the rights of captors and the distribution of the proceeds. [Cases: War and National Emergency 28. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 29–32, 34–45.]

PRIZE MONEY

prize money. 1. A dividend from the proceeds of a captured vessel, paid to the captors. 2. Money offered as an award.

PROBABILIS CAUSA LITIGANDI probabilis causa litigandi (pr⟨schwa⟩-bab-⟨schwa⟩-lis kaw-z⟨schwa⟩ lit-i-gan-di). [Law Latin] Scots law. A probable cause of action. • A person applying for legal aid has to show a reasonable basis for the proposed legal action.

PROBABLE CAUSE

probable cause. 1.Criminal law. A reasonable ground to suspect that a person has committed or is committing a crime or that a place contains specific items connected with a crime. • Under the Fourth Amendment, probable cause — which amounts to more than a bare suspicion but less than evidence that would justify a conviction — must be shown before an arrest warrant or search warrant may be issued. — Also termed reasonable cause; sufficient cause; reasonable grounds; reasonable excuse. Cf. REASONABLE SUSPICION. [Cases: Arrest 63.4(2). C.J.S. Arrest § 22.]

“Probable cause may not be established simply by showing that the officer who made the challenged arrest or search subjectively believed he had grounds for his action. As emphasized in Beck v. Ohio [379 U.S. 89, 85 S.Ct. 223 (1964)]: ‘If subjective good faith alone were the test, the protection of the Fourth Amendment would evaporate, and the people would be “secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects” only in the discretion of the police.’ The probable cause test, then, is an objective one; for there to be probable cause, the facts must be such as would warrant a belief by a reasonable man.” Wayne R. LaFave & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 3.3, at 140 (2d ed. 1992).

2.Torts. A reasonable belief in the existence of facts on which a claim is based and in the legal validity of the claim itself. • In this sense, probable cause is usu. assessed as of the time when the claimant brings the claim (as by filing suit).

PROBABLE-CAUSE HEARING

probable-cause hearing. 1.PRELIMINARY HEARING. 2. See shelter hearing under HEARING.

PROBABLE CONSEQUENCE probable consequence.An effect or result that is more likely than not to follow its supposed cause. [Cases: Negligence 386. C.J.S. Negligence § 196.]

probable-desistance test.Criminal law. A common-law test for the crime of attempt, focusing on whether the defendant has exhibited dangerous behavior indicating a likelihood of committing the crime. See ATTEMPT(2).

PROBABLE EVIDENCE

probable evidence.See presumptive evidence under EVIDENCE.

PROBANDUM

probandum (proh-ban-d<<schwa>>m), n. A fact to be proved. Pl. probanda.See fact in issue under FACT.

PROBATA

probata (proh-bay-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] pl.PROBATUM.

PROBATE

independent probate.See informal probate.

informal probate.Probate designed to operate with minimal input and supervision of the probate court. • Most modern probate codes encourage this type of administration, with an independent personal representative. — Also termed independent probate. Cf. independent executor under EXECUTOR. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 3(1). C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 7, 9–10.]

probate in common form.Probate granted in the registry, without any formal procedure in court, on the executor's ex parte application. • The judgment is subject to being reopened by a party who has not been given notice. [Cases: Wills 213. C.J.S. Wills §§ 472–473.]

probate in solemn form.Probate granted in open court, as a final decree, when all interested parties have been given notice. • The judgment is final for all parties who have had notice of the proceeding, unless a later will is discovered. [Cases: Wills 214. C.J.S. Wills §§ 472–473.]

small-estate probate.An informal procedure for administering small estates, less structured than the normal process and usu. not requiring the assistance of an attorney.

2. Loosely, a personal representative's actions in handling a decedent's estate. 3. Loosely, all the subjects over which probate courts have jurisdiction. 4.Archaic. A nonresident plaintiff's proof of a debt by swearing before a notary public or other officer that the debt is correct, just, and due, and by having the notary attach a jurat.

probate,vb.1. To admit (a will) to proof. 2. To administer (a decedent's estate).3. To grant probation to (a criminal); to reduce (a sentence) by means of probation.

PROBATE ESTATE

probate estate.A decedent's property subject to administration by a personal representative. • The probate estate comprises property owned by the decedent at the time of death and property acquired by the decedent's estate at or after the time of death. — Also termed probate property. See decedent's estate under ESTATE(3). [Cases: Executors and Administrators 38–61; Wills 4. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 2, 121–127, 129–151; Wills § 53.]

net probate estate. The probate estate after the following deductions: (1) family allowances, (2) exempt property, (3) homestead allowances, (4) claims against the estate, and (5) taxes for which the estate is liable. — Also termed net estate. Cf. adjusted gross estate (1) under ESTATE(3). [Cases: Internal Revenue 4149–4185; Taxation 895. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 500, 503–539, 541–546, 798; Taxation §§ 1900–1909, 1918–1931, 1941–1944, 1948.]

“devil's proof”] Civil law. The (usu. difficult) proof of ownership of an immovable thing by tracing its title back to the sovereign.

probatio mortua (pr<<schwa>>-bay-shee-oh mor-choo-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Dead proof; proof by an inanimate object such as a deed or other instrument.

probatio plena (pr<<schwa>>-bay-shee-oh plee-n<<schwa>>). [Latin] Civil law. Full proof; proof by two witnesses or a public instrument. — Also termed plena probatio.

probatio probata (pr<<schwa>>-bay-shee-oh pr<<schwa>>-bay-t<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] A proven proof; evidence that could not be contradicted.

probatio prout de jure (pr<<schwa>>-bay-shee-oh proh-<<schwa>>t dee [or di] joor-ee). [Law Latin] A proof according to any of the legal modes of proof applicable to the circumstance.

probatio semiplena (pr<<schwa>>-bay-shee-oh sem-I-plee-n<<schwa>>). [Latin] Civil law. Half-full proof; half-proof; proof by one witness or a private instrument.

probatio viva (pr<<schwa>>-bay-shee-oh vI-v<<schwa>>). [Latin] Living proof; that is, proof by the mouth of a witness.

PROBATION

probation. 1. A court-imposed criminal sentence that, subject to stated conditions, releases a convicted person into the community instead of sending the criminal to jail or prison. Cf. PAROLE. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1811.] — probationary,adj.

bench probation.Probation in which the offender agrees to certain conditions or restrictions and reports only to the sentencing judge rather than a probation officer. — Also termed bench parole; court probation.

deferred-adjudication probation.See deferred judgment under JUDGMENT.

shock probation.Probation that is granted after a brief stay in jail or prison. • Shock probation is intended to awaken the defendant to the reality of confinement for failure to abide by the conditions of probation. This type of probation is discretionary with the sentencing judge and is usu. granted within 180 days of the original sentence. — Also termed split sentence. Cf. shock incarceration under INCARCERATION. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1936.]

probatum (proh-bay-t<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Something conclusively established or proved; proof. Pl. probata. Cf. ALLEGATUM.

PROBLEM-ORIENTED POLICING problem-oriented policing. A method that law-enforcement officers use to reduce crime by identifying and remedying the underlying causes of criminal incidents rather than merely seeking basic information (such as the identity of the perpetrator) about the crime being investigated.

PRO BONO

pro bono (proh boh-noh), adv. & adj. [Latin pro bono publico “for the public good”] Being or involving uncompensated legal services performed esp. for the public good <took the case pro bono> <50 hours of pro bono work each year>. [Cases: Attorney and Client 132. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 299–303.]

“The bar in this country has a long-standing tradition of service pro bono publico — legal services ‘for the public good,’ provided at no cost or a reduced fee. This concept encompasses a wide range of activities, including law reform efforts, participation in bar associations and civic organizations, and individual or group representation. Clients who receive such assistance also span a broad range including: poor people, nonprofit organizations, ideological or political causes, and friends, relatives, or employees of the lawyer.” Deborah L. Rhode & Geoffrey C. Hazard, Professional Responsibility 162 (2002).

PRO BONO ET MALO

pro bono et malo (proh boh-noh et mal-oh). [Latin] For good and ill. See DE BONO ET MALO .

PRO BONO PUBLICO

PROCEDURE

procedure. 1. A specific method or course of action. 2. The judicial rule or manner for carrying on a civil lawsuit or criminal prosecution. — Also termed rules of procedure. See CIVIL PROCEDURE; CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

PROCEEDING

proceeding. 1. The regular and orderly progression of a lawsuit, including all acts and events between the time of commencement and the entry of judgment. 2. Any procedural means for seeking redress from a tribunal or agency. 3. An act or step that is part of a larger action. 4. The business conducted by a court or other official body; a hearing. 5. Bankruptcy. A particular dispute or matter arising within a pending case — as opposed to the case as a whole. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2156. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 26.]

“ ‘Proceeding’ is a word much used to express the business done in courts. A proceeding in court is an act done by the authority or direction of the court, express or implied. It is more comprehensive than the word ‘action,’ but it may include in its general sense all the steps taken or measures adopted in the prosecution or defense of an action, including the pleadings and judgment. As applied to actions, the term ‘proceeding’ may include — (1) the institution of the action; (2) the appearance of the defendant; (3) all ancillary or provisional steps, such as arrest, attachment of property, garnishment, injunction, writ of ne exeat; (4) the pleadings; (5) the taking of testimony before trial; (6) all motions made in the action; (7) the trial; (8) the judgment; (9) the execution; (10) proceedings supplementary to execution, in code practice; (11) the taking of the appeal or writ of error; (12) the remittitur, or sending back of the record to the lower court from the appellate or reviewing court; (13) the enforcement of the judgment, or a new trial, as may be directed by the court of last resort.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 3–4 (2d ed. 1899).

adjudicatory proceeding. See adjudication hearing under HEARING.

administrative proceeding. See ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDING.

collateral proceeding. A proceeding brought to address an issue incidental to the principal proceeding.

competency proceeding. A proceeding to assess a person's mental capacity. • A competency hearing may be held either in a criminal context to determine a defendant's competency to stand trial or as a civil proceeding to assess whether a person should be committed to a mental-health facility.

contempt proceeding. A judicial or quasi-judicial hearing conducted to determine whether a person has committed contempt. [Cases: Contempt 40. C.J.S. Contempt §§ 63–66, 74–75, 77, 83.]

core proceeding. See CORE PROCEEDING.

criminal proceeding. A proceeding instituted to determine a person's guilt or innocence or to set a convicted person's punishment; a criminal hearing or trial.

ex parte proceeding (eks pahr-tee). A proceeding in which not all parties are present or given the opportunity to be heard. — Also termed ex parte hearing.

in camera proceeding (in kam-<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>). A proceeding held in a judge's chambers or other private place. [Cases: Pretrial Procedure 411; Witnesses 223. C.J.S. Discovery § 101; Witnesses § 377.]

informal proceeding. A trial conducted in a more relaxed manner than a typical court trial, such as an administrative hearing or a trial in small-claims court. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 469; Courts 176. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 134, 136, 138–139.]

involuntary proceeding. See involuntary bankruptcy under BANKRUPTCY.

judicial proceeding. Any court proceeding; any proceeding initiated to procure an order or decree, whether in law or in equity.

noncore proceeding. See RELATED PROCEEDING.

posttrial proceeding. Action on a case that occurs after the trial is completed.

proceeding in rem. A proceeding brought to affect all persons' interests in a thing that is subject to the power of a state.

proceeding quasi in rem. A proceeding brought to affect particular persons' interests in a thing.

quasi-criminal proceeding. Procedure. A civil proceeding that is conducted in conformity with the rules of a criminal proceeding because a penalty analogous to a criminal penalty may apply, as in some juvenile proceedings. • For example, juvenile delinquency is classified as a civil offense. But like a defendant in a criminal trial, an accused juvenile faces a potential loss of liberty. So criminal procedure rules apply.

related proceeding. See RELATED PROCEEDING.

special proceeding. 1. A proceeding that can be commenced independently of a pending action and from which a final order may be appealed immediately. 2. A proceeding involving statutory or civil remedies or rules rather than the rules or remedies ordinarily available under rules of procedure; a proceeding providing extraordinary relief. [Cases: Action 20. C.J.S. Actions § 67.]

summary proceeding. A nonjury proceeding that settles a controversy or disposes of a case in a relatively prompt and simple manner. — Also termed summary trial. Cf. plenary action under ACTION(4).

“Summary proceedings were such as were directed by Act of Parliament, there was no jury, and the person accused was acquitted or sentenced only by such person as statute had appointed for his judge. The common law was wholly a stranger to summary proceedings.” A.H. Manchester, Modern Legal History of England and Wales, 1750–1950 160 (1980).

supplementary proceeding. 1. A proceeding held in connection with the enforcement of a judgment, for the purpose of identifying and locating the debtor's assets available to satisfy the judgment. 2. A proceeding that in some way supplements another. [Cases: Execution 358; Federal Civil Procedure 2707. C.J.S. Executions §§ 345–347, 386.]

proceeds (proh-seedz), n.1. The value of land, goods, or investments when converted into money; the amount of money received from a sale <the proceeds are subject to attachment>.2. Something received upon selling, exchanging, collecting, or otherwise disposing of collateral. UCC § 9-102(a)(64). • Proceeds differ from other types of collateral because they constitute any collateral that has changed in form. For example, if a farmer borrows money and gives the creditor a security interest in the harvest, the harvested wheat is collateral. If the farmer then exchanges the harvest for a tractor, the tractor becomes the proceeds of the wheat. [Cases: Secured Transactions 164. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 113, 115, 117–118.]

net proceeds.The amount received in a transaction minus the costs of the transaction (such as expenses and commissions). — Also termed net balance.

PROCEEDS AND AVAILS

proceeds and avails.The cash-surrender value of a life-insurance policy, together with values built up since the policy's issue date and the benefits payable on maturity and at the death of the insured.

PROCERES

proceres (pros-<<schwa>>-reez). [Latin] Nobles; lords. See DOMUS PROCERUM.

process,n.1. The proceedings in any action or prosecution <due process of law>.2. A summons or writ, esp. to appear or respond in court <service of process>. — Also termed judicial process; legal process. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 401; Process 1, 3. C.J.S. Process §§ 2–3.]

“Process is so denominated because it proceeds or issues forth in order to bring the defendant into court, to answer the charge preferred against him, and signifies the writs or judicial means by which he is brought to answer.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 338 (2d ed. 1826).

bailable process.A process instructing an officer to take bail after arresting a defendant. • The defendant's discharge is required by law after the tender of suitable security.

civil process.A process that issues in a civil lawsuit. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 401; Process 1. C.J.S. Process § 2.]

compulsory process.A process, with a warrant to arrest or attach included, that compels a person to appear in court as a witness. [Cases: Witnesses 2. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 469–485.]

criminal process.A process (such as an arrest warrant) that issues to compel a person to answer for a crime. [Cases: Criminal Law 216. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 334.]

defective process.Void or voidable process. See void process; voidable process.

final process.A process issued at the conclusion of a judicial proceeding; esp., a writ of execution. [Cases: Execution 1. C.J.S. Executions §§ 2, 15.]

irregular process.A process not issued in accordance with prescribed practice. • Whether the process is void or merely voidable depends on the type of irregularity. Cf. regular process.

legal process.Process validly issued. — Also termed lawful process.

mesne process (meen).1. A process issued between the commencement of a lawsuit and the final judgment or determination. 2. The procedure by which a contumacious defendant is compelled to plead. — Also termed writ of mesne process; writ of mesne.

original process.A process issued at the beginning of a judicial proceeding. [Cases: Process 1. C.J.S. Process § 2.]

“Original process is any writ or notice by which a defendant is called upon to appear and answer the plaintiff’s declaration. The commencement of the suit at common law was formerly by original writ. Judicial process was by summons, attachment, arrest and outlawry.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 3, at 17 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

regular process.A process that issues lawfully according to prescribed practice. Cf. irregular process.

summary process. 1. An immediate process, issuing and taking effect without intermediate applications or delays. 2. A legal procedure used to resolve a controversy more efficiently and expeditiously than ordinary methods. 3. The legal documents achieving such a result. 4. A procedure for repossessing real property from a tenant upon default. See summary eviction under EVICTION. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 293.] 5.SHOW-CAUSE PROCEEDING.

trust process.In some states (particularly in New England), garnishment or foreign attachment. [Cases: Garnishment 1.]

voidable process.A defective process with a curable defect.

void process.Legal process that, in some material way, does not comply with the required form.

3.Patents. A method, operation, or series of actions intended to achieve some new and useful end or result by changing a material's chemical or physical characteristics. • Process is a statutory category of patentable invention. Cf. MACHINE; MANUFACTURE. [Cases: Patents 7. C.J.S. Patents §§ 17–19.]“A process is a way of doing something. If it is a patentable process, it must be a new, useful, and nonobvious way of doing something. If the process is patentable, the result of that process — the something getting done — need not of itself be new, useful, or nonobvious. In other words, the result of an inventive process need not be an invention itself.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 24 (2d ed. 1990).

PROCESS, ABUSE OF

process, abuse of. See ABUSE OF PROCESS.

PRODUCTS LIABILITY

products liability, n. 1. A manufacturer's or seller's tort liability for any damages or injuries suffered by a buyer, user, or bystander as a result of a defective product. • Products liability can be based on a theory of negligence, strict liability, or breach of warranty. [Cases: Products Liability 1. C.J.S. Products Liability §§ 2–3.] 2. The legal theory by which liability is imposed on the manufacturer or seller of a defective product. 3. The field of law dealing with this theory. — Also termed product liability; (specif.) manufacturer's liability. See LIABILITY. — products-liability,adj.

strict products liability.Products liability arising when the buyer proves that the goods were unreasonably dangerous and that (1) the seller was in the business of selling goods, (2) the goods were defective when they were in the seller's hands, (3) the defect caused the plaintiff's injury, and (4) the product was expected to and did reach the consumer without substantial change in condition. [Cases: Products Liability 5. C.J.S. Products Liability §§ 7–8.]

products-liability action.A lawsuit brought against a manufacturer, seller, or lessor of a product — regardless of the substantive legal theory or theories upon which the lawsuit is brought — for personal injury, death, or property damage caused by the manufacture, construction, design, formulation, installation, preparation, or assembly of a product. — Also termed product-liability action. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 30; Products Liability 1; Sales 425. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 68–70, 72; Products Liability §§ 2–3; Sales §§ 237, 278–280, 284–286, 288.]

profit à prendre (a prawn-dr<<schwa>> or ah prahn-d<<schwa>>r). [Law French “profit to take”] (usu. pl.) A right or privilege to go on another's land and take away something of value from its soil or from the products of its soil (as by mining, logging, or hunting). — Also termed right of common. Pl. profits à prendre. Cf. EASEMENT. [Cases: Licenses 43. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses § 88.]

“A profit à prendre has been described as ‘a right to take something off another person's land.’ This is too wide; the thing taken must be something taken out of the soil, i.e., it must be either the soil, the natural produce thereof, or the wild animals existing on it; and the thing taken must at the time of taking be susceptible of ownership. A right to ‘hawk, hunt, fish, and fowl’ may thus exist as a profit, for this gives the right to take creatures living on the soil which, when killed, are capable of being owned. But a right to take water from a spring or a pump, or the right to water cattle at a pond, may be an easement but cannot be a profit; for the water, when taken, was not owned by anyone nor was it part of the soil.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 375–76 (6th ed. 1993).

PROFITEERING

profiteering, n. The taking advantage of unusual or exceptional circumstances to make excessive profits, as in the selling of scarce goods at inflated prices during war. [Cases: War and National Emergency 59.] — profiteer, vb.

PROFIT INSURANCE

profit insurance. See INSURANCE.

PROFIT MARGIN

profit margin. 1. The difference between the cost of something and the price for which it is sold. 2. The ratio, expressed as a percentage, between this difference and the selling price. • For example, a widget costing a retailer $10 and selling for $15 has a profit margin of 33% ($5 difference divided by $15 selling price). — Often shortened to margin.

PROFIT-SHARING PLAN

profit-sharing plan. An employee benefit plan that allows an employee to share in the company's profits. • ERISA governs the administration of many profit-sharing plans, which provide for discretionary employer contributions and provide a definite predetermination formula for allocating the contributions to the plan among the participants. Contributions are frequently allocated in proportion to each participant's compensation. See EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN; EMPLOYEE RETIREMENT INCOME SECURITY ACT. [Cases: Pensions 24.1, 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.] qualified profit-sharing plan. A plan in which an employer's contributions are not taxed to the employee until distribution. • The employer is allowed to deduct the contributions. IRC (26 USCA) § 401(a). — Often shortened to qualified plan. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3578. C.J.S. Internal prohibition. 1. A law or order that forbids a certain action. 2. An extraordinary writ issued by an appellate court to prevent a lower court from exceeding its jurisdiction or to prevent a nonjudicial officer or entity from exercising a power. — Also termed (in sense 2) writ of prohibition; (in Scots law) inhibition. Cf. WRIT OF CONSULTATION. [Cases: Prohibition 1. C.J.S. Prohibition §§ 2–5.]

Revenue §§ 294–295, 302–304.]

“Prohibition is a kind of common-law injunction to prevent an unlawful assumption of jurisdiction.... It is a common-law injunction against governmental usurpation, as where one is called coram non judge (before a judge unauthorized to take cognizance of the affair), to answer in a tribunal that has no legal cognizance of the cause. It arrests the proceedings of any tribunal, board, or person exercising judicial functions in a manner or by means not within its jurisdiction or discretion.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 341, at 542 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

3. (cap.) The period from 1920 to 1933, when the manufacture, transport, and sale of alcoholic beverages in the United States was forbidden by the 18th Amendment to the Constitution. • The 18th Amendment was repealed by the 21st Amendment. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors 17. C.J.S. Intoxicating Liquors § 35.]

promise, n.1. The manifestation of an intention to act or refrain from acting in a specified manner, conveyed in such a way that another is justified in understanding that a commitment has been made; a person's assurance that the person will or will not do something. • A binding promise — one that the law will enforce — is the essence of a contract. [Cases: Contracts 1.C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

“By common usage, a promise is an expression leading another person justifiably to expect certain conduct on the part of the promisor. Such an expression is a promise, whether enforceable at law or not. It is indeed an essential element in every contract. Society does not guarantee the fulfillment of all expectations so induced.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 6 n.3 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“[Promise] means not only the physical manifestations of assurance by words or conduct, but also the moral duty to make good the assurance by performance. If by reason of other operative facts the promise is recognized as creating a legal duty, the promise is a contract.” Samuel Williston, A Treatise on the Law of Contracts § 1A, at 4 (Walter H.E. Jaeger ed., 3d ed. 1957).

2. The words in a promissory note expressing the maker's intention to pay a debt. • A mere written acknowledgment that a debt is due is insufficient to constitute a promise. [Cases: Bills and Notes 30. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 11.] — promise, vb.

aleatory promise (ay-lee-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A promise conditional on the happening of a fortuitous event, or on an event that the parties believe is fortuitous. [Cases: Contracts 218. C.J.S.

alternative promise. A contractual promise to do one of two or more things, any one of which qualifies as consideration.

bare promise. See gratuitous promise.

collateral promise. A promise to guarantee the debt of another, made primarily without benefit to the party making the promise. • Unlike an original promise, a collateral promise must be in writing to be enforceable. See MAIN-PURPOSE RULE. [Cases: Guaranty 1.]

conditional promise. A promise that is conditioned on the occurrence of an event other than the lapse of time <she made a conditional promise to sell the gold on April 2 unless the price fell below $300 an ounce before that time>. • A conditional promise is not illusory as long as the condition is not entirely within the promisor's control. [Cases: Contracts 58, 218. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 107, 355, 358.]

corresponding promise. A mutual promise calling for the performance of an act substantially similar to the act called for by the other mutual promise, both acts being in pursuit of a common purpose.

counterpromise. See COUNTERPROMISE.

dependent promise. A promise to be performed by a party only when another obligation has first been performed by another party. [Cases: Contracts 173, 278(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 361, 475, 503–505, 510–512.]

divisible promises. Promises that are capable of being divided into independent parts.

false promise. A promise made with no intention of carrying it out. Cf. promissory fraud under FRAUD.

fictitious promise. See implied promise.

gratuitous promise. A promise made in exchange for nothing; a promise not supported by consideration. • A gratuitous promise is not ordinarily legally enforceable. — Also termed bare promise; naked promise. [Cases: Contracts 47. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 83–84.]

illusory promise. A promise that appears on its face to be so insubstantial as to impose no obligation on the promisor; an expression cloaked in promissory terms but actually containing no commitment by the promisor. • An illusory promise typically, by its terms, makes performance optional with the promisor. For example, if a guarantor promises to make good on the principal debtor's obligation "as long as I think it's in my commercial interest," the promisor is not really bound. [Cases: Contracts 10(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 105–106, 108–113.]

"An apparent promise which, according to its terms, makes performance optional with the promisor no matter what may happen, or no matter what course of conduct in other respects he may pursue, is in fact no promise. Such an expression is often called an illusory promise." Samuel Williston, A Treatise on the Law of Contracts § 1A, at 5 (Walter H.E. Jaeger ed., 3d ed. 1957).

implied promise. A promise created by law to render a person liable on a contract so as to avoid fraud or unjust enrichment. — Also termed fictitious promise. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts 1. C.J.S. Implied and Constructive Contracts §§ 2–3.]

"Under some circumstances the promise inferred is called an implied promise and in others it is referred to as a constructive promise. But whichever conclusion is reached, the result is the same. In other words an implied promise and a constructive promise are not treated differently. The theoretical difference between the two is that a promise implied from the conduct of the parties arises by construction of law, only when justice requires it under the circumstances." John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 4–12, at 234–35 (3d ed. 1987).

independent promise. See unconditional promise.

marriage promise. Family law. A betrothal; an engagement to be married. — Also termed agreement to marry; promise to marry; promise of marriage. [Cases: Breach of Marriage Promise 1. C.J.S. Breach of Marriage Promise § 3.]

mutual promises. Promises given simultaneously by two parties, each promise serving as consideration for the other. See bilateral contract under CONTRACT.

naked promise. See gratuitous promise.

new promise. A previously unenforceable promise that a promisor revives and agrees to fulfill, as when a debtor agrees to pay a creditor an amount discharged in the debtor's bankruptcy.

original promise. A promise to guarantee the debt of another, made primarily for the benefit of the party making the promise. • An original promise need not be in writing to be enforceable. See MAIN-PURPOSE RULE. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of 23.]

promise implied in fact. A promise existing by inference from the circumstances or actions of the parties. See implied promise. [Cases: Contracts 27. C.J.S. Contracts § 6.]

promise in consideration of marriage. A promise for which the actual performance of the marriage is the consideration, as when a man agrees to transfer property to a woman if she will marry him. • A promise to marry, however, is not considered a promise in consideration of marriage. [Cases: Breach of Marriage Promise 5. C.J.S. Breach of Marriage Promise § 6.]

promise in restraint of trade. A promise whose performance would limit competition in any business or restrict the promisor in the exercise of a gainful occupation. • Such a promise is usu. unenforceable. [Cases: Contracts 116. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 249–251, 253–254, 257–260.]

remedial promise. A seller's promise to repair or replace goods, or the like, or to refund the price if the goods (1) do not conform to the contract or to a representation at the time of the delivery of the goods, (2) conform at the time of delivery but later fail to perform as agreed, or (3) contain a defect.

unconditional promise. A promise that either is unqualified or requires nothing but the lapse of time to make the promise presently enforceable. • A party who makes an unconditional promise must perform that promise even though the other party has not performed according to the bargain. — Also termed independent promise. [Cases: Contracts 218. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 355, 358.]

voidable promise. A promise that one party may, under the law, declare void by reason of that party's incapacity or mistake, or by reason of the fraud, breach, or other fault of the other party. [Cases: Contracts 98. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 137, 139–140, 145, 153–155, 157, 171, 173–174, 185, 188.]

promisee (prom-is-ee). One to whom a promise is made.

PROMISE NOT TO COMPETE

promise not to compete. See noncompetition covenant under COVENANT(1).

PROMISE OF MARRIAGE

promise of marriage. See marriage promise under PROMISE.

PROMISE TO MARRY

promise to marry. See marriage promise under PROMISE.

PROMISOR

promisor (prom-is-or). One who makes a promise; esp., one who undertakes a contractual obligation.

PROMISSOR

promissor (prom-is-<<schwa>>r). [Latin] 1. Civil law. A promisor; specif., a party who undertakes to do a thing in response to the interrogation of the other party (the stipulator). 2. REUS PROMITTENDI.

PROMISSORY

promissory, adj. Containing or consisting of a promise <the agreement's promissory terms>.

PROMISSORY CONDITION

promissory condition. See CONDITION(2).

PROMISSORY ESTOPPEL

promissory estoppel. See ESTOPPEL.

PROMISSORY FRAUD

promissory fraud. See FRAUD.

PROMISSORY NOTE

promissory note. See NOTE(1).

PROMISSORY OATH

promissory oath. See OATH.

PROMISSORY REPRESENTATION

promissory representation. See REPRESENTATION(1).

PROMISSORY RESTRAINT

promissory restraint. An attempt by an otherwise effective conveyance or contract to discourage a later conveyance by imposing contractual liability on anyone who makes a later conveyance.

PROMISSORY WARRANTY

promissory warranty. See WARRANTY(3).

PRO MODO ADMISSI

pro modo admissi (proh moh-doh ad-mis-I). [Latin] Hist. According to the measure of the offense.

PROMOTER

promoter. 1. A person who encourages or incites. 2. A founder or organizer of a corporation or business venture; one who takes the entrepreneurial initiative in founding or organizing a business or enterprise. — Formerly also termed projector. [Cases: Corporations 30. C.J.S. Corporations § 67.]

“The complete judicial acceptance of the term ‘promoter’ is a matter of comparatively recent date. In some of the early cases, persons engaged in the formation of a corporation are spoken of as ‘projectors.’ Other cases of about the same period, though recognizing the obligations flowing therefrom, do not give any name to the relation in which such persons stand to the contemplated company. The word promoter, while undoubtedly employed in common parlance before that time, does not seem to have been used in any reported decision until after it had been used, and for the purposes of the act defined, in the Joint Stock Companies Act of 1844.... [A] person may be said to be a promoter of a corporation if before its organization, he directly or indirectly solicits subscriptions to its stock, or assumes to act in its behalf in the purchase of property, or in the securing of its charter, or otherwise assists in its organization.” Manfred W. Ehrlich, The Law of

“A promoter is a person who takes the initiative in developing and organizing a new business venture. A promoter may act either alone or with co-promoters. The term ‘promoter’ is not one of opprobrium; indeed, the promoter is often an aggressive, imaginative entrepreneur who fulfills the essential economic function of taking an idea and creating a profitable business to capitalize on the idea.” Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 64 (3d ed. 1991).

PROMOTING PROSTITUTION promoting prostitution. See PANDERING.

PROMULGARE

promulgare (proh-m<<schwa>>l-gair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To promulgate; to make (a law) publicly known after its enactment.

PROMULGATE

promulgate (pr<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>l-gayt or prom-<<schwa>>l-gayt), vb. 1. To declare or announce publicly; to proclaim. 2. To put (a law or decree) into force or effect. 3. (Of an administrative agency) to carry out the formal process of rulemaking by publishing the proposed regulation, inviting public comments, and approving or rejecting the proposal. — promulgation (prom-<<schwa>>l-gay-sh<<schwa>>n or proh-m<<schwa>>l-), n.

PROMULGATION

promulgation (prom-<<schwa>>l-gay-sh<<schwa>>n or proh-m<<schwa>>l-). The official publication of a new law or regulation, by which it is put into effect.

PROMUTUUM

promutuum (proh-myoo-choo-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “as if lent”] Civil law. A quasi-contract in which a person who received money or property in error agrees to return what was received to the person who paid it.

PRONEPOS

pronepos (proh-nep-ohs). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A great-grandson. Pl. pronepotes.

PRONEPTIS

proneptis (proh-nep-tis). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A great-granddaughter. Pl. proneptes.

PRO NON ADJECTO

pro non adjecto (proh non <<schwa>>-jek-toh). [Latin] Hist. As not added. • For example, a nonessential deed provision might be treated pro non adjecto.

PRO NON SCRIPTO

pro non scripto (proh non skrip-toh). [Latin] As not written; as though it had not been written.

- The phrase usu. referred to testamentary conditions that a court would disregard because the conditions were impossible, illegal, or meaningless.

PRONOTARY

pronotary (proh-noh-t<<schwa>>-ree), n. First notary.

PRONOUNCE

pronounce, vb. To announce formally <pronounce judgment>.

PRONUNCIATION

pronunciation (pr<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>n-see-ay-sh<<schwa>>n). Archaic. A sentence or decree.

PRONURUS

pronurus (proh-n<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman & civil law. The wife of a grandson or great-grandson. Pl. pronurus.

proof, n. 1. The establishment or refutation of an alleged fact by evidence; the persuasive effect of evidence in the mind of a fact-finder. [Cases: Evidence 584. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 729, 1301–1305, 1320, 1324, 1326–1327, 1342, 1345.] 2. Evidence that determines the judgment of a court. 3. An attested document that constitutes legal evidence.

affirmative proof. Evidence establishing the fact in dispute by a preponderance of the evidence. [Cases: Evidence 99. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2–5, 197–199, 204, 206.]

conditional proof. A fact that amounts to proof as long as there is no other fact amounting to disproof. — Also termed presumptive proof.

double proof. 1. Bankruptcy. Proof of claims by two or more creditors against the same debt. • This violates the general rule that there can be only one claim with respect to a single debt. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2891. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 268.] 2. Evidence. Corroborating government evidence (usu. by two witnesses) required to sustain certain convictions.

full proof. 1. Civil law. Proof by two witnesses or by public instrument. 2. Evidence that satisfies the minds of the jury of the truth of the fact in dispute beyond a reasonable doubt. [Cases: Evidence 584. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 729, 1301–1305, 1320, 1324, 1326–1327, 1342, 1345.]

literal proof. Civil law. Written evidence. Cf. testimonial proof.

negative proof. Proof that establishes a fact by showing that its opposite is not or cannot be true. Cf. positive proof. [Cases: Evidence 586. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 339, 1309, 1328.]

positive proof. Direct or affirmative proof. Cf. negative proof. [Cases: Evidence 586. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 339, 1309, 1328.]

preliminary proof. Insurance. The first proof offered of a loss occurring under a policy, usu.

sent in to the underwriters with a notification of the claim. [Cases: Insurance 3164. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1280, 1316, 1627.]

presumptive proof. See conditional proof.

proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Proof that precludes every reasonable hypothesis except that which it tends to support. See REASONABLE DOUBT. • Formerly, this standard required evidence to “establish the truth of the fact to a reasonable and moral certainty” and “proof to a moral certainty as distinguished from an absolute certainty.” Moral certainty is no longer a synonym for proof beyond a reasonable doubt. See Victor v. Nebraska, 511 U.S. 1, 8, 12, 114 S.Ct. 1239, 1244, 1246 (1994). [Cases: Criminal Law 561. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1108.] testimonial proof. Civil law. Proof by the evidence of witnesses, rather than proof by written instrument. Cf. literal proof.

PROOF, BURDEN OF proof, burden of. See BURDEN OF PROOF.

PROOF BRIEF

proof brief. See BRIEF.

PROOF OF ACKNOWLEDGMENT proof of acknowledgment. An authorized officer's certification — based on a third party's testimony — that the signature of a person (who usu. does not appear before the notary) is genuine and was freely made. — Also termed certificate of proof. See ACKNOWLEDGMENT(5). [Cases: Acknowledgment 8–39. C.J.S. Acknowledgments §§ 24–78, 88–90.]

proof of claim. Bankruptcy. A creditor's written statement that is submitted to show the basis and amount of the creditor's claim. Pl. proofs of claim. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2891–2904. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 268–279.]

informal proof of claim. A proof of claim stating a creditor's demand for payment and intent to hold the debtor's bankruptcy estate liable, but that does not comply with the Bankruptcy Code's form for proofs of claim. • A late-filed proof of claim may be given effect if the creditor had timely filed an informal proof of claim. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2902. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 276.]

proof of debt. The establishment by a creditor of a debt in some prescribed manner (as by affidavit) as a first step in recovering the debt from an estate or property; PROOF OF CLAIM.

PROOF OF LOSS

proof of loss. An insured's formal statement of loss required by an insurance company before it will determine whether the policy covers the loss. [Cases: Insurance 3164. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1280, 1316, 1627.]

PROOF OF SERVICE

proof of service. 1. A document filed (as by a sheriff) in court as evidence that process has been successfully served on a party. — Also termed return of service; return of process. See SERVICE(1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 511–518; Process 127–150. C.J.S. Process §§ 77–91.] 2.CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE.

PROOF OF WILL

proof of will.See PROBATE(1).

PRO OMNI ALIO ONERE

pro omni alio onere (proh om-nī [also -nee] ay-lee-oh on-<<schwa>>r-ee). [Law Latin “for every other burden”] Hist. A portion of a charter clause restricting the vassal's duties to those explicitly named in the charter.

PRO OPERE ET LABORE

pro opere et labore (proh op-<<schwa>>-ree et l*<<schwa>>-bor-ee*). [Latin] For work and labor.

PROPAGANDA

propaganda.Int'l law. 1. The systematic dissemination of doctrine, rumor, or selected information to promote or injure a particular doctrine, view, or cause. 2. The ideas or information so disseminated. • The word propaganda originated as an abbreviated form of Congregatio de propaganda fide, a committee (of cardinals) for propagating the (Christian) faith.

defamatory propaganda.Propaganda used to promote dissatisfaction among a nation's citizens and undermine government authority. • Defamatory propaganda is common in wartime but is also used in peacetime as a means of incitement.

hostile propaganda.Propaganda employed by a nation to manipulate the people of another nation to support or oppose their government. — Also termed ideological aggression. See subversive propaganda.

“Ideological aggression ... is the spreading of ideas intentionally and deliberately so as to manipulate by symbols controversial attitudes and positions. It is hostile propaganda indulged in by a state directly or vicariously to incite and influence the people of another state so as to maintain or alter the institutions and policies of that state. The campaign of hostile propaganda may emanate from within or without the territory of the victim state and can be carried on by any means of communications.” Ann Van Wynen Thomas & A.J. Thomas, Jr., The Concept of Aggression in International Law 84 (1972).

subversive propaganda.Propaganda calculated to incite a civil war or revolution. • When the instigator is another nation, it is termed hostile propaganda or ideological aggression.

war-mongering propaganda.Propaganda calculated to produce national support for a war and to encourage the government to declare or join in a war regardless of any legal constraints.

PRO PARTE

pro parte (proh pahr-tee). [Latin] Hist. Partly; in part.

PRO PARTE LEGITIMUS, PRO PARTE ILLEGITIMUS

pro parte legitimus, pro parte illegitimus (proh pahr-tee l<<schwa>>-jit-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>s, proh pahr-tee il-l<<schwa>>-jit-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] Hist. Partly legitimate, partly illegitimate. • In Roman and civil law, an illegitimate child could be later legitimated through the marriage of the child's parents. But England did not fully recognize this legitimate status.

PRO PARTE VIRILI

pro parte virili (proh pahr-tee v<<schwa>>-rI-II). [Latin “for the share per man”] Hist. In equal shares; for one's own proportion.

PRO PARTIBUS LIBERANDIS

pro partibus liberandis (proh pahr-ti-b<<schwa>>s lib-<<schwa>>-ran-dis). [Latin “to free the portions”] Hist. A writ for the partition of lands among coheirs.

PROPATRUUS

propatruus (proh-pay-troo-<<schwa>>s or -pa-troo-<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A great-grandfather's brother.

PROPATRUUS MAGNUS

propatruus magnus (proh-pay-troo-<<schwa>>s [or -pa-troo-<<schwa>>s] mag-n<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A great-great-uncle.

PRO PER

PROPER EVIDENCE

proper evidence.See admissible evidence under EVIDENCE.

PROPER FEUD

proper feud.See FEUD(1).

PROPER IMPROBATION

proper improbation.See IMPROBATION.

PROPER INDEPENDENT ADVICE proper independent advice. See INDEPENDENT ADVICE.

PROPER LAW

proper law. Conflict of laws. The substantive law that, under the principles of conflict of laws, governs a transaction. [Cases: Action 17. C.J.S. Actions §§ 18–20; Conflict of Laws §§ 2–3, 12, 15, 20, 23, 27–32, 34–40, 42–48, 50–65, 96–97, 100, 102, 105–107.]

PROPER LOOKOUT

proper lookout, n. The duty of a vehicle operator to exercise caution to avoid collisions with pedestrians or other vehicles. [Cases: Automobiles 150. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 568–571, 573.]

proper means. Trade secrets. Any method of discovering trade secrets that does not violate property-protection statutes or standards of commercial ethics. • Proper means include independent invention, reverse engineering, observing the product in public, and studying published literature. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 757 cmt. f (1977).

“Trade secrets are protected ... in a manner akin to private property, but only when they are disclosed or used through improper means. Trade secrets do not enjoy the absolute monopoly afforded patented processes, for example, and trade secrets will lose their character as private property when the owner divulges them or when they are discovered through proper means.... Thus, it is the employment of improper means to produce the trade secret, rather than mere copy or use, which is the basis of liability.” Chicago Lock Co. v. Fanberg, 676 F.2d 400, 404 (9th Cir. 1982).

PROPER PARTY

proper party. See PARTY(2).

PRO PERSONA

pro persona (proh p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>), adv. & adj. [Latin] For one's own person; on one's own behalf . — Sometimes shortened to pro per. See PRO SE.

PROPERTY

property. 1. The right to possess, use, and enjoy a determinate thing (either a tract of land or a chattel); the right of ownership <the institution of private property is protected from undue governmental interference>. — Also termed bundle of rights. [Cases: Constitutional Law 277; Property 1. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 982; Property § 2–10, 13.] 2. Any external thing over which the rights of possession, use, and enjoyment are exercised <the airport is city property>. [Cases: Property 1. C.J.S. Property §§ 2–10, 13.]

“In its widest sense, property includes all a person's legal rights, of whatever description. A man's property is all that is his in law. This usage, however, is obsolete at the present day, though it is common enough in the older books.... In a second and narrower sense, property includes not all a person's rights, but only his proprietary as opposed to his personal rights. The former constitute his estate or property, while the latter constitute his status or personal condition. In this sense a man's land, chattels, shares, and the debts due to him are his property; but not his life or liberty or reputation.... In a third application, which is that adopted [here], the term includes not even all proprietary rights, but only those which are both proprietary and in rem. The law of property is the law of proprietary rights in rem, the law of proprietary rights in personam being distinguished from it as the law of obligations. According to this usage a freehold or leasehold estate in land, or a patent or copyright, is property; but a debt or the benefit of a contract is not.... Finally, in the narrowest use of the term, it includes nothing more than corporeal property — that is to say, the right of ownership in a material object, or that object itself.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 423–24 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

abandoned property.Property that the owner voluntarily surrenders, relinquishes, or disclaims. Cf. lost property; mislaid property. [Cases: Abandoned and Lost Property 1. C.J.S. Abandonment §§ 4, 7–8.]

absolute property.Property that one has full and complete title to and control over.

adventitious property. 1.Roman law. Property coming to a son or daughter from anyone other than the pater familias. — Also termed peculium adventitium. 2.Hist. Property coming to one from a stranger or collateral relative.

appointive property.A property interest that is subject to a power of appointment. [Cases: Powers 4.]

common property. 1. Real property that is held by two or more persons with no right of survivorship. Cf. joint property. [Cases: Common Lands 1. C.J.S. Common Lands §§ 1–5.] 2.COMMON AREA.

community property.See COMMUNITY PROPERTY.

complete property.The entirety of the rights, privileges, powers, and immunities that it is legally possible for a person to have with regard to land or any other thing, apart from those that all other members of society have in the land or thing.

corporeal property. 1. The right of ownership in material things. 2. Property that can be perceived, as opposed to incorporeal property; tangible property. [Cases: Property 1, 2. C.J.S. Property §§ 2–13, 15–20.]

distressed property.Property that must be sold because of mortgage foreclosure or because it is part of an insolvent estate. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3067.1.]

domestic-partnership property.Property that would be marital property if the domestic partners were married to each other. See DOMESTIC PARTNERSHIP; DOMESTIC-PARTNERSHIP PERIOD.

dotal property.Civil law. Separate property that the wife brings to the marriage to assist the husband with the marriage expenses. Cf. extradotal property. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy 10. C.J.S. Dower §§ 10, 12–17, 140.]

exempt property. See EXEMPT PROPERTY.

extradotal property. Civil law. 1. That portion of a wife's property over which she has complete control. 2. All of a wife's effects that have not been settled on her as dowry; any property that a wife owns apart from her dowry. • In Louisiana, after January 1, 1980, all property acquired by the wife that is not community is neither dotal nor extradotal; it is simply her separate property, as has always been true of the husband. La. Civ. Code art. 2341. — Also termed paraphernal property. Cf. dotal property.

general property. Property belonging to a general owner. See general owner under OWNER.

income property. Property that produces income, such as rental property.

incorporeal property. 1. An in rem proprietary right that is not classified as corporeal property. • Incorporeal property is traditionally broken down into two classes: (1) jura in re aliena (encumbrances), whether over material or immaterial things, examples being leases, mortgages, and servitudes; and (2) jura in re propria (full ownership over an immaterial thing), examples being patents, copyrights, and trademarks. 2. A legal right in property having no physical existence. • Patent rights, for example, are incorporeal property. — Also termed incorporeal chattel; incorporeal thing.

intangible property. Property that lacks a physical existence. • Examples include stock options and business goodwill. Cf. tangible property. [Cases: Property 1, 2. C.J.S. Property §§ 2–13, 15–20.]

intellectual property. See INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY.

joint property. Real or personal property held by two or more persons with a right of survivorship. Cf. common property.

limited-market property. See special-purpose property.

literary property. See LITERARY PROPERTY.

lost property. Property that the owner no longer possesses because of accident, negligence, or carelessness, and that cannot be located by an ordinary, diligent search. Cf. abandoned property; mislaid property. [Cases: Abandoned and Lost Property 10.]

marital property. Property that is acquired during marriage and that is subject to distribution or division at the time of marital dissolution. • Generally, it is property acquired after the date of the marriage and before a spouse files for separation or divorce. The phrase marital property is used in equitable-distribution states and is roughly equivalent to community property. — Also termed marital estate. See COMMUNITY PROPERTY; EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION. [Cases: Divorce 248; Husband and Wife 6–15(6). C.J.S. Divorce §§ 508–511, 580–582; Estates § 19.] maternal property. Property that comes from the mother of a party and other ascendants of the

mislaid property.Property that has been voluntarily relinquished by the owner with an intent to recover it later — but that cannot now be found. Cf. abandoned property; lost property. [Cases: Abandoned and Lost Property 1, 10. C.J.S. Abandonment §§ 4, 7–8.]

“A distinction is drawn between lost property and mislaid property. An article is ‘mislaid’ if it is intentionally put in a certain place for a temporary purpose and then inadvertently left there when the owner goes away. A typical case is the package left on the patron's table in a bank lobby by a depositor who put the package there for a moment while he wrote a check and then departed without remembering to take it with him. There is always a ‘clue’ to the ownership of property which is obviously mislaid rather than lost, because of the strong probability that the owner will know where to return for his chattel when he realizes he has gone away without it.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 310–11 (3d ed. 1982).

mixed property.Property with characteristics of both real property and personal property — such as heirlooms and fixtures. [Cases: Property 4. C.J.S. Property §§ 14–21, 23.] movable property.See MOVABLE(1).

neutral property.See NEUTRAL PROPERTY.

nonancestral property.See nonancestral estate under ESTATE(4).

nonexempt property.See NONEXEMPT PROPERTY.

paraphernal property.See extradotal property.

paternal property.Property that comes from the father of a party and other ascendants of the paternal stock.

personal property. 1. Any movable or intangible thing that is subject to ownership and not classified as real property. — Also termed personalty; personal estate; movable estate; (in plural) things personal. Cf. real property. [Cases: Property 4. C.J.S. Property §§ 14–21, 23.] 2.Tax. Property not used in a taxpayer's trade or business or held for income production or collection. [Cases: Taxation 67. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 114, 120, 122, 125, 129–130.]

“ ‘[P]ersonal property’ includes ... everything except real property. It includes credits, savings-bank deposits, notes, bonds, the proceeds arising from the sale of realty, and the right to a certificate in foreclosure, the time of redemption having passed.” 3 William Herbert Page, A Treatise on the Law of Wills § 964, at 44–45 (1941).

private property.Property — protected from public appropriation — over which the owner has exclusive and absolute rights.

public property.State- or community-owned property not restricted to any one individual's use or possession. [Cases: States 88. C.J.S. States § 147.]

qualified property.A temporary or special interest in a thing (such as a right to possess it), subject to being totally extinguished by the occurrence of a specified contingency over which the qualified owner has no control.

qualified-terminable-interest property. Property that passes by a QTIP trust from a deceased spouse to the surviving spouse and that (if the executor so elects) qualifies for the marital deduction provided that the spouse is entitled to receive all income in payments made at least annually for life and that no one has the power to appoint the property to anyone other than the surviving spouse. • The purpose of the marital deduction is to permit deferral of estate taxes until the death of the surviving spouse. But this property is included in the surviving spouse's estate at death, where it is subject to the federal estate tax. — Abbr. QTIP. See QTIP trust under TRUST. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4169(4). C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 536–537.] quasi-community property. See COMMUNITY PROPERTY.

real property. Land and anything growing on, attached to, or erected on it, excluding anything that may be severed without injury to the land. • Real property can be either corporeal (soil and buildings) or incorporeal (easements). — Also termed realty; real estate; fast estate. Cf. personal property (1). [Cases: Property 4. C.J.S. Property §§ 14–21, 23.]

“Historically, the line between real and personal property stems from the types of assets administered on death respectively, in the king's and in the church's courts. The king's courts, concerned with the preservation of the feudal structure, dealt with fees simple, fees tail and life estates. Estates for years, gradually evolving out of contracts made by feudally unimportant persons, clearly became interests in land but never fully attained the historical dignity of being ‘real property.’ The early economic unimportance of money, goods and things other than land permitted the church courts to take over the handling of all such assets on the death of the owner. When the development of trade and of capitalism caused assets of these types to assume great, and sometimes paramount, importance we found ourselves with the two important categories of property, namely ‘real’ and ‘personal’ property, each with its set of rules evolved from a different matrix. The pressure of modern society has been strongly for assimilation and the resultant elimination of this line, but this movement is far from complete attainment of its goal.” 1 Richard R. Powell, Powell on Real Property § 5.04, at 5–7 to 5–8 (Patrick J. Rohan ed., rev. ed. 1998).

scheduled property. Insurance. Property itemized on a list (usu. attached to an insurance policy) that records property values, which provide the basis for insurance payments in the event of a loss under an insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance 2169.]

separate property. See SEPARATE PROPERTY.

special-design property. See special-purpose property.

special property. Property that the holder has only a qualified, temporary, or limited interest in, such as (from a bailee's standpoint) bailed property.

special-purpose property. Property that has a unique design or layout, incorporates special construction materials, or has other features that limit the property's utility for purposes other than the one for which it was built. • Because of the property's specialized nature, the market for the property may be quite limited. — Also termed limited-market property; special-design property.

specialty property. See SPECIALTY(3).

tangible personal property. Corporeal personal property of any kind; personal property that can be seen, weighed, measured, felt, or touched, or is in any other way perceptible to the senses, such as furniture, cooking utensils, and books.

tangible property. Property that has physical form and characteristics. Cf. intangible property. [Cases: Property 1–2. C.J.S. Property §§ 2–13, 15–20.]

wasting property. 1. Property that is consumed in its normal use, such as a wasting asset, a leasehold interest, or a patent right. 2. A right to or an interest in such property.

PROPERTY OF THE DEBTOR

property of the debtor. Bankruptcy. Property that is owned or (in some instances) possessed by the debtor, including property that is exempted from the bankruptcy estate. 11 USCA § 541(b). — Also termed debtor's property. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2531–2559. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 105–109, 111, 113–120, 122.]

PROPERTY OF THE ESTATE

property of the estate. Bankruptcy. The debtor's tangible and intangible property interests (including both legal and equitable interests) that fall under the bankruptcy court's jurisdiction because they were owned or held by the debtor when the bankruptcy petition was filed. 11 USCA § 541. — Also termed estate's property. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2491–2559. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 105–109, 111, 113–120, 122–124, 126, 128.]

PROPERTY RATIONE PRIVILEGII

property ratione privilegii (ray-shee-oh-nee priv-i-lee-jee-I). Hist. A common-law right, granted by a royal franchise, to take wild animals on another's land. • This principle made its way into American law. See, e.g., Hanson v. Fergus Falls Nat'l Bank, 65 N.W.2d 857, 862 (Minn. 1954). Cf. PROPERTY RATIONE SOLI .

“Property Ratione privilegii is the right which, by a peculiar franchise anciently granted by the Crown in virtue of its prerogative, one man had of killing and taking animals Ferae naturae on the land of another; and in like manner the game, when killed or taken by virtue of the privilege, became the absolute property of the owner of the franchise, just as in the other case it becomes the absolute property of the owner of the soil.” Blades v. Higgs, 11 Eng. Rep. 1474, 1479 (H.L. 1865).

PROPERTY RATIONE SOLI

property ratione soli (ray-shee-oh-nee soh-II). The common-law right to take wild animals found on one's own land. Cf. PROPERTY RATIONE PRIVILEGII.

“The exclusive common law right of a landowner to take game on his land, known as property ratione soli ... has been recognized throughout the history of common law, with one exception: Following the Norman Conquest the King contended that he was lord paramount of the field, possessed of the right to the universal soil and of the exclusive right to take the game, but the irate landowners, vehemently objecting, quickly and decisively recaptured their rights and re-established the common law.” Alford v. Finch, 155 So. 2d 790, 792 (Fla. 1963).

PROPERTY SETTLEMENT

property settlement. 1. A judgment in a divorce case determining the distribution of the marital property between the divorcing parties. • A property settlement includes a division of the marital debts as well as assets. — Also termed property division; division of property. [Cases: Husband and Wife 248.] 2. A contract that divides up the assets of divorcing spouses and is incorporated into a divorce decree. — Also termed integrated property settlement; property settlement agreement. Cf. DIVORCE AGREEMENT . [Cases: Husband and Wife 277.] 3. MARITAL AGREEMENT.

On account of the negligence of the heir in not following up the heir's right. • If a vassal's heir failed, for a year and a day, to enter the estate, then the heir forfeited the right to the land.

PROPTER PRIVILEGIUM

propter privilegium (prop-t<<schwa>>r priv-<<schwa>>-lee-jee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] On the account of privilege. • This describes a way of acquiring a property interest in a wild animal, based on the claimant's exclusive right to hunt in a particular park or preserve.

PROPTER QUOD FECERUNT PER ALIUM

propter quod fecerunt per alium (prop-t<<schwa>>r kwod fi-see-r<<schwa>>nt p<<schwa>>r ay-lee-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of what they have done by another. • The phrase usu. referred to an agent's actions.

PROPTER REM IPSAM NON HABITAM propter rem ipsam non habitam (prop-t<<schwa>>r rem ip-s<<schwa>>m non hab-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of not having had possession of the thing itself. • The phrase appeared in reference to damages suffered by a party who failed to receive a thing for which the party had contracted.

PRO QUANTITATE HAEREDITATIS ET TEMPORIS pro quantitate haereditatis et temporis (proh kwon-ti-tay-tee h<<schwa>>-red-i-tay-tis et tem-p<<schwa>>-ris). [Law Latin] Hist. According to the extent of the succession.

pro querente (proh kw<<schwa>>-ren-tee). [Latin] For the plaintiff. — Abbr. pro quer. Cf. PRO DEFENDENTE.

PRO RATA

pro rata (proh ray-t<<schwa>> orrah-t<<schwa>> orra-t<<schwa>>), adv. Proportionately; according to an exact rate, measure, or interest <the liability will be assessed pro rata between the defendants>. See RATABLE. — pro rata,adj.

PRO RATA CLAUSE

pro rata clause.An insurance-policy provision — usu. contained in the “other insurance” section of the policy — that limits the insurer’s liability to payment of the portion of the loss that the face amount of the policy bears to the total insurance available on the risk. — Also termed pro rata distribution clause. Cf. ESCAPE CLAUSE; EXCESS CLAUSE. [Cases: Insurance 2111(2), 2112.]

PRO RATA ITINERIS

pro rata itineris (proh ray-t<<schwa>> I-tin-<<schwa>>-ris). [Latin] Scots law. For the proportion of the journey.

“Where a ship, chartered to convey a cargo to a certain port ... is prevented from completing the voyage ... the master of the ship may transship the goods, and thus conveying them to their destination, earn his full freight. But if, when the ship has been prevented from proceeding on her voyage, the freighter himself transships the cargo, the master is entitled to freight pro rata itineris, for the proportion of the voyage which he has accomplished.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 486 (4th ed. 1894).

prorate (proh-rayt or proh-rayt), vb. To divide, assess, or distribute proportionately <prorate taxes between the buyer and the seller>. — proration,n.

PRO RE NATA

pro re nata (proh ree nay-t<<schwa>>). [Latin “in the light of what has arisen”] Hist. By reason of emergency; arising from exigent circumstances. • The phrase appeared, for example, in reference to a meeting called to address an emergency.

“So far as may be, the state leaves the rule of right to be declared and constituted by the agreement of those concerned with it. So far as possible, it contents itself with executing the rules which its subjects have made for themselves. And in so doing it acts wisely. For, in the first place, the administration of justice is enabled in this manner to escape in a degree not otherwise attainable the disadvantages inherent in the recognition of rigid principles of law. Such principles we must have; but if they are established pro re nata by the parties themselves, they will possess a measure of adaptability to individual cases which is unattainable by the more general legislation of the state itself.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 352 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

PROROGATED JURISDICTION

prorogated jurisdiction.See JURISDICTION.

PROROGATIO DE LOCO IN LOCUM deferred prosecution.See deferred judgment under JUDGMENT.

selective prosecution.See SELECTIVE PROSECUTION.

sham prosecution.A prosecution that seeks to circumvent a defendant's double-jeopardy protection by appearing to be prosecuted by another sovereignty, when it is in fact controlled by the sovereignty that already prosecuted the defendant for the same crime. • A sham prosecution is, in essence, a misuse of the dual-sovereignty doctrine. Under that doctrine, a defendant's protection against double jeopardy does not provide protection against a prosecution by a different sovereignty. For example, if the defendant was first tried in federal court and acquitted, that fact would not forbid the state authorities from prosecuting the defendant in state court. But a sham prosecution — for example, a later state-court prosecution that is completely dominated or manipulated by the federal authorities that already prosecuted the defendant, so that the state-court proceeding is merely a tool of the federal authorities — will not withstand a double-jeopardy challenge. See DUAL-SOVEREIGNTY DOCTRINE. [Cases: Double Jeopardy 53. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 217.]

vindictive prosecution.A prosecution in which a person is singled out under a law or regulation because the person has exercised a constitutionally protected right. Cf. SELECTIVE ENFORCEMENT. [Cases: Criminal Law 37.15. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 68–77.]

3. The government attorneys who initiate and maintain a criminal action against an accused defendant <the prosecution rests>.4.Patents. The process of applying for a patent through the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and negotiating with the patent examiner. — Also termed patent-prosecution process. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.]

prospect theory.See INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY.

PROSPECTUS

prospectus (pr<<schwa>>-spek-t<<schwa>>s). A printed document that describes the main features of an enterprise (esp. a corporation's business) and that is distributed to prospective buyers or investors; esp., a written description of a securities offering. • Under SEC regulations, a publicly traded corporation must provide a prospectus before offering to sell stock in the corporation. Pl. prospectuses.See REGISTRATION STATEMENT. Cf. TOMBSTONE. [Cases: Securities Regulation 25.50–25.75. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 47, 92–100.]

newspaper prospectus.A summary prospectus that the SEC allows to be disseminated through advertisements in newspapers, magazines, or other periodicals sent through the mails as second-class matter (though not distributed by the advertiser), when the securities involved are issued by a foreign national government with which the United States maintains diplomatic relations.

preliminary prospectus.A prospectus for a stock issue that has been filed but not yet approved by the SEC. • The SEC requires such a prospectus to contain a notice — printed in distinctive red lettering — that the document is not complete or final. That notice, which is usu. stamped or printed in red ink, typically reads as follows: “The information here given is subject to completion or amendment. A registration statement relating to these securities has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. These securities cannot be sold — and offers to buy cannot be accepted — until the registration statement becomes effective. This prospectus does not constitute an offer to buy. And these securities cannot be sold in any state where the offer, solicitation, or sale would be unlawful before registration or qualification under the securities laws of that state.” — Also termed red-herring prospectus; red herring. [Cases: Securities Regulation 25.51.]

prostitution,n.1. The act or practice of engaging in sexual activity for money or its equivalent; commercialized sex. [Cases: Prostitution 1.C.J.S. Prostitution and Related Offenses §§ 2–4, 8–13, 17, 21–24.]

“Prostitution is not itself a crime in England or Scotland, although certain activities of prostitutes and those who profit from prostitution are prohibited, such as soliciting in a public place, procuring, letting premises for the purpose of prostitution and so forth. On the other hand, prostitution was, at least at one time, prohibited in all American jurisdictions.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 470 (3d ed. 1982).

2. The act of debasing. — prostitute,vb. — prostitute,n.

pro tanto (proh tan-toh), adv. & adj.[Latin] To that extent; for so much; as far as it goes <the debt is pro tanto discharged> .

PROTECTED ACTIVITY

protected activity.Conduct that is permitted or encouraged by a statute or constitutional provision, and for which the actor may not legally be retaliated against. • For example, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act prohibits an employer from retaliating against an employee who opposes a discriminatory employment practice or helps in investigating an allegedly discriminatory employment practice. An employee who is retaliated against for engaging in one of those activities has a claim against the employer. 42 USCA § 2000e–3(a). [Cases: Civil Rights 1244. C.J.S. Civil Rights § 66.]

PROTECTED CLASS

protected class.See CLASS(1).

PROTECTED PERSON

protected person.See PERSON(1).

PROTECTING POWER

protecting power.Int'l law. A country responsible for protecting another country's citizens and interests during a conflict or a suspension of diplomatic ties between the citizens' country and a third party. • After a protecting power is accepted by both belligerents, it works to ensure the proper treatment of nationals who are in a belligerent's territory, esp. prisoners of war. If the parties cannot agree on a protecting power, the International Committee of the Red Cross is often appointed to this position.

PROTECTION

PROTECTION AND ADVOCACY FOR MENTALLY ILL INDIVIDUALS ACT

Protection and Advocacy for Mentally Ill Individuals Act.See PROTECTION AND ADVOCACY FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH MENTAL ILLNESS ACT .

PROTECTION COVENANT protection covenant.Oil & gas. The implied promise in an oil-and-gas lease that the lessee will protect the property against the loss of oil and gas by drainage from the producing reservoir by drilling one or more offsetting wells. • The covenant applies only if a reasonably prudent operator would drill the additional wells. — Also termed covenant to protect against drainage. See REASONABLY PRUDENT-OPERATOR STANDARD.

PROTECTIONISM

protectionism. The protection of domestic businesses and industries against foreign competition by imposing high tariffs and restricting imports. — protectionist,adj.

PROTECTION MONEY

protection money. 1. A bribe paid to an officer as an inducement not to interfere with the criminal activities of the briber. • Examples include payments to an officer in exchange for the officer's releasing an arrestee, removing records of traffic violations from a court's files, and refraining from making a proper arrest. [Cases: Bribery 1(1). C.J.S. Bribery §§ 2–3, 5–8, 10–11.] 2. Money extorted from a business owner by one who promises to “protect” the business premises, with the implied threat that if the owner does not pay, the person requesting the payment will harm the owner or damage the premises.

PROTECTION ORDER

protection order.See RESTRAINING ORDER(1).

PROTECTIVE APPEAL

protective appeal.See APPEAL.

PROTECTIVE COMMITTEE

protective committee.A group of security holders or preferred stockholders appointed to protect the interests of their group when the corporation is liquidated or reorganized.

PROTECTIVE CUSTODY

protective order. 1. A court order prohibiting or restricting a party from engaging in conduct (esp. a legal procedure such as discovery) that unduly annoys or burdens the opposing party or a third-party witness. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1271; Pretrial Procedure 41. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 12, 47.] 2. RESTRAINING ORDER(1).

emergency protective order. A temporary protective order granted on an expedited basis, usu. after an ex parte hearing (without notice to the other side), most commonly to provide injunctive relief from an abuser in a domestic-violence case; esp., a short-term restraining order that is issued at the request of a law-enforcement officer in response to a domestic-violence complaint from a victim who is in immediate danger. • A victim of domestic violence can obtain an EPO only through a law-enforcement officer. There is no notice requirement, but the abuser must be served with the order. The duration of an EPO varies from three to seven days, depending on state law. — Abbr. EPO. Cf. TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER.

permanent protective order. A protective order of indefinite duration granted after a hearing with notice to both sides; esp., a court order that prohibits an abuser from contacting or approaching the protected person for a long period, usu. years. Despite the name, permanent orders often have expiration dates set by state law. An order may also require the abuser to perform certain acts such as attending counseling or providing financial support for the protected person. — Abbr. PPO.

PROTECTIVE PRINCIPLE

protective principle. An international-law doctrine that a sovereign state has the power to assert jurisdiction over a person whose conduct outside its boundaries threatens its security or could interfere with the operation of its government functions.

PROTECTIVE SEARCH

protective search. See SEARCH.

PROTECTIVE SWEEP

protective sweep. A police officer's quick and limited search — conducted after the officer has lawfully entered the premises — based on a reasonable belief that such a search is necessary to protect the officer or others from harm.

PROTECTIVE TARIFF

protective tariff. See TARIFF(2).

PROTECTIVE TRUST

protective trust. See TRUST.

PROTECTOR

protector. 1. An unrelated, disinterested overseer of a trust who possesses broader authority than a trustee. • Protectors are usu. appointed to manage offshore trusts, but the concept is slowly being applied to domestic trusts. Protectors often possess broad powers to act for the benefit of the trust, as by removing trustees and clarifying or modifying trust terms to promote the settlor's objectives. For these reasons, a protector is generally not a trustee or beneficiary of the trust. Cf. TRUSTEE. 2. A person who, having been named in an instrument creating a fee tail, has the responsibility of exercising discretion over whether the tenant in tail may bar the entail. — Also termed protector of the settlement.

“The only additional restriction imposed upon the alienation of an estate tail is that the consent of the person who is called the Protector of the settlement is necessary to its being effectually barred. Alienation by tenant in tail without this consent binds his own issue, but not remaindermen or reversioners, and creates what is called a ‘base fee.’ The Protector of the settlement is usually the tenant for life in possession; but the settlor of the lands may appoint in his place any number of persons not exceeding three to be together Protector during the continuance of the estates preceding the estate tail.” Kenelm E. Digby, An Introduction to the History of the Law of Real Property 255 (5th ed. 1897).

protectorate (pr<<schwa>>-tek-t<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>t). 1. Int'l law. The relationship between a weaker nation and a stronger one when the weaker nation has transferred the management of its more important international affairs to the stronger nation. 2. Int'l law. The weaker or dependent nation within such a relationship. 3. (usu. cap.) The period in British history — from 1653 to 1659 — during which Oliver Cromwell and Richard Cromwell governed. 4. The British government in the period from 1653 to 1659.

PRO TEM

pro tem. abbr. PRO TEMPORE.

PRO TEMPORE

pro tempore (proh tem-p<<schwa>>-ree), adv. & adj. [Latin] For the time being; appointed to occupy a position temporarily . — Abbr. pro tem. [Cases: Judges 15. C.J.S. Judges §§ 166, 168–173.]

PROTEST

protest, n. 1. A formal statement or action expressing dissent or disapproval. • Under some circumstances, a protest is lodged to preserve a claim or right. 2. A notary public's written statement that, upon presentment, a negotiable instrument was neither paid nor accepted. — Also termed initial protest; noting protest. Cf. NOTICE OF DISHONOR. [Cases: Bills and Notes 408. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 211.]

notary's initials, date, and the amount of noting charges, together with a statement of the cause of dishonor, such as 'no effects,' 'not advice,' or 'no account.' This is done to charge the memory of the notary, and should be done on the day of dishonor." Frederick M. Hinch, John's American Notary and Commission of Deeds Manual § 442, at 281 (3d ed. 1922).

3. A formal statement, usu. in writing, disputing a debt's legality or validity but agreeing to make payment while reserving the right to recover the amount at a later time. • The disputed debt is described as under protest. [Cases: Payment 88. C.J.S. Payment § 111.] 4. Tax. A taxpayer's statement to the collecting officer that payment is being made unwillingly because the taxpayer believes the tax to be invalid. 5. Int'l law. A formal communication from one subject of international law to another objecting to conduct or a claim by the latter as violating international law. 6. Patents. A proceeding in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to determine patentability of an invention after a third party has challenged it in a petition. • Unlike in a public use proceeding, the protestant has no right to participate in the proceeding beyond filing the petition and supporting documents. 37 CFR § 1.291. Cf. PUBLIC-USE PROCEEDING. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.] — protest, vb.

protestando (proh-t<<schwa>>-stan-doh). [Law Latin] Protesting. • This emphatic word was used in a protestation to allege or deny something in an oblique manner.

PROTESTANT

protestant. Patents. A person who files a protest petition with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office challenging the patentability of an invention. See PROTEST.

PROTESTATIO CONTRARIA FACTO protestatio contraria facto (proh-tes-tay-shee-oh k<<schwa>>n-trair-ee-<< schwa>> fak-toh). [Law Latin] Hist. Protestation inconsistent with one's conduct while protesting.

PROTESTATION

protestation (prot-<<schwa>>-stay-sh<<schwa>>n). 1. Common-law pleading. A declaration by which a party makes an oblique allegation or denial of some fact, claiming that it does or does not exist or is or is not legally sufficient, while not directly affirming or denying the fact. [Cases: Pleading 128.]

“The practice of protestation of facts not denied arose where the pleader, wishing to avail himself of the right to contest in a future action some traversable fact in the pending action, passes it by without traverse, but at the same time makes a declaration collateral or incidental to his main pleading, importing that the fact so passed over is untrue. The necessity for this arose from the rule that pleadings must not be double, and that every pleading is taken to admit such matters as it does not traverse. Such being its only purpose, it is wholly without effect in the action in which it occurs” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 207, at 358 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

2.Scots law. A defendant's act in a civil case to compel a pursuer (plaintiff) who has failed to take the necessary procedural steps either to proceed or to allow the action to fall.

PROTEST CERTIFICATE

protest certificate.A notarial certificate declaring (1) that a holder in due course has recruited the notary public to present a previously refused or dishonored negotiable instrument, (2) that the notary has presented the instrument to the person responsible for payment or acceptance (the drawee), (3) that the instrument was presented at a given time and place, and (4) that the drawee refused or dishonored the instrument. • In former practice, the notary would issue a protest certificate, which could then be presented to the drawee and any other liable parties as notice that the holder could seek damages for the dishonored negotiable instrument. — Also termed notarial protest certificate. See NOTICE OF DISHONOR. [Cases: Bills and Notes 408. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 211.]

PROTEST FEE

protest fee.A fee charged by a bank or other financial institution when an item (such as a check) is presented but cannot be collected.

PROTHONOTARY

prothonotary (pr<<schwa>>-thon-<<schwa>>-ter-ee or proh-th<<schwa>>-noh-t<<schwa>>-ree), n. A chief clerk in certain courts of law. — Also termed protonotary. [Cases: Clerks of Courts 1. C.J.S. Courts § 236.] — prothonotarial,adj.

PROTOCOL

puberty. 1. The stage of physical development when a person takes on secondary sexual characteristics and it usu. becomes possible to reproduce. • In females, the beginning of this stage is marked by the menarche. 2.Hist. The earliest age at which one could presumptively consent and to legally enter into a binding marriage. • At English common law, children became marriageable at the onset of legal puberty (age 12 for girls and 14 for boys). At French civil law, a marriage was invalid if contracted before the end of legal puberty (age 15 for girls and 18 for boys). An underage spouse had the power to void the marriage. — Also termed (in English common law) age of discretion.

PUBLICANUS

publicanus (p<<schwa>>b-li-kay-n<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Hist. Roman law. A tax collector. • A publicanus was described as “a farmer of the public revenue,” although the publicanus reaped only the money from that sown by the labor of others. — Often shortened to publican.

PUBLIC APPOINTMENT

public appointment. See APPOINTMENT(1).

PUBLICATION

publication, n. 1. Generally, the act of declaring or announcing to the public. 2. Copyright. The offering or distribution of copies of a work to the public. • At common law, publication marked the dividing line between state and federal protection, but the Copyright Act of 1976 superseded most of common-law copyright and thereby diminished the significance of publication. Under the Act, an original work is considered published only when it is first made publicly available without restriction. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 31. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 32, 37.]

legal word of art, denoting a process much more esoteric than is suggested by the lay definition of the term. That it thus evolved was due largely to the American dichotomy between common law and statutory copyright, wherein the act of publication constituted the dividing line between the two systems of protection [state and federal].” 1 Melville B. Nimmer & David Nimmer, Nimmer on Copyright § 4.01, at 4-3 (Supp. 1997).

divestitive publication. Archaic. The public distribution of an author's work on a scale large enough to divest the author of any claim to state common-law copyright protection. • The Copyright Act of 1976 preempted most common-law copyright. — Sometimes (erroneously) written divestive publication.

general publication. Distribution of an author's work to the public, as opposed to a selected group, whether or not restrictions are placed on the use of the work. • Before the Copyright Act of 1976, a general publication was generally held to divest common-law rights in a work. Rather, the author was deemed to have dedicated the work to the public. Cf. limited publication. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 31. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 32, 37.]

investitive publication. Archaic. The public distribution of an author's work on a scale large enough to qualify for federal statutory copyright protection. • Since 1976 copyright has protected works from their creation, rather than their publication.

limited publication. Distribution of copies of an author's work to a selected group for a limited purpose and with no permission to copy the work, at a time when copies are not available to the general public. • Before the Copyright Act of 1976 made publication irrelevant, courts distinguished between limited publication and general publication to decide whether federal copyright laws applied. Under that Act, a work published before January 1, 1978 without proper copyright notice entered the public domain unless the publication was limited. — Also termed private publication. Cf. general publication. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 31. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 32, 37.]

private publication. See limited publication.

3. Defamation. The communication of defamatory words to someone other than the person defamed. • The communication may be in any form, verbal or nonverbal. [Cases: Libel and Slander 23. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 48–52.] “Publication means the act of making the defamatory statement known to any person or persons other than the plaintiff himself. It is not necessary that there should be any publication in the popular sense of making the statement public. A private and confidential communication to a single individual is sufficient. Nor need it be published in the sense of being written or printed; for we have seen that actions as well as words may be defamatory. A communication to the person defamed himself, however, is not a sufficient publication on which to found civil proceedings; though it is otherwise in the case of a criminal prosecution, because such a communication may provoke a breach of the peace. Nor does a communication between husband and wife amount to publication; domestic intercourse of this kind is exempt from the restrictions of the law of libel and slander. But a statement by the defendant to the wife or husband of the plaintiff is a ground of action.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 154 (17th ed. 1977).

“The publication of a libel might be in the form of a book, pamphlet or newspaper, but nothing of that nature is required. A letter sent to a single individual is sufficient.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 489 (3d ed. 1982).

4.Wills. The formal declaration made by a testator when signing the will that it is the testator's will. • There is no requirement that the provisions of the will or the identities of the beneficiaries be revealed to the witnesses.

PUBLICATION-QUALITY DRAWINGS

public domain. 1. Government-owned land. 2.Hist. Government lands that are open to entry and settlement. • Today virtually all federal lands are off-limits to traditional entry and settlement. 3.Intellectual property. The universe of inventions and creative works that are not protected by intellectual-property rights and are therefore available for anyone to use without charge. • When copyright, trademark, patent, or trade-secret rights are lost or expire, the intellectual property they had protected becomes part of the public domain and can be appropriated by anyone without liability for infringement. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 40.C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 31.]

“[P]ublic domain is the status of an invention, creative work, commercial symbol, or any other creation that is not protected by any form of intellectual property. Public domain is the rule: intellectual property is the exception.” 1 J. Thomas McCarthy, McCarthy on Trademarks and Unfair Competition § 1.01[2], at 1-3 (3d ed. 1996).

PUBLIC-DUTY DOCTRINE public-duty doctrine.Torts. The rule that a governmental entity (such as a state or municipality) cannot be held liable for an individual plaintiff's injury resulting from a governmental officer's or employee's breach of a duty owed to the general public rather than to the individual plaintiff. — Also termed public-duty rule. See SPECIAL-DUTY DOCTRINE. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 723. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 661–663.]

public figure. A person who has achieved fame or notoriety or who has voluntarily become involved in a public controversy. • A public figure (or public official) suing for defamation must prove that the defendant acted with actual malice. New York Times Co. v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254, 84 S.Ct. 710 (1964). — Also termed public character. [Cases: Libel and Slander 48(1). C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 91–92, 96, 98, 102–104.]

all-purpose public figure. A person who achieves such pervasive fame or notoriety that he or she becomes a public figure for all purposes and in all contexts. • For example, a person who occupies a position with great persuasive power and influence may become an all-purpose public figure whether or not the person actively seeks attention. Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc., 418 U.S. 323, 345, 94 S.Ct. 2997, 3009 (1974).

limited-purpose public figure. A person who, having become involved in a particular public issue, has achieved fame or notoriety only in relation to that particular issue. [Cases: Libel and Slander 48(1). C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 91–92, 96, 98, 102–104.]

public forum. Constitutional law. A public place where people traditionally gather to express ideas and exchange views. • To be constitutional, the government's regulation of a public forum must be narrowly tailored to serve a significant government interest and must usu. be limited to time-place-or-manner restrictions. — Also termed open forum. Cf. NONPUBLIC FORUM. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90.1(4). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 556–557, 559–561, 568, 570–572, 580, 608.]

“[T]raditional public fora are open for expressive activity regardless of the government's intent. The objective characteristics of these properties require the government to accommodate private speakers. The government is free to open additional properties for expressive use by the general public or by a particular class of speakers, thereby creating designated public fora. Where the property is not a traditional public forum and the government has not chosen to create a designated public forum, the property is either a nonpublic forum or not a forum at all.” Arkansas Educ. Television Comm'n v. Forbes, 523 U.S. 666, 678, 118 S.Ct. 1633, 1641 (1998).

designated public forum. Public property that has not traditionally been open for public assembly and debate but that the government has opened for use by the public as a place for expressive activity, such as a public-university facility or a publicly owned theater. • Unlike a traditional public forum, the government does not have to retain the open character of a designated public forum. Also, the subject matter of the expression permitted in a designated public forum may be limited to accord with the character of the forum; reasonable, content-neutral time, place, and manner restrictions are generally permissible. But any prohibition based on the content of the expression must be narrowly drawn to effectuate a compelling state interest, as with a traditional public forum. — Also termed limited public forum; nontraditional public forum. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90.1(1.4, 4). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 556–557, 559–561, 568, 570–572, 580, 596, 599–600, 608.]

traditional public forum. Public property that has by long tradition — as opposed to governmental designation — been used by the public for assembly and expression, such as a public street, public sidewalk, or public park. • To be constitutional, the government's content-neutral restrictions of the time, place, or manner of expression must be narrowly tailored to serve a significant government interest, and leave open ample alternative channels of communication. Any government regulation of expression that is based on the content of the expression must meet the much higher test of being necessary to serve a compelling state interest. — Also termed quintessential public forum. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90.1(4). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 556–557, 559–561, 568, 570–572, 580, 608.]

public person. A sovereign government, or a body or person delegated authority under it.

PUBLIC PLACE

public place. Any location that the local, state, or national government maintains for the use of the public, such as a highway, park, or public building.

PUBLIC POLICY

public policy. 1. Broadly, principles and standards regarded by the legislature or by the courts as being of fundamental concern to the state and the whole of society. • Courts sometimes use the term to justify their decisions, as when declaring a contract void because it is “contrary to public policy.” — Also termed policy of the law. [Cases: Contracts 108. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 215–218.]

“The policy of the law, or public policy, is a phrase of common use in estimating the validity of contracts. Its history is obscure; it is most likely that agreements which tended to restrain trade or to promote litigation were the first to elicit the principle that the courts would look to the interests of the public in giving efficacy to contracts. Wagers, while they continued to be legal, were a frequent provocative of judicial ingenuity on this point, as is sufficiently shown by the case of Gilbert v. Sykes [16 East 150 (1812)] ... : but it does not seem probable that the doctrine of public policy began in the endeavor to elude their binding force. Whatever may have been its origin, it was applied very frequently, and not always with the happiest results, during the latter part of the eighteenth and the commencement of the nineteenth century. Modern decisions, however, while maintaining the duty of the courts to consider the public advantage, have tended more and more to limit the sphere within which this duty may be exercised.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 286 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

2. More narrowly, the principle that a person should not be allowed to do anything that would tend to injure the public at large.

PUBLIC-POLICY LIMITATION public-policy limitation. Tax. A judicially developed principle that a person should not be allowed to deduct expenses related to an activity that is contrary to the public welfare. • This principle is reflected in the Internal Revenue Code's specific disallowance provisions (such as for kickbacks and bribes). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3368. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 188.]

PUBLIC POND

puffer. See BY-BIDDER.

PUFFING

puffing. 1. The expression of an exaggerated opinion — as opposed to a factual misrepresentation — with the intent to sell a good or service. • Puffing involves expressing opinions, not asserting something as a fact. Although there is some leeway in puffing goods, a seller may not misrepresent them or say that they have attributes that they do not possess. — Also termed puffery; sales puffery; dealer's talk. [Cases: Contracts 94(7); Sales 38(3), 261(5). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 156, 162; Sales § 55.]

“ ‘Dealer's puffing,’ so long as it remains in the realm of opinion or belief, will not support a conviction of false pretenses however extravagant the statements.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 369 (3d ed. 1982).

2. Secret bidding at an auction by or on behalf of a seller; BY-BIDDING.

PUGH CLAUSE

Pugh clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease modifying the effect of most lease-pooling clauses by severing pooled portions of the lease from unpooled portions of the lease. • Drilling or production on a pooled portion will not maintain the lease for the unpooled portions. The clause is named for Lawrence G. Pugh, an attorney from Cowley, Louisiana, who drafted the first version in 1947. In Texas it is termed a Freestone rider. See POOLING.

PUNIES

punies (pyoo-neeZ). Slang. Punitive damages. See punitive damages under DAMAGES.

PUNISHABLE

punishable, adj. 1. (Of a person) subject to a punishment <there is no dispute that Jackson remains punishable for these offenses>. 2. (Of a crime or tort) giving rise to a specified punishment . — punishability, n.

PUNISHMENT

punishment, n. 1. A sanction — such as a fine, penalty, confinement, or loss of property, right, or privilege — assessed against a person who has violated the law. See SENTENCE.

“Punishment in all its forms is a loss of rights or advantages consequent on a breach of law. When it loses this quality it degenerates into an arbitrary act of violence that can produce nothing but bad social effects.” Glanville Williams, Criminal Law 575 (2d ed. 1961).

“In the treatment of offenders there is a clear and unmistakable line of division between the function of the judge and that of the penologist. I should modify that: the law is clear only if it is first made clear in what sense the word ‘treatment’ is being used. For in this context the word can be used in two senses, one wide and the other narrow. Let me take the wide meaning first. The object of a sentence is to impose punishment. For ‘punishment’, a word which to many connotes nothing but retribution, the softer word ‘treatment’ is now frequently substituted; this is the wider meaning. The substitution is made, I suppose, partly as a concession to the school which holds that crime is caused by mental sickness, but more justifiably as a reminder that there are other methods of dealing with criminal tendencies besides making the consequences of crime unpleasant.” Patrick Devlin, The Judge 32–33 (1979).

capital punishment. See CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

collective punishment. See COLLECTIVE PUNISHMENT.

corporal punishment. Physical punishment; punishment that is inflicted upon the body (including imprisonment). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1524–1525. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1593–1595, 1597–1599, 1602.]

“Past forms of corporal punishment included branding, blinding, mutilation, amputation, and the use of the pillory and the stocks. It was also an element in such violent modes of execution as drowning, stoning, burning, hanging, and drawing and quartering In most parts of Europe and in the United States, such savage penalties were replaced by imprisonment during the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, although capital punishment itself remained. Physical chastisement became less frequent until, in the twentieth century, corporal punishment was either eliminated as a legal penalty or restricted to beating with a birch rod, cane, whip, or other scourge. In ordinary usage the term now refers to such penal flagellation.” Gordon Hawkins, “Corporal Punishment,” in 1 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 251, 251 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

cruel and unusual punishment. Punishment that is torturous, degrading, inhuman, grossly disproportionate to the crime in question, or otherwise shocking to the moral sense of the community. • Cruel and unusual punishment is prohibited by the Eighth Amendment. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1430–1439. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1463, 1472, 1593–1594, 1596–1597, 1599, 1602.]

cumulative punishment. Punishment that increases in severity when a person is convicted of the same offense more than once.

deterrent punishment. 1. Criminal law. Punishment intended to deter the offender and others from committing crimes and to make an example of the offender so that like-minded people are warned of the consequences of crime. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 41.] 2. Torts. Punishment intended to deter a tortfeasor from repeating a behavior or failing to remove a hazard that led to an injury. • Punitive damages are usu. awarded as a deterrent punishment.

excessive punishment. Punishment that is not justified by the gravity of the offense or the defendant's criminal record. See excessive fine (1) under FINE (5). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 32. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1463–1464, 1472, 1521.]

infamous punishment. Punishment by imprisonment, usu. in a penitentiary. See infamous crime under CRIME.

nonjudicial punishment. Military law. A procedure under which a commanding officer levies punishment against a minor offender who is subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice. • In the Navy and Coast Guard, nonjudicial punishment is termed captain's mast; in the Marine Corps, it is termed office hours; and in the Army and Air Force, it is referred to as Article 15. Nonjudicial punishment is not a court-martial. [Cases: Armed Services 39; Military Justice 525. C.J.S. Armed Services §§ 155, 159; Military Justice § 24–27.]

preventive punishment. Punishment intended to prevent a repetition of wrongdoing by disabling the offender. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 42. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1472, 1479, 1492–1495, 1530.]

reformatory punishment. Punishment intended to change the character of the offender. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 45. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1458, 1472, 1479, 1492–1495, 1530.]

retributive punishment. Punishment intended to satisfy the community's retaliatory sense of indignation that is provoked by injustice. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 44.]

“The fact that it is natural to hate a criminal does not prove that retributive punishment is justified.” Glanville Williams, The Sanctity of Life and the Criminal Law 60 (1957).

2. Family law. A negative disciplinary action administered to a minor child by a parent.

PUNITIVE

pure theory.The philosophy of Hans Kelsen, in which he contends that a legal system must be “pure” — that is, self-supporting and not dependent on extralegal values. • Kelsen's theory, set out in such works as General Theory of Law and the State (1945) and The Pure Theory of Law (1934), maintains that laws are norms handed down by the state. Laws are not defined in terms of history, ethics, sociology, or other external factors. Rather, a legal system is an interconnected system of norms, in which coercive techniques are used to secure compliance. The validity of each law, or legal norm, is traced to another legal norm. Ultimately, all laws must find their validity in the society's basic norm (grundnorm), which may be as simple as the concept that the constitution was validly enacted. See basic norm under NORM.

PURVIEW

purview (p<<schwa>>r-vyoo).1. Scope; area of application. 2. The body of a statute following the preamble.

“The word ‘purview’ appears sometimes to be confined to so much of the body of the statute as would be left by omitting the exceptions, provisos, and savings clauses; and as the word is ambiguous, and not very useful at best, a wise course may be not to use it at all.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 336 (3d ed. 1914).

PUSHER

pusher. A person who sells illicit drugs. [Cases: Controlled Substances 32.]

PUSHMAN DOCTRINE

Pushman doctrine. Archaic. The rule that transfer of an unpublished work transfers the common-law copyright to the work along with the work itself. • The name derives from Pushman v. New York Graphic Soc'y, Inc., 39 N.E.2d 249 (N.Y. 1942). The doctrine was rejected by § 202 of the Copyright Act of 1976, but it remains in effect for transfers completed before the provision's effective date of January 1, 1978.

“[A]n outright sale of a material object, such as a book, canvas, or master tape of a musical work, does not transfer copyright. One possible exception to this rule is the Pushman doctrine under which an author or artist who has sold an unpublished work of art or a manuscript is presumed to have transferred his common law copyright, unless the copyright has been specifically reserved.” Marshall A. Leaffer, Understanding Copyright Law 211 (3d ed. 1999).

The reasonable value of services; damages awarded in an amount considered reasonable to compensate a person who has rendered services in a quasi-contractual relationship. 2. A claim or right of action for the reasonable value of services rendered. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts 30. C.J.S. Implied and Constructive Contracts § 24.] 3. At common law, a count in an assumpsit action to recover payment for services rendered to another person. • Quantum meruit is still used today as an equitable remedy to provide restitution for unjust enrichment. It is often pleaded as an alternative claim in a breach-of-contract case so that the plaintiff can recover even if the contract is unenforceable. See implied-in-law contract under CONTRACT.

QUANTUM NUNC VALENT

quantum nunc valent (kwon-t<<schwa>>m n<<schwa>>ngk vay-lent). [Law Latin] Hist. How much they (the lands) are now worth. Cf. ANTIQUUS ET NOVUS EXTENTUS ; QUANTUM VALUERUNT TEMPORE PACIS.

QUANTUM VALEBANT

quantum valebant (kwon-t<<schwa>>m v<<schwa>>-lee-bant or -b<<schwa>>nt). [Latin “as much as they were worth”] 1. The reasonable value of goods and materials. 2. At common law, a count in an assumpsit action to recover payment for goods sold and delivered to another. • Quantum valebant — although less common than quantum meruit — is still used today as an equitable remedy to provide restitution for another's unjust enrichment. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts 31. C.J.S. Implied and Constructive Contracts § 25.]

QUANTUM VALUERUNT TEMPORE PACIS quantum valuerunt tempore pacis (kwon-t<<schwa>>m val-yoo-air-<<schwa>>nt tem-p<<schwa>>-ree pay-sis). [Law Latin] Hist. How much they (the lands) were worth in peacetime. Cf. ANTIQUUS ET NOVUS EXTENTUS; QUANTUM NUNC VALENT.

QUARANTINA HABENDA

quarantina habenda. See DE QUARANTINA HABENDA.

QUARANTINE

quarantine. 1. The isolation of a person or animal afflicted with a communicable disease or the prevention of such a person or animal from coming into a particular area, the purpose being to prevent the spread of disease. • Federal, state, and local authorities are required to cooperate in the enforcement of quarantine laws. 42 USCA § 243(a).

“Power to make quarantine regulations is one of the most frequent powers conferred on boards of health. Such regulations constitute a proper exercise of the police power, provided they are not in conflict with federal regulations on the subject or that legislation by Congress is absent, and that they do not abridge rights protected by the Fourteenth Amendment.” 39 Am. Jur. 2d Health § 59, at 529–30 (1999).

2. A place where a quarantine is in force. 3.Hist. A period of 40 days, esp. for the isolation and detention of ships containing persons or animals suspected of having or carrying a dangerous communicable disease, in order to prevent the spread of the disease.“Quarantine The name is drawn from the fact that the period was formerly commonly 40 (Ital. quaranta) days. In 1423 Venice established a lazaretto or quarantine station on an island to check the growth of disease brought in by ships. In the sixteenth century quarantine became widespread and there developed the system of bills of health, certificates that the last port was free from disease; a clean bill entitled a ship to use the port without subjection to quarantine.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1022 (1980).

4.Hist. A widow's privilege to remain in her husband's house for 40 days after his death while her dower is being assigned. • This right was enforced by a writ de quarantina habenda. — Also spelled quarentine; quarentene. See DE QUARANTINA HABENDA. — quarantine,vb.“[I]t was provided by Magna Charta that the widow should give nothing for her dower, and that she should tarry in the chief house of her husband for forty days, (and which is called the widow's quarantine,) after the death of her husband, within which time her dower should be assigned her; and that, in the mean time, she should have reasonable estovers, or maintenance, out of the estate. The provision that the widow should pay nothing for the dower, was made with the generous intention of taking away the uncourtly and oppressive claim of the feudal lord, for a fine, upon allowing the widow to be endowed. This declaration of Magna Charta is, probably, the law in all the United States.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *61 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

quare (kwair-ee). [Latin] Why; for what reason; on what account. • This was used in various common-law writs, esp. writs in trespass.

QUARE CLAUSUM FREGIT

quare clausum fregit (kwair-ee klaw-z<<schwa>>m free-jit). [Latin] Why he broke the close. — Abbr. qu. cl. fr.; q.c.f. See trespass quare clausum fregit under TRESPASS. [Cases: Trespass 10, 16. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 13–15, 62–64.]

QUARE CLAUSUM QUERENTIS FREGIT

quare clausum querentis fregit.See trespass quare clausum fregit under TRESPASS.

QUARE EJECIT INFRA TERMINUM

quare ejecit infra terminum (kwair-ee i-jee-sit in-fr<<schwa>> t<<schwa>>r-m<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin “why he ejected within the term”] Hist. A writ for a lessee who was prematurely ejected, when the ejector was not actually in possession but one claiming under the ejector was.

“For this injury the law has provided him with two remedies ... the writ of ejectione firmæ; ... and the writ of quare ejecti infra terminum; which lies not against the wrongdoer or ejector himself, but his feoffee or other person claiming under him. These are mixed actions, somewhat between real and personal; for therein are two things recovered, as well restitution of the term of years, as damages for the ouster or wrong.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 199 (1768).

QUARE EXECUTIONEM NON

quare executionem non.[Latin] See Q.E.N.

QUARE IMPEDIT

quare impedit (kwair-ee im-p<<schwa>>-dit). [Latin “why he hinders”] Hist. Eccles. law. A writ or action to enforce a patron's right to present a person to fill a vacant benefice. — Also termed writ of quare impedit. See PRESENTATION(2); ADVOWSON.

“The writ of quare impedit commands the disturbers, the bishop, the pseudo-patron, and his clerk, to permit the plaintiff to present a proper person (without specifying the particular clerk) to such a vacant church, which pertains to his patronage; and which the defendants, as he alleges, do obstruct: and unless they so do, then that they appear in court to shew the reason why they hinder him.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 248 (1768).

QUARE INCUMBRAVIT

quare incumbavit (kwair-ee in-k<<schwa>>m-bray-vit), n.[Law Latin “why he encumbered”] Hist. A writ or action to compel a bishop to explain why he encumbered the church when, within six months after the vacation of a benefice and after a ne admittas was received, the bishop conferred the benefice on his clerk while other clerks were contending for the right of presentation in a quare impedit action. • The writ was abolished by the Real Property Limitation Act of 1833, ch. 27.

QUARE INTRUSIT

quare intrusit (kwair-ee in-troo-sit), n.[Law Latin “why he thrust in”] Hist. A writ allowing a lord to recover the value of a marriage, when the lord offered a suitable marriage to a ward but the ward rejected it and married someone else. • It was abolished by the Tenures Abolition Act, 1660, ch. 24.

QUARE NON PERMITTIT

quare non permittit (kwair-ee non p<<schwa>>r-mit-it), n.[Law Latin “why he does not permit”] Hist. A writ for one who has a right to present to a church, against the proprietor.

QUARENTENA TERRAE quarentena terrae (kwahr-en-tee-n<<schwa>> ter-ee), n.[Law Latin “a quantity of land”] Hist. A furlong.

QUARENTINE

quarentine. See QUARANTINE.

QUARE OBSTRUXIT

quare obstruxit (kwair-ee <<schwa>>b-str<<schwa>>k-sit), n.[Law Latin “why he obstructed”] Hist. A writ for one who could not enjoy a privilege to pass through a neighbor's land because the neighbor had obstructed the path.

QUARREL

quarrel. 1. An altercation or angry dispute; an exchange of recriminations, taunts, threats, or accusations between two persons. 2.Archaic. A complaint; a legal action.

“Quarrels is derived from querendo, and extends not only to actions as well real as personal, but also to the causes of actions and suits: so that by the release of all quarrels, not only actions depending in suit, but causes of action and suit also are released; and quarrels, controversies and debates, are words of one sense, and of one and the same signification, Coke, lib. 8, fol. 153.” Termes de la Ley 330 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

QUARTA DIVI PII

quarta divi Pii (kwor-t<<schwa>> dI-vIpI-I). [Latin “quarter of the deified Pius”] Roman law. The quarter portion of a testator's estate required to be left to an adrogated child who had been unjustly emancipated or disinherited.

QUARTA FALCIDIANA

quarta Falcidiana (kwor-t<<schwa>> fal-sid-ee-an-<<schwa>>). [Latin “Falcidian fourth”] See FALCIDIAN PORTION.

QUARTA TREBELLIANICA

quarta Trebellianica (kwor-t<<schwa>> tr<<schwa>>-bel-ee-an-<<schwa>>-k<< schwa>>). [Latin “the quarter due under Trebellianus's senatus consultum”] Hist. The fourth portion that an heir could retain from a succession after transferring the succession as directed by the testator under a fideicommissum. — Also termed quarta Trebelliana (tr<<schwa>>-bel-ee-ay-n<< schwa>> or -an-<<schwa>>). Cf. FALCIDIAN PORTION.

QUARTER

quarter,n.1. In the law of war, the act of showing mercy to a defeated enemy by sparing lives and accepting a surrender <to give no quarter>.2. See quarter section under SECTION.

QUARTER DAY

quash (kwahsh), vb. 1. To annul or make void; to terminate <quash an indictment> <quash proceedings>. 2. To suppress or subdue; to crush <quash a rebellion>.

QUASHAL

quashal (kwahsh-<<schwa>>l), n. The act of quashing something <quashal of the subpoena>. [Cases: Witnesses 16. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 21, 32–52.]

quasi (kway-sIorkway-zIalsokwah-zee). [Latin “as if”] Seemingly but not actually; in some sense; resembling; nearly.

“QUASI. A Latin word frequently used in the civil law, and often prefixed to English words. It is not a very definite word. It marks the resemblance, and supposes a little difference, between two objects, and in legal phraseology the term is used to indicate that one subject resembles another, with which it is compared, in certain characteristics, but that there are also intrinsic and material differences between them. It negatives the idea of identity, but implies a strong superficial analogy, and points out that the conceptions are sufficiently similar for one to be classed as the equal of the other.” 74 C.J.S. Quasi, at 2 (1951).

QUASI-ADMISSION

quasi-admission. See ADMISSION(1).

QUASI-AFFINITY

quasi-affinity. See AFFINITY.

QUASI-INSURER

quasi-insurer. See INSURER.

QUASI-JUDICIAL

quasi-judicial, adj. Of, relating to, or involving an executive or administrative official's adjudicative acts. • Quasi-judicial acts, which are valid if there is no abuse of discretion, often determine the fundamental rights of citizens. They are subject to review by courts. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 108. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 10–11.]

“Quasi-judicial is a term that is ... not easily definable. In the United States, the phrase often covers judicial decisions taken by an administrative agency — the test is the nature of the tribunal rather than what it is doing. In England quasi-judicial belongs to the administrative category and is used to cover situations where the administrator is bound by the law to observe certain forms and possibly hold a public hearing but where he is a free agent in reaching the final decision. If the rules are broken, the determination may be set aside, but it is not sufficient to show that the administration is biased in favour of a certain policy, or that the evidence points to a different conclusion.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 336 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

QUASI-JUDICIAL ACT

quasi-judicial act. 1. A judicial act performed by an official who is not a judge. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 110. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 234–245.] 2. An act performed by a judge who is not acting entirely in a judicial capacity. See judicial act under ACT.

QUASI-PUPILLARY SUBSTITUTION quasi-pupillary substitution. See SUBSTITUTION(5).

QUASI-REALTY

quasi-realty. See REALTY.

QUASI-RENT

quasi-rent. (often pl.) Law and economics. Value over and above one's opportunity cost or next best alternative; the excess of an asset's value over its salvage value. • In the economic theory of marriage, a quasi-rent is a spouse's excess value of the marriage over the value of the next best option of not being in that specific marriage. The next best option may be separation, divorce, or divorce and remarriage, depending on the spouse's preferences and opportunities.

QUASI-SEISIN

quasi-seisin. See SEISIN.

QUASI-SUSPECT CLASSIFICATION quasi-suspect classification. See SUSPECT CLASSIFICATION.

QUASI-TENANT

quasi traditio (kway-sI [or -zI] tr<<schwa>>-dish-ee-oh). [Latin "as if transfer"] Roman law. A party's acquisition of a servitude by using it with the informal permission or acquiescence of the owner.

"According to the civil law again a servitude — that is, a limited right of user in respect of a thing not one's own, e.g. a usufruct or a right of way — could only be created by means of certain definite legal forms. The praetorian law, on the other hand, allowed a servitude to be created by a so-called quasi traditio servitutis; that is, it was satisfied if one party gave the other, without any form, permission to exercise the right of user in question." Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 82 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

QUASI-TRUSTEE

quasi-trustee. See TRUSTEE(1).

QUATTUOR PEDIBUS CURRIT quattuor pedibus currit (kwah-too-or ped-<<schwa>>-b*<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>*r-it). [Law Latin] It runs upon four feet; it runs upon all fours. • The term commonly described a precedent that was extremely close to a point being decided. See ON ALL FOURS.

QUAYAGE

quayage (kee-*<<schwa>>*j). A toll or fee charged for lading or unloading goods on a quay or wharf. — Also written keyage.

QUAYLE ACTION

Quayle action. Patents. An office action telling the patent applicant that the claims are allowable on the merits but that the form of the application still needs to be amended. Ex parte Quayle, 25 USPQ 74, 1935 C.D. 11, 453 O.G. 213 (Comm'r Pat. 1935). • The applicant generally has two months to respond. A Quayle action ends the prosecution on the merits, and amendments that affect the merits will be treated in a manner similar to amendments after final rejection. — Also termed Ex parte Quayle action. [Cases: Patents 109. C.J.S. Patents §§ 152–155.]

QU. CL. FR.

qu. cl. fr. abbr. QUARE CLAUSUM FREGIT.

QUEEN

queen. 1. A woman who possesses, in her own right, the sovereignty and royal power in a monarchy. • Among the more famous English queens are Queen Mary I, Queen Elizabeth I, Queen Victoria, and Queen Elizabeth II. — Also termed queen regnant. 2. The wife of a reigning king. • She has some royal prerogatives (such as having her own officers), but is in many ways legally no different from the rest of the king's subjects. — Also termed queen consort. 3. A woman who rules in place of the actual sovereign (e.g., if the sovereign is a child). — Also termed queen regent. 4. DOWAGER-QUEEN.

QUEEN ANNE'S BOUNTY

Queen Anne's Bounty. See FIRST FRUITS(2).

QUEEN DOWAGER

queen dowager. See DOWAGER-QUEEN.

QUEEN MOTHER

queen mother. A queen who has children, esp. a dowager-queen whose child is the reigning monarch. See DOWAGER-QUEEN.

QUEEN'S BENCH

Queen's Bench. Historically, the highest common-law court in England, presided over by the reigning monarch. • The jurisdiction of this court now lies with the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice; when a king begins to reign, the name automatically changes to King's Bench. — Abbr. Q.B. — Also termed Court of Queen's Bench. Cf. KING'S BENCH.

QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION

Queen's Bench Division. The English court, formerly known as the Queen's Bench or King's Bench, that presides over tort and contract actions, applications for judicial review, and some magistrate-court appeals. — Abbr. Q.B.D.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

Queen's Counsel. In the United Kingdom, Canada, and territories that have retained the rank, an elite, senior-level barrister or advocate. • Originally, a Queen's Counsel was appointed to serve as counsel to the reigning monarch. — Also termed senior counsel. — Abbr. Q.C. Cf. KING'S COUNSEL.

QUEEN'S EVIDENCE

Queen's evidence. See EVIDENCE.

QUEEN'S PRISON

Queen's prison. A prison established in 1842 in Southwark, to be used for debtors and criminals confined under authority of the superior courts at Westminster, the highest court of admiralty, and the bankruptcy laws. • It replaced the Queen's Bench Prison, Fleet Prison, and Marshalsea Prison but was closed in 1862.

QUEEN'S PROCTOR

Queen's proctor. A solicitor that represents the Crown in domestic-relations, probate, and admiralty cases. • For example, in a suit for divorce or nullity of marriage, the Queen's proctor might intervene to prove collusion between the parties. — Also termed (when a king reigns) King's proctor.

QUE EST LE MESME

que est le mesme (kyoo ay l<<schwa>> mem). [Law French] See QUAE EST EADEM.

QUEM NUPTIAE DEMONSTRANT quem nuptiae demonstrant (kwem n<<schwa>>p-shee-ee di-mon-strant). [Latin] Roman & Scots law. Whom the marriage indicates. • The phrase refers to the rebuttable presumption that a husband is the father of a child that his wife gives birth to. See presumed father, putative father under FATHER.

QUEM REDDITUM REDDIT

quem redditum reddit (kwem red-<<schwa>>-t*<<schwa>>*m red-it), n.[Law Latin “which return he made”] Hist. A writ for a grantee of a rent (not a rent service) to force the tenant to consent to the transfer.

QUERELA

querela (kw*<<schwa>>-ree-l<<schwa>>*), n. [Law Latin fr. Latin queri “to complain”] Hist. 1.A complaint founding an action; the plaintiff's count or declaration. 2. A cause of action. 3. An action.

QUERELA CORAM REGE A CONCILIO DISCUTIENDA ET TERMINANDA querela coram rege a concilio discutienda et terminanda (kw*<<schwa>>-ree-l<<schwa>>* kor-*<<schwa>>m ree-jee ay k<<schwa>>n-sil-ee-oh dis-k<<schwa>>-shee-en-d<<schwa>>* et t*<<schwa>>r-m<<schwa>>-nan-d<<schwa>>*), n.[Law Latin “a dispute to be discussed and resolved by the council in front of the king”] Hist. A writ ordering someone to appear before the king to answer to a trespass.

QUERELA INOFFICIOSI TESTAMENTI

querela inofficiosi testamenti (kw*<<schwa>>-ree-l<<schwa>>* in-<<schwa>>-fish-ee-oh-sI tes-t*<<schwa>>*-men-tI). [Latin “complaint of an undutiful will”] Roman law. An action allowing a descendant, ascendant, or sibling who was unjustly disinherited or passed over by a parent's will to have the will set aside as undutifully made.

“By far the most important is due to the querela inofficiosi testamenti. By this procedure, though the forms had been complied with, near relatives with obvious claims (the classes of those entitled having been gradually widened) might attack the will as contrary to natural duty (inofficiosum) and get it set aside.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 199 (2d ed. 1953).

querens (kweer-enz), n.[Latin fr. queri “to complain”] Hist. A plaintiff; the complaining party.

QUESTA

questa (kwes-t*<<schwa>>*), n.[Law Latin] Hist. A quest; an inquest or inquiry upon the oaths of an impaneled jury.

QUESTION-AND-ANSWER

question-and-answer. 1. The portion of a deposition or trial transcript in which evidence is developed through a series of questions asked by the lawyer and answered by the witness. — Abbr. Q-and-A. 2. The method for developing evidence during a deposition or at trial, requiring the witness to answer the examining lawyer's questions, without offering unsolicited information. [Cases: Witnesses 236, 247. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 406, 429.] 3. The method of instruction used in many law-school classes, in which the professor asks questions of one or more students and then follows up each answer with another question. — Also termed Socratic method. See SOCRATIC METHOD .

QUESTION OF CONSIDERATION

question of fact. 1. An issue that has not been predetermined and authoritatively answered by the law. • An example is whether a particular criminal defendant is guilty of an offense or whether a contractor has delayed unreasonably in constructing a building. 2. An issue that does not involve what the law is on a given point. 3. A disputed issue to be resolved by the jury in a jury trial or by the judge in a bench trial. — Also termed fact question. See FACT-FINDER. 4. An issue capable of being answered by way of demonstration, as opposed to a question of unverifiable opinion.

QUESTION OF LAW

question of law. 1. An issue to be decided by the judge, concerning the application or interpretation of the law .2. A question that the law itself has authoritatively answered, so that the court may not answer it as a matter of discretion <under the sentencing guidelines, the punishment for a three-time offender is a question of law>.3. An issue about what the law is on a particular point; an issue in which parties argue about, and the court must decide, what the true rule of law is <both parties appealed on the question of law>.4. An issue that, although it may turn on a factual point, is reserved for the court and excluded from the jury; an issue that is exclusively within the province of the judge and not the jury <whether a contractual ambiguity exists is a question of law>. — Also termed legal question; law question.

QUIA TIMET

quia timet (kwI-<<schwa>> tI-m<<schwa>>t orkwee-<<schwa>> tim-et). [Latin “because he fears”] A legal doctrine that allows a person to seek equitable relief from future probable harm to a specific right or interest. [Cases: Equity 17. C.J.S. Equity § 55.]

“A second class of cases where equity courts act to prevent injury are known as ‘quia timet’ cases. The name comes from the two Latin words, once used when asking relief in this class of cases; the words mean, ‘whereas he fears’ that some injury will be inflicted in the future unless the court of equity assists him in advance, the plaintiff asks the assistance of the court to do this, that, or the other thing with respect to the defendant.” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 648 (2d ed. 1952).

“Quia timet is the right to be protected against anticipated future injury that cannot be prevented by the present action. The doctrine of ‘quia timet’ permits equitable relief based on a concern over future probable injury to certain rights or interests, where anticipated future injury cannot be prevented by a present action at law, such as where there is a danger that a defense at law might be prejudiced or lost if not tried immediately.” 27A Am. Jur. 2d Equity § 93, at 581 (1996).

quominus (kwoh-m<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>s or kwoh-mI-n<<schwa>>s). [Latin quo minus “by which the less”] Hist. A 14th-century Exchequer writ alleging that the plaintiff had lent the defendant a sum of money and that the plaintiff was unable to repay a debt of similar amount to the Crown because of the debt to the defendant. • In effect, the plaintiff pleaded the fiction that he was a debtor of the king who could not repay that debt because of the defendant's failure to repay him. — Also termed writ of quominus.

“[W]hat in the beginning had been permitted as a means of collecting the royal revenue came in the end to be nothing more or less than permitting any citizen to sue in the court of the king in order to collect a private debt. The old pretense that the matter concerned the royal revenue had to be kept up, and accordingly A had to allege that he was ‘less able’ to pay the king when his debtors would not pay him. But everyone, even the court itself, recognized this as a mere fiction, and that since the suit was in fact between A and B, B was not permitted to bring in other matters, such for example as a defense on the ground that A did not actually owe any taxes to the crown. This fiction came to be known as the ‘quo minus’ fiction, because these were the Latin words used in the litigation, which meant that A was ‘less able’ to pay the king.” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 265–66 (2d ed. 1952).

QUOT GENERATIONES TOT GRADUS

quot generationes tot gradus (kwot jen-<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh-nee-z taht gray-d*<<schwa>>*s). [Law Latin] Hist. As many generations as degrees (of relationship). • The phrase appeared in reference to degrees of relationship.

QUOTIENT VERDICT

quotient verdict. See VERDICT.

QUOUSQUE

quousque (kwoh-*<<schwa>>*s-kwee). [Latin] Hist. As long as; how long; until; how far. • This term was used in conveyances as a limitation.

QUOVIS MODO

quovis modo (kwoh-vis moh-doh). [Latin] In whatever manner.

QUOVIS TEMPORE

quovis tempore (kwoh-vis tem-p*<<schwa>>*-ree). [Latin] Hist. At whatever time.

quo warranto (kwoh w*<<schwa>>-ran-toh also kwoh wahr-<<schwa>>*n-toh). [Law Latin “by what authority”] 1. A common-law writ used to inquire into the authority by which a public office is held or a franchise is claimed. — Also termed writ of quo warranto. [Cases: Quo Warranto 9. C.J.S. Quo Warranto §§ 14, 16–20.] 2. An action by which the state seeks to revoke a corporation's charter. • The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are applicable to proceedings for quo warranto “to the extent that the practice in such proceedings is not set forth in statutes of the United States and has therefore conformed to the practice in civil actions.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(a)(2). [Cases: Quo Warranto 15. C.J.S. Quo Warranto §§ 30–33.]

“There are two modes of proceeding judicially to ascertain and enforce the forfeiture of a charter for default or abuse of power. The one is by scire facias; and that process is proper where there is a legal existing body, capable of acting, but who have abused their power. The other mode is by information in the nature of a quo warranto; which is in form a criminal, and in its nature a civil remedy; and that proceeding applies where there is a body corporate de facto only, but who take upon themselves to act, though, from some defect in their constitution, they cannot legally exercise their powers. Both these modes of proceeding are at the instance of and on behalf of the government. The state must be a party to the prosecution, for the judgment is that the parties be ousted, and the franchises seized into the hands of the government.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *313 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

“Quo warranto means ‘by what warrant?’ — or authority? — and was a proceeding to inquire whether authority existed to justify or authorize certain acts of a public character or interest. Originally the proceeding of quo warranto was a criminal one instituted by the crown, the purpose of which was to find out, in the course of a formal inquiry, whether or not persons or corporations were exercising a privilege or franchise illegally, or if persons who had no right to do so were occupying some public office. If it were found that the person or corporation was in fact illegally interfering with the prerogative power of the crown, or was in fact doing some other illegal act, it was ousted from the illegal practice or office. Accordingly, it can be seen at once that the race to the courthouse. 1.Bankruptcy. The competition among creditors to make claims on assets, usu. motivated by the advantages to be gained by those who act first in preference to other creditors. • Chapter 11 of the Bank-ruptcy Code, as well as various other provisions, is intended to prevent a race to the courthouse and instead to promote equality among creditors. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3442. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 351–352.] 2.Civil pro-cedure. The competition between disputing parties, both of whom know that litigation is inevitable, to prepare and file a lawsuit in a favorable or convenient forum before the other side files in one that is less favorable or less convenient. • A race to the courthouse may result after one party informally accuses another of breach of contract or intellectual-property infringement. When informal negotiations break down, both want to resolve the matter quickly, usu. to avoid further business disruption. While the accuser races to sue for breach of contract or in-fringement, the accused seeks a declaratory judgment that no breach or infringement has occurred. See ANTICIPATORY FILING.

Cf. NOTICE STATUTE ; RACE-NOTICE STATUTE. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 231(11).C.J.S. Vendor and Pur-chaser § 502.]

RACHAT

rachat (rah-shah), n.[French] 1. Repurchase; redemption. 2. Ransom.

racheter (rah-sh<<schwa>>-tay), vb.[French] 1. To repurchase or buy back. 2. To ransom.

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

racial discrimination.See DISCRIMINATION.

RACIAL PROFILING

racial profiling.The law-enforcement practice of using race, national origin, or ethnicity as a salient basis for suspicion of criminal activity. • Originally, the term referred to the practice of stopping a disproportionate number of male African-American drivers on the assumption that they had a heightened likelihood of being involved in criminal activity. After the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, the term was frequently used in reference to searching and interrogating Middle Eastern men at airports. — Also termed ethnic profiling; profiling.

RACK

rack,n. Hist. An instrument of torture on which a person was slowly stretched, formerly used to interrogate someone charged with a crime.

RACKETEER

racketeer,n. A person who engages in racketeering. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 4, 103. C.J.S. RICO (Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations) §§ 4, 6.] — racketeer,vb.

RACKETEER INFLUENCED AND CORRUPT ORGANIZATIONS ACT

Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act.A law designed to attack organized criminal activity and preserve marketplace integrity by investigating, controlling, and prosecuting persons who participate or conspire to participate in racketeering. • Enacted in 1970, the federal RICO statute applies only to activity involving interstate or foreign commerce. 18 USCA §§ 1961–1968. Since then, many states have adopted laws (sometimes called “little RICO” acts) based on the federal statute. The federal and most state RICO acts provide for enforcement not only by criminal prosecution but also by civil lawsuit, in which the plaintiff can sue for treble damages. — Abbr. RICO. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 2. C.J.S. RICO (Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations) § 7.]

“Before criminal or civil liability can attach under RICO, it must be shown that the two or more acts of racketeering alleged in the criminal indictment or civil complaint constitute a pattern of racketeering activity on the part of the culpable person. The statutory definition of pattern 'requires at least two' predicate acts occurring within ten years of each other, with one of them occurring after October 15, 1970. More broadly put, the pattern of racketeering activity is a scheme of unlawful conduct with a nexus to both the culpable person and the enterprise." David R. McCormack, Racketeering Influenced Corrupt Organizations § 1.04, at 1-20 (1998).

racketeering, n. 1. A system of organized crime traditionally involving the extortion of money from businesses by intimidation, violence, or other illegal methods. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 4, 103. C.J.S. RICO (Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations) §§ 4, 6.] 2. A pattern of illegal activity (such as bribery, extortion, fraud, and murder) carried out as part of an enterprise (such as a crime syndicate) that is owned or controlled by those engaged in the illegal activity. • The modern sense (sense 2) derives from the federal RICO statute, which greatly broadened the term's original sense to include such activities as mail fraud, securities fraud, and the collection of illegal gambling debts. See 18 USCA §§ 1951–1960. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 1–124. C.J.S. RICO (Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations) §§ 2–11, 13–29, 35–37.]

RAP

rap, n. Slang. 1. Legal responsibility for a criminal act <he took the rap for his accomplices>. 2. A criminal charge . 3. A criminal conviction; esp., a prison sentence .

rape, n. 1. At common law, unlawful sexual intercourse committed by a man with a woman not his wife through force and against her will. • The common-law crime of rape required at least a slight penetration of the penis into the vagina. Also at common law, a husband could not be convicted of raping his wife. — Formerly also termed rapture; ravishment. [Cases: Rape 1. C.J.S. Rape §§ 1–3, 15.] 2. Unlawful sexual activity (esp. intercourse) with a person (usu. a female) without consent and usu. by force or threat of injury. • Most modern state statutes have broadened the definition along these lines. Rape includes unlawful sexual intercourse without consent after the perpetrator has substantially impaired his victim by administering, without the victim's knowledge or consent, drugs or intoxicants for the purpose of preventing resistance. It also includes unlawful sexual intercourse with a person who is unconscious. Marital status is now usu. irrelevant, and sometimes so is the victim's gender. — Also termed (in some statutes) unlawful sexual intercourse; sexual assault; sexual battery; sexual abuse; (in Latin) crimen raptus. Cf. sexual assault under ASSAULT; sexual battery under BATTERY.

“[Another] offence, against the female part also of his majesty's subjects, but attended with greater aggravations than that of forcible marriage, is the crime of rape, raptus mulierum, or the carnal knowledge of a woman forcibly and against her will.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 210 (1769).

“If force is to be declared an element of the crime [of rape] it becomes necessary to resort to the fiction of ‘constructive force’ to take care of those cases in which no force is needed beyond what is involved in the very act of intercourse itself. A better analysis is to recognize that the requirement of force is simply a means of demonstrating that the unlawful violation of the woman was without her consent and against her will. Therefore, evidence of serious force need not be shown in many cases. Hence the better view is that ‘force’ is not truly speaking an element of the crime itself, but if great force was not needed to accomplish the act the necessary lack of consent has been disproved in other than exceptional situations. The courts today frequently state the position that a woman's resistance need not be ‘more than her age, strength, the surrounding facts, and all attending circumstances’ make reasonable.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 211–12 (3d ed. 1982).

acquaintance rape. Rape committed by someone known to the victim, esp. by the victim's social companion. Cf. date rape; relationship rape.

date rape. Rape committed by a person who is escorting the victim on a social occasion. • Loosely, date rape also sometimes refers to what is more accurately called acquaintance rape or relationship rape. [Cases: Rape 4. C.J.S. Rape § 14.]

marital rape. A husband's sexual intercourse with his wife by force or without her consent. • Marital rape was not a crime at common law, but under modern statutes the marital exemption no longer applies, and in most jurisdictions a husband can be prosecuted for raping his wife. — Also termed spousal rape. [Cases: Rape 4. C.J.S. Rape § 14.]

prior-relationship rape. See relationship rape.

rape by means of fraud. An instance of sexual intercourse that has been induced by fraud. • Authorities are divided on the question whether rape can occur when a woman is induced by fraudulent statements to have sexual intercourse. But the term rape by means of fraud is not uncommon in legal literature.

rape under age. See statutory rape.

relationship rape. Rape committed by someone with whom the victim has had a significant association, often (though not always) of a romantic nature. • This term encompasses all types of relationships, including family, friends, dates, cohabitants, and spouses, in which the victim has had more than brief or perfunctory interaction with the other person. Thus it does not extend to those with whom the victim has had only brief encounters or a nodding acquaintance. — Also termed prior-relationship rape. Cf. date rape; acquaintance rape.

spousal rape. See marital rape.

statutory rape. Unlawful sexual intercourse with a person under the age of consent (as defined by statute), regardless of whether it is against that person's will. • Generally, only an adult may be convicted of this crime. A person under the age of consent cannot be convicted. — Also termed rape under age. See age of consent under AGE. [Cases: Rape 13. C.J.S. Rape §§ 18, 21.]

“Carnal knowledge of a child is frequently declared to be rape by statute and where this is true the offense is popularly known as 'statutory rape,' although not so designated in the statute." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 198 (3d ed. 1982).

3.Archaic. The act of seizing and carrying off a person (esp. a woman) by force; abduction. 4. The act of plundering or despoiling a place. 5.Hist. One of the six administrative districts into which Sussex, England was divided, being smaller than a shire and larger than a hundred.

Capable of being estimated, appraised, or apportioned < because hundreds of angry fans ran onto the field at the same time, blame for the goalpost's destruction is not ratable>.3. Taxable <the government assessed the widow's ratable estate>. See PRO RATA.

RATCHET THEORY

ratchet theory.Constitutional law. The principle that Congress, in exercising its enforcement power under the 14th Amendment, can increase but not dilute the scope of 14th Amendment guarantees as previously defined by the Supreme Court. • The thought underlying the term is that the enabling clause works in only one direction, like a ratchet. The theory was stated by Justice Brennan in Katzenbach v. Morgan, 384 U.S. 641, 86 S.Ct. 1717 (1966), but was repudiated by the Supreme Court in City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507, 117 S.Ct. 2157 (1997). — Also termed one-way ratchet theory.

RATE

rate,n.1. Proportional or relative value; the proportion by which quantity or value is adjusted <rate of inflation>.2. An amount paid or charged for a good or service <the rate for a business-class fare is $550>.

class rate.A single rate applying to the transportation of several articles of the same general character. [Cases: Carriers 189. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace § 231; Carriers §§ 470–472, 474.]

confiscatory rate.A utility rate set so low by the government that the utility company cannot realize a reasonable return on its investment. [Cases: Public Utilities 129. C.J.S. Public Utilities §§ 35, 38–41, 57.]

freight rate.A rate charged by a carrier for the transportation of cargo, usu. based on the weight, volume, or quantity of goods but sometimes also on the goods' value or the mileage. [Cases: Carriers 12, 189. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace § 231; Carriers §§ 367–368, 470–472, 474.]

joint rate.A single rate charged by two or more carriers to cover a shipment of goods over a single route. [Cases: Carriers 26, 193. C.J.S. Carriers §§ 138–140, 482.]

union rate.The wage scale set by a union as a minimum wage to be paid and usu. expressed as an hourly rate or piecework rate.

project, used to determine the actual return on an investment. — Abbr. IRR.

RATEPAYER

ratepayer. English law. A person who pays local taxes; a person liable to pay rates. See RATE(4).

RATIFICATION

ratification, n. 1. Adoption or enactment, esp. where the act is the last in a series of necessary steps or consents <The Ratification of the Conventions of nine States, shall be sufficient for the Establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the Same>. • In this sense, ratification runs the gamut of a formal approval of a constitutional amendment to rank-and-file approval of a labor union's collective-bargaining agreement with management. See ADOPTION(5). Cf. SANCTION(1). 2. Confirmation and acceptance of a previous act, thereby making the act valid from the moment it was done <the board of directors' ratification of the president's resolution>. • This sense includes action taken by the legislature to make binding a treaty negotiated by the executive. [Cases: Estoppel 90(1). C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 68–69, 134–135.] 3. Contracts. A person's binding adoption of an act already completed but either not done in a way that originally produced a legal obligation or done by a third party having at the time no authority to act as the person's agent <an adult's ratification of a contract signed during childhood is necessary to make the contract enforceable>. [Cases: Contracts 97(2); Infants 57; Principal and Agent 163–176. C.J.S. Agency §§ 63–104, 264, 447, 500, 527, 542, 549; Contracts §§ 138, 146, 156, 172, 186, 188; Infants §§ 167, 179.]

“Ratification may take place by express words indicating an intention to confirm the contract. These words may consist of a new express promise, or such words as ‘I do ratify and confirm.’ A mere acknowledgment that the contract was in fact made and that it has not been performed is not sufficient as a ratification. It is sometimes said that a ratification is ineffective unless made with knowledge of the possession of a legal power to disaffirm, but the cases holding the contrary seem to have the better reason.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 179–80 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

4. Int'l law. The final establishment of consent by the parties to a treaty to be bound by it, usu. including the exchange or deposit of instruments of ratification <the ratification of the nuclear-weapons treaty>. See INSTRUMENT OF RATIFICATION. Cf. CONFIRMATION. [Cases: Treaties 3. C.J.S. Treaties § 4.] — ratify, vb. — ratifiable, adj.

ratihabitio (rat-schwa-h*schwa*-bish-ee-oh), n. [Latin fr. ratum habere “to hold ratified”] Civil law. Ratification or approval, esp. by a principal of an agent's transaction. Pl. ratihabitiones.

RATIO DECIDENDI

ratio decidendi (ray-shee-oh des-<<schwa>>-den-dI), n.[Latin “the reason for deciding”] 1. The principle or rule of law on which a court's decision is founded <many poorly written judicial opinions do not contain a clearly ascertainable ratio decidendi>.2. The rule of law on which a later court thinks that a previous court founded its decision; a general rule without which a case must have been decided otherwise <this opinion recognizes the Supreme Court's ratio decidendi in the school desegregation cases>. — Often shortened to ratio. Pl. rationes decidendi (ray-shee-oh-nee-z des-<<schwa>>-den-dI). Cf. OBITER DICTUM; HOLDING(1).

“The phrase ‘the ratio decidendi of a case’ is slightly ambiguous. It may mean either (1) the rule that the judge who decided the case intended to lay down and apply to the facts, or (2) the rule that a later court concedes him to have had the power to lay down.” Glanville Williams, Learning the Law 75 (11th ed. 1982).

“There are ... two steps involved in the ascertainment of the ratio decidendi.... First, it is necessary to determine all the facts of the case as seen by the judge; secondly, it is necessary to discover which of those facts were treated as material by the judge.” Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 65–66 (4th ed. 1991).

ratio legis (ray-shee-oh lee-j<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin] The reason or purpose for making a law <the Senator argued that the rapid spread of violent crime was a compelling ratio legis for the gun-control statute>. — Also termed ratio juris.

RATIONAL-BASIS TEST

rational-basis test.Constitutional law. The criterion for judicial analysis of a statute that does not implicate a fundamental right or a suspect or quasi-suspect classification under the Due Process or Equal Protection Clause, whereby the court will uphold a law if it bears a reasonable relationship to the attainment of a legitimate governmental objective. • Rational basis is the most deferential of the standards of review that courts use in due-process and equal-protection analysis. — Also termed rational-purpose test; rational-relationship test; minimum scrutiny; minimal scrutiny. Cf. STRICT SCRUTINY ; INTERMEDIATE SCRUTINY. [Cases: Constitutional Law 213.1(2). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 714, 716, 718.]

RATIONAL-CHOICE THEORY

rational-choice theory. The theory that criminals engage in criminal activity when they believe that the potential benefits outweigh the risks of committing the crime. Cf. CONTROL THEORY; ROUTINE-ACTIVITIES THEORY; STRAIN THEORY .

RATIONE

ratione (ray-shee-oh-nee or rash-ee-oh-nee). [Latin] By reason; on account.

ratione bonorum (b<<schwa>>-nor-<<schwa>>m). By reason of property.

ratione causae (kaw-zee). By reason of the nature of the case.

ratione contractus (k<<schwa>>n-trak-t<<schwa>>s). By reason of the contract.

“By entering into a contract, the contracting parties may ... render themselves amenable to the jurisdiction of a judge to whose jurisdiction they would not have been amenable had the contract not been entered into. Thus, a foreigner, for the time being domiciled in Scotland, entering into a contract there with a Scotchman ... renders himself amenable to the jurisdiction of the Scotch courts in any question arising out of the contract, for the parties ... are presumed to have had the law and the courts of Scotland in view as the forum... and a jurisdiction thus founded is said to arise ratione contractus.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 540 (4th ed. 1894).

ratione delicti (di-lik-ti). On account of the delict.

ratione domicilii (dom-<<schwa>>-sil-ee-I). By reason of domicile; on account of residence.

• The phrase appeared in reference to the foundation of jurisdiction in many civil cases.

ratione habita (hab-i-t<<schwa>>). Regard being had (of particular factors or circumstances).

ratione impotentiae (im-p<<schwa>>-ten-shee-ee). By reason of inability. • This was the basis for a property right in young wild animals that were unable to run or fly. See FERAE NATURAE.

ratione incidentiae (in-si-den-shee-ee). By reason of the incident.

ratione loci (loh-sI). By reason of place. • This was the basis for a property right in rabbits and hares.

ratione materiae (m<<schwa>>-teer-ee-ee). By reason of the matter involved.

ratione originis (<<schwa>>-rij-<<schwa>>-nis). By reason of one's origin.

ratione personae (p<<schwa>>r-soh-nee). By reason of the person concerned.

ratione privilegii (priv-<<schwa>>-lee-jee-I). By reason of privilege. • This was the basis for a property right in animals of warren. See WARREN.

ratione rei sitae (ree-IsI-tee). By reason of the situation of a thing.

ratione soli (soh-II). By reason of the soil. • This was the basis for a property right in bees.

ratione subjectae materiae (s<<schwa>>b-jek-tee m<<schwa>>-teer-ee-ee). On account of the subject matter.

ratione suspecti iudicis (s<<schwa>>-spek-tIjoo-di-sis). On account of the judge being suspected. • This referred to a judge's recusal in a case.

ratione tenurae (ten-y<<schwa>>-ree). By reason of tenure.

RATIONES

rationes (ray-shee-oh-nee-z or rash-ee-oh-nee-z), n.[Latin “reasons”] Hist. The pleadings in a suit.

RATIO PERTINENS

ratio pertinens.A pertinent reason (for a question).

RATIO SCIENTIAE

ratio scientiae (ray-shee-oh sI-en-shee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. The ground of knowledge; esp., the basis for a witness's testimony.

RATIO SCRIPTA

ratio scripta (ray-shee-oh skrip-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. Written reason.

rattening (rat-ning).Hist. The practice of taking away tools, destroying machinery, and the like in an attempt either to compel a worker to join a union or to enforce a company's compliance with union rules. • Rattening was formerly a common labor-union tactic in England, and it was a criminal offense.

ravishment,n. Archaic. 1. Forcible seizure and carrying off of another person (esp. a woman); ABDUCTION. 2.RAPE(1). • In this sense the term is widely considered inappropriate for modern usage, given its romantic connotations (in other contexts) of ecstasy and delight. In the Restatement (First) of Torts § 65a, the word was defined as including not just rape but any carnal intercourse of a criminal nature. See RAPUIT. — ravish,vb.

shareholders themselves, without a trustee's or a receiver's intervention. — readjust,vb.

READ ON

read on,vb. Patents. 1. (Of a patent claim) to contain all the same features of (a prior-art reference). • If the patent claim reads on the prior art, the claim has been anticipated and the patent will be denied. See ANTICIPATED. [Cases: Patents 72(1). C.J.S. Patents § 31.] 2. (Of a patent claim) to describe an infringing product or process. • If all the patent claims read on the other product, that product infringes the patent. — Also termed read into; recite. [Cases: Patents 226.6. C.J.S. Patents § 415.]

READY, WILLING, AND ABLE

ready, willing, and able.(Of a prospective buyer) legally and financially capable of consummating a purchase. [Cases: Brokers 54; Specific Performance 87. C.J.S. Brokers §§ 152–154; Specific Performance §§ 104, 106–107, 109.]

“ ‘READY, WILLING, AND ABLE’ — A phrase referring to a prospective buyer of property who is legally capable and financially able to consummate the deal. Traditionally, the broker earns a commission upon procuring a ‘ready, willing, and able’ buyer on the listing terms, regardless of whether the seller actually goes through with the sale. The ‘ready and willing’ means, generally, that the broker must in fact produce a buyer who indicates that he or she is prepared to accept the terms of the seller and is willing to enter into a contract for sale. The buyer is not ‘ready and willing’ when he or she enters into an option with the seller, but the buyer is ‘ready and willing’ when the option is exercised. The buyer is not ‘ready and willing’ when the offer is subject to any new conditions, such as making the closing date an unreasonably long period, for example, one year from the offer.... The ‘able’ requires that the buyer be financially able to comply with the terms of the sale in both initial cash payment and any necessary financing. The broker is not required to show that the purchaser has actual cash or assets to pay off the mortgage. But the broker is required to reveal the identity of the buyer if requested by the seller.” John W. Reilly, The Language of Real Estate 326 (4th ed. 1993).

REAFFIRMATION

reaffirmation,n.1. Approval of something previously decided or agreed to; renewal <the Supreme Court's reaffirmation of this principle is long overdue>.2.Bankruptcy. An agreement between the debtor and a creditor by which the debtor promises to repay a prepetition debt that would otherwise be discharged at the conclusion of the bankruptcy <the debtor negotiated a reaffirmation so that he could keep the collateral>. • There are two main requirements for a reaffirmation to be enforceable: (1) the agreement must contain a clear and conspicuous provision stating that the debtor may rescind the reaffirmation agreement anytime before discharge or within 60 days after the agreement is filed with the court; and (2) for a debtor who is not represented by counsel, the court must determine that the reaffirmation is in the debtor's best interest and does not impose an undue hardship. 11 USCA § 524(c). — Also termed (in sense 2) reaffirmation agreement. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3415. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 350.] — reaffirm,vb.

REAFFIRMATION HEARING

reaffirmation hearing. Bankruptcy. A hearing at which the debtor and a creditor present a reaffirmation of a dischargeable debt for the court's approval. • The reaffirmation hearing is usually held simultaneously with the discharge hearing. See DISCHARGE HEARING. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3417. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 350.]

REAL

real, adj. 1. Of or relating to things (such as lands and buildings) that are fixed or immovable <real property> . 2. Civil law. Of, relating to, or attached to a thing (whether movable or immovable) rather than a person . 3. Actual; genuine; true <real authority>. 4. REAL-ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST real-estate investment trust. A company that invests in and manages a portfolio of real estate, with the majority of the trust's income distributed to its shareholders. • Such a trust may qualify for special income-tax treatment if it distributes 95% of its income to its shareholders. — Abbr. REIT. See investment company under COMPANY. Cf. REAL-ESTATE MORTGAGE TRUST. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3997. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 420.]

umbrella-partnership real-estate investment trust. A REIT that controls and holds most of its properties through an umbrella limited partnership, as a result of which the trust can acquire properties in exchange for the limited-partnership interests in the umbrella while triggering no immediate tax obligations for certain sellers. • This is a structure that many REITs now use. — Abbr. UPREIT. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3997. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 420.]

real-estate-mortgage investment conduit. An entity that holds a fixed pool of mortgages or mortgage-backed securities (such as collateralized mortgage obligations), issues interests in itself to investors, and receives favorable tax treatment by passing its income through to those investors. • Real-estate-mortgage investment conduits were created by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. They can be organized as corporations, partnerships, or trusts. To qualify for tax-exempt status, the entity must meet two requirements: (1) almost all the entity's assets must be real-estate mortgages (though a few other cash-flow-maintaining assets are allowed); and (2) all interests in the entity must be classified as either regular interests (which entitle the holder to principal and interest income through debt or equity) or residual interests (which provide contingent income). — Abbr. REMIC.

REAL-ESTATE MORTGAGE TRUST

real-estate mortgage trust. A real-estate investment trust that buys and sells the mortgages on real property rather than the real property itself. — Abbr. REMT. Cf. REAL-ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST.

reapportionment,n. Realignment of a legislative district's boundaries to reflect changes in population. • The U.S. Supreme Court has required federal reapportionment. See U.S. Const. art. I, § 2, cl. 3. — Also termed redistricting. Cf. GERRYMANDERING. [Cases: Elections 12(6); States 27. C.J.S. States §§ 62–78.] — reapportion,vb.

REARGUMENT

reargument,n. The presentation of additional arguments, which often suggest that a controlling legal principle has been overlooked, to a court (usu. an appellate court) that has already heard initial arguments. Cf. REHEARING. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 928; Motions 39. C.J.S. Motions and Orders §§ 39–40.] — reargue,vb.

REARREST

rearrest. See ARREST.

REASONABLE

reasonable,adj.1. Fair, proper, or moderate under the circumstances < reasonable pay>.2. According to reason <your argument is reasonable but not convincing>.

“It is extremely difficult to state what lawyers mean when they speak of ‘reasonableness.’ In part the expression refers to ordinary ideas of natural law or natural justice, in part to logical thought, working upon the basis of the rules of law.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 183 n.(u) (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“In one sense the word [reasonable] describes the proper use of the reasoning power, and in another it is no more than a word of assessment. Reasoning does not help much in fixing a reasonable or fair price or a reasonable or moderate length of time, or in estimating the size of a doubt. Lawyers say a reasonable doubt, meaning a substantial one; the Court of Appeal has frowned upon the description of a reasonable doubt as one for which reasons could be given.” Patrick Devlin, The Judge 134 (1979).

3. (Of a person) having the faculty of reason .4.Archaic. Human <criminal homicide is traditionally called the unlawful killing of a “reasonable person”>. — reasonableness,n.

REASONABLE ACCOMMODATION

reasonable accommodation. 1. An action taken to adapt or adjust for a disabled person, done in a way that does not impose an undue hardship on the party taking the action. • Under the Americans with Disabilities Act, an employer must make reasonable accommodations for an employee's disability. Examples of reasonable accommodations that have been approved by the courts include providing additional unpaid leave, modifying the employee's work schedule, and reassigning the employee to a more appropriate, vacant position. [Cases: Civil Rights 1020, 1225. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 4–5, 8, 13, 62–63.] 2. An action taken to adapt or adjust for an employee's religious need or practice, done in a way that does not impose an undue hardship on the employer. See HARDSHIP. [Cases: Civil Rights 1162.C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 35, 88.]

REASONABLE-APPREHENSION TEST reasonable-apprehension test.Patents. A judicial analysis to decide whether there is a justiciable controversy between a patentee and an alleged infringer. • The test has two elements: (1) the patentee must make an explicit threat or take other action that makes another person reasonably believe that an infringement suit is likely, and (2) the other person must be engaged in an activity that could constitute infringement or must be intentionally preparing to engage in possibly infringing activity. If either element is prospective or uncertain, the court will not consider the complaint. [Cases: Declaratory Judgment 233. C.J.S. Declaratory Judgments § 99.]

REASONABLE CARE

reasonable care.See CARE.

REASONABLE CAUSE

reasonable cause.See PROBABLE CAUSE.

REASONABLE-CONSUMER TEST

reasonable-consumer test.The prevailing test for determining whether advertisement is deceptive, determined by asking whether the reasonable consumer would believe that the claim is true. Cf. FOOL'S TEST.

REASONABLE-DEVELOPMENT COVENANT reasonable-development covenant.Oil & gas. The implied promise in an oil-and-gas lease that once production is obtained the lessee will continue to develop the property as would a reasonably prudent operator, as opposed to merely holding the lease by the production already obtained. See FURTHER-EXPLORATION COVENANT T.

REASONABLE DEVIATION reasonable deviation. See DEVIATION.

REASONABLE DILIGENCE reasonable diligence. See DILIGENCE.

REASONABLE DOUBT

reasonable doubt. The doubt that prevents one from being firmly convinced of a defendant's guilt, or the belief that there is a real possibility that a defendant is not guilty. • “Beyond a reasonable doubt” is the standard used by a jury to determine whether a criminal defendant is guilty. See Model Penal Code § 1.12. In deciding whether guilt has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt, the jury must begin with the presumption that the defendant is innocent. — Also termed rational doubt. See BURDEN OF PERSUASION. Cf. clear and convincing evidence under EVIDENCE; PREPONDERANCE OF THE EVIDENCE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 266(7); Criminal Law 561. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 1028–1029, 1037; Criminal Law § 1108.]

“Reasonable doubt ... is a term often used, probably pretty well understood, but not easily defined. It is not a mere possible doubt; because every thing relating to human affairs, and depending on moral evidence, is open to some possible or imaginary doubt. It is that state of the case, which, after the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence, leaves the minds of jurors in that condition that they cannot say they feel an abiding conviction, to a moral certainty, of the truth of the charge.” Commonwealth v. Webster, 59 Mass. (5 Cush.) 295, 320 (1850) (per Lemuel Shaw, J.).

“The gravamen of Lord Goddard's objection to the formula of ‘reasonable doubt’ seems to have been the muddle occasionally created by an impromptu effort to explain to a jury the meaning of this phrase. A simple solution would be to refrain from explaining it, relying on the common sense of the jury. As Barton J. said in an Australian case, ‘one embarks on a dangerous sea if he attempts to define with precision a term which is in ordinary use with reference to this subject-matter, and which is usually stated to a jury without embellishment as a well understood expression.’ However, some modes of embellishment seem to be unobjectionable. There is probably no harm in telling the jury, as some judges do, that a reasonable doubt is one for which a sensible reason can be supplied.” Glanville Williams, Criminal Law 873 (2d ed. 1961).

REASONABLE EXCUSE

reasonable excuse. See PROBABLE CAUSE.

REASONABLE-EXPECTATION DOCTRINE reasonable-expectation doctrine. Insurance. The rule that resolves an insurance-policy ambiguity in favor of the insured's reasonable expectations. [Cases: Insurance 1817. C.J.S. Insurance § 363.]

REASONABLE FORCE

reasonable force. See FORCE.

REASONABLE GROUNDS

reasonable grounds. See PROBABLE CAUSE.

REASONABLE-INFERENCE RULE reasonable-inference rule. An evidentiary principle providing that a jury, in deciding a case, may properly consider any reasonable inference drawn from the evidence presented at trial. Cf. PYRAMIDING INFERENCES, RULE AGAINST. [Cases: Criminal Law 559; Evidence 595. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1096; Evidence §§ 1300, 1341.]

REASONABLE MAN

reasonable man. See REASONABLE PERSON.

REASONABLE MEDICAL PROBABILITY reasonable medical probability. In proving the cause of an injury, a standard requiring a showing that the injury was more likely than not caused by a particular stimulus, based on the general consensus of recognized medical thought. — Also termed reasonable medical certainty. [Cases: Damages 185(1); Evidence 547.5. C.J.S. Damages §§ 308–310; Evidence §§ 609, 648, 698–699.]

REASONABLE NOTICE

reasonable notice. See NOTICE.

REASONABLE PERSON

reasonable person. 1. A hypothetical person used as a legal standard, esp. to determine whether someone acted with negligence; specif., a person who exercises the degree of attention, knowledge, intelligence, and judgment that society requires of its members for the protection of their own and of others' interests. • The reasonable person acts sensibly, does things without serious delay, and takes proper but not excessive precautions. — Also termed reasonable man; prudent person; ordinarily prudent person; reasonably prudent person; highly prudent person. See reasonable care under CARE. [Cases: Insurance 1818; Negligence 233. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 34, 118–121, 125–127, 130–131, 133.]

“The reasonable man connotes a person whose notions and standards of behaviour and responsibility correspond with those generally obtained among ordinary people in our society at the present time, who seldom allows his emotions to overbear his reason and whose habits are moderate and whose disposition is equable. He is not necessarily the same as the average man — a term which implies an amalgamation of counter-balancing extremes.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 56 (17th ed. 1977).

2. Archaic. A human being. “In the antique phraseology which has been repeated since the time of Lord Coke the actus reus of murder (and therefore of any criminal homicide) was declared to be unlawfully killing a reasonable person who is in being and under the King's peace, the death following within a year and a day. In this sentence the word 'reasonable' does not mean 'sane', but 'human'. In criminal law, a lunatic is a persona for all purposes of protection, even when not so treated for the assessment of liability." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 102 (16th ed. 1952).

REASONABLE PROVOCATION

reasonable provocation. See adequate provocation under PROVOCATION.

REASONABLE ROYALTY

REASONABLE SUPPORT

reasonable support. See SUPPORT.

REASONABLE SUSPICION

reasonable suspicion. See SUSPICION.

REASONABLE TIME

reasonable time. 1. Contracts. The time needed to do what a contract requires to be done, based on subjective circumstances. • If the contracting parties do not fix a time for performance, the law will usu. presume a reasonable time. [Cases: Contracts 212. C.J.S. Contracts § 582.] 2. Commercial law. The time during which the UCC permits a party to accept an offer, inspect goods, substitute conforming goods for rejected goods, and the like. [Cases: Sales 22(5), 23(5), 166(1), 168(2), 179(6). C.J.S. Sales §§ 34, 176, 182, 186–187, 192, 194–198.]

REASONABLE USE

reasonable use. See USE(1).

REASONABLE-USE THEORY

reasonable-use theory. Property. The principle that owners of riparian land may make reasonable use of their water if this use does not affect the water available to lower riparian owners. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 41. C.J.S. Waters § 13.]

REASONABLY BELIEVE

reasonably believe. See BELIEVE.

REASONABLY-PRUDENT-OPERATOR STANDARD reasonably-prudent-operator standard. Oil & gas. The test generally applied to determine a lessee's compliance with implied lease covenants by considering what a reasonable, competent operator in the oil-and-gas industry would do under the circumstances, acting in good faith and with economic motivation, and taking into account the lessor's interests as well as that of the operator. — Also termed reasonable-prudent-operator standard; prudent-operator standard.

REASONABLY PRUDENT PERSON reasonably prudent person. See REASONABLE PERSON.

REASONABLY SUSPECT

reasonably suspect. See SUSPECT.

REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

reasons for allowance. See RULE 109 STATEMENT.

REASON TO KNOW

reason to know. Information from which a person of ordinary intelligence — or of the superior intelligence that the person may have — would infer that the fact in question exists or that there is a substantial enough chance of its existence that, if the person exercises reasonable care, the person can assume the fact exists.

REASSURANCE

reassurance. See REINSURANCE.

REBATE

REBUS INTEGRIS

rebus integris (ree-b<<schwa>>s in-t<<schwa>>-gris). [Latin] Scots law. Matters being complete; no performance having taken place. • For example, a contract could be rescinded if nothing had been done toward performance.

REBUS IPSIS ET FACTIS

rebus ipsis et factis (ree-b<<schwa>>s ip-sis et fak-tis). [Latin] Scots law. By the facts and circumstances themselves. • A marital contract was sometimes inferred rebus ipsis et factis.

REBUS SIC STANTIBUS

rebus sic stantibus (ree-b<<schwa>>s sik stan-ti-b<<schwa>>s). [Latin “matters so standing”] Int'l law & civil law. The principle that all agreements are concluded with the implied condition that they are binding only as long as there are no major changes in the circumstances. See CLAUSA REBUS SIC STANTIBUS . [Cases: Treaties 5. C.J.S. Treaties § 10.]

rebut,vb. To refute, oppose, or counteract (something) by evidence, argument, or contrary proof <rebut the opponent's expert testimony> <rebut a presumption of negligence>.

REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTION rebuttable presumption.See PRESUMPTION.

REBUTTAL

rebuttal,n.1. In-court contradiction of an adverse party's evidence. 2. The time given to a party to present contradictory evidence or arguments. Cf. CASE-IN-CHIEF. [Cases: Criminal Law 683; Federal Civil Procedure 2015; Trial 62. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1219; Trial § 195.]

“Rebuttal is the hardest argument to make in any court. In the Supreme Court and in most courts of appeals, petitioner has to work hard to save any time at all for rebuttal. In the Supreme Court, rebuttal time comes directly out of the 30 minutes allotted to petitioner's side and, if the justices keep asking questions that use up petitioner's time, the case is submitted without rebuttal. Many courts of appeals permit counsel to reserve time for rebuttal, either through the clerk in advance of the argument or at the beginning of the argument itself. It is the rare court of appeals panel that does not permit counsel at least one minute of rebuttal, even when counsel's time has expired.” David C. Frederick, Supreme Court and Appellate Advocacy § 7.3, at 178 (2003) (dealing only with oral rebuttals on appeal).

3. The arguments contained in a reply brief. See reply brief under BRIEF.

REBUTTAL EVIDENCE

rebuttal evidence.See EVIDENCE.

REBUTTAL WITNESS

rebuttal witness.See WITNESS.

REBUTTER

rebutter. 1.Common-law pleading. The defendant's answer to a plaintiff's surrejoinder; the pleading that followed the rejoinder and surrejoinder, and that might in turn be answered by the surrebutter. [Cases: Pleading 185.] 2. One who rebuts.

REBUTTING EVIDENCE

rebutting evidence.See rebuttal evidence under EVIDENCE.

RECALL

recall,n.1. Removal of a public official from office by popular vote. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 70.7. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 215–219.] 2. A manufacturer's request to consumers for the return of defective products for repair or replacement. [Cases: Insurance 2278(24); Products Liability 12. C.J.S. Products Liability § 22.] 3. Revocation of a judgment for factual or legal reasons. — recall,vb.

RECALL ELECTION

recall election.See ELECTION(3).

RECALL EXCLUSION

recall exclusion.See sistership exclusion under EXCLUSION(3).

RECALL LETTER

recall letter.See LETTER OF RECALL.

RECALL OF MANDATE

recall of mandate.The extraordinary action by an appellate court of withdrawing the order it issued to the trial court upon deciding an appeal, usu. after the deadline has passed for the losing party to seek a rehearing. • Because this action can interfere with trial-court proceedings on remand, and also because it clouds the waters that repose (the finality of a judgment) is meant to clear, courts are reluctant to use the power. But they will use it to correct clerical errors or to remedy a fraud on the court during the appeal. It has also been used when the original mandate would result in a grave injustice. See MANDATE(1).

recant (ri-kant), vb.1. To withdraw or renounce (prior statements or testimony) formally or publicly <the prosecution hoped the eyewitness wouldn't recant her corroborating testimony on the stand>.2. To withdraw or renounce prior statements or testimony formally or publicly <under grueling cross-examination, the witness recanted>. — recantation,n.

RECAPITALIZATION

recapitalization,n. An adjustment or recasting of a corporation's capital structure — that is, its stocks, bonds, or other securities — through amendment of the articles of incorporation or merger with a parent or subsidiary. • An example of recapitalization is the elimination of unpaid preferred dividends and the creation of a new class of senior securities. Cf. REORGANIZATION(2). [Cases: Corporations 38, 581. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 54–61, 792–797.] — recapitalize,vb.

leveraged recapitalization.Recapitalization whereby the corporation substitutes debt for equity in the capital structure, usu. to make the corporation less attractive as a target for a hostile takeover. — Also termed leveraging up.

recaption. 1. At common law, lawful seizure of another's property for a second time to secure the performance of a duty; a second distress. See DISTRESS. 2. Peaceful retaking, without legal process, of one's own property that has been wrongfully taken.

recapture, n. 1. The act or an instance of retaking or reacquiring; recovery. 2. The lawful taking by the government of earnings or profits exceeding a specified amount; esp., the government's recovery of a tax benefit (such as a deduction or credit) by taxing income or property that no longer qualifies for the benefit. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3089, 3138, 3531. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 78, 351, 490–491.] 3. Int'l law. The retaking of a prize or booty so that the property is legally restored to its original owner. See POSTLIMINIUM(2). — recapture, vb.

“Upon recapture from pirates, the property is to be restored to the owner, on the allowance of a reasonable compensation to the retaker, in the nature of salvage; for it is a principle of the law of nations, that a capture by pirates does not, like a capture by an enemy in solemn war, change the title, or divest the original owner of his right to the property, and it does not require the doctrine of postliminy to restore it.” 1 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *107–08 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

RECAPTURE CLAUSE

recapture clause. 1. A contract provision that limits prices or allows for the recovery of goods if market conditions greatly differ from what the contract anticipated. 2. A commercial-lease provision that grants the landlord both a percentage of the tenant's profits above a fixed amount of rent and the right to terminate the lease — and thus recapture the property — if those profits are too low.

RECAPTURE RULE

recapture rule. Patents. The doctrine that a patentee cannot regain, in a reissue patent, a claim that the patentee previously abandoned in order to gain allowance of the patent application. • The rule provides a defense in an infringement action by allowing the defendant to attack the validity of a reissue patent. An attempt to recapture a strategically abandoned claim cannot meet the statutory requirement that the error be made without deceptive intent. 35 USCA § 251. [Cases: Patents 141(6). C.J.S. Patents § 249.]

recede, vb. (Of a house in a bicameral legislature) to withdraw from an amendment in which the other house has not concurred. See CONCUR(3).

“A vote to recede from amendments constitutes a final passage of the bill without the amendments from which the house has receded, since both houses have then agreed to the bill in its form prior to amendment.” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 767, at 555 (2000).

RECEDING MARKET

receding market. See bear market under MARKET.

RECEIPT

receipt, n. 1. The act of receiving something <my receipt of the document was delayed by two days>. 2. A written acknowledgment that something has been received <keep the receipt for the gift>.

accountable receipt. A receipt in which a person admits that goods or money were delivered to the person and that the person is obliged to deliver all or part of the goods or money to a third person.

interim receipt. The written acknowledgment of a premium paid on an insurance policy that is pending final approval. [Cases: Insurance 1746. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 266–271.]

warehouse receipt. See WAREHOUSE RECEIPT.

3. (usu. pl.) Something received; INCOME <post the daily receipts in the ledger>.

receipt, vb. 1. To acknowledge in writing the receipt of (something, esp. money) <the bill must be receipted>. 2. To give a receipt for (something, esp. money) <the bookkeeper receipted the payments>.

RECEIPT CLAUSE

receipt clause. In a conveyancing document, a clause that acts as a receipt for the consideration given. • This clause typically appears to avoid the necessity of a separate receipt.

RECEIPTOR

receiptor (ri-see-t<<schwa>>r). A person who receives from a sheriff another's property seized in garnishment and agrees to return the property upon demand or execution. [Cases: Execution 150. C.J.S. Executions §§ 130–131.]

RECEIVABLE

receivable, adj. 1. Capable of being admitted or accepted <receivable evidence>. 2. Awaiting receipt of payment <accounts receivable>. 3. Subject to a call for payment .

receivable, n. An amount owed, esp. by a business's customer. See account receivable under ACCOUNT.

unrealized receivable. An amount earned but not yet received. • Unrealized receivables have no income-tax basis for cash-basis taxpayers. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3931, 3935.]

receiver. 1. A disinterested person appointed by a court, or by a corporation or other person, for the protection or collection of property that is the subject of diverse claims (for example, because it belongs to a bankrupt or is otherwise being litigated). Cf. LIQUIDATOR. [Cases: Corporations 552, 621(.5); Receivers 1, 81. C.J.S. Corporations § 756; Receivers §§ 1–3, 139–146.]

ancillary receiver. One who is appointed as a receiver in a particular area to help a foreign receiver collect the assets of an insolvent corporation or other entity. [Cases: Corporations 686.

C.J.S. Corporations §§ 929–930.]

“An ancillary receiver of a corporation or unincorporated association may be appointed (a) by a competent court of a state in which there are assets of the corporation or unincorporated association at the time of the commencement of the action for the appointment of such receiver, or (b) in the case of a corporation, by a competent court of the state of incorporation.... The purpose of such an ancillary receivership is to aid the foreign primary receivership in the collection and taking charge of assets of the estate being administered.” 66 Am. Jur. 2d Receivers § 436, at 239 (1973).

general receiver. See principal receiver.

judgment receiver. A receiver who collects or diverts funds from a judgment debtor to the creditor. • A judgment receiver is usu. appointed when it is difficult to enforce a judgment in any other manner. — Also termed receiver in aid of execution.

local receiver. Conflict of laws. A receiver appointed in the state where property is located or where an act is done.

principal receiver. A receiver who is primarily responsible for the receivership estate. • A principal receiver may ordinarily (1) act outside the state of appointment, (2) sue in a foreign court, (3) exercise broad powers of assignment, and (4) handle all distributions. — Also termed primary receiver; general receiver; original receiver.

receiver in aid of execution. See judgment receiver.

statutory receiver. A receiver whose appointment is provided for in a statute.

2.Hist. An officer in the royal household who collected revenues and disbursed them in a lump sum to the treasurer, and who also acted as an attorney with the power to appear in any court in England. • The monarch and his or her consort each had a receiver, thus the full title was King's Receiver or Queen's Receiver.

RECEIVER GENERAL

receiver general. A public official in charge of a government's receipts and treasury. Pl. receivers general.

RECEIVER'S CERTIFICATE

receiver's certificate. Bankruptcy. An instrument issued by a receiver as evidence that the holder is entitled to receive payment from funds controlled by the bankruptcy court.

RECEIVERSHIP

receivership. 1. The state or condition of being in the control of a receiver. [Cases: Corporations 552, 621(.5); Receivers 1. C.J.S. Corporations § 756; Receivers §§ 1–3.] 2. The position or function of being a receiver appointed by a court or under a statute. 3. A proceeding in which a court appoints a receiver.

ancillary receivership. A receivership in which a further administrative proceeding is appointed in another state to help the principal receivership.

dry receivership. A receivership in which there is no equity available to pay general creditors. [Cases: Receivers 151, 163. C.J.S. Receivers §§ 299–301, 390–401.]

RECEIVERSHIP ESTATE

receivership estate. The totality of the interests that the receivers of an association in one or more states are appointed to protect.

RECEIVING

receiving, n. See RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY.

RECEIVING ORDER

receiving order. See ORDER(2).

RECEIVING STATE receiving state. See STATE.

RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY receiving stolen property. The criminal offense of acquiring or controlling property known to have been stolen by another person. • Some jurisdictions require the additional element of wrongful intent. In some jurisdictions it is a felony, but in others it is either a felony or a misdemeanor depending on the value of the property. See Model Penal Code §§ 223.1, 223.6. — Sometimes shortened to receiving. — Also termed receiving stolen goods. See FENCE(1). [Cases: Receiving Stolen Goods 1. C.J.S. Receiving or Transferring Stolen Goods and Related Offenses §§ 2, 10–12, 15–16.]

RECENS INSECUTIO

recens insecutio (ree-senz in-s<<schwa>>-kyoo-shee-oh). [Latin “fresh pursuit”] Hist. Pursuit of a thief immediately after discovery of the theft. See FRESH PURSUIT .

RECEPTATOR

receptator (ree-sep-tay-tor or -t<<schwa>>r). [Latin fr. receptare “to harbor (a criminal or the proceeds of crime)”] Scots law. 1. A harbinger of a felon. 2. A receiver of stolen property.

RECEPTION

reception. The adoption in whole or in part of the law of one jurisdiction by another jurisdiction. • In the legal idiom, it is most common to speak of the reception of Roman law.

“In many parts of Europe monarchs encouraged a ‘reception’ of Roman law at the expense of medieval customary systems. On the continent — in France, Holland, and Germany — the results of the reception of Roman law have tended to be permanent; the continental jurist in the twentieth century studies Roman law to grasp the jurisprudence underlying modern codes. And in the British Isles, the law of Scotland now contains so much borrowing from Roman law that there, too the road to legal practice leads through study of the corpus of Roman civil law compiled at Justinian's direction. But a reception of Roman law never occurred in England." Arthur R. Hogue, Origins of the Common Law 242 (1966).

receptitious (ree-sep-tish-*<<schwa>>*s), adj. Roman law. 1. (Of a dowry) returnable by agreement to the donor upon the dissolution of the marriage. 2. (Of property) retained by the wife and not included in the dowry.

RECEPTUS

receptus (ri-sep-t*<<schwa>>*s). [Latin "(a person) having been received"] Civil law. An arbitrator. • The term takes its name from the idea that the arbitrator is "received" by the parties to settle their dispute.

RECESS

recess (ree-ses), n.1. A brief break in judicial proceedings <the court granted a fifteen-minute recess so the attorney and plaintiff could confer>. Cf. CONTINUANCE(3). [Cases: Criminal Law 649; Trial 26.C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1155; Trial§ 113.] 2.Parliamentary law. A motion that suspends but does not end a meeting, and that usu. provides for resumption of the meeting <the meeting had a 15-minute recess>. • The motion to recess, which merely suspends the meeting, differs from the motion to adjourn, which ends the meeting. Cf. ADJOURN. [Cases: United States 18. C.J.S. United States §§ 29, 31.] 3.Parliamentary law. The interval between such a motion's adoption and the meeting's reconvening < Congress took a monthlong recess>. — recess (ri-ses), vb.

RECESSION

recession. A period characterized by a sharp slowdown in economic activity, declining employment, and a decrease in investment and consumer spending. Cf. DEPRESSION.

RECESSUS MARIS

recessus maris (ri-ses-*<<schwa>>s mair-<<schwa>>*s). [Latin] A going back or retreat of the sea. See RELICTION.

RECHARACTERIZATION

recharacterization. A court's determination that an insider's loan to an entity in liquidation (such as a corporation or partnership) should be treated as a capital contribution, not as a loan, thereby entitling the insider to only part of the liquidation proceeds payable after all the business's debts have been discharged. • Factors influencing this determination include the amount of capital initially available, the ability of the entity to obtain loans from outside sources, how long the entity has existed, the treatment of the loan in the entity's business records, and past treatment of similar transactions made to that entity by an insider.

Recht (rekt). [German "right"] 1. Law generally. 2. A body of law. 3. A right or claim.

RECHTSBESITZ

Rechtsbesitz (rekts-be-zits). See possession of a right under POSSESSION.

RECHTSPHILOSOPHIE

Rechtsphilosophie (rekts-f<<schwa>>-los-<<schwa>>-fee). See ethical jurisprudence under JURISPRUDENCE.

RECIDIVATE

recidivate (ri-sid-<<schwa>>-vayt), vb. To return to a habit of criminal behavior; to relapse into crime. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1202. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1643, 1650, 1652.]

recidivation. Archaic. See RECIDIVISM.

RECIDIVISM

recidivism (ri-sid-<<schwa>>-viz-<<schwa>>m), n. A tendency to relapse into a habit of criminal activity or behavior. — Also termed (archaically) recidivation. — recidivous, recidivist, adj.

RECIDIVIST

recidivist (ri-sid-<<schwa>>-vist), n. One who has been convicted of multiple criminal offenses, usu. similar in nature; a repeat offender <proponents of prison reform argue that prisons don't cure the recidivist>. — Also termed habitual offender; habitual criminal; repeater; career criminal. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1200. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1638–1639, 1641.]

RECIPROCAL

reciprocal (ri-sip-r<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>l), adj. 1. Directed by each toward the other or others; MUTUAL <reciprocal trusts>. 2. BILATERAL . 3. Corresponding; equivalent <reciprocal discovery>.

RECIPROCAL CONTRACT

reciprocal contract. See bilateral contract under CONTRACT.

RECIPROCAL DEALING

reciprocal dealing. A business arrangement in which a buyer having greater economic power than a seller agrees to buy something from the seller only if the seller buys something in return. • Reciprocal dealing usu. violates antitrust laws. — Also termed reciprocal-dealing arrangement. Cf. TYING ARRANGEMENT .

RECIPROCAL DISCOVERY

reciprocal discovery. See reverse Jencks material under JENCKS MATERIAL.

RECIPROCAL EXCHANGE

reciprocal exchange. An association whose members exchange contracts and pay premiums through an attorney-in-fact for the purpose of insuring themselves and each other. • A reciprocal exchange can consist of individuals, partnerships, trustees, or corporations, but the exchange itself is unincorporated. — Also termed interinsurance exchange; reciprocal insurance exchange; reciprocal interinsurance exchange. See reciprocal insurance under INSURANCE; EXCHANGE(5). [Cases: Insurance 1204. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1712, 1720.]

RECIPROCAL INSURANCE

reciprocal insurance. See INSURANCE.

RECIPROCAL INSURANCE EXCHANGE reciprocal insurance exchange. See RECIPROCAL EXCHANGE.

RECIPROCAL INTERINSURANCE EXCHANGE reciprocal interinsurance exchange. See RECIPROCAL EXCHANGE.

RECIPROCAL NEGATIVE EASEMENT reciprocal negative easement. See EASEMENT.

RECIPROCAL TRADE AGREEMENT

reciprocal trade agreement. An agreement between two countries providing for the exchange of goods between them at lower tariffs and better terms than exist between one of the countries and other countries.

RECIPROCAL TRUST

reciprocal trust. See TRUST.

RECIPROCAL WILL

reciprocal will. See mutual will under WILL.

RECIPROCITY

reciprocity (res-<<schwa>>-pros-i-tee). 1. Mutual or bilateral action <the Arthurs stopped receiving social invitations from friends because of their lack of reciprocity>. 2. The mutual concession of advantages or privileges for purposes of commercial or diplomatic relations <Texas and Louisiana grant reciprocity to each other's citizens in qualifying for in-state tuition rates>. — Also termed mutuality of benefits; quid pro quo; equivalence of advantages. [Cases: Colleges and Universities 9.20(2). C.J.S. Colleges and Universities § 32.] 3. Intellectual property. The recognition by one country of a foreign national's intellectual-property rights only if and only to the extent that the other nation would recognize those same rights for the first country's citizens. • Reciprocity is the most restrictive approach to international intellectual-property-law rights. Cf. NATIONAL TREATMENT ; UNIVERSALITY.

“It has become common when introducing new categories of rights for them to be granted on the basis of reciprocity. The advantages of reciprocity are twofold. First, reciprocity benefits rights owners by providing incentives for non-conforming countries to change their laws. Secondly, it saves users in one country (A) from paying royalties for foreign authors from countries that do not pay royalties to the authors of country A.” Lionel Bently & Brad Sherman, Intellectual Property Law 101 (2001).

recision. See RESCISSION.

RECISSION

recission. See RESCISSION.

RECITAL

recital. 1. An account or description of some fact or thing <the recital of the events leading up to the accident>.2. A preliminary statement in a contract or deed explaining the reasons for entering into it or the background of the transaction, or showing the existence of particular facts <the recitals in the settlement agreement should describe the underlying dispute>. • Traditionally, each recital begins with the word whereas. — Also termed (in sense 2) whereas clause. — recite, vb.

“The parties may wish to begin the agreement with a statement of their intentions. Often they do this through recitals, which were traditionally introduced by ‘whereas,’ but can simply state the background without this formality.” Scott J. Burnham, Contract Drafting Guidebook § 8.4, at 158 (2d ed. 1992).

introductory recital.(usu. pl.) A recital explaining how and why the existing state of affairs is to be altered.

narrative recital.(usu. pl.) A recital dealing with matters such as how the buyer and the seller came together.

particular recital.A recital that states a fact definitely.

RECITE

recite,vb. See READ ON.

RECKLESS

reckless,adj. Characterized by the creation of a substantial and unjustifiable risk of harm to others and by a conscious (and sometimes deliberate) disregard for or indifference to that risk; heedless; rash. • Reckless conduct is much more than mere negligence: it is a gross deviation from what a reasonable person would do. See RECKLESSNESS. Cf. CARELESS; WANTON. [Cases: Automobiles 330; Negligence 274. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 1354–1362; Negligence §§ 104–105, 109.] — recklessly,adv.

“Intention cannot exist without foresight, but foresight can exist without intention. For a man may foresee the possible or even probable consequences of his conduct and yet not desire them to occur; none the less if he persists on his course he knowingly runs the risk of bringing about the unwished result. To describe this state of mind the word ‘reckless’ is the most appropriate. The words ‘rash’ and ‘rashness’ have also been used to indicate this same attitude.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 28 (16th ed. 1952).

RECKLESS DISREGARD

reckless disregard.See DISREGARD.

RECKLESS DRIVING

reckless driving.The criminal offense of operating a motor vehicle in a manner that shows conscious indifference to the safety of others. [Cases: Automobiles 330. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 1354–1362.]

RECKLESS ENDANGERMENT

reckless endangerment.The criminal offense of putting another person at substantial risk of death or serious injury. • This is a statutory, not a common-law, offense. [Cases: Assault and Battery 48. C.J.S. Assault and Battery §§ 2–3, 62, 64–66, 81.]

RECKLESS HOMICIDE

reckless homicide.See HOMICIDE.

RECKLESS KNOWLEDGE

reckless knowledge.See KNOWLEDGE.

RECKLESS NEGLIGENCE

reckless negligence.See gross negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

RECKLESSNESS

recklessness,n.1. Conduct whereby the actor does not desire harmful consequence but nonetheless foresees the possibility and consciously takes the risk. • Recklessness involves a greater degree of fault than negligence but a lesser degree of fault than intentional wrongdoing. [Cases: Negligence 274. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 104–105, 109.] 2. The state of mind in which a person does not care about the consequences of his or her actions. — Also termed heedlessness. Cf. WANTONNESS. [Cases: Negligence 274. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 104–105, 109.]

“The ordinary meaning of the word [recklessness] is a high degree of carelessness. It is the doing of something which in fact involves a grave risk to others, whether the doer realises it or not. The test is therefore objective and not subjective.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts reclamation (rek-l<<schwa>>-may-sh<<schwa>>n), n.1. The act or an instance of improving the value of economically useless land by physically changing the land, such as irrigating a desert. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 222. C.J.S. Waters §§ 763–765.] 2. Commercial law. A seller’s limited right to retrieve goods delivered to a buyer when the buyer is insolvent. UCC § 2-702(2). [Cases: Sales 316. C.J.S. Sales §§ 325–326, 339–343.] 3. The act or an instance of obtaining valuable materials from waste materials. — reclaim, vb.

194 (17th ed. 1977).

“An abiding difficulty in discussing the legal meaning of recklessness is that the term has been given several different shades of meaning by the courts over the years. In the law of manslaughter, ‘reckless’ was long regarded as the most appropriate adjective to express the degree of negligence needed for a conviction: in this sense, it meant a high degree of carelessness. In the late 1950s the courts adopted a different meaning of recklessness in the context of mens rea, referring to D’s actual awareness of the risk of the prohibited consequence occurring: we shall call this ‘common-law recklessness.’ Controversy was introduced into this area in the early 1980s, when the House of Lords purported to broaden the meaning of recklessness so as to include those who failed to give thought to an obvious risk that the consequence would occur” Andrew Ashworth, Principles of Criminal Law 154 (1991).

RECLAMATION

RECLUSION

reclusion (ri-kloo-zh<<schwa>>n). Civil law. Incarceration as punishment for a crime; esp. solitary confinement or confinement at hard labor in a penitentiary.

RECOGNITION

recognition, n.1. Confirmation that an act done by another person was authorized. See RATIFICATION. [Cases: Principal and Agent 170(2). C.J.S. Agency § 88.] 2. The formal admission that a person, entity, or thing has a particular status; esp. a nation’s act in formally acknowledging the existence of another nation or national government. 3. Parliamentary law. The chair’s acknowledgment that a member is entitled to the floor <the chair recognizes the delegate from Minnesota>. See PRECEDENCE(4).

“When any member desires to speak or deliver any matter to the house, that person should rise and respectfully address the presiding officer. When the presiding officer recognizes the member by calling the member by name or by indicating recognition, that person is entitled to the floor and may address the body or present a matter of business, but may not yield the floor to any other member.” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason’s Manual of Legislative Procedure § 91, at 76–77 (2000).

4. Tax. The act or an instance of accounting for a taxpayer’s realized gain or loss for the purpose of income-tax reporting. Cf. NONRECOGNITION PROVISION; REALIZATION(2). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3115, 3178; Taxation 996. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 61, 110; Taxation §§ 1732–1733.] 5. An employer’s acknowledgment that a union has the right to act as a bargaining agent for employees. [Cases: Labor Relations 191. C.J.S. Labor Relations § 162.] 6.Int'l law. Official action by a country acknowledging, expressly or by implication, de jure or de facto, the existence of a government or a country, or a situation such as a change of territorial sovereignty. Cf. NONRECOGNITION. [Cases: International Law 4. C.J.S. International Law §§ 9–11.] 7.RULE OF RECOGNITION. — recognize,vb.

RECOGNITION CLAUSE

recognition clause.Real estate. A clause providing that, when a tract of land has been subdivided for development, the ultimate buyers of individual lots are protected if the developer defaults on the mortgage. • Such a clause is typically found in a blanket mortgage or a contract for deed.

RECOGNITION PICKETING recognition picketing.See organizational picketing under PICKETING.

RECOGNITION STRIKE

recognition strike.See STRIKE.

RECOGNITOR recognitor (ri-kog-n<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r), n.1.Hist. A member of a jury impaneled on an assize or inquest. See RECOGNITION(1), (2).2.Rare. RECOGNIZOR.

RECOGNIZANCE

recognizance (ri-kog-n<<schwa>>-z<<schwa>>nts).1. A bond or obligation, made in court, by which a person promises to perform some act or observe some condition, such as to appear when called, to pay a debt, or to keep the peace; specif., an in-court acknowledgment of an obligation in a penal sum, conditioned on the performance or nonperformance of a particular act. • Most commonly, a recognizance takes the form of a bail bond that guarantees an unjailed criminal defendant's return for a court date <the defendant was released on his own recognizance>. See RELEASE ON RECOGNIZANCE. [Cases: Bail 54, 63; Recognizances 1. C.J.S. Bail; Release and Detention Pending Proceedings §§ 93, 106–107, 109; Recognizances §§ 2–4, 8.]

“A recognizance is an acknowledgment of an obligation in court by the recognizer binding him to make a certain payment subject to the condition that on the performance of a specified act the obligation shall be discharged.” 1 Samuel Williston, A Treatise on the Law of Contracts § 6, at 18 (Walter H.E. Jaeger ed., 3d ed. 1957).

personal recognizance. The release of a defendant in a criminal case in which the court takes the defendant's word that he or she will appear for a scheduled matter or when told to appear. • This type of release dispenses with the necessity of the person's posting money or having a surety sign a bond with the court. [Cases: Bail 40. C.J.S. Bail; Release and Detention Pending Proceedings § 8.]

2. See bail bond under BOND(2).

RECOGNIZED GAIN

RECOMMIT

recommit.Parliamentary law. To refer (a motion) back to a committee that has considered it. • The motion is called “recommit” rather than “re-refer” for the sake of euphony. See REFER. Cf. re-refer under REFER. — recommit,n.

RECOMPENSABLE

recompensable. See COMPENSABLE.

RECOMPENSATION

recompensation.Scots law. In an action for debt, a plaintiff's allegation that money owed to a defendant has already been paid and should not be considered as a setoff against an award to the plaintiff.

RECOMPENSE

recompense (rek-<<schwa>>m-pents), n. Repayment, compensation, or retribution for something, esp. an injury or loss. — recompense,vb.

RECONCILIATION

reconciliation (rek-<<schwa>>n-sil-ee-ay-sh<<schwa>>n), n.1. Restoration of harmony between persons or things that had been in conflict .2.Family law. Voluntary resumption, after a separation, of full marital relations between spouses <the court dismissed the divorce petition after the parties' reconciliation>. Cf. CONDONATION (2). [Cases: Husband and Wife 279(3).] 3.Accounting. An adjustment of accounts so that they agree, esp. by allowing for outstanding items < reconciliation of the checking account and the bank statement>. — reconcile (rek-<<schwa>>n-sil), vb.

RECONCILIATION AGREEMENT

reconciliation agreement.Family law. A contract between spouses who have had marital difficulties but who now wish to save the marital relationship, usu. by specifying certain economic actions that might ameliorate pressures on the marriage. • This type of agreement serves a limited purpose. In fact, many states have statutes prohibiting enforcement of contracts for domestic services, so if the agreement governs anything other than economic behavior, it may be unenforceable.

RECONCILIATION STATEMENT reconciliation statement.An accounting or financial statement in which discrepancies are adjusted.

RECONDUCTION

reconduction,n.1.Civil law. The renewal of a lease. — Also termed relocation. See TACIT RELOCATION. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 90.C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 73.] 2.Int'l law. reconduct,vb.

RECONSIDER

reconsider,vb. To discuss or take up (a matter) again <legislators voted to reconsider the bill>.

- Under parliamentary law, a motion to reconsider sets aside a certain vote already taken and restores the motion on which the vote is being reconsidered to its status immediately before the vote occurred. Making a motion to reconsider suspends a vote already taken until the assembly decides whether to reconsider it. — reconsideration,n.

“The motion to reconsider is a distinctively American motion (it was first made the subject of a rule in the U. S. House of Representatives in 1802).

“This motion was unknown to the early British Parliament. When Parliament (the British Congress) passed an act, that act then stood as the judgment of the body until another law or supplementary act was afterward passed explaining or amending the previous act — a slow-moving and time-consuming process in the estimation of American lawmakers.“Consequently, the American love for celerity invented the motion to reconsider, and cleverly made it a mere procedural or restoratory motion. As a result, the motion to reconsider now makes possible immediate reconsideration of a question, even on the same day.” George Demeter, Demeter's Manual of Parliamentary Law and Procedure 154 (1969).reconsider and enter on the minutes.Parliamentary law. To make a motion to reconsider for the purpose of suspending a vote already taken and bringing it back up at the next meeting. — Also termed reconsider and enter; reconsider and have it entered on the minutes.

REDUCTION IMPROBATION

reduction improbation. See IMPROBATION.

REDUCTION IN FORCE

reduction in force. See LAYOFF.

REDUCTION TO PRACTICE

reduction to practice. Patents. The embodiment of the concept of an invention, either by physical construction and operation or by filing a patent application with a disclosure adequate to teach a person reasonably skilled in the art how to make and work the invention without undue experimentation. • The date of reduction to practice is critical in determining priority between inventors competing for a patent on the same invention. See INVENTION. [Cases: Patents 90(5). C.J.S. Patents § 123.]

actual reduction to practice. The empirical demonstration that an invention performs its intended purpose and is therefore complete for patent purposes; the use of an idea or invention — as by testing it — to establish that the idea or invention will perform its intended purpose. Brunswick Corp. v. U.S., 34 Fed. Cl. 532, 584 (1995).

constructive reduction to practice. The documented demonstration that an invention will perform its intended purpose, contained in a patent application that provides enough detail that a person skilled in the art could make and test the invention; the filing of a patent application for an invention or design. Brunswick Corp. v. U.S., 34 Fed. Cl. 532, 584 (1995). [Cases: Patents 90(5). C.J.S. Patents § 123.]

vicarious reduction to practice. A doctrine that treats one party's actual reduction to practice of an invention as the opposing (usu. complaining) party's actual reduction to practice. • In a two-party interference, proof of derivation is usu. sufficient; showing an actual reduction to practice is unnecessary. The doctrine is more important in a three-party interference. [Cases: Patents 90(5). C.J.S. Patents § 123.]

reenactment rule. In statutory construction, the principle that when reenacting a law, the legislature implicitly adopts well-settled judicial or administrative interpretations of the law. [Cases: Statutes 223.5. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 356–357.]

resumption of possession of leased premises upon the tenant's default under the lease. See POWER OF TERMINATION . [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 277. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 716, 718–719, 724, 726.] — reenter,vb.

reeve (reev).Hist. 1. A ministerial officer of high rank having local jurisdiction; the chief magistrate of a hundred. • The reeve executed process, kept the peace, and enforced the law by holding court within the hundred. 2. A minor officer serving the Crown at the hundred level; a bailiff or deputy-sheriff. 3. An overseer of a manor, parish, or the like. — Also spelled reve. — Also termed greve.

“All the freeholders, unless relieved by special exemption, ‘owed suit’ at the hundred-moot, and the reeve of the hundred presided over it. In Anglo-Saxon times, the reeve was an independent official, and the hundred-moot was not a preliminary stage to the shire-moot at all.... But after the Conquest the hundred assembly, now called a court as all the others were, lost its importance very quickly. Pleas of land were taken from it, and its criminal jurisdiction limited to one of holding suspects in temporary detention. The reeve of the hundred became the deputy of the sheriff, and the chief purpose of holding the hundred court was to enable the sheriff to hold his tourn and to permit a ‘view of frankpledge,’ i.e., an inspection of the person who ought to belong to the frankpledge system.” Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 174–75 (1936).

borough reeve.Hist. In England, the head of an unincorporated municipality.

shire-reeve. The reeve of a shire. • The shire-reeve was a forerunner of the sheriff. — Also spelled shire-reve. — Also termed shire-gerefa.

REEXAMINATION

reexamination,n.1.REDIRECT EXAMINATION <the attorney focused on the defendant's alibi during reexamination>.2.Patents. A proceeding by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to determine whether prior art renders one or more claims of an already-issued patent invalid; specif., an administrative procedure by which a party can seek review of a patent on the basis of prior art by the PTO <the alleged infringer, hoping to avoid liability, sought reexamination of the patent to narrow its scope>. • A reexamination may be sought by anyone, even the patentee or an anonymous informant, at any time during the life of a patent. Only patents and publications may be considered as prior art. 35 USCA §§ 301–305. [Cases: Patents 134, 140.C.J.S. Patents §§ 237–238, 251.] — reexamine,vb.

ex parte reexamination.A reexamination procedure, created in the early 1980s, that allows a challenger to initiate a review by producing prior art and responding to a patentee's statements regarding the new prior art, but that excludes the challenger from further participation in the examination process. • Ex parte reexamination does not employ discovery mechanisms, and witnesses are not examined. The challenger also has no right to participate in an appeal. See 35 USCA §§ 302–307. Cf. inter partes reexamination.

inter partes reexamination.A reexamination procedure, created in 1999, that allows a challenger to initiate a review by producing prior art, to respond to a patentee's statements regarding the new prior art, to address the patentee's responses to any office actions, and to request a hearing. • Both parties must serve each other with documents filed in the proceeding, but there is no discovery and witnesses are not examined. Either party may appeal the PTO's final decision on patentability. Inter partes reexamination is available to patents that issue from original applications that were filed on or after November 29, 1999. See 35 USCA §§ 311–318. Cf. ex parte reexamination. [Cases: Patents 140. C.J.S. Patents § 251.]

REEXAMINATION CERTIFICATE

reexamination certificate. Patents. A certificate issued by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office at the conclusion of a reexamination proceeding, confirming that a patent has been reexamined and the claims have been found to be patentable, confirming that claims determined to be unpatentable have been canceled, or incorporating into the patent any amended or new claims determined to be patentable.

An ambassador's request for instructions on subject matter that the ambassador does not have sufficient power to address. Pl. referendums, referenda. Cf. INITIATIVE.

referral. The act or an instance of sending or directing to another for information, service, consideration, or decision <referral of the client to an employment-law specialist> <referral of the question to the board of directors>.

REFERRAL SALES CONTRACT

referral sales contract. A dual agreement consisting of an agreement by the consumer to purchase goods or services (usu. at an inflated price) and an agreement by the seller to compensate the consumer for each customer (or potential customer) referred to the seller. — Also termed referral sales agreement. Cf. PYRAMID SCHEME. [Cases: Consumer Protection 12. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 56–58.]

“The problem inherent in a referral sales contract is the problem inherent in a chain letter — the success of the arrangement depends on an inexhaustible supply of customers. For example, if each buyer submits 25 names and each of these ‘referrals’ becomes a buyer under a similar agreement, the completion of the seventh round of referrals requires 6.1 trillion persons.... Both courts and legislatures have acted against referral sales.... The Uniform Consumer Credit Code prohibits the use of referral sales schemes in which the rebate is conditioned on ‘the occurrence of an event after the time the consumer agrees to buy or lease.’ In other words, a referral scheme keyed to the consumer merely furnishing names is not affected; a referral scheme keyed to the consumer furnishing names of people who actually become customers is prohibited.” David G. Epstein & Steve H. Nickles, Consumer Law in a Nutshell 39 (2d ed. 1981).

refinancing, n. An exchange of an old debt for a new debt, as by negotiating a different interest rate or term or by repaying the existing loan with money acquired from a new loan. — refinance, vb.

REFORMATION

reformation (ref-<<schwa>>r-may-sh<<schwa>>n), n. An equitable remedy by which a court will modify a written agreement to reflect the actual intent of the parties, usu. to correct fraud or mutual mistake in the writing, such as an incomplete property description in a deed. • In cases of mutual mistake, the actual intended agreement must usu. be established by clear and convincing evidence. In cases of fraud, there must be clear evidence of what the agreement would have been but for the fraud. See RECTIFICATION. [Cases: Reformation of Instruments 1. C.J.S. Reformation of Instruments §§ 2–5, 12, 16.] — reform, vb.

“The standard explanation of reformation is that the parties had an actual agreement, and that the writing does not reflect that agreement.... If the parties made a mistake about the premises of their agreement, about some fact in the world outside their word-processing machines, reformation is not a solution. The court cannot reform the contract because it cannot know what the parties would have agreed to but for the mistake.” Douglas Laycock, Modern American Remedies 39 (3d ed. 2002).

REFORMATION CONDITION

reformation condition. See conditional bequest under BEQUEST.

REFORMATIVE PUNISHMENT

REGIAM MAJESTATEM

Regiam Majestatem (ree-jee-<<schwa>>m maj-<<schwa>>-stay-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin “the (books of the) Royal Majesty”] Scots law. An ancient collection of Scottish laws, so called from its opening words. • The four-book collection is generally believed to be genuine, although its origins are widely disputed. It was partly copied from Glanville's treatise De Legibus et Consuetudinibus Angliae, as appears from the works' similarities and the fact that the Glanville treatise opens with the words Regiam potestatem. It was at one time believed to have been compiled by David I, but this supposition is unfounded. Still others believed that Edward I was responsible for the compilation as part of his efforts to take over Scotland and assimilate the laws of that country and England, but modern scholars reject this view. It was probably compiled by an unknown cleric shortly before 1320.

criminal registration. The requirement in some communities that any felon who spends any time in the community must register his or her name with the police. • Since the late 1980s, many states have adopted strict registration laws for convicted sex offenders. See MEGAN'S LAW. [Cases: Criminal Law 1222.1.]

special registration. Voter registration for a particular election only.

2. Securities. The complete process of preparing to sell a newly issued security to the public <the security is currently in registration>. [Cases: Securities Regulation 11.10–11.50. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 8, 35–49, 63, 69–72.] — register, vb.

shelf registration. Registration with the SEC of securities to be sold over time, the purpose being to avoid the delays and market uncertainties of individual registration.

“It is generally contemplated that the entire allotment of securities covered by a registered offering will be made available for purchase on the effective date. This is not always the case, however. For example, insiders, promoters or underwriters might receive securities directly from the issuer with an intent to resell at a later date.... [I]t may be desirable to get a debt offering all ready to go but wait for a propitious moment to release it. These and other delayed offerings have led to what is known as shelf registration. In a shelf registration the registration statement is filed but the securities are put on the shelf until the manner and date of the offering are determined.” Thomas Lee Hazen, The Law of Securities Regulation § 3.8, at 119 (2d ed. 1994).

RE INFECTA

re infecta (ree in-fek-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. The thing not having been done; the performance having failed.

REINSCRIPTION

reinscription, n. Civil law. A second or renewed recordation of a mortgage or other title document. [Cases: Mortgages 96.] — reinscribe, vb.

REINSTATE

reinstate, vb. To place again in a former state or position; to restore <the judge reinstated the judgment that had been vacated>. — reinstatement, n.

REINSURANCE

reinsurance. Insurance of all or part of one insurer's risk by a second insurer, who accepts the risk in exchange for a percentage of the original premium. — Also termed reinsurance. [Cases: Insurance 3593.]

“The laying off of risk by means of reinsurance traditionally serves three basic purposes. First, reinsurance can increase the capacity of the insurer to accept risk. The insurer may be enabled to take on larger individual risks, or a large number of smaller risks, or a combination of both.... Secondly, reinsurance can promote financial stability by ameliorating the adverse consequences of an unexpected accumulation of losses or of single catastrophic losses, because these will, at least in part, be absorbed by reinsurers. Thirdly, reinsurance can strengthen the solvency of an insurer from the point of view of any regulations under which the insurer must operate which provide for a minimum ‘solvency margin,’ generally expressed as a ratio of net premium income over capital and free reserves.” P.T. O’Neill & J.W. Woloniecki, The Law of Reinsurance in England and Bermuda 4 (1998).

excess reinsurance. Reinsurance in which a reinsurer assumes liability only for an amount of insurance that exceeds a specified sum. See excess insurance under INSURANCE.

facultative reinsurance.Reinsurance of an individual risk at the option (the "faculty") of the reinsurer. [Cases: Insurance 3593.]

flat reinsurance.Reinsurance (esp. of marine insurance) that cannot be canceled or modified.

treaty reinsurance.Reinsurance under a broad agreement of all risks in a given class as soon as they are insured by the direct insurer. [Cases: Insurance 3593.]

REINSURANCE TREATY

reinsurance treaty.A contract of reinsurance (usu. long-term) covering different classes or lines of business of the reinsured (such as professional liability, property, etc.) and obligating the reinsurer in advance to accept the cession of covered risks. • Rather than receive individual notice of each specific claim covered, the treaty reinsurer will generally receive periodic reports providing basic information on the losses paid. — Also termed treaty of reinsurance. See BORDEREAU. Cf. FACULTATIVE CERTIFICATE. [Cases: Insurance 3593.]

reinsured,n. An insurer that transfers all or part of a risk it underwrites to a reinsurer, usu. along with a percentage of the original premium. — Also termed cedent; cedant. [Cases: Insurance 3593.]

REINSURER

reinsurer. An insurer that assumes all or part of a risk underwritten by another insurer, usu. in exchange for a percentage of the original premium. [Cases: Insurance 3593.]

REJECT, ASSUME OR reject, assume or. See ASSUME OR REJECT.

REJECTING rejecting,n. A parent's or caregiver's pattern of refusing to acknowledge a child's worth or legitimate needs. Cf. ISOLATING; IGNORING.

REJECTION

rejection. 1. A refusal to accept a contractual offer. [Cases: Contracts 21.] 2. A refusal to accept tendered goods as contractual performance. • Under the UCC, a buyer's rejection of nonconforming goods must be made within a reasonable time after tender or delivery, and notice of the rejection must be given to the seller. UCC § 2-602. [Cases: Sales 168(4), 179(6).C.J.S. Sales §§ 192, 194–198.] Cf. REPUDIATION(2); RESCISSION; REVOCATION(1).3.Parliamentary law. Failure of adoption or ratification. See LOST(3).4.Patents. A patent examiner's finding in an office action that a claim in an application is unpatentable. Cf. OBJECTION(4); RESTRICTION(4). [Cases: Patents 108. C.J.S. Patents §§ 144, 148–151.] — reject,vb.

aggregation rejection.Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it is a list of unrelated elements that, taken together, do not assert a claim. [Cases: Patents 25. C.J.S. Patents § 86.]

alternativeness rejection.Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it seeks a broad monopoly on the invention as disclosed and on other unspecified variations. • For example, a claim using a phrase such as “and similar materials” would probably be too broad to be allowed. [Cases: Patents 124. C.J.S. Patents § 210.]

duplicate-claiming rejection.The nonart rejection of a patent claim because it is not substantially different from another claim.

exhausted-combination rejection. See old-combination rejection.

failure-to-disclose-best-mode rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the inventor has not disclosed the best way to use the invention. • To warrant rejection, the examiner must find deliberate concealment or a description so poorly drafted as to amount to concealment. [Cases: Patents 98. C.J.S. Patents §§ 137–139.]

final rejection. A patent examiner's finding, in a second or subsequent office action, that a claim in an application is unpatentable on the merits. • A final rejection is made in the final office action. Despite the misleading name, a final rejection need not end the prosecution. The rejection can be appealed, or the application can be reexamined or continued in another application. A rejection may also be appealed to the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences. A decision of that Board may be reviewed by the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia or appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. 35 USCA §§ 141–145. [Cases: Patents 108. C.J.S. Patents §§ 144, 148–151.]

formal rejection. Rejection of a patent claim because of an error in format rather than substance. • A formal rejection is actually an objection rather than a rejection, since it requires no substantive change in the claim. — Also termed nonart rejection. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.]

functional rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the grounds that it broadly claims a function but does not disclose enough structure to account for achieving that function. See FUNCTIONAL LIMITATION. [Cases: Patents 101(8).]

inaccuracy rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it is not consistent with the description.

incompleteness rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that an element of the device or a step in the process has been left out.

interference-estoppel rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that the applicant failed to bring the claim into a previous interference contest in which its priority could have been determined. [Cases: Patents 112.4.]

judicially created double-patenting rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the invention is an obvious variation of another patented invention by the same inventor. — Also termed obviousness-type double-patenting rejection. [Cases: Patents 120.]

lack-of-antecedent-basis rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that a reference either in the specification or in the claim is missing.

lack-of-enablement rejection. See nonenablement rejection.

lack-of-utility rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that the invention is inoperative, frivolous, fraudulent, or against the public interest. • The classic examples are perpetual-motion machines (inoperative), cures for the common cold (frivolous because believed impossible, and also probably fraudulent), and gambling devices (formerly seen as against the public interest). [Cases: Patents 46. C.J.S. Patents § 59.]

new-matter rejection.Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that an amendment contains new matter. [Cases: Patents 109. C.J.S. Patents §§ 152–155.]

nonart rejection.See formal rejection.

nonenablement rejection.Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that its specification does not teach enough to enable a person skilled in the art to make and use the invention. — Also termed lack-of-enablement rejection. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

obviousness-type double-patenting rejection.See judicially created double-patenting rejection.

old-combination rejection.Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that, despite the fact that one or more elements perform in a different way, all the elements perform the same function as a previously patented invention. • The improved element may be patentable, but the combination may not be. — Also termed exhausted-combination rejection. [Cases: Patents 26(1.1).]

prolixity rejection.Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the language is so wordy and tedious that it tends more to hide than to disclose the invention.

rejection on issues of interference.Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that the applicant has lost a final judgment of priority regarding the claim in an interference contest. [Cases: Patents 112.4.]

same-invention double-patenting rejection.See statutory double-patenting rejection.

Section 101 rejection.Rejection of a patent application on the ground that it is based on nonstatutory subject matter. 35 USCA § 101.

Section 102 rejection.Rejection of a patent application for lack of novelty. 35 USCA § 102. [Cases: Patents 37. C.J.S. Patents §§ 29–30.]

Section 103 rejection.Rejection of a patent application for obviousness. 35 USCA § 103. [Cases: Patents 16.1. C.J.S. Patents § 64.]

Section 112 rejection.See vague-and-indefinite rejection.

shotgun rejection.Slang. Denial of all or almost all claims in a patent application by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, esp. in the first office action.

statutory double-patenting rejection.Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the invention is the same subject matter as an already-patented invention by the same inventor. • This rejection is based on 35 USCA § 101. — Also termed same-invention double-patenting rejection. [Cases: Patents 120.]

undue-breadth rejection.Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it seeks a patent monopoly on more than the invention. • For instance, a functional claim is too broad if it purports to include every other possible way of accomplishing a function. A claim on a chemical is more likely to be rejected for undue breadth than a claim on a machine, because future discoveries are less predictable. [Cases: Patents 124. C.J.S. Patents § 210.]

undue-multiplicity-of-claims rejection.Rejection of a patent application on the ground that it makes an unreasonable number of claims. See AGGREGATION OF CLAIMS.

vague-and-indefinite rejection.Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that a person of ordinary skill in the art could not clearly understand it. • For example, terms used in more than one sense could make the meaning unclear. — Also termed Section 112 rejection. [Cases: Patents 101(6).]

REJOINDER

rejoinder,n. Common-law pleading. The defendant's answer to the plaintiff's reply (or replication). [Cases: Pleading 183. C.J.S. Pleading § 229.] — rejoin,vb.

RELATED GOOD

related good.Trademarks. A good that infringes a trademark because it appears to come from the same source as the marked good, despite not competing with the marked good. • For example, a cutting tool named “McKnife” might infringe the “McDonald's” trademark as a related good.

RELATED PROCEEDING

related proceeding.Bankruptcy. A proceeding that involves a claim that will affect the administration of the debtor's estate (such as a tort action between the debtor and a third party), but that does not arise under bankruptcy law and could be adjudicated in a state court. • A related proceeding must be adjudicated in federal district court unless the parties consent to bankruptcy-court jurisdiction or unless the district court refers the matter to the bankruptcy court or to state court. — Also termed noncore proceeding. Cf. CORE PROCEEDING(1). [Cases: Bankruptcy 2043–2063.C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 5, 9–12, 14–15, 17–18, 22.]

related right.See NEIGHBORING RIGHT.

RELATION

RELATION BACK

relation back,n.1. The doctrine that an act done at a later time is, under certain circumstances, treated as though it occurred at an earlier time. • In federal civil procedure, an amended pleading may relate back, for purposes of the statute of limitations, to the time when the original pleading was filed. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c). [Cases: Limitation of Actions 127.C.J.S. Limitations of Actions § 235.] 2. A judicial application of that doctrine. — Also termed doctrine of relation back. Cf. NUNC PRO TUNC. — relate back,vb.

RELATIONSHIP

relationship. The nature of the association between two or more people; esp., a legally recognized association that makes a difference in the participants' legal rights and duties of care.

attorney–client relationship. The formal legal representation of a person by a lawyer. • An attorney–client relationship may be found, for disciplinary purposes, without any formal agreement.

confidential relationship. 1. See fiduciary relationship. 2. Trade secrets. A relationship in which one person has a duty to the other not to disclose proprietary information. • A confidential relationship can be expressly established, as by the terms of an employment contract. It can also be implied when one person knows or should know that the information is confidential, and the other person reasonably believes that the first person has consented to keep the information confidential. A confidential relationship might be implied, for instance, between two people negotiating the sale of a business.

doctor–patient relationship. The association between a medical provider and one who is being diagnosed or treated. • The relationship imposes a duty on the doctor to ensure that the patient gives informed consent for treatment.

employer–employee relationship. The association between a person employed to perform services in the affairs of another, who in turn has the right to control the person's physical conduct in the course of that service. • At common law, the relationship was termed “master-servant.” That term is still used often, but “employer–employee” dominates in modern legal usage.

fiducial relationship. See trust relationship.

fiduciary relationship. A relationship in which one person is under a duty to act for the benefit of another on matters within the scope of the relationship. • Fiduciary relationships — such as trustee–beneficiary, guardian–ward, principal–agent, and attorney–client — require an unusually high degree of care. Fiduciary relationships usu. arise in one of four situations: (1) when one person places trust in the faithful integrity of another, who as a result gains superiority or influence over the first, (2) when one person assumes control and responsibility over another, (3) when one person has a duty to act for or give advice to another on matters falling within the scope of the relationship, or (4) when there is a specific relationship that has traditionally been recognized as involving fiduciary duties, as with a lawyer and a client or a stockbroker and a customer. — Also termed fiduciary relation; confidential relationship. Cf. special relationship master–servant relationship. The association between one in authority and a subordinate, esp. between an employer and an employee. • At common law, this term also designated the husband–wife relationship for purposes of analyzing loss of consortium, but that usage is now obsolete. — Also termed employer–employee relationship. See MASTER AND SERVANT.

parent–child relationship. The association between an adult and a minor in the adult's care, esp. an offspring or an adoptee. • The relationship imposes a high duty of care on the adult, including the duties to support, to rescue, to supervise and control, and to educate.

professional relationship. An association that involves one person's reliance on the other person's specialized training. • Examples include one's relationship with a lawyer, doctor, insurer, banker, and the like.

special relationship. A nonfiduciary relationship having an element of trust, arising esp. when one person trusts another to exercise a reasonable degree of care and the other knows or ought to know about the reliance. Cf. fiduciary relationship. [Cases: Master and Servant 30(1.15); Torts 12. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship § 60; Torts §§ 54, 59–65.]

trust relationship. An association based on one person's reliance on the other person's specialized training. — Also termed fiducial relationship.

RELATIONSHIP RAPE

relationship rape. See RAPE.

RELATIVE

relative, n. A person connected with another by blood or affinity; a person who is kin with another. — Also termed relation; kinsman. Cf. NEXT OF KIN(1).

blood relative. One who shares an ancestor with another.

collateral relative. A relative who is not in the direct line of descent, such as a cousin. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 32–41. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 29, 38–49.]

relative by affinity. A person who is related not by marriage or by blood or by adoption, but solely as the result of a marriage. • A person is a relative by affinity (1) to any blood or adopted relative of his or her spouse, and (2) to any spouse of his or her blood and adopted relatives. Based on the theory that marriage makes two people one, the relatives of each spouse become the other spouse's relatives by affinity. See AFFINITY.

relative of the half blood. A collateral relative who shares one common ancestor. • A half brother, for example, is a relative of the half blood. See half blood under BLOOD.

RELATIVE CONFESSION

relative confession. See CONFESSION.

RELATIVE-CONVENIENCE DOCTRINE relative-convenience doctrine. The principle that an injunction or other equitable relief may be denied if granting it would cause one party great inconvenience but denying it would cause the other party little or no inconvenience. [Cases: Injunction 23. C.J.S. Injunctions § 35.]

RELATIVE FACT

relative fact. See FACT.

RELATIVE NULLITY

relative nullity. See NULLITY.

RELATIVE POWER

relative power. See POWER(5).

RELATIVE-RESPONSIBILITY STATUTE

relative-responsibility statute. A law requiring adult children to support or provide basic necessities for their indigent elderly parents.

RELATIVE RIGHT

relative right. See RIGHT.

RELATIVE SIMULATED CONTRACT

relative simulated contract. See CONTRACT.

RELATOR

relator. 1. The real party in interest in whose name a state or an attorney general brings a lawsuit. See EX REL. [Cases: Attorney General 9.C.J.S. Attorney General §§ 11, 15.] 2. The applicant for a writ, esp. a writ of mandamus, prohibition, or quo warranto. [Cases: Mandamus 144; Prohibition 19; Quo Warranto 30. C.J.S. Mandamus §§ 278, 280, 287–288; Prohibition §§ 10, 33; Quo Warranto § 57.] 3. A person who furnishes information on which a civil or criminal case is based; an informer.

RELATRIX

relatrix (ri-lay-triks). Archaic. A female relator.

RELAXATIO

relaxatio (ree-lak-say-shee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. An instrument by which one relinquishes a right or claim to another; a release.

RELEASE

release, n. 1. Liberation from an obligation, duty, or demand; the act of giving up a right or claim to the person against whom it could have been enforced <the employee asked for a release from the noncompete agreement>. — Also termed discharge; surrender. 2. The relinquishment or concession of a right, title, or claim <Benson's effective release of the claim against Thompson's estate precluded his filing a lawsuit>. [Cases: Release 1.C.J.S. Release §§ 2–3, 5–8, 19.] 3. A written discharge, acquittance, or receipt; specif., a writing — either under seal or supported by sufficient consideration — stating that one or more of the worker's contractual or compensatory rights are discharged <Jones signed the release before accepting the cash from Hawkins>. • Beneficiaries of an estate are routinely required to sign a release discharging the estate from further liability before the executor or administrator distributes the property. 4. A written authorization or permission for publication <the newspaper obtained a release from the witness before printing his picture on the front page>. 5. The act of conveying an estate or right to another, or of legally disposing of it <the release of the easement on February 14>. 6. A deed or document effecting a conveyance <the legal description in the release was defective>. See deed of release under DEED. [Cases: Deeds 23.] 7. The action of freeing or the fact of being freed from restraint or confinement <he became a model citizen after his release from prison>. 8. A document giving formal discharge from custody <after the sheriff signed the release, the prisoner was free to go>. — release, vb.

conditional release. 1. A discharge from an obligation based on some condition, the failure of which defeats the release. 2. An early discharge of a prison inmate, who is then subject to the rules and regulations of parole. [Cases: Prisons 15(6). C.J.S. Prisons and Rights of Prisoners § 154.]

mutual release. A simultaneous exchange of releases of legal claims held by two or more parties against each other.

partial release. A release of a portion of a creditor's claims against property; esp., a mortgagee's release of specified parcels covered by a blanket mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages 310. C.J.S. Mortgages § 488.]

study release. A program that allows a prisoner to be released for a few hours at a time to attend classes at a nearby college or technical institution. — Also termed study furlough.

unconditional release. The final discharge of a prison inmate from custody.

RELEASE CLAUSE

release clause. Real estate. 1. A blanket-mortgage provision that enables the mortgagor to obtain a release from the mortgage of a specific portion of the property upon paying a specific (usu. more than pro rata) portion of the loan. • Mortgagees commonly include a clause that disallows a partial release if the mortgagor is in default on any part of the mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages 310. C.J.S. Mortgages § 488.] 2. A purchase-agreement provision that allows a seller who has accepted an offer containing a contingency to continue to market the property and accept other offers. • If the seller accepts another buyer's offer, the original buyer typically has a specified time (such as 72 hours) to waive the contingency (such as the sale of the buyer's present house) or to release the seller from the agreement. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 79. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 125, 141.]

RELEASE DEED

release deed. See DEED.

RELEASEE

releasee. 1. One who is released, either physically or by contractual discharge. [Cases: Release 26. C.J.S. Release § 49.] 2. One to whom an estate is released.

RELEASE OF MORTGAGE

release of mortgage. A written document that discharges a mortgage upon full payment by the borrower and that is publicly recorded to show that the borrower has full equity in the property. [Cases: Mortgages 309, 314. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 451, 465–466, 477–479, 488.]

RELEASE ON RECOGNIZANCE release on recognizance. The pretrial release of an arrested person who promises, usu. in writing but without supplying a surety or posting bond, to appear for trial at a later date. — Abbr. ROR. — Also termed release on own recognizance. See RECOGNIZANCE. [Cases: Bail 40. C.J.S. Bail; Release and Detention Pending Proceedings § 8.]

releaser. See RELEASOR.

RELEASE TO USES

release to uses. Conveyance of property, by deed of release, by one party to another for the benefit of the grantor or a third party. See deed of release under DEED; STATUTE OF USES; USE(4). [Cases: Deeds 23.]

RELEASOR

releasor. One who releases property or a claim to another. — Also spelled releaser. [Cases: Release 1. C.J.S. Release §§ 2–3, 5–8, 19.]

relegatio (rel-<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh), n. [fr. Latin relegare “to send away”] Roman law. Temporary or permanent banishment of a condemned criminal from Rome and the criminal's native province, without loss of citizenship or forfeiture of all the criminal's property. Cf. DEPORTATIO.

“Relegatio. The expulsion of a citizen ordered either by an administrative act of a magistrate or by judgment in a criminal trial. In the latter case the relegatio was sometimes combined with additional punishments, such as confiscation of the whole or of a part of the property of the condemned person, loss of Roman citizenship, confinement in a certain place. A milder form of relegatio was the exclusion of the wrongdoer from residence in a specified territory. Illicit return was punished with the death penalty.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 673 (1953).

relegation, n. 1. Banishment or exile, esp. a temporary one. 2. Assignment or delegation. — relegate, vb.

RELEVANCE

relevance. The fact, quality, or state of being relevant; relation or pertinence to the issue at hand. — Also termed relevancy. [Cases: Criminal Law 338; Evidence 99. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 710, 730; Evidence §§ 2–5, 197–199, 204, 206.]

relevancy. See RELEVANCE.

RELEVANT

relevant,adj. Logically connected and tending to prove or disprove a matter in issue; having appreciable probative value — that is, rationally tending to persuade people of the probability or possibility of some alleged fact. Cf. MATERIAL(2), (3). [Cases: Criminal Law 338; Evidence 99.C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 710, 730; Evidence§§ 2–5, 197–199, 204, 206.]

“The word ‘relevant’ means that any two facts to which it is applied are so related to each other that according to the common course of events one either taken by itself or in connection with other facts proves or renders probable the past, present, or future existence or non-existence of the other.” James Fitzjames Stephen, A Digest of the Law of Evidence 2 (4th ed. 1881).

RELEVANT ART

relevant art. See ART.

RELEVANT EVIDENCE

relevant evidence.See EVIDENCE.

RELEVANT MARKET relevant market.See MARKET.

RELIANCE

reliance,n. Dependence or trust by a person, esp. when combined with action based on that dependence or trust. — rely,vb.

detrimental reliance.Reliance by one party on the acts or representations of another, causing a worsening of the first party's position. • Detrimental reliance may serve as a substitute for consideration and thus make a promise enforceable as a contract. See promissory estoppel under ESTOPPEL. [Cases: Estoppel 55, 85, 87. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 85–86, 90, 92–93.]

RELIANCE DAMAGES

reliance damages.See DAMAGES.

RELIANCE INTEREST

reliance interest.See INTEREST(2).

RELIANCE-LOSS DAMAGES

reliance-loss damages.See DAMAGES.

RELIANCE MATERIALS

reliance materials.See EXPERT-RELIANCE MATERIALS.

RELICT

relict (rel-ikt).Archaic. 1. A widow. 2. A surviving spouse.

RELICTA VERIFICATIONE relicta verificatione (ri-lik-t<<schwa>> ver-<<schwa>>-fi-kay-shee-oh-nee). [Latin “his pleading being abandoned”] Hist. A confession of judgment accompanied by a withdrawal of the plea. See COGNOVIT ACTIONEM.

relicion (ri-lik-sh<<schwa>>n).1. A process by which a river or stream shifts its location, causing the recession of water from its bank. [Cases: Navigable Waters 44; Waters and Water Courses 93. C.J.S. Navigable Waters § 94; Waters §§ 177–182, 184–185.] 2. The alteration of a boundary line because of the gradual removal of land by a river or stream. See ACCRETION; DERELICTION(2). [Cases: Navigable Waters 44; Waters and Water Courses 93. C.J.S. Navigable Waters § 94; Waters §§ 177–182, 184–185.]

relief. 1. A payment made by an heir of a feudal tenant to the feudal lord for the privilege of succeeding to the ancestor's tenancy.

“A mesne lord could, upon the death of his tenant, accept the tenant's heir as tenant; but he was not required to do so. When he did accept his deceased tenant's heir as tenant, it was typically because the heir had paid the mesne lord a substantial sum (known as a relief) for the re-grant of the tenancy.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 8 (2d ed. 1984).

2. Aid or assistance given to those in need, esp., financial aid provided by the state. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 4. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 6, 10, 17.] 3. The redress or benefit, esp. equitable in nature (such as an injunction or specific performance), that a party asks of a court. — Also termed remedy. Cf. REMEDY.

affirmative relief.The relief sought by a defendant by raising a counterclaim or cross-claim that could have been maintained independently of the plaintiff's action.

alternative relief.Judicial relief that is mutually exclusive with another form of judicial relief. • In pleading, a party may request alternative relief, as by asking for both specific performance and damages that would be averted by specific performance. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a). Cf. ELECTION OF REMEDIES. [Cases: Specific Performance 127. C.J.S. Specific Performance §§ 194–196, 198–199.]

coercive relief.Judicial relief, either legal or equitable, in the form of a personal command to the defendant that is enforceable by physical restraint.

interim relief.Relief that is granted on a preliminary basis before an order finally disposing of a request for relief.

therapeutic relief.The relief, esp. in a settlement, that requires the defendant to take remedial measures as opposed to paying damages. • An example is a defendant-corporation (in an employment-discrimination suit) that agrees to undergo sensitivity training. — Often shortened to therapeutics.

religion. A system of faith and worship usu. involving belief in a supreme being and usu. containing a moral or ethical code; esp., such a system recognized and practiced by a particular church, sect, or denomination. • In construing the protections under the Establishment Clause and the Free Exercise Clause, courts have interpreted the term religion quite broadly to include a wide variety of theistic and nontheistic beliefs. [Cases: Religious Societies 1. C.J.S. Religious Societies §§ 2–5, 7–13.]

state religion. A religion promoted, taught, or enforced by a government's acts to the exclusion of other religions.

RELIGION, FREEDOM OF religion, freedom of. See FREEDOM OF RELIGION.

RELIGION CLAUSE

Religion Clause. In the Bill of Rights, the provision stating that “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.” U.S. Const. amend. I. • Some writers use the plural form, “Religion Clauses,” to mean both the Establishment Clause and the Free Exercise Clause, thus emphasizing the asserted common purpose of the two provisions. [Cases: Constitutional Law 84. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 513–517.]

RELIGIOUS CORPORATION religious corporation. See CORPORATION.

RELIGIOUS-EXEMPTION STATUTE religious-exemption statute. See FAITH-HEALING EXEMPTION.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY

religious liberty. See LIBERTY.

RELIGIOUS TEST CLAUSE

Religious Test Clause. The clause of the U.S. Constitution that prohibits the use of a religious test as a qualification to serve in any office or public trust. U.S. Const. art. VI, par. 3, cl. 2. — Also termed No Religious Test Clause.

RELINQUISHMENT

relinquishment, n. The abandonment of a right or thing. — relinquish, vb.

RELIQUA

reliqua (rel-<<schwa>>-kw*<<schwa>>*). [Latin] Civil law. The remainder of a debt after balancing or liquidating an account; money left unpaid.

RELITIGATE

— relitigation,n.

RELOCATIO

relocatio (ree-loh-kay-shee-oh). [Latin] Civil law. The renewal of a lease; RECONDUCTION(1).

RELOCATION

relocation. 1. Removal and establishment of someone or something in a new place. 2.Mining law. Appropriation of a new tract of land for a mining claim, as by an owner who wishes to change the boundaries of the original tract or by a stranger who wishes to claim an abandoned or forfeited tract. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 26. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 101–107.] 3.Civil law.
RECONDUCTION(1).

REM

rem. See IN REM.

“Whether a remainder is vested or contingent depends upon the language employed. If the conditional element is incorporated into the description of, or the gift to the remainder-man, then the remainder is contingent; but if, after words giving a vested interest, a clause is added divesting it, the remainder is vested. Thus, on a devise to A. for life, remainder to his children, but if any child dies in the lifetime of A. his share to go to those who survive, the share of each child is vested, subject to be divested by his death. But on a devise to A. for life, remainder to such of his children as survive him, the remainder is contingent.” John Chipman Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities 66 (1886).

“Under the names of ‘remainders' and ‘executory limitations,’ various classes of interests in land could be created in expectancy, either at the Common Law or under the Statute of Uses. The differences between the two classes were highly technical; and the learning involved in acquiring a knowledge of the rules of determining them [is] quite out of proportion to the value obtained.” Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 263 (P.B. Fairest ed., 6th ed. 1967).

accelerated remainder.A remainder that has passed to the remainderman, as when the gift to the preceding beneficiary fails. [Cases: Remainders 5. C.J.S. Estates §§ 77, 80.]

alternative remainder.A remainder in which the disposition of property is to take effect only if another disposition does not take effect.

charitable remainder.A remainder, usu. from a life estate, that is given to a charity; for example, “to Jane for life, and then to the American Red Cross.” [Cases: Internal Revenue 4172(3); Taxation 876. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 532; Taxation §§ 1876–1878.]

contingent remainder.A remainder that is either given to an unascertained person or made subject to a condition precedent. • An example is “to A for life, and then, if B has married before A dies, to B.” — Also termed executory remainder; remainder subject to a condition precedent. [Cases: Remainders 1, 4. C.J.S. Estates §§ 70–77, 79, 81–82, 88.]

“Unlike a vested remainder, a contingent remainder is either subject to a condition precedent (in addition to the natural expiration of a prior estate), or owned by unascertainable persons, or both. But the contingent remainder, like the vested remainder, ‘waits patiently’ for possession. It is so created that it can become a present estate (if ever it does) immediately upon, and no sooner than, the natural expiration of particular estates that stand in front of it and were created simultaneously with it.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 73 (2d ed. 1984).

cross-remainder. A future interest that results when particular estates are given to two or more persons in different parcels of land, or in the same land in undivided shares, and the remainders of all the estates are made to vest in the survivor or survivors. • Two examples of devises giving rise to cross-remainders are (1) “to A and B for life, with the remainder to the survivor and her heirs,” and (2) “Blackacre to A and Whiteacre to B, with the remainder of A's estate to B on A's failure of issue, and the remainder of B's estate to A on B's failure of issue.” • If no tenants or issue survive, the remainder vests in a third party (sometimes known as the ulterior remainderman). Each tenant in common has a reciprocal, or cross, remainder in the share of the others. This type of remainder could not be created by deed unless expressly stated. It could, however, be implied in a will. [Cases: Remainders 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 70–71, 77, 79, 81–82.]

“By a will also an estate may pass by mere implication, without any express words to direct its course.... So also, where a devise of black-acre to A and of white-acre to B in tail, and if they both die without issue, then to C in fee: here A and B have cross remainders by implication, and on the failure of either's issue, the other or his issue shall take the whole; and C's remainder over shall be postponed till the issue of both shall fail.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 381 (1766).

defeasible remainder.A vested remainder that will be destroyed if a condition subsequent occurs. • An example is “to A for life, and then to B, but if B ever sells liquor on the land, then to C.” — Also termed remainder subject to divestment. [Cases: Remainders 10. C.J.S. Estates §§ 88–89, 91–92.]

executed remainder.See vested remainder.

executory remainder.See contingent remainder.

indefeasible remainder.A vested remainder that is not subject to a condition subsequent; specif., a remainder in which the remainderman is certain to acquire a present interest sometime in the future and will be entitled to retain the interest permanently. — Also termed indefeasibly vested remainder; remainder indefeasibly vested.

remainder subject to a condition precedent. See contingent remainder.

remainder subject to divestment. See defeasible remainder.

remainder subject to open.A vested remainder that is given to a class of persons whose numbers may change over time and that is to be shared equally by each member of the class. • An example is “to A for life, and then equally to all of B's children.” The class must have at least one member, but more can be added over time. — Also termed remainder subject to partial divestment; remainder vested subject to open.

vested remainder.A remainder that is given to an ascertained person and that is not subject to a condition precedent. • An example is “to A for life, and then to B.” — Also termed executed remainder. [Cases: Remainders 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 70–71, 77, 79, 81–82.]

2. The property in a decedent's estate that is not otherwise specifically devised or bequeathed in a will. See residuary estate under ESTATE(3). [Cases: Wills 586. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1176–1179, 1184.]

remainder bequest. See residuary bequest under BEQUEST.

REMAINDERER

remainderer. See REMAINDERMAN.

REMAINDER ESTATE

remainder estate. See REMAINDER(1).

REMAINDER INDEFEASIBLY VESTED remainder indefeasibly vested. See indefeasible remainder under REMAINDER.

REMAINDER INTEREST

remainder interest.The property that passes to a beneficiary after the expiration of an intervening income interest. • For example, if a grantor places real estate in trust with income to A for life and remainder to B upon A's death, then B has a remainder interest.

REMAINDERMAN

remainderman. A person who holds or is entitled to receive a remainder. — Also termed remainderer; remainderperson; remainor. [Cases: Remainders 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 70–71, 77, 79, 81–82.]

ulterior remainderman.A third party whose future interest in a property vests only if all the preceding reciprocal interests expire. See cross-remainder under REMAINDER.

REMAINDER SUBJECT TO PARTIAL DIVESTMENT remainder subject to partial divestment. See remainder subject to open under REMAINDER.

REMAINDER VESTED SUBJECT TO OPEN remainder vested subject to open. See remainder subject to open under REMAINDER.

REMAINOR

remainor, n. See REMAINDERMAN.

REMAKE RIGHTS

remake rights. Copyright. The rights to produce one or more additional movies or screenplays based on what is substantially the same story as is contained in the original movie or screenplay for which the rights have been granted. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 38. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 20, 40, 59.]

REMANCIPATE

remancipate, vb. To mancipate (a thing or person) again.

REMAND

remand (ri-mandalsoree-mand), n. 1. The act or an instance of sending something (such as a case, claim, or person) back for further action. 2. An order remanding a case, claim, or person.

fourth-sentence remand. In a claim for social-security benefits, a court's decision affirming, reversing, or modifying the decision of the Commissioner of Social Security. • This type of remand is called a fourth-sentence remand because it is based on the fourth sentence of 42 USCA § 405(g): "The court shall have power to enter, upon the pleadings and transcript of the record, a judgment affirming, modifying, or reversing the decision of the Commissioner of Social Security, with or without remanding the cause for a rehearing." See Melkonyan v. Sullivan, 501 U.S. 89, 111 S.Ct. 2157 (1991). [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 149. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 82–83.]

sixth-sentence remand. In a claim for social-security benefits, a court's decision that the claim should be reheard by the Commissioner of Social Security because new evidence is available, which was not available before, that might change the outcome of the proceeding. • This type of remand is called a sixth-sentence remand because it is based on the sixth sentence of 42 USCA § 405(g): "The court may, on motion of the Commissioner of Social Security made for good cause shown before the Commissioner files the Commissioner's answer, remand the case to the Commissioner of Social Security for further action by the Commissioner of Social Security, and it may at any time order additional evidence to be taken before the Commissioner of Social Security, but only upon a showing that there is new evidence which is material and that there is good cause for the failure to incorporate such evidence into the record in a prior proceeding" See Melkonyan v. Sullivan, 501 U.S. 89, 111 S.Ct. 2157 (1991). [Cases: Social Security and Public remand (ri-mand), vb.1. To send (a case or claim) back to the court or tribunal from which it came for some further action <the appellate court reversed the trial court's opinion and remanded the case for new trial>. Cf. REMOVAL(2). [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 817; Appeal and Error 1186–1216; Federal Courts 937, 943; Removal of Cases 107(8). C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 968–1010; Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 254–255; Removal of Causes§ 192.] 2. ek-str<<schwa>>-or-). [Latin] Hist. An extraordinary remedy.

REMEDY

remedy,n.1. The means of enforcing a right or preventing or redressing a wrong; legal or equitable relief. — Also termed civil remedy. 2.REMEDIAL ACTION . Cf. RELIEF. — Also termed (in both senses) law of remedy. — remedy,vb.

“A remedy is anything a court can do for a litigant who has been wronged or is about to be wronged. The two most common remedies are judgments that plaintiffs are entitled to collect sums of money from defendants and orders to defendants to refrain from their wrongful conduct or to undo its consequences. The court decides whether the litigant has been wronged under the substantive law; it conducts its inquiry in accordance with the procedural law. The law of remedies falls somewhere between substance and procedure, distinct from both but overlapping with both.” Douglas Laycock, Modern American Remedies 1 (3d ed. 2002).

adequate remedy at law.A legal remedy (such as an award of damages) that provides sufficient relief to the petitioning party, thus preventing the party from obtaining equitable relief. See IRREPARABLE INJURY RULE. [Cases: Specific Performance 5. C.J.S. Specific Performance § 8.]

administrative remedy.A nonjudicial remedy provided by an administrative agency. • Ordinarily, if an administrative remedy is available, it must be exhausted before a court will hear the case. See EXHAUSTION OF REMEDIES. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 229. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 38–42.]

civil remedy.See REMEDY(1).

concurrent remedy.One of two or more legal or equitable actions available to redress a wrong.

cumulative remedy.A remedy available to a party in addition to another remedy that still remains in force.

equitable remedy.A remedy, usu. a nonmonetary one such as an injunction or specific performance, obtained when available legal remedies, usu. monetary damages, cannot adequately redress the injury. • Historically, an equitable remedy was available only from a court of equity. — Also termed equitable relief. See IRREPARABLE-INJURY RULE. [Cases: Injunction 17; Specific Performance 1. C.J.S. Injunctions § 31; Specific Performance §§ 2, 5–6.]

extrajudicial remedy.A remedy not obtained from a court, such as repossession. — Also termed self-help remedy.

extraordinary remedy.A remedy — such as a writ of mandamus or habeas corpus — not available to a party unless necessary to preserve a right that cannot be protected by a standard legal or equitable remedy. • Because there is no agreed list of extraordinary remedies, some standard remedies — such as preliminary and permanent injunctions — are sometimes described as extraordinary. [Cases: Mandamus 3(1)–3(2.1).C.J.S. Mandamus §§ 18–19, 21–23, 31.]

judicial remedy. A remedy granted by a court.

legal remedy. A remedy historically available in a court of law, as distinguished from a remedy historically available only in equity. • After the merger of law and equity, this distinction remained relevant in some ways, such as in determining the right to jury trial and the choice between alternate remedies. [Cases: Action 21. C.J.S. Actions § 124.]

provisional remedy. A temporary remedy awarded before judgment and pending the action's disposition, such as a temporary restraining order, a preliminary injunction, a prejudgment receivership, or an attachment. • Such a remedy is intended to maintain the status quo by protecting a person's safety or preserving property. [Cases: Attachment 1; Indemnity 20. C.J.S. Attachment §§ 2–4, 7; Subrogation §§ 2–15, 19, 91.]

remedy over. A remedy that arises from a right of indemnification or subrogation. • For example, if a city is liable for injuries caused by a defect in a street, the city has a “remedy over” against the person whose act or negligence caused the defect. [Cases: Injunction 1. C.J.S. Injunctions §§ 2–4, 12, 14, 22, 24, 166.]

self-help remedy. See extrajudicial remedy.

specific remedy. A remedy whereby the injured party is awarded the very performance that was contractually promised or whereby the injury threatened or caused by a tort is prevented or repaired. • A court awards a specific remedy by ordering a defaulting seller of goods to deliver the specified goods to the buyer (as opposed to paying damages). [Cases: Specific Performance 126. C.J.S. Specific Performance §§ 189–193.]

speedy remedy. A remedy that, under the circumstances, can be pursued expeditiously before the aggrieved party has incurred substantial detriment. • “Speedy remedy” is an informal expression with no fixed meaning — that is, what is considered speedy in one context may not be considered speedy in other contexts. For example, the Federal Tax Injunction Act requires a “plain, speedy, and efficient remedy” in state courts. But the Act does not require preliminary or injunctive relief — or even interest for delay. [Cases: Injunction 1. C.J.S. Injunctions §§ 2–4, 12, 14, 22, 24, 166.]

substitutional remedy. A remedy intended to give the promisee something as a replacement for the promised performance or to give the plaintiff something in lieu of preventing or repairing an injury. • A court awards a substitutional remedy by ordering a defaulting seller of goods to pay the buyer damages (as opposed to delivering the promised goods). — Also termed substitutionary remedy. [Cases: Contracts 324(1). C.J.S. Architects §§ 39, 47, 51; Contracts § 600.]

“With substitutionary remedies, plaintiff suffers harm and receives a sum of money. Specific remedies seek to avoid this exchange. They seek to prevent harm, or undo it, rather than let it happen and compensate for it... [Money damages] are substitutionary both in the sense that the sum of money is substituted for plaintiff's original entitlement, and in the less obvious sense that the fact finder's valuation of the loss is substituted for plaintiff's valuation. Specific relief seeks to avoid both these substitutions, giving plaintiff the very thing he lost if that is what he wants." Douglas Laycock, The Death of the Irreparable Injury Rule 13 (1991).

2.Hist. A compensation or return made periodically by a tenant or occupant for the possession and use of lands or corporeal hereditaments; money, chattels, or services issuing usu. annually out of lands and tenements as payment for use.

quit rent.See QUIT RENT.

rent charge.The right to receive an annual sum from the income of land, usu. in perpetuity, and to retake possession if the payments are in arrears. — Also spelled rent-charge; rentcharge. — Also termed fee-farm rent.

“Rent-charge is a rent with liberty to distrain. As when a man seised of land granteth by a deed poll, or by indenture, a yearly rent going out of the same land to another in fee or fee-tail, or for a term of life, etc. with clause of distress, or maketh a feoffment in fee by indenture, reserving to himself a certain yearly rent, with clause of distress.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 155 (1759).

“A rentcharge is an annual or periodic payment charged upon, and payable by the owner of, land. Unlike a rent service, in the case of a rentcharge there is no tenure or privity of estate between the parties. The owner of a rentcharge has no tenurial relationship with the land upon which it is charged. A rentcharge is a species of incorporeal property, but, unlike an easement, is incorporeal property in gross, being enjoyed by the owner personally and not in the capacity of proprietor of land.” Peter Butt, Land Law 330 (2d ed. 1988).

rent seck.Hist. A rent reserved by deed but without any clause of distress. — Also spelled rent-seck; rent-sec. — Also termed dry rent. Pl. rents seck.

“But rents-seck have long ceased to exist, because the inability of their owners to distrain was abolished by the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1730 (4 George II), which enacted that the owners of rents-seck, rents of assize and chief rents should have the same remedy by distress as existed in the case of rent reserved upon lease.” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 199 (3d ed. 1933).

“At common law, the relationship of lord and tenant carried with it an automatic right of distress for any rent. If no such relationship existed, there was no common law right of distress, and consequently an express clause of distress was frequently inserted when reserving the rent. A rent supported by no right of distress was known as a rent seck (from the Latin siccus, dry, barren) Rent seck ceased to exist many years ago, for by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1730, the owners of rents seck were given the same rights of distress as a landlord has against his tenant under a lease, namely, a right to distrain as soon as the rent is in arrear.” Robert E. Megarry & P.V. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 409 (4th ed. 1969).

rent service. A rent with some corporeal service incident to it (as by fealty) and with a right of distress. — Also written rent-service.

“[R]ent-service exists only where the relation of landlord and tenant is found, and in such a case rent derives its name from the fact that it was given as a substitute for the services to which the land was originally liable.” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 198 (3d ed. 1933).

3. Civil law. A contract by which one party conveys to another party a tract of land or other immovable property, to be held by the other party as owner and in perpetuity, in exchange for payment of an annual sum of money or quantity of fruits. • Under Louisiana law, the rent is essentially redeemable even though stipulated to be perpetual. The seller may set the terms of the redemption, which must take place after a stipulated time (not to exceed 30 years). La. Civ. Code art. 2788. See FRUIT(2). — Also termed rent of lands. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 181. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 462–465.] 4. The difference between the actual return from a commodity or service and the cost of supplying it; the difference between revenue and opportunity cost. — rent, vb.

replead, vb. 1. To plead again or anew; to file a new pleading, esp. to correct a defect in an earlier pleading. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1838; Pretrial Procedure 695.] 2. To make a replader.

REPLEADER

repleader (ree-plee-d<<schwa>>r). Common-law pleading. A court order or judgment — issued on the motion of a party who suffered an adverse verdict — requiring the parties to file new pleadings because of some defect in the original pleadings. — Also termed judgment of replader. [Cases: Pleading 286. C.J.S. Pleading § 477.]

REPLEGIARE

replegiare (ri-plee-jee-air-ee), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To take back on pledge or surety; to replevy.

REPLEVIABLE

repleviable (ri-plev-ee-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. Capable of being replevied; recoverable by replevin <repleviable property>. — Also spelled replevisable (ri-plev-<<schwa>>-s<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). Cf. IRREPLEVIABLE. [Cases: Replevin 3. C.J.S. Replevin §§ 10–24.]

replevin (ri-plev-in), n. 1. An action for the repossession of personal property wrongfully taken or detained by the defendant, whereby the plaintiff gives security for and holds the property until the court decides who owns it. — Also termed claim and delivery. [Cases: Replevin 1. C.J.S. Replevin §§ 2–7.] 2. A writ obtained from a court authorizing the retaking of personal property wrongfully taken or detained. — Also termed (in sense 2) writ of replevin. Cf. DETINUE; TROVER. [Cases: Replevin 34. C.J.S. Replevin § 60.]

lawfully obtained in the first instance (replevin in the detinet). (d) That the property shall be wrongfully detained by the defendant at the time of suit.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 49, at 120 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

personal replevin. At common law, an action to replevy a person out of prison or out of another's custody. • Personal replevin has been largely superseded by the writ of habeas corpus as a means of investigating the legality of an imprisonment. See HABEAS CORPUS.

replevin in cepit (in see-pit). An action for the repossession of property that is both wrongfully taken and wrongfully detained. [Cases: Replevin 9. C.J.S. Replevin §§ 28–29.]

replevin in detinet (in det-i-net). An action for the repossession of property that is rightfully taken but wrongfully detained. [Cases: Replevin 9. C.J.S. Replevin §§ 28–29.]

REPLICATIO

replicatio (rep-li-kay-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Roman law.A plaintiff's rejection of what a defendant asserted in an exceptio; a counterexception. Pl. replicationes (rep-li-kay-shee-oh-neeZ). Cf. TRIPLICATIO; QUADRUPPLICATIO.

REPLICATION

replication (rep-l<<schwa>>-kay-sh<<schwa>>n). A plaintiff's or complainant's reply to a defendant's plea or answer; REPLY(2). [Cases: Pleading 162. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 209, 219.]

anticipatory replication.Equity pleading. In an original bill, the denial of defensive matters that the defendant might assert. • A defendant who relies on the anticipated defense must traverse the anticipatory matter in addition to setting up the defense. [Cases: Equity 133.]

general replication.Equity pleading. A replication that consists of a general denial of the defendant's plea or answer and an assertion of the truth and sufficiency of the bill. [Cases: Equity 207.]

replication de injuria.Common-law pleading. A traverse occurring only in the replication whereby the plaintiff is permitted to traverse the whole substance of a plea consisting merely of legal excuse, when the matter does not involve a title or interest in land, authority of law, authority of fact derived from the opposing party, or any matter of record. — Also termed replication de injuria sua propria, absque tali causa. [Cases: Pleading 179. C.J.S. Pleading § 222.]

replication per fraudem.Common-law pleading. A replication asserting that the discharge pleaded by the defendant was obtained by fraud.

special replication.Equity pleading. A replication that puts in issue a new fact to counter a new matter raised in the defendant's plea or answer. [Cases: Equity 209.]

REPLY

reply,n.1.Civil procedure. In federal practice, the plaintiff's response to the defendant's counterclaim (or, by court order, to the defendant's or a third party's answer).Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 801–815.] 2.Common-law pleading. The plaintiff's response to the defendant's plea or answer. • The reply is the plaintiff's second pleading, and it is followed by the defendant's rejoinder. — Also termed (in sense 2) replication. [Cases: Pleading 162, 164. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 209, 213–214, 219.] — reply,vb.

REPORT

report,n.1. A formal oral or written presentation of facts or a recommendation for action <according to the treasurer's report, there is $300 in the bank>.

committee report.Parliamentary law. A report from a committee to a deliberative assembly on business referred to the committee or on a matter otherwise under its charge.

informational report.Parliamentary law. A report without a recommendation for action.

insider report.Securities. A monthly report that must be filed with the SEC when more than 10% of a company's stock is traded.

majority report.Parliamentary law. A committee report, as distinguished from a minority report. See committee report. Cf. minority report.

minority report.Parliamentary law. A report by a member or members who dissent from a committee report, setting forth their views, and sometimes proposing an alternative recommendation. • Some organizations require that a minority must reach a certain size (or obtain permission) before it can file a report. A typical minimum is one-fourth of the committee's members, which guarantees that not more than one minority report will result.

officer's report.Parliamentary law. A report from an officer to an organization or deliberative assembly on business relating to the officer's duties or on a matter otherwise under the officer's charge.

report with recommendation.Parliamentary law. A report accompanied by a recommendation for action.

2. A written account of a court proceeding and judicial decision <the law clerk sent the court's report to counsel for both sides>. [Cases: Courts 103. C.J.S. Courts §§ 170, 173–174, 176.] 3. (usu. pl.) A published volume of judicial decisions by a particular court or group of courts <U.S. Reports>. • Generally, these decisions are first printed in temporary paperback volumes, and then printed in hardbound reporter volumes. Law reports may be either official (published by a government entity) or unofficial (published by a private publisher). Court citations frequently include the names of both the official and unofficial reports. — Also termed reporter; law report; law reporter. Cf. ADVANCE SHEETS. [Cases: Courts 103; Reports 3. C.J.S. Courts §§ 170, 173–174, 176; Reports §§ 10–13.]

official report.(usu. pl.) The governmentally approved set of reported cases within a given jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 103; Reports 1. C.J.S. Courts §§ 170, 173–174, 176; Reports §§ 2–3.]

“[I]t may justly be said that all reports are in a sense ‘official,’ or that to use the term ‘official reports’ as referring to any particular series of reports is a misnomer, for it is certainly misleading. The mere fact that each state authorizes or requires publication of reports of its Supreme Court decisions, and, to insure such publication, agrees to purchase a stated number of each volume of the reports, cannot be said to give such a series pre-eminence as an ‘official’ publication.” William

M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 33 (3d ed. 1914).

4. (usu. pl.) A collection of administrative decisions by one or more administrative agencies. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 507.C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 151, 157.] 5.MINUTES (2). — Abbr. rep. — report,vb.

reporter. 1. A person responsible for making and publishing a report; esp., a lawyer-consultant who prepares drafts of official or semi-official writings such as court rules or Restatements <the reporter to the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules explained the various amendments>. [Cases: Reports 3. C.J.S. Reports §§ 10–13.] 2.REPORTER OF DECISIONS. 3.REPORT (3) <Supreme Court Reporter>. — Abbr. rep.; rpt.

“It may not come amiss to remark that the National Report System is usually spoken of as the ‘Reporters,’ and one of the component parts of that system is in like manner spoken of as a ‘Reporter.’ Wherever, in this or the succeeding chapters of this work, the word is used with a capital, it refers to one or more of the parts of the National Reporter System. When the word ‘reporter’ is used without capitalization, it refers to the person who reports or edits the cases in any series of reports to which reference is being made.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 37 (3d ed. 1914).

REPORTER OF DECISIONS

reporter of decisions.The person responsible for publishing a court's opinions. • The position began historically — in the years before systematic reporting of decisions was introduced — when lawyers attended the sessions of particular courts, were accredited to them by the judges, and reported the decisions of that court. Today, the reporter of decisions holds an administrative post as a court employee. The reporter often has duties that include verifying citations, correcting spelling and punctuation, and suggesting minor editorial improvements before judicial opinions are released or published. — Often shortened to reporter. — Also termed court reporter. See COURT REPORTER. [Cases: Courts 103; Reports 3. C.J.S. Courts §§ 170, 173–174, 176; Reports §§ 10–13.]

REPORT WITH RECOMMENDATION report with recommendation. See REPORT(1).

REPOSE

repose (ri-pohz), n. 1. Cessation of activity; temporary rest. 2. A statutory period after which an action cannot be brought in court, even if it expires before the plaintiff suffers any injury. See STATUTE OF REPOSE. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 1, 165. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 2-4, 10-11.]

REPOSITORY

repository (ri-poz-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A place where something is deposited or stored; a warehouse or storehouse. [Cases: Warehousemen 1-38. C.J.S. Agriculture §§ 163-165, 170-173, 176; Warehousemen and Safe Depositaries §§ 1-44, 47-137.]

REPOSSESSION

repossession, n. The act or an instance of retaking property; esp., a seller's retaking of goods sold on credit when the buyer has failed to pay for them. — Often shortened to repo. Cf. FORECLOSURE; RESCUE(3). [Cases: Secured Transactions 228. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 151, 153-160, 180.] — repossess, vb.

REPRESENTATION

representation, n. 1. A presentation of fact — either by words or by conduct — made to induce someone to act, esp. to enter into a contract; esp., the manifestation to another that a fact, including a state of mind, exists <the buyer relied on the seller's representation that the roof did not leak>. Cf. MISREPRESENTATION. [Cases: Fraud 9.]

“Representation ... may introduce terms into a contract and affect performance: or it may induce a contract and so affect the intention of one of the parties, and the formation of the contract.... At common law, ... if a representation did not afterwards become a substantive part of the contract, its untruth (save in certain excepted cases and apart always from fraud) was immaterial. But if it did, it might be one of two things: (1) it might be regarded by the parties as a vital term going to the root of the contract (when it is usually called a 'condition'); and in this case its untruth entitles the injured party to repudiate the whole contract; or (2) it might be a term in the nature only of an independent subsidiary promise (when it is usually called a 'warranty'), which is indeed a part of the contract, but does not go to the root of it; in this case its untruth only gives rise to an action ex contractu for damages, and does not entitle the injured party to repudiate the whole contract." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 218, 222 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

affirmative representation.A representation asserting the existence of certain facts pertaining to a given subject matter. [Cases: Contracts 205.5; Fraud 9. C.J.S. Contracts § 341.]

false representation.See MISREPRESENTATION.

material representation.A representation to which a reasonable person would attach importance in deciding his or her course of action in a transaction. • Material representation is a necessary element of an action for fraud. [Cases: Contracts 94(2); Fraud 18. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 156, 166.]

promissory representation.A representation about what one will do in the future; esp., a representation made by an insured about what will happen during the time of coverage, stated as a matter of expectation and amounting to an enforceable promise. [Cases: Insurance 3035. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 537, 546–551, 629, 634, 639, 694, 704, 759.]

2. The act or an instance of standing for or acting on behalf of another, esp. by a lawyer on behalf of a client <Clarence Darrow's representation of John Scopes>. [Cases: Attorney and Client 77–101. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 191–217.]

concurrent representation.The simultaneous representation of more than one person in the same matter. See CONFLICT OF INTEREST(2).

3. The fact of a litigant's having such a close alignment of interests with another person that the other is considered as having been present in the litigation <the named plaintiff provided adequate representation for the absent class members>.

adequate representation.A close alignment of interests between actual parties and potential parties in a lawsuit, so that the interests of potential parties are sufficiently protected by the actual parties. • The concept of adequate representation is often used in procedural contexts. For example, if a case is to be certified as a class action, there must be adequate representation by the named plaintiffs of all the potential class members. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(4). And if a nonparty is to intervene in a lawsuit, there must not already be adequate representation of the nonparty by an existing party. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2).

virtual representation.A party's maintenance of an action on behalf of others with a similar interest, as a class representative does in a class action. See VIRTUAL-REPRESENTATION DOCTRINE. [Cases: Judgment 677; Parties 35.3. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 847, 851–854; Parties § 28.]

4. The assumption by an heir of the rights of his or her predecessor <each child takes a share by representation>. See PER STIRPES. [Cases: Wills 550. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1809–1810.] 5. (usu. pl.) Int'l law. A friendly but firm statement of a perceived wrong. • This is the mildest form of complaint that one nation can make to another. — Also termed diplomatic representation. — represent, vb. “Representations are in the nature of vigorous arguments employed in the hope of securing a modification of the action complained of without implying necessarily or expressly an intention ultimately to seek redress by more vigorous means.” Ellery C. Stowell, International Law: A Restatement of Principles in Conformity with Actual Practice 427 (1931).

representative, n. 1. One who stands for or acts on behalf of another <the owner was the football team's representative at the labor negotiations>. See AGENT(2). [Cases: Principal and Agent 1. C.J.S. Agency §§ 2, 4–6, 23, 25–27, 33, 38–40, 58; Architects § 21.]

accredited representative. A person with designated authority to act on behalf of another person, group, or organization, usu. by being granted that authority by law or by the rules of the group or organization <as an officer of the union, she was the accredited representative of the employees in the wage dispute>.

class representative. A person who sues on behalf of a group of plaintiffs in a class action. — Also termed named plaintiff. See CLASS ACTION. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 164; Parties 35.13. C.J.S. Parties §§ 31, 34.]

independent personal representative. See personal representative.

lawful representative. 1. A legal heir. 2. An executor, administrator, or other legal representative. — Also termed legal representative. See personal representative. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 14–18. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 17–32, 34–49.]

legal–personal representative. 1. When used by a testator referring to personal property, an executor or administrator. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 14–18. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 17–32, 34–49.] 2. When used by a testator referring to real property, one to whom the real estate passes immediately upon the testator's death. 3. When used concerning the death of a mariner at sea, the public administrator, executor, or appointed administrator in the seaman's state of residence.

legal representative. 1. See lawful representative. 2. See personal representative.

personal representative. A person who manages the legal affairs of another because of incapacity or death, such as the executor of an estate. • Technically, while an executor is a personal representative named in a will, an administrator is a personal representative not named in a will. — Also termed independent personal representative; legal representative. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 14–18. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 17–32, 34–49.]

registered representative. A person approved by the SEC and stock exchanges to sell securities to the public. — Formerly also termed customer's man; customer's person. [Cases: Securities Regulation 40.12–40.14. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 157–160, 165.]

2. A member of a legislature, esp. of the lower house <one senator and one representative attended the rally>. [Cases: States 28. C.J.S. States § 42.] — Abbr. rep.

REPRESENTATIVE ACTION representative action. 1. CLASS ACTION. 2. DERIVATIVE ACTION(1).

REPRESENTATIVE CAPACITY

representative capacity. See CAPACITY(1).

REPRESENTTEE

representee. One to whom a representation is made.

“First, where the representor can show that he was not negligent, he will not be liable under the 1967 Act; and secondly, where the representee wants to claim damages at the contractual rate, for loss of his bargain, it may be that the Misrepresentation Act will not suffice.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 165 (3d ed. 1981).

REPRESENTOR

representor. One who makes a representation.

REPRESSED-MEMORY SYNDROME

repressed-memory syndrome. A memory disorder characterized by an intermittent and extensive inability to recall important personal information, usu. following or concerning a traumatic or highly stressful occurrence, when the memory lapses cannot be dismissed as normal forgetfulness. • The theoretical basis for this syndrome was proposed by Sigmund Freud in 1895. The American Psychiatric Association has recognized the syndrome officially by the medical term dissociative amnesia. Although the APA has affirmed that some people suffering partial or total dissociative amnesia may later recover some or all of the memory of the traumatic or stressful event, the existence of the syndrome is controversial. Some studies indicate that “repressed” memories, at least in some patients, may be a product of suggestions made by mental-health therapists rather than of any actual experience. — Abbr. RMS. — Also termed recovered-memory syndrome; dissociative amnesia. Cf. FALSE-MEMORY SYNDROME .

REPRESSIVE TAX

repressive tax. See sin tax under TAX.

REPRIEVE

reprieve (ri-preev), n. Temporary postponement of the carrying out of a criminal sentence, esp. a death sentence. Cf. COMMUTATION(2); PARDON. [Cases: Pardon and Parole 27. C.J.S. Pardon and Parole §§ 3, 32–33.] — reprieve, vb.

“The term reprieve is derived from reprendre, to keep back, and signifies the withdrawing of the sentence for an interval of time, and operates in delay of execution.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 757 (2d ed. 1826).

reprimand, n. In professional responsibility, a form of disciplinary action — imposed after trial or formal charges — that declares the lawyer's conduct improper but does not limit his or her right to practice law; a mild form of lawyer discipline that does not restrict the lawyer's ability to practice law. [Cases: Attorney and Client 58. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 116–118.] — reprimand, vb.

private reprimand. An unpublished communication between a disciplinary agency and a wrongdoing attorney, admonishing the attorney about the improper conduct. • Sometimes a published reprimand that does not identify the lawyer by name is considered a private reprimand. [Cases: Attorney and Client 58. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 116–118.]

public reprimand. A published notice, appearing usu. in a legal newspaper or bar journal, admonishing the attorney about improper conduct and describing the impropriety for the benefit of other members of the legal profession. [Cases: Attorney and Client 58. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 116–118.]

reprisal (ri-prI-z<<schwa>>). 1. (often pl.) Int'l law. The use of force, short of war, against another country to redress an injury caused by that country. [Cases: War and National Emergency 12. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 8, 13, 16–22, 84–85.]

“ ‘Reprisals’ is a word with a long history, and modern writers are not agreed on the meaning which should be given to it today. Literally and historically it denotes the seizing of property or persons by way of retaliation Reprisals when they are taken today are taken by a state, but some writers would still limit the word to acts of taking or withholding the property of a foreign state or its nationals, for example by an embargo, whilst others would abandon the historical associations and use it to denote any kind of coercive action not amounting to war whereby a state attempts to secure satisfaction from another for some wrong which the latter has committed against it.” J.L. Briery, The Law of Nations 321–22 (5th ed. 1955).

general reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation directs all its military officers and citizens to redress an injury caused by another nation. • An example is a command to seize the property of the offending nation wherever it is found.

negative reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation refuses to perform an obligation to another nation, such as the fulfillment of a treaty.

positive reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation forcibly seizes another nation's property or persons.

special reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation authorizes an aggrieved private citizen to redress an injury caused by another nation. • An example is an authorization for a private citizen to seize a particular vessel of the offending nation. See LETTERS OF MARQUE.

2. (often pl.) Int'l law. An act of forceful retaliation for injury or attack by another country; formerly, in war, the killing of prisoners in response to an enemy's war crimes (now unlawful). Cf. RETORSION. 3. Any act or instance of retaliation, as by an employer against a complaining employee. [Cases: Master and Servant 30(6.5). C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 68, 70, 72, 79.]

reprise (ri-prĭz), n. An annual deduction, duty, or payment out of a manor or estate, such as an annuity.

REPROBATION

reprobation (rep-r<<schwa>>-bay-sh<<schwa>>n). The act of raising an objection or exception, as to the competency of a witness or the sufficiency of evidence. — reprobatory (rep-r<<schwa>>-bay-sh<<schwa>>-ner-ee), reprobative (rep-r<<schwa>>-bay-tiv), adj. — reprobate (rep-r<<schwa>>-bayt), vb.

REPROBATOR

reprobator (rep-r<<schwa>>-bay-t<<schwa>>r). Scots law. Hist. A challenge to disqualify a witness or to invalidate the testimony of an objectionable witness. — Also termed action of reprobator.

REPRODUCTION RIGHT

reproduction right. Copyright. A copyright holder's exclusive right to make copies or phonorecords of the protected work. • Unauthorized copying constitutes infringement. — Also termed right of reproduction. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 36. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 10, 40–41, 97.]

REPRODUCTIVE RIGHTS

reproductive rights. A person's constitutionally protected rights relating to the control of his or her procreative activities; specif., the cluster of civil liberties relating to pregnancy, abortion, and sterilization, esp. the personal bodily rights of a woman in her decision whether to become pregnant or bear a child. • The phrase includes the idea of being able to make reproductive decisions free from discrimination, coercion, or violence. Human-rights scholars increasingly consider many reproductive rights to be protected by international human-rights law. [Cases: Civil Rights 1029. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 4–5, 8, 13.]

republic, n. A system of government in which the people hold sovereign power and elect representatives who exercise that power. • It contrasts on the one hand with a pure democracy, in which the people or community as an organized whole wield the sovereign power of government, and on the other with the rule of one person (such as a king or dictator) or of an elite group (such as an oligarchy, aristocracy, or junta). — Abbr. rep. Cf. DEMOCRACY. — republican, adj.

“A republic is a government which (a) derives all of its powers directly or indirectly from the great body of the people and (b) is administered by persons holding their office during pleasure, for a limited period, or during good behavior.” Robert A. Dahl, A Preface to Democratic Theory 10 (1956).

REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT

republican government. See GOVERNMENT.

REPUBLICATION

repudiation, n. 1. The act or an instance of publishing again or anew. 2. Wills & estates. Reestablishment of the validity of a previously revoked will by repeating the formalities of execution or by using a codicil. • The result is to make the old will effective from the date of republication. — Also termed revalidation. Cf. REVIVAL(2). [Cases: Wills 196–202. C.J.S. Wills §§ 429–440.] 3. Defamation. The act or an instance of repeating or spreading more widely a defamatory statement. — republish, vb.

REPUDIATE

repudiate, vb. 1. To reject or renounce (a duty or obligation); esp., to indicate an intention not to perform (a contract). [Cases: Contracts 313. C.J.S. Contracts § 534.] 2. Hist. To divorce or disown (one's wife).

REPUDIATEE

repudiatee (ri-pyoo-dee-<<schwa>>-tee). A party to a contract that has been repudiated by the other party. [Cases: Contracts 313. C.J.S. Contracts § 534.]

REPUDIATION

repudiation (ri-pyoo-dee-ay-sh<<schwa>>n), n. 1. Eccles. law. Rare. A person's refusal to accept a benefice. 2. A contracting party's words or actions that indicate an intention not to perform the contract in the future; a threatened breach of contract. Cf. REJECTION(1), (2); RESCISSION; REVOCATION(1). [Cases: Contracts 313(2). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 534–540.] — repudiatory (ri-pyoo-dee-<<schwa>>-tor-ee), repudiable (ri-pyoo-dee-<<schwa>>-b*<<schwa>>*l), adj.

“A repudiation is (a) a statement by the obligor to the obligee indicating that the obligor will commit a breach that would of itself give the obligee a claim for damages for total breach ... , or (b) a voluntary affirmative act which renders the obligor unable or apparently unable to perform without such a breach.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 250 (1979).

anticipatory repudiation.Repudiation of a contractual duty before the time for performance, giving the injured party an immediate right to damages for total breach, as well as discharging the injured party's remaining duties of performance. • This type of repudiation occurs when the promisor unequivocally disavows any intention to perform when the time for performance comes. Once the repudiation occurs, the nonrepudiating party has three options: (1) treat the repudiation as an immediate breach and sue for damages; (2) ignore the repudiation, urge the repudiator to perform, wait for the specified time of performance, and sue if the repudiating party does not perform; and (3) cancel the contract. — Also termed renunciation. See anticipatory breach under BREACH OF CONTRACT. [Cases: Contracts 313. C.J.S. Contracts § 534.]

The Restatement lists three actions that constitute anticipatory repudiation: “(a) a positive statement to the promisee or other person having a right under the contract, indicating that the promisor will not or cannot substantially perform his contractual duties; (b) transferring or contracting to transfer to a third person an interest in specific land, goods, or in any other thing essential for the substantial performance of his contractual duties; (c) any voluntary affirmative act which renders substantial performance of his contractual duties impossible, or apparently impossible.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 318 (1979).

total repudiation.An unconditional refusal by a party to perform the acts required by a contract. • This type of repudiation justifies the other party in refraining from performance. [Cases: Contracts 313. C.J.S. Contracts § 534.]

REPUDIATOR

repudiator (ri-pyoo-dee-ay-t*<<schwa>>*r). One who repudiates; esp., a party who repudiates a contract. [Cases: Contracts 313. C.J.S. Contracts § 534.]

REPUDIUM

repudium (ri-pyoo-dee-*<<schwa>>*m), n. [Latin] Roman law. The revocation of betrothal or marriage by either the man or the woman. • After Augustus, it was necessary to send the other spouse a letter of repudiation in order to terminate the marriage. Cf. DIVORTIUM.

REPUGNANCY

repugnancy (ri-p<<schwa>>g-n<<schwa>>n-see). An inconsistency or contradiction between two or more parts of a legal instrument (such as a contract or statute). [Cases: Contracts 162; Statutes 207. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 324, 326.]

REPUGNANT

repugnant (ri-p<<schwa>>g-n<<schwa>>nt), adj. Inconsistent or irreconcilable with; contrary or contradictory to <the court's interpretation was repugnant to the express wording of the statute>.

REPUGNANT VERDICT

repugnant verdict. See VERDICT.

REPURCHASE

repurchase, n. The act or an instance of buying something back or again; esp., a corporation's buying back of some or all of its stock at market price. See REDEMPTION. [Cases: Corporations 82, 120. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 180–181, 193–195, 239–241.] — repurchase, vb.

REPURCHASE AGREEMENT

repurchase agreement. A short-term loan agreement by which one party sells a security to another party but promises to buy back the security on a specified date at a specified price. — Often shortened to repo. [Cases: Corporations 82, 120. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 180–181, 193–195, 239–241.]

REPURCHASE PRICE

repurchase price. See redemption price under PRICE.

REPUTATION

reputation, n. The esteem in which a person is held by others. • Evidence of reputation may be introduced as proof of character whenever character evidence is admissible. Fed. R. Evid. 405. — Also termed personal reputation. [Cases: Criminal Law 375; Evidence 106; Witnesses 338. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 816–818; Evidence §§ 495–497, 499–502, 504–506; Witnesses § 592.] — reputational, adj.

REPUTATIONAL EVIDENCE

reputational evidence. See reputation evidence under EVIDENCE.

REPUTATION EVIDENCE

reputation evidence. See EVIDENCE.

REPUTED MANOR

reputed manor. See MANOR.

REQUEST

request, n. Parliamentary law. A motion by which a member invokes a right, seeks permission for the exercise of a privilege, or asks a question. Cf. MOTION(2); DEMAND(2); INQUIRY(2); POINT(2). request for leave to modify a motion. See request for permission to modify a motion.

request for leave to withdraw a motion. See request for permission to withdraw a motion.

request for permission to modify a motion. A motion by which the mover seeks an amendment to his or her own motion after the chair has stated the motion. • The mover controls a motion only until the chair states the question. After that, the motion belongs to the assembly and the mover cannot modify it without the assembly's permission. See friendly amendment under AMENDMENT(3). — Also termed request for leave to modify a motion.

request for permission to withdraw a motion. A motion by the mover to end consideration of the motion without reaching a decision on its merits. See request for permission to modify a motion. — Also termed request for leave to withdraw a motion.

request to be excused from a duty. A motion seeking relief from a duty that an officer or other member has been charged with.

request to read papers. 1. A motion asking permission to read aloud from printed matter. • Reading aloud is generally not allowed without permission. 2. A motion asking that the chair or secretary read aloud a document for the mover's or the assembly's information.

REQUEST FOR ADMISSION

request for admission. Civil procedure. In pretrial discovery, a party's written factual statement served on another party who must admit, deny, or object to the substance of the statement. • Ordinarily, many requests for admission appear in one document. The admitted statements, along with any statements not denied or objected to, will be treated by the court as established and therefore do not have to be proved at trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36. — Abbr. RFA. — Also termed request for admissions; request to admit; notice to admit. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1671; Pretrial Procedure 471. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 113, 115.]

REQUEST FOR CONTINUED EXAMINATION

request for continued examination. Patents. A means of negating the final action on a patent so that the applicant can file amendments, new claims, etc. to show that the invention is patentable as of the original application date. • Unlike a continuation application, a request for continued examination keeps a patent alive as if no final decision had been made. It allows prosecution of claims that have been rejected in a final office action to continue. — Abbr. RCE. Cf. CONTINUATION. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.]

REQUEST FOR INSTRUCTIONS

request for instructions.Procedure. During trial, a party's written request that the court instruct the jury on the law as set forth in the request. — Abbr. RFI. — Also termed request to charge. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 51. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2176; Trial 259. C.J.S. Trial § 698.]

REQUEST FOR LEAVE TO MODIFY A MOTION request for leave to modify a motion.See REQUEST.

REQUEST FOR LEAVE TO WITHDRAW A MOTION request for leave to withdraw a motion.See REQUEST.

REQUEST FOR PERMISSION TO MODIFY A MOTION request for permission to modify a motion.See REQUEST.

REQUEST FOR PERMISSION TO WITHDRAW A MOTION request for permission to withdraw a motion.See REQUEST.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION

request for production.Procedure. In pretrial discovery, a party's written request that another party provide specified documents or other tangible things for inspection and copying. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34. — Abbr. RFP. — Also termed document request; request for production of documents; notice to produce; demand for document inspection. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1551; Pretrial Procedure 331. C.J.S. Discovery § 71.]

REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION request for reconsideration.Patents. An applicant's submission of further arguments after a patent claim's rejection. [Cases: Patents 104.C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.]

REQUEST FOR REEXAMINATION request for reexamination.Patents. A formal process of asking the Patent and Trademark Office to review an in-force patent's validity in light of prior-art references. • Anyone, including the patentee or an infringer, may request a patent's reexamination. [Cases: Patents 140. C.J.S. Patents § 251.]

REQUEST TO ADMIT

request to admit.See REQUEST FOR ADMISSION.

REQUEST TO BE EXCUSED FROM A DUTY request to be excused from a duty.See REQUEST.

REQUEST TO CHARGE

request to charge.See REQUEST FOR INSTRUCTIONS.

REQUEST TO READ PAPERS

request to read papers.See REQUEST.

REQUIRED-RECORDS DOCTRINE required-records doctrine.The principle that the privilege against self-incrimination does not apply when one is being compelled to produce business records that are kept in accordance with government regulations and that involve public aspects. • Some courts have held that certain medical records and tax forms fall within this doctrine and are thus not protected by the privilege against self-incrimination. [Cases: Witnesses 298. C.J.S. Witnesses § 543.]

REQUIRED-REQUEST LAW

required-request law.A law mandating that hospital personnel discuss with a deceased patient's relatives the possibility of an anatomical gift. • The Uniform Anatomical Gift Act (not in effect in all states) mandates a required-request law.

RESALE

resale,n.1. The act of selling goods or property — previously sold to a buyer who breached the sales contract — to someone else. UCC § 2-706. [Cases: Sales 332–339. C.J.S. Sales §§ 344–347.] 2. A retailer's selling of goods, previously purchased from a manufacturer or wholesaler, usu. to consumers or to someone else further down the chain of distribution. — resell,vb.

RESALE-PRICE MAINTENANCE resale-price maintenance.A form of price-fixing in which a manufacturer forces or persuades several different retailers to sell the manufacturer's product at the same price, thus preventing competition. • Resale-price maintenance is per se illegal under antitrust law. But a manufacturer is permitted to suggest a retail price as long as it does not compel retailers to sell at that price. See vertical price-fixing under PRICE-FIXING. [Cases: Monopolies 17(1.7). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 83–85, 87.]

RES ALIENA

res aliena (rays ay-lee-ee-n*<<schwa>>* or al-ee-). [Latin] Archaic. The property belonging to another.

res aliena scienter legata (rays ay-lee-ee-n<<schwa>> [or al-ee-] sI-en-t<< schwa>>r l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. The property of another knowingly bequeathed — that is, property that a testator did not own but purported to bequeath by will.

RES CADUCA

res caduca (rays k<<schwa>>-d[y]oo-k<<schwa>>). [Latin] Civil law. A fallen thing; an escheat. Pl. res caducae.

RESCUIT

rescuit (ri-seet).Hist. The admittance of an interested third party to plead in a case between two others; intervention.

RESCIND

rescind (ri-sind), vb.1. To abrogate or cancel (a contract) unilaterally or by agreement. [Cases: Contracts 249. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 422, 424, 427–428, 456, 465–466, 484.] 2. To make void; to repeal or annul <rescind the legislation>.3.Parliamentary law. To void, repeal, or nullify a main motion adopted earlier. — Also termed annul; repeal. — rescindable,adj.

rescind and expunge.See EXPUNGE(2).

rescissio (ri-sis[h]-ee-oh). [Latin] Civil law. Annulment or voidance of a juridical act; rescission. Pl. rescissiones.

rescission (ri-sizh-<<schwa>>n), n.1. A party's unilateral unmaking of a contract for a legally sufficient reason, such as the other party's material breach, or a judgment rescinding the contract; VOIDANCE. • Rescission is generally available as a remedy or defense for a nondefaulting party and is accompanied by restitution of any partial performance, thus restoring the parties to their precontractual positions. — Also termed avoidance. [Cases: Contracts 249. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 422, 424, 427–428, 456, 465–466, 484.] 2. An agreement by contracting parties to discharge all remaining duties of performance and terminate the contract. — Also spelled rescision; recission. — Also termed (in sense 2) agreement of rescission; mutual rescission; abandonment. Cf. REJECTION(2); REPUDIATION (2); REVOCATION(1). [Cases: Contracts 252. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 428, 462.] — rescissory (ri-sis-<<schwa>>-ree or ri-siz-), adj.

“The [UCC] takes cognizance of the fact that the term ‘rescission’ is often used by lawyers, courts and businessmen in many different senses; for example, termination of a contract by virtue of an option to terminate in the agreement, cancellation for breach and avoidance on the grounds of infancy or fraud. In the interests of clarity of thought — as the consequences of each of these forms of discharge may vary — the Commercial Code carefully distinguishes three circumstances. ‘Rescission’ is utilized as a term of art to refer to a mutual agreement to discharge contractual duties. 'Termination' refers to the discharge of duties by the exercise of a power granted by the agreement. 'Cancellation' refers to the putting an end to the contract by reason of a breach by the other party. Section 2-720, however, takes into account that the parties do not necessarily use these terms in this way." John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 21-2, at 864-65 (3d ed. 1987).

equitable rescission. Rescission that is decreed by a court of equity. [Cases: Cancellation of Instruments 1. C.J.S. Cancellation of Instruments; Rescission §§ 2-7.]

legal rescission. 1. Rescission that is effected by the agreement of the parties. [Cases: Contracts 251.] 2. Rescission that is decreed by a court of law, as opposed to a court of equity.

"The modern tendency is to treat rescission as equitable, but rescission was often available at law. If plaintiff had paid money, or had delivered goods, he could rescind by tendering whatever he had received from defendant and suing at law to recover his money or replevy his goods. But if he had delivered a promissory note or securities, or conveyed real estate, rescission required the court to cancel the instruments or compel defendant to reconvey. This relief was available only in equity. Many modern courts ignore the distinction But versions of the distinction are codified in some states." Douglas Laycock, Modern American Remedies 627-28 (3d ed. 2002).

RESCUE

rescue,n.1. The act or an instance of saving or freeing someone from danger or captivity. 2. The forcible and unlawful freeing of a person from arrest or imprisonment. — Also termed rescous. [Cases: Rescue 1. C.J.S. Escape §§ 28–31, 33.]

“A rescue signifies a forcible setting at liberty, against law, of a person duly arrested. It is necessary, that the rescuer should have knowledge that the person whom he sets at liberty has been apprehended for a criminal offence, if he be in the custody of a private person; but if he be under the care of an officer, then he is to take notice of it at his peril.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 62 (2d ed. 1826).

3. The forcible retaking by the owner of goods that have been lawfully distrained. — Also termed rescous. Cf. REPOSSESSION. 4.Int'l law. The retaking of a prize by persons captured with it, so that the property is legally restored to its original owner. See POSTLIMINIUM(3). — rescue,vb.

RESCUE CLAUSE

rescue clause.See SUE-AND-LABOR CLAUSE.

RESCUE DOCTRINE

rescue doctrine.Torts. The principle that a tortfeasor who negligently endangered a person is liable for injuries to someone who reasonably attempted to rescue the person in danger. • The rationale for this doctrine is that an attempted rescue of someone in danger is always foreseeable. Thus, if the tortfeasor is negligent toward the rescuee, the tortfeasor is also negligent toward the rescuer. — Also termed danger-invites-rescue doctrine. Cf. EMERGENCY DOCTRINE; GOOD SAMARITAN DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence 510(3). C.J.S. Negligence §§ 240, 317.]

“Danger invites rescue. The cry of distress is the summons to relief. The law does not ignore these reactions of the mind in tracing conduct to its consequences. It recognizes them as normal. It places their effects within the range of the natural and probable. The wrong that imperils life is a wrong to the imperiled victim; it is a wrong also to his rescuer The railroad company whose train approaches without signal is a wrongdoer toward the traveler surprised between the rails, but a wrongdoer also to the bystander who drags him from the path The emergency begets the man.

The wrongdoer may not have foreseen the coming of a deliverer. He is accountable as if he had." Wagner v. International Ry. Co., 133 N.E. 437, 437–38 (N.Y. 1921).

RESCUE SYNDROME

rescue syndrome. Family law. A situation in which a child in a custody battle expresses a preference for the parent perceived by the child to be the "weaker" of the two, in the belief that the parent needs the child. • This is a form of parent-alienation syndrome. One parent may overtly or subtly act increasingly dependent on the child, leading the child to believe that he or she is responsible for the parent's comfort, happiness, and protection. The child may also believe that one parent is actively harming the other and attempt to protect the "weaker" parent by choosing to stay with that parent, even if the child would actually prefer to live with the "stronger" parent. See PARENT-ALIENATION SYNDROME. Cf. LOLLIPOP SYNDROME.

RESCUSSU

rescussu. See DE RESCUSSU.

RES DERELICTA

res derelicta (rays der-<<schwa>>-lik-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] A thing thrown away or forsaken by its owner; abandoned property.

RESENTENCING

resentencing,n. The act or an instance of imposing a new or revised criminal sentence. — resentence,vb.

RESERVATION

reservation. 1. The creation of a new right or interest (such as an easement), by and for the grantor, in real property being granted to another. Cf. EXCEPTION(3). [Cases: Deeds 141; Easements 14. C.J.S. Deeds §§ 279–282, 284; Easements § 60.]

implied reservation.An implied easement that reserves in a landowner an easement across a portion of sold land, such as a right-of-way over land lying between the seller's home and the only exit. • An implied reservation arises only if the seller could have expressly reserved an easement, but for some reason failed to do so. See implied easement under EASEMENT. [Cases: Easements 17. C.J.S. Easements §§ 62, 75–78, 105.]

“If the implied easement is in favor of the conveyee and is appurtenant to the tract conveyed, it is called an implied grant; if the implied easement is in favor of the conveyor and is appurtenant to the tract retained, it is called an implied reservation.” Ralph E. Boyer et al., The Law of Property 311 (4th ed. 1991).

2. The establishment of a limiting condition or qualification; esp., a nation's formal declaration, upon signing or ratifying a treaty, that its willingness to become a party to the treaty is conditioned on the modification or amendment of one or more provisions of the treaty as applied in its relations with other parties to the treaty. [Cases: Treaties 3.C.J.S. Treaties § 4.] 3. A tract of public land that is not open to settlers but is set aside for a special purpose; esp., a tract of land set aside for use by indigenous peoples. — Also termed (in sense 3) reserve; reserved land; withdrawn land. [Cases: Indians 12. C.J.S. Indians §§ 72–74, 79–80.]

RESERVATION-OF-RIGHTS LETTER

reservation-of-rights letter.Insurance. A notice of an insurer's intention not to waive its contractual rights to contest coverage or to apply an exclusion that negates an insured's claim. — Also termed reservation of rights.

RESERVE

reserve,n.1. Something retained or stored for future use; esp., a fund of money set aside by a bank or an insurance company to cover future liabilities.

bad-debt reserve.A reserve to cover losses on uncollectible accounts receivable.

legal reserve.The minimum amount of liquid assets that a bank or an insurance company must maintain by law to meet depositors' or claimants' demands. [Cases: Banks and Banking 14, 503; Insurance 1139. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 23, 674–676, 679; Insurance §§ 106–107, loss reserve. 1. An insurance company's reserve that represents the estimated value of future payments, as for losses incurred but not yet reported. [Cases: Insurance 1139. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 106–107, 116–118.] 2. A bank's reserve set aside to cover possible losses, as from defaulting loans.

mean reserve. In insurance, the average of the beginning reserve (after the premium has been paid for the policy year) and the ending reserve of the policy year.

policy reserve. An insurance company's reserve that represents the difference between net premiums and expected claims for a given year. • This type of reserve is kept esp. by life-insurance companies. [Cases: Insurance 1139. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 106–107, 116–118.]

required reserve. The minimum amount of money, as required by the Federal Reserve Board, that a bank must hold in the form of vault cash and deposits with regional Federal Reserve Banks. [Cases: Banks and Banking 351–359. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 650–662, 676–678, 682–687, 746.]

sinking-fund reserve. A reserve used to pay long-term debt. See sinking fund under FUND(1).

unearned-premium reserve. An insurance company's reserve that represents premiums that have been received in advance but not yet applied to policy coverage. • If a policyholder cancels coverage before the policy expires but has already paid a premium for the full policy period, the insurance company refunds the policyholder out of this reserve. [Cases: Insurance 1139. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 106–107, 116–118.]

2.RESERVATION(3).3. See net value under VALUE(2). — reserve,vb.

RES FUNGIBILES

res fungibiles (rays f<<schwa>>n-jib-<<schwa>>-leez), n. pl. [Latin] Civil law. Fungible things; things that are commercially interchangeable.

RES GESTAE

res gestae (rays jes-tee alsojes-tI), n. pl.[Latin “things done”] The events at issue, or other events contemporaneous with them. • In evidence law, words and statements about the res gestae are usu. admissible under a hearsay exception (such as present sense impression or excited utterance). Where the Federal Rules of Evidence or state rules fashioned after them are in effect, the use of res gestae is now out of place. See Fed. R. Evid. 803(1), (2). — Also termed res gesta. [Cases: Criminal Law 363–368; Evidence 118–128. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 454, 831, 867–876; Evidence §§ 342–363.]

“The res gestae embraces not only the actual facts of the transaction and the circumstances surrounding it, but the matters immediately antecedent to and having a direct causal connection with it, as well as acts immediately following it and so closely connected with it as to form in reality a part of the occurrence.” State v. Fouquette, 221 P.2d 404, 416–17 (Nev. 1950).

RES GESTAE WITNESS

res gestae witness. See WITNESS.

RES HABILES resiant, n. Archaic. A resident.

RESIDENCE

residence. 1. The act or fact of living in a given place for some time <a year's residence in

New Jersey>.2. The place where one actually lives, as distinguished from a domicile <she made her residence in Oregon>. • Residence usu. just means bodily presence as an inhabitant in a given place; domicile usu. requires bodily presence plus an intention to make the place one's home. A person thus may have more than one residence at a time but only one domicile. Sometimes, though, the two terms are used synonymously. Cf. DOMICILE(2). [Cases: Domicile 2. C.J.S. Domicile § 4.] 3. A house or other fixed abode; a dwelling .4. The place where a corporation or other enterprise does business or is registered to do business <Pantheon Inc.'s principal residence is in Delaware>. [Cases: Corporations 52, 503(1), 666. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 107–109, 717, 886, 937, 948–949.]

habitual residence. 1.Family law. A person's customary place of residence; esp., a child's customary place of residence before being removed to some other place. • The term, which appears as an undefined term in the Hague Convention, is used in determining the country having a presumed paramount interest in the child. 2.Copyright. An established place, esp. a country, in which one lives for the long term, usu. without being a citizen of the place. • The Berne Convention makes habitual residence an alternative to legal domicile in a member country to qualify for copyright protection but leaves the exact definition of the term to member countries.

RESIDENCY

RES INTER ALIOS ACTA

res inter alios acta (rays in-t<<schwa>>-r ay-lee-ohs ak-t<<schwa>>). [Latin “a thing done between others”] 1. Contracts. The common-law doctrine holding that a contract cannot unfavorably affect the rights of a person who is not a party to the contract. [Cases: Contracts 186(1).] 2. Evidence. The rule prohibiting the admission of collateral facts into evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 369.1; Evidence 99, 130. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 825; Evidence §§ 2–5, 197–199, 204, 206, 760–761.]

RES IPSA LOQUITUR

res ipsa loquitur (rays ip-s<<schwa>> loh-kw<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin “the thing speaks for itself”] Torts. The doctrine providing that, in some circumstances, the mere fact of an accident's occurrence raises an inference of negligence so as to establish a prima facie case. — Often shortened to res ipsa. [Cases: Negligence 1610. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 744–748, 754–756.]

“The phrase ‘res ipsa loquitur’ is a symbol for the rule that the fact of the occurrence of an injury, taken with the surrounding circumstances, may permit an inference or raise a presumption of negligence, or make out a plaintiff's prima facie case, and present a question of fact for defendant to meet with an explanation. It is merely a short way of saying that the circumstances attendant on the accident are of such a nature as to justify a jury, in light of common sense and past experience, in inferring that the accident was probably the result of the defendant's negligence, in the absence of explanation or other evidence which the jury believes." Stuart M. Speiser, The Negligence Case: Res Ipsa Loquitur § 1:2, at 5–6 (1972).

"It is said that res ipsa loquitur does not apply if the cause of the harm is known. This is a dark saying. The application of the principle nearly always presupposes that some part of the causal process is known, but what is lacking is evidence of its connection with the defendant's act or omission. When the fact of control is used to justify the inference that defendant's negligence was responsible it must of course be shown that the thing in his control in fact caused the harm. In a sense, therefore, the cause of the harm must be known before the maxim can apply." H.L.A. Hart & Tony Honoré, Causation in the Law 419–20 (2d ed. 1985).

"Res ipsa loquitur is an appropriate form of circumstantial evidence enabling the plaintiff in particular cases to establish the defendant's likely negligence. Hence the res ipsa loquitur doctrine, properly applied, does not entail any covert form of strict liability.... The doctrine implies that the court does not know, and cannot find out, what actually happened in the individual case. Instead, the finding of likely negligence is derived from knowledge of the causes of the type or category of accidents involved." Restatement (Third) of Torts § 17 cmt. a (Tentative Draft No. 1, 2001).

RES IPSA LOQUITUR TEST

res ipsa loquitur test (rays ip-s<<schwa>> loh-kw<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r). A method for determining whether a defendant has gone beyond preparation and has actually committed an attempt, based on whether the defendant's act itself would have indicated to an observer what the defendant intended to do. — Also termed equivocality test. See ATTEMPT(2). [Cases: Criminal Law 44. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 114–123.]

RESISTING ARREST

resisting arrest. The crime of obstructing or opposing a police officer who is making an arrest. — Also termed resisting lawful arrest. [Cases: Obstructing Justice 3. C.J.S. Obstructing Justice or Governmental Administration §§ 18–29.]

RESISTING PROCESS

resisting process. See OBSTRUCTION OF PROCESS.

RESISTING UNLAWFUL ARREST

resisting unlawful arrest. The act of opposing a police officer who is making an unlawful arrest. • Most jurisdictions have accepted the Model Penal Code position prohibiting the use of force to resist an unlawful arrest when the person arrested knows that a police officer is making the arrest. But some jurisdictions allow an arrestee to use nondeadly force to prevent the arrest. See Model Penal Code § 3. [Cases: Obstructing Justice 3. C.J.S. Obstructing Justice or Governmental Administration §§ 18–29.]

RES JUDICATA

res judicata (rays joo-di-kay-t<<schwa>> or -kah-t<<schwa>>). [Latin “a thing adjudicated”]
 1. An issue that has been definitively settled by judicial decision. [Cases: Judgment 540, 584, 585. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 697–700, 702–703, 749, 752.] 2. An affirmative defense barring the same parties from litigating a second lawsuit on the same claim, or any other claim arising from the same transaction or series of transactions and that could have been — but was not — raised in the first suit. • The three essential elements are (1) an earlier decision on the issue, (2) a final judgment on the merits, and (3) the involvement of the same parties, or parties in privity with the original parties. Restatement (Second) of Judgments §§ 17, 24 (1982). — Also termed res adjudicata; claim preclusion; doctrine of res judicata. Cf. COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL. [Cases: Judgment 540, 584, 948(1). C.J.S. Judgments §§ 697–700, 702–703, 752, 930–931, 933.]

“ ‘Res judicata’ has been used in this section as a general term referring to all of the ways in which one judgment will have a binding effect on another. That usage is and doubtless will continue to be common, but it lumps under a single name two quite different effects of judgments. The first is the effect of foreclosing any litigation of matters that never have been litigated, because of the determination that they should have been advanced in an earlier suit. The second is the effect of foreclosing relitigation of matters that have once been litigated and decided. The first of these, preclusion of matters that were never litigated, has gone under the name, ‘true res judicata,’ or the names, ‘merger’ and ‘bar.’ The second doctrine, preclusion of matters that have once been decided, has usually been called ‘collateral estoppel.’ Professor Allan Vestal has long argued for the use of the names ‘claim preclusion’ and ‘issue preclusion’ for these two doctrines [Vestal, Rationale of Preclusion, 9 St. Louis U. L.J. 29 (1964)], and this usage is increasingly employed by the courts as it is by Restatement Second of Judgments.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 100A, at 722–23 (5th ed. 1994).

res litigiosae (rays li-tij-ee-oh-see), n. pl.[Latin] Civil law. Things that are in litigation; property or rights that are the subject of a pending action.

RES MANCIPI

res mancipi (rays man-s<<schwa>>-pI). [Latin “things of mancipium”] Roman law. Property, specifically Italic land with its rustic servitudes and beasts of draft or burden, that can be transferred only by a formal ceremony of mancipation. — Also termed mancipi res; things mancipi. See MANCIPATION.

RES MERAЕ FACULTATIS

res merae facultatis (rays meer-ee fak-<<schwa>>l-tay-tis). [Law Latin] Scots law. A matter of mere power.

“Res merae facultatis Such, for example, is the right which a proprietor has of building upon his own property, or which any one has of walking upon the seashore, or sailing upon the sea, or on any navigable river. It is a right which may or may not be exercised at the pleasure of him who holds it; and such rights are never lost by their non-exercise for any length of time, because it is of their essential character that they may be used or exercised at any time.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 554 (4th ed. 1894).

RES MOBILES

res mobiles (rays moh-b<<schwa>>-leez), n. pl.[Latin] Civil law. Movable things; chattels personal.

RES NEC MANCIPI

res nec mancipi (rays nek man-s<<schwa>>-pI). [Latin “things not of mancipium”] Roman law. Property that can be transferred without a formal ceremony of mancipation. — Also termed things nec mancipi.

RES NON EST INTEGRA

res non est integra (rays non est in-t<<schwa>>-gr<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. The original position has changed; performance has taken place (in whole or in part).

RES NOVA

res nova (rays noh-v<<schwa>>). [Latin “new thing”] 1. An undecided question of law. 2. A case of first impression. — Also termed res integra. See case of first impression under CASE.

RES NULLIUS

res nullius (rays n<<schwa>>-II-<<schwa>>s). [Latin “thing of no one”] A thing that can belong to no one; an ownerless chattel.

RESOLUTION

resolution. 1.Parliamentary law. A main motion that formally expresses the sense, will, or action of a deliberative assembly (esp. a legislative body). • A resolution is a highly formal kind of main motion, often containing a preamble, and one or more resolving clauses in the form, “Resolved, That...”

concurrent resolution.A resolution passed by one house and agreed to by the other. • It expresses the legislature's opinion on a subject but does not have the force of law.

joint resolution.A legislative resolution passed by both houses. • It has the force of law and is subject to executive veto. [Cases: Statutes 22, 229. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 2, 28.]

simple resolution.A resolution passed by one house only. • It expresses the opinion or affects the internal affairs of the passing house, but it does not have the force of law.

2. Formal action by a corporate board of directors or other corporate body authorizing a particular act, transaction, or appointment. — Also termed corporate resolution.

shareholder resolution.A resolution by shareholders, usu. to ratify the actions of the board of directors.

3. A document containing such an expression or authorization.

RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE

RESPA (res-p<<schwa>>). abbr. REAL ESTATE SETTLEMENT PROCEDURES ACT.

RESPITE

respite (res-pit), n. 1. A period of temporary delay; an extension of time. 2. A temporary suspension of a death sentence; a reprieve. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1798. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1547–1548, 1687.] 3. A delay granted to a jury or court for further consideration of a verdict or appeal. 4. Civil law. An agreement between a debtor and several creditors for an extension of time to repay the various debts. La. Civ. Code art. 3084. — respite, vb.

forced respite. A respite in which some of the creditors are compelled by a court to give the same extension of time that the other creditors have agreed to.

voluntary respite. A respite in which all the creditors agree to the debtor's proposal for an extension of time.

RESPONDEAT OUSTER

respondeat ouster (ri-spon-dee-at ow-st<<schwa>>r). [Latin “let him make further answer”] An interlocutory judgment or order that a party who made a dilatory plea that has been denied must now plead on the merits. — Also termed judgment respondeat ouster. [Cases: Pleading 111.47.]

“In case of felony, if the plea be held bad, the judgment is respondeat ouster; or rather, as the defendant generally pleads over to the felony, the jury are charged again, and that at the same time with the issue on the plea of autrefois acquit, to inquire of the second issue, and the trial proceeds as if no plea in bar had been pleaded.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 461 (2d ed. 1826).

RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR

respondeat superior (ri-spon-dee-at soo-peer-ee-<<schwa>>r or s<<schwa>>-peer-ee-or). [Law Latin “let the superior make answer”] Torts. The doctrine holding an employer or principal liable for the employee's or agent's wrongful acts committed within the scope of the employment or agency. — Also termed master–servant rule. See SCOPE OF EMPLOYMENT. [Cases: Master and Servant 300, 315; Principal and Agent 159(2). C.J.S. Agency §§ 379–384; Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 181–184, 188–193, 203, 231–235, 242, 244–246, 248, 251–252, 254–255.]

“Most courts have made little or no effort to explain the result, and have taken refuge in rather empty phrases, such as ‘he who does a thing through another does it himself,’ or the endlessly repeated formula of ‘respondeat superior,’ which in itself means nothing more than ‘look to the man higher up.’ ” W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 69, at 500 (5th ed. 1984).

RESPONDE BOOK

responde book.Hist. Scots law. The chancellery's record of all duties payable by heirs who obtained royal warrants for possession of the decedent's lands.

RESPONDENT

respondent. 1. The party against whom an appeal is taken; APPELLEE. • In some appellate courts, the parties are designated as petitioner and respondent. In most appellate courts in the United States, the parties are designated as appellant and appellee. Often the designations depend on whether the appeal is taken by writ of certiorari (or writ of error) or by direct appeal. [Cases: Appeal and Error 326; Federal Courts 545.1. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 232–233, 238.] 2. The party against whom a motion or petition is filed. Cf. PETITIONER. 3. At common law, the defendant in an equity proceeding. 4.Civil law. One who answers for another or acts as another's security.

RESPONDENT BANK

respondent bank.See BANK.

RESPONDENTIA

respondentia (ree-spon-den-shee-<<schwa>> or res-pon-). [Law Latin fr. Latin respondere “to answer”] A loan secured by the cargo on one's ship rather than the ship itself. Cf. BOTTOMRY. [Cases: Shipping 88. C.J.S. Shipping § 221.]

RESPONDENTIA BOND

respondentia bond. See BOND(2).

RESPONDERE NON DEBET

respondere non debet (ri-spon-d*<<schwa>>-ree non deb-<<schwa>>*t). [Latin] Common-law pleading. The prayer of a plea in which the defendant insists that he or she does not have to answer — because of a privilege, for example.

RESPONSALIS responsalis (res-pon-say-lis). [Law Latin] 1.Hist. One who appears and answers for another. 2.Eccles. law. A proctor. See APOCRISARIUS.

RESPONSA PRUDENTIUM responsa prudentium (ri-spon-s*<<schwa>>* proo-den-shee-*<<schwa>>*m). [Latin “the answers of the learned”] Roman law. The opinions and judgments of eminent lawyers or jurists on questions of law addressed to them. • The responsa prudentium originally constituted part of the early Roman civil law. Roman citizens seeking legal advice, as well as magistrates and judges, often referred legal questions to leading jurists so as to obtain their opinions (responsa). The responsa of some leading jurists were collected, much in the manner of caselaw digests, and many of them passed into Justinian's Digest. The phrase responsa prudentium gradually migrated to the common law, but today it is of primarily historical use. — Also spelled responsa prudentum.

“[T]he judex, or as we would now call him, the referee, might have no technical knowledge of law whatever. Under such conditions the unlearned judicial magistrates naturally looked for light and leading to the jurisconsults who instructed them through their responsa prudentium, the technical name given to their opinions as experts, which were promptly recorded on tablets by their students or disciples.” Hannis Taylor, The Science of Jurisprudence 90–91 (1908).

“In [classical Latin] responsa prudentium is the usual form, but most of the legal sources ... have prudentum following the example of Blackstone (1765).” The Oxford English Dictionary (2d ed. 1989).

RESPONSE

response. Patents. A patent applicant's answer to an office action, usu. countering the examiner's rejections and objections and often amending the claims. [Cases: Patents 109. C.J.S. Patents §§ 152–155.]

RESPONSIBILITY

responsibility, n. 1. LIABILITY(1). 2. Criminal law. A person's mental fitness to answer in court for his or her actions. See COMPETENCY. [Cases: Mental Health 432. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 549–554.] 3.Criminal law. Guilt. — Also termed (in senses 2 & 3) criminal responsibility. — responsible,adj.

“Responsibility means answerability or accountability. It is used in the criminal law in the sense of ‘criminal responsibility’ and hence means answerability to the criminal law.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law and Procedure: Cases and Materials 399 (5th ed. 1977).

RESPONSIBLE BROKER-DEALER responsible broker-dealer.See BROKER.

RESPONSIVE responsive,adj. Giving or constituting a response; answering <the witness's testimony is not responsive to the question>. [Cases: Witnesses 248.C.J.S. Witnesses § 430.]

RESPONSIVE ACTION

responsive action.Patents. A patent applicant's answer to an examiner's rejections in an office action. • To be responsive, the answer must address all of the examiner's issues in detail, rather than merely submitting substitute claims. [Cases: Patents 108. C.J.S. Patents §§ 144, 148–151.]

RESPONSIVE PLEADING

rest,vb.1. (Of a litigant) to voluntarily conclude presenting evidence in a trial <after the police officer's testimony, the prosecution rested>.2. (Of a litigant) to voluntarily conclude presenting evidence in (a trial) <the defense rested its case after presenting just two witnesses>. • In sense 1, the verb is intransitive; in sense 2, it is transitive.

RESTATEMENT

Restatement. One of several influential treatises published by the American Law Institute describing the law in a given area and guiding its development. • The Restatements use a distinctive format of black-letter rules, official comments, illustrations, and reporter's notes. Although the Restatements are frequently cited in cases and commentary, a Restatement provision is not binding on a court unless it has been officially adopted as the law by that jurisdiction's highest court. Restatements have been published in the following areas of law: Agency, Conflict of Laws, Contracts, Foreign Relations Law of the United States, Judgments, Law Governing Lawyers, Property, Restitution, Security, Suretyship and Guaranty, Torts, Trusts, and Unfair Competition. — Also termed Restatement of the Law.

“We speak of the work which the organization should undertake as a restatement; its object should not only be to help make certain much that is now uncertain and to simplify unnecessary complexities, but also to promote those changes which will tend better to adapt the laws to the needs of life. The character of the restatement which we have in mind can be best described by saying that it should be at once analytical, critical and constructive.” Committee on the Establishment of a Permanent Organization for the Improvement of the Law (Elihu Root, chairman), Report Proposing the Establishment of an American Law Institute, 1 ALI Proc. 14 (1923).

restater. An author or reporter of a Restatement.

RESTAUR

restaur (res-tor).1. The recourse that insurers (esp. marine underwriters) have against each other according to the date of their insurance. 2. The recourse that marine insurers have against a ship's master if a loss occurs through the master's fault or negligence. 3. The recourse that one has against a guarantor or other person under a duty to indemnify. — Also spelled restor.

RESTITUTIO IN INTEGRUM

restitutio in integrum (res-t<<schwa>>-t[y]oo-shee-oh in in-t<<schwa>>-gr<< schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman & civil law. Restoration to the previous condition or the status quo. • In Roman law, a praetor could accomplish this by annulling a contract or transaction that was strictly legally valid but inequitable and by restoring the parties to their previous legal relationship. The phrase is still sometimes used in American law (esp. in Louisiana) when a court annuls a contract and orders restitution on equitable grounds.

RESTITUTION

restitution, n.1. A body of substantive law in which liability is based not on tort or contract but on the defendant's unjust enrichment. See UNJUST ENRICHMENT . 2. The set of remedies associated with that body of law, in which the measure of recovery is usu. based not on the plaintiff's loss, but on the defendant's gain. Cf. COMPENSATION; DAMAGES. 3. Return or restoration of some specific thing to its rightful owner or status. 4. Compensation for loss; esp., full or partial compensation paid by a criminal to a victim, not awarded in a civil trial for tort, but ordered as part of a criminal sentence or as a condition of probation. [Cases: Damages 1; Implied and Constructive Contracts 4; Infants 224; Sentencing and Punishment 1973, 2100–2217. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 19, 1459, 1462, 1465–1466, 1556, 1759–1786; Damages §§ 1–2, 4–6; Implied and Constructive Contracts§ 6.] — restitutionary, adj.

“The term ‘restitution’ appears in early decisions, but general recognition probably began with the publication of the Restatement of Restitution [in 1937]. The term is not wholly apt since it suggests restoration to the successful party of some benefit obtained from him. Usually this will be the case where relief is given, but by no means always. There are cases in which the successful party obtains restitution of something he did not have before, for example a benefit received by the defendant from a third person which justly should go to the plaintiff.” 1 George E. Palmer, The Law of Restitution § 1.1, at 4 (1978).

“ ‘Restitution’ is an ambiguous term, sometimes referring to the disgorging of something which has been taken and at times referring to compensation for injury done. Often, the result under either meaning of the term would be the same. If the plaintiff has been defrauded into paying $1,000 to the defendant, his loss and the defendant's gain coincide. Where they do not coincide, as where the plaintiff is out of pocket more than the defendant has gained and the defendant's conduct is tortious, the plaintiff will recover his loss in a quasi-contractual or equitable action for restitution. Unjust impoverishment as well as unjust enrichment is a ground for restitution. If the defendant is guilty of a non-tortious misrepresentation, the measure of recovery is not rigid but, as in other cases of restitution, such factors as relative fault, the agreed upon risks, and the fairness of alternative risk allocations not agreed upon and not attributable to the fault of either party need to be weighed.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 9-23, at 376 (3d ed. 1987).

RESTITUTIONARY REDRESS

restorative justice. An alternative delinquency sanction that focuses on repairing the harm done, meeting the victim's needs, and holding the offender responsible for his or her actions. • Restorative-justice sanctions use a balanced approach, producing the least restrictive disposition while stressing the offender's accountability and providing relief to the victim. The offender may be ordered to make restitution, to perform community service, or to make amends in some other way that the court orders.

RESTORATIVE MOTION

restorative motion. See MOTION(2).

RESTORATORY MOTION

restoratory motion. See restorative motion under MOTION(2).

RESTRAINING ORDER

restraining order. 1. A court order prohibiting family violence; esp., an order restricting a person from harassing, threatening, and sometimes merely contacting or approaching another specified person. • This type of order is issued most commonly in cases of domestic violence. A court may grant an ex parte restraining order in a family-violence case if it is necessary to (1) achieve the government's interest in protecting victims of family violence from further abuse, (2) ensure prompt action where there is an immediate threat of danger, and (3) provide governmental control by ensuring that judges grant such orders only where there is an immediate danger of such abuse. Fuentes v. Shevin, 407 U.S. 67, 92 S.Ct. 1983 (1972). — Also termed protection order; protective order; stay-away order. See ex parte motion under MOTION. [Cases: Breach of The Peace 15. C.J.S. Breach of the Peace §§ 14, 18, 21, 25; Domestic Abuse and Violence §§ 2–3.] 2. TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER. 3. A court order entered to prevent the dissipation or loss of property.

RESTRAINING POWER

restraining power. See POWER(3).

RESTRAINING STATUTE

restraining statute. See disabling statute under STATUTE.

RESTRAINT

restraint, n. 1. Confinement, abridgment, or limitation . See PRIOR RESTRAINT. 2. Prohibition of action; holding back <the victim's family exercised no restraint — they told the suspect exactly what they thought of him>. 3. RESTRAINT OF TRADE. 4. FORFEITURE RESTRAINT .

RESTRAINT OF MARRIAGE

restraint of marriage. A condition (esp. in a gift or bequest) that nullifies the grant to which it applies if the grantee marries or remarries. • Restraints of marriage are usu. void if they are general or unlimited in scope. [Cases: Contracts 111. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 245–248.]

RESTRAINT OF PRINCES

restraint of princes. Archaic. An embargo. • The phrase still occasionally appears in marine-insurance contexts. — Also termed restraint of princes and rulers; restraint of princes, rulers, and people. See EMBARGO.

RESTRAINT OF TRADE

restraint of trade. 1. A limitation on business dealings or professional or gainful occupations. 2. Antitrust. An agreement between or combination of businesses intended to eliminate competition, create a monopoly, artificially raise prices, or otherwise adversely affect the free market. • Restraints of trade are usu. illegal, but may be declared reasonable if they are in the best interests of both the parties and the public. — Often shortened to restraint. — Also termed conspiracy in restraint of trade. See PER SE RULE; RULE OF REASON. [Cases: Monopolies 12. C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 19, 26–27, 62–63.]

horizontal restraint. A restraint of trade imposed by agreement between competitors at the same level of distribution. • The restraint is horizontal not because it has horizontal effects, but because it is the product of a horizontal agreement. — Also termed horizontal agreement.

unreasonable restraint of trade. A restraint of trade that produces a significant anticompetitive effect and thus violates antitrust law.

vertical restraint. A restraint of trade imposed by agreement between firms at different levels of distribution (as between manufacturer and retailer).

RESTRAINT ON ALIENATION restraint on alienation. 1. A restriction, usu. in a deed of conveyance, on a grantee's ability to sell or transfer real property; a provision that conveys an interest and that, even after the interest has become vested, prevents or discourages the owner from disposing of it at all or from disposing of it in particular ways or to particular persons. • Restraints on alienation are generally unenforceable as against public policy favoring the free alienability of land. — Also termed unreasonable restraint on alienation. 2. A trust provision that prohibits or penalizes alienation of the trust corpus. [Cases: Perpetuities 6. C.J.S. Perpetuities § 65.]

RESTRICTED INDORSEMENT

restriction. 1. A limitation or qualification. 2. A limitation (esp. in a deed) placed on the use or enjoyment of property. See restrictive covenant under COVENANT(4). [Cases: Covenants 49–52, 69.] 3. Military law. A deprivation of liberty involving moral and legal, rather than physical, restraint. • A military restriction is imposed as punishment either by a commanding officer's nonjudicial punishment or by a summary, special, or general court-martial. Restriction is a lesser restraint because it permits the restricted person to perform full military duties. See nonjudicial punishment under PUNISHMENT. [Cases: Military Justice 526, 1322.1. C.J.S. Military Justice §§ 28–30.]

restriction in lieu of arrest. A restriction in which a person is ordered to stay within specific geographical limits, such as a base or a ship, and is permitted to perform full military duties. [Cases: Military Justice 935.1.]

4. Patents. A patent examiner's ruling that a patent application comprises two or more patentably distinct or independent inventions; the requirement that the applicant elect one invention to continue prosecuting under the original application by abandoning some of the original claims. • The applicant may defend the claims by traversing the requirement, abandon any nonelected invention, or continue prosecuting any nonelected invention under a separate divisional application. — Also termed requirement for restriction; requirement for division; restriction requirement; division. Cf. OBJECTION(2); REJECTION (4). [Cases: Patents 120.]

RESTRICTIVE PRINCIPLE OF SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY restrictive principle of sovereign immunity. The doctrine by which a foreign nation's immunity does not apply to claims arising from the nation's private or commercial acts, but protects the nation only from claims arising from its public functions. See COMMERCIAL-ACTIVITY EXCEPTION; JURE GESTIONIS; JURE IMPERII . [Cases: International Law 10.33. C.J.S. International Law §§ 46–48.]

“[T]he [Foreign Sovereign] Immunities Act codified the so-called ‘restrictive’ principle of sovereign immunity, as recognized in international law. Under this doctrine, the immunity of a foreign state in the courts of the United States is ‘restricted’ to claims involving the foreign state's public acts and does not extend to suits based on its commercial or private conduct.” 14A Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 3662, at 161–62 (3d ed. 1998).

Attorney and Client §§ 166, 169.] 2. A fee that a client pays to a lawyer simply to be available when the client needs legal help during a specified period or on a specified matter. 3. A lump-sum fee paid by the client to engage a lawyer at the outset of a matter. — Also termed engagement fee. 4. An advance payment of fees for work that the lawyer will perform in the future. — Also termed retaining fee. Cf. ATTORNEY'S FEES. [Cases: Attorney and Client 137. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 282, 331.] — retain, vb.

“Over the years, attorneys have used the term ‘retainer’ in so many conflicting senses that it should be banished from the legal vocabulary.... If some primordial urge drives you to use the term ‘retainer,’ at least explain what you mean in terms that both you and the client will understand.” Mortimer D. Schwartz & Richard C. Wydick, Problems in Legal Ethics 100, 101 (2d ed. 1988).

general retainer. A retainer for a specific length of time rather than for a specific project. [Cases: Attorney and Client 64. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 166, 169.]

retorna brevium (ri-tor-n<<schwa>> bree-vee-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. The return of a writ. • This was the indorsement on a writ by a sheriff or other officer, reporting on the writ's execution.

RETORNO HABENDO

retorno habendo.See DE RETORNO HABENDO.

RETORSION

retorsion (ri-tor-sh<<schwa>>n).Int'l law. An act of lawful retaliation in kind for another nation's unfriendly or unfair act. • Examples of retorsion include suspending diplomatic relations, expelling foreign nationals, and restricting travel rights. — Also spelled retortion. Cf. REPRISAL(2).

RETRACTION

retraction,n.1. The act of taking or drawing back <retraction of anticipatory repudiation before breach of contract>.2. The act of recanting; a statement in recantation <retraction of a defamatory remark>. [Cases: Libel and Slander 66. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood§ 195.] 3.Wills & estates. A withdrawal of a renunciation <because of her retraction, she took property under her uncle's will>. See RENUNCIATION(3).4.Copyright. The right of authors and artists to renounce their creative works and to forbid their sale or display. • Retraction is one of the moral rights of artists recognized in civil-law countries and much of Europe, but largely unavailable in the United States. — Also termed (in sense 4) withdrawal. — retract,vb.

RETRACTUS FEUDALIS

retractus feudalis (ri-trak-t<<schwa>>s fyoo-day-lis). [Law Latin “a recall of the fee”] Scots law. A superior's right to pay a debt of a vassal's lands in exchange for the return of the conveyance.

RETRAXIT

retraxit (ri-trak-sit). [Latin “he has withdrawn”] A plaintiff's voluntary withdrawal of a lawsuit in court so that the plaintiff forever forfeits the right of action. • In modern practice, retraxit is called voluntary dismissal with prejudice. A dismissal without prejudice does not operate as a retraxit. See judgment of retraxit under JUDGMENT.

RETREAT RULE

retreat rule.Criminal law. The doctrine holding that the victim of a murderous assault must choose a safe retreat instead of resorting to deadly force in self-defense, unless (1) the victim is at home or in his or her place of business (the so-called castle doctrine), or (2) the assailant is a person whom the victim is trying to arrest. • A minority of American jurisdictions have adopted this rule. Cf. NO-RETREAT RULE. [Cases: Homicide 798.]

“The rationale for the retreat rule is not difficult to ascertain, at least in part. It rests upon the view that human life, even the life of an aggressor, is sufficiently important that it should be preserved when to do so requires only the sacrifice of the much less important interest in standing one's ground.” George E. Dix, “Justification: Self-defense,” in 3 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 946, 948–49 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

RETRIAL

retrial,n. A new trial of an action that has already been tried. See trial de novo under TRIAL. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2311; New Trial 0.5.] — retry,vb.

RETRIBUTION

retribution,n.1.Criminal law. Punishment imposed as repayment or revenge for the offense committed; requital. Cf. DETERRENCE; REHABILITATION(1). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 44.] 2. Something justly deserved; repayment; reward. — retributive,adj. — retribute,vb.

RETRIBUTIVE DANGER

retributive danger.See DANGER.

RETRIBUTIVE PUNISHMENT

retributive punishment.See PUNISHMENT.

RETRIBUTIVISM

retributivism (ri-trib-y<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>-viz-<<schwa>>m). The legal theory by which criminal punishment is justified, as long as the offender is morally accountable, regardless of whether deterrence or other good consequences would result. • According to retributivism, a criminal is thought to have a debt to pay to society, which is paid by punishment. The punishment is also sometimes said to be society's act of paying back the criminal for the wrong done. Opponents of retributivism sometimes refer to it as “vindictive theory.” Cf. hedonistic utilitarianism under UTILITARIANISM; UTILITARIAN-DETERRENCE THEORY Y. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 44.]

maximalist retributivism. The classical form of retributivism, espoused by scholars such as Immanuel Kant, under which it is argued that society has a duty, not just a right, to punish a criminal who is guilty and culpable, that is, someone who has no justification or excuse for the illegal act.

minimalist retributivism. The more contemporary form of retributivism, which maintains that no one should be punished in the absence of guilt and culpability (that is, unless punishment is deserved), and that a judge may absolve the offender from punishment, wholly or partially, when doing so would further societal goals such as rehabilitation or deterrence.

RETROACTIVE

retroactive, adj. (Of a statute, ruling, etc.) extending in scope or effect to matters that have occurred in the past. — Also termed retrospective. Cf. PROSPECTIVE(1). [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 419; Courts 100(1); Statutes 261–278. C.J.S. Courts §§ 147–148; Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 89, 98; Statutes §§ 407–431.] — retroactivity, n.

“ ‘Retroactivity’ is a term often used by lawyers but rarely defined. On analysis it soon becomes apparent, moreover, that it is used to cover at least two distinct concepts. The first, which may be called ‘true retroactivity,’ consists in the application of a new rule of law to an act or transaction which was completed before the rule was promulgated. The second concept, which will be referred to as ‘quasi-retroactivity,’ occurs when a new rule of law is applied to an act or transaction in the process of completion.... [T]he foundation of these concepts is the distinction between completed and pending transactions” T.C. Hartley, The Foundations of European Community Law 129 (1981).

RETROACTIVE LAW

retroactive law. A legislative act that looks backward or contemplates the past, affecting acts or facts that existed before the act came into effect. • A retroactive law is not unconstitutional unless it (1) is in the nature of an ex post facto law or a bill of attainder, (2) impairs the obligation of contracts, (3) divests vested rights, or (4) is constitutionally forbidden. — Also termed retrospective law; retroactive statute; retrospective statute. [Cases: Constitutional Law 186–196; Statutes 261–278. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 390–404, 406–408, 421; Statutes §§ 407–431.]

RETROCESSION

retrocession. 1. The act of ceding something back (such as a territory or jurisdiction). [Cases:

United States 3. C.J.S. United States §§ 9–15.] 2. The return of a title or other interest in property to its former or rightful owner. 3. The process of transferring all or part of a reinsured risk to another reinsurance company; reinsurance of reinsurance. • Subsequent retrocessions are referred to as first retrocession, second retrocession, and so on. 4. The amount of risk that is so transferred.

RETURN OF WRIT

return of writ.The sheriff's bringing back a writ to the court that issued it, with a short written account (usu. on the back) of the manner in which the writ was executed. — Often shortened to return. See RETURN(1). [Cases: Execution 334; Sheriffs and Constables 87. C.J.S. Executions §§ 324–325; Sheriffs and Constables §§ 80–88.]

REUNIFICATION

reunification. The return of a child who has been removed from his or her parents because of abuse or neglect by one or both of them. • When a child has been removed from the home because of abuse or neglect, the state's primary goal is family reunification as long as this is in the best interests of the child. The state is required, in most instances, to provide the parent or parents with services that will enable them to provide adequately for their child upon his or her return. After the enactment of the Adoption and Safe Families Act in 1997, states became more concerned with limiting the time that children are in foster care and less concerned with lengthy reunification plans. — Also termed family reunification. See ADOPTION AND SAFE FAMILIES ACT ; PERMANENCY PLAN; ADOPTION ASSISTANCE AND CHILD WELFARE ACT . — reunify,vb.

RE-UP

re-up,vb.1. To reenlist in one of the armed forces <the soldier re-upped the day after being discharged>. [Cases: Armed Services 18. C.J.S. Armed Services §§ 43, 45–46.] 2. REVERSE CONDEMNATION reverse condemnation.See inverse condemnation under CONDEMNATION.

REVERSE CONFUSION

reverse confusion.See CONFUSION.

REVERSE-CONFUSION DOCTRINE reverse-confusion doctrine.Intellectual property. The rule that it is unfair competition if the defendant's use of a title that is confusingly similar to the one used by the plaintiff leads the public to believe that the plaintiff's work is the same as the defendant's, or that it is derived from or associated in some manner with the defendant. • Under the conventional passing-off form of unfair competition, similarity of titles leads the public to believe that the defendant's work is the same as the plaintiff's work, or is in some manner derived from the plaintiff. But in reverse confusion, the unfair competition results from the confusion created about the origin of the plaintiff's work. [Cases: Trade Regulation 334. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 87.]

REVERSE CONSENSUS

reverse consensus.Intellectual property. In a dispute-settlement procedure under TRIPs, an agreement between the parties that a dispute should not be submitted to a World Trade Organization panel for adjudication. • Before TRIPs, any party could delay formation of a WTO panel or adoption of its report by withholding consensus. Under TRIPs, each process is automatic unless all parties agree not to go forward.

RHODIAN LAW

Rhodian law (roh-dee-*<<schwa>>*n). As legend would have it, the earliest known system or code of maritime law, supposedly dating from 900 B.C. and adopted intact by the Romans. • Rhodian law was purportedly developed by the people of the island Rhodes, located in the Aegean Sea and now belonging to Greece. The ancient inhabitants of Rhodes are said to have controlled the seas because of their commercial prosperity and naval superiority. Despite the uncertainties about its history, Rhodian law has often been cited as a source of admiralty and maritime law.

“A strong tradition says that a maritime code was promulgated by the Island of Rhodes, in the Eastern Mediterranean, at the height of its power; the ridiculously early date of 900 B.C. has even been assigned to this suppositious code — a date accepted uncritically by some legal scholars. But even the existence of such a code has been pretty well cast in doubt, and we know next to nothing of its contents, if it existed. It is interesting to note, however, that the root-principle of the highly distinctive maritime-law system of general average ... is clearly stated in Justinian's Digest, and that the Rhodian Law is invoked as authority.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 1-2, at 3–4 (2d ed. 1975).

RIENS PASSA PER LE FAIT

riens passa per le fait (ryan pah-sah pair l<<schwa>> fay). [Law French “nothing passed by the deed”] Hist. A plea by which a party seeks to avoid the operation of a deed that has been enrolled or acknowledged in court.

RIENS PER DESCENT

riens per descent (ryan pair day-sawn). [Law French “nothing by descent”] Hist. The plea of an heir who is sued for the ancestor's debt and who received no land or assets from the ancestor.

RIER COUNTY

rier county. See RERE-COUNTY.

RIF

RIF.abbr.Reduction in force. See LAYOFF.

rif,vb. Slang. To lay off (a worker). • The word derives from the acronym for reduction in force.

RIGGING THE MARKET

rigging the market. The practice of artificially inflating stock prices, by a series of bids, so that the demand for those stocks appears to be high and investors will therefore be enticed into buying the stocks. See MANIPULATION. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.25. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 214, 226–227.]

right,n.1. That which is proper under law, morality, or ethics <know right from wrong>.2. Something that is due to a person by just claim, legal guarantee, or moral principle <the right of liberty>.3. A power, privilege, or immunity secured to a person by law <the right to dispose of one's estate>.4. A legally enforceable claim that another will do or will not do a given act; a recognized and protected interest the violation of which is a wrong .5. (often pl.) The interest, claim, or ownership that one has in tangible or intangible property  <publishing rights>.6. The privilege of corporate shareholders to purchase newly issued securities in amounts proportionate to their holdings. 7. The negotiable certificate granting such a privilege to a corporate shareholder.

“Right is a correlative to duty; where there is no duty there can be no right. But the converse is not necessarily true. There may be duties without rights. In order for a duty to create a right, it must be a duty to act or forbear. Thus, among those duties which have rights corresponding to them do not come the duties, if such there be, which call for an inward state of mind, as distinguished from external acts or forbearances. It is only to acts and forbearances that others have a right. It may be our duty to love our neighbor, but he has no right to our love.” John Chipman Gray, The Nature and Sources of the Law 8–9 (2d ed. 1921).

“[T]he word ‘right’ is one of the most deceptive of pitfalls; it is so easy to slip from a qualified meaning in the premise to an unqualified one in the conclusion. Most rights are qualified.” American Bank & Trust Co. v. Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, 256 U.S. 350, 358, 41 S.Ct. 499, 500 (1921)(Holmes, J.).

“[In Hohfeldian terminology,] A is said to have a right that B shall do an act when, if B does not do the act, A can initiate legal proceedings that will result in coercing B. In such a situation B is said to have a duty to do the act. Right and duty are therefore correlatives, since in this sense there can never be a duty without a right.” E. Allen Farnsworth, Contracts § 3.4, at 114 n.3 (3d ed. 1999).

absolute right. 1. A right that belongs to every human being, such as the right of personal liberty; a natural right. 2. An unqualified right; specif., a right that cannot be denied or curtailed except under specific conditions <freedom of thought is an absolute right>. • For example, a plaintiff has an absolute right to voluntarily nonsuit a case before it is finally submitted; after final submission, the court has discretion to grant or deny a voluntary nonsuit. Cf. relative right.

accessory right.A supplementary right that has been added to the main right that is vested in the same owner. • For example, the right in a security is accessory to the right that is secured; a servitude is accessory to the ownership of the land for whose benefit the servitude exists. Cf. principal right.

accrued right.A matured right; a right that is ripe for enforcement (as through litigation).

acquired right.A right that a person does not naturally enjoy, but that is instead procured, such as the right to own property.

civil right.See CIVIL RIGHT.

conditional right. A right that depends on an uncertain event; a right that may or may not exist. • For example, parents have the conditional right to punish their child, the condition being that the punishment must be reasonable.

conjugal rights. See CONJUGAL RIGHTS.

equitable right. A right cognizable within a court of equity. • If a legal right and an equitable right conflict, the legal right ordinarily prevails over and destroys the equitable right even if the legal right arose after the equitable right. With the merger of law and equity in federal and most state courts, the procedural differences between legal and equitable rights have been largely abolished. Cf. legal right. [Cases: Equity 3. C.J.S. Equity §§ 7, 11–16, 36–37.]

expectant right. A right that depends on the continued existence of present conditions until some future event occurs; a contingent right.

imperfect right. A right that is recognized by the law but is not enforceable. • Examples include time-barred claims and claims exceeding the local limits of a court's jurisdiction.

“[T]here are certain rights, sometimes called imperfect rights, which the law recognizes but will not enforce directly. Thus a statute-barred debt cannot be recovered in a court of law, but for certain purposes the existence of the debt has legal significance. If the debtor pays the money, he cannot later sue to recover it as money paid without consideration; and the imperfect right has the faculty of becoming perfect if the debtor makes an acknowledgment of the debt from which there can be inferred a promise to pay.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 286 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

imprescriptible right. A right that cannot be lost to prescription.

inalienable right. A right that cannot be transferred or surrendered; esp., a natural right such as the right to own property. — Also termed inherent right.

legal right. 1. A right created or recognized by law. 2. A right historically recognized by common-law courts. Cf. equitable right. 3. The capacity of asserting a legally recognized claim against one with a correlative duty to act.

natural right. A right that is conceived as part of natural law and that is therefore thought to exist independently of rights created by government or society, such as the right to life, liberty, and property. See NATURAL LAW.

negative right. A right entitling a person to have another refrain from doing an act that might harm the person entitled.

patent right. A right secured by a patent. [Cases: Patents 1. C.J.S. Patents §§ 1–5, 10–12, perfect right.A right that is recognized by the law and is fully enforceable.

personal right. 1. A right that forms part of a person's legal status or personal condition, as opposed to the person's estate. 2. See right in personam.

political right.The right to participate in the establishment or administration of government, such as the right to vote or the right to hold public office. — Also termed political liberty. [Cases: Constitutional Law 82(8); Elections 1; Officers and Public Employees 18. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 461–462, 612, 614–619, 624–626; Elections §§ 1(1, 10), 2; Officers and Public Employees §§ 21–22.]

positive right.A right entitling a person to have another do some act for the benefit of the person entitled.

precarious right.A right enjoyed at the pleasure of another; a right that can be revoked at any time.

primary right.A right prescribed by the substantive law, such as a right not to be defamed or assaulted. • The enforcement of a primary right is termed specific enforcement.

principal right.A right to which has been added a supplementary right in the same owner. Cf. accessory right.

private right.A personal right, as opposed to a right of the public or the state. Cf. public right.

procedural right.A right that derives from legal or administrative procedure; a right that helps in the protection or enforcement of a substantive right. Cf. substantive right.

property right.A right to specific property, whether tangible or intangible. [Cases: Constitutional Law 277. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 982.]

proprietary right.A right that is part of a person's estate, assets, or property, as opposed to a right arising from the person's legal status.

public right.A right belonging to all citizens and usu. vested in and exercised by a public office or political entity. Cf. private right.

real right. 1.Civil law. A right that is connected with a thing rather than a person. • Real rights include ownership, use, habitation, usufruct, predial servitude, pledge, and real mortgage.

“The term ‘real rights’ (jura in re) is an abstraction unknown to classical Roman law. The classical jurists were preoccupied with the availability of remedies rather than the existence of substantive rights, and did not have a generic term to include all ‘rights’ which civilian scholars of following generations classified as ‘real.’ The expression (‘real rights’) was first coined by medieval writers elaborating on the Digest in an effort to explain ancient procedural forms of action in terms of substantive rights.” A.N. Yiannopoulos, Real Rights in Louisiana and relative right.A right that arises from and depends on someone else's right, as distinguished from an absolute right. Cf. absolute right.

Comparative Law, 23 La. L. Rev. 161, 163 (1963).

remedial right.The secondary right to have a remedy that arises when a primary right is broken.

right in personam (in p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>m). An interest protected solely against specific individuals. — Also termed personal right; jus in personam. See IN PERSONAM.

right in rem (in rem). A right exercisable against the world at large. — Also termed real right; jus in rem. See IN REM.

“A right in rem need not relate to a tangible res. Thus a right that one's reputation should not be unjustifiably attacked is today described as a right in rem, since it is a right that avails against persons generally. This shows how far the conception has developed from the Roman notion of actio in rem, for one who sues to protect his reputation is not asking for judgment for a specific res. It should also be noticed that on breach of a right in rem, a right in personam arises against the aggressor.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 300 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

secondary right.A right prescribed by procedural law to enforce a substantive right, such as the right to damages for a breach of contract. • The enforcement of a secondary right is variously termed secondary enforcement, remedial enforcement, or sanctional enforcement. — Also termed remedial right; sanctioning right.

substantial right.An essential right that potentially affects the outcome of a lawsuit and is capable of legal enforcement and protection, as distinguished from a mere technical or procedural right.

substantive right (s<<schwa>>b-st<<schwa>>n-tiv). A right that can be protected or enforced by law; a right of substance rather than form. Cf. procedural right.

vested right.A right that so completely and definitely belongs to a person that it cannot be impaired or taken away without the person's consent. [Cases: Constitutional Law 92–112. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 228–276.]

RIGHT AGAINST SELF-INCRIMINATION

right against self-incrimination.A criminal defendant's or a witness's constitutional right — under the Fifth Amendment, but waivable under certain conditions — guaranteeing that a person cannot be compelled by the government to testify if the testimony might result in the person's being criminally prosecuted. • Although this right is most often asserted during a criminal prosecution, a person can also “plead the Fifth” in a civil, legislative, administrative, or grand-jury proceeding. — Also termed privilege against self-incrimination; right to remain silent. See SELF-INCRIMINATION N. [Cases: Criminal Law 393; Witnesses 297.C.J.S. Criminal Law § 645; Witnesses § 522.]

“The right against self-incrimination, protected by the Fifth Amendment, is central to the accusatorial system of criminal justice: together with the presumption of innocence, the right against self-incrimination ensures that the state must bear the burden of prosecution.... The right against self-incrimination is personal. It may be claimed only by the person who himself might be at risk for testifying. It may not be claimed on behalf of another” Jethro K. Lieberman, The Evolving Constitution 481–82 (1992).

RIGHT-AND-WRONG TEST

right-and-wrong test. See MCNAGHTEN RULES.

RIGHTFUL

rightful, adj. 1. (Of an action) equitable; fair . 2. (Of a person) legitimately entitled to a position . 3. (Of an office or piece of property) that one is entitled to <her rightful inheritance>.

RIGHT HEIR

right heir. See HEIR.

right in personam. See RIGHT.

RIGHT IN RE ALIENA

right in re aliena. See JUS IN RE ALIENA.

RIGHT IN RE PROPRIA

right in re propria. See JUS IN RE PROPRIA.

RIGHT NOT TO BE QUESTIONED right not to be questioned. See privilege against self-incrimination under PRIVILEGE(3).

RIGHT OF ACTION

right of action. 1. The right to bring a specific case to court. [Cases: Action 1, 2. C.J.S. Actions §§ 2–9, 11, 17, 21, 26, 31–33, 36.] 2. A right that can be enforced by legal action; a chose in action. Cf. CAUSE OF ACTION. [Cases: Action 1, 2; Property 5.5. C.J.S. Actions §§ 2–9, 11, 17, 21, 26, 31–33, 36; Property § 22; Trading Stamps and Coupons § 2.]

RIGHT OF ANGARY

right of angary. See ANGARY.

RIGHT OF APPROACH

right of approach. Int'l law. The right of a warship on the high seas to draw near another vessel to determine its nationality. [Cases: War and National Emergency 20. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 26, 28.]

RIGHT OF ASSEMBLY

right of assembly. The constitutional right — guaranteed by the First Amendment — of the people to gather peacefully for public expression of religion, politics, or grievances. — Also termed freedom of assembly; right to assemble. Cf. FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION; unlawful assembly under ASSEMBLY. [Cases: Constitutional Law 91. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 461–462, 466, 612–629.]

RIGHT OF AUDIENCE

right of audience. A right to appear and be heard in a given court. • The term is chiefly used in England to denote the right of a certain type of lawyer to appear in a certain type of court.

RIGHT OF COMMON

right of common. See PROFIT à PRENDRE.

RIGHT OF CONTRIBUTION

right of contribution. See CONTRIBUTION(1).

RIGHT OF DISCLOSURE

RIGHT OF DISCUSSION

right of discussion. Scots law. See BENEFIT OF DISCUSSION.

RIGHT OF DISSENT AND APPRAISAL right of dissent and appraisal. See APPRAISAL REMEDY.

RIGHT OF DIVISION

right of division. Scots law. See BENEFIT OF DIVISION.

RIGHT OF ELECTION

right of election. Wills & estates. A surviving spouse's statutory right to choose either the gifts given by the deceased spouse in the will or a forced share or a share of the estate as defined in the probate statute. — Also termed widow's election. See ELECTION(2); augmented estate under ESTATE (3). [Cases: Descent and Distribution 64; Wills 778–818. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1719–1741, 1841–1879.]

RIGHT OF ENTRY

right of entry. 1. The right of taking or resuming possession of land or other real property in a peaceable manner. 2. POWER OF TERMINATION. 3. The right to go into another's real property for a special purpose without committing trespass. • An example is a landlord's right to enter a tenant's property to make repairs. [Cases: Trespass 24. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 57–61, 167.] 4. The right of an alien to go into a jurisdiction for a special purpose. • An example is an exchange student's right to enter another country to attend college. [Cases: Aliens 39, 53.9. C.J.S. Aliens §§ 53–60, 63–64, 75–76, 84–87, 135, 170, 197–198, 249.]

RIGHT OF ENTRY FOR BREACH OF CONDITION right of entry for breach of condition. See POWER OF TERMINATION.

RIGHT OF ENTRY FOR CONDITION BROKEN right of entry for condition broken. See POWER OF TERMINATION.

RIGHT OF EXONERATION

right of exoneration. See EQUITY OF EXONERATION.

RIGHT OF FAMILY INTEGRITY

right of family integrity. A fundamental and substantive due-process right for a family unit to be free of unjustified state interference. • While not specifically mentioned in the U.S. Constitution, this right is said to emanate from it. The contours of the right are nebulous and incompletely defined, but it at least includes the right to bear children, to rear them, and to guide them according to the parents' beliefs, as well as the right of children to be raised by their parents free of unwarranted interference by state officials. The right restricts state action under the Fourteenth Amendment. Interference is not permitted in the absence of a compelling state interest and is reviewed under a strict-scrutiny standard. Most courts require a state to establish by clear and convincing evidence that interference in a familial relationship is justified. — Also termed right to family integrity. See PARENTAL-AUTONOMY DOCTRINE; PARENTAL-PRIVILEGE DOCTRINE . Cf. freedom of intimate association under FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION.

RIGHT OF FIRST PUBLICATION right of first publication. See common-law copyright under COPYRIGHT.

RIGHT OF FIRST REFUSAL

right of first refusal. A potential buyer's contractual right to meet the terms of a third party's higher offer. • For example, if Beth has a right of first refusal on the purchase of Sam's house, and if Terry offers to buy the house for $300,000, then Beth can match this offer and prevent Terry from buying it. Cf. RIGHT OF PREEMPTION. [Cases: Contracts 16, 172; Sales 24, 64; Vendor and Purchaser 18(.5), 57. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 37–41, 44, 46, 55–56, 58, 341, 506; Sales §§ 41–42, 82; Trading Stamps and Coupons §§ 7–9; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 98–106, 115–116.]

RIGHT OF FISHERY

right of fishery. See FISHERY(1).

RIGHT OF INNOCENT PASSAGE right of innocent passage. See INNOCENT PASSAGE.

RIGHT OF OCCUPANCY

right of occupancy. See INDIAN TITLE.

RIGHT OF PETITION

right of petition. See RIGHT TO PETITION.

RIGHT OF POSSESSION

right of possession. The right to hold, use, occupy, or otherwise enjoy a given property; esp., the right to enter real property and eject or evict a wrongful possessor. [Cases: Forcible Entry and Detainer 9(2).]

RIGHT OF PREEMPTION

right of preemption. A potential buyer's contractual right to have the first opportunity to buy, at a specified price, if the seller chooses to sell within the contracted period. • For example, if Beth has a right of preemption on Sam's house for five years at $100,000, Sam can either keep the house for five years (in which case Beth's right expires) or, if he wishes to sell during those five years, offer the house to Beth, who can either buy it for $100,000 or refuse to buy, but if she refuses, Sam can sell to someone else. — Also termed first option to buy. Cf. RIGHT OF FIRST REFUSAL. [Cases: Contracts 16; Sales 24; Vendor and Purchaser 18(.5). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 37–41, 44, 46, 55–56, 58; Sales §§ 41–42; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 98–100, 103–106, 115–116.]

right of privacy. 1. The right to personal autonomy. • The U.S. Constitution does not explicitly provide for a right of privacy or for a general right of personal autonomy, but the Supreme Court has repeatedly ruled that a right of personal autonomy is implied in the “zones of privacy” created by specific constitutional guarantees. [Cases: Constitutional Law 82(7)–82(13). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 461–470, 584, 612, 614–619, 623–628, 630–648; Right to Die § 2.] 2. The right of a person and the person's property to be free from unwarranted public scrutiny or exposure. — Also termed right to privacy. See INVASION OF PRIVACY.

RIGHT OF PUBLICITY

right of publicity. The right to control the use of one's own name, picture, or likeness and to prevent another from using it for commercial benefit without one's consent. [Cases: Torts 8.5(6). C.J.S. Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 9–16, 40–43, 45.]

“The right of publicity is a state-law created intellectual property right whose infringement is a commercial tort of unfair competition. It is a distinct legal category, not just a ‘kind of’ trademark, copyright, false advertising or right of privacy.” 1 J. Thomas McCarthy, The Rights of Publicity and Privacy § 1:3, at 1–2 (2d ed. 2000).

right of redemption.1.EQUITY OF REDEMPTION. 2.STATUTORY RIGHT OF REDEMPTION.

RIGHT OF REENTRY

RIGHT OF RETAINER

right of retainer.A trustee's power to withhold trust funds or property from distribution, exercisable when the beneficiary owes money to the trust.

RIGHT OF RETENTION

right of retention.See RETENTION.

RIGHT OF REVOLUTION

right of revolution.The inherent right of a people to cast out their rulers, change their polity, or effect radical reforms in their system of government or institutions, by force or general uprising, when the legal and constitutional methods of making such changes have proved inadequate or are so obstructed as to be unavailable.

RIGHT OF SEARCH

right of search.Int'l law. The right to stop, visit, and examine vessels on the high seas to discover whether they or the goods they carry are liable to capture; esp., a belligerent state's right to stop any merchant vessel of a neutral state on the high seas and to search as reasonably necessary to determine whether the ship has become liable to capture under the international law of naval warfare. • This right carries with it no right to destroy without full examination, unless those on a given vessel actively resist. — Also termed right of visit; right of visit and search; right of visitation; right of visitation and search. See VISIT.

RIGHT OF SUBROGATION right of subrogation.1.SUBROGATION. 2.EQUITY OF SUBROGATION.

RIGHT OF SUIT

right of suit. A person's right to seek redress in a court.

RIGHT OF SUPPORT

right of support. Property. 1. A landowner's right to have the land supported by adjacent land and by the underlying earth. [Cases: Adjoining Landowners 2. C.J.S. Adjoining Landowners §§ 9–10, 14.] 2. A servitude giving the owner of a house the right to rest timber on the walls of a neighboring house.

RIGHT OF SURVIVORSHIP

right of survivorship. A joint tenant's right to succeed to the whole estate upon the death of the other joint tenant. — Also termed jus accrescendi. See SURVIVORSHIP; joint tenancy under TENANCY. [Cases: Joint Tenancy 6. C.J.S. Joint Tenancy §§ 3, 5, 7, 10–15, 19–20, 38–40.]

RIGHT OF TERMINATION

right of termination. A remedy involving the ending of contractual relations, accorded to a party to a contract when the other party breaches a duty that arises under the contract. • The right of termination is contrasted with a right to rescind, which arises when the other party breaches a duty that arises independently of the contract. — Also termed right to terminate. [Cases: Contracts 217; Sales 84. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 436–443, 446, 448–449, 500–501; Sales §§ 108, 119.]

RIGHT OF TRANSIT PASSAGE right of transit passage. See TRANSIT PASSAGE.

RIGHT OF VISIT

right of visit. See RIGHT OF SEARCH.

RIGHT OF VISIT AND SEARCH right of visit and search. See RIGHT OF SEARCH.

RIGHT OF VISITATION

right of visitation. 1. VISITATION RIGHT. 2. RIGHT OF SEARCH.

RIGHT OF VISITATION AND SEARCH right of visitation and search. See RIGHT OF SEARCH.

RIGHT-OF-WAY

right-of-way. 1. The right to pass through property owned by another. • A right-of-way may be established by contract, by longstanding usage, or by public authority (as with a highway). Cf. EASEMENT. [Cases: Easements 1. C.J.S. Easements §§ 2–8, 13–14, 21–22, 24, 53–55, 57–58, 89.] 2. The right to build and operate a railway line or a highway on land belonging to another, or the land so used. [Cases: Railroads 69. C.J.S. Railroads §§ 182–189.] 3. The right to take precedence in traffic. [Cases: Automobiles 154, 171(4); Highways 99; C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 729–739, 741–746, 748, 1299.] 4. The strip of land subject to a nonowner's right to pass through. — Also written right of way. Pl. rights-of-way.

private right-of-way. See EASEMENT.

public right-of-way. The right of passage held by the public in general to travel on roads, freeways, and other thoroughfares.

RIGHT OF WHARFING OUT right of wharfing out. A right to the exclusive use of submerged lands, as by establishing a permanent structure or wharf on the land to dock oceangoing vessels. [Cases: Navigable Waters 43(2).]

RIGHTS ARBITRATION

rights arbitration. See grievance arbitration under ARBITRATION.

RIGHTS-CONSCIOUSNESS rights-consciousness. See CLAIMS-CONSCIOUSNESS.

RIGHTS-MANAGEMENT INFORMATION rights-management information. Intellectual property. Information about an intellectual-property right, affixed to the subject matter when it is communicated to the public, esp. in electronic form, and identifying the right's owner, terms of use, indexing numbers or codes, or other identifying information. • The information facilitates contracting with the owner of the rights. In digital technology, laws may ban the removal or alteration of rights-management information as a form of intellectual-property protection.

RIGHT OF ATTRIBUTION

right of attribution. See ATTRIBUTION RIGHT.

RIGHTS OFF

rights off. See EX RIGHTS.

RIGHTS OFFERING

rights offering. See OFFERING.

RIGHTS ON

rights on. See CUM RIGHTS.

RIGHT TO ASSEMBLE

right to assemble. See RIGHT OF ASSEMBLY.

RIGHT TO BEAR ARMS

right to bear arms.The constitutional right of persons to own firearms.U.S. Const. amend II. See SECOND AMENDMENT. [Cases: Weapons 1.C.J.S. Weapons §§ 1–8, 61–62.]

RIGHT TO CHOOSE

right to choose.See FREEDOM OF CHOICE.

RIGHT-TO-CONVEY COVENANT right-to-convey covenant.See covenant of seisin under COVENANT(4).

RIGHT TO COUNSEL

right to counsel. 1.Criminal law. A criminal defendant's constitutional right, guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment, to representation by a court-appointed lawyer if the defendant cannot afford to hire one. • The Supreme Court has recognized a juvenile delinquent defendant's right to counsel. In re Gault, 387 U.S. 1, 87 S.Ct. 1428 (1967). — Also termed benefit of counsel; right to assistance of counsel. [Cases: Criminal Law 641.1. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 277–278, 281.] 2.Family law. The right of a defendant in a suit for termination of parental rights to representation by a court-appointed lawyer if the defendant cannot afford to hire one. • Although some states appoint counsel for indigent defendants in a suit for termination of parental rights, the Supreme Court has held that the Constitution does not require that counsel be appointed for indigent defendants in all termination suits, but if a criminal charge may be made, the right to counsel may attach. Lassiter v. Department of Soc. Servs., 452 U.S. 18, 101 S.Ct. 2153 (1981). See ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL.

RIGHT TO DIE

right to die.The right of a terminally ill person to refuse life-sustaining treatment. — Also termed right to refuse treatment. See ADVANCE DIRECTIVE. [Cases: Health 914.]

RIGHT TO EXCLUDE

right to exclude.Patents. A patentee's right to prevent others from making, using, selling, or offering for sale the patentee's invention. [Cases: Patents 191. C.J.S. Patents §§ 217, 314, 339.]

RIGHT TO FAMILY INTEGRITY right to family integrity.See RIGHT OF FAMILY INTEGRITY.

RIGHT-TO-KNOW ACT

right-to-know act.A federal or state statute requiring businesses (such as chemical manufacturers) that produce hazardous substances to disclose information about the substances both to the community where they are produced or stored and to employees who handle them. — Also termed right-to-know statute. [Cases: Environmental Law 415.]

RIGHT TO PETITION

right to petition.The constitutional right — guaranteed by the First Amendment — of the people to make formal requests to the government, as by lobbying or writing letters to public officials. — Also termed right of petition; freedom of petition. [Cases: Constitutional Law 91.C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 461–462, 466, 612–629.]

RIGHT TO REFUSE TREATMENT right to refuse treatment.See RIGHT TO DIE.

RIGHT TO REMAIN SILENT

right to remain silent.See RIGHT AGAINST SELF-INCRIMINATION.

RIGHT TO RESCIND

right to rescind.The remedy accorded to a party to a contract when the other party breaches a duty that arises independently of the contract. • The right to rescind is contrasted with a right of termination, which arises when the other party breaches a duty that arises under the contract. — Also termed right of rescission. [Cases: Contracts 258. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 456, 461–463, 465–467, 472, 476.]

RIGHT TO TERMINATE

right to terminate.See RIGHT OF TERMINATION.

RIGHT TO TRAVEL

RIGOR MORTIS

rigor mortis (rig-*<<schwa>>*r mor-tis). The temporary stiffening of a body's joints and muscles after death. • The onset of rigor mortis can vary from 15 minutes to several hours after death, depending on the body's condition and on atmospheric factors.

RINGING OUT

ringing out. See RINGING UP.

RINGING THE CHANGES

ringing the changes. Fraud consisting in the offender's using a large bill to pay for a small purchase, waiting for the shopkeeper to put change on the counter, and then, by a series of maneuvers involving changes of mind — such as asking for some other article of little value or for smaller change for some of the money on the counter — creating a confused situation in which the offender picks up much more of the money than is really due. [Cases: Larceny 14(1). C.J.S. Larceny §§ 1(4), 20, 32.]

RINGING UP

ringing up. A method by which a group of commodities dealers discharge contracts for future delivery in advance by using offsets, cancellations, and price adjustments, thus saving the cost of actual delivery and change of possession. — Also termed ringing out.

riot, n. 1. An assemblage of three or more persons in a public place for the purpose of accomplishing by concerted action — and in a turbulent and disorderly manner — a common purpose (regardless of the lawfulness of that purpose). 2. An unlawful disturbance of the peace by an assemblage of usu. three or more persons acting with a common purpose in a violent or tumultuous manner that threatens or terrorizes the public. Cf. unlawful assembly under ASSEMBLY; CIVIL COMMOTION; ROUT; AFFRAY. [Cases: Riot 1. C.J.S. Riot; Insurrection §§ 2–10.] — riotous, adj. — riot, vb.

“A riot is defined as an unlawful assembly (i.e. an assembly come together in pursuance of an unlawful purpose), consisting of at least three persons, which has begun to create a breach of the peace. At Common Law it is an indictable misdemeanour, punishable by a fine and imprisonment. But the statutory form of it, introduced by the Riot Act of 1714, is better known. By that statute, passed to deal with Jacobite disturbances, it was provided that the members of a riotous assembly of twelve or more persons which does not disperse within an hour after the reading by a magistrate of the proclamation contained in the Act, become guilty of felony, which, at the time of the passing of the Act, was a capital offence, and is, even now, punishable with imprisonment for life.” Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 136 (P.B. Fairest ed., 6th ed. 1967).

terror and alarm.... When they come together for this purpose they are guilty of unlawful assembly. When they start on their way to carry out their common design they are guilty of rout. In the actual execution of their design they are guilty of riot.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 483 (3d ed. 1982).

RIO TACT

Riot Act. A 1714 English statute that made it a capital offense for 12 or more rioters to continue together for an hour after a magistrate has officially proclaimed that rioters must disperse.

- This statute was not generally accepted in the United States and did not become a part of American common law. It did, however, become a permanent part of the English language in the slang phrase reading the Riot Act (meaning “to reprimand vigorously”), which originally referred to the official command for rioters to disperse.

RIO TOS ASSEMBLY

riotous assembly. See ASSEMBLY.

RIPAE MUNIENDAE CAUSA

ripae muniendae causa (rI-pee myoo-nee-en-dee kaw-z<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. For the purpose of strengthening a riverbank.

RIPARIAN

riparian (ri-pair-ee-<<schwa>>n or rI-), adj. Of, relating to, or located on the bank of a river or stream (or occasionally another body of water, such as a lake) <riparian land> . Cf. LITTORAL. [Cases: Navigable Waters 39–46; Waters and Water Courses 34–49, 109. C.J.S. Navigable Waters §§ 82–102, 111, 126–131, 134; Waters §§ 3–17, 20, 91, 238–240, 243–244, 760–761, 926.]

RIPARIAN LAND riparian land. See LAND.

RIPARIAN PROPRIETOR

riparian proprietor. A person who is in possession of riparian land or who owns an estate in it; a landowner whose property borders on a stream or river. See riparian land under LAND. [Cases: Navigable Waters 39(1); Waters and Water Courses 39. C.J.S. Navigable Waters § 83; Waters § 11.]

riparian right. (often pl.) The right of a landowner whose property borders on a body of water or watercourse.

- Such a landowner traditionally has the right to make reasonable use of the water.

— Also termed water right. [Cases: Navigable Waters 39–46; Waters and Water Courses 34–47. C.J.S. Navigable Waters §§ 82–102, 111, 126–131, 134; Waters §§ 3–14, 20, 91, 760–761, 926.]

RIPARIAN-RIGHTS DOCTRINE riparian-rights doctrine. The rule that owners of land bordering on a waterway have equal rights to use the water passing through or by their property. Cf. PRIOR-APPROPRIATION DOCTRINE. [Cases: Navigable Waters 39; Waters and Water Courses 40. C.J.S. Navigable Waters § 82; Waters § 12.]

RIPENESS

ripeness, n. 1. The circumstance existing when a case has reached, but has not passed, the point when the facts have developed sufficiently to permit an intelligent and useful decision to be made. 2. The requirement that this circumstance must exist before a court will decide a controversy. See JUSTICIABILITY. Cf. MOOTNESS DOCTRINE; PREMATURITY(1). [Cases: Action 6; Federal Courts 12.1. C.J.S. Actions §§ 38–45.] — ripe, adj. — ripen, vb.

RIPPER ACT

ripper act. Slang. A statute that gives a government's chief executive broad powers to appoint and remove department heads or other subordinate officials.

RISE

rise, vb. 1. (Of a court) to adjourn finally at the end of a term. 2. (Of spectators and participants in a courtroom) to stand when the judge enters or exits. 3. (Of a court) to take a recess or temporary break, as at the end of a day. 4. Parliamentary law. (Of a special committee that has exhausted its business) to dissolve and send a report to the referring body. • A committee's rising is equivalent to a deliberative assembly's adjourning sine die. — Also termed rise and report. Cf. adjourn sine die under ADJOURN(2).

RISING VOTE

rising vote. See VOTE(4).

RISING VOTE OF THANKS

rising vote of thanks. See rising vote under VOTE(4).

RISK

risk, n. 1. The uncertainty of a result, happening, or loss; the chance of injury, damage, or loss; esp., the existence and extent of the possibility of harm <many feel that skydiving is not worth the risk>. See ASSUMPTION OF THE RISK. 2. Liability for injury, damage, or loss if it occurs <the consumer-protection statute placed the risk on the manufacturer instead of the buyer>. 3. Insurance. The chance or degree of probability of loss to the subject matter of an insurance policy <the insurer undertook the risk in exchange for a premium>. Cf. PERIL(2). [Cases: Insurance 1542. C.J.S. Insurance § 67.] 4. Insurance. The amount that an insurer stands to lose <the underwriter took steps to reduce its total risk>. 5. Insurance. A person or thing that an insurer considers a hazard; someone or something that might be covered by an insurance policy <she's a poor risk for health insurance>. [Cases: Insurance 1542(3).] 6. Insurance. The type of loss covered by a policy; a hazard from a specified source <this homeowner's policy covers fire risks and flood risks>. [Cases: Insurance 2097. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 282–283, 395, 860.] — risk, vb.

absorbable risk.A potential loss that a corporation believes that it can cover either with available capital or with self-insurance.

assigned risk.One who is a poor risk for insurance but whom an insurance company is forced to insure because of state law. • For example, an accident-prone driver is an assigned risk in a state with a compulsory motor-vehicle-insurance statute. [Cases: Insurance 1528. C.J.S. Insurance § 63.]

classified risk.In life and health policies, the risk created by a policyholder's substandard health or other peril.

noninsurable risk.A risk for which insurance will not be written because the risk is too uncertain to be the subject of actuarial analysis.

pure risk.A risk that always results in a loss.

shifting risk.The changing risk covered under an insurance policy insuring a stock of goods or similar property that varies in amount and composition in the course of trade. [Cases: Insurance 2138(1). C.J.S. Insurance § 417.]

speculative risk.A risk that can result in either a loss or a gain.

RISK ARBITRAGE

risk arbitrage.See ARBITRAGE.

RISK ASSESSMENT

risk assessment.Family law. A process for ascertaining the likelihood that a person, usu. a parent, will harm a child. • Before a child can be removed from his or her family by a governmental entity, a risk assessment should be performed to determine the likelihood of the child's being harmed in the future.

RISK-AVERSE

risk-benefit test.See RISK-UTILITY TEST.

RISK CAPITAL

risk capital.See CAPITAL.

RISK-CAPITAL TEST

risk-capital test.Securities. A test of whether a transaction constitutes the sale of a security (and is thus subject to securities laws) based on whether the seller is soliciting risk capital with which to develop a business venture. Cf. CAPITAL-RISK TEST. [Cases: Securities Regulation 5, 248, 249. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 3, 9, 379–380, 384–387, 389–390, 392–393.]

RISK DISTRIBUTION

risk distribution. The method by which a legal system allocates the risk of harm between the person who suffers it and the loss.

RISK FACTOR

risk factor. Insurance. In life-insurance ratemaking, the estimated cost of present and future claims, based on a mortality table. • The risk factor is one element that a life insurer uses to calculate premium rates. See PREMIUM RATE . Cf. INTEREST FACTOR; MORTALITY FACTOR. [Cases: Insurance 1542.C.J.S. Insurance § 67.]

RISK MANAGEMENT

risk management. The procedures or systems used to minimize accidental losses, esp. to a business.

RISK MANAGEMENT AGENCY

Risk Management Agency. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for administering the programs of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation and for overseeing other programs relating to the risk management of crops and commodities. — Abbr. RMA.

RISK OF JURY DOUBT

risk of jury doubt. See BURDEN OF PERSUASION.

RISK OF LOSS

risk of loss. The danger or possibility that a party will have to bear the costs and expenses for the damage, destruction, or inability to locate goods or other property.

RISK OF NONPERSUASION risk of nonpersuasion. See BURDEN OF PERSUASION.

RISK-STOPS-HERE RULE

risk-stops-here rule. See DOCTRINE OF SUPERIOR EQUITIES.

RISK-UTILITY TEST

risk-utility test. A method of imposing product liability on a manufacturer if the evidence shows that a reasonable person would conclude that the benefits of a product's particular design versus the feasibility of an alternative safer design did not outweigh the dangers inherent in the original design. — Also termed danger-utility test; risk-benefit test. Cf. CONSUMER-CONTEMPLATION TEST T. [Cases: Products Liability 11. C.J.S. Products Liability §§ 19–21.]

RIT

RIT. abbr. Rochester Institute for Technology. See NATIONAL TECHNICAL INSTITUTE roadstead. Maritime law. A convenient or safe place where vessels usu. anchor.

ROADSTEAD

ROBBERY

robbery, n. The illegal taking of property from the person of another, or in the person's presence, by violence or intimidation; aggravated larceny. • Robbery is usu. a felony, but some jurisdictions classify some robberies as high misdemeanors. — Also termed (in Latin) crimen roberiae. See LARCENY; THEFT. Cf. BURGLARY. [Cases: Robbery 1. C.J.S. Robbery §§ 2, 4, 12, 90–91.] — rob, vb.

“Robbery is larceny from the person by violence or intimidation. It is a felony both at common law and under modern statutes. Under some of the new penal codes robbery does not require an actual taking of property. If force or intimidation is used in the attempt to commit theft this is sufficient.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 343 (3d ed. 1982).

aggravated robbery. Robbery committed by a person who either carries a dangerous weapon — often called armed robbery — or inflicts bodily harm on someone during the robbery. • Some statutes also specify that a robbery is aggravated when the victim is a member of a protected class, such as children or the elderly. [Cases: Robbery 11. C.J.S. Robbery §§ 24–28, 79, 82, 90.]

armed robbery. Robbery committed by a person carrying a dangerous weapon, regardless of whether the weapon is revealed or used. • Most states punish armed robbery as an aggravated form of robbery rather than as a separate crime. [Cases: Robbery 11. C.J.S. Robbery §§ 24–28, 79, 82, 90.]

conjoint robbery (k<<schwa>>n-joynt). A robbery committed by two or more persons. [Cases: Robbery 15. C.J.S. Robbery §§ 31–33, 78, 90.]

highway robbery. 1. Robbery committed against a traveler on or near a public highway. [Cases: Robbery 1. C.J.S. Robbery §§ 2, 4, 12, 90–91.] 2. Figuratively, a price or fee that is unreasonably high; excessive profit or advantage.

simple robbery. Robbery that does not involve an aggravating factor or circumstance. [Cases: Robbery 1. C.J.S. Robbery §§ 2, 4, 12, 90–91.]

robe. 1. The gown worn by a judge while presiding over court. • In the U.S., judges generally wear plain black gowns. In the U.K., judicial robes vary in color and adornment, depending on the judge's rank, the season, and the court, and are traditionally worn with white horsehair wigs. — Also termed judicial robe. 2. (often cap.) The legal or judicial profession <eminent members of the robe>.

ROBERT'S RULES

Robert's Rules. 1. A parliamentary manual titled Robert's Rules of Order, originally written in 1875–1876 by Henry M. Robert (1837–1923). • The manual went through three editions under its original title and three more (beginning in 1915) under the title Robert's Rules of Order Revised. Since 1970 it has been titled Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised. It is the best selling and most commonly adopted parliamentary manual in the United States. 2. Any parliamentary manual that includes “Robert's Rules” in its title. • The copyright on the first several editions has expired, and many imitators have adapted those editions in varying degrees of faithfulness to the original. 3. (sing.) RULE(3). See PARLIAMENTARY MANUAL.

ROBINSON–PATMAN ACT

Robinson–Patman Act. A federal statute (specif., an amendment to the Clayton Act) prohibiting price discrimination that hinders competition or tends to create a monopoly. 15 USCA § 13. See ANTITRUST LAW; CLAYTON ACT. [Cases: Trade Regulation 911–914. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 382–383, 385.]

ROCHIN<TT> RULE

Rochin rule. The now-rejected principle that unconstitutionally obtained evidence is admissible against the accused unless the evidence was obtained in a manner that shocks the conscience (such as pumping the stomach of a suspect to obtain illegal drugs that the suspect has swallowed, as occurred in the Rochin v. California case). • The Supreme Court handed down Rochin before the Fourth Amendment exclusionary rule applied to the states. Rochin v. California, 342 U.S. 165, 72 S.Ct. 205 (1952).

ROCKET DOCKET

rocket docket. 1. An accelerated dispute-resolution process. 2. A court or judicial district known for its speedy disposition of cases. 3. A similar administrative process, in which disputes must be decided within a specified time (such as 60 days).

ROGATIO TESTIUM

rogatio testium. The production of a witness who can testify to the making of a nuncupative will. • The witness must confirm that the testator declared or expressed that the words spoken were a will. See nuncupative will under WILL.

ROGATORY LETTER

rogatory letter (rog-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). See LETTER OF REQUEST.

ROLL

roll, n. 1. A record of a court's or public office's proceedings. [Cases: Judgment 277; Records 6, 32. C.J.S. Judgments § 130; Records §§ 9–14, 17–18, 65, 67–73.] 2. An official list of the persons and property subject to taxation. — Also termed (in sense 2) tax roll; tax list; assessment roll. Cf. TAXPAYERS' LISTS. [Cases: Taxation 408. C.J.S. Taxation § 580.] 3. Parliamentary law. The roster of those entitled to vote. — Also termed roll of delegates; roll of members.

ROLL CALL

roll call. See CALL(1).

ROLL-CALL VOTE

roll-call vote. See VOTE(4).

ROLLED-UP PLEA

rolled-up plea. See PLEA(3).

ROLLING STOCK

rolling stock. Movable property, such as locomotives and rail cars, owned by a railroad.

ROLL OF DELEGATES

roll of delegates. See ROLL(3).

ROLL OF MEMBERS

roll of members. See ROLL(3).

ROLLOVER

rollover, n. 1. The extension or renewal of a short-term loan; the refinancing of a maturing loan or note. 2. The transfer of funds (such as IRA funds) to a new investment of the same type, esp. so as to defer payment of taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3587, 3594. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 206–208, 313, 319–326.] — roll over,vb.

ROLLOVER MORTGAGE

rollover mortgage.See renegotiable-rate mortgage under MORTGAGE.

ROMAN–DUTCH LAW

Roman–Dutch law.A system of law in Holland from the mid-15th century to the early 19th century, based on a mixture of Germanic customary law and Roman law as interpreted in medieval and Renaissance lawbooks. • This law forms the basis of modern South African law, the law of several other countries in southern Africa, and the law of Sri Lanka.

“The phrase ‘Roman–Dutch Law’ was invented by Simon van Leeuwen, who employed it as the sub-title of his work entitled Paratitla Juris Novissimi, published at Leyden in 1652. Subsequently his larger and better known treatise on the ‘Roman–Dutch Law’ was issued under that name in the year 1664.

“The system of law thus described is that which obtained in the province of Holland from the middle of the fifteenth to the early years of the nineteenth century. Its main principles were carried by the Dutch into their settlements in the East and West Indies; and when some of these, namely, the Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, and part of Guiana, at the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth century, passed under the dominion of the Crown of Great Britain, the old law was retained as the common law of the territories which now became British colonies. With the expansion of the British Empire in South Africa, the sphere of the Roman–Dutch Law has extended its boundaries, until the whole of the area comprised within the Union of South Africa ... has adopted this system as its common law. This is the more remarkable since in Holland itself and in the Dutch colonies of the present day the old law has been replaced by codes” R.W. Lee, An Introduction to Roman–Dutch Law 2 (4th ed. 1946).

ROMANESQUE LAW

Romanesque law.See CIVIL LAW(1).

ROMANIST

Romanist,n. One who is versed in or practices Roman law; a Roman-law specialist.

ROMAN LAW

Roman law.The legal system of the ancient Romans, forming the basis of the modern civil law; CIVIL LAW(1).

“The Roman law is the body of rules that governed the social relations of many peoples in Europe, Asia, and Africa for some period between the earliest prehistoric times and 1453 A.D. This date should perhaps be extended to 1900 A.D., or even to the present time, and we might include America in the territory concerned.... Yet the essential fact is that no present-day community ... consciously applies as binding upon its citizens the rules of Roman law in their unmodified form. That law is an historical fact. It would have only a tepid historical interest ... if it were not for the circumstance that, before it became a purely historical fact, it was worked into the foundation and framework of what is called the civil law” Max Radin, Handbook of Roman Law 1 (1927).

“Roman law is not only the best-known, the most highly developed, and the most influential of all legal systems of the past; apart from English law, it is also the only one whose entire and unbroken history can be traced from early and primitive beginnings to a stage of elaborate perfection in the hands of skilled specialists.” Hans Julius Wolff, Roman Law: An Historical Introduction 5 (1951).

ROME ACT

Rome Act. Copyright. A 1928 revision of the Berne Convention adding the moral rights of attribution and integrity to the minimum standards of protection that member nations must recognize, creating a compulsory license of recorded performances for radio broadcasting, and specifying that the term of protection for joint works must be measured from the death of the last surviving coauthor. — Also termed Rome Act of 1928; 1928 Rome Act.

ROME CONVENTION

Rome Convention. See ROME CONVENTION ON RELATED RIGHTS.

ROME CONVENTION ON RELATED RIGHTS

Rome Convention on Related Rights. Copyright. A 1961 treaty setting minimum standards for neighboring rights of performers, producers, and broadcasters. • The United States is not a signatory. Neighboring rights were not protected under the Paris Convention or the Berne Convention. They are part of the copyright protection under TRIPs. — Often shortened to Rome Convention. — Also termed Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations. See NEIGHBORING RIGHT .

ROOKER–FELDMAN DOCTRINE

Rooker–Feldman doctrine. The rule that a federal court cannot consider claims actually decided by a state court or claims inextricably intertwined with an earlier state-court judgment. Rooker v. Fidelity Trust Co., 263 U.S. 413, 415–16, 44 S.Ct. 149, 150 (1923); District of Columbia Ct. of App. v. Feldman, 460 U.S. 462, 476, 103 S.Ct. 1303, 1311 (1983). • This doctrine precludes “a party losing in state court ... from seeking what in substance would be appellate review of [a] state judgment in a United States district court, based on the losing party's claim that the state judgment itself violates the loser's federal rights.” Johnson v. De Grandy, 512 U.S. 997, 1005–06, 114 S.Ct. 2647, 2654 (1994).

ROOT

root. Civil law. A descendant.

ROOT OF TITLE

root of title. The recorded land transaction, usu. at least 40 years old, that is used to begin a title search. See CHAIN OF TITLE; TITLE SEARCH.

ROR

ROR.abbr.RELEASE ON RECOGNIZANCE.

ROTH IRA

Roth IRA.See INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT.

ROUND LOT

round lot.See LOT(3).

ROUP

roup.Scots law. A sale by auction (usu. public).

ROUT

rou (rowt), n. The offense that occurs when an unlawful assembly makes some move toward the accomplishment of its participants' common purpose. Cf. RIOT. [Cases: Riot 1. C.J.S. Riot; Insurrection §§ 2–10.]

“The word ‘rou’ comes from the same source as the word ‘route.’ It signifies that three or more who have gathered together in unlawful assembly are ‘on their way.’ It is not necessary for guilt of this offense that the design be actually carried out, nor that the journey be made in a tumultuous manner.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 483 (3d ed. 1982).

ROUTINE-ACTIVITIES THEORY

routine-activities theory.The theory that criminal acts occur when (1) a person is motivated to commit the offense, (2) a vulnerable victim is available, and (3) there is insufficient protection to prevent the crime. Cf. CONTROL THEORY; RATIONAL-CHOICE THEORY; STRAIN THEORY.

ROYAL MARRIAGES ACT

Royal Marriages Act.A 1772 statute (12 Geo. 3, ch. 1) forbidding members of the royal family from marrying without the sovereign's permission, except on certain conditions.

“Royal Marriages Act An Act occasioned by George III's fear of the effect on the dignity and honour of the royal family of members thereof contracting unsuitable marriages, two of his brothers having done so It provided that marriages of descendants of George II, other than the issue of princesses who marry into foreign families, should not be valid unless they had the consent of the King in Council, or, if the parties were aged over 25, they had given 12 months' notice to the Privy Council, unless during that time both Houses of Parliament expressly declare disapproval of the proposed marriage.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1091 (1980).

royalty. 1. A payment made to an author or inventor for each copy of a work or article sold under a copyright or patent. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 48; Patents 217.1. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 27, 29, 33–34, 93; Patents § 364.] established royalty. A royalty set at an agreed-on price. • In the absence of an established royalty, a court will determine a remedy for infringement based on what a reasonable royalty would have been.

reasonable royalty. A royalty that a licensee would be willing to pay the holder of the thing's intellectual-property rights while still making a reasonable profit from its use. • The reasonable-royalty standard often serves as the measure of damages in a claim of patent, copyright, or trademark infringement, or for misappropriation of trade secrets. In deciding what royalty is reasonable in a trade-secrets suit, courts consider the unique circumstances of the case, as well as (1) how the use affected the parties' ability to compete; (2) the cost of past licenses; (3) the cost to develop the secret and its present value; (4) how the defendant intends to use the information; and (5) the availability of alternatives. [Cases: Patents 319(1). C.J.S. Patents §§ 565, 567–568.]

2. Oil & gas. A share of the product or profit from real property, reserved by the grantor of a mineral lease, in exchange for the lessee's right to mine or drill on the land. — Also termed (in sense 2) override. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 70, 79. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 218, 223–224, 289–290, 296, 298–299, 303.]

haulage royalty. A royalty paid to a landowner for moving coal via a subterranean passageway under the landowner's land from a mine located on an adjacent property. • The payment is calculated at a certain amount per ton of coal.

landowner's royalty. A share of production or revenues provided for the lessor in the royalty clause of the oil-and-gas lease and paid at the well free of any costs of production. • Traditionally, except in California, the landowner's royalty has been 1/8 of gross production for oil and 1/8 of the proceeds received from the sale of gas. But today the size is often negotiated. — Also termed leaseholder royalty.

mineral royalty. A right to a share of income from mineral production. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 70, 79. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 218, 223–224, 289–290, 296, 298–299, 303.]

nonparticipating royalty. A share of production — or of the revenue from production free its costs — carved out of the mineral interest. • A nonparticipating-royalty holder is entitled to the stated share of production or cash without regard to the terms of any lease. Nonparticipating royalties are often retained by mineral-interest owners who sell their rights.

overriding royalty. A share of either production or revenue from production (free of the costs of production) carved out of a lessee's interest under an oil-and-gas lease. • Overriding-royalty interests are often used to compensate those who have helped structure a drilling venture. An overriding-royalty interest ends when the underlying lease terminates. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 74. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals § 308.]

shut-in royalty. A payment made by an oil-and-gas lessee to the lessor to keep the lease in force when a well capable of producing is not utilized because there is no market for the oil or gas.

- Generally, without such a payment, the lease will terminate at the end of the primary term unless actual production has begun. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 78.1(3). C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 269–270.]

ROYALTY INTEREST

royalty interest.Oil & gas. A share of production — or the value or proceeds of production, free of the costs of production — when and if there is production. • A royalty interest is usu. expressed as a fraction (such as 1/6). A royalty-interest owner has no right to operate the property and therefore no right to lease the property or to share in bonuses or delay rentals. In some states a royalty owner has the right of ingress and egress to take the royalty production. Authorities are split over what costs are costs of production. Several different but related kinds of royalty interests are commonly encountered. See ROYALTY(2).

RUBRIC

rubric (roo-brik).1. The title of a statute or code <the rubric of the relevant statute is the Civil Rights Act of 1964>.2. A category or designation <assignment of rights falls under the rubric of contract law>.3. An authoritative rule, esp. for conducting a public worship service <the rubric dictates whether the congregation should stand or kneel>.4. An introductory or explanatory note; a preface .5. An established rule, custom, or law <what is the rubric in the Northern District of Texas regarding appearance at docket call?>.

RULE

rule,n.1. Generally, an established and authoritative standard or principle; a general norm mandating or guiding conduct or action in a given type of situation.

default rule.A legal principle that fills a gap in a contract in the absence of an applicable express provision but remains subject to a contrary agreement. Cf. GAP-FILLER.

general rule.A rule applicable to a class of cases or circumstances.

mandatory rule.A legal rule that is not subject to contrary to contrary agreement. • For example, the UCC obligation of good faith and fair dealing cannot be disclaimed.

peremptory rule.A court order that must be obeyed without an opportunity to respond. • No objections may be lodged or arguments made.

special rule.See SPECIAL RULE(1).

2. A regulation governing a court's or an agency's internal procedures. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 381; Courts 85; Federal Civil Procedure 21. C.J.S. Courts § 130; Evidence § 7; Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 87, 91.] 3.Parliamentary law. A procedural rule (sense 1) for the orderly conduct of business in a deliberative assembly. — Also termed rule of order (often pl.).

Cordon rule.See CORDON RULE.

joint rule.A rule adopted by both houses of a bicameral legislature for the conduct of business or relations between them, such as when they meet in joint session, or for other matters in which they share an interest. See joint session under SESSION(1).

ordinary standing rule.See standing rule (1).

Ramseyer rule.See RAMSEYER RULE.

special rule.1.SPECIAL RULE(2).2.SPECIAL RULE(3).

standing rule. 1. A rule that relates to an organization's administration or operation rather than to its procedure in meetings. • For example, a rule about the time and place of regular meetings, or about a committee's jurisdiction, is a standing rule. — Also termed ordinary standing rule. 2. A special rule of continuing force. • Many conventions and other deliberative assemblies collect both their administrative and procedural rules into a set titled “standing rules.” See SPECIAL RULE(1).

rule,vb.1. To command or require; to exert control <the dictator ruled the country>.2. To decide a legal point <the court ruled on the issue of admissibility>.

RULE, THE

rule, the.An evidentiary and procedural rule by which all witnesses are excluded from the courtroom while another witness is testifying <invoking “the rule”>. • The phrase “the rule” is used chiefly in the American South and Southwest, but it is a universal practice to exclude witnesses before they testify. [Cases: Criminal Law 665; Federal Civil Procedure 2012; Trial 41. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1195; Trial § 155.]

RULE 1.53 APPLICATION

Rule 1.53 application. See continued-prosecution application under PATENT APPLICATION .

RULE 10B-5

Rule 10b-5. The SEC rule that prohibits deceptive or manipulative practices (such as material misrepresentations or omissions) in the buying or selling of securities. — Also termed antifraud rule. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.10–60.70. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 105–106, 164–165, 169–228.]

RULE 11

Rule 11. Civil procedure. 1. In federal practice, the procedural rule requiring the attorney of record or the party (if not represented by an attorney) to sign all pleadings, motions, and other papers filed with the court and — by this signing — to represent that the paper is filed in good faith after an inquiry that is reasonable under the circumstances. • This rule provides for the imposition of sanctions, upon a party's or the court's own motion, if an attorney or party violates the conditions stated in the rule. Fed. R. Civ. P. 11. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2750–2831.] 2. In Texas practice, the procedural rule requiring agreements between attorneys or parties concerning a pending suit to be in writing, signed, and filed in the court's record or made on the record in open court. Tex. R. Civ. P. 11. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement 5; Judgment 72. C.J.S. Compromise and Settlement § 19; Judgments §§ 183–184.]

RULE 109 STATEMENT

Rule 109 statement. Patents. A statement by a patent examiner of the reasons for allowing a patent claim. • An examiner may file a Rule 109 statement at any time if it appears that the record does not adequately reflect the reasons for allowance. It should state how the claim differs from prior art and why that difference is nonobvious. PTO Reg. § 1.109. — Also termed reasons for allowance. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.]

RULE 116 AMENDMENT

Rule 116 amendment. See amendment after final action under PATENT-APPLICATION AMENDMENT .

RULE 312 AMENDMENT

Rule 312 amendment. See amendment after allowance under PATENT-APPLICATION AMENDMENT .

RULE ABSOLUTE

rule absolute. See decree absolute under DECREE.

RULE AGAINST ACCUMULATIONS rule against accumulations. See ACCUMULATIONS, RULE AGAINST.

RULE AGAINST INALIENABILITY rule against inalienability. The principle that property must not be made nontransferable. — Also termed rule against trusts of perpetual duration. Cf. RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES.

RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES rule against perpetuities. (sometimes cap.) Property. The common-law rule prohibiting a grant of an estate unless the interest must vest, if at all, no later than 21 years (plus a period of gestation to cover a posthumous birth) after the death of some person alive when the interest was created. • The purpose of the rule was to limit the time that title to property could be suspended out of commerce because there was no owner who had title to the property and who could sell it or exercise other aspects of ownership. If the terms of the contract or gift exceeded the time limits of the rule, the gift or transaction was void. See MEASURING LIFE. Cf. ACCUMULATIONS, RULE AGAINST. [Cases: Perpetuities 4. C.J.S. Perpetuities §§ 2, 12.]

“The true form of the Rule against Perpetuities is believed to be this: — NO INTEREST SUBJECT TO A CONDITION PRECEDENT IS GOOD, UNLESS THE CONDITION MUST BE FULFILLED, IF AT ALL, WITHIN TWENTY-ONE YEARS AFTER SOME LIFE IN BEING AT THE CREATION OF THE INTEREST.” John Chipman Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities 144 (1886).

“Another scholar who spent a substantial part of an academic lifetime attempting to bring order and add sense to the rule [against perpetuities], W. Barton Leach, described the rule as a ‘technicality-ridden legal nightmare’ and a ‘dangerous instrumentality in the hands of most members of the bar.’” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 178 (2d ed. 1984) (quoting Leach, Perpetuities Legislation, Massachusetts Style, 67 Harv. L. Rev. 1349 (1954)).

“The Rule Against Perpetuities is a rule against remoteness of vesting. A contingent future interest is invalid under the orthodox rule if, at the time of the creation of the interest, the circumstances are such that the contingency may go unresolved for too long a time. The Rule is not concerned with the duration of interests, that is, the length of time that they endure. It is not a rule against suspension of the power of alienation, nor a rule against restraints on alienation. It is not a rule that directly limits the duration of trusts The orthodox rule is satisfied if all contingent future interests are so created that they must vest, if they vest at all, within the perpetuities period.” Robert J. Lynn, The Modern Rule Against Perpetuities 9 (1966).

“The common law Rule Against Perpetuities (modified by statute in some states) provides that no interest is valid unless it must vest within 21 years after lives in being when the interest was created. The rule is something of a misnomer. It does not limit the duration of a condition in a bequest, but rather limits the testator's power to earmark gifts for remote descendants.” Richard A. Posner, Economic Analysis of Law § 18.7, at 394 (2d ed. 1977).

RULE AGAINST PYRAMIDING INFERENCES rule against pyramiding inferences. See PYRAMIDING, RULE AGAINST.

RULE AGAINST TRUSTS OF PERPETUAL DURATION rule against trusts of perpetual duration. See RULE AGAINST INALIENABILITY.

RULE DAY

rule day. See return day (3) under DAY.

RULE IN HEYDON'S CASE

Rule in Heydon's case. See MISCHIEF RULE.

RULE IN SHELLEY'S CASE

Rule in Shelley's Case. Property. The rule that if — in a single grant — a freehold estate is given to a person and a remainder is given to the person's heirs, the remainder belongs to the named person and not the heirs, so that the person is held to have a fee simple absolute. • The rule, which dates from the 14th century but draws its name from the famous 16th-century case, has been abolished in most states. Wolfe v. Shelley, 76 Eng. Rep. 206 (K.B. 1581). [Cases: Estates in Property 8. C.J.S. Estates § 7.]

“[T]he rule in Shelley's Case, the Don Quixote of the law, which, like the last knight errant of chivalry, has long survived every cause that gave it birth and now wanders aimlessly through the reports, still vigorous, but equally useless and dangerous.” Stamper v. Stamper, 28 S.E. 20, 22 (N.C. 1897).

RULE IN WILD'S CASE

Rule in Wild's Case. Property. The rule construing a grant to “A and A's children” as a fee tail if A's children do not exist at the effective date of the instrument, and as a joint tenancy if A's children do exist at the effective date. • The rule has been abolished along with the fee tail in most states.

RULEMAKING

rulemaking, n. The process used by an administrative agency to formulate, amend, or repeal a rule or regulation. — Also termed administrative rulemaking. Cf. ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUDICATION; INFORMAL AGENCY ACTION. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 381–427. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 87–114.] — rulemaking, adj.

formal rulemaking. Agency rulemaking that, when required by statute or the agency's discretion, must be on the record after an opportunity for an agency hearing, and must comply with certain procedures, such as allowing the submission of evidence and the cross-examination of witnesses. Cf. informal rulemaking. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 381–427. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 87–114.]

informal rulemaking. Agency rulemaking in which the agency publishes a proposed regulation and receives public comments on the regulation, after which the regulation can take effect without the necessity of a formal hearing on the record. • Informal rulemaking is the most common procedure followed by an agency in issuing its substantive rules. — Also termed notice-and-comment rulemaking. See NOTICE-AND-COMMENT PERIOD. Cf. formal rulemaking. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 381–427. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 87–114.]

RULE NISI

rule nisi. See decree nisi under DECREE.

RULE OF CAPTURE

rule of capture. 1. The doctrine that if the donee of a general power of appointment manifests an intent to assume control of the property for all purposes and not just for the purpose of appointing it to someone, the donee captures the property and the property goes to the donee's estate. • One common way for the donee to show an intent to assume control for all purposes is to include provisions in his or her will blending the appointing property with the donee's own property. 2. Property. The principle that wild animals belong to the person who captures them, regardless of whether they were originally on another person's land. [Cases: Animals 2. C.J.S. Animals §§ 4–9.] 3. Water law. The principle that a surface landowner can extract and appropriate all the groundwater beneath the land by drilling or pumping, even if doing so drains away groundwaters to the point of drying up springs and wells from which other landowners benefit. • This doctrine has been widely abolished or limited by legislation. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 101. C.J.S. Waters §§ 193, 195–197, 201–204.] 4. Oil & gas. A fundamental principle of oil-and-gas law holding that there is no liability for drainage of oil and gas from under the lands of another so long as there has been no trespass and all relevant statutes and regulations have been observed. — Also termed doctrine of capture; law of capture. Cf. AD COELUM DOCTRINE. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 47. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 140, 142.]

RULE OF COMPLETENESS

rule of completeness. See RULE OF OPTIONAL COMPLETENESS.

RULE OF CONSTRUCTION

rule of construction. See canon of construction under CANON(1).

RULE OF COURT

rule of court. A rule governing the practice or procedure in a given court < federal rules of court >. See LOCAL RULE. [Cases: Courts 85; Federal Civil Procedure 21. C.J.S. Courts § 130; Evidence § 7.]

RULE OF DECISION

rule of decision. A rule, statute, body of law, or prior decision that provides the basis for deciding or adjudicating a case. [Cases: Courts 88. C.J.S. Courts § 139; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 187.]

RULE OF DOUBT

rule of doubt. 1. Copyright. The doctrine that unreadable or incomprehensible identifying material deposited with the U.S. Copyright Office may not be protected under copyright law because it cannot be easily examined to determine whether it qualifies. • This rule usu. applies to computer object code. Unlike a certificate of registration, a filing under the rule of doubt is not prima facie evidence of a valid copyright. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 4. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 9–10, 16.] 2. Patents. An abandoned judicial doctrine holding that when there is doubt whether an invention is patentable, the patent should be issued so that the inventor can test its validity in court.

RULE OF EVIDENCE

rule of evidence. See EVIDENCE(4).

RULE OF FOUR

rule of four. The convention that for certiorari to be granted by the U.S. Supreme Court, four justices must vote in favor of the grant. See CERTIORARI. [Cases: Federal Courts 452, 509.]

RULE OF INCONVENIENCE

rule of inconvenience. The principle of statutory interpretation holding that a court should not construe a statute in a way that will jeopardize an important public interest or produce a serious hardship for anyone, unless that interpretation is unavoidable. — Often shortened to inconvenience. [Cases: Statutes 181(2). C.J.S. Statutes § 318.]

RULE OF INTERPRETATION

rule of interpretation. See canon of construction under CANON(1).

RULE OF JUSTICE

rule of justice. A jurisprudential principle that determines the sphere of individual liberty in the pursuit of individual welfare, so as to confine that liberty within limits that are consistent with the general welfare of humankind.

RULE OF LAW

rule of law. 1. A substantive legal principle <under the rule of law known as respondeat superior, the employer is answerable for all wrongs committed by an employee in the course of the employment>. 2. The supremacy of regular as opposed to arbitrary power <citizens must respect the rule of law>. — Also termed supremacy of law. 3. The doctrine that every person is subject to the ordinary law within the jurisdiction <all persons within the United States are within the American rule of law>. 4. The doctrine that general constitutional principles are the result of judicial decisions determining the rights of private individuals in the courts <under the rule of law, Supreme Court caselaw makes up the bulk of what we call “constitutional law”>. 5. Loosely, a legal ruling; a ruling on a point of law <the ratio decidendi of a case is any rule of law reached by the judge as a necessary step in the decision>. [Cases: Courts 87. C.J.S. Courts §§ 135–136.]

RULE OF LENITY

rule of lenity (len-<<schwa>>-tee). The judicial doctrine holding that a court, in construing an ambiguous criminal statute that sets out multiple or inconsistent punishments, should resolve the ambiguity in favor of the more lenient punishment. — Also termed lenity rule. [Cases: Statutes 241(1).]

RULE OF MARSHALING ASSETS rule of marshaling assets. An equitable doctrine that requires a senior creditor, having two or more funds to satisfy its debt, to first dispose of the fund not available to a junior creditor. • It prevents the inequity that would result if the senior creditor could choose to satisfy its debt out of the only fund available to the junior creditor and thereby exclude the junior creditor from any satisfaction. — Also termed marshaling doctrine; rule of marshaling securities; rule of marshaling remedies. [Cases: Debtor and Creditor 13. C.J.S. Assignments for Benefit of Creditors § 27; Creditor and Debtor §§ 110–112, 114, 118–119.]

RULE OF MARSHALING LIENS rule of marshaling liens. See INVERSE-ORDER-OF-ALIENATION DOCTRINE.

RULE OF MARSHALING REMEDIES rule of marshaling remedies. See RULE OF MARSHALING ASSETS.

RULE OF MARSHALING SECURITIES rule of marshaling securities. See RULE OF MARSHALING ASSETS.

RULE OF NECESSITY

rule of necessity. A rule requiring a judge or other official to hear a case, despite bias or conflict of interest, when disqualification would result in the lack of any competent court or tribunal. — Often shortened to necessity. [Cases: Judges 39. C.J.S. Judges §§ 62, 98, 100–102, 107.]

RULE OF OPERATION

rule of operation. Patents. A method of using a machine to produce its intended useful result. • A rule of operation and moving parts generally distinguish a machine from an article of manufacture.

RULE OF OPTIONAL COMPLETENESS rule of optional completeness. The evidentiary rule providing that when a party introduces part of a writing or an utterance at trial, the opposing party may require that the remainder of the passage be read to establish the full context. • The rule has limitations: first, no utterance can be received if it is irrelevant, and second, the remainder of the utterance must explain the first part. In many jurisdictions, the rule applies to conversations, to an opponent's admissions, to confessions, and to all other types of writings — even account books. But the Federal Rules of Evidence limit the rule to writings and recorded statements. Fed. R. Evid. 106. In most jurisdictions, including federal, the remainder is admissible unless its admission would be unfair or misleading. — Also termed rule of completeness; doctrine of completeness; doctrine of optional completeness; completeness doctrine; optional-completeness rule; optional-completeness doctrine. [Cases: Criminal Law 396(2); Evidence 155, 383(12).C.J.S. Criminal Law § 758; Evidence §§ 248–250, 816–817.]

RULE OF ORDER

rule of order. See RULE(3).

RULE OF RANK

rule of rank. A doctrine of statutory construction holding that a statute dealing with things or persons of an inferior rank cannot by any general words be extended to things or persons of a superior rank. • Blackstone gives the example of a statute dealing with deans, prebendaries, parsons, vicars, and others having spiritual promotion. According to Blackstone, this statute is held not to extend to bishops, even though they have spiritual promotion, because deans are the highest persons named, and bishops are of a higher order. Cf. EJUSDEM GENERIS; EXPRESSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS; NOSCITUR A SOCIIS .

RULE OF REASON

rule of reason. Antitrust. The judicial doctrine holding that a trade practice violates the Sherman Act only if the practice is an unreasonable restraint of trade, based on economic factors. See SHERMAN ANTITRUST ACT; RESTRAINT OF TRADE . Cf. PER SE RULE. [Cases: Monopolies 12(1.10). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 47–52, 72, 78, 80–82, 105.]

RULE OF RECOGNITION

rule of recognition. In the legal theory of H.L.A. Hart, a legal system's fundamental rule, by which all other rules are identified and understood. • In The Concept of Law (1961), Hart contends that a society's legal system is centered on rules. There are primary rules of obligation, which prescribe how a person should act in society, and secondary rules, by which the primary rules are created, identified, changed, and understood. A “rule of recognition” is a secondary rule, and serves to instruct citizens on when a pronouncement or societal principle constitutes a rule of obligation. Cf. RULES OF CHANGE; basic norm under NORM. — Sometimes shortened to recognition.

“This rule [the rule of recognition] may amount to no more than specifying a list of primary rules carved on a public monument. Or it may actually be a complete set of rules” Martin P. Golding, Philosophy of Law 44 (1975).

RULE OF RIGHT

rule of right. The source of a right; the rule that gives rise to a right.

RULE OF 72

rule of 72.A method for determining how many years it takes to double money invested at a compound interest rate. • For example, at a compound rate of 6%, it takes 12 years (72 divided by 6) for principal to double.

rule of 78.A method for computing the amount of interest that a borrower saves by paying off a loan early, when the interest payments are higher at the beginning of the loan period. • For example, to determine how much interest is saved by prepaying a 12-month loan after 6 months, divide the sum of the digits for the remaining six payments (21) by the sum of the digits for all twelve payments (78) and multiply that percentage by the total interest. — Also termed rule of the sum of the digits.

RULE OF THE FLOATING SUBTRAHEND rule of the floating subtrahend.The common-law doctrine that a plaintiff whose damage was not caused entirely by the defendant must prove the amount of damage that is not attributable to the defendant (the subtrahend) or else recover nothing. • The reasoning behind the rule is that damage is an essential element of a tort claim, and the plaintiff has the burden of proof. If proved, the subtrahend is subtracted from the total damage to determine the plaintiff's recovery.

RULE OF THE LAST ANTECEDENT rule of the last antecedent.An interpretative principle by which a court determines that qualifying words or phrases modify the words or phrases immediately preceding them and not words or phrases more remote, unless the extension is necessary from the context or the spirit of the entire writing. • For example, an application of this rule might mean that, in the phrase Texas courts, New Mexico courts, and New York courts in the federal system, the words in the federal system might be held to modify only New York courts and not Texas courts or New Mexico courts. — Also termed doctrine of the last antecedent; doctrine of the last preceding antecedent. [Cases: Statutes 196. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 331, 333.]

RULE OF THE SHORTER TERM

rule of the shorter term.Copyright. A provision of the Universal Copyright Convention stating that no member country is required to extend a longer term of protection than the work receives in the country where it is first published. — Also termed shorter-term rule.

RULE OF THE SUM OF THE DIGITS rule of the sum of the digits.See RULE OF 78.

RULE OF UNIVERSAL INHERITANCE rule of universal inheritance.See UNIVERSAL-INHERITANCE RULE.

RULES COMMITTEE

rules committee.See COMMITTEE.

RULES OF CHANGE

rules of change. In the legal theory of H.L.A. Hart, the fundamental rules by which a legal system's other rules are altered. • In Hart's theory, a legal system's primary rules are subject to identification and change by secondary rules. Among those rules are "rules of change," which prescribe how laws are altered or repealed. Cf. RULE OF RECOGNITION.

RULES OF COURT

rules of court. See COURT RULES.

RULES OF DECISION ACT

Rules of Decision Act. A federal statute (28 USCA § 1652) providing that a federal court, when exercising diversity jurisdiction, must apply the substantive law of the state in which the court sits. See diversity jurisdiction under JURISDICTION. [Cases: Federal Courts 373.]

RULES OF EVIDENCE rules of evidence. 1. EVIDENCE(4). 2. FEDERAL RULES OF EVIDENCE.

RULES OF NAVIGATION

rules of navigation. Maritime law. The principles and regulations that govern the steering and sailing of vessels to avoid collisions. • Examples include the International Rules governing conduct on the high seas and the Inland Rules governing navigation on the inland waters of the United States and U.S. vessels on the Canadian waters of the Great Lakes. 33 USCA §§ 1602–1608, 2001–73. [Cases: Collision 3–16. C.J.S. Collision §§ 9, 13–16, 22–24, 26–35.]

RULES OF ORDER

rules of order. See RULE(3).

RULES OF PROCEDURE

rules of procedure. See PROCEDURE(2).

RULE TO SHOW CAUSE

rule to show cause. 1. SHOW-CAUSE PROCEEDING. 2. See show-cause order under ORDER(2).

RULING

ruling, n. 1. The outcome of a court's decision either on some point of law or on the case as a whole. — Also termed legal ruling. Cf. JUDGMENT(1); OPINION(1). [Cases: Courts 88. C.J.S. Courts § 139; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 187.]

“A distinction is sometimes made between rules and rulings. Whether or not a formal distinction is declared, in common usage ‘legal ruling’ (or simply ‘ruling’) is a term ordinarily used to signify the outcome of applying a legal test when that outcome is one of relatively narrow

2.Parliamentary law. The chair's decision on a point of order. — rule,vb.

RULING CASE ruling case.See LEADING CASE(3).

RULING LETTER

ruling letter.See DETERMINATION LETTER.

RULPA

RULPA.abbr.Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act. See UNIFORM LIMITED PARTNERSHIP ACT .

RUN

run,vb.1. To expire after a prescribed period <the statute of limitations had run, so the plaintiff's lawsuit was barred>.2. To accompany a conveyance or assignment of (land) <the covenant runs with the land>. [Cases: Covenants 53–84. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 6, 25–37.] 3. To apply < the injunction runs against only one of the parties in the dispute>.

RUNAWAY

runaway. A person (usu. a juvenile) who has fled from the custody of legal guardians without permission and who has failed to return within a reasonable time; esp., an unemancipated minor who has left home, usu. indefinitely. Cf. THROWAWAY. — run away,vb.

RUNAWAY GRAND JURY

runaway grand jury.See GRAND JURY.

RUNNER

runner. 1. A law-office employee who delivers papers between offices and files papers in court. 2. One who solicits personal-injury cases for a lawyer. — Also termed capper. 3. A smuggler. 4.BrE. Slang. An escape; flight (from something); a voluntary disappearance.

RUNNING ACCOUNT

running account.See ACCOUNT.

RUNNING-DOWN CLAUSE

running-down clause. Marine insurance. A provision for the hull insurer's paying a proportion of the damages sustained by the other vessel in a collision.

RUNNING OBJECTION

running objection. See continuing objection under OBJECTION.

RUNNING POLICY

running policy. See floating policy under INSURANCE POLICY.

RUNNING WITH THE LAND running with the land. Property. See covenant running with the land under COVENANT(4).

RUSTICA ET URBANA

rustica et urbana (r<<schwa>>s-ti-k<<schwa>> et <<schwa>>r-bay-n<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. Rural and urban. • The phrase appeared in reference to servitudes. See SERVITUS.

RUSTICUM FORUM

rusticum forum (r<<schwa>>s-ti-k<<schwa>>m for-<<schwa>>m). Any nonjudicial body (such as an arbitral panel or workers'-compensation review board) that has authority to make a binding decision. — Also termed poor man's court.

RUSTICUM JUDICIUM

rusticum judicium (r<<schwa>>s-ti-k<<schwa>>m joo-dish-ee-<<schwa>>m). 1. The division of liability so that one party (usu. a defendant) must pay only part (usu. half) of another party's (usu. the plaintiff's) loss. • Rusticum judicium originated in 17th century maritime law as a means of efficiently resolving collision cases in which both ships were at fault. In maritime law, damages were equally divided. — Also termed rusticum jus. Cf. comparative negligence under NEGLIGENCE. 2. Rare. Rough justice; a rustic tribunal. • This is a literal translation of the term, used colloquially rather than accurately. — Sometimes misspelled rusticum judicum.

RUSTICUM JUS

rusticum jus (r<<schwa>>s-ti-k<<schwa>>m j<<schwa>>s). Maritime law. See RUSTICUM JUDICIUM(1).

sacramento (sak-r<<schwa>>-men-toh), n. [Latin “by oath”] Roman law. A legal action in the earliest form of civil procedure in which, at its commencement, each of the contending parties deposited or gave security for a certain sum (called the sacramentum), which the loser forfeited to the public. — Also termed legis actio sacramento. See LEGIS ACTIO.

SACRAMENTUM

sacramentum (sak-r<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin “an oath”] Roman law. 1.SACRAMENTO. 2. An oath of allegiance given by a soldier upon enlistment.

SACRAMENTUM DECISIONIS

sacramentum decisionis (sak-r<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m di-sizh-ee-oh-nis). [Latin “the oath of decision”] Civil law. The offer by one party to accept the opposing party's oath as decisive of the issues involved in a lawsuit. Pl. sacramenta decisionis.

“The defendant or person accused was ... to make oath of his own innocence, and to produce a certain number of compurgators, who swore they believed his oath. Somewhat similar also to this is the sacramentum decisionis, or the voluntary and decisive oath of the civil law; where one of the parties to the suit, not being able to prove his charge, offers to refer the decision of the cause to the oath of his adversary: which the adversary was bound to accept, or tender the same proposal back again; otherwise the whole was taken as confessed by him.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 342 (1768).

SACRAMENTUM FIDELITATIS

sacramentum fidelitatis (sak-r<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m fi-del-<<schwa>>-tay-tis). [Law Latin] Hist. The oath of fidelity, given by a vassal to a lord.

SACRILEGIUM

sacrilegium (sak-r<<schwa>>-lee-jee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin fr. sacer “sacred” + legere “to steal”] Roman law. 1. The theft of a sacred thing. • This was usu. a capital offense. See CAPITALIS. 2. Violation of an imperial law.

“In the later Empire the conception of sacrilegium was somewhat distorted and those ‘who through ignorance or negligence confound, violate and offend the sanctity of a divine law’ ... were considered guilty of sacrilegium. 'Divine' is here used in the sense of imperial, issued by the emperor Thus sacrilegium and sacrilegus became rather general terms applied to the neglect or violation of imperial orders or enactments." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 689 (1953).

SACRILEGUS

sacrilegus (s<<schwa>>-kril-<<schwa>>-g<<schwa>>s), adj. & n. [Latin "sacrilegious"] Roman law. (A person) guilty of sacrilegium. See SACRILEGIUM.

SAFE CONDUCT

safe conduct. Int'l law. 1. A privilege granted by a belligerent allowing an enemy, a neutral, or some other person to travel within or through a designated area for a specified purpose. 2. A document conveying this privilege. — Sometimes written safe-conduct. — Also termed safeguard; passport.

“Passports and safeguards, or safe conducts, are letters of protection, with or without an escort, by which the person of an enemy is rendered inviolable. These may be given in order to carry on the peculiar commerce of war, or for reasons which have no relation to it, which terminate in the person himself.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 155, at 265 (5th ed. 1878).

“Safe-conduct The grantee is inviolable so long as he complies with the conditions imposed on him or necessitated by the circumstances of the case. Unless stated, a safe-conduct does not cover goods or luggage. They may be given also for ships and for goods. To be effective under international law the grant must have been arranged between belligerents.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1098 (1980).

[Cases: Securities Regulation 60.27(5). C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 192.]

safe-haven law.Family law. A statute that protects a parent who abandons a baby at a designated place such as a hospital, a physician's office, or a fire station, where it can receive emergency medical assistance as needed. • The law typically stipulates that a parent who leaves a baby at such a place will not be publicly identified or prosecuted. Such laws have been enacted in many states in response to a perceived increase in incidents of child abandonment. — Also termed Baby Moses law.

SAFE HOUSE

safe house.A residence where people live under protection, usu. in anonymity. • Safe houses are operated for a range of purposes, both legal and illegal. Shelters for abused spouses and runaway children are safe houses. Law-enforcement agencies keep safe houses for undercover operations and to protect witnesses who have been threatened. Lawbreakers use them to shield criminal activity such as drug manufacturing.

SAFEKEEPING

safekeeping. 1. The act of protecting something in one's custody. 2. Under the Securities Investors Protection Act, the holding of a security on behalf of the investor or broker that has paid for it. 15 USCA § 78III(2). [Cases: Securities Regulation 185.13–185.16. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 309–310, 312, 315–316, 318–319, 322.]

SAFE-PLEDGE

safe-pledge. See PLEDGE(5).

SAFE-PORT CLAUSE

safe-port clause.Maritime law. A provision in a voyage or time charterparty obligating the charterer to choose a port where the ship will be safe from damage. • The ship's master can refuse to enter the port without breaching the charter. But if the master reasonably enters the port and the ship is damaged, the charterer is liable. Cf. SAFE-BERTH CLAUSE. [Cases: Shipping 39, 55. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 74, 85, 88, 91, 141–144.]

See OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH ADMINISTRATION . [Cases: Employers' Liability 30; Labor Relations 9.5. C.J.S. Employers' Liability for Injuries to Employees §§ 52–53, 56, 103; Labor Relations §§ 2, 19.5, 19.10, 19.20, 19.30, 19.45.]

sagibaro (sag-<<schwa>>-bar-oh), n. [Old English] Hist. A determiner of disputes; a judge. — Also termed sachbaro (sak-bar-oh).

SAID

said, adj. Aforesaid; above-mentioned. • The adjective said is obsolescent in legal drafting, its last bastion being patent claims. But even in that context the word is giving way to the ordinary word the, which if properly used is equally precise. See AFORESAID.

“The word ‘said’ is used by many practitioners rather than ‘the’ to refer back to previously recited elements, sometimes to a previously cited anything. This practice is unobjectionable, although perhaps overly legalistic. If ‘saids’ or ‘thes’ are used, one should be consistent in the usage and not alternate between those words in repetitions of the same element or among different elements.” Robert C. Faber, Landis on Mechanics of Patent Claim Drafting § 23, at 50 (3d ed. 1990).

SAILOR'S WILL

sailor's will. See soldier's will under WILL.

SALARIIUM

salarium (s<<schwa>>-lair-ee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin “salt money”] 1. Roman law. An allowance, esp. for living expenses, given to persons in noble professions (such as teachers and doctors) who were not allowed to sue for fees. 2. Roman law. Wages for persons engaged in military service on an emergency basis. • The regular soldier's pay is a stipendium. 3. Hist. The rent or profits of a hall or house.

SALARY

salary. An agreed compensation for services — esp. professional or semiprofessional services — usu. paid at regular intervals on a yearly basis, as distinguished from an hourly basis. • Salaried positions are usu. exempt from the requirements of the Fair Labor Standards Act (on overtime and the like) but are subject to state regulation. Cf. WAGE. [Cases: Master and Servant 70. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 140–145, 150–151, 163–172, 174–176.]

accrued salary. A salary that has been earned but not yet paid.

SALE

sale, n. 1. The transfer of property or title for a price. See UCC § 2-106(1). [Cases: Sales 1; Vendor and Purchaser 1. C.J.S. Sales § 2; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 2, 5.] 2. The agreement by which such a transfer takes place. • The four elements are (1) parties competent to contract, (2) mutual assent, (3) a thing capable of being transferred, and (4) a price in money paid or promised.

absolute sale. A sale in which possession and title to the property pass to the buyer immediately upon the completion of the bargain. Cf. conditional sale. [Cases: Sales 454; Vendor and Purchaser 79. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 125, 141.]

approval sale. See sale on approval.

auction sale. See AUCTION.

average gross sales. The amount of total sales divided by the number of sales transactions in a specific period.

bona fide sale. A sale made by a seller in good faith, for valuable consideration, and without notice of a defect in title or any other reason not to hold the sale. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 220. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 482–485, 517.]

bootstrap sale. 1. A sale in which the purchase price is financed by earnings and profits of the thing sold; esp., a leveraged buyout. See BUYOUT. 2. A seller's tax-saving conversion of a business's ordinary income into a capital gain from the sale of corporate stock.

bulk sale.See BULK SALE.

cash-against-documents sale.See documentary sale.

cash sale. 1. A sale in which cash payment is concurrent with the receipt of the property sold. [Cases: Sales 82(1). C.J.S. Sales § 208.] 2. A securities transaction on the stock-exchange floor requiring cash payment and same-day delivery.

compulsory sale.The forced sale of real property in accordance with either an eminent-domain order or an order for a judicial sale arising from nonpayment of taxes. [Cases: Taxation 672. C.J.S. Taxation § 1179.]

conditional sale. 1. A sale in which the buyer gains immediate possession but the seller retains title until the buyer performs a condition, esp. payment of the full purchase price. See retail installment contract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Sales 450. C.J.S. Sales § 2.] 2. A sale accompanied by an agreement to resell upon specified terms. Cf. absolute sale.

consignment sale.A sale of an owner's property (such as clothing or furniture) by a third party entrusted to make the sale. UCC § 9-102(a)(20). See CONSIGNMENT. [Cases: Factors 5, 20; Sales 8. C.J.S. Bailments § 11; Sales § 3.]

consumer-credit sale.A sale in which the seller extends credit to the consumer. • A consumer-credit sale includes a lease in which the lessee's rental payments equal or exceed the retail value of the item rented. [Cases: Consumer Credit 3. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 280–293, 306.]

credit sale.A sale of goods to a buyer who is allowed to pay for the goods at a later time. [Cases: Sales 82(1). C.J.S. Sales § 208.]

distress sale. 1. A form of liquidation in which the seller receives less for the goods than what would be received under normal sales conditions; esp., a going-out-of-business sale. 2. A foreclosure or tax sale. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4860; Taxation 581, 672. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 745; Taxation §§ 1041–1043, 1179.]

dock sale.A sale in which a purchaser takes possession of the product at the seller's shipping dock, esp. for transportation outside the state.

documentary sale.A sale in which the buyer pays upon the seller's tender of documents of title covering the goods, plus a sight draft requiring the buyer to pay “at sight.” • This type of sale typically occurs before delivery of the goods, which might be en route when the buyer pays. — Also termed cash-against-documents sale.

exclusive sale.A sale made by a broker under an exclusive-agency listing. See exclusive-agency listing under LISTING. [Cases: Brokers 40. C.J.S. Brokers §§ 117–120, 125, 143.]

execution sale.A forced sale of a debtor's property by a government official carrying out a writ of execution. — Also termed forced sale; judgment sale; sheriff's sale. See EXECUTION. [Cases: Execution 213. C.J.S. Executions §§ 211–212.]

executory sale.A sale agreed upon in principle but with a few minor details remaining.

fair sale.A foreclosure sale or other judicial sale conducted with fairness toward the rights and interests of the affected parties. [Cases: Judicial Sales 1; Mortgages 380. C.J.S. Judicial Sales §§ 2–5, 11; Mortgages §§ 490–491, 495, 690–691, 695, 697.]

fire sale. 1. A sale of merchandise at reduced prices because of fire or water damage. 2. Any sale at greatly reduced prices, esp. due to an emergency. • Fire sales are often regulated to protect the public from deceptive sales practices.

forced sale. 1. See execution sale. 2. A hurried sale by a debtor because of financial hardship or a creditor's action. Cf. voluntary sale.

foreclosure sale.The sale of mortgaged property, authorized by a court decree or a power-of-sale clause, to satisfy the debt. See FORECLOSURE. [Cases: Mortgages 360, 514. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 626–628, 630, 855.]

fraudulent sale.A sale made to defraud the seller's creditors by converting into cash property that should be used to satisfy the creditors' claims. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances 1.]

gross sales.Total sales (esp. in retail) before deductions for returns and allowances. — Also termed sales in gross.

installment sale.See INSTALLMENT SALE.

isolated sale.An infrequent or one-time sale that does not carry an implied warranty of merchantability because the seller is not a merchant with respect to goods of that kind. UCC § 2-314(1). [Cases: Sales 272. C.J.S. Sales §§ 254–256.]

judgment sale.See execution sale.

judicial sale.A sale conducted under the authority of a judgment or court order, such as an execution sale. — Also termed sheriff's sale. [Cases: Judicial Sales 1. C.J.S. Judicial Sales §§ 2–5, 11.]

lumping sale.A court-ordered sale in which several distinct pieces of property are sold together for a single sum.

net sale.The amount of money remaining from a sale, after deducting returns, allowances, rebates, discounts, and other expenses.

present sale.Under the UCC, a sale accomplished by the making of a contract. UCC § 2-106(1). [Cases: Sales 1(1). C.J.S. Sales §§ 2, 9, 29, 48.]

private sale. An unadvertised sale negotiated and concluded directly between the buyer and seller, not through an agent.

public sale. 1. A sale made after public notice, such as an auction or sheriff's sale; specif., a sale to which the public has been invited by advertisement to appear and bid at auction for the items to be sold. 2. Patents. An actual exchange for value or an offer through some medium (e.g., a sales brochure) of an article, product, or process to a member of the general public. [Cases: Patents 76. C.J.S. Patents §§ 107, 110–111.]

retail installment sale. See INSTALLMENT SALE.

sale against the box. See short sale against the box.

sale and leaseback. See LEASEBACK.

sale and return. See sale or return.

sale as is. A sale in which the buyer accepts the property in its existing condition unless the seller has misrepresented its quality. — Also termed sale with all faults. [Cases: Sales 260, 267. C.J.S. Sales §§ 238, 247–248, 263–270.]

sale by sample. A sale in which the parties understand that the goods exhibited constitute the standard with which the goods not exhibited correspond and to which all deliveries should conform. • Any sample that is made part of the basis of the bargain creates an express warranty that the whole of the goods will conform to the sample or model. UCC § 2-313(c). — Also termed sample sale. [Cases: Sales 73. C.J.S. Sales § 176.]

sale in gross. 1. A sale of a tract of land made with no guarantee about the exact amount or size of the land being sold. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 65(2). C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 128, 131.] 2. (pl.) See gross sales.

sale on approval. A sale in which completion hinges on the buyer's satisfaction, regardless of whether the goods conform to the contract. • Title and risk of loss remain with the seller until the buyer approves. UCC § 2-326(1)(a). — Also termed approval sale. [Cases: Sales 168.5(.5). C.J.S. Sales §§ 165–166, 190.]

sale on credit. A sale accompanied by delivery of possession, but with payment deferred to a later date. [Cases: Sales 82(1). C.J.S. Sales § 208.]

sale or return. A sale in which the buyer may return the goods to the seller, regardless of whether they conform to the contract, if the goods were delivered primarily for resale. • This transaction is a type of consignment in which the seller (usu. a distributor) sells goods to the buyer (often a retailer), who then tries to resell the goods, but a buyer who cannot resell is allowed to return them to the seller. Title and risk of loss are with the buyer until the goods are returned. UCC § 2-326(1)(b). — Also termed sale and return. [Cases: Sales 168.5(.5). C.J.S. Sales §§ 165–166, 190.]

sale per aversionem (p<<schwa>>r <<schwa>>-v<<schwa>>r-zhee-oh-n<<schwa>>m). Civil law. A conveyance of all immovable property that falls within the boundaries stated in a purchase agreement, as opposed to a specified amount of acreage. • The sales price will not be modified because of a surplus or shortage in the amount of property that is exchanged, because the boundary description is the binding definition of the property conveyed. La. Civ. Code art. 2495. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 65(2). C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 128, 131.]

sale positive.A sale with no reserve price.

sales in gross.See gross sales.

sale short.See short sale.

sale with all faults.See sale as is.

sale with right of redemption.A sale in which the seller reserves the right to retake the goods by refunding the purchase price.

sample sale.See sale by sample.

sheriff's sale. 1. See execution sale. 2. See judicial sale.

short sale.A sale of a security that the seller does not own or has not contracted for at the time of sale, and that the seller must borrow to make delivery. • Such a sale is usu. made when the seller expects the security's price to drop. If the price does drop, the seller can make a profit on the difference between the price of the shares sold and the lower price of the shares bought to pay back the borrowed shares. — Also termed sale short. [Cases: Securities Regulation 45.17. C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 117.]

short sale against the box.A short sale of a security by a seller who owns enough shares of the security to cover the sale but borrows shares anyway because the seller wants to keep ownership a secret or because the owned shares are not easily accessible. • Delivery may be made with either the owned or the borrowed shares, so it is less risky than an ordinary short sale. The phrase against the box refers to the owned shares that are in safekeeping; formerly, the “box” was a container used to store stock certificates. — Often shortened to sale against the box.

similar sales.Eminent domain. Sales of like property in the same locality and time frame, admissible in a condemnation action to determine the marketable value of the particular property at issue. [Cases: Evidence 142. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 774–775, 780–781.]

simulated sale.A sale in which no price or other consideration is paid or intended to be paid, and in which there is no intent to actually transfer ownership. • Simulated sales are usu. done in an attempt to put property beyond the reach of creditors. — Also termed simulated transaction. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances 1.]

tax sale.A sale of property because of nonpayment of taxes. See tax deed under DEED. [Cases: Taxation 614. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1101, 1104–1110.]

voluntary sale.A sale made freely with the seller's consent. Cf. forced sale.

wash sale.A sale of securities made at about the same time as a purchase of the same securities (such as within 30 days), resulting in no change in beneficial ownership. • A loss from a wash sale is usu. not tax-deductible. And securities laws prohibit a wash sale made to create the false appearance of market activity. — Also termed wash transaction. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3216; Securities Regulation 60.25. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 126; Securities Regulation §§ 214, 226–227.]

SALE NOTE

sale note.See NOTE(1).

SALE-OF-BUSINESS DOCTRINE sale-of-business doctrine.The outmoded rule holding that the transfer of stock incident to the sale of a business does not constitute a transfer of securities. • This doctrine was rejected by the U.S. Supreme Court in Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth, 471 U.S. 681, 105 S.Ct. 2297 (1985), and its companion case, Gould v. Rufenacht, 471 U.S. 701, 105 S.Ct. 2308 (1985). [Cases: Securities Regulation 5.25(2). C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 27.]

SALE OF LAND

sale of land.A transfer of title to real estate from one person to another by a contract of sale. • A transfer of real estate is often referred to as a conveyance rather than a sale. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 1, 3.C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 2–3, 5.]

SALE ON APPROVAL

sale on approval.See SALE.

SALE ON CREDIT

sale on credit.See SALE.

SALE OR EXCHANGE

sale or exchange. 1.Tax. A voluntary transfer of property for value (as distinguished from a gift) resulting in a gain or loss recognized for federal tax purposes. 2. A transfer of property; esp., a situation in which proceeds of a sale are to be vested in another estate of the same character and use. — Also termed (in both senses) sale and exchange. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3232; Taxation 998. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 128–129, 490–491; Taxation § 1734.]

SALIC LAW

Salic law (sal-ik orsay-lik). An influential early medieval Frankish code of law that originated with the Salian Franks and that deals with a variety of civil property and family issues but is primarily a penal code listing the punishments for various crimes. • Salic law is the principal compilation of the early Germanic laws known collectively as leges barbarorum (“laws of the barbarians”). Salic law also designated a rule barring females from the line of succession to the throne, as a result of which references to Salic law have sometimes referred only to the code provision excluding women from inheriting certain lands (which probably existed only because military duties were connected with the inheritance). In the late 19th century, Oliver Wendell Holmes revived scholarly interest in Salic law by referring to it throughout The Common Law (1881). — Also termed Salique law; law Salique (s<<schwa>>-leekorsal-ik); lex Salica (leks sal-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>).

SALIC MARRIAGE

salic marriage. See morganatic marriage under MARRIAGE(1).

SALTING

salting, n. Labor law. A union tactic that involves a paid union employee going to work for a targeted nonunion employer with the intention of organizing the workforce. • The union agent (known as a salt) is considered an employee of the nonunion company and is protected by the National Labor Relations Act.

SALUS

salus (sal-<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin] Health; prosperity; safety.

SALVA GARDIA

salva gardia. See DE SALVA GARDIA.

SALVAGE

salvage (sal-vij), n. 1. The rescue of imperiled property. 2. The property saved or remaining after a fire or other loss, sometimes retained by an insurance company that has compensated the owner for the loss. [Cases: Insurance 2194, 2717. C.J.S. Insurance § 1119.] 3. Compensation allowed to a person who, having no duty to do so, helps save a ship or its cargo. — Also termed

(in sense 3) salvage award; reward. [Cases: Salvage 1. C.J.S. Salvage §§ 2, 4, 24.] — salvage, vb.

“Salvage is a reward payable either by the shipowner or by the owners of goods carried in the ship to persons who save the ship or cargo from shipwreck, capture or other loss. The right to salvage is an ancient rule of maritime law and is not based on contractual rights. The actual amount payable is, as a rule, assessed by the Court. Sometimes an express agreement, fixing an amount, is made before the assistance is rendered, but this is not a question of salvage in the strict sense, which always implies service by persons who are under no obligation to render it.” 2 E.W. Chance, Principles of Mercantile Law 98 (P.W. French ed., 10th ed. 1951).

“With reference to aid rendered to distressed property on navigable waters the word ‘salvage’ is often used indifferently to describe the salvage operation and the salvage operation and the salvage award — the latter being the compensation granted for the services rendered.” Martin J. Norris, The Law of Salvage § 2, at 2 (1958).

“A salvage award, or reward, is the compensation allowed to the volunteer whose services on navigable waters have aided distressed property in whole or in part. The award is not regarded merely as pay on the principle of quantum meruit or as remuneration pro opera et labore, but as a reward to persons participating and the owners of salvaged property, voluntarily rendering their services and to encourage others to similarly undertake the saving of life and property. That part of the award constituting more than quantum meruit has, on occasions, been referred to as a ‘bounty,’ ‘gratuity,’ and ‘bonus.’” Martin J. Norris, The Law of Salvage § 3, at 3–4 (1958).

SALVAGE AWARD

salvage award. See SALVAGE(3).

SALVAGE CHARGES

salvage charges. Insurance. Costs necessarily incurred in salvage.

SALVAGE LOSS

salvage loss. See LOSS.

SALVAGER

salvager. See SALVOR.

SALVAGE SERVICE

salvage service. The aid or rescue given, either voluntarily or by contract, to a vessel in need of assistance because of present or apprehended danger. • Although salvage may involve towing, it is distinguished from towing service, which is rendered merely to expedite a voyage, not to respond to dangerous circumstances. [Cases: Salvage 6. C.J.S. Salvage §§ 4, 7.]

SALVAGE VALUE

salvage value. See VALUE(2).

SALVAM FECIT TOTIUS PIGNORIS CAUSAM

salvam fecit totius pignoris causam (sal-v<<schwa>>m fee-sit toh-shee-<<schwa>>s pig-n<<schwa>>-ris kaw-z<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Scots law. He furnished the means of saving the whole pledge. • On this basis a bottomry creditor posting the last bond obtained preference over the remaining bottomry creditors. See bottomry bond under BOND(2).

SALVA SUBSTANTIA

salva substantia (sal-v<<schwa>> s<<schwa>>b-stan-shee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman & civil law. The substance (of the property) being preserved; the substance remaining intact. — Also termed salva rei substantia.

“A right of liferent, therefore, cannot be constituted in a subject which necessarily perishes in the use; it must be a subject which can be used salva substantia.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 563 (4th ed. 1894).

SALVO

salvo (sal-voh). [Latin fr. salvus “safe”] Hist. 1. Saving; excepting. • This term was used in deeds. 2. Safely.

SALVO BENEFICIO COMPETENTIAE salvo beneficio competentiae (sal-voh ben-<<schwa>>-fish-ee-oh kom-p<<schwa>>-ten-shee-ee). [Latin] Hist. Saving the benefit of being held liable only to the extent that one's means permit. See BENEFICIUM COMPETENTIAE.

SALVO CONDUCTU

salvo conductu. See DE SALVO CONDUCTU.

SALVO JURE

salvo jure (sal-voh joor-ee). [Latin “the rule being safe”] Without prejudice to.

SALVOR

salvor (sal-v<<schwa>>r), n. [Law Latin] A person who saves a vessel and its cargo from danger or loss; a person entitled to salvage. — Also termed salvager. [Cases: Salvage 18, 19. C.J.S. Salvage §§ 23–33, 35–38.]

“A salvor is a person, who, without any particular relation to a ship or property in distress, performs useful service, and gives it as a volunteer without any pre-existing contract that connected him with the duty of employing himself for the preservation of the ship or property.” Martin J. Norris, The Law of Salvage § 4, at 4 (1958).

have an intent to acquire it.” 68 Am. Jur. 2d Salvage § 2, at 270 (1993).

SALVUS PLEGIUS

salvus plegius (sal-v<<schwa>>s plee-jee-<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] Hist. A safe pledge; a satisfactory pledge. See PLEDGE. — Also termed certus plegius.

SAME-ACTOR INFERENCE same-actor inference.Employment law. The doctrine that when an employee is hired and fired by the same person, and the termination occurs a reasonably short time after the hiring, the termination will be presumed not to be based on a discriminatory reason. [Cases: Civil Rights 1534. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 168–169.]

SAME-CONDUCT TEST

same-conduct test.Criminal law. A test for determining whether a later charge arising out of a single incident is barred by the Double Jeopardy Clause; specif., an analysis of whether the later charge requires the state to prove the same conduct that it was required to prove in a previous trial against the same defendant. • The Supreme Court abandoned the Blockburger test and adopted the same-conduct test in 1990 (Grady v. Corbin, 495 U.S. 508, 110 S.Ct. 2084), but overruled that decision and revived Blockburger three years later (U.S. v. Dixon, 509 U.S. 688, 113 S.Ct. 2849 (1993)). Cf. BLOCKBURGER TEST; SAME-TRANSACTION TEST.

SAME-ELEMENTS TEST

sampling, n. Copyright. The process of taking a small portion of a sound recording and digitally manipulating it as part of a new recording. • Sampling may infringe the copyright of the sample's source, esp. the musical-works and sound-recording copyrights. — Also termed digital sampling. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 67.2. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 58.]

SANAE MENTIS

sanae mentis (san-ee men-tis). [Law Latin] Hist. Of sound mind; of sane mind.

SANCIRE

sancire (san-sI-ree), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To enact; confirm; prescribe.

SANCTIO

sanctio (sangk-shee-oh), n. [Latin fr. sancio “to ordain, confirm, or forbid under penalty”] Roman law. A particular clause in a statute imposing a penalty on any violation of that statute. Pl. sanctiones (sangk-shee-oh-nee-z).

“Sanctio (legis). A clause in a statute which strengthens its efficacy by fixing a penalty for its violation, by forbidding its derogation through a later enactment, or by releasing from responsibility any one who by acting in accordance with the statute violated another law. The purpose of the sanction clause was to settle the relation between the new statute and former and future legislation. Thus the sanctio could also state that a previous statute remained fully or partially in force without being changed by the new one.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 689 (1953).

SANCTION

sanction (sangk-sh<<schwa>>n), n.1. Official approval or authorization <the committee gave sanction to the proposal>. Cf. RATIFICATION(1).2. A penalty or coercive measure that results from failure to comply with a law, rule, or order . Cf. DISCIPLINE. [Cases: Costs 2; Federal Civil Procedure 1278, 2750; Pretrial Procedure 44. C.J.S. Costs §§ 2–3, 8–9; Discovery § 31.]

criminal sanction.A sanction attached to a criminal conviction, such as a fine or restitution. — Also termed penal sanction.

“A criminal sanction ... is a legally authorized post-conviction deprivation suffered by a human being through governmental action. By using the words ‘post-conviction’ in that definition, criminal sanctions are thus limited to those imposed upon defendants in criminal proceedings who, by reason or in consequence of a judgment entered upon a verdict of guilty found by a jury, or judge sitting without a jury (the latter having been legally waived), or upon a plea of guilty, or a plea of nolo contendere, stand convicted.” A Treatise on the Law of Crimes § 2.00, at 66 (Marian Quinn Barnes ed., 7th ed. 1967).

death-penalty sanction.Civil procedure. A court's order dismissing the suit or entering a default judgment in favor of the plaintiff because of extreme discovery abuses by a party or because of a party's action or inaction that shows an unwillingness to participate in the case. • Such a sanction is rarely ordered, and is usu. preceded by orders of lesser sanctions that have not been complied with or that have not remedied the problem. — Often shortened to death penalty. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1278; Pretrial Procedure 46. C.J.S. Discovery § 31.]

shame sanction.A criminal sanction designed to stigmatize or disgrace a convicted offender, and often to alert the public about the offender's conviction. • A shame sanction usu. publicly associates the offender with the crime that he or she committed. An example is being required to post a sign in one's yard stating, “Convicted Child Molester Lives Here.” — Also termed shame sentence; shaming sanction; shaming sentence; scarlet-letter punishment; scarlet-letter sentence.

3.Int'l law. An economic or military coercive measure taken by one or more countries toward another to force it to comply with international law <U.N. sanctions against a renegade nation>.

sanction,vb.1. To approve, authorize, or support <the court will sanction the trust disposition if it is not against public policy>.2. To penalize by imposing a sanction <the court sanctioned the attorney for violating the gag order>.

SANCTIONABLE

sanctionable,adj. (Of conduct or action) meriting sanctions; likely to be sanctioned. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1278, 2750–2848.]

SANCTIONAL ENFORCEMENT

sanctional enforcement.See secondary right under RIGHT.

SANCTIONING RIGHT

SANCTIONS TORT

sanctions tort.A means of recovery for another party's discovery abuse, whereby the judge orders the abusive party to pay a fine to the injured party for the discovery violation. • This is not a tort in the traditional sense, but rather a form of punishment that results in monetary gain for the injured party. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1278; Pretrial Procedure 44.1.]

SANCTITY OF CONTRACT

sanctity of contract.The principle that the parties to a contract, having duly entered into it, must honor their obligations under it. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

“[Sanctity of contract] is merely another facet of freedom of contract, but the two concepts cover, to some extent, different grounds. The sanctity of contractual obligations is merely an expression of the principle that once a contract is freely and voluntarily entered into, it should be held sacred, and should be enforced by the Courts if it is broken. No doubt this very sanctity was an outcome of freedom of contract, for the reason why contracts were held sacred was the fact that the parties entered into them of their own choice and volition, and settled the terms by mutual agreement.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 12 (3d ed. 1981).

SANCTUARY

sanctuary. 1. A safe place, esp. where legal process cannot be executed; asylum.

“Every consecrated church was a sanctuary. If a malefactor took refuge therein, he could not be extracted; but it was the duty of the four neighbouring vills to beset the holy place, prevent his escape and send for a coroner.... [A]fter he had enjoyed the right of asylum for forty days, he was to be starved into submission; but the clergy resented this interference with the peace of Holy Church.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 590–91 (2d ed. 1899).

“In medieval England, as elsewhere in Europe, there were a number of ecclesiastical places where the king's writ did not run. The underlying theory was that consecrated places should not be profaned by the use of force, but the result in practice was that thieves and murderers could take refuge and thereby gain immunity even against the operation of criminal justice. This was the privilege called ‘sanctuary.’ In the case of parochial churches, the sanctuary lasted for forty days only. Before the expiration of this period, the fugitive had to choose whether to stand trial or ‘abjure’ the realm This was only permitted if he made a written confession to the coroner, which resulted in the forfeiture of his property as on conviction; his life only was spared” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 585 (3d ed. 1990).

2. A holy area of a religious building; esp., the area in a church where the main altar is located.

sandbagging, n. 1. A trial lawyer's remaining cagily silent when a possible error occurs at trial, with the hope of preserving an issue for appeal if the court does not correct the problem. • Such a tactic does not usu. preserve the issue for appeal because objections must be promptly made to alert the trial judge of the possible error. [Cases: Appeal and Error 181; Criminal Law 1030(1); Federal Courts 611. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 202, 207; Criminal Law §§ 1682, 1684.] 2. Corporations. An antitakeover tactic wherein the target company delays a hostile bidder's final offer by agreeing to negotiate, then prolonging bad-faith negotiations as long as possible. — sandbag, vb.

SATISDARE

satisdare (sat-is-dair-ee), vb.[Latin fr. satis “sufficient” + dare “to give”] Roman law. To give security in the form of satisdatio. See SATISDATIO.

SATISDATIO

satisdatio (sat-is-day-shee-oh), n.[Latin fr. satisdare] Roman law. Security given by a person, such as a debtor, through a surety. Pl. satisdationes (sat-is-day-shee-oh-nee-z).

SATISFACTION

satisfaction,n.1. The giving of something with the intention, express or implied, that it is to extinguish some existing legal or moral obligation. • Satisfaction differs from performance because it is always something given as a substitute for or equivalent of something else, while performance is the identical thing promised to be done. — Also termed satisfaction of debt. [Cases: Accord and Satisfaction 1. C.J.S. Accord and Satisfaction §§ 2–17, 25–33.] 2. The fulfillment of an obligation; esp., the payment in full of a debt.

“Satisfaction closely resembles performance. Both depend upon presumed intention to carry out an obligation, but in satisfaction the thing done is something different from the thing agreed to be done, whereas in performance the identical act which the party contracted to do is considered to have been done. The cases on satisfaction are usually grouped under four heads, namely, (i) satisfaction of debts by legacies; (ii) satisfaction of legacies by legacies; (iii) satisfaction (or ademption) of legacies by portions; and (iv) satisfaction of portion-debts by legacies, or by portions. Strictly, however, only the first and last of these heads are really cases of satisfaction; for satisfaction presupposes an obligation, which, of course, does not exist in the case of a legacy in the will of a living person.” R.E. Megarry, Snell's Principles of Equity 226–27 (23d ed. 1947).

3.SATISFACTION PIECE. 4.Wills & estates. The payment by a testator, during the testator's lifetime, of a legacy provided for in a will; ADVANCEMENT. Cf. ADEMPITION. [Cases: Wills 772. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1762–1769.] 5.Wills & estates. A testamentary gift intended to satisfy a debt owed by the testator to a creditor. See ACCORD AND SATISFACTION. — satisfy,vb.

SATISFACTION OF JUDGMENT satisfaction of judgment. 1. The complete discharge of obligations under a judgment. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2398; Judgment 874–899. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 656–676, 678–692.] 2. The document filed and entered on the record indicating that a judgment has been paid. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2398; Judgment 897. C.J.S. Judgments § 686.]

“Generally, a satisfaction of a judgment is the final act and end of a proceeding. Satisfaction implies or manifests an expression of finality as to all questions of liability and damages involved in the litigation. Once satisfaction occurs, further alteration or amendment of a final judgment generally is barred. Satisfaction of a judgment, when entered of record by the act of the parties, is prima facie evidence that the creditor has received payment of the amount of the judgment or its equivalent, and operates as an extinguishment of the judgment debt.” 47 Am. Jur. 2d Judgments § 1006, at 443 (1995).

SATISFACTION OF LIEN

satisfaction of lien. 1. The fulfillment of all obligations made the subject of a lien. 2. The document signed by the lienholder releasing the property subject to a lien.

SATISFACTION OF MORTGAGE satisfaction of mortgage. 1. The complete payment of a mortgage. 2. A discharge signed by the mortgagee or mortgage holder indicating that the property subject to the mortgage is released or that the mortgage debt has been paid and the mortgage conditions have been fully satisfied. [Cases: Mortgages 309–315. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 451, 465–466, 468, 477–485, 488.]

SATISFACTION PIECE

satisfaction piece.A written statement that one party (esp. a debtor) has discharged its obligation to another party, who accepts the discharge. — Also termed certificate of discharge; satisfaction. [Cases: Mortgages 309. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 451, 465–466, 477–478.]

SAVINGS-AND-LOAN ASSOCIATION

savings-and-loan association.A financial institution — often organized and chartered like a bank — that primarily makes home-mortgage loans but also usu. maintains checking accounts and provides other banking services. — Often shortened to S & L. — Also termed loan association; thrift institution; thrift. Cf. BUILDING-AND-LOAN ASSOCIATION. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations 1, 24–40. C.J.S. Building and Loan Associations, Savings and Loan Associations, and Credit Unions §§ 2–4, 11, 18–19, 66–113, 115.]

“The thrift institutions, mutual savings banks, savings and loan associations, and credit unions, originally were created to meet needs for saving, credit and loans of people whose resources and income were modest. Commercial banks, merchants, money lenders, and pawn shops often did not serve this demand for loans or savings as well, or with interest rates as favorable to poor individuals, and families. During the last two centuries, thrift institutions were gradually developed, therefore, by social reformers, philanthropic benefactors, religious and fraternal organizations, trade unions, employers, and thrift entrepreneurs (in most countries of the world) as a collateral type of banking or financial intermediation.” William A. Lovett, Banking and Financial Institutions Law in a Nutshell 236 (1997).

SCAB

scab. A person who works under conditions contrary to a union contract; esp., a worker who crosses a union picket line to replace a union worker during a strike. — Also termed strikebreaker; (in BrE) black-leg labor.

SCABINI

scabini (sk<<schwa>>-bI-nI). [Law Latin] Hist. Judges or the judge's assessors in the court held by the count; magistrates. • The term was found in a charter from the wardens of Lynn in Norfolk, during the reign of Henry VIII. But even earlier than that, the title was used in Charlemagne's empire (the French equivalent being édevins) and later Germanized as Schöffen.

SCALAM

scalam (skay-l<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin] Hist. Scale. • Ad scalam was the method of paying money to the Exchequer, in which sixpence was added to each 20 shillings to compensate for a deficiency in weight, although no scales were actually used.

SCALE

scale,n.1. A progression of degrees; esp., a range of wage rates. 2. A wage according to a range of rates. 3. An instrument for weighing. 4.Hist. In the practice of the English Supreme Court of Judicature, the fee charged by a solicitor for a particular type of case. • Unless the court ordered otherwise, the lower scale applied to all causes and matters assigned by the Judicature Acts to the King's Bench, or the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty divisions; to all actions for debt, contract, or tort; and to almost all causes and matters assigned by the acts to the Chancery division and in which the amount in controversy was less than £1,000. The higher scale applied in all other cases, and in actions falling under one of the lower-scale classes if the principal relief sought was injunctive.

SCALE ORDER

scale order.See ORDER(8).

SCALE TOLERANCE

scale tolerance.The nominal variation of the mass or weight of the same goods on different scales.

SCALING LAW

scalper. 1. A seller who buys something (esp. a ticket) at face value (or less) and then tries to resell it for a higher price. — Also termed ticket speculator. 2. An investment adviser who buys a security before recommending it to clients. 3. A market-maker who puts an excessive markup or markdown on a transaction.

SCALPING

scalping, n. 1. The practice of selling something (esp. a ticket) at a price above face value once it becomes scarce (usu. just before a high-demand event begins). 2. The purchase of a security by an investment adviser before the adviser recommends that a customer buy the same security. • This practice is usu. considered unethical because the customer's purchase will increase the security's price, thus enabling the investment adviser to sell at a profit. 3. The excessive markup or markdown on a transaction by a market-maker. • This action violates National Association of Securities Dealers guidelines. — scalp, vb.

SCANDAL

scandal. 1. Disgraceful, shameful, or degrading acts or conduct. 2. Defamatory reports or rumors; esp., slander. See SCANDALOUS MATTER.

“Scandal consists in the allegation of anything which is unbecoming the dignity of the court to hear, or is contrary to decency or good manners, or which charges some person with a crime not necessary to be shown in the cause, to which may be added that any unnecessary allegation, bearing cruelly upon the moral character of an individual, is also scandalous. The matter alleged, however, must be not only offensive, but also irrelevant to the cause, for however offensive it be, if it be pertinent and material to the cause the party has a right to plead it. It may often be necessary to charge false representations, fraud and immorality, and the pleading will not be open to the objection of scandal, if the facts justify the charge.” Eugene A. Jones, Manual of Equity Pleading and Practice 50–51 (1916).

SCANDALOUS MATTER

scandalous matter. Civil procedure. A matter that is both grossly disgraceful (or defamatory) and irrelevant to the action or defense. • A federal court — upon a party's motion or on its own — can order a scandalous matter struck from a pleading. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f). Cf. IMPERTINENT MATTER. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1127; Pleading 364(4). C.J.S. Pleading § 683.]

SCANDALOUS SUBJECT MATTER

scandalous subject matter. Trademarks. A word, phrase, symbol, or graphic depiction that the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office may refuse to register because it is shockingly offensive to social mores. • Although the Lanham Act uses the phrase “immoral, deceptive, or scandalous subject matter,” courts have not distinguished “scandalous” from “immoral.” [Cases: Trade Regulation 161. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 159.]

SCANDALUM MAGNATUM

scandalum magnatum (skan-d<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>m mag-nay-t<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. Actionable slander of powerful people; specif., defamatory comments regarding persons of high rank, such as peers, judges, or state officials.

“Words spoken in derogation of a peer, a judge, or other great officer of the realm, which are called scandalum magnatum, are held to be still more heinous; and, though they be such as would not be actionable in the case of a common person, yet when spoken in disgrace of such high and respectable characters, they amount to an atrocious injury: which is redressed by an action on the case founded on many ancient statutes; as well on behalf of the crown, to inflict the punishment of imprisonment on the slanderer, as on behalf of the party, to recover damages for the injury sustained.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 123–24 (1768).

A separation of beliefs and doctrines by persons of the same organized religion, religious denomination, or sect. [Cases: Religious Societies 23, 35. C.J.S. Religious Societies §§ 70, 98–100.]

“It has been held that the civil courts are not concerned with mere schisms stemming from disputations over matters of religious doctrine, not only because such questions are essentially ecclesiastical rather than judicial, but also because of the separation between the church and the state However, it has also been held that the situation is different in the case of self-governing congressional churches, for here the courts do not hesitate to assume jurisdiction when a schism affects property rights, for in this form ... each local congregation is independent and autonomous and there is no recourse within the denomination.” 66 Am. Jur. 2d Religious Societies § 51, at 804 (1973).

school,n.1. An institution of learning and education, esp. for children. [Cases: Schools 11. C.J.S. Schools and School Districts §§ 4, 74, 76, 396–398.]

“Although the word ‘school’ in its broad sense includes all schools or institutions, whether of high or low degree, the word ‘school’ frequently has been defined in constitutions and statutes as referring only to the public common schools generally established throughout the United States When used in a statute or other contract, ‘school’ usually does not include universities, business colleges, or other institutions of higher education unless the intent to include such institutions is clearly indicated.” 68 Am. Jur. 2d Schools § 1, at 355 (1993).

common school.See public school.

district school.A public school contained in and maintained by a school district. See SCHOOL DISTRICT.

private school.A school maintained by private individuals, religious organizations, or corporations, funded, at least in part, by fees or tuition, and open only to pupils selected and admitted based on religious affiliations or other particular qualifications. [Cases: Schools 1. C.J.S. Schools and School Districts §§ 2, 807.]

public school.An elementary, middle, or high school established under state law, regulated by the local state authorities in the various political subdivisions, funded and maintained by public taxation, and open and free to all children of the particular district where the school is located. — Also termed common school. [Cases: Schools 11. C.J.S. Schools and School Districts §§ 4, 74, 76, 396–398.]

2. The collective body of students under instruction in an institution of learning. 3. A group of people adhering to the same philosophy or system of beliefs.

scienter (sI-en-t<<schwa>>r or see-), n. [Latin “knowingly”] 1. A degree of knowledge that makes a person legally responsible for the consequences of his or her act or omission; the fact of an act's having been done knowingly, esp. as a ground for civil damages or criminal punishment. See KNOWLEDGE; MENS REA . [Cases: Criminal Law 20; Negligence 212, 302. C.J.S.

Criminal Law §§ 31–33, 35–39; Negligence §§ 44, 46–55, 913.] 2. A mental state consisting in an intent to deceive, manipulate, or defraud. • In this sense, the term is used most often in the context of securities fraud. The Supreme Court has held that to establish a claim for damages under Rule 10b-5, a plaintiff must prove that the defendant acted with scienter. Ernst & Ernst v. Hochfelder, 425 U.S. 185, 96 S.Ct. 1375 (1976). [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.45. C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 217.]

SCOPE NOTE

scope note.In a digest, a précis appearing after a title and showing concisely what subject matter is included and what is excluded.

“In the Century and Decennial Digests, though not in the various digests of the Key-Number Series, there is printed immediately following each topic title a couple of paragraphs which are called the Scope-Note. The first paragraph of this scope-note shows very briefly the character of the subject-matter included under the title. The second paragraph shows the 'Exclusions' — i.e., what related matter has been excluded in order to conform to the plan of the Digest — and directs the reader to the proper title under which such related matter may be found. Consequently a little study of the scope-note will oftentimes repay the searcher for a few moments' time consumed in so doing." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 116 (3d ed. 1914).

SCRIBERE EST AGERE

scribere est agere (skrI-b<<schwa>>-ree est aj-<<schwa>>-ree). [Latin] Hist. To write is to act.

“But now it seems clearly to be agreed, that, by the common law and the statute of Edward III, words spoken amount only to a high misdemeanor, and no treason. For they may be spoken in heat, without any intention If the words be set down in writing, it argues more deliberate intention; and it has been held that writing is an overt act of treason; for scribere est agere. But even in this case the bare words are not the treason, but the deliberate act of writing them.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 80 (1769).

scutage (skyoo-tij), n.[fr. Latin scutum “a shield”] Hist. 1.A monetary payment levied by the king on barons as a substitute for some or all of the knights to be supplied to the king by each baron. • This payment seems to date from the 12th century, Henry II (1154–1189) having levied five scutages in the first 11 years of his reign. 2. A fee paid by a tenant-in-chief by knight-service in lieu of serving in a war. 3. A tax on a knight's estate to help furnish the army. — Also termed escuage.

“Scutage Shield-money, in mediaeval feudal law, a payment in lieu of military service, paid by a tenant-in-chief in respect of the service of knights which he owed to the Crown. His personal obligation to serve could not be discharged by scutage but only by fine. Payment of scutage, though known in France and Germany, was most highly developed in England where it became a general tax on knights' estates at rates which by the thirteenth century were standardized. King John demanded frequent and heavy scutages and Magna Carta forbade the levying of scutage without the consent of a general council. Scutage was divided between the King and the tenants-in-chief who gave personal service in the campaign. It became obsolete by the fourteenth century.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1121 (1980).

seal,n.1. A fastening that must be broken before access can be obtained; esp., a device or substance that joins two things, usu. making the seam impervious. — Also termed common-law seal. 2. A piece of wax, a wafer, or some other substance affixed to the paper or other material on which a promise, release, or conveyance is written, together with a recital or expression of intention by which the promisor, releasor, or grantor manifests that a piece of wax, wafer, or other substance is a seal. • The purpose of a seal is to secure or prove authenticity. 3. A design embossed or stamped on paper to authenticate, confirm, or attest; an impression or sign that has legal consequence when applied to an instrument. [Cases: Seals 1.C.J.S. Seals §§ 2–3.]

“The use of the seal in England seems to have begun after the Norman Conquest, spreading from royalty and a few of the nobility to those of lesser rank. Originally a seal often consisted of wax bearing the imprint of an individualized signet ring, and in the seventeenth century Lord Coke said that wax without impression was not a seal. But in the United States the courts have not required either wax or impression. Impressions directly on the paper were recognized early and are still common for notarial and corporate seals, and gummed wafers have been widely used. In the absence of statute decisions have divided on the effectiveness of the written or printed word 'seal,' the printed initials 'L.S.' (locus sigilli, meaning place of the seal), a scrawl made with a pen (often called a 'scroll') and a recital of sealing. Most states in which the seal is still recognized now have statutes giving effect to one or more such devices." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 96 cmt. a (1979).

"The time-honoured form of seal was a blob of wax at the foot of the document, bearing an imprint of some kind, often a crest or motto. The use of wax was not, however, necessary for a seal, and any mark or impression on the paper was sufficient as long as it was made with the intention of affixing a seal. Recent English cases have been willing to find the necessary intention in circumstances where courts in the past would almost certainly have declined; so much so that it may now be the common law that a document purporting to be executed as a deed but lacking actual sealing will be regarded as sealed as long as it contains a printed or written indication of where the mark or impression constituting the seal should be placed if it were to be affixed." Peter Butt, Land Law 481–82 (2d ed. 1988).

corporate seal. A seal adopted by a corporation for executing and authenticating its corporate and legal instruments. [Cases: Corporations 51. C.J.S. Corporations § 106.]

great seal. 1. The official seal of the United States, of which the Secretary of State is the custodian. — Also termed seal of the United States. [Cases: United States 5.5.] 2. The official seal of a particular state. — Also termed seal of the state; state seal. [Cases: States 23. C.J.S. States § 39.] 3. The official seal of Great Britain, of which the Lord Chancellor is the custodian.

notary seal. See NOTARY SEAL.

private seal. A corporate or individual seal, as distinguished from a public seal. [Cases: Seals 1. C.J.S. Seals §§ 2–3.]

public seal. A seal used to certify documents belonging to a public authority or government bureau.

quarter seal. A seal (originally a quarter section of the great seal) maintained in the Scotch chancery to be used on particular grants from the Crown. See great seal (3).

seal of the United States. See great seal (1).

state seal. See great seal (2).

wafer seal. A plastic or paper disk, usu. red or gold, affixed to a legal document as a substitute for a wax seal. • Wafers are more common in the U.K. than in the U.S. — Sometimes shortened to wafer.

seal, vb. 1. To authenticate or execute (a document) by use of a seal. 2. To close (an envelope, etc.) tightly; to prevent access to (a document, record, etc.).

SEALANE

sea lane.Int'l & maritime law. A designated course or regularly used route for ships, esp. in restricted waters such as harbors and straits. • Although sea lanes have obvious safety advantages, they were long resisted by sea captains, who saw them as a threat to their freedom to navigate.

SEALED-CONTAINER RULE

sealed-container rule.Products liability. The principle that a seller is not liable for a defective product if the seller receives the product from the manufacturer and sells it without knowing of the defect or having a reasonable opportunity to inspect the product. [Cases: Products Liability 9; Sales 430. C.J.S. Products Liability §§ 16–17; Sales § 289.]

SEALED CONTRACT

sealed contract.See contract under seal under CONTRACT.

SEALED INSTRUMENT

sealed instrument.At common law and under some statutes, an instrument to which the bound party has affixed a personal seal, usu. recognized as providing indisputable evidence of the validity of the underlying obligations. • The common-law distinction between sealed and unsealed instruments has been abolished by many states, and the UCC provides that the laws applicable to sealed instruments do not apply to contracts for the sale of goods or negotiable instruments. UCC § 2-203. See contract under seal under CONTRACT. [Cases: Contracts 36; Seals 1. C.J.S. Contracts § 76; Seals §§ 2–3.]

“At common law, the seal served to render documents indisputable as to the terms of the underlying obligation, thereby dispensing with the necessity of witnesses; the sealed instrument was considered such reliable evidence that it actually became the contract itself — called a ‘specialty’ — the loss of which meant loss of all rights of the obligee against the obligor. The seal also had many other consequences at common law, some of which have been retained in jurisdictions which still recognize the seal In states where the seal is still recognized, its primary legal significance is often the application of a longer statute of limitations to actions on sealed instruments.” 69 Am. Jur. 2d Seals § 2, at 617–18 (1993).

“In medieval England a wax seal may have performed [the functions of a formality] tolerably well. But in the United States few people owned or used a seal and the ritual deteriorated to the point that wax was dispensed with and printing houses decorated the signature lines of their standard forms with the printed letters 'L.S.' for locus sigilli (place of the seal). Perfunctory invocation of the rules for sealed documents called into question the seal's utility in making promises enforceable." E. Allan Farnsworth, Changing Your Mind: The Law of Regretted Decisions 46 (1998).

SEA LETTER

sea letter. Hist. A manifest issued during a war by authorities of a port where a neutral vessel is fitted, certifying the vessel's nationality, specifying the nature of and destination of the vessel's cargo, and allowing the vessel to sail under the neutral flag of its owner. • The last sea letter was issued at the Port of New York in 1806, and the use of sea letters was discontinued by proclamation of President James Madison. — Also spelled sea-letter. — Also termed sea brief; sea pass; passport.

"Our laws require masters of vessels, on entering a port for traffic, to lodge with the consul their registers, sea-letters, and passports" Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law 161–62 (5th ed. 1878).

SEALING OF RECORDS

sealing of records. The act or practice of officially preventing access to particular (esp. juvenile-criminal) records, in the absence of a court order. Cf. EXPUNGEMENT OF RECORD. [Cases: Records 32. C.J.S. Records §§ 65, 67–73.]

SEAL OF CAUSE

seal of cause. Scots law. The seal of a burgh court, by which a royal burgh could, consistently with its charter powers, create a subordinate corporation by charter. • The seal of cause was most commonly used to create charitable corporations and craft guilds.

SEAL OF THE STATE

seaman. Maritime law. Under the Jones Act and the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, a person who is attached to a navigating vessel as an employee below the rank of officer and contributes to the function of the vessel or the accomplishment of its mission. • Seamen's injuries are covered under the Jones Act and the general maritime law. — Also termed crew member; mariner; member of a crew. See JONES ACT. Cf. STEVEDORE. [Cases: Seamen 2. C.J.S. Seamen §§ 2–3, 155.]

“The Jones Act plaintiff must be a ‘seaman’ who is injured (or killed) ‘in the course of his employment.’ The ‘course of ... employment’ requirement at least excluded passengers, guests, trespassers, pirates (unless of course the pirate was suing his own employer) and so on. Who else might be excluded (or included) was, as a matter of initial construction, impossible to say. After a half-century of litigation the answer to the riddle is not apparent. The Supreme Court has alternated between giving the term ‘seaman’ an exceedingly broad construction and giving it a much narrower one. Consequently defendants have been encouraged to argue, in all but the most obvious cases, that plaintiff is not a Jones Act seaman and that the action must be dismissed. Thus there has always been, there continues to be, and presumably there will go on being a substantial volume of depressing litigation of this type.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 6-21, at 328 (2d ed. 1975).

“The traditional seaman is a member of the crew of a merchant vessel However, vessels are not limited in their functions to the transportation of goods over water. The performance by a vessel of some other mission, such as operating as a cruise ship, necessitates the presence aboard ship of employees who do not ‘man, reef and steer’ the vessel Exploration for oil and gas on navigable waters has led to further expansion of the concept of a ‘seaman.’ In 1959, in the celebrated case of Offshore Oil Co. v. Robison, 266 F.2d 769 (5th Cir. 1959), the Fifth Circuit held that floating drilling structures are ‘vessels’ and that the amphibious oil workers aboard them are entitled to the seaman's remedies against their employers and the operators of the ‘vessels’ on which they are employed.” Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 178–80 (2d ed. 1988).

able-bodied seaman. An experienced seaman who is qualified for all seaman's duties and certified by an inspecting authority. — Abbr. AB; ABS. — Also termed able seaman; bluewater seaman. [Cases: Seamen 11, 29. C.J.S. Seamen §§ 113–121, 123, 132–133, 148.]

merchant seaman. A sailor employed by a private vessel, as distinguished from one employed in public or military service. [Cases: Seamen 2. C.J.S. Seamen §§ 2–3, 155.]

ordinary seaman. A seaman who has some experience but who is not proficient enough to be classified as an able-bodied seaman. — Abbr. OS; OD. [Cases: Seamen 11, 29. C.J.S. Seamen §§ 113–121, 123, 132–133, 148.]

search, n. 1. Criminal procedure. An examination of a person's body, property, or other area that the person would reasonably be expected to consider as private, conducted by a law-enforcement officer for the purpose of finding evidence of a crime. • Because the Fourth Amendment prohibits unreasonable searches (as well as seizures), a search cannot ordinarily be conducted without probable cause. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 13. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 8, 13, 20, 23, 70, 72.]

“It must be recognized that whenever a police officer accosts an individual and restrains his freedom to walk away, he has ‘seized’ that person. And it is nothing less than sheer torture of the English language to suggest that a careful exploration of the outer surfaces of a person's clothing all over his or her body in an attempt to find weapons is not a ‘search.’ ” Terry v. Ohio, 392 U.S. 1, 16, 88 S.Ct. 1868, 1877 (1968) (Warren, J.).

administrative search. A search of public or commercial premises carried out by a regulatory authority for the purpose of enforcing compliance with health, safety, or security regulations. • The probable cause required for an administrative search is less stringent than that required for a search incident to a criminal investigation. — Also termed regulatory search; inspection search. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 79. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 99–101, 189.]

border search. 1. A search conducted at the border of a country, esp. at a checkpoint, for the purpose of excluding illegal aliens and contraband. [Cases: Aliens 53.8; Customs Duties 126(1). C.J.S. Aliens §§ 70, 169–170; Customs Duties §§ 225, 228–229, 231.]

“[W]arrantless searches and seizures conducted at national boundaries are permitted under the general authority of the United States to ensure the integrity of its borders. As the Supreme Court stated in Carroll v. United States, such activity ensures ‘national self-protection reasonably requiring one entering the country to identify himself as entitled to come in, and his belongings as effects which may be lawfully brought in.’ [267 U.S. 132, 154, 45 S.Ct. 280, 285 (1925).] Thus, the right to remain silent and protect one's personal belongings from government intrusion, normally afforded constitutional protection, are surrendered at the border.” Charles H. Whitebread, Criminal Procedure § 12.02, at 227 (1980).

2. Loosely, a search conducted near the border of a country. • Generally, searches near the border are treated no differently from those conducted elsewhere in the country.

checkpoint search. 1. A search anywhere on a military installation. 2. A search in which police officers set up roadblocks and stop motorists to ascertain whether the drivers are intoxicated.

Chimel search. See protective search.

consent search. A search conducted after a person with the authority to do so voluntarily waives Fourth Amendment rights. • The government has the burden to show that the consent was given freely — not under duress. Bumper v. North Carolina, 391 U.S. 543, 548–49, 88 S.Ct. 1788, 1792 (1968). — Also termed consensual search. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 171–186. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 111–127.]

“The voluntariness of a consent to search is ‘to be determined from the totality of all the circumstances.’ [Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218, 93 S.Ct. 2041 (1973).] Among the factors to be considered in determining the effectiveness of an alleged consent to search are whether the defendant (1) has minimal schooling or was of low intelligence; (2) was mentally ill or intoxicated; (3) was under arrest at the time the consent was given; (4) was overpowered by officers, handcuffed, or similarly subject to physical restriction; (5) has seized from him by the police the keys to the premises thereafter searched; (6) employed evasive conduct or attempted to mislead the police; (7) denied guilt or the presence of any incriminatory objects in his premises; (8) earlier gave a valid confession or otherwise cooperated, as by instigating the search, or at least the investigation leading to the search; (9) was hesitant in agreeing to the search; or (10) was refused his request to consult with counsel. The presence of some of these factors is not controlling, however, as each case must stand or fall on its own special facts.” Jerold H. Israel & Wayne R. LaFave, Criminal Procedure in a Nutshell 141–42 (5th ed. 1993).

constructive search. A subpoena of a corporation's records.

“[I]t is settled that the so-called ‘constructive search’ involved in an administrative subpoena of corporate books or records constitutes a ‘search’ or ‘seizure’ within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment.” 68 Am. Jur. 2d Searches and Seizures § 44, at 674 (1993).

emergency search. A warrantless search conducted by a police officer who has probable cause and reasonably believes that, because of a need to protect life or property, there is not enough time to obtain a warrant. See EMERGENCY DOCTRINE(3).

exigent search (eks-<<schwa>>-j<<schwa>>nt). A warrantless search carried out under exigent circumstances, such as an imminent danger to human life or a risk of the destruction of evidence. See exigent circumstances under CIRCUMSTANCE. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 42.1. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 14, 57–61, 63.]

illegal search. See unreasonable search.

inventory search. A complete search of an arrestee's person before that person is booked into jail. • All possessions found are typically held in police custody. [Cases: Automobiles 349.5(12); Controlled Substances 117; Searches and Seizures 58. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles § 1334; Searches and Seizures § 77.]

no-knock search. A search of property by the police without knocking and announcing their presence and purpose before entry. • A no-knock search warrant may be issued under limited circumstances, as when a prior announcement would probably lead to the destruction of the objects searched for, or would endanger the safety of the police or another person. [Cases: Controlled Substances 153.]

private search.A search conducted by a private person rather than by a law-enforcement officer. • Items found during a private search are generally admissible in evidence if the person conducting the search was not acting at the direction of a law-enforcement officer. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 33. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 23, 43.]

protective search.A search of a detained suspect and the area within the suspect's immediate control, conducted to protect the arresting officer's safety (as from a concealed weapon) and often to preserve evidence. • A protective search can be conducted without a warrant. Chimel v. California, 395 U.S. 752, 89 S.Ct. 2034 (1969). — Also termed search incident to arrest; Chimel search (sh<<schwa>>-mel). [Cases: Arrest 63, 63.5(8); Searches and Seizures 70. C.J.S. Arrest § 40; Searches and Seizures §§ 88–89.]

regulatory search.See administrative search.

search incident to arrest.See protective search.

sector search.See zone search.

shakedown search.A usu. random and warrantless search for illicit or contraband material (such as weapons or drugs) in a prisoner's cell. — Often shortened to shakedown. [Cases: Prisons 4(7). C.J.S. Prisons and Rights of Prisoners §§ 58, 60, 74–75.]

strip search.A search of a person conducted after that person's clothes have been removed, the purpose usu. being to find any contraband the person might be hiding. [Cases: Controlled Substances 126.]

unreasonable search.A search conducted without probable cause or other considerations that would make it legally permissible. — Also termed illegal search.

voluntary search.A search in which no duress or coercion was applied to obtain the defendant's consent. See consent search.

warranted search.A search conducted under authority of a search warrant.

warrantless search.A search conducted without obtaining a proper warrant. • Warrantless searches are permissible under exigent circumstances or when conducted incident to an arrest. See exigent circumstances under CIRCUMSTANCE; protective search.

zone search.A search of a crime scene (such as the scene of a fire or explosion) by dividing it up into specific sectors. — Also termed sector search.

2. An examination of public documents or records for information; esp., TITLE SEARCH.
3.Int'l law. The wartime process of boarding and examining the contents of a merchant vessel for contraband. • A number of treaties regulate the manner in which the search must be conducted. See RIGHT OF SEARCH. [Cases: War and National Emergency 20. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 26, 28.]

SEARCH-AND-SEIZURE WARRANT search-and-seizure warrant.See SEARCH WARRANT.

SEARCH BOOK

search book. A lawbook that contains no statements of the law but instead consists of lists or tables of cases, statutes, and the like, used simply to help a researcher find the law. • Most indexes, other than index-digests, are search books.

SEARCH COMMITTEE

SEARCH OF PATENTABILITY

search of patentability. See PATENTABILITY SEARCH.

SEARCH REPORT

search report. Patents. A list of prior-art documents cited by the patent examiner during the patent application's preliminary examination.

SEARCH WARRANT

search warrant. Criminal law. A judge's written order authorizing a law-enforcement officer to conduct a search of a specified place and to seize evidence. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 41. — Also termed search-and-seizure warrant. See WARRANT(1). [Cases: Searches and Seizures 101. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 128–132, 149.]

anticipatory search warrant. A search warrant based on an affidavit showing probable cause that evidence of a certain crime (such as illegal drugs) will be located at a specific place in the future. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 122. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures § 172.]

blanket search warrant. 1. A single search warrant that authorizes the search of more than one area. 2. An unconstitutional warrant that authorizes the seizure of everything found at a given location, without specifying which items may be seized.

covert-entry search warrant. A warrant authorizing law-enforcement officers to clandestinely enter private premises in the absence of the owner or occupant without prior notice, and to search the premises and collect intangible evidence, esp. photographs and eyewitness information. • Although previously used in federal criminal investigations, these types of warrants were first given express statutory authority by the USA Patriot Act. 18 USCA § 3103a. Information gathered while executing a sneak-and-peek warrant can later be used to support a search warrant under which physical evidence can be seized. — Also termed sneak-and-peek search warrant; surreptitious-entry search warrant.

no-knock search warrant. A search warrant that authorizes the police to enter premises without knocking and announcing their presence and purpose before entry because a prior announcement would lead to the destruction of the objects searched for or would endanger the safety of the police or another person. Cf. KNOCK-AND-ANNOUNCE RULE. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 143.1. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 195–201.]

sneak-and-peek search warrant. See covert-entry search warrant.

surreptitious-entry search warrant. See covert-entry search warrant.

SEA REEVE

sea reeve (see reev). Hist. An officer appointed to watch the shore and enforce a lord's maritime rights, including the right to wreckage.

SEA ROVER

sea rover. 1. A person who roves the sea for plunder; a pirate. 2. A pirate vessel.

SEARS–COMPCO DOCTRINE

Sears–CompcO doctrine. The principle that Congress, by passing copyright, trademark, and patent laws, has preempted some state-law protection of information that is not protected by those statutes. Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Stiffel Co., 376 U.S. 225, 84 S.Ct. 784 (1964); CompcO Corp. v. Day-Brite Lighting, Inc., 376 U.S. 234, 84 S.Ct. 779 (1964). • The doctrine reflects a congressional policy decision that public access to information outweighs private economic incentives to collect and disseminate it. It limits how far states may protect against misappropriation. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 109. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 104, 108.]

SEASONABLE

seasonable, adj. Within the time agreed on; within a reasonable time < seasonable performance of the contract>.

SECONDARY FACTOR

secondary factor. (usu. pl.) Patents. Objective evidence that courts consider in determining a patent claim's nonobviousness. • Secondary factors include “commercial success, long-felt but unsolved need, failure of others, and unexpected results.” Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 17–18, 86 S.Ct. 684, 694 (1966). — Also termed secondary consideration. [Cases: Patents 36.1. C.J.S. Patents §§ 87–88, 98–99.]

SECONDARY INSURED

secondary insured. See additional insured under INSURED.

SECONDARY INSURER

secondary insurer. See excess insurer under INSURER.

SECONDARY INVENTION

secondary invention. Patents. An invention that uses or incorporates established elements or combinations to achieve a new and useful result. [Cases: Patents 174. C.J.S. Patents § 308.]

SECONDARY LENDER

secondary lender. A wholesale mortgage buyer who purchases first mortgages from banks and savings-and-loan associations, enabling them to restock their money supply and loan more money.

SECONDARY LIABILITY

secondary liability. See LIABILITY.

SECONDARY-LINE COMPETITION

secondary-line competition. See vertical competition under COMPETITION.

SECONDARY-LINE INJURY

secondary-line injury. Antitrust. Under the price-discrimination provisions of the Robinson–Patman Act, the act of hindering or seeking to hinder competition among a seller's customers by selling substantially the same products at favorable prices to one customer, or a select group of customers, to the detriment of others. 15 USCA § 13(a). • A secondary-line injury, which refers to competition among the seller's customers, is distinguishable from a primary-line injury, which refers to the anticompetitive effects that predatory pricing has on the direct competitors of the seller. Cf. PRIMARY-LINE INJURY Y.

SECONDARY MARKET

secondary market.See MARKET.

SECONDARY MEANING secondary meaning.Intellectual property. A special sense that a trademark or tradename for a business, goods, or services has acquired even though the trademark or tradename was not originally protectable. • The term does not refer to a subordinate or rare meaning, but rather to a later meaning that has been added to the original one borne by the mark or name and that has now become in the market its usual and primary meaning. — Also termed special meaning; trade meaning. [Cases: Trade Regulation 478. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 101–102, 118.]

“Secondary meaning is association, nothing more. It exists only in the minds of those of the public who have seen or known or have heard of a brand of goods by some name or sign and have associated the two in their minds.” Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 105 (1929).

SECTION 8(F) AGREEMENT

section 8(f) agreement.Labor law. A labor contract that is negotiated between an employer in the construction business and a union that cannot demonstrate that it represents a majority of the employees at the time the contract is executed. 29 USCA § 158(f). • This is an exception to the general rule that an employer need only negotiate with a union that can demonstrate majority status. It was enacted in part because of the nature of the construction industry, in which the employers may have several different jobs in different parts of the country, the jobs are typically completed in a relatively short time, and the workforce is often transient. Since the workforce often does not have sufficient ties to a particular employer to petition for a certification election, section 8(f) agreements are directed toward providing a certain level of protection in recognition of that fact. But section 8(f) agreements are not equivalent to collective-bargaining agreements. For example, the employer can legally repudiate the agreement at any time, and the employees may not legally picket to enforce the agreement. The main protection such an agreement provides is a monetary obligation, which can be enforced, if necessary, in federal court. And if the union achieves majority status, the section 8(f) agreement will essentially become a fully enforceable collective-bargaining agreement.

SECURITY

security, n. 1. Collateral given or pledged to guarantee the fulfillment of an obligation; esp., the assurance that a creditor will be repaid (usu. with interest) any money or credit extended to a debtor. [Cases: Secured Transactions 11, 115. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 3, 11, 84.] 2. A person who is bound by some type of guaranty; SURETY. 3. The state of being secure, esp. from danger or attack. 4. An instrument that evidences the holder's ownership rights in a firm (e.g., a stock), the holder's creditor relationship with a firm or government (e.g., a bond), or the holder's other rights (e.g., an option). • A security indicates an interest based on an investment in a common enterprise rather than direct participation in the enterprise. Under an important statutory definition, a security is any interest or instrument relating to finances, including a note, stock, treasury stock, bond, debenture, evidence of indebtedness, certificate of interest or participation in a profit-sharing agreement, collateral trust certificate, preorganization certificate or subscription, transferable share, investment contract, voting trust certificate, certificate of deposit for a security, fractional undivided interest in oil, gas, or other mineral rights, or certificate of interest or participation in, temporary or interim certificate for, receipt for, guarantee of, or warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase any of these things. A security also includes any put, call, straddle, option, or privilege on any security, certificate of deposit, group or index of securities, or any such device entered into on a national securities exchange, relating to foreign currency. 15 USCA § 77b(1). — Also termed (in sense 4) evidence of indebtedness; evidence of debt. Cf. SHARE(2); STOCK(4). [Cases: Corporations 63.1, 470; Securities Regulation 5, 249. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 664–665; Securities Regulation §§ 9, 384–387, 389–390, 392.]

“What do the following have in common: scotch whisky, self-improvement courses, cosmetics, earthworms, beavers, muskrats, rabbits, chinchillas, fishing boats, vacuum cleaners, cemetery lots, cattle embryos, master recording contracts, animal feeding programs, pooled litigation funds, and fruit trees? The answer is that they have all been held to be securities within the meaning of federal or state securities statutes. The vast range of such unconventional investments that have fallen within the ambit of the securities laws' coverage is due to the broad statutory definition of a ‘security’” 1 Thomas Lee Hazen, Treatise on the Law of Securities Regulation § 1.5, at 28–29 (3d ed. 1995).

adjustment security.A stock or bond that is issued during a corporate reorganization. • The security holders' relative interests are readjusted during this process.

convertible security.A security (usu. a bond or preferred stock) that may be exchanged by the owner for another security, esp. common stock from the same company, and usu. at a fixed price on a specified date. — Also termed (specif.) convertible debt; convertible stock. [Cases: Securities Regulation 53.16(10).]

coupon security.A security with detachable interest coupons that the holder must present for payment as they mature. • Coupon securities are usu. in denominations of $1,000, and they are negotiable. [Cases: Corporations 472. C.J.S. Corporations § 664.]

debt security.A security representing funds borrowed by the corporation from the holder of the debt obligation; esp., a bond, note, or debenture. • Generally, a debt security is any security that is not an equity security. See BOND(3). [Cases: Securities Regulation 5.12, 5.13, 250. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 22–23, 388, 394.]

dematerialized security. See uncertificated security.

divisional security. A special type of security issued to finance a particular project.

equity security. A security representing an ownership interest in a corporation, such as a share of stock, rather than a debt interest, such as a bond; any stock or similar security, or any security that is convertible into stock or similar security or carrying a warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase stock or a similar security, and any such warrant or right. [Cases: Corporations 63.1; Securities Regulation 5.25. C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 26.]

exempt security. A security that need not be registered under the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 and is exempt from the margin requirements of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. [Cases: Securities Regulation 14.10–14.40. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 23, 51–61, 69.]

fixed-income security. A security that pays a fixed rate of return, such as a bond with a fixed interest rate or a preferred stock with a fixed dividend. [Cases: Corporations 156, 473. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 158, 670.]

government security. A security issued by a government, a government agency, or a government corporation; esp., a security (such as a Treasury bill) issued by a U.S. government agency, with the implied backing of Congress. — Also termed government-agency security; agency security. [Cases: Securities Regulation 5.29; United States 91. C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 25; United States §§ 164, 167.]

heritable security. Scots law. A debt instrument secured by a charge on heritable property. — Also termed inheritable security. See heritable bond under BOND(2).

high-grade security. A security issued by a company of sound financial condition and having the ability to maintain good earnings (e.g., a utility company security).

hybrid security. A security with features of both a debt instrument (such as a bond) and an equity interest (such as a share of stock). • An example of a hybrid security is a convertible bond, which can be exchanged for shares in the issuing corporation and is subject to stock-price fluctuations.

investment security. An instrument issued in bearer or registered form as a type commonly recognized as a medium for investment and evidencing a share or other interest in the property or enterprise of the issuer. [Cases: Securities Regulation 5.10, 252. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 3, 9–10, 33, 381–382, 384–386, 392.]

junior security. A security that is subordinate to a senior security.

landed security. A mortgage or other encumbrance affecting land. [Cases: Mortgages 1. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 2–6.]

letter security. See restricted security.

listed security. A security accepted for trading on a securities exchange. • The issuing company must have met the SEC's registration requirements and complied with the rules of the particular exchange. — Also termed listed stock. See DELISTING. [Cases: Exchanges 13.10. C.J.S. Exchanges §§ 17–18.]

long-term security. 1. A new securities issue with an initial maturity of ten years or more. 2. On a balance sheet, a security with a remaining maturity of one year or more.

low-grade security. A security with low investment quality. • Low-grade securities usu. offer higher yields to attract capital. See high-yield bond under BOND(3).

marginable security. A security that can be bought on margin. — Also termed margin stock. See MARGIN.

margin'd security. A security that is bought on margin and that serves as collateral in a margin account. See MARGIN.

marketable security. A security that the holder can readily sell on a stock exchange or an over-the-counter market.

mortgage-backed security. A security (esp. a pass-through security) backed by mortgages. See stripped mortgage-backed security. [Cases: Securities Regulation 5.13. C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 23.]

municipal security. See municipal bond under BOND(3).

noncallable security. A security that cannot be redeemed, or bought back, at the issuer's option. — Also termed (specif.) noncallable bond.

nonmarketable security. 1. A security that cannot be sold on the market and can be redeemed only by the holder. 2. A security that is not of investment quality.

outstanding security. A security that is held by an investor and has not been redeemed by the issuing corporation.

pass-through security. A security that passes through payments from debtors to investors. • Pass-through securities are usu. assembled and sold in packages to investors by private lenders who deduct a service fee before passing the principal and interest payments through to the investors.

personal security. 1. An obligation for the repayment of a debt, evidenced by a pledge or note binding a natural person, as distinguished from property. 2. A person's legal right to enjoy life, health, and reputation.

public security. A negotiable or transferable security that is evidence of government debt.

real security. The security of mortgages or other liens or encumbrances upon land. See COLLATERAL(2). [Cases: Mortgages 1. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 2–6.]

redeemable security. Any security, other than a short-term note, that, when presented to the issuer, entitles the holder to receive a share of the issuer's assets or the cash equivalent. — Also termed callable security.

registered security. 1. A security whose owner is recorded in the issuer's books. • The issuer keeps a record of the current owners for purposes of sending dividends, interest payments, proxies, and the like. 2. A security that is to be offered for sale and for which a registration statement has been submitted. — Also termed (specif.) registered stock. [Cases: Securities Regulation 11.10–11.50. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 8, 35–49, 63, 69–72.]

restricted security. A security that is not registered with the SEC and therefore may not be sold publicly unless specified conditions are met. • A restricted security is usu. acquired in a nonpublic transaction in which the buyer gives the seller a letter stating the buyer's intent to hold the stock as an investment rather than resell it. — Also termed restricted stock; letter security; letter stock; unregistered security.

senior security. A security of a class having priority over another class as to the distribution of assets or the payment of dividends. 15 USCA § 77r(d)(4).

shelf security. A security that is set aside for shelf registration.

short-term security. A bond or note that matures and is payable within a brief period (often one year).

speculative security. A security that, as an investment, involves a risk of loss greater than would usu. be involved; esp., a security whose value depends on proposed or promised future promotion or development, rather than on present tangible assets or conditions.

stripped mortgage-backed security. A derivative security providing distributions to classes that receive different proportions of either the principal or interest payments from a pool of mortgage-backed securities. — Abbr. SMBS. See mortgage-backed security.

structured security. (usu. pl.) A security whose cash-flow characteristics depend on one or more indexes, or that has an embedded forward or option, or a security for which an investor's investment return and the issuer's payment obligations are contingent on, or highly sensitive to, changes in the value of the underlying assets, indices, interest rates, or cash flows. SEC Rule 434(h) (17 CFR § 230.434(h)).

treasury security. See treasury stock under STOCK.

uncertificated security. A share or other interest in property or an enterprise, or an obligation of the issuer that is not represented by an instrument but is registered on the issuer's books. UCC § 8-102(a)(18). • This term was called uncertified security in earlier versions of the UCC. — Also termed (in BrE) dematerialized security.

unlisted security. An over-the-counter security that is not registered with a stock exchange. — Also termed unlisted stock.

unregistered security. See restricted security.

voting security. See voting stock under STOCK.

when-issued security. A security that can be traded even though it has not yet been issued. • Any transaction that takes place does not become final until the security is issued.

worthless security. A security that has lost its value, for which a loss (usu. capital) is allowed for tax purposes. IRC (26 USCA) § 165. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3429.]

zero-coupon security. A security (esp. a bond) that is issued at a large discount but pays no interest. • The face value of the bond is payable at maturity.

SECURITY AGREEMENT

security agreement. An agreement that creates or provides for an interest in specified real or personal property to guarantee the performance of an obligation. • It must provide for a security interest, describe the collateral, and be signed by the debtor. The agreement may include other important covenants and warranties. [Cases: Secured Transactions 41–51. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 37–49.]

SECURITY COUNCIL

Security Council. A principal organ of the United Nations, consisting of five permanent members (China, France, Russia, the United Kingdom, and the United States) and ten additional members elected at stated intervals, charged with the responsibility of maintaining international peace and security, and esp. of preventing or halting wars by diplomatic, economic, or military action. • The nonpermanent members are elected from each of the world's major regions, based on a distribution formula. [Cases: International Law 10.45. C.J.S. International Law §§ 59–65.]

SECURITY DEPOSIT

security deposit. See DEPOSIT(3).

SECURITY FOR COSTS

security for costs. Money, property, or a bond given to a court by a plaintiff or an appellant to secure the payment of court costs if that party loses. [Cases: Costs 105, 302; Federal Civil Procedure 2732. C.J.S. Costs §§ 59, 63; Criminal Law §§ 1742–1743.]

SECURITY GRADE

security grade. See SECURITY RATING.

SECURITY GRADING

security grading. See SECURITY RATING.

SECURITY INTEREST

security interest. A property interest created by agreement or by operation of law to secure performance of an obligation (esp. repayment of a debt). • Although the UCC limits the creation of a security interest to personal property, the Bankruptcy Code defines the term to mean “a lien created by an agreement.” 11 USCA § 101(51). [Cases: Secured Transactions 2, 11. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 3, 7, 9–11, 22, 27.]

perfected security interest.A security interest that complies with the statutory requirements for achieving priority over a trustee in bankruptcy and unperfected interests. • A perfected interest may also have priority over another interest that was perfected later in time. See PERFECT. [Cases: Secured Transactions 81–96, 138–145. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 3, 50–51, 53–77, 88, 90–102, 105–107, 118.]

purchase-money security interest.A security interest that is created when a buyer uses the lender's money to make the purchase and immediately gives the lender security (UCC § 9-103); a security interest that is either (1) taken or retained by the seller of the collateral to secure all or part of its price or (2) taken by a person who by making advances or incurring an obligation gives value to enable the debtor to acquire rights in or the use of collateral if that value is in fact so used. • If a buyer's purchase of a boat, for example, is financed by a bank that loans the amount of the purchase price, the bank's security interest in the boat that secures the loan is a purchase-money security interest. — Abbr. PMSI. — Also termed purchase-money interest. [Cases: Secured Transactions 83, 146. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 10, 55, 103–105.]

unperfected security interest.A security interest held by a creditor who has not established priority over any other creditor. • The only priority is over the debtor. [Cases: Secured Transactions 139. C.J.S. Secured Transactions § 91.]

SECURITY RATING

security rating. 1. The system for grading or classifying a security by financial strength, stability, or risk. • Firms such as Standard and Poor's and Moody's grade securities. — Also termed security grade; security grading; security rate. 2. The classification that a given security is assigned to under this system.

SEDGE FLAT

sedge flat.A tract of land below the high-water mark.

sedition,n.1. An agreement, communication, or other preliminary activity aimed at inciting treason or some lesser commotion against public authority. 2. Advocacy aimed at inciting or producing — and likely to incite or produce — imminent lawless action. • At common law, sedition included defaming a member of the royal family or the government. The difference between sedition and treason is that the former is committed by preliminary steps, while the latter entails some overt act for carrying out the plan. But of course, if the plan is merely for some small commotion, even accomplishing the plan does not amount to treason. Cf. TREASON. [Cases: Insurrection and Sedition 1. C.J.S. Riot; Insurrection § 29.] — seditious,adj.

“Sedition — This, perhaps the very vaguest of all offences known to the Criminal Law, is defined as the speaking or writing of words calculated to excite disaffection against the Constitution as by law established, to procure the alteration of it by other than lawful means, or to incite any person to commit a crime to the disturbance of the peace, or to raise discontent or disaffection, or to promote ill-feeling between different classes of the community. A charge of sedition is, historically, one of the chief means by which Government, especially at the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth century, strove to put down hostile critics. It is evident that the vagueness of the charge is a danger to the liberty of the subject, especially if the Courts of Justice can be induced to take a view favourable to the Government.” Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 136 (P.B. Fairest ed., 6th ed. 1967).

SEDITION ACT

Sedition Act.Hist. A 1798 federal statute that prohibited the malicious publication of defamatory material about the government, Congress, or the President. • The act expired in 1801.

SED PER CURIAM

sed per curiam (sed p*<<schwa>>r kyoor-ee-<<schwa>>m*). [Latin] But by the court. • This phrase is used to introduce: (1) a statement made by the court disagreeing with counsel's arguments; or (2) the opinion of the whole court when different from the opinion of the single judge immediately before quoted.

SED QUAERE

sed quaere (sed kweer-ee). [Latin] But inquire; examine this further. • This remark indicates that the correctness of a particular statement is challenged.

SEDUCTION

seduction. The offense that occurs when a man entices a woman of previously chaste character to have unlawful intercourse with him by means of persuasion, solicitation, promises, or bribes, or other means not involving force. • Many states have abolished this offense for persons over the age of legal consent. Traditionally, the parent of a young woman had an action to recover damages for the loss of her services. But in measuring damages, the jury could consider not just the loss of services but also the distress and anxiety that the parent had suffered in being deprived of her comfort and companionship. Though seduction was not a crime at common law, many American states made it a statutory crime until the late 20th century. [Cases: Seduction 29–54.]

SED VIDE

sed vide (sed vI-dee). [Latin] But see. • This remark, followed by a citation, directs the reader's attention to an authority or a statement that conflicts with or contradicts the statement or principle just given. — Also termed but see.

SEIGNIORY

seignior (seen-y<<schwa>>r-ee), n.[Law French] Hist. 1.The rights and powers of a lord; esp., a grantor's retained right to have the grantee perform services in exchange for the transfer of land. 2. A lord's dominions; a feudal or manor lordship; esp., land held subject to such a retained right in the grantor. — Also spelled seignory.

seignory in gross (seen-y<<schwa>>r-ee in grohs). See reputed manor under MANOR.

SEIGNORY

seignory. See SEIGNIORY.

SEISE

seise (seez), vb. To invest with seisin or establish as a holder in fee simple; to put in possession <he became seised of half a section of farmland near Tulia>.

SEISED TO USES

seised to uses. See STANDING SEISED TO USES.

seisin (see-zin), n. 1. Hist. Completion of the ceremony of feudal investiture, by which the tenant was admitted into freehold. 2. Possession of a freehold estate in land; ownership. 3. Louisiana law. The right that the law accords universal successors to own and possess a person's estate directly and immediately upon that person's death. La. Civ. Code arts. 935 et seq. — Also spelled seizin. — Also termed vesture; seisina; (in Scots law) sasine. [Cases: Property 10. C.J.S. Property §§ 27–31, 33.]

“Originally, seisin meant simply possession and the word was applicable to both land and chattels. Prior to the fourteenth century it was proper to speak of a man as being seised of land or seised of a horse. Gradually, seisin and possession became distinct concepts. A man could be said to be in possession of chattels, or of lands wherein he had an estate for years, but he could not be said to be seised of them. Seisin came finally to mean, in relation to land, possession under claim of a freehold estate therein. The tenant for years had possession but not seisin; seisin was in the reversioner who had the fee. And although the word ‘seisin’ appears in modern statutes with a fair degree of frequency, it is usually treated as synonymous with ownership.” Cornelius J. Moynihan, Introduction to the Law of Real Property 98–99 (2d ed. 1988).

“It is difficult to define seisin satisfactorily. It has nothing to do with ‘seizing,’ with its implication of violence. To medieval lawyers it suggested the very opposite: peace and quiet. A man who was put in seisin of land was ‘set’ there and continued to ‘sit’ there. Seisin thus denotes quiet possession of land, but quiet possession of a particular kind.... Although it seems impossible to frame a satisfactory definition ..., to call it ‘that feudal possession of land which only the owner of a freehold estate in freehold land could have’ is to express the most important elements.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 27–28 (6th ed. 1993).

actual seisin. See seisin in deed.

constructive seisin. See seisin in law.

covenant of seisin. See COVENANT(4).

primer seisin (prim-*<<schwa>>*r or *pr*I-m*<<schwa>>*r see-zin). Hist. A right of the Crown to receive, from the heir of a tenant who died in possession of a knight's fee, one year's profits of the inherited estate (or half a year's profits if the estate was in reversion); FIRST FRUITS(1). quasi-seisin. A copyholder's possession of lands, the freehold possession being in the lord. — Also termed customary seisin.

seisin in deed. Actual possession of a freehold estate in land, by oneself or by one's tenant or agent, as distinguished from legal possession. — Also termed seisin in fact; actual seisin. [Cases: Property 10. C.J.S. Property §§ 27–31, 33.]

seisin in fact. See seisin in deed.

seisin in law. The right to immediate possession of a freehold estate in land, as when an heir inherits land but has not yet entered it. — Also termed legal seisin; constructive seisin; equitable seisin; fictitious seisin. [Cases: Property 10. C.J.S. Property §§ 27–31, 33.]

“Seisin in law is, when something is done, which the law accounteth a seisin; as an inrollment.” 2 E. Chambers, Cyclopedia: Or, an Universal Dictionary of Arts and Sciences (1743), s.v. SEISIN IN FACT.

SEISINA

seisina (see-zin-<<schwa>>), n. [Law Latin] Hist. Seisin.

SEISINA HABENDA

seisina habenda (see-zin-<<schwa>> h*<<schwa>>-ben-d<<schwa>>*). See DE SEISINA HABENDA.

SEIZURE

seizure,n. The act or an instance of taking possession of a person or property by legal right or process; esp., in constitutional law, a confiscation or arrest that may interfere with a person's reasonable expectation of privacy. [Cases: Arrest 68(4); Searches and Seizures 13.1. C.J.S. Arrest § 45; Searches and Seizures §§ 8, 13, 20, 23, 70, 72.]

constructive seizure.A manifest intent to seize and take possession of another person's property, usu. either by lawfully acquiring actual custody and control of the property or by posting notice of the property's pending foreclosure.

SELECT COMMITTEE

select committee.See special committee under COMMITTEE.

SELECT COUNCIL

select council.See COUNCIL.

SELECTI JUDICES

selecti judices (si-lek-tjoo-di-seez). [Latin] Roman law. Jurors on the official panel prepared by the praetor, who for a specific trial were drawn by lot subject to challenge and sworn to office in a similar manner to modern juries.

SELECTIVE DISCLOSURE

selective disclosure.The act of divulging part of a privileged communication, or one of several privileged communications, usu. because the divulged portion is helpful to the party giving the information, while harmful portions of the communication are withheld. • Such a disclosure can result in a limited waiver of the privilege for all communications on the same subject matter as the divulged portion. [Cases: Witnesses 219. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 378–389.]

SELECTIVE-DRAFT LAW

selective-draft law.A statute empowering the federal government to conscript citizens for military duty. • The constitutionality of the first selective-draft law was challenged and upheld in the Selective-Draft-Law Cases. See Arver v. United States, 245 U.S. 366, 38 S.Ct. 159 (1918).

SELECTIVE ENFORCEMENT selective enforcement.The practice of law-enforcement officers who use wide or even unfettered discretion about when and where to carry out certain laws; esp., the practice of singling a person out for prosecution or punishment under a statute or regulation because the person is a member of a protected group or because the person has exercised or is planning to exercise a constitutionally protected right. — Also termed selective prosecution. Cf. vindictive prosecution under PROSECUTION. [Cases: Constitutional Law 223, 250.1(3); Criminal Law 37.10. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 723, 743–744; Criminal Law § 64.]

“The chief of police of a New England town once declared to the press that he believed in a strict curfew law, ‘selectively enforced.’ ‘Selective enforcement’ in this case means that the policeman decides for himself who ought to be sent home from the street; legislative candour would suggest that if this is the intention it ought to be expressed in the law itself, instead of being concealed behind words that are 'strict' and categorical." Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 42 (1968).

SELECTIVE INCORPORATION selective incorporation. See INCORPORATION.

SELECTIVE PROSECUTION

selective prosecution. 1. SELECTIVE ENFORCEMENT. 2. The practice or an instance of a criminal prosecution brought at the discretion of a prosecutor rather than one brought as a matter of course in the normal functioning of the prosecuting authority's office. • Selective prosecution violates the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment if a defendant is singled out for prosecution when others similarly situated have not been prosecuted and the prosecutor's reasons for doing so are impermissible.

SELECTIVE PROSPECTIVITY selective prospectivity. A court's decision to apply a new rule of law in the particular case in which the new rule is announced, but to apply the old rule in all other cases pending at the time the new rule is announced or in which the facts predate the new rule's announcement. [Cases: Courts 100(1). C.J.S. Courts §§ 147–148.]

SELECTIVE SERVICE SYSTEM

Selective Service System. The federal agency that registers all persons 18–26 who are eligible for military service and provides personnel to the Armed Forces during emergencies. • It was established in 1940 as a part of the War Manpower Commission and became independent in 1943. — Abbr. SSS. [Cases: Armed Services 20.8. C.J.S. Armed Services §§ 60–65, 67–68.]

SELECTMAN

selectman. A municipal officer elected annually in some New England towns to transact business and perform some executive functions. [Cases: Towns 26. C.J.S. Towns §§ 82–93.]

SELF-CRIMINATION

self-crimination. See SELF-INCRIMINATION.

SELF-CRITICAL-ANALYSIS PRIVILEGE self-critical-analysis privilege. See PRIVILEGE(3).

SELF-DEALING

self-dealing, n. Participation in a transaction that benefits oneself instead of another who is owed a fiduciary duty. • For example, a corporate director might engage in self-dealing by participating in a competing business to the corporation's detriment. Cf. FAIR DEALING(1), (2). [Cases: Corporations 184, 314(.5). C.J.S. Corporations § 325.] — self-deal, vb.

SELF-DEFENSE

self-defense, n. 1. The use of force to protect oneself, one's family, or one's property from a real or threatened attack. • Generally, a person is justified in using a reasonable amount of force in self-defense if he or she believes that the danger of bodily harm is imminent and that force is necessary to avoid this danger. — Also termed defense of self. Cf. adequate provocation under PROVOCATION. [Cases: Assault and Battery 13, 67; Homicide 766. C.J.S. Assault and Battery §§ 19–21, 87–92.]

“The law of self-defence, as it is applied by the courts, turns on two requirements: the force must have been necessary, and it must have been reasonable.” Andrew Ashworth, Principles of Criminal Law 114 (1991).

imperfect self-defense. The use of force by one who makes an honest but unreasonable mistake that force is necessary to repel an attack. • In some jurisdictions, such a self-defender will be charged with a lesser offense than the one committed. [Cases: Homicide 687.]

perfect self-defense. The use of force by one who accurately appraises the necessity and the amount of force to repel an attack.

2. Int'l law. The right of a state to defend itself against a real or threatened attack. See United Nations Charter, art. 51 (59 Stat. 1031). — Also spelled (esp. in BrE) self-defence. — self-defender, n. “Self-defence, properly understood, is a legal right, and as with other legal rights the question whether a specific state of facts warrants its exercise is a legal question. It is not a question on which a state is entitled, in any special sense, to be a judge in its own cause.” J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 319 (5th ed. 1955).

SELF-DESTRUCT CLAUSE

self-destruct clause. A provision in a trust for a condition that will automatically terminate the trust. • Discretionary trusts, esp. supplemental-needs trusts, often include a self-destruct provision. For example, a trust to provide for the needs of a disabled person may terminate if the beneficiary becomes ineligible for a government-benefits program such as Medicaid.

SELF-DESTRUCTION

self-destruction. See SUICIDE(1).

SELF-DETERMINATION CONTRACT

self-determination contract. See CONTRACT.

SELF-DETERMINATION ELECTION

self-determination election. See GLOBE ELECTION.

SELF-DISSERVING DECLARATION self-disserving declaration. Hist. See declaration against interest under DECLARATION(6).

SELF-EMPLOYED RETIREMENT PLAN self-employed retirement plan. See KEOGH PLAN.

SELF-EMPLOYMENT TAX

self-employment tax. See TAX.

SELF-EVALUATION PRIVILEGE

self-evaluation privilege. See self-critical-analysis privilege under PRIVILEGE(3).

SELF-EXECUTING

self-executing, adj. (Of an instrument) effective immediately without the need of any type of implementing action <the wills had self-executing affidavits attached>. • Legal instruments may be self-executing according to various standards. For example, treaties are self-executing under the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution (art. VI, § 2) if textually capable of judicial enforcement and intended to be enforced in that manner.

SELF-HELP

self-help, n. An attempt to redress a perceived wrong by one's own action rather than through the normal legal process. • The UCC and other statutes provide for particular self-help remedies (such as repossession) if the remedy can be executed without breaching the peace. UCC § 9-609. — Also termed self-redress; extrajudicial enforcement. [Cases: Secured Transactions 228. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 151, 153–160, 180.]

“Notice to the debtor is generally not required prior to self-help repossession of collateral by the creditor upon default, although the provision for self-help repossession has been held to violate due process requirements in some instances, and states under the Uniform Consumer Credit Code require particular notice requirements. Furthermore, while the UCC generally does not require notice to the debtor upon self-help repossession of the collateral upon the debtor's default, the agreement between the parties may require such notice prior to repossession.” 68A Am. Jur. 2d Secured Transactions § 608, at 466 (1993).

SELF-HELP REMEDY

self-help remedy. See extrajudicial remedy under REMEDY.

SELF-INCRIMINATION

self-incrimination. The act of indicating one's own involvement in a crime or exposing oneself to prosecution, esp. by making a statement. — Also termed self-crimination; self-inculpation. See RIGHT AGAINST SELF-INCRIMINATION. [Cases: Criminal Law 393; Witnesses 297. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 645; Witnesses § 522.]

SELF-INCRIMINATION CLAUSE

Self-Incrimination Clause. The clause of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution barring the government from compelling criminal defendants to testify against themselves. [Cases: Witnesses 299. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 532–533.]

SELF-INCULPATION

self-inculpation. See SELF-INCRIMINATION.

SELF-INDUCED FRUSTRATION self-induced frustration. See FRUSTRATION.

SELF-INDUCED INTOXICATION self-induced intoxication. See voluntary intoxication under INTOXICATION.

SELF-INSURANCE

self-insurance. See INSURANCE.

SELF-INSURED RETENTION self-insured retention. Insurance. The amount of an otherwise-covered loss that is not covered by an insurance policy and that usu. must be paid before the insurer will pay benefits <the defendant had a $1 million CGL policy to cover the loss, but had to pay a self-insured retention of $100,000, which it had agreed to so that the policy premium would be lower>. — Abbr. SIR. Cf. DEDUCTIBLE. [Cases: Insurance 2283.]

SELF-KILLING

self-killing. See SUICIDE(1).

SELF-LIQUIDATING MORTGAGE self-liquidating mortgage. See amortized mortgage under MORTGAGE.

SELF-MURDER

self-murder. See SUICIDE(1).

SELF-POLICING PRIVILEGE self-policing privilege. See self-critical-analysis privilege under PRIVILEGE (3).

SELF-PROVED WILL

self-proved will. See WILL.

SELF-PROVING AFFIDAVIT

self-proving affidavit. See AFFIDAVIT.

SELF-REDRESS

self-redress. See SELF-HELP.

SELF-REGULATION

self-regulation. An organization's or industry's control, oversight, or direction of itself according to rules and standards that it establishes. • Self-regulation is often subject to the oversight of various governmental agencies, such as the Securities Exchange Commission and the Commodities Futures Trading Commission.

SELF-SERVING DECLARATION

self-serving declaration. See DECLARATION(6).

SELF-SETTLED TRUST

self-settled trust. See TRUST.

SELF-SLAUGHTER

self-slaughter. See SUICIDE(1).

SELF-STULTIFICATION

self-stultification. The act or an instance of testifying about one's own deficiencies. See STULTIFY.

SELL

sell, vb. To transfer (property) by sale.

SELLER

seller. 1. A person who sells or contracts to sell goods; a vendor. UCC § 2-103(1)(d). [Cases: Sales 15. C.J.S. Sales § 10.] 2. Generally, a person who sells anything; the transferor of property in a contract of sale.

SELL-OFF

sell-off, n. A period when heavy pressure to sell causes falling stock-market prices.

SELL ORDER

sell order. See ORDER(8).

SEMBLE

semble (sem-b<<schwa>>l). [Law French] It seems; it would appear <semble that the parties' intention was to create a binding agreement>. • This term is used chiefly to indicate an obiter dictum in a court opinion or to introduce an uncertain thought or interpretation. — Abbr. sem.; semb.

SEMESTRIA

semestria (si-mes-tree-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin "half-yearly matters"] Roman law. The collected decisions of Roman emperors, issued every six months.

SEMICONDUCTOR CHIP PROTECTION ACT

Semiconductor Chip Protection Act. Intellectual property. A 1984 statute protecting manufacturers against the unauthorized copying or use of semiconductor chips and the mask works used to manufacture them. • Semiconductor chips do not qualify for patent protection since technological advancements are small and usu. obvious. Mask works are multilayered, three-dimensional templates used to produce semiconductor chips. Mask-work design is more functional than expressive, and so traditional copyright protection was inapplicable until 1984. The Act provides copyright protection to the mask works for ten years. 17 USCA §§ 901–914. — Abbr. SCPA. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 10.4. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 11–12, 16, 92, 101.]

SEMI-FREE SOFTWARE

semi-free software. Software that does not include source code but comes with permission for individuals to use, copy, modify, and distribute the software for nonprofit purposes. Cf. FREeware; PROPRIETARY SOFTWARE; SHAREWARE.

SEMI-MATRIMONIUM

semi-matrimonium (sem-I ma-tr<<schwa>>-moh-nee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] A half-marriage.

SEMINARY

seminary. 1. An educational institution, such as a college, academy, or other school. [Cases: Colleges and Universities 1. C.J.S. Colleges and Universities §§ 2–3, 9.] 2. The building in which the institution performs its functions.

SEMINAUFRAGIUM

seminaufragium (sem-I-naw-fray-jee-<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin] Hist. A half-shipwreck, as when goods are cast overboard in a storm or when a damaged ship's repair costs are more than the ship's worth.

SEMIPLENA PROBATIO

semplena probatio (sem-I-plee-n<<schwa>> proh-bay-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Half-proof.

“In actions of filiation, a pursuer was formerly entitled, on adducing a semplena probatio, to her oath in supplement to prove that the defender was the father of her child. A semplena probatio was such a proof as induced, not merely a suspicion, but a reasonable belief that the pursuer's case was well-founded, and consisted generally of a proof of opportunity for connection, acts of familiarity on the part of the defender towards the pursuer, &c” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 569 (4th ed. 1894).

SEMI-SECRET TRUST

semi-secret trust.See TRUST.

SEMI-SKILLED WORK

semi-skilled work.See WORK(1).

SEMPER

semper (sem-p<<schwa>>r). [Latin] Always. • This term introduces several Latin maxims, such as semper in dubiis benigniora praeferenda sunt (“in doubtful cases, the more favorable constructions are always to be preferred”).

SEMPER PARATUS

semper paratus.A defendant's pleading that he or she has always been ready to perform as the plaintiff demanded.

SENAGE

senage (see-nij). [French] Money paid for synodals; tribute-money. See SYNODAL.

SENATE

senate. 1. The upper chamber of a bicameral legislature. [Cases: States 26. C.J.S. States § 40.] 2. (cap.) The upper house of the U.S. Congress, composed of 100 members — two from each state — who are elected to six-year terms. — Abbr. S. [Cases: United States 7.1. C.J.S. United States § 16.]

SENATE BILL

senate bill.See BILL(3).

SENATOR

senator. A person who is a member of a senate.

SENATORES

senatores (sen-<<schwa>>-tor-eez), n. pl.[Latin] Roman law. 1. Members of the Roman senate. 2. Members of municipal councils.

SENATORIAL COURTESY

senatorial courtesy. 1. The tradition that the President should take care in filling a high-level federal post (such as a judgeship) with a person agreeable to the senators from the nominee's home state, lest the senators defeat confirmation. [Cases: Judges 3. C.J.S. Judges §§ 12–14.]

“The risk of a deadlock is minimized by [the President's] consulting informally with the Senators from the State in which the office lies, if they are members of his own political party. Actually this amounts in most instances to his taking the advice of these two Senators as to a selection. A nomination approved by them is practically certain of final confirmation by the Senate as a whole. The arrangement is a ‘log-rolling’ one, which has been dignified by the name of ‘Senatorial courtesy.’ ‘If you will help me to get the appointments I want in my State, I will help you get the appointments you want in your State.’ ” Herbert W. Horwill, The Usages of the American Constitution 129 (1925).

2. Loosely, civility among senators .

SENATOR OF THE COLLEGE OF JUSTICE

SENATUS

senatus (si-nay-t<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin] Roman law. 1. The Roman senate. 2. The meeting place for the Roman senate.

SENATUS CONSULTO

senatus consulto (si-nay-t<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>l-toh). [Latin] Roman law. By the decree of the Senate.

SENATUS CONSULTUM

senatus consultum (si-nay-t<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>l-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. In the Republic, a resolution of the Roman Senate, which did not have the force of law (though usu. followed). • In the first century A.D., these resolutions replaced the legislation of the comitia, but by the end of the second century, they were merely the Senate's official expression of the imperial will. The senate often adopted the text of a speech (oratio) by the emperor. — Abbr. S.C. — Sometimes written senatusconsultum. — Also termed senatus consult. Pl. senatus consulta.

“Senatus consulta. — In the regal and republican periods the Senate enjoyed no legislative power. It was an advisory body, nominated by the King, and at first purely patrician. Later it ... included patricians and plebeians ... its chief duty still being to tender advice to the magistrates The theory still was, till the time of Hadrian, that senatus consulta were directions to the magistrates, who were now in fact, if not in name, bound to give effect to them, till by a process of gradual usurpation senatus consulta came to be direct legislation." R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 12–13 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

SENATUS CONSULTUM MACEDONIANUM

senatus consultum Macedonianum (si-nay-t<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>l-t<<schwa>>m mas-<<schwa>>-doh-nee-ay-n<<schwa>>m). [Latin "Macedo's Resolution"] Roman law. A senate decree under Vespasian to protect fathers from children in their power who had borrowed excessive sums in expectation of their father's death, by making actions to recover such loans unlawful. — Also termed Macedonian Decree.

"The senatus consultum Macedonianum reads as follows: 'Whereas Macedo's borrowings gave him an added incentive to commit a crime to which he was naturally predisposed and whereas those who lend money on terms which are dubious, to say the least, often provide evil men with the means of wrongdoing, it has been decided, in order to teach pernicious moneylenders that a son's debt cannot be made good by waiting for his father's death, that a person who has lent money to a son-in-power is to have no claim or action even after the death of the person in whose power he was.' " Digest of Justinian 14.6.1 (Ulpian, Ad Sabinum 49).

"In the principate of Vespasian, 69–79 A.D., a senatus consultum was passed which forbade loans to a filius-familias. It was called the senatus consultum — Macedonianum, after one Macedo, a usurer who had made such a loan and thereby instigated a hard-pressed debtor to kill his father in order to enter into his inheritance. To prevent tragic possibilities like these, the senatus consultum declared that no action would lie to recover money lent to a filius-familias." Max Radin, Handbook of Roman Law 188–89 (1927).

SENATUS CONSULTUM ULTIMUM NECESSITATIS

senatus consultum ultimum necessitatis (si-nay-t<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>l-t<<schwa>>m <<schwa>>l-t<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>m n<<schwa>>-ses-i-tay-tis). [Latin] Roman law. A decree of the senate of the last necessity. • This decree usu. preceded the nomination of a leader with absolute power in a time of emergency. — Also termed senatus consultum ultimae necessitatis.

SENATUS CONSULTUM VELLEIANUM senatus consultum Velleianum (si-nay-t<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>l-t<<schwa>>m vel-ee-ay-n<<schwa>>m). [Latin "Velleian Decree"] Roman law. A senate decree, probably of A.D. 46, to protect women from making unconscionable guarantees, suretyship undertakings, or debt assumptions for their husbands and for others generally, by making actions to enforce such undertakings unlawful.

SENATUS DECRETA

senatus decreta (si-nay-t<<schwa>>s di-kree-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. The senate's decisions.

SENDING STATE

sending state. See STATE.

SENESCALLUS

senescallus (sen-<<schwa>>s-kal-<<schwa>>s), n. [Law Latin] See SENESCHAL.

SENESCHAL

seneschal (sen-<<schwa>>-sh-<<schwa>>l), n. [Law French] Hist. 1. A French title of office, equivalent to a steward in England. • A seneschal was originally a duke's lieutenant or a lieutenant to other dignities of the kingdom. 2. The steward of a manor. 3. Hist. An administrative or judicial officer, such as the governor of a city or province. — Also termed senescallus.

SENILITY

senility. Mental feebleness or impairment caused by old age. • A senile person (in the legal, as opposed to the popular, sense) is incompetent to enter into a binding contract or to execute a will. — Also termed senile dementia (see-nll di-men-shee-<<schwa>>). [Cases: Mental Health 3. C.J.S. Insane Persons §§ 2, 6.] — senile, adj.

SENIOR

senior, adj. 1. (Of a debt, etc.) first; preferred, as over junior obligations. 2. (Of a person) older than someone else. 3. (Of a person) higher in rank or service. 4. (Of a man) elder, as distinguished from the man's son who has the same name.

SENIOR ADMINISTRATIVE PATENT JUDGE

SENIOR INTEREST

senior interest. See INTEREST(2).

SENIORITY

seniority. 1. The preferential status, privileges, or rights given an employee based on the employee's length of service with an employer. • Employees with seniority may receive additional or enhanced benefit packages and obtain competitive advantages over fellow employees in layoff and promotional decisions. 2. The status of being older or senior.

SENIORITY SYSTEM seniority system. Employment law. Any arrangement that recognizes length of service in making decisions about job layoffs and promotions or other advancements.

SENIOR JUDGE

senior judge. See JUDGE.

SENIOR LIEN

senior lien. See LIEN.

SENIOR MORTGAGE

senior mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

SENIOR PARTNER

senior partner. See PARTNER.

SENIOR PARTY

senior party. Intellectual property. In an interference proceeding, the first person to file an application for a property's legal protection, e.g., an invention patent or a trademark registration. • In the United States, merely being the first to file does not entitle the party to the protection. The proceeding's administrator also takes other factors into account. For instance, in a patent-interference proceeding the invention's conception date and the inventor's diligence in reducing the invention to practice are relevant factors. Priority in the filing date is prima facie evidence that the senior party is the first inventor, so the challenger has the burden of proof. Cf. JUNIOR PARTY. [Cases: Patents 106(1). C.J.S. Patents §§ 159–162, 165.]

SENIOR SECURITY

senior security. See SECURITY.

SENIOR STATUS

senior status. The employment condition of a semiretired judge who continues to perform certain judicial duties that the judge is willing and able to undertake. [Cases: Judges 7. C.J.S. Judges §§ 21–24, 27–29.]

SENIOR USER

senior user. Trademarks. The first person to use a mark. • That person is usu. found to be the mark's owner. — Also termed first user. Cf. JUNIOR USER. [Cases: Trade Regulation 66.1. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 29–30.]

SENSITIVITY TRAINING

sensitivity training. One or more instructional session for management and employees designed to counteract the callous treatment of others, esp. women and minorities, in the workplace.

SENSUS

sensus (sen-s<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Hist. Sense; meaning; signification. • The word appears in its inflected form in phrases such as malo sensu (“an evil sense”), mitiori sensu (“in a milder sense”), and sensu honesto (“in an honest sense”).

SENTENCE

sentence,n. The judgment that a court formally pronounces after finding a criminal defendant guilty; the punishment imposed on a criminal wrongdoer . See Fed. R. Crim. P. 32. — Also termed judgment of conviction. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1001.C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1420–1422, 1458, 1471, 1480, 1504–1505, 1511.] — sentence,vb.

accumulative sentences.See consecutive sentences.

aggregate sentence.A sentence that arises from a conviction on multiple counts in an indictment. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 642–643. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1459–1460, 1463, 1465, 1472, 1517–1523, 1525.]

alternative sentence.A sentence other than incarceration. • Examples include community service and victim restitution. — Also termed creative sentence.

blended sentence.In a juvenile-delinquency disposition, a sanction that combines delinquency sanctions and criminal punishment.

concurrent sentences.Two or more sentences of jail time to be served simultaneously. • For example, if a defendant receives concurrent sentences of 5 years and 15 years, the total amount of jail time is 15 years. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 547. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1582–1586.]

conditional sentence.A sentence of confinement if the defendant fails to perform the conditions of probation. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1960–1988. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1458, 1471, 1504–1505, 1511, 1547–1550, 1552–1562, 1566–1567, 1771–1786.]

consecutive sentences.Two or more sentences of jail time to be served in sequence. • For example, if a defendant receives consecutive sentences of 20 years and 5 years, the total amount of jail time is 25 years. — Also termed cumulative sentences; accumulative sentences. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 545. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1522–1523.]

consolidated sentence.See general sentence.

creative sentence.See alternative sentence.

death sentence.A sentence that imposes the death penalty. See Model Penal Code § 210.6. — Also termed judgment of blood. See DEATH PENALTY. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1610, 1787. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1529–1532, 1534–1538, 1541–1543, 1606–1608.]

deferred sentence.A sentence that will not be carried out if the defendant meets certain requirements, such as complying with conditions of probation. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 2051–2054. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 425–444, 449–450.]

delayed sentence.A sentence that is not imposed immediately after conviction, thereby allowing the defendant to satisfy the court (usu. by complying with certain restrictions or conditions during the delay period) that probation is preferable to a prison sentence.

determinate sentence. A sentence for a fixed length of time rather than for an unspecified duration. — Also termed definite sentence; definitive sentence; fixed sentence; flat sentence; straight sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1053–1054. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1458, 1468, 1471, 1504–1505, 1511, 1570.]

excessive sentence. A sentence that gives more punishment than is allowed by law.

fixed sentence. 1. See determinate sentence. 2. See mandatory sentence.

flat sentence. See determinate sentence.

general sentence. An undivided, aggregate sentence in a multicount case; a sentence that does not specify the punishment imposed for each count. • General sentences are prohibited. — Also termed consolidated sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1060. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1458, 1471, 1504–1505, 1511.]

indeterminate sentence. 1. A sentence of an unspecified duration, such as one for a term of 10 to 20 years. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1057–1059, 1125–1127. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1468, 1585.] 2. A maximum prison term that the parole board can reduce, through statutory authorization, after the inmate has served the minimum time required by law. — Also termed indefinite sentence. See INDETERMINATE SENTENCING.

intermittent sentence. A sentence consisting of periods of confinement interrupted by periods of freedom. — Also termed (when served on weekends) weekend sentence.

life sentence. A sentence that imprisons the convicted criminal for life — though in some jurisdictions the prisoner may become eligible for release on good behavior, rehabilitation, or the like. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1020, 1055. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1468.]

mandatory sentence. A sentence set by law with no discretion for the judge to individualize punishment. — Also termed mandatory penalty; mandatory punishment; fixed sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1053–1054. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1458, 1468, 1471, 1504–1505, 1511, 1570.]

maximum sentence. The highest level of punishment provided by law for a particular crime. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1059, 1127. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1468, 1585.]

minimum sentence. The least amount of time that a defendant must serve in prison before becoming eligible for parole. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1057, 1126. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1468, 1585.]

multiple sentences. Concurrent or consecutive sentences, if a defendant is found guilty of more than one offense. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 500. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1464, 1517–1521.]

nominal sentence. A criminal sentence in name only; an exceedingly light sentence.

noncustodial sentence. A criminal sentence (such as probation) not requiring prison time.

presumptive sentence. An average sentence for a particular crime (esp. provided under sentencing guidelines) that can be raised or lowered based on the presence of mitigating or aggravating circumstances. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 34, 654. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1459, 1461, 1463, 1472, 1479.]

prior sentence. A sentence previously imposed on a criminal defendant for a different offense, whether by a guilty verdict, a guilty plea, or a nolo contendere.

split sentence. A sentence in which part of the time is served in confinement — to expose the offender to the unpleasantness of prison — and the rest on probation. See shock probation under PROBATION. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1934, 1936. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1549–1550, 1552, 1555.]

straight sentence. See determinate sentence.

suspended sentence. A sentence postponed so that the defendant is not required to serve time unless he or she commits another crime or violates some other court-imposed condition. • A suspended sentence, in effect, is a form of probation. — Also termed withheld sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1804–1810. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1547–1550, 1552, 1555, 1557–1558.]

weekend sentence. See intermittent sentence.

SENTENCE BARGAIN

sentence bargain. See PLEA BARGAIN.

SENTENCE CAP

sentence cap. Military law. A pretrial plea agreement in a court-martial proceeding by which a ceiling is placed on the maximum penalty that can be imposed. [Cases: Military Justice 990, 1326. C.J.S. Military Justice §§ 201, 393, 449.]

SENTENCED TO TIME SERVED

sentenced to time served. A sentencing disposition in which a criminal defendant is sentenced to jail but is credited with time served in an amount equal to the sentence handed down, resulting in the defendant's release from custody. Cf. BALANCE OF SENTENCE SUSPENDED.

SENTENCE-FACTOR MANIPULATION sentence-factor manipulation. See sentencing entrapment under ENTRAPMENT.

SENTENCE-PACKAGE RULE

sentence-package rule. Criminal procedure. The principle that a defendant can be resentenced on an aggregate sentence — that is, one arising from a conviction on multiple counts in an indictment — when the defendant successfully challenges part of the conviction, as by successfully challenging some but not all of the counts.

SENTENCING COUNCIL

sentencing council.A panel of three or more judges who confer to determine a criminal sentence. • Sentencing by a council occurs less frequently than sentencing by a single trial judge.

SENTENCING ENTRAPMENT sentencing entrapment.See ENTRAPMENT.

SENTENCING GUIDELINES sentencing guidelines.A set of standards for determining the punishment that a convicted criminal should receive, based on the nature of the crime and the offender's criminal history. • The federal government and several states have adopted sentencing guidelines in an effort to make judicial sentencing more consistent. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 650. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1479.]

SENTENCING HEARING

sentencing hearing.See PRESENTENCE HEARING.

SENTENCING PHASE

sentencing phase.See PENALTY PHASE.

SENTENCING REFORM ACT OF 1984

Sentencing Reform Act of 1984.A federal statute enacted to bring greater uniformity to punishments assessed for federal crimes by creating a committee of federal judges and other officials (the United States Sentencing Commission) responsible for producing sentencing guidelines to be used by the federal courts. 28 USCA § 994(a)(1).

SENTENCING TABLE

Sentencing Table.A reference guide used by federal courts to calculate the appropriate punishment under the sentencing guidelines by taking into account the gravity of the offense and the convicted person's criminal history.

SENTENTIA

[Cases: Descent and Distribution 137. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 123.]

SEPARATION OF POWERS

separation of powers. The division of governmental authority into three branches of government — legislative, executive, and judicial — each with specified duties on which neither of the other branches can encroach; the constitutional doctrine of checks and balances by which the people are protected against tyranny. Cf. DIVISION OF POWERS. [Cases: Constitutional Law 50–80(4). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 54, 58–59, 111–227, 441.]

“[T]he doctrine of the separation of powers was adopted by the convention of 1787 not to promote efficiency but to preclude the exercise of arbitrary power. The purpose was not to avoid friction, but, by means of the inevitable friction incident to the distribution of the governmental powers among three departments, to save the people from autocracy.” Justice Louis Brandeis (as quoted in Roscoe Pound, The Development of Constitutional Guarantees of Liberty 94 (1957)).

“Separation of powers means something quite different in the European context from what it has come to mean in the United States.... Separation of powers to an American evokes the familiar system of checks and balances among the three coordinate branches of government — legislative, executive, and judiciary — each with its independent constitutional basis. To a European, it is a more rigid doctrine and inseparable from the notion of legislative supremacy.” Mary Ann Glendon et al., Comparative Legal Traditions 67 (1994).

SEPARATION OF WITNESSES

separation of witnesses. The exclusion of witnesses (other than the plaintiff and defendant) from the courtroom to prevent them from hearing the testimony of others. [Cases: Criminal Law 665; Federal Civil Procedure 2012; Trial 41. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1195; Trial § 155.]

SEQUESTRATION FOR RENT

sequestration for rent. Scots law. A landlord's remedy to recover up to one year's unpaid rent by seizing and selling, under court order, the tenant's personal property. Cf. DISTRESS.

SEQUESTRATOR

sequestrator (see-kwes-tray-t<<schwa>>r). 1. An officer appointed to execute a writ of sequestration.

“[A] sequestrator was an officer of the Court of Chancery acting under the order of that court in seizing property. The law courts appear, however, to have held that the holder of the property could resist seizure by the officer of the Court of Chancery, and indeed kill that officer if necessary to prevent the seizure. And if he killed the officer, he would not be held guilty of murder because the Court of Chancery was an illegal tribunal or its decrees were illegal, and could not justify an officer in seizing the property mentioned in the order.” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 306 (2d ed. 1952).

2. A person who holds property in sequestration. — Also termed sequesterer. [Cases: Sequestration 14. C.J.S. Sequestration § 17.]

SEQUESTRO HABENDO

sequestro habendo (si-kwes-troh h<<schwa>>-ben-doh), n. [Law Latin] Hist. Eccles. law. A writ from the sovereign to the bishop ordering the discharge of the sequestration of a benefice's serf.Hist. A person in a condition of feudal servitude, bound to labor at the will of a lord; a villein. • Serfs differed from slaves in that they were bound to the native soil rather than being the absolute property of a master.

“As the categories became indistinct, the more abject varieties of slavery disappeared and in the twelfth century the word ‘villein’ became the general term for unfree peasants. ‘Serf’ did not become a legal term of art, and in so far as it remained in use it did not connote a status lower than that of villein. The merger was to the detriment of the villani, but it ensured that full slavery was not received as part of the common law.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 532 (3d ed. 1990).

SERGEANT

sergeant. 1.Hist. A person who is not a knight but holds lands by tenure of military service. 2.Hist. A municipal officer performing duties for the Crown. 3.Hist. A bailiff. 4.SERGEANT-AT-ARMS. 5. servitor of bills (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>r).Hist. A messenger of the marshal of the King's Bench, sent out to summon people to court. — Also termed tip-stave.

SERVITUDE

servitude. 1. An encumbrance consisting in a right to the limited use of a piece of land or other immovable property without the possession of it; a charge or burden on an estate for another's benefit <the easement by necessity is an equitable servitude>. • Servitudes include easements, irrevocable licenses, profits, and real covenants. See EASEMENT; LICENSE; PROFIT(2); covenant running with the land under COVENANT(4). [Cases: Easements 1. C.J.S. Easements §§ 2–8, 13–14, 21–22, 24, 53–55, 57–58, 89.] 2. Roman & civil law. The right exercised by a dominant tenement over a servient tenement, either adjoining or neighboring. • This right was perpetual except for personal servitudes; the land, rather than its owner, enjoyed the right. Although a servitude could not be possessed because it was incorporeal, it could be protected by interdict. Generally, a servitude had to be exercised civiliter, with as little inconvenience as possible. There was never a closed list of what constituted a servitude; for example, Justinian classed personal rights in re aliena as personal servitude. See SERVITUS(2). acquired servitude. A servitude that requires a special mode of acquisition before it comes into existence.

additional servitude. A servitude imposed on land taken under an eminent-domain proceeding for a different type of servitude, as when a highway is constructed on land condemned for a public sidewalk. • A landowner whose land is burdened by an additional servitude is entitled to further compensation.

affirmative servitude. Civil law. See positive servitude.

apparent servitude. Civil law. A servitude appurtenant that is manifested by exterior signs or constructions, such as a roadway. Cf. nonapparent servitude.

continuous servitude. Louisiana law. See continuous easement under EASEMENT. La. Civ. Code art. 646.

conventional servitude. Civil law. A servitude established by agreement or through acquisitive prescription.

discontinuous servitude. See discontinuous easement under EASEMENT.

equitable servitude. See restrictive covenant under COVENANT(4).

landed servitude. See servitude appurtenant.

legal servitude. Civil law. A limitation that the law imposes on the use of an estate for the benefit of the general public or of a particular person or persons. • Examples of legal servitudes are restrictions on certain uses of the shores of navigable rivers, and the obligation of an owner to provide a passage to an enclosed estate.

mineral servitude. Louisiana law. A servitude granting the right to enter another's property to explore for and extract minerals; specif., under the Louisiana Mineral Code, a charge on land in favor of a person or another tract of land, creating a limited right to use the land to explore for and produce minerals. • The servitude is generally equivalent to the severed mineral interest in a common-law state. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 55. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 158–160, 169.]

natural servitude. 1. A servitude naturally appurtenant to land, requiring no special mode of acquisition. • An example is the right of land, unencumbered by buildings, to the support of the adjoining land. 2. Civil law. A servitude imposed by law because of the natural situation of the estates. • An example of a natural servitude is a lower estate that is bound to receive waters flowing naturally from a higher estate.

navigation servitude. 1. An easement allowing the federal government to regulate commerce on navigable water without having to pay compensation for interference with private ownership rights. See NAVIGABLE WATER. [Cases: Navigable Waters 2. C.J.S. Navigable Waters §§ 20–21, 23–30, 33.]

“The navigation servitude, because of its link to navigable waters and the protection of navigation, is often confused with the public trust doctrine. The navigation servitude, however, is a paramount federal servitude on navigable waters based on the commerce power rather than on ownership or trust responsibilities.” Donna R. Christie, Coastal and Ocean Management Law in a Nutshell 34 (1994).

2. An easement, based on the state police power or public-trust doctrine, that allows a state to regulate commerce on navigable water and provide limited compensation for interference with private ownership rights. • The state servitude is inferior to the federal servitude. [Cases: Navigable Waters 2. C.J.S. Navigable Waters §§ 20–21, 23–30, 33.]

negative servitude. Civil law. A real servitude allowing a person to prohibit the servient landowner from exercising a right. • For example, a negative servitude, such as jus ne luminibus officiat, prevents an owner of land from building in a way that blocks light from reaching another person's house.

nonapparent servitude. Civil law. A servitude appurtenant that is not obvious because there are no exterior signs of its existence. • An example is a prohibition against building above a certain height. Cf. apparent servitude.

personal servitude. 1. A servitude granting a specific person certain rights in property. 2. Roman law. A specific person's right over the property of another, regardless of who the owner might be. • A personal servitude lasted for the person's lifetime. 3. Louisiana law. A servitude that benefits a person or an immovable. La. Civ. Code art. 534.

positive servitude. Civil law. A real servitude allowing a person to lawfully do something on the servient landowner's property, such as entering the property. — Also termed affirmative servitude.

predial servitude. See servitude appurtenant.

private servitude. A servitude vested in a particular person. • Examples include a landowner's personal right-of-way over an adjoining piece of land or a right granted to one person to fish in another's lake.

public servitude. A servitude vested in the public at large or in some class of indeterminate individuals. • Examples include the right of the public to a highway over privately owned land and the right to navigate a river the bed of which belongs to some private person.

real servitude. See servitude appurtenant.

rural servitude. Roman law. A servitude chiefly affecting agricultural land or land in the country. • The four oldest types, iter, actus, via, and aqueductus, were all res mancipi despite being incorporeal. Most rural servitudes were easements, but some were profits. — Also termed rustic servitude; praedium rusticum; jus rusticorum praediorum.

servitude appurtenant. Civil law. A servitude that is not merely an encumbrance of one piece of land but also accessory to another piece; the right of using one piece of land for the benefit of another, such as the right of support for a building. — Also termed real servitude; predial (or praedial) servitude; landed servitude. La. Civ. Code art. 646. [Cases: Easements 3. C.J.S. Easements §§ 4, 10–11, 20.]

servitude in gross. A servitude that is not accessory to any dominant tenement for whose benefit it exists but is merely an encumbrance on a given piece of land. [Cases: Easements 3. C.J.S. Easements §§ 4, 10–11, 20.]

servitude of drip. Louisiana law. A servitude appurtenant that binds the servient estate's owner to maintain a roof so that rainwater does not drip or drain onto the dominant estate. La. Civ. Code art. 664. — Also termed servitude of drip and drain.

servitude of view. Louisiana law. The dominant estate owner's right to enjoy a view through the servient estate and to prevent its obstruction. La. Civ. Code art. 701.

urban servitude. 1. A servitude appertaining to the building and construction of houses in a city, such as the right to light and air. 2. Roman law. A servitude that primarily affects buildings or urban land. • With the exception of oneris ferendi, urban servitudes were passive. They could be affected by planning legislation. — Also termed (in sense 2) praedium urbanum; jus urbanorum praediorum.

3. The condition of being a servant or slave <under the 15th Amendment, an American citizen's right to vote cannot be denied on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude>. 4. The condition of a prisoner who has been sentenced to forced labor <penal servitude>.

involuntary servitude. The condition of one forced to labor — for pay or not — for another by coercion or imprisonment. [Cases: Constitutional Law 83(2). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 482–486.]

SERVITUDE OF DRIP AND DRAIN

servitude of drip and drain. See servitude of drip under SERVITUDE(2).

SERVITUS

servitus (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin fr. servire “to serve”] Roman law. 1. Slavery; bondage. 2. A servitude, usu. a servitude appurtenant as opposed to a personal servitude such as usufruct; an easement. See rural servitude and urban servitude under SERVITUDE(2). Pl. servitutes.

servitus actus (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s ak-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin “the servitude of driving cattle”] Roman law. A type of right-of-way; a rural servitude entitling one to walk, ride, or drive animals over another's property.

servitus altius non tollendi (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s al-shee-<<schwa>>s non t<<schwa>>-len-dI). [Latin “the servitude of not building higher”] Roman law. An urban servitude allowing a person to prevent a neighbor from building a higher house.

servitus aquae ducendae (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s ak-wee d[y]oo-sen-dee). [Latin “the servitude of leading water”] Roman law. A rural servitude allowing one to bring water to property through another's land, as by a canal. — Also termed aquaeductus.

servitus aquae educendae (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s ak-wee ee-d[y]oo-sen-dee). [Latin “the servitude of leading off water”] Roman law. An urban servitude entitling a person to discharge water onto another's land.

servitus aquae hauriendae (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s ak-wee haw-ree-en-dee). [Latin “the servitude of drawing water”] Roman law. See AQUAEHAUSTUS.

servitus aquaehaustus (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s ak-wee-haws-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin “the servitude of drawing water”] Roman law. See AQUAEHAUSTUS.

servitus fluminis (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s floo-m<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>s). [Latin “the servitude of a stream of rainwater”] Roman law. An urban servitude consisting in the right to divert rainwater as opposed to drip (stillicidium) onto another's land.

servitus fumi immittendi (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s fyoo-mI im-<<schwa>>-ten-dI). [Latin “the servitude of discharging smoke”] Roman law. An urban servitude allowing a person's chimney smoke to be directed over a neighbor's property.

servitus itineris (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s I-tin-<<schwa>>-r-is). [Latin “the servitude of way”] See ITER.

servitus luminum (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s loo-m<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>m). [Latin “the servitude of lights”] Roman law. An urban servitude entitling one to receive light from a neighbor's land, as by building windows in a common wall to light a room.

servitus ne luminibus officiatur (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s nee loo-min-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>s <<schwa>>-fish-ee-ay-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin “the servitude not to hinder light”] Roman law. An urban servitude preventing someone's light from being obstructed by a neighbor's building.

servitus ne prospectui officiator (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s nee pr<<schwa>>-spek-too-I <<schwa>>-fish-ee-ay-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin “the servitude not to intercept one's prospect”] Roman law. An urban servitude entitling someone to an unobstructed view.

servitus oneris ferendi (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s on-<<schwa>>-ris f<<schwa>>-ren-dI). [Latin “the servitude of bearing weight”] Roman law. The urban servitude allowing a person's building to rest on a neighbor's building, wall, or pillar. See ONERIS FERENDI; JUS ONERIS FERENDI.

servitus pascendi (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s pa-sen-dI). [Latin “the servitude of pasturing”] Roman law. A rural servitude allowing one to pasture cattle on another's land. — Also termed jus pascendi.

servitus pecoris ad aquam adpulsum (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s pek-<<schwa>>-ris ad ak-w<<schwa>>m ad-p<<schwa>>l-s<<schwa>>m). [Latin “the servitude to drive cattle to water”] Roman law. A rural servitude allowing one to drive cattle to water across another's land.

servitus praedii rustici (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s pree-dee-Ir<<schwa>>s-ti-sI). [Latin “the servitude of a country estate”] Roman law. A rural servitude; a servitude attached to land, as in servitus pecoris ad aquam adpulsum. Cf. rural servitude under SERVITUDE(2).

servitus praedii urbani (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s pree-dee-I <<schwa>>r-bay-nI). [Latin “the servitude of an urban estate”] Roman law. An urban servitude; a servitude attached to a building, as in servitus oneris ferendi. See urban servitude under SERVITUDE(2).

servitus praediorum (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s pree-dee-or-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “praedial servitude”] Roman law. A burden on one estate for the benefit of another. See servitude appurtenant under SERVITUDE(2).

servitus projiciendi (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s pr<<schwa>>-jish-ee-en-dI). [Latin “the servitude of projecting”] Roman law. An urban servitude allowing a projection from one's building into the open space over a neighbor's property.

servitus stillicidii (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s stil-<<schwa>>-sid-ee-I). [Latin “the servitude of drip”] Roman law. An urban servitude allowing water to drip from one's house onto the house or ground of a neighbor. Cf. AQUAE IMMITTENDAE; DRIP RIGHTS.

servitus tigni immittendi (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s tig-nI im-<<schwa>>-ten-dI). [Latin “the servitude of letting in a beam”] Roman law. An urban servitude allowing one to insert beams into a neighbor's wall.

servitus viae (s<<schwa>>r-vi-t<<schwa>>s vI-ee). [Latin “the servitude of road way”] Roman law. A rural servitude allowing a right-of-way over another's land. See VIA(2).

servus (s<<schwa>>r-v<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin] 1.Roman law. A slave; a human being who was property, and could be bought, sold, pledged, and testated. • A Roman slave who was formally freed became a Roman citizen. Cf. INGENUUS; LATINI JUNIANI; LIBERTINII. 2.Hist. A bondman; a servant.

SESS

sess,n. See CESS.

SESSIO

sessio (sesh-ee-oh), n.[Latin “a sitting”] Hist. A session; a sitting, as in sessio parliamenti (“the sitting of Parliament”).

SESSION

session. 1.Parliamentary law. A meeting or series of related meetings throughout which a court, legislature, or other deliberative assembly conducts business in a continuing sequence <the court's spring session>. — Also termed (for a court) sitting. See TERM(5).

“Parliament have three modes of separation, to wit, by adjournment, by prorogation, or dissolution by the king, or by the efflux of the term for which they were elected. Prorogation or dissolution constitutes there what is called a session, provided some act has passed. In this case all matters depending before them are discontinued, and at their next meeting are to be taken up de novo, if taken up at all. Adjournment, which is by themselves, is no more than a continuance of the session from one day to another, or for a fortnight, a month, &c. ad libitum. All matters depending remain in statu quo, and when they meet again, be the term ever so distant, are resumed without any fresh commencement, at the point at which they were left. Their whole session is considered in law but as one day, and has relation to the first day thereof.” Thomas Jefferson, A Manual of Parliamentary Practice 127–28 (1801) (citations omitted).

biennial session.A legislative session held every two years. • Most state legislatures have biennial sessions, usu. held in odd-numbered years. [Cases: States 32. C.J.S. States §§ 48–50.]

closed session. 1. See executive session. 2. A session to which parties not directly involved are not admitted. 3.Military law. A period during a court-martial when the members (or the judge, if trial is before a military judge) deliberate alone. — Also termed closed court. [Cases: Military Justice 1222, 1270. C.J.S. Military Justice §§ 360, 379.]

executive session.A meeting, usu. held in secret, that only the members and invited nonmembers may attend. • The term originated in the United States Senate, which until 1929 sat behind closed doors when it advised the President about executive business such as appointments and treaties. — Also termed closed session; secret session. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 124. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 19.]

“Virtually all open meeting statutes expressly authorize the use of executive sessions, typically specifying the particular circumstances in which executive sessions are permitted. When the specific circumstances are specified, generally no other exceptions are permitted Use of the executive session to discuss matters not properly hidden from the public is a clear violation of the open meeting law. Many states expressly or implicitly forbid use of the executive session as a subterfuge to defeat the purposes of the open meeting law.” Ann Taylor Schwing, Open Meeting extraordinary session.See special session.

Laws§ 7.1, at 357, 359 (2d ed. 2000).

extra session.See special session.

joint session.The combined meeting of two legislative bodies (such as the House of Representatives and the Senate) to pursue a common agenda. [Cases: United States 18. C.J.S. United States §§ 29, 31.]

“When the two houses meet in a joint session, they, in effect, merge into one house where the quorum is a majority of the members of both houses, where the votes of members of each house have equal weight, and where special rules can be adopted to govern joint sessions or they can be governed by the parliamentary common law.” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 782, at 573 (2000).

lame-duck session.A post-election legislative session in which some of the participants are voting during their last days as elected officials. See LAME DUCK. [Cases: States 32. C.J.S. States §§ 48–50.]

open session. 1. A session to which parties not directly involved are admitted. — Also termed public session. 2.Military law. The period during a court-martial in which all participants are in the courtroom. • Generally, the public may attend a court-martial's open session. [Cases: Military Justice 1210.1, 1222. C.J.S. Military Justice § 360.]

plenary session.A meeting of all the members of a deliberative assembly, not just a committee.

pro forma session.A legislative session held not to conduct business but only to satisfy a constitutional provision that neither house may adjourn for longer than a certain time (usu. three days) without the other house's consent.

public session.See open session (1).

quarter session. 1.English law. The meetings held four times a year by a county's justices of the peace to transact business, including trying certain criminal and civil matters as specified by statute. • The quarter sessions were abolished in 1971 and replaced by the Crown Court system. 2.Scots law. A meeting formerly held four times a year by the justices to review criminal sentences. — Abbr. Q.S.

regular session.A session that takes place at fixed intervals or specified times.

secret session.See executive session.

special session.A legislative session, usu. called by the executive, that meets outside its regular term to consider a specific issue or to reduce backlog. — Also termed extra session; extraordinary session. [Cases: States 32. C.J.S. States §§ 48–50.]

2. The period within any given day during which such a body is assembled and performing its duties <court is in session>. • The terms “meeting” and “session” have opposite but sometimes interchangeable meanings. An organization's annual convention may consist of several consecutive meetings that it calls "sessions," such as a morning session and an afternoon session, or a Friday session and a Saturday session, which are technically meetings rather than sessions. Likewise, the organization may call its convention an "annual meeting," which technically comprises several meetings that constitute a single session. Cf. MEETING. 3. A trading day in a stock market.

triple witching session. A stock-market session on the third Friday in March, June, September, and December during which stock options, index options and futures contracts all expire. • Stock-market volatility and share volume are often high on these days.

SESSION LAWS

session laws. 1. A body of statutes enacted by a legislature during a particular annual or biennial session. 2. The softbound booklets containing these statutes. — Also termed acts of assembly; blue books; sheet acts.

SESSIONS

sessions. See COURT OF GENERAL QUARTER SESSIONS OF THE PEACE.

SET-ASIDE

set-aside, n. Something (such as a percentage of funds) that is reserved or put aside for a specific purpose.

SET ASIDE

set aside, vb. (Of a court) to annul or vacate (a judgment, order, etc.) <the judge refused to set aside the default judgment>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2441, 2641; Judgment 135, 336. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 305, 331, 333, 350, 376, 408.]

SETBACK

setback, n. Real estate. The minimum amount of space required between a lot line and a building line . • Typically contained in zoning ordinances or deed restrictions, setbacks are designed to ensure that enough light and ventilation reach the property and to keep buildings from being erected too close to property lines. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 64, 252. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 50, 117.]

SET DOWN

set down, vb. To schedule (a case) for trial or hearing, usu. by making a docket entry.

SE TE FECERIT SECURUM

se te fecerit securum (see tee fes-<<schwa>>r-it si-kyoor-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] See SI FECERIT TE SECURUM.

SET FORTH

set forth. See SET OUT.

SETI

seti (set-ee). Mining law. A lease.

SET OF EXCHANGE

set of exchange. Commercial law. A single bill of lading drawn in a set of parts, each of which is valid only if the goods have not been delivered against any other part. • Bills may be drawn in duplicate or triplicate, the first part being “first of exchange,” the second part being “second of exchange,” and so on. When one part has been paid, the other parts become void.

SETOFF

setoff, n. 1. A defendant's counterdemand against the plaintiff, arising out of a transaction independent of the plaintiff's claim. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 772; Set-off and Counterclaim 8. C.J.S. Set-off and Counterclaim §§ 3, 6.] 2. A debtor's right to reduce the amount of a debt by any sum the creditor owes the debtor; the counterbalancing sum owed by the creditor. — Also written set-off. — Also termed (in civil law) compensation; stoppage. See COUNTERCLAIM; OFFSET. Cf. RECOUPMENT(3). [Cases: Banks and Banking 134; Set-off and Counterclaim 8. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 301–305, 312–313, 316; Set-off and Counterclaim §§ 3, 6.] 3. The balancing of mutual liabilities with respect to a pledge relationship. — set off, vb.

“Set-off signifies the subtraction or taking away of one demand from another opposite or cross demand, so as to distinguish the smaller demand and reduce the greater by the amount of the less; or, if the opposite demands are equal, to extinguish both. It was also, formerly, sometimes called stoppage, because the amount to be set-off was stopped or deducted from the cross demand.” Thomas W. Waterman, A Treatise on the Law of Set-Off, Recoupment, and Counter Claim § 1, at 1 (2d ed. 1872).

“Before considering the counter-claim, a brief reference to ‘the set-off’ as known in former practice is necessary. By the common law, the setting off of one demand against another in the same action was unknown. If A had a cause of action in debt against B, and B had another cause of action in debt in equal amount against A, each must bring his action. One could not be set off against the other. This was changed by statute in England in 1729, by a provision which, somewhat enlarged and modified, has been generally adopted in this country.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 250–51 (2d ed. 1899).

“Set-off is defined to be a counter-demand, generally of a liquidated debt growing out of an independent transaction for which an action might be maintained by the defendant against the plaintiff.” Eugene A. Jones, Manual of Equity Pleading and Practice 65 n.42 (1916).

SET OUT

set out, vb. To recite, explain, narrate, or incorporate (facts or circumstances) <set out the terms of the contract>. — Also termed set forth.

SET OVER

set over,vb. To transfer or convey (property) <to set over the land to the purchaser>.

SETTING

setting,n. The date and time established by a court for a trial or hearing < the plaintiff sought a continuance of the imminent setting>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1991; Trial 6, 9. C.J.S. Trial §§ 31–38, 60.]

special setting.A preferential setting on a court's calendar, usu. reserved for older cases or cases given priority by law, made either on a party's motion or on the court's own motion. • For example, some jurisdictions authorize a special setting for cases involving a party over the age of 70. — Also termed special trial setting; trial-setting preference. [Cases: Trial 13. C.J.S. Trial §§ 77, 81–90.]

settlement,n.1. The conveyance of property — or of interests in property — to provide for one or more beneficiaries, usu. members of the settlor's family, in a way that differs from what the beneficiaries would receive as heirs under the statutes of descent and distribution <in marriage settlements, historically, the wife waived her right to claim dower or to succeed to her husband's property>. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 515. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators § 794.]

strict settlement.Hist. A property settlement that aimed to keep the estate within the family by creating successive interests in tail and shielding remainders from destruction by the interposition of a trust. Cf. trader's settlement.

trader's settlement.Hist. A property settlement in which the land is put into a trust for sale, the proceeds to be either paid out to beneficiaries over time or divided among the settlor's heirs. Cf. strict settlement.

voluntary settlement.A property settlement made without valuable consideration — other than love and affection — from the beneficiary.

2. An agreement ending a dispute or lawsuit <the parties reached a settlement the day before trial>. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement 1. C.J.S. Compromise and Settlement § 1.]

derivative settlement. 1. The negotiated outcome of a derivative action. See DERIVATIVE ACTION. 2. A person's legal-residence status that is acquired through another person, as with a child through one or both parents.

final settlement. A court order discharging an executor's duties after an estate's execution. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 512. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 865, 871.]

full settlement. A settlement and release of all pending claims between the parties. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement 1. C.J.S. Compromise and Settlement § 1.]

judicial settlement. The settlement of a civil case with the help of a judge who is not assigned to adjudicate the dispute. • Parties sometimes find this procedure advantageous because it capitalizes on judicial experience in evaluating the settlement value of a claim.

nuisance settlement. A settlement in which the defendant pays the plaintiff purely for economic reasons — as opposed to any notion of responsibility — because without the settlement the defendant would spend more money in legal fees and expenses caused by protracted litigation than in paying the settlement amount. • The money paid in such a settlement is often termed nuisance money.

out-of-court settlement. The settlement and termination of a pending suit, arrived at without the court's participation. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement 1. C.J.S. Compromise and Settlement § 1.]

structured settlement. A settlement in which the defendant agrees to pay periodic sums to the plaintiff for a specified time. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement 2. C.J.S. Compromise and Settlement §§ 1–7.]

“Especially in personal injury and product liability cases, structured settlements — i.e., those which provide for an initial cash payment followed by deferred payments in future years, normally on some annuity basis — are becoming more frequent.... Such a structured settlement may have advantages over a lump-sum cash payment. Deferred payments or arranged settlements may serve particular purposes that a cash settlement could not reach, and there will be instances when a structured settlement will be in lieu of an all-cash settlement that would not be acceptable to one party or the other.” Alba Conte, Attorney Fee Awards § 2.31, at 101 (1993).

3. Payment, satisfaction, or final adjustment <the seller shipped the goods after confirming the buyer's settlement of the account>.

viatical settlement (vI-at-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>l). [fr. Latin viaticus “relating to a road or journey”] A transaction in which a terminally or chronically ill person sells the benefits of a life-insurance policy to a third party in return for a lump-sum cash payment equal to a percentage of the policy's face value. • Viatical settlements are common with AIDS patients, many of whom sell their policies at a 20% to 40% discount, depending on life expectancy. When the insured (called the “viator”) dies, the investor receives the insurance benefit. — Also termed life settlement. [Cases: Insurance 1994.]

4.CLOSING <the settlement on their first home is next Friday>.5.Wills & estates. The complete execution of an estate by the executor <the settlement of the estate was long and complex>. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 502–516. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 794, 847–877, 879–899.] 6. The establishment of a legal residence. • This sense was frequently used in poor-relief contexts. — settle, vb.

SETTLEMENT CLASS

settlement class. See CLASS(4).

SETTLEMENT COUNSEL

settlement counsel. See CIRCUIT MEDIATOR.

SETTLEMENT CREDIT

settlement credit. Civil procedure. A court's reduction of the amount of a jury verdict — or the effect of the verdict on nonsettling defendants — to account for settlement funds the plaintiff has received from former defendants or from other responsible parties. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement 15(1); Damages 63. C.J.S. Compromise and Settlement §§ 32–33, 35–37, 40–41; Damages §§ 169–171.]

SETTLEMENT DATE

settlement date. See DATE.

SETTLEMENT-FIRST METHOD settlement-first method. A means by which to apply a settlement credit to a jury verdict, by first reducing the amount of the verdict by subtracting the amount of all settlements the plaintiff has received on the claim, then reducing the remainder by the percentage of the plaintiff's comparative fault. See SETTLEMENT CREDIT. Cf. FAULT-FIRST METHOD. [Cases: Damages 63. C.J.S. Damages §§ 169–171.]

Many victims of shaken-baby syndrome are permanently blind or die. Shaken-baby syndrome is one of the leading causes of infant death. It was first identified in the early 1970s.

SHAKEOUT

shakeout, n. An elimination of weak or nonproductive businesses in an industry, esp. during a period of intense competition or declining prices.

SHALL

shall, vb. 1. Has a duty to; more broadly, is required to <the requester shall send notice> <notice shall be sent>. • This is the mandatory sense that drafters typically intend and that courts typically uphold. [Cases: Statutes 227. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 362–369.] 2. Should (as often interpreted by courts) <all claimants shall request mediation>. 3. May <no person shall enter the building without first signing the roster>. • When a negative word such as not or no precedes shall (as in the example in angle brackets), the word shall often means may. What is being negated is permission, not a requirement. 4. Will (as a future-tense verb) <the corporation shall then have a period of 30 days to object>. 5. Is entitled to <the secretary shall be reimbursed for all expenses>. • Only sense 1 is acceptable under strict standards of drafting.

SHELL GAME

shell game. A sleight-of-hand game that uses three cups or thimble-like objects, one of which has a pea, ball, or other small object underneath. • This is a game of chance in which one player bets that he or she can remember under which cup the object is. The cups are moved around so quickly that the player finds it difficult to remember where the object is. When played casually on public streets the shell game is usu. a swindle because the operator palms the object rather than leaving it under a cup, so the player has no chance of winning. — Also termed thimblorig; thimbles and balls. See GAME OF CHANCE.

SHELTER

shelter, n. 1. A place of refuge providing safety from danger, attack, or observation.

homeless shelter. A privately or publicly operated residential facility providing overnight accommodation free of charge to homeless people. • Most homeless shelters accept occupants on a first-come-first-served basis and are open only from early evening to early morning. Those that serve homeless families may remain open throughout the day to women and children. Some shelters offer occupants help such as advice on finding and applying for public assistance, employment, and medical care.

women's shelter. A privately or publicly operated residential facility providing women (and their children) who are victims of domestic violence with temporary lodging, food, and other services such as employment assistance, counseling, and medical care. — Also termed family shelter.

youth shelter. 1. A privately or publicly operated residential facility offering young runaway or throwaway children and homeless young people a safe place to stay, usu. for a short time. • The residents enter the shelter voluntarily and can leave anytime they wish. Some shelters offer long-term transitional training so that young people can leave street life and eventually lead independent, productive lives. 2. An alternative type of juvenile-detention center that is less physically restrictive than a jail or boot camp. • Delinquent juveniles are usu. brought to these shelters by police or ordered to reside there by a court. Residents attend school or work in the daytime and may be permitted weekend visits at their family homes.

2. TAX SHELTER <the shelter saved the taxpayer over $2,000 in taxes>. — shelter, vb.

SHELTER-CARE HEARING

shelter-care hearing. See shelter hearing under HEARING.

SHELTER DOCTRINE

shelter doctrine. Commercial law. The principle that a person to whom a holder in due course has transferred commercial paper, as well as any later transferee, will succeed to the rights of the holder in due course. • As a result, transferees of holders in due course are generally not subject to defenses against the payment of an instrument. This doctrine ensures the free transferability of commercial paper. Its name derives from the idea that the transferees “take shelter” in the rights of the holder in due course. [Cases: Bills and Notes 362. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 189.]

SHELTER HEARING

shelter hearing. See HEARING.

SHELVING

shelving. Patents. The failure to begin or the stopping of commercial use of a patent during a specified period, usu. the term of the license. • A licensor may place an antishelving provision in a license to ensure the licensed product's manufacture and sale. The shelving problem usu. applies to patented inventions, but licenses for trademarked products may also address shelving. See ANTISHELVING CLAUSE.

SHELVING CLAUSE

shelving clause. See ANTISHELVING CLAUSE.

SHEPARDIZE

shepardize, vb. 1. (often cap.) To determine the subsequent history of (a case) by using a printed or computerized version of Shepard's Citators. 2. Loosely, to check the precedential value of (a case) by the same or similar means. — shepardization; shepardizing, n.

SHERIFF

sheriff. [Middle English shire reeve from Anglo-Saxon scirgerefa] 1. A county's chief peace officer, usu. elected, who in most jurisdictions acts as custodian of the county jail, executes civil and criminal process, and carries out judicial mandates within the county. — Also termed high sheriff; vice-comes. [Cases: Sheriffs and Constables 1. C.J.S. Sheriffs and Constables § 1.]

deputy sheriff. An officer who, acting under the direction of a sheriff, may perform most of the duties of the sheriff's office. • Although undersheriff is broadly synonymous with deputy sheriff, writers have sometimes distinguished between the two, suggesting that a deputy is appointed for a special occasion or purpose, while an undersheriff is permanent. — Also termed undersheriff; general deputy; vice-sheriff. [Cases: Sheriffs and Constables 16.]

2. Scots law. The chief judge at the county level, with limited criminal and unlimited civil jurisdiction. • A sheriff may not hear cases of murder or of some minor offenses. In medieval times, the sheriff was the king's representative in the shires, having military, administrative, and judicial functions. The office was hereditary until the Heritable Jurisdictions Act of 1746.

SHERMAN ANTITRUST ACT

Sherman Antitrust Act.A federal statute, passed in 1890, that prohibits direct or indirect interference with the freely competitive interstate production and distribution of goods. • This Act was amended by the Clayton Act in 1914. 15 USCA §§ 1–7. — Often shortened to Sherman Act. — Also termed the Antitrust Law. [Cases: Monopolies 10. C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 18, 20–26, 45, 56–62, 71, 137.]

SHERMAN–SORRELLS DOCTRINE

Sherman–Sorrells doctrine.The principle that a defendant may claim as an affirmative defense that he or she was not disposed to commit the offense until a public official (often an undercover police officer) encouraged the defendant to do so. • This entrapment defense, which is recognized in the federal system and a majority of states, was developed in Sherman v. United States, 356 U.S. 369, 78 S.Ct. 819 (1958), and Sorrells v. United States, 287 U.S. 435, 53 S.Ct. 210 (1932). — Also termed subjective method. See ENTRAPMENT. Cf. HYPOTHETICAL-PERSON DEFENSE.

SHIELD LAW

shield law. 1. A statute that affords journalists the privilege not to reveal confidential sources. See journalist's privilege under PRIVILEGE(3). [Cases: Witnesses 196.1. C.J.S. Witnesses § 358.]

“More than half of the states have ‘shield laws’ creating ‘reporters’ privileges’ that are sometimes broader than the First Amendment version of that privilege.” David A. Anderson, Freedom of the Press, 80 Texas L. Rev. 429, 432 (2002).

2. A statute that restricts or prohibits the use, in rape or sexual-assault cases, of evidence about the past sexual conduct of the victim. — Also termed (in sense 2) rape shield law; rape shield statute. [Cases: Rape 40(1)–40(5).C.J.S. Rape §§ 86–89.]“The ‘rape shield law.’ At common law the character of the woman as to chastity or unchastity was held to be admissible in evidence on the theory that it had probative value in determining whether she did or did not consent. Defense counsel, in unrestrained zeal for an acquittal, took advantage of this to the point that it often seemed as if it was the victim of the rape, rather than the perpetrator, who was on trial.... A typical ‘rape shield statute’ does not prevent the introduction of any relevant and otherwise admissible evidence, but requires that the relevancy of any evidence of the previous sexual conduct of the complaining witness must be determined in a pretrial hearing before the judge in camera.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 206 (3d ed. 1982).

SHIFTING

shill. 1. A person who poses as an innocent bystander at a confidence game but actually serves as a decoy for the perpetrators of the scheme. 2. BY-BIDDER R. — shill, vb.

SHILLING

shilling, n. 1. The practice of fraudulently bidding on items at an auction solely to drive up the price. • The seller might collude with another person to bid or might act alone and anonymously. Cf. BIDDING UP; BY-BIDDING. 2. Hist. An English coin equal to 12 pence or 1/20th of a pound. • Shillings were revalued as five pence and phased out when decimalization was adopted in the early 1970s. The modern five-pence coin, like its predecessor equal to 1/20th of a pound, is sometimes nostalgically referred to as a shilling.

SHINGLE

shingle. A small, usu. dignified sign that marks the office door of a professional, esp. a lawyer.

SHINGLE THEORY

shingle theory. Securities. The notion that a broker-dealer must be held to a high standard of conduct because by engaging in the securities business (“hanging out a shingle”), the broker-dealer implicitly represents to the world that the conduct of all its employees will be fair and meet professional norms. [Cases: Securities Regulation 27.21, 60.32(1). C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 76, 164, 195, 217.]

“[I]n judging the appropriate standard of care that attaches to a broker-dealer in recommending securities to his or her customers and in dealing with the customers' accounts, the Commission has relied upon the ‘shingle theory.’ The shingle theory is but an extension of the common law doctrine of ‘holding out.’ When brokers hold themselves out as experts either in investments in general or in the securities of a particular issuer, they will be held to a higher standard of care in making recommendations.” Thomas Lee Hazen, The Law of Securities Regulation § 10.6, at 423 (2d ed. 1994).

SHIN PLASTER

shin plaster. Hist. Slang. 1. A bank note that has greatly depreciated in value, esp. the paper money of the Republic of Texas in relation to the U.S. dollar. 2. Paper money in denominations less than one dollar.

[Cases: Shipping 32. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 63–67.]

SHIPOWNER-NEGLIGENCE DOCTRINE

shipowner-negligence doctrine.The principle that a shipowner is liable for an assault on a crew member if the crew member was assaulted by a superior, in the context of an activity undertaken for the benefit of the ship's business, and if the ship's officers could reasonably have foreseen the assault. [Cases: Seamen 29(3). C.J.S. Seamen §§ 163, 165–166.]

SHIPPER

shipper. 1. One who ships goods to another. 2. One who contracts with a carrier for the transportation of cargo. • As a legal term of art, the shipper may not be the person who owns the cargo, but an agent or an independent contractor. Cf. CARRIER(1). [Cases: Carriers 3, 41. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace § 179; Carriers §§ 2, 385.]

SHIPPING ARTICLES

shipping articles. Maritime law. A document (provided by a master of a vessel to the mariners) detailing voyage information, such as the voyage term, the number of crew, and the wage rates. 46 USCA § 10302. [Cases: Seamen 7. C.J.S. Seamen §§ 13, 15.]

SHIPPING COMMISSIONER

shipping commissioner. An officer, appointed by the secretary of the treasury, who is posted at a port of entry, and vested with general supervisory authority over seamen's contracts and welfare. • In 1993, the term was changed to "master or individual in charge." See Pub. L. No. 103-206, § 403.

[Cases: Maritime Liens 28; Seamen 22; Shipping 74. C.J.S. Maritime Liens §§ 28-30, 32-33; Seamen § 95; Shipping § 174.]

SHIP'S PAPERS

ship's papers. Maritime law. The papers that a vessel is required to carry to provide the primary evidence of the ship's national character, ownership, nature and destination of cargo, and compliance with navigation laws. • This evidence includes certificates of health, charterparty, muster-rolls, licenses, and bills of lading. [Cases: Shipping 5. C.J.S. Shipping § 16.]

SHIPWRECK

shipwreck. Maritime law. 1. A ship's wreckage. [Cases: Shipping 212.C.J.S. Shipping § 520.]
2. The injury or destruction of a vessel because of circumstances beyond the owner's control, rendering the vessel incapable of carrying out its mission.

“There are two kinds of shipwreck: (1.) When the vessel sinks or is dashed to pieces. (2.) When she is stranded, which is, when she grounds and fills with water. The latter may terminate in shipwreck, or may not, and it depends on circumstances whether it will or will not justify an abandonment.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *323 n.(b) (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

SHIRE

SHOCK THE CONSCIENCE

shock the conscience.To cause intense ethical or humanitarian discomfort. • This phrase is used as an equitable standard for gauging whether (1) state action amounts to a violation of a person's substantive-due-process rights, (2) a jury's award is excessive, (3) a fine or jail term is disproportionate to the crime, or (4) a contract is unconscionable. See CONSCIENCE OF THE COURT(2).

SHOP

shop,n. A business establishment or place of employment; a factory, office, or other place of business.

agency shop.A shop in which a union acts as an agent for the employees, regardless of their union membership. • Nonunion members must pay union dues because it is presumed that any collective bargaining will benefit nonunion as well as union members.

closed nonunion shop.A shop in which the employer restricts employment to workers who are unaffiliated with any labor union.

closed shop.A shop in which the employer, by agreement with a union, hires and retains in employment only union members in good standing. • Closed shops were made illegal under the federal Labor–Management Relations Act. — Also termed closed union shop. See PREHIRE AGREEMENT. Cf. closed union under UNION. [Cases: Labor Relations 251. C.J.S. Labor Relations §§ 10, 230–231, 233, 235–238.]

shoplifting, n. Theft of merchandise from a store or business; specif., larceny of goods from a store or other commercial establishment by willfully taking and concealing the merchandise with the intention of converting the goods to one's personal use without paying the purchase price. See LARCENY. [Cases: Larceny 1. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 1(1, 2), 9.] — shoplift, vb.

“Shoplifting is a form of larceny As a practical matter, however, the difficulty of proving the wrongful taking and the felonious intent requisites for a conviction under the general larceny statutes, together with the risk of retributory civil action against the shopkeeper consequent to acquittal of an accused shoplifter, have caused shoplifting to be established as a specific statutory crime in many jurisdictions.” 50 Am. Jur. 2d Larceny § 71, at 79–80 (1995).

SHOP RIGHT

shop right. Patents. An employer's right to an irrevocable, nonassignable, nonexclusive, royalty-free license in an employee's invention, if the employee conceived and developed the invention during the course of employment and used company funds and materials. • The term derives from the idea that the right belongs to the shop, not to the employee. Employment contracts frequently contain patent-assignment clauses, but the employer is entitled to the license even if the employee retains the patent. If the employee or consultant was hired to invent, then the employer owns the resulting inventions. If an employee develops an invention independently, the employee is its sole owner. But if an employee uses the employer's resources to make the invention, courts use the shop-right doctrine to compensate the employer. [Cases: Master and Servant 62. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 115, 117–122.]

SHOP STEWARD

shop steward. See STEWARD(2).

sidesman. Eccles. law. A church officer who originally reported to the bishop on clerical and congregational misdeeds, including heretical acts, and later became a standing officer whose duties gradually devolved by custom on the churchwarden. — Also termed synodsmen; questman.

SI DEVENTUM SIT AD ACTUM MALEFICIO PROXIMUM

si deventum sit ad actum maleficio proximum (sI di-ven-t<<schwa>>m sit ad ak-t<<schwa>>m mal-<<schwa>>-fish-ee-oh prok-s<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. If it approaches an act bordering on crime. • The phrase described the determination of a criminal attempt.

SIERRA–MOBILE DOCTRINE

Sierra–Mobile doctrine. See MOBILE–SIERRA DOCTRINE.

SI FECERIT TE SECURUM

si fecerit te securum (sIfes-<<schwa>>r-it tee si-kyoor-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. If he has made you secure. • These were the initial words of a writ ordering the sheriff, upon receipt of security from the plaintiff, to compel the defendant's appearance in court. — Also spelled (erroneously) se te fecerit securum.

SIGHT

sight. A drawee's acceptance of a draft <payable after sight>. • The term after sight means “after acceptance.”

SIGHT DRAFT

sight draft. See DRAFT.

SIGIL

sigil (sij-<<schwa>>l), n. A seal or an abbreviated signature used as a seal; esp., a seal formerly used by civil-law notaries.

SIGILLUM

sigillum (si-jil-<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] A seal, esp. one impressed on wax.

SIGLA

sigla (sig-l<<schwa>>), n. pl. [Latin] Abbreviations and signs used in writing, esp. by the Glossators.

SIGN

sign, vb. 1. To identify (a record) by means of a signature, mark, or other symbol with the intent to authenticate it as an act or agreement of the person identifying it <both parties signed the contract>. 2. To agree with or join <the commissioner signed on for a four-year term>.

SIGNAL

signal. 1. A means of communication, esp. between vessels at sea or between a vessel and the shore. • The international code of signals assigns arbitrary meanings to different arrangements of flags or light displays. [Cases: Collision 75–79, 81, 98, 100(2). C.J.S. Collision §§ 102–137, 143–147, 159, 210, 224.] 2. In the citation of legal authority, an abbreviation or notation supplied to indicate some basic fact about the authority. • For example, according to the Bluebook, the signal See means that the cited authority directly states or supports the proposition, while Cf. means that the cited authority supports a proposition analogous to (but in some way different from) the main proposition. For these and other signals, see The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation § 1.2, at 22–24 (17th ed. 2000). — Also termed (in sense 2) citation signal.

SIGNATORIUS ANULUS

signatorius anulus (sig-n<<schwa>>-tor-ee-<<schwa>>s an-y<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. A signet ring.

SIGNATORY

signatory (sig-n<<schwa>>-tor-ee), n. A party that signs a document, personally or through an agent, and thereby becomes a party to an agreement <eight countries are signatories to the treaty>. — signatory,adj.

SIGNATORY AUTHORITY

signatory authority. 1. License to make a decision, esp. to withdraw money from an account or to transfer a negotiable instrument. 2.Patents. In the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, the power of an examiner to approve an office action.

SIGNATURE

signature. 1. A person's name or mark written by that person or at the person's direction. — Also termed sign manual. [Cases: Signatures 1–5.C.J.S. Signatures §§ 1–16.] 2.Commercial law. Any name, mark, or writing used with the intention of authenticating a document. UCC §§ 1-201(b)(37), 3-401(b). — Also termed legal signature. [Cases: Sales 29. C.J.S. Sales § 76.]

“The signature to a memorandum may be any symbol made or adopted with an intention, actual or apparent, to authenticate the writing as that of the signer.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 134 (1979).

digital signature.A secure, digital code attached to an electronically transmitted message that uniquely identifies and authenticates the sender. • A digital signature consists of a “hashed” number combined with a number assigned to a document (a private-encryption key). Generating a signature requires the use of private- and public-key-encryption software, and is often activated by a simple command or act, such as clicking on a “place order” icon on a retailer's website. Digital signatures are esp. important for electronic commerce and are a key component of many electronic message-authentication schemes. Several states have passed legislation recognizing the legality of digital signatures. See E-COMMERCE; KEY ENCRYPTION. [Cases: Signatures 2. C.J.S. Signatures § 14.]

electronic signature.An electronic symbol, sound, or process that is either attached to or logically associated with a document (such as a contract or other record) and executed or adopted by a person with the intent to sign the document. • Types of electronic signatures include a typed name at the end of an e-mail, a digital image of a handwritten signature, and the click of an “I accept” button on an e-commerce site. The term electronic signature does not suggest or require the use of encryption, authentication, or identification measures. A document's integrity (unaltered content), authenticity (sender's identity), and confidentiality (of the signer's identity or document's contents) are not ensured merely because an electronic signature is provided for. [Cases: Signatures 3. C.J.S. Signatures § 12.]

facsimile signature. 1. A signature that has been prepared and reproduced by mechanical or photographic means. 2. A signature on a document that has been transmitted by a facsimile machine. See FAX.

private signature. Civil law. A signature made on a document (such as a will) that has not been witnessed or notarized. [Cases: Wills 149. C.J.S. Wills § 338.]

unauthorized signature. A signature made without actual, implied, or apparent authority. • It includes a forgery. UCC § 1-201(b)(41). [Cases: Banks and Banking 147; Bills and Notes 54, 279. Banks and Banking §§ 415–416; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 26–30, 150–151.]

SIGNATURE CARD

signature card. A financial-institution record consisting of a customer's signature and other information that assists the institution in monitoring financial transactions, as by comparing the signature on the record with signatures on checks, withdrawal slips, and other documents. [Cases: Banks and Banking 133, 151. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 266–268, 277–278, 326, 328–329, 331–335, 342, 347–348, 399.]

SIGNATURE CRIME

SIGNED, SEALED, AND DELIVERED

signed, sealed, and delivered. In a certificate of acknowledgment, a statement that the instrument was executed by the person acknowledging it. — Often shortened to sealed and delivered. [Cases: Acknowledgment 29. C.J.S. Acknowledgments §§ 60–61, 69.]

SIGNET

signet. 1. Civil law. An elaborate hand-drawn symbol (usu. incorporating a cross and the notary's initials) formerly placed at the base of notarial instruments, later replaced by a seal. 2. Scots law. A seal used to authenticate summonses in civil matters before the Court of Session. • Originally, this was the monarch's personal seal. See WRITER TO THE SIGNET.

SIGNIFICANT-CONNECTION JURISDICTION significant-connection jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

SIGNIFICANT-CONNECTION/ SUBSTANTIAL-EVIDENCE JURISDICTION significant-connection/substantial-evidence jurisdiction. See significant-connection jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

SIGNIFICANT-RELATIONSHIP THEORY significant-relationship theory. See CENTER-OF-GRAVITY DOCTRINE.

SIGNIFICAVIT

significavit (sig-ni-fi-kay-vit), n. [Latin "he has signified"] Eccles. law. 1. A bishop's certificate that a person has been in a state of excommunication for more than 40 days. 2. A notice to the Crown in chancery, based on the bishop's certificate, whereby a writ de contumace capiendo (or, earlier, a writ de excommunicato capiendo) would issue for the disobedient person's arrest and imprisonment. See DE CONTUMACE CAPIENDO.

SIGN MANUAL

sign manual. 1. SIGNATURE(1). 2. A symbol or emblem, such as a trademark, representing words or an idea.

SIGNUM

signum (sig-n<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. A sign; a seal.

"Signum. (On written documents.) A seal (a stamp) put on to close a document in order to make its contents inaccessible to unauthorized persons and protect against forgery, or at the end of it after the written text. In the latter case the seal (without or with a signature) indicated that the sealer recognized the written declaration as his.... Signum is also the seal of a witness who was present at the making of a document." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 707 (1953).

2. An indication of something seen or otherwise perceived by the senses, such as a bloodstain on a murder suspect. Pl. signa.

SI INSTITUTUS SINE LIBERIS DECESSERIT si institutus sine liberis decesserit (sI in-sti-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>s sI-nee lib-<<schwa>>r-is di-ses-<<schwa>>r-it). [Latin] Hist. If the instituted heir should die without issue. See SUBSTITUTION.

SI ITA EST

si ita est (sI I-t<<schwa>> est). [Latin] If it be so. • This phrase was formerly used in a mandamus writ to order a judge to affix a seal to a bill of exceptions, if the facts were accurately stated.

SILENCE

silence, n. 1. A restraint from speaking. • In criminal law, silence includes an arrestee's statements expressing the desire not to speak and requesting an attorney. 2. A failure to reveal something required by law to be revealed. See estoppel by silence under ESTOPPEL. — silent, adj.

SILENT CONFIRMATION silent confirmation. See CONFIRMATION.

SILENTIARY

silentary (sI-len-shee-air-ee), n. 1. Roman law. An official who maintains order in the imperial palace and on the imperial council; a chamberlain. 2. Hist. An officer who is sworn to silence about state secrets; esp., a privy councillor so sworn. 3. Hist. A court usher who maintains order and esp. silence in the court. — Also termed silentarius.

SILENT PARTNER

silent partner. See PARTNER.

SILENT RECORD

silent record. See RECORD.

SILENT-WITNESS THEORY

silent-witness theory. Evidence. A method of authenticating and admitting evidence (such as a photograph), without the need for a witness to verify its authenticity, upon a sufficient showing of the reliability of the process of producing the evidence, including proof that the evidence has not been altered. [Cases: Criminal Law 438, 444; Evidence 359, 380. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1025, 1028, 1030, 1032, 1040–1041, 1046; Evidence §§ 987, 991–994, 998, 1000, 1002.]

SILK GOWN

silk gown. 1. The professional robe worn by a Queen's Counsel. 2. One who is a Queen's Counsel. — Often shortened (in sense 2) to silk. Cf. STUFF GOWN.

SILVER CERTIFICATES

silver certificates. U.S. paper money formerly in circulation and redeemable in silver. • Silver certificates have been replaced by Federal Reserve notes, which are not so redeemable.

SILVER PARACHUTE

silver parachute. See TIN PARACHUTE.

SILVER-PLATTER DOCTRINE

silver-platter doctrine. Criminal procedure. The principle that a federal court could allow the admission of evidence obtained illegally by a state police officer as long as a federal officer did not participate in or request the search. • The Supreme Court rejected this doctrine in Elkins v. United States, 364 U.S. 206, 80 S.Ct. 1437 (1960). [Cases: Criminal Law 394.2. C.J.S. Criminal si malitia suppleat aetatem (sI m<<schwa>>-lish-ee-<<schwa>> s<<schwa>>p-lee-at ee-tay-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. If malice should supply the want of age.

Law § 776.]

SI MALITIA SUPPLEAT AETATEM

SIMILAR HAPPENINGS

similar happenings.Evidence. Events that occur at a time different from the time in dispute and are therefore usu. inadmissible except to the extent that they provide relevant information on issues that would be fairly constant, such as the control of and conditions on land on the day in question. [Cases: Criminal Law 369–374; Evidence 129–142. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 454, 825–830, 832; Evidence §§ 760–775, 780–781, 783–788.]

SIMILARITY

similarity.Intellectual property. The resemblance of one trademark or copyrighted work to another. • How closely a trademark must resemble another to amount to infringement depends on the nature of the product and how much care the typical buyer would be expected to take in making the selection in that particular market. It is a question of overall impression rather than an element-by-element comparison of the two marks. — Also termed imitation; colorable imitation. [Cases: Trade Regulation 340. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 86, 89.]

“It is the buyer who uses ordinary caution in making his purchase, who is buying with the care usually exercised in such transactions, who must be deceived by this similarity. He who buys a box of candy does not use as much care as he who buys a watch. He who buys a handkerchief does not usually examine the goods offered him as carefully as he who buys a suit of clothes.” Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 836 (1929).

comprehensive nonliteral similarity.Copyright. Similarity evidenced by the copying of the protected work's general ideas or structure (such as a movie's plot) without using the precise words or phrases of the work. — Also termed pattern similarity.

fragmented literal similarity.Copyright. Similarity evidenced by the copying of verbatim portions of the protected work.

pattern similarity.See comprehensive nonlinear similarity.

substantial similarity.Copyright. A strong resemblance between a copyrighted work and an alleged infringement, thereby creating an inference of unauthorized copying. • The standard for substantial similarity is whether an ordinary person would conclude that the alleged infringement has appropriated nontrivial amounts of the copyrighted work's expressions. See derivative work under WORK (2). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 53(1).]

SIMILAR SALES

similar sales.See SALE.

SIMILITER

similiter (si-mil-i-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin “similarly”] Common-law pleading. A party's written acceptance of an opponent's issue or argument; a set form of words by which a party accepts or joins in an issue of fact tendered by the other side. See joinder of issue (2) under JOINDER. [Cases: Pleading 100, 186. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 225, 764, 769.]

SI MINOR SE MAJOREM DIXERIT

si minor se majorem dixerit (sImI-n<<schwa>>r see m<<schwa>>-jor-<<schwa>>m dik-s<<schwa>>r-it). [Latin] Hist. If the minor has said that he is major. • The phrase refers to a defense that might be raised in a suit for a minor's claim for restitution for minority.

SIMONY

simony (sim-<<schwa>>-nee orsI-m<<schwa>>-nee), n.[fr. Latin simonia “payment for things spiritual,” fr. the proper name Simon Magus (see below)] Hist. Eccles. law. The unlawful practice of giving or receiving money or gifts in exchange for spiritual promotion; esp., the unlawful buying or selling of a benefice or the right to present clergy to a vacant benefice.

“By simony, the right of presentation to a living is forfeited, and vested pro hac vice in the crown. Simony is the corrupt presentation of any one to an ecclesiastical benefice for money, gift, or reward. It is so called from the resemblance it is said to bear to the sin of Simon Magus, though the purchasing of holy orders seems to approach nearer to his offence. It was by the canon law a very grievous crime: and is so much the more odious, because, as sir Edward Coke observes, it is ever accompanied with perjury; for the presentee is sworn to have committed no simony.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 278 (1766).

“Simony is an offence which consists in the buying and selling of holy orders, and any bond or contract involving simony is illegal and void.” John Indermaur, Principles of the Common Law 195 (Edmund H. Bennett ed., 1st Am. ed. 1878).

SIMPLE

simple,adj.1. (Of a crime) not accompanied by aggravating circumstances. Cf. AGGRAVATED(1).2. (Of an estate or fee) heritable by the owner's heirs with no conditions concerning tail. 3. (Of a contract) not made under seal. [Cases: Contracts 36. C.J.S. Contracts § 76.]

SINGLE-CRIMINAL-INTENT DOCTRINE single-criminal-intent doctrine.See SINGLE-LARCENY DOCTRINE.

SINGLE-DATE-OF-REMOVAL DOCTRINE

single-element means claim. See single-means claim under PATENT CLAIM.

SINGLE-ENTRY BOOKKEEPING single-entry bookkeeping. See BOOKKEEPING.

SINGLE-FILING RULE

single-filing rule. Civil-rights law. The principle that an administrative charge filed by one plaintiff in a civil-rights suit (esp. a Title VII suit) will satisfy the administrative-filing requirements for all coplaintiffs who are making claims for the same act of discrimination. • But this rule will not usu. protect a coplaintiff's claims if the coplaintiff also filed an administrative charge, against the same employer, in which different discriminatory acts were complained of, because the administrative agency (usu. the EEOC) and the employer are entitled to rely on the allegations someone makes in an administrative charge. [Cases: Civil Rights 1517.C.J.S. Civil Rights § 153.]

SINGLE-IMPULSE PLAN

single-impulse plan. See SINGLE-LARCENY DOCTRINE.

SINGLE-JUROR INSTRUCTION single-juror instruction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

SINGLE-LARCENY DOCTRINE

single-larceny doctrine. Criminal law. The principle that the taking of different items of property belonging to either the same or different owners at the same time and place constitutes one act of larceny if the theft is part of one larcenous plan, as when it involves essentially one continuous act or if control over the property is exercised simultaneously. • The intent of the thief determines the number of occurrences. — Also termed single-impulse plan; single-larceny rule; single-criminal-intent doctrine. [Cases: Larceny 1. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 1(1, 2), 9.]

SINGLE-PUBLICATION RULE

single-publication rule. The doctrine that a plaintiff in a libel suit against a publisher has only one claim for each mass publication, not a claim for every book or issue in that run. [Cases: Libel and Slander 26. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 53-55, 98.]

SINGLE-PURPOSE PROJECT

single-purpose project. A facility that is designed, built, and used for one reason only, such as to generate electricity. • This term most often refers to large, complex, expensive projects such as power plants, chemical-processing plants, mines, and toll roads. Projects of this type are often funded through project financing, in which a special-purpose entity is established to perform no function other than to develop, own, and operate the facility, the idea being to limit the number of the entity's creditors and thus provide protection for the project's lenders. See project financing under FINANCING; SPECIAL-PURPOSE ENTITY; BANKRUPTCY-REMOTE ENTITY.

SINGLE-RECOVERY RULE

single-recovery rule. See ONE-SATISFACTION RULE.

SINGLE-REGISTRATION RULE

single-registration rule. Copyright. The U.S. Copyright Office doctrine that permits only one registration for each original work. • Exceptions to the rule are routinely made for unpublished works that are later published. [Cases: Telecommunications 323.]

slander, n. 1. A defamatory assertion expressed in a transitory form, esp. speech. • Damages for slander — unlike those for libel — are not presumed and thus must be proved by the plaintiff (unless the defamation is slander per se). [Cases: Libel and Slander 1, 24. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5–6, 10, 47.] 2. The act of making such a statement. See DEFAMATION. Cf. LIBEL. — slander, vb. — slanderous, adj.

“Although libel and slander are for the most part governed by the same principles, there are two important differences: (1) Libel is not merely an actionable tort, but also a criminal offence, whereas slander is a civil injury only. (2) Libel is in all cases actionable per se; but slander is, save in special cases, actionable only on proof of actual damage. This distinction has been severely criticised as productive of great injustice.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 139 (17th ed. 1977).

slander per quod. Slander that does not qualify as slander per se, thus forcing the plaintiff to prove special damages. [Cases: Libel and Slander 11, 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

slander per se. Slander for which special damages need not be proved because it imputes to the plaintiff any one of the following: (1) a crime involving moral turpitude, (2) a loathsome disease (such as a sexually transmitted disease), (3) conduct that would adversely affect one's business or profession, or (4) unchastity (esp. of a woman). [Cases: Libel and Slander 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

slavery. 1. A situation in which one person has absolute power over the life, fortune, and liberty of another. 2. The practice of keeping individuals in such a state of bondage or servitude. • Slavery was outlawed by the 13th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. [Cases: Slaves 1. C.J.S. Peonage § 2.]

“Slavery was a big problem for the Constitution makers. Those who profited by it insisted on protecting it; those who loathed it dreaded even more the prospect that to insist on abolition would mean that the Constitution would die aborning. So the Framers reached a compromise, of sorts. The words ‘slave’ and ‘slavery’ would never be mentioned, but the Constitution would safeguard the ‘peculiar institution’ from the abolitionists.” Jethro K. Lieberman, The Evolving Constitution slight-evidence rule. 1. The doctrine providing that, when there is evidence establishing the existence of a conspiracy between at least two other people, the prosecution need only offer slight evidence of a defendant's knowing participation or intentional involvement in the conspiracy to secure a conviction. • This rule was first announced in Tomplain v. United States, 42 F.2d 202, 203 (5th Cir. 1930). In the decades after Tomplain, other circuits adopted the rule, but not until the 1970s did the rule become widespread. Since then, the rule has been widely criticized and, in most circuits, abolished. See, e.g., United States v. Durrive, 902 F.2d 1221 (7th Cir. 1990). But its vitality remains undiminished in some jurisdictions. 2. The doctrine that only slight evidence of a defendant's participation in a conspiracy need be offered in order to admit a coconspirator's out-of-court statement under the coconspirator exception to the hearsay rule. See Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(E).

493 (1992).

SLIGHT-EVIDENCE RULE

SOCA

soca (soh-k<<schwa>> orsok-<<schwa>>), n. See SOC.

socage (sok-ij).Hist. A type of lay tenure in which a tenant held lands in exchange for providing the lord husbandry-related (rather than military) service. • Socage, the great residuary tenure, was any free tenure that did not fall within the definition of knight-service, serjeanty, or frankalmoin. Cf. KNIGHT-SERVICE; VILLEINAGE.

“If they [the peasant's duties] were fixed — for instance, helping the lord with sowing or reaping at specified times — the tenure was usually called socage. This was originally the tenure of socmen; but it became ... a generic term for all free services other than knight-service, serjeanty, or spiritual service.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 260 (3d ed. 1990).

free socage.Socage in which the services were both certain and honorable. • By the statute 12 Car. 2, ch. 24 (1660), all the tenures by knight-service were, with minor exceptions, converted into free socage. — Also termed free and common socage; liberum socagium.

villein socage (vil-<<schwa>>n). Socage in which the services, though certain, were of a baser nature than those provided under free socage.

societas (s<<schwa>>-sI-<<schwa>>-tas), n.[Latin] Roman law. A partnership between two or more people agreeing to share profits and losses; a partnership contract.

“Societas in its widest acceptation denotes two or more persons who unite or combine for the prosecution of a common object; in its more restricted sense it denotes a mercantile partnership ..., the individual members being termed Socii.” William Ramsay, A Manual of Roman Antiquities 316 (Rodolfo Lanciani ed., 15th ed. 1894).

SOCIETAS LEONINA

societas leonina (s<<schwa>>-sI-<<schwa>>-tas lee-<<schwa>>-nI-n<<schwa>>). [Latin “partnership with a lion”] Roman law. An illegal partnership in which a partner shares in only the losses, not the profits; a partnership in which one person takes the lion's share. — Also termed leonina societas.

“But an arrangement by which one party should have all the gain was not recognized as binding; it was considered as contrary to the nature and purposes of the societas, the aim of which was gain for all the parties concerned. Such an arrangement the lawyers called societas leonina, a partnership like that which the lion in the fable imposed upon the cow, the sheep, and the she-goat, his associates in the chase.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 231–32 (1881).

socna (sok-n<<schwa>>).Hist. A privilege; a liberty; a franchise.

SOCRATIC METHOD

Socratic method.A technique of philosophical discussion — and of law-school instruction — by which the questioner (a law professor) questions one or more followers (the law students), building on each answer with another question, esp. an analogy incorporating the answer. • This method takes its name from the Greek philosopher Socrates, who lived in Athens about 469–399 B.C.His method is a traditional one in law schools, primarily because it forces law students to think through issues rationally and deductively — a skill required in the practice of law. Most law professors who employ this method call on students randomly, an approach designed to teach students to think quickly, without stage fright. Cf. CASEBOOK METHOD; HORNBOOK METHOD.

“[Socrates] himself did not profess to be capable of teaching anything, except consciousness of ignorance He called his method of discussion (the Socratic method) obstetrics... because it was an art of inducing his interlocutors to develop their own ideas under a catechetical system.” 5 The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia 5746 (rev. ed. 1914).

Oral or anal copulation between a human and an animal; bestiality. — Also termed buggery; crime against nature; abominable and detestable crime against nature; unnatural offense; unspeakable crime; (archaically) sodomitry; (in Latin) crimen innotatum. Cf. PEDERASTY. — sodomize,vb. — sodomitic,adj. — sodomist, sodomite,n.

“Sodomitry is a carnal copulation against nature; to wit, of man or woman in the same sex, or of either of them with beasts.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 219 (1759).

“Sodomy was not a crime under the common law of England but was an ecclesiastical offense only. It was made a felony by an English statute so early that it is a common-law felony in this country, and statutes expressly making it a felony were widely adopted. ‘Sodomy’ is a generic term including both ‘bestiality’ and ‘buggery.’ ” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 465 (3d ed. 1982).

aggravated sodomy. Criminal sodomy that involves force or results in serious bodily injury to the victim in addition to mental injury and emotional distress. • Some laws provide that sodomy involving a minor is automatically aggravated sodomy. [Cases: Sodomy 1. C.J.S. Sodomy §§ 2–6.]

solicitor general.(usu. cap.) The second-highest-ranking legal officer in a government (after the attorney general); esp., the chief courtroom lawyer for the executive branch. — Abbr. SG. Pl. solicitors general.

“By [federal] law, only the Solicitor General or his designee can conduct and argue before the Supreme Court cases ‘in which the United States is interested.’ Thus, if a trial court appoints a special, independent prosecutor in order to prosecute a criminal contempt of court, that court-appointed special prosecutor cannot represent the United States in seeking Supreme Court review of any lower court decision unless the Solicitor General authorizes the filing of such a petition.... Although the Solicitor General serves at the pleasure of the President, by tradition the Solicitor General also acts with independence. Thus, if the Solicitor General does not believe in the legal validity of the arguments that the government wants presented, he will refuse to sign the brief. In close cases the Solicitor General will sign the brief but tag on a disclaimer that has become known as ‘tying a tin can.’ The disclaimer would state, for example, ‘The foregoing is presented as the position of the Internal Revenue Service.’ The justices would then know that the Solicitor General, although not withholding a legal argument, was not personally sponsoring or adopting the particular legal position.” Ronald D. Rotunda & John E. Nowak, Treatise on Constitutional Law § 2.2, at 86–88 (3d ed. 1999).

SOLICITOR'S HYPOTHEC

SOLIDARITY

solidarity. The state of being jointly and severally liable (as for a debt). See solidary obligation under OBLIGATION. [Cases: Action 14. C.J.S. Actions § 64.]

SOLIDARY

solidary (sol-<<schwa>>-der-ee), adj. (Of a liability or obligation) joint and several. See JOINT AND SEVERAL. [Cases: Action 14. C.J.S. Actions § 64.]

“It is a single debt of £100 owing by each of them, in such fashion that each of them may be compelled to pay the whole of it, but that when it is once paid by either of them, both are discharged from it. Obligations of this description may be called solidary, since in the language of Roman law, each of the debtors is bound in solidum instead of pro parte; that is to say, for the whole, and not for a proportionate part. A solidary obligation, therefore, may be defined as one in which two or more debtors owe the same thing to the same creditor.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 462–63 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

solum italicum (soh-l*<<schwa>>m I-tal-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>*m). [Latin "Italian land"] Roman law. Land in Italy (an extension of the old ager Romanus) needing, for full ownership to pass, to be transferred by formal methods, such as mancipatio or cession in jure. Cf. SOLUM PROVINCIALE.

SOLUM PROVINCIALE

solum provinciale (soh-l*<<schwa>>m pr<<schwa>>*-vin-shee-ay-lee). [Latin "provincial land"] Roman law. Provincial land ultimately held by the Emperor or state, with private holders having only, in theory, a possessory title without the right to transfer the property by formal methods, as distinguished from solum italicum. • Justinian abolished all distinctions between the two, allowing all land to be conveyed by traditio. Cf. SOLUM ITALICUM .

"Ownership of provincial land. The dominium of this was in Caesar or the populus according as it was an imperial or a senatorial province The holders were practically owners, but as they were not domini formal methods of transfer were not applicable. The holdings were however transferable informally The case disappeared when Justinian abolished the distinction between Italic and provincial land. Not all land in the provinces was solum provinciale: many provincial communities were given ius italicum, the chief result being that the land was in the dominium of the holder and not of the State, so that it could be transferred and claimed at law by civil law methods." W.W. Buckland, A Text-Book of Roman Law from Augustus to Justinian 190 (Peter Stein ed., 3d ed. 1963).

SOLUS CUM SOLA IN LOCO SUSPECTO

SONNY BONO COPYRIGHT TERM EXTENSION ACT

Sonny Bono Copyright Term Extension Act.Copyright. A federal law extending the copyright term by 20 years for all works published in the U.S. after January 1, 1978, and settling the copyright term for works created before 1978 as 95 years from the original copyright date. • Before the extension, the copyright term was the life of the author plus 50 years. The Act is named in honor of its sponsor, Congressman Sonny Bono, who died before the bill became law.Pub. L. No. 105-298, 112 Stat. 2827. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 33. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 31–32, 34, 94.]

SON-OF-SAM LAW

Son-of-Sam law.A state statute that prohibits a convicted criminal from profiting by selling his or her story rights to a publisher or filmmaker. • State law usu. authorizes prosecutors to seize royalties from a convicted criminal and to place the money in an escrow account for the crime victim's benefit. This type of law was first enacted in New York in 1977, in response to the lucrative book deals that publishers offered David Berkowitz, the serial killer who called himself "Son of Sam." In 1992, the U.S. Supreme Court declared New York's Son-of-Sam law unconstitutional as a content-based speech regulation, prompting many states to amend their laws in an attempt to avoid constitutionality problems. Simon & Schuster, Inc. v. New York State Crime Victims Bd., 502 U.S. 105, 112 S.Ct. 501 (1991). [Cases: Criminal Law 1221. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1733.]

sonticus (sahn-ti-k<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin] Roman law. Serious; more than trivial. • The term was used in the Twelve Tables to refer to a serious illness (morbus sonticus) that gave a defendant a valid reason not to appear in court.

source,n. The originator or primary agent of an act, circumstance, or result < she was the source of the information> <the side business was the source of income>.

SOURCE CODE

source code.Copyright. The nonmachine language used by a computer programmer to create a program. • If it is not included with the software sold to the public, source code is protected by trade-secret laws as well as copyright and patent laws. Source code may be deposited with the U.S. Copyright Office, but because of the need to protect a trade secret, and because a skilled programmer could figure out how to duplicate the source code's functions without necessarily copying the code, strategic parts may be blacked out. Cf. OBJECT CODE.

SOURCE OF LAW

source of law.Something (such as a constitution, treaty, statute, or custom) that provides authority for legislation and for judicial decisions; a point of origin for law or legal analysis. — Also termed fons juris.

terms might be more enlightening than one directed toward the more restricted function performed by judges. Our concern here will be with 'sources' in a much broader sense than is usual in the literature of jurisprudence. Our interest is not so much in sources of laws, as in sources of law. From whence does the law generally draw not only its content but its force in men's lives?" Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 69 (1968).

"In the context of legal research, the term 'sources of law' can refer to three different concepts which should be distinguished. One, sources of law can refer to the origins of legal concepts and ideas.... Two, sources of law can refer to governmental institutions that formulate legal rules.... Three, sources of law can refer to the published manifestations of the law. The books, computer databases, microforms, optical disks, and other media that contain legal information are all sources of law." J. Myron Jacobstein & Roy M. Mersky, Fundamentals of Legal Research 1–2 (5th ed. 1990).

SOVEREIGN

sovereign, adj. (Of a state) characteristic of or endowed with supreme authority <sovereign nation> <sovereign immunity>.

sovereign, n. 1. A person, body, or state vested with independent and supreme authority. 2. The ruler of an independent state. — Also spelled sovrán. See SOVEREIGNTY.

SOVEREIGN EQUALITY

sovereign equality. Int'l law. The principle that nations have the right to enjoy territorial integrity and political independence, free from intervention by other nations. • The United Nations "is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members." UN Charter art. 2, ¶ 1.

SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY

sovereign immunity. See IMMUNITY(1).

SOVEREIGN PEOPLE

sovereign people. The political body consisting of the collective number of citizens and qualified electors who possess the powers of sovereignty and exercise them through their chosen representatives.

SOVEREIGN POLITICAL POWER sovereign political power. See POLITICAL POWER.

SOVEREIGN POWER

sovereign power. The power to make and enforce laws. See sovereign political power under POLITICAL POWER.

SOVEREIGN RIGHT

sovereign right. A unique right possessed by a state or its agencies that enables it to carry out its official functions for the public benefit, as distinguished from certain proprietary rights that it may possess like any other private person. [Cases: States 21. C.J.S. States §§ 36–37.]

SOVEREIGN STATE

sovereign state. 1. A state that possesses an independent existence, being complete in itself, without being merely part of a larger whole to whose government it is subject. 2. A political community whose members are bound together by the tie of common subjection to some central authority, whose commands those members must obey. — Also termed independent state. Cf. client state and nonsovereign state under STATE. [Cases: International Law 3. C.J.S. International Law §§ 6–8, 13.]

“The essence of statehood is sovereignty, the principle that each nation answers only to its own domestic order and is not accountable to a larger international community, save only to the extent it has consented to do so. Sovereign states are thus conceived as hermetically sealed units, atoms that spin around an international orbit, sometimes colliding, sometimes cooperating, but always separate and apart.” David J. Bederman, International Law Frameworks 50 (2001).

part-sovereign state. A political community in which part of the powers of external sovereignty are exercised by the home government, and part are vested in or controlled by some other political body or bodies. • Such a state is not fully independent because by the conditions of its existence it is not allowed full freedom of action in external affairs.

SOVEREIGNTY

sovereignty (sahv-[-[<<schwa>>-]rin-tee). 1. Supreme dominion, authority, or rule. [Cases: International Law 8. C.J.S. International Law §§ 25–28.]

popular sovereignty. A system of government in which policy choices reflect the preferences of the majority of citizens.

state sovereignty. See STATE SOVEREIGNTY.

2. The supreme political authority of an independent state. 3. The state itself. "It is well to [distinguish] the senses in which the word Sovereignty is used. In the ordinary popular sense it means Supremacy, the right to demand obedience. Although the idea of actual power is not absent, the prominent idea is that of some sort of title to exercise control. An ordinary layman would call that person (or body of persons) Sovereign in a State who is obeyed because he is acknowledged to stand at the top, whose will must be expected to prevail, who can get his own way, and make others go his, because such is the practice of the country. Etymologically the word of course means merely superiority, and familiar usage applies it in monarchies to the monarch, because he stands first in the State, be his real power great or small." James Bryce, Studies in History and Jurisprudence 504–05 (1901).

external sovereignty. The power of dealing on a nation's behalf with other national governments.

internal sovereignty. The power enjoyed by a governmental entity of a sovereign state, including affairs within its own territory and powers related to the exercise of external sovereignty.

SPAM

spam. Unsolicited commercial e-mail (UCE). • Most states have some form of antis spam law, usu. prohibiting advertisers from misrepresenting or concealing an e-mail's origin and purpose. In 2004, the much-criticized CAN-SPAM Act of 2003 became federal law. 15 USCA § 7701.

SPARSIM

sparsim (spahr-sim). [Latin] Hist. Scattered; here and there. • This term was used in several situations — for example, when an action to recover for waste not only when the injury was complete, but also when the injury was partial or scattered.

“And if waste be done sparsim, or here and there, all over a wood, the whole wood shall be recovered; or if in several rooms of a house, the whole house shall be forfeited; because it is impracticable for the reversioner to enjoy only the identical places wasted, when lying interspersed with the other. But if waste be done only in one end of a wood (or perhaps in one room of a house) if that can be conveniently separated from the rest, that part only is the locus vastatus, or thing wasted, and that only shall be forfeited to the reversioner.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 283–84 (1766).

SPATAE PLACITUM

special venire. See VENIRE.

SPECIAL VERDICT

special verdict. See VERDICT.

SPECIAL WARRANTY

special warranty. See WARRANTY(1).

SPECIAL WARRANTY DEED

special warranty deed. See DEED.

SPECIE

specie (spee-shee). See IN SPECIE.

SPECIES

species (spee-sheez). 1. A taxonomic class of organisms uniquely distinguished from other classes by shared characteristics and usu. by an inability to interbreed with members of other classes.

endangered species. A species in danger of becoming extinct; esp., under federal law, a species that is in danger of extinction throughout all or a significant part of its range. • Federal law excludes from the definition a species of the class Insecta if the Environmental Protection Agency determines that it constitutes a pest whose protection would present a significant risk to the human population. 50 CFR § 81. [Cases: Environmental Law 528.]

threatened species. A species that, within the foreseeable future, is likely to become an endangered species throughout all or a significant part of its range. 16 USCA § 1532(20). [Cases: Environmental Law 528.]

2. A specific class or kind of thing within a larger, general class. • For example, tort refers to a general class or genus. Slander refers to a specific kind of tort. Cf. GENUS. 3. Patents. An element, usu. one of several mutually exclusive alternatives, that may be used in an invention to achieve a desired result. • Species may be structures, steps, parts, compounds, and so on.

ultimate species. A species that has been fully and narrowly defined. • For example, a species may be defined generally as “magnetic metals, including iron and steel,” or particularly, such as “sodium chloride.”

SPECIES CLAIM

species claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

SPECIES FACTI

species facti (spee-shee-eez orspee-sheez fak-ti). [Latin] Scots law. The particular character of the thing done. • The phrase appeared in reference to the specific criminal act or civil wrong alleged.

SPECIFIC

specific, adj. 1. Of, relating to, or designating a particular or defined thing; explicit <specific duties>. 2. Of or relating to a particular named thing <specific item>. 3. Conformable to special requirements <specific performance>. — specificity (spes-<<schwa>>-fis-i-tee), n. — specifically,adv.

SPECIFIC APPROPRIATION

specific appropriation. See APPROPRIATION(2).

specificatio (spes-<<schwa>>-fi-kay-shee-oh), n. [Latin fr. species “form” + facere “to make”] Roman & civil law. 1. A giving of form to materials; the process of making something new from existing property. 2. A mode of acquisition by which a person made something new from existing material (for example, wine from grapes or a ship from timber). See ACCESSION(4). Pl. specificationes.

SPECIFICATION

specification. 1. The act of making a detailed statement, esp. of the measurements, quality, materials, or other items to be provided under a contract. [Cases: Contracts 199(1).] 2. The statement so made. 3. Patents. The part of a patent application describing how an invention is made and used, the best mode of operation of the claimed invention, and the inventor's claims. • The specification must be clear and complete enough to enable a person of ordinary skill in the art to make and use the invention. It must also disclose the best mode of working the invention. The term may also refer to the description as separate from the claims. — Abbr. spec. Cf. PATENT CLAIM. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

“The specification and claims of a patent, particularly if the invention be at all complicated, constitute one of the most difficult legal instruments to draw with accuracy; and, in view of the fact that valuable inventions are often placed in the hands of inexperienced persons to prepare such specifications and claims, it is no matter of surprise that the latter frequently fail to describe with requisite certainty the exact invention of the patentee, and err either in claiming that which the patentee had not in fact invented, or in omitting some element which was a valuable or essential part of his actual invention.” Topliff v. Topliff, 145 U.S. 156, 170, 12 S.Ct. 825, 831 (1892).

substitute specification. A patent specification that is rewritten (1) to include amendments made to the specification after filing; (2) to replace an illegible or unreadable original; or (3) to prepare the papers for printing. • A substitute specification must be accompanied by a statement that it contains no new matter, and by a copy showing what has been added and deleted since the original specification. Substitute specifications are allowed under 37 CFR § 1.125. — Also termed rewritten specification. [Cases: Patents 109. C.J.S. Patents §§ 152–155.]

4. A statement of charges against one who is accused of an offense, esp. a military offense. [Cases: Armed Services 47(2); Military Justice 950–971. C.J.S. Armed Services § 164; Military Justice §§ 180–191.]“A charge sets forth an offense — that is, a particular kind of act or conduct that the governing rules define as entailing liability to prescribed penalties — of which the accused is alleged to be guilty. A specification states what the accused is alleged to have done which, if true, constitutes an instance of the offense indicated in the charge. An accused must be found guilty of a charge before a penalty can be imposed.” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 61, at 636 (10th ed. 2002).

5. The acquisition of title to materials belonging to another person by converting those materials into a new and different form, as by changing grapes into wine, lumber into shelving, or corn into liquor. • The effect is that the original owner of the materials loses the property rights in them and is left with a right of action for their original value. — Abbr. spec.

SPECIFIC BEQUEST

SPECIFIC LEGATEE

specific legatee.See LEGATEE.

SPECIFIC LIEN

specific lien.See LIEN.

SPECIFIC MAIN MOTION

specific main motion.See incidental main motion under MOTION(2).

SPECIFIC OBJECTION

specific objection.See OBJECTION.

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE

specific performance.The rendering, as nearly as practicable, of a promised performance through a judgment or decree; specif., a court-ordered remedy that requires precise fulfillment of a legal or contractual obligation when monetary damages are inappropriate or inadequate, as when the sale of real estate or a rare article is involved. • Specific performance is an equitable remedy that lies within the court's discretion to award whenever the common-law remedy is insufficient, either because damages would be inadequate or because the damages could not possibly be established. — Also termed specific relief. [Cases: Specific Performance 1. C.J.S. Specific Performance §§ 2, 5–6.]

“In essence, the remedy of specific performance enforces the execution of a contract according to its terms, and it may therefore be contrasted with the remedy of damages, which is compensation for non-execution. In specific performance, execution of the contract is enforced by the power of the Court to treat disobedience of its decree as contempt, for which the offender may be imprisoned until he is prepared to comply with the decree. Actually, ... it is not strictly accurate to say that the Court enforces execution of the contract according to its terms, for the Court will not usually intervene until default upon the contract has occurred, so that enforcement by the Court is later in time than performance carried out by the person bound, without the intervention of the Court.” G.W. Keeton, An Introduction to Equity 304 (5th ed. 1961).

SPECIFIC POLICY

specific policy. See basic-form policy under INSURANCE POLICY.

SPECIFIC RELIEF

specific relief. See SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

SPECIFIC REMEDY

specific remedy. See REMEDY.

SPECIFIC TAX

specific tax. See TAX.

SPECIFIC TRAVERSE

specific traverse. See common traverse under TRAVERSE.

SPECIMEN

specimen. An actual sample of something; esp., an example of a trademark as it is used in commerce. • In the field of trademarks, a specimen typically consists of a label, a container, a display, or a photograph of the mark used for selling or advertising the goods or services.

SPECTROGRAPH

spectrograph. An electromagnetic machine that analyzes sound, esp. a human voice, by separating and mapping it into elements of frequency, time lapse, and intensity (represented by a series of horizontal and vertical bar lines) to produce a final voiceprint. See VOICEPRINT. [Cases: Criminal Law 339.6. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 800–801.]

SPECULATION

speculation, n. 1. The buying or selling of something with the expectation of profiting from price fluctuations <he engaged in speculation in the stock market>. 2. The act or practice of theorizing about matters over which there is no certain knowledge <the public's speculation about the assassination of John F. Kennedy>. — speculate, vb. — speculative, adj.

SPECULATIVE DAMAGES

speculative damages. See DAMAGES.

SPECULATIVE RISK

speculative risk. See RISK.

SPECULATIVE SECURITY

speculative security. See SECURITY.

SPECULATOR

speculator. A knowledgeable, aggressive investor who trades securities to profit from fluctuating market prices.

SPEECH

speech. 1. The expression or communication of thoughts or opinions in spoken words; something spoken or uttered. See FREEDOM OF SPEECH. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 539, 542.]

commercial speech. Communication (such as advertising and marketing) that involves only the commercial interests of the speaker and the audience, and is therefore afforded lesser First Amendment protection than social, political, or religious speech. Cf. pure speech. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90.2, 90.3. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 544–545, 561, 568, 570–571, 573–574, 576–577, 581.]

corporate speech. Speech deriving from a corporation and protected under the First Amendment. • It does not lose protected status simply because of its corporate source.

hate speech. Speech that carries no meaning other than the expression of hatred for some group, such as a particular race, esp. in circumstances in which the communication is likely to provoke violence. Cf. hate crime under CRIME; group libel under LIBEL. [Cases: Civil Rights 1808. C.J.S. Civil Rights § 222.]

pure speech. Words or conduct limited in form to what is necessary to convey the idea. • This type of speech is given the greatest constitutional protection. Cf. commercial speech; symbolic speech.

sedition speech. Speech advocating the violent overthrow of government. See SEDITION. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90.1(2). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 550, 557, 605–606.]

speech-plus. See symbolic speech.

symbolic speech. Conduct that expresses opinions or thoughts, such as a hunger strike or the wearing of a black armband. • Symbolic speech does not enjoy the same constitutional protection that pure speech does. — Also termed speech-plus. Cf. pure speech. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90.1(1). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 461, 501–503, 539–543, 548–554, 561, 565, 572, 582–584, 603–605, 608, 610.]

2. English law. An opinion delivered by a Law Lord; JUDGMENT(2). 3. Parliamentary law. The unit of debate; specif., one statement, usu. subject to a time limit, on one question by one member. • When finished, the speaker must relinquish the floor and ordinarily cannot yield it to another member.

SPEECH CLAUSE

Speech Clause. The First Amendment provision that “Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech.” U.S. Const. amend I. — Also termed Freedom of Speech Clause.

SPEECH OR DEBATE CLAUSE

Speech or Debate Clause. The clause of the U.S. Constitution giving members of Congress immunity for statements made during debate in either the House or the Senate. • This immunity is extended to other areas where it is necessary to prevent impairment of deliberations and other legitimate legislative activities, such as subpoenaing bank records for an investigation. U.S. Const. art. I, § 6, cl. 1. — Also termed Speech and Debate Clause. See congressional immunity under IMMUNITY(1). [Cases: United States 12.C.J.S. United States §§ 27–28.]

SPEECH-PLUS

speech-plus. See symbolic speech under SPEECH.

SPEEDY EXECUTION

speedy execution. See EXECUTION.

SPEEDY REMEDY

speedy remedy. See REMEDY.

SPEEDY TRIAL

speedy trial. Criminal procedure. A trial that the prosecution, with reasonable diligence, begins promptly and conducts expeditiously. • The Sixth Amendment secures the right to a speedy trial. In deciding whether an accused has been deprived of that right, courts generally consider the length of the delay, the reason for the delay, and the prejudice to the accused. [Cases: Criminal Law 577.1–577.16. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 578–621.]

SPEEDY TRIAL ACT OF 1974

Speedy Trial Act of 1974. A federal statute establishing time limits for carrying out the major events (such as information, indictment, arraignment, and trial commencement) in the prosecution of federal criminal cases. 18 USCA §§ 3161–3174. [Cases: Criminal Law 577.2, 577.5. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 579, 591–592, 599, 602–603.]

spent bill of lading. See BILL OF LADING.

SPE NUMERANDAE PECUNIAE

spe numerandae pecuniae (spee n[y]oo-m<<schwa>>-ran-dee pi-kyoo-nee-ee). [Law Latin] Scots law. In the hope of the money being paid.

“So, also, where one delivers a conveyance, which acknowledges receipt of the consideration price, and discharges the disponee, this does not exclude his action for the price, if the disponee, on receiving delivery, refuses payment; the disponee is still liable ex dolo, the deed having been delivered spe numerandae pecuniae.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 582 (4th ed. 1894).

SPERATE

sperate (speer-<<schwa>>t), adj. Archaic. (Of a debt) recoverable; not hopeless. • In determining whether a debt could be collected, consideration was formerly given to whether the debt was desperate or sperate.

SPES ACCRESCENDI

spes accrescendi (speez ak-r<<schwa>>-sen-dI). [Latin “hope of accrual”] Hope of acquiring an extra share of a legacy or inheritance by survival.

SPES OBLIGATIONIS

spes obligationis (speez ob-li-gay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Hist. The hope of an obligation yet to emerge.

SPES RECUPERANDI

spes recuperandi (speez ri-k[y]oo-p<<schwa>>-ran-dI). [Latin “hope of recovery”] Hope of recovering a prize, as from a captured vessel.

SPES SUCCESSIONIS

spes successionis (speez s<<schwa>>k-sesh-ee-oh-nis). [Latin “hope of succession”] Hope of succeeding to a right.

“A mere spes successionis must be distinguished from a contingent right. If Matilda has nursed her invalid friend for thirty years, she may have every hope of succeeding to the property, but she has no right.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 306 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

SPES SUCCESSIONIS IN DESTINATIONE spes successionis in destinatione (speez s<<schwa>>k-ses[h]-ee-oh-nis in des-ti-nay-shee-oh-nee). [Law Latin] Hist. A hope of succeeding under a destination (that is, an appointment by will).

SPES SUCCESSIONIS IN OBLIGATIONE

spes successionis in obligatione (speez s<<schwa>>k-ses[h]-ee-oh-nis in ob-li-gay-shee-oh-nee). [Law Latin] Hist. A hope of succeeding to a right under an existing obligation.

SPIELBERG DOCTRINE

Spielberg doctrine.Labor law. The policy of the National Labor Relations Board to defer to an arbitrator's decision regarding a contract dispute if (1) the decision is not repugnant to the National Labor Relations Board, (2) the arbitration proceedings provided a hearing as fair as would have been provided before the NLRB, and (3) the contract requires binding arbitration.Spielberg Mfg. Co., 112 NLRB Dec. (CCH) 86 (1955). Cf. COLLYER DOCTRINE.

“In Spielberg Mfg. Co. (1955), the Board announced its policy of dismissing an unfair labor practice complaint in deference to an arbitration award already rendered, provided the arbitral procedures were fair and the award was not repugnant to the policies of the Labor Act.... The Supreme Court in several cases cited the Board's deferral policy with approval, noting that the Board has discretion to respect an arbitration award and that arbitration of disputes contributes to industrial peace and stability.” Robert A. Gorman, Basic Text on Labor Law: Unionization and Collective Bargaining 751 (1976).

spigurnel (spig-<<schwa>>r-nel), n. Hist. An early officer of the Chancery, equivalent to the Sealer of the king's writs in later times.

SPILOVER

spillover. See EXTERNALITY.

SPILOVER THEORY

spillover theory.The principle that a severance must be granted only when a defendant can show that trial with a codefendant would substantially prejudice the defendant's case, as when the jury might wrongly use evidence against the defendant. See BRUTON ERROR. [Cases: Criminal Law 622.2(8). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 570–571.]

“The spillover theory involves the question of whether a jury's unfavorable impression of a defendant against whom the evidence is properly admitted will influence the way the jurors view a codefendant.... The test ... is whether the jury can keep separate the evidence that is relevant to each defendant and render a fair and impartial verdict.” 22A C.J.S. Criminal Law § 571, at 190–91 (1989).

SPIN-OFF

spin-off,n.1. A corporate divestiture in which a division of a corporation becomes an independent company and stock of the new company is distributed to the corporation's shareholders. [Cases: Corporations 445. C.J.S. Corporations § 656.] 2. The company created by this divestiture. Cf. SPLIT-OFF F; SPLIT-UP.

SPLIT-OFF

split-off, n. 1. The creation of a new corporation by an existing corporation that gives its shareholders stock in the new corporation in return for their stock in the original corporation. 2. The corporation created by this process. Cf. SPIN-OFF; SPLIT-UP. [Cases: Corporations 445. C.J.S. Corporations § 656.]

SPLIT ORDER

split order. See ORDER(8).

SPLIT SENTENCE

split sentence. See SENTENCE.

SPLITTING A CAUSE OF ACTION splitting a cause of action. Separating parts of a demand and pursuing it piecemeal; presenting only a part of a claim in one lawsuit, leaving the rest for a second suit. • This practice has long been considered procedurally impermissible. [Cases: Action 53; Judgment 591. C.J.S. Actions §§ 177–203; Judgments §§ 761, 764–765.]

SPLIT-UP

split-up, n. The division of a corporation into two or more new corporations. • The shareholders in the original corporation typically receive shares in the new corporations, and the original corporation goes out of business. Cf. SPIN-OFF; SPLIT-OFF.

spondet peritiam artis (spon-det p<<schwa>>-rish-ee-<<schwa>>m ahr-tis). [Latin “he guarantees his professional skill”] Hist. A personal promise to use the skill of one's art. • This phrase is used in construction contracts to indicate an implied agreement to perform in a workmanlike manner.

SPONGE TAX

sponge tax. See pickup tax under TAX.

SPONSALIA

sponsalia (spon-say-lee-⟨schwa⟩), n. [Latin] Hist. 1. A betrothal; an engagement to marry. 2. An engagement gift. — Also termed stipulatio sponsalitia.

SPONSALIA PER VERBA DE FUTURO sponsalia per verba de futuro (spon-say-lee-⟨schwa⟩ p⟨schwa⟩r v⟨schwa⟩r-b⟨schwa⟩r dee f[y]oo-t[y]oor-oh). [Latin “espousals by words about the future”] Hist. A promise to marry in the future.

“[A] promise to marry in the future (sponsalia per verba de futuro) gave rise only to an executory contract of marriage. The regular way of executing the contract was to solemnise the marriage, using present words. But the Canon law acknowledged that it could also be turned into the indissoluble bond of present matrimony by physical consummation Thus, in the absence of carnal copulation, the validity of a marriage had come to depend on whether the contract was by words de praesenti or de futuro.... It is hardly surprising that it gave rise to so much wrangling and fraud, and that the commonest species of matrimonial suit in the medieval consistory courts was to interpret and enforce ‘espousals.’” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 546 (3d ed. 1990).

SPONSALIA PER VERBA DE PRAESENTI

sponsalia per verba de praesenti (spon-say-lee-⟨schwa⟩ p⟨schwa⟩r v⟨schwa⟩r-b⟨schwa⟩r dee pri-zen-t[or]pree-). Eccles. law. A type of informal marriage that occurred when the parties made an informal agreement to have each other as husband and wife. • This type of informal marriage was based on nothing more than the present consent to be married but was entirely valid and would take precedence over a later formal ceremonial marriage that either of the parties attempted to contract with someone else.

SPONSIO

sponsio (spon-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. An undertaking, available only to citizens, in the form of an answer to a question using a solemn form of words with religious overtones. • This was the original form of stipulation. See SPONDESNE? SPONDEO; STIPULATIO.

SPONSIO JUDICIALIS

sponsio judicialis (spon-shee-oh joo-dish-ee-ay-lis). [Latin] Roman law. A formal promise that the judge is entitled to acquire by virtue of his office. Pl. sponsiones judiciales.

SQUALOR CARCERIS

squalor carceris (skway-lor kahr-s<<schwa>>r-is). [Law Latin] Scots law. The strictness of imprisonment.

“This term means merely the strictness of imprisonment which a creditor is entitled to enforce, with the view of compelling the debtor to pay the debt, or disclose any funds which he may have concealed. It does not imply (as it did with the ancient churchmen, from whom the term is derived) anything loathsome or unhealthy in the imprisonment in Scotland, which is indeed less close than in England. Squalor carceris is not necessary in imprisonment on meditatio fugae warrant, security being all that is required in such cases.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 1032 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

SQUALOR MORBI

squalor morbi (skway-lor mor-bi). [Law Latin] Hist. The dregs of disease.

SQUIRES<TT> CLAIM

Squires claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

SQUIRES<TT> DOCTRINE

Squires doctrine. Patents. A rule of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that a utility-patent claim may incorporate drawings or tables by reference, but only when there is no practical way to express the information in words, and when referring to the artwork is a concise way to communicate the information. • The namesake case involved a numerical font designed to be readable in the dim red light inside a submarine. It is allowed only when necessary, and is not available just for the convenience of an applicant. Ex parte Squires, 133 USPQ (BNA) 598 (Bd. App. 1961). See Squires claim under PATENT CLAIM. [Cases: Patents 100. C.J.S. Patents § 143.]

SS

ss. abbr. 1. Sections. 2. Subscripti (i.e., signed below). 3. Sans (i.e., without). 4. (Erroneously) scilicet.

“Many possible etymologies have been suggested for this mysterious abbreviation. One is that it signifies scilicet (= namely, to wit), which is usually abbreviated sc. or scil. Another is that ss. represents ‘[t]he two gold letters at the ends of the chain of office or “collar” worn by the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench’ Max Radin, Law Dictionary 327 (1955). Mellinkoff suggests that the precise etymology is unknown: ‘Lawyers have been using ss for nine hundred years and still are not sure what it means.’ David Mellinkoff, The Language of the Law 296 (1963). In fact, though, it is a flourish deriving from the Year Books — an equivalent of the paragraph mark: ‘¶.’ Hence Lord Hardwicke's statement that ss. is nothing more than a division mark. See Jodderrell v. Cowell, 95 Eng. Rep. 222, 222 (K.B. 1737).... An early formbook writer incorporated it into his forms, and ever since it has been mindlessly perpetuated by one generation after another.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 825 (2d ed. 1995).

STANDING

standing,n. A party's right to make a legal claim or seek judicial enforcement of a duty or right. • To have standing in federal court, a plaintiff must show (1) that the challenged conduct has caused the plaintiff actual injury, and (2) that the interest sought to be protected is within the zone of interests meant to be regulated by the statutory or constitutional guarantee in question. — Also termed standing to sue. Cf. JUSTICIABILITY. [Cases: Action 13; Federal Civil Procedure 103.1. C.J.S. Actions §§ 57–63.]

“Have the appellants alleged such a personal stake in the outcome of the controversy as to assure that concrete adverseness which sharpens the presentation of issues upon which the court so largely depends for illumination of difficult constitutional questions? This is the gist of the question of standing.” Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 204, 82 S.Ct. 691, 703 (1962)(Brennan, J.).

“The word standing is rather recent in the basic judicial vocabulary and does not appear to have been commonly used until the middle of our own century. No authority that I have found introduces the term with proper explanations and apologies and announces that henceforth standing should be used to describe who may be heard by a judge. Nor was there any sudden adoption by tacit consent. The word appears here and there, spreading very gradually with no discernible pattern. Judges and lawyers found themselves using the term and did not ask why they did so or where it came from.” Joseph Vining, Legal Identity 55 (1978).

third-party standing. Standing held by someone claiming to protect the rights of others. • For example, in most jurisdictions, only a parent has standing to bring a suit for custody or visitation; in some, however, a third party — for instance, a grandparent or a person with whom the child has substantial contacts — may have standing to bring an action for custody or visitation. See GRANDPARENT RIGHTS. [Cases: Action 13; Federal Civil Procedure 103.4. C.J.S. Actions §§ 57–63.]

STANDING ASIDE A JUROR

standing aside a juror. The prosecution practice of provisionally placing a juror aside until the panel is exhausted, without providing a reason, instead of challenging the juror or showing cause. • The practice originally developed as a method of avoiding the Challenge of Jurors Act (1305), which prohibited the Crown from challenging a juror without showing cause. A similar practice was formerly used in Pennsylvania. [Cases: Jury 122. C.J.S. Juries § 368.]

STANDING BY

standing by. 1. The awaiting of an opportunity to respond, as with assistance. 2. Silence or inaction when there is a duty to speak or act; esp., the tacit possession of knowledge under circumstances requiring the possessor to reveal the knowledge. See estoppel by silence under ESTOPPEL.

STANDING COMMITTEE

standing committee. See COMMITTEE.

STANDING COMMITTEE ON RULES OF PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE

Standing Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure. A group of judges, lawyers, and legal scholars appointed by the Chief Justice of the United States to advise the Judicial Conference of the United States on possible amendments to the procedural rules in the various federal courts and on other issues relating to the operation of the federal courts. 28 USCA § 331.

“[Under 28 USCA § 331], the Judicial Conference of the United States has created a Standing Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure and has authorized the appointment from time to time of various advisory committees. These committees make recommendations regarding amendments of the rules to the Judicial Conference, which in turn transmits those recommendations it approves to the Supreme Court. Under this new plan, as under the machinery in effect from 1934 to 1956, the Court retains the ultimate responsibility for the adoption of amendments to the rules.” 4 Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1007, at 35 (2d ed. 1987).

A town appointed by the Crown as an exclusive market for staple products. See STATUTE STAPLE. 3. Patents. An unpatented thing or material that is a component of a patented product or is used in a patented process, but also has other practical uses. • Patentees may not gain control of the market for staples through tying agreements. Cf. NONSTAPLE.

STAR CHAMBER

Star Chamber. 1. Hist. An English court having broad civil and criminal jurisdiction at the king's discretion and noted for its secretive, arbitrary, and oppressive procedures, including compulsory self-incrimination, inquisitorial investigation, and the absence of juries. • The Star Chamber was abolished in 1641 because of its abuses of power. — Also termed Court of Star Chamber; Camera Stellata. 2. (usu. l.c.) Any secretive, arbitrary, or oppressive tribunal or proceeding.

STARE DECISIS

stare decisis (stahr-ee di-si-sis or stair-ee), n. [Latin “to stand by things decided”] The doctrine of precedent, under which it is necessary for a court to follow earlier judicial decisions when the same points arise again in litigation. See PRECEDENT; NON QUIETA MOVERE. Cf. RES JUDICATA; LAW OF THE CASE ; (in civil law) jurisprudence constante under JURISPRUDENCE. [Cases: Courts 89. C.J.S. Courts §§ 139–140, 144–146, 161–164, 166–167.]

“The rule of adherence to judicial precedents finds its expression in the doctrine of stare decisis. This doctrine is simply that, when a point or principle of law has been once officially decided or settled by the ruling of a competent court in a case in which it is directly and necessarily involved, it will no longer be considered as open to examination or to a new ruling by the same tribunal, or by those which are bound to follow its adjudications, unless it be for urgent reasons and in exceptional cases.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 321 (3d ed. 1914).

“The general orthodox interpretation of stare decisis... is stare rationibus decidendis (‘keep to the rationes decidendi of past cases’), but a narrower and more literal interpretation is sometimes employed. To appreciate this narrower interpretation it is necessary to refer ... to Lord Halsbury’s assertion that a case is only authority for what it actually decides. We saw that situations can arise in which all that is binding is the decision. According to Lord Reid, such a situation arises when the ratio decidendi of a previous case is obscure, out of accord with authority or established principle, or too broadly expressed.” Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 100–01 (4th ed. 1991).

STARE DECISIS ET NON QUIETA MOVERE stare decisis et non quieta movere (stair-ee di-si-sis et non kwI-ee-t<<schwa>>moh-veer-ee). [Latin] To stand by things decided, and not to disturb settled points. See STARE DECISIS.

STARE ENIM RELIGIONI DEBET stare enim religioni debet (stair-ee ee-nim ri-lij-ee-oh-nee dee-bet ordeb-et). [Latin] Hist. For one ought to abide by one's solemn obligation.

STARE IN JUDICIO

stare in judicio (stair-ee in joo-dish-ee-oh). [Latin] Hist. To appear before a tribunal as either a plaintiff or a defendant.

STAR PAGING

star paging, n.1. A method of referring to a page in an earlier edition of a book, esp. a legal source. • This method correlates the pagination of the later edition with that of the earlier (usu. the first) edition. 2. By extension, the method of displaying on a computer screen the page breaks that occur in printed documents such as law reports and law reviews. — Also termed star pagination. — star page, n.

STARR

starr (stahr), n.[fr. Latin starrum fr. Hebrew sh'tar “a writing”] Hist. A Jewish contract (esp. for release of an obligation) that Richard I declared to be invalid unless it was placed in a lawful repository, the largest being in the king's Exchequer at Westminster. Pl. starra, starrs.

“It is well known that, before the banishment of the Jews under Edward I, their contracts and obligations were denominated in our ancient records starra or starrs, from a corruption of the Hebrew word, shetâr, a covenant.... These starrs, by an ordinance of Richard the first ... were commanded to be enrolled and deposited in chests under three keys in certain places; one, and the most considerable, of which was in the king's exchequer at Westminster [T]he room at the exchequer, where the chests containing these starrs were kept, was probably called the starr-chamber, and, when the Jews were expelled [from] the kingdom, was applied to the use of the king's council, when sitting in their judicial capacity." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 263 n.a (1769).

STATE

state,n.1. The political system of a body of people who are politically organized; the system of rules by which jurisdiction and authority are exercised over such a body of people <separation of church and state>. — Also termed political society. Cf. NATION. [Cases: International Law 3. C.J.S. International Law §§ 6–8, 13.]

“A STATE is a community of persons living within certain limits of territory, under a permanent organization which aims to secure the prevalence of justice by self-imposed law. The organ of the state by which its relations with other states are managed is the government.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 36, at 34 (5th ed. 1878).

“A state or political society is an association of human beings established for the attainment of certain ends by certain means. It is the most important of all the various kinds of society in which men unite, being indeed the necessary basis and condition of peace, order, and civilisation. What then is the difference between this and other forms of association? In what does the state differ from such other societies as a church, a university, a joint-stock company, or a trade union? The difference is clearly one of function. The state must be defined by reference to such of its activities and purposes as are essential and characteristic.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 129 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“A state is an institution, that is to say, it is a system of relations which men establish among themselves as a means of securing certain objects, of which the most fundamental is a system of order within which their activities can be carried on. Modern states are territorial; their governments exercise control over persons and things within their frontiers, and today the whole of the habitable world is divided between about seventy of these territorial states. A state should not be confused with the whole community of persons living on its territory; it is only one among a multitude of other institutions, such as churches and corporations, which a community establishes for securing different objects, though obviously it is one of tremendous importance; none the less it is not, except in the ideology of totalitarianism, an all-embracing institution, not something from which, or within which, all other institutions and associations have their being; many institutions, e.g. the Roman Catholic Church, and many associations, e.g. federations of employers and of workers, transcend the boundaries of any single state.” J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 118 (5th ed. 1955).

client state.A country that is obliged in some degree to share in the control of its external relations with some foreign power or powers. — Also termed satellite state. Cf. SOVEREIGN STATE.

composite state.A state that comprises an aggregate or group of constituent states.

dependent state.See nonsovereign state.

federal state.A composite state in which the sovereignty of the entire state is divided between the central or federal government and the local governments of the several constituent states; a union of states in which the control of the external relations of all the member states has been surrendered to a central government so that the only state that exists for international purposes is the one formed by the union. Cf. confederation of states under CONFEDERATION.

imperial state.Archaic. A composite state in which a common or central government possesses in itself the entire sovereignty, so that the constituent states possess no portion of this sovereignty.

nonsovereign state.A state that is a constituent part of a greater state that includes both it and one or more others, and to whose government it is subject; a state that is not complete and self-existent. • Among other things, a nonsovereign state has no power to engage in foreign relations. — Also termed dependent state. Cf. SOVEREIGN STATE.

part-sovereign state.See SOVEREIGN STATE.

police state.A state in which the political, economic, and social life of its citizens is subject to repressive governmental control and arbitrary uses of power by the ruling elite, which uses the police as the instrument of control; a totalitarian state.

receiving state.The country to which a diplomatic agent or consul is sent by the country represented by that agent. Cf. sending state. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls 3. C.J.S. Ambassadors and Consuls §§ 15–23.]

satellite state.See client state.

sending state.The country from which a diplomatic agent or consul is sent abroad. Cf. receiving state. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls 3. C.J.S. Ambassadors and Consuls §§ 15–23.]

simple state.See unitary state.

social-service state.A state that uses its power to create laws and regulations to provide for the welfare of its citizens.

sovereign state.See SOVEREIGN STATE.

unitary state.A state that is not made up of territorial divisions that are states themselves. — Also termed (archaically) simple state.

2. An institution of self-government within a larger political entity; esp., one of the constituent parts of a nation having a federal government <the 50 states>. [Cases: States 1. C.J.S. States §§ 2, 16.] 3. (often cap.) The people of a state, collectively considered as the party wronged by a criminal deed; esp., the prosecution as the representative of the people <the State rests its case>.

STATE ACTION

state action. Anything done by a government; esp., in constitutional law, an intrusion on a person's rights (esp. civil rights) either by a governmental entity or by a private requirement that can be enforced only by governmental action (such as a racially restrictive covenant, which requires judicial action for enforcement). [Cases: Civil Rights 1325; Constitutional Law 82(5), 213(2), 254(2). C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 92–94; Constitutional Law §§ 456, 619, 629, 631, 704, 708.]

STATE-ACTION DOCTRINE

state-action doctrine. Antitrust. The principle that the antitrust laws do not prohibit a state's anticompetitive acts, or official acts directed by a state. Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341, 63 S.Ct. 307 (1943). — Also termed Parker doctrine. See MIDCAL TEST. [Cases: Monopolies 12(15.6). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 136, 143.]

STATE JUSTICE INSTITUTE

State Justice Institute. A nonprofit federal corporation charged with improving judicial administration in state courts. • It was created by the State Justice Institute Act of 1984. — Abbr. SJI.

STATE LAW

state law.A body of law in a particular state consisting of the state's constitution, statutes, regulations, and common law. Cf. FEDERAL LAW.

STATELESS PERSON

stateless person.Int'l law. A natural person who is not considered a national by any country. • The Stateless Persons Convention (1954) provides these people with certain protections and obliges them to abide by the laws of the country where they reside.

STATEMENT

statement. 1.Evidence. A verbal assertion or nonverbal conduct intended as an assertion. [Cases: Evidence 267. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 259, 285, 311–313, 326, 333–336, 343.] 2. A formal and exact presentation of facts. — Also termed (for plaintiff) statement of cause of action. 3.Criminal procedure. An account of a person's (usu. a suspect's) knowledge of a crime, taken by the police pursuant to their investigation of the offense. Cf. CONFESSION.

consonant statement.A prior declaration of a witness, testified to by a person to whom the declaration was made and allowed into evidence only after the witness's testimony has been impeached. • This type of evidence would, but for the impeachment of the witness, be inadmissible hearsay. [Cases: Witnesses 414(2). C.J.S. Witnesses § 781.]

false statement. 1. An untrue statement knowingly made with the intent to mislead. See PERJURY. 2. Any one of three distinct federal offenses: (1) falsifying or concealing a material fact by trick, scheme, or device; (2) making a false, fictitious, or fraudulent representation; and (3) making or using a false document or writing. 18 USCA § 1001. [Cases: Fraud 68.10(1).]

financial statement.See FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

incriminating statement.A statement that tends to establish the guilt of someone, esp. the person making it.

prior consistent statement.A witness's earlier statement that conflicts with the witness's testimony at trial. • In federal practice, extrinsic evidence of an unsworn prior inconsistent statement is admissible — if the witness is given an opportunity to explain or deny the statement — for impeachment purposes only. Fed. R. Evid. 613(b). Sworn statements may be admitted for all purposes. Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(A). A prior consistent statement is not hearsay if it is offered to rebut a charge that the testimony was improperly influenced or fabricated. Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(B). [Cases: Witnesses 379–397; 414(2). C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 674–754; 781.]

sworn statement. 1. A statement given under oath; an affidavit. [Cases: Affidavits 1. C.J.S. Affidavits §§ 2–6.] 2. A contractor-builder's listing of suppliers and subcontractors, and their respective bids, required by a lending institution for interim financing.

voluntary statement. A statement made without the influence of duress, coercion, or inducement.

STATEMENT AND ACCOUNT CLAUSE

Statement and Account Clause. The clause of the U.S. Constitution requiring the regular publication of the receipts and expenditures of the federal government. U.S. Const. art. I, § 9, cl. 7. [Cases: United States 44. C.J.S. United States § 78.]

STATEMENT OF ACCOUNT

statement of account. 1. A report issued periodically (usu. monthly) by a bank to a customer, providing certain information on the customer's account, including the checks drawn and cleared, deposits made, charges debited, and the account balance. — Also termed bank statement. See ACCOUNT(4). [Cases: Banks and Banking 151. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 266–268, 277–278.] 2. A report issued periodically (usu. monthly) by a creditor to a customer, providing certain information on the customer's account, including the amounts billed, credits given, and the balance due. — Also termed account statement.

STATEMENT OF AFFAIRS

statement of affairs. 1. STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL AFFAIRS. 2. A balance sheet showing immediate liquidation values (rather than historical costs), usu. prepared when insolvency is imminent.

STATEMENT OF CAUSE OF ACTION

statement of cause of action. See STATEMENT(2).

STATEMENT OF CLAIM

statement of claim. 1. COMPLAINT(1). 2. English law. A plaintiff's initial pleading in a civil case; DECLARATION(7).

STATEMENT OF CONDITION

statement of condition. See BALANCE SHEET.

STATEMENT OF CONFESSION

statement of confession. See CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT.

STATEMENT OF DEFENSE

statement of defense. The assertions by a defendant; esp., in England, the defendant's answer to the plaintiff's statement of claim.

STATEMENT OF FACT

statement of fact. A form of conduct that asserts or implies the existence or nonexistence of a fact. • The term includes not just a particular statement that a particular fact exists or has existed, but also an assertion that, although perhaps expressed as an opinion, implies the existence of some fact or facts that have led the assertor to hold the opinion in question. See affirmative testimony under TESTIMONY.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

statement of facts.A party's written presentation of the facts leading up to or surrounding a legal dispute, usu. recited toward the beginning of a brief.

“The statement of facts is another of those critical parts of the brief Two principles are at war in drafting the statement of facts. First, judges want and some circuit rules require a nonargumentative, ‘fair summary without argument or comment.’ Conversely, you want a statement of facts that persuades the judges to rule for you as soon as they finish reading it. Satisfying both ends requires some balancing.” David G. Knibb, Federal Court of Appeals Manual § 31.7, at 549 (4th ed. 2000).

agreed statement of facts.A narrative statement of facts that is stipulated to be correct by the parties and is submitted to a tribunal for a ruling. • When the narrative statement is filed on appeal instead of a report of the trial proceedings, it is called an agreed statement on appeal. — Also termed agreed case. [Cases: Appeal and Error 845(2); Stipulations 14(10), 18(7). C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 707, 709; Stipulations §§ 92–98.]

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL AFFAIRS

statement of financial affairs.Bankruptcy. A document that an individual or corporate debtor must file to answer questions about its past and present financial status, including any previous bankruptcy, the location of any current accounts, and its recent or current debt. — Also termed statement of affairs. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2321. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 44.]

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL CONDITION

statement of financial condition.See BALANCE SHEET.

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL POSITION statement of financial position.See BALANCE SHEET.

STATEMENT OF INCOME statement of income.See INCOME STATEMENT.

STATEMENT OF INTENTION

statement of intention.Bankruptcy. A preliminary statement filed by the debtor in a Chapter 7 case, in which the debtor details whether property secured by consumer debt will be retained or surrendered and whether the property is claimed as exempt. • The statement usu. must be filed before the first creditors' meeting or within 30 days from the petition-filing date, whichever is earlier. 11 USCA § 521. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2851, 3022, 3034, 3415.1. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 111–112, 191, 246–247.]

STATEMENT OF PARTICULARS statement of particulars.See BILL OF PARTICULARS.

STATEMENT OF PRINCIPLE

statement of principle.In legislative drafting, a sentence or paragraph that explains the legislature's purpose in passing a statute. • Although a statement of principle often resembles a preamble (usu. both do not appear in a single statute), it differs in that it typically appears in a numbered section of the statute.

STATEMENT OF PRIOR-ART REFERENCES statement of prior-art references.See INFORMATION-DISCLOSURE STATEMENT.

STATEMENT OF USE

statement of use.See amendment to allege use under TRADEMARK-APPLICATION AMENDMENT .

STATEMENT OF UTILITY

statement of utility.Patents. The portion of a patent-application disclosure statement that explains how the invention is useful. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

STATEMENT OF WORK

statement of work.A contractual provision or exhibit that defines what one party (e.g., the seller) is going to do for the other (e.g., the buyer). • The statement of work often covers such terms as (1) inspection and acceptance, (2) quality-assurance requirements, (3) packing and marking, (4) data requirements, and (5) training. There are generally two types of specifications in a statement of work: a performance specification establishing the minimum requirements for items to be supplied, and a design specification establishing the methods to be used in meeting those minimum requirements. — Also termed statement-of-work clause. — Abbr. SOW.

STATE OF ART

state of art. See STATE OF THE ART.

STATE OFFICER

state officer.See OFFICER(1).

STATE OF MIND

state of mind. 1. The condition or capacity of a person's mind; MENS REA. 2. Loosely, a person's reasons or motives for committing an act, esp. a criminal act.

STATE-OF-MIND EXCEPTION

state-of-mind exception.Evidence. The principle that an out-of-court declaration of an existing motive is admissible, even when the declarant cannot testify in person. • This principle constitutes an exception to the general rule that hearsay is inadmissible. [Cases: Criminal Law 419(2.20); Evidence 268. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 862; Evidence §§ 314–318, 325, 327–328, state of nature. The lack of a politically organized society. • The term is a fictional construct for the period in human history predating any type of political society.

330.]

STATE OF NATURE

“[W]e may make use of the contrast, familiar to the philosophy of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, between the civil state and the state of nature. This state of nature is now commonly rejected as one of the fictions which flourished in the era of the social contract, but such treatment is needlessly severe. The term certainly became associated with much false or exaggerated doctrine touching the golden age, on the one hand, and the bellum omnium contra omnes of Hobbes, on the other, but in itself it nevertheless affords a convenient mode for the expression of an undoubted truth. As long as there have been men, there has probably been some form of human society. The state of nature, therefore, is not the absence of society, but the absence of a society so organized on the basis of physical force as to constitute a state. Though human society is coeval with mankind, the rise of political society, properly so called, is an event in human history.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 103–04 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

STATE OF THE ART

state of the art. Products liability. The level of pertinent scientific and technical knowledge existing at the time of a product's manufacture, and the best technology reasonably available at the time the product was sold. — Also termed state of art. [Cases: Products Liability 11. C.J.S. Products Liability §§ 19–21.] — state-of-the-art, adj.

“While the statutes in effect in some jurisdictions speak in terms of a state of the art defense, statutes in other jurisdictions provide that state of the art evidence is admissible or may be considered by the trier of fact by statute, and that in determining whether a product was in a defective condition or unreasonably dangerous at the time it left the control of the manufacturer or seller, consideration is given to the state of scientific and technical knowledge available to the manufacturer or seller at the time the product was placed on the market, and to the customary designs, methods, standards, and techniques of manufacturing, inspecting, and testing used by other manufacturers or sellers of similar products.” 63A Am. Jur. 2d Products Liability § 1319, at 472 (1997).

STATE OF THE CASE

state of the case. The posture of litigation as it develops, as in discovery, at trial, or on appeal.

STATISTICAL-DECISION THEORY

statistical-decision theory.A method for determining whether a panel of potential jurors was selected from a fair cross section of the community, by calculating the probabilities of selecting a certain number of jurors from a particular group to analyze whether it is statistically probable that the jury pool was selected by mere chance. • This method has been criticized because a pool of potential jurors is not ordinarily selected by mere chance; potential jurors are disqualified for a number of legitimate reasons. See FAIR-CROSS-SECTION REQUIREMENT; ABSOLUTE DISPARITY; COMPARATIVE DISPARITY; DUREN TEST. [Cases: Jury 33(1.1, 1.2).C.J.S. Juries §§ 269–274, 277, 279, 292, 299, 303, 306, 445.]

STATULIBER

statuliber (stach-<<schwa>>-ll-b<<schwa>>r), n.[Latin] Roman law. A person whose freedom under a will is made conditional or postponed; a person who will be free at a particular time or when certain conditions are met. — Also written statu liber (stay-t[y]oo II-b<<schwa>>r).

“The statuliber is one who has freedom arranged to take effect on completion of a period or fulfillment of a condition. Men become statuliberi as a result of an express condition, or by the very nature of the case. The meaning of ‘express condition’ presents no problem. The status arises from the very nature of the case when men are manumitted for the purpose of defrauding a creditor; for so long as it is uncertain whether the creditor will use his right, the men remain statuliberi, since fraud is taken in the lex Aelia Sentia to involve actual damage.” Digest of Justinian 40.7.1 (Paul, ad Sabinum 5).

STATUS

status. 1. A person's legal condition, whether personal or proprietary; the sum total of a person's legal rights, duties, liabilities, and other legal relations, or any particular group of them separately considered <the status of a landowner>. 2. A person's legal condition regarding personal rights but excluding proprietary relations <the status of a father> <the status of a wife>. 3. A person's capacities and incapacities, as opposed to other elements of personal status <the status of minors>. 4. A person's legal condition insofar as it is imposed by the law without the person's consent, as opposed to a condition that the person has acquired by agreement <the status of a slave>.

“By the status (or standing) of a person is meant the position that he holds with reference to the rights which are recognized and maintained by the law — in other words, his capacity for the exercise and enjoyment of legal rights.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 106 (1881).

“The word ‘status’ itself originally signified nothing more than the position of a person before the law. Therefore, every person (except slaves, who were not regarded as persons, for legal purposes) had a status. But, as a result of the modern tendency towards legal equality formerly noticed, differences of status became less and less frequent, and the importance of the subject has greatly diminished, with the result that the term status is now used, at any rate in English Law, in connection only with those comparatively few classes of persons in the community who, by reason of their conspicuous differences from normal persons, and the fact that by no decision of their own can they get rid of these differences, require separate consideration in an account of the law. But professional or even political differences do not amount to status; thus peers, physicians, clergymen of the established Church, and many other classes of persons, are not regarded as the subjects of status, because the legal differences which distinguish them from other persons, though substantial, are not enough to make them legally abnormal. And landowners, merchants, manufacturers, and wage-earners are not subjects of the Law of Status, though the last-named are, as the result of recent legislation, tending to approach that position.” Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 109 (P.B. Fairsted ed., 6th ed. 1967).

statutable (stach-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. 1. Prescribed or authorized by statute. 2. Conformed to the legislative requirements for quality, size, amount, or the like. 3. (Of an offense) punishable by law. See STATUTORY.

STATUTE

statute. A law passed by a legislative body; specif., legislation enacted by any lawmaking body, including legislatures, administrative boards, and municipal courts. • The term act is interchangeable as a synonym. For each of the subentries listed below, act is sometimes substituted for statute. — Abbr. s.; stat. [Cases: Statutes 2. C.J.S. Statutes § 2–3.]

“[W]e are not justified in limiting the statutory law to those rules only which are promulgated by what we commonly call ‘legislatures.’ Any positive enactment to which the state gives the force of a law is a ‘statute,’ whether it has gone through the usual stages of legislative proceedings, or has been adopted in other modes of expressing the will of the people or other sovereign power of the state. In an absolute monarchy, an edict of the ruling sovereign is statutory law. Constitutions, being direct legislation by the people, must be included in the statutory law, and indeed they are examples of the highest form that the statute law can assume. Generally speaking, treaties also are statutory law, because in this country, under the provisions of the United States Constitution, treaties have not the force of law until so declared by the representatives of the people.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 8 (3d ed. 1914).

affirmative statute.A law requiring that something be done; one that directs the doing of an act. Cf. negative statute.

antideficiency statute.See antideficiency legislation under LEGISLATION.

codifying statute.A law that purports to be exhaustive in restating the whole of the law on a particular topic, including prior caselaw as well as legislative provisions. • Courts generally presume that a codifying statute supersedes prior caselaw. Cf. consolidating statute.

compiled statutes.Laws that have been arranged by subject but have not been substantively changed; COMPILATION(2). Cf. revised statutes.

“The term ‘compiled statutes’ is properly applied to a methodical arrangement, without revision or reenactment, of the existing statutes of a State, all the statutes on a given subject being collected in one place. The work is usually performed by private persons; and the former statutes, as they were before the compilation, remain the authority.” Frank Hall Childs, Where and How to Find the Law 12 (1922).

consolidating statute.A law that collects the legislative provisions on a particular subject and embodies them in a single statute, often with minor amendments and drafting improvements. • Courts generally presume that a consolidating statute leaves prior caselaw intact. Cf. codifying statute.

“A distinction of greater importance in this field is that between consolidating and codifying statutes. A consolidating statute is one which collects the statutory provisions relating to a particular topic, and embodies them in a single Act of Parliament, making only minor amendments and improvements. A codifying statute is one which purports to state exhaustively the whole of the law on a particular subject (the common law as well as previous statutory provisions).... The importance of the distinction lies in the courts’ treatment of the previous case law, the existence of special procedural provisions with regard to consolidating statutes and the existence of a presumption that they do not change the law.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 5 (1976).

construction statute.A legislative directive included in a statute, intended to guide or direct a court’s interpretation of the statute. • A construction act can, for example, be a simple statement such as “The word ‘week’ means seven consecutive days” or a broader directive such as “Words and phrases are to be read in context and construed according to the rules of grammar and common usage. Words and phrases that have acquired a technical or particular meaning, whether by legislative definition or otherwise, are to be construed accordingly." [Cases: Statutes 179. C.J.S. Statutes § 309.]

criminal statute. A law that defines, classifies, and sets forth punishment for one or more specific crimes. See PENAL CODE. [Cases: Statutes 241. C.J.S. Statutes § 378.]

curative statute. 1. An act that corrects an error in a statute's original enactment, usu. an error that interferes with interpreting or applying the statute. 2. See remedial statute.

declaratory statute. A law enacted to clarify prior law by reconciling conflicting judicial decisions or by explaining the meaning of a prior statute. — Also termed expository statute.

directory statute. A law that indicates only what should be done, with no provision for enforcement. Cf. mandatory statute. [Cases: Statutes 227. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 362–369.]

disabling statute. A law that limits or curbs certain rights.

enabling statute. A law that permits what was previously prohibited or that creates new powers; esp., a congressional statute conferring powers on an executive agency to carry out various delegated tasks. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 305. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 49–54, 57–58, 64.]

expository statute. See declaratory statute.

general statute. A law pertaining to an entire community or all persons generally. — Also termed public statute. See PUBLIC LAW(2). [Cases: Statutes 68. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 154–161.]

imperfect statute. A law that prohibits, but does not render void, an objectionable transaction. • Such a statute provides a penalty for disobedience without depriving the violative transaction of its legal effect.

local statute. 1. LOCAL LAW(1). 2. LOCAL LAW(2).

mandatory statute. A law that requires a course of action as opposed to merely permitting it. Cf. directory statute. [Cases: Statutes 227. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 362–369.]

negative statute. A law prohibiting something; a law expressed in negative terms. Cf. affirmative statute.

nonclaim statute. 1. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. 2. A law that sets a time limit for creditors to bring claims against a decedent's estate. • Unlike a statute of limitations, a nonclaim statute is usu. not subject to tolling and is not waivable. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 223, 225. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 425, 434–436.]

organic statute. A law that establishes an administrative agency or local government. Cf. ORGANIC LAW.

penal statute. A law that defines an offense and prescribes its corresponding fine, penalty, or punishment. — Also termed penal law; punitive statute. [Cases: Statutes 241. C.J.S. Statutes § 378.]

“It is a familiar and well-settled rule that penal statutes are to be construed strictly, and not extended by implications, intendments, analogies, or equitable considerations. Thus, an offense cannot be created or inferred by vague implications. And a court cannot create a penalty by construction, but must avoid it by construction unless it is brought within the letter and the necessary meaning of the act creating it.” Henry Campbell Black, Handbook on the Construction and Interpretation of the Laws 287 (1896).

permanent statute. See perpetual statute.

permissive statute. A statute that allows certain acts but does not command them. • A permissive statute creates a license or privilege, or allows discretion in performing an act.

perpetual statute. A law containing no provision for repeal, abrogation, or expiration. — Also termed permanent statute.

personal statute. Civil law. A law that primarily affects a person's condition or status (such as a statute relating to capacity or majority) and affects property only incidentally.

preceptive statute. A statute that is prescriptive, general, definite, and complete. • In form, a preceptive statute is similar to a rule.

private statute. See special statute.

prohibitive statute. A statute that forbids all acts that disturb society's peace or forbids certain acts on other grounds. • An example of a noncriminal prohibitive statute is one forbidding the execution of a mentally retarded criminal because a person who lacks mental capacity cannot understand the reason for the punishment.

prospective statute. A law that applies to future events.

public statute. See PUBLIC LAW(2).

punitive statute. See penal statute.

real statute. Civil law. A law primarily affecting the operation, status, and condition of property, and addressing persons only incidentally.

recording statute. See RECORDING ACT.

reference statute. A law that incorporates and adopts by reference provisions of other laws. [Cases: Statutes 51. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 66–67.]

remedial statute. A law that affords a remedy. — Also termed curative statute. [Cases: Statutes 236, 264. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 377, 417.]

repealing statute. A statute that revokes, and sometimes replaces, an earlier statute. • A repealing statute may work expressly or by implication.

restraining statute. See disabling statute.

retroactive statute. See RETROACTIVE LAW.

retrospective statute. See RETROACTIVE LAW.

revised statutes. Laws that have been collected, arranged, and reenacted as a whole by a legislative body. — Abbr. Rev. Stat.; R.S. See CODE(1). Cf. compiled statutes. [Cases: Statutes 144–148, 231. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 266–275, 374–375.]

revival statute. A law that provides for the renewal of actions, of wills, and of the legal effect of documents.

severable statute. A law that remains operative in its remaining provisions even if a portion of the law is declared unconstitutional. [Cases: Statutes 64. C.J.S. Statutes § 83.]

speaking statute. A statute to be interpreted in light of the understanding of its terms prevailing at the time of interpretation.

special statute. A law that applies only to specific individuals, as opposed to everyone. — Also termed private statute; special act. [Cases: Statutes 77–104. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 148–149, 154–155, 159, 162–201.]

“It is ancient wisdom, tracing back at least as far as the Roman taboo against the privilegium, that laws ought to be general, they ought to be addressed, not to particular persons, but to persons generally or to classes of persons (say, ‘all householders’). Accordingly, a number of American states have inserted in their constitutions prohibitions against ‘private or special’ statutes. These have given rise to endless difficulties.” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 102–03 (1968).

split-level statute. A law that includes officially promulgated explanatory materials in addition to its substantive provisions, so that courts are left with two levels of documents to construe.

statute of descent and distribution. See STATUTE OF DISTRIBUTION.

statute of distribution. See STATUTE OF DISTRIBUTION.

statute of frauds. See STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

temporary statute. 1. A law that specifically provides that it is to remain in effect for a fixed, limited period. [Cases: Statutes 172. C.J.S. Statutes § 303.] 2. A law (such as an appropriation statute) that, by its nature, has only a single and temporary operation.

uniform statute. A law drafted with the intention that it will be adopted by all or most of the states; esp., UNIFORM LAW. Cf. MODEL ACT. [Cases: Statutes 226. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 358–361.]

validating statute. A law that is amended either to remove errors or to add provisions to conform to constitutional requirements. — Also termed validation statute. [Cases: Statutes 236. C.J.S. Statutes § 377.]

STATUTE BOOK

statute book. A bound collection of statutes, usu. as part of a larger set of books containing a complete body of statutory law, such as the United States Code Annotated.

STATUTE FAIR

statute fair. Hist. A fair during which the fixed labor rates are announced and laborers of both sexes offer themselves for hire. — Also termed mop.

STATUTE LAW

statute law. See STATUTORY LAW.

STATUTE-MAKING

statute-making. See LEGISLATION(1).

STATUTE MERCHANT

statute merchant. Hist. 1. (cap.) One of two 13th-century statutes establishing procedures to better secure and recover debts by, among other things, providing for a commercial bond that, if not timely paid, resulted in swift execution on the lands, goods, and body of the debtor. 13 Edw., ch. 6 (1283); 15 Edw., ch. 6 (1285). • These statutes were repealed in 1863. — Also termed pocket judgment. 2. The commercial bond so established. Cf. STATUTE STAPLE.

“It is not a little remarkable that our common law knew no process whereby a man could pledge his body or liberty for payment of a debt Under Edward I, the tide turned. In the interest of commerce a new form of security, the so-called ‘statute merchant,’ was invented, which gave the creditor power to demand the seizure and imprisonment of his debtor's body.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 596–97 (2d ed. 1899).

STATUTE MILE

statute mile. See MILE(1).

STATUTE OF ACCUMULATIONS

Statute of Accumulations. Hist. A statute forbidding the accumulation, beyond a certain period, of property settled by deed or will. 39 & 40 Geo. 3, ch. 98 (1800).

STATUTE OF ALLEGIANCE DE FACTO

Statute of Allegiance de Facto. Hist. A statute requiring subjects to give allegiance to the actual (de facto) king, and protecting them in so doing. 11 Hen. 7, ch. 1.

STATUTE OF AMENDMENTS AND JEOFAILS

Statute of Amendments and Jeofails (jef-aylz). Hist. One of several 15th- and 16th-century statutes allowing a party who acknowledges a pleading error to correct it. 1 Hen. 5, ch. 5 (1413); 32 Hen. 8, ch. 30 (1540); 37 Hen. 8, ch. 6 (1545). See JEOFAIL.

STATUTE OF ANNE

Statute of Anne.Hist. 1.The Copyright Act of 1709, which first granted copyright protection to book authors. 8 Anne, ch. 19 (1709).2. The statute that modernized the English bankruptcy system and first introduced the discharge of the debtor's existing debts. 4 Anne, ch. 17 (1705).

STATUTE OF BREAD AND ALE statute of bread and ale.See ASSISA PANIS ET CEREVISIAE.

STATUTE OF DISTRIBUTION statute of distribution.A state law regulating the distribution of an estate among an intestate's heirs and relatives. • Historically, the statute specified separate, and often different, patterns for distributing an intestate's real property and personal property. Generally, land descended to the heirs and personalty descended to the next of kin. — Also termed statute of descent and distribution. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 1–43.C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 71, 84; Descent and Distribution §§ 1–49; Right of Privacy and Publicity § 42.]

STATUTE OF ELIZABETH

Statute of Elizabeth.Hist. The Bankrupts Act of 1705, which contained provisions against conveyances made to defraud creditors. 13 Eliz., ch. 5.

STATUTE OF FRAUDS statute of frauds. 1.Hist. (cap.) A 1677 English statute that declared certain contracts judicially unenforceable (but not void) if they were not committed to writing and signed by the party to be charged. • The statute was entitled “An Act for the Prevention of Frauds and Perjuries” (29 Car. 2, ch. 3). — Also termed Statute of Frauds and Perjuries.

“The best known, and until recently, most important, Act prescribing written formalities for certain contracts only required that those contracts should be evidenced in writing, or to put it another way, that the contract would be unenforceable in a Court (but not void) in the absence of writing. This was the Statute of Frauds 1677, sections 4 and 17 of which required written evidence of a somewhat curious list of contracts. Today, all that is left of these provisions is that part of section 4, which requires contracts of guarantee to be evidenced in writing, and section 40 of the Law of Property Act 1925 (replacing another part of section 4), which deals with contracts of sale of an interest in land.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 141 (3d ed. 1981).

2. A statute (based on the English Statute of Frauds) designed to prevent fraud and perjury by requiring certain contracts to be in writing and signed by the party to be charged. • Statutes of frauds traditionally apply to the following types of contracts: (1) a contract for the sale or transfer of an interest in land, (2) a contract that cannot be performed within one year of its making, (3) a contract for the sale of goods valued at $500 or more, (4) a contract of an executor or administrator to answer for a decedent's debt, (5) a contract to guarantee the debt or duty of another, and (6) a contract made in consideration of marriage. UCC § 2-201. — Abbr. S/F; SOF. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of 1–119. C.J.S. Boundaries §§ 70–72; Sales §§ 68, 71.] “[T]he primary theory of statutes of frauds, past and present, is that they are means to the end of preventing successful courtroom perjury. The means to this end is simply the requirement of a writing signed by the party to be charged.... [B]ut the statute of frauds writing requirement is ... so far from any kind of guarantee against successful perjury that it is inappropriate even to call it a means to fraud prevention at all." 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 2-8, at 82 (4th ed. 1995).

STATUTE OF FRAUDS AND PERJURIES

Statute of Frauds and Perjuries. See STATUTE OF FRAUDS(1).

STATUTE OF GLOUCESTER

Statute of Gloucester (glos-t<<schwa>>r). Hist. A statute providing for the award of costs in legal actions. 6 Edw., ch. 1 (1278).

STATUTE OF JEOFAILS statute of jeofails (jef-aylz). A law permitting a litigant to acknowledge an error in a pleading and correct or amend the pleading without risking dismissal of the claim. See JEOFAIL.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS statute of limitations. 1. A law that bars claims after a specified period; specif., a statute establishing a time limit for suing in a civil case, based on the date when the claim accrued (as when the injury occurred or was discovered). • The purpose of such a statute is to require diligent prosecution of known claims, thereby providing finality and predictability in legal affairs and ensuring that claims will be resolved while evidence is reasonably available and fresh. — Also termed nonclaim statute; limitations period. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 1. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 2–4.]

“Statutes of limitations, like the equitable doctrine of laches, in their conclusive effects are designed to promote justice by preventing surprises through the revival of claims that have been allowed to slumber until evidence has been lost, memories have faded, and witnesses have disappeared.” Order of R.R. Telegraphers v. Railway Express Agency, 321 U.S. 342, 348–49, 64 S.Ct. 582, 586 (1944).

2. A statute establishing a time limit for prosecuting a crime, based on the date when the offense occurred. Cf. STATUTE OF REPOSE. [Cases: Criminal Law 145.5–160. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 196–207.] — Abbr. S/L; SOL. “The purpose of a statute of limitations is to limit exposure to criminal prosecution to a certain fixed period of time following the occurrence of those acts the legislature had decided to punish by criminal sanctions. Such a limitation is designed to protect individuals from having to defend themselves against charges when the basic facts have become obscured by the passage of time and to minimize the danger of official punishment because of acts in the far-distant past. Such a time limit may also have the salutary effect of encouraging law enforcement officials promptly to investigate suspected criminal activity.” Toussie v. United States, 397 U.S. 112, 90 S.Ct. 858 (1970).

STATUTE OF MONOPOLIES

Statute of Monopolies. Hist. A 1624 act of the English Parliament banning the Crown's practice of granting monopolies with the single exception of letters patent, which gave an inventor the exclusive right to make and use an invention for 14 years.

STATUTE OF MORTMAIN statute of mortmain. See MORTMAIN STATUTE.

STATUTE OF REPOSE

statute of repose. A statute barring any suit that is brought after a specified time since the defendant acted (such as by designing or manufacturing a product), even if this period ends before the plaintiff has suffered a resulting injury. Cf. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 1. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 2–4.]

“A statute of repose ... limits the time within which an action may be brought and is not related to the accrual of any cause of action; the injury need not have occurred, much less have been discovered. Unlike an ordinary statute of limitations which begins running upon accrual of the claim, the period contained in a statute of repose begins when a specific event occurs, regardless of whether a cause of action has accrued or whether any injury has resulted.” 54 C.J.S. Limitations of Actions § 4, at 20–21 (1987).

STATUTE OF USES

Statute of Uses. Hist. An English statute of 1535 that converted the equitable title held by a cestui que use (i.e., a beneficiary) to a legal one in order to make the cestui que use liable for feudal dues, as only a legal owner (the feoffee to uses) could be. • This statute was the culmination of a series of enactments designed by the Tudors to stop the practice of creating uses in land that deprived feudal lords of the valuable incidents of feudal tenure. The statute discouraged the granting of property subject to another's use by deeming the person who enjoys the use to have legal title with the right of absolute ownership and possession. So after the statute was enacted, if A conveyed land to B subject to the use of C, then C became the legal owner of the land in fee simple. Ultimately, the statute was circumvented by the courts' recognition of the use of equitable trusts in land-conveyancing. See CESTUI QUE USE; GRANT TO USES; USE(4).

“The Statute of 27 H.8. hath advanced Uses, and hath established Surety for him that hath the Use against the Feoffees: for before the Statute the Feoffees were Owners of the Land, but now it is destroyed, and the cestuy que use is the Owner of the same: before the Possession ruled the Use, but since the Use governeth the Possession.” William Noy, A Treatise of the Principal Grounds and Maxims of the Laws of This Nation 73 (4th ed. 1677; repr. C. Sims ed., 1870).

STATUTE OF WESTMINSTER THE FIRST

Statute of Westminster the First. See WESTMINSTER THE FIRST, STATUTE OF.

STATUTE OF WILLS

statute of wills. 1. (cap.) An English statute (enacted in 1540) that established the right of a person to devise real property by will. — Also termed Wills Act. 2. A state statute, usu. derived from the English statute, providing for testamentary disposition and requiring an elaborate set of requirements for valid execution in that jurisdiction. [Cases: Wills 1–20. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 72; Wills § 1–3, 53–87, 93–95, 97–98, 103–104, 106–132, 172, 174, 381.]

STATUTE OF WINCHESTER

STATUTE ROLL

statute roll. Hist. A roll upon which a statute was formally entered after receiving the royal assent.

STATUTES AT LARGE

Statutes at Large. An official compilation of the acts and resolutions that become law from each session of Congress, printed in chronological order.

STATUTE STAPLE

statute staple. Hist. 1. A 1353 statute establishing procedures for settling disputes among merchants who traded in staple towns. • The statute helped merchants receive swift judgments for debt. Cf. STATUTE MERCHANT. 2. A bond for commercial debt. • A statute staple gave the lender a possessory right in the land of a debtor who failed to repay a loan. See STAPLE.

“A popular form of security after 1285 ... was the ... ‘statute staple’ — whereby the borrower could by means of a registered contract charge his land and goods without giving up possession; if he failed to pay, the lender became a tenant of the land until satisfied The borrower under a statute or recognizance remained in possession of his land, and it later became a common practice under the common-law forms of mortgage likewise to allow the mortgagor to remain in possession as a tenant at will or at sufferance of the mortgagee.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 354 (3d ed. 1990).

statuti (st<<schwa>>-t[y]oo-tl), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. Licensed officials, esp. advocates, whose names are inscribed in registers of matriculation, forming part of the college of advocates. Cf. SUPERNUMERARII.

STATUTO MERCATORIO

statuto mercatorio. See DE STATUTO MERCATORIO.

STATUTORY

statutory (stach-<<schwa>>-tor-ee), adj. 1. Of or relating to legislation < statutory interpretation>. 2. Legislatively created <the law of patents is purely statutory>. 3. Conformable to a statute .

STATUTORY ACTION

statutory action. See ACTION(4).

STATUTORY AGENT

statutory agent. See AGENT(2).

STATUTORY ARSON

statutory arson. See ARSON(2).

STATUTORY BAR

statutory bar. Patents. A patent-law provision that denies patent protection to inventors who wait too long to apply. • This “loss of right” may occur when an inventor publishes an article about the work, sells it, offers it for sale, or makes public use of the invention. The inventor has one year after the disclosure to apply for a patent. See BAR(7). Cf. GRACE PERIOD(2). [Cases: Patents 80. C.J.S. Patents §§ 105–106, 108–111.]

STATUTORY BOND

statutory bond. 1. BOND(2). 2. BOND(3).

STATUTORY BURGLARY

statutory burglary. See BURGLARY(2).

STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION statutory construction. 1. The act or process of interpreting a statute. 2. Collectively, the principles developed by courts for interpreting statutes. — Also termed statutory interpretation. See CONSTRUCTION(2). [Cases: Statutes 174–247. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 306–387.]

“[T]here is not, and probably never can be, anything meriting the description of a coherent body of case-law on statutory interpretation as a whole as distinct from the interpretation of a particular statute.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 39 (1976).

STATUTORY INSTRUMENT

statutory instrument. A British administrative regulation or order; an order or regulation issued by an authority empowered by statute to do so, usu. to give detailed effect to the statute.

STATUTORY INTERPRETATION statutory interpretation. See STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.

STATUTORY INVENTION REGISTRATION statutory invention registration. Patents. An official procedure for placing an invention in the public domain by publishing the patent abstract (which is included with the invention's original application) in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office's Official Gazette, thus making the abstract a prior-art reference as of the application's filing date. • The process results in abandonment of the patent application. If an alternative form of disclosure is used, the prior-art reference's effective date is the date of publication. — Abbr. SIR. See DEFENSIVE DISCLOSURE. [Cases: Patents 115. C.J.S. Patents § 210.]

STATUTORY LAW

statutory law. The body of law derived from statutes rather than from constitutions or judicial decisions. — Also termed statute law; legislative law; ordinary law. Cf. COMMON LAW(1); CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

STATUTORY RELEASE

statutory release. Hist. A conveyance superseding the compound assurance by lease and release, created by the Conveyance by Release Without Lease Act of 1841 (St. 4 & 5 Vict., ch. 21).

STATUTORY RIGHT OF REDEMPTION statutory right of redemption. The right of a mortgagor in default to recover property after a foreclosure sale by paying the principal, interest, and other costs that are owed, together with any other measure required to cure the default. • This statutory right exists in many states but is not uniform. See EQUITY OF REDEMPTION; REDEMPTION(4). [Cases: Mortgages 591–624. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 57–61, 66–67, 565, 991–1090, 1092–1093.]

stay, n. 1. The postponement or halting of a proceeding, judgment, or the like. 2. An order to suspend all or part of a judicial proceeding or a judgment resulting from that proceeding. — Also termed stay of execution; suspension of judgment. [Cases: Action 67; Execution 158; Federal Civil Procedure 2700. C.J.S. Actions § 243; Executions §§ 152–153, 155.] — stay, vb. — stayable, adj.

automatic stay. Bankruptcy. A bar to all judicial and extrajudicial collection efforts against the debtor or the debtor's property. • The policy behind the automatic stay, which is effective upon the filing of the bankruptcy petition, is that all actions against the debtor should be halted pending the determination of creditors' rights and the orderly administration of the debtor's assets free from creditor interference. — Also termed automatic suspension. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2391–2404. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 65–79.]

STAY-AWAY ORDER

stay-away order. 1. In a domestic-violence case, an order forbidding the defendant to contact the victim. • A stay-away order usu. prohibits the defendant from coming within a certain number of feet of the victim's home, school, work, or other specific place. Stay-away orders are most often issued in criminal cases. 2.RESTRAINING ORDER(1).3. In a juvenile-delinquency case, an order prohibiting a youthful offender from frequenting the scene of the offense or from being in the company of certain persons. — Also termed no-contact order; stay-away order of protection.

STEGANOGRAPHY

steganography (steg-<<schwa>>-nog-r<<schwa>>-fee), n. A cryptographic method that digitally embeds or encodes one item of information within another. • Because a digitized audio or visual file usu. has unused data areas, indelible (and nearly undetectable) information can be added without altering the file's quality. Copyright or trademark tags can be hidden in every fragment of a digital work, making disassociation almost impossible. — Also termed digital fingerprinting; digital watermarking.

STELLIONATUS

stellionatus (stel-ee-<<schwa>>-nay-t<<schwa>>s or stel-y-<<schwa>>-nay-t<< schwa>>s). [Latin “underhand dealing”] Roman & Scots law. Conduct that is fraudulent but does not fall within a specific class of offenses. • This term applies primarily to fraudulent practices in the sale or hypothecation of land. — Also termed (in Scots law) stellionate. Cf. COZENING.

“STELLIONATE... is a term applied, in the law of Scotland, either to any crime which, though indictable, goes under no general denomination, and is punishable arbitrarily, or to any civil delinquency of which fraud is an ingredient. Those, e.g., who grant double conveyances of the same subject, are guilty of this crime ... and are punishable arbitrarily in their persons and goods, besides becoming infamous.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 940 (George Watson ed., 1882).

“Though pignus and hypothec are almost different names for the same thing, there were differences. Hypothec was used mainly for land, which cannot be removed. A thing could be pledged only to one, but successive hypothecs might be created over a thing. There was no fraud in this but it was the offence of stellionatus to give a hypothec without declaring existing hypothecs.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 355 (2d ed. 1953).

stipulatio (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Roman law. An oral contract requiring a formal question and reply, binding the replier to do what was asked. • It is essential that both parties speak, and that the reply directly conforms to the question asked and is made with the intent to enter into a contractual obligation. No consideration is required. See SPONDESNE? SPONDEO; actio ex stipulatu under ACTIO. Pl. stipulationes (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh-neeZ).

“[I]t must be remembered that the law-forms used by the Romans had their origin in times when writing was neither easy nor common. It is not surprising, therefore, that among them a form of spoken words, a verbal contract, should hold the place which among us is occupied by written notes. This form ...stipulatio — was of a very simple character, consisting only of a question asked by one party, and an answer returned by the other Such forms as Spondesne mihi decem aureos dare (do you engage to give me ten aurei, or gold-pieces): answer, Spondeo (I engage)” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 210 (1881).

“The oldest Roman contract was the stipulatio, an oral promise made by an answer to an immediately preceding question, with the promisor using the same verb. The contract was unilateral. Only one party, the promisor, was legally liable, and he was bound strictly by the words used.” Alan Watson, Ancient Law and Modern Understanding 96 (1998).

STIPULATIO AQUILIANA

stipulatio aquiliana (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh <<schwa>>-kwil-ee-ay-n<< schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A type of stipulatio used to collect and discharge all the liabilities owed on various grounds by a single contract.

“[S]tipulatio Aquiliana, a device credited to Aquilius Gallus, of Cicero's time. Where two persons with complex relations between them desired to square or simplify their accounts they could work out the items and arrive at the balance This balance being paid or otherwise arranged, each party would then make with the other this stipulatio, which was a comprehensive formula This would novate all the claims and turn them into a single promise, for an incertum. These mutual stipulations might then be released by acceptilatio.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 348 (2d ed. 1953).

STIPULATIO JURIS

stipulatio juris (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh joor-is). [Latin “stipulatio as to the law”] The parties' agreement on a question of law or its applicability. • The court is not bound to accept the stipulation if it is erroneous. But the parties are allowed to stipulate the law to be applied to a dispute.

STIPULATION

stipulation (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-sh<<schwa>>n), n.1. A material condition or requirement in an agreement; esp., a factual representation that is incorporated into a contract as a term <breach of the stipulation regarding payment of taxes>. • Such a contractual term often appears in a section of the contract called “Representations and Warranties.” [Cases: Contracts 173, 207,

218, 221. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 355–356, 358, 361, 373, 444–445, 450, 475.] 2. A voluntary agreement between opposing parties concerning some relevant point; esp., an agreement relating to a proceeding, made by attorneys representing adverse parties to the proceeding <the plaintiff and defendant entered into a stipulation on the issue of liability>. • A stipulation relating to a pending judicial proceeding, made by a party to the proceeding or the party's attorney, is binding without consideration. [Cases: Stipulations 1. C.J.S. Stipulations §§ 2–3.]

“Breach of a stipulation should not be confused with misrepresentation, which is a false statement made before or at the time the contract is made, and which induces the contract; only if it is incorporated into the contract does it become a stipulation or term, the breach of which will entitle the injured party to pursue the usual remedies which are available where there has been a breach of a warranty or of a condition.” 1 E.W. Chance, Principles of Mercantile Law 239 (P.W. French ed., 13th ed. 1950).

“Stipulations with respect to matters of form and procedure serve the convenience of the parties to litigation and often serve to simplify and expedite the proceeding. In some cases they are supported by the policy of favoring compromise in order to reduce the volume of litigation. Hence they are favored by the courts and enforced without regard to consideration.” RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF CONTRACTS § 94 cmt. a (1979).

3. Roman law. A formal contract by which a promisor (and only the promisor) became bound by oral question and answer. • By the third century A.D., stipulations were always evidenced in writing. See REUS PROMITTENDI; REUS STIPULANDI. — stipulate (stip-y<<schwa>>-layt), vb. — stipulative (stip-y<< schwa>>-l<<schwa>>-tiv), adj. “A stipulation consisted in a question and answer, the question being put by the person who was to acquire a right, the answer being given orally by the person who undertook the obligation. The matter of the agreement being stated, the binding words were usually simple; those used by (and peculiar to) Romans being Spondesne? or spondes? Spondeo. A stipulation made with a foreigner in these terms was invalid. The questioner was called stipulator, sometimes reus stipulandi (‘[stipulating party]’), the answerer usually promissor (or reus promittendi [the promising party])” 2 Henry John Roby, Roman Private Law 12 (1902).

STIPULATION POUR AUTRUI

stipulation pour autrui (poor oh-troo-ee). [French “for other persons”] Civil law. A contractual provision that benefits a third party and gives the third party a cause of action against the promisor for specific performance. La. Civ. Code art. 1978. See third-party beneficiary under BENEFICIARY. [Cases: Contracts 187. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 612–622, 624–629.]

STIPULATIO SPONSALITIA

stipulatio sponsalitia (stip-y<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh spon-s<<schwa>>-lish-ee-<< schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. In early law, a solemn promise by a father (paterfamilias) that his child would marry someone else's child. • In some cases, there was a penalty if the marriage did not occur. In classical and later Roman law, in which free marriage was the rule, such a promise was unenforceable because it was regarded as immoral (contra bonos mores).

STIPULATIVE DEFINITION

stipulative definition. See DEFINITION.

STIPULATOR

stipulator. 1. One who makes a stipulation. 2. Civil law. The promisee in a stipulation pour autrui, accepting the promise of a benefit to a third party. See REUS STIPULANDI.

stirps (st<<schwa>>rps), n. [Latin “stock”] A branch of a family; a line of descent. Pl. stirpes (st<<schwa>>r-peeze). See PER STIRPES.

STOCK

stock, n. 1. The original progenitor of a family; a person from whom a family is descended <George Harper Sr. was the stock of the Harper line>. 2. A merchant's goods that are kept for sale or trade <the car dealer put last year's models on sale to reduce its stock>. 3. The capital or principal fund raised by a corporation through subscribers' contributions or the sale of shares <Acme's stock is worth far more today than it was 20 years ago>. 4. A proportional part of a corporation's capital represented by the number of equal units (or shares) owned, and granting the holder the right to participate in the company's general management and to share in its net profits or earnings <Julia sold her stock in Pantheon Corporation>. See SHARE(2). Cf. SECURITY(4). [Cases: Corporations 63.1.] assented stock. Stock that an owner deposits with a third person according to an agreement by which the owner voluntarily accepts a change in the corporation's securities.

assessable stock. Stock that is subject to resale by the issuer if the holder fails to pay any assessment levied on it. [Cases: Corporations 175. C.J.S. Corporations § 316.]

authorized stock. See capital stock (1).

bailout stock. Nontaxable preferred stock issued to stockholders as a dividend. • Bailout stock is issued to gain favorable tax rates by distributing corporate earnings at capital gains rates rather than by distributing dividends at ordinary income rates. This practice is now prohibited by the Internal Revenue Code. IRC (26 USCA)§ 306.

barometer stock.A stock whose price fluctuates according to market conditions; an individual stock considered to be indicative of the strength of the market in general. — Also termed bellwether stock.

blank stock.Securities. Stock with voting powers and rights set by the issuer's board of directors after the stock has been sold. [Cases: Corporations 197. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 375–378.]

blue-chip stock.See BLUE CHIP.

bonus stock.A stock share that is issued for no consideration, as an enticement to buy some other type or class of security. • It is considered a type of watered stock. — Also termed bonus share. [Cases: Corporations 99, 243(6). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 163, 169.]

book-value stock.Stock offered to executives at a book-value price, rather than at its market value. • The stock is offered with the understanding that when its book value has risen, the company will buy back the stock at the increased price or will make payments in stock equal to the increased price. [Cases: Corporations 316(3). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 519–524.]

callable preferred stock.Preferred stock that may be repurchased by the issuing corporation at a pre stated price, usu. at or slightly above par value. [Cases: Corporations 68. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 177, 180–183.]

capital stock. 1. The total number of shares of stock that a corporation may issue under its charter or articles of incorporation, including both common stock and preferred stock. • A corporation may increase the amount of capital stock if the owners of a majority of the outstanding shares consent. — Also termed authorized stock; authorized capital stock; authorized stock issue; authorized shares. [Cases: Corporations 60. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 122–125.] 2. The total par value or stated value of this stock; CAPITALIZATION(4).3. See common stock.

common stock.A class of stock entitling the holder to vote on corporate matters, to receive dividends after other claims and dividends have been paid (esp. to preferred shareholders), and to share in assets upon liquidation. • Common stock is often called capital stock if it is the corporation's only class of stock outstanding. — Also termed ordinary shares. Cf. preferred stock. [Cases: Corporations 155. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 294, 302–303.]

convertible stock.See convertible security under SECURITY.

corporate stock.An equity security issued by a corporation.

cumulative preferred stock.Preferred stock that must receive dividends in full before common shareholders may receive any dividend. • If the corporation omits a dividend in a particular year or period, it is carried over to the next year or period and must be paid before the common shareholders receive any payment. — Also termed cumulative stock; cumulative preference share. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

deferred stock.Stock whose holders are entitled to dividends only after the corporation has met some other specified obligation, such as the discharge of a liability or the payment of a dividend to preferred shareholders. [Cases: Corporations 155(3).]

discount stock. A stock share issued for less than par value. • Discount stock is considered a type of watered stock, the issuance of which may impose liability on the recipient for the difference between the par value and the cash amount paid. — Also termed discount share. [Cases: Corporations 99(3). C.J.S. Corporations § 170.]

donated stock. Stock donated to a charity or given to a corporation by its own stockholders, esp. for resale.

equity stock. Stock of any class having unlimited dividend rights, regardless of whether the stock is preferred. [Cases: Corporations 155(3).]

floating stock. Stock that is offered for sale on the open market and that has not yet been purchased; the number of outstanding shares available for trading.

full-paid stock. Stock on which no further payments can be demanded by the issuing company. — Also termed paid-up stock. [Cases: Corporations 88–89.]

glamour stock. A stock with great public interest because of a real or imagined potential for fast growth or high earnings. — Also termed growth stock; performance stock.

growth stock. 1. Stock issued by a growth company. • Because a growth company usu. reinvests a large share of its income back into the company, growth stock pays relatively low dividends, though its price usu. has a relatively high appreciation in market value over time. 2. See glamour stock.

guaranteed stock. Preferred stock on which a dividend is guaranteed by someone (usu. a parent corporation) other than the issuer. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

guarantee stock. A fixed, nonwithdrawal investment in a building-and-loan association. • This type of stock guarantees to all other investors in the association a fixed dividend or interest rate. See BUILDING-AND-LOAN ASSOCIATION. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations 7. C.J.S. Building and Loan Associations, Savings and Loan Associations, and Credit Unions §§ 33, 36.]

guaranty stock. A savings-and-loan association's stock yielding dividends to the holders after dividends have been paid to the depositors. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations 11. C.J.S. Building and Loan Associations, Savings and Loan Associations, and Credit Unions § 41.]

hot stock. See hot issue under ISSUE(2).

inactive stock. A low-volume stock.

income stock. A stock with a history of high yields or dividend payments (e.g., public utilities and well-established corporations).

issued stock. Capital stock that has been authorized and sold to subscribers, but may be reacquired, such as treasury stock. [Cases: Corporations 72, 159. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 133, 146–147.]

joint stock.Capital invested in an unincorporated business and divided into shares proportionate to the size of each investment.

letter stock.See restricted security under SECURITY.

listed stock.See listed security under SECURITY.

margin stock.See marginable security under SECURITY.

nonassessable stock.Stock owned by a holder whose potential liability is limited to the amount paid for the stock and who cannot be charged additional funds to pay the issuer's debts. • Stock issued in the United States is usu. nonassessable. [Cases: Corporations 78, 175. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 188, 192, 316.]

noncumulative preferred stock.Preferred stock that does not have to be paid dividends that are in arrears. • Once a periodic dividend is omitted, it will not be paid. — Also termed noncumulative stock. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

nonparticipating preferred stock.Preferred stock that does not give the shareholder the right to additional earnings — usu. surplus common-stock dividends — beyond those stated in the preferred contract. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

nonvoting stock.Stock that has no voting rights under most situations. [Cases: Corporations 197. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 375–378.]

no-par stock.Stock issued without a specific value assigned to it. • For accounting purposes, it is given a legal or stated value that has little or no connection to the stock's actual value. — Sometimes shortened to no par. — Also termed no-par-value stock.

outstanding stock.Stock that is held by investors and has not been redeemed by the issuing corporation. — Also termed outstanding capital stock; shares outstanding.

participating preferred stock.Preferred stock whose holder is entitled to receive stated dividends and to share with the common shareholders in any additional distributions of earnings. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

participation stock.Stock permitting the holder to participate in profits and surplus. [Cases: Corporations 154.1.]

par-value stock.Stock originally issued for a fixed value derived by dividing the total value of capital stock by the number of shares to be issued. • The par value does not bear a necessary relation to the actual stock value because surplus plays a role in the valuation. [Cases: Corporations 62. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 126, 128, 148–151.]

penny stock.An equity security that is not traded in established markets, represents no tangible assets, or has average revenues less than required for trading on an exchange. • Typically, a penny stock is highly speculative and can be purchased for less than $5 a share.

performance stock.See glamour stock.

phantom stock. Imaginary stock that is credited to a corporate executive account as part of the executive's compensation package. See PHANTOM STOCK PLAN. [Cases: Corporations 308(1). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 490, 530–531, 533, 536.]

preferred stock. A class of stock giving its holder a preferential claim to dividends and to corporate assets upon liquidation but that usu. carries no voting rights. — Also termed preference shares. Cf. common stock. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

premium stock. Stock that carries a premium for trading, as in the case of short-selling.

prior preferred stock. Preferred stock that has preference over another class of preferred stock from the same issuer. • The preference usu. relates to dividend payments or claims on assets. [Cases: Corporations 156. C.J.S. Corporations § 158.]

public stock. 1. See public security under SECURITY. 2. Stock of a publicly traded corporation.

reacquired stock. See treasury stock.

redeemable stock. Preferred stock that can be called by the issuing corporation and retired. [Cases: Corporations 68. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 177, 180–183.]

registered stock. See registered security under SECURITY.

restricted stock. See restricted security under SECURITY.

retired stock. See treasury stock.

special stock. Hist. Corporate stock that guarantees investors an annual dividend and gives them creditor status to the extent that dividends have become payable. • In contrast, preferred-stock holders' claims for dividends payable are secondary to creditors' claims. Special stock was statutorily authorized only in Massachusetts.

watered stock. Stock issued for less than par value. [Cases: Corporations 99. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 163, 169.]

“The term ‘watered stock’ is a colorful common law phrase describing the situation where shareholders receive shares without paying as much for them as the law requires.... Much of the early common law relating to watered shares concerned the liability of shareholders receiving watered shares to pay the additional consideration needed to ‘squeeze out the water.’ ... [It now] seems clear that a shareholder is liable to the corporation if he or she pays less for the shares than the consideration fixed by the directors, and this liability is measured by the difference between the fixed consideration and the amount actually paid.” Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 120–21 (3d ed. 1991).

whisper stock. The stock of a company that is rumored to be the target of a takeover attempt.

STRAND

strand,n. A shore or bank of an ocean, lake, river, or stream.

STRANDING

stranding,n. Maritime law. A ship's drifting, driving, or running aground on a strand. • The type of stranding that occurs determines the method of apportioning the liability for any resulting losses. [Cases: Salvage 9, 30. C.J.S. Salvage §§ 12, 81.]

accidental stranding.Stranding as a result of natural forces, such as wind and waves. See general average, particular average under AVERAGE. — Also termed involuntary stranding.

“Damage to a vessel from involuntary stranding or wreck, and the cost of repairs, are particular average only. Where, however, the ship and cargo are exposed to a common peril by the accidental stranding, the expenses of unloading and taking care of the cargo, rescuing the vessel, reloading the cargo, and other expenses other than repairs requisite to enable the vessel to proceed on the voyage, are brought into general average, provided the vessel and cargo were saved by the same series of measures during the continuance of the common peril which created the joint necessity for the expenses.” 70 Am. Jur. 2d Shipping § 961, at 1069 (1987).

voluntary stranding.Stranding to avoid a more dangerous fate or for fraudulent purposes.

“The loss occurring when a ship is voluntarily run ashore to avoid capture, foundering, or shipwreck is to be made good by general average contribution, if the ship is afterwards recovered so as to be able to perform its voyage, as such a claim is clearly within the rule that whatever is sacrificed for the common benefit of the associated interests shall be made good by all the interests exposed to the common peril which were saved from the common danger by the sacrifice A vessel cannot, however, claim contribution founded on even a voluntary stranding made necessary by ... unseaworthiness or the negligence of those in charge, except in pursuance of a valid agreement to that effect.” 70 Am. Jur. 2d Shipping § 961, at 1069 (1987).

STRANGER

stranger. 1. One who is not party to a given transaction; esp., someone other than a party or the party's employee, agent, tenant, or immediate family member. [Cases: Contracts 185. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 610–612, 619–620.] 2. One not standing toward another in some relation implied in the context; esp., one who is not in privity. 3. A person who voluntarily pays another person's debt even though the payor cannot be held liable for the debt and the payor's property is not affected by the creditor's rights. • Subrogation does not apply to a stranger if the debtor did not agree to or assign subrogation rights.

A third party used in some transactions as a temporary transferee to allow the principal parties to accomplish something that is otherwise impermissible. Cf. DUMMY. 4. A person hired to post a worthless bail bond for the release of an accused. — Also termed stramineus homo. See MEN OF STRAW.

STRAW POLL

straw poll. A nonbinding vote, taken as a way of informally gauging support or opposition but usu. without a formal motion or debate.

STRAY REMARKS

stray remarks. Employment law. Statements to or about an employee by a coworker or supervisor, concerning the employee's race, sex, age, national origin, or other status, that are either objectively or subjectively offensive, but that do not represent harassment or discrimination by the employer because of (1) their sporadic, unsystematic, and unofficial nature, (2) the circumstances in which they were made, or (3) their not showing any intention to hamper the employee's continued employment. — Also termed stray comments. [Cases: Civil Rights 1147, 1543. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 29, 144, 170.]

STREAM

stream. Anything liquid that flows in a line or course; esp., a current of water consisting of a bed, bank, and watercourse, usu. emptying into other bodies of water but not losing its character even if it breaks up or disappears. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 38. C.J.S. Waters §§ 3–8, 91.]

private stream. A watercourse, the bed, channel, or waters of which are exclusively owned by private parties.

STREAM-OF-COMMERCE THEORY stream-of-commerce theory. 1. The principle that a state may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant if the defendant places a product in the general marketplace and the product causes injury or damage in the forum state, as long as the defendant also takes other acts to establish some connection with the forum state, as by advertising there or by hiring someone to serve as a sales agent there. Asahi Metal Indus. Co., Ltd. v. Superior Court of Cal., 480 U.S. 102, 107 S.Ct. 1026 (1987). [Cases: Corporations 665(1); Courts 12(2.25); Federal Courts 76, 81. C.J.S. Courts § 44.] 2. The principle that a person who participates in placing a defective product in the general marketplace is strictly liable for harm caused by the product. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 402A (1979). [Cases: Products Liability 23.1.]

street. A road or public thoroughfare used for travel in an urban area, including the pavement, shoulders, gutters, curbs, and other areas within the street lines. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 658. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 1451–1452.]

“Strictly speaking, a ‘street’ is a public thoroughfare in an urban community such as a city, town, or village, and the term is not ordinarily applicable to roads and highways outside of municipalities. Although a street, in common parlance, is equivalent to a highway, it is usually specifically denominated by its own proper appellation.... Whether a particular highway is to be regarded as a ‘street’ within the meaning of that term as used in a statute must, of course, be resolved by construction.” 39 Am. Jur. 2d Highways, Streets, and Bridges § 8, at 588–89 (1999).

paper street. A thoroughfare that appears on plats, subdivision maps, and other publicly filed documents, but that has not been completed or opened for public use. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 646. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations § 1422.]

strike, n. 1. An organized cessation or slowdown of work by employees to compel the employer to meet the employees' demands; a concerted refusal by employees to work for their employer, or to work at their customary rate of speed, until the employer grants the concessions that they seek. — Also termed walkout. Cf. LOCKOUT; BOYCOTT; PICKETING. [Cases: Labor Relations 290. C.J.S. Labor Relations §§ 273–274, 277–278.]

ca'canny strike (kah-kan-ee or kaw-). A strike in which the workers remain on the job but work at a slower pace to reduce their output.

economic strike. A strike resulting from an economic dispute with the employer (such as a wage dispute); a dispute for reasons other than unfair labor practices. • An employer can permanently replace an economic striker but cannot prevent the worker from coming back to an unreplaced position simply because the worker was on strike.

general strike. A strike organized to affect an entire industry.

illegal strike. 1. A strike using unlawful procedures. 2. A strike to obtain unlawful objectives, as in a strike to force an employer to stop doing business with a particular company.

jurisdictional strike. A strike resulting from a dispute between members of different unions over work assignments.

organizational strike. See recognition strike.

outlaw strike. See wildcat strike.

quickie strike. See wildcat strike.

recognition strike. A strike by workers seeking to force their employer to acknowledge the union as their collective-bargaining agent. • After the National Labor Relations Act was passed in 1935, recognition strikes became unnecessary. Under the Act, the employer is required to recognize an NLRB-certified union for bargaining purposes. — Also termed organizational strike.

SUBINFEUDATE

subinfeudate (s<<schwa>>b-in-fyoo-dayt), vb. Hist. (Of a subvassal) to grant land to another, who then holds the land as the grantor's vassal rather than as the vassal of the grantor's superior. — Also termed subinfeud (s<<schwa>>b-in-fyood).

“[A] more common method of obtaining the annual quota of knights was to subinfeudate portions of the baronial lands to individual knights in exchange for their obligations to spend a fixed portion of time annually in the king's or baron's service. A knight who so received a portion of a baron's land would hold of his baron in much the same way as the baron held of the king.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 4 (2d ed. 1984).

subinfeudation (s<<schwa>>b-in-fyoo-day-sh<<schwa>>n), n. Hist. The system under which the tenants in a feudal system granted smaller estates to their tenants, who in turn did the same from their pieces of land. • As this system proceeded down the social scale, the lords were deprived of their feudal profits, as a result of which the system was suppressed by the statute Quia Emptores in 1290. Instead of subinfeudation, alienation in the modern sense was introduced. Cf. INFEUDATION; SUPERINFEUDATION.

“The first step taken in mitigation of the rigors of the law of feuds, and in favor of voluntary alienations, was the countenance given to the practice of subinfeudations. They were calculated to elude the restraint upon alienation, and consisted in carving out portions of the fief to be held of the vassal by the same tenure with which he held of the chief lord of the fee. The alienation prohibited by the feudal law, all over Europe, was the substitution of a new feudatory in the place of the old one; but subinfeudation was a feoffment by the tenant to hold of himself. The purchaser became his vassal, and the vendor still continued liable to the chief lord for all the feudal obligations. Subinfeudations were encouraged by the subordinate feudatories, because they contributed to their own power and independence; but they were found to be injurious to the fruits of tenure, such as reliefs, marriages and wardships, belonging to the paramount lords.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *443–44 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

SUBJECT

subject, adj. Referred to above; having relevance to the current discussion < the subject property was then sold to Smith>.

subject, n. 1. One who owes allegiance to a sovereign and is governed by that sovereign's laws <the monarchy's subjects>.

“Speaking generally, we may say that the terms subject and citizen are synonymous. Subjects and citizens are alike those whose relation to the state is personal and not merely territorial, permanent and not merely temporary. This equivalent, however, is not absolute. For in the first place, the term subject is commonly limited to monarchical forms of government, while the term citizen is more specially applicable in the case of republics. A British subject becomes by naturalisation a citizen of the United States of America or of France. In the second place, the term citizen brings into prominence the rights and privileges of the status, rather than its correlative obligations, while the reverse is the case with the term subject. Finally it is to be noticed that the term subject is capable of a different and wider application, in which it includes all members of the body politic, whether they are citizens (i.e., subjects stricto sensu) or resident aliens. All such persons are subjects, all being subject to the power of the state and to its jurisdiction, and as owing to it, at least temporarily, fidelity and obedience." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 133 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

liege subject. See natural-born subject.

natural-born subject. A person born within the dominion of a monarchy, esp. England. — Also termed liege subject. Cf. NATIONAL.

subreptio (s<<schwa>>b-rep-shee-oh), n. [Latin “surreptitious removal”] Roman law. 1. Theft. 2. The obtaining of a grant from the emperor under false pretenses. — Also termed (in French law) subreption. Pl. subreptiones (s<<schwa>>b-rep-shee-oh-nee-z).

SUBREPTIONE VEL OBREPTIONE subreptione vel obreptione (s<<schwa>>b-rep-shee-oh-nee vel ob-rep-shee-oh-nee), adv. [Latin] Hist. By deceit or surprise.

SUBROGATE

subrogate (s<<schwa>>b-r<<schwa>>-gayt), vb. To substitute (a person) for another regarding a legal right or claim. [Cases: Subrogation 1. C.J.S. Subrogation §§ 2–15, 19, 91.]

SUBROGATION

subrogation (s<<schwa>>b-r<<schwa>>-gay-sh<<schwa>>n), n. 1. The substitution of one party for another whose debt the party pays, entitling the paying party to rights, remedies, or securities that would otherwise belong to the debtor. • For example, a surety who has paid a debt is, by subrogation, entitled to any security for the debt held by the creditor and the benefit of any judgment the creditor has against the debtor, and may proceed against the debtor as the creditor would. [Cases: Subrogation 1, 33. C.J.S. Subrogation §§ 2–15, 19, 91.] 2. The equitable remedy by which such a substitution takes place. 3. The principle under which an insurer that has paid a loss under an insurance policy is entitled to all the rights and remedies belonging to the insured against a third party with respect to any loss covered by the policy. See EQUITY OF SUBROGATION; ANTISUBROGATION RULE. [Cases: Insurance 3509, 3513.]

“Subrogation is equitable assignment. The right comes into existence when the surety becomes obligated, and this is important as affecting priorities; but such right of subrogation does not become a cause of action until the debt is fully paid. Subrogation entitles the surety to use any remedy against the principal which the creditor could have used, and in general to enjoy the benefit of any advantage that the creditor had, such as a mortgage, lien, power to confess judgment, to follow trust funds, to proceed against a third person who has promised either the principal or the creditor to pay the debt.” Laurence P. Simpson, Handbook on the Law of Suretyship 205 (1950).

“Subrogation simply means substitution of one person for another; that is, one person is allowed to stand in the shoes of another and assert that person's rights against the defendant. Factually, the case arises because, for some justifiable reason, the subrogation plaintiff has paid a debt owed by the defendant.” Dan B. Dobbs, Law of Remedies § 4.3, at 404 (2d ed. 1993).

conventional subrogation. Subrogation that arises by contract or by an express act of the parties. [Cases: Subrogation 27. C.J.S. Subrogation §§ 4–5, 22.]

legal subrogation. Subrogation that arises by operation of law or by implication in equity to prevent fraud or injustice. • Legal subrogation usu. arises when (1) the paying party has a liability, claim, or fiduciary relationship with the debtor, (2) the party pays to fulfill a legal duty or because of public policy, (3) the paying party is a secondary debtor, (4) the paying party is a surety, or (5) the party pays to protect its own rights or property. — Also termed equitable subrogation. [Cases: Subrogation 1–25. C.J.S. Subrogation §§ 2–16, 18–19, 23–63, 68–76, 83–86, 88–91.]

SUBROGATION CLAUSE

subrogation clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease permitting the lessee to pay taxes, mortgages, or other encumbrances on the leased property and to recover those payments out of future proceeds under the lease.

subsidiary motion. See MOTION(2).

SUBSIDY

subsidy (s<<schwa>>b-s<<schwa>>-dee), n.1. A grant, usu. made by the government, to any enterprise whose promotion is considered to be in the public interest. • Although governments sometimes make direct payments (such as cash grants), subsidies are usu. indirect. They may take the form of research-and-development support, tax breaks, provision of raw materials at below-market prices, or low-interest loans or low-interest export credits guaranteed by a government agency. — Also termed grant. [Cases: United States 82(1). C.J.S. United States §§ 155, 158.] 2. A specific financial contribution by a foreign government or public entity conferring a benefit on exporters to the United States. • Such a subsidy is countervailable under 19 USCA §§ 1671, 1677. [Cases: Customs Duties 21.5(2).]

countervailable subsidy (kown-t<<schwa>>r-vayl-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). A foreign government's subsidy on the manufacture of goods exported to another country, giving rise to the importing country's entitlement to impose a countervailing duty on the goods if their import caused or threatens to cause material injury to domestic industry. See countervailing duty under DUTY(4). [Cases: Customs Duties 21.5(2).]

3.Int'l law. Financial assistance given by one nation to another to preserve the receiving nation's neutrality or to support it in a war, even if the donor nation does not directly participate. — subsidize,vb.

drug rehabilitation program. • This type of treatment is esp. common in DUI cases. — Abbr. SAET.

SUBSTANTIAL-CAPACITY TEST substantial-capacity test.Criminal law. The Model Penal Code's test for the insanity defense, stating that a person is not criminally responsible for an act if, as a result of a mental disease or defect, the person lacks substantial capacity either to appreciate the criminality of the conduct or to conform the conduct to the law. • This test combines elements of both the McNaghten rules and the irresistible-impulse test by allowing consideration of both volitional and cognitive weaknesses. This test was formerly used by the federal courts and many states, but since 1984 many jurisdictions (including the federal courts) — in response to the acquittal by reason of insanity of would-be presidential assassin John Hinckley — have narrowed the insanity defense and adopted a new test resembling the McNaghten rules, although portions of the substantial-capacity test continue to be used. Model Penal Code § 4.01. — Also termed Model Penal Code test; MPC test; American Law Institute test; ALI test. See INSANITY DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law 48.]

SUBSTANTIAL-CERTAINTY TEST

substantial-certainty test.Copyright. The test for deciding whether a second work was copied from the first. • The question is whether a reasonable observer would conclude with substantial certainty that the second work is a copy. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 53(1).]

(Of conduct, a position, etc.) having a reasonable basis in law and in fact. • Under the Equal Access to Justice Act, a prevailing party in a lawsuit against the government will be unable to recover its attorney's fees if the government's position is substantially justified. [Cases: United States 147(10).]

SUBSTANTIAL NEW QUESTION OF PATENTABILITY substantial new question of patentability. Patents. The statutory threshold required for the Commissioner for Patents to order that a patent's validity be reexamined. • The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office is not authorized to reopen an examination based solely on prior art and issues that came up during the original examination. 35 USCA §§ 303–304. [Cases: Patents 136. C.J.S. Patents § 238.]

SUBSTANTIAL NONINFRINGEMENT USE substantial noninfringing use. See COMMERCIALLY SIGNIFICANT NONINFRINGEMENT USE.

SUBSTANTIAL PERFORMANCE substantial performance. See PERFORMANCE.

SUBSTANTIAL-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE substantial-performance doctrine. The rule that if a good-faith attempt to perform does not precisely meet the terms of an agreement or statutory requirements, the performance will still be considered complete if the essential purpose is accomplished, subject to a claim for damages for the shortfall. • Under the Uniform Probate Code, a will that is otherwise void because some formality has not been followed may still be valid under the substantial-performance doctrine. But this rule is not widely followed. — Also termed substantial-compliance rule. Cf. PERFECT-TENDER RULE. [Cases: Contracts 294. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 433, 589.]

“There has arisen in the United States an indefinite doctrine sometimes referred to as that of substantial performance. It is a doctrine that deals not with performance of a duty as a discharge thereof but with performance by the plaintiff as a condition precedent to the active duty of performance by the defendant. Where a defendant is sued for non-performance he cannot avoid paying damages by showing that he substantially performed or came near performing or gave something equally good; but he can always successfully defend if in fact some condition precedent to his own duty has not been fulfilled by the plaintiff.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 422 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

SUBSTANTIAL POSSESSION

substitution. 1. A designation of a person or thing to take the place of another person or thing. 2. The process by which one person or thing takes the place of another person or thing. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 351; Parties 57. C.J.S. Parties §§ 76–78.] 3. Parliamentary law. An amendment by replacing one or more words with others. See amendment by substituting under AMENDMENT(3). 4. Roman law. The nomination of a person to take the place of a previously named heir who has refused or failed to accept an inheritance. — Also termed common substitution; vulgar substitution. 5. Roman law. The nomination of a person to take the place of, or to succeed, a descendant who is under the age of puberty and in the potestas of the testator, if the descendant has died before reaching puberty. • This type of substitution was known as a pupillary substitution. If a descendant of any age failed to take by reason of lunacy, the substitution was known as an exemplary substitution or quasi-pupillary substitution. 6. Roman law. A testator's designation of a person to whom the property was to be given by the person named as heir, or by the heir of that person. — Also termed fideicommissary substitution. See FIDEICOMMISSUM. 7. Civil law. The designation of a person to succeed another as beneficiary of an estate, usu. involving a fideicommissum. — Also termed fideicommissary substitution. [Cases: Wills 553. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1071, 1076.]

SUBTERFUGE ARREST

subterfuge arrest. See ARREST.

SUBTERRANEAN WATER

subterranean water. See WATER.

SUBTRACTION

subtraction. 1. The process of deducting one number from another number to determine the difference. 2. Hist. The act of neglecting a duty or service that one party owes to another, esp. one that arises out of land tenure.

“Subtraction, which is the fifth species of injuries affecting a man's real property, happens, when any person who owes any suit, duty, custom, or service to another, withdraws or neglects to perform it. It differs from a disseisin, in that this is committed without any denial of the right, consisting merely in non-performance; that strikes at the very title of the party injured, and amounts to an ouster or actual dispossession. Subtraction however, being clearly an injury, is remediable by due course of law: but the remedy differs according to the nature of the services; whether they be due by virtue of any tenure, or by custom only.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 230 (1768).

SUBTRACTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS subtraction of conjugal rights.Hist. The act of a husband and wife unlawfully living apart.

SUBTRAHEND

subtrahend (s<<schwa>>b-tr<<schwa>>-hend). In a mathematical equation, the amount subtracted from another number (the minuend) to arrive at a remainder or balance. • The term is used in law in a variety of accounting contexts. Cf. MINUEND.

SUBURBANI

suburbani (s<<schwa>>b-<<schwa>>r-bay-nl), n.[Latin] Hist. Husbandmen.

SUBVENTION

subvention (s<<schwa>>b-ven-sh<<schwa>>n). A grant of financial aid or assistance; a subsidy. [Cases: United States 82. C.J.S. United States § 155.]

SUBVERSION

subversion. The process of overthrowing, destroying, or corrupting <subversion of legal principles> <subversion of the government>.

“Subversion can succeed where diplomacy has failed. Subversion exceeds the bounds of diplomacy in that it employs methods which diplomacy abhors; it does not wince at assassination, riot, pillage, and arson, if it believes these to be useful in the attainment of its ends. Subversion is a form of war. It may include the use of propaganda ... to sway the thinking and action of influential social groups, especially attempting to discredit the leadership of the target area, labeling it as the ‘tool’ of ... any convenient target for emotional hatred. By inflaming passion, the purveyors of violent propaganda can stir up peaceful citizens so that in minutes they are transformed into a terrifying mob. The art of subversion has developed the technique of the manipulation of mobs to a high degree.” T. Wyckoff, War by Subversion, 59 S. Atlantic Q. 36 (1960).

“Prior to World War II, subversive activities were thought to cover cases where states attempted to achieve certain political ends of fomenting civil strife in another state or by supporting rebellion against the legally established government of another state by giving to the rebels supplies of personnel, training facilities, war materials, or munitions and by engaging in hostile propaganda against the victim state and its government.... By the beginning of World War II, the concept of subversion had been expanded to include the attempt of one state to weaken or overthrow the government of another by means of infiltration of its governmental apparatus with conspirators who strongly opposed the domestic policy of their own government and willingly served as clandestine instruments in the conduct of an alien state's foreign policy. But with increased militancy of modern ideologies, ... subversive activities are no longer seen in many quarters as advancing the foreign policy of a nation or nations, but rather are thought to advance universal human values, i.e., the specific ideological theory adhered to." Ann Van Wynen Thomas & A.J. Thomas Jr., The Concept of Aggression in International Law 72–73 (1972).

"Today, the term subversion designates all illegal activities, whether direct or indirect, overt or covert, conducted under the auspices of a state and designed to overthrow the established government or vitally disrupt the public order of another state. Subversion combines psychological, political, social, and economic actions, as well as active military or paramilitary operations, and it is generally a sustained, long-run, intermeshed, and coordinated process. Consequently, it is usually impossible to place acts of subversion into neat little categorical definitions. Subversion, being a technique of opportunity, is successful mainly in areas where social and political revolution is at least incipient." Id. 80–81.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES CONTROL ACT OF 1950

Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950. See MCCARRAN ACT.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITY

SUCCESSIO

successio (s<<schwa>>k-sesh-ee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A succession to something, as to an estate by will or by the laws of intestacy.

SUCCESSIO IN UNIVERSUM JUS successio in universum jus (s<<schwa>>k-ses[h]-ee-oh in yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>m j<<schwa>>s). [Latin "succession to universal right"] Roman law. The succession on death to the entirety of a deceased person's assets and liabilities. See hereditas jacens under HEREDITAS.

SUCCESSION

succession, n. 1. The act or right of legally or officially taking over a predecessor's office, rank, or duties. 2. The acquisition of rights or property by inheritance under the laws of descent and distribution; DESCENT (1). [Cases: Descent and Distribution 1–43. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 71, 84; Descent and Distribution §§ 1–49; Right of Privacy and Publicity § 42.] — succeed, vb.

hereditary succession. See intestate succession.

intestate succession. 1. The method used to distribute property owned by a person who dies without a valid will. 2. Succession by the common law of descent. — Also termed hereditary succession; descent and distribution. See DESCENT(1). Cf. testate succession. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 20–43. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 23–49.]

irregular succession. Succession by special laws favoring certain persons or the state, rather than heirs (such as testamentary heirs) under the ordinary laws of descent. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 1. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 1–5.]

legal succession. The succession established by law, usu. in favor of the nearest relation of a deceased person.

lucrative succession. Scots law. See PRAECEPTIO HAEREDITATIS.

natural succession. Succession between natural persons, as in descent on the death of an ancestor. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 20–43. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 23–49.]

testamentary succession. Civil law. Succession resulting from the designation of an heir in a testament executed in the legally required form. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 44. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 50.]

testate succession. The passing of rights or property by will. Cf. intestate succession. [Cases: Wills 1. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1, 3, 174.]

universal succession. Succession to an entire estate of another at death. • This type of succession carries with it the predecessor's liabilities as well as assets. Originally developed by Roman law and later continued by civil law, this concept has now been widely adopted as an option endorsed and authorized by the Uniform Probate Code. La. Civ. Code art. 3506(28).

vacant succession. Civil law. 1. A succession that fails either because there are no known heirs or because the heirs have renounced the estate. 2. An estate that has suffered such a failure. See ESCHEAT.

3. The right by which one group, in replacing another group, acquires all the goods, movables, and other chattels of a corporation. [Cases: Corporations 445.1. C.J.S. Corporations § 657.] 4. The continuation of a corporation's legal status despite changes in ownership or management. — Also termed artificial succession. [Cases: Corporations 1.1. C.J.S. Corporations § 2.]

perpetual succession. The continuous succession of a corporation — despite changes in shareholders and officers — for as long as the corporation legally exists. [Cases: Corporations 36. C.J.S. Corporations § 52.]

“As a general rule, the words ‘perpetual succession,’ as used in charters, often in connection with a further provision limiting the period of corporate existence to a certain number of years, mean nothing more than that the corporation shall have continuous and uninterrupted succession so long as it shall continue to exist as a corporation, and are not intended to define its duration.” 18 Am. Jur. 2d Corporations § 69, at 883 (1985).

SUCCESSIONAL

SUE-AND-LABOR CLAUSE

sue-and-labor clause. Marine insurance. A provision establishing that the marine insurer will cover the costs incurred by the insured in protecting the covered property from damage or minimizing actual damages to the property. • The clause generally requires the insurer to “sue and labor” to protect the insured party's interests. — Also termed rescue clause. [Cases: Insurance 2195, 2245(2). C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1118, 1215.]

“Some insurance today is written against ‘all risks’ Besides the perils clause ... recovery under the policy can be had on the entirely separate ‘sue and labor’ clause Under this clause, the underwriter may become liable for certain charges incurred by the assured in caring for the insured property, whether or not there is any actual loss or damage. Where sue-and-labor charges are incurred and loss also occurs, the underwriter may become liable for more than the policy amount, which limits only a claim for loss of or damage to the goods or vessel.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 2-10, at 75 (2d ed. 1975).

SUE FACTS

sue facts. Facts that determine whether a party should bring a lawsuit; esp., facts determining whether a shareholder-derivative action should be instituted under state law.

SUFFRAGAN

suffragan (s<<schwa>>-f-r<<schwa>>-g<<schwa>>n). A titular bishop ordained to assist a bishop of the diocese in the church business; a deputy or assistant bishop. • Suffragans were originally appointed only to replace absent bishops and were called chorepiscopi (“bishops of the county”), as distinguished from the regular bishops of the city or see.

SUFFRAGE

suffrage (s<<schwa>>-f-rj).1. The right or privilege of casting a vote at a public election. — Also termed right to vote. [Cases: Elections 1.C.J.S. Elections §§ 1(1, 10), 2.]

“In the United States suffrage is a privilege, franchise or trust conferred by the people upon such persons as it deems fittest to represent it in the choice of magistrates or in the performance of political duties which it would be inexpedient or inconvenient for the people to perform in a body. The person upon whom the franchise is conferred is called an elector or voter. No community extends suffrage to all persons, but places such restrictions upon it as may best subserve the ends of government.” George W. McCrary, A Treatise on the American Law of Elections § 1, at 2 (Henry L. McCune ed., 4th ed. 1897).

2. A vote; the act of voting.

SUICIDE

suicide, n. 1. The act of taking one's own life. — Also termed self-killing; self-destruction; self-slaughter; self-murder; felony-de-se; death by one's own hand. [Cases: Suicide 1. C.J.S. Suicide §§ 2–5, 11.]

assisted suicide. The intentional act of providing a person with the medical means or the medical knowledge to commit suicide. — Also termed assisted self-determination; (when a doctor provides the means) physician-assisted suicide. Cf. EUTHANASIA. [Cases: Suicide 3. C.J.S. Suicide §§ 8–12.]

attempted suicide. An unsuccessful suicidal act. [Cases: Suicide 2. C.J.S. Suicide § 6–7.]

physician-assisted suicide. See assisted suicide.

police-assisted suicide. See suicide-by-cop.

suicide-by-cop. Slang. A form of suicide in which the suicidal person intentionally engages in life-threatening behavior to induce a police officer to shoot the person. • Frequently, the decedent attacks the officer or otherwise threatens the officer's life, but occasionally a third person's life is at risk. A suicide-by-cop is distinguished from other police shootings by three elements. The person must: (1) evince an intent to die; (2) consciously understand the finality of the act; and (3) confront a law-enforcement official with behavior so extreme that it compels that officer to act with deadly force. — Also termed police-assisted suicide; victim-precipitated homicide.

2. A person who has taken his or her own life. — Also termed felo-de-se; felon-de-se; felon of oneself. — suicidal, adj.

SUI GENERIS

sui generis (s[y]oo-Ior-soo-ee jen-<<schwa>>-ris). [Latin “of its own kind”] Of its own kind or class; unique or peculiar. • The term is used in intellectual-property law to describe a regime designed to protect rights that fall outside the traditional patent, trademark, copyright, and trade-secret doctrines. For example, a database may not be protected by copyright law if its content is not original, but it could be protected by a sui generis statute designed for that purpose.

SUI HEREDES

sui heredes (s[y]oo-I h*<<schwa>>*-ree-deez). [Latin] Roman law. One's own heirs. — Also spelled sui haeredes. — Often shortened to sui. See SUUS HERES .

“If a man died without a will, his property went to his sui heredes (own heirs, direct heirs), that is, to the persons who were previously under his potestas, but were released from it by his death. If he had adopted as son a person not connected with him by birth, that person was included among the sui heredes; on the other hand, a son by birth whom he had emancipated was ... excluded from the sui heredes....” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 134 (1881).

SUI JURIS

sui juris (s[y]oo-Ior-soo-ee joor-is). [Latin “of one's own right; independent”] 1. Of full age and capacity. 2. Possessing full social and civil rights. 3. Roman law. Of or relating to anyone of any age, male or female, not in the potestas of another, and therefore capable of owning property and enjoying private-law rights. • As a status, it was not relevant to public law.

SURDUS

surdus (s<<schwa>>r-d<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin] Roman law. A deaf person. • A wholly deaf and mute person could not lawfully make a will before the time of Justinian, who modified the law.

SURETY

surety (shuur[-<<schwa>>]-tee). 1. A person who is primarily liable for the payment of another's debt or the performance of another's obligation. • Although a surety is similar to an insurer, one important difference is that a surety often receives no compensation for assuming liability. A surety differs from a guarantor, who is liable to the creditor only if the debtor does not meet the duties owed to the creditor; the surety is directly liable. Cf. GUARANTOR. [Cases: Principal and Surety 1, 65–66. C.J.S. Principal and Surety §§ 2–5, 70, 72.]

same consideration. He is an original promisor and debtor from the beginning, and is held ordinarily to know every default of this principal. Usually the surety will not be discharged, either by the mere indulgence of the creditor to the principal, or by want of notice of the default of the principal, no matter how much he may be injured thereby. On the other hand, the contract of the guarantor is his own separate undertaking, in which the principal does not join. It is usually entered into before or after that of the principal, and is often founded on a separate consideration from that supporting the contract of the principal.” 1 George W. Brandt, The Law of Suretyship and Guaranty § 2, at 9 (3d ed. 1905).

“A surety, in the broad sense, is one who is liable for the debt or obligation of another, whether primarily or secondarily, conditionally or unconditionally. In other words, the term surety includes anyone who is bound on an obligation which, as between himself and another person who is bound to the obligee for the same performance, the latter obligor should discharge. In this sense, suretyship includes all accessorial obligations. By such terminology, guarantors and indorsers are kinds of sureties A surety, in the narrow sense, is one who is liable in form primarily on the debt or obligation of another. His obligation is accessorial to that of the principal debtor, but it is direct and not conditioned on the principal debtor's default. In this sense, suretyship differs from guaranty and indorsement, which are conditional, secondary obligations The word surety is in the majority of American decisions used in the narrower sense to indicate a primary obligation to pay another's debt, to distinguish it from the secondary obligation of a guarantor. This terminology has the advantage of indicating by the use of the one word ‘surety’ an obligation which is at once one to pay another's debt, but which at the same time is not conditioned upon another's default.” Laurence P. Simpson, Handbook on the Law of Suretyship 6, 8–9 (1950).

accommodation surety. See voluntary surety.

compensated surety. A surety who is paid for becoming obliged to the creditor; esp., one that engages in the business of executing suretyship contracts in exchange for premiums, which are determined by an actuarial computation of risks. • A bonding company is a typical example of a compensated surety. — Also termed commercial surety.

cosurety. See COSURETY.

gratuitous surety. A surety who is not compensated for becoming obliged to the creditor. • Perhaps the most common example is the parent who signs as a surety for a child.

subsurety. See SUBSURETY.

supplemental surety. A surety for a surety.

surety of the peace. Hist. A surety responsible for ensuring that a person will not commit a future offense. • It is required of one against whom there are probable grounds to suspect future misbehavior. See SUPPLICAVIT.

surety company. See COMPANY.

SURETY INSURANCE

surety insurance. See guaranty insurance under INSURANCE.

SURETYSHIP

suretyship. 1. The legal relation that arises when one party assumes liability for a debt, default, or other failing of a second party. • The liability of both parties begins simultaneously. In other words, under a contract of suretyship, a surety becomes a party to the principal obligation. — Also termed (archaically) pledgery. [Cases: Principal and Surety 1, 65, 66. C.J.S. Principal and Surety §§ 2–5, 70, 72.] 2. The lending of credit to aid a principal who does not have sufficient credit. • The purpose is to guard against loss if the principal debtor were to default. 3. The position or status of a surety.

involuntary suretyship. A suretyship that arises incidentally, when the chief object of the contract is to accomplish some other purpose. [Cases: Principal and Surety 11. C.J.S. Principal and Surety §§ 24, 33.]

personal suretyship. A suretyship in which the surety is answerable in damages. [Cases: Principal and Surety 65. C.J.S. Principal and Surety § 70.]

real suretyship. A suretyship in which specified property can be taken, but the surety is not answerable in damages. [Cases: Principal and Surety 65. C.J.S. Principal and Surety § 70.]

suretyship by operation of law. A suretyship that the law creates when a third party promises a debtor to assume and pay the debt that the debtor owes to a creditor. [Cases: Principal and Surety 14. C.J.S. Principal and Surety § 35.]

voluntary suretyship. A suretyship in which the chief object of the contract is to make one party a surety.

SURFACE

surface. 1. The top layer of something, esp. of land. 2. Mining law. An entire portion of land, including mineral deposits, except those specifically reserved. • The meaning of the term varies, esp. when used in legal instruments, depending on the language used, the intention of the parties, the business involved, and the nature and circumstances of the transaction. 3. Mining law. The part of the geologic section lying over the minerals in question.

SURFACE CASING

surface casing. See CASING.

SURFACE-DAMAGE CLAUSE

surface-damage clause. Oil & gas. A lease provision requiring the lessee to pay the lessor or the surface-interest owner for all or for a specified kind or degree of damage to the surface that results from oil-and-gas operations. — Also termed location-damage clause; damages clause.

SURFACE INTEREST

surface interest. Oil & gas. Every right in real property other than the mineral interest. • The surface-interest owner has the right to the surface subject to the right of the mineral-interest owner to use the surface. The surface-interest owner is entitled to whatever nonmineral substances are found in or under the soil. — Also termed surface right. Cf. MINERAL INTEREST ; SUBSURFACE INTEREST. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 55(6). C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 177, 180, 182–185, 428, 434–435.]

SURFACE ISSUE

surface issue. See ISSUE(1).

SURFACE TRANSPORTATION BOARD

Surface Transportation Board. A unit in the U.S. Department of Transportation responsible for the economic regulation of interstate surface transportation, primarily railroads. • Its jurisdiction includes railroad-rate and -service issues, railroad-company mergers and related labor matters; certain truck and ocean shipping rates; certain intercity bus-company structures; and certain pipeline matters not regulated by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. — Abbr. STB.

SURFACE WATER

surface water. See WATER.

SURGEON GENERAL

Surgeon General. 1. The chief medical officer of the U.S. Public Health Service or of a state public-health agency. 2. The chief officer of the medical departments in the armed forces. — Abbr. SG.

SURMISE

surmise (s<<schwa>>r-mIz), n. 1. An idea based on weak evidence; conjecture. 2. Hist. A suggestion, esp. to a court. 3. Hist. Eccles. law. An allegation in the complaint. • A collateral surmise is a surmise of a fact not contained in the libel. See LIBEL(3).

SURNAME

surname. See NAME.

SURPLICE FEES

surplice fees (s<<schwa>>r-plis feez).Eccles. law. Fees paid to clergy for performing occasional duties, such as marriages, funerals, and baptisms.

SURPLUS

surplus. 1. The remainder of a thing; the residue or excess. 2. The excess of receipts over disbursements. 3. Funds that remain after a partnership has been dissolved and all its debts paid. 4. A corporation's net worth, beyond the par value of capital stock. — Also termed overplus.

accumulated surplus.Earnings in excess of a corporation's capital and liabilities.

acquired surplus.The surplus gained by the purchase of another business.

actuarial surplus.See ACTUARIAL SURPLUS.

appreciation surplus.See revaluation surplus.

appropriated surplus. 1. The portion of surplus earmarked for a specific purpose. — Also termed reserved surplus. 2. See appropriated retained earnings under EARNINGS.

capital surplus. 1. All surplus (such as paid-in surplus or donated surplus) not arising from the accumulation of profits; a company's surplus other than earned surplus, usu. created by financial reorganization or gifts. 2. See paid-in surplus.

donated surplus. 1. Assets (such as stock) contributed to a corporation. 2. The increase in the shareholders' equity account resulting from such a contribution.

earned surplus.See retained earnings under EARNINGS.

initial surplus.The surplus that appears on the financial statement at the beginning of an accounting period, but that does not reflect the operations for the statement's period.

paid-in surplus.The surplus gained by the sale, exchange, or issuance of capital stock at a price above par value. — Also termed capital surplus; premium on capital stock.

reserved surplus.See appropriated surplus (1).

restricted surplus.A surplus with a limited or restricted use; esp., the portion of retained earnings that cannot be distributed as dividends. • The restriction is usu. due to preferred dividends in arrears, a covenant in a loan agreement, or some decision of the board of directors. See retained earnings under EARNINGS.

revaluation surplus.Surplus that is gained when assets are reappraised at a higher value. — Also termed appreciation surplus.

trade surplus.The excess of merchandise exports over merchandise imports during a specific period. Cf. trade deficit under DEFICIT.

unearned surplus. Corporations. The total of amounts assigned to shares in excess of stated capital, surplus arising from a revaluation of assets above cost, and contributions other than for shares, whether from shareholders or others.

SURPLUSAGE

surplusage (s<<schwa>>r-pl<<schwa>>s-ij). 1. Redundant words in a statute or legal instrument; language that does not add meaning <the court must give effect to every word, reading nothing as mere surplusage>. [Cases: Statutes 202, 206. C.J.S. Statutes § 327.] 2. Extraneous matter in a pleading <allegations that are irrelevant to the case will be treated as surplusage>. [Cases: Indictment and Information 118. C.J.S. Indictments and Informations § 136.]

“Surplusage is to be avoided. The perfection of pleading is to combine the requisite certainty and precision with the greatest possible brevity of statement. ‘Surplusage’ ... includes matter of any description which is unnecessary to the maintenance of the action or defense. The rule requires the omission of such matter in two instances: (1) Where the matter is wholly foreign and irrelevant to the merits of the case. (2) When, though not wholly foreign, such matter need not be stated.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 316, at 514 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

SURPLUS PROFIT

surplus profit. See PROFIT(1).

SURPLUS REVENUE

surplus revenue. See appropriated retained earnings under EARNINGS.

SURPLUS WATER

surplus water. See WATER.

SURPRISE

surprise. An occurrence for which there is no adequate warning or that affects someone in an unexpected way. • In a trial, the procedural rules are designed to limit surprise — or trial by ambush — as much as possible. For example, the parties in a civil case are permitted to conduct discovery, to determine the essential facts of the case and the identities of possible witnesses, and to inspect relevant documents. At trial, if a party calls a witness who has not been previously identified, the witness's testimony may be excluded if it would unfairly surprise and prejudice the other party. And if a party has diligently prepared the case and is nevertheless taken by surprise on a material point at trial, that fact can sometimes be grounds for a new trial or for relief from the judgment under Rules 59 and 60 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

surrebuttal (s<<schwa>>r-ri-b<<schwa>>t-<<schwa>>l). The response to the opposing party's rebuttal in a trial or other proceeding; a rebuttal to a rebuttal <called two extra witnesses in surrebuttal>. [Cases: Criminal Law 683; Federal Civil Procedure 2015; Trial 64. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1219; Trial § 197.]

SURREBUTTER

surrebutter (s<<schwa>>r-ri-b<<schwa>>t-<<schwa>>r). Common-law pleading. The plaintiff's answer of fact to the defendant's rebutter. [Cases: Pleading 185.]

SURREJOINDER

surrejoinder (s<<schwa>>r-ri-joyn-d<<schwa>>r). Common-law pleading. The plaintiff's answer to the defendant's rejoinder. See REPLICATION. [Cases: Pleading 184.]

“Where the common-law system of pleading is in force, the pleadings do not terminate with the plaintiff's replication. The defendant may interpose a rejoinder to the replication, and the plaintiff a surrejoinder to the defendant's rejoinder. Then follows the rebutter, which in turn may be met by a surrebutter.” 61A Am. Jur. 2d Pleading § 193, at 192 (1981).

SURRENDER

surrender, n. 1. The act of yielding to another's power or control. 2. The giving up of a right or claim; RELEASE(1). [Cases: Release 1. C.J.S. Release §§ 2–3, 5–8, 19.] 3. The return of an estate to the person who has a reversion or remainder, so as to merge the estate into a larger estate. Cf. MERGER(4).

“Merger bears a very near resemblance, in circumstances and effect, to a surrender; but the analogy does not hold in all cases, though there is not any case in which merger will take place, unless the right of making and surrender resided in the parties between whom the merger takes place. To a surrender, it is requisite that the tenant of the particular estate should relinquish his estate in favor of the tenant of the next vested estate, in remainder or reversion. But merger is confined to the cases in which the tenant of the estate in reversion or remainder grants that estate to the tenant of the particular estate, or in which the particular tenant grants his estate to him in reversion or remainder. Surrender is the act of the party, and merger is the act of the law.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *100 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

4. Commercial law. The delivery of an instrument so that the delivery releases the deliverer from all liability. [Cases: Bills and Notes 438. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 240–241.] 5. A tenant's relinquishment of possession before the lease has expired, allowing the landlord to take possession and treat the lease as terminated. — Also termed (in sense 5) surrender of term. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 109. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 120, 123–124.] — surrender, vb.

SURRENDER BY BAIL

surrender by bail.A surety's delivery of a prisoner, who had been released on bail, into custody. [Cases: Bail 80. C.J.S. Bail; Release and Detention Pending Proceedings §§ 136–139.]

SURRENDER BY OPERATION OF LAW surrender by operation of law.An act that is an equivalent to an agreement by a tenant to abandon property and the landlord to resume possession, as when the parties perform an act so inconsistent with the landlord–tenant relationship that surrender is presumed, or when a tenant performs some act that would not be valid if the estate continued to exist. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 109(1). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 121, 127.]

SURRENDER CLAUSE

surrender clause.Oil & gas. A provision commonly found in oil-and-gas leases authorizing a lessee to release its rights to all or any portion of the leased property at any time and to be relieved of further obligations on the acreage surrendered.

SURRENDEREE

surrenderee. One to whom a surrender is made. See SURRENDER.

SURRENDERER

surrenderer. See SURRENDEROR.

SURRENDER OF A CRIMINAL surrender of a criminal.An officer's delivery of a prisoner to the authorities in the appropriate jurisdiction. See EXTRADITION; RENDITION. [Cases: Extradition and Detainers 16, 36.]

SURRENDER OF A PREFERENCE surrender of a preference.Bankruptcy. The yielding of a voidable conveyance, transfer, assignment, or encumbrance by a creditor to the trustee as a condition of allowing the creditor's claim. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2824.C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 239.]

SURRENDER OF CHARTER

surrender of charter.Corporations. The dissolution of a corporation by a formal yielding of its charter to the state under which it was created and the subsequent acceptance of that charter by the state. [Cases: Corporations 610(1). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 835–837.]

“The surrender of a charter can be made only by some formal, solemn act of the corporation, and will be of no avail until accepted by the government. There must be the same agreement of the parties to dissolve that there was to form the compact. It is the acceptance which gives efficacy to the surrender. Consent of the state is sometimes given by general statute.” 19 Am. Jur. 2d Corporations § 2738, at 546 (1986).

SURRENDER OF COPYHOLD

surrender of copyhold.Hist. The transfer by a tenant of a copyhold estate by yielding it to the lord in trust for the transferee according to the terms in the surrender. • In normal practice, the tenant went to the steward of the manor and delivered a rod, a glove, or other customary symbol, thereby conveying to the lord (through the steward) all interest and title to the estate, in trust, to be then granted by the lord to the transferee. See COPYHOLD.

SURRENDER OF TERM

surrender of term. See SURRENDER(5).

SURRENDEROR

surrenderor. One who surrenders; esp., one who yields up a copyhold estate for conveyance. — Also spelled surrenderer. See COPYHOLD.

SURRENDER TO USES OF WILL surrender to uses of will. Hist. A required yielding of a copyhold interest passed by will to the will's uses. • The requirement was abolished by St. 55 Geo. 3, ch. 192.

SURRENDER VALUE

surrender value. See cash surrender value under VALUE(2).

SURREPTITIOUS

surreptitious (s<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>p-tish-<<schwa>>s), adj. (Of conduct) unauthorized and clandestine; stealthily and usu. fraudulently done < surreptitious interception of electronic communications is prohibited under wiretapping laws>. [Cases: Telecommunications 494. C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television §§ 247–249, 254, 264–265.]

SURROGATE PARENT

surrogate parent. 1. PARENT. 2. See surrogate mother under MOTHER.

SURROGATE-PARENTING AGREEMENT surrogate-parenting agreement. A contract between a woman and typically an infertile couple under which the woman provides her uterus to carry an embryo throughout pregnancy; esp., an agreement between a person (the intentional parent) and a woman (the surrogate mother) providing that the surrogate mother will (1) bear a child for the intentional parent, and (2) relinquish any and all rights to the child. • If the surrogate mother is married, her husband must also consent to the terms of the surrogacy contract. The agreement usu. provides that the woman will relinquish to the couple any parental rights she may have upon the birth of the child. Complex issues arise concerning who is the parent of the resulting child: the genetic donor of egg or sperm, a spouse of either donor, the surrogate, or the person intending to care for the resulting child? American jurisdictions are split on the interpretation and enforceability of these contracts. — Also termed surrogacy contract. See surrogate mother under MOTHER; intended child under CHILD; intentional parent under PARENT. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock 1; Contracts 108(2). C.J.S. Children Out-of-Wedlock §§ 2–11; Contracts §§ 269–270, 272–273, 277.]

SURROGATE'S COURT

surveyor of the port. Hist. A U.S. customs revenue officer appointed for each principal port of entry to oversee the inspection and valuation of imports. • The office was abolished in 1953.

SURVIVAL ACTION

survival action. A lawsuit brought on behalf of a decedent's estate for injuries or damages incurred by the decedent immediately before dying. • A survival action derives from the claim that a decedent would have had — such as for pain and suffering — if he or she had survived. In contrast is a claim that the beneficiaries may have in a wrongful-death action, such as for loss of consortium or loss of support from the decedent. Cf. WRONGFUL-DEATH ACTION . [Cases: Death 10. C.J.S. Death §§ 21, 102.]

SURVIVAL CLAUSE

survival clause. Wills & estates. A testamentary provision conditioning a bequest on a beneficiary's living for a specified period, often 60 days, after the testator's death. • If the beneficiary dies within the stated period, the testamentary gift usu. accrues to the residuary estate. — Also termed survivorship clause. Cf. SIMULTANEOUS-DEATH CLAUSE.

SURVIVAL STATUTE

survival statute. A law that modifies the common law by allowing certain actions to continue in favor of a personal representative after the death of the party who could have originally brought the action; esp., a law that provides for the estate's recovery of damages incurred by the decedent immediately before death. Cf. DEATH STATUTE. [Cases: Death 10. C.J.S. Death §§ 21, 102.]

SURVIVANCE

survivance. The right of succession (as to an office or to an estate) of a survivor named before the death of the incumbent or the holder.

SURVIVING

surviving, adj. Remaining alive; living beyond the happening of an event so as to entitle one to a distribution of property or income <surviving spouse>. See SURVIVAL ACTION.

SURVIVING CORPORATION

SUSCEPTIBILITY

susceptibility. See SUBJECTION(3).

SUSPECT

suspect, n. A person believed to have committed a crime or offense.

suspect, vb. 1. To consider (something) to be probable. 2. To consider (something) possible. 3. To consider (a person) as having probably committed wrongdoing, but without certain truth.

reasonably suspect. 1. To consider (something) to be probable under circumstances in which a reasonable person would be led to that conclusion. 2. To consider (someone) as having probably committed wrongdoing under circumstances in which a reasonable person would be led to that conclusion.

SUSPECT CLASS

suspect class. A group identified or defined in a suspect classification.

SUSPECT CLASSIFICATION suspect classification. Constitutional law. A statutory classification based on race, national origin, or alienage, and thereby subject to strict scrutiny under equal-protection analysis. • Examples of laws creating suspect classifications are those permitting only U.S. citizens to receive welfare benefits and setting quotas for the government's hiring of minority contractors. See STRICT SCRUTINY. Cf. FUNDAMENTAL RIGHT. [Cases: Constitutional Law 213.1(1). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 714–715, 718.]

quasi-suspect classification. A statutory classification based on gender or legitimacy, and therefore subject to intermediate scrutiny under equal-protection analysis. • Examples of laws creating a quasi-suspect classification are those permitting alimony for women only and providing for an all-male draft. See INTERMEDIATE SCRUTINY. [Cases: Constitutional Law 213.1(1), 224(1). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 714–715, 718, 733–734, 941–944.]

suspend, vb. 1. To interrupt; postpone; defer <the fire alarm suspended the prosecutor's opening statement>. 2. To temporarily keep (a person) from performing a function, occupying an office, holding a job, or exercising a right or privilege <the attorney's law license was suspended for violating the Model Rules of Professional Conduct>. [Cases: Licenses 38; Officers and Public Employees 65. C.J.S. Agriculture §§ 4.5; Architects § 10; Licenses §§ 48, 50–63; Officers and Public Employees §§ 139, 141–142.]

suspend the rules. Parliamentary law. To pass a motion that overrides an agenda or other procedural rule, for a limited time and purpose, so that the deliberative assembly may take some otherwise obstructed action.

“When a body wishes to do something that cannot be done without violating its own rules, but yet that is not in conflict with the constitution or with any controlling statutory provision, it ‘suspends the rules that interfere with’ the proposed action. Suspension differs from amendment because it is limited in scope and in time. The object of the suspension must be specified, and nothing falling outside the stated limits of the motion to suspend the rules can be done under the suspension.” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 279, at 211 (2000).

SUSPENDATUR PER COLLUM

suspendatur per collum (s<<schwa>>s-pen-day-t<<schwa>>r p<<schwa>>r kahl-<<schwa>>m). [Law French] Hist. Let him be hanged by the neck. • This phrase was written by a judge in the margin of the sheriff's calendar, opposite the name of a prisoner who had been sentenced to death. — Abbr. sus. per coll.

“And now the usage is, for the judge to sign the calendar, or list of all the prisoners' names, with their separate judgments in the margin, which is left with the sheriff. As, for capital felony, it is written opposite to the prisoner's name, ‘hanged by the neck;’ formerly, in the days of Latin and abbreviation, ‘sus. per coll.’ for ‘suspendatur per collum.’ And this is the only warrant that the sheriff has for so material an act as taking away life of another.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 396 (1769).

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

suspended sentence. See SENTENCE.

SUSPENDED TRADING

suspended trading. See TRADING HALT.

SWEAT-OF-THE-BROW DOCTRINE

sweat-of-the-brow doctrine. Copyright. The now-discarded principle that copyrights can protect the labor and expense that went into a work, rather than the work's originality. • The Supreme Court rejected the sweat-of-the-brow doctrine in Feist Pubs., Inc. v. Rural Tel. Servs. Co., 499 U.S. 340, 111 S.Ct. 1282 (1991). Cf. SWEATWORK. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 12(1).]

SWEATSHOP

sweatshop. Slang. A business where the employees are overworked and underpaid in extreme conditions; esp., in lawyer parlance, a law firm that requires associates to work so hard that they barely (if at all) maintain a family or social life — though the firm may, in return, pay higher salaries.

SWEATWORK

sweatwork. Slang. A compilation, esp. a searchable computer database, that does not qualify for U.S. copyright protection because the underlying facts are not copyrightable and the compilation is not a nontrivial arrangement. • New forms of intellectual-property laws are aimed at protecting the “sweat-of-the-brow” investment that goes into compiling databases. Cf.

SWEAT-OF-THE-BROW DOCTRINE E.SWEEPING

SYMBIOTIC-RELATIONSHIP TEST

symbiotic-relationship test. The standard by which a private person may be considered a state actor — and may be liable for violating someone's constitutional rights — if the relationship between the private person and the government is so close that they can fairly be said to be acting jointly. • Private acts by a private person do not generally create liability for violating someone's constitutional rights. But if a private person violates someone's constitutional rights while engaging in state action, the private person, and possibly the government, can be held liable. State action may be shown by proving that the private person and the state have a mutually dependent (symbiotic) relationship. For example, a restaurant in a public parking garage was held to have engaged in discriminatory state action by refusing to serve African-Americans. Burton v. Wilmington Parking Auth., 365 U.S. 715, 81 S.Ct. 856 (1961). There, the Court found a symbiotic relationship because the restaurant relied on the garage for its existence and significantly contributed to the municipal parking authority's ability to maintain the garage. But the symbiotic-relationship test is strictly construed. For example, the fact that an entity receives financial support from — or is heavily regulated by — the government is probably insufficient to show a symbiotic relationship. Thus, although a state had granted a partial monopoly to a public utility, the Court refused to find a symbiotic relationship between them. Jackson v. Metropolitan Edison Co., 419 U.S. 345, 95 S.Ct. 449 (1974). See JOINT PARTICIPATION. Cf. STATE-COMPULSION TEST; NEXUS TEST. [Cases: Civil Rights 1326(5, 7); Constitutional Law 82(5), 213(4), 254(4). C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 92–94; Constitutional Law §§ 456, 619, 629, 631, 705, 719, 954–958.]

SYNERGISM

synergism (sin-<<schwa>>r-jiz-<<schwa>>m), n. Patents. 1. A combination of known elements or functions that create a result greater than the sum of the individual elements or functions. • Demonstrating that synergism exists is sometimes useful in proving nonobviousness. The U.S. Supreme Court held that synergism was a requirement for a combination patent in Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co. v. Supermarket Equip. Corp., 340 U.S. 147, 71 S.Ct. 127 (1950). But that holding was overturned by the Patent Act of 1952. 35 USCA § 103. [Cases: Patents 26(1.5). C.J.S. Patents §§ 83–84.] 2. A synopsis representation, esp. in columnar form, of the particulars of a subject, usu. to present diverse items in a way that can be more easily understood. • Examples include actuarial tables, genealogical tables (which show the names and relationships of all the persons constituting a family), and interest tables. 2. A formulation of laws inscribed on tablets, such as the Twelve Tables of Roman law. See TWELVE TABLES . 3.Parliamentary law. The secretary's desk.

table,vb. Parliamentary law. (Of a deliberative assembly) to set aside the pending business until the assembly votes to resume its consideration. • A matter that has been tabled may be brought up again by a vote of the assembly. — Also termed lay on the table; postpone temporarily.

“The early name of the motion to postpone temporarily was ‘lay on the table.’ (In American usage the phrase has been shortened, and the motion is now generally referred to as the motion ‘to table.’) The term grew out of the legislative custom of literally laying a bill awaiting further consideration on the clerk's table.

“The reference to ‘laying the motion on the table’ or ‘tabling’ is still widely used, but the more precise term, ‘postpone temporarily,’ is preferred when that is its purpose, because the term is self-explanatory.

“Sometimes, however, the purpose of the motion is not merely to postpone temporarily, but to set the motion aside indefinitely — in effect, to ‘kill’ it” Alice Sturgis, The Standard Code of Parliamentary Procedure 70 (4th ed. 2001).

TACK

tack,n. Scots law. A deed creating a lease of land or other immovable property for an annual rent payable in money, services, or fruits produced on the land. • The lessee may be referred to as a tacksman or tackswoman. — tack,vb.

tack,vb.1. To add (one's own period of land possession) to a prior possessor's period to establish continuous adverse possession for the statutory period. [Cases: Adverse Possession 43. C.J.S. Adverse Possession § 154.] 2. To annex (a junior lien) to a first lien to acquire priority over an intermediate lien.

“It is the established doctrine in the English law, that if there be three mortgages in succession, and all duly registered, or a mortgage, and then a judgment, and then a second mortgage upon the estate, the junior mortgagee may purchase in the first mortgage, and tack it to his mortgage, and by that contrivance ‘squeeze out’ the middle mortgage and gain preference over it. The same rule would apply if the first as well as the second incumbrance was a judgment; but the incumbrancer who tacks must always be a mortgagee, for he stands in the light of a bonâ fide purchaser, parting with his money upon the security of the mortgage.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *176 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

3.Scots law. To lease land or another immovable for an annual rent payable in money, services, or fruits produced on the land.

tail special.A tail limited to specified heirs of the donee's body. — Also termed special tail. [Cases: Estates in Property 12; Wills 604. C.J.S. Estates §§ 22–27; Wills § 1258.]

“Estates-tail are either general, or special.... Tenant in tail-special is where the gift is restrained to certain heirs ... and does not go to all of them in general. And this may happen in several ways. I shall instance in only one: as where lands and tenements are given to a man and the heirs of his body, on Mary his now wife to be begotten; here no issue can inherit, but such special issue as is engendered, between them two; not such as the husband may have by another wife: and therefore it is called special tail.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 113–14 (1766).

TALLY

tally. 1.Hist. A stick cut into two parts and marked with notches to show what was due between a debtor and creditor.

“The tally, used as a receipt for money or chattels, was a narrow wooden stick with notches of varying dimensions to represent the amount received. After the notches had been cut, the stick was split lengthwise into two unequal pieces. The longer, which contained a stump or handle and was called the ‘stock,’ was given to the person making the payment, and the shorter, a flat strip called the ‘foil,’ to the other party. If the sum involved was disputed, the two pieces could be fitted one to the other to see if they would ‘tally.’ ” C.H.S. Fifoot, History and Sources of the Common Law: Tort and Contract 223 (1949).

“A thousand pounds was marked by cutting out the thickness of the palm of the hand, a hundred by the breadth of the thumb, a score by the breadth of the little finger, one pound by that of a swelling barley-corn The terminology has left a permanent imprint on our language. If you lent money to the Bank of England, tallies were cut for the amount: the Bank kept the foil and you received the stock; you thus held ‘Bank Stock’ of the amount recorded upon it. When the form of cheque was adopted, it was not indeed called a foil, but the part retained by the payer is still the counterfoil; and the word ‘cheque’ itself goes back ultimately to the same root as ‘exchequer.’ ” Reginald L. Poole, The Exchequer in the Twelfth Century 86–93 (1912).

“From early times tallies were used in the Exchequer and this lasted until 1826. The burning of a large quantity of old tallies led to the burning down of the old Houses of Parliament.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1207 (1980).

tax,n. A monetary charge imposed by the government on persons, entities, transactions, or property to yield public revenue. • Most broadly, the term embraces all governmental impositions on the person, property, privileges, occupations, and enjoyment of the people, and includes duties, imposts, and excises. Although a tax is often thought of as being pecuniary in nature, it is not necessarily payable in money. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3001; Taxation 1, 856.1, 906.11, 931, 1201. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 2; Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6, 1693, 1783–1785, 1792, 1990, 1993.] — tax,vb.

“Taxes are the enforced proportional contributions from persons and property, levied by the state by virtue of its sovereignty for the support of government and for all public needs. This definition of taxes, often referred to as ‘Cooley's definition,’ has been quoted and indorsed, or approved, expressly or otherwise, by many different courts. While this definition of taxes characterizes them as ‘contributions,’ other definitions refer to them as ‘imposts,’ ‘duty or impost,’ ‘charges,’ ‘burdens,’ or ‘exactions’; but these variations in phraseology are of no practical importance.” 1 Thomas M. Cooley, The Law of Taxation § 1, at 61–63 (Clark A. Nichols ed., 4th ed. 1924).

accrued tax.A tax that has been incurred but not yet paid or payable.

accumulated-earnings tax.A penalty tax imposed on a corporation that has retained its earnings in an effort to avoid the income-tax liability arising once the earnings are distributed to shareholders as dividends. — Also termed undistributed-earnings tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3843–3845. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 381–382.]

additional tax.See stopgap tax.

admission tax.A tax imposed as part of the price of being admitted to a particular event.

[Cases: Theaters and Shows 3. C.J.S. Entertainment and Amusement; Sports §§ 18–19, 22, 25–37.]

ad valorem tax. A tax imposed proportionally on the value of something (esp. real property), rather than on its quantity or some other measure. [Cases: Taxation 1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.]

“[A]n ad valorem tax is a tax of a fixed proportion of the value of the property with respect to which the tax is assessed, and requires the intervention of assessors or appraisers to estimate the value of such property before the amount due from each taxpayer can be determined.” 71 Am. Jur. 2d State and Local Taxation §§ 20, at 355 (1973).

alternative minimum tax. A tax, often a flat rate, potentially imposed on corporations and higher-income individuals to ensure that those taxpayers do not avoid too much (or all) income-tax liability by legitimately using exclusions, deductions, and credits. — Abbr. AMT. — Also termed minimum tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3550. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 358–361.]

amusement tax. A tax on a ticket to a concert, sporting event, or the like. • The tax is usu. expressed as a percentage of the ticket price. [Cases: Theaters and Shows 3, 3.40, 3.60. C.J.S. Entertainment and Amusement; Sports §§ 18–19, 22, 24–37, 48.]

betterment tax. See BETTERMENT TAX.

capital-gains tax. A tax on income derived from the sale of a capital asset. • The federal income tax on capital gains typically has a more favorable tax rate — for example, 20% for an individual and 34% for a corporation — than the otherwise applicable tax rate on ordinary income. See CAPITAL GAIN. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3230.1–3260. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 127–145, 490–491.]

capital-stock tax. 1. A tax on capital stock in the hands of a stockholder. [Cases: Taxation 119.] 2. A state tax for conducting business in the corporate form, usu. imposed on out-of-state corporations for the privilege of doing business in the state. • The tax is usu. assessed as a percentage of the par or assigned value of a corporation's capital stock.

capitation tax. See poll tax.

classified tax. A tax system in which different rates are assessed against different types of taxed property.

collateral-inheritance tax. A tax levied on the transfer of property by will or intestate succession to a person other than the spouse, a parent, or a descendant of the decedent. Cf. legacy tax. [Cases: Taxation 856.1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1783–1785, 1792.]

commutation tax. 1. A combination of two or more taxes that is or can be substituted for something else that could be imposed, such as a demand for other taxes or the performance of personal services. • For example, an excise or franchise tax may be combined with a local tax in lieu of all other taxes related to the subject matter. 2.Hist. A tax imposed on shipowners, requiring them to post a bond or remit a payment per foreign passenger. • In the 19th-century, the tax was used to discourage immigration and to raise revenue to defray the costs of supporting indigent immigrants who had remained in the U.S. 3.Hist. A 1784 tax intended to reduce tea-smuggling and increase tax revenue by cutting the tax on tea and raising the tax on windows. • To avoid payment of the tax, many people boarded up their windows.

consumption tax.A tax imposed on sale of goods or services to be consumed. [Cases: Taxation 1201.1.]

death tax. 1. See estate tax. 2. See inheritance tax.

delinquent tax.A tax not paid when due. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4827; Taxation 526, 903, 906.20, 1096, 1331. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 725–726; Taxation §§ 883–884, 1777–1778, 1976, 1978–1981, 2055.]

direct tax.A tax that is imposed on property, as distinguished from a tax on a right or privilege. • A direct tax is presumed to be borne by the person upon whom it is assessed, and not “passed on” to some other person. Ad valorem and property taxes are direct taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3059–3064; Taxation 1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 4; Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.]

documentary-stamp transfer tax.See stamp tax.

erroneous tax. 1. A tax levied without statutory authority. [Cases: Taxation 498, 536, 608(2). C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare § 208; Taxation §§ 801–804, 915, 1093.] 2. A tax on property not subject to taxation. 3. A tax levied by an officer who lacks authority to levy the tax. — Also termed illegal tax.

estate tax.A tax imposed on the transfer of property by will or by intestate succession. — Also termed death tax; death duty. Cf. inheritance tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4145; Taxation 856.1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 500–502; Taxation §§ 1783–1785, 1792.]

estimated tax.A tax paid quarterly by a taxpayer not subject to withholding (such as a self-employed person) based on either the previous year's tax liability or an estimate of the current year's tax liability. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4827, 4832, 5219.40; Taxation 1096. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 725–726, 733, 821; Taxation §§ 1777–1778.]

excess-profits tax.A tax levied on profits that are beyond a business's normal profits. • This type of tax is usu. imposed only in times of national emergency (such as war) to discourage profiteering. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4130–4136. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 670.]

excise lieu property tax.A tax on the gross premiums received and collected by designated classes of insurance companies. [Cases: Taxation 140. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 217–218.]

excise tax.See EXCISE.

export tax.A tax levied on merchandise and goods shipped or to be shipped out of a country.

flat tax.A tax whose rate remains fixed regardless of the amount of the tax base. • Most sales taxes are flat taxes. — Also termed proportional tax. Cf. progressive tax; regressive tax. [Cases: Taxation 1281. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 2035–2036.]

floor tax.A tax imposed on distilled spirits stored in a warehouse. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4314. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 597.]

franchise tax.A tax imposed on the privilege of carrying on a business (esp. as a corporation), usu. measured by the business's income. See FRANCHISE. [Cases: Taxation 117. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 177–180, 199.]

general tax. 1. A tax that returns no special benefit to the taxpayer other than the support of governmental programs that benefit all. [Cases: Taxation 1, 22. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.] 2. A property tax or an ad valorem tax that is imposed for no special purpose except to produce public revenue. Cf. special assessment under ASSESSMENT.

generation-skipping tax.A tax on a property transfer that skips a generation. • The tax limits the use of generation-skipping techniques as a means of avoiding estate taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4220. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 576–578.]

generation-skipping transfer tax.A gift or estate tax imposed on a generation-skipping transfer or a generation-skipping trust. — Sometimes shortened to generation-skipping tax; transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2601–2663. See DIRECT SKIP; GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER; generation-skipping trust under TRUST; TAXABLE DISTRIBUTION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4220–4228. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 576–578.]

gift tax.A tax imposed when property is voluntarily and gratuitously transferred. • Under federal law, the gift tax is imposed on the donor, but some states tax the donee. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4200; Taxation 906.10. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 493–494, 499, 557–565, 573–575; Taxation §§ 1783–1784.]

graduated tax.A tax employing a rate schedule with higher marginal rates for larger taxable bases (income, property, transfer, etc.) — Also termed progressive tax.

gross-income tax.A tax on gross income, possibly after deduction for costs of goods sold, rather than on net profits; an income tax without allowance for expenses or deductions. See gross income under INCOME. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3110; Taxation 979, 1202.5. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 59–60; Taxation § 1991.]

gross-receipts tax.A tax on a business's gross receipts, without a deduction for costs of goods sold, or allowance for expenses or deductions. See GROSS RECEIPTS.

head tax. 1. See poll tax. 2.HEAD MONEY(3).

hidden tax.A tax that is paid, often unknowingly, by someone other than the person or entity on whom it is levied; esp., a tax imposed on a manufacturer or seller (such as a gasoline producer) who passes it on to consumers in the form of higher prices.

highway tax.A tax raised to pay for the construction, repair, and maintenance of highways. [Cases: Highways 123.]

holding-company tax.A federal tax imposed on undistributed personal-holding-company income after allowing deductions for such things as dividends paid. IRC (26 USCA) § 545. — Also termed personal-holding-company tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3850.1–3858. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 383–386.]

illegal tax.A tax that violates the law, esp. the constitution. • For an example, see poll tax. See erroneous tax.

income tax.A tax on an individual's or entity's net income. • The federal income tax — set forth in the Internal Revenue Code — is the federal government's primary source of revenue, and most states also have income taxes. Cf. property tax; EXCISE. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3065–4122; Taxation 931–1104. C.J.S. Indians § 131; Internal Revenue §§ 12–14, 16–492, 501, 638–639, 670–673, 797–800; Taxation §§ 1693–1782.]

indirect tax.A tax on a right or privilege, such as an occupation tax or franchise tax. • An indirect tax is often presumed to be partly or wholly passed on from the nominal taxpayer to another person. [Cases: Licenses 1. C.J.S. Architects § 8; Licenses §§ 2–4.]

inheritance tax. 1. A tax imposed on a person who inherits property from another (unlike an estate tax, which is imposed on the decedent's estate). • There is no federal inheritance tax, but some states have an inheritance tax (though it is creditable or deductible under the federal estate tax). — Also termed succession tax; death tax. Cf. estate tax. [Cases: Taxation 856.1–906. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1783–1989.] 2. Loosely, an estate tax.

in lieu tax.A tax imposed as a substitute for another.

intangible tax.A state tax imposed on the privilege of owning, transferring, devising, or otherwise dealing with intangible property. [Cases: Taxation 1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.]

interest-equalization tax.A tax imposed on a U.S. citizen's acquisition of stock issued by a foreign issuer or a debt obligation of a foreign obligor, but only if the obligation did not mature within a year. • This tax was repealed in the mid-1970s. IRC (26 USCA) § 4911.

kiddie tax.Slang. A federal tax imposed on a child's unearned income (above an exempt amount) at the parents' tax rate if the parents' rate is higher and if the child is under 14 years old. — Also termed child's income tax.

land tax.See property tax.

legacy tax.A tax on a legacy, often with the provision that the rate increases as the relationship of the legatee becomes more remote from the testator. • In English law, this tax was known as a legacy duty; it was abolished in 1949. Cf. collateral-inheritance tax. [Cases: Taxation 856.1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1783–1785, 1792.]

luxury tax.An excise tax imposed on high-priced items that are not deemed necessities (such as cars costing more than a specified amount). Cf. sin tax. [Cases: Taxation 1201.1–1345. C.J.S. Indians § 131; Steam § 4; Taxation §§ 1990–2071.]

minimum tax.See alternative minimum tax.

nanny tax.Slang. A federal social-security tax imposed on the employer of a domestic employee if the employer pays that employee more than a specified amount in total wages in a year. • The term, which is not a technical legal phrase, was popularized in the mid-1990s, when several of President Clinton's nominees were found not to have paid the social-security tax for their nannies.

occupation tax.An excise tax imposed for the privilege of carrying on a business, trade, or profession. • For example, many states require lawyers to pay an occupation tax. — Also termed occupational tax. [Cases: Licenses 1. C.J.S. Architects § 8; Licenses §§ 2–4.]

payroll tax. 1. A tax payable by an employer based on its payroll (such as a social-security tax or an unemployment tax). [Cases: Internal Revenue 4849; Taxation 1100. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 740–741; Taxation§ 1779.] 2. A tax collected by an employer from its employees' gross pay (such as an income tax or a social-security tax). See withholding tax.

per capita tax.See poll tax.

personal-holding-company tax.See holding-company tax.

personal-property tax.A tax on personal property (such as jewelry or household furniture) levied by a state or local government. [Cases: Taxation 67. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 114, 120, 122, 125, 129–130.]

pickup tax.Slang. A state death tax levied in an amount equal to the federal death-tax credit. — Also termed sponge tax.

poll tax.A fixed tax levied on each person within a jurisdiction. • The 24th Amendment prohibits the federal and state governments from imposing poll taxes as a condition for voting. — Also termed per capita tax; capitation tax; capitation; head tax. [Cases: Elections 83; Taxation 106. C.J.S. Elections § 29; Taxation §§ 1671–1672.]

premium tax.A state tax paid by an insurer on premiums paid by the insured. [Cases: Taxation 140. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 217–218.]

privilege tax.A tax on the privilege of carrying on a business or occupation for which a license or franchise is required. [Cases: Licenses 1. C.J.S. Architects § 8; Licenses §§ 2–4.]

progressive tax.A tax structured so that the effective tax rate increases more than proportionately as the tax base increases, or so that an exemption remains flat or diminishes. • With this type of tax, the percentage of income paid in taxes increases as the taxpayer's income increases. Most income taxes are progressive, so that higher incomes are taxed at a higher rate. But a tax can be progressive without using graduated rates. — Also termed graduated tax. Cf. regressive tax; flat tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 1061–1065. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 331–333, 335, 358–361, 797; Taxation § 1698.]

property tax.A tax levied on the owner of property (esp. real property), usu. based on the property's value. • Local governments often impose property taxes to finance school districts, municipal projects, and the like. — Also termed (specif.) land tax. Cf. income tax; EXCISE.

[Cases: Taxation 57–111. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 4, 79–168, 283, 1671–1672, 1674, 1681–1692.]

proportional tax. See flat tax.

regressive tax. A tax structured so that the effective tax rate decreases as the tax base increases. • With this type of tax, the percentage of income paid in taxes decreases as the taxpayer's income increases. A flat tax (such as the typical sales tax) is usu. considered regressive — despite its constant rate — because it is more burdensome for low-income taxpayers than high-income taxpayers. A growing tax exemption also produces a regressive tax effect. Cf. progressive tax; flat tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 1061–1065. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 331–333, 335, 358–361, 797; Taxation § 1698.] repressive tax. See sin tax.

sales tax. A tax imposed on the sale of goods and services, usu. measured as a percentage of their price. — Also termed retail sales tax. See flat tax. [Cases: Taxation 1201.1–1345. C.J.S. Indians § 131; Steam § 4; Taxation §§ 1990–2071.]

“While the term ‘sales tax’ encompasses a large variety of levies, the term often refers to the ‘retail sales tax,’ where the tax is separately stated and collected on a transaction-by-transaction basis from the consumer; although the economic burden of the sales tax falls upon the consumer, the seller has the statutory duty to collect the tax for the taxing jurisdiction.” 68 Am. Jur. 2d Sales and Use Tax § 1, at 11 (1993).

self-employment tax. The social-security tax imposed on the net earnings of a self-employed person. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4381. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 579–580, 582; Social Security and Public Welfare § 33.]

service-occupation tax. A tax imposed on persons who sell services, usu. computed as a percentage of net cost of the tangible personal property (e.g., materials and goods) transferred as an incident to the sale. [Cases: Taxation 1237. C.J.S. Taxation § 2018.]

severance tax. A tax imposed on the value of oil, gas, timber, or other natural resources extracted from the earth. [Cases: Logs and Logging 4; Mines and Minerals 87. C.J.S. Logs and Logging § 26; Mines and Minerals §§ 334, 373–374.]

sinking-fund tax. A tax to be applied to the repayment of a public loan.

sin tax. An excise tax imposed on goods or activities that are considered harmful or immoral (such as cigarettes, liquor, or gambling). — Also termed repressive tax. Cf. luxury tax.

special tax. 1. A tax levied for a unique purpose. 2. A tax (such as an inheritance tax) that is levied in addition to a general tax. [Cases: Taxation 24. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 22, 25.]

specific tax. A tax imposed as a fixed sum on each article or item of property of a given class or kind without regard to its value.

sponge tax. See pickup tax.

stamp tax. A tax imposed by requiring the purchase of a revenue stamp that must be affixed to a legal document (such as a deed or note) before the document can be recorded. — Also termed documentary-stamp transfer tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4390–4409.]

state tax. 1. A tax — usu. in the form of a sales or income tax — earmarked for state, rather than federal or municipal, purposes. [Cases: Taxation 1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.] 2. A tax levied under a state law.

stock-transfer tax. A tax levied by the federal government and by some states on the transfer or sale of shares of stock. — Often shortened to transfer tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4404; Taxation 105.5. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 167, 1681–1692.]

“Some state statutes impose special taxes, usually in the form of a stamp tax, upon sales and agreements for sale and other transfers of stock in corporations. Such a tax is in the nature of an excise tax on the transfer. Taxes on the issuance and transfer of corporate stock, commonly known as ‘stock transfer taxes’ and payable by means of stamps, are constitutional, as within the power of state governments.” 71 Am. Jur. 2d State and Local Taxation § 643, at 896 (1973).

stopgap tax. A tax, usu. temporary, levied during the term of a budget to cover an unexpected deficit. — Also termed additional tax.

succession tax. See inheritance tax (1).

surtax. An additional tax imposed on something being taxed or on the primary tax itself. [Cases: Taxation 1061. C.J.S. Taxation § 1698.]

tonnage tax. See tonnage duty under DUTY(4). transfer tax. 1. A tax imposed on the transfer of property, esp. by will, inheritance, or gift. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4220–4228; Taxation 856–898. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 576–578; Taxation §§ 1783–1792, 1794–1944, 1948, 1988.] 2. See stock-transfer tax. 3. See generation-skipping transfer tax.

undistributed-earnings tax. See accumulated-earnings tax.

unemployment tax. A tax imposed on an employer by state or federal law to cover the cost of unemployment insurance. • The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) provides for a tax based on a percentage of employee earnings but allows a credit for amounts paid in state unemployment taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4305. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 596, 606.]

unified transfer tax. The federal transfer tax imposed equally on property transferred during life or at death. • Until 1977, gift-tax rates were lower than estate taxes. — Also termed unified estate-and-gift tax.

unitary tax. A tax of income earned locally by a business that transacts business through an affiliated company outside the state or country. See UNITARY BUSINESS. [Cases: Taxation 1005. C.J.S. Taxation § 1719.]

unrelated-business-income tax. A tax levied on a not-for-profit organization's taxable income, such as advertising revenue from a publication. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4068; Taxation 1018. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 473–474; Taxation § 1706.]

use tax. A tax imposed on the use of certain goods that are bought outside the taxing authority's jurisdiction. • Use taxes are designed to discourage the purchase of products that are not subject to the sales tax. [Cases: Taxation 1202. C.J.S. Taxation § 1992.]

value-added tax. A tax assessed at each step in the production of a commodity, based on the value added at each step by the difference between the commodity's production cost and its selling price. • A value-added tax — which is popular in several European countries — effectively acts as a sales tax on the ultimate consumer. — Abbr. VAT. [Cases: Taxation 1201.1.]

windfall-profits tax. A tax imposed on a business or industry as a result of a sudden increase in profits. • An example is the tax imposed on oil companies in 1980 for profits resulting from the Arab oil embargo of the 1970s. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4338.]

window tax. Hist. English law. A tax imposed on a house containing a certain number of windows (usu. more than six). • It was established under the Taxation Act of 1695 and replaced with a tax on inhabited houses established under the House Tax of 1851. See HOUSE-DUTY.

withholding tax. A portion of income tax that is subtracted from salary, wages, dividends, or other income before the earner receives payment. • The most common example is the income tax and social-security tax withheld by an employer from an employee's pay. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4849; Taxation 1100. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 740–741; Taxation § 1779.]

TAXABLE

taxable, adj. 1. Subject to taxation <interest earned on a checking account is taxable income>. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3110; Taxation 978. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 59–60; Taxation §§ 1715–1716, 1721–1722, 1727.] 2. (Of legal costs or fees) assessable <expert-witness fees are not taxable court costs>. [Cases: Costs 146–194; Federal Civil Procedure 2742. C.J.S. Costs §§ 6, 94–97, 99–101, 105–124.]

TAXABLE COST

taxable cost. See COST(3).

TAXABLE DISTRIBUTION

taxable distribution. A generation-skipping transfer from a trust to the beneficiary (i.e., the skip person) that is neither a direct skip nor a taxable termination. See GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER; generation-skipping transfer tax under TAX; generation-skipping trust under TRUST; SKIP PERSON. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4224.]

TAXABLE ESTATE

taxable estate. See ESTATE(3).

TAXABLE GIFT

taxable gift. See GIFT.

TAXABLE INCOME

taxable income. See INCOME.

TAXABLE TERMINATION

taxable termination. A taxable event that occurs when (1) an interest in a generation-skipping trust property terminates (as on the death of a skip person's parent who possessed the interest), (2) no interest in the trust is held by a nonskip person, and (3) a distribution may be made to a skip person. • Before the creation of taxable terminations in 1976, a taxpayer could create a trust that paid income to a child for life, then to that child's child for life, and so on without incurring an estate or gift tax liability at the death of each generation's beneficiary. See GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER R; generation-skipping transfer tax under TAX; generation-skipping trust under TRUST; SKIP PERSON. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4224.]

TAXABLE YEAR

taxable year. See tax year under YEAR.

TAX ACCOUNTING

tax accounting. The accounting rules and methods used in determining a taxpayer's liability.

TAX-ANTICIPATION BILL

tax-anticipation bill. A short-term obligation issued by the U.S. Treasury to meet the cash-flow needs of the government. • Corporations can tender these bills at par value to make quarterly tax payments. — Abbr. TAB.

TAX-ANTICIPATION NOTE

tax-anticipation note. See NOTE(1).

TAX-ANTICIPATION WARRANT tax-anticipation warrant. See WARRANT(2).

TAX-APPORTIONMENT CLAUSE

tax-apportionment clause. A testamentary provision directing how inheritance and estate taxes should be paid.

TAX ASSESSMENT

tax assessment. See ASSESSMENT(3).

TAX ASSESSOR

tax assessor. See ASSESSOR(1).

TAXATION

taxation. 1. The imposition or assessment of a tax; the means by which the state obtains the revenue required for its activities. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3001–3007; Taxation 1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 2, 4; Taxation §§ 1–3, 5–6.]

double taxation. 1. The imposition of two taxes on the same property during the same period and for the same taxing purpose. [Cases: Taxation 47. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 61–72.] 2. The imposition of two taxes on one corporate profit; esp., the structure of taxation employed by Subchapter C of the Internal Revenue Code, under which corporate profits are taxed twice, once to the corporation when earned and once to the shareholders when the earnings are distributed as dividends. 3. Int'l law. The imposition of comparable taxes in two or more states on the same taxpayer for the same subject matter or identical goods. — Also termed duplicate taxation; (in sense 3) juridical double taxation.

duplicate taxation. See double taxation.

equal and uniform taxation. A tax system in which no person or class of persons in the taxing district — whether it be a state, city, or county — is taxed at a different rate from others in the same district on the same value or thing. [Cases: Taxation 39. C.J.S. Taxation § 26.]

pass-through taxation. The taxation of an entity's owners for the entity's income without taxing the entity itself. • Partnerships and S corporations are taxed under this method. So are limited liability companies and limited liability partnerships unless they elect to be taxed as corporations by “checking the box” on their income tax returns. The election is made on Form 8832 (Entity Classification Election). See Treas. Reg. § 301.7701–(3)(b)(1). — Also termed conduit taxation. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3896, 3920–3924. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 376–377, 427, 429.]

2. The act of determining and charging to a litigant the costs of a legal proceeding.

TAXATION OF COSTS

taxation of costs. The process of fixing the amount of litigation-related expenses that a prevailing party is entitled to be awarded.

TAX AUDIT

tax audit. See AUDIT.

TAX AVOIDANCE

tax avoidance. The act of taking advantage of legally available tax-planning opportunities in order to minimize one's tax liability. Cf. TAX EVASION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3056–3058; Taxation 108. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 3, 14–16; Taxation § 88.]

TAX BASE

tax base. The total property, income, or wealth subject to taxation in a given jurisdiction; the aggregate value of the property being taxed by a particular tax. Cf. BASIS(2).

TAX BASIS

tax basis. See BASIS(2).

TAX-BENEFIT RULE

tax-benefit rule. The principle that if a taxpayer recovers a loss or expense that was deducted in a previous year, the recovery must be included in the current year's gross income to the extent that it was previously deducted. — Also termed tax-benefit doctrine. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3089, 3138. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 78.]

TAX BRACKET

tax bracket. A categorized level of income subject to a particular tax rate under federal or state law <28% tax bracket>. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 1061–1065. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 331–333, 335, 358–361, 797; Taxation § 1698.]

TAX CERTIFICATE

tax certificate. An instrument issued to the buyer of property at a tax sale, certifying the sale and entitling the buyer to a tax deed and possession of the property upon the expiration of the redemption period. • If the property is redeemed, the tax certificate is voided. See REDEMPTION PERIOD; tax sale under SALE. Cf. tax deed under DEED. [Cases: Taxation 730, 731. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1365–1369.]

TAX COURT

tax court. 1. TAX COURT, U.S. 2. In some states, a court that hears appeals in nonfederal tax cases and can modify or change any valuation, assessment, classification, tax, or final order that is appealed. [Cases: Taxation 492.6, 1085.5, 1318.5. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 729, 1770–1772, 2048–2054.]

TAX COURT, U.S

Tax Court, U.S. A federal court that hears appeals by taxpayers from adverse IRS decisions about tax deficiencies. • The Tax Court was created in 1942, replacing the Board of Tax Appeals. — Abbr. T.C. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4645–4655. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 680–687.]

TAX CREDIT

tax credit. An amount subtracted directly from one's total tax liability, dollar for dollar, as opposed to a deduction from gross income. — Often shortened to credit. Cf. DEDUCTION(2). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3520–3537; Taxation 1047. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 58, 336–357, 489–492; Taxation § 1758.]

child- and dependent-care tax credit. A tax credit available to a person who is employed full-time and who maintains a household for a dependent child or a disabled spouse or dependent. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3520, 3534; Taxation 1047. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 58, 336–338, 341–343, 345, 347, 354, 489; Taxation § 1758.]

earned-income credit. A refundable federal tax credit on the earned income of a low-income worker with dependent children. • The credit is paid to the taxpayer even if it exceeds the total tax liability. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3532. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 346.]

foreign tax credit. A tax credit against U.S. income taxes for a taxpayer who earns income overseas and has paid foreign taxes on that income. See FOREIGN-EARNED-INCOME EXCLUSION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4098. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 481.]

“Since direct foreign investments and business operations of United States persons often attract foreign income taxes along with the baseline U.S. tax, the specter of double taxation is bound to haunt the pursuit of foreign income. The principal accommodation of the U.S. tax system to the possibility of source-based taxation by other countries is the foreign tax credit. From a simple idea — a dollar-for-dollar reduction of U.S. tax for income taxes paid to foreign countries — the foreign tax credit has evolved into an elaborate statutory structure capable of engulfing an entire professional career.” Joseph Isenbergh, International Taxation 14 (2000).

investment tax credit. A tax credit intended to stimulate business investment in capital goods by allowing a percentage of the purchase price as a credit against the taxpayer's income taxes. • The Tax Reform Act of 1986 generally repealed this credit retroactively for most property placed in service after January 1, 1986. — Abbr. ITC. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3523; Taxation 1047. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 348, 492; Taxation § 1758.] unified credit. See unified estate-and-gift tax credit.

unified estate-and-gift tax credit. A tax credit applied against the federal unified transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) § 2001(c)(2). — Often shortened to unified credit. — Also termed applicable exclusion credit. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4182.30. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 541.]

TAX DEDUCTION

tax deduction. See DEDUCTION(2).

TAX DEED

tax deed. See DEED.

TAX-DEFERRED

tax-deferred, adj. Not taxable until a future date or event . [Cases: Internal Revenue 3575–3615. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 160, 206–208, 291, 294–295, 299–327.]

TAX-DEFERRED ACCOUNT

tax-deferred account. See ACCOUNT.

TAX-DEFERRED ANNUITY tax-deferred annuity. See 403(b) plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

TAX DEFICIENCY

tax deficiency. See DEFICIENCY.

TAX-DEFICIENCY NOTICE

tax-deficiency notice. See NINETY-DAY LETTER.

TAX EVASION

tax evasion. The willful attempt to defeat or circumvent the tax law in order to illegally reduce one's tax liability. • Tax evasion is punishable by both civil and criminal penalties. — Also termed tax fraud. Cf. TAX AVOIDANCE. [Cases: Internal Revenue 5263; Taxation 1103. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 847; Taxation § 1782.]

TAX-EXEMPT

tax-exempt, adj. 1. By law not subject to taxation . [Cases: Internal Revenue 4045–4071; Taxation 211–250. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 327, 462–474, 670, 798; Taxation §§ 266, 275, 277–282, 287–289, 291–298, 300, 303–383, 1736–1737.] 2. Bearing interest that is free from income tax <tax-exempt municipal bonds>. — Also termed tax-free.

TAX-EXEMPT BOND

tax-exempt bond. See BOND(3).

TAX FERRET

tax ferret. A private person engaged in the business of searching for taxable property that has somehow not been taxed. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4442. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 610.]

TAX FORECLOSURE

tax foreclosure. See FORECLOSURE.

TAX FRAUD

tax fraud. See TAX EVASION.

TAX-FREE

tax-free, adj. See TAX-EXEMPT.

TAX-FREE EXCHANGE

tax-free exchange. A transfer of property for which the tax law specifically defers (or possibly exempts) income-tax consequences. • For example, a transfer of property to a controlled corporation under IRC (26 USCA) § 351(a) and a like-kind exchange under IRC (26 USCA) § 1031(a). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3184; Taxation 996. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 120–121, 124; Taxation §§ 1732–1733.]

TAX HAVEN

tax haven. A jurisdiction, esp. a country, that imposes little or no tax on the profits from transactions carried on there or on persons resident there.

“Among the reasons for this complexity [in international taxation] is the elusive nature of tax havens. A tax haven is not always immediately obvious. What makes a particular environment a tax haven is not invariably a low rate of tax, but relations with other tax regimes that permit the ultimate deflection of income to a low-tax environment with which the income may have little indigenous connection.” Joseph Isenbergh, International Taxation 16 (2000).

TAX HOME

tax home. A taxpayer's principal business location, post, or station. • Travel expenses are tax-deductible only if the taxpayer is traveling away from home. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3343.]

TAX INCENTIVE

tax incentive. A governmental enticement, through a tax benefit, to engage in a particular activity, such as the contribution of money or property to a qualified charity.

TAX-INCREMENT FINANCING tax-increment financing. A technique used by a municipality to finance commercial developments usu. involving issuing bonds to finance land acquisition and other up-front costs, and then using the additional property taxes generated from the new development to service the debt. — Abbr. TIF. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 953.]

TAXING DISTRICT

taxing district. See DISTRICT.

TAXING POWER

taxing power. See POWER(3).

TAX INJUNCTION ACT

tax injunction act. A federal law prohibiting a federal court from interfering with the assessment or collection of any state tax where the state affords a plain, speedy, and efficient remedy in its own courts. 28 USCA § 1341. [Cases: Federal Courts 27.]

TAX LAW

tax law. 1. INTERNAL REVENUE CODE. 2. The statutory, regulatory, constitutional, and common-law rules that constitute the law applicable to taxation. 3. The area of legal study dealing with taxation.

TAX LEASE

tax lease. See LEASE.

TAX LEVY

tax levy. See LEVY(1).

TAX LIABILITY

tax liability.The amount that a taxpayer legally owes after calculating the applicable tax; the amount of unpaid taxes.

TAX LIEN

tax negligence.See NEGLIGENCE.

TAX-OPTION CORPORATION

tax-option corporation.See S corporation under CORPORATION.

TAXPAYER

taxpayer. One who pays or is subject to a tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3560; Taxation 57, 1011. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 17, 70, 87, 362; Taxation §§ 4, 79, 85, 1701.]

TAXPAYERS' BILL OF RIGHTS taxpayers' bill of rights.Federal legislation granting taxpayers specific rights when dealing with the Internal Revenue Service, such as the right to have representation and the right to receive written notice of a levy 30 days before enforcement.

TAXPAYERS' LISTS

taxpayers' lists.Written exhibits required of taxpayers in some taxing districts, listing all property owned by them and subject to taxation, used as a basis for assessment and valuation. Cf. ROLL(2). [Cases: Taxation 328, 366. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 483, 535–536, 541, 544.]

TAXPAYER-STANDING DOCTRINE taxpayer-standing doctrine.Constitutional law. The principle that a taxpayer has no standing to sue the government for allegedly mispending the public's tax money unless the taxpayer can demonstrate a personal stake and show some direct injury. [Cases: Constitutional Law 42.3(2); Municipal Corporations 987. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 68–69, 76; Municipal Corporations §§ 1889–1890, 1893–1894, 1896–1897, 1900–1904.]

TAX-PREFERENCE ITEMS

tax-preference items. Certain items that, even though lawfully deducted in arriving at taxable income for regular tax purposes, must be considered in calculating a taxpayer's alternative minimum tax. See alternative minimum tax under TAX. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3550. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 358–361.]

TAX RATE

tax rate. A mathematical figure for calculating a tax, usu. expressed as a percentage. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 1061–1065. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 331–333, 335, 358–361, 797; Taxation § 1698.]

average tax rate. A taxpayer's tax liability divided by the amount of taxable income. — Also called effective tax rate.

marginal tax rate. In a tax scheme, the rate applicable to the last dollar of income earned by the taxpayer. • This concept is useful in calculating the tax effect of receiving additional income or claiming additional deductions. See TAX BRACKET.

TAX-RATE SCHEDULE

tax-rate schedule. A schedule used to determine the tax on a given level of taxable income and based on a taxpayer's status (for example, married filing a joint income-tax return). — Also termed tax table. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 1061–1065. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 331–333, 335, 358–361, 797; Taxation § 1698.]

TAX REBATE

tax rebate. See TAX REFUND.

TAX REDEMPTION

tax redemption. See REDEMPTION.

TAX REFUND

tax refund. Money that a taxpayer overpaid and is thus returned by the taxing authority. — Also termed tax rebate. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4950; Taxation 535, 904, 1097. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 780; Social Security and Public Welfare § 207; Taxation §§ 910–914, 919, 1679, 1690, 1764, 1978–1981.]

TAX RETURN

tax return. An income-tax form on which a person or entity reports income, deductions, and exemptions, and on which tax liability is calculated. — Often shortened to return. — Also termed income-tax return. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4470; Taxation 1079.1, 1313. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 547, 575, 631; Taxation § 2038.]

amended return. A return filed after the original return, usu. to correct an error in the original. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4479; Taxation 1079.1, 1313. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 636; Taxation § 2038.]

consolidated return. A return that reflects combined financial information for a group of affiliated corporations. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3865–3880; Taxation 1080. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 17–18, 638; Taxation § 1699.]

false return. See FALSE RETURN(2).

information return. A return, such as a W-2, filed by an entity to report some economic information related to, but other than, tax liability.

joint return. A return filed together by spouses. • A joint return can be filed even if only one spouse had income, but each spouse is usu. individually liable for the tax payment. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4481; Taxation 1079.1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 335, 637.]

separate return. A return filed by each spouse separately, showing income and liability. • Unlike with a joint return, each spouse is individually liable only for taxes due on the separate return. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4481; Taxation 1079.1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 335, 637.]

TAX-RETURN PRIVILEGE

tax-return privilege. See PRIVILEGE(3).

TAX ROLL

tax roll. See ROLL(2).

TAX SALE

tax sale. See SALE.

TAX SHELTER

tax shelter, n. A financial operation or investment strategy (such as a partnership or real-estate investment trust) that is created primarily for the purpose of reducing or deferring income-tax payments. • The Tax Reform Act of 1986 — by restricting the deductibility of passive losses — sharply limited the effectiveness of tax shelters. — Often shortened to shelter. — tax-sheltered, adj.

TAX-SHELTERED ANNUITY tax-sheltered annuity. See 403(b) plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

TAX SITUS

tax situs (sI-t<<schwa>>s). A state or jurisdiction that has a substantial connection with assets that are subject to taxation. [Cases: Taxation 97. C.J.S. Taxation § 153.]

TAX-STRADDLE RULE

tax-straddle rule. A rule preventing undue deferral of tax on income or conversion of ordinary income or short-term capital gain into long-term capital gain by disallowing the premature deduction of a loss on sale or disposition of one leg of a straddle position (e.g., a promise to sell offset by a promise to buy, such as in futures contracts) while retaining the other, offsetting leg or position. • This practice has been greatly restricted by the requirement that gains and losses on commodities transactions must be reported based on their value at year end. IRC (26 USCA) § 165(c)(2). See STRADDLE. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3397.]

TAX TABLE

tax table. See TAX-RATE SCHEDULE.

TAX TITLE

tax title. See TITLE(2).

TAX WARRANT

tax warrant. See WARRANT(1).

TAX WRITE-OFF

tax write-off. A deduction of depreciation, loss, or expense. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3310–3442, 3470–3505; Taxation 1031.1–1044. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 33, 58, 140, 150–171, 173–180, 182–184, 186–190, 192–196, 198–205, 212, 215–249, 251–265, 267, 270–283, 286, 409, 489, 671, 673, 799–800; Taxation §§ 1738–1755.]

TDA

TDA.abbr. UNITED STATES TRADE AND DEVELOPMENT AGENCY.

TEACH

teach,vb. Patents. 1. (Of a patent specification) to instruct (a person of ordinary skill in the art how to make and use an invention). [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.] 2. (Of a prior-art reference) to anticipate (the invention's being examined) by discussing, describing, or analyzing the invention's essential elements or technology. • In this sense, prior art that discourages an inventor from pursuing an invention “teaches away from” that invention. A teaching raises a statutory bar to an invention's patentability. [Cases: Patents 65. C.J.S. Patents § 49.]

TEAMWORK

teamwork. Work done by a team; esp., work by a team of animals as a substantial part of one's business, such as farming, express carrying, freight hauling, or transporting material. • In some jurisdictions, animals (such as horses) that work in teams are exempt from execution on a civil judgment.

TEMPORAL LORD

temporal lord. See LORD.

TEMPORARY

temporary, adj. Lasting for a time only; existing or continuing for a limited (usu. short) time; transitory.

TEMPORARY ADMINISTRATION temporary administration. See ADMINISTRATION.

TEMPORARY ALIMONY

temporary alimony. See ALIMONY.

TEMPORARY ALLEGIANCE

temporary allegiance. See ALLEGIANCE.

TEMPORARY ASSISTANCE TO NEEDY FAMILIES

Temporary Assistance to Needy Families. A combined state and federal program that provides limited financial assistance to families in need. 42 USCA §§ 601–603a. • This program replaced Aid to Families with Dependent Children. TANF differs from AFDC because families are limited to no more than five years of assistance, and states have more control over eligibility requirements. — Abbr. TANF.

TEMPORARY-CESSATION-OF-PRODUCTION DOCTRINE

temporary-cessation-of-production doctrine. Oil & gas. The rule that an oil-and-gas lease term “for so long thereafter as oil and gas are produced” will not terminate once production is attained unless the cessation of production is for an unreasonable length of time. See CESSATION-OF-PRODUCTION CLAUSE.

TEMPUS

tempus (tem-p<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin] Hist. Time; a specified duration.

tempus continuum (tem-p<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>n-tin-yoo-<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin] Hist. Time continuing without interruption; a continuous period.

tempus deliberandi (tem-p<<schwa>>s di-lib-<<schwa>>-ran-dI), n.[Latin] Hist. The period allowed for deliberation; esp., the time during which an heir could consider whether to accept or reject an inheritance. Cf. JUS DELIBERANDI.

tempus lugendi (tem-p<<schwa>>s loo-gen-DI).n. See LUCTUS.

tempus semestre (tem-p<<schwa>>s si-mes-tr<<schwa>>), n.[Latin] A period of 182 days (half a year).

tempus utile (tem-p<<schwa>>s yoo-t<<schwa>>-lee), n.[Latin “useful time”] Hist. Time that one can use to exercise his or her legal rights; the period within which an action or proceeding must be brought. • This is the period before prescription or limitation cuts off a right.

TENANCY

tenancy. 1. The possession or occupancy of land under a lease; a leasehold interest in real estate. 2. The period of such possession or occupancy. See ESTATE(1). [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.] 3. The possession of real or personal property by right or title, esp. under a conveying instrument such as a deed or will.

at-will tenancy. See tenancy at will.

common tenancy. See tenancy in common.

cotenancy. A tenancy with two or more coowners who have unity of possession. • Examples are a joint tenancy and tenancy in common. [Cases: Joint Tenancy 1; Tenancy in Common 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Joint Tenancy §§ 2, 4, 7–9; Tenancy in Common §§ 2–5.]

entire tenancy. A tenancy possessed by one person, as opposed to a joint or common tenancy. See estate by entirety under ESTATE(1).

general tenancy. A tenancy that is not of fixed duration under the parties' agreement. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 114(3). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 136(1, 2, 3, 4, 5).]

holdover tenancy. See tenancy at sufferance.

joint tenancy. A tenancy with two or more coowners who take identical interests simultaneously by the same instrument and with the same right of possession. • A joint tenancy differs from a tenancy in common because each joint tenant has a right of survivorship to the other's share (in some states, this right must be clearly expressed in the conveyance — otherwise, the tenancy will be presumed to be a tenancy in common). See RIGHT OF SURVIVORSHIP. Cf. tenancy in common. [Cases: Joint Tenancy 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Joint Tenancy §§ 2, 4, 7–9.]

“The rules for creation of a joint tenancy are these: The joint tenants must get their interests at the same time. They must become entitled to possession at the same time. The interests must be physically undivided interests, and each undivided interest must be an equal fraction of the whole — e.g., a one-third undivided interest to each of three joint tenants. The joint tenants must get their interests by the same instrument — e.g., the same deed or will. The joint tenants must get the same kinds of estates — e.g., in fee simple, for life, and so on.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 55 (2d ed. 1984).

life tenancy. See life estate under ESTATE(1).

periodic tenancy. A tenancy that automatically continues for successive periods — usu. month to month or year to year — unless terminated at the end of a period by notice. • A typical example is a month-to-month apartment lease. This type of tenancy originated through court rulings that, when the lessor received a periodic rent, the lease could not be terminated without reasonable notice. — Also termed tenancy from period to period; periodic estate; estate from period to period; (more specif.) month-to-month tenancy (or estate); year-to-year tenancy (or estate). [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors 160; Landlord and Tenant 114, 115. C.J.S. Intoxicating Liquors § 257;

Landlord and Tenant §§ 132, 137, 146.]

several tenancy.A tenancy that is separate and not held jointly with another person.

tenancy at sufferance.A tenancy arising when a person who has been in lawful possession of property wrongfully remains as a holdover after his or her interest has expired. • A tenancy at sufferance takes the form of either a tenancy at will or a periodic tenancy. — Also termed holdover tenancy; estate at sufferance. See HOLDING OVER. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 119, 120. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 167–168, 172, 175–176, 182.]

“A tenancy at sufferance arises where a tenant, having entered upon land under a valid tenancy, holds over without the landlord's assent or dissent. Such a tenant differs from a trespasser in that his original entry was lawful, and from a tenant at will in that his tenancy exists without the landlord's assent. No rent, as such, is payable, but the tenant is liable to pay compensation for his use and occupation of the land. The tenancy may be determined [i.e., terminated] at any time, and may be converted into a yearly or other periodic tenancy in the usual way, e.g., if rent is paid and accepted with reference to a year in circumstances where the parties intended there to be a tenancy.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 319 (6th ed. 1993).

tenancy attendant on the inheritance.A tenancy for a term that is vested in a trustee in trust for the owner of the inheritance. • The tenancy is a form of personal property to the trustee. — Also termed tenancy attendant on an inheritance; term attendant on the inheritance.

tenancy at will.A tenancy in which the tenant holds possession with the landlord's consent but without fixed terms (as for duration or rent); specif., a tenancy that is terminable at the will of either the transferor or the transferee and that has no designated period of duration. • Such a tenancy may be terminated by either party upon fair notice. — Also termed at-will tenancy; estate at will. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 118, 120. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 157, 166–168, 172, 182.]

tenancy by the entirety (en-tī-<<schwa>>-r-tee). See estate by entirety under ESTATE(1). [Cases: Husband and Wife 14.2–14.11.]

“Tenancy by the entireties is a form of joint tenancy. It resembles joint tenancy in that upon the death of either husband or wife the survivor automatically acquires title to the share of the deceased spouse. Like a joint tenancy, also, it is necessary for the creation of a tenancy by the entireties that the husband and wife acquire title by the same deed or will.” Robert Kratovil, Real Estate Law 198 (6th ed. 1974).

“Where [tenancy by the entirety] is recognized, it may exist only between a husband and a wife. It resembles, in most respects, the joint tenancy. The only major difference is that a tenant by the entirety may not destroy the other spouse's right of survivorship by transferring his or her interest to another. Whether a tenant by the entirety may transfer any interest to a third party — for example, the right of present possession or the contingent right of survivorship — is a matter on which the states differ. Most take the view that no interest may be transferred. The husband and wife may, of course, together convey their estate to a third person. If they both wish to convert their tenancy into a tenancy in common or a joint tenancy, they may do so. Upon the death of a tenant by the entirety, no interest passes, in theory, to the surviving spouse. As was true of the joint tenancy, the survivor's ownership is thought simply to expand to absorb the relinquished ownership of the decedent." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 55 (2d ed. 1984).

"A tenancy by the entireties could exist in any estate, whether in fee, for life, for years or otherwise. The nature of the tenancy was virtually that of an unseverable joint tenancy; neither husband nor wife could dispose of any interest in the land without the concurrence of the other, nor could one of them cause a forfeiture of the land. The united of husband and wife was regarded as so complete that they were said to be seised 'per tout et non per mie,' the survivor being entitled to the whole of the land by force of the original limitation, discharged of the other's right to participate, and not, as in the case of joint tenancy, by virtue of survivorship on the death of the other tenant. Unlike joint tenants, neither tenant was regarded as having any potential share in the land; 'between husband and wife there are no moieties.' " Robert E. Megarry & P.V. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 232–33 (4th ed. 1969) (quoting Marquis of Winchester's Case, 3 Co. Rep. 1a, 5a (1583)).

tenancy by the rod. See COPYHOLD.

tenancy by the verge. See COPYHOLD.

tenancy for a term. A tenancy whose duration is known in years, weeks, or days from the moment of its creation. — Also termed tenancy for a period; tenancy for years; term for years; term of years; estate for a term; estate for years; lease for years. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 113–116. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 130(1, 2), 131–135, 136(1, 2, 3, 4, 5), 137–141, 143, 145–148, 151–155.]

tenancy from period to period. See PERIODIC TENANCY.

tenancy in common. A tenancy by two or more persons, in equal or unequal undivided shares, each person having an equal right to possess the whole property but no right of survivorship. — Also termed common tenancy; estate in common. [Cases: Tenancy in Common 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Tenancy in Common §§ 2–5.]

"The central characteristic of a tenancy in common is simply that each tenant is deemed to own by himself, with most of the attributes of independent ownership, a physically undivided part of the entire parcel." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 54 (2d ed. 1984).

tenancy in coparcenary. See COPARCENARY.

tenancy in fee. See FEE SIMPLE.

tenancy in gross. A tenancy for a term that is outstanding — that is, one that is unattached to or disconnected from the estate or inheritance, such as one that is in the hands of some third party having no interest in the inheritance.

TENANT

tenant, n. 1. One who holds or possesses lands or tenements by any kind of right or title. See TENANCY. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 1. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 1, 2(1, 2), 6(1), 7, 202(5).]

copyhold tenant. See customary tenant.

customary tenant. A tenant holding by the custom of the manor. • Over time, customary tenants became known as copyhold tenants. See COPYHOLD.

“The lord has a court; in that court the tenant in villeinage, even though he be personally unfree, appears as no mere tenant at will, but as holding permanently, often heritably, on fairly definite terms. He is a customary tenant, customarius, consuetudinarius; he holds according to the custom of the manor.... Then gradually ... [d]ealings with villein tenements are set forth upon the rolls of the lord's court; the villein tenement is conceived to be holden ‘by roll of court,’ or even ‘by copy of court roll,’ and the mode of conveyance serves to mark off the most beneficial of villeinholds from the most onerous of freeholds In Henry III's time this process which secured for the tenant in villeinage a written, a registered title, and gave him the name of ‘copyholder,’ was but beginning” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 361, 375 (2d ed. 1899).

dominant tenant. The person who holds a dominant estate and therefore benefits from an easement. Cf. servient tenant. [Cases: Easements 2. C.J.S. Easements §§ 6, 21, 53–55.]

holdover tenant. A person who remains in possession of real property after a previous tenancy (esp. one under a lease) expires, thus giving rise to a tenancy at sufferance. — Sometimes shortened to holdover. See tenancy at sufferance under TENANCY. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 114(3). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 136(1, 2, 3, 4, 5).]

hypothetical tenant. See HYPOTHETICAL TENANT.

illusory tenant. 1. A fictitious person who, as the landlord's alter ego, subleases an apartment to permit the landlord to circumvent rent-law regulations. 2. A tenant whose business is to sublease rent-controlled apartments. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 200.16. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 551.11.]

joint tenant. See joint tenancy under TENANCY.

life tenant. See LIFE TENANT.

particular tenant. A tenant of a limited estate taken out of a fee. See particular estate under ESTATE(1).

prime tenant.A commercial or professional tenant with an established reputation that leases substantial, and usu. the most preferred, space in a commercial development. • A prime tenant is important in securing construction financing and in attracting other desirable tenants.

quasi-tenant. A sublessee that the new tenant or reversioner allows to hold over.

servient tenant.The person who holds a servient estate and is therefore burdened by an easement. Cf. dominant tenant. [Cases: Easements 2. C.J.S. Easements §§ 6, 21, 53–55.]

statutory tenant.A person who is legally entitled to remain on property after the tenancy expires.

tenant at sufferance.A tenant who has been in lawful possession of property and wrongfully remains as a holdover after the tenant's interest has expired. • The tenant may become either a tenant at will or a periodic tenant. — Also termed permissive tenant. See tenancy at will; periodic tenancy.

tenant by elegit.See ELEGIT.

tenant by the curtesy.A life tenant who receives the estate from his deceased wife by whom he has had legitimate children. • The children hold the remainder interest. See CURTESY.

tenant by the verge.See COPYHOLDER.

tenant for life.See LIFE TENANT.

tenant in chief.Hist. A person who held land directly of the king. — Also termed tenant in capite. See IN CAPITE.

tenant in common.One of two or more tenants who hold the same land by unity of possession but by separate and distinct titles, with each person having an equal right to possess the whole property but no right of survivorship. See tenancy in common under TENANCY. [Cases: Tenancy in Common 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Tenancy in Common §§ 2–5.]

tenant in demesne (di-maynor di-meen). A feudal tenant who holds land of, and owes services to, a tenant in service.

tenant in dower.A life tenant who is entitled to hold and use one-third of all the real property owned by her deceased husband. See DOWER.

tenant in fee.The owner of land held in fee. — Also termed tenant in fee simple.

“A tenant in fee simple is [one who owns] lands, tenements, or hereditaments, to hold to him and his heirs forever; generally, absolutely, and simply, without mentioning what heirs, but referring that to his own pleasure, or to the disposition of the law. An estate in fee simple is an estate of inheritance without condition, belonging to the owner, and alienable by him or transmissible to his heirs absolutely and simply; it is an estate or interest in land of one holding absolute and exclusive control and dominion over it, no matter how acquired.” 31 C.J.S. Estates § 11, at 27 (1996).

tenant in service. A feudal tenant who grants an estate to another (a tenant in demesne) and is therefore entitled to services from the latter.

undertenant. See SUBLESSEE.

2. One who pays rent for the temporary use and occupation of another's land under a lease or similar arrangement. See LESSEE. 3. Archaic. The defendant in a real action (the plaintiff being called a demandant). See real action under ACTION(4).

TEN-DAY RULE

ten-day rule. The doctrine that one who sells goods on credit and then learns that the buyer is insolvent has ten days after the buyer receives the goods to demand their return. • The seller has even longer to demand return if the buyer has made a written representation of solvency to the seller within three months before delivery. [Cases: Sales 316(1). C.J.S. Sales §§ 325–326, 339–343.]

tender, n.1. A valid and sufficient offer of performance; specif., an unconditional offer of money or performance to satisfy a debt or obligation < a tender of delivery >. • The tender may save the tendering party from a penalty for nonpayment or nonperformance or may, if the other party unjustifiably refuses the tender, place the other party in default. Cf. OFFER OF PERFORMANCE ; CONSIGNATION. [Cases: Contracts 279; Sales 153, 185; Vendor and Purchaser 148, 170. C.J.S. Contracts § 548; Sales §§ 161–162, 164, 182; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 380–382, 409–416, 419.]

tender of delivery. A seller's putting and holding conforming goods at the buyer's disposition and giving the buyer any notification reasonably necessary to take delivery. • The manner, time, and place for tender are determined by the agreement and by Article 2 of the Uniform Commercial Code. [Cases: Sales 153. C.J.S. Sales §§ 161–162, 164, 182.]

tender of performance. An obligor's demonstration of readiness, willingness, and ability to perform the obligation; esp., a buyer's demonstration of readiness, willingness, and ability to pay the purchase money, or a seller's offer to deliver merchantable title. • An offer to perform is usually necessary to hold the defaulting party to a contract liable for breach. [Cases: Contracts 279. C.J.S. Contracts § 548.]

2. Something unconditionally offered to satisfy a debt or obligation. [Cases: Tender 1, 10. C.J.S. Tender §§ 2–3, 5, 7, 26–28.] 3. Contracts. Attempted performance that is frustrated by the act of the party for whose benefit it is to take place. • The performance may take the form of either a tender of goods or services, or a tender of payment. Although this sense is quite similar to sense 1, it differs in making the other party's refusal part of the definition itself.

perfect tender. A seller's tender that meets the contractual terms entered into with the buyer concerning the quality and specifications of the goods sold. See PERFECT-TENDER RULE. [Cases: Sales 153, 177. C.J.S. Sales §§ 161–162, 164, 182, 189, 194, 197–198.]

4. An offer or bid put forward for acceptance . [Cases: Public Contracts 8. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 7, 12–13.] 5. Something that serves as a means of payment, such as coin, banknotes, or other circulating medium; money <legal tender >. [Cases: Payment 10; United States 34. C.J.S. United States §§ 162–163.] — tender, vb.

tender, plea of. See PLEA OF TENDER.

TENDER OFFER

tender offer. A public offer to buy a minimum number of shares directly from a corporation's shareholders at a fixed price, usu. at a substantial premium over the market price, in an effort to take control of the corporation. — Also termed takeover offer; takeover bid. Cf. public-exchange offer under OFFER. [Cases: Securities Regulation 52.30–52.50. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 121–122, 127–128, 131–138, 140–141.]

“Broadly speaking, a direct solicitation of a corporation's stockholders to sell their shares to an acquirer is known as a tender offer (because the acquirer is asking the existing stockholders to tender their shares for sale).” Franklin A. Gevurtz, Corporation Law § 7.3, at 673 (2000).

cash tender offer. A tender offer in which the bidder offers to pay cash for the target's shares, as opposed to offering other corporate shares in exchange. • Most tender offers involve cash. [Cases: Securities Regulation 52.30–52.50. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 121–122, 127–128, 131–138, 140–141.]

creeping tender offer. See creeping acquisition under ACQUISITION.

TENDER OF ISSUE

tender of issue. Common-law pleading. A form attached to a traverse, by which the traversing party refers the issue to the proper mode of trial. [Cases: Pleading 100, 112. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 183, 764, 769.]

“[I]t is the object of all pleadings to bring the parties, in the course of their mutual altercations, to an issue that is a single entire point, affirmed on the one side and denied on the other; and it is to effect this object that the above rule was established. There can be no arrival at this point until one or the other of the parties, by the conclusion of his pleading, offers an issue for the acceptance of his opponent, and this offer is called the ‘tender of issue.’ ” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 254, at 446 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

TENDER-YEARS DOCTRINE

tender-years doctrine. Family law. The doctrine holding that custody of very young children (usu. five years of age and younger) should generally be awarded to the mother in a divorce unless she is found to be unfit. • This doctrine has been rejected in most states and replaced by a presumption of joint custody. See MATERNAL-PREFERENCE PRESUMPTION; PRIMARY-CAREGIVER DOCTRINE . [Cases: Child Custody 457. C.J.S. Parent and Child § 114.]

TENDER-YEARS HEARSAY EXCEPTION

[Cases: States 4.16. C.J.S. States §§ 25–26.]

tenure (ten-y<<schwa>>r), n.1. A right, term, or mode of holding lands or tenements in subordination to a superior. • In feudal times, real property was held predominantly as part of a tenure system. 2. A particular feudal mode of holding lands, such as socage, gavelkind, villeinage, and frankalmoign.

“Most of the feudal incidents and consequences of socage tenure were expressly abolished in New York by the act of 1787; and they were [later] wholly and entirely annihilated by the New York Revised Statutes They were also abolished by statute in Connecticut, 1793; and they have never existed, or they have ceased to exist, in all essential respects, in every other state. The only feudal fictions and services to be retained in any part of the United States consist of the feudal principle, that the lands are held of some superior or lord, to whom the obligation of fealty, and to pay a determinate rent, are due.... The lord paramount of all socage land was none other than the people of the state, and to them, and them only, the duty of fealty was to be rendered” 3 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *509–10 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

base tenure. Hist. The holding of property in villeinage rather than by military service or free service. See VILLEINAGE.

copyhold tenure. See COPYHOLD.

lay tenure. Hist. Any tenure not held through religious service, such as a base tenure or a freehold tenure. • The three historical types of lay tenures are knight-service, socage, and serjeanty. See KNIGHT-SERVICE; SOCAGE; SERJEANTY. Cf. tenure by divine service.

military tenure. A tenure that bears some relation to military service, such as knight-service, grand serjeanty, and cornage. — Also termed tenure in chivalry.

spiritual tenure. A tenure that bears some relation to religious exercises, such as frankalmoign and tenure by divine service.

tenure ad furcam et flagellum (ad f<<schwa>>r-k<<schwa>>m et fl<<schwa>>-jel<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. Tenure by gallows and whip. • This was the meanest of the servile tenures — the bondman was at the disposal of the lord for life and limb.

tenure by divine service.Hist. A tenure obligating the tenant to perform an expressly defined divine service, such as singing a certain number of masses or distributing a fixed sum of alms. Cf. lay tenure.

tenure in chivalry.See military tenure.

villein tenure.See VILLEINAGE.

3. A status afforded to a teacher or professor as a protection against summary dismissal without sufficient cause. • This status has long been considered a cornerstone of academic freedom. [Cases: Colleges and Universities 8.1(2); Schools 133.6. C.J.S. Colleges and Universities § 24; Schools and School Districts §§ 222–223, 226–228, 236–238.] 4. More generally, the legal protection of a long-term relationship, such as employment. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 60. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 119, 130, 134.] — tenurial (ten-yuur-ee-<<schwa>>l), adj.

TERCE

terce.Hist. Scots law. A widow's interest in one-third of her husband's real property, if she has not accepted some other special provision. • The couple must have been married at least a year and a day or else have produced a living child together. See DOWER.

TERCE LAND

terce land.Hist. Scots law. Income-producing real property in which a widow has a pecuniary interest because it was owned by her husband.

TERCER

tercer.Hist. Scots law. A widow who has an interest in one-third of her husband's real property. — Also spelled tiercear.

TERGIVERSATIO

tergiversatio (t<<schwa>>r-jiv-<<schwa>>r-say-shee-oh), n. [Latin “being reluctant, hanging back”] Roman law. A delay tactic, esp. an accuser's failure to pursue a criminal charge, perhaps by not appearing at the trial. • To withdraw an accusation, it was necessary to obtain the court's permission for an annulment (abolitio). In A.D. 61, a law was passed by which anyone convicted of tergiversatio was subject to a fine. See CALUMNIA. Cf. PRAEVARICATIO. Pl. tergiversationes (t<<schwa>>r-jiv-<<schwa>>r-say-shee-oh-neeZ).

TERM

term,n.1. A word or phrase; esp., an expression that has a fixed meaning in some field <term of art>.2. A contractual stipulation <the delivery term provided for shipment within 30 days>. See CONDITION(3).

essential term.See fundamental term.

fundamental term. 1. A contractual provision that must be included for a contract to exist; a contractual provision that specifies an essential purpose of the contract, so that a breach of the provision through inadequate performance makes the performance not only defective but essentially different from what had been promised. [Cases: Contracts 9(1), 15. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 33, 35–36, 38, 42–43.] 2. A contractual provision that must be included in the contract to satisfy the statute of frauds. — Also termed essential term; vital term. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of 113.]

implied term.A provision not expressly agreed to by the parties but instead read into the contract by a court as being implicit. • An implied term should not, in theory, contradict the contract's express terms. [Cases: Contracts 168. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 346–347.]

material term.A contractual provision dealing with a significant issue such as subject matter, price, payment, quantity, quality, duration, or the work to be done. [Cases: Contracts 9. C.J.S. Contracts § 42.]

nonessential term.See nonfundamental term.

nonfundamental term.Any contractual provision that is not regarded as a fundamental term. — Also termed nonessential term; nonvital term. [Cases: Contracts 9(1), 15. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 33, 35–36, 38, 42–43.]

vital term.See fundamental term.

3. (pl.) Provisions that define an agreement's scope; conditions or stipulations <terms of sale>.4. A fixed period of time; esp., the period for which an estate is granted <term of years>.

attendant term.A long period (such as 1,000 years) specified as the duration of a mortgage, created to protect the mortgagor's heirs' interest in the land by not taking back title to the land once it is paid for, but rather by assigning title to a trustee who holds the title in trust for the mortgagor and the mortgagor's heirs. • This arrangement gives the heirs another title to the property in case the interest they inherited proves somehow defective. These types of terms have been largely abolished. See tenancy attendant on the inheritance under TENANCY. [Cases: Mortgages 54. C.J.S. Mortgages § 102.]

“The advantage derived from attendant terms is the security which they afford to purchasers and mortgagees. If the bona fide purchaser or mortgagee should happen to take a defective conveyance or mortgage, by which he acquires a mere equitable title, he may, by taking an assignment of an outstanding term to a trustee for himself, cure the defect, so far as to entitle himself to the legal estate during the term, in preference to any creditor, of whose incumbrance he had not notice, at or before the time of completing his contract for the purchase or mortgage. He may use this term to protect his possessions, or to recover it when lost. This protection extends generally as against all estates and incumbrances created intermediately between the raising of the term and the time of the purchase or mortgage; and the outstanding term, so assigned to a trustee for the purchaser or mortgagee, will prevail over the intermediate legal title to the inheritance.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *87 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

satisfied term.A term of years in land that has satisfied the purpose for which it was created before the term's expiration.

term for deliberating.The time given a beneficiary to decide whether to accept or reject an inheritance or other succession.

term in gross.A term that is unattached to an estate or inheritance. See tenancy in gross under TENANCY.

term of years. 1. A fixed period covering a precise number of years. — Also termed tenancy for a term. 2.English law. A fixed period covering less than a year, or a specified number of years and a fraction of a year. • This sense applies under a seminal English statute — the Law of Property Act of 1925.

“In effect, ‘term of years’ seems to mean a term for any period having a fixed and certain duration as a minimum. Thus, in addition to a tenancy for a specified number of years (e.g., ‘to X for ninety-nine years’), such tenancies as a yearly tenancy or a weekly tenancy are ‘terms of years’ within the definition, for there is a minimum duration of a year or a week respectively. But a lease ‘for the life of X’ cannot exist as a legal estate, and the same, perhaps, applies to tenancies at will or at sufferance (if they are estates at all) for their duration is wholly uncertain.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 74 (6th ed. 1993).

5. The period or session during which a court conducts judicial business <the most recent term was busy indeed>. — Also termed (in sense 5) term of court. See SESSION. [Cases: Courts 63. C.J.S. Courts §§ 111–113, 120.] additional term.A distinct, added term to a previous term. [Cases: Courts 64. C.J.S. Courts § 119.]

territorialism. The traditional approach to choice of law, whereby the place of injury or of contract formation determines which state's law will be applied in a case. See CHOICE OF LAW.

TERRITORIALITY

territoriality.Int'l law. The principle that a nation has the right of sovereignty within its borders.

“Three maxims formulated by the seventeenth-century Dutch scholar Ulrich Huber undergird the modern concept of territoriality: (1) a state's laws have force only within the state's boundaries; (2) anyone found within the state's boundaries is subject to the state's authority; and (3) comity will discipline sovereign exercises of authority so that the territorial effect of each state's laws is respected.” Paul Goldstein, International Copyright: Principles, Law, and Practice 64 (2001).

TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION territorial jurisdiction.See JURISDICTION.

TERRITORIAL LAW

territorial law.The law that applies to all persons within a given territory regardless of their citizenship or nationality. Cf. PERSONAL LAW.

“[T]he expression ‘territorial law’ ... is not confined to the positive rules that regulate acts and events occurring within the jurisdiction, but includes also rules for the choice of law. English rules for the choice of law are part of the law of England and when a court, for instance, tests the substantial validity of a contract made by two foreigners in Paris by reference to French law, it applies a rule imposed by the English sovereign and it may accurately be described as putting into force part of the territorial law of England.” G.C. Cheshire, Private International Law 32 (6th ed. 1961).

TERRITORIAL PROPERTY territorial property.Land and water over which a state has jurisdiction and control, whether the legal title is held by the state or by a private individual or entity. • Lakes and waters wholly within a state are generally its property, as is the marginal sea within the three-mile limit, but bays and gulfs are not always recognized as state property. [Cases: States 11. C.J.S. States § 7.]

TERRITORIAL SEA

non-self-governing territory. Int'l law. A territory that is governed by another country. • These types of territories are rarely allowed representation in the governing country's legislature.

trust territory. Int'l law. A territory to which the United Nations' international trusteeship system formerly applied; a territory once administered by the United Nations or a member state for the political, economic, educational, and social advancement of its inhabitants. • All territories that were subject to this system either became independent nations or opted to become part of another nation.

2. A part of the United States not included within any state but organized with a separate legislature (such as Guam and the U.S. Virgin Islands). Cf. COMMONWEALTH(2); DEPENDENCY(1). [Cases: Territories 7. C.J.S. Territories §§ 2, 5, 7, 9–10.] — territorial, adj. “The United States has had territories from its inception. The Northwest Territory, along with the thirteen original states, was a part of the nation when the constitution was ratified. The original U.S. constitution expressly granted Congress the power to govern territories. Before the Civil War all of the territories were on the North American continent and contiguous with the states or the other territories. After the Civil War with the purchase of Alaska in 1867 (called ‘Seward's Folly’ or ‘Seward's Icebox’ by detractors) came the United States' first acquisition of non-contiguous territory. Alaska did, however, have certain basics in common with earlier U.S. territories. Alaska was on the North American continent and sparsely populated.... In the latter part of the 19th century, the U.S. became interested in various islands around the world.” Stanley K. Laughlin Jr., The Law of United States Territories and Affiliated Jurisdictions § 3.1, at 25–26 (1995).

TERRITORY OF A JUDGE

territory of a judge. The territorial jurisdiction of a particular court. See JURISDICTION(3). [Cases: Courts 29, 171; Judges 30. C.J.S. Courts §§ 67, 70; Judges §§ 71–74.]

TESTAMENTI FACTIO

testamenti factio (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-tifak-shee-oh). [Latin “right to make a testament”] Roman law. 1. Broadly, the capacity to take part in a will, as testator, heir, or witness. 2. The capacity to make a will, open to any citizen, male or female, sui juris, and over puberty. • This term is sometimes known as “active” testamenti factio or testamenti factio activa, though the latter phrase was not known to the Roman law. 3. The capacity to receive property by will. • Junian Latini and peregrini did not have this capacity. It is also known as “passive” testamenti factio or testamenti factio passiva, though the latter phrase was (like testamenti factio activa) unknown to the Roman law. See LATINI JUNIANI; PEREGRINUS⁴. The capacity to witness a will. • Women did not have this capacity. — Also termed factio testamenti.

“Under the civil law, this was a power ... vested only in the Roman citizen The testamenti factio was necessary to any participation whatever in a testament. Without it, no one could make a will, or take a legacy, or even be a witness to the execution of a will In Scotch law, this phrase can only signify the power of making a will, as any one may be a beneficiary under another's settlement.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 216–17 (4th ed. 1894).

testamentum (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman law. A will. • In early and classical law, the mancipatory will was standard. It was still used in the Later Empire but in A.D. 446, the holographic will was accepted in the Western Empire. A will could also be made by registration on the court acta. See holographic will, mancipatory will under WILL.

testamentum calatis comitiis (k<<schwa>>-lay-tis k<<schwa>>-mish-ee-is). [Latin “will made before the comitia curiata”] Roman law. In early Rome, a will made before the comitia curiata, having an effect comparable to adrogation. • The comitia curiata was known as the comitia calata when it met twice a year for the purpose of making wills. See comitia curiata under COMITIA.

testamentum holografum (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m hol-<<schwa>>-graf-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] See holographic will under WILL.

testamentum in procinctu (in pr<<schwa>>-singk-t[y]oo). [Latin “will made before the army”] Roman law. A will made by a soldier before a fellow soldiers while preparing for battle.

testamentum militum (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m mil-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] See soldier's will under WILL.

testamentum tripartitum (trI-p<<schwa>>-r-tI-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin “tripartite will”] Roman law. A will made without interruption, with seven witnesses to seal it, and signed by the testator. • This form of will was valid in Justinian's law. It was called “tripartite” because the authority for various parts of it derived from three sources: the civil law (requiring that the will be made at one and the same time before witnesses); the praetor's edict (requiring that there be seven witnesses and that they must seal it); and imperial constitutions (requiring that the testator must sign at the end).

TESTATE

testate (tes-tayt), adj. Having left a will at death <she died testate>. Cf. INTESTATE. [Cases: Wills 1. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1, 3, 174.]

TESTATOR

testator (tes-tay-t<<schwa>>r also te-stay-t<<schwa>>r). A person who has made a will; esp., a person who dies leaving a will. • Because this term is usu. interpreted as applying to both sexes, testatrix has become archaic. — Also termed testate. Cf. INTESTATE. [Cases: Wills 21–55. C.J.S. Indians § 117; Wills §§ 2, 4–40.]

TESTATRIX

testatrix (te-stay-triks ortes-t<<schwa>>-triks).Archaic. A female testator. • In modern usage, a person who leaves a will is called a testator, regardless of sex. Pl. testatrixes, testatrices.

TESTATUM

testatum (tes-tay-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin “attested”] Hist. A writ issued in a county where a defendant or a defendant's property is located when venue lies in another county. • This writ, when issued after a ground writ, allowed the seizure of the defendant or the defendant's property in another county. — Also termed testatum bill; testatum writ; latitat (lat-<<schwa>>-tat). Cf. ground writ under WRIT.

“But if the defendant had removed into another county, the next process the plaintiff might sue out against him was a testatum bill, directed to the sheriff thereof, which soon gained the name of a latitat, from that word being within it.” 1 George Crompton, Practice Common-Placed: Rules and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas xxxv (3d ed. 1787).

TESTIMONIUM CLAUSE

testimonium clause. A provision at the end of an instrument (esp. a will) reciting the date when the instrument was signed, by whom it was signed, and in what capacity. • This clause traditionally begins with the phrase “In witness whereof.” — Also termed testatum clause; witness clause. Cf. ATTESTATION CLAUSE. [Cases: Wills 111(2). C.J.S. Wills §§ 240–252.]

TESTIMONY

testimony,n. Evidence that a competent witness under oath or affirmation gives at trial or in an affidavit or deposition. — Also termed personal evidence. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Trial 33; Witnesses 224. C.J.S. Trial §§ 141–142; Witnesses §§ 390–392.] — testimonial,adj.

affirmative testimony.Testimony about whether something occurred or did not occur, based on what the witness saw or heard at the time and place in question. — Also termed positive testimony; (formerly) statement of fact. See direct evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Evidence 586. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 339, 1309, 1328.]

cumulative testimony.Identical or similar testimony by more than one witness, and usu. by several, offered by a party usu. to impress the jury with the apparent weight of proof on that party's side. • The trial court typically limits cumulative testimony. [Cases: Criminal Law 675; Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Trial 56. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1212; Trial § 183.]

dropsy testimony.Slang. A police officer's false testimony that a fleeing suspect dropped an illegal substance that was then confiscated by the police and used as probable cause for arresting the suspect. • Dropsy testimony is sometimes given when an arrest has been made without probable cause, as when illegal substances have been found through an improper search.

“Before [Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643 (1961)], the policeman typically testified that he had stopped the defendant for little or no reason, searched him, and found narcotics on his person. This had the ring of truth. It was an illegal search (not based upon ‘probable cause’), but the evidence was admissible because Mapp had not yet been decided. Since it made no difference, the policeman testified truthfully. After, the decision in Mapp it made a great deal of difference. [¶] For the first few months, New York policemen continued to tell the truth about the circumstances of their searches, with the result that evidence was suppressed. Then the police made the great discovery that if the defendant drops the narcotics on the ground, after which the policeman arrests him, then the search is reasonable and the evidence is admissible. Spend a few hours in the New York City Criminal Court nowadays and you will hear case after case in which a policeman testifies that the defendant dropped the narcotics on the ground whereupon the policeman arrested him. [¶] Usually the very language of the testimony is identical from one case to another. This is now known among defense lawyers and prosecutors as ‘dropsy’ testimony. The judge has no reason to disbelieve it in any particular case, and of course the judge must decide each case on its own evidence, without regard to the testimony in other cases. Surely, though, not in every case was the defendant unlucky enough to drop his narcotics.” Irving Younger, “The Perjury Routine,” The Nation, May 3, 1967, at 596–97.

expert testimony.See expert evidence under EVIDENCE.

false testimony.Testimony that is untrue. • This term is broader than perjury, which has a state-of-mind element. Unlike perjury, false testimony does not denote a crime. — Also termed false evidence.

interpreted testimony. Testimony translated because the witness cannot communicate in the language of the tribunal. [Cases: Witnesses 230. C.J.S. Witnesses § 399.]

lay opinion testimony. Evidence given by a witness who is not qualified as an expert but who testifies to opinions or inferences. • In federal court, the admissibility of this testimony is limited to opinions or inferences that are rationally based on the witness's perception and that will be helpful to a clear understanding of the witness's testimony or the determination of a fact in issue. Fed. R. Evid. 701. [Cases: Criminal Law 449.1–467; Evidence 470–503.] mediate testimony. See secondary evidence under EVIDENCE.

negative testimony. See negative evidence under EVIDENCE.

nonverbal testimony. A photograph, drawing, map, chart, or other depiction used to aid a witness in testifying. • The witness need not have made it, but it must accurately represent something that the witness saw. See demonstrative evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Criminal Law 437; Evidence 358, 359. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1039, 1049; Evidence §§ 985–987, 991.]

opinion testimony. Testimony based on one's belief or idea rather than on direct knowledge of the facts at issue. • Opinion testimony from either a lay witness or an expert witness may be allowed in evidence under certain conditions. See opinion evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Criminal Law 448–494; Evidence 470–574. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 853, 1050–1088; Evidence §§ 223, 509–759, 800–812; Executions § 435.]

positive testimony. See affirmative testimony.

testimony de bene esse (dee bee-nee es-ee also day ben-ay es-ay). Testimony taken because it is in danger of being lost before it can be given at a trial or hearing, usu. because of the impending death or departure of the witness. • Such testimony is taken in aid of a pending case, while testimony taken under a bill to perpetuate testimony is taken in anticipation of future litigation. See deposition de bene esse under DEPOSITION. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1291; Pretrial Procedure 61. C.J.S. Pretrial Procedure §§ 1, 3–4, 9.]

written testimony. 1. Testimony given out of court by deposition or affidavit. • The recorded writing, signed by the witness, is considered testimony. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1932; Pretrial Procedure 201. C.J.S. Discovery § 69; Pretrial Procedure §§ 109–114, 122–124.] 2. In some administrative agencies and courts, direct narrative testimony that is reduced to writing, to which the witness swears at a hearing or trial before cross-examination takes place in the traditional way. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 461; Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Trial 33. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 129; Trial §§ 141–142.]

TESTING CLAUSE

testing clause. Scots law. The clause at the end of a formal written instrument or deed by which it is authenticated according to the forms of law. • Traditionally, the clause states the name and address of the writer, the number of pages in the instrument, any alterations or erasures, the names and addresses of the witnesses, the name and address of the person who penned the instrument, and the date and place of signing.

TESTIS

testis. [Latin] Hist. A witness. — testes,pl.

TEST OATH

test oath.See oath of allegiance under OATH.

TEST PAPER

test paper.A writing that has been proved genuine and submitted to a jury as a standard by which to determine the authenticity of other writings. • The court decides the test paper's authenticity as a matter of law before it is used by the jury. Direct evidence, such as a witness to the writing's creation or an admission by the party, is preferred, but strong circumstantial evidence is usu. acceptable. In Pennsylvania, a paper or instrument shown to the jury as evidence is still called a test paper (sometimes written test-paper).

TEXAS BALLOT

Texas ballot.See BALLOT(4).

TEXTBOOK DIGEST

textbook digest.A legal text whose aim is to set forth the law of a subject in condensed form, with little or no criticism or discussion of the authorities cited, and no serious attempt to explain or reconcile apparently conflicting decisions.

TEXTUAL CITATION

textual citation.See CITATION(4).

TEXTUALISM

textualism. See STRICT CONSTRUCTIONISM.

THALWEG

thalweg (tahl-vayk or -veg).1. A line following the lowest part of a (usu. submerged) valley. 2. The middle of the primary navigable channel of a waterway, constituting the boundary between states. — Also spelled talweg. — Also termed midway. [Cases: States 12.1.]

live thalweg.The part of a river channel that is most followed, usu. at the middle of the principal channel. Louisiana v. Mississippi, 466 U.S. 96, 104 S.Ct. 1645 (1984).

THAYER PRESUMPTION

Thayer presumption.A presumption that allows the party against whom the presumption operates to come forward with evidence to rebut the presumption, but that does not shift the burden of proof to that party. See James B. Thayer, A Preliminary Treatise on Evidence 31–44

(1898). • Most presumptions that arise in civil trials in federal court are interpreted in this way. Fed. R. Evid. 301. Cf. MORGAN PRESUMPTION. [Cases: Criminal Law 324; Evidence 85, 89. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 695; Evidence §§ 131, 135, 152–156, 160.]

theft, n.1. The felonious taking and removing of another's personal property with the intent of depriving the true owner of it; larceny. [Cases: Larceny 1. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 1(1, 2), 9.] 2. Broadly, any act or instance of stealing, including larceny, burglary, embezzlement, and false pretenses. • Many modern penal codes have consolidated such property offenses under the name “theft.” — Also termed (in Latin) crimen furti. See LARCENY.

“[T]he distinctions between larceny, embezzlement and false pretenses serve no useful purpose in the criminal law but are useless handicaps from the standpoint of the administration of criminal justice. One solution has been to combine all three in one section of the code under the name of ‘larceny.’ This has one disadvantage, however, because it frequently becomes necessary to add a modifier to make clear whether the reference is to common-law larceny or to statutory larceny. To avoid this difficulty some states have employed another word to designate a statutory offense made up of a combination of larceny, embezzlement, and false pretenses. And the word used for this purpose is ‘theft.’ ‘Theft’ is not the name of any common-law offense. At times it has been employed as a synonym of ‘larceny,’ but for the most part has been regarded as broader in its general scope. Under such a statute it is not necessary for the indictment charging theft to specify whether the offense is larceny, embezzlement or false pretenses.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 389–90 (3d ed. 1982).

cybertheft. See CYBERTHEFT.

petty theft. A theft of a small quantity of cash or of low-value goods or services. • This offense is usu. a misdemeanor.

theft by deception. The use of trickery to obtain another's property, esp. by (1) creating or reinforcing a false impression (as about value), (2) preventing one from obtaining information that would affect one's judgment about a transaction, or (3) failing to disclose, in a property transfer, a known lien or other legal impediment. Model Penal Code § 223. [Cases: False Pretenses 1.]

theft by extortion. Larceny in which the perpetrator obtains property by threatening to (1) inflict bodily harm on anyone or commit any other criminal offense, (2) accuse anyone of a criminal offense, (3) expose any secret tending to subject any person to hatred, contempt, or ridicule, or impair one's credit or business reputation, (4) take or withhold action as an official, or cause an official to take or withhold action, (5) bring about or continue a strike, boycott, or other collective unofficial action, if the property is not demanded or received for the benefit of the group in whose interest the actor purports to act, (6) testify or provide information or withhold testimony or information with respect to another's legal claim or defense, or (7) inflict any other harm that would not benefit the actor. Model Penal Code § 223.4. — Also termed larceny by extortion. See EXTORTION. [Cases: Extortion and Threats 25.1. C.J.S. Threats and Unlawful Communications §§ 2–20.]

theft by false pretext.The use of a false pretext to obtain another's property. [Cases: False Pretenses 1.]

theft of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake.Larceny in which one obtains control of property the person knows to be lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake (esp. in the amount of property or identity of recipient) and fails to take reasonable measures to restore the property to the rightful owner. Model Penal Code § 223.5. — Also termed larceny of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake. [Cases: Larceny 10. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 18, 49.]

theft of services.The act of obtaining services from another by deception, threat, coercion, stealth, mechanical tampering, or using a false token or device. See Model Penal Code § 223.7.

THEFTBOTE

theftbote (theft-boht). See BOTE(2).

THEFTUOUS

theftuous (thef-choo-<<schwa>>s), adj.1. (Of an act) characterized by theft. 2. (Of a person) given to stealing. — Also spelled theftous.

THENCE

thence,adv.1. From that place; from that time. • In surveying, and in describing land by courses and distances, this word, preceding each course given, implies that the following course is continuous with the one before it <south 240 feet to an iron post, thence west 59 feet>.2. On that account; therefore.

THENCE DOWN THE RIVER

thence down the river.With the meanders of a river. • This phrase appears in the field notes of patent surveyors, indicating that the survey follows a meandering river unless evidence shows that the meander line as written was where the surveyor in fact ran it. Meander lines show the general course of the river and are used in estimating acreage, but are not necessarily boundary lines. See MEANDER LINE. [Cases: Boundaries 12. C.J.S. Boundaries § 25.]

THEOCRACY

theocracy (thee-ok-r<<schwa>>-see).1. Government of a state by those who are believed to be or represent that they are acting under the immediate direction of God or some other divinity. 2. A state in which power is exercised by ecclesiastics.

THEODOSIAN CODE

Theodosian Code (thee-<<schwa>>-doh-sh<<schwa>>n).Roman law. A compilation of imperial enactments prepared at the direction of the emperor Theodosius II and published in A.D. 438. • The Theodosian Code replaced all other imperial legislation from the time of Constantine I (A.D. 306–337), and remained the basis of Roman law until it was superseded by the first Justinian Code in A.D. 529. — Also termed (in Latin) Codex Theodosianus (koh-deks thee-<<schwa>>-doh-shee-ay-n<<schwa>>s).

“As a literary work the Theodosian Code has a dismal reputation Some quaestors possessed an elegant, powerful, or agreeably ornate style.... Against these may be set others with literary pretensions whose prose is ponderous or marred by excessive alliteration, assonance, pleonasm, or fondness for technical terms, or whose compositions are in other ways inept.” Tony Honoré, Law in the Crisis of the Empire 379–455 AD 21 (1998).

THEOLONIO

theolonio. See DE THEOLONIO.

THEORY OF LAW

theory of law. The legal premise or set of principles on which a case rests.

THEORY-OF-PLEADING DOCTRINE theory-of-pleading doctrine. The principle — now outmoded — that one must prove a case exactly as pleaded. • Various modern codes and rules of civil procedure have abolished this strict pleading-and-proof requirement. For example, Fed. R. Civ. P. 15 allows amendment of pleadings to conform to the evidence. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 881; Pleading 370. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 763, 766–768, 770.]

THEORY OF THE CASE

theory of the case. A comprehensive and orderly mental arrangement of principles and facts, conceived and constructed for the purpose of securing a judgment or decree of a court in favor of a litigant; the particular line of reasoning of either party to a suit, the purpose being to bring together certain facts of the case in a logical sequence and to correlate them in a way that produces in the decision-maker's mind a definite result or conclusion favored by the advocate. See CAUSE OF ACTION(1).

THERAPEUTIC ABORTION

therapeutic abortion. See ABORTION.

THERAPEUTIC RELIEF

therapeutic relief. See RELIEF.

THEREABOUTS

Inside or within that thing; inside or within those things <there were three school buses with 108 children therein>.3. In that regard, circumstance, or particular <therein lies the problem>.

THEREINAFTER

thereinafter,adv. Later in that thing (such as a speech or document) <the book's first reference was innocuous, but the five references thereafter were libelous per se>.

THEREOF

thereof,adv. Of that, it, or them <although the disease is spreading rapidly, the cause thereof is unknown>.

THEREON

thereon,adv. On that or them <Michaels found the online reports of the cases and relied thereon instead of checking the printed books>. — Also termed thereupon.

THERETO

thereto,adv. To that place, thing, issue, or the like <the jury awarded $750,000 in actual damages, and it added thereto another $250,000 in punitive damages>. — Also termed thereunto.

THERETOFORE

theretofore,adv. Until that time; before that time <theretofore, the highest award in such a case has been $450,000>.

THEREUNDER

thereunder,adv. Under that or them <on the top shelf were three books, and situated thereunder was the missing banknote> <section 1988 was the relevant fee statute, and the plaintiffs were undeniably proceeding thereunder>.

THEREUNTO

thereunto,adv. See THERETO.

THEREUPON

thereupon,adv.1. Immediately; without delay; promptly <the writ of execution issued from the court, and the sheriff thereupon sought to find the judgment debtor>.2.THEREON. 3.THEREFORE.

THESAURI INVENTIO

thesauri inventio (thi-sawr-I in-ven-shee-oh). [Latin “discovery of treasure”] Roman law. The principle according to which the finder of treasure acquires full or partial ownership of it.

THIRD-DEGREE INSTRUCTION

third-degree instruction. See ALLEN CHARGE.

THIRD-DEGREE MURDER

third-degree murder. See MURDER.

THIRD OPPOSITION

third opposition. Civil law. A species of intervention, usu. in a real-property case, in which the third party asserts a claim of ownership or other real right to seized property, and the claim does not depend on the outcome of the original suit between the plaintiff and the defendant. La. Code Civ. Proc. art. 1092. See, e.g., Atkins v. Smith, 15 So. 2d 855 (La. 1943). See INTERVENTION(1).

THIRD PARTY

third party, n. A person who is not a party to a lawsuit, agreement, or other transaction but who is usu. somehow implicated in it; someone other than the principal parties. — Also termed outside party; third person. See PARTY. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 281; Parties 49. C.J.S. Parties § 127.] — third-party, adj.

THIRD-PARTY

third-party,vb. To bring (a person or entity) into litigation as a third-party defendant <seeking indemnity, the defendant third-partied the surety>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 281; Parties 49. C.J.S. Parties § 127.]

THIRD WORLD

Third World. Int'l law. 1. DEVELOPING COUNTRY. 2. The group of nations (esp. in Africa and Asia) not aligned with major powers, whether Western democracies (i.e., the First — or Free — World) or countries that were formerly part of the Soviet bloc (i.e., the Second World). • Although Third World nations are often underdeveloped, the term Third World properly may denote only their political, not their economic, status.

THIRD WORLD COUNTRY

Third World country. See DEVELOPING COUNTRY.

THIRTEENTH AMENDMENT

Thirteenth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1865, that abolished slavery and involuntary servitude. [Cases: Constitutional Law 83(2). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 482–486.]

“The thirteenth amendment is fairly unique in two respects. First, it contains an absolute bar to the existence of slavery or involuntary servitude; there is no requirement of ‘state action.’ Thus it is applicable to individuals as well as states Secondly, like the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, it contains an enforcement clause, enabling Congress to pass all necessary legislation.” John E. Nowak & Ronald D. Rotunda, Constitutional Law § 15.6, at 918 (4th ed. 1991).

30(B)(6) DEPOSITION

30(b)(6) deposition. See DEPOSITION.

THIRTY-DAY LETTER

thirty-day letter. A letter that accompanies a revenue agent's report issued as a result of an Internal Revenue Service audit or the rejection of a taxpayer's claim for refund and that outlines the taxpayer's appeal procedure before the Internal Revenue Service. • If the taxpayer does not request any such procedure within the 30-day period, the IRS will issue a statutory notice of deficiency. — Also written 30-day letter. Cf. NINETY-DAY LETTER. [Cases: Internal Revenue 5044.]

threat, n. 1. A communicated intent to inflict harm or loss on another or on another's property, esp. one that might diminish a person's freedom to act voluntarily or with lawful consent . [Cases: Extortion and Threats 25.1. C.J.S. Threats and Unlawful Communications §§ 2–20.]

terroristic threat. A threat to commit any crime of violence with the purpose of (1) terrorizing another, (2) causing the evacuation of a building, place of assembly, or facility of public transportation, (3) causing serious public inconvenience, or (4) recklessly disregarding the risk of causing such terror or inconvenience. Model Penal Code § 211. See TERRORISM. [Cases: Extortion and Threats 25.1. C.J.S. Threats and Unlawful Communications §§ 2–20.]

2. An indication of an approaching menace <the threat of bankruptcy>. 3. A person or thing that might well cause harm <Mrs. Harrington testified that she had never viewed her husband as a threat>. — threaten, vb. — threatening, adj.

THREATENED SPECIES

threatened species. See SPECIES(1).

THREAT OF CONTINUING HARM threat of continuing harm. See CONTINUING THREAT OF HARM.

THREAT OF CONTINUING INJURY

THREE-JUDGE COURT

three-judge court. See COURT.

THREE-MILE LIMIT

three-mile limit. The distance of one marine league or three miles offshore, usu. recognized as the limit of territorial jurisdiction. [Cases: International Law 5. C.J.S. International Law §§ 14–20.]

THREE-STEP TEST

three-step test. Copyright. An analysis of an infringement defense under TRIPs and the Berne Convention, looking at whether the defendant's use of a protected work (1) is inherently limited to special cases, (2) did not conflict with the owner's normal exploitation of the work, and (3) did not unreasonably prejudice the legitimate interests of the owner. • The test is analogous to the analysis under the fair-use doctrine in U.S. law.

THREE-STRIKES LAW

three-strikes law. Slang. A statute prescribing an enhanced sentence, esp. life imprisonment, for a repeat offender's third felony conviction. • About half the states have enacted a statute of this kind. — Also termed three-strikes-and-you're-out law. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1200–1219. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1463, 1472, 1638–1643, 1645–1647, 1650–1653.]

THREE WICKED SISTERS

three wicked sisters. Slang. The three doctrines — contributory negligence, the fellow-servant rule, and assumption of the risk — used by 19th-century courts to deny recovery to workers injured on the job.

“These three common law defenses, contributory negligence, fellow servant rule, and assumption of the risk, became known as the ‘three wicked sisters,’ because of their preclusive effect on the ability of injured workers to recover.... By precluding application of the traditional respondeat superior concept for acts of fellow servants and by presuming that workers assumed the risks associated with their employment, courts made it extremely difficult for employees to recover from their employers for the increasing number of work-related injuries.... By the late 1800s, courts began to recognize the harsh results generated by rote application of the fellow servant, assumption of the risk, and contributory negligence doctrines.” Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law § 7.2, at 404 (1994).

THRESHOLD

threshold. Parliamentary law. The number or proportion of votes needed for election.

THRESHOLD CONFESSION

threshold confession. See CONFESSION.

THROUGH BILL OF LADING

through bill of lading. See BILL OF LADING.

THROUGH LOT

through lot. A lot that abuts a street at each end.

THROUGH RATE

through rate. The total shipping cost when two or more carriers are involved. • The carriers agree in advance on a through rate, which is typically lower than the sum of the separate rates. [Cases: Carriers 26. C.J.S. Carriers §§ 138–140.]

THROWAWAY

throwaway, n. Slang. 1. An unemancipated minor whose parent or caregiver has forced him or her to leave home. 2. A runaway whose parent or caregiver refuses to allow him or her to return home. Cf. RUNAWAY.

THROWBACK RULE

throwback rule. Tax. 1. In the taxation of trusts, a rule requiring that an amount distributed in any tax year that exceeds the year's distributable net income must be treated as if it had been distributed in the preceding year. • The beneficiary is taxed in the current year although the computation is made as if the excess had been distributed in the previous year. If the trust did not have undistributed accumulated income in the preceding year, the amount of the throwback is tested against each of the preceding years. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 665–668. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4019. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 450–452.] 2. A taxation rule requiring a sale that would otherwise be exempt from state income tax (because the state to which the sale would be assigned for apportionment purposes does not have an income tax, even though the seller's state does) to be attributed to the seller's state and thus subjected to a state-level tax. • This rule applies only if the seller's state has adopted a throwback rule.

THROW OUT

throw out, vb. To dismiss (a claim or lawsuit).

THUMBPRINT

thumbprint. See FINGERPRINT.

TICKET

ticket, n. 1. A certificate indicating that the person to whom it is issued, or the holder, is entitled to some right or privilege <she bought a bus ticket for Miami>. 2. CITATION(2) <he got a speeding ticket last week>. 3. BALLOT (2) <they all voted a straight-party ticket>.

TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN

ticket-of-leave man. A convict who has obtained a ticket of leave.

TICKET SPECULATOR

ticket speculator. A person who buys tickets and then resells them for more than their face value; in slang, a scalper. See SCALPER(1).

TIDAL

tidal, adj. Affected by or having tides. • For a river to be “tidal” at a given spot, the water need not necessarily be salt, but the spot must be one where the tide, in the ordinary and regular course of things, flows and reflows.

TIDE

tide. The rising and falling of seawater that is produced by the attraction of the sun and moon, uninfluenced by special winds, seasons, or other circumstances that create meteorological and atmospheric meteorological tides; the ebb and flow of the sea. • Tides are used to measure a shore's upland boundary.

mean high tide. The average of all high tides, esp. over a period of 18.6 years. — Also termed ordinary high tide.

mean lower low tide. The average of lower low tides over a fixed period.

mean low tide. The average of all low tides — both low and lower low — over a fixed period.

neap tide (neep). A tide, either high tide or low tide, that is lower than average because it occurs during the first or last quarter of the moon, when the sun's attraction partly counteracts the moon's.

ordinary high tide. See mean high tide.

spring tide. A tide, either high tide or low tide, that is higher than average because it occurs during the new moon and full moon.

TIDELAND

tideland. Land between the lines of the ordinary high and low tides, covered and uncovered successively by the ebb and flow of those tides; land covered and uncovered by the ordinary tides. [Cases: Navigable Waters 36(3).]

TIDESMAN

tidesman. English law. A customhouse officer appointed to watch or attend upon ships until the customs are paid. • A tidesman boards a ship at its arrival in the mouth of the Thames and comes up with the tide. See CUSTOMHOUSE.

TIME-PLACE-OR-MANNER RESTRICTION time-place-or-manner restriction. Constitutional law. A government's limitation on when, where, or how a public speech or assembly may occur, but not on the content of that speech or assembly. • As long as such restrictions are narrowly tailored to achieve a legitimate governmental interest, they do not violate the First Amendment. — Also written time, place, or manner restriction. — Also termed time-place-and-manner restriction. See PUBLIC FORUM .

TIME POLICY

time policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

TIME-PRICE DIFFERENTIAL time-price differential. 1. A figure representing the difference between the current cash price of an item and the total cost of purchasing it on credit. [Cases: Consumer Credit 4; Usury 32. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 124–125, 280, 284–293.] 2. The difference between a seller's price for immediate cash payment and a different price when payment is made later or in installments.

TIME-PRICE DOCTRINE

time-price doctrine. The rule that if a debt arises out of a purchase and sale, the usury laws do not apply. • If a higher price is charged for a deferred payment than for an immediate payment, the difference between the time price and the cash price is deemed compensation to the seller for the risk that the buyer will default and for the interest that the seller could have earned on an immediate payment. Because the buyer can usually choose to postpone a purchase and save up the cash price, the buyer does not have the same status as a needy borrower who must deal with a potentially predatory lender.

TIME-SHARING

time-sharing, n. Joint ownership or rental of property (such as a vacation condominium) by several persons who take turns occupying the property. — Also termed time-share. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.] — time-share, vb.

TIMESHEET

timesheet. 1. An employee's record of time spent on the job. 2. An attorney's daily record of billable and nonbillable hours, used to generate clients' bills. — Formerly also termed time check. See BILLABLE HOUR.

TIME-SHIFTING

time-shifting. The practice of recording a broadcast for viewing at a later time. • Time-shifting was found to be a noninfringing fair use of videotape recorders in Sony Corp. v. Universal Studios, Inc., 464 U.S. 417, 104 S.Ct. 774 (1984). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 67.1. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 51–52, 54.]

TIME UNITY

time unity. See unity of time under UNITY.

TIN PARACHUTE

tin parachute. An employment-contract provision that grants a corporate employee (esp. one below the executive level) severance benefits in the event of a takeover. • These benefits are typically less lucrative than those provided under a golden parachute. — Also termed silver parachute. Cf. GOLDEN PARACHUTE.

TIP

tip, n.1. A piece of special information; esp., in securities law, advance or inside information passed from one person to another. See INSIDE INFORMATION; INSIDER TRADING. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.28(2). C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 180.] 2. A gratuity for service given. • Tip income is taxable. IRC (26 USCA) § 61(a). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3163; Taxation 986.1.]

TIPPEE

tippee. Securities. A person who acquires material nonpublic information from someone in a fiduciary relationship with the company to which that information pertains. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.28(5). C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 184.]

TIPPER

tipper. Securities. A person who possesses material inside information and who selectively discloses that information for trading or other personal purposes <the tippee traded 5,000 shares after her conversation with the tipper>. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.28(5). C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 184.]

TIPLING HOUSE

tippling house. See PUBLIC HOUSE.

TIPSTAFF

tipstaff. A court crier. • The name derives from the crier's former practice of holding a staff tipped with silver as a badge of office. See CRIER(1). [Cases: Courts 58. C.J.S. Courts § 108.] Pl. tipstaves, tipstaffs.

TIP-STAVE

tip-stave. See SERVITOR OF BILLS.

TITHE

tithe (tith), n.1. A tenth of one's income, esp. in reference to a religious or charitable gift or obligation. [Cases: Religious Societies 15. C.J.S. Religious Societies §§ 53–54.] 2. Hist. A small tax or assessment, esp. in the amount of one-tenth. — tithe, vb. — tithable, adj.

“A tithe was the right of a rector to a tenth part of the produce of all the land in his parish. In some cases a rector was an individual, while in others the rectory was vested in a monastery, which appointed a vicar to perform the necessary ecclesiastical duties ‘vicariously’ for the monastery. On the dissolution of the monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII many rectories passed into the royal hands and were granted to laymen; the result was that the right to tithes in many cases passed into lay hands. Like advowsons, tithes were deemed to be land in which the various estates could exist.” Robert E. Megarry & P.V. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 415 (4th ed. 1969).

great tithe.(usu. pl.) A tithe paid in kind and therefore considered more valuable than other tithes. • The great tithes often consisted of corn, peas, beans, hay, and wood.

mixed tithes.A tithe consisting of a natural product, such as milk or wool, obtained or cultivated by human effort.

“A second species of incorporeal hereditaments is that of tithes ... the first species being usually called predial, as of corn, grass, hops, and wood; the second mixed, as of wool, milk, pigs, etc., consisting of natural products, but nurtured and preserved in part by the care of man; and of these the tenth must be paid in gross: the third personal, as of manual occupations, trades, fisheries, and the like; and of these only the tenth part of the clear gains and profits is due.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 24 (1766).

personal tithe.A tithe of profits from manual occupations or trades.

predial tithe.A tithe of crops (such as corn). — Also spelled praedial tithe.

vicarial tithe (vI-kair-ee-<<schwa>>l). A small tithe payable to a vicar.

TITHE OF AGISTMENT

tithe of agistment (<<schwa>>-jist-m<<schwa>>nt).Hist. A church-levied charge on grazing land. • The tithe was paid by the occupier of the land rather than the person whose cattle grazed on the land. See AGISTMENT.

TITHING

tithing. See DECENNARY.

TITIUS HERES ESTO

Titius heres esto (tish-ee-<<schwa>>s heer-eez es-toh). [Latin] Roman law. Let Titius be my heir. • The phrase was the testamentary form for appointing an heir. Titius was a fictitious name often used by way of example in legal writing, esp. in forms.

TITLE

title. 1. The union of all elements (as ownership, possession, and custody) constituting the legal right to control and dispose of property; the legal link between a person who owns property and the property itself <no one has title to that land>.2. Legal evidence of a person's ownership rights in property; an instrument (such as a deed) that constitutes such evidence < record your title with the county clerk>.

“Though employed in various ways, [title] is generally used to describe either the manner in which a right to real property is acquired, or the right itself. In the first sense, it refers to the conditions necessary to acquire a valid claim to land; in the second, it refers to the legal consequences of such conditions. These two senses are not only interrelated, but inseparable: given the requisite conditions, the legal consequences or rights follow as of course; given the rights, conditions necessary for the creation of those rights must have been satisfied. Thus, when the word 'title' is used in one sense, the other sense is necessarily implied." Kent McNeil, Common Law Aboriginal Title 10 (1989).

aboriginal title. 1. Land ownership, or a claim of land ownership, by an indigenous people in a place that has been colonized. — Also termed native title. 2. INDIAN TITLE.

absolute title. An exclusive title to land; a title that excludes all others not compatible with it. See fee simple absolute under FEE SIMPLE. [Cases: Estates in Property 5. C.J.S. Estates §§ 11–12.]

adverse title. A title acquired by adverse possession. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. [Cases: Adverse Possession 106. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 247, 339.]

after-acquired title. Title held by a person who bought property from a seller who acquired title only after purporting to sell the property to the buyer. See AFTER-ACQUIRED-TITLE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 8. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 6.]

apparent title. See COLOR OF TITLE.

bad title. 1. See defective title. 2. See unmarketable title.

clear title. 1. A title free from any encumbrances, burdens, or other limitations. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 130(2), 133. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 326, 330.] 2. See marketable title. — Also termed good title.

defeasible title. A title voidable on the occurrence of a contingency, but not void on its face. [Cases: Estates in Property 6. C.J.S. Estates §§ 13–14.]

defective title. A title that cannot legally convey the property to which it applies, usu. because of some conflicting claim to that property. — Also termed bad title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 129. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 314.]

derivative title. 1. A title that results when an already existing right is transferred to a new owner. 2. The general principle that a transferee of property acquires only the rights held by the transferor and no more. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 210. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 464.]

dormant title. A title in real property held in abeyance.

doubtful title. A title that exposes the party holding it to the risk of litigation with an adverse claimant. See unmarketable title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 129(1), 130(2). C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 314–319, 321–322, 326.]

equitable title. A title that indicates a beneficial interest in property and that gives the holder the right to acquire formal legal title. • Before the Statute of Uses (1536), an equitable title was enforceable only in a court of chancery, not of law. Cf. legal title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 54. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 145–146.]

good title. 1. A title that is legally valid or effective. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 130(2), 133. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 326, 330.] 2. See clear title (1). 3. See marketable title.

imperfect title. A title that requires a further exercise of the granting power to pass land in fee, or that does not convey full and absolute dominion.

Indian title. See INDIAN TITLE.

just title. In a case of prescription, a title that the possessor received from someone whom the possessor honestly believed to be the real owner, provided that the title was to transfer ownership of the property. [Cases: Adverse Possession 69. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 66, 73, 75, 103, 105.]

legal title. A title that evidences apparent ownership but does not necessarily signify full and complete title or a beneficial interest. • Before the Statute of Uses (1536), a legal title was enforceable only in a court of law, not chancery. Cf. equitable title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 54. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 145–146.]

lucrative title. Civil law. A title acquired without giving anything in exchange for the property; title by which a person acquires anything that comes as a clear gain, as by gift, descent, or devise. • Because lucrative title is usu. acquired by gift or inheritance, it is treated as the separate property of a married person. Cf. onerous title.

marketable title. A title that a reasonable buyer would accept because it appears to lack any defect and to cover the entire property that the seller has purported to sell; a title that enables a purchaser to hold property in peace during the period of ownership and to have it accepted by a later purchaser who employs the same standards of acceptability. — Also termed good title; merchantable title; clear title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 130. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 324.]

“One definition of a marketable title which has been put forward repeatedly is one free from all reasonable doubt. Stated another way, a marketable title is one which does not contain any manner of defect or outstanding interest or claim which may conceivably operate to defeat or impair the interest which is bargained for and is intended to be conveyed. This negative concept of marketability has become an implied invitation for courts to declare titles unmarketable if an examiner has entertained any doubt whatever with respect to them. The digests attest the painful truth that claims of a bygone era cling like barnacles to land titles and encumber them long after they should have been scraped clean.... We need to replace this negative approach by a positive one which will make the marketability of titles depend solely upon their state during some recent interval of time rather than upon their entire history.” Paul E. Basye, Clearing Land Titles § 371, at 539 (1953).

native title. See aboriginal title (1).

nonmerchantable title. See unmarketable title.

onerous title (on-<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>s). 1. Civil law. A title acquired by giving valuable consideration for the property, as by paying money or performing services. 2. A title to property that is acquired during marriage through a spouse's skill or labor and is therefore treated as community property. Cf. lucrative title.

original title. A title that creates a right for the first time.

“The catching of fish is an original title of the right of ownership, whereas the purchase of them is a derivative title. The right acquired by the fisherman is newly created; it did not formerly exist in any one.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 345 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

paper title. See record title.

paramount title. 1. Archaic. A title that is the source of the current title; original title. 2. A title that is superior to another title or claim on the same property.

particular title. Civil law. A title acquired from an ancestor by purchase, gift, or inheritance before or after the ancestor's death.

perfect title. 1. FEE SIMPLE. 2. A grant of land that requires no further act from the legal authority to constitute an absolute title to the land. 3. A title that does not disclose a patent defect that may require a lawsuit to defend it. 4. A title that is good both at law and in equity. 5. A title that is good and valid beyond all reasonable doubt.

presumptive title. A title of the lowest order, arising out of the mere occupation or simple possession of property without any apparent right, or any pretense of right, to hold and continue that possession.

record title. A title as it appears in the public records after the deed is properly recorded. — Also termed title of record; paper title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 132, 231(1). C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 328, 496.]

singular title. The title by which one acquires property as a singular successor.

tax title. A title to land purchased at a tax sale. [Cases: Taxation 726–743. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1354–1401.]

title by descent. A title that one acquires by law as an heir of the deceased owner.

title by devise. A title created by will.

title by estoppel. Title acquired from a person who did not have title at the time of a purported conveyance with a warranty but later acquired the title, which then inures to the benefit of the grantee.

title by prescription. A title acquired by prescription. See PRESCRIPTION (5). [Cases: Adverse Possession 106. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 247, 339.]

title defective in form. A title for which some defect appears on the face of the deed, as opposed to a defect that arises from circumstances or extrinsic evidence. • Title defective in form cannot be the basis of prescription. See PRESCRIPTION(5). [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 129. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 314.]

title of entry.The right to enter upon lands.

title of record.See record title.

universal title.A title acquired by a conveyance causa mortis of a stated portion of all the conveyor's property interests so that on the conveyor's death the recipient stands as a universal successor.

unmarketable title.A title that a reasonable buyer would refuse to accept because of possible conflicting interests in or litigation over the property. — Also termed bad title; unmerchantable title; nonmerchantable title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 130(2). C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 326.]

3. The heading of a statute or other legal document <the title of the contract was “Confidentiality Agreement”>. [Cases: Contracts 152; Statutes 109–126. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 307, 318–322, 327, 331; Statutes §§ 209–242.]

general title.A statute's name that broadly and comprehensively identifies the subject matter addressed by the legislature. Cf. restrictive title.

long title.The full, formal title of a statute, usu. containing a brief statement of legislative purpose.

“The first Acts of Parliament did not have titles. The first time that an Act of Parliament was given a title was about 1495. Even when the long title came to be added to each Act of Parliament as a matter of course, as it did from about 1513, the long title was not regarded as part of the Act of Parliament itself. Today, however, the position is different: the long title is part of the Act of Parliament.” D.J. Gifford & John Salter, How to Understand an Act of Parliament 19 (1996).

“Because Parliament's clerks, rather than Parliament, provided the titles of acts, the traditional rule has been that the title could not be used for interpretive purposes.... This is no longer the practice in most English-speaking jurisdictions, for the long title, and often a short title as well, are part of the legislative bill from the very beginning. In the United States, most state constitutions require the legislative enactment to have a title that gives accurate notice of the contents of the law.” William N. Eskridge Jr. & Elizabeth Garrett, Legislation 831 (2001).

restrictive title.A statute's name that narrowly identifies the particular subject matter addressed by the legislature. Cf. general title.

short title.The abbreviated title of a statute by which it is popularly known; a statutory nickname.

4. A subdivision of a statute or code <Title IX>.5. The name by which a court case or other legal proceeding is distinguished from others; STYLE(1).6. An appellation of office, dignity, or distinction <after the election, he bore the title of mayor for the next four years>.

TITLE VII OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1964

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. A federal law that prohibits employment discrimination and harassment on the basis of race, sex, pregnancy, religion, and national origin, as well as prohibiting retaliation against an employee who opposes illegal harassment or discrimination in the workplace. • This term is often referred to simply as Title VII. 42 USCA §§ 2000e et seq. [Cases: Civil Rights 1102. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 22, 26–27, 30–31, 33–34, 37, 41–42, 67.]

TITLE IX OF THE EDUCATIONAL AMENDMENTS OF 1972

Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972. A federal statute generally prohibiting sex discrimination and harassment by educational facilities that receive federal funds. • This term is often referred to simply as Title IX. 20 USCA §§ 1681 et seq. [Cases: Civil Rights 1067. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 2, 7, 44, 49–53, 64, 86, 221.]

TITLE CLEARANCE

title clearance. The removal of impediments to the marketability of land, esp. through title examinations.

TITLE COMPANY

title company. See COMPANY.

TITLE DEED

title deed. See DEED.

TITLE DIVISION

title division. Archaic. A common-law system for dividing property acquired during marriage upon the dissolution of the marriage, the divisions being based on who holds legal title to the property. • Under title division, when a marriage ends in divorce, property purchased during the marriage is awarded to the person who holds title to the property. Cf. COMMUNITY PROPERTY; EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION.

TITLE-GUARANTY COMPANY

title-guaranty company. See title company under COMPANY.

TITLE INSURANCE

title insurance. See INSURANCE.

TITLE JURISDICTION

title jurisdiction. See TITLE THEORY.

TITLE MEMBER

title member. See name partner under PARTNER.

TITLE OF ENTRY

title of entry. See TITLE(2).

TITLE OF RECORD

title of record. See record title under TITLE(2).

TITLE OF RIGHT

title of right. A court-issued decree creating, transferring, or extinguishing rights. • Examples include a decree of divorce or judicial separation, an adjudication of bankruptcy, a discharge in bankruptcy, a decree of foreclosure against a mortgagor, an order appointing or removing a trustee, and a grant of letters of administration. In all the examples listed, the judgment operates not as a remedy but as a title of right.

TITLE OPINION

title opinion. See OPINION(2).

TITLE REGISTRATION title registration. A system of registering title to land with a public registry, such as a county clerk's office. See TORRENS SYSTEM. [Cases: Records 9. C.J.S. Registers of Deeds §§ 2–71.]

TITLE RETENTION

title retention. A form of lien, in the nature of a chattel mortgage, to secure payment of a loan given to purchase the secured item. [Cases: Chattel Mortgages 1.]

TITLE SEARCH

title search. An examination of the public records to determine whether any defects or encumbrances exist in a given property's chain of title. • A title search is typically conducted by a title company or a real-estate lawyer at a prospective buyer's or mortgagee's request. [Cases: Abstracts of Title 1–3; Vendor and Purchaser 231(2). C.J.S. Abstracts of Title §§ 2–20; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 497–498.]

TITLE STANDARDS

title standards. Criteria by which a real-estate title can be evaluated to determine whether it is defective or marketable. • Many states, through associations of conveyancers and real-estate attorneys, still adhere to title standards. [Cases: Abstracts of Title 1–3; Vendor and Purchaser 130(2). C.J.S. Abstracts of Title §§ 2–20; Vendor and Purchaser § 326.]

TITLE STATE

title state. See TITLE THEORY.

TITLE THEORY

title theory. Property law. The idea that a mortgage transfers legal title of the property to the mortgagee, who retains it until the mortgage has been satisfied or foreclosed. • Only a few American states — known as title states, title jurisdictions, or title-theory jurisdictions — have adopted this theory. Cf. LIEN THEORY. [Cases: Mortgages 136. C.J.S. Mortgages § 183.]

TITLE TRANSACTION

title transaction. A transaction that affects title to an interest in land.

TITLE UNITY

title unity. See unity of title under UNITY.

TITULO LUCRATIVO, QUI TITULUS EST POST CONTRACTUM DEBITUM
