FAMILY-PURPOSE RULE

family-purpose rule. Torts. The principle that a vehicle's owner is liable for injuries or damage caused by a family member's negligent driving. • Many states have abolished this rule. — Also termed family-purpose doctrine; family-automobile doctrine; family-car doctrine. Cf. GUEST STATUTE. [Cases: Automobiles 195(5). C.J.S. Motor Vehicles § 843.]

“A number of jurisdictions have adopted the so-called ‘family purpose’ doctrine, under which the owner of a motor vehicle purchased or maintained for the pleasure of his family is liable for injuries inflicted by the negligent operation of the vehicle while it is being used by members of the family for their own pleasure, on the theory that the vehicle is being used for the purpose or business for which it was kept, and that the person operating it is therefore acting as the owner's agent or servant in using it." 8 Am. Jur. 2d Automobiles and Highway Traffic § 715, at 296 (1997).

FARMINOR

farminor. See FARMOUTOR.

FARM LET

farm let, vb. Hist. To lease; to let land for rent. • To farm let is a phrasal verb that commonly appeared in real-property leases; it corresponds with its Latin root, ad firmam tradidi.

“A lease is properly a conveyance of any lands or tenements, (usually in consideration of rent or other annual recompense) made for life, for years, or at will, but always for a less time than the lessor hath in the premises: for if it be for the whole interest, it is more properly an assignment than a lease. The usual words of operation in it are, ‘demise, grant, and to farm let; dimisi, concessi, et ad firmam tradidi.’ ” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 317–18 (1766).

FARMOR

farmor. See FARMOUTOR.

FARM OUT

farm out, vb. 1. To turn over something (such as an oil-and-gas lease) for performance by another. • The term evolved from the Roman practice of transferring the right to collect taxes to a third party for a fee. It was later practiced in England, Scotland, and France but has been long abolished. 2. Hist. To lease for a term. 3. To exhaust farmland, esp. by continuously raising a single crop.

FARMOUT AGREEMENT

farmout agreement.Oil & gas. An agreement by which one who owns an oil-and-gas lease (the farmoutor or farmor) agrees to assign to another (the farmoutee or farmee) an interest in the lease in return for drilling and testing operations on the lease. • For the farmor, the agreement either (1) maintains the lease by securing production or complying with the implied covenant to develop or offset, or (2) obtains an interest in production without costs. For the farmee, the agreement obtains acreage that is not otherwise available or at lower cost than would otherwise be possible. A farmout agreement may also serve as a device to keep people and equipment gainfully employed. — Often shortened to farmout. — Also written farm out agreement; farm-out agreement. See ASSIGNMENT. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 74(8). C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 318–319.]

FAS

FAS.abbr.1.FREE ALONGSIDE SHIP. 2.FETAL ALCOHOL SYNDROME. 3.FOREIGN AGRICULTURAL SERVICE .

fas (fas), n.[Latin] Roman law. 1. Moral law of divine origin; divine law. • Jus, by contrast, is created by man. See JUS. 2. What is right, proper, lawful, and permitted. Cf. NEFAS.

“The first element to be noted in the Roman composite existing in primitive times, when religion and law were not distinguished, is fas — the will of the gods, embodied in rules that regulated not only ceremonials but the conduct of all men as such.” Hannis Taylor, The Science of Jurisprudence 65 (1908).

“It is true that the two spheres of ius and fas overlapped.... All this, however, concerned merely the question of where to draw the line between ius and fas; it did not blur the distinction between the two. From the standpoint of the history of Roman law, this distinction, consciously made from very early times, was of great importance, since it enabled the Romans to delimit the scope and the contents of strictly legal rules. This attitude may occasionally have caused a certain cold aloofness from purely human problems, but it undoubtedly contributed to the clarity of the legal system.” Hans Julius Wolff, Roman Law: An Historical Introduction 51–52 (1951).

legal father.The man recognized by law as the male parent of a child. • A man is the legal father of a child if he was married to the child's natural mother when the child was born, if he has recognized or acknowledged the child, or if he has been declared the child's natural father in a paternity action. If a man consents to the artificial insemination of his wife, he is the legal father of the child that is born as a result of the artificial insemination even though he may not be the genetic father of the child. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock 12, 68; Parent and Child 1. C.J.S. Children Out-of-Wedlock §§ 25–26, 126–127; Parent and Child §§ 1–12, 201.] natural father. See biological father.

presumed father. The man presumed to be the father of a child for any of several reasons: (1) because he was married to the child's natural mother when the child was conceived or born (even though the marriage may have been invalid), (2) because the man married the mother after the child's birth and agreed either to have his name on the birth certificate or to support the child, or (3) because the man welcomed the child into his home and held out the child as his own. • This term represents a complicated category, and state laws vary in their requirements. See PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock 43. C.J.S. Children Out-of-Wedlock § 100.] psychological father. See psychological parent under PARENT.

FEAL

feal (fee-<<schwa>>l), adj. Archaic. Faithful; truthful. — Also termed fele.

FEALTY

fealty (feel-tee orfee-<<schwa>>l-tee).Hist. In feudal law, the allegiance that a tenant or vassal owes to a lord. — Also termed feodality.

“There was the possibility that if the entire top layer of the structure revolted, the king might be deprived of all support. To meet this possibility, the king also bound directly to himself all the important men in the lower strata of the [feudal] structure by an oath of loyalty. This was particularly effective for in medieval times the oath of fealty had all the sanction of the church, and in addition due to the necessity for feudal organization in times of disorder, had also a popular sanction in public opinion so that the man who broke his oath to his lord was one of the most execrable men to be found in the whole social organization.” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 248 (2d ed. 1952).

FEDERAL KIDNAPPING ACT

Federal Kidnapping Act.A federal law punishing kidnapping for ransom or reward when the victim is transported interstate or internationally. • The law presumes that a victim has been transported in violation of the law if the victim is not released within 24 hours. The Federal Kidnapping Act, by express provision, does not apply to the kidnapping of a minor by either parent. 18 USCA § 1201. — Also termed Lindbergh Act. Cf. PARENTAL KIDNAPPING PREVENTION ACT . [Cases: Kidnapping 1. C.J.S. Kidnapping §§ 1–2.]

“The Federal Kidnapping Act was passed in 1932 to close a dangerous loophole between state and federal law. At that time, marauding bands of kidnapers were preying upon the wealthy with ruthless abandon, seizing their victims for ransom while operating outside the reach of existing state laws. Knowing that authorities in the victim's home state were powerless once a hostage was transported across state lines, the criminals would kidnap their target in one state, then move quickly to the next. In response, Congress made kidnapping a federal crime when the victim was moved from one state to another, and comprehensive language was used to cover every possible variety of kidnapping followed by interstate transportation.” 1 Am. Jur. 2d Abduction and Kidnapping § 14, at 185 (1994).

FEDERAL LABOR RELATIONS AUTHORITY

Federal Labor Relations Authority. An agency that protects the right of federal employees to organize, engage in collective bargaining, and select their own union representatives. • It was established under Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1978 and began operating in 1979. 5 USCA §§ 7101–7135. — Abbr. FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM Federal Reserve System. The central bank that sets credit and monetary policy by fixing the reserves to be maintained by depository institutions, determining the discount rate charged by Federal Reserve Banks, and regulating the amount of credit that may be extended on any security. • The Federal Reserve System was established by the Federal Reserve Act of 1913. 12 USCA § 221. It comprises 12 central banks supervised by a Board of Governors whose members are appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. — Abbr. FRS; Fed. [Cases: Banks and Banking 351–359. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 650–662, 676–678, 682–687, 746.]

“The Federal Reserve System of 1913 evolved out of a search for consensus among bankers, politicians, and some academic experts. It was a move toward ‘central bank’ regulation in the European sense [The System] seemed to resolve the outstanding problems in money and banking. Federal Reserve banknotes could grow with expanding commercial paper and economic prosperity, and assure a more adequate, reliable monetary growth.” William A. Lovett, Banking and Financial Institutions Law in a Nutshell 14–15 (1997).

FEDERAL RETIREMENT THRIFT INVESTMENT BOARD

Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board. A board responsible for administering the Thrift Savings Plan that allows federal employees to save additional funds for retirement. • It was established in 1986. 5 USCA § 8472. — Abbr. FRTIB.

FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE

Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure. The rules governing appeals to the U.S. courts of appeals from lower courts, some federal-agency proceedings, and applications for writs. — Abbr. Fed. R. App. P.; FRAP. [Cases: Federal Courts 522.]

FEDERAL RULES OF BANKRUPTCY PROCEDURE

Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. The rules governing proceedings instituted under the Bankruptcy Code. — Abbr. Fed. R. Bankr. P. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2129. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 6.]

FEDERAL RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The rules governing civil actions in the U.S. district courts. — Abbr. Fed. R. Civ. P.; FRCP. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 31–44. C.J.S. Evidence § 7.]

“Chief Justice Hughes in 1935 appointed fourteen lawyers and law teachers as the Advisory Committee for the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, with William D. Mitchell, former Attorney General, as chairman, and Charles E. Clark, then dean of the Yale Law School, as reporter, to recommend a draft of rules uniting law and equity. The committee proposed a system of rules that was approved by the Court with certain changes. In accordance with the Enabling Act, the rules were submitted to Congress for its acquiescence and, Congress having taken no exception to them, they became effective September 16, 1938.

“The rules thus produced bear the unmistakable imprint of the reporter, Charles E. Clark, and represent the largest single accomplishment in American civil procedure since the Field Code of 1848. Although they were not perfect and have been amended many times, experience with them has on the whole been satisfactory, and more than half of the states have adopted them in their entirety or in large part.” Fleming James, Geoffrey C. Hazard Jr. & John Leubsdorf, Civil Procedure § 1.8, at 24–25 (5th ed. 2001).

FEDERAL RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. The rules governing criminal proceedings in the U.S. district courts. — Abbr. Fed. R. Crim. P. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 23.]

FEDERAL TECHNOLOGY SERVICE

Federal Technology Service.A unit in the General Services Administration responsible for providing communications services worldwide to other federal departments and agencies. — Abbr. FTS.

FEDERAL TORT CLAIMS ACT

Federal Tort Claims Act.A statute that limits federal sovereign immunity and allows recovery in federal court for tort damages caused by federal employees, but only if the law of the state where the injury occurred would hold a private person liable for the injury. 28 USCA §§ 2671–2680. — Abbr. FTCA. See sovereign immunity under IMMUNITY(1). [Cases: United States 78. C.J.S. United States §§ 149–151, 179.]

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

Federal Trade Commission. An independent five-member federal commission that administers various laws against business monopolies, restraint of trade, and deceptive trade practices. • It was established by the Federal Trade Commission Act of 1914. 15 USCA §§ 41–58. The Commission's body of rulings often reaches into state-law actions because many so-called Little FTC Acts of the states specify that FTC interpretations should provide a model for state-court decisions. — Abbr. FTC. [Cases: Trade Regulation 741. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 342–344.]

FEDERAL TRADEMARK ACT

Federal Trademark Act. See LANHAM ACT.

FEE

fee. 1. A charge for labor or services, esp. professional services.

attorney's fees.See ATTORNEY'S FEES.

contingent fee.See CONTINGENT FEE.

docket fee.A fee charged by a court for filing a claim.

expert-witness fee.A fee paid for the professional services of an expert witness. [Cases: Costs 187. C.J.S. Costs § 116.]

fixed fee. 1. A flat charge for a service; a charge that does not vary with the amount of time or effort required to complete the service. 2. In a construction contract, a predetermined amount that is added to costs for calculating payments due under the contract. [Cases: Contracts 231(1).]

franchise fee. 1. A fee paid by a franchisee to a franchisor for franchise rights. • Franchise fees are regulated by state laws. 2. A fee paid to the government for a government grant of a franchise, such as the one required for operating a radio or television station. [Cases: Telecommunications 86, 401. C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television §§ 30, 153.]

jury fee.A fee, usu. a minimal one, that a party to a civil suit must pay the court clerk to be entitled to a jury trial. [Cases: Jury 26. C.J.S. Juries §§ 180–181.]

maintenance fee.See MAINTENANCE FEE.

management fee.A fee charged by an investment manager for supervisory services.

origination fee. A fee charged by a lender for preparing and processing a loan. [Cases: Usury 53. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 162, 165–168.]

probate fee. Compensation paid with a probate court's approval to an attorney who performs probate-related services to the estate.

witness fee. 1. A statutory fee that must be tendered with a subpoena for the subpoena to be binding. [Cases: Witnesses 23. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 70–71.] 2. A fee paid by a party to a witness as reimbursement for reasonable expenses (such as travel, meals, lodging, and loss of time) incurred as a result of the witness's having to attend and testify at a deposition or trial. • Any other payment to a nonexpert witness is considered unethical. — Also termed (in English law) conduct money. Cf. expert-witness fee.

2. A heritable interest in land; esp., a fee simple absolute. — Also termed fee estate; feod; feodum; feud; feodum; fief. See FEE SIMPLE. Cf. FEU. [Cases: Estates in Property 5–7. C.J.S. Estates §§ 11–14, 20–21.] “To enfeoff someone was to transfer to him an interest in land called a fief — or, if you prefer, a feoff, feod, or feud. Our modern word fee, a direct lineal descendant of fief, implies the characteristic of potentially infinite duration when used to describe an interest in land today; but in the earliest part of the feudal period, a fief might have been as small as a life interest. We shall see later that feoffment was not used to transfer interests ‘smaller’ than life interests — e.g., so-called terms for years — but for our purposes now we may simply note that transfers of interests for life or ‘larger’ were accomplished by livery of seisin.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 11 (2d ed. 1984).

arriere fee (ar-ee-air or ar-ee-*<<schwa>>*r). Hist. A fee dependent on a superior one; a subfief. — Also termed arriere fief.

base fee. A fee that has some qualification connected to it and that terminates whenever the qualification terminates. • An example of the words creating a base fee are “to A and his heirs, tenants of the manor of Tinsleydale,” which would terminate when A or his heirs are no longer tenants of the manor of Tinsleydale. Among the base fees at common law are the fee simple subject to a condition subsequent and the conditional fee. — Also termed determinable fee; qualified fee; limited fee. See fee simple determinable under FEE SIMPLE.

“A base fee is a particular kind of determinable fee. The two essentials of a base fee are (a) it continues only so long as the original grantor or any heirs of his body are alive; and (b) there is a remainder or reversion after it.... In effect a base fee was a fee simple which endured for as long as the entail would have continued if it had not been barred, and determined when the entail would have ended.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 38–40 (6th ed. 1993).

plowman's fee.Hist. A species of tenure for peasants or small farmers by which the land descended in equal shares to all the tenant's sons.

qualified fee. See base fee.

quasi-fee.Hist. An estate in fee acquired wrongfully.

FEE DAMAGES

fee damages.See DAMAGES.

FEEDER ORGANIZATION

feeder organization.Tax. An entity that conducts a business or trade for the benefit of a tax-exempt organization. • The feeder organization is not tax-exempt. IRC (26 USCA) § 502. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4067.C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 466.]

FEE ESTATE

fee estate.See FEE(2).

FEE FARM

fee farm.Hist. A species of tenure in which land is held in perpetuity at a yearly rent (fee-farm rent), without fealty, homage, or other services than those in the feoffment. — Also termed feodi firma; firma feodi. See EMPHYTEUSIS.

“Now to all appearance the term socage, a term not found in Normandy, has been extending itself upwards; a name appropriate to a class of cultivating peasants has begun to include the baron or prelate who holds land at a rent but is not burdened with military service.... He is sometimes said to have feodum censuale; far more commonly he is said to hold ‘in fee farm.’ This term has difficulties of its own, for it appears in many different guises; a feoffee is to hold in feofirma, in feufirmam, in fedfirmam, in feudo firmam, in feudo firma, ad firmam feodalem, but most commonly, in feodi firma. The Old English language had both of the words of which this term is compounded, both feoh (property) and feorm (rent); but so had the language of France, and in Norman documents the term may be found in various shapes, firmam fedium, feudifirmam. But, whatever may be the precise history of the phrase, to hold in fee farm means to hold heritably, perpetually, at a rent; the fee, the inheritance, is let to farm.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 293 (2d ed. 1899).

FEE-FARM RENT

fee-farm rent. 1. The rent reserved, usu. one-fourth or one-third of the land's value, on granting a fee farm. 2. A rent charge issuing out of a fee estate. 3. A perpetual rent on a conveyance in fee simple.

FEE INTEREST

fee interest. 1.FEE(2).2.FEE SIMPLE. 3.FEE TAIL. 4.Oil & gas. Ownership of both the surface interest and the mineral interest.

feemail (fee-mayl).Slang. 1. An attorney's fee extorted by intimidation, threats, or pressure. 2. The act or process of extorting such a fee. Cf. BLACKMAIL(1); GRAYMAIL; GREENMAIL(1), (2).

FEE-SHARING

fee-sharing. See FEE-SPLITTING.

FEE SIMPLE

fee simple.An interest in land that, being the broadest property interest allowed by law, endures until the current holder dies without heirs; esp., a fee simple absolute. — Often shortened to fee. — Also termed estate in fee simple; tenancy in fee; exclusive ownership; fee-simple title; feudum simplex. [Cases: Estates in Property 5–7. C.J.S. Estates §§ 11–14, 20–21.]

“[Fee simple] is a term not likely to be found in modern conversation between laymen, who would in all probability find it quite unintelligible. Yet to a layman of the 14th century the term would have been perfectly intelligible, for it refers to the elementary social relationship of feudalism with which he was fully familiar: the words ‘fee’ and ‘feudal’ are closely related.... The estate in fee simple is the largest estate known to the law, ownership of such an estate being the nearest approach to ownership of the land itself which is consonant with the feudal principle of tenure. It is ‘the most comprehensive estate in land which the law recognises’; it is the ‘most extensive in quantum, and the most absolute in respect to the rights which it confers, of all estates known to the law’. Traditionally, the fee simple has two distinguishing features: first, the owner (‘tenant’ in fee simple) has the power to dispose of the fee simple, either inter vivos or by will; second, on intestacy the fee simple descends, in the absence of lineal heirs, to collateral heirs — to a brother, for example, if there is no issue.” Peter Butt, Land Law 35 (2d ed. 1988).

“Fee simple.Originally this was an estate which endured for as long as the original tenant or any of his heirs survived. ‘Heirs’ comprised any blood relations, although originally ancestors were excluded; not until the Inheritance Act 1833 could a person be the heir of one of his descendants. Thus at first a fee simple would terminate if the original tenant died without leaving any descendants or collateral blood relations (e.g., brothers or cousins), even if before his death the land had been conveyed to another tenant who was still alive. But by 1306 it was settled that where a tenant in fee simple alienated the land, the fee simple would continue as long as there were heirs of the new tenant and so on, irrespective of any failure of the original tenant's heirs. Thenceforward a fee simple was virtually eternal.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 24–25 (6th ed. 1993).

fee simple absolute. An estate of indefinite or potentially infinite duration (e.g., “to Albert and his heirs”). — Often shortened to fee simple or fee. — Also termed fee simple absolute in possession. [Cases: Estates in Property 5. C.J.S. Estates §§ 11–12.]

“Although it is probably good practice to use the word ‘absolute’ whenever one is referring to an estate in fee simple that is free of special limitation, condition subsequent, or executory limitation, lawyers frequently refer to such an estate as a ‘fee simple’ or even as a ‘fee.’ ” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 24 (2d ed. 1984).

fee simple conditional. An estate restricted to some specified heirs, exclusive of others (e.g., “to Albert and his female heirs”). • The fee simple conditional is obsolete except in Iowa, Oregon, and South Carolina. — Also termed general fee conditional; conditional fee. [Cases: Estates in Property 7. C.J.S. Estates §§ 13–14, 20–21.]

“The reader should be careful not to confuse this estate with estates having similar labels, such as the ‘estate in fee simple subject to a condition subsequent’” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 29 n.19 (2d ed. 1984).

fee simple defeasible (di-fee-z<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). An estate that ends either because there are no more heirs of the person to whom it is granted or because a special limitation, condition subsequent, or executory limitation takes effect before the line of heirs runs out. — Also termed qualified fee. [Cases: Estates in Property 6. C.J.S. Estates §§ 13–14.]

fee simple determinable. An estate that will automatically end and revert to the grantor if some specified event occurs (e.g., “to Albert and his heirs while the property is used for charitable purposes”); an estate in fee simple subject to a special limitation. • The future interest retained by the grantor is called a possibility of reverter. — Also termed determinable fee; qualified fee; fee simple subject to common-law limitation; fee simple subject to special limitation; fee simple subject to special interest; base fee; estate on limitation. [Cases: Estates in Property 6. C.J.S. Estates §§ 13–14.]

fee simple subject to a condition subsequent. An estate subject to the grantor's power to end the estate if some specified event happens (e.g., “to Albert and his heirs, upon condition that no alcohol is sold on the premises”). • The future interest retained by the grantor is called a power of termination (or a right of entry). — Also termed fee simple on a condition subsequent; fee simple subject to a power of termination; fee simple upon condition. [Cases: Estates in Property 7. C.J.S. Estates §§ 13–14, 20–21.]

fee simple subject to an executory limitation. A fee simple defeasible that is subject to divestment in favor of someone other than the grantor if a specified event happens (e.g., “to Albert and his heirs, but if the property is ever used as a parking lot, then to Bob”). — Also termed fee simple subject to an executory interest. [Cases: Estates in Property 6. C.J.S. Estates §§ 13–14.] fee simple subject to a power of termination. See fee simple subject to a condition subsequent.

fee simple subject to common-law limitation. See fee simple determinable.

fee simple subject to special interest. See fee simple determinable.

fee simple subject to special limitation. See fee simple determinable.

fee simple upon condition. See fee simple subject to a condition subsequent.

FEE-SIMPLE TITLE

fee-simple title. See FEE SIMPLE.

FEE-SPLITTING

fee-splitting. 1. The division of attorney's fees between two or more lawyers, esp. between the lawyer who handled a matter and the lawyer who referred the matter. • Some states consider this practice unethical. 2. The division of attorney's fees between two or more lawyers who represent a client jointly but are not in the same firm. • Under most states' ethics rules, an attorney is prohibited from splitting a fee with a nonlawyer. — Also termed fee-sharing. [Cases: Attorney and Client 151. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 294, 309–310.]

FEE STATEMENT

fee statement. A lawyer's bill for services either already rendered or to be rendered, usu. including itemized expenses.

FEE TAIL

fee tail. An estate that is heritable only by specified descendants of the original grantee, and that endures until its current holder dies without issue (e.g., “to Albert and the heirs of his body”). • Most jurisdictions — except Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island — have abolished the fee tail. — Also termed entailed estate; estate tail; estate in tail; estate in fee tail; tenancy in tail; entail; feodum talliatum. See ENTAIL; TAIL. [Cases: Estates in Property 12. C.J.S. Estates §§ 22–27.]

“The old legal estate tail was throughout its history invariably associated with family settlements, and in particular with marriage settlements.... Medieval landowners sought to achieve fee tail general.A fee tail that is heritable by all of the property owner's issue by any spouse. • Formerly, a grant “to A and the heirs of his body” created a fee tail general.

“If we cannot resist the temptation to say that De Donis permitted the creation of tailor-made estates, we can at least argue that it is not a pun. Our word ‘tailor’ and the word ‘tail,’ as used in ‘fee tail,’ come from the same source — the French tailler, to cut. The word ‘tail’ in ‘fee tail’ has nothing to do with that which wags the dog. The estate in fee tail was a cut estate — either cut in the sense that the collateral heirs were cut out, or cut in the sense that the estate was carved into a series of discrete life-possession periods to be enjoyed successively by A and his lineal heirs.... We know of no state in the United States that recognizes the estate in fee tail in its strict 1285–1472 form. Wherever it is recognized, the tenant in tail in possession may disentail it by simple deed.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 30, 32 (2d ed. 1984).

fee tail special.A fee tail that restricts the eligibility of claimants by requiring a claimant to prove direct descent from the grantee and meet the special condition in the grant. • For example, the words “to A and the heirs of his body begotten on his wife Mary” meant that only descendants of A and Mary could inherit; A's children by any other wife were excluded. An estate tail special could also be restricted to only male or only female descendants, as in “to A and the heirs male of his body.”

FEIGN

feign (fayn), vb. To make up or fabricate; to make a false show of <he feigned an illness>.

FEIGNED

feigned,adj. Pretended; simulated; fictitious.

FEIGNED ACCOMPLICE

feigned accomplice.See INFORMANT.

FEIGNED ACTION

feigned action.Hist. An action brought for an illegal purpose on a pretended right. — Also termed faint action; false action.

FEIGNED ISSUE

feigned issue.Hist. A proceeding in which the parties, by consent, have an issue tried by a jury without actually bringing a formal action. • The proceeding was done when a court either lacked jurisdiction or was unwilling to decide the issue. — Also termed fictitious issue.

“The chancellor's decree is either interlocutory or final. It very seldom happens that the first decree can be final, or conclude the cause; for, if any matter of fact is strongly controverted, this court is so sensible of the deficiency of trial by written depositions, that it will not bind the parties thereby, but usually directs the matter to be tried by jury But, as no jury can be summoned to attend this court, the fact is usually directed to be tried at the bar of the court of king's bench or at the assises, upon a feigned issue. For, (in order to bring it there, and have the point in dispute, and that only, put in issue) an action is feigned to be brought, wherein the pretended plaintiff declares that he laid a wager of 5l. with the defendant that A was heir at law to B; and then avers that he is so; and therefore demands the 5l. The defendant allows the wager, but avers that A is not the heir to B; and thereupon the issue is joined These feigned issues seem borrowed from the sponsio judicialis of the Romans: and are also frequently used in the courts of law, by consent of the parties, to determine some disputed rights without the formality of pleading” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 452 (1768).

fellow,n.1. One joined with another in some legal status or relation. 2. A member of a college, board, corporate body, or other organization.

FELLOW-OFFICER RULE

fellow-officer rule.Criminal procedure. The principle that an investigative stop or an arrest is valid even if the law-enforcement officer lacks personal knowledge to establish reasonable suspicion or probable cause as long as the officer is acting on the knowledge of another officer and the collective knowledge of the law-enforcement office. — Also termed Whiteley rule. [Cases:

Arrest 63.4(11). C.J.S. Arrest § 32.]

fellow servant. A coworker having the same employer; esp., an employee who is so closely related to another employee's work that there is a special risk of harm if either one is negligent. See FELLOW-SERVANT RULE; DIFFERENT-DEPARTMENT RULE E.

superior fellow servant. A worker that has the power of control or direction over a coworker. — Also termed superior servant.

FELLOW-SERVANT RULE

fellow-servant rule. A common-law doctrine holding that an employer is not liable for an employee's injuries caused by a negligent coworker. • This doctrine has generally been abrogated by workers'-compensation statutes. In some jurisdictions, employees were considered fellow servants when they were working with one aim or result in view. In others, the relation of fellow servant was tested by the "superior servant rule" or the "doctrine of vice principal," meaning that an employer is liable for injuries to an employee if they result from the negligence of another employee who is given power of control or direction over the injured employee. — Also termed common-employment doctrine. Cf. DIFFERENT-DEPARTMENT RULE. [Cases: Employers' Liability 100. C.J.S. Employers' Liability for Injuries to Employees §§ 167–169, 172.]

FELO-DE-SE

felo-de-se (fee-loh orfel-oh dee see), n. See SUICIDE(2).

“ ‘Felo de se,’ or felon of himself is freely spoken of by the early writers as self-murder. Hence one who killed himself before he arrived at the age of discretion or while he was non compos mentis, was not a felo de se, or suicide... [B]y the early common law suicide was a felony and was punished by ignominious burial and forfeiture of goods and chattels to the king.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 120 (3d ed. 1982).

FELON

felon, n. A person who has been convicted of a felony. — Also termed (redundantly) convicted felon.

FELON-DE-SE

felon-de-se. See SUICIDE(2).

felonia (f<<schwa>>-loh-nee-<<schwa>>). [Latin “felony”] Hist. An offense that results in a vassal's forfeiting his fee.

“The attempt to derive felonía from fel ‘poison’ is merely a folk etymology which came into vogue when ‘felony’ meant a serious crime, and differed from treason. The word was well established in Feudal Law as the characteristic offense against the Feudal relationship. It will hardly do, therefore, to try to determine its meaning merely by reference to English usage” Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 148 n.7 (1936).

FELONIOUS

felonious (f<<schwa>>-loh-nee-<<schwa>>s), adj.1. Of, relating to, or involving a felony. 2. Constituting or having the character of a felony. 3. Proceeding from an evil heart or purpose; malicious; villainous. 4. Wrongful; (of an act) done without excuse or color of right.

FELONIOUS ASSAULT

FELONIOUS HOMICIDE

felonious homicide. See HOMICIDE.

FELONIOUS INTENT

felonious intent. See criminal intent under INTENT(1).

FELONIOUS RESTRAINT

felonious restraint. 1. The offense of knowingly and unlawfully restraining a person under circumstances that expose the person to serious bodily harm. Model Penal Code § 212.2(a). 2. The offense of holding a person in involuntary servitude. Model Penal Code § 212.2(b).

FELON OF ONESELF

felon of oneself. See SUICIDE(2).

FELONY

felony, n. 1. A serious crime usu. punishable by imprisonment for more than one year or by death. • Examples include burglary, arson, rape, and murder. — Also termed major crime; serious crime. Cf. MISDEMEANOR. [Cases: Criminal Law 27. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 9–12.]

“Felony, in the general acceptance of our English law, comprizes every species of crime, which occasioned at common law the forfeiture of lands or goods.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 94 (1769).

“Amongst indictable crimes, the common law singled out some as being so conspicuously heinous that a man adjudged guilty of any of them incurred — not as any express part of his sentence but as a consequence that necessarily ensued upon it — a forfeiture of property, whether of his lands or of his goods or of both (in the case of treason). Such crimes came to be called ‘felonies.’ The other, and lesser, crimes were known as ‘transgressions’ or ‘trespasses,’ and did not obtain their present name of misdemeanours until a much later date. A felony is, therefore, a crime which either involved by common law such a forfeiture, or else has been placed by statute on the footing of those crimes which did involve it.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 93 (16th ed. 1952).

atrocious felony. A serious, usu. cruel felony involving personal violence. • This term is now used less frequently than the specific type of crime alleged (e.g., first-degree murder or aggravated sexual assault).

serious felony. A major felony, such as burglary of a residence or an assault that causes great bodily injury. • In many jurisdictions, a defendant's prior serious-felony convictions can be used to enhance another criminal charge.

substantive felony. See substantive offense under OFFENSE(1).

treason felony. See TREASON FELONY.

violent felony. See violent offense under OFFENSE(1).

2.Hist. At common law, an offense for which conviction results in forfeiture of the defendant's lands or goods (or both) to the Crown, regardless of whether any capital or other punishment is mandated. • At early common law, the term felony included any offense for which a defendant who fled before trial could be summarily convicted, attainted, and outlawed, or that carried a right of appeal after conviction. Although treason carried the same penalties as a common-law felony, it was usu. defined as a separate class of crime. 3.Hist. Feudal law. A grave act that resulted in the forfeiture of land granted by a superior.

FELONY-DE-SE

felony-de-se. See SUICIDE(1).

FELONY INJURY TO A CHILD

felony injury to a child. The act of causing or allowing a child to suffer in circumstances likely to produce great bodily harm or death, or inflicting unjustifiable pain or mental suffering in those circumstances.

FELONY MURDER

felony murder. See MURDER.

FELONY-MURDER RULE

felony-murder rule. The doctrine holding that any death resulting from the commission or attempted commission of a felony is murder. • Most states restrict this rule to inherently dangerous felonies such as rape, arson, robbery, and burglary. Cf. MISDEMEANOR-MANSLAUGHTER RULE. [Cases: Homicide 575.]

“[I]t seems fair to suggest that the future of felony murder is uncertain. England, where the doctrine originated, has abolished it. The Model Penal Code recommends its abolition except for the purpose of creating a rebuttable presumption of malice for killings perpetrated during the course of a felony. Although most states have not yet adopted this position, many of the judicial limitations on felony murder discussed above seem to insure that in many states it will be an unusual case in which one is convicted of felony murder, who absent this doctrine, would not have been convicted of murder.” Arnold H. Loewy, Criminal Law in a Nutshell 46 (2d ed. 1987).

FEMA

FEMA.abbr. FEDERAL EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT AGENCY.

FEMALE GENITAL MUTILATION

female genital mutilation. 1. Female circumcision. 2. The act of cutting, or cutting off, one or more female sexual organs. • Female genital mutilation is practiced primarily among certain tribes in Africa, but it also occurs among some immigrant populations in the United States and in other Western nations. There are three commonly identified types: sunna, in which the hood of the clitoris is cut off; excision, in which the entire clitoris is cut off; and infibulation, in which the clitoris, the labia minora, and much of the labia majora are cut off. In the United States, Congress has outlawed female genital mutilation, specifically prohibiting the use of a cultural defense for persons accused of performing the act. 18 USCA § 16. — Abbr. FGM. See CULTURAL DEFENSE.

FEM-CRIT

fem-crit. See CRIT.

FEME

feme (fem), n.[Law French] Archaic. 1. A woman. 2. A wife. — Also spelled femme.

feme covert (fem k<<schwa>>v-<<schwa>>rt). [Law French “covered woman”] Archaic. A married woman. • The notion, as Blackstone put it, was that the husband was the one “under whose wing, protection, and cover, she performs every thing.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Law of England 430 (1766). See COVERTURE.

feme sole (fem sohl). [Law French] Archaic. 1. An unmarried woman. 2. A married woman handling the affairs of her separate estate. — Also termed (in sense 2) feme sole trader; feme sole merchant.

FEMICIDE

femicide (fem-<<schwa>>-sId).1. The killing of a woman. 2. One who kills a woman.

FEMINIST JURISPRUDENCE

feminist jurisprudence.See JURISPRUDENCE.

FENCE

fence,n.1. A person who receives stolen goods. — Also termed (historically) intaker. [Cases: Receiving Stolen Goods 4. C.J.S. Receiving or Transferring Stolen Goods and Related Offenses §§ 4, 6–7, 12.]

“The receivers of stolen goods almost never ‘know’ that they have been stolen, in the sense that they could testify to it in a courtroom. The business could not be so conducted, for those who sell the goods — the ‘fences’ — must keep up a more respectable front than is generally possible for the thieves.” United States v. Werner, 160 F.2d 438, 441–42 (2d Cir. 1947).

“The typical ‘fence’ takes over the stolen property and pays the thief a price. He purports to ‘buy’ the goods from the thief.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 395 (3d ed. 1982).

2. A place where stolen goods are sold. See RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY. 3.LAWFUL FENCE. 4.Scots law. The formal warning to not interrupt or obstruct judicial or legislative proceedings. 5.Scots law. A penalty of forfeiture prescribed in a statute or a contract.

fence,vb. 1. To sell (stolen property) to a fence. 2.Scots law. To open (a legislative or judicial sitting) by warning persons against obstructing or interrupting the legislature or court. 3.Scots law. To threaten with forfeiture as a consequence of violating a law or breaching a contractual promise.

feoffee (fef-eor feef-ee). The transferee of an estate in fee simple; the recipient of a fief.

feoffee to uses.Hist. A person to whom land is conveyed for the use of a third party (called a cestui que use); one who holds legal title to land for the benefit of another. See CESTUI QUE USE; GRANT TO USES. Cf. TRUSTEE(1).

feoffment (fef-m<<schwa>>nt orfeef-m<<schwa>>nt).Hist. 1. The act of conveying a freehold estate; a grant of land in fee simple. — Also termed feoffment with livery of seisin. 2. The land so granted. 3. The charter that transfers the land. — Also written enfeoffment. — Also termed deed of feoffment. [Cases: Deeds 21. C.J.S. Deeds §§ 12–13.]

feoffment to uses. An enfeoffment of land to one person for the use of a third party. • The feoffee was bound in conscience to hold the land according to the prescribed use and could derive no benefit from the holding.

“Conveyances of freehold land could originally be made only by a feoffment with livery of seisin. This was a solemn ceremony carried out by the parties entering on the land, and the feoffor, in the presence of witnesses, delivering the seisin to the feoffee either by some symbolic act, such as handing him a twig or sod of earth, or by uttering some words such as ‘Enter into this land and God give you joy’ and leaving him in possession of the land.” Robert E. Megarry & H.W.R. Wade, The Law of Real Property 47 (5th ed. 1984).

FEOFFMENT WITH LIVERY OF SEISIN

ferry,vb. To carry persons or property, usu. across water, for a fee.

FERRY FRANCHISE

ferry franchise.See FERRY(4).

FERTILE-OCTOGENARIAN RULE

fertile-octogenarian rule.The legal fiction, assumed under the rule against perpetuities, that a woman can become pregnant as long as she is alive. • The case that gave rise to this fiction was Jee v. Audley, 1 Cox 324, 29 Eng. Rep. 1186 (ch. 1787). See W. Barton Leach, Perpetuities: New Hampshire Defertilizes Octogenarians, 77 Harv. L. Rev. 729 (1963). — Also termed presumption-of-fertility rule.

“Suppose testator bequeaths in trust to pay the income to A for her life, then to pay the income to the children of A for their lives, and upon the death of the survivor of such children, to pay the principal to the grandchildren of A. At the time of the testator's death A is 79 years old, and she has two children. Believe it or not, it has been held that the remainder to the grandchildren of A is violative of the rule against perpetuities and invalid. The law adopted the conclusive presumption that every person is capable of having children until the day he or she dies, as far as the rule against perpetuities is concerned. Consequently, A could have an additional child who would not be a life in being at the testator's death, and that child could have a child who would be born beyond the permissible period. The result of this hypothesis is to invalidate the remainder to the grandchildren. This situation is sometimes referred to as the case of the ‘fertile octogenarian.’ Remember that the class gift is invalid if it is possible that the interest of any one member of the class can violate the rule.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 188 (2d ed. 1984).

FESTING-MAN

festing-man.Hist. A bondsman; a surety. See FRANKPLEDGE.

FESTING-PENNY

festing-penny.Hist. Earnest, or payment, given to a servant when hired.

FESTINUM REMEDIUM

festinum remedium (fes-tĭ-n<<schwa>>m ri-mee-dee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. A speedy remedy. • It was used in cases, such as actions for dower or assize, where the redress of injury was given without unnecessary delay.

FESTO<TT> DOCTRINE

Festo doctrine.Patents. The rule that the voluntary narrowing of a patent claim may give rise to prosecution-history estoppel. Festo Corp. v. Shoketsu Kinzoku Kogyo Kabushiki Co., 304 F.3d 1289 (Fed. Cir. 2003). [Cases: Patents 168(2.2). C.J.S. Patents § 297.]

festuca (fes-tyoo-k<<schwa>>).Hist. A rod, staff, or stick used as a pledge (or gage) of good faith by a party to a contract or as a token of conveyance of land. • In Roman law, a festuca was a symbol of ownership. — Also termed fistuca; vindicta. See LIVERY OF SEISIN.

“The wed or gage, however, was capable of becoming a symbol; an object which intrinsically was of trifling value might be given and might serve to bind a contract. Among the Franks, whom we must regard as being for many purposes our ancestors in law, it took the shape of the festuca. Whether this transition from the ‘real’ to the ‘formal’ can be accomplished without the intervention of sacral ceremonies seems doubtful. There are some who regard the festuca as a stout staff which has taken the place of a spear and is a symbol of physical power. Others see in it a little bit of stick on which imprecatory runes have been cut. It is hard to decide such questions, for, especially under the influence of a new religion, symbols lose their old meanings and are mixed up. Popular etymology confounds confusion.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 186 (2d ed. 1899).

festum (fes-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] A feast-day, holiday, or festival.

FETAL ALCOHOL SYNDROME

fetal alcohol syndrome.A variety of birth defects caused by the mother's alcohol consumption during pregnancy. • The birth defects include facial abnormalities, mental retardation, and growth deficiencies. — Abbr. FAS.

fetiales (fee-shee-ay-leez), n. pl. Roman law. The order of priests whose duties concerned international relations and treaties, including the declaration of war and peace. — Also spelled feciales.

“Feciales [were] ... priests among the Romans, Etruscans, and other ancient nations of Italy, who acted as heralds of peace and war. Their persons were sacred from injury when engaged on any mission to a hostile state, as the persons of ambassadors, and messengers, under a flag of truce, are inviolate in the present time. Their duties in some few particulars resembled those of the heralds of the Middle Ages. The Roman feciales ... formed a kind of college of heralds, instituted by Numa Pompilius, the second king of Rome, about 710 B.C.” Beeton's Illustrated Dictionary of Religion, Philosophy, Politics, and Law 240 (ca. 1880).

FETIAL LAW

fetial law (fee-sh<<schwa>>l). Roman law. A branch of law concerned with matters (such as treaties, embassies, and war declarations) affecting relations between peoples or nations. — Also spelled feacial law. — Also termed jus fetiale.

feticide (fee-t<<schwa>>-sId). 1. The act or an instance of killing a fetus, usu. by assaulting and battering the mother; esp., the act of unlawfully causing the death of a fetus. 2. An intentionally induced miscarriage. — Also spelled foeticide. — Also termed child destruction. Cf. INFANTICIDE (1). — feticial,adj.

FETTER

fetter, n. (usu. pl.) A chain or shackle for the feet. — fetter, vb.

FETTERING OF PROPERTY

fettering of property. The act of making the disposition or ownership of property more complex so that those with separate interests must cooperate if they are to handle their interests reasonably. • Fettering of property occurs whenever ownership is split into two or more interests, as when present and future interests are divided or when a tenancy in common is created.

FETUS

fetus. A developing but unborn mammal, esp. in the latter stages of development. — Also spelled foetus. Cf. EMBRYO; ZYGOTE.

FEU

feu (fyoo), n. [fr. Law Latin feudum “a fee”] 1. A right to land given to a person in exchange for service to be performed. 2. Scots law. Land held by a vassal in return for an annual payment in money, crops, or services (called feu duty). • This type of tenure was abolished in Scotland in 2000. 3. Scots law. A perpetual grant of land to be held in exchange for grain or money. 4. A perpetual lease for a fixed rent. 5. A piece of land held under a perpetual lease for a fixed rent. — Also spelled few. See FEE(2). — feu, vb. — feu, adj.

“Feu; in Latin feudum, was used to denote the feudal-holding, where the service was purely military; but the term has been used in Scotland in contradistinction to ward-holding, the military tenure of this country ... for, even in the purest ages of the military system, innumerable instances are to be found of grants of land in the feudal form, where the vassal annually delivered victual, or performed agricultural services to his superior.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 456 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

feu,vb. Scots law. To grant (land) by feu.

FEU ANNUAL

feu annual.Scots law. The yearly return generated by a feu.

FEUAR

feuar (fyoo-<<schwa>>r), n. Scots law. One who holds a feu. Cf. FEU; VASSAL.

FEU CHARTER

feu charter.Scots law. The charter creating a feu tenure.

FEUD

feud,n. Hist. 1.A heritable estate in land conveyed from a feudal superior to a grantee or tenant, held on the condition of rendering services to the superior.

impartible feud.An indivisible feud; a feud not subject to partition. See feudum individuum under FEUD.

improper feud.A nonmilitary feud; a feud that is base or servile in nature.

“These were the principal, and very simple, qualities of the genuine or original feuds; being then all of a military nature, and in the hands of military persons: though the feudatories, being under frequent incapacities of cultivating and manuring their own lands, soon found it necessary to commit part of them to inferior tenants But this at the same time demolished the ancient simplicity of feuds; and an inroad being once made upon their constitution, it subjected them, in a course of time, to great varieties and innovations. Feuds came to be bought and sold, and deviations were made from the old fundamental rules of tenure and succession; which were held no longer sacred, when the feuds themselves no longer continued to be purely military. Hence these tenures began now to be divided into feoda propria et impropria, proper and improper feuds” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 57–58 (1766).

proper feud. A feud based on military service.

2. The interest of the tenant in the land conveyed. 3. The land itself conveyed. — Also termed (in senses 1, 2 & 3) fee; fief; feod; feude; feudum. 4. An enmity or private war existing between families or clans, esp. as a result of a murder. “Where wrong done to an individual is not regarded as an injury to the entire tribe, the wrongdoer is out of the peace only as regards the wronged party and his kin. The situation created by such wrongful deed is feud (Anglo Saxon foehth, Latin faida). The root meaning of the word is ‘hatred.’ Feud is legally sanctioned hostility. The recognition of feud by the law is found in the fact that revenge taken in lawful feud is not a breach of the peace. It is not a wrongful deed. It furnishes no basis for any claim for fine or punishment. The man slain in lawful feud is not to be avenged nor has compensation to be paid for his slaying.” Munroe Smith, The Development of European Law 29 (1928).

blood feud. A state of hostility between families in which one family seeks to avenge the killing of one of its members by killing a member of the other family. See VENDETTA.

“Anglo-Saxon polity preserved, even down to the Norman Conquest, many traces of a time when kinship was the strongest of all bonds. Such a stage of society, we hardly need add, is not confined to any one region of the world or any one race of men... When it puts on the face of strife between hostile kindreds, it is shown in the war of tribal factions, and more specifically in the blood-feud. A man's kindred are his avengers; and, as it is their right and honour to avenge him, so it is their duty to make amends for his misdeeds, or else maintain his cause in fight. Step by step, as the power of the State waxes, the self-centred and self-helping autonomy of the kindred wanes. Private feud is controlled, regulated, put, one may say, into legal harness; the avenging and the protecting clan on the slain and the slayer are made pledges and auxiliaries of public justice.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 31 (2d ed. 1898).

FEUDAL

feudal, adj. 1. Of, relating to, or growing out of feudalism <feudal law>. 2. Of or relating to a feud <feudal tenure>. — Also spelled (archaically) feodal. Cf. ALLODIAL.

FEUDAL ACTION

feudal action. Hist. A real action; an action that concerned only real property.

feudalism (fyood-l-iz-m). 1. A landholding system, particularly applying to medieval Europe, in which all are bound by their status in a hierarchy of reciprocal obligations of service and defense. • The lord was obligated to give the vassal (1) some land, (2) protection, and (3) justice. The lord guaranteed the quiet occupation of the land by the vassal and guaranteed to do right if the vassal became involved in a dispute. In return, the vassal owed the lord some type of service, called “tenure” (literally “means of holding”), because the different types of service were the methods by which the vassals held the property. 2. The social, political, and economic system of medieval Europe. — Also termed feudal system; feodal system. —

Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 46 (1766).

feude. See FEUD.

FEUDEE

feudee (fyoo-dee), n. Hist. The grantee of a feud; a feudal tenant.

FEUDIST

feudist. A writer on feuds (for example, Cujacius, Spelman, Craig).

FEUDORUM LIBRI

Feudorum Libri (fyoo-dor-<<schwa>>m li-brI). [Latin “the books of the feuds”] Hist. The Books of Feuds, a five-book compilation of Lombardic feudal law published in Milan around 1152, during the reign of Henry III. • This unofficial compilation was the main source of tenure law among the nations in Europe. It was widely used in medieval law schools and courts in Italy, France, and Germany. The Feudorum Libri were probably known in England but had little effect other than influencing English lawyers to study their own tenure system more critically. — Also termed Consuetudines Feudorum; Usus Feudorum.

feudum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] A fief or feud; a feudum. — Also termed feodum; feum. Pl. feuda (fyoo-d<<schwa>>). See FEUD(1); FIEF; FEE(2).

“The Latin equivalent of feodum or feudum is the root of the words ‘feudal’ and ‘subinfeudation’. The French form fief is favoured by some English historians, but it was not used in law-French.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 256 n.4 (3d ed. 1990).

feudum antiquum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m an-tI-kw<<schwa>>m), n. [Law Latin “ancient feud”] Hist. 1. A feud that passed to a vassal from an intestate ancestor. 2. A feud that ancestors had possessed for more than four generations. 3. An ancient feud. — Also termed feodum antiquum (fee-<<schwa>>-d<<schwa>>m or fyoo-d<<schwa>>m). See FEUD(1). Pl. feuda antiqua (fyoo-d<<schwa>> an-tI-kw<<schwa>>).

feudum apertum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m <<schwa>>-p<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>m). Hist. A feud that reverted to the lord because of a tenant's failure of issue, a crime by the tenant, or some other legal cause. — Also termed feodum apertum.

feudum burgale (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m b<<schwa>>r-gay-lee). [Law Latin] Hist. Land held feudally by burgage tenure — that is, tenure given in exchange for a tenant's watching and warding in a burgh. See WATCH AND WARD.

feudum ex camera aut caverna (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m eks kam-<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>awt k<<schwa>>-v<<schwa>>r-n<<schwa>>). [Law Latin “feu from a room or hole”] Hist. An annual gift of money, grain, or other items to a deserving person, esp. a soldier.

feodum francum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m frangk-<<schwa>>m).Hist. A free feud; a feud or fee that was noble and free from talliage and subsidies that vulgar feuds (plebeia feuda) were subject to.

feodum hauberticum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m haw-b<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>m).Hist. A feud that was held on the military service of appearing fully armed when summoned by the lord. See ARRIÈRE-BAN.

feodum improprium (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m im-proh-pree-<<schwa>>m).Hist. A feud that was improper.

feodum individuum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m in-d<<schwa>>-vij-oo-<<schwa>>m).Hist. A feud that was indivisible and descendible only to the eldest son.

feodum laicum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m lay-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>m).Hist. A lay feud. — Also termed feodum laicum.

feodum ligium (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m lij-ee-<<schwa>>m).Hist. 1. A liege feud; a feud held immediately of the sovereign. 2. A feud for which the vassal owed fealty to his lord against all other persons.

feodum maternum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m m<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r-n<<schwa>>m).Hist. A feud that descended to the feudatory from the maternal side.

feodum militare (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m mil-<<schwa>>-tair-ee).Hist. A knight's feud. • It was held by knight-service and esteemed the most honorable species of tenure. — Also termed feodum militis; (in Norman law) fief d'haubert or fief d'hauberk.

feodum nobile (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m noh-b<<schwa>>-lee).Hist. A feud for which the tenant did guard and owed fealty and homage. — Also termed feodum nobile.

feodum novum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m noh-v<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. A new fee; a fee that began with the person of the feudatory, and that was not acquired by succession. — Also spelled feodum novum.

feodum novum ut antiquum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m noh-v<<schwa>>m <<schwa>>t an-tI-kw<<schwa>>m).Hist. A new feud held with the qualities of an ancient feud.

feodum paternum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m p<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r-n<<schwa>>m).Hist. 1. A feud that the tenant's paternal ancestors had held for four generations. 2. A feud descendible only to the heirs on the paternal side. 3. A feud that could be held only by males.

feudum proprium (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m proh-pree-<<schwa>>m).Hist. An original feud that is military in nature and held by military service.

feudum rectum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m rek-t<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. Lands held by military tenure.

feudum simplex (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m sim-pleks). [Law Latin] Hist. FEE SIMPLE.

feudum talliatum (fyoo-d<<schwa>>m tal-ee-ay-t<<schwa>>m). See FEE TAIL.

FEU DUTY

feu duty.Scots law. The annual rent paid by the tenant of a feu. — Also termed ground annual.

FEU FARM

feu farm.Scots law. A tenure of land held in exchange for a specified annual payment (called feu duty). • This type of tenure was converted to a freehold in 2000. — Also termed feu tenure. See FEU DUTY.

feuholding (fyoo-hohl-ding).Hist. A tenancy held by rendering produce or money instead of military service. — Also spelled feu holding.

FEUM

feum. See FEUDUM.

fiant,n. Hist. 1.A decree; commission. 2. A warrant to the Chancery of Ireland for a grant under the great seal.

fiar,n. Scots law. One who holds an estate in fee, in contrast to a liferenter.

FIAT

fiat (fee-aht orfee-at orfI-at orfI-<<schwa>>t), n.[Latin "let it be done"] 1. An order or decree, esp. an arbitrary one <judicial fiat>.2. A court decree, esp. one relating to a routine matter such as scheduling <the court requires all motions to contain a fiat — to be filled in by the court — setting the hearing date>. — Also termed fiaunt.

FIAT JUSTITIA

fiat justitia (fI-at j<<schwa>>s-tish-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. Let justice be done. • This phrase signaled the Crown's commission to the House of Lords to hear an appeal.

“Fiat Justitia, ruat coelum, says another maxim, as full of extravagance as it is of harmony: Go heaven to wreck — so justice be but done: — and what is the ruin of kingdoms, in comparison of the wreck of heaven?” Jeremy Bentham, An Introduction to the Principles of Morals and Legislation 13–14 n.1 (1823).

FIAT MONEY

fiat money. See MONEY.

FIAT UT PETITUR

fiat ut petitur (fī-at <<schwa>>t pet-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin] Let it be done as it is asked. • An order granting a petition.

FIAUNT

fiaunt. See FIAT.

FICA

FICA (fī-k<<schwa>>).abbr.FEDERAL INSURANCE CONTRIBUTIONS ACT.

FICKLE-FIDUCIARY RULE

fickle-fiduciary rule. A rule that requires a partner or employee to forfeit all compensation, bonuses, and other benefits received after breaching a fiduciary duty to the employer or partnership, for as long as the breach continues. • The rule usu. applies to people who are preparing to resign or have resigned to set up a competing business or work for a competitor. Mitigating factors, including an absence of harm to the employer or partnership, are usu. not considered. But a few courts have found that if a strict application of the rule would produce unjustly harsh results, mitigating factors must be taken into account.

FICTA TRADITIO

ficta traditio (fik-t<<schwa>> tr<<schwa>>-dish-ee-oh). [Latin] Scots law. A fictitious delivery. • The phrase invoked the rule that if the parties so intended, an item could be treated as having been delivered to a buyer in possession of it without the need for physical transfer. — Also termed fictio brevis manus.

FICTIO

fictio (fik-shee-oh), n. [Latin fr. ingere “to feign”] Roman law. A legal fiction; a legal assumption or supposition (such as that the plaintiff was a citizen) necessary to achieve certain legal results that otherwise would not be obtained. • Legal fictions allowed Roman magistrates (praetors) to expand the law beyond what was strictly allowed by the jus civile. This practice also occurred in English law — for example, the action of common recovery, which allowed a landowner to convey land that by law could not be alienated (such as land held in fee tail). Pl. fictiones (fik-shee-oh-nee-z).

FICTIO BREVIS MANUS

fictio brevis manus (fik-shee-oh bree-vis may-n<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] FICTA TRADITIO .

fictitious name. 1. ASSUMED NAME. 2. ALIAS.

FICTITIOUS PARTY

fictitious party. See PARTY(2).

FICTITIOUS-PAYEE RULE fictitious-payee rule. Commercial law. The principle that if a drawer or maker issues commercial paper to a payee whom the drawer or maker does not actually intend to have any interest in the instrument, an ensuing forgery of the payee's name will be effective to pass good title to later transferees. — Also termed padded-payroll rule. [Cases: Banks and Banking 148, 174. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 416–417, 419, 421–428, 430–432, 434–438.]

FICTITIOUS PERSON

fictitious person. See artificial person under PERSON(3).

FICTITIOUS PROMISE

fictitious promise. See implied promise under PROMISE.

FICTITIOUS SEISIN

fictitious seisin. See seisin in law under SEISIN.

FIDE-COMMITTEE

fide-committee. A beneficiary; CESTUI QUE TRUST. — Also termed fidei-commissarius.

“In a particular case, a cestuy que trust is called by the Roman law, fideicommissarius. In imitation of this, I have seen him somewhere or other called in English a fide-committee. This term, however, seems not very expressive. A fide-committee, or, as it should have been, a fidei-committee, seems, literally speaking, to mean one who is committed to the good faith of another.” Jeremy Bentham, An Introduction to the Principles of Morals and Legislation 226 n.1 (1823).

fideicomiso (fee-day-koh-mee-soh). Mexican law. A trust; esp., a trust that is established for the purpose of acquiring property in Mexico with a Mexican bank as trustee and a non-Mexican (who may be the settlor) as beneficiary. • The property is held in the name of the trust, but the beneficiary has all the rights and obligations of direct ownership, including the power to lease, sell, or devise the property. A Mexican fideicomiso usu. lasts 50 years and can be renewed for 50 more. Cf. FIDEICOMMISSUM.

FIDEI-COMMISSARIUS

fidei-commissarius. See CESTUI QUE TRUST.

FIDEI-COMMISSARY

fidei-commissary (fī-dee-I-kom-<<schwa>>-ser-ee). See CESTUI QUE TRUST.

FIDEICOMMISSARY HEIR

fideicommissary heir. See HEIR.

FIDEICOMMISSARY SUBSTITUTION fideicommissary substitution. 1. SUBSTITUTION(6). 2. SUBSTITUTION(7).

fideicommissum (fī-dee-I-k*<<schwa>>-mis-<<schwa>>m*). [Latin]. 1. Roman law. A direction to an heir asking the heir as a matter of good faith to give some part of the inheritance, such as a particular object, or all the inheritance, to a third party. • A fideicommissum was a device to overcome some of the technicalities of the Roman will. Originally it created a mere moral obligation, but Augustus made it enforceable by legal process. 2. Roman & civil law. An arrangement similar to a trust by which a testator gave property to a person for the benefit of another who could not, by law, inherit property. • Over time, this device was used to tie up property for generations, and most civil jurisdictions now prohibit or limit it. For example, in Louisiana, an arrangement in which one person bequeaths property to a second with a charge to preserve it and, at death, to restore it to a third person is a prohibited fideicommissum. — Sometimes spelled fidei-commissum. Pl. fideicommissa.

“The many formalities with regard to the institution of heirs and the bequest of legacies, coupled with the fact that many persons, e.g. peregrini, were incapable of being instituted heirs, or of being given a legacy, led, in the late Republic, to testators leaving directions to their heirs in favour of given individuals, which, though not binding at law, they hoped their heirs would, in honour, feel bound to carry out. The beginning of fideicommissa, therefore, was very like the early practice with regard to trusts in English law, and, as in the case of trusts, a time came when trusts were made binding legally as well as morally.... For brevity, the fideicommissum will here be called ‘the trust’, the person upon whom it was imposed (fiduciarius) ‘the trustee’, and the person in whose favour it was imposed (fideicommissarius) ‘the beneficiary’.” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 252 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

fidejubere (fī-dee-y<<schwa>>-beer-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To become a surety. • Forms of this word were spoken by the parties to a stipulatio that bound one party to become a surety for the other; the first party asked, “Do you pledge yourself?” (“fidejubesne?”), and the second responded, “I do pledge myself” (“fidejubeo”). See STIPULATIO.

FIDEJUSSION

fidejussion (fī-di-j<<schwa>>sh-<<schwa>>n). [fr. Latin fidejussio] Roman law. An act by which a person becomes an additional security for another. • The act does not remove the principal's liability but only adds to the surety's security. Fidejussion was one of the three types of adpromission, and the only type remaining in Justinian's law. — Also spelled fidejussio; fideiussio. See ADPROMISSION(1). — fidejussionary,adj.

fidejussor (fī-dee-j<<schwa>>s-or or -j<<schwa>>s-<<schwa>>r).1.Roman law. (ital.) A guarantor; a person who binds himself to pay another's debt. 2.Hist. Maritime law. A person who acts as bail for a defendant in the Court of Admiralty. — Also spelled fideiussor. Cf. ADPROMISSOR. — fidejussory,adj.

“The proceedings of the court of admiralty bear much resemblance to those of the civil law, but are not entirely founded thereon; and they likewise adopt and make use of other laws, as occasion requires; such as the Rhodian law, and the laws of Oleron. For the law of England, as has frequently been observed, doth not acknowledge or pay any deference to the civil law considered as such; but merely permits its use in such cases where it judged its determinations equitable, and therefore blends it, in the present instance, with other marine laws The first process in these courts is frequently by arrest of the defendant's person; and they also take recognizances or stipulation of certain fidejussors in the nature of bail, and in case of default may imprison both them and their principal.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 108–09

fidelitas (fi-del-<<schwa>>-tas). [Latin “fidelity”] See FEALTY.

FIDELITATIS SACRAMENTUM

fidelitatis sacramentum (fi-del-i-tay-tis sak-r*<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>*m). [Law Latin] Hist. The oath of fealty that a vassal owed to a lord.

FIDEM FACERE JUDICI

fidem facere judici (fi-d*<<schwa>>m fay-s<<schwa>>*-ree joo-di-sI). [Latin] Hist. To convince the judge. • The phrase appeared in reference to the introduction of evidence to prove a case.

FIDEM MENTIRI

fidem mentiri (fi-d*<<schwa>>*m men-tI-rI). [Latin] Hist. To betray faith or fealty. • The term refers to a feudal tenant who did not keep the fealty sworn to the lord.

FIDEPROMISSION

fidepromission (fi-dee-proh-mish-*<<schwa>>*n), n. [Latin “faith-promise”] Roman law. A contract of guaranty by stipulation. • Fidepromission was one of the three types of adpromission. See ADPROMISSION (1); STIPULATION(3). — fidepromissor, n.

FIDES

fides (fi-deez). [Latin] Faith.

FIDES FACTA

fides facta (fi-deez fak-t*<<schwa>>*). [Latin] Hist. Faith-making; faith-pledging. • Among the Franks and Lombards, certain transactions were guaranteed by symbolic, formal acts — making one's faith — such as the giving of a rod when property was transferred. See FESTUCA.

fiducia (fi-d[y]oo-shee-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin “an entrusting”] Roman law. An early form of transfer of title by way of mortgage, deposit, etc., with a provision for reconveyance upon payment of the debt, termination of the deposit, etc.

“The Roman mortgage (fiducia) fell wholly out of use before the time of Justinian, having been displaced by the superior simplicity and convenience of the hypotheca; and in this respect modern Continental law has followed the Roman.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 443 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

fiducial,adj. Of, relating to, or characterized by confidence in and reliance on another person or thing <there must be a fiducial bond between a patient and a doctor>.

FIDUCIAL RELATIONSHIP

fiducial relationship. See trust relationship under RELATIONSHIP.

FIDUCIARIUS HERES

fiduciarius heres (fi-d[y]oo-shee-air-ee-*<<schwa>>*s heer-eez). [Latin “fiduciary heir”] Roman law. A person formally named an heir in a testament, but in a fiduciary capacity, and charged to deliver the succession to the person designated by the testament.

FIDUCIARIUS TUTOR

fiduciarius tutor (fi-d[y]oo-shee-air-ee-*<<schwa>>s t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>*r). Roman law. A fiduciary guardian; a person who by fulfilling a trust to free someone in power became his or her guardian.

FIDUCIARY

fiduciary (fi-d[y]oo-shee-er-ee), n.1. A person who is required to act for the benefit of another person on all matters within the scope of their relationship; one who owes to another the duties of good faith, trust, confidence, and candor <the corporate officer is a fiduciary to the corporation>.2. One who must exercise a high standard of care in managing another's money or property <the beneficiary sued the fiduciary for investing in speculative securities>. — fiduciary,adj.

“ ‘Fiduciary’ is a vague term, and it has been pressed into service for a number of ends.... My view is that the term ‘fiduciary’ is so vague that plaintiffs have been able to claim that fiduciary obligations have been breached when in fact the particular defendant was not a fiduciary stricto sensu but simply had withheld property from the plaintiff in an unconscionable manner.” D.W.M. Waters, The Constructive Trust 4 (1964).

dilatory fiduciary (dil-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A trustee or other fiduciary who is unreasonably slow in administering an estate.

successor fiduciary. A fiduciary who is appointed to succeed or replace a prior one.

temporary fiduciary. An interim fiduciary appointed by the court until a regular fiduciary can be appointed.

FIDUCIARY BOND

fiduciary bond. See BOND(2).

FIDUCIARY CONTRACT

fiduciary contract. Hist. An agreement by which one party delivers something to another on condition that the second party will return the thing to the first.

FIDUCIARY DEBT

FIELD-WAREHOUSE FINANCING AGREEMENT

field-warehouse financing agreement. The loan agreement in a field-warehousing arrangement.

FIELD WAREHOUSING

field warehousing. An inventory-financing method by which a merchant pledges its inventory, which is in the possession of a third person (a warehouse). • This is a method of financing an inventory that cannot economically be delivered to the creditor or third party. The borrower segregates part of the inventory and places it under the nominal control of a lender or third party, so that the lender has a possessory interest. Cf. floor-plan financing under FINANCING; PLEDGE.

“Field warehousing is a way of bringing about the security relationship of a pledge. It is an arrangement for allowing the pledgor a more convenient access to the pledged goods, while the goods are actually in the custody and control of a third person on the pledgor's premises.” Business Factors, Inc. v. Taylor-Edwards Warehouse & Transfer Co., 585 P.2d 825, 828 (Wash. Ct. App. 1978).

“Field warehousing is ... an arrangement whereby a wholesaler, manufacturer, or merchant finances his business through the pledge of goods remaining on his premises. The arrangement is valid and effective where there is an actual delivery to the warehouseman by the bailor who has hired the warehouseman and given him exclusive possession of the warehouse goods.” In re Covington Grain Co., 638 F.2d 1362, 1365 (5th Cir. 1981).

FIERDING COURT

• Four courts were in each district or hundred.

FIERI

fieri (fI-<<schwa>>-rI). [Latin] To be made; to be done. • Fieri usu. appears as part of the phrase in fieri. See IN FIERI.

FIERI FACIAS

fieri facias (fI-<<schwa>>-rIfay-shee-<<schwa>>s). [Latin “that you cause to be done”] A writ of execution that directs a marshal or sheriff to seize and sell a defendant's property to satisfy a money judgment. — Abbr. fi. fa.; Fi. Fa. Cf. LEVARI FACIAS. [Cases: Execution 1, 15. C.J.S. Executions §§ 2, 15, 18.]

“It receives its name from the Latin words in the writ (quod fieri facias de bonis et catallis, that you cause to be made of the goods and chattels). It is the form of execution in common use in levying upon the judgment-debtor's personal property.” John Bouvier, Bouvier's Law Dictionary (8th ed. 1914).

“The writ of ‘fieri facias’ (commonly called a writ of ‘fi fa’), which commanded literally ‘that you cause to be made,’ was an early common-law means of enforcing payment on a judgment; it was, in effect, an order to the sheriff of the court to enforce a judgment against the debtor by levy, seizure, and sale of his personalty to the extent needed to satisfy a judgment.” 30 Am. Jur. 2d Executions and Enforcement of Judgments § 14, at 50–51 (1994).

fieri facias de bonis ecclesiasticis (fI-<<schwa>>-rIfay-shee-<<schwa>>s dee boh-nis e-klee-z[h]ee-as-t<<schwa>>-sis). [Latin “that you cause to be made of the ecclesiastical goods”] Hist. A writ of execution — used when the defendant was a beneficed clerk who had no lay fee — that commanded the bishop to satisfy the judgment from the ecclesiastical goods and chattels of the defendant within the diocese. • This was accomplished by issuing a sequestration to levy the debt out of the defendant's benefice. This writ was issued after a fieri facias had been returned nulla bona.

fieri facias de bonis propriis (fī-⟨schwa⟩-rIfay-shee-⟨schwa⟩s dee boh-nis proh-pree-is). [Latin “that you cause to be made of his own goods”] Hist. A writ that executes on an executor's property when a writ fieri facias de bonis testatoris is returned by the sheriff nulla bona or devastavit (a wasting of the testator's goods by the executor).

fieri facias de bonis testatoris (fī-⟨schwa⟩-rIfay-shee-⟨schwa⟩s dee boh-nis tes-t⟨schwa⟩-tor-is). [Latin “that you cause to be made of the testator's goods”] Hist. A writ of execution served on an executor for a debt incurred by the testator.

FIERI FECI

fieri feci (fī-⟨schwa⟩-rIfee-sI). [Latin “I have caused to be made”] Hist. A sheriff's return on a fieri facias where the sheriff has collected, in whole or in part, the sum to be levied on. • The return is usu. expressed by the word “satisfied.”

FILIATED FATHER

filiated father.See FATHER.

filiation (fil-ee-ay-sh<<schwa>>n).1. The fact or condition of being a son or daughter; relationship of a child to a parent. • Despite Bentham's protest (see below), filiation is usual in this sense. — Also termed filiality.

“In English we have no word that will serve to express with propriety the person who bears the relation opposed to that of parent. The word child is ambiguous, being employed in another sense, perhaps more frequently than in this: more frequently in opposition to a person of full age, an adult, than in correlation to a parent. For the condition itself we have no other word than filiation: an ill-contrived term, not analogous to paternity and maternity: the proper term would have been filiality: the word filiation is as frequently, perhaps, and more consistently, put for the act of establishing a person in the possession of the condition of filiality.” Jeremy Bentham, An Introduction to the Principles of Morals and Legislation 276 n.2 (1823).

2. Judicial determination of paternity. See PATERNITY; filiated father under FATHER. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock 30–75. C.J.S. Children Out-of-Wedlock §§ 41, 46–52, 67, 70–141.]

filiation order.See ORDER(2).

FILIBUSTER

filibuster (fil-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>-s-t<<schwa>>-r), n.1. A dilatory tactic, esp. prolonged and often irrelevant speechmaking, employed in an attempt to obstruct legislative action. • The filibuster is common in the U.S. Senate, where the right to debate is usu. unlimited and where a filibuster can be terminated only by a cloture vote of two-thirds of all members. 2. In a deliberative body, a member in the minority who resorts to obstructive tactics to prevent the adoption of a measure or procedure that is favored by the majority. — Also termed filibusterer. 3.Hist. A person who, together with others, works to invade and revolutionize a foreign state in disregard of international law. See CLOTURE. — filibuster,vb.

filicide (fil-i-sId).1. A person who kills his or her own child. 2. The act of killing one's own child. Cf. INFANTICIDE(1).

FILIUSFAMILIAS

filiusfamilias (fil-ee-<<schwa>>-s-f<<schwa>>-mil-ee-as), n. [Latin “the son of a family”] Roman law. An unemancipated son or daughter, grandson or granddaughter. — Also termed homo alieni juris.

“Every Roman citizen is either a paterfamilias or a filiusfamilias, according as he is free from paternal power (homo sui juris) or not (homo alieni juris). Paterfamilias is the generic name for a homo sui juris, whether child or adult, married or unmarried. Filiusfamilias is the generic name for a homo alieni juris, whether son or daughter, grandson or granddaughter, and so on.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 177 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

special finding. 1. (usu. pl.) A finding of the necessary and ultimate facts to support a judgment in favor of one party. 2.Military law. A military tribunal's finding that directly relates to the determination of guilt or innocence.

fine,n.1. An amicable final agreement or compromise of a fictitious or actual suit to determine the true possessor of land. • The fine was formerly used as a form of conveyance to disentail an estate. — Also termed final concord; finalis concordia. See FOOT OF THE FINE.

“A peculiar and persistent use of the writ [of covenant] was in levying a fine. A fine — finalis concordia — was the compromise of a suit, settled upon terms approved by the court. The dispute, while it might be a reality, was more often fictitious, and was chiefly used as a means of conveying land... Soon after [Glanvill's] book was written, an innovation was made in the procedure which endured until 1833. The terms of the compromise, agreed by the parties and approved by the judges, were entered upon a threefold indenture, one of the parts being given to each of the litigants and the third — the ‘foot’ or bottom of the document — being kept among the records of the court. The parties thus obtained incontestable evidence and abundant security, and either could sue the other if the agreement were not implemented.” C.H.S. Fifoot, History and Sources of the Common Law: Tort and Contract 256 (1949).

“Unlike the recovery, which was a real action, the fine was a compromised fictitious personal action, originally designed as a method of ensuring security in conveyancing and only later being employed for the purpose of barring estates tail. In outline, it operated in the following manner. The intending purchaser brought an action, begun by writ of covenant, against the intending vendor. The parties then applied to the court to compromise the action; by the terms of the compromise (finis) the intending vendor admitted that the land belonged to the intending purchaser because he had given it to him, and the terms of the compromise were recorded in the court records. The fine owed its popularity as a means of conveyancing to two factors, neither of which was present in the standard method of conveyance by means of feoffment. First, the enrolling in the court records provided evidence of the transaction which was both permanent and free from the danger of forgery. Secondly, the effect of the fine was to set running a short period of limitation at the expiration of which all claims to the land were barred. It was this second aspect which made the device attractive as a means of ‘barring’ fees tail.” Peter Butt, Land Law 102–03 (2d ed. 1988).

executed fine.Hist. A fine made on acknowledgment of the right of the grantee to land given to him as a gift from the grantor. • This was abolished in England in 1833. 3 & 4 Will. 4, ch. 74.

2.FINE FOR ALIENATION. 3. A fee paid by a tenant to the landlord at the commencement of the tenancy to reduce the rent payments. 4.Hist. A money payment from a tenant to the tenant's lord.

common fine.A sum of money due from a tenant to a lord to defray the cost of a court leet or to allow the litigants to try the action closer to home. — Also termed head-silver.

5. A pecuniary criminal punishment or civil penalty payable to the public treasury. [Cases: Fines 1.5.] — fine,vb.

day fine.A fine payable over time, usu. as a percentage of the defendant's earnings on a weekly or monthly basis.

excessive fine. 1. Criminal law. A fine that is unreasonably high and disproportionate to the offense committed. • The Eighth Amendment proscribes excessive fines. An example of an excessive fine is a civil forfeiture in which the property was not an instrumentality of the crime and the worth of the property was not proportional to the owner's culpability. [Cases: Fines 1.3.]
2. A fine or penalty that seriously impairs one's earning capacity, esp. from a business.

fresh fine. Hist. A fine levied within the past year.

FINEABLE

[Latin “a fine to be annulled levied from a tenement which was of ancient demesne”] Hist. A writ for disannulling a conveyance of land in ancient demesne to the lord's prejudice.

FINECAPIENDO PRO TERRIS fine capiendo pro terris (kap-ee-en-doh proh ter-is). [Latin “a fine to be taken for lands”] Hist. A writ that an imprisoned felon could use in some circumstances to obtain release from jail and to recover lands and goods taken during imprisonment.

FINE FOR ALIENATION

fine for alienation. Hist. A fee paid by a tenant to the lord upon the alienation of a feudal estate and substitution of a new tenant. • It was payable by all tenants holding by knight's service or tenants in capite by socage tenure. — Often shortened to fine.

FINE FOR ENDOWMENT

fine for endowment. Hist. A fee paid by a widow of a tenant to the tenant's lord. • If it was not paid, the widow could not be endowed of her husband's land.

FINEM FACERE

finem facere (fl-n<<schwa>>m fay-s<<schwa>>-ree). [Latin] Hist. 1. To make a composition or compromise; to relinquish a claim in exchange for consideration.

“In the thirteenth century the king's justices wield a wide and a ‘common law’ power of ordering that an offender be kept in custody. They have an equally wide power of discharging him upon his ‘making fine with the king.’ We must observe the language of the time. In strictness they have no power to ‘impose a fine.’ No tribunal of this period, unless we are mistaken, is ever said to impose a fine. To order the offender to pay so much money to the king — this the judge may not do. If he did it, he would be breaking or evading the Great Charter, for an amercement should be affeered, not by royal justices, but by neighbours of the wrong-doer. What the judges can do is this: — they can pronounce a sentence of imprisonment and then allow the culprit to ‘make fine,’ that is to make an end (finem facere) of the matter by paying or finding security for a certain sum of money. In theory the fine is a bilateral transaction, a bargain; it is not ‘imposed,’ it is ‘made.’” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 517 (2d ed. 1899).

2. To make a settlement of a penalty. • Magna Carta (ch. 55) specifically limited “[a]ll fines which were made with us unjustly and contrary to the law of the land ...” (Omnes fines qui injuste et contra legem terrae facti sunt nobiscum).

FINENON CAPIENDO PRO PULCHRE PLACITANDO fine non capiendo pro pulchre placitando (non kap-ee-en-doh proh p<<schwa>>l-kree plas-<<schwa>>-tan-doh). [Latin “a fine not to be taken for pleading fairly”] Hist. A writ prohibiting court officers from taking fines for fair pleading (i.e., beaupleader).

fine sur cognizance de droit, come ceo que il ad de son done (fIn s<<schwa>>r kon-<<schwa>>-z<<schwa>>nts d<<schwa>> droyt, kom say-oh kweel ad d<<schwa>>sawni dawin). [Law French “a fine upon acknowledgment of the right, as that which he has of his gift”] Hist. The most common fine of conveyance, by which the defendant (also called the deforciant) acknowledged in court that he had already conveyed the property to the cognizee. • This form of conveyance took the place of an actual livery of seisin. See FINE(1).

“But, in general, the first species of fine, ‘sur cognizance de droit come ceo, etc.,’ is the most used, as it conveys a clean and absolute freehold, and gives the cognizee a seisin in law, without an actual livery; and is therefore called a fine executed, whereas the others are but executory.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 353 (1766).

FINESUR COGNIZANCE DE DROIT TANTUM

fine sur cognizance de droit tantum (fIn s<<schwa>>r kon-<<schwa>>-z<<schwa>>nts d<<schwa>> droyt tan-t<<schwa>>m). [Law French “fine upon acknowledgment of the right merely”] Hist. A fine of conveyance that does not acknowledge a prior conveyance of land. • This type of fine was used to convey reversionary interests — that is, interests that did not require acknowledgment of an earlier livery of seisin. See FINE(1).

FINESUR CONCESSIT

fine sur concessit (fIn s<<schwa>>r k<<schwa>>n-ses-it). [Law French] Hist. A species of conveyance in which the cognizor does not acknowledge the cognizee's preceding right in land but grants the cognizee an estate de novo, usu. for life or a term of years, by way of supposed composition. See FINE (1).

FINESUR DONE GRANT ET RENDER

fine sur done, grant et render (fIn s<<schwa>>r dawn, grant ay ren-d<<schwa>>r). [Law French “fine upon gift, grant and render”] Hist. A double conveyance, consisting of a fine sur cognizance de droit, come ceo que il ad de son done and a fine sur concessit, used to convey particular limitations of estates. • For example, after acknowledgment of the cognizee's right in the land, the cognizee would grant back to the cognizor or a third party some other estate in the land. See FINE(1).

FIRST POLICY YEAR

first policy year. Insurance. The first year of a life-insurance policy that is to be automatically renewed annually. • This statutory phrase prohibits an insurer from using the policy's suicide exclusion as a defense — and refusing payment on the policy — when an insured commits suicide after the first year of the policy. The insurer can invoke the suicide exclusion as a defense to payment only if the insured commits suicide in the first policy year. [Cases: Insurance 2434(1), 2594(5), 3125. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 850–858.]

FIRST PURCHASER

first purchaser. See PURCHASER(2).

FIRST REFUSAL, RIGHT OF

first refusal, right of. See RIGHT OF FIRST REFUSAL.

FIRST-SALE DOCTRINE

first-sale doctrine. 1. Copyright. The rule that the purchaser of a physical copy of a copyrighted work, such as a book or CD, may give or sell that copy to someone else without infringing the copyright owner's exclusive distribution rights. • With regard to that physical copy, the copyright owner's distribution right is said to be exhausted. 17 USCA § 109(a). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 38.5. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 47, 97.] 2. Patents. The principle that the buyer of a patented article has the right to use, repair, and resell the article without interference from the patentee. • The patentee may still retain control of the article through terms in the license or sale contract. See PATENT-EXHAUSTION DOCTRINE.

FIRST TAKER

first taker. See TAKER.

FIRST-TO-FILE RULE

first-to-file rule. Civil procedure. 1. The principle that, when two suits are brought by the same parties, regarding the same issues, in two courts of proper jurisdiction, the court that first acquires jurisdiction usu. retains the suit, to the exclusion of the other court. • The court with the second-filed suit ordinarily stays proceedings or abstains. But an exception exists if the first-filed suit is brought merely in anticipation of the true plaintiff's suit and amounts to an improper attempt at forum-shopping. See ANTICIPATORY FILING. [Cases: Courts 475, 493, 514; Federal Courts 1145. C.J.S. Courts §§ 188, 211, 224.] 2. The doctrine allowing a party to a previously filed lawsuit to enjoin another from pursuing a later-filed action. — Also termed first-filing rule; first-filed rule; priority-jurisdiction rule. [Cases: Injunction 26(3). C.J.S. Injunctions §§ 43–44, 47–48, 54.]

FIRST-TO-FILE SYSTEM

first-to-file system. Patents. The practice of granting priority to the first person to file a patent application. • Most of the world uses a first-to-file patent system; the only major exception is the United States, which grants priority to the first inventor. Cf. FIRST-TO-INVENT SYSTEM. [Cases: Patents 90(1). C.J.S. Patents §§ 120–122.]

FIRST-TO-INVENT SYSTEM

first-to-invent system. Patents. The practice of awarding a patent to the first person to create an invention, rather than the first to file a patent application. • Because the first inventor is not necessarily the first person to file for a patent, an interference hearing is held to decide who is entitled to the patent. This system is used only in the United States. See CONCEPTION OF

INVENTION; priority of invention under PRIORITY. Cf. FIRST-TO-FILE SYSTEM M. [Cases: Patents 90(1). C.J.S. Patents §§ 120–122.]

fixture. Personal property that is attached to land or a building and that is regarded as an irremovable part of the real property, such as a fireplace built into a home. See UCC § 9-102(a)(41). • Historically, personal property becomes a fixture when it is physically fastened to or connected with the land or building and the fastening or connection was done to enhance the utility of the land or building. If personal property has been attached to the land or building and enhances only the chattel's utility, it is not a fixture. For example, if bricks are purposely stacked to form a wall, a fixture results. But if the bricks are merely stacked for convenience until used for some purpose, they do not form a fixture. — Also termed permanent fixture; immovable fixture. Cf. IMPROVEMENT. [Cases: Fixtures 1.]

"A fixture can best be defined as a thing which, although originally a movable chattel, is by reason of its annexation to, or association in use with land, regarded as a part of the land.... The law of fixtures concerns those situations where the chattel annexed still retains a separate identity in spite of annexation, for example a furnace or a light fixture. Where the chattel annexed loses such identity, as in the case of nails, boards, etc., the problem becomes one of accession." Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 137, at 698 & n.1 (2d ed. 1955).

"Broadly, goods can be classified for the purposes of [UCC §] 9-313 into three categories: those that remain 'pure goods,' those so substantially integrated into real estate as to become real estate themselves, 'pure realty,' and those in the gray area that would pass in a deed to the real estate but that retain separate status as personal property. These last are fixtures." 4 James J. White tenant's fixture. Removable personal property that a tenant affixes to the leased property but that the tenant can detach and take away. — Also termed movable fixture. [Cases: Fixtures 13.]

trade fixture. Removable personal property that a tenant attaches to leased land for business purposes, such as a display counter. • Despite its name, a trade fixture is not usu. treated as a fixture — that is, as irremovable. [Cases: Fixtures 15.]

fixture filing. The act or an instance of recording, in public real-estate records, a security interest in personal property that is intended to become a fixture. See UCC § 9-102(a)(40). • The creditor files a financing statement in the real-property records of the county where a mortgage on the real estate would be filed. A fixture-filing financing statement must contain a description of the real estate. [Cases: Secured Transactions 85, 94. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 54, 68–70.]

flag, n. 1. A usu. rectangular piece of cloth, bunting, or other material decorated with a distinctive design and used as a symbol or signal. 2. Something symbolized by the display of a flag, such as a ship or nationality. See DUTY OF THE FLAG; LAW OF THE FLAG.

flag of convenience. Int'l law. A national flag flown by a ship not because the ship or its crew has an affiliation with the nation, but because the lax controls and modest fees and taxes imposed by that nation have attracted the owner to register it there. • After World War II, shipowners began registering their ships in countries such as Panama, Liberia, and Honduras to avoid expensive and restrictive national regulation of labor, safety, and other matters. Since the late 1950s, there has been increasing international pressure to require a “genuine link” between a ship and its flag state, but this reform has been slow in coming. — Abbr. FOC. [Cases: Shipping 2. C.J.S. Shipping § 1.]

flag of truce. Int'l law. A white flag used as a signal when one belligerent wishes to communicate with the other in the field. • The bearers of such a flag may not be fired on, injured, or taken prisoner, as long as they carry out their mission in good faith.

FLAG DESECRATION

flag desecration. The act of mutilating, defacing, burning, or flagrantly misusing a flag. • Flag desecration is constitutionally protected as a form of free speech. United States v. Eichman, 496 U.S. 310, 110 S.Ct. 2404 (1990). [Cases: United States 5.5.]

"Folio ... [a] certain number of words; in conveyances, etc., and proceedings in the High Court amounting to seventy-two, and in parliamentary proceedings to ninety." Ivan Horniman, Wharton's Law Lexicon 368 (13th ed. 1925).

3. A page number on a printed book. 4. A large book the pages of which are formed by folding a sheet of paper only once in the binding to form two leaves, making available four pages (both sides of each leaf).

folkland.Hist. Land held by customary law, without written title. — Also spelled folcland. Cf. BOOKLAND.

"In all discussions on Anglo-Saxon law bookland is contrasted with 'folkland.' The most recent and probably the most correct view is that folkland simply means land subject to customary law, as opposed to land which was held under the terms of a charter. It would seem that the view that folkland means public land or land of the people, though till recently generally accepted, must be abandoned as resting on insufficient evidence. It appears that folkland might either be land occupied by individuals or families or communities, or it might be waste or unoccupied land. The only characteristic which can be universally ascribed to it is, that it is not bookland." Kenelm E. Digby, An Introduction to the History of the Law of Real Property 15 (5th ed. 1897).

FOLK LAWS

[Law French “a superior force”] An event or effect that can be neither anticipated nor controlled. • The term includes both acts of nature (e.g., floods and hurricanes) and acts of people (e.g., riots, strikes, and wars). — Also termed force majeure; vis major; superior force. Cf. ACT OF GOD; VIS MAJOR.

FORCE-MAJEURE CLAUSE

force-majeure clause. A contractual provision allocating the risk if performance becomes impossible or impracticable, esp. as a result of an event or effect that the parties could not have anticipated or controlled. [Cases: Contracts 309(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 520–522, 524.]

forcible, adj. Effected by force or threat of force against opposition or resistance.

“[In the law of trespass, the] term ‘forcible’ is used in a wide and somewhat unnatural sense to include any act of physical interference with the person or property of another. To lay one’s finger on another person without lawful justification is as much a forcible injury in the eye of the law, and therefore a trespass, as to beat him with a stick. To walk peacefully across another man’s land is a forcible injury and a trespass, no less than to break into his house vi et armis. So also it is probably a trespass deliberately to put matter where natural forces will take it on to the plaintiff’s land.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 5 (17th ed. 1977).

forcible detainer. 1. The wrongful retention of possession of property by one originally in lawful possession, often with threats or actual use of violence. 2. FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER(2).

FORCIBLE ENTRY

forcible entry. 1. The act or an instance of violently and unlawfully taking possession of lands and tenements against the will of those in lawful possession. 2. The act of entering land in another’s possession by the use of force against another or by breaking into the premises.

FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER forcible entry and detainer. 1. The act of violently taking and keeping possession of lands and tenements without legal authority. [Cases: Forcible Entry and Detainer 4.]

“To walk across another’s land, or to enter his building, without privilege, is a trespass, but this in itself, while a civil wrong, is not a crime. However, if an entry upon real estate is accomplished by violence or intimidation, or if such methods are employed for detention after a peaceable entry, there is a crime according to English law, known as forcible entry and detainer. This was a common-law offense in England, although supplemented by English statutes that are old enough to be common law in this country.... It has sometimes been said that there are two separate offenses — (1) forcible entry and (2) forcible detainer. This may be true under the peculiar wording of some particular statute, but in general it seems to be one offense which may be committed in two different ways.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 487–88 (3d ed. 1982).

2. A quick and simple legal proceeding for regaining possession of real property from someone who has wrongfully taken, or refused to surrender, possession. — Also termed forcible detainer. See EVICTION; EJECTMENT. [Cases: Forcible Entry and Detainer 6; Landlord and Tenant 287.]“Forcible entry and detainer is a remedy given by statute for the recovery of possession of land and of damages for its detention. It is entirely regulated by statute, and the statutes vary materially in the different states.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 74, at 188 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

foreclose,vb. To terminate a mortgagor's interest in property; to subject (property) to foreclosure proceedings. [Cases: Mortgages 320.C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 490–491, 495, 559, 568.]

“Should the mortgagor default in his obligations under the mortgage, the mortgagee will seek to ‘foreclose’, — i.e., ‘end’ or ‘close’ the mortgagor's rights in the security. After taking the appropriate statutory steps, the mortgagee will sell the mortgaged property. If the sale is to someone other than the mortgagor or the mortgagee (a ‘third party’ sale) the proceeds will go: first, to pay the costs of the foreclosure proceedings; second, to pay off the principal indebtedness and accrued interest; third, if there is anything left over (i.e., any ‘equity’ existed) this is paid to the mortgagor.” Edward H. Rabin, Fundamentals of Modern Real Property Law 1087 (1974).

foreclosure (for-kloh-zh<<schwa>>r). A legal proceeding to terminate a mortgagor's interest in property, instituted by the lender (the mortgagee) either to gain title or to force a sale in order to satisfy the unpaid debt secured by the property. Cf. REPOSSESSION. [Cases: Mortgages 380.C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 490–491, 495, 690–691, 695, 697.]

equitable foreclosure.A foreclosure method in which the court orders the property sold, and the proceeds are applied first to pay the costs of the suit and sale and then to the mortgage debt. • Any surplus is paid to the mortgagor. [Cases: Mortgages 386. C.J.S. Mortgages § 693.]

judicial foreclosure.A costly and time-consuming foreclosure method by which the mortgaged property is sold through a court proceeding requiring many standard legal steps such as the filing of a complaint, service of process, notice, and a hearing. • Judicial foreclosure is available in all jurisdictions and is the exclusive or most common method of foreclosure in at least 20 states. [Cases: Mortgages 380. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 490–491, 495, 690–691, 695, 697.]

mortgage foreclosure.A foreclosure of the mortgaged property upon the mortgagor's default.

nonjudicial foreclosure. 1. See power-of-sale foreclosure. 2. A foreclosure method that does not require court involvement. [Cases: Mortgages 329. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 490–491, 495, 575, 621.]

power-of-sale foreclosure. A foreclosure process by which, according to the mortgage instrument and a state statute, the mortgaged property is sold at a nonjudicial public sale by a public official, the mortgagee, or a trustee, without the stringent notice requirements, procedural burdens, or delays of a judicial foreclosure. • Power-of-sale foreclosure is authorized and used in more than half the states. — Also termed nonjudicial foreclosure; statutory foreclosure. [Cases: Mortgages 329. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 490–491, 495, 575, 621.]

strict foreclosure. A rare procedure that gives the mortgagee title to the mortgaged property — without first conducting a sale — after a defaulting mortgagor fails to pay the mortgage debt within a court-specified period. • The use of strict foreclosure is limited to special situations except in those few states that permit this remedy generally. [Cases: Mortgages 384. C.J.S. Mortgages § 694.]

tax foreclosure. A public authority's seizure and sale of property for nonpayment of taxes. [Cases: Taxation 635. C.J.S. Taxation § 1133.]

FORECLOSURE DECREE

FOREIGN SOVEREIGN IMMUNITIES ACT

Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act. A federal statute providing individuals with a right of action against foreign governments, under certain circumstances, to the extent the claim arises from the private, as opposed to the public, acts of the foreign state. 28 USCA §§ 1602–1611. — Abbr. FSIA. See RESTRICTIVE PRINCIPLE OF SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY. [Cases: International Law 10.31–10.39. C.J.S. International Law §§ 46–52, 54–55.]

“The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA) of 1976 was designed to provide a set of comprehensive regulations governing access to federal and state courts in this country for plaintiffs asserting claims against foreign states and instrumentalities thereof. The enactment of this legislation responded to the reality that increased contacts between American citizens and companies on the one hand, and foreign states and entities owned by foreign states on the other, as well as a constantly expanding range of government activities, had created the need for judicial fora in this country to resolve disputes arising out of these activities.” 14A Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 3662, at 160–61 (2d ed. 1998).

See FORESTALLING THE MARKET.

“[A] growing town in England might have placed a higher value on grain than a neighboring town with a static population, yet traditional patterns of business might continue to send the same amount of grain to both towns. A forestaller would bid against the traditional buyer in the smaller town, obtain the grain, and resell it where it could command a higher price in the larger town. Forestalling did not harm allocative efficiency. Indeed, it was a highly effective means of reallocating scarce goods to their most highly valued uses — the very definition of efficiency. Rather, forestalling was objectionable, and thus prohibited as a restraint of trade, because the bidding process necessarily resulted in higher grain prices in many parts of the country.” Stephen F. Ross, Principles of Antitrust Law 12 (1993).

forestaller,n.1. A person who forestalls. 2.Hist. One guilty of the offense of forestalling. See FORESTALL(5).

FORESTALLING THE MARKET

forestalling the market.Hist. 1.The taking possession of commodities on their way to the market. 2. The purchase of goods on their way to the market, with the intention of reselling them at a higher price. 3. The deterrence of having sellers offer their goods at market at a reasonable price; specif., the crime of inhibiting normal trading by persuading sellers to raise their prices on goods or dissuading them from offering the goods in a particular market, or by purchasing as much as possible of certain goods before they reach the market to drive up prices.

FOREST LAW

forest law.Hist. The body of law protecting game and preserving timber.

FORESTRY RIGHT

forestry right.A land interest under which a person has the right to enter the land, establish and maintain a crop of trees, harvest them, and construct works for that purpose. [Cases: Logs and Logging 1. C.J.S. Logs and Logging §§ 2, 9.]

forger^y,n.1. The act of fraudulently making a false document or altering a real one to be used as if genuine <the contract was void because of the seller's forgery>. — Also termed false making. • Though forgery was a misdemeanor at common law, modern statutes typically make it a felony. [Cases: Forgery 1.] 2. A false or altered document made to look genuine by someone with the intent to deceive <he was not the true property owner because the deed was a forgery>. — Also termed fake. 3. Under the Model Penal Code, the act of fraudulently altering, authenticating, issuing, or transferring a writing without appropriate authorization. • Under the explicit terms of the Code, writing can include items such as coins and credit cards. Model Penal Code § 224.1(1). — forge,vb. — forger,n.

“While it is true that there is a distinction between fraud and forgery, and forgery contains some elements that are not included in fraud, forgeries are a species of fraud. In essence, the crime of forgery involves the making, altering, or completing of an instrument by someone other than the ostensible maker or drawer or an agent of the ostensible maker or drawer.” 37 C.J.S. Forgery § 2, at 66 (1997).

double forgery.A draft having a forged payor signature and a forged indorsement.

FORINSEC SERVICE

forinsec service (f<<schwa>>-rin-sik).Hist. The feudal services owed by a mesne (i.e., intermediate) lord, esp. those of a military nature. — Also termed foreign service; forinsecum servitium. Cf. INTRINSEC SERVICE.

“The terminology of Bracton's day and of yet earlier times neatly expresses the distinction between the service which the tenant owes to his immediate lord by reason of the bargain which exists between them, and the service which was incumbent on the tenement whilst it was in the lord's hand. The former is intrinsec service, the latter forinsec service; the former is the service which is created by, which (as it were) arises within, the bargain between the two persons, A and B, whose rights and duties we are discussing; the latter arises outside that bargain, is ‘foreign’ to that bargain [T]he term is a relative one; what is ‘intrinsec’ between A and B is ‘forinsec’ as regards C.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 238, 239 n.2 (2d ed. 1898).

forisfiliate (for-is-f<<schwa>>-mil-ee-ayt), vb. [fr. Latin foris “outside” + familia “family”] Hist. To emancipate (a son) from paternal authority by a gift of land. • This act usu. rendered the son ineligible to inherit more property. — Also termed (archaically) forisfamiliare.

forisfiliated (for-is-f<<schwa>>-mil-ee-ay-tid), adj. Hist. (Of a son) emancipated from paternal authority and in possession of a portion of family land in lieu of inheritance.

“If our English law at any time knew an enduring patria potestas which could be likened to the Roman, that time had passed away long before the days of Bracton.... Bracton, it is true, has copied about this matter some sentences from the Institutes which he ought not to have copied; but he soon forgets them, and we easily see that they belong to an alien system. Our law knows no such thing as ‘emancipation,’ it merely knows an attainment of full age.... In old times a forisfiliated son, that is, one whom his father had enfeoffed, was excluded from the inheritance. This is already antiquated, yet Bracton can find nothing else to serve instead of an emancipatio.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 438, 438 n.3 (2d ed. 1899).

forisfiliation.Scots law. The liberation of a child from the father's tutelage, as when a child under the age of majority left home, was given seisin in a part of the father's land, or accepted something as a settled inheritance. Cf. EMANCIPATION(2).

FORMER PUNISHMENT

former punishment.Military law. The rule that nonjudicial punishment for a minor offense may bar trial by court-martial for the same offense.

FORM OF ACTION

form of action.The common-law legal and procedural device associated with a particular writ, each of which had specific forms of process, pleading, trial, and judgment. • The 11 common-law forms of action were trespass, trespass on the case, trover, ejectment, detinue, replevin, debt, covenant, account, special assumpsit, and general assumpsit. [Cases: Action 29; Federal Civil Procedure 71. C.J.S. Actions §§ 74–77.]

“Forms of action are usually regarded as different methods of procedure adapted to cases of different kinds, but in fact the choice between forms of action is primarily a choice between different theories of substantive liability, and the scope of the actions measures the existence and extent of liability at common law.... The development and extension of the different forms of action is the history of the recognition of rights and liability in the law of torts, contracts, and property, and the essentials of rights of action.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading §§ 27, 30, at 54, 60 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

Form S-1. See S-1.

formula. [Latin “set form of words”] 1. Roman law. A written document, prepared by a praetor and forwarded to a judex, identifying the issue to be tried and the judgment to be given by the judex. • It was based on model pleas formulated by the praetor in his edict and adapted by him or other magistrates in civil suits for the benefit of the judex who had to try the issue. These pleas were adapted to the circumstances of the case. The usual parts of a formula were (1) the demonstratio, in which the plaintiff stated the facts of the claim; (2) the intentio, in which the plaintiff specified the relief sought against the defendant; and (3) the condemnatio, in which the judex condemned (usu. to pay the plaintiff a sum) or acquitted the defendant. Pl. formulae (for-my<<schwa>>-lee). — Also termed verba concepta (v<<schwa>>r-b<<schwa>>k<<schwa>>n-sep-t<<schwa>>).

“The Roman judges were not, as with us, the presiding officers in the administration of law and justice. This was the position of the magistrate, the praetor. When a suit at law was commenced, the parties appeared before the praetor, who made a preliminary examination, not to ascertain the merits of the case, but to find the precise points in controversy. He heard the statements of the plaintiff and the counter-statements of the defendant, and from the two he constructed a formula (as it was called), a brief technical expression of the disputed issues. He then appointed a judex... instructing him to investigate the matter, and if he found the facts to be so and so, as recited in the formula, then to condemn the accused party, but, if he did not find them so, to acquit him.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 59–60 (1881). [This quotation describes only the period of formulary procedure, ca. 150 B.C.–A.D. 300. — Ed.]

2. Common-law pleading. A set form of words (such as those appearing in writs) used in judicial proceedings.

The common-law method of pleading and practice, which required formulaic compliance with the accepted forms of action even if through elaborate fictions. • In the 19th century, this type of procedure was replaced both in the United States and in England. See code pleading under PLEADING(2).

FORNICATION

fornication, n. 1. Voluntary sexual intercourse between two unmarried persons. • Fornication is still a crime in some states, such as Virginia. 2. Hist. Voluntary sexual intercourse with an unmarried woman. • At common law, the status of the woman determined whether the offense was adultery or fornication — adultery was sexual intercourse between a man, single or married, and a married woman not his wife; fornication was sexual intercourse between a man, single or married, and a single woman. Cf. ADULTERY. [Cases: Criminal Law 45.40; Lewdness 1. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 7.10; Lewdness §§ 2–9.] — fornicate, vb.

“Fornication was not a common-law crime but was made punishable by statute in a few states as a misdemeanor.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 455 (3d ed. 1982).

forum non competens (for-<<schwa>>m non kom-p<<schwa>>-tenz). [Latin] Hist. An inappropriate court; a court that lacks jurisdiction over a case.

FORUM NON CONVENIENS

forum non conveniens (for-<<schwa>>m non k<<schwa>>n-vee-nee-enz). [Latin “an unsuitable court”] Civil procedure. The doctrine that an appropriate forum — even though competent under the law — may divest itself of jurisdiction if, for the convenience of the litigants and the witnesses, it appears that the action should proceed in another forum in which the action might also have been properly brought in the first place. — Also termed forum inconueniens. [Cases: Courts 28; Federal Courts 45. C.J.S. Courts §§ 68–69.]

“Forum non conueniens allows a court to exercise its discretion to avoid the oppression or vexation that might result from automatically honoring plaintiff's forum choice. However, dismissal on the basis of forum non conueniens also requires that there be an alternative forum in which the suit can be prosecuted. It must appear that jurisdiction over all parties can be secured and that complete relief can be obtained in the supposedly more convenient court. Further, in at least some states, it has been held that the doctrine cannot be successfully invoked when the plaintiff is resident of the forum state since, effectively, one of the functions of the state courts is to provide a tribunal in which their residents can obtain an adjudication of their grievances. But in most instances a balancing of the convenience to all the parties will be considered and no one factor will preclude a forum non conueniens dismissal, as long as another forum is available.” Jack H. Friedenthal et al., Civil Procedure §§ 2.17, at 87–88 (2d ed. 1993).

forum originis (for-m rij-nis). [Latin] Hist. The forum or place of a person's birth, considered as a place of jurisdiction.

foster,adj.1. (Of a relationship) involving parental care given by someone not related by blood or legal adoption <foster home>.2. (Of a person) giving or receiving parental care to or from someone not related by blood or legal adoption <foster parent> <foster child>.

foster,vb. To give care to (something or someone); esp., to give parental care to (a child who is not one's natural or legally adopted child).

fosterage,n.1. The act of caring for another's child. 2. The entrusting of a child to another. 3. The condition of being in the care of another. 4. The act of encouraging or promoting.

foster care. 1. A federally funded child-welfare program providing substitute care for abused and neglected children who have been removed by court order from their parents' or guardians' care or for children voluntarily placed by their parents in the temporary care of the state because of a family crisis. 42 USCA §§ 670–679a. • The state welfare agency selects, trains, supervises, and pays those who serve as foster parents. [Cases: Infants 226. C.J.S. Adoption of Persons §§ 10–12.]

long-term foster care.The placing of a child in foster care for extended periods, perhaps even for the child's entire minority, in lieu of family reunification, termination and adoption, or guardianship. • Although most courts do not generally find this arrangement to be in a child's best interests, sometimes it is the only possibility, as when the child, because of age or disability, is unlikely to be adopted or when, although the parent cannot be permanently reunited with the child, limited contact with the parent would serve the child's best interests. Under the Adoption and Safe Families Act, long-term foster care is the permanent placement of last resort.

2. The area of social services concerned with meeting the needs of children who participate in these types of programs. [Cases: Infants 17.C.J.S. Infants §§ 8–9.]

FOSTER-CARE DRIFT

foster-care drift.The phenomenon that occurs when children placed in foster care remain in that system, in legal limbo, for too many years of their developmental life before they are reunited with their parents or freed for adoption and placed in permanent homes. • The Adoption and Safe Families Act was passed in 1997 to help rectify this problem. See ADOPTION AND SAFE FAMILIES ACT .

FOSTER-CARE PLACEMENT

foster-care placement.The (usu. temporary) act of placing a child in a home with a person or persons who provide parental care for the child. Cf. OUT-OF-HOME PLACEMENT T. [Cases:

Infants 226. C.J.S. Adoption of Persons §§ 10–12.]

FOSTER-CARE REVIEW BOARD

foster-care review board. A panel of screened and trained volunteers who routinely review cases of children placed in foster care, examine efforts at permanency planning, and report to the court. [Cases: Infants 17, 226. C.J.S. Adoption of Persons §§ 10–12; Infants §§ 8–9.]

FOSTER CHILD

foster child. See CHILD.

FOSTER FATHER

FOSTER HOME

foster home. A household in which foster care is provided to a child who has been removed from his or her birth or adoptive parents, usu. for abuse or neglect. • A foster home is usu. an individual home, but it can also be a group home. [Cases: Infants 226. C.J.S. Adoption of Persons §§ 10–12.]

FOUNDLING HOSPITAL

foundling hospital. A charitable institution, found esp. in Europe, the purpose of which is to care for abandoned children.

FOUR, RULE OF

four, rule of. See RULE OF FOUR.

FOUR CORNERS

four corners. The face of a written instrument. • The phrase derives from the ancient custom of putting all instruments (such as contracts) on a single sheet of parchment, as opposed to multiple pages, no matter how long the sheet might be. At common law, this custom prevented people from fraudulently inserting materials into a fully signed agreement. The requirement was that every contract could have only four corners. [Cases: Contracts 143(1), 147(2); Evidence 397, 448. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 302–303, 309–313; Evidence §§ 1159, 1165, 1189, 1214–1215, 1217, 1220–1221, 1228, 1286–1288, 1291.]

FOUR-CORNERS RULE

four-corners rule. 1. The principle that a document's meaning is to be gathered from the entire document and not from its isolated parts. [Cases: Contracts 143.5; Evidence 448. C.J.S. Contracts § 314.] 2. The principle that no extraneous evidence should be used to interpret an unambiguous document. Cf. PAROL-EVIDENCE RULE. [Cases: Evidence 448.C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1214–1215, 1217, 1220–1221, 1228, 1286–1288, 1291.]

four-folding.Hist. The quadrupling of a property's taxable value for purposes of penalizing a person who falsely underreported the property's true taxable value.

“In the State of Connecticut a number of men are chosen annually by each town, to receive from each inhabitant a list of the taxable property in his possession. This list is required by law; and is made up by the proprietor. The men, who receive it, are from their employment called Listers. If the proprietor gives in a false list, he is punished by having the falsified article increased on the list four-fold.... We therefore style this punishment four-folding.” 4 Timothy Dwight, Travels in New-England and New-York 284 (1822).

FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT

Fourteenth Amendment.The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1868, whose primary provisions effectively apply the Bill of Rights to the states by prohibiting states from denying due process and equal protection and from abridging the privileges and immunities of U.S. citizenship. • The amendment also gave Congress the power to enforce these provisions, leading to legislation such as the civil-rights acts. [Cases: Constitutional Law 206, 209–250.5, 251–320.5. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 455, 461–467, 470, 501, 503, 513, 518, 540, 557, 576–581, 585, 587, 596, 612, 614–618, 649, 700–773, 775–912, 916–917, 919–1348, 1350–1396, 1399–1401, 1405–1427; Right to Die § 2; Zoning and Land Planning § 23.]

FOURTH AMENDMENT

Fourth Amendment.The constitutional amendment, ratified with the Bill of Rights in 1791, prohibiting unreasonable searches and seizures and the issuance of warrants without probable cause. See PROBABLE CAUSE. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 23. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 3, 5, 9–12, 14–15, 24, 29–30, 32, 34, 47–48, 102.]

FOURTH ESTATE

fourth estate.The journalistic profession; the news media. • The term comes from the British Parliament's reporters' gallery, whose influence was said to equal Parliament's three traditional estates: the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal, and the Commons. (In France, the three estates were the clergy, the nobility, and the commons.)

FOURTH-SENTENCE REMAND

fourth-sentence remand. See REMAND.

FOUR UNITIES

four unities. The four qualities needed to create a joint tenancy at common law — interest, possession, time, and title. See UNITY(2). [Cases: Joint Tenancy 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Joint Tenancy §§ 2, 4, 7–9.]

To favor a similar case. • A judge who is disqualified for having a personal interest in a case may also be disqualified in a later case if the ruling in the former case could affect the ruling in the latter.

FOX'S LIBEL ACT

Fox's Libel Act. Hist. A 1792 statute that gave the jury in a libel prosecution the right of rendering a guilty or not-guilty verdict on the whole matter in issue. • The jury was no longer bound to find the defendant guilty if it found that the defendant had in fact published the allegedly libelous statement. The Act empowered juries to decide whether the defendant's statement conformed to the legal standard for libel.

foy (foy or fwah). [Law French] Faith; allegiance.

FPA

FPA.abbr. Free from particular average.

“F.P.A. means Free from Particular Average; that is to say, the insured can recover only where the loss is total or is due to a general average sacrifice. The claims under the Sue and Labour clause are not affected by this stipulation.” 2 E.W. Chance, Principles of Mercantile Law 128 (P.W. French ed., 10th ed. 1951).

francbordus. See FREE-BORD.

FRANCHISE

franchise (fran-chIz), n.1. The right to vote. — Also termed elective franchise. [Cases: Elections 1. C.J.S. Elections §§ 1(1, 10), 2.] 2. The right conferred by the government to engage in a specific business or to exercise corporate powers. — Also termed corporate franchise; general franchise. [Cases: Franchises 1.]

“When referring to government grants (other than patents, trademarks, and copyrights), the term ‘franchise’ is often used to connote more substantial rights, whereas the term ‘license’ connotes lesser rights. Thus, the rights necessary for public utility companies to carry on their operations are generally designated as franchise rights. On the other hand, the rights to construct or to repair, the rights to practice certain professions, and the rights to use or to operate automobiles are generally referred to as licenses.” 1 Eckstrom's Licensing in Foreign and Domestic Operations § 1.02 [3], at 1-10 to 1-11 (David M. Epstein ed., 1998).

“In a violent conceptual collision, some franchisors maintain that a franchise is merely an embellished license and therefore revocable at will. Franchisees contend that a franchise is a license coupled with an interest, not subject to unlimited control by franchisors. As a result of this disagreement, legislative draftsmen have had difficulty defining ‘franchise.’ ” 1 Harold Brown, Franchising Realities and Remedies § 1.03 [1], at 1-17 (1998).

franchise appurtenant to land. Rare. A franchise that is used in connection with real property and thus is sometimes characterized as real property.

general franchise. A corporation's charter.

special franchise. A right conferred by the government, esp. to a public utility, to use property for a public use but for private profit. [Cases: Franchises 1.]

3. The sole right granted by the owner of a trademark or tradename to engage in business or to sell a good or service in a certain area. 4. The business or territory controlled by the person or entity that has been granted such a right.

commercial franchise. A franchise using local capital and management by contracting with third parties to operate a facility identified as offering a particular brand of goods or services.

sports franchise. 1. A franchise granted by a professional sports league to field a team in that league. 2. The team itself.

trial franchise. A franchise having an initial term of limited duration, such as one year.

franchise, vb. To grant (to another) the sole right of engaging in a certain business or in a business using a particular trademark in a certain area.

FRANCHISE AGREEMENT

franchise agreement. The contract between a franchisor and franchisee establishing the terms and conditions of the franchise relationship. • State and federal laws regulate franchise agreements.

FRANCHISE APPURTENANT TO LAND franchise appurtenant to land. See FRANCHISE(2).

FRANCHISE CLAUSE

franchise clause. Insurance. A provision in a casualty insurance policy stating that the insurer will pay a claim only if it is more than a stated amount, and that the insured is responsible for all damages if the claim is under that amount. • Unlike a deductible, which the insured always has to pay, with a franchise clause, once the claim exceeds the stated amount, the insurer pays the entire claim.

FRANCHISE COURT

franchise court.Hist. A privately held court that (usu.) exists by virtue of a royal grant, with jurisdiction over a variety of matters, depending on the grant and whatever powers the court acquires over time. • In 1274, Edward I abolished many of these feudal courts by forcing the nobility to demonstrate by what authority (quo warranto) they held court. If a lord could not produce a charter reflecting the franchise, the court was abolished. — Also termed courts of the franchise.

“Dispensing justice was profitable. Much revenue could come from the fees and dues, fines and amercements. This explains the growth of the second class of feudal courts, the Franchise Courts. They too were private courts held by feudal lords. Sometimes their claim to jurisdiction was based on old pre-Conquest grants But many of them were, in reality, only wrongful usurpations of private jurisdiction by powerful lords. These were put down after the famous Quo Warranto enquiry in the reign of Edward I.” W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 56–57 (2d ed. 1949).

franchisee. One who is granted a franchise.

FRANCHISE FEE

FRANCUS HOMO

francus homo (frangk-<<schwa>>s hoh-moh). Hist. A free man.

FRANCUS TENENS

francus tenens. See FRANK-TENANT.

FRANK

frank, adj. [Law French] Hist. Free. — Also spelled fraunc; fraunche; fraunke.

frank, n. 1. (cap.) A member of the Germanic people who conquered Gaul in the 6th century. • France received its name from the Franks. 2. A signature, stamp, or mark affixed to mail as a substitute for postage. [Cases: Postal Service 15. C.J.S. Postal Service and Offenses Against Postal Laws §§ 18–19.] 3. The privilege of sending certain mail free of charge, accorded to certain government officials, such as members of Congress and federal courts. — Also termed (in sense 3) franking privilege. [Cases: United States 12. C.J.S. United States §§ 27–28.] — frank, vb.

frankalmoin (frangk-al-moyn). [Law French “free alms”] Hist. A spiritual tenure by which a religious institution held land, usu. with a general duty to pray for the donor. • This tenure differed from the tenure by divine service, which required specific church services, such as a certain number of masses or alms distributions. — Also spelled frankalmoign; frankalmoigne. — Also termed almoign; almoin; free alms; libera eleemosyna. See spiritual tenure under TENURE.

“Frankalmoin, or free alms, was a survival of Anglo-Saxon law, and implied simply an indefinite promise to pray for the soul of the donor; but since it was deemed a tenure by which the land was held, the general doctrine of ‘services’ was applied. On the other hand, in the case of Divine Service, which was much less frequently met with, the tenant promised a definite number of prayers, a duty which might be enforced in the King's courts.” A.K.R. Kiralfy, Potter's Outlines of English Legal History 210 (5th ed. 1958).

FRANK BANK

frank bank. See FREE BENCH.

FRANK-CHASE

frank-chase. Hist. Free chase; a person's liberty or right to hunt or log within a certain area. • Others holding land within the frank-chase area were forbidden from hunting or logging in it. See CHASE.

FRANK-FEE

frank-fee. Hist. Freehold land — land that one held to oneself and one's heirs — exempted from all services except homage; land held other than by ancient demesne or copyhold.

FRANK FERM

frank ferm.Hist. An estate in land held in socage, the nature of the fee having been changed from knight's service by enfeoffment for certain yearly services. — Also spelled frank-ferme.

FRANKING PRIVILEGE

franking privilege.See FRANK(3).

FRANK-LAW

frank-law.Hist. The rights and privileges of a citizen or freeman; specif., the condition of being legally capable of giving an oath (esp. as a juror or witness). See LEGALIS HOMO.

“Frank law ... may be understood from Bracton's description of the consequences of losing it, among which the principal one was, that the parties incurred perpetual infamy, so that they were never afterwards to be admitted to oath, because they were not deemed to be othesworth, (that is, not worthy of making oath,) nor allowed to give testimony.” 1 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 657–58 (2d ed. 1867).

FRANKLIN

franklin (frangk-lin).Hist. A freeman; a freeholder; a gentleman. — Also spelled francling; frankleyn; frankleyne.

FRANKMARRIAGE

frankmarriage.Hist. An entailed estate in which the donor retains control of the land by refusing to accept feudal services from the donee (usu. the donor's daughter) for three generations. • If the donee's issue fail in that time, the land returns to the donor. A donor who accepted homage (and the corresponding services arising from it) from the donee risked losing control of the land to a collateral heir. After three generations — a time considered sufficient to demonstrate that the line was well established — the donee's heir could insist on paying homage; doing so transformed the estate into a fee simple. — Also termed liberum maritagium. See MARITAGIUM.

“Only when homage has been done are we to apply the rule which excludes the lord from the inheritance. This is at the bottom of one of the peculiarities of the ‘estate in frankmarriage.’ When a father makes a provision for a daughter, he intends that if the daughter has no issue or if her issue fails — at all events if this failure occurs in the course of a few generations — the land shall come back to him or to his heir. Therefore no homage is done for the estate in frankmarriage until the daughter's third heir has entered, for were homage once done, there would be a danger that the land would never come back to the father or to his heir.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 291 (2d ed. 1899).

frankpledge.Hist. A promise given to the sovereign by a group of ten freeholders (a tithing) ensuring the group's good conduct. • The frankpledge was of Saxon origin, but continued after the Norman Conquest. The members of the group were not liable for an injury caused by an offending member, but they did act as bail to ensure that the culprit would appear in court. They were bound to produce a wrongdoer for trial. — Also termed borrow; laughe. See VIEW OF FRANKPLEDGE. Cf. DECENARY.

“Since there was no elaborate group of royal officials, the policing of the country had to be arranged for in a special way. The commonest way was to hold each household responsible for the offenses of any member of it. A further step was taken when, in the time of Cnut, a group of ten men was formed who were responsible for each other, in the sense that every one was security, borh, for the good behavior of the others. This group was called fri-borh, frankpledge, and remained for a long time one of the chief police methods of England.” Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 33–34 (1936).

FRANKS<TT> HEARING

Franks hearing. A hearing to determine whether a police officer's affidavit used to obtain a search warrant that yields incriminating evidence was based on false statements by the police officer. Franks v. Delaware, 438 U.S. 154, 98 S.Ct. 2674 (1978).

FRANK-TENANT

frank-tenant.Hist. A freeholder. — Also termed francus tenens.

FRANK-TENEMENT

frank-tenement.Hist. A free tenement; a freehold. • This term described both the tenure and the estate. — Also spelled franktenement. See FREEHOLD.

FRAP (frap).abbr.FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE.

frater (fray-t<<schwa>>r), n. [Latin] Roman law. A brother.

frater consanguineus (fray-t<<schwa>>r kon-sang-gwin-ee-<<schwa>>s). A brother or half-brother having the same father.

frater germanus (fray-t<<schwa>>r j<<schwa>>r-may-n<<schwa>>s). A brother having both parents in common.

frater nutricius (fray-t<<schwa>>r n[y]oo-trish-ee-<<schwa>>s). A foster brother who was suckled by the same wet nurse.

frater uterinus (fray-t<<schwa>>r yoo-t<<schwa>>-rI-n<<schwa>>s). A brother or half-brother having the same mother.

FRATERNAL

fraternal,adj.1. Of or relating to the relationship of brothers. 2. Of or relating to a fraternity or a fraternal benefit association.

FRATERNAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION fraternal benefit association. A voluntary organization or society created for its members' mutual aid and benefit rather than for profit, and whose members have a common and worthy cause, objective, or interest. • These associations usu. have a lodge system, a governing body, rituals, and a benefits system for their members. — Also termed fraternal benefit society; fraternity; fraternal lodge; fraternal order. Cf. FRIENDLY SOCIETY. [Cases: Beneficial Associations 1. C.J.S. Beneficial Associations §§ 2–3.]

FRATERNAL INSURANCE

FRATER UTERINUS

frater uterinus. See FRATER.

FRATRES CONJURATI

fratres conjurati (fray-treez kon-j<<schwa>>-ray-ti). [Latin “sworn brothers”] Hist. Sworn brothers or companions for the defense of their sovereign or for other purposes.

fratriage (fra-tree-ij orfray-). Hist. 1. A younger brother's portion of his father's estate, received as an inheritance. • Under feudal law, even though the land was from the father's estate, the younger brother was bound to pay homage to the older brother. 2. A portion of an inheritance given to coheirs. — Also termed fratriagium.

FRATRICIDE

fratricide (fra-tr<<schwa>>-sId orfray-). 1. The killing of one's brother or sister. 2. One who has killed one's brother or sister. Cf. SORORICIDE. — fratricidal,adj.

FRAUD

fraud,n.1. A knowing misrepresentation of the truth or concealment of a material fact to induce another to act to his or her detriment. • Fraud is usu. a tort, but in some cases (esp. when the conduct is willful) it may be a crime. — Also termed intentional fraud. [Cases: Fraud 1, 3, 16.] 2. A misrepresentation made recklessly without belief in its truth to induce another person to act. [Cases: Fraud 31.] 3. A tort arising from a knowing misrepresentation, concealment of material fact, or reckless misrepresentation made to induce another to act to his or her detriment. [Cases: Fraud 13(3).] 4. Unconscionable dealing; esp., in contract law, the unfair use of the power arising out of the parties' relative positions and resulting in an unconscionable bargain. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.] — fraudulent,adj.

“[T]he use of the term fraud has been wider and less precise in the chancery than in the common-law courts. This followed necessarily from the remedies which they respectively administered. Common law gave damages for a wrong, and was compelled to define with care the wrong which furnished a cause of action. Equity refused specific performance of a contract, or set aside a transaction, or gave compensation where one party had acted unfairly by the other. Thus ‘fraud’ at common law is a false statement ... : fraud in equity has often been used as meaning unconscientious dealing — ‘although, I think, unfortunately,’ a great equity lawyer has said.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 263 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

actual fraud.A concealment or false representation through a statement or conduct that injures another who relies on it in acting. — Also termed fraud in fact; positive fraud; moral fraud. [Cases: Fraud 3.]

bank fraud.The criminal offense of knowingly executing, or attempting to execute, a scheme or artifice to defraud a financial institution, or to obtain property owned by or under the control of a financial institution, by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises. 18 USCA § 1344. [Cases: Banks and Banking 509.10, 509.25. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 687, 746, 749–754, 756–757, 769–783.]

bankruptcy fraud.A fraudulent act connected to a bankruptcy case; esp., any of several proscribed acts performed knowingly and fraudulently in a bankruptcy case, such as concealing assets or destroying, withholding, or falsifying documents in an effort to defeat bankruptcy-code provisions. See 18 USCA § 152. — Also termed criminal bankruptcy; bankruptcy crime.

civil fraud. 1.FRAUD(3).2.Tax. An intentional — but not willful — evasion of taxes. • The distinction between an intentional (i.e., civil) and willful (i.e., criminal) fraud is not always clear, but civil fraud carries only a monetary, noncriminal penalty. Cf. criminal fraud; TAX EVASION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 5218; Taxation 1103. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 825; Taxation § 1782.]

common-law fraud.See promissory fraud.

constructive fraud. 1. Unintentional deception or misrepresentation that causes injury to another. — Also termed legal fraud; fraud in contemplation of law; equitable fraud; fraud in equity. 2. See fraud in law. [Cases: Fraud 5.]

criminal fraud. Fraud that has been made illegal by statute and that subjects the offender to criminal penalties such as fines and imprisonment. • An example is the willful evasion of taxes accomplished by filing a fraudulent tax return. Cf. civil fraud; larceny by trick under LARCENY. [Cases: Internal Revenue 5263.20; Taxation 1103. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 851–852; Taxation § 1782.]

equitable fraud. See constructive fraud (1).

extrinsic fraud. 1. Deception that is collateral to the issues being considered in the case; intentional misrepresentation or deceptive behavior outside the transaction itself (whether a contract or a lawsuit), depriving one party of informed consent or full participation. • For example, a person might engage in extrinsic fraud by convincing a litigant not to hire counsel or answer by dishonestly saying the matter will not be pursued. — Also termed collateral fraud. 2. Deception that prevents a person from knowing about or asserting certain rights. [Cases: Judgment 375, 443(1). C.J.S. Judgments § 309.]

fraud in contemplation of law. See constructive fraud (1).

fraud in equity. See constructive fraud (1).

fraud in fact. See actual fraud.

fraud in law. Fraud that is presumed under the circumstances, as when a debtor transfers assets and thereby impairs creditors' efforts to collect sums due. — Also termed constructive fraud.

fraud in the execution. See fraud in the factum.

fraud in the factum. Fraud occurring when a legal instrument as actually executed differs from the one intended for execution by the person who executes it, or when the instrument may have had no legal existence. • Compared to fraud in the inducement, fraud in the factum occurs only rarely, as when a blind person signs a mortgage when misleadingly told that it is just a letter. — Also termed fraud in the execution; fraud in the making. Cf. fraud in the inducement. [Cases: Contracts 94(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 136, 139–140, 156–160, 170–171, 173–174.]

fraud in the inducement. Fraud occurring when a misrepresentation leads another to enter into a transaction with a false impression of the risks, duties, or obligations involved; an intentional misrepresentation of a material risk or duty reasonably relied on, thereby injuring the other party without vitiating the contract itself, esp. about a fact relating to value. — Also termed fraud in the procurement. Cf. fraud in the factum. [Cases: Contracts 94(1); Fraud 3, 24. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 136, 139–140, 156–160, 170–171, 173–174.]

fraud in the making. See fraud in the factum.

fraud in the procurement. See fraud in the inducement.

fraud on the community. Family law. In a community-property state, the deliberate hiding or fraudulent transfer of community assets before a divorce or death for the purpose of preventing the other spouse from claiming a half-interest ownership in the property.

fraud on the court. In a judicial proceeding, a lawyer's or party's misconduct so serious that it undermines or is intended to undermine the integrity of the proceeding. • Examples are bribery of a juror and introduction of fabricated evidence. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2654; Judgment 372, 440. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 309, 319, 331, 465.]

fraud on the market. 1. Fraud occurring when an issuer of securities gives out misinformation that affects the market price of stock, the result being that people who buy or sell are effectively misled even though they did not rely on the statement itself or anything derived from it other than the market price. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.25. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 214, 226–227.] 2. The securities-law claim based on such fraud. See FRAUD-ON-THE-MARKET PRINCIPLE.

fraud on the Patent Office. Patents. A defense in a patent-infringement action, attacking the validity of the patent on the grounds that the patentee gave the examiner false or misleading information or withheld relevant information that the examiner would have considered important in considering patentability. • The scope of prohibited acts is wider than that covered by common-law fraud, and today the defense is generally called “inequitable conduct before the PTO.” If the defense is established, the entire patent is rendered unenforceable. See defense of inequitable conduct under DEFENSE(1). [Cases: Patents 97. C.J.S. Patents §§ 135–138, 145, 178.]

insurance fraud. Fraud committed against an insurer, as when an insured lies on a policy application or fabricates a claim.

intrinsic fraud. Deception that pertains to an issue involved in an original action. • Examples include the use of fabricated evidence, a false return of service, perjured testimony, and false receipts or other commercial documents. [Cases: Judgment 373, 441. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 319, 331, 465, 471.]

legal fraud. See constructive fraud (1).

long-firm fraud. The act of obtaining goods or money on credit by falsely posing as an established business and having no intent to pay for the goods or repay the loan.

mail fraud. An act of fraud using the U.S. Postal Service, as in making false representations through the mail to obtain an economic advantage. 18 USCA §§ 1341–1347. [Cases: Postal Service 35. C.J.S. Postal Service and Offenses Against Postal Laws § 23.]

moral fraud. See actual fraud.

positive fraud. See actual fraud.

promissory fraud. A promise to perform made when the promisor had no intention of performing the promise. — Also termed common-law fraud. [Cases: Fraud 12.]

tax fraud. See TAX EVASION.

wire fraud. An act of fraud using electronic communications, as by making false representations on the telephone to obtain money. • The federal Wire Fraud Act provides that any artifice to defraud by means of wire or other electronic communications (such as radio or television) in foreign or interstate commerce is a crime. 18 USCA § 1343. [Cases: Telecommunications 362.]

FRAUD, BADGE OF

fraud, badge of. See BADGE OF FRAUD.

FRAUDARE

fraudare (fraw-dair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To defraud.

FRAUDE

fraude (frawd). [French] Civil law. Fraud committed in performing a contract. Cf. DOL.

FRAUDFEASOR

fraudfeasor (frawd-fee-z<<schwa>>r). A person who has committed fraud. — Also termed defrauder.

FRAUD IN THE EXECUTION fraud in the execution. See fraud in the factum under FRAUD.

FRAUD ON CREDITORS

fraud on creditors. See FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE(1).

FRAUD ON THE COMMUNITY

fraud on the community. See FRAUD.

FRAUD-ON-THE-MARKET PRINCIPLE fraud-on-the-market principle. Securities. The doctrine that, in a claim under the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws, a plaintiff may presumptively establish reliance on a misstatement about a security's value — without proving actual knowledge of the fraudulent statement — if the stock is purchased in an open and developed securities market. • This doctrine recognizes that the market price of an issuer's stock reflects all available public information. The presumption is rebuttable. — Also termed fraud-on-the-market theory. See fraud on the market under FRAUD. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.25. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 214, 226–227.]

FRAUDS, STATUTE OF

FRAUDULENT-CONCEALMENT RULE

fraudulent-concealment rule. See CONCEALMENT RULE.

FRAUDULENT CONVERSION

fraudulent conversion. See CONVERSION(2).

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE

fraudulent conveyance. 1. A transfer of property for little or no consideration, made for the purpose of hindering or delaying a creditor by putting the property beyond the creditor's reach; a transaction by which the owner of real or personal property seeks to place the property beyond the reach of creditors. — Also termed fraud on creditors. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances 1.]

“With respect to the general power which is exercisable by deed, it seems that the principle that the donee's creditors can reach the property subject to the exercised general power will have application only to the so-called fraudulent conveyance. That is to say, if the owned assets of the donee after the donative inter vivos exercise are sufficient to satisfy the creditors, then the exercise of the power will not subject the appointive property to the claims of the creditors; if, on the other hand, the owned assets of the donee are inadequate to satisfy creditors' claims after the exercise of the power, then the transfer resulting from the exercise is likely to fall into the category of the fraudulent conveyance and the creditors will be able to reach the appointive property in the hands of the appointee.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 173 (2d ed. 1984).

2.Bankruptcy. A prebankruptcy transfer or obligation made or incurred by a debtor for little or no consideration or with the actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor. • A bankruptcy trustee may recover such a conveyance from the transferee if the requirements of 11 USCA § 548 are met. — Also termed fraudulent transfer. Cf. PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2641–2651. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 152–157, 159.]

free bench.Hist. A widow's (and occasionally a widower's) interest in the deceased spouse's estate. • Free bench gave the surviving spouse a half interest in the estate until death or remarriage. — Also termed francus bancus; frank bank; liber bancus.

“The bench in question was, we may guess ... a bench at the fireside. The surviving spouse has in time past been allowed to remain in the house along with the children. In the days when families kept together, the right of the widower or widow to remain at the fireside may have borne a somewhat indefinite character.... By way of ‘free bench’ the surviving spouse now has the enjoyment of one-half of the land until death or second marriage, whether there has ever been a child of the marriage or no.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 419 (2d ed. 1899).

FREE-BORD

free-bord.Hist. 1. A small strip of land (usu. 2 1/2 feet wide and lying just outside a fence) that the owner of the fenced property was allowed to claim and use. 2. The right of claiming that quantity of land. — Also spelled freebord; free bord; free-board. — Also termed francbordus.

FREE CARRIER

free carrier. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must clear the goods for export and deliver them to the buyer's chosen carrier at a named place. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods are loaded on the collecting vehicle or otherwise placed at the carrier's disposal. The buyer is responsible for all costs of carriage. There are no restrictions on the buyer's choice of carrier. — Abbr. FCA.

FREE CHAPEL

free chapel. Hist. Eccles. law. A church founded by the Crown (or by a person under royal grant) and not subject to the bishop's jurisdiction.

“[T]hose onely are Free-chappels, which are of the King's Foundation, and by him exempted from the Jurisdiction of the Ordinary; but the King may licence a Subject to found such a Chappel, and by his Charter exempt it from the Ordinaries Visitation also.... [I]t is called free, in respect of its exemption from the Jurisdiction of the Diocesan....” Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

FREEDOM

freedom. 1. The state of being free or liberated. 2. A political right.

FREEDOM OF ACCESS TO CLINIC ENTRANCES ACT

Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act. A 1994 federal statute that provides for criminal sanctions, private civil causes of action, and civil action by the U.S. Attorney General against a person who uses force, threat of force, or physical obstruction to injure, intimidate, or interfere with a provider or patient of reproductive services or who damages a reproductive-services facility. — Abbr. FACE.

FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY

freedom of assembly. See RIGHT OF ASSEMBLY.

FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION

freedom of association. The right to join with others in a common undertaking that would be lawful if pursued individually. • This right is protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The government may not prohibit outsiders from joining an association, but the insiders do not necessarily have a right to exclude others. Cf. RIGHT OF ASSEMBLY. [Cases: Constitutional Law 91. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 461–462, 466, 612–629.]

freedom of expressive association. The constitutional right of an individual to associate with others, without undue government interference, for the purpose of engaging in activities protected by the First Amendment, such as speech, assembly, and the exercise of religion.

freedom of intimate association. The constitutional right of privacy to form and preserve certain intimate human relationships without intrusion by the state because the relationships safeguard individual freedom. • The group relationships protected by the right to freedom of intimate association are familial in nature and are characterized by deep attachments, a high degree of commitment, and the sharing of distinctly personal aspects of life. The exclusion of others is an essential characteristic of these relationships.

FREEDOM OF CHOICE

freedom of choice. 1. The liberty embodied in the exercise of one's rights. 2. The parents' opportunity to select a school for their child in a unitary, integrated school system that is devoid of de jure segregation. 3. The liberty to exercise one's right of privacy, esp. the right to have an abortion. — Also termed right to choose; choice. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control 0.5.]

FREEDOM OF CONTRACT

freedom of contract. The doctrine that people have the right to bind themselves legally; a judicial concept that contracts are based on mutual agreement and free choice, and thus should not be hampered by external control such as governmental interference. • This is the principle that people are able to fashion their relations by private agreements, esp. as opposed to the assigned roles of the feudal system. As Maine famously said, “[T]he movement of progressive societies has been a movement from Status to Contract.” Henry Sumner Maine, Ancient Law 165 (1864). — Also termed liberty of contract; autonomy of the parties. [Cases: Constitutional Law 89. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 491.]

“Like most shibboleths, that of ‘freedom of contract’ rarely, if ever, received the close examination which its importance deserved, and even today it is by no means easy to say what exactly the nineteenth-century judges meant when they used this phrase. At least it may be said that the idea of freedom of contract embraced two closely connected, but none the less distinct, concepts. In the first place it indicated that contracts were based on mutual agreement, while in the second place it emphasized that the creation of a contract was the result of a free choice unhampered by external control such as government or legislative interference.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 5 (3d ed. 1981).

FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

freedom of expression. The freedom of speech, press, assembly, or religion as guaranteed by the First Amendment; the prohibition of governmental interference with those freedoms. Cf. FREEDOM OF SPEECH. [Cases: Constitutional Law 84, 90, 91. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 461–462, 466, 513–517, 539, 542, 612–629.]

FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT

Freedom of Information Act. The federal statute that establishes guidelines for public disclosure of documents and materials created and held by federal agencies. 5 USCA § 552. • The basic purpose of the statute, or of a state statute modeled after it, is to give the public access to official information so that the public will be better informed and the government will be more accountable for its actions. — Abbr. FOIA. [Cases: Records 50–68. C.J.S. Records §§ 93–131.]

FREEDOM OF INTIMATE ASSOCIATION freedom of intimate association. See FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION.

FREEDOM OF PETITION

freedom of petition. See RIGHT TO PETITION.

FREEDOM OF RELIGION

freedom of religion. The right to adhere to any form of religion or none, to practice or abstain from practicing religious beliefs, and to be free from governmental interference with or promotion of religion, as guaranteed by the First Amendment and Article VI, § 3 of the U.S. Constitution. [Cases: Constitutional Law 84. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 513–517.]

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

freedom of speech. The right to express one's thoughts and opinions without governmental restriction, as guaranteed by the First Amendment. — Also termed liberty of speech. Cf. FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 539, 542.]

FREEDOM OF SPEECH CLAUSE

Freedom of Speech Clause. See SPEECH CLAUSE.

FREEDOM OF THE CITY

freedom of the city. Hist. An immunity or privilege from some burden, esp. from county jurisdiction and its privilege of municipal taxation and self-government, held under a royal charter.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

freedom of the press. The right to print and publish materials without governmental intervention, as guaranteed by the First Amendment. — Also termed liberty of the press. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90.1(8). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 552, 554, 562–565, 597–598, 603–604.]

“ ‘Freedom of the press' has less significance than meets the eye. It is true, of course, that the First Amendment specifically guarantees freedom of the press as well as free speech, and the media often ascribe the freedom they enjoy to the Press Clause. Even the Supreme Court occasionally emits rhetoric that implies as much. But as a matter of positive law, the Press Clause actually plays a rather minor role in protecting the freedom of the press. Most of the freedoms the press receives from the First Amendment are no different from the freedoms everyone enjoys under the Speech Clause. The press is protected from most government censorship, libel judgments, and prior restraints not because it is the press but because the Speech Clause protects all of us from those threats.” David A. Anderson, Freedom of the Press, 80 Tex. L. Rev. 429, 430 (2002).

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS CLAUSE

Freedom of the Press Clause. See PRESS CLAUSE.

FREEDOM OF THE SEAS

freedom of the seas. Int'l law. The principle that the seas beyond territorial waters are not subject to any country's control. • Ships on the high seas are subject only to the jurisdiction of the country whose flag they fly, except in cases of piracy, hijacking, hot pursuit from territorial waters, slave trading, and certain rights of approach by warships. — Also termed mare liberum. [Cases: International Law 7. C.J.S. International Law §§ 23–24.]

FREEDOM-TO-CREATE STATUTE

freedom-to-create statute. Patents. A law restricting an employer's ability to require employees to assign to the employer all rights to their inventions, even those independently developed. [Cases: Master and Servant 62. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 115, 117–122.]

FREEDOM-TO-OPERATE SEARCH freedom-to-operate search. See INFRINGEMENT SEARCH.

FREE ELECTION

free election. See ELECTION(3).

FREE ENTERPRISE

free enterprise. A private and consensual system of production and distribution, usu. conducted for a profit in a competitive environment that is relatively free of governmental interference. See CAPITALISM.

FREE ENTRY, EGRESS, AND REGRESS

free entry, egress, and regress (ee-gres / ree-gres). Hist. A person's right to go on land as often as reasonably necessary. • A tenant could go on land to gather crops still growing after the tenancy expired.

FREE EXERCISE CLAUSE

Free Exercise Clause.The constitutional provision (U.S. Const. amend. I) prohibiting the government from interfering in people's religious practices or forms of worship. — Also termed Exercise Clause. Cf. ESTABLISHMENT CLAUSE . [Cases: Constitutional Law 84. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 513–517.]

FREE FISHERY

free fishery.See FISHERY(1).

FREE-GAS CLAUSE

free-gas clause.Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease entitling the lessor or the surface owner to use gas produced from the leased property without charge. • Used commonly in colder states, free-gas clauses usu. limit how the gas may be used (e.g., domestic heating and light), how much gas may be used (e.g., not more than 300 MCF per year), or both.

FREEHOLD

freehold,n.1. An estate in land held in fee simple, in fee tail, or for term of life; any real-property interest that is or may become possessory. • At common law, these estates were all created by enfeoffment with livery of seisin. [Cases: Estates in Property 4–7, 12. C.J.S. Estates §§ 10–14, 20–27.] 2. The tenure by which such an estate is held. — Also termed freehold estate; estate in freehold; freehold interest; franktenement; liberum tenementum. Cf. LEASEHOLD.

determinable freehold.See determinable estate under ESTATE(1). movable freehold.The land a seashore owner acquires or loses as water recedes or approaches. [Cases: Navigable Waters 44. C.J.S. Navigable Waters § 94.]

perpetual freehold.An estate given to a grantee for life, and then successively to the grantee's heirs for life. • The effect of this type of freehold was to keep land within a family in perpetuity, much like a fee tail.

“It took the form of a grant ‘to A for life, remainder to A's son for life, remainder to that son's son for life’, and so on ad infinitum. Such a limitation, if valid, would have been an effective substitute for the fee tail. The courts, however, set their face against this ‘perpetual freehold’ (as it was sometimes termed), and in Lovelace v. Lovelace (1585) it was held that remainders which did not vest before the determination of the first life estate would fail ex post facto. Subsequently a number of other, not entirely convincing, reasons were found for invalidating perpetual freeholds, ultimately culminating in what is sometimes termed the ‘old’ rule against perpetuities, but, more commonly, the rule in Whitby v. Mitchell, taking its name from the case which marked its emphatic reiteration.” Peter Butt, Land Law 136 (2d ed. 1988).

FREEHOLDER

freeholder.Hist. One who possesses a freehold.

FREEHOLDER'S COURT BARON

freeholder's court baron.See COURT BARON.

FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETY

freehold land society. (usu. pl.) Hist. A society in England created to enable mechanics, artisans, and other workers to buy at the lowest possible price freehold land with a sufficient yearly value to entitle the owner to the right to vote in the county in which the land was located.

FREE ICE

free ice. Hist. Ice in navigable streams that does not belong to the adjacent riparian owner or to another with the right to appropriate it, but that belongs to the person who first appropriates it.

FREE LAW

free law. Hist. The civil rights enjoyed by a freeman (as opposed to a serf). • Free law could be forfeited if the freeman was convicted of treason or an infamous crime.

FREEMAN

freeman. 1. A person who possesses and enjoys all the civil and political rights belonging to the people under a free government. 2. A person who is not a slave. 3. Hist. A member of a municipal corporation (a city or borough) who possesses full civic rights, esp. the right to vote. 4. Hist. A freeholder. Cf. VILLEIN. 5. Hist. An allodial landowner. Cf. VASSAL. — Also spelled free man.

FREEMAN–WALTER–ABELE TEST

Freeman–Walter–Abele test. Patents. An outmoded two-step judicial test for determining whether a claimed invention is an unpatentable mathematical algorithm. • The test looks first to whether an algorithm is explicit or inherent in the claim, and second to whether a patent would wholly preempt others from using the algorithm. In re Freeman, 573 F.2d 1237 (CCPA 1978); In re Walter, 618 F.2d 758 (CCPA 1980); In re Abele, 684 F.2d 902 (CCPA 1982). The Federal Circuit has said that the test has “little, if any, applicability” after State St. Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Fin. Group, 149 F.3d 1368 (Fed. Cir. 1998).

FREE MARKET

free market. See open market under MARKET.

FREE OF ALL AVERAGE

free of all average. Maritime law. Insurance that covers a total loss only. — Abbr. FAA.

FREE ON BOARD

free on board.A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must clear the goods for export, and the buyer must arrange for transportation. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods pass the transporter's rail. The buyer is responsible for all costs of carriage. UCC § 2-319. — Abbr. FOB; F.O.B. Cf. FREE ALONGSIDE SHIP; DELIVERED EX SHIP. [Cases: Sales 77(2). C.J.S. Sales §§ 96–98.]

“In an F.O.B. (‘free on board’) contract, the goods must be delivered on board by the seller, free of expense to the purchaser, and they are not at the latter's risk until actually delivered on board, when the property in them passes to him. The seller must also give the buyer sufficient notice to enable him to insure against loss during the sea transit. The buyer, on the other hand, must name a ship or authorize the seller to select one. The seller cannot sue for the price until the goods are loaded, and if his inability to load was caused by the buyer's failure to name an effective ship, his only remedy lies in damages. Similarly, F.O.R. means ‘free on rail.’ ” 2 E.W. Chance, Principles of Mercantile Law 86–87 (P.W. French ed., 10th ed. 1951).

FOB destination.A mercantile term denoting that the seller is required to pay the freight charges as far as the buyer's named destination. [Cases: Sales 79. C.J.S. Sales § 168.]

FOB shipping.A mercantile term denoting that the seller is required to bear the risk of placing the goods on a carrier. [Cases: Sales 201(4). C.J.S. Sales §§ 224–227.]

FREE PORT

free port.See PORT.

FREE RIDE

free ride.A benefit obtained without paying a fair price. • For example, a competitor who used aerial photographs of a plant-construction site to discover secret manufacturing techniques was judicially criticized for getting a free ride, in contrast to others who might spend time and effort legally reverse-engineering the same techniques.

FREE RIDER

free rider.One who obtains an economic benefit at another's expense without contributing to it. — Also spelled freerider.

FREE SEAS

free seas.See SEA.

FREE SOCAGE

free socage.See SOCAGE.

FREESTONE RIDER

Freestone rider.See PUGH CLAUSE.

FREE TRADE

free trade,n. The open and unrestricted import and export of goods without barriers, such as quotas or tariffs, other than those charged only as a revenue source, as opposed to those designed to protect domestic businesses. Cf. protective tariff under TARIFF(2).

FREE-TRADE ZONE

free-trade zone.A duty-free area within a country to promote commerce, esp. transshipment and processing, without entering into the country's market. — Also termed foreign trade zone; free port.

FREEWARE

freeware. Software, esp. open-source code, that is made generally available with express or implicit permission for anyone to use, copy, modify, and distribute for any purpose, including financial gain. • The term “free” refers to usage rights rather than price — a distinction important in two respects. First, a user may purchase the initial copy of freeware. Second, software available at no cost may not include permission for the software's user to copy, modify, or give away the software. — Also termed free software. Cf. PROPRIETARY SOFTWARE; SEMI-FREE SOFTWARE; SHAREWARE.

FREE WARREN

free warren.See WARREN.

FREEZE

freeze,n.1. A period when the government restricts or immobilizes certain commercial activity.

credit freeze.A period when the government restricts bank-lending.

wage-and-price freeze.A period when the government forbids the increase of wages and prices.

2. A recapitalization of a closed corporation so that the value of its existing capital is concentrated primarily in preferred stock rather than in common stock. • By freezing capital, the owner can transfer the common stock to heirs without taxation while continuing to enjoy preferred-stock income during the owner's lifetime, while the common stock grows.

freeze,vb. 1. To cause to become fixed and unable to increase <to freeze interest rates> <to freeze prices>.2. To make immobile by government mandate or banking action <to freeze assets>.3. To cease physical movement, esp. when ordered by a law enforcement officer <the police officer shouted at the suspect to freeze>.

freezee,n. A person or entity subjected to a freeze-out.

FREEZE-OUT

freeze-out,n. Corporations. The process, usu. in a closely held corporation, by which the majority shareholders or the board of directors oppresses minority shareholders in an effort to compel them to liquidate their investment on terms favorable to the controlling shareholders. Cf. SQUEEZE-OUT T. [Cases: Corporations 182.3, 584; Securities Regulation 60.21. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 344, 799–801; Securities Regulation § 190.]

“A ‘freeze-out’ is usually accomplished by the merger of a corporation into its parent corporation, where the parent corporation owns a large percentage of the shares of the subsidiary, and the minority shareholders are entitled to minimal distributions of cash or securities. A ‘freeze-out’ may also be used to connote the situation where so large a number of equity shares are issued to the acquiring corporation that the public shareholders own less than 10 percent of the outstanding equity securities and, therefore, have no control over the corporation or any of its decisions. In such event, a short-form merger could later be used to eliminate the minority shareholders.” 69A Am. Jur. 2d Securities Regulation — State § 245, at 971 n.60 (1993).

freeze out, vb. 1. To subject one to a freeze-out. 2. To exclude a business competitor <freezing out the competition>.

FREEZE-OUT MERGER

FRUCTUARIUS

fructuarius (fr<<schwa>>k-choo-air-ee-<<schwa>>s). [Latin “(one) entitled to fruits”] 1. Roman & civil law. One having the usufruct of a thing (as of land and animals); a usufructuary. See USUFRUCTUARY. 2. Hist. A lessee. Pl. fructuarii.

FRUCTUS

fructus (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin “fruits”] 1. Roman & civil law. The natural produce of land and animals; the profit or increase from land and animals. • The owner of the land or animals acquired ownership by separatio, the separation of the fruit from the parent body. A bona fide possessor or an emphyteuta also acquired ownership by separatio, which allowed a nonowner to claim title from a thief. But in Justinian's law, a bona fide possessor had to account to a successful claimant for ownership for the principal thing and any unconsumed fruits. A tenant or usufructuary acquired title only by perceptio, and cannot claim title from a thief. See PERCEPTION(2). Cf. FRUCTUS CIVILES. 2. USUFRUCT. Pl. fructus.

FRUCTUS CIVILES

fructus civiles (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s s<<schwa>>-vI-leez). [Latin “civil fruits”] Roman & civil law. Income (such as rent or interest) that one receives from another for the use or enjoyment of a thing, esp. real property or loaned money. • In Roman law, fructus civiles included both minerals and the earnings of slaves.

FRUCTUS FUNDI

fructus fundi (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s f<<schwa>>n-dI). [Latin "land fruits"] The fruits or produce of land.

FRUCTUS INDUSTRIALES

fructus industriales (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s in-d<<schwa>>s-tree-ay-leez). [Latin "industrial fruits"] See EMBLEMENTS.

FRUCTUS LEGIS

fructus legis (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s lee-jis). [Latin "fruits of the law"] The proceeds of judgment or execution. [Cases: Execution 322.C.J.S. Executions § 258.]

FRUCTUS NATURALES

fructus naturales (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s nach-<<schwa>>-ray-leez). [Latin "natural fruits"] The natural produce of land or plants and the offspring of animals. • Fructus naturales are considered part of the real property.

FRUCTUS PECUDUM

fructus pecudum (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s pek-y<<schwa>>-d<<schwa>>m). [Latin "fruits of the herd"] The produce or increase of flocks or herds.

FRUCTUS PENDENTES

fructus pendentes (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s pen-den-teez). [Latin "hanging fruits"] Fruits not yet severed or gathered; fruits united with that which produces them.

FRUCTUS PERCEPTI

fructus percepti (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s p<<schwa>>r-sep-tI). [Latin "gathered fruits"] Roman & civil law. Fruits that have been gathered.

FRUCTUS REI ALIENAE

fructus rei alienae (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s ree-I ay-lee-ee-nee or al-ee-). [Latin "fruits of another's property"] The fruits of another's property; fruits taken from another's estate.

FRUCTUS SEPARATI

fructus separati (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s sep-<<schwa>>-ray-tI). [Latin "separated fruits"] Roman & civil law. The produce of a thing after being separated from it, and so becoming in law "fruits."

FRUCTUS STANTES

fructus stantes (fr<<schwa>>k-t<<schwa>>s stan-teez). [Latin "standing fruits"] Fruits that have not yet been severed from the stalk or stem.

FRUCTUUM PERCEPTIO

fructuum perceptio (fr<<schwa>>k-choo-<<schwa>>m p<<schwa>>r-sep-shee-oh). [Latin]

Roman & civil law. The rightful taking of the produce of property by a person who does not own the property.

FRUGES

fruges (froo-jeez). [Latin “fruits” or “crops”] Roman & civil law. Edible produce or crops; esculents.

FRUGI AUT BONAE FAMAE frugi aut bonae famae (froo-jī awt boh-nee fay-mee). [Latin] Hist. Frugal or of good reputation.

FRUIT

fruit. 1. The produce or product of something (as of land or property). 2. Civil law. Income or goods derived or produced from property without a diminution of the property's inherent value.

civil fruit. Civil law. Revenue derived from a thing by operation of law or by reason of a juridical act, such as lease or interest payments, or certain corporate distributions. La. Civ. Code art. 551. See FRUCTUS CIVILES.

natural fruit. Civil law. A product of the land or of animals. • Examples are crops and eggs. La. Civ. Code art. 2317. See FRUCTUS NATURALES.

3. Something (such as evidence) obtained during an activity or operation <the fruit of the officer's search>. See FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE.

FRUIT-AND-THE-TREE DOCTRINE fruit-and-the-tree doctrine. Tax. The rule that an individual who earns income cannot assign that income to another person to avoid taxation.

FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE fruit-of-the-poisonous-tree doctrine. Criminal procedure. The rule that evidence derived from an illegal search, arrest, or interrogation is inadmissible because the evidence (the “fruit”) was tainted by the illegality (the “poisonous tree”). • Under this doctrine, for example, a murder weapon is inadmissible if the map showing its location and used to find it was seized during an illegal search. — Also termed fruits doctrine. See EXCLUSIONARY RULE; ATTENUATION DOCTRINE; INDEPENDENT-SOURCE RULE; INEVITABLE-DISCOVERY RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law 394.1(3). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 771, 773–775.]

FRUITS OF A CRIME

fruits of a crime. The proceeds acquired through criminal acts. [Cases: Criminal Law 1221. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1733.]

FRUSTRA

frustra (fr<<schwa>>s-tr<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. In vain; to no purpose.

FRUSTRATION

frustration, n.1. The prevention or hindering of the attainment of a goal, such as contractual performance.

commercial frustration. An excuse for a party's nonperformance because of some unforeseeable and uncontrollable circumstance. — Also termed economic frustration. [Cases: Contracts 309(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 520–522, 524.]

self-induced frustration. A breach of contract caused by one party's action that prevents the performance. • The phrase is something of a misnomer, since self-induced frustration is not really a type of frustration at all but is instead a breach of contract.

temporary frustration. An occurrence that prevents performance and legally suspends the duty to perform for the duration of the event. • If the burden or circumstance is substantially different after the event, then the duty may be discharged.

2. Contracts. The doctrine that if a party's principal purpose is substantially frustrated by unanticipated changed circumstances, that party's duties are discharged and the contract is considered terminated. — Also termed frustration of purpose. Cf. IMPOSSIBILITY(4); IMPRACTICABILITY; MISTAKE. [Cases: Contracts 309. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 520–522, 524.] — frustrate, vb.

FRUSTRUM TERRAE

frustrum terrae (fr<<schwa>>s-tr<<schwa>>m ter-ee). [Latin] Hist. A piece of land. • This usu. referred to a fragment of land remaining after a survey.

FRYE TEST

Frye test. The defunct federal common-law rule of evidence on the admissibility of scientific evidence. • It required that the tests or procedures must have gained general acceptance in their particular field. In Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharms., Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 113 S.Ct. 2786 (1993), the Supreme Court held that scientific evidence must meet the requirements of the Federal Rules of Evidence, not the Frye test, to be admissible. Frye v. United States, 293 F. 1013 (D.C. Cir. 1923). See DAUBERT TEST. [Cases: Criminal Law 388.1–388.4; Evidence 555. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 597–598, 601, 649, 652, 713.]

FUNCTIONAL ANALOG

functional analog. See ANALOG.

FUNCTIONAL DEPRECIATION functional depreciation. See DEPRECIATION.

FUNCTIONAL DISCOUNT

functional discount. See DISCOUNT.

FUNCTIONAL DISEASE

functional disease. See DISEASE.

FUNCTIONAL FEATURE

functional feature. Trademarks. A design element that is either physically necessary to construct an article or commercially necessary to manufacture and sell it; a product's attribute that is essential to its use, necessary for its proper and successful operation, and utilitarian rather than ornamental in every detail. • A functional feature is not eligible for trademark protection. [Cases: Trade Regulation 43. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 49–50.]

FUNCTIONALITY

functionality. Trademarks. The quality of having a shape, configuration, design, or color that is so superior to available alternatives that giving the first user exclusive trademark rights would hinder competition. [Cases: Trade Regulation 43. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 49–50.]

aesthetic functionality. A doctrine that denies protection to the design of a product or its container when the design is necessary to enable the product to function as intended.

FUNCTIONAL LIMITATION

functional limitation. Patents. In a patent application, the definition of an invention by what it does rather than what it is. • A functional limitation is not inherently invalid, but it is examined closely because it tends to be too broad, claiming every possible way of doing the same thing. MPEP 2173.05(g). See functional rejection under REJECTION. [Cases: Patents 101(3).]

FUNCTIONAL OBSOLESCENCE

functional obsolescence. See OBSOLESCENCE.

FUNCTIONAL REJECTION

[Latin “having performed his or her office”] (Of an officer or official body) without further authority or legal competence because the duties and functions of the original commission have been fully accomplished. • The term is sometimes abbreviated to functus <the court was functus>. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 44. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 339, 345.]

fund, n. 1. A sum of money or other liquid assets established for a specific purpose .

blended fund.A fund created by income from more than one source, usu. from the sale of a testator's real and personal property.

changing fund.A fund, esp. a trust fund, that changes its form periodically as it is invested and reinvested.

client-security fund.A fund established usu. by a state or a state bar association to compensate persons for losses that they suffered because of their attorneys' misappropriation of funds or other misconduct. [Cases: Attorney and Client 129.5. C.J.S. Attorney and Client § 279.]

contingent fund. 1. A fund created by a municipality for expenses that will necessarily arise during the year but that cannot be appropriately classified under any of the specific purposes for which taxes are collected. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 886. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations § 1627.] 2. A fund segregated by a business to pay unknown costs that may arise in the future. — Also termed contingency reserve.

executor fund.A fund established for an executor to pay an estate's final expenses.

fund in court. 1. Contested money deposited with the court. See INTERPLEADER. [Cases: Deposits in Court 1. C.J.S. Deposits in Court §§ 1, 4–7.] 2. Money deposited to pay a contingent liability.

general fund. 1. A government's primary operating fund; a state's assets furnishing the means for the support of government and for defraying the legislature's discretionary appropriations. • A general fund is distinguished from assets of a special character, such as trust, escrow, and special-purpose funds. [Cases: States 126. C.J.S. States § 228.] 2. A nonprofit entity's assets that are not earmarked for a specific purpose.

general revenue fund.The fund out of which a municipality pays its ordinary and incidental expenses. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 886. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations § 1627.]

guaranty fund.A private deposit-insurance fund, raised primarily by assessments on banks, and used to pay the depositors of an insolvent bank. • Guaranty funds preceded the FDIC's federal-deposit insurance, which began in 1933, though many funds continued until the savings-and-loan crisis in the 1980s. Massachusetts has a guaranty fund for uninsured deposits (deposits above $100,000) that are not covered by federal-deposit insurance. [Cases: Banks and Banking 15, 504–506. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 24–26, 673, 676–679, 682–694, 696, 699–706, 708–717.]

imprest fund (im-prest). A fund used by a business for small, routine expenses.

joint-welfare fund.A fund that is established in collective bargaining to provide health and welfare benefits to union employees. • The fund is jointly managed by labor and management representatives. — Also termed Taft–Hartley fund.

paid-in fund.A reserve cash fund established by a mutual insurance company to pay unforeseen losses. • The fund is in lieu of a capital stock account.

public fund.(usu. pl.) 1. The revenue or money of a governmental body. • The term includes not only coins and paper but also bank deposits and instruments representing investments of public money. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 880. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations § 1623.] 2. The securities of a state or national government. [Cases: States 122. C.J.S. States § 224.]

revolving fund.A fund whose moneys are continually expended and then replenished, such as a petty-cash fund.

sinking fund.A fund consisting of regular deposits that are accumulated with interest to pay off a long-term corporate or public debt. — Abbr. SF. [Cases: Corporations 486; Municipal Corporations 951. C.J.S. Corporations § 671; Municipal Corporations §§ 1704–1705.]

strike fund.See STRIKE FUND.

Taft–Hartley fund.See joint-welfare fund.

trust fund.See TRUST FUND.

unsatisfied-judgment fund.A fund established by a state to compensate persons for losses stemming from an automobile accident caused by an uninsured or underinsured motorist. [Cases: Automobiles 251.1. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 1285, 1290–1294.]

2. (usu. pl.) Money or other assets, such as stocks, bonds, or working capital, available to pay debts, expenses, and the like <Sue invested her funds in her sister's business>.

current funds.Assets that can be readily converted into cash.

3. A pool of investments owned in common and managed for a fee; MUTUAL FUND < a diverse portfolio of funds>.

fund,vb. 1. To furnish money to (an individual, entity, or venture), esp. to finance a particular project. 2. To use resources in a manner that produces interest. 3. To convert (a debt, esp. an open account) into a long-term debt that bears interest at a fixed rate.

FUNDAMENTAL ERROR

FUNDAMENTAL LAW

fundamental law.The organic law that establishes the governing principles of a nation or state; esp., CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. — Also termed organic law; ground-law. Cf. NATURAL LAW.

FUNDAMENTAL-MISCARRIAGE-OF-JUSTICE EXCEPTION fundamental-miscarriage-of-justice exception. The doctrine allowing a federal court in a habeas corpus proceeding to address a claim of constitutional error that, although ordinarily unreviewable, is subject to review because of a state-court procedural default that rendered the proceedings basically unfair. • For the exception to apply, among other things, the petitioner must show by a preponderance of the evidence that constitutional error resulted in the conviction of one who is actually innocent. If the defaulted claim applies only to sentencing, the exception permits review of the claim if the petitioner shows by clear and convincing evidence that, but for the constitutional error, no reasonable judge or jury would have imposed the sentence that the petitioner received. [Cases: Habeas Corpus 401.]

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHT

fundamental right. 1. A right derived from natural or fundamental law. 2. Constitutional law. A significant component of liberty, encroachments of which are rigorously tested by courts to ascertain the soundness of purported governmental justifications. • A fundamental right triggers strict scrutiny to determine whether the law violates the Due Process Clause or the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. As enunciated by the Supreme Court, fundamental rights include voting, interstate travel, and various aspects of privacy (such as marriage and contraception rights). — Also termed fundamental interest. See STRICT SCRUTINY. Cf. SUSPECT CLASSIFICATION. [Cases: Constitutional Law 252.5. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 953, 966–967, 980.]

FUNDAMENTAL TERM

Mortgages §§ 154–156.] 2. Equity practice. The agreed conversion of arrears of interest on a mortgage security into principal.

FURTHER ASSURANCE

further assurance. See ASSURANCE.

FURTHER-EXPLORATION COVENANT

further-exploration covenant. Oil & gas. In an oil-and-gas lease, an implied promise that once production has been obtained from the leased property, the lessee will continue to explore other parts of the property and other formations under it. • Some jurisdictions hold that the covenant for further exploration does not exist independently of the covenant for reasonable development. See also REASONABLE-DEVELOPMENT COVENANT; REASONABLY-PRUDENT-OPERATOR STANDARD D.

FURTHER INSTRUCTION

further instruction. See additional instruction under JURY INSTRUCTION.

furtum (f<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin "theft"] Roman law. 1. The offense of stealing movable property. • Under Roman law, furtum included not only the taking of another's property, but any handling of the property done with the intent of profiting by it. Furtum was not only a private wrong (delictum) prosecuted by the person suffering the loss. Cf. PECULATUS. 2. The thing stolen.

furtum conceptum (f<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>m k<<schwa>>n-sep-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. A theft in which someone is discovered in possession of stolen property after a search with witnesses. • The possessor was liable to pay the owner three times the value of the stolen property. The possessor could bring an action against the thief and recover triple damages.

furtum grave (f<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>m gray-vee orgrah-vay).Hist. Scots law. An aggravated degree of theft that, in ancient times, was punishable by death.

furtum manifestum (f<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>m man-<<schwa>>-fes-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin "open theft"] Roman law. A theft in which the thief is caught in the act. • A theft was "manifest" if the thief was caught on the day of the theft with the stolen property before reaching the place where he intended to take it. Fourfold damages were available by means of actio furti. (See actio furti under ACTIO.) A theft other than this type was known as furtum nec manifestum.

furtum oblatum (f<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>m <<schwa>>-blay-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin "offered theft"] Roman law. 1. A theft in which the thief offers stolen property to a person who is then found with the goods. • The person found in possession of the stolen goods could bring an action against the true thief. 2. The planting of stolen goods.

furtum possessionis (f<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>m p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh-nis). [Latin "theft of possession"] Roman law. The owner's dishonest removal of a thing from the control of a pledgee, a bona fide possessor, a commodatary with a lien, or a usufructuary.

furtum rei (f<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>m ree-I). [Latin "theft of a thing"] Roman law. Ordinary theft, involving the dishonest taking of something to which the taker had no right.

furtum usus (f<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>m yoo-s<<schwa>>s oryoo-z<<schwa>>s). [Latin "theft of the use of a thing"] Roman law. 1. A bailee's dishonest use of the thing bailed or lent. 2. A creditor's dishonest use of a pledge (pignus) without contractual authority.

FUTURE-ACQUIRED PROPERTY future-acquired property. See AFTER-ACQUIRED PROPERTY(1).

FUTURE ADVANCE

future advance. Money secured by an original security agreement even though it is lent after the security interest has attached. [Cases: Secured Transactions 20, 114. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 18, 83.]

FUTURE-ADVANCE CLAUSE future-advance clause. A contractual term in a security agreement covering additional loaned amounts on present collateral or collateral to be acquired in the future, regardless of whether the secured party is obliged to make the advances; esp., a provision in an open-end mortgage or deed of trust allowing the borrower to borrow additional sums in the future, secured under the same instrument and by the same security. • This type of clause makes a new security agreement unnecessary when the secured creditor makes a future loan to the debtor. [Cases: Mortgages 16, 116; Secured Transactions 20, 114. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 154–156; Secured Transactions §§ 18, 83.]

FUTURE GOODS

future goods. See GOODS.

FUTURE INTEREST

future interest. A property interest in which the privilege of possession or of other enjoyment is future and not present. • A future interest can exist in either the grantor (as with a reversion) or the grantee (as with a remainder or executory interest). Today, most future interests are equitable interests in stocks and debt securities, with power of sale in a trustee. — Also termed future estate; expectant estate; estate in expectancy; nonpossessory estate. Cf. present interest under INTEREST(2). [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.]

FUTURE PERFORMANCE

gabella (g<<schwa>>-bel-<<schwa>>).Hist. 1. A tax or duty on merchandise. 2. A peasant villager, esp. one who pays rent or tribute. See GAVEL(1). — Also spelled gavella.

GAGE

gage (gayj), n. A pledge, pawn, or other thing deposited as security for performance. • An archaic use of this word corresponded to the way wage was formerly used in legal contexts: a gager del ley, for example, was an earlier form of wager of law, while gager de deliverance had the same meaning as wager of deliverance.

“A single root has sent out many branches which overshadow large fields of law. Gage, engagement, wage, wages, wager, wed, wedding, the Scottish wadset, all spring from one root. In particular we must notice that the word ‘gage,’ in Latin vadium, is applied indiscriminately to movables and immovables, to transactions in which a gage is given and to those in which a gage is taken. When a lord has seized his tenant's goods in distress they are in his hands a gage for the payment of the rent that is in arrear, and the sheriff is always taking gages from those who have no mind to give them. The notion expressed by the word seems to be that expressed by our ‘security’” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 117–18 (2d ed. 1899).

gage,vb. To pawn or pledge; to give as security for. • Gage is an older form of wage, and often appeared as a phrase, gager deliverance. Cf. WAGE(2).

“Though the word Gage be retained, as it is a Substantive, yet as it is a verb, use hath turned the Gage into Wage so as it is oftener written Wage; as to Wage Deliverance, to give security, that a thing shall be delivered: For, if he that distrained, being sued, have not delivered the Cattle that were distrained, then he shall not onely avow the Distress, but Gager Deliverance, put in surety, that he will deliver them." Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

GAGER

gager (gay-j<<schwa>>r), n. The giving of security; the transaction in which one gives a gage. See GAGE.

GAGER DEL LEY

gager del ley. See WAGER OF LAW.

GAG ORDER

gag order. 1. A judge's order directing parties, attorneys, witnesses, or journalists to refrain from publicly discussing the facts of a case. • When directed to the press, such an order is generally unconstitutional under the First Amendment. [Cases: Criminal Law 633(1); Federal Civil Procedure 1951; Trial 18, 20. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 564, 1134, 1140, 1145–1149, 1191; Trial §§ 91–92, 97.] 2. A judge's order that an unruly defendant be bound and gagged during trial to prevent further interruptions. [Cases: Criminal Law 637. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1168–1172.]

gain, n. 1. An increase in amount, degree, or value.

pecuniary gain. 1. A gain of money or of something having monetary value. 2. Criminal law. Any monetary or economic gain that serves as an impetus for the commission of an offense. • In most states, an offense and its punishment are aggravated if the offense was committed for pecuniary gain. Murder, for example, is often aggravated to capital murder if the murderer is paid to commit the crime. See SOLICITATION(2).

2. Excess of receipts over expenditures or of sale price over cost. See PROFIT(1). 3. Tax. The excess of the amount realized from a sale or other disposition of property over the property's adjusted value. IRC (26 USCA) § 1001. — Also termed realized gain; net gain. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3178–3216. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 107–108, 110–126, 132–134, 136, 283.]

game, n. 1. Wild animals and birds considered as objects of pursuit, for food or sport; esp., animals for which one must have a license to hunt. [Cases: Game 2.] 2. A contest, for amusement or for a prize, whose outcome depends on the skill, strength, or luck of the players. [Cases: Gaming 6.]

game of chance. A game whose outcome is determined by luck rather than skill. Cf. GAMBLING DEVICE.

“Games of chance do not cease to be such merely because they call for the exercise of skill by the players, nor do games of skill cease to be so because at times ... their result is determined by some unforeseen accident, usually called ‘luck.’ According to some cases, the test of the character of the game is not whether it contains an element of chance or an element of skill, but which of these is the dominating element that determines the result of the game.... And it has been said that ‘it is the character of the game, and not the skill or want of skill of the player,’ which determines whether a game is one of chance or skill.” 38 Am. Jur. 2d Gambling § 4, at 109–10 (1968).

game of skill. A game in which the outcome is determined by a player's superior knowledge or ability, not chance.

percentage game. A game of chance from which the house collects an amount calculated as a percentage of the wagers made or the sums won. • Percentage games are illegal in many states.

game, vb. To gamble; to play for a stake.

GAME LAW

game law. A federal or state law that regulates the hunting of game, esp. one that forbids the capturing or killing of specified game either entirely or seasonally, describes the means for killing or capturing game in season, or restricts the number and type of game animals that may be killed or captured in season. 16 USCA §§ 661–667; 18 USCA §§ 41–47. [Cases: Game 4.]

GAMETE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER

gamete intrafallopian transfer. A procedure in which mature eggs are implanted in a woman's fallopian tubes and fertilized with semen. — Abbr. GIFT. — Also termed gamete intrafallopian-tube transfer. Cf. ZYGOTE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER ; ARTIFICIAL INSEMINATION; IN VITRO FERTILIZATION.

GANANCIAL

ganancial (g<<schwa>>-nan-sh<<schwa>>l), adj. Of, relating to, or consisting of community property . See COMMUNITY PROPERTY. [Cases: Husband and Wife 246–276(9).]

“The Spanish [more correctly, the Castilian] form of community property, called the ‘ganancial’ system, is found today in nine states of the United States, the Spanish-American republics of Central and South America, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the Philippine Republic.” Robert L. Menell & Thomas M. Boykoff, Community Property in a Nutshell 10 (2d ed. 1988).

G & A. abbr. See general administrative expense under EXPENSE.

GANG

gang. A group of persons who go about together or act in concert, esp. for antisocial or criminal purposes. • Many gangs (esp. those made up of adolescents) have common identifying signs and symbols, such as hand signals and distinctive colors. — Also termed street gang.

GANGLAND

gangland. The world of criminal gangs and organized crime.

GANGSTER

gangster. A member of a criminal gang or an organized-crime syndicate.

GANSER'S SYNDROME

Ganser's syndrome (gahn-z<<schwa>>r organ-s<<schwa>>r). An abnormality characterized by the giving of irrelevant and nonsensical answers to questions. • Prisoners have been known to feign this syndrome in an attempt to obtain leniency.

GANTLET

gantlet (gawnt-lit). [fr. Swedish gata “lane” + lopp “course”] 1.Hist. A former military punishment in which the offender was stripped to the waist and forced to run between two rows of soldiers who gave him lashes as he passed. 2. A series of severe troubles or difficulties; an ordeal. — Also spelled gauntlet; (archaically) gantlope.

GAO

gaol liberties.See JAIL LIBERTIES.

GAP

gap. See GAP PERIOD.

GAP CREDITOR

gap creditor.See CREDITOR.

GAP-FILLER

gap-filler. A rule that supplies a contractual term that the parties failed to include in the contract. • For example, if the contract does not contain a sales price, UCC § 2-305(1) establishes the price as being a reasonable one at the time of delivery. Cf. default rule under RULE(1). [Cases: Sales 22(4), 23(4). C.J.S. Sales §§ 38–40, 223.]

“Contracts often have gaps in them, intentional or inadvertent. Gaps arise, too, out of the ‘battle of the forms’ under sections 2–204 and 2–207. Some gaps are more or less complete, others only partial. Article 2 of the Code includes numerous gap filler provisions which taken together constitute a kind of standardized statutory contract.” 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 3-4 (4th ed. 1995).

GAP FINANCING

gap financing. See FINANCING.

GAP PERIOD

gap period. Bankruptcy. The duration of time between the filing of an involuntary bankruptcy petition and the entry of the order for relief. — Often shortened to gap. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2281. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 56.]

GAP REPORT

gap report. In the making of federal court rules, a report that explains any changes made by an advisory committee in the language of a proposed amendment to a procedural rule after its publication for comment. • Before advisory committees began issuing gap reports in the early 1980s, there were complaints that the public record did not show why changes were made after the public-comment period. The five advisory committees — for appellate, bankruptcy, civil, criminal, and evidence rules — therefore began filing the reports to fill in the “gaps” in the record. Although the phrase is sometimes written in capital letters (GAP report), it is not an acronym.

GAP THEORY

gap theory. Insurance. The principle that a tortfeasor will be considered underinsured if his or her liability-insurance coverage — although legally adequate — is less than the injured party's underinsured-motorist coverage. • This principle allows an injured party to invoke underinsured-motorist coverage. Cf. EXCESS THEORY. [Cases: Insurance 2787. C.J.S. Insurance § 1657.]

garauntor (gar-<<schwa>>n-t<<schwa>>r). [Law French] Hist. A warrantor of land. • A garauntor was obligated to defend the title and seisin of the alienee. If the alienee was evicted, the garauntor had to provide the alienee with other land of equal value.

GARCIA<TT> HEARING

Garcia hearing (gahr-see-<<schwa>>).Criminal procedure. A hearing held to ensure that a defendant who is one of two or more defendants represented by the same attorney understands (1) the risk of a conflict of interest inherent in this type of representation, and (2) that he or she is entitled to the services of an attorney who does not represent anyone else in the defendant's case. United States v. Garcia, 517 F.2d 272 (5th Cir. 1975). See CON-FLICT OF INTEREST(2). [Cases: Criminal Law 641.5(5). C.J.S. Criminal Law § 319.]

gard (gahrd). [Law French] Hist. 1.Wardship or custody (of a person).2. A precinct (or ward) of a city. — Also spelled garde; gardia.

GARDE

garde (gahrd). [French] Civil law. A relationship that gives rise to liability for a person when an injury is caused by a thing, whether animate or inanimate, that is considered by law to be that person's responsibility or to be in that person's custody.

GARDEIN

gardein (gahr-deen). [Law French] Hist. A guardian or keeper. — Also spelled gardian; gardien; gardeyn.

GARNER<TT> DOCTRINE

Garner doctrine. The rule that allows shareholder plaintiffs in a corporate derivative action to discover confidential communications between a corporate officer and the corporation's attorney.

• The Garner doctrine does not apply to attorney work product, and the movant must show good cause. Garner v. Wolfinbarger, 430 F.2d 1093 (5th Cir. 1970). See DERIVATIVE ACTION(1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1600; Witnesses 197. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 316–340.]

garnish, n. Hist. Money exacted from a new prisoner by other prisoners or as a jailer's fee. • This practice was banned in England in 1815.

garnish, vb. [Old French garnir “to warn”; “to prepare”] 1. Hist. To serve an heir with notice (i.e., to warn) of certain debts that must be paid before the person is entitled to receive property as an heir. 2. To subject (property) to garnishment; to attach (property held by a third party) in order to satisfy a debt. 3. To notify (a person, bank, etc.) that a garnishment proceeding has been undertaken and that the one receiving notice may be liable as stakeholder or custodian of the defendant's property. — Also termed garnishee; (in senses 2 & 3) factorize. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 601; Garnishment 1.] — garnishable, adj.

garnishee (gahr-ni-shee), n. A person or institution (such as a bank) that is indebted to or is bailee for another whose property has been subjected to garnishment. — Also termed garnishee-defendant (as opposed to the “principal defendant,” i.e., the primary debtor). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 601; Garnishment 13–24.]

garnishee (gahr-ni-shee), vb. See GARNISH.

garnisher. A creditor who initiates a garnishment action to reach the debtor's property that is thought to be held or owed by a third party (the garnishee). — Also spelled garnishor. [Cases: Garnishment 11.]

garnishment, n. 1. A judicial proceeding in which a creditor (or potential creditor) asks the court to order a third party who is indebted to or is bailee for the debtor to turn over to the creditor any of the debtor's property (such as wages or bank accounts) held by that third party. • A plaintiff initiates a garnishment action as a means of either prejudgment seizure or postjudgment collection. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 601; Garnishment 64, 118.]

wrongful garnishment. 1. An improper or tortious garnishment. [Cases: Garnishment 122, 248.] 2. A cause of action against a garnisher for improperly or tortiously filing a garnishment proceeding. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 601; Garnishment 174.]

2. The judicial order by which such a turnover is effected. Cf. ATTACHMENT (1); SEQUESTRATION(1).

GARNISHMENT LIEN

garnishment lien. See LIEN.

GARNISHOR

garnishor. See GARNISHER.

GARRITY<TT> STATEMENT

Garrity statement (gar-<<schwa>>-tee). A public employee's oral or written report (as of an incident) obtained under a threat of termination of employment. • A public employee usu. makes a Garrity statement in the course of an internal investigation (as by a police department). Because a Garrity statement is coerced, the statement and any evidence obtained as a result of it cannot be used in a later criminal prosecution against the public employee. The statement and evidence may be used only to evaluate the employee's performance. Garrity v. New Jersey, 385 U.S. 493, 87 S.Ct. 616 (1967).

GAS-BALANCING AGREEMENT

gas-balancing agreement. Oil & gas. A contract among owners of the production of a gas well to balance production if one owner sells more of the gas stream than the other owners do.

“Gas balancing agreements address the problem of imbalances in production from a gas well or field. Co-owners frequently sell their share of production to different purchasers Even when co-owners sell to the same purchaser, their contracts are likely to be signed at different times and to have different price and take provisions. Thus, imbalances are inevitable.” John S. Lowe, Oil and Gas Law in a Nutshell 385 (3d ed. 1995).

GAS CHAMBER

gas chamber. A small, sealed room in which a capital punishment is carried out by strapping the prisoner into a chair and releasing poisonous fumes.

GAS CONTRACT

gas contract. Oil & gas. An agreement for the sale of natural gas.

GAS SOLD

gas sold. Oil & gas. Natural gas that is actually sold but not necessarily all that a well produces. • The term is used in natural-gas leases.

GAS USED

gas used.Oil & gas. Natural gas that is consumed while a well is in operation but that is not necessarily sold.

GAVELING MAN

gaveling man (gav-<<schwa>>l-ing man or m<<schwa>>n).Hist. See GAVELMAN.

gavelkind (gav-<<schwa>>l-kInd).Hist. 1. A species of socage tenure arising in land that has descended equally to the decedent's sons. • It was widespread before 1066, when it was mainly superseded by primogeniture. This property-division technique was then largely limited to Kent. The person holding land in this manner enjoyed several advantages not available under the common law: the land could be disposed of by will, did not escheat for felony other than treason or for want of heirs, and was alienable by an heir at age 15. Gavelkind was abolished in 1925. Although the etymology of this term was much debated in the 19th century, the explanation given in the first quotation below appears to be the true one. 2. Land that yields gavel service.

“[G]afol, or gavel, was a word of frequent use before the Norman Conquest, and signified not only a tribute, tax, or custom, but also rent in general; and ... under this term were comprehended all socage services whatsoever which lay in render or feasant, the word being often compounded with and applied to the particulars wherein the payment or performance of the service consisted; as corn-gavel, or gavel-corn, was a corn-rent, and gavel-earth was a service of ‘earing’ or ploughing.... The tenant from whom such services were due was called a gavel-man; and ‘gavelkind’ being taken as a compound of this word ‘gavel’ and ‘gekynde,’ which is nature, kind, quality (usually appearing under the form ‘gafolcund’ in the most ancient records), the proper signification of the term will be land of the kind or nature which yielded rent, or ‘censual land,’ which may be compared to rent-service land as distinguished from knight-service land, which being held by free military service yielded no ‘cens’ or rent in money, provision, or works: so that the lands held by the old English tenure are known in Kent as gavelkind which in other parts of the country are distinguished by the name of socage.” Charles I. Elton & Herbert J.H. Mackay, Robinson on Gavelkind 5–6 (5th ed. 1897).

“The term ‘gavelkind’ has by the modern usage acquired [a] signification more confined as to the properties contained under it, yet more extensive in point of place: since at this day it is generally used to denote the partibility of the land, exclusive of all other customary qualities; nor is the word ‘gavelkind’ in common parlance confined to Kentish lands, but is equally and indifferently applied to all partible lands wherever they lie.” Id. at 9.

“Archbishop Hubert Walter, who presided in the king's court ... obtained from King John a charter empowering him and his successors to convert into military fees the tenements that were holden of their church in gavelkind. The archbishop's main object may have been to get money in the form of rents and scutages, instead of provender and boonworks, ‘gavel-corn’ and ‘gavel-swine,’ ‘gavel-erth’ and ‘gavel-rip’” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 273 (2d ed. 1899).

gavelman (gav-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩l-m⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩n).Hist. A tenant who is liable for money rent in addition to a customary service to the lord. • A gavelman was formerly a villein who had been released from villenage in consideration of money rent. — Also termed gaveling man.

GAVELMED

gavelmed (gav-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩l-meed).Hist. A tenant's customary service of mowing the lord's meadowland or grass for hay. — Also spelled gavelmead.

GAVELREP

gavelrep (gav-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩l-reep).Hist. A tenant's duty to reap the lord's fields at the lord's command; bederepe. — Also spelled gavelrip.

GAVEL THROUGH

gavel through.Parliamentary law. To put (a question) to a vote before any member can obtain the floor. • The practice of “gaveling through” a motion is improper under parliamentary law.

“It should be noted that, under legitimate parliamentary procedure, there is no such thing as ‘gaveling through’ a measure. The right of members to debate or introduce secondary motions cannot be cut off by the chair’s at-tempting to put a question to vote so quickly that no member can get the floor — either when the chair first states the question or when he believes debate is ended. Debate is not closed by the presiding officer’s rising to put the question.” Henry M. Robert, Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised § 43, at 374 (10th ed. 2000).

gavelwerk (gav-<<schwa>>l-w<<schwa>>rk).Hist. Customary service, either by the tenant's own hands or with the aid of the tenant's carts or carriages.

gazumping (g<<schwa>>-z<<schwa>>mp-ing).BrE Slang. The improper sale of a house, usu. by raising the price after accepting an offer. • Gazumping can take different forms, the usual one being when a seller raises the price after accepting the buyer's offer. But it may also occur when a competing buyer makes a higher bid than the one already accepted, thus encouraging the seller to back out of the earlier contract.

GENERAL MARITIME LAW

general maritime law. The body of U.S. legal precedents and doctrines developed through caselaw in maritime and admiralty litigation. • General maritime law is a branch of federal common law. It is distinguished from statutory law. Cf. MARITIME LAW; LAW OF THE SEA.

“The general maritime law is characterized by the expansive and dominant role played by federal courts in fashioning and applying its precepts to new situations. Large areas of maritime tort law have not been touched by legislation; these are left to the federal courts to define and fill. In areas preempted by legislation, federal courts may not establish principles in derogation of the congressional mandate. However, in the framework of admiralty jurisdiction, federal courts may still play an active role in interpreting statutes, filling gaps, and coordinating legislation with the general maritime law.” Thomas J. Schoenbaum, Admiralty and Maritime Law 122 (1987).

GENERIC

generic,adj. Trademarks. 1. Common or descriptive, and thus not eligible for trademark protection; nonproprietary . [Cases: Trade Regulation 23. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 43.] 2. Not having a trademark or brand name <generic drugs>.

GENERALALNESS

generalalness. See GENERICNESS.

GENERIC CLAIM

generic claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

GENERIC DRUG

generic drug. See DRUG.

GENERIC-DRUG LAW

generic-drug law. A statute that allows pharmacists to substitute a generic drug for a brand-name drug under specified conditions. • Most states have enacted generic-drug laws to ensure that less-expensive generic drugs are available to consumers.

GENERICIDE

genericide (j<<schwa>>-ner-<<schwa>>-sId). Trademarks. The loss or cancellation of a trademark that no longer distinguishes the owner's product from others' products. • Genericide occurs when a trademark becomes such a household name that the consuming public begins to think of the mark not as a brand name but as a synonym for the product itself. Examples of trademarks that have been “killed” by genericide include aspirin and escalator. [Cases: Trade Regulation 77. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 225.]

GENERICISM

genericism (j<<schwa>>-ner-<<schwa>>-siz-<<schwa>>m). See GENERICNESS.

GENERIC NAME

generic name. Trademarks. A term that describes something generally without designating the thing's source or creator, such as the word “car” or “sink.” • A generic name cannot be protected as a trademark for the thing it denotes; e.g., “Apple” can be a trademark for computers but not for apples. — Also termed generic term; generic mark; common descriptive name. [Cases: Trade Regulation 23. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 43.]

GENERICNESS

genericness, n. The state or condition of being generic <an affirmative defense of genericness in a trademark suit>. — Also termed generalalness; genericism.

GENETIC ENGINEERING

genetic engineering. A method of creating new life-forms and organic matter by gene-splicing and other techniques. • The Supreme Court has ruled that those creations are patentable. Diamond v. Chakrabarty, 447 U.S. 303, 100 S.Ct. 2204 (1980).

GENETIC FATHER

genetic father. See biological father under FATHER.

GENETIC FINGERPRINTING genetic fingerprinting. See DNA IDENTIFICATION.

GENETIC-MARKER TEST

genetic-marker test. A medical method of testing tissue samples used in paternity and illegitimacy cases to determine whether a particular man could be the father of a child. • This test represents a medical advance over blood-grouping tests. It analyzes DNA and is much more precise in assessing the probability of paternity. — Abbr. GMT. See PATERNITY TEST. Cf. BLOOD-GROUPING TEST; HUMAN-LEUKOCYTE ANTIGEN TEST.

GENETIC MOTHER

genetic mother. See biological mother under MOTHER.

GENETIC PARENT

genetic parent. See biological parent under PARENT.

GENEVA CONVENTIONS OF 1949

Geneva Conventions of 1949 (j<<schwa>>-nee-v<<schwa>>). Four international agreements dealing with the protection of wounded members of the armed forces, the treatment of prisoners of war, and the protection of civilians during international armed conflicts. • Common Article 3 of the Conventions proclaims certain minimum standards of treatment that are applicable to noninternational armed conflicts. The humanitarian-law protection established in these four agreements was amplified in 1977 by the two Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions. In common parlance, people refer to the Geneva Convention as if there were just one agreement. [Cases: Treaties 8. C.J.S. Treaties § 6.]

GENEVA PHONOGRAMS CONVENTION

Geneva Phonograms Convention. A 1971 treaty requiring signatories to protect phonorecord producers against piracy and the importation of pirated copies, by copyright protection, unfair-competition law, or criminal sanctions. • The treaty was drafted by representatives from WIPO and UNESCO to correct weaknesses in the Rome Convention. — Also termed Convention for the Protection of Producers of Phonograms Against Unauthorized Duplication of Their Phonograms; Phonograms Convention.

genocide (jen-<<schwa>>-sId).Int'l law. An international crime involving acts causing serious physical and mental harm with the intent to destroy, partially or entirely, a national, ethnic, racial, or religious group. • The widely ratified Genocide Convention of 1948 defines the crime. The International Criminal Court has jurisdiction to try those accused of genocide. Many nations also have criminal laws providing punishment for individuals convicted of genocide. Cf. ETHNIC CLEANSING. [Cases: International Law 10.11.]

“The ... draft Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide was adopted by the General Assembly on December 9, 1948 and unanimously recommended for adherence to the members of the United Nations. It came into force in October, 1950 The term ‘genocide’ was first proposed by Dr. Lemkin in the course of the war and incorporated on his suggestion into the Indictment of the Major German War Criminals. The [U.N. General] Assembly Resolution on Genocide of December 11, 1946, and the Convention of 1948, are also the result of a remarkable one-man campaign.” Georg Schwarzenberger, Power Politics: A Study of International Society 634 (2d ed. 1951).

GENOESE LOTTERY

Genoese lottery (jen-oh-eezor -ees). See LOTTERY.

GENOTYPE

genotype.Patents. The genetic makeup of a living organism. • A patent on living matter must disclose its genotype rather than just describe its physical characteristics (phenotype) or behavior. Cf. PHENOTYPE. — genotypic,adj.

GENS

gens (jenz), n.[Latin] Roman law. A clan or group of families who share the same name and (supposedly) a common ancestor; extended family. • Members of a gens are freeborn and possess full civic rights. Pl. gentes.

“A wider group still is the gens, of great importance in early law though its importance was gone in classical times. This consisted of all who bore the same nomen, the gentile name.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 61 (2d ed. 1953).

gentes (jen-teez), n. [Latin] Roman law. The peoples or nations of the world, particularly the civilized peoples.

GENTLEMEN'S AGREEMENT

gentlemen's agreement.An unwritten agreement that, while not legally enforceable, is secured by the good faith and honor of the parties. — Also spelled gentleman's agreement. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

GENTRIFICATION

gentrification,n. The restoration and upgrading of a deteriorated or aging urban neighborhood by middle-class or affluent persons, resulting in increased property values and often in displacement of lower-income residents. — gentrify,vb.

GENUINE

genuine,adj.1. (Of a thing) authentic or real; something that has the quality of what it is purported to be or to have <the plaintiff failed to question whether the exhibits were genuine>.2. (Of an instrument) free of forgery or counterfeiting <the bank teller could not determine whether the signature on the check was genuine>. UCC § 1-201(b)(19).

GENUINE ISSUE OF MATERIAL FACT genuine issue of material fact.Civil procedure. In the law of summary judgments, a triable, substantial, or real question of fact supported by substantial evidence. • An issue of this kind precludes entry of summary judgment. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2470, 2470.1; Judgment 181(2), 185(6). C.J.S. Judgments § 260.]

GENUS

genus (jee-n<<schwa>>s orjen-<<schwa>>s). A general class comprising several species or divisions. • In legal usage, the terms genus and (sometimes) species invoke the taxonomic classification of life forms in biological science. For example, patent law is a species within the genus of intellectual property; burglary is a species within the genus of crime. In the law of sales, genus referred to fungibles, while species referred to specific, individual items. Cf. SPECIES(2).

GENUS CLAIM

genus claim. See generic claim under PATENT CLAIM.

GENUS NUNQUAM PERIT

genus nunquam perit (jee-n<<schwa>>s n<<schwa>>n[g]-kwam per-it). [Latin] Hist. The class never perishes. • The phrase appeared in reference to a quantity of contracted-for goods of a certain class (rather than a single item), the destruction of which did not discharge the seller's obligation.

GEODETTIC-SURVEY SYSTEM

geodetic-survey system (jee-<<schwa>>-det-ik). A federally created land-description method consisting of nationwide marks (or benches) made at longitude and latitude points. • The geodetic-survey system integrates most of the real property in the United States into one unified form of measurement.

GERMANE

germane (j<<schwa>>r-mayn), adj. Relevant; pertinent <the caselaw cited in the brief was not germane to the legal issue pending before the court>. • Under parliamentary law, debate and amendments are in order only if they are germane to the motion under consideration.

GERMANUS

germanus (j<<schwa>>r-may-n<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. 1.adj. Having the same father and mother. See frater germanus under FRATER. 2.n. A whole brother; a child of both of one's own parents.

GERRYMANDERING

gerrymandering (jer-ee-man-d<<schwa>>r-ing orger-ee-), n.1. The practice of dividing a geographical area into electoral districts, often of highly irregular shape, to give one political party an unfair advantage by diluting the opposition's voting strength. • When Massachusetts Governor Elbridge Gerry ran for reelection in 1812, members of his political party, the Anti-Federalists, altered the state's voting districts to benefit the party. One newly created district resembled a salamander, inspiring a critic to coin the word gerrymander by combining the governor's name, Gerry, with the ending of salamander. Gerry was not reelected governor, but was elected as James Madison's vice president. — Also termed political gerrymandering. [Cases: Constitutional Law 215.3, 225.3(5); Elections 12(6).C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 717, 720, 819.] 2. The practice of dividing any geographical or jurisdictional area into political units (such as school districts) to give some group a special advantage. — Also termed jurisdictional gerrymandering. Cf. REAPPORTIONMENT. [Cases: Schools 32. C.J.S. Schools and School Districts §§ 20, 23–26.] — gerrymander,vb.

delineational gerrymandering.Gerrymandering by varying the districts' shape. • There are three kinds of delin-eational gerrymandering: cracking (or fracturing), packing, and stacking. See CRACKING; PACKING; STACKING(2).

institutional gerrymandering.Gerrymandering by means of varying the number of representatives per district.

gersum (g<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>m).Hist. 1. Money paid for a thing; specif., compensation paid by a tenant to a superior on entering a holding; GRESSUME. 2. A penalty or amercement paid for an offense. — Also spelled garsumme; gersuma; gersume.

GERSUMARIUS

gersumarius (j<<schwa>>r-s[y]<<schwa>>-mair-ee-<<schwa>>s), adj.. Hist. Finable; liable to be fined at the discretion of a feudal superior. • A villein who gave his daughter in marriage was gersumarius — he was liable to pay a fine to the lord.

gestio (jes-chee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. Behavior or conduct. See GESTIO PRO HAEREDE . 2. The management of a thing, esp. a transaction. See NEGOTIORUM GESTIO .

GESTIO PRO HAEREDE

gestio pro haerede (jes-chee-oh proh her-<<schwa>>-dee). [Latin “behavior as heir”] Roman & Hist. Scots law. An appointed heir's conduct (such as selling or leasing the decedent's property) that indicates the heir's intent to receive the inheritance and thereby take on the estate's debts; behavior as an heir. — Also spelled gestio pro herede.

GESTOR gestor (jes-tor), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. One who carries on a business. 2. NEGOTIORUM GESTOR. Pl. gestores.

GESTU ET FAMA

gestu et fama (jes-t[y]oo et fay-m<<schwa>>). [Latin “demeanor and reputation”] Hist. A writ used by a person who had been imprisoned because of a poor reputation in the community to gain release from jail pending the arrival of justices with commissions of gaol delivery. See COMMISSION OF GAOL DELIVERY.

GESTUM

gestum (jes-t<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman law. A deed or an act; a thing done. • Gestum is synonymous with factum. See FACTUM(2).

GESTURE

gesture. A motion of the body calculated to express a thought or emphasize a certain point <the prosecutor was known for her dramatic gestures during closing argument>.

GET

get, n. 1. A rabbinical divorce; a Jewish divorce. 2. Under Jewish law, a document signed by a rabbi to grant a divorce. • Under Jewish law, a Jewish divorce can be obtained only after the husband has given the get to the wife, who must voluntarily accept it. — Also spelled gett. Pl.

gittin. See rabbinical divorce under DIVORCE.

GET-UP

GIC

GIC. See guaranteed investment contract under INVESTMENT CONTRACT.

GIFT. abbr. GAMETE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER.

gift, n. 1. The voluntary transfer of property to another without compensation. [Cases: Gifts 1.] 2. A thing so transferred. — gift, vb.

absolute gift. See inter vivos gift.

anatomical gift. A testamentary donation of a bodily organ or organs, esp. for transplant or for medical research. • The procedures for making an anatomical gift are set forth in the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act, which has been adopted in every state. [Cases: Dead Bodies 1. C.J.S. Dead Bodies §§ 1–3.]

antenuptial gift. See prenuptial gift.

charitable gift. An inter vivos or testamentary donation to a nonprofit organization for the relief of poverty, the advancement of education, the advancement of religion, the promotion of health, governmental, or municipal purposes, and other purposes the accomplishment of which is beneficial to the community. Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 368 (1959). • When the beneficiary is a religious organization or the gift is intended for a religious purpose, it is sometimes also termed a pious gift.

class gift. A gift to a group of persons, uncertain in number at the time of the gift but to be ascertained at a future time, who are all to take in definite proportions, the share of each being dependent on the ultimate number in the group.

"The typical class gift is to 'children,' 'issue,' 'heirs,' 'brothers and sisters,' 'nieces and nephews,' 'grandchildren.' A class gift is one in which the donor intends to benefit a group or a class of persons, as distinguished from specific individuals; the class gift donor is said to be 'group-minded.' The class gift is one in which the donor intends that the number of donees, from the time of the delivery of the instrument of gift in the case of the inter vivos gift, or from the time of the execution of the will in the case of the testamentary gift, is subject to fluctuation by way of increase or decrease, or by way of increase only, or by way of decrease only, depending on the circumstances of the gift." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 136 (2d ed. 1984).

completed gift. A gift that is no longer in the donor's possession and control. • Only a completed gift is taxable under the gift tax.

gift causa mortis (kaw-z<<schwa>> mor-tis). A gift made in contemplation of the donor's imminent death. • The three essentials are that (1) the gift must be made with a view to the donor's present illness or peril, (2) the donor must actually die from that illness or peril, without ever recovering, and (3) there must be a delivery. Even though causa mortis is the more usual word order in modern law, the correct Latin phrasing is mortis causa — hence gift mortis causa. — Also termed donatio causa mortis; donatio mortis causa; gift in contemplation of death; transfer in contemplation of death. See CONTEMPLATION OF DEATH. [Cases: Gifts 53–68.]

"[Gifts causa mortis] are conditional, like legacies; and it is essential to them that the donor make them in his last illness, or in contemplation and expectation of death; and with reference to their effect after his death, they are good, notwithstanding a previous will; and if he recovers, the gift becomes void." 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *444 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

"A 'gift causa mortis' ... is testamentary, and it is similar to testamentary disposition in the respect that there remains with the donor the power to revoke the gift until his death. In some respects, a gift causa mortis may be said to resemble a contract, for mutual consent and the concurrent will of both parties are necessary to the validity of the transfer." 38A C.J.S. Gifts § 85, at 276–77 (1996).

gift in contemplation of death. See gift causa mortis.

gift inter vivos. See inter vivos gift.

gift in trust. A gift of legal title to property to someone who will act as trustee for the benefit of a beneficiary.

gift over. A property gift (esp. by will) that takes effect after the expiration of a preceding estate in the property (such as a life estate or fee simple determinable) <to Sarah for life, with gift over to Don in fee>. [Cases: Wills 614(2, 3). C.J.S. Wills §§ 1278, 1284–1285.]

gift splitting. See split gift.

gratuitous gift. A gift made without consideration, as most gifts are. • Strictly speaking, the term looks redundant, but it answers to the donum gratuitum of Roman law.

inter vivos gift (in-t<<schwa>>r vI-vohs orvee-vohs). A gift of personal property made during the donor's lifetime and delivered to the donee with the intention of irrevocably surrendering control over the property. — Also termed gift inter vivos; lifetime gift; absolute gift; DONATIO INTER VIVOS. [Cases: Gifts 1–33.]

lifetime gift. See inter vivos gift.

manual gift. Civil law. A gift of movable, tangible property, made by delivery without any formalities. La. Civ. Code art. 1539.

onerous gift (ohn-<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>s oron-<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>s). A gift made subject to certain conditions imposed on the recipient.

pious gift. See charitable gift.

prenuptial gift (pree-n<<schwa>>p-sh<<schwa>>l). A gift of property from one spouse to another before marriage. • In community-property states, prenuptial gifts are often made to preserve the property's classification as separate property. — Also termed antenuptial gift. [Cases: Husband and Wife 250.]

split gift. Tax. A gift that is made by one spouse to a third person and that, for gift-tax purposes, both spouses treat as being made one-half by each spouse; a gift in which the spouses combine their annual gift-tax exclusions. • A split gift, for example, is eligible for two annual exclusions of $10,000 each, or a total of $20,000 for one gift. — Also termed gift-splitting; gift-splitting election. See annual exclusion under EXCLUSION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4206.10. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 566–568.]

substitute gift. A testamentary gift to one person in place of another who is unable to take under the will for some reason. — Also termed substitutional gift.

taxable gift. A gift that, after adjusting for the annual exclusion and applicable deductions, is subject to the federal unified transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) § 2503. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4203.10, 4206.10. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 559, 566–568.]

testamentary gift (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>-ree or -tree). A gift made in a will.

vested gift. An absolute gift, being neither conditional nor contingent, though its use or enjoyment might not occur until sometime in the future.

GIFT DEED

gift deed. See DEED.

GIFT ENTERPRISE

gift enterprise. 1. A scheme for the distribution of items by chance among those who have purchased shares in the scheme. [Cases: Lotteries 3. C.J.S. Lotteries §§ 2–7, 11.] 2. A merchant's scheme to increase sales without lowering prices by giving buyers tickets that carry a chance to win a prize. • Gift enterprises are regulated by state law. See LOTTERY.

GIFTING CIRCLE

gifting circle. See GIFTING CLUB.

GIFTING CLUB

gifting club. A type of pyramid scheme or Ponzi scheme in which recruits make “gifts” of money to other club members with the expectation that future recruits will make “gifts” to the present recruits. • Many gifting clubs limit membership to women. Club leaders usu. try to evade income-tax laws by claiming that the money paid in by a recruit is a tax-free “gift” to a club member and warning new recruits not to expect “gifts” in the future. Some states forbid gifting clubs as illegal pyramid schemes. Other states hold that the clubs are illegal lotteries. — Also termed gifting circle; sisterhood; birthday club. See PONZI SCHEME.

GIFT INTER VIVOS

gift inter vivos. See inter vivos gift under GIFT.

GIFT IN TRUST

GIRTH

girth (g<<schwa>>rth). [Old English] 1. A measure of length, equal to a yard. • This term, which was used in Saxon and early English law, was taken from the circumference of a man's body. 2. The area surrounding a church. 3. A place of sanctuary. 4. A band or strap that encircles the body of an animal to fasten something (usu. a saddle) to its back.

GISEMENT

gisement (jIs- orjIz-m<<schwa>>nt). [Law French] Archaic. See AGISTMENT.

giser (jI-s<<schwa>>r), vb.[Law French] Hist. (Of an action) to lie; to be capable of being brought as a suit in court. • This verb, in its inflected form gist, appeared in such phrases as ou assise ne gist point (“when an assise does not lie”), le action bien gist (“the action well lies”), gist en le bouche (“it lies in the mouth”), and cest action gist (“this action lies”).

GISETAKER

gisetaker (jIs- orjIz-tay-k<<schwa>>r).Archaic. See AGISTER.

GIST

gist (jist).1. The ground or essence (of a legal action) <the gist of the crime>.2. The main point <she skimmed the brief to get the gist of it>. • This noun derives from the Law French verb giser “to lie.” See GISER.

To confer by a formal act <the First Amendment gives all citizens the right to free speech>.3. To present for another to consider <the witness gave compelling testimony before the jury>.4. (Of a jury) to impose or award by verdict <the jury gave the defendant the death penalty> <the jury gave the plaintiff $1,000 in damages>.

GIVE BAIL

give bail,vb. To post security for one's appearance in court <the court ordered the accused to give bail in the amount of $10,000>. — Also termed post bail.

GIVE COLOR

give color,vb. Hist. To admit, either expressly or impliedly by silence, that an opponent's allegations appear to be meritorious. • In common-law pleading, a defendant's plea of confession and avoidance had to give color to the plaintiff's allegations in the complaint or the plea would be fatally defective. See COLOR(2).

GIVE, DEVISE, AND BEQUEATH give, devise, and bequeath,vb. To transfer property by will <I give, devise, and bequeath all the rest, residue, and remainder of my estate to my beloved daughter Sarah>. • This wording has long been criticized as redundant. In modern usage, give ordinarily suffices. See BEQUEST.

GIVEN NAME given name.See NAME.

GIVE WAY

give way,vb. Maritime law. (Of a vessel) to deviate from a course, or to slow down, in accordance with navigation rules, so that a second vessel may pass without altering its course. [Cases: Collision 29, 37. C.J.S. Collision §§ 4, 41, 43.]

GIVING IN PAYMENT

giving in payment.Civil law. The act of discharging a debt by giving something to the creditor (with the creditor's consent) other than what was originally called for. La. Civ. Code art. 2655. • The phrase is a translation of the French dation en paiement and derives from the Roman datio in solutum. See DATIION EN PAIEMENT. Cf. ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

GLADIUS

gladius (glay-dee-<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin “sword”] Roman law. The emblem of the emperor's power, esp. the power to punish criminals. See JUS GLADII.

GLASS-STEAGALL ACT

Glass-Steagall Act. A federal statute that protects bank depositors by restricting the securities-related business of commercial banks, specif. by prohibiting banks from owning brokerage firms or engaging in the brokerage business. 12 USCA § 378. — Also termed Banking Act of 1933.

GLEBAE ASCRIPTITII

glebae ascriptitii. See ADSCRIPTI GLEBAE.

GLEBE

glebe (gleeb). [fr. Latin gleba “clod of earth”] 1. Roman law. The soil of an inheritance; an agrarian estate. • Servi addicti glebae (“slaves bound to the land”) were serfs attached to and passing with the estate. 2. Eccles. law. Land possessed as part of the endowment or revenue of a church or ecclesiastical benefice.

“Diocesan glebe land forms the largest section of ecclesiastical conveyancing work by virtue of the large number of glebe properties which are held in each diocese. Such land is governed primarily by the Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 ... , which in technical terms defines ‘glebe land’ as ‘land vested in the incumbent of a benefice (when the benefice is full) as part of the endowments of the benefice other than parsonage land’; and ‘diocesan glebe land’ as ‘glebe land acquired by a diocesan board of finance under any provision of this Measure and any other land acquired by such a board, being land which by virtue of, or of any enactment amended by, a provision of this Measure is to be held as part of the diocesan glebe land of the diocese.’” David Rees, Ecclesiastical Conveyancing 8 (1989).

GLOBAL FUND

global fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

GLOBE ELECTION

Globe election. Labor law. The procedure by which a group of employees is given the opportunity to decide whether to be represented as a distinct group or to be represented as a part of a larger, existing unit. Globe Machine & Stamping Co., 3 NLRB 294 (1937). — Also termed self-determination election.

GLOS

glos (glos), n. [Latin] Roman law. One's husband's sister.

GLOSS

gloss, n. 1. A note inserted between the lines or in the margin of a text to explain a difficult or obscure word in the text <this edition of Shakespeare's works is bolstered by its many glosses on Elizabethan English>. 2. A collection of explanations; a glossary <the hornbook's copious gloss>. 3. (usu. pl.) A pronouncement about meaning; an interpretation <the statutory language needs no gloss>.

GLOSSATORS

glossators (glah-say-t<<schwa>>rz). (usu. cap.) A group of Italian juriconsults who, from the 11th to the 13th centuries, were primarily responsible for the revival of the study of Roman law. • They originally worked by glossing (that is, explaining in the margin) difficult or unclear passages, and gradually their writings blossomed into full-blown commentaries and discussions. See POSTGLOSSATORS.

GLOUCESTER, STATUTE OF

Gloucester, Statute of (glos-t<<schwa>>r).Hist. A statute that allowed a successful plaintiff to recover costs in addition to damages. • The statute was enacted in Gloucester.6 Edw. 1, ch. 1 (1278).

GLOVE SILVER

glove silver.Hist. Money given as an incentive or reward to a court officer, esp. money given by a sheriff to an assize official when no prisoners were left by the assize for execution. • The name derives from the practice of giving money to servants, ostensibly to buy gloves with.

GODBOTE

Godbote. See BOTE(2).

GOD-GILD

God-gild.Hist. Money paid or something offered for the service of God; esp., a payment of money or a gift (for example, land) to a church. See FRANKALMOIN.

GODPARENT

godparent.Eccles. law. A person, usu. a close family friend or relative, who accepts a parent's invitation to assume part of the responsibility for the religious education of a newly baptized child. • Often, too, there is an un-derstanding that the godparent would help support and rear the child if the parents were to die or become inca-pacitated. The spiritual parent-child relationship creates a canonical impediment to marriage. — Also termed (more specifically) godmother; godfather; (in eccles. law) sponsor.

GOD'S PENNY

God's penny.Hist. Earnest money; a small sum paid on the striking of a bargain. — Also termed denarius Dei; earnest-penny; godpenny. See ARRA.

“It is among the merchants that the giving of earnest first ... becomes a form which binds both buyer and seller in a contract of sale. To all appearances this change was not accomplished without the intermediation of a religious idea. All over western Europe the earnest becomes known as the God's penny or Holy Ghost's penny (denarius Dei) ...” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 208 (2d ed. 1899).

GO FORWARD

go forward,vb. To commence or carry on with the presentation of a case in court <after the lunch recess, the judge instructed the plaintiff to go forward with its case>.

GO HENCE WITHOUT DAY

go hence without day.(Of a defendant to a lawsuit) to be finished with legal proceedings without any further settings on the court's calendar. • Thus, a defendant who “goes hence without day” succeeds in getting a case finally resolved, usu. by dismissal. The phrase derives from the Law French phrase aller sans jour, and over time defendants came to use it to request that the case against them be dismissed without the necessity of a day in court. — Sometimes shortened to go without day; without day. See SINE DIE.

GOING-AND-COMING RULE

going-and-coming rule. 1. The principle that torts committed by an employee while commuting to or from work are generally outside the scope of employment. [Cases: Master and Servant 302.] 2. The principle that denies workers'-compensation benefits to an employee injured while commuting to or from work. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 719–755. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 431–432, 435–447.]

GOING CONCERN

going concern.A commercial enterprise actively engaging in business with the expectation of indefinite conti-nuance. — Also termed going business.

GOING PRICE

going price,n. The prevailing or current market value of something. See fair market value under VALUE(2).

GOING PRIVATE

going private.The process of changing a public corporation into a close corporation by terminating the corporation's status with the SEC as a publicly held corporation and by having its outstanding publicly held shares acquired by a single shareholder or a small group. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.23.]

GOING PUBLIC

going public.The process of a company's selling stock to the investing public for the first time (after filing a registration statement under applicable securities laws), thereby becoming a public corporation. [Cases: Securities Regulation 11.10–11.14. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 8, 35–39, 45, 63.]

GOING THROUGH THE BAR

going through the bar.Hist. A daily process in which the court would ask all barristers present whether they had motions to present. • This practice, which ended in 1873, was conducted according to seniority, except for the last day of a term, when the junior barristers were asked first.

GOING TO THE COUNTRY

going to the country.Hist. The act of requesting a jury trial. • A defendant was said to be “going to the country” by concluding a pleading with the phrase “and of this he puts himself upon the country.” Similarly, a plaintiff would conclude a pleading with the phrase “and this the plaintiff prays may be enquired of by the country.” — Also termed go to the country. Cf. CONCLUSION TO THE COUNTRY.

GOING VALUE

going value.See going-concern value under VALUE(2).

GOING WITNESS

going witness.See WITNESS.

GOLD BOND

gold bond.See BOND(3).

GOLD CLAUSE

gold clause.A provision calling for payment in gold. • Gold clauses, which are now void, were once used in contracts, bonds, and mortgages.

GOLDEN HANDCUFFS

golden handcuffs. Remuneration set at such a high level that the employee earning it cannot leave the firm or company and receive commensurate pay elsewhere. • As a result, the employee often stays in the position even if it is otherwise unrewarding or unpleasant.

GOLDEN HANDSHAKE

golden handshake. A generous compensation package offered to an employee, usu. as an inducement to retire or upon dismissal.

GOLDEN PARACHUTE golden parachute. An employment-contract provision that grants an upper-level executive lucrative severance benefits — including long-term salary guarantees or bonuses — if control of the company changes hands (as by a merger). Cf. TIN PARACHUTE. [Cases: Corporations 308(3). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 532–533, 536.]

GOLDEN RULE

golden rule. The principle that, in construing written instruments, a court should adhere to the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words unless that adherence would lead to some manifest absurdity; esp., in statutory construction, the principle that if a statute's literal meaning would lead to an absurd or unjust result, or even to an inconsistency within the statute itself, the statute should be interpreted in a way that avoids such a result or in-consistency. — Also termed Baron Parke's rule. Cf. ABSURDITY; MISCHIEF RULE ; PLAIN-MEANING RULE; EQUITY-OF-THE-STATUTE RULE. [Cases: Statutes 181(2), 189. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 318, 324.]

“[T]he ‘golden’ rule ... allows for a departure from the literal rule when the application of the statutory words in the ordinary sense would be repugnant to or inconsistent with some other provision in the statute or even when it would lead to what the court considers to be an absurdity. The usual consequence of applying the golden rule is that words which are in the statute are ignored or words which are not there are read in. The scope of the golden rule is debatable, particularly so far as the meaning of an ‘absurdity’ is concerned.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 14 (1976).

GOLDEN-RULE ARGUMENT

golden-rule argument. A jury argument in which a lawyer asks the jurors to reach a verdict by imagining themselves or someone they care about in the place of the injured plaintiff or crime victim. • Because golden-rule arguments ask the jurors to become advocates for the plaintiff or victim and to ignore their obligation to exercise calm and reasonable judgment, these arguments are widely condemned and are considered improper in most states. [Cases: Trial 125(1). C.J.S. Trial §§ 320, 323.]

GOLDSMITHS' NOTES

goldsmiths' notes.Hist. Bankers' cash notes; promissory notes given by bankers to customers as acknowledgments of the receipt of money. • This term derives from the London banking business, which originally was transacted by goldsmiths.

GOLD STANDARD

gold standard.A monetary system in which currency is convertible into its legal equivalent in gold or gold coin. • The United States adopted the gold standard in 1900 and abandoned it in 1934. Cf. PAPER STANDARD.

GOOD DELIVERY

good delivery. See DELIVERY.

good faith, n. A state of mind consisting in (1) honesty in belief or purpose, (2) faithfulness to one's duty or obligation, (3) observance of reasonable commercial standards of fair dealing in a given trade or business, or (4) absence of intent to defraud or to seek unconscionable advantage. — Also termed bona fides. Cf. BAD FAITH. — good-faith, adj.

“The phrase ‘good faith’ is used in a variety of contexts, and its meaning varies somewhat with the context. Good faith performance or enforcement of a contract emphasizes faithfulness to an agreed common purpose and consistency with the justified expectations of the other party; it excludes a variety of types of conduct characterized as involving ‘bad faith’ because they violate community standards of decency, fairness or reasonableness. The appropriate remedy for a breach of the duty of good faith also varies with the circumstances.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 205 cmt. a (1979).

“[G]ood faith is an elusive idea, taking on different meanings and emphases as we move from one context to another — whether the particular context is supplied by the type of legal system (e.g., common law, civilian, or hybrid), the type of contract (e.g., commercial or consumer), or the nature of the subject matter of the contract (e.g., insurance, employment, sale of goods, financial services, and so on).” Roger Brownsword et al., “Good Faith in Contract,” in Good Faith in Contract: Concept and Context 1, 3 (Roger Brownsword ed., 1999).

good-faith bargaining. Labor law. Negotiations between an employer and a representative of employees, usu. a union, in which both parties meet and confer at reasonable times with open minds and with a view to reaching an agreement. • The National Labor Relations Act requires good-faith bargaining, and failure to bargain in good faith is considered an unfair labor practice. 29 USCA §§ 151–169. See UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICE. [Cases: Labor Relations 388.2.]

GOOD-FAITH EXCEPTION

good-faith exception. Criminal procedure. An exception to the exclusionary rule whereby evidence obtained under a warrant later found to be invalid (esp. because it is not supported by probable cause) is nonetheless admissible if the police reasonably relied on the notion that the warrant was valid. • The good-faith exception was adopted by the Supreme Court in United States v. Leon, 468 U.S. 897, 104 S.Ct. 3405 (1984). [Cases: Criminal Law 394.4(6). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 782–785.]

good-faith improver. A person who makes improvements to real property while actually and reasonably believing himself or herself to be the owner or lawful occupant. • The improver may be entitled to recover the value of the improvements from the true owner or to remove them. See IMPROVEMENT.

GOOD-FAITH MARGIN

good-faith margin. See MARGIN.

GOOD-FAITH PURCHASER

good-faith purchaser. See bona fide purchaser under PURCHASER(1).

good health. Insurance. A state of reasonable healthiness; a state of health free from serious disease. • Good health, a phrase often appearing in life-insurance policies, does not mean perfect health. — Also termed sound health. [Cases: Insurance 1758, 3003(8). C.J.S. Insurance § 314.]

“As used in policies of insurance, there is no material difference between the terms ‘sound health’ and ‘good health,’ and generally it appears that the two terms are considered to be synonymous. Such expressions are comparative terms, and the rule followed generally is that the term ‘good health’ or ‘sound health,’ when used in an insurance contract, means that the applicant has no grave, important, or serious disease, and is free from any ailment that seriously affects the general soundness or healthfulness of his system.” 43 Am. Jur. 2d Insurance § 1061, at 1069 (1982).

GOOD JURY

good jury. See special jury under JURY.

GOOD MORAL CHARACTER good moral character, n.1. A pattern of behavior that is consistent with the community's current ethical standards and that shows an absence of deceit or morally reprehensible conduct. • An alien seeking to be naturalized must show good moral character in the five years preceding the petition for naturalization. [Cases: Aliens 62(5). C.J.S. Aliens §§ 287–292.] 2. A pattern of behavior conforming to a profession's ethical standards and showing an absence of moral turpitude. • Good moral character is usu. a requirement of persons applying to practice a profession such as law or medicine. [Cases: Licenses 20. C.J.S. Architects §§ 4, 7; Licenses §§ 39–41.]

GOOD OFFICES

good offices.Int'l law. The involvement of one or more countries or an international organization in a dispute between other countries with the aim of contributing to its settlement or at least easing relations between the disputing countries.

GOOD OF THE ORDER

good of the order.Parliamentary law. A time scheduled, usu. late in a meeting, for informal announcements, comments, and suggestions that do not seek the meeting's immediate action. — Also termed general good and welfare; open forum; open microphone.

GOODRIGHT

Goodright.Hist. A name sometimes used as a fictitious plaintiff in an ejectment action. • “John Doe” was used more frequently. — Also termed Goodtitle. Cf. JOHN DOE.

goods. 1. Tangible or movable personal property other than money; esp., articles of trade or items of merchandise <goods and services>. • The sale of goods is governed by Article 2 of the UCC. [Cases: Sales 10. C.J.S. Sales §§ 12–16.] 2. Things that have value, whether tangible or not <the importance of social goods varies from society to society>.

“ ‘Goods’ means all things (including specially manufactured goods) which are movable at the time of identification to the contract for sale other than the money in which the price is to be paid, investment securities (Article 8) and things in action. ‘Goods’ also includes the unborn young of animals and growing crops and other identified things attached to realty as described in the section on goods to be severed from realty (Section 2-107).” UCC § 2-105(1).

bulky goods.Goods that are obviously difficult to move because of their nature, their number, or their location.

capital goods.Goods (such as equipment and machinery) used for the production of other goods or services. — Also termed industrial goods.

consumer goods.Goods bought or used primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, and not for resale or for producing other goods. UCC § 9-102(a)(23). [Cases: Secured Transactions 15. C.J.S. Secured Transactions § 14.]

customers' goods.Insurance. Goods belonging to the customers of a casualty-insurance policyholder; goods held by a policyholder as a bailee.

distressed goods.Goods sold at unusually low prices or at a loss.

durable goods.Consumer goods that are designed to be used repeatedly over a long period, such as automobiles and personal computers. — Also termed durables; hard goods.

fungible goods (f<<schwa>>n-j<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). Goods that are interchangeable with one another; goods that, by nature or trade usage, are the equivalent of any other like unit, such as coffee or grain. UCC § 1-201(b)(18).

future goods.Goods that will come into being, such as those yet to be manufactured; goods that are not both existing and identified. • A purported present sale of future goods or any interest in them operates as a contract to sell. UCC § 2-105(2).

gray-market goods.See PARALLEL IMPORTS.

hard goods.See durable goods.

household goods.Goods that are used in connection with a home. • This term usu. arises when a warehouse claims a lien on what he or she asserts are “household” goods. According to the UCC, a warehouse may claim a lien on a depositor's furniture, furnishings, and personal effects that are used in a dwelling. UCC § 7-209(3)(b).

industrial goods.See capital goods.

mobile goods.Goods that are normally used in more than one jurisdiction (such as shipping containers and road-construction machinery) and that are held by the debtor as equipment or leased by the debtor to others. • Under previous drafts of the Uniform Commercial Code, the procedure for perfecting a security interest in mobile goods was generally defined by the law of the state where the debtor is located. The current UCC does not distinguish mobile goods.

nonconforming goods.Goods that fail to meet contractual specifications, allowing the buyer to reject the tender of the goods or to revoke their acceptance. UCC §§ 2-601, 2-608. See PERFECT-TENDER RULE. [Cases: Sales 119, 166(1). C.J.S. Sales §§ 176, 182, 194, 199–202.]

ordinary goods.Goods that are anything other than mobile goods, minerals, or goods covered by a certificate of title. • The current UCC does not distinguish between ordinary and mobile goods. [Cases: Secured Transactions 14. C.J.S. Secured Transactions § 13.]

prize goods.Goods captured at sea during wartime.

soft goods.Consumer goods (such as clothing) that are not durable goods.

GOOD SAMARITAN DOCTRINE

Good Samaritan doctrine (s<<schwa>>-mar-i-t<<schwa>>n).Torts. The principle that a person who is injured while attempting to aid another in imminent danger, and who then sues the one whose negligence created the danger, will not be charged with contributory negligence unless the rescue attempt is an unreasonable one or the rescuer acts unreasonably in performing the attempted rescue. Cf. EMERGENCY DOCTRINE; RESCUE DOCTRINE; LOST-CHANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence 510(3). C.J.S. Negligence §§ 240, 317.]

GOOD-SAMARITAN LAW

good-samaritan law.A statute that exempts from liability a person (such as an off-duty physician) who voluntarily renders aid to another in imminent danger but negligently causes injury while rendering the aid. • Some form of good-samaritan legislation has been enacted in all 50 states and in the District of Columbia. — Also written Good Samaritan law. — Also termed good-samaritan statute. Cf. GOOD SAMARITAN DOCTRINE. [Cases: Health 769; Negligence 284. C.J.S. Negligence § 87.]

“The so-called ‘Good Samaritan Statutes’ ... do not require aid to be given. They merely encourage doctors to stop and give aid to strangers in emergency situations by providing that no physician who in good faith renders such aid shall be liable in civil damages as a result of acts or omissions in rendering such aid. Some states have enacted statutes that require a person who is able to do so with no danger or peril to himself to come to the aid of another who is exposed to grave physical harm.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 661 (3d ed. 1982).

GOODS AND CHATTELS

goods and chattels (chat-<<schwa>>lz), n. Loosely, personal property of any kind; occasionally, tangible personal property only. — Also termed goods and effects; goods and merchandise.

GOOD-SOLDIER DEFENSE

good-soldier defense. An excuse theory based on the assertion that a defendant was following orders, esp. of a military or corporate superior. • The term is a derisive label rather than a valid defense. Following an order does not relieve a defendant of responsibility for wrongful acts unless there are circumstances that would amount to coercion.

GOOD TIME

good time. See TIME.

GOOD TITLE

good title. See TITLE(2).

GOODWILL

goodwill. A business's reputation, patronage, and other intangible assets that are considered when appraising the business, esp. for purchase; the ability to earn income in excess of the income that would be expected from the business viewed as a mere collection of assets. • Because an established business's trademark or servicemark is a symbol of goodwill, trademark infringement is a form of theft of goodwill. By the same token, when a trademark is assigned, the goodwill that it carries is also assigned. — Also written good will. Cf. going-concern value under VALUE(2). [Cases: Good Will 1–2.]

“[Goodwill] is only another name for reputation, credit, honesty, fair name, reliability.” Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 36 (1929).

“Good will is to be distinguished from that element of value referred to variously as going-concern value, going value, or going business. Although some courts have stated that the difference is merely technical and that it is unimportant to attempt to separate these intangibles, it is generally held that going-concern value is that which inheres in a plant of an established business.” 38 Am. Jur. 2d Good Will § 2, at 913 (1968).

GOOSE CASE

goose case. See WHITEHORSE CASE.

GOOSEHORN

goosehorn, n. Slang. A bawdy house; a house of prostitution. See DISORDERLY HOUSE .

GORE

gore (gor), n. 1. Hist. A small, narrow slip of land. 2. A small (often triangular) piece of land, such as may be left between surveys that do not close. 3. In some New England states (such as Maine and Vermont), a county's subdivision that has little population and thus is not organized as a town.

GOTHLAND SEA LAWS

Gothland sea laws. See LAWS OF VISBY.

GO TO PROTEST

go to protest. (Of commercial paper) to be dishonored by nonpayment or nonacceptance <the draft will go to protest>. See DISHONOR(1); PROTEST(2).

GOVERN

govern, vb. (Of a precedent) to control a point in issue <the Smith case will govern the outcome of the appeal>.

GOVERNING BODY

governing body. 1. GOVERNMENT(2). 2. A group of (esp. corporate) officers or persons having ultimate control <the board of directors is the governing body of XYZ, Inc.>.

GOVERNING DOCUMENT

governing document. See DOCUMENT.

GOVERNMENT

government. 1. The structure of principles and rules determining how a state or organization is regulated. 2. The sovereign power in a nation or state. 3. An organization through which a body of people exercises political authority; the machinery by which sovereign power is expressed <the Canadian government>. • In this sense, the term refers collectively to the political organs of a country regardless of their function or level, and regardless of the subject matter they deal with. Cf. NATION; STATE.

central government. See federal government (1).

de facto government (di fak-toh).1. A government that has taken over the regular government and exercises sovereignty over a nation. 2. An independent government established and exercised by a group of a country's inhabitants who have separated themselves from the parent state. — Also termed government de facto.

de jure government.A functioning government that is legally established. — Also termed government de jure.

federal government. 1. A national government that exercises some degree of control over smaller political units that have surrendered some degree of power in exchange for the right to participate in national political matters. — Also termed (in federal states) central government. 2. The U.S. government. — Also termed national government. [Cases: United States 1. C.J.S. United States §§ 2–3.]

government de facto.See de facto government.

government de jure.See de jure government.

local government.The government of a particular locality, such as a city or county; a governing body at a lower level than the state government. • The term includes a school district, fire district, transportation authority, and any other special-purpose district or authority. — Also termed municipal government. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 6. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations § 12.]

mixed government.A government containing a blend of forms, as in democracy and monarchy.

municipal government.See local government.

national government.1.NATIONAL GOVERNMENT. 2. See federal government(2).

4. The executive branch of the U.S. government. 5. The prosecutors in a given criminal case <the government has objected to the introduction of that evidence>.6. An academic course devoted to the study of government; political science <Bridges is enrolled in Government 101>.

GOVERNMENT AGENCY

government agency. See AGENCY(3).

GOVERNMENT-AGENCY DEFENSE

government-agency defense. Torts. An affirmative defense that immunizes a contractor from liability upon proof that the contractor acted on the government's behalf as an agent or as a government officer. • This defense is extremely limited because of the difficulty of establishing the government-agent relationship. See Yearsley v. W.A. Ross Constr. Co., 309 U.S. 18, 20–22, 60 S.Ct. 413, 414–15 (1940). Cf. GOVERNMENT-CONTRACTOR DEFENSE; CONTRACT-SPECIFICATION DEFENSE.

GOVERNMENT-AGENCY SECURITY

GOVERNMENTAL ENTERPRISE governmental enterprise. See ENTERPRISE.

GOVERNMENTAL FUNCTION

governmental function. Torts. A government agency's conduct that is expressly or impliedly mandated or authorized by constitution, statute, or other law and that is carried out for the benefit of the general public. • Generally, a governmental entity is immune from tort liability for governmental acts. — Also termed governmental act; governmental activity. See PUBLIC-FUNCTION TEST. Cf. PROPRIETARY FUNCTION. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 724.C.J.S. Municipal Corporations § 664.]

“[A]ctivities of police or firefighters, though tortious, are usually considered governmental in the sense that they involve the kind of power expected of the government, even if its exercise in the specific case is wrongful. The city is immune as to such activities for this reason. On the other hand, if the city operates a local electric or water company for which fees are charged, this looks very much like private enterprise and is usually considered pro-prietary.... The difficult distinction between governmental and proprietary functions is even more troubling where the city's conduct combines both kinds of function at once. For example, operation of a sanitary sewer may be deemed governmental, but operation of a storm sewer may be deemed proprietary.” W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 131, at 1053–54 (5th ed. 1984).

GOVERNMENTAL-FUNCTION THEORY governmental-function theory. Constitutional law. A principle by which private conduct is characterized as state action, esp. for due-process and equal-protection purposes, when a private party is exercising a public function. • Under this theory, for example, a political party (which is a private entity) cannot exclude voters from primary elections on the basis of race. — Also termed public-function rationale. [Cases: Civil Rights 1326(4, 7); Constitutional Law 213(4), 254(4). C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 92–94; Constitutional Law §§ 705, 719, 954–958.]

GOVERNMENTAL IMMUNITY

governmental immunity. See sovereign immunity under IMMUNITY(1).

GOVERNMENTAL INSTRUMENTALITY governmental instrumentality. A constitutionally or legislatively created agency that is immune from certain kinds of liability, as for taxes or punitive damages. [Cases: United States 53. C.J.S. United States §§ 83, 88–95.]

GOVERNMENTAL UNIT

governmental unit. A subdivision, agency, department, county, parish, municipality, or other unit of the government of a country or a state. • The term includes an organization with a separate corporate existence only if the organization can legally issue debt obligations on which interest is exempt from income taxation under national law. UCC § 9-102(a)(45). [Cases: Municipal Corporations 6. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations § 12.]

GOVERNMENT-ANNUITY SOCIETY

government-annuity society. Hist. One of several organizations formed in England to enable the working class to provide for themselves by purchasing, on advantageous terms, a government annuity for life or for a term of years.

GOVERNMENT BOND

government bond. See savings bond under BOND(3); government security under SECURITY.

GOVERNMENT CONTRACT

government contract. See CONTRACT.

GOVERNMENT-CONTRACTOR DEFENSE government-contractor defense. An affirmative defense that immunizes a government contractor from civil liability under state law when the contractor complies with government specifications. • Immunization is extended when two conditions are satisfied: (1) the supplier warned the government about any dangers presented by the goods about which the supplier had knowledge but the government did not, and (2) the government itself is immune from liability under the Feres doctrine. Essentially, this federal common-law defense, which has been applied in cases of negligence, strict liability, and breach of warranty, extends sovereign immunity over the contractor. The leading case on this defense is Boyle v. United Techs. Corp., 487 U.S. 500, 108 S.Ct. 2510 (1988). — Also termed Boyle defense; government-contract defense; government-contract-specification defense; (in military context) military-contract defense. See FERES DOCTRINE. Cf. GOVERNMENT-AGENCY DEFENSE. [Cases: Aviation 13; Products Liability 26. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace §§ 125–135; Products Liability §§ 44, 48.]

GOVERNMENT-CONTRACT-SPECIFICATION DEFENSE

GOVERNMENT NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

Government National Mortgage Association. A federally owned corporation in the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development responsible for guaranteeing mortgage-backed securities composed of FHA-insured or VA-guaranteed mortgage loans. • The Association purchases, on the secondary market, residential mortgages originated by local lenders; it then issues federally insured securities backed by these mortgages. — Abbr. GNMA. — Also termed Ginnie Mae. [Cases: United States 53(9).]

GOVERNMENT OF LAWS

government of laws. The doctrine that government must operate according to established, consistent legal principles and not according to the interests of those who happen to be in power at a given time; esp., the doctrine that judicial decisions must be based on the law, regardless of the character of the litigants or the personal predilections of the judge.

GOVERNMENT PLAN

government plan. See governmental plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE

Government Printing Office. An office in the legislative branch of the federal government responsible for printing and distributing congressional publications and publications of other agencies of the United States government. • The Office is supervised by the Congressional Joint Committee on Printing. It began operating in 1860. — Abbr. GPO.

GRAB LAW

grab law. The various means of debt collection involving remedies outside the scope of federal bankruptcy law, such as attachment and garnishment; aggressive collection practices. [Cases: Attachment 1; Garnishment 1. C.J.S. Attachment §§ 2–4, 7.]

GRACE PERIOD

grace period. 1. A period of extra time allowed for taking some required action (such as making payment) without incurring the usual penalty for being late. • Insurance policies typically provide for a grace period of 30 days beyond the premium's due date, during which the premium may be paid without the policy being canceled. And Article 9 of the UCC provides for a ten-day grace period, after the collateral is received, during which a purchase-money security interest must be perfected to have priority over any conflicting security interests. — Also termed days of grace; grace days. 2. Patents. The one-year interval allowed by the U.S. Patent Act between the time an invention is used in public, sold, offered for sale, or disclosed in a publication and the time the inventor applies for a patent. • Most countries follow the doctrine of absolute priority and do not allow a grace period. — Sometimes shortened to grace. Cf. STATUTORY BAR; absolute novelty under NOVELTY.

gradatim (gr<<schwa>>-day-t<<schwa>>m), adv.[Latin] Roman law. Gradually; by successive degrees of relationship. • Gradatim refers to the step-by-step admission of successors when there is no heir next in line. See GRADUS(1).

GRADE

grade,n. Criminal law. An incremental step in the scale of punishments for offenses, based on a particular offense's seriousness <several grades of murder>. See DEGREE(2).

GRADED OFFENSE

graded offense.See OFFENSE(1).

GRADING

GRANDFATHER CLAUSE

grandfather clause. 1. Hist. A clause in the constitutions of some Southern states exempting from suffrage re-strictions the descendants of men who voted before the Civil War. 2. A provision that creates an exemption from the law's effect for something that existed before the law's effective date; specif., a statutory or regulatory clause that exempts a class of persons or transactions because of circumstances existing before the new rule or regulation takes effect. [Cases: Statutes 228. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 370–372.] 3. In a government contract, a provision that immunizes the contractor against any changes in federal law that would otherwise adversely affect the contract. • For example, the government may promise to cover any increased costs that arise from a change in the law, even though the contractor would bear them for any other reason. 4. In a construction contract, a general and inclusive provision that makes a party responsible for dealing with risks, whether expected or unexpected.

GRAND INQUEST

grand inquest. See INQUEST.

GRAND JUROR

grand juror. See JUROR.

GRAND JURY

grand jury. A body of (often 23) people who are chosen to sit permanently for at least a month — and sometimes a year — and who, in ex parte proceedings, decide whether to issue indictments. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 6. • If the grand jury decides that evidence is strong enough to hold a suspect for trial, it returns a bill of indictment (a true bill) charging the suspect with a specific crime. — Also termed accusing jury; presenting jury; jury of indictment. Cf. petit jury under JURY. [Cases: Grand Jury 1.]

“The grand jury serves — or may serve — two distinct functions. One is a screening function; the grand jury evaluates evidence supporting possible charges and returns an indictment only in those cases in which the evidence amounts to at least probable cause. The other is an investigational function; the grand jury sometimes develops information that is of value in determining whether grounds for a charge exist and — perhaps incidentally — in proving that charge at the defendant's later criminal trial.” Frank W. Miller et al., Cases and Materials on Criminal Justice Administration 546 (3d ed. 1986).

additional grand jury. See special grand jury.

investigative grand jury. A grand jury whose primary function is to examine possible crimes and develop evidence not currently available to the prosecution. — Also termed investigatory grand jury.

runaway grand jury. A grand jury that acts essentially in opposition to the prosecution, as by perversely failing to return an indictment that the prosecution has requested.

screening grand jury. A grand jury whose primary function is to decide whether to issue an indictment.

special grand jury. A grand jury specially summoned, usu. when the regular grand jury either has already been discharged or has not been drawn; a grand jury with limited authority. — Also termed additional grand jury; extraordinary grand jury. [Cases: Grand Jury 10.]

GRAND JURY CLAUSE

Grand Jury Clause. The clause of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution requiring an indictment by a grand jury before a person can be tried for serious offenses.

grand-jury witness. See WITNESS.

GRAND LARCENY

grand larceny. See LARCENY.

GRANDPARENT APPLICATION

grandparent application. See PATENT APPLICATION.

GRANDPARENT RIGHTS

grandparent rights. A grandfather's or grandmother's rights in seeking visitation with a grandchild. • By statute in most states, in certain circumstances a grandparent may seek court-ordered visitation with a grandchild. Typically these circumstances include the death of the grandparents' child (the child's parent) and the divorce of the child's parents. But the United States Supreme Court has held that the primary, constitutionally protected right of decision-making regarding association with a child lies with the child's parents. As a general rule, if the parent is a fit and proper guardian and objects to visitation, the parent's will prevails. Troxel v. Granville, 530 U.S. 57, 120 S.Ct. 2054 (2000).

GRANDPARENT VISITATION

grandparent visitation. See VISITATION.

GRAND REMONSTRANCE

Grand Remonstrance (ri-mon-str<<schwa>>nts). Hist. A protest document issued by the House of Commons in 1641, setting forth numerous political grievances against Charles I. • The document demanded three primary remedial measures: (1) improvements in the administration of justice, (2) appointment of trustworthy ministers, and (3) enforcement of the laws against Roman Catholics. It was the first major split between the Royalist and Parliamentary parties, and it led Charles to seek the arrest of the five members who pushed the document through Commons.

GRAND SERJEANTY

grand serjeanty. See SERJEANTY.

GRAND SURVEY

Grand Survey. See grand inquest (2) under INQUEST.

grange (graynj). 1. Hist. A farm furnished with all the necessities for husbandry, such as a barn, granary, and stables; esp., an outlying farm that belonged to a religious establishment or a feudal lord. 2. (cap.) A social, educational, and political organization, formally called the National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry, that informs its members about agriculture-related legislation and proposals, and represents farm interests in lobbying government. • The Grange was formed in 1867 and soon became the foundation of the Granger Movement, a 19th-century political force that protested economic abuses that increased farmers' costs while forcing down prices for agricultural products. Movement followers (called Grangers) controlled several Midwest state legislatures and passed Granger laws that set maximum rates for railroads, warehouses, and elevators. Railroads and other interested parties challenged the constitutionality of these laws in what have become known as the Granger Cases.

GRANGER CASES

Granger Cases (grayn-j<<schwa>>r). Six U.S. Supreme Court decisions that affirmed the government's right to regulate fees charged by common carriers, warehouses, and grain elevators. • The cases, decided in 1876, arose out of grangers' (i.e., farmers') frustration with the inflated prices they were paying to store and transport their agricultural products. Several state legislatures passed statutes regulating the rates. The affected businesses sued to have the statutes overturned on grounds that they violated the Commerce Clause and the Due Process Clause of the 14th Amendment. The Court rejected these claims, holding that the activities involved affected the public interest and were therefore subject to the government's regulatory authority. See GRANGE(2).

GRANT

grant,n.1. An agreement that creates a right of any description other than the one held by the grantor. • Examples include leases, easements, charges, patents, franchises, powers, and licenses. 2. The formal transfer of real prop-erty. [Cases: Deeds 3. C.J.S. Deeds §§ 1–8.] 3. The document by which a transfer is effected; esp., DEED. 4. The property or property right so transferred.

community grant.A grant of real property made by a government (or sometimes by an individual) for communal use, to be held in common with no right to sell. • A community grant may set out specific, communal uses for the property, such as for grazing animals or a playground. Cf. private grant.

escheat grant.A government's grant of escheated land to a new owner. — Also termed escheat patent.

imperfect grant. 1. A grant that requires the grantor to do something before the title passes to another. Cf. perfect grant. 2. A grant that does not convey all rights and complete title against both private persons and government, so that the granting person or political authority may later disavow the grant. See Paschal v. Perex, 7 Tex. 368 (1851).

inclusive grant.A deed or grant that describes the boundaries of the land conveyed and excepts certain parcels within those boundaries from the conveyance, usu. because those parcels of land are owned or claimed by others. — Also termed inclusive deed.

office grant.A grant made by a legal officer because the owner is either unwilling or unable to execute a deed to pass title, as in the case of a tax deed. See tax deed under DEED.

perfect grant.A grant for which the grantor has done everything required to pass a complete title, and the grantee has done everything required to receive and enjoy the property in fee. Cf. imperfect grant (1).

private grant. A grant of real property made to an individual for his or her private use, including the right to sell it. • Private grants made by a government are often found in the chains of title for land outside the original 13 states, esp. in former Spanish and Mexican possessions. Cf. community grant.

5.Int'l law. SUBSIDY(1).

grant, vb. 1. To give or confer (something), with or without compensation <the parents granted the car to their daughter on her 16th birthday>. 2. To formally transfer (real property) by deed or other writing <the Lewisons granted the townhouse to the Bufords>. [Cases: Deeds 3. C.J.S. Deeds §§ 1–8.] 3. To permit or agree to <the press secretary granted the reporter access to the Oval Office>. 4. To approve, warrant, or order (a request, motion, etc.) <the court granted the continuance>. 5.Int'l law. SUBSIDY(1).

grantback, n. A license-agreement provision requiring the licensee to assign or license back to the licensor any improvements that the licensee might make to a patent or other proprietary right. [Cases: Patents 213. C.J.S. Patents § 351.]

GRANT DEED

grant deed. See DEED.

GRANTEE

GRANT-IN-AID

grant-in-aid. 1. A sum of money given by a governmental agency to a person or institution for a specific purpose; esp., federal funding for a state public program. [Cases: United States 82(2).] 2.Hist. AID(1).

GRANTING CLAUSE

granting clause. The words that transfer an interest in a deed or other instrument, esp. an oil-and-gas lease. • In an oil-and-gas lease, the granting clause typically specifies the rights transferred, the uses permitted, and the substances covered by the lease. [Cases: Deeds 28–37; Mines and Minerals 73, 73.1. C.J.S. Deeds §§ 19, 34–38, 40–42, 44–53; Mines and Minerals §§ 233, 238, 240–246, 265, 291, 442.]

GRANT OF RIGHTS

grant of rights. Copyright. A copyright owner's prepublication assignment to the publisher of all rights in exchange for an advance on royalties or other payment.

GRANTOR

grantor. 1. One who conveys property to another. [Cases: Deeds 10, 30. C.J.S. Deeds §§ 23, 44.] 2.SETTLOR(1).

GRANT TO USES

grant to uses. Hist. A conveyance of legal title to real property to one person for the benefit of another. • If, for example, A conveyed land to B and his heirs to the use of C and his heirs, B — the feoffee to uses — acquired seisin in and had possession of the land and was considered the legal owner. C — the cestui que use — was considered the equitable owner of the land and was entitled to the land's rents, profits, and benefits. Because the cestui que use did not have seisin in the land, he was not subject to feudal payments. From the 13th century forward, the grant to uses was an increasingly popular mode of conveyance. See CESTUI QUE USE; STATUTE OF USES; USE(4).

GRASS HEARTH

grass hearth. Hist. A tenant's customary service, consisting of the tenant's bringing his plow to the lord's land and plowing it for one day.

GRASSUM

grassum (gras-*<<schwa>>*m). [Law Latin] Scots law. 1. An additional lease payment made in anticipation of or in addition to rent. Pl. grassums. 2. GRESSUME.

“Grassum; an anticipation of rent in a gross or lump sum In questions with singular successors there is no limitation of the power to take grassums, only the rent must not be thereby diminished so as to be altogether elusory. In regard, however, to lands under entail, the heir in possession must administer the estate secundum bonum et aequum, taking no more of the annually accruing rents and profits than he leaves to descend to his successors. Hence, grassums, as being, in effect, anticipations of the future rents, to the prejudice of succeeding heirs, are held to be struck at by the prohibition against alienation." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Laws of Scotland 492 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

GUARANTEE

guarantee (gar-<<schwa>>n-tee), n.1. The assurance that a contract or legal act will be duly carried out. 2.GUARANTY(1).

“In practice, guarantee, n., is the usual term, seen often, for example, in the context of consumer warranties or other assurances of quality or performance. Guaranty, in contrast, is now used primarily in financial and banking contexts in the sense ”a promise to answer for the debt of another. “ Guaranty is now rarely seen in nonlegal writing, whether in G.B. or in the U.S.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 394 (2d ed. 1995).

3. Something given or existing as security, such as to fulfill a future engagement or a condition subsequent. [Cases: Guaranty 29.] 4. One to whom a guaranty is made. — Also spelled guaranty.

guarantee,vb.1. To assume a suretyship obligation; to agree to answer for a debt or default. 2. To promise that a contract or legal act will be duly carried out. 3. To give security to.

GUARANTEE CLAUSE

guarantor. One who makes a guaranty or gives security for a debt. • While a surety's liability begins with that of the principal, a guarantor's liability does not begin until the principal debtor is in default. Cf. SURETY. [Cases: Guaranty 29, 33.]

“A guarantor either guarantees payment or collection, depending on the words used. ‘Payment guaranteed’ or equivalent words added to a signature mean the signer will pay the instrument if it is not paid when due without a need for the holder to resort to another party. ‘Collection guaranteed’ means resort must first be had to others.” Fred H. Miller & Alvin C. Harrell, The Law of Modern Payment Systems § 5.02, at 195 (2003).

guarantor of collectibility. One who guarantees a debtor's solvency and is under a duty to pay only if the creditor is unable to collect from the principal debtor after exhausting all legal remedies, including demand, suit, judgment, and any supplementary proceedings. [Cases: Guaranty 33, 45, 77(2).]

guarantor of payment. One who guarantees payment of a negotiable instrument when it is due without the holder first seeking payment from another party. • A guarantor of payment is liable only if “payment guaranteed” or equivalent words are added to the guarantor's indorsement. [Cases: Guaranty 35, 45, 77.]

GUARANTOR TRUST

guarantor trust. See TRUST.

GUARANTY

guaranty (gar-*<<schwa>>*n-tee), n.1. A promise to answer for the payment of some debt, or the performance of some duty, in case of the failure of another who is liable in the first instance. • The term is most common in finance and banking contexts. While a warranty relates to things (not persons), is not collateral, and need not be in writing, a guaranty is an undertaking that a person will pay or do some act, is collateral to the duty of the primary obligor, and must be in writing. On the spelling of guaranty vs. guarantee, see the quotation at GUARANTEE(2). — Also termed guaranty contract. [Cases: Guaranty 1.]

“Both guaranty and warranty are undertakings by one party to another to indemnify the party assured against some possible default or defect. But a guaranty relates to the future, as a collateral promise designed to protect the promisee from loss in case another fails to perform his duty. A warranty relates to the present or past, and is an independent promise designed to protect the promisee from loss in the event that the facts warranted are not as the promisor states them to be when the contract is made. A warranty is broken as soon as it is made if the facts are not as represented, and is enforceable though oral; whereas a guaranty is not breached until a future default occurs, and is unenforceable unless in writing.” Laurence P. Simpson, Handbook on the Law of Suretyship 23 (1950).

“A transaction of guaranty involves at least three parties: a promisor, a creditor (the person to whom the promise is made), and a debtor — although at the time the promise is made, the person denominated the ‘creditor’ need not have extended the credit to the person denominated as the ‘debtor.’ The usual guaranty situation arises when the promisor makes a promise to the creditor either as to the solvency of the debtor or as to the payment of the debt.” 38 Am. Jur. 2d Guaranty § 1, at 996 (1968).

absolute guaranty. 1. An unqualified promise that the principal will pay or perform. 2. A guarantor’s contractual promise to perform some act for the creditor — such as paying money or delivering property — if the principal debtor defaults.

conditional guaranty.A guaranty that requires the performance of some condition by the creditor before the guarantor will become liable. [Cases: Guaranty 42.]

contingent guaranty.A guaranty in which the guarantor will not be liable unless a specified event occurs.

continuing guaranty.A guaranty that governs a course of dealing for an indefinite time or by a succession of credits. — Also termed open guaranty. [Cases: Guaranty 38.]

general guaranty. 1. A guaranty addressed to no specific person, so that anyone who acts on it can enforce it. 2. A guaranty for the principal’s default on obligations that the principal undertakes with anyone.

guaranty of collection.A guaranty that is conditioned on the creditor’s having first exhausted legal remedies against the principal debtor before suing the guarantor. See guarantor of collectibility under GUARANTOR.

guaranty of payment.A guaranty that is not conditioned on the creditor’s exhausting legal remedies against the principal debtor before suing the guarantor. See guarantor of payment under GUARANTOR.

irrevocable guaranty (i-rev-schwa-k*schwa*-b*schwa*l). A guaranty that cannot be terminated unless the other parties consent. [Cases: Guaranty 24.]

limited guaranty.An agreement to answer for a debt arising from a single transaction. — Also termed noncontinuing guaranty.

revocable guaranty. A guaranty that the guarantor may terminate without any other party's consent. [Cases: Guaranty 24.]

special guaranty. 1. A guaranty addressed to a particular person or group of persons, who are the only ones who can enforce it. [Cases: Guaranty 29, 32.] 2. A guaranty that names a definite person as obligee and that can be accepted only by the person named.

specific guaranty. A guaranty of a single debt or obligation.

GUARDIAN

guardian,n.1. One who has the legal authority and duty to care for another's person or property, esp. because of the other's infancy, incapacity, or disability. • A guardian may be appointed either for all purposes or for a specific purpose. — Abbr. gdn. — Also termed custodian. See CONSERVATOR. Cf. WARD(1). [Cases: Guardian and Ward 1; Mental Health 101. C.J.S. Insane Persons §§ 108, 110, 143.]

chancery guardian (chan-s<<schwa>>r-ee). A guardian appointed by a court of chancery to manage both the person and the estate of the ward. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 10, 17, 36.]

domestic guardian.A guardian appointed in the state in which the ward is domiciled.

foreign guardian.A guardian appointed by a court in a state other than the one in which the ward is domiciled. • A foreign guardian cares for the ward's property that is located in the state of appointment. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 166; Mental Health 194.]

general guardian.A guardian who has general care and control of the ward's person and estate. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 29, 36; Mental Health 495. C.J.S. Insane Persons §§ 271–273.]

guardian ad litem (ad II-tem or- t<<schwa>>m). A guardian, usu. a lawyer, appointed by the court to appear in a lawsuit on behalf of an incompetent or minor party. — Abbr. GAL. — Also termed special advocate; special guardian; law guardian. Cf. NEXT FRIEND; attorney ad litem under ATTORNEY. [Cases: Infants 76, 205; Mental Health 485. C.J.S. Infants §§ 51–52, 62, 64–67, 222; Insane Persons § 264.]

“[I]t is necessary to determine whether the lawyer has been appointed as a guardian ad litem (GAL) charged with representing the child's best interests, or as an advocate, serving as counsel to the child From the distinction between guardian and advocate flow a series of important consequences, including such matters as whether the attorney may file motions and examine witnesses, whether the attorney may file a report with the court, and whether the attorney may testify. Moreover, in most jurisdictions a GAL has an absolute quasi-judicial immunity for lawsuits for negligence Although a non-lawyer cannot serve as counsel to the child, such an individual might be a GAL or ‘special advocate’ in some states. Courts have struggled to clarify these roles, and define how children's representatives may participate in different types of proceedings.” Homer H. Clark Jr. & Ann Laquer Estin, Domestic Relations: Cases and Problems 1078 (6th ed. 2000).

guardian by custom.Hist. A person who, under local custom, had the right to act as a minor's guardian.

guardian by election.A guardian chosen by a ward who would otherwise be without one. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 19.]

guardian by estoppel.See quasi-guardian.

guardian by nature.Hist. The parental guardian of an heir apparent who has not yet reached the age of 21. • Although the common law made the father the guardian by nature and the mother only after the father's death, most states have given both parents equal rights of guardianship over their children (see, e.g., N.Y. Dom. Rel. Law § 81). — Also termed natural guardian. [Cases:

Guardian and Ward 4.]

guardian by nurture.Hist. The parental guardian of a child who is not the heir apparent, lasting until the child reaches the age of 14. — Also termed guardian for nurture.

“There are also guardians for nurture, which are, of course, the father or mother, till the infant attains the age of fourteen years and, in default of father or mother, the ordinary usually assigns some discreet persons to take care of the infant's personal estate, and to provide for his maintenance and education.” 1 William Blackstone, Com-mentaries on the Laws of England 449 (1765).

guardian by statute.See statutory guardian.

HABEAS CORPORA JURATORUM

habeas corpora juratorum (hay-bee-*<<schwa>>s kor-p<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>* juur-<<schwa>>-tor-*<<schwa>>*m). [Law Latin “that you have the bodies of the jurors”] Hist. A writ commanding the sheriff to bring in jurors and, if necessary, to take their lands and goods as security to ensure their attendance in court for a trial setting. • This writ issued from the Court of Common Pleas and served the same purpose as a distringas juratores in the King's Bench. The writ was abolished in 1852.

HABEAS CORPUS

habeas corpus (hay-bee-*<<schwa>>s kor-p<<schwa>>*s). [Law Latin “that you have the body”] A writ employed to bring a person before a court, most frequently to ensure that the party's imprisonment or detention is not illegal (habeas corpus ad subjiciendum). • In addition to being used to test the legality of an arrest or commitment, the writ may be used to obtain review of (1) the regularity of the extradition process, (2) the right to or amount of bail, or (3) the jurisdiction of a court that has imposed a criminal sentence. — Abbr. H.C. — Sometimes shortened to habeas. — Also termed writ of habeas corpus; Great Writ. [Cases: Habeas Corpus 201.]

habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum (hay-bee-<<schwa>>s kor-p<<schwa>>s ad sat-is-fay-shee-en-d<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin “that you have the body to make amends”] In England, a writ used to bring a prisoner against whom a judgment has been entered to some superior court so that the plaintiff can proceed to execute that judgment.

habeas corpus ad subjiciendum (hay-bee-<<schwa>>s kor-p<<schwa>>s ad s<<schwa>>b-jis-ee-en-d<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin “that you have the body to submit to”] A writ directed to someone detaining another person and commanding that the detainee be brought to court. — Usu. shortened to habeas corpus. [Cases: Habeas Corpus 201.]

habeas corpus ad testificandum (hay-bee-<<schwa>>s kor-p<<schwa>>s ad tes-ti-fi-kan-d<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin “that you have the body to testify”] Hist. A writ used in civil and criminal cases to bring a prisoner to court to testify. [Cases: Witnesses 18. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 65–66.]

habeas corpus cum causa. See habeas corpus ad faciendum et recipiendum.

HABEAS CORPUS ACT

Habeas Corpus Act. 1. One of the four great charters of English liberty (31 Car. 2 (1679)), securing to English subjects speedy relief from all unlawful imprisonments. • The other three great charters are Magna Carta, the Petition of Right (3 Car. 1 (1628)), and the Bill of Rights (1 Wm. & M. (1689)). The Habeas Corpus Act does not apply in Scotland; the corresponding statute is the Criminal Procedure Act of 1701, ch. 6. 2. A statute deriving ultimately from the English statute and enacted in the United States as a constitutional guarantee of personal liberty. [Cases: Habeas Corpus 201–913.]

HABENDUM CLAUSE

habendum clause (h<<schwa>>-ben-d<<schwa>>m). 1. The part of an instrument, such as a deed or will, that defines the extent of the interest being granted and any conditions affecting the grant. • The introductory words to the clause are ordinarily to have and to hold. — Also termed to-have-and-to-hold clause. [Cases: Deeds 120. C.J.S. Deeds §§ 36, 231–236, 253–260, 262, 268, 270–274, 276–278.] 2.Oil & gas. The provision in an oil-and-gas lease defining how long the interest granted to the lessee will extend. • Modern oil-and-gas leases typically provide for a primary term — a fixed number of years during which the lessee has no obligation to develop the premises — and a secondary term (for “so long thereafter as oil and gas produced”) once development takes place. Most jurisdictions require production of paying quantities to keep the lease in effect. — Also termed term clause. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 73.5. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 241, 247, 253–254.] — Often shortened to habendum.

“This part of the deed was originally used to determine the interest granted, or to lessen, enlarge, explain or qualify the premises. But it cannot perform the office of divesting the estate already vested by the deed; for it is void if it be repugnant to the estate granted. It has degenerated into a mere useless form; and the premises now contain the specification of the estate granted, and the deed becomes effectual without any habendum. If, however, the premises should be merely descriptive, and no estate mentioned, then the habendum becomes efficient to declare the intention; and it will rebut any implication arising from the silence of the premises.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *468 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

HABENDUM ET TENENDUM

habendum et tenendum (h<<schwa>>-ben-d<<schwa>>m et t<<schwa>>-nen-d<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. To have and to hold. • This formal phrase appeared in land deeds and defined the estate or interest being transferred. See HABENDUM CLAUSE ; TENENDUM.

habere (h<<schwa>>-beer-ee), vb.[Latin “to have”] Roman law. To have (the right to) something. • This term was sometimes distinguished from tenere (to hold) and possidere (to possess), with habere referring to the right, tenere to the fact, and possidere to both.

“ ‘Habere’ has two meanings; for we say that the owner of a thing ‘has’ it and also that a nonowner who holds the thing ‘has’ it. Lastly, we use the word in relation to property deposited with us.” Digest of Justinian 45.1.38.9 (Ulpian, Ad Sabinum 49).

HABERE FACIAS POSSESSIONEM

habere facias possessionem (h<<schwa>>-beer-ee fay-shee-<<schwa>>s p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh-n<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin “that you cause to have possession”] Hist. A writ giving a successful ejectment-action plaintiff the possession of the recovered land. • If the sheriff delivered more than the person was entitled to, a writ of rehabere facias seisinam could compel the sheriff to return the excess. — Often shortened to habere facias or hab. fa.

HABERE FACIAS SEISINAM

habere facias seisinam (h<<schwa>>-beer-ee fay-shee-<<schwa>>s see-zi-n<< schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin “that you cause to have seisin”] Hist. A writ of execution commanding the sheriff to give the applicant seisin of the recovered land. • This writ was the proper process for giving seisin of a freehold, as distinguished from giving only a chattel interest in land. See SEISIN.

HABERE FACIAS VISUM

HADLEY V. BAXENDALE RULE

Hadley v. Baxendale rule.Contracts. The principle that consequential damages will be awarded for breach of contract only if it was foreseeable at the time of contracting that this type of damage would result from the breach.Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341 (1854). • Hadley v. Baxendale is best known for its impact on a nonbreaching party's ability to recover consequential damages, but the case also confirmed the principle that the nonbreaching party may recover damages that arise naturally from the breach. See foreseeable damages under DAMAGES. [Cases: Damages 23. C.J.S. Damages §§ 28–33.]

important new limitation on the scope of recovery that juries could allow for breach of contract. The result was to impose a more severe limitation on the recovery of damages for breach of contract than that applicable to actions in tort or for breach of warranty, in which substantial or proximate cause is the test.” E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 12.14, at 822–23 (3d ed. 1999).

HAGUE CONVENTION ON THE TAKING OF EVIDENCE ABROAD IN CIVIL OR COMMERCIAL MATTERS

Hague Convention on the Taking of Evidence Abroad in Civil or Commercial Matters. An international convention, concluded on October 26, 1968, that establishes procedures for obtaining evidence in a foreign country, such as taking a deposition abroad. • More than 27 countries are parties, including the United States. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1261; Pretrial Procedure 91; Treaties 8. C.J.S. Pretrial Procedure §§ 4–6; Treaties § 6.]

HAGUE RULES

Hague Rules. Maritime law. An international agreement adopted at the International Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules of Law Relating to Bills of Lading in 1924. • Under the Hague Rules, a carrier is not liable for losses.

HAGUE TRIBUNAL

Hague Tribunal. Int'l law. A permanent court of arbitration established by the Hague Peace Conference of 1899 to facilitate immediate recourse to arbitration to settle international differences. • The court was given jurisdiction over all arbitration cases, unless the parties agreed to institute a special tribunal. An international bureau was likewise established to serve as a registry for the court and to issue communications about the court's meetings. The court is “permanent” only in the sense that there is a permanent list of members from whom arbitrators in a given case are selected. Apart from making minor changes in the court, the Second Hague Conference of 1907 provided that, of the two arbitrators appointed by each party, only one should be a national of the appointing state. [Cases: International Law 10.45. C.J.S. International Law §§ 59–65.]

haircut. 1. Securities. The discount required by the National Association of Securities Dealers on the value of stock that a brokerage firm holds in its own account at the time of filing a monthly report about the firm's net capital condition. [Cases: Securities Regulation 40.13. C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 159.] 2. The difference between the amount of a loan and the market value of the collateral securing the loan.

HAND FORMULA

Hand formula.A balancing test for determining whether conduct has created an unreasonable risk of harm, first formulated by Judge Learned Hand in United States v. Carroll Towing Co., 159 F.2d 169 (2d Cir. 1947). • Under this test, an actor is negligent if the burden of taking adequate precautions against the harm is outweighed by the probable gravity of the harm multiplied by the probability that the harm will occur. [Cases: Negligence 215.C.J.S. Negligence §§ 32–33, 195–196.]

“The legal standard applicable to most unintentional tort cases is that of negligence, defined by Judge Learned Hand as follows: the defendant is guilty of negligence if the loss caused by the accident, multiplied by the probability of the accident's occurring, exceeds the burden of the precautions that the defendant might have taken to avert it. This is an economic test.... Although the Hand formula is of relatively recent origin, the method that it capsulizes has been the basic one used to determine negligence ever since negligence was first adopted as the standard to govern accident cases.” Richard A. Posner, Economic Analysis of Law § 6.2, at 122–23 (2d ed. 1977).

handhabend (hand-hab-<<schwa>>nd), adj. Hist. (Of a thief) caught in possession of a stolen item.

HAZANTOWN AGREEMENT

Hazantown agreement (hay-z<<schwa>>n-town). A type of collective-bargaining agreement used in the garment industry, governing the relationship between a jobber and the contractors that produce the jobber's garments. • The agreement does not govern the relationship between the jobber and its own employees. It governs the relationship between the jobber and the contractors that manufacture the garments that the jobber sells, including agreements that the jobber will use only unionized contractors, will ensure that salaries and bonuses are appropriately paid, and will contribute to employee-benefit funds maintained on behalf of the contractor's employees. This term gets its name from Hazantown, Inc., the jobber involved in Danielson v. Joint Bd. of Coat, Suit & Allied Garment Workers' Union, 494 F.2d 1230 (2d Cir. 1974). — Also termed jobber's agreement.

HAZARD

extraordinary hazard.Workers' compensation. An unusual occupational danger that is increased by the acts of employees other than the injured worker. — Also termed extraordinary danger. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 511–520, 678. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 288–304, 338, 409, 420, 424.]

imminent hazard.An immediate danger; esp., in environmental law, a situation in which the continued use of a pesticide will probably result in unreasonable adverse effects on the environment or will involve an unreasonable danger to the survival of an endangered species. 7 USCA § 136(1). [Cases: Environmental Law 423.]

occupational hazard.A danger or risk that is peculiar to a particular calling or occupation. • Occupational hazards include both accidental injuries and occupational diseases.

2.Insurance. The risk or probability of loss or injury, esp. a loss or injury covered by an insurance policy.

moral hazard.A hazard that has its inception in mental attitudes. • Examples include dishonesty, carelessness, and insanity. The risk that an insured will destroy property or allow it to be destroyed (usu. by burning) in order to collect the insurance proceeds is a moral hazard. Also, an insured's potential interest, if any, in the burning of the property is sometimes called a moral hazard. [Cases: Insurance 3055(2).]

physical hazard.A hazard that has its inception in the material world. • Examples include location, structure, occupancy, exposure, and the like.

3.Hist. An unlawful dice game in which the chances of winning are complicated by arbitrary rules.

HAZARD PAY

hazard pay.Special compensation for work done under unpleasant or unsafe conditions.

HAZING

hazing,n. The practice of physically or emotionally abusing newcomers to an organization as a means of initiation. • In the early 19th century, hazing referred to beating. Hazing was a well-established custom in fraternities at Ivy League universities by the mid-19th century. (One college magazine referred to “the absurd and barbarous custom of hazing, which has long prevailed in the college.” 1 Harvard Mag. 413 (1860).) The first death from hazing was reported at Yale in 1892 (N.Y. Daily News, June 28, 1892). In the late 20th century, many colleges and universities banned hazing and many states passed anti-hazing statutes establishing criminal penalties. See ANTIHAZING STATUTE.

HAZING STATUTE

hazing statute. See ANTIHAZING STATUTE.

HDC

HDC.abbr.HOLDER IN DUE COURSE.

HE

he. A pronoun of the masculine gender, traditionally used and construed in statutes to include both sexes, as well as corporations. • It may also be read as they. Because of the trend toward nonsexist language, careful drafters avoid using the generic pronouns he, him, and his unless the reference is only to a male person.

HEAD-AND-MASTER RULE

head-and-master rule.Hist. The doctrine that the husband alone is authorized to manage community property. • Some courts have held that the rule is unconstitutional gender-based discrimination. — Also termed lord-and-master rule. Cf. EQUAL-MANAGEMENT RULE.

HEADBOROUGH

headborough. See BORSHOLDER.

HEADING

heading. A brief title or caption of a section of a statute, contract, or other writing.

“The headings prefixed to sections or sets of sections in some modern statutes are regarded as preambles to those sections. They cannot control the plain words of the statute, but they may explain ambiguous words” P. St. J. Langan, Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes 11 (12th ed. 1969).

headlease. A primary lease under which a sublease has been granted. — Also spelled head lease. — Also termed primary lease; chief lease. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 78(1).]

offered by a government for a prisoner taken at sea during a naval engagement. • This bounty is divided among the officers and crew in the same manner as prize money. See PRIZE MONEY . 3. A tax or duty on shipowners, imposed by an 1882 federal statute, for every immigrant brought into the United States. — Also termed head tax. 4.Hist. A bounty or reward paid to a person who killed a bandit or outlaw and produced the head as evidence. See BOUNTY(1); REWARD.

headnote. A case summary that appears before the printed judicial opinion in a law report, addresses a point of law, and usu. includes the relevant facts bearing on that point of law. — Also termed syllabus; synopsis; reporter's syllabus.

“The syllabus or headnote is a brief statement of the propositions of law decided in the case, being in the nature of a table of contents of the case. The modern method is to number each proposition in the syllabus, and to indicate, by corresponding figures, the exact place in the decision where the point mentioned in the syllabus can be found. Sometimes, especially in the older reports, the syllabus is inaccurate or misleading, and it is not safe to rely on it without first verifying it from the decision.” Frank Hall Childs, Where and How to Find the Law 22 (1922).

HEADNOTE LAWYER

headnote lawyer.See LAWYER.

HEAD OF FAMILY

head of family.A person who supports one or more people related by birth, adoption, or marriage and with whom those persons maintain their permanent domicile. • The phrase head of family appears most commonly in homestead law. For a person to have the status of head of family, there must, of necessity, be at least two people in the family. — Also termed head of a family. Cf. HEAD OF HOUSEHOLD.

HEAD OF HOUSEHOLD

head of household. 1. The primary income-provider within a family. 2. For income-tax purposes, an unmarried or separated person (other than a surviving spouse) who provides a home for dependents for more than one-half of the taxable year. • A head of household is taxed at a lower rate than a single person who is not head of a household. Cf. HEAD OF FAMILY; HOUSEHOLDER. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3549.]

HEADRIGHT

headright. In American Indian law, a tribe member's right to a pro rata portion of income from a tribal trust fund set up under the Allotment Act of 1906. • This type of trust fund is funded largely by mineral royalties arising from land held or once held by the tribe member's tribe. [Cases: Indians 10, 16.10. C.J.S. Indians §§ 30, 67, 69–70, 74–75, 77–80, 107–108.]

HEADRIGHT CERTIFICATE

headright certificate.Hist. A certificate issued under authority of a Republic of Texas law of 1839 providing that a person was entitled to a grant of 640 acres if the person (1) had immigrated to the Republic between 1 October 1837 and 1 January 1840, (2) was a head of household, and (3) actually resided within the Republic with his or her family. • The grant was to be held under the certificate for three years and then conveyed by absolute deed to the settler.

HEAD SHOP

health officer. A government official charged with executing and enforcing health laws. • The powers of a health officer (such as the Surgeon General) are regulated by law. [Cases: Health 361.]

hearing. 1. A judicial session, usu. open to the public, held for the purpose of deciding issues of fact or of law, sometimes with witnesses testifying < the court held a hearing on the admissibility of DNA evidence in the murder case >. 2. Administrative law. Any setting in which an affected person presents arguments to an agency decision-maker < a hearing on zoning variations >.

[Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 469. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 134, 136, 138–139.] 3. In legislative practice, any proceeding in which legislators or their designees receive testimony about legislation that might be enacted <the shooting victim spoke at the Senate's hearing on gun control>. See PRELIMINARY HEARING . [Cases: States 34. C.J.S. States §§ 55–58.] 4.Equity practice. A trial. 5.English law. ORAL ARGUMENT.

adjudication hearing. 1.Administrative law. An agency proceeding in which a person's rights and duties are decided after notice and an opportunity to be heard. See procedural due process under DUE PROCESS. Cf. disposition hearing. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 469. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 134, 136, 138–139.] 2. In child-abuse and neglect proceedings, the trial stage at which the court hears the state's allegations and evidence and decides whether the state has the right to intervene on behalf of the child. [Cases: Infants 203. C.J.S. Infants §§ 51–52, 62, 64–67.] 3. In a juvenile-delinquency case, a hearing at which the court hears evidence of the charges and makes a finding of whether the charges are true or not true. — Also termed adjudicatory hearing; adjudicatory proceeding.

adjudicatory hearing (<<schwa>>-joo-di-k<<schwa>>-tor-ee). See adjudication hearing.

certification hearing.See transfer hearing.

conformity hearing.See CONFORMITY HEARING.

contested hearing.A hearing in which at least one of the parties has objections regarding one or more matters before the court.

continued-custody hearing.See shelter hearing.

custody hearing.Family law. A judicial examination of the facts relating to child custody, typically in a divorce or separation proceeding. • Child-neglect and dependency matters are also often dealt with in custody hearings. — Also termed custody proceeding. [Cases: Child Custody 500. C.J.S. Parent and Child § 122.]

dependency hearing.See shelter hearing.

detention hearing. 1.Criminal law. A hearing to determine whether an accused should be released pending trial. See pretrial detention under DETENTION. 2.Family law. A hearing held by a juvenile court to determine whether a juvenile accused of delinquent conduct should be detained, continued in confinement, or released pending an adjudicatory hearing. Cf. adjudication hearing; disposition hearing. [Cases: Infants 203. C.J.S. Infants §§ 51–52, 62, 64–67.] 3. See shelter hearing.

discharge hearing.See DISCHARGE HEARING.

dispositional hearing.See disposition hearing.

disposition hearing.Family law. 1. In child-abuse and neglect proceedings, after an adjudication hearing at which the state proves its allegations, a hearing at which the court hears evidence and enters orders for the child's care, custody, and control. • Typically, the judge determines a plan for services aimed at reunifying or rehabilitating the family. 2. In a juvenile-delinquency case, after an adjudication hearing at which the state proves its case against the juvenile or after a juvenile's pleading true to the charges against him, a hearing at which the court determines what sanctions, if any, will be imposed on the juvenile. • At a disposition hearing, the court balances the best interests of the child against the need to sanction the child for his or her actions. If the juvenile is adjudicated a delinquent, the probation staff prepares a social history of the youth and his family and recommends a disposition. After reviewing the social history and various recommendations, the court enters a disposition. Among the possible juvenile sanctions are a warning, probation, restitution, counseling, or placement in a juvenile-detention facility. Probation is the most common sanction. — Also termed dispositional hearing. Cf. adjudication hearing. 3. See permanency hearing. [Cases: Infants 203. C.J.S. Infants §§ 51–52, 62, 64–67.]

evidentiary hearing. 1. A hearing at which evidence is presented, as opposed to a hearing at which only legal argument is presented. 2. ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDING.

exclusionary hearing. A pretrial hearing conducted to review and determine the admissibility of alleged illegally obtained evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 394.6. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 794.]

fair hearing. A judicial or administrative hearing conducted in accordance with due process. [Cases: Constitutional Law 251.6, 318(1). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 968, 1165–1166, 1168–1169, 1176–1179.]

Fatico hearing. See FATICO HEARING.

fitness hearing. See transfer hearing.

Franks hearing. See FRANKS HEARING.

full adversary hearing. See adjudication hearing.

full hearing. 1. A hearing at which the parties are allowed notice of each other's claims and are given ample opportunity to present their positions with evidence and argument. 2. ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDING.

Garcia hearing. See GARCIA HEARING.

hearing de novo (dee or di noh-voh). 1. A reviewing court's decision of a matter anew, giving no deference to a lower court's findings. [Cases: Appeal and Error 892; Federal Courts 776. C.J.S. Appeal and Error § 756.] 2. A new hearing of a matter, conducted as if the original hearing had not taken place.

Jackson–Denno hearing. See JACKSON–DENNO HEARING.

Mapp hearing. See MAPP HEARING.

neglect hearing. Family law. A judicial hearing involving alleged child abuse or some other situation in which a child has not been properly cared for by a parent or person legally responsible for the child's care. • At issue is the civil culpability of the parent or responsible party and the possible loss of children into foster care or — in extreme cases — the termination of parental rights. [Cases: Infants 203. C.J.S. Infants §§ 51–52, 62, 64–67.]

omnibus hearing.Criminal procedure. A hearing designed to bring judicial oversight over criminal cases at an early stage to make certain that the cases are being handled expeditiously and properly. • At an omnibus hearing, the court is primarily interested in ensuring that discovery is being conducted properly, that any necessary evidentiary hearings have been scheduled, and that all issues ripe for decision have been decided.

permanency hearing.Family law. Under the Adoption and Safe Families Act, a judicial proceeding to determine the future, permanent status of a child in foster care. • Under the Act, the term permanency hearing replaces the term disposition hearing. The permanency hearing must occur within 12 months of a child's being placed in foster care. The purpose of the hearing is to determine the final direction of the case, whether that means going forward with termination proceedings or continuing plans for family reunification. — Also termed permanency-planning hearing.

preliminary hearing.See PRELIMINARY HEARING.

preliminary protective hearing.See shelter hearing.

presentence hearing.See PRESENTENCE HEARING.

pretrial hearing.See PRETRIAL CONFERENCE.

probable-cause hearing.See shelter hearing.

public hearing.A hearing that, within reasonable limits, is open to anyone who wishes to observe. • Such a hearing is often characterized by the right to appear and present evidence in a case before an impartial tribunal. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 473. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 136, 138–139.]

reaffirmation hearing.See REAFFIRMATION HEARING.

review hearing.Family law. After a finding of child abuse or neglect, a hearing to assess the progress in the case plan. See CASE PLAN.

revocation hearing.Criminal procedure. A hearing held to determine whether a parolee should be returned to prison for violating the terms of parole. [Cases: Pardon and Parole 85. C.J.S. Pardon and Parole §§ 75, 79–80.]

sentencing hearing.See PRESENTENCE HEARING.

shelter hearing.Family law. A hearing shortly after the state's removal of a child for suspected abuse or neglect. • The hearing is generally held within 24 to 72 hours after the removal. The purpose of the hearing is to determine whether the state has adequate cause to maintain the children in protective care. — Also termed shelter-care hearing; continued-custody hearing; preliminary protective hearing; probable-cause hearing; detention hearing; dependency hearing.

suppression hearing.Criminal procedure. A pretrial hearing in which a criminal defendant seeks to prevent the introduction of evidence alleged to have been seized illegally. [Cases: Criminal Law 394.6. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 794.]

termination-of-parental-rights hearing.Family law. A trial or court proceeding, usu. initiated by a state agency, that seeks to sever the legal ties between a parent and child, usu. so that the child can be adopted. • The standard of proof in a termination-of-parental-rights hearing is clear and convincing evidence. Santosky v. Kramer, 455 U.S. 745, 102 S.Ct. 1388 (1982). — Often shortened to termination hearing. [Cases: Infants 203. C.J.S. Infants §§ 51–52, 62, 64–67.]

transfer hearing.Criminal procedure. In a juvenile-court case, a hearing to determine whether the case should be transferred to adult criminal court where the juvenile will be tried as an adult. • Every state, as well as the District of Columbia, has a transfer statute. The United States Supreme Court defined the due-process requirements for transfer hearings in Kent v. United States, 383 U.S. 541, 86 S.Ct. 1045 (1966). — Also termed certification hearing; waiver hearing; fitness hearing. See TRANSFER STATUTE; MANDATORY WAIVER; STATUTORY EXCLUSION.

trial-type hearing.See ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDING.

uncontested hearing.A hearing in which either (1) the parties are in agreement as to all matters before the court, or (2) one of the parties has failed to answer the lawsuit.

unfair hearing.A hearing that is not conducted in accordance with due process, as when the defendant is denied the opportunity to prepare or consult with counsel. [Cases: Constitutional Law 251.6. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 968, 1165–1166, 1168–1169.]

Wade hearing.See WADE HEARING.

waiver hearing.See transfer hearing.

HEARING EXAMINER

hearing examiner.See ADMINISTRATIVE-LAW JUDGE.

HEARING OFFICER

hearing officer. 1.ADMINISTRATIVE-LAW JUDGE. 2. See judicial officer (3) under OFFICER.

HEARSAY

hearsay. 1. Traditionally, testimony that is given by a witness who relates not what he or she knows personally, but what others have said, and that is therefore dependent on the credibility of someone other than the witness. • Such testimony is generally inadmissible under the rules of evidence. 2. In federal law, a statement (either a verbal assertion or nonverbal assertive conduct), other than one made by the declarant while testifying at the trial or hearing, offered in evidence to prove the truth of the matter asserted.Fed. R. Evid. 801(c). — Also termed hearsay evidence; secondhand evidence. Cf. original evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Criminal Law 419; Evidence 314–324. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 856; Evidence §§ 227–228, 234, 259–266, 268–284, 319, 505–506.]

double hearsay.A hearsay statement that contains further hearsay statements within it, none of which is admissible unless exceptions to the rule against hearsay can be applied to each level <the double hearsay was the investigation's report stating that Amy admitted to running the red light>.Fed. R. Evid. 805. — Also termed multiple hearsay; hearsay within hearsay. [Cases: Criminal Law 419(13); Evidence 314–324.]

hearsay exception.Any of several deviations from the hearsay rule, allowing the admission of otherwise inadmissible statements because the circumstances surrounding the statements provide a basis for considering the statements reliable.

tender-years hearsay exception.A hearsay exception for an out-of-court statement by a child ten years of age or younger, usu. describing an act of physical or sexual abuse, when the child is unavailable to testify and the court determines that the time, content, and circumstances of the statement make it reliable.

HEARSAY RULE

hearsay rule.The rule that no assertion offered as testimony can be received unless it is or has been open to test by cross-examination or an opportunity for cross-examination, except as provided otherwise by the rules of evidence, by court rules, or by statute. • The chief reasons for the rule are that out-of-court statements amounting to hearsay are not made under oath and are not subject to cross-examination. Fed. R. Evid. 802. Rule 803 provides 23 explicit exceptions to the hearsay rule, regardless of whether the out-of-court declarant is available to testify, and Rule 804 provides five more exceptions for situations in which the declarant is unavailable to testify. [Cases: Criminal Law 419; Evidence 314–324. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 856; Evidence §§ 227–228, 234, 259–266, 268–284, 319, 505–506.]

“[T]he great hearsay rule ... is a fundamental rule of safety, but one overenforced and abused, — the spoiled child of the family, — proudest scion of our jury-trial rules of evidence, but so petted and indulged that it has become a nuisance and an obstruction to speedy and efficient trials.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 238 (1935).

HEARSAY WITHIN HEARSAY

hearsay within hearsay.See double hearsay under HEARSAY.

HEARTBALM STATUTE

heartbalm statute.A state law that abolishes the rights of action for monetary damages as solace for the emotional trauma occasioned by a loss of love and relationship. • The abolished rights of action include alienation of affections, breach of promise to marry, criminal conversation, and seduction of a person over the legal age of consent. Many states today have enacted heartbalm statutes primarily because of the highly speculative nature of the injury and the potential for abusive prosecution, as well as the difficulties of determining the cause of a loss. The terminology in this field is somewhat confusing, since a heartbalm statute abolishes lawsuits that were known as heartbalm suits; some scholars therefore call the abolitionary statutes anti-heartbalm statutes.

But the prevailing term is heartbalm statute. — Also written heart-balm statute. — Also termed heartbalm act; anti-heartbalm statute; anti-heartbalm act. [Cases: Breach of Marriage Promise 14; Husband and Wife 323, 341; Seduction 3. C.J.S. Breach of Marriage Promise §§ 2, 12, 14.]

“Under the English common law, a broken engagement might be followed by a lawsuit for breach of promise to marry [T]he action came to look more like a tort action, in which damages might be given for the injury to the plaintiff's feelings, health and reputation and for expenses such as costs incurred in preparing for a wedding. Widespread criticism of the suit for breach of promise to marry (as well as related tort actions including seduction and alienation of affections) led to the passage of ‘heart balm’ statutes abolishing these claims in many jurisdictions in the United States beginning in the 1930's.” Homer H. Clark Jr. & Ann Laquer Estin, Domestic Relations: Cases and Problems 47 (6th ed. 2000).

HEARTH MONEY

hearth money.Hist.1.A tax of two shillings levied on every fireplace in England (14 Car. 2, ch. 10). • This extremely unpopular tax was enacted in 1662 during the reign of Charles II and abolished in 1688. — Also termed chimney money. 2.PETER-PENCE.

HEAT OF PASSION

heat of passion.Rage, terror, or furious hatred suddenly aroused by some immediate provocation, usu. another person's words or actions. • At common law, the heat of passion could serve as a mitigating circumstance that would reduce a murder charge to manslaughter. — Also termed sudden heat of passion; sudden heat; sudden passion; hot blood; sudden heat and passion; furor brevis. Cf. COLD BLOOD; COOL BLOOD. [Cases: Homicide 666, 828.]

“To constitute the heat of passion included in this requirement it is not necessary for the passion to be so extreme that the slayer does not know what he is doing at the time; but it must be so extreme that for the moment his action is being directed by passion rather than by reason.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 99 (3d ed. 1982).

HEAVY WORK

heavy work.See WORK(1).

HEBOTE

hebote. See HEREBOTE.

HEDAGIUM

hedagium (h<<schwa>>-day-jee-<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin] Hist. A toll or custom due at a wharf for landing goods. • The Crown exempted particular persons and societies from this toll.

HEDGE

hedge,vb. To use two compensating or offsetting transactions to ensure a position of breaking even; to make advance arrangements to safeguard oneself from loss on an investment, speculation, or bet, as when a buyer of commodities insures against unfavorable price changes by buying in advance at a fixed rate for later delivery. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation 10. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 455, 470.] — hedging,n.

HEDGEBOTE

hedgebote. See HAYBOTE.

HEDGE FUND

hedge fund.A specialized investment group — usu. organized as a limited partnership or offshore investment company — that offers the possibility of high returns through risky techniques such as selling short or buying derivatives. • Most hedge funds are not registered with the SEC and are therefore restricted in marketing their services to the public.

HEIR

heir (air).1. A person who, under the laws of intestacy, is entitled to receive an intestate decedent's property. Cf. ANCESTOR. — Also termed legal heir; heir at law; lawful heir; heir general; legitimate heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 20–43; Wills 505. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 23–49; Wills § 947.]

“Laymen — and sometimes first-year law students taking exams — wrongly assume that one who receives real property by will is an heir. Technically, the word ‘heir’ is reserved for one who receives real property by action of the laws of intestacy, which operate today only in the absence of a valid will.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 14 n.32 (2d ed. 1984).

2. Loosely (in common-law jurisdictions), a person who inherits real or personal property, whether by will or by intestate succession. 3. Popularly, a person who has inherited or is in line to inherit great wealth. 4. Civil law. A person who succeeds to the rights and occupies the place of, or is entitled to succeed to the estate of, a decedent, whether by an act of the decedent or by operation of law. • The term heir under the civil law has a more expanded meaning than under the common law.

afterborn heir. One born after the death of an intestate from whom the heir is entitled to inherit. See afterborn child under CHILD. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 7.]

and his heirs. A term of art formerly required to transfer complete title (a fee simple absolute) to real estate <A conveys Blackacre to B and his heirs>. • This phrasing originated in the translation of a Law French phrase used in medieval grants (a lui et a ses heritiers pour toujours “to him and his heirs forever”). See FEE SIMPLE.

“The development reached its culmination when the words ‘and his heirs’ in a transfer were thought to give full durational ownership to the immediate transferee and no ownership whatever to his heirs. This notion was expressed in the statement that the words ‘and his heirs’ are words of limitation and not words of purchase. They indicate the durational character of an estate, not its taker.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 93–94 (2d ed. 1984).

apparent heir. See heir apparent.

beneficiary heir (ben-<<schwa>>-fish-ee-er-ee). Civil law. An heir who accepts an inheritance but whose liability for estate debts is limited to the value of the inheritance. — Also termed heir beneficiary. See BENEFIT OF INVENTORY. Cf. unconditional heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 119(2). C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 116.]

bodily heir. See heir of the body.

coheir (koh-air). One of two or more persons to whom an inheritance descends.

collateral heir. One who is neither a direct descendant nor an ancestor of the decedent, but whose kinship is through a collateral line, such as a brother, sister, uncle, aunt, nephew, niece, or cousin. Cf. lineal heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 32, 37. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 40–41, 44–49.]

expectant heir. An heir who has a reversionary or future interest in property, or a chance of succeeding to it. — Also termed heir expectant. See REVERSION(1); REMAINDER(1). Cf. prospective heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 68. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 68.]

“The reader should be aware that one never has an ‘heir’ until one is dead; one merely has an ‘heir expectant’ Thus, to say that an heir ‘owns’ anything is conceptually difficult. But ... some unborn heirs may be entitled to the protection of the courts, and thus be said to have estates.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 26 n.13 (2d ed. 1984).

fideicommissary heir (fi-dee-I-kom-i-sair-ee). Roman & civil law. A beneficiary of property who succeeds the direct (original) heir. See FIDEICOMMISSUM.

fiduciary heir. Roman & civil law. An heir who takes property as a trustee on behalf of a person who is not eligible to receive the property immediately. See FIDEICOMMISSUM.

forced heir. Civil law. A person whom the testator or donor cannot disinherit because the law reserves part of the estate for that person. • In Louisiana, only descendants are forced heirs. La. Civ. Code art. 1493. See LEGITIME. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 23. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 30–31.]

heir apparent. An heir who is certain to inherit unless he or she dies first or is excluded by a valid will. — Also termed apparent heir. Cf. heir presumptive. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 68. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 68.]

“Heirs apparent are such, whose right of inheritance is indefeasible, provided they outlive the ancestor; as the eldest son or his issue, who must by the course of the common law be heirs to the father whenever he happens to die.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 208 (1766).

heir beneficiary. See beneficiary heir.

heir by adoption. A person who has been adopted by (and thus has become an heir to) the deceased. • By statute in most jurisdictions, an adopted child has the same right of succession to intestate property as a biological child unless the deceased clearly expresses a contrary intention. Jurisdictions differ on whether an adopted child may in addition inherit from his or her biological parents or family. The clear majority view, however, is that upon adoption, a complete severance of rights and obligations occurs and the child forfeits inheritance from all biological relatives.

heir by custom. Hist. In England, a person whose right of inheritance depends on a particular and local custom, such as gavelkind and borough English. See GAVELKIND; BOROUGH ENGLISH.

heir by devise. One to whom lands are given by will.

heir conventional. Civil law. One who takes a succession because of a contract or settlement entitling him or her to it.

heir expectant. See expectant heir.

heir in tail. See heir special.

heir male. Hist. The nearest male blood-relation of a decedent.

heir of the blood. An heir who succeeds to an estate because of consanguinity with the decedent, in either the ascending or descending line.

heir of the body. Archaic. A lineal descendant of the decedent, excluding a surviving spouse, adopted children, and collateral relations. • The term of art heirs of the body was formerly used to create a fee tail <A conveys Blackacre to B and the heirs of his body>. — Also termed bodily heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 25. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 32.]

heir presumptive. An heir who will inherit if the potential intestate dies immediately, but who may be excluded if another, more closely related heir is born. — Also termed presumptive heir. Cf. heir apparent. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 68. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 68.]

heirs and assigns. A term of art formerly required to create a fee simple <A conveys Blackacre to B and his heirs and assigns>.

heir special. Hist. An heir who receives property according to the nature of the estate held in fee tail. • Heirs special were said to receive property per formam doni (“by the form of the gift”). — Also termed heir in tail. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 29.]

joint heir. 1. A coheir. 2. A person who is or will be an heir to both of two designated persons at the death of the survivor of them, the word joint being here applied to the ancestors rather than the heirs.

known heir. An heir who is present to claim an inheritance, the extent of which depends on there being no closer relative.

laughing heir. Slang. An heir distant enough to feel no grief when a relative dies and leaves an inheritance (generally viewed as a windfall) to the heir.

lineal heir. A person who is either an ancestor or a descendant of the decedent, such as a parent or a child. Cf. collateral heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 25, 30. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 32, 37.]

natural heir. An heir by consanguinity as distinguished from an heir by adoption, or a statutory heir (such as a person's spouse). [Cases: Descent and Distribution 25. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 32.]

presumptive heir. See heir presumptive.

pretermitted heir (pree-t<<schwa>>r-mit-id). A child or spouse who has been omitted from a will, as when a testator makes a will naming his or her two children and then, sometime later, has two more children who are not mentioned in the will. — Also termed (more specif.) pretermitted child; pretermitted spouse. See PRETERMITTED-HEIR STATUTE. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 47. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 51–54.]

prospective heir. An heir who may inherit but may be excluded; an heir apparent or an heir presumptive. Cf. expectant heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 68. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 68.]

right heir. 1. Hist. The preferred heir to an estate tail, as distinguished from a general heir. • An estate tail would pass to a general heir only on the failure of the preferred heir and his line. 2. HEIR(1).

testamentary heir (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>-ree or -tree). Civil law. A person who is appointed heir in the decedent's will.

unconditional heir. Civil law. A person who chooses — expressly or tacitly — to inherit without any reservation or without making an inventory. Cf. beneficiary heir.

HEIRDOM

heirdom. The state of being an heir; succession by inheritance. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 20–43. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 23–49.]

HEIRESS

heiress. 1. Archaic. A female heir. See HEIR. 2. A woman or girl who has inherited or is in line to inherit great wealth.

HEIR GENERAL

heir general. See HEIR(1).

HEIR-HUNTER

heir-hunter. A person whose business is to track down missing heirs.

HEIRLESS ESTATE

heirless estate. See ESTATE(3).

HEIRLOOM

heirloom. 1. An item of personal property that by local custom, contrary to the usual legal rule, descends to the heir along with the inheritance, instead of passing to the executor or administrator of the last owner. • Traditional examples are an ancestor's suit of armor, family portraits, title deeds, and keys. Blackstone gave a false etymology that many have copied: “The termination, loom, is of Saxon origin; in which language it signifies a limb or member; so that an heirloom is nothing else, but a limb or member of the inheritance.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Law of England 427 (1766). In fact, loom derives from Old English geloma “utensil,” and loom meant “implement, tool.” 2. Popularly, a treasured possession of great sentimental value passed down through generations within a family.

“Heir-looms, strictly so called, are now very seldom to be met with. They may be defined to be such personal chattels as go, by force of a special custom, to the heir, along with the inheritance, and not to the executor or administrator of the last owner. The owner of an heir-loom cannot by his will bequeath the heir-loom, if he leave the land to descend to his heir; for in such a case the force of custom will prevail over the bequest, which, not coming into operation until after the decease of the owner, is too late to supersede the custom.... In popular language the term ‘heir-loom’ is generally applied to plate, pictures or articles of property which have been assigned by deed of settlement or bequeathed by will to trustees, in trust to permit the same to be used and enjoyed by the persons for the time being in possession, under the settlement or will, of the mansion-house in which the articles may be placed.” Joshua Williams, Principles of the Law of Personal Property 13–14 (11th ed. 1881).

HEIR PORTIONER

heir portioner. See PORTIONER.

HEIRSHIP

heirship. 1. The quality or condition of being an heir. 2. The relation between an ancestor and an heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 20–41. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 23–26, 29–49.]

HELL-OR-HIGH-WATER CLAUSE hell-or-high-water clause. A clause in a personal-property lease requiring the lessee to continue to make full rent payments to the lessor even if the thing leased is unsuitable, defective, or destroyed. [Cases: Bailment 20. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 76–78.]

HELL-OR-HIGH-WATER RULE hell-or-high-water rule. 1. The principle that a personal-property lessee must pay the full rent due, regardless of any claim against the lessor, unless the lessee proves unequal bargaining power or unconscionability. [Cases: Bailment 20. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 76–78.] 2. Insurance. The principle that an insured's automobile-liability policy will cover the insured while using a vehicle owned by another if the insured uses the vehicle in a manner within the scope of the permission granted. [Cases: Insurance 2662. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 928, 1049, 1673.]

HENCEFORTH

henceforth, adv. From now on <the newly enacted rule will apply henceforth>.

corporeal hereditament (kor-por-ee-<<schwa>>l). A tangible item of property, such as land, a building, or a fixture. [Cases: Fixtures 1; Property 4. C.J.S. Property §§ 14–21, 23.]

incorporeal hereditament (in-kor-por-ee-<<schwa>>l). An intangible right in land, such as an easement. • The various types at common law were advowsons, annuities, commons, dignities, franchises, offices, pensions, rents, tithes, and ways.

“There are two quite distinct classes of incorporeal hereditaments: 1. Those which may ripen into corporeal hereditaments. Thus a grant to A for life with remainder to B in fee simple gave B an incorporeal hereditament which becomes corporeal after A's death. 2. Those which can never become corporeal hereditaments but are merely rights over the land of another, e.g., rentcharges.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 361 (6th ed. 1993).

HEREDITARY

hereditary,adj. Of or relating to inheritance; that descends from an ancestor to an heir.

HEREDITARY SUCCESSION

hereditary succession.See intestate succession under SUCCESSION(2).

hereditas (h<<schwa>>-red-i-tas), n.[Latin] 1.Roman law. An inheritance by universal succession to a decedent. • This succession applied whether the decedent died testate or intestate, and whether in trust (ex fideicommisso) for another or not. The comparable right under Praetorian law was bonorum possessio, possession of an inheritance that could be the basis of a right to succeed. 2.Hist. An estate transmissible by descent; an inheritance. — Also spelled haereditas.

hereditas damnosa (h<<schwa>>-red-i-tas dam-noh-s<<schwa>>). A burdensome inheritance; an inheritance whose debts exceed its assets.

hereditas jacens (h<<schwa>>-red-i-tas jay-senz). [Latin iaceo “to lie”] 1. Property belonging to an estate before an heir accepts it. • This term had a similar meaning at common law. See ABEYANCE(2).

“Hereditas jacens is the term applied to an inheritance which has not yet vested, an inheritance, that is to say, which has been ‘delata’ to a heres extraneus (i.e. voluntarius), but has not yet been acquired by him.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 512 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

2.Hist. A decedent's estate that has no heir or legatee to take it; an escheated estate. — Also termed caduca. See ESCHEAT. 3.Hist. An inheritance without legal owner and thus open to the first occupant.

hereditas legitima (h<<schwa>>-red-i-tas l<<schwa>>-jit-i-m<<schwa>>). A succession or inheritance devolving by operation of law rather than by will. See INTESTACY.

hereditas luctuosa (h<<schwa>>-red-i-tas l<<schwa>>k-choo-oh-s<<schwa>>). A sad or mournful inheritance; one that disturbs the natural order of mortality (turbato ordine mortalitatis), as that of a parent inheriting a child's estate. • This term is more literary than legal. — Also termed tristis successio.

hereditas paterna (h<<schwa>>-red-i-tas p<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r-n<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. A succession that descends through the father.

hereditas testamentaria (h<<schwa>>-red-i-tas tes-t<<schwa>>-men-tair-ee-<< schwa>>). Testamentary inheritance; succession to an estate under a decedent's will.

heredity. 1.Archaic. Intestate succession; the taking of an inheritance by common-law succession. 2. The genetic transmission of characteristics from a parent to a child; the biological law by which characteristics of a living being tend to repeat themselves in the being's descendants.

HEREOF

hereof,adv. Of this thing (such as a provision or document) <the conditions hereof are stated in section 3>.

HERES

heres (heer-eez), n.[Latin] Roman law. A successor to the rights and liabilities of a deceased person; an heir. • Because the heres succeeded to both the rights and the debts of the decedent, the office combined that of a modern executor with that of an heir at law. The institution of the heres was the essential characteristic of a testament; if this was not done, the instrument was called a codicillus. — Also spelled (in Law Latin) haeres. Pl. heredes (h<<schwa>>-ree-deez) or (for haeres) haeredes.

heres actu (ak-t[y]oo). [Law Latin] Hist. Heir by appointment.

heres astrarius (as-trair-ee-<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin “heir of the hearth”] An heir who has received, by conveyance, an ancestor's estate during the ancestor's lifetime.

heres de facto (di fak-toh). [Law Latin “heir from fact”] Hist.1.An heir whose status arises from the disseisin or other wrongful act of the heir's ancestor. See DISSEISIN. 2. An heir in fact, as distinguished from an heir by law (de jure).

heres ex asse (as-ee). [Latin “sole heir”] Roman law. An heir to the whole estate.

heres ex testamento (eks tes-t<<schwa>>-men-to). See heres factus.

heres extraneus (ek-stray-nee-<<schwa>>s). [Latin “extraneous heir”] Roman law. An external heir; one who had not been subject to the testator's power (potestas) and hence not bound to accept the inheritance. Pl. heredes extranei (h<<schwa>>-ree-deez ek-stray-nee-I).

heres factus (fak-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin “made heir”] An heir appointed by will; a testamentary heir. — Also termed heres ex testamento; heres institutus. Cf. heres natus.

heres fideicommissarius (fl-dee-I-kom-<<schwa>>-sair-ee-<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. The person for whose benefit an estate was given by will to a fiduciary heir. • This office corresponds loosely to the cestui que trust of the common law. Cf. heres fiduciarius.

heres fiduciarius (fi-d[y]oo-shee-air-ee-<<schwa>>s). [Latin “fiduciary heir”] Roman law. A person made heir by will, in trust for the benefit of another; an heir subject to a trust. Cf. heres fideicommissarius.

heres in mobilibus (heer-eez in moh-bil-i-b<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] Hist. Heir in movables.

heres institutus (in-sti-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>s). See heres factus.

heres legitimus (l<<schwa>>-jit-i-m<<schwa>>s). [Latin "lawful heir"] Roman law. An heir entitled to succeed (on intestacy) by the laws of the Twelve Tables.

heres natus (nay-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin "heir by birth"] An heir by reason of birth; an heir at law or by intestacy. Cf. heres factus.

heres necessarius (nes-<<schwa>>-sair-ee-<<schwa>>s). [Latin "necessary heir"] Roman law. A slave freed on the testator's death and thus compelled to accept the inheritance.

heres rectus (rek-t<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] Hist. A right or proper heir.

heres suus (s[y]oo-<<schwa>>s). [Latin "one's own heir"] 1. A decedent's proper or natural heir; a lineal descendant of the deceased. 2. Roman law. A free person who was subject to the testator's power (potestas) but who could exercise full legal rights upon the testator's death.

heres suus et necessarius (s[y]oo-<<schwa>>s et nes-<<schwa>>-sair-ee-<<schwa>>s). [Latin "one's own and necessary heir"] A free person subject to the decedent's potestas. • These heirs were called necessary because they became heirs by law, not by the decedent's choice. But since this was also true of slaves, when named heirs in a will, the former class was designated suus et necessarius by way of distinction, the word suus denoting that the necessity arose from the relationship to the decedent.

ultimus heres (<<schwa>>l-ti-m<<schwa>>s). The last or remote heir; the lord.

HERESY

heresy (her-<<schwa>>-see), n.1. Opinion or doctrine contrary to (usu. Catholic) church dogma. [Cases: Religious Societies 28.] 2. Hist. In England, an offense against religion, consisting not in totally denying Christianity, but in publicly denying some of its essential doctrines; an opinion on divine subjects devised solely by human reason, openly taught, and obstinately maintained. • This offense is now subject only to ecclesiastical correction and is no longer punishable by the secular law.

herield. See HEREYELD.

heriot (her-ee-<<schwa>>t), n.[fr. Old English here “army” + geatwa “trappings”] Hist. A customary tribute of goods and chattels, payable to the lord of the fee on the tenant's death. • Heriot derives from an earlier feudal service consisting of military equipment returned to the lord on the tenant's death; over time it came to refer only to the chattel payment due at the tenant's death.

“We are told that the ancient heriot (heregeatu, military apparel) had at one time consisted of the horses and arms lent by the lord to his man which on the man's death were returned to the lord.... Turning to manorial surveys, we find it among the commonest of customs that when a tenant in villeinage dies, the lord shall have the best beast; sometimes a similar due is taken from the goods of the dead freeholder, and it is to these customary dues that the name ‘heriot’ permanently attaches itself.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 312, 317 (2d ed. 1898).

heriot custom.A heriot due by custom. • This term is used primarily to distinguish a heriot service from an ordinary heriot.

heriot service.A tribute arising from special reservation in a grant or lease of lands, and thus amounting to little more than rent.

HERISLIT

herislit (her-<<schwa>>-sleet orhair-), n.[Old English] Hist. 1.The act of surrendering; laying down of arms. 2. The crime of deserting from an army.

HIGH COURT

High Court. 1. See HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE. 2. See HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY.

HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY

High Court of Admiralty. In England, a court exercising jurisdiction in matters relating to shipping, collision, and salvage cases. • The court dates from the 14th century, and much of its early history concerns prize and piracy cases. Its jurisdiction varied through the centuries, sometimes extending into criminal matters and other areas of law not related directly to maritime issues. The Judicature Acts of 1873–1875 merged the Court into the High Court as part of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division. The Administration of Justice Act of 1970 established a new Admiralty Court as part of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court. It is regulated by the Supreme Court Act of 1981. — Also termed Court of the Lord High Admiral; Court of Admiralty. Cf. ADMIRALTY(1).

“To the office of the Lord High Admiral (originally a naval official concerned with the command of the fleet and the suppression of piracy and wrecking) there was annexed a court which acquired a jurisdiction over civil cases of a maritime nature. Just how and when this happened is too cloudy and controversial for simple or even accurate summary, but by the time of Richard II (1377–1400) the admiral and vice-admiral were transacting enough judicial business to move Parliament to limit their jurisdiction by statute to ‘a thing done upon the sea,’ and in Tudor times the court was well established as a court of record, doing a large civil business. It slowly but surely took away most of their business from the local maritime courts in the port towns, and attracted the easily aroused jealousy of the common law courts, as well as the dislike of those who feared it as a prerogative court These factors resulted in the rather anticlimactic eclipse of the court for almost two centuries.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 1-4, at 9–10 (2d ed. 1975).

HIGH COURT OF CHIVALRY

High Court of Chivalry. Hist. A court of honor having jurisdiction over matters relating to deeds of arms and war, armorial insignia, and precedence. — Also termed Court of Chivalry; Court of Earl Marshal. See COURT OF HONOR.

“This Curia Marescalli, or High Court of Chivalry, was revived by James I as a court of honour, which not only tried the right to distinctions of honour and coat armour but also redressed affronts to honour such as slander. The slander jurisdiction was later denied, leaving it with a jurisdiction probably confined to disputes over armorial bearings, which are determined according to the law of arms. The court, which has only sat once since 1737, is the last English court to use the procedure of the civil law.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 142 (3d ed. 1990).

HILARY RULES

Hilary Rules.Hist. A collection of English pleading rules designed to ease the strict pleading requirements of the special-pleading system, esp. by limiting the scope of the general issue in the formed actions and by forcing the defendant to set up affirmatively all matters other than a denial of the breach of duty or of the wrongful act. • Promulgated in England in the 1834 Hilary Term, these rules followed an 1828 initiative to examine procedural laws and other subjects and to report to Parliament changes that might be enacted. The rules had the unintended effect of extending the reach of strict-pleading requirements into new areas of law. Widespread dissatisfaction with the Hilary Rules led to the liberalization of the pleading system under the 1873–1875 Judicature Acts. — Formerly also termed New Rules.

“The failure of the Hilary Rules ... lay in their insistence on special pleading as it was understood late in the eighteenth century. That parties should plead precisely, and clarify as far as possible the issue between them, is one thing; that their endeavours to do so should be judged by the extremely artificial standards of the old system, was quite another.” Theodore F.T. Plucknett, A Concise History of the Common Law 416 (5th ed. 1956).

HILARY SITTINGS

Hilary sittings.In England, a term of court beginning on January 11 of each year and ending on the Wednesday before Easter. • The Hilary sittings were known as Hilary term until 1875. Cf. EASTER SITTINGS; MICHAELMAS SITTINGS; TRINITY SITTINGS.

Atlantic Refining Co.*, 327 F.2d 217 (5th Cir. 1964). [Cases: Mines and Minerals 78.7(2).]

HIMALAYA CLAUSE

Himalaya clause.Maritime law. A provision in a bill of lading extending the carrier's defenses and limitations under the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act to third parties, typically employees, agents, and independent contractors. • The Supreme Court has held that this type of clause must be strictly construed. Robert C. Herd & Co. v. Krawill Machinery Corp., 359 U.S. 297, 79 S.Ct. 766 (1959). See CARRIAGE OF GOODS BY SEA ACT. [Cases: Shipping 140(1). C.J.S. Shipping §§ 300–311.]

“The plaintiff was injured while a passenger on the cruise ship The Himalaya. She sued the master and the boatswain for their negligence because the carrier was contractually exempt from all liability. Because the contract did not have a ‘Himalaya clause,’ she succeeded. The carrier, having indemnified its employees, ultimately paid the damages. It thus lost its contractual exemption indirectly.” Michael J. Sturley, International Uniform Law in National Courts, 27 Va. J. Int'l L. 729, 740 n.101 (1987).

holymote. See HALLMOTE(4).

HOMAGE

homage (hom-ij). In feudal times, a ceremony that a new tenant performed for the lord to acknowledge the tenure. • This was the most honorable service that a free tenant might do for a lord. In the ceremony, kneeling before the lord, the tenant placed his hands between the lord's hands while saying, "I become your man from this day forward, of life and limb and earthly honor, and to you will be faithful and loyal, and bear you faith, for the tenements that I claim to hold of you, saving the faith that I owe unto our sovereign lord the king, so help me God."

"Homage is an oath of fidelity, acknowledging himself to be the lord's man: wherein the tenant must be ungirt, uncovered, kneel upon both knees, and hold both his hands together between the lord's hands sitting before him. This is to be done only to the lord himself." Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 143 (1759).

homage ancestral (hom-ij an-ses-tr<<schwa>>l). [Law French] A type of homage in which a tenant and the tenant's ancestors have held immemorially of another by the service of homage. • This long-standing relationship bound the lord to warrant the title and to hold the tenant clear of all services to superior lords. — Also spelled homage auncestral (aw-mahzh on-se-stral).

homage liege (hom-ij leej). Homage due the sovereign alone as supreme lord, done without any saving or exception of the rights of other lords. — Also termed homagium ligium (h<<schwa>>-may-jee-<<schwa>>m II-jee-<<schwa>>m).

HOME OWNERS WARRANTY

Home Owners Warranty. A warranty and insurance program that, among other coverage, insures a new home for ten years against major structural defects. • The program was developed by the Home Owners Warranty Corporation, a subsidiary of the National Association of Home Builders. Builders often provide this type of coverage, and many states provide similar warranty protection by statute. — Abbr. HOW. — Also spelled Home Owners' Warranty. [Cases: Consumer Protection 8. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 40–51, 64.]

HOME PORT

home port. See PORT.

HOME-PORT DOCTRINE

home-port doctrine. Maritime law. The rule mandating that a vessel engaged in interstate and foreign commerce is taxable only at its home port, usu. where the vessel is registered. [Cases: Taxation 98. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 153–157, 160, 283.]

home rule. A state legislative provision or action allocating a measure of autonomy to a local government, conditional on its acceptance of certain terms. Cf. LOCAL OPTION. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 65. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 122, 140–141, 143.]

“Home rule in the United States was sometimes envisioned in its early days as giving the cities to whom such rule was granted full-fledged sovereignty over local affairs, thus bringing about dual state and local sovereignty along the national plan of federal and state governments. But such local sovereignty has never developed, nor have any clear-cut distinctions between state and local power.” Osborne M. Reynolds Jr., Handbook of Local Government Law § 35, at 96 (1982).

HOME STATE home state.Family law. In an interstate child-custody dispute governed by the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act, the state where a child has lived with a parent or a person acting as a parent for at least six consecutive months immediately before the proceeding. See home-state jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

HOME-STATE JURISDICTION home-state jurisdiction.See JURISDICTION.

HOMESTEAD

homestead. 1. The house, outbuildings, and adjoining land owned and occupied by a person or family as a residence. • As long as the homestead does not exceed in area or value the limits fixed by law, in most states it is exempt from forced sale for collection of a debt. — Also termed homestead estate. See HOMESTEAD LAW. [Cases: Homestead 58–89.]

business homestead.The premises on which a family's business is located. • In some states, business homesteads are exempt from execution or judicial sale for most kinds of debt. [Cases: Homestead 36.]

constitutional homestead.A homestead, along with its exemption from forced sale, conferred on the head of a household by a state constitution. — Also termed statutory homestead; pony homestead. [Cases: Homestead 3, 30.]

pony homestead.See constitutional homestead.

probate homestead.A homestead created by a probate court from a decedent's estate for the benefit of the decedent's surviving spouse and minor children. • Under most statutes providing for the creation of a probate homestead, it is exempt from forced sale for the collection of decedent's debts. The family can remain in the home at least until the youngest child reaches the age of majority. Many states allow the surviving spouse to live in the home for life. In a few states, such as Texas, the right to a probate homestead is constitutional. See family allowance, spousal allowance under ALLOWANCE; HOMESTEAD LAW. Cf. life estate under ESTATE(1). [Cases: Homestead 134–153.]

statutory homestead.See constitutional homestead.

2. A surviving spouse's right of occupying the family home for life. • In some states, the right is extended to other dependents of a decedent.

HOMESTEADER

homesteader. One who acquires or occupies a homestead. [Cases: Homestead 16–29; Public Lands 35. C.J.S. Public Lands § 43.]

HOMESTEAD ESTATE

homestead estate. See HOMESTEAD.

HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION

homestead exemption. See HOMESTEAD LAW.

HOMESTEAD-EXEMPTION STATUTE homestead-exemption statute. See HOMESTEAD LAW.

HOMESTEAD LAW

homestead law. A statute exempting a homestead from execution or judicial sale for debt, unless all owners, usu. a husband and wife, have jointly mortgaged the property or otherwise subjected it to creditors' claims. — Also termed homestead exemption; homestead-exemption statute; homestead right. [Cases: Homestead 1, 118.]

“Almost all states also have legislative provisions, commonly referred to as homestead laws, designed to protect the family home from the reach of certain classes of creditors.... The protection afforded by an exemption statute is not absolute. A federal tax claim may be satisfied from ‘exempt property.’ A number of states make similar exceptions for state taxes, claims for alimony and child support, materialmen and mechanics' liens. By statute in most states, case law in others, purchase money mortgages and security interests are generally not affected by an exemption statute.” David G. Epstein & Steve H. Nickles, Consumer Law in a Nutshell 384–85 (2d ed. 1981).

HOMESTEAD RIGHT

homestead right. See HOMESTEAD LAW.

HOME-STUDY REPORT

home-study report. Family law. A summary of an investigation into a child's home, family environment, and background, usu. prepared by a social worker when a child has been removed from his or her home because of abuse or neglect, but also prepared after a similar investigation of the home of potential adoptive parents. — Often shortened to home study. — Also termed custody evaluation; social study.

HOME-STYLE EXEMPTION home-style exemption. Copyright. A provision in the U.S. Copyright Act allowing for the public airing of radio and television broadcasts in public-accommodation establishments, such as bars and restaurants, with impunity from liability for infringement. • The exemption is so named because the equipment used for the airing must be a single receiver of the type typically found in homes. 17 USCA § 110(5). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 67.1. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 51–52, 54.]

homicide (hom-<<schwa>>-sId), n. 1. The killing of one person by another. [Cases: Homicide 520.] 2. A person who kills another. — homicidal, adj.

“The legal term for killing a man, whether lawfully or unlawfully, is ‘homicide.’ There is no crime of ‘homicide.’ Unlawful homicide at common law comprises the two crimes of murder and manslaughter. Other forms of unlawful homicide have been created by statute: certain new forms of manslaughter (homicide with diminished responsibility, and suicide pacts), infanticide, and causing death by dangerous driving.” Glanville Williams, Textbook of Criminal Law 204 (1978).

criminal homicide. 1. Homicide prohibited and punishable by law, such as murder or manslaughter. [Cases: Homicide 525, 656.] 2. The act of purposely, knowingly, recklessly, or negligently causing the death of another human being. Model Penal Code § 210.1.

“Criminal homicide is everywhere divided into categories that reflect the historical distinction in English law between murder and manslaughter. American statutory formations have varied the terminology and the precise classifications; many statutes create more than two forms of criminal homicide, for purposes of definition and/or punishment. These variations notwithstanding, it is usually possible to discern a category that corresponds to the common-law crime of murder, the paradigm of which is a deliberate killing without legal justification or excuse, and a category that corresponds to the common-law crime of manslaughter and comprises killings that either are committed in circumstances which substantially mitigate their intentional aspect or are not intentional. In common speech as well as in the law, murder refers to the most serious criminal homicides, and manslaughter to those that may be serious crimes for which a substantial penalty is imposed but lack the special gravity of murder.” Lloyd L. Weinreb, “Homicide: Legal Aspects,” in 2 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 855, 857 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

criminally negligent homicide. See negligent homicide.

culpable homicide. Scots law. A wrongful act that results in a person's death but does not amount to murder. Cf. MANSLAUGHTER.

excusable homicide. 1. Homicide resulting from a person's lawful act, committed without intention to harm another. [Cases: Homicide 750.] 2. See justifiable homicide (1).

felonious homicide. Homicide committed unlawfully, without legal justification or excuse. • This is the category into which murder and manslaughter fall.

homicide by abuse. Homicide in which the perpetrator, under circumstances showing an extreme indifference to human life, causes the death of the perpetrator's dependent — usu. a child or mentally retarded person.

homicide by misadventure. See ACCIDENTAL KILLING.

homicide per infortunium (p<<schwa>>r in-for-t[y]oo-nee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “homicide by misfortune”] The unintentional killing of another while engaged in a lawful act; ACCIDENTAL KILLING. See PER INFORTUNIUM. [Cases: Homicide 762.]

innocent homicide. Homicide that does not involve criminal guilt.

justifiable homicide. 1. The killing of another in self-defense when faced with the danger of death or serious bodily injury. — Also termed excusable homicide. See SELF-DEFENSE(1). 2. A killing mandated or permitted by the law, such as execution for a capital crime or killing to prevent a crime or a criminal's escape. [Cases: Homicide 752–756.]

“It should be noted that a justifiable homicide is not criminal, since it is a killing which the law has either commanded or permitted: the actus in such a case is not legally punishable, and therefore we may perhaps say that it is an actus of killing which is not reus. As we shall see in most cases of justifiable homicide the killing is intentional, and therefore the mental element of criminal responsibility is clearly present: but there is no crime committed since there is no actus reus.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 109 (16th ed. 1952).

“English lawyers once distinguished between ‘excusable’ homicide (e.g. accidental non-negligent killing) and ‘justifiable’ homicide (e.g. killing in self-defence or in the arrest of a felon) and different legal consequences once attached to these two forms of homicide. To the modern lawyer this distinction has no longer any legal importance: he would simply consider both kinds of homicide to be cases where some element, negative or positive, required in the full definition of criminal homicide (murder or manslaughter) was lacking. But the distinction between these two different ways in which actions may fail to constitute a criminal offence is still of great moral importance. Killing in self-defence is an exception to a general rule making killing punishable; it is admitted because the policy or aims which in general justify the punishment of killing (e.g. protection of human life) do not include cases such as this. In the case of ‘justification’ what is done is regarded as something which the law does not condemn, or even welcomes.” H.L.A. Hart, “Prolegomenon to the Principles of Punishment,” in Punishment and Responsibility 1, 13 (1968).

negligent homicide. Homicide resulting from the careless performance of a legal or illegal act in which the danger of death is apparent; the killing of a human being by criminal negligence. — Also termed criminally negligent homicide. See criminal negligence under NEGLIGENCE. [Cases: Homicide 708.]

“There is no common-law offense known as ‘negligent homicide.’ As a matter of the common law of crimes any killing below the grade of manslaughter is innocent homicide. Some of the new penal codes have a classification scheme which (omitting degrees or other variations) divides criminal homicide into murder, manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide — or simply negligent homicide. For the most part, however, this has been achieved by removing from manslaughter the offense of homicide by criminal negligence and using this to constitute the newly named offense. Thus, though there are a few exceptions, most states will have no homicide offense which would be below common-law manslaughter.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 116–17 (3d ed. 1982).

nonfelonious homicide. A killing that is legally either excusable or justifiable. See excusable homicide; justifiable homicide.

reckless homicide. The unlawful killing of another person with conscious indifference toward that person's life. Cf. MANSLAUGHTER. [Cases: Homicide 709.]

vehicular homicide. The killing of another person by one's unlawful or negligent operation of a motor vehicle. — Also termed automobile homicide. [Cases: Automobiles 342.1. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 1456–1458, 1460–1466, 1468–1469, 1471–1476, 1478–1485.]

victim-precipitated homicide. 1. See suicide-by-cop under SUICIDE. 2. A killing provoked by the victim who consciously intended to die at the hands of another person. • This term applies loosely to any assisted suicide. Unlike most types of homicide, the victim bears some of the responsibility for causing his or her own death.

willful homicide. The act of intentionally causing a person's death, with or without legal justification.

HOMICIDIUM

homicidium (hom-<<schwa>>-sI-dee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin “felling of a person”] Homicide.

hotchpot (hoch-pot), n.1. The blending of items of property to secure equality of division, esp. as practiced either in cases of divorce or in cases in which advancements of an intestate's property must be made up to the estate by a contribution or by an accounting. — Also termed hotchpotch; hotchpot rule. Cf. RAPPORT à SUCCESSION. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 108; Wills 757, 762. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 106; Wills §§ 1774–1776, 1789.]

hotchpot rule, the purpose of which is to ensure that the shares of all the children shall be equal. The rule is that any money or property which the intestate has paid to, or settled on, or covenanted to settle on a child, either by way of advancement or in view of marriage, shall be brought into account and deducted from the share which is payable to that child under the intestacy.” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 783–84 (3d ed. 1933).

2. In a community-property state, the property that falls within the community estate. See COLLATIO BONORUM. [Cases: Husband and Wife 248.5–260.] 3.MAIN POT.

HOUSEBREAKING

housebreaking. The crime of breaking into a dwelling or other secured building, with the intent to commit a felony inside; BURGLARY. • Burglary is now used more frequently than housebreaking. In England, for example, housebreaking was replaced in 1968 with statutory burglary, though the term is still used in Scots law. In some jurisdictions, housebreaking includes “breaking out” of a house that was entered without a breaking. [Cases: Burglary 1.C.J.S. Burglary §§ 2–5.]

“The oldest term for this purpose [i.e., of distinguishing between common-law burglary and its statutory enlargements], still encountered at times, is ‘housebreaking’; a more recent suggestion is ‘breaking and entering,’ and peace officers sometimes speak of a ‘breakin.’ ” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 270 (3d ed. 1982).

constructive housebreaking. A breaking made out by construction of law, as when a burglar gains entry by threat or fraud. — Also termed constructive breaking into a house. [Cases: Burglary 9. C.J.S. Burglary §§ 11–12, 16, 21–22.]

HOUSEBURNING

hovering act. Int'l law. A statute applying to a coastal country's criminal jurisdiction over ships, and persons aboard those ships, when the ships are outside the country's territory.

“The notion of hovering acts evolved long before that of a belt of uniform width in the form of territorial waters. Great Britain's first anti-smuggling legislation to operate at a stated distance seaward was in 1719, applying to the master of any ship ‘found at anchor or hovering within two leagues from the shore.’ Later enactments extended this limit to three, then four, then eight leagues. A statute of 1794 gave power to seize and confiscate customable goods in vessels ‘found at anchor, or hovering’ inside specific straight lines drawn between lines on the British coasts, thus resembling the ‘King's Chambers’ of the Stuart era. In 1805 the British Parliament extended the seizure limit to 100 leagues (300 miles) from the coasts of Great Britain and Ireland in respect of vessels ‘belonging wholly or in part to His Majesty's subjects, or whereof one-half of the persons on board shall be subjects of His Majesty.’ Foreign-flag vessels could have fallen within this category. In the case of Le Louis (1817) 165 E.R. 1464, the British Admiralty judge Lord Stowell described these statutes as being permitted by ‘the common courtesy of nations for their convenience.’ ” Geoffrey Marston, “Hovering Acts,” in 2 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 884–85 (1995).

hypothetical lien creditor.See hypothetical creditor under CREDITOR.

HYPOTHETICAL NEGOTIATION

hypothetical negotiation.A judicial construct used to calculate damages in a patent-infringement suit by arriving at a figure that would have been a reasonable royalty acceptable to both parties.

HYPOTHETICAL-PERSON DEFENSE hypothetical-person defense.An entrapment defense in which the defendant asserts that an undercover law-enforcement officer (or person acting at the law-enforcement officer's direction) encouraged the defendant to engage in the criminal conduct either by making false representations designed to convince the defendant that the conduct was not prohibited, or by using persuasive methods that created a substantial risk that the charged offense would be committed by a person who was not otherwise inclined to commit it. • This defense has been adopted by a minority of states and by the Model Penal Code. — Also termed objective method. See Model Penal Code § 2.13. Cf. SHERMAN–SORRELLS DOCTRINE.

HYPOTHETICAL PLEADING hypothetical pleading. See PLEADING(1).

HYPOTHETICAL QUESTION hypothetical question. A trial device that solicits an expert witness's opinion based on assumptions treated as facts established by evidence. — Also termed abstract question. [Cases: Evidence 551; Witnesses 237. C.J.S. Evidence § 693; Witnesses § 411.]

HYPOTHETICAL TENANT

hypothetical tenant. Hist. A fictional person used for assessing property taxes, which are based on what the person would pay to lease the property.

IDEA–EXPRESSION DICHOTOMY idea–expression dichotomy.Copyright. The fundamental rule that copyright law protects only specific expressions of an idea, not the idea itself. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 4.5. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 10.]

IDEM PER IDEM

idem per idem (I-dem p<<schwa>>r I-dem). [Latin] The same for the same. • This phrase refers to an illustration that adds nothing to a matter under consideration.

IDEM SONANS

idem sonans (I-dem soh-nanz), adj.[Latin] (Of words or names) sounding the same, regardless of spelling <the names Gene and Jean are idem sonans>. • In trademark law, the term designates a name that sounds close enough to a registered trademark to create confusion among consumers and infringe that mark, so the Steinway company was able to prevent a competitor from registering “Steinberg” for the name of its pianos.

“The names of parties should be correctly spelled, but misspelling which does not change the sound works no harm; it matters not how incorrectly names are spelled, if they are idem sonans (the same sound).” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 186 (2d ed. 1899).

idem sonans (I-dem soh-nanz), n.[Latin] A legal doctrine preventing a variant spelling of a name in a document from voiding the document if the misspelling is pronounced the same way as the true spelling. [Cases: Names 16.C.J.S. Names § 4.]

identification of goods.A process that enables a buyer to obtain an identifiable (and therefore insurable) interest in goods before taking possession from the seller. • The goods are identified in any manner agreed to by the parties. UCC § 2-501. [Cases: Sales 199, 208. C.J.S. Sales §§ 214–215, 217, 223–224.]

To look upon as being associated (with) <the plaintiff was identified with the environmental movement>. 3. To specify (certain goods) as the object of a contract <identify the appliances to the contract>. See IDENTIFICATION OF GOODS. [Cases: Sales 199, 208. C.J.S. Sales §§ 214–215, 217, 223–224.]

IDENTIFYING MATERIAL

identifying material. Copyright. A portion or representation of an entire work deposited with the U.S. Copyright Office. • A copyright registrant is required to deposit at least one complete copy of the work, and often two. If a trade secret would be disclosed by a deposit or if the work's nature (e.g., a holograph) makes deposit difficult, a substitution is acceptable. Common forms of identifying material are drawings, photocopies, and selected pages of computer-software programs and databases. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 50.10. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 38–39.]

IDENTIKIT

identikit. A collection of pictures of facial features, used by police to create a composite image of a suspect from witnesses' descriptions. • In Great Britain, the resulting image is called a photofit.

IDENTITATE NOMINIS identitate nominis (I-den-ti-tay-tee nom-<<schwa>>-nis). See DE IDENTITATE NOMINIS .

IDENTITY

identity. 1. The identical nature of two or more things; esp., in patent law, the sameness in two devices of the function performed, the way it is performed, and the result achieved. • Under the doctrine of equivalents, infringement may be found even if the accused device is not identical to the claimed invention. See DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS. [Cases: Patents 234–237. C.J.S. Patents §§ 414–415, 417–418, 425–426.] 2. Evidence. The authenticity of a person or thing. [Cases: Evidence 102. C.J.S. Evidence § 211.]

IDENTITY OF INTERESTS

identity of interests. Civil procedure. A relationship between two parties who are so close that suing one serves as notice to the other, so that the other may be joined in the suit. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(3). [Cases: Limitation of Actions 127. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions § 235.]

IDENTITY OF PARTIES

identity of parties. Civil procedure. A relationship between two parties who are so close that a judgment against one prevents later action against the other because of res judicata. [Cases: Judgment 624–631, 665–678.C.J.S. Judgments §§ 697, 706, 828–833, 835, 837–840, 842–861, 912.]

identity theory of ademption. See ADEPTION.

IDEO

ideo (I-dee-oh), adv. [Latin] Therefore; for that reason.

IDEO CONSIDERATUM EST

ideo consideratum est (I-dee-oh k<<schwa>>n-sid-<<schwa>>-ray-t<<schwa>>m est). [Latin] Hist. Therefore it is considered. • These words often prefaced a judgment at common law, and came to refer to the judgment itself. Cf. CONSIDERATUM EST PER CURIAM.

IDEOLOGICAL AGGRESSION ideological aggression. 1. See hostile propaganda under PROPAGANDA. 2. See subversive propaganda under PROPAGANDA.

IDES

ides (Idz), n. [fr. Latin idus] (pl.) Roman law. In the Roman calendar, the ninth day after the Nones, being the 15th of March, May, July, and October, and the 13th of the other months. • In the calculation of the day, Nones is the first day counted. Cf. CALENDIS; NONES.

IDIOCHIRA

idiochira (id-ee-oh-kI-r<<schwa>>). [Greek “one's own hand”] Hist. An instrument executed privately, rather than before a public officer; esp., a deed written in one's own hand.

IDIOCY

idiocy. Archaic. The condition of a person who, from birth, has never had any glimmering of reasoning or intellectual faculties. — Also termed idiopathic insanity.

IDIOT

idiot. A person afflicted with profound mental retardation. • This term has largely fallen out of use in modern legal and medical contexts. Cf. IMBECILE.

IDIOTA

idiota (id-ee-oh-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Civil law. 1. An unlearned, simple person. 2. A private person; one not in public office.

IDIOTA INQUIRENDO

idiota inquirendo (id-ee-oh-t<<schwa>> in-kwI-ren-doh or in-kw<<schwa>>-ren-doh). See DE IDIOTA INQUIRENDO.

ID NON AGEBATUR

id non agebatur (id non aj-⟨schwa⟩-bay-t⟨schwa⟩r). [Law Latin] Scots law. That was not done.

“The meaning of the words as they occur here is this: the deceased, when he valued the subjects, did not intend to depreciate their value for the purpose of benefiting the executor, — this was not in his consideration at all — this was not what he did (id non agebatur) by the valuation; therefore, the executor is bound for the true value of the subjects.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 245 (4th ed. 1894).

IDONEIS ARGUMENTIS

idoneis argumentis (I-doh-nee-is ahr-gyoo-men-tis). [Law Latin] Hist. By suitable arguments.

IDONEITAS

idoneitas (I-doh-nee-⟨schwa⟩-tas). [fr. Latin idoneus “suitable”] Hist. A person's ability or fitness. — Also termed idoneity.

IDONEUM SE FACERE; IDONEARE SE

idoneum se facere; idoneare se (I-doh-nee-⟨schwa⟩m see fay-s⟨schwa⟩-ree; I-doh-nee-air-ee see). [Law Latin “to make oneself sufficient; to clear oneself”] Hist. To purge oneself, by oath, of a crime that one is accused of committing.

IDONEUS

idoneus (I-doh-nee-⟨schwa⟩s), adj.[Latin] Roman law. (Of a person or thing) appropriate or suitable. • A responsible or solvent man, for example, was known as an idoneus homo, while a pledge of sufficient security was termed idonea cautio. — Also spelled (in English) idoneous.

IGNIS JUDICIUM

ignis judicium (ig-nis joo-dish-ee-*<<schwa>>*m). [Latin] Hist. Trial by fire. See ordeal by fire under ORDEAL.

IGNOMINY

ignominy (ig-n*<<schwa>>*-min-ee). Public disgrace or dishonor. — ignominious,adj.

IGNORAMUS

ignoramus (ig-n*<<schwa>>-ray-m<<schwa>>*s). [Law Latin] Hist. We do not know. • This notation, when written on a bill of indictment, indicated the grand jury's rejection of the bill. See NOT FOUND; NO BILL. Cf. TRUE BILL.

“When the grand jury have heard the evidence, if they think it a groundless accusation, they used formerly to endorse on the back of the bill, ‘ignoramus;’ or, we know nothing of it; intimating, that, though the facts might possibly be true, that truth did not appear to them: but now they assert in English, more absolutely, ‘not a true bill’; and then the party is discharged without farther answer.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 301 (1769).

ignorantia (ig-n*<<schwa>>-ran-shee-<<schwa>>*). [Latin] Ignorance; esp., ignorance of the law.

“Ignorantia.... Divided in the civil law, into ignorantia facti (ignorance of fact) and ignorantia juris (ignorance of law). Lord Coke accepts this division....” 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 40 (2d ed. 1867).

IGNORANTIA FACTI

ignorantia facti (ig-n*<<schwa>>-ran-shee-<<schwa>>* fak-tI). [Latin] Ignorance of fact.

ignorantia facti excusat (ig-n*<<schwa>>-ran-shee-<<schwa>>* fak-tI ek-skyoo-sat or -zat). [Latin] Ignorance of fact is an excuse; whatever is done under a mistaken impression of a material fact is excused or provides grounds for relief. • This maxim refers to the principle that acts done and contracts made under mistake or ignorance of a material fact are voidable. [Cases: Criminal Law 33. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 93.]

“ ‘Ignorantia facti excusat,’ however, is obviously too sweeping even for a general statement of law, because it is clear (to mention only one point for the moment) that if a certain deed would constitute exactly the same crime under either of two factual situations, it will be no excuse that one was mistaken for the other.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 1044 (3d ed. 1982).

IGNORANTIA JURIS

ignorantia juris (ig-n*<<schwa>>-ran-shee-<<schwa>>* joor-is). [Latin] Ignorance of law. • Under Roman law, this type of ignorance was less likely than ignorantia facti to excuse mistaken conduct, except in the case of minors and people, such as women, under some legal disability.

IGNORANTIA JURIS NON EXCUSAT

ignorantia juris non excusat (ig-n<<schwa>>-ran-shee-<<schwa>> joor-is non ek-skyoo-sat or -zat). [Latin] Lack of knowledge about a legal requirement or prohibition is never an excuse to a criminal charge. • In English, the idea is commonly rendered ignorance of the law is no excuse. — Often shortened to ignorantia juris. — Also termed ignorantia juris neminem excusat (ignorance of the law excuses no one); ignorantia legis non excusat; ignorantia juris haud excusat. [Cases: Criminal Law 32. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 56, 94.]

“Almost the only knowledge of law possessed by many people is that ignorance of it is no excuse (ignorantia juris non excusat). This maxim was originally formulated at a time when the list of crimes, broadly speaking, represented current morality (mala in se), but we now have many other crimes that are the result of administrative or social regulation (mala prohibita), which are equally governed by the maxim. The rule is, then, that whereas ignorance of fact can excuse, to the extent that it negatives mens rea or fault, ignorance of the law generally does not.” Glanville Williams, Textbook of Criminal Law 405 (1978).

IGNORATIO ELENCHI

ignoratio elenchi (ig-n<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh e-leng-ki or ig-n<<schwa>>-rah-tee-oh i-leng-kee). [Law Latin “ignorance of the conclusion to be proved”] An advocate's misunderstanding of an opponent's position, manifested by an argument that fails to address the opponent's point; the overlooking of an opponent's counterargument. • This fallacy of logic often involves an advocate's trying to prove something that is immaterial to the point to be decided.

IGNORE

ignore, vb. 1. To refuse to notice, recognize, or consider. 2. (Of a grand jury) to reject (an indictment) as groundless; to no-bill (a charge).

IGNORING

The unauthorized entrance of an alien into the United States by arriving at the wrong time or place, by evading inspection, or by fraud.

ILLEGAL INTEREST

illegal interest.See USURY.

ILLEGALITY

illegality,n.1. An act that is not authorized by law. 2. The state of not being legally authorized.

“A contract made ultra vires is void; but not [strictly speaking] on the ground of illegality. Lord Cairns ... takes exception to the use of the term ‘illegality,’ pointing out that it is not the object of the contracting parties, but the incapacity of one of them, that avoids the contract.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 190 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“It must not be thought that illegality in the law of contract is co-terminous with illegality in the criminal law, for a contract may be illegal without involving any breach of the criminal law at all.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 257 (3d ed. 1981).

3. The state or condition of being unlawful. • The affirmative defense of illegality must be expressly set forth in the response to the opponent's pleading. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c).

IMITATION

imitation. Trademarks. An item that so resembles a trademarked item as to be likely to induce the belief that it is genuine. See SIMILARITY. [Cases: Trade Regulation 339. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 84, 86.]

“The law of trade marks is of recent origin, and may be comprehended in the proposition that a dealer ‘has a property in his trade mark.’ The ownership is allowed to him, that he may have the exclusive benefit of the reputation which his skill has given to articles made by him, and that no other person may be able to sell to the public, as his, that which is not his. An imitation of his mark, with partial differences such as the public would not observe, does him the same harm as an entire counterfeit. If the wholesale buyer, who is most conversant with the marks, is not misled, but the small retailer or the consumer is, the injury is the same in law, and differs only in degree.” Clark v. Clark, 25 Barb. 76 (N.Y. 1857).

“It is no excuse that one using the trade-marks of another informs his dealers of the imitation, for succeeding sellers may not make similar disclosures.” James Kent, 2 Commentaries on American Law *372 n.8 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

IMLS

IMLS.abbr.INSTITUTE OF MUSEUM AND LIBRARY SERVICES.

IMMATERIAL

immaterial,adj. (Of evidence) tending to prove some fact that is not properly at issue; lacking any logical connection with the consequential facts. Cf. IRRELEVANT. [Cases: Evidence 143. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 197, 201–204.] — immateriality,n.

“The rules of substantive law and of pleading are what determine immateriality; and if the probandum is immaterial, of course no evidence to prove it is wanted.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 37 (1935).

IMMEDIATE INTENT

immediate intent.See INTENT(1).

IMMEDIATELY-APPARENT REQUIREMENT

immediately-apparent requirement.Criminal procedure. The principle that a police officer must have probable cause to believe that an item is contraband before seizing it. • This plain-view exception to the warrant requirement was first announced in Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 403 U.S. 443, 91 S.Ct. 2022 (1971).

“An object may not be seized from a car merely because the police plain view of it was lawfully acquired; there must be probable cause that the object is a fruit, instrumentality or evidence of crime. And under the ‘immediately apparent’ requirement of Coolidge v. New Hampshire, this probable cause must be determined without examination of the object other than is justified by the purpose underlying police entry of the vehicle.” Wayne R. LaFave & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 3.7, at 201 (2d ed. 1992).

immobilis, (i-moh-b<<schwa>>-lis,)adj.[Latin] Immovable.

immobilize,vb. To make immobile; esp., to turn (movable property) into immovable property or to turn (circulating capital) into fixed capital.

IMMORAL CONSIDERATION

immoral consideration.See CONSIDERATION(1).

IMMORAL CONTRACT

immoral contract.See CONTRACT.

IMMORAL SUBJECT MATTER

immoral subject matter. 1.Patents. Inventions that do not have a socially beneficial use. • In the past, patents were denied for some categories of inventions, such as gambling devices and fraudulent products, esp. medicines. The doctrine is rarely used today. [Cases: Patents 46. C.J.S. Patents § 59.] 2.Trademarks. SCANDALOUS SUBJECT MATTER.

IMMOVABLE

immovable,n. (usu. pl.) Property that cannot be moved; an object so firmly attached to land that it is regarded as part of the land. — Also termed immovable thing. See FIXTURE. Cf. MOVABLE. [Cases: Fixtures 1; Property 4. C.J.S. Property §§ 14–21, 23.] — immovable,adj.

“Considered in its legal aspect, an immovable, that is to say, a piece of land, includes the following elements: — 1. A determinate portion of the earth's surface. 2. The ground beneath the surface down to the centre of the world. All the pieces of land in England meet together in one terminable point at the earth's centre. 3. Possibly the column of space above the surface ad infinitum.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 428 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

IMMOVABLE FIXTURE

immovable fixture.See FIXTURE.

IMMUNE

immune,adj. Having immunity; exempt from a duty or liability.

IMMUNITY

immunity. 1. Any exemption from a duty, liability, or service of process; esp., such an exemption granted to a public official.

“An immunity is a defense to tort liability which is conferred upon an entire group or class of persons or entities under circumstances where considerations of public policy are thought to require special protection for the person, activity or entity in question at the expense of those injured by its tortious act. Historically, tort litigation against units of government, public officers, and charities, and between spouses, parents and children, has been limited or prohibited on this basis.” Edward J. Kionka, Torts in a Nutshell 341 (2d ed. 1992).

absolute immunity.A complete exemption from civil liability, usu. afforded to officials while performing particularly important functions, such as a representative enacting legislation and a judge presiding over a lawsuit. Cf. qualified immunity. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 114. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 247–248, 251–258.]

congressional immunity.Either of two special immunities given to members of Congress: (1) the exemption from arrest while attending a session of the body to which the member belongs, excluding an arrest for treason, breach of the peace, or a felony, or (2) the exemption from arrest or questioning for any speech or debate entered into during a legislative session. U.S. Const. art. I, § 6, cl. 1. See SPEECH AND DEBATE CLAUSE. [Cases: United States 12. C.J.S. United States §§ 27–28.]

constitutional immunity.Immunity created by a constitution.

diplomatic immunity.The general exemption of diplomatic ministers from the operation of local law, the exception being that a minister who is plotting against the security of the host nation may be arrested and sent out of the country. • A minister's family shares in diplomatic immunity to a great, though ill-defined, degree. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls 3. C.J.S. Ambassadors and Consuls §§ 15–23.]

discretionary immunity.A qualified immunity for a public official's acts, granted when the act in question required the exercise of judgment in carrying out official duties (such as planning and policy-making).²⁸ USCA § 2680(a). [Cases: Municipal Corporations 728. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations § 665.]

“Probably no one test will control the decision on discretionary immunity. Although the fact that the government has omitted to act is not in itself a defense, the discretionary immunity is frequently emphasized in nonfeasance cases. On the other hand, where the government's activity is affirmative, specific, and in violation of a statute, regulation, or constitutional provision imposing a duty upon government, courts are often willing to say there is no room for discretion.” Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 131, at 1041–42 (W. Page Keeton ed., 5th ed. 1984).

executive immunity. 1. The absolute immunity of the U.S. President or a state governor from civil damages for actions that are within the scope of official responsibilities. [Cases: United States 26. C.J.S. United States §§ 45–47.] 2. The qualified immunity from civil claims against lesser executive officials, who are liable only if their conduct violates clearly established constitutional or statutory rights. • Executive immunity generally protects an official while carrying out clearly established responsibilities about which a reasonable person would know. Cf. executive privilege under PRIVILEGE(3).

foreign immunity.The immunity of a foreign sovereign, its agents, and its instrumentalities from litigation in U.S. courts. [Cases: International Law 10.31–10.39. C.J.S. International Law §§ 46–52, 54–55.]

government immunity. See sovereign immunity.

intergovernmental immunity. The immunity between the federal and state governments based on their independent sovereignty. See INTERGOVERNMENTAL-IMMUNITY DOCTRINE.

judicial immunity. The immunity of a judge from civil liability arising from the performance of judicial duties. [Cases: Judges 36. C.J.S. Judges §§ 86–92, 94–96.]

legislative immunity. The immunity of a legislator from civil liability arising from the performance of legislative duties. See congressional immunity.

prosecutorial immunity. The absolute immunity of a prosecutor from civil liability for decisions made and actions taken in a criminal prosecution.

qualified immunity. Immunity from civil liability for a public official who is performing a discretionary function, as long as the conduct does not violate clearly established constitutional or statutory rights. — Also termed prima facie privilege. Cf. absolute immunity. [Cases: Civil Rights 1376; Officers and Public Employees 114. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 143–144, 146, 157, 160; Officers and Public Employees §§ 247–248, 251–258.]

sovereign immunity. 1. A government's immunity from being sued in its own courts without its consent. • Congress has waived most of the federal government's sovereign immunity. See FEDERAL TORT CLAIMS ACT. 2. A state's immunity from being sued in federal court by the state's own citizens. — Also termed government immunity; governmental immunity.

work-product immunity. See WORK-PRODUCT RULE.

2. Torts. A doctrine providing a complete defense to a tort action. • Unlike a privilege, immunity does not negate the tort, and it must be raised affirmatively or it will be waived. Cf. PRIVILEGE(2).

charitable immunity. The immunity of a charitable organization from tort liability. • This immunity has been eliminated or restricted in most states. — Also termed eleemosynary defense. [Cases: Charities 45(2). C.J.S. Charities §§ 66–67.]

corporate immunity. A corporate officer's immunity from personal liability for a tortious act committed while acting in good faith and within the course of corporate duties. [Cases: Corporations 306, 336. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 537–540, 544–545, 547, 549.]

husband–wife immunity. The immunity of one spouse from a tort action by the other spouse for personal injury. • As of 1992, 38 states and the District of Columbia had abolished interspousal tort immunity either by judicial opinion or by statute. Nine states had abolished the rule only in specific instances such as intentional or vehicular torts. — Also termed interspousal immunity; interspousal tort immunity; marital immunity. [Cases: Husband and Wife 205(2).]

interspousal immunity. See husband–wife immunity.

judgmental immunity. See ERROR-OF-JUDGMENT RULE.

marital immunity. See husband–wife immunity.

parental immunity. 1. The principle that children cannot sue their parents, and that parents cannot sue their children, for tort claims. • This tort immunity did not exist at English common law; it was created by American courts, first appearing in Hewellette v. George, 9 So. 885 (Miss. 1891). Many courts have abolished the doctrine for some purposes, such as actions by unemancipated minors against parents to recover for injuries sustained in motor-vehicle accidents. See, e.g., Merrick v. Sutterlin, 610 P.2d 891 (Wash. 1980) (en banc). Nor does the immunity apply when an injury is inflicted by the parent or child through willful, wanton, or criminal conduct. See, e.g., Schenk v. Schenk, 241 N.E.2d 12 (Ill. App. Ct. 1968). — Also termed parent–child immunity; parental-immunity doctrine. [Cases: Parent and Child 11. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 260, 299–300, 316–320.] 2. The principle that parents are not liable for damages caused by the ordinary negligence of their minor child. Cf. PARENTAL-LIABILITY STATUTE. [Cases: Parent and Child 13.5(2). C.J.S. Parent and Child § 191.]

3. Criminal law. Freedom from prosecution granted by the government in exchange for the person's testimony. • By granting immunity, the government can compel testimony — despite the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination — because that testimony can no longer incriminate the witness. [Cases: Criminal Law 42. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 78–86.]

pocket immunity. Immunity that results from the prosecutor's decision not to prosecute, instead of from a formal grant of immunity. — Also termed informal immunity. [Cases: Criminal Law 42. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 78–86.]

testimonial immunity. Immunity from the use of the compelled testimony against the witness. • Any information derived from that testimony, however, is generally admissible against the witness. [Cases: Criminal Law 42; Witnesses 304. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 78–86; Witnesses § 555.]

“Testimonial immunity is a logical corollary to a person's fifth amendment right not to ‘be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself.’ It provides that when a witness is compelled to testify for any reason, his testimony cannot be used against him in a subsequent criminal proceeding. It also follows that the immunity is not available where the witness testifies voluntarily, and that the protection applies only in a subsequent criminal prosecution in which the witness is subject to prosecution for an offense related to his earlier testimony.” 2 Paul H. Robinson, Criminal Law Defenses § 205, at 482–83 (1984).

transactional immunity. Immunity from prosecution for any event or transaction described in the compelled testimony. • This is the broadest form of immunity. [Cases: Criminal Law 42. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 78–86.]

use immunity. Immunity from the use of the compelled testimony (or any information derived from that testimony) in a future prosecution against the witness. • After granting use immunity, the government can still prosecute if it shows that its evidence comes from a legitimate independent source. — Also termed use/derivative-use immunity. [Cases: Criminal Law 42. C.J.S. Criminal

Law §§ 78–86.]

4. Freedom of a person against having a given legal relation altered by someone else's act or omission.

IMMUNIZE

immunize,vb. To grant immunity to <the new legislation immunized the police officers from liability>.

IMPACTED AREA

impacted area.A region that is affected by some event; esp., a region in which the school population increases due to an influx of federal employees who are working on a federal project or activity, but the tax revenue declines due to the U.S. government's immunity from local taxes.

IMPACT RULE impact rule.Torts. The common-law requirement that physical contact must have occurred to allow damages for negligent infliction of emotional distress. • This rule has been abandoned in most jurisdictions. — Also termed physical-impact rule. [Cases: Damages 50. C.J.S. Damages § 96; Torts §§ 74, 80–81, 83.]

IMPAIR

impair,vb. To diminish the value of (property or a property right). • This term is commonly used in reference to diminishing the value of a contractual obligation to the point that the contract becomes invalid or a party loses the benefit of the contract. See CONTRACTS CLAUSE.

IMPAIRED CAPITAL

impaired capital.See CAPITAL.

IMPAIRING THE MORALS OF A MINOR impairing the morals of a minor.The offense of an adult's engaging in sex-related acts, short of intercourse, with a minor. • Examples of this conduct are fondling, taking obscene photographs, and showing pornographic materials. — Also termed unlawful sexual conduct with a minor; corrupting; corruption of a minor. Cf. CONTRIBUTING TO THE DELINQUENCY OF A MINOR. [Cases: Infants 13. C.J.S. Infants §§ 5, 92–93, 95–98.]

IMPAIRMENT

impairment,n. The fact or state of being damaged, weakened, or diminished <impairment of collateral>. — impair,vb.

IMPALEMENT

impalement,n. Hist. An ancient mode of inflicting punishment by thrusting a sharp pole through the body. — Formerly also spelled empalement. — impale,vb.

IMPANEL

impanel,vb. See EMPANEL.

IMPANELED JURY

impaneled jury.See JURY.

IMPARCARE

imparcare (im-pahr-kair-ee), vb.[Law Latin “to enclose”] Hist. To impound; to confine in prison. See CARCER.

IMPARL

imparl (im-pahr), vb.1.Hist. To request or obtain an imparlance. 2. To confer with the opposing party in an effort to settle a dispute amicably; to discuss settlement.

imparlance (im-pahr-l<<schwa>>nts).Hist. 1. A continuance granted for the purpose of giving the requesting party (usu. the defendant) further time to answer the adversary's last pleading (esp. the plaintiff's writ, bill, or count), often so that the parties will have time to settle the dispute. • Imparlanes were abolished in England in 1853. 2. A petition for such a continuance. 3. The permission granting such a continuance. — Formerly also spelled emparlance. — Also termed licentia loquendi.

“After defence made, the defendant must put in his plea. But, before he pleads, he is entitled to demand one imparlance, or licentia loquendi, and may have more granted by consent of the plaintiff; to see if he can end the matter amicably without farther suit, by talking with the plaintiff” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 298 (1768).

general imparlance.The allowance of time until the court's next term, without reserving to the defendant the benefit of any exception. • With this type of imparlance, the requesting defendant cannot later object to the jurisdiction of the court or plead any matter in abatement.

general special imparlance.The allowance of time with a saving of all exceptions, so that a defendant might later plead not only in abatement but also to the jurisdiction.

special imparlance.The allowance of time with a saving only of exceptions to the writ, bill, or count, but not to the court's jurisdiction.

IMPARTIAL

impartial,adj. Unbiased; disinterested.

IMPARTIAL CHAIR

impartial chair. 1.ARBITRATOR. 2.MEDIATOR. — Also termed impartial chairman.

IMPARTIAL EXPERT impartial expert.See EXPERT.

IMPARTIAL JURY

impartial jury.See JURY.

IMPARTIBLE

impartible (im-pahr-t<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. Indivisible <an impartible estate>.

IMPARTIBLE FEUD

impartible feud.See FEUD(1).

IMPASSE

impasse (im-pas). A point in labor negotiations at which agreement cannot be reached. • A neutral third party (such as a mediator) is often called in to help resolve an impasse.

“Not only is the employer free after impasse to implement changes already offered to the union, but either party is free after impasse to decline to negotiate further. Since impasse signifies that the parties have exhausted (at least temporarily) the avenues of bargaining, termination of bargaining at that point cannot be thought to demonstrate a cast of mind against reaching agreement.” Robert A. Gorman, Basic Text on Labor Law: Unionization and Collective Bargaining 447 (1976).

IMPEACH

impeach,vb.1. To charge with a crime or misconduct; esp., to formally charge (a public official) with a violation of the public trust <President Nixon resigned from office to avoid being impeached>. • Impeaching a federal official, such as the President, the Vice President, or a judge, requires that a majority of the U.S. House of Representatives vote to return at least one article of impeachment to the U.S. Senate, itemizing the charges and explaining their factual grounds. Even if an official is impeached, removal from office does not occur unless two-thirds of the senators vote for conviction. 2. To discredit the veracity of (a witness) <the lawyer hoped that her star witness wouldn't be impeached on cross-examination>. [Cases: Witnesses 311–409. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 559–775.] 3. To challenge the accuracy or authenticity of (a document) <the handwriting expert impeached the holographic will>.

IMPEACHABLE OFFENSE

impeachable offense.An offense for which a public official may legally be impeached, during the first step in a two-step process that may, depending on the vote in the U.S. Senate, lead to the official's removal from office. • The U.S. Constitution states that “[t]he President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.” The meaning of this language was much debated during the impeachment and trial of President Bill Clinton, against whom two articles of impeachment were returned by the House of Representatives. The question arose what type of misdemeanor will suffice, and whether the high in high crimes modifies misdemeanors as well. No definitive answer resulted from the proceedings.

IMPEACHMENT

impeachment. 1. The act (by a legislature) of calling for the removal from office of a public official, accomplished by presenting a written charge of the official's alleged misconduct; esp., the initiation of a proceeding in the U.S. House of Representatives against a federal official, such as the President or a judge. • Congress's authority to remove a federal official stems from art. II, § 4 of the Constitution, which authorizes the removal of an official for “Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.” The grounds upon which an official can be removed do not, however, have to be criminal in nature. They usu. involve some type of abuse of power or breach of the public trust. Articles of impeachment — which can be approved by a simple majority in the House — serve as the charging instrument for the later trial in the Senate. If the President is impeached, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court presides over the Senate trial. The defendant can be removed from office by a two-thirds majority of the senators who are present. In the United Kingdom, impeachment is by the House of Commons and trial by the House of Lords. But no case has arisen there since 1801, and many British scholars consider impeachment obsolete. [Cases: United States 35.C.J.S. United States §§ 23, 53, 56–57.] 2. The act of discrediting a witness, as by catching the witness in a lie or by demonstrating that the witness has been convicted of a criminal offense. [Cases: Witnesses 311–409. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 559–775.] 3. The act of challenging the accuracy or authenticity of evidence.

IMPEACHMENT COURT

impeachment court. See COURT FOR THE TRIALS OF IMPEACHMENT.

IMPEACHMENT EVIDENCE

impeachment evidence. See EVIDENCE.

IMPEACHMENT OF VERDICT impeachment of verdict. A party's attack on a verdict, alleging impropriety by a member of the jury. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2371.]

IMPEACHMENT OF WASTE

impeachment of waste. Hist. An action for waste against the tenant of the harmed property.

“[F]or above five hundred years past, all tenants for life or for any less estate, have been punishable or liable to be impeached for waste, both voluntary and permissive; unless their leases be made, as sometimes they are, without impeachment of waste” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 283 (1766).

impechiare (im-pee-chee-air-ee), vb.[fr. Law French empescher “to impeach”] Hist. To impeach; to accuse.

IMPEDIENS

impediens (im-pee-dee-enz). [Law Latin] Hist. A person who hinders. • The defendant (or deforciant) in a fine of conveyance was sometimes so called. See FINE(1).

IMPEDIMENT

impediment (im-ped-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>nt). A hindrance or obstruction; esp., some fact (such as legal minority) that bars a marriage if known beforehand and, if discovered after the ceremony, renders the marriage void or voidable.

canonical impediment.A ground for annulment recognized by canon law and developed by the ecclesiastical courts of the Roman Catholic Church. • Canonical impediments include affinity, impotence, disparity of worship, and previous religious profession.

civil impediment.A ground for annulment recognized by civil law of contracts, such as minority, unsoundness of mind, fraud, and duress. • The defects of fraud and duress may be waived, and the parties may confirm the marriage.

diriment impediment (dir-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>nt im-ped-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>nt), n.[fr. Latin dirimens impedimentum “nullifying impediment”] A fact that raises an absolute bar to marriage and renders a contracted marriage void. • Diriment impediments include consanguinity within a prohibited degree and prior undissolved marriage. — Also termed impedimenta dirimentia.

IMPEDIMENTA DIRIMENTIA impedimenta dirimentia.See diriment impediment under IMPEDIMENT.

IMPEDIMENTUM REBUS AGENDIS impedimentum rebus agendis (im-ped-<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m ree-b<<schwa>>s <<schwa>>-jen-dis). [Law Latin] Hist. A hindrance to the transaction of business.

IMPEDITOR

impeditor (im-ped-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r). [Law Latin] Hist. A person who interferes with a patron's right of advowson, i.e., the right to appoint a clerk to a benefice. — Also termed disturber. See DE CLERICO ADMITTENDO.

IMPENSAE

impensae (im-pen-see), n. pl.[Latin] Roman law. Expenditures made on a thing.

impensae necessariae (im-pen-see nes-<<schwa>>-sair-ee-ee). Expenditures necessary to prevent deterioration, destruction, or loss of a thing — such as money expended for building repair or maintenance.

impensae utiles (im-pen-see yoo-t<<schwa>>-leez). Useful expenditures that improve something and increase its selling value.

impensae voluptariae (im-pen-see vol-<<schwa>>p-tair-ee-ee). Expenditures made on a thing for ornamental purposes only.

IMPERATIVE AUTHORITY

imperative authority. See AUTHORITY(4).

IMPERATIVE LAW

imperative law. See LAW.

IMPERATIVE THEORY OF LAW

imperative theory of law. The theory that law consists of the general commands issued by a country or other political community to its subjects and enforced by courts with the sanction of physical force. • Imperative theorists believe that if there are rules predating or independent of the country, those rules may closely resemble law or even substitute for it, but they are not law. See POSITIVE LAW. Cf. NATURAL LAW.

IMPERFECT DEFENSE

imperfect defense. See DEFENSE(1).

IMPERFECT DUTY

imperfect duty. See DUTY(1).

IMPERFECT GRANT

imperfect grant. See GRANT.

IMPERFECT JUSTIFICATION imperfect justification. See JUSTIFICATION.

IMPERFECT OBLIGATION

imperfect obligation. See moral obligation under OBLIGATION.

IMPERFECT OWNERSHIP

imperfect ownership. See OWNERSHIP.

IMPERFECT RIGHT

imperfect right. See RIGHT.

IMPERFECT SELF-DEFENSE

imperfect self-defense. See SELF-DEFENSE.

IMPERFECT STATUTE

imperfect statute. See STATUTE.

IMPERFECT TITLE

imperfect title. See TITLE(2).

IMPERFECT TRUST

imperfect trust. See executory trust under TRUST.

IMPERFECT USUFRUCT

imperfect usufruct. See quasi-usufruct (1) under USUFRUCT.

IMPERFECT WAR

imperfect war. See WAR.

IMPERIAL STATE

imperial state. See STATE.

IMPERITIA

imperitia (im-p<<schwa>>-rish-ee-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] Roman law. Lack of skill or competence; inexperience. • The Romans considered imperitia to be a type of culpa that gave rise to liability in tort or liability under a contract calling for the rendering of services (such as a locatio conductio operis). Imperitus could denote a person, such as a judge who was incompetent in what he undertook.

IMPERIUM

imperium (im-peer-ee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman law. Power or dominion; esp., the legal authority wielded by superior magistrates under the Republic, and later by the emperor under the Empire. • Imperium implied the right of military command, and the powers of corporal punishment, and of life and death over citizens. It was symbolized by the lictors who carried the fasces and an ax, which symbolized those powers. Imperium was also used less technically; it applied to lesser types of authority under Roman law, and thus had different meanings. For example, imperium domesticum described the power of the head of a household.

imperium merum (im-peer-ee-<<schwa>>m meer-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “bare power” or “absolute executive power”] Roman law. A higher magistrate's power to use force to repress crime.

imperium mixtum (im-peer-ee-<<schwa>>m miks-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin “mixed power”] Roman law. A magistrate's authority to make and enforce decisions in civil and criminal matters.

IMPERMISSIBLE COMMENT ON THE EVIDENCE impermissible comment on the evidence. See COMMENT ON THE EVIDENCE.

IMPERSONAL

impersonal. See IN REM.

IMPERSONATION

impersonation. The act of impersonating someone. — Also termed personation.

false impersonation. The crime of falsely representing oneself as another person, usu. a law-enforcement officer, for the purpose of deceiving someone. See 18 USCA §§ 912–917. — Also termed false personation. [Cases: False Personation 1.]

IMPERTINENT

impertinent, adj. See IRRELEVANT.

IMPERTINENT EVIDENCE

impertinent evidence. See EVIDENCE.

IMPERTINENT MATTER

impertinent matter. Procedure. In pleading, matter that is not relevant to the action or defense. • A federal court may strike any impertinent matter from a pleading. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f). Cf. SCANDALOUS MATTER. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1127; Pleading 364(4). C.J.S. Pleading § 683.]

“The court will not strike out the matter unless its impertinence clearly appears; for if erroneously stricken out, the error is irremediable; if left to stand, the court may set the matter right in taxing the costs. Matter which is scandalous is also impertinent.” William C. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 526 (1889).

impescare (im-p<<schwa>>-skair-ee), vb. [fr. Law French empescher “to impeach”] Hist. To impeach; to accuse.

IMPETITIO VASTI

impetitia vasti (im-p<<schwa>>-tish-ee-oh vas-ti). See IMPEACHMENT OF WASTE.

impetrare (im-p<<schwa>>-trair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To obtain by request. • This word often appeared in petitions requesting a formula for an action from a praetor. It performed a similar function under English law for those seeking a writ from Chancery. The English word impetrate derives from this Latinism. Cf. FORMULA (1).

IMPETRATION

impetration (im-p<<schwa>>-tray-sh<<schwa>>n). 1. Hist. The act of petitioning for a writ.

2.Hist. Eccles. law. The act of obtaining a papal benefice for bestowal by the king or other lay patron. — impetrate,vb.

IMPIGNORATA

impignorata (im-pig-n<<schwa>>-ray-t<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] Hist. Given in pledge; pledged or mortgaged.

IMPIGNORATION

impignoration (im-pig-n<<schwa>>-ray-sh<<schwa>>n), n. Hist. The act of pawning or putting to pledge. — impignorate,vb.

IMPINGE

impinge,vb. To encroach or infringe (on or upon) <impinge on the defendant's rights>.

IMPLACITARE

implacitare (im-plas-<<schwa>>-tair-ee), vb.[fr. Latin placitum “plea”] Hist. To implead; to sue.

implead,vb.1. To bring (someone) into a lawsuit; esp., to bring (a new party) into the action. Cf. INTERPLEAD. 2.Hist. To bring an action against; to accuse. — Formerly also spelled emplead; empleet. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 281–297; Parties 49. C.J.S. Parties § 127.]

impleader,n. A procedure by which a third party is brought into a lawsuit, esp. by a defendant who seeks to shift liability to someone not sued by the plaintiff. Fed. R. Civ. P. 14. — Also termed third-party practice; vouching-in. Cf. INTERPLEADER; INTERVENTION(1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 281–297; Parties 49. C.J.S. Parties § 127.]

IMPLEMENTATION PLAN

imply, vb. 1. To express or involve indirectly; to suggest <the opinion implies that the court has adopted a stricter standard for upholding punitive-damages awards>. Cf. INFER. 2. (Of a court) to impute or impose on equitable or legal grounds <the court implied a contract between the parties>. 3. To read into (a document) <citing grounds of fairness, the court implied a condition that the parties had not expressed>. See implied term under TERM(2). — implication, n.

“Anglo-American judges, who continually evaluate facts, often use the phrase by implication (= by what is implied, though not formally expressed, by natural inference), along with its various cognates. Judges (by implication) draw ‘natural inferences’ and thereby decide that something or other was, in the circumstances, ‘implied.’ Through the process of hypallage — a semantic shift by which the attributes of the true subject are transferred to another subject — the word imply has come to be used in reference to what the judges do, as opposed to the circumstances. This specialized use of imply runs counter to popular lay use and is not adequately treated in English-language dictionaries.

“The lawyer's imply has directly encroached on the word infer. Whereas nonlawyers frequently use infer for imply, lawyers and judges conflate the two in the opposite direction, by using imply for infer. In analyzing the facts of a case, judges will imply one fact from certain others. (From is a telling preposition.) Nonlawyers believe they must be inferring an additional fact from those already known; if contractual terms are implied, they must surely be implied by the words or circumstances of the contract and not by the judges.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 423, 424 (2d ed. 1995).

import,n.1. A product brought into a country from a foreign country where it originated <imports declined in the third quarter>. See PARALLEL IMPORTS. 2. The process of bringing foreign goods into a country <the import of products affects the domestic economy in significant ways>. Cf. EXPORT. 3. The meaning; esp., the implied meaning <the court must decide the import of that obscure provision>.4. Importance; significance <time will tell the relative import of Judge Posner's decisions in American law>.

IMPORTATION

importation. The bringing of goods into a country from another country.

IMPORT DUTY

import duty. See DUTY(4).

IMPORTED LITIGATION

imported litigation. One or more lawsuits brought in a state that has no interest in the dispute.

IMPORTER

importer. A person or entity that brings goods into a country from a foreign country and pays customs duties.

IMPORT-EXPORT CLAUSE

Import-Export Clause. U.S. Const. art. I, § 10, cl. 2, which prohibits states from taxing imports or exports. • The Supreme Court has liberally interpreted this clause, allowing states to tax imports as long as the tax does not discriminate in favor of domestic goods. — Also termed Export Clause. [Cases: Customs Duties 1–2. C.J.S. Customs Duties §§ 1–4, 6, 10–12.]

IMPORT LETTER OF CREDIT import letter of credit. See LETTER OF CREDIT.

IMPORT QUOTA

importune (im-por-t[y]oon), vb. To solicit forcefully; to request persistently, and sometimes irksomely.

IMPOSE

impose,vb. To levy or exact (a tax or duty).

IMPOSITION

imposition. An impost or tax.

IMPOSITIVE FACT

impositive fact.See FACT.

IMPOSSIBILITY

impossibility. 1. The fact or condition of not being able to occur, exist, or be done. 2. A fact or circumstance that cannot occur, exist, or be done. 3.Contracts. A fact or circumstance that excuses performance because (1) the subject or means of performance has deteriorated, has been destroyed, or is no longer available, (2) the method of delivery or payment has failed, (3) a law now prevents performance, or (4) death or illness prevents performance. • Increased or unexpected difficulty and expense do not usu. qualify as an impossibility and thus do not excuse performance. — Also termed impossibility of performance. [Cases: Contracts 309. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 520–522, 524.] 4. The doctrine by which such a fact or circumstance excuses contractual performance. Cf. FRUSTRATION(2); IMPRACTICABILITY. [Cases: Contracts 309. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 520–522, 524.] 5.Criminal law. A fact or circumstance preventing the commission of a crime. [Cases: Criminal Law 31, 44. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 15, 46–49, 88, 93–94, 114–123.]

factual impossibility.Impossibility due to the fact that the illegal act cannot physically be accomplished, such as trying to pick an empty pocket. • Factual impossibility is not a defense to the crime of attempt. — Also termed physical impossibility; impossibility of fact.

legal impossibility. 1. Impossibility due to the fact that what the defendant intended to do is not illegal even though the defendant might have believed that he or she was committing a crime. • A legal impossibility might occur, for example, if a person goes hunting while erroneously believing that it is not hunting season. This type of legal impossibility is a defense to the crimes of attempt, conspiracy, and solicitation. — Also termed impossibility of law; true legal impossibility. 2. Impossibility due to the fact that an element required for an attempt has not been satisfied. • This type of legal impossibility might occur, for example, if a person fires an unloaded gun at another when the crime of attempt requires that the gun be loaded. This is a defense to the crime of attempt.

objective impossibility.Impossibility due to the nature of the performance and not to the inability of the individual promisor.

subjective impossibility.Impossibility due wholly to the inability of the individual promisor and not to the nature of the performance.

supervening impossibility.Impossibility arising after the formation of a contract but before the time when the promisor's performance is due, and arising because of facts that the promisor had no reason to anticipate and did not contribute to the occurrence of.

“Contracting parties constantly take a voluntary risk, and it would make the whole basis of contract insecure if they were allowed to plead every and any kind of supervening impossibility. Moreover, a man need not undertake this kind of risk unless he chooses. He can deliberately exclude it by stipulations in his contract, if the other party is willing to contract with him on those terms.” 2 Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England 82–83 (L. Crispin Warmington ed., 21st ed. 1950).

IMPOSSIBILITY-OF-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE impossibility-of-performance doctrine. The principle that a party may be released from a contract on the ground that uncontrollable circumstances have rendered performance impossible. Cf. FRUSTRATION(2); IMPRACTICABILITY. [Cases: Contracts 309(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 520–522, 524.]

IMPOSSIBLE CONSIDERATION impossible consideration. See CONSIDERATION(1).

IMPOSSIBLE CONTRACT

impossible contract. See CONTRACT.

IMPOST

impost (im-pohst). A tax or duty, esp. a customs duty <the impost was assessed when the ship reached the mainland>. See DUTY(4).

IMPOSTOR

impostor (im-pos-t<<schwa>>r). One who pretends to be someone else to deceive others, esp. to receive the benefits of a negotiable instrument. — Also spelled imposter. [Cases: Banks and Banking 147; Bills and Notes 201, 279. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 415–416; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 29, 150–151.]

IMPOSTOR RULE

impostor rule. Commercial law. The principle that an impostor's indorsement of a negotiable instrument is not a forgery, and that the drawer or maker who issues the instrument to the impostor is negligent and therefore liable to the holder for payment. • If a drawer or maker issues an instrument to an impostor, any resulting forgery of the payee's name will be effective in favor of a person paying on the instrument in good faith or taking it for value or collection. UCC § 3-404. [Cases: Banks and Banking 147; Bills and Notes 201, 279. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 415–416; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 29, 150–151.]

IMPOTENCE

impotence (im-p<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>nts). A man's inability to achieve an erection and therefore to have sexual intercourse. • Because an impotent husband cannot consummate a marriage, impotence has often been cited as a ground for annulment. — Also termed impotency; physical incapacity; erectile dysfunction.

IMPOUND

impound,vb.1. To place (something, such as a car or other personal property) in the custody of the police or the court, often with the understanding that it will be returned intact at the end of the proceeding. 2. To take and retain possession of (something, such as a forged document to be produced as evidence) in preparation for a criminal prosecution.

IMPOUND ACCOUNT

impound account.See ACCOUNT.

IMPOUNDMENT

impoundment. 1. The action of impounding; the state of being impounded. See IMPOUND. 2.Constitutional law. The President's refusal to spend funds appropriated by Congress. • Although not authorized by the Constitution and seldom used, the impoundment power effectively gives the executive branch a line-item veto over legislative spending. [Cases: United States 82(1). C.J.S. United States §§ 155, 158.]

IMPRACTICABILITY

impracticability (im-prak-ti-k<<schwa>>-bil-<<schwa>>-tee).Contracts. 1. A fact or circumstance that excuses a party from performing an act, esp. a contractual duty, because (though possible) it would cause extreme and unreasonable difficulty. • For performance to be truly impracticable, the duty must become much more difficult or much more expensive to perform, and this difficulty or expense must have been unanticipated. [Cases: Contracts 309(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 520–522, 524.] 2. The doctrine by which such a fact or circumstance excuses performance. Cf. FRUSTRATION(2); IMPOSSIBILITY(4).

commercial impracticability.The occurrence of a contingency whose nonoccurrence was an assumption in the contract, as a result of which one party cannot perform. [Cases: Contracts 309(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 520–522, 524.]

“The doctrines of Impossibility, Commercial Impracticability or as the Uniform Commercial Code knows it, Excuse by Failure of Presupposed Conditions, comprise unclimbed peaks of contract doctrine. Clearly, all of the famous early and mid-twentieth century mountaineers, Corbin, Williston, Farnsworth and many lesser men have made attempts on this topic but none has succeeded in conquering the very summit.... In spite of attempts by all of the contract buffs and even in the face of eloquent and persuasive general statements, it remains impossible to predict with accuracy how the law will apply to a variety of relatively common cases. Both the cases and the Code commentary are full of weasel words such as ‘severe’ shortage, ‘marked’ increase, ‘basic’ assumptions, and ‘force majeure.’ ” James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 3-9, at 155 (3d ed. 1988).

imprescriptible (im-pr<<schwa>>-skrip-t<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. Not subject to prescription; not capable of being acquired by prescription.

imprimis (im-prI-mis), adv. [fr. Latin in primis “in the first”] In the first place. — Also termed in primis.

IMPRISON

imprison, vb. To confine (a person) in prison.

IMPRISONMENT

imprisonment, n. 1. The act of confining a person, esp. in a prison <the imprisonment of Jackson was entirely justified>. 2. The state of being confined; a period of confinement <Jackson's imprisonment lasted 14 years>. See FALSE IMPRISONMENT.

“Imprisonment, by whatever name it is called, is a harsh thing, and the discipline that must be exercised over human beings in close confinement can never be wholly agreeable to those subject to it. When an attempt is made to hide the harsh realities of criminal justice behind euphemistic descriptions, a corrupting irony may be introduced into ordinary speech that is fully as frightening as Orwell's ‘Newspeak.’ ” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 57 (1968).

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT

imprisonment for debt. Hist. Detention of a debtor by court order to force the debtor to pay certain civil obligations. • The remedy was usu. available only when the debt arose from nonpayment of taxes or fines owed to the Crown, or from the debtor's failure to pay court-ordered support or alimony, or from the debtor's failure to obey a decree ad factum praestandum. — Also termed civil imprisonment. See decree ad factum praestandum under DECREE.

IMPROBATION

improbation.Scots law. An action to prove that a document is forged or otherwise false. — Also termed proper improbation.

reduction improbation.Scots law. An action in which a person who may be hurt or affected by a document can demand the document's production in court. • The person bringing the action may ask the court either to determine the document's effects or to nullify the document. If the document is not produced, the court can automatically declare it false or forged.

impute (im-pyoot), vb. To ascribe or attribute; to regard (usu. something undesirable) as being done, caused, or possessed by <the court imputed malice to the defamatory statement>. — imputation,n. — imputable,adj.

“The word ‘impute’ comes from im (in) and putare (reckon). It means to bring into the reckoning, to attribute or to ascribe. It is sometimes used to attribute vicariously, — to ascribe as derived from another. This is included properly within the general import of the term but it is not its primary meaning. It may be used in many senses. Thus we may impute (ascribe) intent, knowledge, guilt, and so forth. Here it is used in the basic sense of imputing (ascribing) the fact itself. Harm has been done. Did the defendant do it? Usually such an inquiry is purely factual. What really happened? At times, however, when all the facts are known we have to ask: Will the law impute (attribute or ascribe) what happened to the defendant? That is what is meant here by ‘imputability.’ ” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 605 (3d ed. 1982).

IMPUTED DISQUALIFICATION

in being. Existing in life <life in being plus 21 years>. • In property law, this term includes children conceived but not yet born. — Also termed in esse. See LIFE IN BEING.

“The intentional killing of one not ‘in being,’ i.e. an unborn child, was until 1929 punishable neither as murder nor as infanticide. There can be no murder nor manslaughter of a child which dies before being born or even whilst being born, only of one that has been born and, moreover, been born alive.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 104 (16th ed. 1952).

IN BLANK

in blank. (Of an indorsement) not restricted to a particular indorsee. See blank indorsement under INDORSEMENT.

INCENDIARY

incendiary (in-sen-dee-er-ee), n. 1. One who deliberately and unlawfully sets fire to property. — Also termed arsonist; firebug. 2. An instrument (such as a bomb) or chemical agent designed to start a fire. — incendiary,adj.

INCENDIUM

incendium (in-sen-dee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] 1.Roman law. Fire. 2.Hist. Arson.

INCENTIVE PAY PLAN

incentive pay plan.A compensation plan in which increased productivity is rewarded with higher pay.

INCENTIVE STOCK OPTION incentive stock option.See STOCK OPTION(2).

INCENTIVE THEORY

incentive theory.Intellectual property. The proposition that society grants creators exclusive rights to their intellectual property in order to stimulate further creativity. • The Patent and Copyright Clause of the U.S. Constitution declares that the purpose of exclusive-right protection is to “promote the Progress of Science and useful Arts.” U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 8.

INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY

incentive-to-commercialize theory.Patents. The economic theory justifying the grant of patent rights based on how efficient the patent system is at bringing together diverse resources such as commercial backing, manufacturing capacity, marketing know-how, and other skills that the inventor alone would be unable to handle. — Also termed incentive-to-invest theory; incentive-to-innovate theory; prospect theory. Cf. INCENTIVE-TO-DESIGN-AROUND THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-DISCLOSE THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-INVENT THEORY.

INCENTIVE-TO-DESIGN-AROUND THEORY incentive-to-design-around theory.Patents. The economic theory justifying the grant of patent rights based on their tendency to encourage others to design substitutes and improvements that are better or cheaper. Cf. INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY Y; INCENTIVE-TO-DISCLOSE THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-INVENT THEORY .

INCENTIVE-TO-DISCLOSE THEORY

incentive-to-disclose theory.Patents. The economic theory justifying the grant of patent rights based on the social benefit of having the information enter the public domain. • Without the incentive, the argument goes, the technical advancements would remain trade secrets and the duplication of research efforts would be a waste to society. Cf. INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-DESIGN-AROUND THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-INVENT THEORY.

INCENTIVE-TO-INNOVATE THEORY incentive-to-innovate theory.See INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY.

INCENTIVE-TO-INVENT THEORY

incentive-to-invent theory. Patents. The economic theory justifying the grant of patent rights based on their tendency to encourage new inventions that benefit society and that may not otherwise be developed. Cf. INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY Y; INCENTIVE-TO-DESIGN-AROUND THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-DISCLOSE THEORY Y.

INCENTIVE-TO-INVEST THEORY incentive-to-invest theory. See INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY.

INCENTIVE ZONING

incentive zoning. See ZONING.

INCERTA PERSONA

incerta persona (in-s<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>> p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>). [Latin “uncertain person”] Roman law. A person (or corporate body) that could not inherit property, such as a person whose existence was uncertain or whom the testator could not identify by name (such as the first person to appear at the testator's funeral). Pl. incertae personae.

“Another change under Justinian was of much greater importance. Gifts of all kinds could now be made to incertae personae....” W.W. Buckland, A Text-Book of Roman Law from Augustus to Justinian 363 (Peter Stein ed., 3d ed. 1963).

INCERTO PATRE

incerto patre (in-s<<schwa>>r-toh pay-tree). [Latin] Hist. From an uncertain father. • The phrase appeared in reference to illegitimate children.

INCEST

incest, n. 1. Sexual relations between family members or close relatives, including children related by adoption. • Incest was not a crime under English common law but was punished as an ecclesiastical offense. Modern statutes make it a felony.

“Although incest under both English and American law is a distinct crime, its commission may involve any of eight different offenses: illegal marriage, consensual cohabitation by unmarried persons, fornication (consensual intercourse), forcible rape, statutory rape, child abuse, and juvenile delinquency (sexual relations between minor siblings or cousins).... The choice of crime charged is generally one of prosecutorial discretion. Unless one of the participants is a minor and the other an adult, both parties may be prosecuted for incest.” Lois G. Forer, “Incest,” in 3 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 880, 880 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

2. Intermarriage between persons related in any degree of consanguinity or affinity within which marriage is prohibited — for example, through the uncle–niece or aunt–nephew relationship. [Cases: Incest 1–8.5. C.J.S. Incest §§ 2–7.] — incestuous, adj.

incestuosi (in-ses-choo-oh-sI). [Law Latin] Hist. Children begotten incestuously. Cf. ADULTERINI.

INCESTUOUS ADULTERY

IN CHIEF

in chief. 1. Principal, as opposed to collateral or incidental. 2. Denoting the part of a trial in which the main body of evidence is presented. See CASE-IN-CHIEF F.

INCHMAREE CLAUSE

Inchmaree clause (inch-m<<schwa>>-ree). Maritime law. An insurance-policy provision that protects against risks not caused by nature, such as a sailor's negligence or a latent defect in machinery. • This term is taken from a British ship, the Inchmaree, whose sinking in 1884 gave rise to litigation that led to the clause bearing its name. — Also termed additional-perils clause. [Cases: Insurance 2228, 2231. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 997, 1011–1012.]

“The most celebrated decision of recent times under the ‘general’ clause was doubtless Thames & Mersey Marine Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, Fraser & Co., 12 App.Cas. 484 (1887). A pump, insured as part of the machinery of a vessel, clogged through valve failure and was damaged. The House of Lords held this accident arose neither through a ‘peril of the sea’ nor through a cause ejusdem generis with the enumerated perils.... This was a disquieting decision, for it more than suggested that many costly accidents that might be suffered by the expensive machinery on steam vessels were not covered by the standard marine policy. The result was the inclusion of the celebrated ‘Inchmaree’ clause in hull policies, extending special coverage not only to machinery breakage but to many other classes of loss not covered by the standard perils clause as restrictively construed.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 4-8, at 74 n.90 (2d ed. 1975).

inchoate (in-koh-it), adj. Partially completed or imperfectly formed; just begun. Cf. CHOATE. — inchoateness, n.

“The word ‘inchoate,’ not much used in ordinary discourse, means ‘just begun,’ ‘undeveloped.’ The common law has given birth to three general offences which are usually termed ‘inchoate’ or ‘preliminary’ crimes — attempt, conspiracy, and incitement. A principal feature of these crimes is that they are committed even though the substantive offence is not successfully consummated. An attempt fails, a conspiracy comes to nothing, words of incitement are ignored — in all these instances, there may be liability for the inchoate crime.” Andrew Ashworth, Principles of Criminal Law 395 (1991).

INCHOATE CRIME

inchoate crime. See inchoate offense under OFFENSE(1).

INCHOATE DOWER

inchoate dower. See DOWER.

INCHOATE INSTRUMENT

inchoate instrument. See INSTRUMENT(3).

INCHOATE INTEREST

inchoate interest. See INTEREST(2).

INCHOATE LIEN

inchoate lien. See LIEN.

INCHOATE OFFENSE

inchoate offense. See OFFENSE(1).

INCHOATE RIGHT

inchoate right. 1. A right that has not fully developed, matured, or vested. 2. Patents. An inventor's right that has not yet vested into a property right because the patent application is pending. [Cases: Patents 182.]

incident, adj. Dependent upon, subordinate to, arising out of, or otherwise connected with (something else, usu. of greater importance) <the utility easement is incident to the ownership of the tract>. — incident, n.

incident, n. 1. A discrete occurrence or happening <an incident of copyright infringement>. 2. A dependent, subordinate, or consequential part (of something else) <child support is a typical incident of divorce>.

INCIDENTAL

incidental, adj. Subordinate to something of greater importance; having a minor role <the FAA determined that the wind played only an incidental part in the plane crash>.

INCIDENTAL ADMISSION

incidental admission. See ADMISSION(1).

INCIDENTAL AUTHORITY

incidental authority. See AUTHORITY(1).

INCIDENTAL BENEFICIARY incidental beneficiary. See BENEFICIARY.

INCIDENTAL DAMAGES

incidental damages. See DAMAGES.

INCIDENTAL DEMAND

incidental demand. See DEMAND(1).

INCIDENTAL MAIN MOTION

incidental main motion. See MOTION(2).

INCIDENTAL MOTION

incidental motion. See MOTION(2).

INCIDENTAL POWER

incidental power. See incident power under POWER(3).

INCIDENTAL USE

incidental use. See USE(1).

INCIDENTER

incidenter (in-si-den-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin] Hist. Incidentally.

INCIDENT OF OWNERSHIP

incident of ownership. (usu. pl.) Any right of control that may be exercised over a transferred life-insurance policy so that the policy's proceeds will be included in a decedent's gross estate for estate-tax purposes <because Douglas still retained the incidents of ownership after giving his life-insurance policy to his daughter, the policy proceeds were taxed against his estate>. • The incidents of ownership include the rights to change the policy's beneficiaries and to borrow against, assign, and cancel the policy. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4155. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 510.]

INCIDENT POWER

incident power. See POWER(3).

INCIDENT TO EMPLOYMENT incident to employment. Workers' compensation. A risk that is related to or connected with a worker's job duties. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 610–611. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 376, 378.]

incidere (in-sid-<<schwa>>-ree), vb.[Latin “fall into or on”] Roman law. To come within the scope of a law or to fall into a legal category; esp. to become involved in a situation that entangles a person in a legal action. • This term had a similar meaning under English law. For example, a person might become liable to (or “fall into”) amercement (incidere in misericordiam). See AMERCEMENT.

INCIPITUR

incipitur (in-sip-i-t<<schwa>>r). [Law Latin] Hist. It is begun. • This refers to the practice of entering the commencement of a pleading on the court roll.

INCITE

incite,vb. To provoke or stir up (someone to commit a criminal act, or the criminal act itself). Cf. ABET.

INCITEE

incitee. A person who has been incited, esp. to commit a crime.

INCITEFUL

inciteful,adj. Tending to incite <inciteful speech>.

INCITEMENT

incitement,n.1. The act or an instance of provoking, urging on, or stirring up. 2.Criminal law. The act of persuading another person to commit a crime; SOLICITATION(2). [Cases: Criminal Law 45. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 115, 124–126.] — inciteful,adj.

“An inciter is one who counsels, commands or advises the commission of a crime. It will be observed that this definition is much the same as that of an accessory before the fact. What, then, is the difference between the two? It is that in incitement the crime has not (or has not necessarily) been committed, whereas a party cannot be an accessory in crime unless the crime has been committed. An accessory before the fact is party to consummated mischief; an inciter is guilty only of an inchoate crime.” Glanville Williams, Criminal Law 612 (2d ed. 1961).

“Emphasis upon the theory of one offense with guilt attaching to several is quite appropriate because it is still part of the groundwork of our legal philosophy, so far as perpetrators, abettors and inciters are concerned, despite the fact that some of the statutes require lipservice to the notion of a separate substantive offense, in the effort to avoid certain procedural difficulties. It explains how one may be guilty of a crime he could not perpetrate, by having caused or procured it as a result of his abetment or incitement.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 732–33 (3d ed. 1982).

inciter. A person who incites another to commit a crime; an aider or abettor.

INCITING REVOLT

inciting revolt. See MUTINY.

INCIVILE

incivile (in-siv-<<schwa>>-lee), adj. [Law Latin] Irregular; out of the due course of law.

INCIVISM

incivism (in-si-viz-*<<schwa>>*m). Unfriendliness toward one's own country or its government; lack of good citizenship.

INCLAUSA

inclausa (in-klaw-z*<<schwa>>*). [Law Latin] Hist. An enclosure near a house; a home close. See CLOSE(1).

IN CLIENTELA

in clientela (in kli-*<<schwa>>n-tee-l<<schwa>>*). [Latin] Hist. In the relation between client and patron.

INCLOSE

inclose, vb. See ENCLOSE.

INCLOSURE

inclosure. See ENCLOSURE.

INCLUDE

include, vb. To contain as a part of something. • The participle including typically indicates a partial list <the plaintiff asserted five tort claims, including slander and libel>. But some drafters use phrases such as including without limitation and including but not limited to — which mean the same thing. See NAMELY.

INCLUDED OFFENSE

included offense. See lesser included offense under OFFENSE(1).

INCLUSIONARY-APPROACH RULE

inclusionary-approach rule. The principle that evidence of a prior crime, wrong, or act is admissible for any purpose other than to show a defendant's criminal propensity as long as it is relevant to some disputed issue and its probative value outweighs its prejudicial effect. [Cases: Criminal Law 369.2(1). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 825–826.]

INCLUSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS inclusio unius est exclusio alterius. See EXPRESSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS .

INCLUSIVE DEED

inclusive deed. See inclusive grant under GRANT.

INCLUSIVE GRANT

inclusive grant. See GRANT.

INCLUSIVE SURVEY

inclusive survey. See SURVEY.

INCOGNITO

incognito (in-kog-nee-toh or in-kog-ni-toh), adj. Without making one's name or identity known <Binkley flew incognito to France>.

INCOLA

incola (in-k<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>), n. [Latin "an inhabitant"] Roman law. A foreign resident without full civil rights; the inhabitant of a foreign colony. • The term is used particularly for provincial residents who were not Roman citizens. — Also termed (in English) incolant. Cf. PEREGRINUS.

INCOME

income. The money or other form of payment that one receives, usu. periodically, from employment, business, investments, royalties, gifts, and the like. See EARNINGS. Cf. PROFIT.

accrued income. Money earned but not yet received.

accumulated income. Income that is retained in an account; esp., income that a trust has generated, but that has not yet been reinvested or distributed by the trustee. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4008. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 446.]

accumulated taxable income. The income of a corporation as adjusted for certain items (such as excess charitable contributions), less the dividends-paid deduction and the accumulated-earnings credit. • It serves as the base upon which the accumulated-earnings tax is imposed. See accumulated-earnings tax under TAX. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3833.]

active income. 1. Wages; salary. 2. Income from a trade or business.

adjusted gross income. Gross income minus allowable deductions specified in the tax code. — Abbr. AGI. [Cases: Taxation 979.]

adjusted ordinary gross income. A corporation's gross income less capital gains and certain expenses. • The IRS uses this calculation to determine whether a corporation is a personal holding company. If 60% or more of a corporation's AOGI consists of certain passive investment income, the company has met the test for personal-holding-company classification. IRC (26 USCA) § 543(b). — Abbr. AOGI. See personal holding company under COMPANY. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3853–3858. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 383–385.]

aggregate income. The combined income of a husband and wife who file a joint tax return. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3566.1, 4481. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 335, 366, 637.]

blocked income. Money earned by a foreign taxpayer but not subject to U.S. taxation because the foreign country prohibits changing the income into dollars.

current income. Income that is due within the present accounting period. — Also termed current revenue.

deferred income. Money received at a time later than when it was earned, such as a check received in January for commissions earned in November.

disposable income. Income that may be spent or invested after payment of taxes and other primary obligations. — Also termed disposable earnings.

distributable net income. The amount of distributions from estates and trusts that the beneficiaries will have to include in income. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3173, 4018. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 66, 95, 439, 443–444, 452.]

dividend income. The income resulting from a dividend distribution and subject to tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3743–3774; Taxation 988. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 72, 389–391, 395; Taxation § 1728.]

earned income. Money derived from one's own labor or active participation; earnings from services. Cf. unearned income (2).

exempt income. Income that is not subject to income tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4045–4071; Taxation 1048. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 327, 462–474, 670, 798; Taxation § 1736–1737.]

fixed income. Money received at a constant rate, such as a payment from a pension or annuity.

gross income. Total income from all sources before deductions, exemptions, or other tax reductions. IRC (26 USCA) § 61. — Also termed gross earnings. [Cases: Taxation 979.]

imputed income. The benefit one receives from the use of one's own property, the performance of one's services, or the consumption of self-produced goods and services.

income in respect of a decedent. Income earned by a person, but not collected before death. • This income is included in the decedent's gross estate for estate-tax purposes. For income-tax purposes, it is taxed to the estate or, if the estate does not collect the income, it is taxed to the eventual recipient. — Abbr. IRD. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4035–4039; Taxation 1024. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 435–439, 457–461; Taxation §§ 1710–1712.]

investment income. See unearned income.

net income. Total income from all sources minus deductions, exemptions, and other tax reductions. • Income tax is computed on net income. — Also termed net earnings. [Cases: Taxation 980. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1715–1716.]

net operating income. Income derived from operating a business, after subtracting operating costs.

nonoperating income. Business income derived from investments rather than operations.

operating income. See ordinary income (1).

ordinary income. 1. For business-tax purposes, earnings from the normal operations or activities of a business. — Also termed operating income. 2. For individual income-tax purposes, income that is derived from sources such as wages, commissions, and interest (as opposed to income from capital gains). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3230.1–3257; Taxation 986, 996. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 128–129, 131–145, 490–491; Taxation §§ 1724, 1732–1733.]

other income. Income not derived from an entity's principal business, such as earnings from dividends and interest.

passive income. Income derived from a business, rental, or other income-producing activity that the earner does not directly participate in or has no immediate control over. See PASSIVE ACTIVITY. Cf. portfolio income.

passive investment income. Investment income that does not involve or require active participation, such as gross receipts from royalties, rental income, dividends, interest, annuities, and gains from the sale or exchange of securities. IRC (26 USCA) § 1362(d). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3892.]

personal income. The total income received by an individual from all sources.

portfolio income. Income not derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business, such as interest earned on savings, dividends, royalties, capital gains, or other investment sources. • For tax purposes, losses on passive activities cannot be used to offset net portfolio income. Cf. passive income.

prepaid income. Income received but not yet earned. — Also termed deferred revenue.

previously taxed income. An S corporation's undistributed taxable income taxed to the shareholders as of the last day of the corporation's tax year. • This income could usu. be withdrawn later by the shareholders without tax consequences. PTI has been replaced by the accumulated adjustments account. — Abbr. PTI.

real income. Income adjusted to allow for inflation or deflation so that it reflects true purchasing power.

regular income. Income that is received at fixed or specified intervals.

split income. An equal division between spouses of earnings reported on a joint tax return, allowing for equal tax treatment in community-property and common-law states.

taxable income. Gross income minus all allowable deductions and exemptions. • Taxable income is multiplied by the applicable tax rate to compute one's tax liability. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4529; Taxation 980. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 644–645; Taxation §§ 1715–1716.]

unearned income. 1. Earnings from investments rather than labor. — Also termed investment income. 2. Income received but not yet earned; money paid in advance. Cf. earned income.

unrelated-business income. Tax. Gross income earned by a nonprofit corporation from activities unrelated to its nonprofit functions. • A nonprofit corporation's income is tax-exempt only to the extent that it is produced by activities directly related to its nonprofit purpose. — Also termed unrelated-business taxable income. IRC (26 USCA) § 512(a)(3)(A). [Cases: Internal Revenue 4068. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 473–474.]

“The [Internal Revenue] Service has justified the unrelated business income tax as a means of preventing unfair competition between tax-exempt and for-profit providers. Thus, part of the analysis of whether income from a business venture is unrelated business taxable income focuses on the impact of the activity on competitors by inquiring whether the activity at issue is one generally offered by commercial enterprise. The categorization of a business activity of an exempt organization as related or unrelated to the exempt purpose of the organization follows very few bright-line rules. Approaches to the question of exempt purposes within the context of unrelated business income differ substantially from those used in the context of the qualification of an entity for exempt status itself.” Barry R. Furrow et al., Health Law § 8-1, at 419 (2d ed. 2000).

INCOME-AND-EXPENSE DECLARATION income-and-expense declaration. Family law. In child-support litigation, a document that contains information on a parent's income, assets, expenses, and liabilities. — Also termed financial statement.

INCOME APPROACH

income approach. A method of appraising real property based on capitalization of the income that the property is expected to generate. Cf. MARKET APPROACH; COST APPROACH . [Cases: Taxation 348(5).]

INCOME AVERAGING income averaging. Tax. A method of computing tax by averaging a person's current income with that of preceding years. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3092. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 334.]

“A distinct departure from the strict annual system of taxing income is the concept of averaging income, allowed until repeal by the 1986 T.R.A.... [T]he rate at which the item was taxed was made to depend not only on the rates and level of income for that year, but upon the taxpayer's experience over the past four years. The item was (sometimes) taxed as if it had been received over a four-year period. Especially for authors, actors, athletes, and other taxpayers who have fluctuating or bunched income and face graduated tax rates that apply on an annual basis, income averaging was most important.” John K. McNulty, Federal Income Taxation of Individuals in a Nutshell 353 (5th ed. 1995).

INCOME-BASED PLAN

income-based plan. See CHAPTER 13.

INCOME-BASIS METHOD

income-basis method. A method of computing the rate of return on a security using the interest and price paid rather than the face value.

INCOME BENEFICIARY income beneficiary. See BENEFICIARY.

INCOME BOND

income bond. See BOND(3).

INCOME EXCLUSION

income exclusion. See EXCLUSION(1).

INCOME FUND

income fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

INCOME IN RESPECT OF A DECEDENT income in respect of a decedent. See INCOME.

INCOME PROPERTY

income property. See PROPERTY.

INCOME-SHIFTING

income-shifting. The practice of transferring income to a taxpayer in a lower tax bracket, such as a child, to reduce tax liability. • Often this is accomplished by forming a Clifford trust. See Clifford trust under TRUST; kiddie tax under TAX.

INCOME STATEMENT

income statement. A statement of all the revenues, expenses, gains, and losses that a business incurred during a given period. — Also termed statement of income; profit-and-loss statement; earnings report. Cf. BALANCE SHEET.

INCOME STOCK

income stock. See STOCK.

INCOME TAX

income tax. See TAX.

IN CONTEMPLATION OF DEATH in contemplation of death. See CONTEMPLATION OF DEATH.

INCONTESTABILITY CLAUSE

incontestability clause. Insurance. An insurance-policy provision (esp. found in a life-insurance policy) that prevents the insurer, after a specified period (usu. one or two years), from disputing the policy's validity on the basis of fraud or mistake; a clause that bars all defenses except those reserved (usu. conditions and the payment of premiums). • Most states require that a life-insurance policy contain a clause making the policy incontestable after it has been in effect for a specified period, unless the insured does not pay premiums or violates policy conditions relating to military service. Some states also require similar provisions in accident and sickness policies. — Also termed noncontestability clause; incontestable clause; uncontestable clause. Cf. CONTESTABILITY CLAUSE. [Cases: Insurance 3121. C.J.S. Insurance § 1636.]

INCONTESTABILITY STATUS

incontestability status. Trademarks. A classification of a trademark that meets certain criteria — including commercial use for five years after being placed on the Principal Register — as immune from legal challenge. • Although incontestability does not confer absolute immunity, it makes a challenge much more difficult. 37 USCA § 1065. Cf. DECLARATION OF USE. [Cases: Trade Regulation 252. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 199.]

INCONTESTABLE POLICY

INCONVENIENT FORUM

inconvenient forum. See FORUM NON CONVENIENS.

INCORPORAMUS

incorporamus (in-kor-p<<schwa>>-ray-m<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] Hist. We incorporate. • This word indicated an intent to incorporate.

“All the other methods therefore whereby corporations exist, by common law, by prescription, and by act of parliament, are for the most part reducible to this of the king's letters patent, or charter of incorporation. The king's creation may be performed by the words ‘creamus, erigimus, fundamus, incorporamus,’ or the like.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 461 (1765).

INCORPORATE

incorporate, vb. 1. To form a legal corporation <she incorporated the family business>. [Cases: Corporations 1. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 2, 4.] 2. To combine with something else <incorporate the exhibits into the agreement>. 3. To make the terms of another (esp. earlier) document part of a document by specific reference <the codicil incorporated the terms of the will>; esp., to apply the provisions of the Bill of Rights to the states by interpreting the 14th Amendment's Due Process Clause as encompassing those provisions.

INCORPORATION

incorporation, n. 1. The formation of a legal corporation. See ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION. [Cases: Corporations 1. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 2, 4.] 2. Constitutional law. The process of applying the provisions of the Bill of Rights to the states by interpreting the 14th Amendment's Due Process Clause as encompassing those provisions. • In a variety of opinions since 1897, the Supreme Court has incorporated the First, Fourth, Sixth, and Ninth Amendments into the Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause. [Cases: Constitutional Law 254.2. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 951.] selective incorporation. Incorporation of certain provisions of the Bill of Rights. • Justice Benjamin Cardozo, who served from 1932 to 1938, first advocated this approach. [Cases: Constitutional Law 254.2. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 951.]

total incorporation. Incorporation of all of the Bill of Rights. • Justice Hugo Black, who served on the U.S. Supreme Court from 1937 to 1971, first advocated this approach. [Cases: Constitutional Law 254.2. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 951.]

3. INCORPORATION BY REFERENCE. — incorporate, vb.

INCORPORATION BY REFERENCE

incorporation by reference. 1. A method of making a secondary document part of a primary document by including in the primary document a statement that the secondary document should be treated as if it were contained within the primary one. • With a contract, the document to be incorporated must be referred to and described in the contract in such a way that the document's identity is clear beyond doubt. With a will, the rule applies only to clearly identified writings that existed when the testator signed the will. Unif. Probate Code § 2-510. Not all jurisdictions follow this rule for either contracts or wills. — Often shortened to incorporation. — Also termed adoption by reference. 2. Patents. The explicit inclusion in one patent application of information already contained in another document, such as another patent or patent application. • Generally, the reference must be to a U.S. patent or application if the information is essential (i.e., the description, enabling disclosure, or best mode), but otherwise it may be to a foreign patent or a nonpatent publication. Incorporation by reference is often used in a continuing application to cite the disclosure contained in a parent application. Cf. CROSS-REFERENCE. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.] 3. Patents. The inclusion in a patent claim of information from an external drawing or table. • Incorporation by reference is a necessity doctrine, available when there is no other practical way to convey the information in words, and when it is more concise and clear to refer the examiner to the graphic element.

INCORPORATOR

incorporator. A person who takes part in the formation of a corporation, usu. by executing the articles of incorporation. — Also termed corporator.

“An ‘incorporator’ must be sharply distinguished from a ‘subscriber.’ The latter agrees to buy shares in the corporation; in other words, a subscriber is an investor and participant in the venture. An ‘incorporator’ on the other hand serves the largely ceremonial or ministerial functions described in this section. At one time many states required that an incorporator also be a subscriber of shares; however, such requirement appears to have disappeared in all states.” Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 34 (3d ed. 1991).

IN CORPORE

in corpore (in kor-p<<schwa>>-ree). [Latin] In body or substance; in a material thing or object.

IN CURSU REBELLIONIS

in cursu rebellionis (in k<<schwa>>r-s[y]oo ri-bel-ee-oh-nis). [Law Latin] Hist. In the course of rebellion.

“In cursu rebellionis All persons were formerly regarded as in rebellion against the Crown who had been put to the horn for non-fulfilment of a civil obligation; their whole moveable estate fell to the Crown as escheat; they might be put to death with impunity; and lost all their legal privileges. If the denunciation remained unrelaxed for year and day (which was the time known as the cursus rebellionis), the rebel was esteemed civiliter mortuus, and his heritage reverted to the superior Denunciation for civil obligation and its consequences were in effect abolished by the Act 20 Geo. II. c. 50.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 257 (4th ed. 1894).

IN CUSTODIA LEGIS

in custodia legis (in k<<schwa>>-stoh-dee-<<schwa>> lee-jis). [Latin] In the custody of the law <the debtor's automobile was in custodia legis after being seized by the sheriff>. • The phrase is traditionally used in reference to property taken into the court's charge during pending litigation over it. — Also termed in legal custody. INDEBITI SOLUTIO indebiti solutio (in-deb-i-tī s<<schwa>>-l[y]oo-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman & Scots law. Payment of what is not owed. • Money paid under the mistaken belief that it was owed could be recovered by condictio indebiti. See condictio indebiti under CONDICTIO.

“Indebiti Solutio — When a person has paid in error what he was not bound to pay the law lays upon the person who has received payment a duty of restitution.... Payment (solutio) includes any performance whereby one person has been enriched at the expense of another. Usually it will be the handing over of money or of some other thing, but it may also consist in undertaking a new liability or in discharging an existing liability.” R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 373–74 (4th ed. 1956).

indebitum (in-deb-i-t<<schwa>>m), n. & adj. Roman law. A debt that in fact is not owed. • Money paid for a nonexistent debt could be recovered by the action condictio indebiti. Cf. DEBITUM.

“A conditional debt if paid could be recovered as an indebitum, so long as the condition was outstanding.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 255 (2d ed. 1939).

INDECENT EXPOSURE

indecent exposure. An offensive display of one's body in public, esp. of the genitals. — Also termed exposure of person. Cf. LEWDNESS; OBSCENITY. [Cases: Obscenity 3. C.J.S. Obscenity §§ 9–10.]

“Indecent exposure of the person to public view is also a common-law misdemeanor. Blackstone did not deal with it separately. ‘The last offense which I shall mention,’ he said, ‘more immediately against religion and morality, and cognizable by the temporal courts, is that of open and notorious lewdness; either by frequenting houses of ill fame, which is an indictable offense; or by some grossly scandalous and public indecency, for which the punishment is by fine and imprisonment.’ In other words private indecency was exclusively under the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical court but public indecency of an extreme nature was indictable.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 473 (3d ed. 1982) (quoting 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 64 (1769)).

INDECENT LIBERTIES

The right of an injured party to claim reimbursement for its loss, damage, or liability from a person who has such a duty. 3. Reimbursement or compensation for loss, damage, or liability in tort; esp., the right of a party who is secondarily liable to recover from the party who is primarily liable for reimbursement of expenditures paid to a third party for injuries resulting from a violation of a common-law duty. Cf. CONTRIBUTION. — indemnitory,adj.

double indemnity.The payment of twice the basic benefit in the event of a specified loss, esp. as in an insurance contract requiring the insurer to pay twice the policy's face amount in the case of accidental death. [Cases: Insurance 2599. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1094, 1096, 1170–1171.]

indemnity against liability.A right to indemnity that arises on the indemnitor's default, regardless of whether the indemnitee has suffered a loss. [Cases: Indemnity 31(4), 42.]

“Indemnity against Liability — Where the indemnity is against liability, the cause of action is complete and the indemnitee may recover on the contract as soon as his liability has become fixed and established, even though he has sustained no actual loss or damage at the time he seeks to recover. Thus, under such a contract, a cause of action accrues to the indemnitee on the recovery of a judgment against him, and he may recover from the indemnitor without proof of payment of the judgment.” 42 C.J.S. Indemnity § 22 (1991).

INDEMNITY BOND

indemnity bond.See BOND(2).

INDEMNITY CLAUSE

indemnity clause.A contractual provision in which one party agrees to answer for any specified or unspecified liability or harm that the other party might incur. — Also termed hold-harmless clause; save-harmless clause. Cf. EXEMPTION CLAUSE. [Cases: Indemnity 25, 31(4).]

indenization (in-den-i-zay-sh<<schwa>>n), n. See DENIZATION.

indent, n. 1. Hist. An indented certificate of indebtedness issued by the U.S. government or a state government in the late 18th or early 19th century. 2. A contract or deed in writing.

indent (in-dent), vb. Hist. 1. To cut in a serrated or wavy line; esp., to sever (an instrument) along a serrated line to create multiple copies, each fitting into the angles of the other. See CHIROGRAPH; INDENTURE(1).

“If a deed be made by more parties than one, there ought to be regularly as many copies of it as there are parties, and each should be cut or indented (formerly in acute angles instar dentium, but at present in a waving line) on the top or side, to tally or correspond with the other; which deed, so made, is called an indenture.... Deeds thus made were denominated syngrapha by the canonists; and with us chirographa, or hand-writings; the word cirographum or cyrographum being usually that which is divided in making the indenture” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 295–96 (1766).

2. To agree by contract; to bind oneself. 3. To bind (a person) by contract.

INDENTED DEED

indented deed. See INDENTURE(1).

INDENTURE

indenture (in-den-ch<<schwa>>r), n.1. A formal written instrument made by two or more parties with different interests, traditionally having the edges serrated, or indented, in a zigzag fashion to reduce the possibility of forgery and to distinguish it from a deed poll. — Also termed indented deed. Cf. deed poll under DEED. [Cases: Deeds 3. C.J.S. Deeds §§ 1–8.] 2. A deed or elaborate contract signed by two or more parties.

“The distinction between a deed poll and an indenture is no longer important since 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, § 5. Formerly a deed made by one party had a polled or smooth-cut edge, a deed made between two or more parties was copied for each on the same parchment, and the copies cut apart with indented edges, so as to enable them to be identified by fitting the parts together. Such deeds were called indentures. An indented edge is not now necessary to give the effect of an indenture to a deed purporting to be such.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 84 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“An indenture was a deed with the top of the parchment indented, i.e., having an irregular edge. The deed was written out twice on a single sheet of parchment, which was then severed by cutting it with an irregular edge; the two halves of the parchment thus formed two separate deeds which could be fitted together to show their genuineness. This contrasted with a ‘deed poll,’ a deed to which there was only one party, which at the top had been polled, or shaved even.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 129 (6th ed. 1993).

corporate indenture. A document containing the terms and conditions governing the issuance of debt securities, such as bonds or debentures. [Cases: Corporations 471. C.J.S. Corporations § 667.]

debenture indenture. See DEBENTURE INDENTURE.

trust indenture. 1. A document containing the terms and conditions governing a trustee's conduct and the trust beneficiaries' rights. — Also termed indenture of trust. [Cases: Trusts 19–29. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 16, 35–50, 69.] 2. See deed of trust under DEED.

3.Hist. A contract by which an apprentice or other person, such as a servant, is bound to a master, usu. for a term of years or other limited period. — indentured, adj.

INDENTURED SERVANT

indentured servant. See SERVANT.

INDENTURE OF A FINE

indenture of a fine. Hist. A document engrossed by the chirographer of fines to reflect penalties assessed by the court. • The chirographer prepared indentures in duplicate on the same piece of parchment, then split the parchment along an indented line through a word, sentence, or drawing placed on the parchment to help ensure its authenticity. See CHIROGRAPHER OF FINES.

INDENTURE OF TRUST

indenture of trust. See trust indenture under INDENTURE.

INDENTURE TRUSTEE

indenture trustee. See TRUSTEE(1).

INDEPENDENCE

independence, n. The state or quality of being independent; esp., a country's freedom to manage all its affairs, whether external or internal, without control by other countries.

INDEPENDENT

independent, adj. 1. Not subject to the control or influence of another < independent investigation>. 2. Not associated with another (often larger) entity <an independent subsidiary>. 3. Not dependent or contingent on something else <an independent person>.

INDEPENDENT ADJUSTER

independent adjuster. See ADJUSTER.

INDEPENDENT ADOPTION

independent adoption. See private adoption under ADOPTION.

INDEPENDENT ADVICE

independent advice. Counsel that is impartial and not given to further the interests of the person giving it. • Whether a testator or donor received independent advice before making a disposition is often an important issue in an undue-influence challenge to the property disposition. — Also termed proper independent advice.

INDEPENDENT AGENCY

independent agency. See AGENCY(3).

INDEPENDENT AGENT

independent agent. See AGENT(2).

INDEPENDENT AUDIT

independent audit. See AUDIT.

INDEPENDENT CLAIM

independent claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

INDEPENDENT CONCEPTION

independent conception. See INDEPENDENT DEVELOPMENT.

INDEPENDENT CONTRACT

independent contract. See CONTRACT.

INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR

independent contractor. One who is entrusted to undertake a specific project but who is left free to do the assigned work and to choose the method for accomplishing it. • It does not matter whether the work is done for pay or gratuitously. Unlike an employee, an independent contractor who commits a wrong while carrying out the work does not create liability for the one who did the hiring. — Also termed contract labor. Cf. EMPLOYEE. [Cases: Master and Servant 5. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 13–20, 34.]

INDEPENDENT COUNSEL

independent counsel. See COUNSEL.

INDEPENDENT COVENANT

independent covenant. See COVENANT(1).

INDEPENDENT CREATION

independent creation. Copyright. A defense asserting that a later work is not a derivative of an allegedly infringed work, but is a product of coincidentally parallel labor. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 75. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 43–44, 62.]

INDEPENDENT DEVELOPMENT

independent development. Intellectual property. A defense against an industrial-espionage charge wherein the user shows that the property was independently discovered or conceived. • Trademarks, symbols, inventions, and other types of intellectual property are all subject to independent development. — Also termed independent conception.

INDEPENDENT EXECUTOR

independent executor. See EXECUTOR.

INDEPENDENT FORCE

independent force. See FORCE.

INDEPENDENT INTERVENING CAUSE

independent intervening cause. See intervening cause under CAUSE(1).

INDEPENDENT INVENTION

independent invention. See INVENTION.

INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION COMMITTEE independent investigation committee. See SPECIAL LITIGATION COMMITTEE.

INDEPENDENT-LIVING PROGRAM

independent-living program. Family law. A training course designed to enable foster children who are near the age of majority to leave the foster-care system and manage their own affairs as adults. • Independent living programs provide education, training, and financial and employment counseling. They also help many foster youth in locating suitable post-foster-care housing. Permanency planning orders or case plans can — but are not required to — provide for independent living as a goal for a child in long-term foster care and describe how it is to be accomplished. See AGING-OUT; PERMANENCY PLAN.

INDEPENDENT MEDICAL EXAMINATION

independent medical examination. An assessment of a person's physical condition and health that is made by an impartial healthcare professional, usu. a physician. — Abbr. IME.

INDEPENDENT MENTAL EVALUATION

independent mental evaluation. An assessment of a person's mental and emotional condition that is made by an impartial mental-health professional, such as a psychologist or psychiatrist. — Abbr. IME. Cf. PSYCHIATRIC EXAMINATION.

INDEPENDENT PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE independent personal representative. See personal representative under REPRESENTATIVE.

INDEPENDENT PROBATE

independent probate. See informal probate under PROBATE.

INDEPENDENT PROMISE

independent promise. See unconditional promise under PROMISE.

INDEPENDENT REGULATORY AGENCY

independent regulatory agency. See independent agency under AGENCY(3).

INDEPENDENT REGULATORY COMMISSION

independent regulatory commission. See independent agency under AGENCY(3).

INDEPENDENT-SIGNIFICANCE DOCTRINE

independent-significance doctrine. Wills & estates. The principle that effect will be given to a testator's disposition that is not done solely to avoid the requirements of a will. • An example is a will provision that gives the contents of the testator's safe-deposit box to his niece. Because the safe-deposit box has utility (“significance”) independent of the will, the gift of its contents at the testator's death is valid.

INDEPENDENT-SOURCE RULE independent-source rule. Criminal procedure. The rule providing — as an exception to the fruit-of-the-poisonous-tree doctrine — that evidence obtained by illegal means may nonetheless be admissible if that evidence is also obtained by legal means unrelated to the original illegal conduct. See FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE. Cf. INEVITABLE-DISCOVERY RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law 394.1(3). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 771, 773–775.]

INDEPENDENT STATE

independent state. See SOVEREIGN STATE.

INDEPENDENT UNION

independent union. See UNION.

INDESTRUCTIBLE TRUST

indestructible trust. See TRUST.

INDETERMINATE

indeterminate, adj. Not definite; not distinct or precise.

INDETERMINATE BOND

indeterminate bond. See BOND(3).

INDETERMINATE CONDITIONAL RELEASE

indeterminate conditional release. A release from prison granted once the prisoner fulfills certain conditions. • The release can be revoked if the prisoner breaches other conditions. [Cases: Prisons 15(6). C.J.S. Prisons and Rights of Prisoners § 154.]

INDETERMINATE DAMAGES

indeterminate damages. See discretionary damages under DAMAGES.

INDETERMINATE OBLIGATION

indeterminate obligation. See OBLIGATION.

INDETERMINATE SENTENCE

indeterminate sentence. See SENTENCE.

INDETERMINATE SENTENCING

indeterminate sentencing. The practice of not imposing a definite term of confinement, but instead prescribing a range for the minimum and maximum term, leaving the precise term to be fixed in some other way, usu. based on the prisoner's conduct and apparent rehabilitation while incarcerated. — Also termed indefinite sentencing. See indeterminate sentence under SENTENCE. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1124.]

IN DETRIMENTUM ANIMI

in detrimentum animi (in de-tr<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m an-<<schwa>>-mI). [Latin] Hist. To the injury of the soul. • The phrase appeared in reference to the ground upon which a person was prohibited from questioning a legal document that the person had sworn to never question.

index,n.1. An alphabetized listing of the topics or other items included in a single book or document, or in a series of volumes, usu. found at the end of the book, document, or series <index of authorities>.

grantee–grantor index.An index, usu. kept in the county recorder's office, alphabetically listing by grantee the volume and page number of the grantee's recorded property transactions. • In some jurisdictions, the grantee–grantor index is combined with the grantor–grantee index. [Cases: Records 8. C.J.S. Records §§ 15–16.]

grantor–grantee index.An index, usu. kept in the county recorder's office, alphabetically listing by grantor the volume and page number of the grantor's recorded property transactions. [Cases: Records 8; Vendor and Purchaser 231. C.J.S. Records §§ 15–16; Vendor and Purchaser § 496.]

tract index.An index, usu. kept in the county recorder's office, listing, by location of each parcel of land, the volume and page number of the recorded property transactions affecting the parcel. [Cases: Records 8; Vendor and Purchaser 231. C.J.S. Records §§ 15–16; Vendor and Purchaser § 496.]

2. A number, usu. expressed in the form of a percentage or ratio, that indicates or measures a series of observations, esp. those involving a market or the economy <cost-of-living index> <stock index>.

advance-decline index.A stock-market indicator showing the cumulative net difference between stock-price advances and declines.

INDEX ANIMI SERMO

index animi sermo (in-deks an-<<schwa>>-mIs<<schwa>>r-moh). [Latin] Speech is the index of the mind. • This maxim supports the concept that the language of a statute or instrument is the best guide to the drafter's intent.

INDEXATION

indexation. See INDEXING.

INDEX CRIME

index crime.See index offense under OFFENSE(1).

INDEX FUND

index fund.See MUTUAL FUND.

INDEXING

indexing. 1. The practice or method of adjusting wages, pension benefits, insurance, or other types of payments to compensate for inflation. 2. The practice of investing funds to track or mirror an index of securities. — Also termed indexation.

INDEX LEASE

index lease.See LEASE.

INDEX OF AUTHORITIES

index of authorities.An alphabetical list of authorities cited in a book or brief, usu. with subcategories for cases, statutes, and treatises. — Also termed table of authorities; table of cases. [Cases: Appeal and Error 756. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 607–608, 616–618.]

INDEX OFFENSE

index offense.See OFFENSE(1).

INDEX OF PATENTS

Index of Patents.An annual two-part publication of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, containing the year's List of Patentees (Part I) and Index to Subjects of Inventions (Part II), arranged by class and subclass.

INDEX OF TRADEMARKS

Index of Trademarks.An annual publication of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, listing all trademarks registered in a given year.

INDEX TO THE U.S. PATENT CLASSIFICATION SYSTEM

Index to the U.S. Patent Classification System.An entry-level aid to using the Patent Office's classification system, comprising an estimated 65,000 common terms and phrases and referring each entry to a class and subclass within the system.

INDIAN CHILD

Indian child.Under the Indian Child Welfare Act, any unmarried person under the age of 18 who either is a member of an Indian tribe or is both eligible for membership in an Indian tribe and the biological child of a member of an Indian tribe. See INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT.

INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT

Indian Child Welfare Act.A federal act that governs child-custody proceedings — including foster-care placement, preadoptive placement, adoptive placement, and termination of parental rights — in cases involving a child of American Indian descent.25 USCA §§ 1911 et seq. • Congress enacted the Act to help protect the best interests of Indian children, to promote the stability and security of Indian tribes and families, and to counteract the disproportionate foster-care placement and adoption of Indian children by non-Indians. The Act provides minimum federal standards for removing Indian children from their families and for placing them in foster or adoptive homes that will provide an environment reflecting the values of the Indian culture. The Act has an important jurisdictional feature: in a custody dispute involving an Indian child who resides in or is domiciled within an Indian reservation, the tribe and its tribal courts have exclusive jurisdiction. And in a custody dispute involving an Indian child who lives off a reservation, upon petition, any state court should usu. defer and transfer the case to the tribal court unless a party demonstrates good cause to the contrary. — Abbr. ICWA.

INDIAN CLAIMS COMMISSION

Indian Claims Commission. A federal agency — dissolved in 1978 — that adjudicated claims brought by American Indians, a tribe, or another identifiable group of Indians against the United States. • The U.S. Court of Federal Claims currently hears these claims.

INDIAN COUNTRY

Indian country. 1. The land within the borders of all Indian reservations, the land occupied by an Indian community (whether or not located within a recognized reservation), and any land held in trust by the United States but beneficially owned by an Indian or tribe. See INDIAN LAND. 2. Hist. Any region (esp. during the U.S. westward migration) where a person was likely to encounter Indians.

INDIAN GAMBLING

Indian gambling. See GAMBLING.

INDIAN LAND

Indian land. Land owned by the United States but held in trust for and used by American Indians. — Also termed Indian tribal property. Cf. TRIBAL LAND. [Cases: Indians 9. C.J.S. Indians § 67.]

INDIAN LAW

Indian law. See NATIVE AMERICAN LAW.

INDIAN RESERVATION

Indian reservation. An area that the federal government has designated for use by an American Indian tribe, where the tribe generally settles and establishes a tribal government. [Cases: Indians 12. C.J.S. Indians §§ 72–74, 79–80.]

INDIAN TERRITORY

Indian Territory. A former U.S. territory — now a part of the state of Oklahoma — to which the Cherokee, Choctaw, Chickasaw, Creek, and Seminole tribes were forcibly moved between 1830 and 1843. • In the late 19th century, most of this territory was ceded to the United States, and in 1907 the greater part of it became the State of Oklahoma.

INDIAN TITLE

Indian title. A right of occupancy that the federal government grants to an American Indian tribe based on the tribe's immemorial possession of the area. • Congress does not recognize tribal ownership of the land, only possession. A tribe or nation must actually, exclusively, and continuously use the property to establish that it is the ancestral home. An individual may claim Indian title by showing that the individual or his or her lineal ancestors continuously occupied a parcel of land, as individuals, before the land was closed to settlers. — Also termed aboriginal title; right of occupancy. Cf. aboriginal title (1) under TITLE(2).

INDIAN TRIBAL PROPERTY

Indian tribal property. See INDIAN LAND.

INDIAN TRIBE

Indian tribe. A group, band, nation, or other organized group of indigenous American people, including any Alaskan native village, that is recognized as eligible for the special programs and services provided by the U.S. government because of Indian status (42 USCA § 9601(36)); esp., any such group having a federally recognized governing body that carries out substantial governmental duties and powers over an area (42 USCA § 300f(14); 40 CFR § 146.3). • A tribe may be identified in various ways, esp. by past dealings with other tribes or with the federal, state, or local government, or by recognition in historical records. [Cases: Indians 1–2. C.J.S. Indians §§ 2–4, 23–29, 38–39, 94, 130, 156.]

“The Indian tribe is the fundamental unit of Indian Law; in its absence there is no occasion for the law to operate. Yet there is no all-purpose definition of an Indian tribe. A group of Indians may qualify as a tribe for the purpose of one statute or federal program, but fail to qualify for others. Definitions must accordingly be used with extreme caution.” William C. Canby Jr., American Indian Law in a Nutshell 3–4 (2d ed. 1988).

indicare (in-di-kair-ee), vb. [Latin] 1. Roman law. To accuse (someone) of a crime; to provide evidence against someone. 2. Civil law. To show or discover. 3. Civil law. To fix or tell the price of a thing. See INDICIUM.

INDICATOR

indicator. Securities. An average or index that shows enough of a correlation to market trends or economic conditions that it can help analyze market performance.

coincident indicator. An economic or market-activity index or indicator that shows changing trends near the same time that overall conditions begin to change.

economic indicator. See ECONOMIC INDICATOR.

lagging indicator. 1. An index that indicates a major stock-market change sometime after the change occurs. 2. See lagging economic indicator under ECONOMIC INDICATOR.

leading indicator. 1. A quantifiable index that predicts a major stock-market change. 2. See leading economic indicator under ECONOMIC INDICATOR.

indicavit (in-di-kay-vit). [Law Latin “he has indicated”] Hist. A writ of prohibition by which a church patron removes to a common-law court an ecclesiastical-court action between two clerics who dispute each other's right to a benefice. • The writ was long available — nominally up to the 20th century — under the 1306 statute De Conjunctim Feoffatis (34 Edw. I). Actions concerning clerics' rights to a benefice were usu. tried in ecclesiastical courts, but they could be removed to a common-law court if the action involved a church patron in some way, as when one cleric was appointed by a certain patron and the other cleric was appointed by another patron. Cf. ADVOWSON.

indicia (in-dish-ee-<<schwa>>), n. pl. 1. Roman law. Evidence. 2. (pl.) Signs; indications <the purchase receipts are indicia of ownership>.

INDICIA OF TITLE

indicia of title. A document that evidences ownership of personal or real property. [Cases: Property 9. C.J.S. Property §§ 35–37.]

INDICIUM

indicium (in-dish-ee-*<<schwa>>*m), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. The act of providing evidence against an accused. 2. The act of promising recompense for a certain service. 3. A sign or mark; esp., something used as a type of proof. See INDICARE.

INDICT

indict (in-dIt), vb. To charge (a person) with a crime by formal legal process, esp. by grand-jury presentation. — Also formerly spelled endite; indite.

INDICTABLE MISDEMEANOR

indictable misdemeanor. See serious misdemeanor under MISDEMEANOR.

INDICTABLE OFFENSE

indictable offense. See OFFENSE(1).

INDICTEE

indictee (in-dI-tee). A person who has been indicted; one officially charged with a crime.

INDICTIO

indictio (in-dik-shee-oh), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. An imperial proclamation establishing a 15-year period for the reassessment of property values for tax purposes. • Indictio also referred to the 15-year cycle itself. 2. A declaration or proclamation, such as a declaration of war (indictio belli). 3. An indictment. Pl. indictiones (in-dik-shee-oh-neeZ).

INDICTMENT

indictment (in-dIt-m*<<schwa>>*nt), n. 1. The formal written accusation of a crime, made by a grand jury and presented to a court for prosecution against the accused person. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 7. [Cases: Indictment and Information 17. C.J.S. Indictments and Informations § 28.] 2. The act or process of preparing or bringing forward such a formal written accusation. Cf. INFORMATION; PRESENTMENT(2).

barebones indictment. An indictment that cites only the language of the statute allegedly violated; an indictment that does not provide a factual statement.

“What has been called ‘a bare bones indictment using only statutory language’ is quite common, and entirely permissible so long as the statute sets forth fully, directly, and expressly all essential elements of the crime intended to be punished.” 1 Charles Alan Wright, Federal Practice and Procedure § 125, at 558–59 (3d ed. 1999).

duplicitous indictment (d[y]oo-plis-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>s). 1. An indictment containing two or more offenses in the same count. [Cases: Indictment and Information 125. C.J.S. Indictments and Informations §§ 146–148.] 2. An indictment charging the same offense in more than one count.

joint indictment. An indictment that charges two or more people with an offense.

INDICTOR

indictor (in-dIt-<<schwa>>r or in-dI-tor). A person who causes another to be indicted.

IN DIEM

in diem (in dI-<<schwa>>m or dee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] For each day; per day. Cf. PER DIEM.

IN DIEM ADDICTIO

in diem addictio. See ADDICTIO IN DIEM.

INDIFFERENCE

indifference. A lack of interest in or concern about something; apathy.

deliberate indifference. Criminal law. The careful preservation of one's ignorance despite awareness of circumstances that would put a reasonable person on notice of a fact essential to a crime. See JEWELL INSTRUCTION.

INDIGENA indigena (in-dij-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>). [Latin “native”] Hist. A subject born within the English realm or naturalized by act of Parliament. Cf. ALIENIGENA.

INDIGENCY

indigency, n. The state or condition of a person who lacks the means of subsistence; extreme hardship or neediness; poverty. • For purposes of the Sixth Amendment right to appointed counsel, indigency refers to a defendant's inability to afford an attorney. — Also termed indigence. — indigent, adj. & n.

“Supreme Court opinions speak generally of the rights of an ‘indigent defendant’ without offering any specific definition of ‘indigency.’ ... The appellate courts agree that indigency is not a synonym for ‘destitute.’ ... Among the factors to be considered in evaluating the individual's financial capacity are: (1) income from employment and such governmental programs as social security and unemployment compensation; (2) real and personal property; (3) number of dependents; (4) outstanding debts; (5) seriousness of the charge (which suggests the likely fee of a retained attorney); and (6) other legal expenses (such as bail bond).” Wayne R. LaFave & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 11.3(g), at 544 (2d ed. 1992).

INDIGENT

indigent (in-di-j<<schwa>>nt), n. 1. A poor person. 2. A person who is found to be financially unable to pay filing fees and court costs and so is allowed to proceed in forma pauperis. • The Supreme Court has recognized an indigent petitioner's right to have certain fees and costs waived in divorce and termination-of-parental-rights cases. Boddie v. Connecticut, 401 U.S. 371, 91 S.Ct. 780 (1971); M.L.B. v. S.L.J., 519 U.S. 102, 117 S.Ct. 555 (1996). See PAUPER; IN FORMA PAUPERIS. — indigent,adj.

INDIGENT DEFENDANT

indigent defendant.A person who is too poor to hire a lawyer and who, upon indictment, becomes eligible to receive aid from a court-appointed attorney and a waiver of court costs. See IN FORMA PAUPERIS. Cf. PAUPER. [Cases: Costs 301.1; Criminal Law 641.6(3). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 279–280, 298–299, 301, 303.]

INDIGNITY

indignity (in-dig-ni-tee), n. Family law. A ground for divorce consisting in one spouse's pattern of behavior calculated to humiliate the other. — Also termed personal indignity. Cf. CRUELTY. [Cases: Divorce 29. C.J.S. Divorce § 53.]

INDIRECT AGGRESSION

indirect aggression.See AGGRESSION.

INDIRECT ATTACK

indirect attack.See COLLATERAL ATTACK.

INDIRECT CONFESSION

indirect confession.See CONFESSION.

INDIRECT CONTEMPT

indirect contempt.See CONTEMPT.

INDIRECT COST

indirect cost.See COST(1).

INDIRECT EVIDENCE

indirect evidence.See circumstantial evidence (1) under EVIDENCE.

INDIRECT LOSS

indirect loss. See consequential loss under LOSS.

INDIRECT NOTICE

indirect notice. See implied notice under NOTICE.

INDIRECT POSSESSION

indirect possession. See mediate possession under POSSESSION.

INDIRECT-PURCHASER DOCTRINE

indirect-purchaser doctrine. Antitrust. The principle that in litigation for price discrimination, the court will ignore sham middle parties in determining whether different prices were paid by different customers for the same goods. • This doctrine gives standing to bring an antitrust action to a party who is not an immediate purchaser of a product. Thus, if a manufacturer sells a product to a retailer, but dictates the terms by which the retailer must sell the product to a consumer, a court will ignore the retailer and treat the consumer as the direct purchaser of the product.

INDIRECT TAX

indirect tax. See TAX.

INDISCRIMINATE ATTACK

indiscriminate attack. Int'l law. An aggressive act that (1) is not carried out for a specific military objective, (2) employs a means of combat not directed at a specific military objective, or (3) employs a means of combat the effects of which cannot be limited in accordance with an international protocol such as the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and their protocols or the Hague Conventions of 1899 and 1907.

INDISPENSABLE-ELEMENT TEST indispensable-element test. Criminal law. A common-law test for the crime of attempt, based on whether the defendant acquires control over any thing that is essential to the crime. • Under this test, for example, a person commits a crime by buying the explosives with which to detonate a bomb. See ATTEMPT (2). [Cases: Criminal Law 44. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 114–123.]

INDISPENSABLE EVIDENCE indispensable evidence. See EVIDENCE.

INDISPENSABLE INSTRUMENT indispensable instrument. See INSTRUMENT(3).

INDISPENSABLE PARTY

indispensable party. See PARTY(2).

INDISTANTER

indistanter (in-di-stan-t<<schwa>>r), adv.[Law Latin “immediately”] Forthwith; without delay.

INDIVIDUAL

individual,adj.1. Existing as an indivisible entity. 2. Of or relating to a single person or thing, as opposed to a group.

INDIVIDUAL ACCOUNT PLAN individual account plan.See defined-contribution plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN .

INDIVIDUAL ASSET

individual asset.See ASSET.

INDIVIDUAL DEBT

individual debt.See DEBT.

INDIVIDUALIZED EDUCATION PROGRAM

individualized education program.Family law. A specially designed plan of educational instruction for a child with disabilities. • The individualized education program is a written plan that details the particular child's abilities, the child's educational goals, and the services to be provided. See child with disabilities under CHILD; INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES EDUCATION ACT .

INDIVIDUAL LIBERTY

individual liberty.See personal liberty under LIBERTY.

INDIVIDUAL PROPERTY individual property.See SEPARATE PROPERTY(1).

INDIVIDUAL PROPRIETORSHIP individual proprietorship.See SOLE PROPRIETORSHIP.

INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT

individual retirement account.A savings or brokerage account to which a person may contribute up to a specified amount of earned income each year. • The contributions, along with any interest earned in the account, are not taxed until the money is withdrawn after a participant reaches 59 1/2 (or before then, if a 10% penalty is paid). — Abbr. IRA. Cf. KEOGH PLAN. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3594. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 206–208, 319–326.]

education individual retirement account.An individual retirement account from which withdrawals may be made tax-free if the withdrawn funds are used for education costs. • Before 2002, annual contributions were limited to $500. In 2002, the contribution limit increased to $2,000 per year for families with incomes under $190,000.

Roth IRA. An IRA in which contributions are nondeductible when they are made. • No further taxes are assessed on the contributions (or accrued interest) when the money is withdrawn (if all applicable rules are followed). This term takes its name from Senator William Roth, who sponsored the legislation creating this type of IRA.

INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES EDUCATION ACT

Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. A federal statute that governs the public education of children with physical or mental handicaps and attempts to ensure that these children receive a free public education that meets their unique needs. • The Education of All Handicapped Children Act (enacted in 1975) was renamed the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act in 1990, and this Act was substantially amended in 1997. All states currently participate in this joint federal–state initiative. 20 USCA §§ 1400–1485. — Abbr. IDEA.

INDIVISIBLE

indivisible, adj. Not separable into parts; held by two or more people in undivided shares <an indivisible debt>.

INDIVISION

indivision. Civil law. Undivided ownership of property; the condition of being owned by coowners each having an undivided interest in the property. [Cases: Tenancy in Common 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Tenancy in Common §§ 2–5.]

INDIVISUM

indivisum (in-di-vI-s<<schwa>>m or -z<<schwa>>m), adj. [Latin] Roman law. (Of property) held in common; not divided.

INDORSE

indorse, vb. To sign (a negotiable instrument), usu. on the back, either to accept responsibility for paying an obligation memorialized by the instrument or to make the instrument payable to someone other than the payee. — Also spelled endorse.

INDORSEE

indorsee (in-dor-see). A person to whom a negotiable instrument is transferred by indorsement. — Also spelled endorsee.

indorsee in due course. An indorsee who, in the ordinary course of business, acquires a negotiable instrument in good faith for value, before its maturity, and without knowledge of its dishonor.

INDORSEMENT

indorsement, n. 1. The placing of a signature, sometimes with an additional notation, on the back of a negotiable instrument to transfer or guarantee the instrument or to acknowledge payment. 2. The signature or notation itself. — Also spelled endorsement. — indorse, vb.

“The clever indorser can subscribe his or her name under a variety of magic phrases. The Code specifies the legal effect of some of these phrases. Qualified indorsements (‘without recourse’) limit the liability of the indorser if the instrument is dishonored. Restrictive indorsements such as ‘for deposit only,’ ‘pay any bank,’ and the like set the terms for further negotiation of the instrument. Their main purpose is to prevent thieves and embezzlers from cashing checks.” 2 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 16-7, at 92–93 (4th ed. 1995).

accommodation indorsement. An indorsement to an instrument by a third party who acts as surety for another party who remains primarily liable. See ACCOMMODATION PAPER. [Cases: Bills and Notes 236. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 63.]

anomalous indorsement. See irregular indorsement.

blank indorsement. An indorsement that names no specific payee, thus making the instrument payable to the bearer and negotiable by delivery only. UCC § 3-205(b). — Also termed indorsement in blank; general indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes 188, 288. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 153.]

collection indorsement. See restrictive indorsement.

conditional indorsement. An indorsement that restricts the instrument in some way, as by limiting how the instrument can be paid or transferred; an indorsement giving possession of the instrument to the indorsee, but retaining title until the occurrence of some condition named in the indorsement. • Wordings that indicate this type of indorsement are “Pay to Brad Jones when he becomes 18 years of age” and “Pay to Brigitte Turner, or order, unless before payment I give you notice to the contrary.” — Also termed restricted indorsement; restrictive indorsement. Cf. special indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes 190, 199, 290. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 154–155.]

irregular indorsement. An indorsement by a person who signs outside the chain of title and who therefore is neither a holder nor a transferor of the instrument. • An irregular indorser is generally treated as an accommodation party. UCC § 3-205(c). — Also termed anomalous indorsement; full indorsement. See ACCOMMODATION PARTY. [Cases: Bills and Notes 191, 294. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 24, 156.]

qualified indorsement. An indorsement that passes title to the instrument but limits the indorser's liability to later holders if the instrument is later dishonored. • Typically, a qualified indorsement is made by writing “without recourse” or “sans recourse” over the signature. — Also termed indorsement without recourse. UCC § 3-415(b). See WITHOUT RECOURSE. [Cases: Bills and Notes 293. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 160.]

restricted indorsement. See conditional indorsement.

restrictive indorsement. An indorsement that includes a condition (e.g., “pay Josefina Cardoza only if she has worked 8 full hours on April 13”) or any other language restricting further negotiation (e.g., “for deposit only”). — Also termed collection indorsement. See conditional indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes 190, 199, 290. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 154–155.]

special indorsement. An indorsement that specifies the person to receive payment or to whom the goods named by the document must be delivered. UCC § 3-205(a). — Also termed indorsement in full; full indorsement. Cf. conditional indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes 189, 289. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 152.]

trust indorsement. An indorsement stating that the payee becomes a trustee for a third person (e.g., “pay Erin Ray in trust for Kaitlin Ray”); a restrictive indorsement that limits the instrument to the use of the indorser or another person.

unauthorized indorsement. An indorsement made without authority, such as a forged indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes 239, 279. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 29, 150–151.]

unqualified indorsement. An indorsement that does not limit the indorser's liability on the paper. • It does not, for example, include the phrase “without recourse.” [Cases: Bills and Notes 281, 287, 293. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 147, 160.]

unrestrictive indorsement. An indorsement that includes no condition or language restricting negotiation. — Also termed unrestricted indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes 190, 199, 290. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 154–155.]

indorser. A person who transfers a negotiable instrument by indorsement; specif., one who signs a negotiable instrument other than as maker, drawer, or acceptor. — Also spelled endorser.

accommodation indorser. An indorser who acts as surety for another person.

INEVITABLE-DISCLOSURE DOCTRINE inevitable-disclosure doctrine. Trade secrets. The legal theory that a key employee, once hired by a competitor, cannot avoid misappropriating the former employer's trade secrets. • To justify an injunction, the plaintiff must prove that the former employee has confidential information and will not be able to avoid using that knowledge to unfairly compete against the plaintiff. Most courts have rejected the controversial doctrine on grounds that it effectively turns a nondisclosure agreement into a disfavored noncompetition agreement. The leading case upholding the doctrine is PepsiCo, Inc. v. Redmond, 54 F.3d 1262 (7th Cir. 1995), where the court quipped: “PepsiCo finds itself in the position of a coach, one of whose players has left, playbook in hand, to join the opposing team before the big game.” — Also termed inevitable disclosure rule; inevitability doctrine; inevitable-misappropriation doctrine.

INEVITABLE-DISCOVERY RULE inevitable-discovery rule.Criminal procedure. The rule providing — as an exception to the fruit-of-the-poisonous-tree doctrine — that evidence obtained by illegal means may nonetheless be admissible if the prosecution can show that the evidence would eventually have been legally obtained anyway. See FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE. Cf. INDEPENDENT-SOURCE RULE . [Cases: Criminal Law 394.1(3). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 771, 773–775.]

INFRA HOSPITIUM<TT>

infra hospitium (in-fr<<schwa>> hah-spish-ee-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin “within the inn”] The doctrine that an innkeeper is liable for goods deposited by a guest. [Cases: Innkeepers 11. C.J.S. Inns, Hotels and Eating Places §§ 36–37.]

INFRA JURISDICTIONEM<TT>

infra jurisdictionem (in-fr<<schwa>> joor-is-dik-shee-oh-n<<schwa>>m), adv. & adj.[Law Latin] Within the jurisdiction.

INFRA PRAESIDIA<TT>

infra praesidia (in-fr<<schwa>> pr<<schwa>>-sid-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin “within the defenses”] Hist. The international-law doctrine that someone who captures goods will be considered the owner of the goods if they are brought completely within the captor's power. • This term is a corruption of the Roman-law term intra praesidia, which referred to goods or persons taken by an enemy during war. Under the principle of postliminium, the captured person's rights or goods were restored to prewar status when the captured person returned. See POSTLIMINIUM.

INFRASTRUCTURE

infrastructure. The underlying framework of a system; esp., public services and facilities (such as highways, schools, bridges, sewers, and water systems) needed to support commerce as well as economic and residential development.

IN FRAUDEM CREDITORUM

in fraudem creditorum (in fraw-d<<schwa>>m kre-di-tor-<<schwa>>m), adv.[Latin] In fraud of creditors.

IN FRAUDEM LEGIS

in fraudem legis (in fraw-d<<schwa>>m lee-jis), adv.[Latin] In fraud of the law. • With an intent to evade the law.

INFRINGEMENT

infringement,n. Intellectual property. An act that interferes with one of the exclusive rights of a patent, copyright, or trademark owner. See INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY . Cf. PLAGIARISM. — infringe,vb.

contributory infringement. 1. The act of participating in, or contributing to, the infringing acts of another person. • The law imposes vicarious liability for contributory infringement. 2.Patents. The act of aiding or abetting another person's patent infringement by knowingly selling a nonstaple item that has no substantial noninfringing use and is esp. adapted for use in a patented combination or process. • In the patent context, contributory infringement is statutorily defined in the Patent Act. 35 USCA § 271(c). [Cases: Patents 259. C.J.S. Patents § 427.] 3.Copyright. The act of either (1) actively inducing, causing, or materially contributing to the infringing conduct of another person, or (2) providing the goods or means necessary to help another person infringe (as by making facilities available for an infringing performance). • In the copyright context, contributory infringement is a common-law doctrine. 4.Trademarks. A manufacturer's or distributor's conduct in knowingly supplying, for resale, goods bearing an infringing mark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 374. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 85.]

copyright infringement.The act of violating any of a copyright owner's exclusive rights granted by the federal Copyright Act, 17 USCA §§ 106, 602. • A copyright owner has several exclusive rights in copyrighted works, including the rights (1) to reproduce the work; (2) to prepare derivative works based on the work; (3) to distribute copies of the work; (4) for certain kinds of works, to perform the work publicly; (5) for certain kinds of works, to display the work publicly; (6) for sound recordings, to perform the work publicly; and (7) to import into the United States copies acquired elsewhere. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 53. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 10, 41, 61, 73.]

criminal infringement.The statutory criminal offense of either (1) willfully infringing a copyright to obtain a commercial advantage or financial gain (17 USCA § 506; 18 USCA § 2319), or (2) trafficking in goods or services that bear a counterfeit mark (18 USCA § 2320). • Under the second category, the law imposes criminal penalties if the counterfeit mark is (1) identical with, or substantially indistinguishable from, a mark registered on the Principal Register of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, and (2) likely to confuse or deceive the public. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 70; Trade Regulation 311–312. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 84–85; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 151.]

direct infringement. 1.Patents. The act of making, using, selling, offering for sale, or importing into the United States, without the patentee's permission, a product that is covered by the claims of a valid patent. 35USCA § 271(a). [Cases: Patents 226. C.J.S. Patents §§ 400, 404, 406–407.] 2.Trademarks. The use of a mark in trade when that use causes a likelihood of confusion about the source of goods or services already identified by a similar mark. 3.Copyright. The unauthorized copying, distributing, or displaying of — or the adapting of a derivative work from — a copyrighted work. Cf. contributory infringement; infringement in the inducement.

domain-name infringement.Infringement of another's trademark or servicemark by the use of a confusingly similar Internet domain name. [Cases: Trade Regulation 350.1. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 119.] infringement in the inducement.Patents. The act of actively and knowingly aiding and abetting direct infringement by another person. • Although sometimes used in copyright and trademark law to mean contributory infringement, the term is usu. reserved for the patent context. — Also termed inducing infringement. Cf. direct infringement. [Cases: Patents 259. C.J.S. Patents § 427.]

innocent infringement.The act of violating an intellectual-property right without knowledge or awareness that the act constitutes infringement. • An innocent infringer may, in limited circumstances, escape liability for some or all of the damages. In the copyright context, damages may be limited if (1) the infringer was misled by the lack of a copyright notice on an authorized copy of the copyrighted work, distributed under the owner's authority before March 1989 (the effective date of the Berne Convention Implementation Act of 1988), and (2) the infringing act occurred before the infringer received actual notice of the copyright. 17 USCA § 405(b). In the trademark context, publishers and distributors of paid advertisements who innocently infringe a mark have no liability for damages. 15 USCA § 1114. In both contexts, the innocent infringer is immunized only from an award of monetary damages, not from injunctive relief. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 52. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 43–44.]

literal infringement.Patents. Infringement in which every element and every limitation of a patent claim is present, exactly, in the accused product or process. Cf. DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS. [Cases: Patents 226. C.J.S. Patents §§ 400, 404, 406–407.]

nonliteral infringement.See DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS.

patent infringement.The unauthorized making, using, offering to sell, selling, or importing into the United States any patented invention. 35 USCA § 271(a). [Cases: Patents 226. C.J.S. Patents §§ 400, 404, 406–407.]

“In determining whether an accused device or composition infringes a valid patent, resort must be had in the first instance to the words of the claim. If accused matter falls clearly within the claim, infringement is made out and that is the end of it.” Graver Tank & Mfg. Co. v. Linde Air Prods. Co., 339 U.S. 605, 607, 70 S.Ct. 854, 855 (1950)(Jackson, J.).

trademark infringement. The unauthorized use of a trademark — or of a confusingly similar name, word, symbol, or any combination of these — in connection with the same or related goods or services and in a manner that is likely to cause confusion, deception, or mistake about the source of the goods or services. See LIKELIHOOD-OF-CONFUSION TEST. [Cases: Trade Regulation 332. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 72.]

vicarious infringement. A person's liability for an infringing act of someone else, even though the person has not directly committed an act of infringement. • For example, a concert theater can be vicariously liable for an infringing performance of a hired band. [Cases: Patents 287(2).]

willful infringement. An intentional and deliberate infringement of another person's intellectual property. [Cases: Patents 227. C.J.S. Patents § 403.]

infringement opinion. See OPINION(2).

INFRINGEMENT SEARCH

infringement search. Patents. A patent search aimed at discovering whether a product or method infringes any in-force patent. • An infringement search is usu. limited to the political territory where the patent is to be relied on. — Also termed clear-to-use search; freedom-to-operate search; FTO search. Cf. PATENTABILITY SEARCH; VALIDITY SEARCH.

INFRINGEMENT TEST

infringement test. Patents. A means of determining whether a patent claim is dependent by asking whether the claim would always be infringed if the independent claim on which it rests were infringed. • Since a dependent claim must incorporate all the elements of the independent claim, an infringement of the independent claim must also be an infringement of the dependent claim. [Cases: Patents 165(5). C.J.S. Patents §§ 283, 287, 290, 293.]

INFRINGER

infringer. A person who interferes with one of the exclusive rights of a patent, copyright, or trademark owner. See INFRINGEMENT. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 77; Patents 287(1); Trade Regulation 374. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 64–65; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 85.]

IN FRUCTU

in fructu (in fr<<schwa>>k-t[y]oo). [Latin] Hist. Among the fruit. • A bona fide possessor owned the fruits of the subject possessed but not the subject itself because the subject was not in fructu. For example, a person who possessed but did not own a goat was entitled to the goat's milk, wool, and offspring, but not the goat's meat.

IN FULL

in full. Constituting the whole or complete amount <payment in full>.

IN FULL LIFE

in full life. (Of a person) alive in fact and in law; neither naturally nor civilly dead.

IN FUTURO

in futuro (in fy<<schwa>>-tyoor-oh), adv. [Latin] In the future. Cf. IN PRAESENTI .

IN GENERALI PASSAGIO

in generali passagio (in jen-<<schwa>>-ray-II p<<schwa>>-say-jee-oh), adv. [Law Latin] Hist. In the general passage (to the holy land with a company of Crusaders). • This type of pilgrimage excused an absence from court during the Crusades. Cf. SIMPLEX PASSAGIUM.

IN GENERE

in genere (in jen-<<schwa>>-r-ee). [Latin "in kind"] Belonging to the same class, but not identical.

INGENUITAS

ingenuitas (in-j<<schwa>>-n[y]oo-<<schwa>>-tas), n. [Latin] Roman law. The condition or status of a free-born person.

INGENUITAS REGNI ingenuitas regni (in-j<<schwa>>-n[y]oo-<<schwa>>-tas reg-nI). [Law Latin] Hist. The freemen, yeomanry, or commonalty of the kingdom. • This term was occasionally applied to the nobility.

INGENUUS

ingenuus (in-jen-yoo-<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin] Roman law. A free-born person. • This term, denoting freeborn persons, was commonly opposed to libertini (people born into slavery and later emancipated). Cf. LATINI JUNIANI; SERVUS.

IN GLOBO

in globo (in gloh-boh), adv. [Latin "in a mass"] As an undivided whole rather than separately <settlement paid in globo to the three defendants>.

INGRATITUDE

ingratitude, n. Civil law. Lack of appreciation for a generous or kind act, esp. for a gift received. • Under Louisiana law, a gift may be reclaimed on grounds of ingratitude if the recipient mistreats the giver by, for example, attempting to murder the giver or refusing to provide the giver with needed food. La. Civ. Code art. 1560. [Cases: Gifts 41.]

ingratus (in-gray-t<<schwa>>s), adj. [Latin] Roman law. (Of a person) ungrateful; (of conduct) marked by ingratitude. • Ungrateful acts or words (such as spiteful comments from a freedman toward a former master) could form the basis for a return to a prior inferior status.

IN GREMIO JURIS

in gremio juris (in gree-mee-oh joor-is), adv. & adj.[Law Latin] Civil & Scots law. In the bosom of the right. • This phrase describes a clause formerly inserted in an instrument to bind holders to its terms.

IN GREMIO LEGIS

in gremio legis (in gree-mee-oh lee-jis), adv. & adj.[Law Latin] In the bosom of the law. • This is a figurative expression for something that is under the protection of the law, such as a land title that is in abeyance.

INGRESS

ingress (in-gres).1. The act of entering. 2. The right or ability to enter; access. Cf. EGRESS.

INGRESS, EGRESS, AND REGRESS ingress, egress, and regress.The right of a lessee to enter, leave, and reenter the land in question.

INGRESSUS

ingressus (in-gres-<<schwa>>s). [Latin “ingress, entry”] Hist. The fee paid by an heir to a feudal lord to enter the estate of a decedent.

IN GROSS

in gross.Undivided; still in one large mass. — Also termed en gros; en grosse. See easement in gross under EASEMENT.

INGROSS

ingross,vb. See ENGROSS.

INGROSSATOR

ingrossator (in-groh-say-t<<schwa>>r). [Law Latin] Hist. An engrosser; a clerk who writes records or instruments on parchment. • The Engrosser of the Great Roll, for example, was known as the Ingrossator Magni Rotuli. See CLERK OF THE PIPE .

INHABIT

inhabit,vb. To dwell in; to occupy permanently or habitually as a residence.

IN HAC PARTE

in hac parte (in hak pahr-tee). [Latin] On this part or side.

IN HAEC VERBA

IN HAEREDITATE JACENTE

in haereditate jacente (in h<<schwa>>-red-i-tay-tee j<<schwa>>-sen-tee). [Latin] Hist. In the estate of a person deceased.

INHAERERE JURISDICTIONI inhaerere jurisdictioni (in-hi-reer-ee juur-is-dik-shee-oh-nI). [Latin] Civil law. To be necessarily connected with jurisdiction. • The phrase typically referred to a judge's inherent powers, such as the power to inflict punishment or to enforce a judgment.

inhere (in-heer), vb. To exist as a permanent, inseparable, or essential attribute or quality of a thing; to be intrinsic to something.

INHERENCY DOCTRINE

inherency doctrine.Patents. The rule that anticipation can be inferred despite a missing element in a prior-art reference if the missing element is either necessarily present in or a natural result of the product or process and a person of ordinary skill in the art would know it. • On one hand, the doctrine precludes patenting an existing invention by merely claiming an inherent element. On the other hand, it allows the later patentability of a substance, usu. a chemical compound, that was inadvertently created but not recognized or appreciated. See INHERENT ANTICIPATION. [Cases: Patents 65. C.J.S. Patents § 49.]

INHERENT ANTICIPATION

inherent anticipation.Patents. An invention's lack of novelty arising from the existence of prior-art products or processes that necessarily possess the same characteristics. • Inherency differs from obviousness in that a lack of novelty must be based on fact, not mere possibility or probability. See INHERENCY DOCTRINE.

INHERENT AUTHORITY

inherent authority.See AUTHORITY(1).

INHERENT CONDITION

inherent condition.See CONDITION(2).

INHERENT COVENANT

inherent covenant.See COVENANT(1).

INHERENT DEFECT

inherent defect.See hidden defect under DEFECT.

INHERENTLY DANGEROUS

INHERENTLY DANGEROUS ACTIVITY

inherently dangerous activity.An activity that can be carried out only by the exercise of special skill and care and that involves a grave risk of serious harm if done unskillfully or carelessly.

INHERENTLY DANGEROUS WORK inherently dangerous work.See WORK(1).

INHERENT POWER

inherent power.See POWER(3).

INHERENT-POWERS DOCTRINE inherent-powers doctrine.The principle that allows courts to deal with diverse matters over which they are thought to have intrinsic authority, such as (1) procedural rulemaking, (2) internal budgeting of the courts, (3) regulating the practice of law; and (4) general judicial housekeeping. • The power is based on interpretations of art. I, § 8, cl. 18 of the Constitution.

INHERIT

inherit,vb.1. To receive (property) from an ancestor under the laws of intestate succession upon the ancestor's death. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 1. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 1–5.] 2. To receive (property) as a bequest or devise.

INHERITABLE

inheritable,adj. See HERITABLE.

INHERITABLE BLOOD

inheritable blood.See heritable blood under BLOOD.

INHERITABLE OBLIGATION

inheritable obligation.See heritable obligation under OBLIGATION.

INHERITABLE SECURITY

inheritable security.See heritable security under SECURITY.

INHERITANCE

inheritance. 1. Property received from an ancestor under the laws of intestacy. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 1, 8. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 1–5, 9–12; Right of Privacy and Publicity§ 42.] 2. Property that a person receives by bequest or devise.

dual inheritance. An adopted child's intestate inheritance through both his adopted family and his natural parent. • The problem of dual inheritance occurs only if a relative of the birth parent adopts the child. For instance, if a child's mother dies and the maternal grandparents adopt the grandchild, and if a grandparent then dies intestate, the child qualifies for two separate shares — one as a child and the other as a grandchild. In some jurisdictions, by statute, such a child is allowed to inherit only the adopted child's share. Under the Uniform Probate Code, the child takes the larger of the two shares.

several inheritance. An inheritance that descends to two persons severally, as by moieties.

shifting inheritance. Under intestacy laws, an inheritance that is transferred from an heir who was living when the intestate died to an afterborn heir who is more closely related to the intestate.

universal inheritance. A system by which an intestate's estate escheats to the state only if the decedent leaves no surviving relatives, no matter how distant. • Universal inheritance has been abandoned in almost all Anglo-American jurisdictions. See UNIVERSAL-INHERITANCE RULE.

INJOIN

injoin,vb. Archaic. See ENJOIN.

IN JUDICIO

in judicio (in joo-dish-ee-oh), adv. & adj.[Latin] Before the judge. • The phrase is still sometimes used. Originally, in Roman law, in judicio referred to the second stage of a Roman formulary trial, held before a private judge known as a judex. — Also termed apud judicem. See FORMULA(1). Cf. IN JURE (2).

IN JUDICIO POSSESSORIO

in judicio possessorio (in joo-dish-ee-oh pah-ses-sor-ee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. In a possessory action.

INJUNCTION

injunction (in-j<<schwa>>ngk-sh<<schwa>>n), n. A court order commanding or preventing an action. • To get an injunction, the complainant must show that there is no plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law and that an irreparable injury will result unless the relief is granted. — Also termed writ of injunction. See IRREPARABLE-INJURY RULE. [Cases: Injunction 1. C.J.S. Injunctions §§ 2–4, 12, 14, 22, 24, 166.]

circumstances of the case, commanding an act which the court regards as essential to justice, or restraining an act which it esteems contrary to equity and good conscience; as a remedial writ which courts issue for the purpose of enforcing their equity jurisdiction; and as a writ issuing by the order and under the seal of a court of equity.” 1 Howard C. Joyce, A Treatise on the Law Relating to Injunctions § 1, at 2–3 (1909).

affirmative injunction. See mandatory injunction.

ex parte injunction. A preliminary injunction issued after the court has heard from only the moving party. — Also termed temporary restraining order.

final injunction. See permanent injunction.

head-start injunction. Trade secrets. An injunction prohibiting the defendant from using a trade secret for a period equal to the time between the date of the secret's theft and the date when the secret became public. • So named since that period is the “head start” that the defendant unfairly gained over the rest of the industry. [Cases: Injunction 189. C.J.S. Injunctions §§ 6, 235–236.]

injunction pendente lite. See preliminary injunction.

interlocutory injunction. See preliminary injunction.

mandatory injunction. An injunction that orders an affirmative act or mandates a specified course of conduct. — Also termed affirmative injunction. Cf. prohibitory injunction. [Cases: Injunction 5, 133. C.J.S. Injunctions §§ 3, 8–9, 81.]

permanent injunction. An injunction granted after a final hearing on the merits. • Despite its name, a permanent injunction does not necessarily last forever. — Also termed perpetual injunction; final injunction. [Cases: Injunction 1. C.J.S. Injunctions §§ 2–4, 12, 14, 22, 24, 166.]

perpetual injunction. See permanent injunction.

preliminary injunction. A temporary injunction issued before or during trial to prevent an irreparable injury from occurring before the court has a chance to decide the case. • A preliminary injunction will be issued only after the defendant receives notice and an opportunity to be heard. — Also termed interlocutory injunction; temporary injunction; provisional injunction; injunction pendente lite. Cf. ex parte injunction; TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER. [Cases: Injunction 132. C.J.S. Injunctions §§ 4–5, 17, 166.]

preventive injunction. An injunction designed to prevent a loss or injury in the future. Cf. reparative injunction.

prohibitory injunction. An injunction that forbids or restrains an act. • This is the most common type of injunction. Cf. mandatory injunction.

provisional injunction. See preliminary injunction.

quia-timet injunction (kwI-<<schwa>> tI-m*<<schwa>>t orkwee-<<schwa>>* tim-et). [Latin “because he fears”] An injunction granted to prevent an action that has been threatened but has not yet violated the plaintiff's rights. See QUIA TIMET.

reparative injunction (ri-par-<<schwa>>-tiv). An injunction requiring the defendant to restore the plaintiff to the position that the plaintiff occupied before the defendant committed a wrong. Cf. preventive injunction.

special injunction.Hist. An injunction in which the prohibition of an act is the only relief ultimately sought, as in prevention of waste or nuisance.

temporary injunction.See preliminary injunction.

INJUNCTION BOND

injunction bond.See BOND(2).

INJUNCTIVE

injunctive,adj. That has the quality of directing or ordering; of or relating to an injunction. — Also termed injunctional.

IN JURE

in jure (in joor-ee). [Latin “in law”] 1. According to the law. 2.Roman law. Before the praetor or other magistrate. • In jure referred to the first stage of a Roman formulary trial, held before the praetor or other judicial magistrate for the purpose of establishing the legal issues and their competence. Evidence was taken in the second stage, which was held before a judex. See FORMULA(1). Cf. IN JUDICIO.

IN JURE ALTERIUS

in jure alterius (in joor-ee al-teer-ee-<<schwa>>s), adv.[Latin] In another's right.

IN JURE CESSIO

in jure cessio (in joor-ee sesh-ee-oh). [Latin “a surrender in law”] Roman law. A fictitious trial held to transfer ownership of property; a collusive claim to formally convey property, esp. incorporeal property, by a court's assignment of ownership. • At trial, the transferee appeared before a praetor and asserted ownership of the property. The actual owner also appeared, but did not contest the assertion, and so allowed the transfer of the property to the plaintiff. In jure cessio was most often used to convey incorporeal property. — Also spelled in iure cessio.

IN JURE PROPRIO

in jure proprio (in joor-ee proh-pree-oh), adv.[Latin] In one's own right.

INJURIA

injuria (in-joor-ee-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. See WRONG. Cf. DAMNUM INJURIA DATUM ; actio injuriarum under ACTIO. 2. An assault on a person's reputation or body. Pl. injuriae (in-joor-ee-ee).

“By injuria (or outrage), as the fourth ground of delict obligation, is meant some affronting wrong, calculated to wound the self-respect and touch the honor of the person injured, to humiliate or degrade him in the view of others.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 243 (1881).

“The term injuria [is best] used in its original and proper sense of wrong (in jus, contrary to law). The modern use of ‘injury’ as a synonym for damage is unfortunate but inveterate.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 13 nn.51–52 (17th ed. 1977).

INJURIA ABSQUE DAMNO

injuria absque damno (in-joor-ee-<<schwa>> abs-kwee dam-noh). [Latin “injury without damage”] A legal wrong that will not sustain a lawsuit because no harm resulted from it. — Also termed injuria sine damno. Cf. DAMNUM SINE INJURIA .

“Just as there are cases in which damage is not actionable as a tort (damnum sine injuria), so conversely there are cases in which behaviour is actionable as a tort, although it has been the cause of no damage at all (injuria sine damno). Torts are of two kinds — namely, those which are actionable per se, and those which are actionable only on proof of actual damage resulting from them. Thus the act of trespassing upon another's land is actionable even though it has done the plaintiff not the slightest harm. Similarly, a libel is actionable per se, while slander (that is to say, oral as opposed to written defamation) is in most cases not actionable without proof of actual damage.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 14 (17th ed. 1977).

INJURIOUS

injurious, adj. Harmful; tending to injure.

INJURIOUS EXPOSURE

injurious exposure. Workers' compensation. Contact with a substance that would cause injury if the person were repeatedly exposed to it over time. • An employer may be found liable for harm resulting from injurious exposure. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 517, 521–551. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 296–297, 305–324, 338, 350, 355.]

INJURIOUS FALSEHOOD

injurious falsehood. 1. DISPARAGEMENT(3). 2. TRADE DISPARAGEMENT.

INJURIOUS WORDS

injurious words. Louisiana law. Slanderous or libelous language. See SLANDER; LIBEL(1), (2).

INJURY

injury, n. 1. The violation of another's legal right, for which the law provides a remedy; a wrong or injustice. See WRONG. 2. Scots law. Anything said or done in breach of a duty not to do it, if harm results to another in person, character, or property. • Injuries are divided into real injuries (such as wounding) and verbal injuries (such as slander). They may be criminal wrongs (as with assault) or civil wrongs (as with defamation). 3. Any harm or damage. • Some authorities distinguish harm from injury, holding that while harm denotes any personal loss or detriment, injury involves an actionable invasion of a legally protected interest. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 7 cmt. a (1965). — injure, vb. — injurious, adj.

accidental injury. An injury resulting from external, violent, and unanticipated causes; esp., a bodily injury caused by some external force or agency operating contrary to a person's intentions, unexpectedly, and not according to the usual order of events. [Cases: Insurance 2590. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 864, 1170.]

advertising injury. Harm resulting from (1) oral or written speech that slanders or libels a person, or disparages a person's goods, products, or services; (2) oral or written speech that violates a person's right of privacy; (3) misappropriation of advertising ideas or style of doing business; or (4) infringement of copyright, esp. in a name or slogan.

bodily injury. Physical damage to a person's body. — Also termed physical injury. See serious bodily injury. [Cases: Damages 30, 32; Insurance 2276. C.J.S. Damages §§ 53, 89–93; Insurance §§ 941, 943, 1132–1133.]

civil injury. Physical harm or property damage caused by breach of a contract or by a criminal offense redressable through a civil action.

compensable injury (k<<schwa>>m-pen-s<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). Workers' compensation. An injury caused by an accident arising from the employment and in the course of the employee's work, and for which the employee is statutorily entitled to receive compensation. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 511–770. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 288–470, 475.]

consequential injury. See consequential loss under LOSS.

continual injury. An injury that recurs at repeated intervals. — Also termed (but improperly) continuous injury.

continuing injury. An injury that is still in the process of being committed. • An example is the constant smoke or noise of a factory. — Also termed continuing harm. [Cases: Damages 110. C.J.S. Damages §§ 135–136.]

direct injury. 1. An injury resulting directly from violation of a legal right. 2. An injury resulting directly from a particular cause, without any intervening causes. [Cases: Damages 16. C.J.S. Damages §§ 23–24.]

injury in fact. An actual or imminent invasion of a legally protected interest, in contrast to an invasion that is conjectural or hypothetical. • An injury in fact gives the victim standing to bring an action for damages. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 103.2.]

irreparable injury (i-rep-<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). An injury that cannot be adequately measured or compensated by money and is therefore often considered remediable by injunction. — Also termed irreparable harm; nonpecuniary injury. See IRREPARABLE-INJURY RULE. [Cases: Injunction 14, 138.6. C.J.S. Injunctions §§ 24, 27–28.]

“The term ‘irreparable injury,’ however, is not to be taken in its strict literal sense. The rule does not require that the threatened injury should be one not physically capable of being repaired.

If the threatened injury would be substantial and serious — one not easily to be estimated, or repaired by money — and if the loss or inconvenience to the plaintiff if the injunction should be refused (his title proving good) would be much greater than any which can be suffered by the defendant through the granting of the injunction, although his title ultimately prevails, the case is one of such probable great or ‘irreparable’ damage as will justify a preliminary injunction.” Elias Merwin, Principles of Equity and Equity Pleading 426–27 (H.C. Merwin ed., 1896).

legal injury. Violation of a legal right.

malicious injury. 1. An injury resulting from a willful act committed with knowledge that it is likely to injure another or with reckless disregard of the consequences. 2. MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.

nonpecuniary injury. See irreparable injury.

pecuniary injury. An injury that can be adequately measured or compensated by money.

permanent injury. 1. A completed wrong whose consequences cannot be remedied for an indefinite period. 2. An injury to land the consequences of which will endure until the reversioner takes possession, as a result of which the reversioner has a present right of possession.

personal injury. Torts. 1. In a negligence action, any harm caused to a person, such as a broken bone, a cut, or a bruise; bodily injury. 2. Any invasion of a personal right, including mental suffering and false imprisonment. — Also termed private injury. [Cases: Insurance 2306.] 3. For purposes of workers' compensation, any harm (including a worsened preexisting condition) that arises in the scope of employment. — Abbr. PI. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 552–566, 604–770. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 325–337, 365–470, 475.] physical injury. See bodily injury.

private injury. See personal injury (2).

public injury. A loss or an injury stemming from a breach of a duty or violation of a right that affects the community as a whole.

reparable injury (rep-r-b). An injury that can be adequately compensated by money.

scheduled injury. A partially disabling injury for which a predetermined amount of compensation is allowed under a workers'-compensation statute. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 869–902. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 575–591.]

serious bodily injury. Serious physical impairment of the human body; esp., bodily injury that creates a substantial risk of death or that causes serious, permanent disfigurement or protracted loss or impairment of the function of any body part or organ. Model Penal Code § 210.0(3). • Typically, the fact-finder must decide in any given case whether the injury meets this general standard. Generally, an injury meets this standard if it creates a substantial risk of fatal consequences or, when inflicted, constitutes mayhem. Cf. MAYHEM(1). — Also termed serious bodily harm; grievous bodily harm; great bodily injury. [Cases: Homicide 530.]

temporary injury. An injury that may be abated or discontinued at any time by either the injured party or the wrongdoer.

willful and malicious injury. Bankruptcy. Under the statutory exception to discharge, damage to another entity (such as a creditor) caused by a debtor intentionally performing a wrongful act — without just cause or excuse — that the debtor knew was certain or substantially certain to cause injury. 11 USCA § 523(a)(6). [Cases: Bankruptcy 3355. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 332.]

in law. Existing in law or by force of law; in the contemplation of the law. Cf. IN FACT.

IN-LAW

in-law, n. A relative by marriage.

INLAW

inlaw, vb. Archaic. To place (an offender) under the protection of the law. Cf. OUTLAW(1).

“The outlaw's life is insecure.... If the king inlaws him, he comes back into the world like a new-born babe, quasi modo genius, capable indeed of acquiring new rights, but unable to assert any of those that he had before his outlawry. An annihilation of the outlawry would have a different operation, but the inlawed outlaw is not the old person restored to legal life; he is a new person.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 477 (2d ed. 1898).

INLAWRY

inlawry. The restoration of an outlawed person's rights and protections under the law. See INLAGATION.

IN LIBERAM BARONIAM

in liberam baroniam (in lib-⟨schwa⟩r-⟨schwa⟩m b⟨schwa⟩-roh-nee-⟨schwa⟩m). [Law Latin] Hist. Into a free barony.

“In former times, many persons holding certain feudal rights from the Crown were called barons, but in the strict legal sense, the title was only due to him whose lands had been erected or confirmed by the king in liberam baroniam. The advantages conferred by the right of barony were considerable. Such a right conferred on the baron both civil and criminal jurisdiction within his barony; and under the clause of union contained in his charter, he was enabled to take infefment in the whole lands and rights of the barony in, what was at that time, an easy and inexpensive mode.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 264 (4th ed. 1894).

IN LIBERAM ELEMOSINAM

in liberam elemosinam (in lib-⟨schwa⟩r-⟨schwa⟩m el-⟨schwa⟩-m⟨schwa⟩-si-n⟨schwa⟩m). [Latin “in free alms”] Hist. Land given away for a charitable purpose; land given away to be held in frankalmoin. — Also spelled in liberam eleemosinam. — Also termed in libera elemosina. See FRANKALMOIN.

IN MALA FIDE

in mala fide (in mal-<<schwa>> fl-dee). [Latin] Hist. In bad faith.

“A possessor in mala fide is one who holds possession of a subject, in the knowledge that it is not his own, on a title which he knows, or has reasonable ground for believing to be a bad one.”
John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 266 (4th ed. 1894).

IN MANCIPIO

in mancipio (in man-sip-ee-oh), adj.[Latin] Roman law. In a state of civil bondage. • This status applied to a son whose father was sued in a noxal action and settled the claim by handing over his son. See NOXAL ACTION(1).

IN MANU MORTUA

in manu mortua. See IN MORTUA MANU.

IN-MARRIAGE

in-marriage. See MARRIAGE(1).

INMATE

inmate. 1. A person confined in a prison, hospital, or other institution. [Cases: Convicts 1. C.J.S. Convicts §§ 2–3.] 2. Archaic. A person living inside a place; one who lives with others in a dwelling.

IN MEDIAS RES

in medias res (in mee-dee-*<<schwa>>*s reezor in me-dee-ahs rays), adv.[Latin] Into the middle of things; without preface or introduction.

IN MEDIO

in medio (in mee-dee-oh). [Law Latin] Scots law. In the middle; intermediate. • The phrase appeared in reference to a fund in controversy.

IN MEDITATIONE FUGAE

in meditatione fugae (in med-i-tay-shee-oh-nee f[y]oo-jee). [Law Latin] Scots law. Meditating flight; contemplating leaving the country. • Formerly, a debtor could be detained under a fugae warrant if the debtor had sufficient debt to warrant imprisonment, and if the debtor was attempting to leave the country. This type of warrant became obsolete when imprisonment for debt was abolished.

IN MERCY

in mercy, adv. At a judge's discretion concerning punishment. • A judgment formerly noted (by the Law Latin phrase in misericordia) which litigant lost by stating that the unsuccessful party was in the court's mercy. A plaintiff held in mercy for a false claim, for example, was said to be in misericordia pro falso clamore suo.

IN MISERICORDIA

in misericordia (in miz-<<schwa>>-ri-kor-dee-<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] See IN MERCY .

IN MITIORI SENSU

in mitiori sensu (in mish-ee-or-Isens-[y]oo), adv.[Law Latin] In a milder or more favorable sense. • This phrase appeared as part of the former rule applied in slander actions. A word capable of two meanings would be given the one more favorable to the defendant. Cf. INNOCENT-CONSTRUCTION RULE. [Cases: Libel and Slander 19. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 13–14.]

“Within half a century of its first appearance, the action for words had become part of the everyday business of the common-law courts, in particular the King's Bench. In the early days there were often more slander cases in the rolls than assumpsit.... The judges apparently came to regret this aspect of their increased jurisdiction, especially since juries frequently awarded sums of money quite disproportionate to the harm and to the ability of the wrongdoer to pay [T]he principal effect of the judicial reaction was that a spirit of repression began to manifest itself The ... most effective attack was launched in the 1570s, when the courts began the policy of construing ambiguous or doubtful words in the milder sense (in mitiori sensu) so that they would not be actionable.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 500–01 (3d ed. 1990).

IN MODUM ADMINICULI

in modum adminiculi (in moh-d*<<schwa>>m ad-mi-nik-y<<schwa>>*-li). [Law Latin] Hist. As corroborating evidence.

IN MODUM ASSISAE

in modum assisae (in moh-d*<<schwa>>*m <<schwa>>-si-zee), adv.[Law Latin] In the manner or form of an assize. See ASSIZE.

IN MODUM JURATAE

in modum juratae (in moh-d*<<schwa>>*m juu-ray-tee), adv.[Law Latin] In the manner or form of a jury.

IN MODUM POENAE

in modum poenae (in moh-d*<<schwa>>*m pee-nee). [Latin] Hist. By way of penalty. • The phrase appeared in reference to the basis for charging interest.

IN MODUM PROBATIONIS

in modum probationis (in moh-d*<<schwa>>*m proh-bay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Hist. In the form of proof. • The phrase appeared in reference to documents that a party provided to support a claim.

IN MODUM SIMPLICIS QUERELAE in modum simplicis querelae (in moh-d*<<schwa>>m sim-pl<<schwa>>-sis kw<<* schwa>>-ree-lee). [Law Latin] Hist. By way of summary complaint.

IN MORA

in mora (in mor-<<schwa>>), adv. & adj.[Latin] Roman law. In delay; in default. • This was said of a debtor who delayed performance or failed to perform.

IN MORTUA MANU

in mortua manu (in mor-choo-<<schwa>> man-yoo), adj. & adv.[Law Latin “in a dead hand”] Hist. (Of property) perpetually controlled according to a decedent's directions. • Land held by a religious society was described this way because the church could hold property perpetually without rendering feudal service. — Also termed in manu mortua. See DEADHAND CONTROL; MORTMAIN.

IN MUNDO

in mundo (in m<<schwa>>n-doh or muun-doh). [Law Latin “in the world”] Hist. In a clean, fair copy.

“Papers written ‘in mundo,’ are what are usually termed extended, or clean copies.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 268 (4th ed. 1894).

INNAVIGABLE

innavigable (in-nav-i-g<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj.1. (Of a body of water) not capable of, or unsuitable for, navigation. [Cases: Navigable Waters 1. C.J.S. Navigable Waters § 1.] 2.Marine insurance. (Of a vessel) unfit for service. — Also termed unnavigable.

INNER BAR

inner bar.English law. The group of senior barristers, called the Queen's Counsel or King's Counsel, who are admitted to plead within the bar of the court. Cf. OUTER BAR.

INNER BARRISTER

inner barrister.See BARRISTER.

INNER CABINET

inner cabinet.See CABINET.

INNER-CITY POST-TRAUMATIC-STRESS DEFENSE inner-city post-traumatic-stress defense.See URBAN-SURVIVAL SYNDROME.

INNER HOUSE

Inner House.Scots law. The appellate jurisdiction of the Court of Session. See COURT OF SESSION(1).

INNING

inning. (pl.) Land reclaimed from the sea.

INNKEEPER

innkeeper. A person who, for compensation, keeps open a public house for the lodging and entertainment of travelers. • A keeper of a boarding house is usu. not considered an innkeeper. — Also termed hotelkeeper. [Cases: Innkeepers 3. C.J.S. Inns, Hotels and Eating Places §§ 2–4.]

“The innkeeper is the person who on his own account carries on the business of an inn. In other words, he is the proprietor of the establishment. The person actually employed as manager, though he has the whole direction of the enterprise, is not an innkeeper if he is acting on behalf of someone else. Thus the salaried manager of a hotel owned or operated by a corporation is not held responsible as an innkeeper; the corporation is the innkeeper.” John H. Sherry, The Laws of Innkeepers § 2.6, at 15 (rev. ed. 1981).

INNKEEPER'S LIEN

innkeeper's lien. See hotelkeeper's lien under LIEN.

INNOCENCE

innocence, n. The absence of guilt; esp., freedom from guilt for a particular offense. Cf. GUILT.

actual innocence. Criminal law. The absence of facts that are prerequisites for the sentence given to a defendant. • In death-penalty cases, actual innocence is an exception to the cause-and-prejudice rule, and can result in a successful challenge to the death sentence on the basis of a defense that was not presented to the trial court. The prisoner must show by clear and convincing evidence that, but for constitutional error in the trial court, no reasonable judge or juror would find the defendant eligible for the death penalty. See Sawyer v. Whitley, 505 U.S. 333, 112 S.Ct. 2514 (1992). Cf. CAUSE-AND-PREJUDICE RULE. [Cases: Habeas Corpus 401, 462.]

legal innocence. Criminal law. The absence of one or more procedural or legal bases to support the sentence given to a defendant. • In the context of a petition for writ of habeas corpus or other attack on the sentence, legal innocence is often contrasted with actual innocence. Actual innocence, which focuses on the facts underlying the sentence, can sometimes be used to obtain relief from the death penalty based on trial-court errors that were not objected to at trial, even if the petitioner cannot meet the elements of the cause-and-prejudice rule. But legal innocence, which focuses on the applicable law and procedure, is not as readily available. Inadvertence or a poor trial strategy resulting in the defendant's failure to assert an established legal principle will not ordinarily be sufficient to satisfy the cause-and-prejudice rule or to establish the right to an exception from that rule. See CAUSE-AND-PREJUDICE RULE. [Cases: Habeas Corpus 401, 462.]

innocent, adj. Free from guilt; free from legal fault. See NOT GUILTY(2).

INNOCENT AGENT

innocent agent. See AGENT(2).

INNOCENT-CONSTRUCTION RULE innocent-construction rule. The doctrine that an allegedly libelous statement will be given an innocuous interpretation if the statement is either ambiguous or harmless. Cf. IN MITIORI SENSU. [Cases: Libel and Slander 19. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 13–14.]

INNOCENT CONVERTER

innocent converter. See CONVERTER.

INNOCENT CONVEYANCE

innocent conveyance. See CONVEYANCE.

INNOCENT HOMICIDE

innocent homicide. See HOMICIDE.

INNOCENT INFRINGEMENT

innocent infringement. See INFRINGEMENT.

INNOCENT JUNIOR USER

innocent junior user. Trademarks. A person who, without any actual or constructive knowledge, uses a trademark that has been previously used in a geographically distant market, and who may continue to use the trademark in a limited geographic area as long as the senior user does not use the mark there. See JUNIOR USER. [Cases: Trade Regulation 375.1.]

INNOCENT MISREPRESENTATION innocent misrepresentation. See MISREPRESENTATION.

INNOCENT-OWNER DEFENSE

innocent-owner defense. See DEFENSE(1).

INNOCENT PARTY

innocent party. See PARTY(2).

INNOCENT PASSAGE

innocent passage. Int'l law. The right of a foreign ship to pass through a country's territorial waters; the right of a foreign vessel to travel through a country's maritime belt without paying a toll. • The right of innocent passage is guaranteed in Article 17 of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea. Passage is considered innocent as long as it is not prejudicial to the peace, good order, and security of the coastal country. — Also termed right of innocent passage. Cf. TRANSIT PASSAGE. [Cases: International Law 5. C.J.S. International Law §§ 14–20.]

“The term ‘innocent passage’ accurately denotes the nature of the right as well as its limitations. In the first place it is a right of 'passage,' that is to say, a right to use the waters as a thoroughfare between two points outside them; a ship proceeding through the maritime belt to a port of the coastal state would not be exercising a right of passage. In the second place the passage must be 'innocent'; a ship exercising the right must respect the local regulations as to navigation, pilotage, and the like, and, of course, it must not do any act which might disturb the tranquillity of the coastal state." J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 188–89 (5th ed. 1955).

INNOCENT PURCHASER

innocent purchaser. See bona fide purchaser under PURCHASER(1).

INNOCENT PURCHASER FOR VALUE innocent purchaser for value. See bona fide purchaser under PURCHASER(1).

INNOCENT SPOUSE

innocent spouse. See SPOUSE.

INNOCENT TRESPASS

innocent trespass. See TRESPASS.

INNOCENT TRESPASSER

innocent trespasser. See TRESPASSER.

INNOCUAE UTILITATIS

innocuae utilitatis (i-nok-yoo-[w]ee yoo-til-<<schwa>>-tay-tis). [Latin "useful without harming"] Hist. An act that is beneficial to one person and harmful to no one.

INN OF CHANCERY

Inn of Chancery. Hist. Any of nine collegiate houses where students studied either to gain entry into an Inn of Court or to learn how to frame writs in order to serve in the chancery courts. • Over time, the Inns — Clement's, Clifford's, Lyon's, Furnival's, Thavies', Symond's, Barnard's, Staples', and the New Inn — became little more than dining clubs, and never exercised control over their members as the Inns of Court did. The Inns of Chancery were all dissolved in the 19th century. Cf. INN OF COURT.

INN OF COURT

Inn of Court. 1. Any of four autonomous institutions, one or more of which English barristers must join to receive their training and of which they remain members for life: The Honourable Societies of Lincoln's Inn, the Middle Temple, the Inner Temple, and Gray's Inn. • These powerful bodies examine candidates for the Bar, "call" them to the Bar, and award the degree of barrister.

"It is impossible to fix with certainty the period when the professors and students of the common law first began to associate themselves together as a society, and form themselves into collegiate order; or to assign an exact date to the foundation of the Inns of Court, the original institution of which nowhere precisely appears.... After the fixing of the Court of Common Pleas by Magna Charta, the practitioners of the municipal law took up their residence in houses between the king's courts at Westminster and the city of London — forming then one community; and before the end of the reign of Edward II, they appear to have divided themselves into separate inns or colleges, at Temple Bar, Lincoln's Inn, and Gray's Inn.” Robert H. Pearce, A Guide to the Inns of Court and Chancery 1–2 (1855).

2. (pl.) In the United States, an organization (formally named the American Inns of Court Foundation) with more than 100 local chapters, whose members include judges, practicing attorneys, law professors, and law students. • Through monthly meetings, the chapters emphasize practice skills, professionalism, and ethics, and provide mentors to train students and young lawyers in the finer points of good legal practice.

INNOMINATE

innominate (i-nom-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>t), adj. Civil law. Unclassified; having no special name or designation. See innominate contract under CONTRACT.

INNOMINATE ACTION

innominate action. See ACTION(4).

INNOMINATE CONTRACT

innominate contract. See CONTRACT.

INNOMINATE OBLIGATIONS

innominate obligations. Obligations having no specific classification or name because they are not strictly contractual, delictual, or quasi-contractual. • An example is the obligation of a trustee to a beneficiary. — Also termed obligationes innominati.

INNOMINATE REAL CONTRACT

innominate real contract. See innominate contract under CONTRACT.

IN NOMINE DEI, AMEN

in nomine Dei, Amen (in nahm-<<schwa>>-nee dee-I, ay-men). [Latin] Hist. In the name of God, Amen. • This phrase formerly appeared at the beginning of a will or other instrument.

INNOTESCIMUS

innotescimus (in-oh-tes-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin “we make known”] Hist. A certification, in the form of letters patent, of a charter of feoffment or other instrument not filed of record. • This term derives from the word of emphasis appearing at the end of the document. Cf. EXEMPLIFICATION.

INNOVATA LITE DEPENDENTE innovata lite dependente (in-oh-vay-t<<schwa>> II-tee dee-pen-den-tee). [Law Latin] Hist.

Innovations during the pendency of a suit. • The phrase appeared in reference to the interference with something that is the subject of a lawsuit. See PENDENTE LITE.

INNOVATION

innovation.Scots law. See NOVATION.

INNOXIARE

innoxiare (i-nok-shee-air-ee), vb.[Law Latin] Hist. To purge (a person) of fault.

IN NUBIBUS

in nubibus (in n[y]oo-bi-b<<schwa>>s), adv. & adj.[Law Latin] In the clouds. • An expression for something that is under the protection of the law.

IN NUDIS FINIBUS CONTRACTUS in nudis finibus contractus (in n[y]oo-dis fin-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>n-trak-t<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] Hist. In the bare terms of a contract.

IN NUDIS TERMINIS

in nudis terminis (in n[y]oo-dis t<<schwa>>r-m<<schwa>>-nis). [Law Latin “with bare limits”] Hist. In its bare terms. • The phrase appeared in reference to the simple terms of an instrument. See NUDUM PACTUM.

INNUENDO

innuendo (in-yoo-en-doh). [Latin “by hinting”] 1. An oblique remark or indirect suggestion, usu. of a derogatory nature. 2. An explanatory word or passage inserted parenthetically into a legal document. • In criminal law, an innuendo is a statement in an indictment showing the application or meaning of matter previously expressed, the meaning of which would not otherwise be clear. In the law of defamation, an innuendo is the plaintiff's explanation of a statement's defamatory meaning when that meaning is not apparent from the statement's face. For example, the innuendo of the statement “David burned down his house” can be shown by pleading that the statement was understood to mean that David was defrauding his insurance company (the fact that he had insured his house is pleaded and proved by inducement). Cf. INDUCEMENT(4); COLLOQUIUM. [Cases: Libel and Slander 86. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood§§ 4, 129.]

“It is not a true innuendo to repeat the obvious meaning of defamatory words in other language, or in an embroidered or exaggerated way. Otherwise an ingenious pleader could perplex the judge and jury and harry the defendant by ringing the changes on the same words, creating numerous different causes of action, each requiring a separate verdict. A true innuendo relies on a conjunction of the words used and some extrinsic fact. Thus it is defamatory in itself to say that a man's affairs are being investigated by the Fraud Squad: but the statement does not support the innuendo that those affairs are being carried on fraudulently. Conversely, the statement 'X is a good advertiser' is innocent in itself, but carries a libellous innuendo if published to persons who know the extrinsic fact that X is an eminent member of the Bar." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 149 (17th ed. 1977). [The example about lawyers' advertising no longer has relevance to American law. — Eds.]

IN NULLIUS BONIS

in nullius bonis (in n<<schwa>>-li-<<schwa>>s boh-nis). See NULLIUS IN BONIS.

IN NULLO EST ERRATUM

in nullo est erratum (in n<<schwa>>l-oh est i-ray-t<<schwa>>m), adj.[Law Latin "in nothing is there error"] Hist. Of or relating to a demurrer that denies any error and at once refers a question of law to the court.

IN OBLIGATIONE

in obligatione (in ob-li-gay-shee-oh-nee). [Latin] Hist. Under an obligation.

IN ODIUM

in odium (in oh-dee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. In detestation. • For example, a gift made to a woman who was later divorced for committing adultery was revoked in odium of her guilt.

IN ODIUM CORRUMPENTIS

in odium corruptentis (in oh-dee-<<schwa>>m kor-<<schwa>>m-pen-tis). [Latin] Hist. In detestation of the person corrupting.

INOFFICIOSUS

inofficiosus (in-<<schwa>>-fish-ee-oh-s<<schwa>>s), adj.[Latin "inofficious"] Roman law. Contrary to a natural duty of affection, used esp. of a will that unjustly disinherits a child or close relative. See QUERELA INOFFICIOSI TESTAMENTI .

INOFFICIOUS TESTAMENT

inofficious testament.See TESTAMENT.

INOFFICIOUS WILL

inofficious will.See inofficious testament under TESTAMENT.

IN OMNIBUS

in omnibus (in ahm-ni-b<<schwa>>s). [Latin] In all things; on all points .

INOPERABLE MODE

inoperable mode. Patents. In a patent application, a disclosed way of working an invention that is not the best mode. • The term usu. designates a mode that is intended to misrepresent or deliberately conceal the best mode. That misrepresentation or concealment is inequitable conduct that will bar patentability or render an issued patent unenforceable. [Cases: Patents 98. C.J.S. Patents §§ 137–139.]

INOPERATIVE

inoperative, adj. 1. Having no force or effect; not operative <an inoperative statute>. 2. Patents. (Of an invention), the condition of not being capable of functioning as described in the patent application.

“An invention is inoperative if an exemplification, built exactly as described in the patent, won't operate, or if further experiment and invention are required to make it operate.” Roger Sherman Hoar, Patent Tactics and the Law 37 (3d ed. 1950).

INOPS CONSILII

inops consilii (in-ahps k<<schwa>>n-sil-ee-I), adj. [Latin] Destitute of counsel; without legal counsel. • This term described actions taken without benefit of legal advice, as when a testator drafts a will without the help of an attorney.

“[T]hat in devises by last will and testament, (which, being often drawn up when the party is inops consilii, and are always more favoured in construction than formal deeds, which are presumed to be made with great caution, fore-thought, and advice) in these devises, I say, remainders may be created in some measure contrary to the rules before laid down” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 172 (1766).

IN ORDER

in order. 1. Ready for business <the meeting is in order>. 2. Available and appropriate for consideration under the applicable rules <the motion is in order>. Cf. OUT OF ORDER(1).

INORDINATUS

inordinatus (in-or-d<<schwa>>-nay-t<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin “disorderly; unordained”] Hist. See INTESTATE.

IN PACATO SOLO

in pacato solo (in p<<schwa>>-kay-toh soh-loh), adv. [Latin] In a country that is at peace.

IN PACE DEI ET REGIS

in pace Dei et regis (in pay-see dee-I et ree-jis), adv. [Law Latin] Hist. In the peace of God and the king. • This phrase was used in an appeal from a murder conviction.

IN PAIS

in pais (in payorpays). [Law French “in the country”] Outside court or legal proceedings. See equitable estoppel under ESTOPPEL.

IN PAPER

in paper.Hist. Of a proceeding that is within the jurisdiction of the trial court; that is, before the record is prepared for an appeal.

“Formerly, the suitors were much perplexed by writs of error brought upon very slight and trivial grounds, as misspellings and other mistakes of the clerks, all which might be amended at the common law, while all the proceedings were in paper, for they were then considered in fieri, and therefore subject to the control of the courts.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 407 (1768).

IN PARI CAUSA

in pari causa (in par-Ikaw-z<<schwa>>), adv.[Latin “in an equal case”] In a case affecting two parties equally or in which they have equal rights <in pari causa, the possessor ordinarily defeats the nonpossessory claimant>.

IN PARI DELICTO

in pari delicto (in par-I d<<schwa>>-lik-toh), adv.[Latin “in equal fault”] Equally at fault <the court denied relief because both parties stood in pari delicto>. Cf. PARTICEPS CRIMINIS(2). [Cases: Equity 65. C.J.S. Equity § 102.]

IN PARI DELICTO DOCTRINE in pari delicto doctrine,n.[Latin] The principle that a plaintiff who has participated in wrongdoing may not recover damages resulting from the wrongdoing. [Cases: Action 4; Contracts 139; Equity 65.C.J.S. Actions §§ 29–30; Contracts §§ 282–283, 286, 299; Equity § 102.]

IN PARI MATERIA

in pari materia (in par-I m<<schwa>>-teer-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin “in the same matter”] 1.adj. On the same subject; relating to the same matter. • It is a canon of construction that statutes that are in pari materia may be construed together, so that inconsistencies in one statute may be resolved by looking at another statute on the same subject. [Cases: Statutes 223.2(1)–223.2(35).]

“[I]t seems that the present position is that, when an earlier statute is in pari materia with a later one, it is simply part of its context to be considered by the judge in deciding whether the meaning of a provision in the later statute is plain.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 128 (1976).

2.adv. Loosely, in conjunction with <the Maryland constitutional provision is construed in pari materia with the Fourth Amendment>.

IN PATIENDO

in patiendo (in pash-ee-en-doh), adv. & adj.[fr. Latin patior “suffer”] In suffering or permitting.

IN PATRIA POTESTATE

in patria potestate (in pay-tree-<<schwa>> [orpa-tree-<<schwa>>] poh-tes-tay-tee). [Latin] Roman law. (Of a person) in the power of the father or a senior male ascendant; subject to patria potestas. • Uncles and brothers never had power over nephews or younger brothers. See patria potestas under POTESTAS; SUB POTESTATE. Cf. SUI JURIS.

IN PATRIMONIO PRINCIPIS in patrimonio principis (in pa-tr<<schwa>>-moh-nee-oh prin-si-pis). [Latin] See INTER REGALIA.

IN PECTORE JUDICIS

in pectore judicis (in pek-t<<schwa>>-ree joo-di-sis), adv. & adj.[Latin] In the breast of the court.

IN PEJOREM PARTEM

in pejorem partem (in p<<schwa>>-jor-<<schwa>>m pahr-t<<schwa>>m), adv.[Law Latin] In the worst part; on the worst side.

IN PENDENTE

in pendente (in pen-den-tee). [Latin] Hist. In suspension; in abeyance.

INPENNY AND OUTPENNY

inpenny and outpenny.Hist. A customary payment of a penny on entering into and going out of a tenancy.

IN PERICULO CONSTITUTUS in periculo constitutus (in p<<schwa>>-rik-y<<schwa>>-loh kon-sti-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Hist. Standing in danger.

IN PERPETUAM COMMENDAM

in perpetuam commendam (in p<<schwa>>r-pech-oo-<<schwa>>m k<<schwa>>-men-d<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. In perpetual trust. • Something given in perpetuam commendam was equivalent to a gift.

IN PERPETUAM REI MEMORIAM

in perpetuam rei memoriam (in p<<schwa>>r-pech-oo-<<schwa>>m [or p<<schwa>>r-pe-tyoo-<<schwa>>m] ree-I m<<schwa>>-mor-ee-<<schwa>>m), adv.[Latin] In perpetual memory of a matter. • This phrase refers to a deposition taken to preserve the deponent's testimony. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1291; Pretrial Procedure 61. C.J.S. Pretrial Procedure §§ 1, 3–4, 9.]

in perpetuity (in p<<schwa>>r-p<<schwa>>-t[y]oo-<<schwa>>-tee). Forever. See PERPETUITY.

IN PERPETUUM

in perpetuum (in p<<schwa>>r-pech-oo-<<schwa>>m or p<<schwa>>r-pe-tyoo-<<schwa>>m), adv.[Latin] Forever; perpetually. — Sometimes spelled imperpetuum.

IN PERPETUUM REI TESTIMONIUM

in perpetuum rei testimonium (in p<<schwa>>r-pech-oo-<<schwa>>m [or p<<schwa>>r-pe-tyoo-<<schwa>>m] ree-I tes-ti-moh-nee-<<schwa>>m), adv.[Law Latin] In perpetual testimony of a matter. • This phrase refers to a statute that confirms existing common law.

“Statutes also are either declaratory of the common law, or remedial of some defects therein. Declaratory, where the old custom of the kingdom is almost fallen into disuse, or become disputable; in which case the parliament has thought proper, in perpetuum rei testimonium, and for avoiding all doubts and difficulties, to declare what the common law is and ever hath been.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 86 (1765).

IN PERSONAM

in personam (in p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>m), adj.[Latin “against a person”] 1. Involving or determining the personal rights and obligations of the parties. 2. (Of a legal action) brought against a person rather than property. — Also termed personal. See action in personam under ACTION(4). Cf. IN REM. [Cases: Courts 10. C.J.S. Courts §§ 39–40.] — in personam,adv.

“An action is said to be in personam when its object is to determine the rights and interests of the parties themselves in the subject-matter of the action, however the action may arise, and the effect of a judgment in such an action is merely to bind the parties to it. A normal action brought by one person against another for breach of contract is a common example of an action in personam.” R.H. Graveson, Conflict of Laws 98 (7th ed. 1974).

IN PERSONAM JUDGMENT

in personam judgment.See personal judgment under JUDGMENT.

IN PERSONAM JURISDICTION in personam jurisdiction.See personal jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

IN PESSIMA FIDE

in pessima fide (in pes-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>> fī-dee). [Latin] Hist. In the worst faith; dishonestly.

IN PETITORIO

in petitorio (in pet-<<schwa>>-tor-ee-oh). [Latin] Hist. In a petitory action.

IN PIOS USUS

in pios usus (in pI-<<schwa>>s yoo-s<<schwa>>s), adv.[Law Latin] Hist. For pious uses; for religious purposes. • This phrase referred to property used by, or claimed by, the church, such as the property of an intestate who had no known heirs.

IN PLACITO

in placito (in plas-<<schwa>>-toh). [Law Latin] Hist. In a suit.

IN PLENA VITA

in plena vita (in plee-n<<schwa>> vI-t<<schwa>>), adv. & adj.[Law Latin] In full life.

IPD.

IN PRENDER

in prender (in pren-d<<schwa>>r), adj.[Law French “in taking”] Hist. (Of a right) consisting in property taken to fulfill a claim to it, such as an incorporeal hereditament (as a heriot custom) that a lord had to seize in order to exercise the right to it. Cf. IN RENDER.

IN-PRESENCE RULE

in-presence rule. The principle that a police officer may make a warrantless arrest of a person who commits a misdemeanor offense not only in the officer's actual presence but also within the officer's immediate vicinity.

“The common law rule with respect to misdemeanors was quite different; a warrant was required except when a breach of the peace occurred in the presence of the arresting officer.... Though the ‘in presence’ rule might be construed as requiring that the misdemeanor in fact have occurred in the officer's presence, the modern view is that the officer may arrest if he has probable cause to believe the offense is being committed in his presence.” Wayne R. LaFave & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 3.5, at 169–70 (2d ed. 1992).

IN PRIMIS

INSANE

insane,adj. Mentally deranged; suffering from one or more delusions or false beliefs that (1) have no foundation in reason or reality, (2) are not credible to any reasonable person of sound mind, and (3) cannot be overcome in a sufferer's mind by any amount of evidence or argument. See INSANITY. [Cases: Mental Health 3. C.J.S. Insane Persons §§ 2, 6.]

INSANE ASYLUM

insane asylum.See ASYLUM(3).

INSANE DELUSION

insane delusion.An irrational, persistent belief in an imaginary state of facts resulting in a lack of capacity to undertake acts of legal consequence, such as making a will. See CAPACITY(2). [Cases: Criminal Law 49.]

INSANITY

insanity,n. Any mental disorder severe enough that it prevents a person from having legal capacity and excuses the person from criminal or civil responsibility. • Insanity is a legal, not a medical, standard. — Also termed legal insanity; lunacy. Cf. diminished capacity under CAPACITY; SANITY. [Cases: Criminal Law 47; Homicide 817; Mental Health 3. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 99–108; Insane Persons §§ 2, 6.]

“The lawyers refer to ‘insanity.’ This is a legal term only, and one that is not used by the psychiatrist; the latter prefers to speak of mental disorder, mental illness, or of psychosis or neurosis.” Winfred Overholser, Psychiatry and the Law, 38 Mental Hygiene 243, 244 (1954).

“The word ‘insanity’ is commonly used in discussions of this problem although some other term would seem to be preferable such as ‘mental disease or defect,’ — which may be shortened to ‘mental disorder’ in general discussions if this is clearly understood to include disease of the mind, congenital lack, and damage resulting from traumatic injury, but to exclude excitement or stupefaction resulting from liquor or drugs. Apart from its uses in the law ‘insanity’ is usually employed to indicate mental disorder resulting from deterioration or damage as distinguished from congenital deficiency. Criminal incapacity may result as readily from one as from the other, but while the earlier authorities spoke of the ‘idiot’ and the ‘madman,’ ... the more recent tendency in the law has been to include both under the ‘insanity’ label.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 952 (3d ed. 1982).

“Another objection to the word ‘insanity’ is the unwarranted assumption that it refers to a very definite mental condition, seldom put into words but apparent in many discussions of the problem.” Id.

emotional insanity.Insanity produced by a violent excitement of the emotions or passions, although reasoning faculties may remain unimpaired; a passion that for a period creates complete derangement of intellect. • Emotional insanity is sometimes described as an irresistible impulse to do an act. See IRRESISTIBLE-IMPULSE TESTT. [Cases: Criminal Law 51. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 99–108.]

temporary insanity.Insanity that exists only at the time of a criminal act.

INSANITY DEFENSE

insanity defense.Criminal law. An affirmative defense alleging that a mental disorder caused the accused to commit the crime. See 18 USCA § 17; Fed. R. Crim. P. 12.2. • Unlike other defenses, a successful insanity defense may not result in acquittal but instead in a special verdict (“not guilty by reason of insanity”) that usu. leads to the defendant's commitment to a mental institution. — Also termed insanity plea. See MCNAGHTEN RULES; SUBSTANTIAL-CAPACITY TEST; IRRESISTIBLE-IMPULSE TEST; DURHAM RULE; APPRECIATION TEST. [Cases: Criminal Law 47; Homicide 817.C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 99–108.]

INSIDER INFORMATION

insider information. See INSIDE INFORMATION.

INSIDER PREFERENCE

insider preference. See PREFERENCE.

INSIDER REPORT

insider report. See REPORT(1).

INSIDER TRADING

“ ‘What is insider trading?’ The term is probably best defined, to the extent any definition is adequate, as ‘the purchase or sale of securities on the basis of material, non-public information.’ What counts as ‘non-public information’? What non-public information can be deemed ‘material’? When is a trader who is in possession of material, non-public information trading ‘on the basis of’ that information? Must the information be about the company whose securities are being purchased or sold? What characteristics establish ‘insider’ status sufficient to warrant legal proscriptions of trading? These are all questions that are derived from the definition of insider trading just offered” C. Edward Fletcher, Materials on the Law of Insider Trading 3 (1991).

amounting to three times the profit gained or loss avoided.” Marc I. Steinberg, Understanding Securities Law 277–78 (2d ed. 1996).

INSIDIATIO VIARUM

INSINUATION OF A WILL

insinuation of a will.Civil law. The first production of a will for probate.

INSIST

insist,vb. (Of a house in a bicameral legislature) to reaffirm (an amendment) that the other house has considered but in which it has not concurred, or to reaffirm nonconcurrence in an amendment from which the other house has not receded. • An insistence often results in a request for a conference. See CONCUR(3); CONFERENCE(2); RECEDE. — insistence,n.

“When one house refuses to recede from its amendments, the bill is not thereby lost, because the house may vote to insist upon its amendments. A message is sent to the other house stating that the house has insisted upon its amendments and is usually accompanied by a request for conference. When one house insists upon its amendments, the other house may then insist upon its nonconcurrence in the amendments and request a conference or recede from its nonconcurrence and concur in the amendments, which would constitute a final passage of the bill with the amendments.” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 768, at 556–57 (2000).

IN SOLIDO

in solido (in sol-<<schwa>>-doh). [Latin “as a whole”] (Of an obligation) creating joint and several liability. • The term is used in most civil-law jurisdictions, but no longer in Louisiana. — Also termed in solidum. See SOLIDARY.

IN SOLIDUM

in solidum (in sol-<<schwa>>-d<<schwa>>m). See IN SOLIDO.

IN SOLO

in solo (in soh-loh), adv. & adj.[Latin] In the soil or ground.

IN SOLO ALIENO

in solo alieno (in soh-loh ay-lee-ee-noh or al-ee-), adv. & adj.[Latin] In another's ground.

institutional lender. A business, esp. a bank, that routinely makes loans to the general public.

INSTITUTIONAL LITIGANT

“Our second observation relates to what has been called the ‘institutional litigant.’ There are organized groups, such as labour unions or trade associations, that have a continuing interest in the development of the common law. A group of this sort may take a case to litigation, not so much for the sake of a determination of the case itself, but for the purpose of bringing about a change in the law or of defending an existing rule against a change sought by some other group. When such groups are involved, the usual arguments against prospective changes in the law through judicial decisions lose much of their force. Indeed, when the litigants have this sort of long-term interest, a judicial proceeding may take on, with the assent of all involved, something of the nature of a legislative hearing.” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 163 (1968).

INSTITUTIONAL MARKET

institutional market. See MARKET.

INSTITUTIONES

institutiones (in-sti-t[y]oo-shee-oh-nee), n. [Latin] Roman law. Elementary works of law; institutes. See INSTITUTE.

IN SUO ORDINE

in suo ordine (in s[y]oo-oh or-d<<schwa>>-nee). [Latin] Hist. In his order.

“In suo ordine A cautioner who is entitled to the benefit of discussion can only be called upon, for fulfilment of the obligation which he guaranteed, in his order — that is, after the principal creditor has been discussed. So, also, an heir can only be made liable for the moveable debts of his ancestor, after the executor who succeeded to the moveable estate has been discussed, and where the moveable estate has proved insufficient to meet those debts.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 277 (4th ed. 1894).

INSURABLE

insurable,adj. Able to be insured <an insurable risk>. — insurability,n.

INSURABLE INTEREST

insurable interest.See INTEREST(2).

INSURABLE VALUE

insurable value.The worth of the subject of an insurance contract, usu. expressed as a monetary amount. [Cases: Insurance 2171. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1108–1109, 1204.]

insurance. 1. A contract by which one party (the insurer) undertakes to indemnify another party (the insured) against risk of loss, damage, or liability arising from the occurrence of some specified contingency, and usu. to defend the insured or to pay for a defense regardless of whether the insured is ultimately found liable. • An insured party usu. pays a premium to the insurer in exchange for the insurer's assumption of the insured's risk. Although indemnification provisions are most common in insurance policies, parties to any type of contract may agree on indemnification arrangements. [Cases: Insurance 1001. C.J.S. Insurance § 2.] 2. The amount for which someone or something is covered by such an agreement. — insure,vb.

“Insurance, or as it is sometimes called, assurance, is a contract by which one party, for a consideration, which is usually paid in money either in one sum or at different times during the continuance of the risk, promises to make a certain payment of money upon the destruction or injury of something in which the other party has an interest. In fire insurance and in marine insurance the thing insured is property; in life or accident insurance it is the life or health of the person.” 1 George J. Couch, Couch on Insurance § 1.2, at 4–5 (2d ed. 1984).

accident and health insurance. See health insurance.

accident-based insurance. See occurrence-based liability insurance.

accident insurance. Insurance that indemnifies against bodily injury caused by an accident. • Covered losses may include expenses, time, suffering, or death. Cf. casualty insurance. [Cases: Insurance 1012. C.J.S. Insurance § 4.]

accounts-receivable insurance. 1. Insurance against losses resulting from the insured's inability to collect outstanding accounts receivable because of damage to or destruction of records. 2. See credit insurance.

additional insurance. Insurance added to an existing policy.

all-risk insurance. Insurance that covers every kind of insurable loss except what is specifically excluded.

annuity insurance. An agreement to pay the insured (or annuitant) for a stated period or for life. [Cases: Annuities 1. C.J.S. Annuities §§ 2–4, 6–9, 21.]

assessable insurance. 1. Insurance in which the insured is liable for additional premiums if a loss is unusually large. 2. See assessable policy (1) under INSURANCE POLICY.

assessment insurance. A type of mutual insurance in which the policyholders are assessed as losses are incurred; a policy in which payments to an insured are not unalterably fixed, but are dependent on the collection of assessments necessary to pay the amount insured.

automobile insurance. An agreement to indemnify against one or more kinds of loss associated with the use of an automobile, including damage to a vehicle and liability for personal injury. [Cases: Insurance 1015. C.J.S. Insurance § 16.]

aviation insurance. Insurance that protects the insured against a loss connected with the use of an aircraft. • This type of insurance can be written to cover a variety of risks, including bodily injury, property damage, and hangarkeepers' liability. [Cases: Insurance 2329.]

broad-form insurance. Comprehensive insurance. • This type of insurance usu. takes the form of an endorsement to a liability or property policy, broadening the coverage that is typically available.

bumbershoot insurance. 1. Marine insurance that provides broad coverage for ocean marine risks. 2. See umbrella insurance. • This term derives from the British slang term for umbrella. The term applies esp. to a policy insured through the London insurance market. See umbrella policy under INSURANCE POLICY.

burial insurance. Insurance that pays for the holder's burial and funeral expenses.

business-interruption insurance. An agreement to protect against one or more kinds of loss from the interruption of an ongoing business, such as a loss of profits while the business is shut down to repair fire damage. [Cases: Insurance 2163, 2179. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1074, 1114.]

business-partner insurance. See partnership insurance.

captive insurance. 1. Insurance that provides coverage for the group or business that established it. [Cases: Insurance 1192.] 2. Insurance that a subsidiary provides to its parent company, usu. so that the parent company can deduct the premiums set aside as loss reserves.

cargo insurance. An agreement to pay for damage to freight damaged in transit. [Cases: Insurance 2137(3), 2217. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 403–404, 419.]

casualty insurance. An agreement to indemnify against loss resulting from a broad group of causes such as legal liability, theft, accident, property damage, and workers' compensation. • The meaning of casualty insurance has become blurred because of the rapid increase in different types of insurance coverage. Cf. accident insurance. [Cases: Insurance 1008; Workers' Compensation 1061. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 4–5, 7, 15, 17–18; Workmen's Compensation § 663.]

coinsurance. 1. Insurance provided jointly by two or more insurers. 2. Insurance under which the insurer and insured jointly bear responsibility. • An example is commercial insurance under which only a portion of a property's value is covered, and the property owner assumes liability for any loss in excess of the policy limits. [Cases: Insurance 2170. C.J.S. Insurance § 1110.]

collision insurance. Automobile insurance that covers damage to the insured's vehicle resulting from a rollover or collision with any object, but does not cover a personal injury or damage to other property. [Cases: Insurance 2704. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1020–1025.]

commercial insurance. 1. An indemnity agreement in the form of a deed or bond to protect against a loss caused by a party's breach of contract. 2. A form of coverage that allows an insurer to adjust the premium rates at will, and does not require the insured to accept the premium or renew the coverage from period to period.

“Commercial insurance is a popular and very elastic term, having reference to indemnity agreements issued in the form of an insurance bond or policy, whereby parties to commercial contracts are, to a designated extent, guaranteed against loss by reason of a breach of contractual obligations on the part of the other contracting party. To this class belong policies of ‘contract,’ ‘credit,’ and ‘title’ insurances.” Thomas Gold Frost, A Treatise on Guaranty Insurance § 3, at 14 (2d ed. 1909).

comprehensive general-liability insurance. Insurance that broadly covers an insured's liability exposure, including product liability, contractual liability, and premises liability. — Abbr. CGL insurance.

comprehensive insurance. Insurance that combines coverage against many kinds of losses that may also be insured separately. • This is commonly used, for example, in an automobile-insurance policy.

compulsory insurance. Statutorily required insurance; esp., motor-vehicle liability insurance that a state requires as a condition to registration of the vehicle. [Cases: Automobiles 43. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 223–224.]

convertible collision insurance. Collision insurance that carries a low premium until a claim is made against the policy.

convertible insurance. Insurance that can be changed to another form without further evidence of insurability, usu. referring to a term-life-insurance policy that can be changed to permanent insurance without a medical examination. [Cases: Insurance 1908–1911.]

credit insurance. An agreement to indemnify against loss that may result from the death, disability, or insolvency of someone to whom credit is extended. • A debtor typically purchases this type of insurance to ensure the repayment of the loan. — Also termed accounts-receivable insurance.

credit life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

crime insurance. Insurance covering losses occasioned by a crime committed by someone other than the insured.

crop insurance. Insurance that protects against loss to growing crops from natural perils such as hail and fire. [Cases: Insurance 2203–2208. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 60, 413, 1076.]

decreasing term insurance. Insurance that declines in value during the term; esp., life insurance that lessens in value to zero by the end of the term.

deposit insurance. A federally sponsored indemnification program to protect depositors against the loss of their money, up to a specified maximum, if the bank or savings-and-loan association fails or defaults. [Cases: Banks and Banking 506. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 688, 706.]

directors and officers' liability insurance. An agreement to indemnify corporate directors and officers against judgments, settlements, and fines arising from negligence suits, shareholder actions, and other business-related suits. — Often shortened to D & O liability insurance; D & O insurance. [Cases: Insurance 2377.]

disability insurance. Coverage purchased to protect a person from a loss of income during a period of incapacity for work. See general-disability insurance; occupational-disability insurance. [Cases: Insurance 1012, 2534–2579. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 4, 1088–1095, 1097, 1102, 1126, 1187–1192.]

double insurance. Insurance coverage by more than one insurer for the same interest and for the same insured. • Except with life insurance, the insured is entitled to only a single indemnity from a loss, and to recover this, the insured may either (1) sue each insurer for its share of the loss, or (2) sue one or more of the insurers for the entire amount, leaving any paying insurers to recover from the others their respective shares of the loss.

dread-disease insurance. Health insurance that covers medical expenses arising from the treatment of any of several specified diseases.

e-commerce insurance. Insurance that covers a business's computer-related damages and losses caused by computer hackers and Internet viruses. • Covered damages usu. include physical destruction of or harm to computer circuitry, loss of access, loss of use, loss of functionality, and business interruption.

employers'-liability insurance. 1. An agreement to indemnify an employer against an employee's claim not covered under the workers'-compensation system. 2. An agreement to indemnify against liability imposed on an employer for an employee's negligence that injures a third party. [Cases: Insurance 2317.]

employment-practices liability insurance. Insurance that provides coverage for claims arising from an insured's injury-causing employment practice, such as discrimination, defamation, or sexual harassment. — Abbr. EPL insurance.

endowment insurance. A type of life insurance that is payable either to the insured at the end of the policy period or to the insured's beneficiary if the insured dies before the period ends. See endowment life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

errors-and-omissions insurance. An agreement to indemnify for loss sustained because of a mistake or oversight by the insured — though not for loss due to the insured's intentional wrongdoing. • For example, lawyers often carry this insurance as part of their malpractice coverage to protect them in suits for damages resulting from inadvertent mistakes (such as missing a procedural deadline). While this insurance does not cover the insured's intentional wrongdoing, it may cover an employee's intentional, but unauthorized, wrongdoing. — Often shortened to E & O insurance. [Cases: Insurance 2383.]

excess insurance. An agreement to indemnify against any loss that exceeds the amount of coverage under another policy. — Also termed excess policy. Cf. primary insurance. See EXCESS CLAUSE. [Cases: Insurance 2110, 2394.]

excess-lines insurance. See surplus-lines insurance.

extended insurance. Insurance that continues in force beyond the date that the last premium was paid by drawing on its cash value.

extended-term insurance. Insurance that remains in effect after a default in paying premiums, as long as the policy has cash value to pay premiums. • Many life-insurance policies provide this feature to protect against forfeiture of the policy if the insured falls behind in premium payments.

family-income insurance. An agreement to pay benefits for a stated period following the death of the insured. • At the end of the payment period, the face value is paid to the designated beneficiary.

fidelity insurance. An agreement to indemnify an employer against a loss arising from the lack of integrity or honesty of an employee or of a person holding a position of trust, such as a loss from embezzlement. — Also termed fidelity guaranty insurance; fidelity and guaranty insurance; surety and fidelity insurance. [Cases: Insurance 1014. C.J.S. Insurance § 8.]

fire insurance. An agreement to indemnify against property damage caused by fire, wind, rain, or other similar disaster. [Cases: Insurance 1009. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 5, 7.]

first-party insurance. A policy that applies to an insured or the insured's own property, such as life insurance, health insurance, disability insurance, and fire insurance. — Also termed indemnity insurance; self-insurance.

fleet insurance. Insurance that covers a number of vehicles owned by the same entity.

floater insurance. An agreement to indemnify against a loss sustained to movable property, wherever its location within the territorial limit set by the policy.

flood insurance. Insurance that indemnifies against a loss caused by a flood. • This type of insurance is often sold privately but subsidized by the federal government. [Cases: Insurance 2209–2213. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 60, 1077.]

fraternal insurance. Life or health insurance issued by a fraternal benefit society to its members.

general-disability insurance. Disability insurance that provides benefits to a person who cannot perform any job that the person is qualified for. — Also termed total-disability insurance. Cf. occupational-disability insurance. [Cases: Insurance 2561. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1089, 1187, 1189.]

government insurance. Life insurance underwritten by the federal government to military personnel, veterans, and government employees.

group insurance. A form of insurance offered to a member of a group, such as the employees of a business, as long as that person remains a member of the group. • Group insurance is typically health or life (usu. term life) insurance issued under a master policy between the insurer and the employer, who usu. pays all or part of the premium for the insured person. Other groups, such as unions and associations, often offer group insurance to their members.

“ ‘Group Insurance’ refers to a method of marketing standard forms of insurance, such as life insurance, whereby a master policy is issued to the party negotiating the contract with the insurer (frequently an employer), and certificates of participation are issued to the individual insured members of the group (frequently employees).” John F. Dobbyn, Insurance Law in a Nutshell 13 (2d ed. 1989).

guaranty insurance (gar-<<schwa>>n-tee). An agreement to cover a loss resulting from another's default, insolvency, or specified misconduct. — Also termed surety insurance. [Cases: Insurance 1014. C.J.S. Insurance § 8.]

“The term ‘guaranty insurance’ is generic in its scope and signification, and embraces within it those subsidiary species of insurance contracts known as ‘fidelity,’ ‘commercial,’ and ‘judicial’ insurances In legal acceptance guaranty insurance is an agreement whereby one party (called the ‘insurer’) for a valuable consideration (termed the ‘premium’) agrees to indemnify another (called the ‘insured’) in a stipulated amount against loss or damage arising through dishonesty, fraud, unfaithful performance of duty or breach of contract on the part of a third person ... sustaining a contractual relationship to the party thus indemnified.” Thomas Gold Frost, A Treatise on Guaranty Insurance § 1, at 11 (2d ed. 1909).

health insurance. Insurance covering medical expenses resulting from sickness or injury. — Also termed accident and health insurance; sickness and accident insurance. [Cases: Insurance 1012. C.J.S. Insurance § 4.]

homeowner's insurance. Insurance that covers both damage to the insured's residence and liability claims made against the insured (esp. those arising from the insured's negligence).

indemnity insurance. See first-party insurance.

inland marine insurance. An agreement to indemnify against losses arising from the transport of goods on domestic waters (i.e., rivers, canals, and lakes). Cf. ocean marine insurance.

insurance of the person. Insurance intended to protect the person, such as life, accident, and disability insurance.

interinsurance. See reciprocal insurance.

joint life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

judicial insurance. Insurance intended to protect litigants and others involved in the court system.

“By judicial insurance reference is had to insurance bonds or policies issued, in connection with the regular course of judicial or administrative procedure, for the purpose of securing the faithful performance of duty on the part of court appointees, to guarantee due compliance with the terms of undertakings entered into by parties litigant before the courts, and to secure proper administration of statute law.” Thomas Gold Frost, A Treatise on Guaranty Insurance § 3, at 14 (2d ed. 1909).

key-employee insurance. See key-employee life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

last-survivor insurance. See last-survivor life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

lease insurance. An agreement to indemnify a leaseholder for the loss of a favorable lease terminated by damage to the property from a peril covered by the policy. • The amount payable is the difference between the rent and the actual rental value of the property, multiplied by the remaining term of the lease.

level-premium insurance. Insurance whose premiums remain constant throughout the life of the agreement. • Most whole life policies are set up this way.

liability insurance. An agreement to cover a loss resulting from the insured's liability to a third party, such as a loss incurred by a driver who injures a pedestrian. • The insured's claim under the policy arises once the insured's liability to a third party has been asserted. — Also termed third-party insurance; public-liability insurance. [Cases: Insurance 1010. C.J.S. Insurance § 9.]

life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

limited-policy insurance. Insurance that covers only specified perils; esp., health insurance that covers a specific type of illness (such as dread-disease insurance) or a risk relating to a stated activity (such as travel-accident insurance).

Lloyd's insurance. Insurance provided by insurers as individuals, rather than as a corporation.

- The insurers' liability is several but not joint. Most states either prohibit or strictly regulate this type of insurance. See LLOYD'S OF LONDON. [Cases: Insurance 1220. C.J.S. Insurance § 1709.]

loss insurance. Insurance purchased by a person who may suffer a loss at the hands of another.

- This is the converse of liability insurance, which is purchased by potential defendants.

malpractice insurance (mal-prak-tis). An agreement to indemnify a professional person, such as a doctor or lawyer, against negligence claims. See errors-and-omissions insurance. [Cases: Insurance 2389.]

“Most contemporary lawyers regard malpractice insurance as an expensive, but essential, part of law practice. Its cost, along with other costs of the lawyer's trade, is ultimately borne by the consumer, the client who pays the lawyer's fees.... Neither the ABA Code nor the ABA Model Rules impose an ethical obligation to carry adequate malpractice insurance. But contemporary lawyers have found it prudent to do so, both to protect their personal assets and to promote their public image as reliable professionals who are financially responsible.” Mortimer D. Schwartz & Richard C. Wydick, Problems in Legal Ethics 127–28 (2d ed. 1988).

manual-rating insurance. A type of insurance whereby the premium is set using a book that classifies certain risks on a general basis, rather than evaluating each individual case.

marine insurance. An agreement to indemnify against injury to a ship, cargo, or profits involved in a certain voyage or for a specific vessel during a fixed period, or to protect other marine interests. [Cases: Insurance 2214–2256. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 394, 400–409, 434, 996–1014, 1195–1229.]

medigap insurance. See MEDIGAP INSURANCE.

mortgage insurance. 1. An agreement to pay off a mortgage if the insured dies or becomes disabled. [Cases: Mortgages 201. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 311–314.] 2. An agreement to provide money to the lender if the mortgagor defaults on the mortgage payments. — Also termed private mortgage insurance (abbr. PMI).

mutual insurance. A system of insurance (esp. life insurance) whereby the policyholders become members of the insurance company, each paying premiums into a common fund from which each can draw in the event of a loss.

national-service life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

no-fault auto insurance. An agreement to indemnify for a loss due to personal injury or property damage arising from the use of an automobile, regardless of who caused the accident. [Cases: Insurance 2817–2856. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 928–929, 1587–1589, 1591–1595, 1601–1602, 1609, 1612–1623, 1645–1646.]

nonassessable insurance. Insurance in which the premium is set and the insurer is barred from demanding additional payments from the insured.

occupational-disability insurance. Disability insurance that provides benefits to a person who cannot perform his or her regular job. [Cases: Insurance 2561(2). C.J.S. Insurance § 1188.]

occurrence-based liability insurance. Insurance that covers bodily injuries or property damage suffered during the policy period. • Each instance of injury or damage is an “occurrence” that may trigger an insured's entitlement to benefits. The terms of occurrence-based liability insurance policies are usu. broad, limited only by specific exclusions. — Also termed accident-based insurance.

ocean marine insurance. Insurance that covers risks arising from the transport of goods by sea. Cf. inland marine insurance. [Cases: Insurance 2214–2256. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 394, 400–409, 434, 996–1014, 1195–1229.]

old-age and survivors' insurance. See OLD-AGE AND SURVIVORS' INSURANCE.

ordinary insurance. See ordinary life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

ordinary life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

overinsurance. See OVERINSURANCE.

paid-up insurance. Insurance that remains in effect even though no more premiums are due.

participating insurance. A type of insurance that allows a policyholder to receive dividends. • This insurance is invariably issued by a mutual company.

partnership insurance. 1. Life insurance on the life of a partner, purchased to ensure the remaining partners' ability to buy out a deceased partner's interest. — Also termed partnership life insurance. 2. Health insurance for a partner, payable to the partnership to allow it to continue to operate while the partner is unable to work due to illness or injury. — Also termed (in both senses) business-partner insurance.

patent insurance (pat-*<<schwa>>*nt). 1. Insurance against loss from an infringement of the insured's patent. 2. Insurance against a claim that the insured has infringed another's patent. 3. Insurance that funds a claim against a third party for infringing the insured's patent.

port-risk insurance. Insurance on a vessel lying in port. Cf. time insurance; voyage insurance.

primary insurance. Insurance that attaches immediately on the happening of a loss; insurance that is not contingent on the exhaustion of an underlying policy. Cf. excess insurance. [Cases: Insurance 2110.]

private mortgage insurance. See mortgage insurance.

products-liability insurance. An agreement to indemnify a manufacturer, supplier, or retailer for a loss arising from the insured's liability to a user who is harmed by any product manufactured or sold by the insured. [Cases: Insurance 2359.]

profit insurance. Insurance that reimburses the insured for profits lost because of a specified peril.

property insurance. An agreement to indemnify against property damage or destruction. — Also termed property-damage insurance. [Cases: Insurance 1009. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 5, 7.]

public-liability insurance. See liability insurance.

reciprocal insurance. A system whereby several individuals or businesses act through an agent to underwrite one another's risks, making each insured an insurer of the other members of the group. — Also termed interinsurance. [Cases: Insurance 1204. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1712, 1720.]

reinsurance. See REINSURANCE.

renewable term insurance. Insurance that the insured may continue at the end of a term, but generally at a higher premium. • The insured usu. has the right to renew for additional terms without a medical examination.

replacement insurance. Insurance under which the value of the loss is measured by the current cost of replacing the insured property. See replacement cost under COST(1). [Cases: Insurance 2184. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1107, 1238, 1240, 1242–1243.]

retirement-income insurance. An agreement whereby the insurance company agrees to pay an annuity beginning at a certain age if the insured survives beyond that age, or the value of the policy if the insured dies before reaching that age.

self-insurance. A plan under which a business maintains its own special fund to cover any loss. • Unlike other forms of insurance, there is no contract with an insurance company. — Also termed first-party insurance. [Cases: Insurance 1004. C.J.S. Insurance § 2.]

sickness and accident insurance. See health insurance.

single-premium insurance. See single-premium life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

social insurance. Insurance provided by a government to persons facing particular perils (such as unemployment or disability) or to persons who have a certain status (such as the elderly or the blind). • Social insurance — such as that created by the Social Security Act of 1935 — is usu. part of a government's broader social policy. See WELFARE STATE. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 121–149.5, 251–751. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 4–5, 18–32, 34–84, 146–191, 209–297.]

split-dollar insurance. See split-dollar life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

step-rate-premium insurance. Insurance whose premiums increase at times specified in the policy.

stop-loss insurance. Insurance that protects a self-insured employer from catastrophic losses or unusually large health costs of covered employees. • Stop-loss insurance essentially provides excess coverage for a self-insured employer. The employer and the insurance carrier agree to the amount the employer will cover, and the stop-loss insurance will cover claims exceeding that amount. [Cases: Insurance 2523, 2525(1). C.J.S. Insurance § 930.]

straight life insurance. See whole life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

surety and fidelity insurance. See fidelity insurance.

surety insurance. See guaranty insurance.

surplus-lines insurance. Insurance with an insurer that is not licensed to transact business within the state where the risk is located. — Also termed excess-lines insurance. [Cases: Insurance 1331.]

term life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

terrorism insurance. Insurance that indemnifies against losses sustained because of an act of terrorism. • Terrorism insurance has been available since the 1970s; it was (and is) required for U.S. airports of almost all sizes. In the mid-1980s, terrorism insurance was offered to individuals, originally as a form of travel insurance that provided compensation for terrorism-related cancellations or changes in itinerary when traveling to or in certain countries. See TERRORISM.

third-party insurance. See liability insurance.

time insurance. Marine insurance. Insurance covering the insured for a specified period. Cf. voyage insurance.

title insurance. An agreement to indemnify against loss arising from a defect in title to real property, usu. issued to the buyer of the property by the title company that conducted the title search. [Cases: Insurance 1013. C.J.S. Insurance § 19.]

“Title insurance is normally written by specialized companies that maintain tract indexes: companies involved in writing life or casualty usually are not involved in title insurance. Title insurance is an unusual type of insurance in a few respects. For one thing, it is not a recurring policy: There is only a single premium, and a title insurance policy written on behalf of an owner theoretically remains outstanding forever to protect him or her from claims asserted by others. It is more similar to an indemnification agreement than to an insurance policy. For another, title insurance companies generally do not take risks that they know about. If the title search shows that a risk exists, the company will exclude that risk from the coverage of the policy.” Robert W. Hamilton, Fundamentals of Modern Business 84 (1989).

total-disability insurance. See general-disability insurance.

travel-accident insurance. Health insurance limited to injuries sustained while traveling.

umbrella insurance. Insurance that is supplemental, providing coverage that exceeds the basic or usual limits of liability. — Also termed bumbershoot insurance. [Cases: Insurance 2110, 2394.]

underinsurance. See UNDERINSURANCE.

unemployment insurance. A type of social insurance that pays money to workers who are unemployed for reasons unrelated to job performance. • Individual states administer unemployment insurance, which is funded by payroll taxes. — Also termed unemployment compensation. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 251–751. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 146–191, 209–297.]

universal life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

variable life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

voyage insurance. Marine insurance. Insurance covering the insured between destinations. Cf. time insurance.

war-risk insurance. 1. Insurance covering damage caused by war. • Ocean marine policies are often written to cover this type of risk. [Cases: Insurance 2159, 2223. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 916, 1084.] 2. Life and accident insurance provided by the federal government to members of the armed forces. • This type of insurance is offered because the hazardous nature of military service often prevents military personnel from obtaining private insurance. [Cases: Armed Services 55. C.J.S. Armed Services § 192.] whole life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

INSURANCE ADJUSTER

insurance adjuster. A person who determines the value of a loss to the insured and settles the claim against the insurer. See ADJUSTER. [Cases: Insurance 3222. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1343–1344.]

INSURANCE AGENT

insurance agent. A person authorized by an insurance company to sell its insurance policies. — Also termed producer; (in property insurance) recording agent; record agent. [Cases: Insurance 1604. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 178, 180.]

general agent. An agent with the general power of making insurance contracts on behalf of an insurer. [Cases: Insurance 1634(2). C.J.S. Insurance §§ 193–194.]

special agent. An agent whose powers are usu. confined to soliciting applications for insurance, taking initial premiums, and delivering policies when issued. — Also termed local agent; solicitor. [Cases: Insurance 1634(2). C.J.S. Insurance §§ 193–194.]

INSURANCE BROKER

insurance broker. See BROKER.

INSURANCE CERTIFICATE

insurance certificate. 1. A document issued by an insurer as evidence of insurance or membership in an insurance or pension plan. 2. A document issued by an insurer to a shipper as evidence that a shipment of goods is covered by a marine insurance policy.

INSURANCE COMMISSIONER insurance commissioner.A public official who supervises the insurance business conducted in a state. [Cases: Insurance 1029.]

INSURANCE COMPANY

insurance company.A corporation or association that issues insurance policies. [Cases: Insurance 1003. C.J.S. Insurance § 32.]

captive insurance company.A company that insures the liabilities of its owner. • The insured is usu. the sole shareholder and the only customer of the company. — Also termed captive insurer. [Cases: Insurance 1192.]

mixed insurance company.An insurance company having characteristics of both stock and mutual companies in that it distributes part of the profits to stockholders and also makes distributions to the insureds.

mutual insurance company.An insurance company whose policyholders are both insurers and insureds because they pay premiums into a common fund, from which claims are paid; an insurer whose policyholders are its owners, as opposed to a stock insurance company owned by outside shareholders. Cf. stock insurance company. [Cases: Insurance 1121. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 99, 109.]

“Mutual insurance companies are organized by a number of persons for the purpose of transacting some particular insurance business A company is a mutual one when the persons constituting the company contribute either cash or assessable premium notes, or both, to a common fund, out of which each is entitled to indemnity in case of loss. The distinguishing feature is mutuality, evidenced by the co-operation of members, uniting for that purpose, each taking a proportionate part in the management of its affairs and being at once insurer and insured, contributing to a fund from which all losses are paid Democratic ownership and control is a fundamental characteristic of a mutual insurance company.” 18 John Alan Appleman, Insurance Law and Practice § 10041, at 79–80 (1945).

stock insurance company.An insurance company operated as a private corporation and owned by stockholders who share in the company's profits and losses.

stock life-insurance company.A stock insurance company that does life-insurance business.

INSURANCE FRAUD

insurance fraud.See FRAUD.

INSURANCE OF THE PERSON

insurance of the person.See INSURANCE.

INSURANCE POLICY

insurance policy. 1. A contract of insurance. 2. A document detailing such a contract. — Often shortened to policy. — Also termed policy of insurance; contract of insurance.

accident policy.A type of business or personal policy that insures against loss resulting directly from accidental bodily injuries sustained during the policy term. [Cases: Insurance 1012, 1716. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 4, 254.]

assessable policy. 1. A policy under which a policyholder may be held liable for losses of the insurance company beyond its reserves. — Also termed assessable insurance. 2. See assessable insurance (1) under INSURANCE.

bailee policy.A floating policy that covers goods in a bailee's possession but does not particularly describe the covered goods.

basic-form policy.A policy that offers limited coverage against loss. • A basic-form policy generally covers damages from fire, windstorm, explosion, riot, aircraft, vehicles, theft, or vandalism. — Also termed limited policy; specific policy.

blanket policy.An agreement to indemnify all property, regardless of location. — Also termed compound policy.

block policy.An all-risk policy that covers groups of property (such as property held in bailment or a business's merchandise) against most perils. See all-risk insurance under INSURANCE.

broad-form policy.A policy that offers broad protection with few limitations. • This policy offers greater coverage than a basic-form policy, but less than an open-perils policy.

claims-made policy.An agreement to indemnify against all claims made during a specified period, regardless of when the incidents that gave rise to the claims occurred. — Also termed discovery policy. [Cases: Insurance 2266. C.J.S. Insurance § 430.]

closed policy.An insurance policy whose terms cannot be changed. • A fraternal benefit society is not permitted to write closed policies. — Also termed closed insurance contract.

commercial general-liability policy.A comprehensive policy that covers most commercial risks, liabilities, and causes of loss. • This type of policy covers both business losses and situations in which a business is liable to a third party for personal injury or property damage. First introduced in 1986, this policy has largely replaced comprehensive general-liability policies. — Abbr. CGL policy. Cf. comprehensive general-liability policy.

completed-operations policy.A policy usu. purchased by a building contractor to cover accidents arising out of a job or an operation that the contractor has completed. [Cases: Insurance 2296. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 431, 950, 952–953, 971–972, 974–976, 985.]

compound policy.See blanket policy.

comprehensive general-liability policy.A broad-coverage commercial insurance policy covering a variety of general risks, esp. bodily injury and property damage to a third party for which the business entity is liable. • This policy was first offered in 1940. It has largely been replaced by the commercial-general liability policy. — Also termed CGL policy; general-liability policy. Cf. commercial general-liability policy.

concurrent policy. One of two or more insurance policies that cover the same risk. • Concurrent insurance policies are stated in almost identical terms so that liability can be apportioned between the insurers. [Cases: Insurance 2107.]

continuous policy. See perpetual policy.

corrected policy. A policy issued after a redetermination of risk to correct a misstatement in the original policy.

deferred-dividend insurance policy. Hist. A life insurance policy that accumulated a fixed percentage of the insurer's surplus profits, payable as a lump sum on a certain date or at the insured's death, whichever came first.

discovery policy. See claims-made policy.

drummer floater policy. Hist. A policy that covered the goods carried by a commercial salesperson while traveling.

endowment policy. A life-insurance policy payable at the end of a specified period, if the insured survives that period, or upon the insured's death if death occurs before the end of the period.

excess policy. See excess insurance under INSURANCE.

extended policy. A policy that remains in effect beyond the time when premiums are no longer paid.

flier policy. Hist. A policy issued at a very low rate near the end of the year for the purpose of swelling the insurance agent's annual-sales figures. — Also spelled flyer policy.

floating policy. An insurance policy covering property that frequently changes in quantity or location, such as jewelry. — Also termed running policy; blanket policy.

following-form policy. An insurance policy that adopts the terms and conditions of another insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance 3615(1).]

gambling policy. See wager policy.

graveyard insurance. See wager policy.

group policy. See master policy.

homeowner's policy. A multiperil policy providing coverage for a variety of risks, including loss by fire, water, burglary, and the homeowner's negligent conduct.

incontestable policy. A policy containing a provision that prohibits the insurer from contesting or canceling the policy on the basis of statements made in the application. [Cases: Insurance 3121. C.J.S. Insurance § 1636.]

interest policy. A policy whose terms indicate that the insured has an interest in the subject matter of the insurance. Cf. wager policy.

joint life policy.A life-insurance policy that matures and becomes due upon the death of any of those jointly insured.

lapsed policy. 1. An insurance policy on which there has been a default in premium payments. [Cases: Insurance 2039.] 2. An insurance policy that, because of statutory provisions, remains in force after a default in premium payments. • Statutes normally provide a 30- or 31-day grace period after nonpayment of premiums. [Cases: Insurance 2018.]

level-rate legal-reserve policy.A policy that seeks to build a reserve equal to the policy's face value by the end of the insured's life.

life policy.A life-insurance policy that requires lifetime annual fixed premiums and that becomes payable only on the death of the insured. — Also termed regular life policy. [Cases: Insurance 1011, 1716. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 10–14, 254.]

limited policy. 1. An insurance policy that specifically excludes certain classes or types of loss. 2. See basic-form policy.

manuscript policy.An insurance policy containing nonstandard provisions that have been negotiated between the insurer and the insured.

master policy.An insurance policy that covers multiple insureds under a group-insurance plan. — Also termed group policy. See group insurance under INSURANCE.

mixed policy.Marine insurance. A policy combining aspects of both a voyage policy and a time policy.

multiperil policy.An insurance policy that covers several types of losses, such as a homeowner's policy that covers losses from fire, theft, and personal injury. — Also termed named-perils policy.

nonmedical policy.An insurance policy issued without a prior medical examination of the applicant.

occurrence policy.An agreement to indemnify for any loss from an event that occurs within the policy period, regardless of when the claim is made. [Cases: Insurance 2264. C.J.S. Insurance § 429.]

open-perils policy.A property insurance policy covering all risks against loss except those specifically excluded from coverage.

open policy.See unvalued policy.

package policy.An insurance policy providing protection against multiple perils and losses of both the insured and third parties. • A homeowner's policy is usu. a package policy.

paid-up policy.A policy that remains in effect after premiums are no longer due.

participating policy.A policy that allows the holder a right to dividends or rebates from future premiums. • This type of policy is issued by a mutual company.

permanent policy. A renewable policy that is effective for a specified period and is terminable by either the insurer or the insured after giving express notice.

perpetual policy. An insurance policy that remains effective without renewal until one of the parties terminates it according to its terms. — Also termed continuous policy.

regular life policy. See life policy.

running policy. See floating policy.

specific policy. See basic-form policy.

standard policy. 1. An insurance policy providing insurance that is recommended or required by state law, usu. regulated by a state agency. [Cases: Insurance 1775. C.J.S. Insurance § 297.] 2. An insurance policy that contains standard terms used for similar insurance policies nationwide, usu. drafted by an insurance industrial association such as Insurance Services Office.

survivorship policy. A joint life policy that is payable after all the insureds have died.

term policy. A life-insurance policy that gives protection for a specified period, but that does not have a cash value or reserve value.

time policy. An insurance policy that is effective only during a specified period.

tontine policy (tahn-teen or tahn-teen). An insurance policy in which a group of participants share advantages so that upon the default or death of any participant, his or her advantages are distributed among the remaining participants until only one remains, whereupon the whole goes to that sole participant. • Under the tontine plan of insurance, no accumulation or earnings are credited to the policy unless it remains in force for the tontine period of a specified number of years. Thus, those who survive the period and keep their policies in force share in the accumulated funds, and those who die or permit their policies to lapse during the period do not. This type of policy takes its name from Lorenzo Tonti, an Italian who invented it in the 17th century. Today, newer and more ingenious forms of insurance have largely made tontine policies defunct. See TONTINE. [Cases: Insurance 2441.]

umbrella policy. An insurance policy covering losses that exceed the basic or usual limits of liability provided by other policies. See umbrella insurance under INSURANCE. [Cases: Insurance 2110, 2394.]

unvalued policy. A policy that does not state a value of the insured property but that, upon loss, requires proof of the property's worth. — Also termed open policy.

valued policy. An insurance policy in which the sum to be paid when a loss occurs is fixed by the terms of the contract. • The value agreed on is conclusive for a total loss and provides a basis for determining recovery in cases of partial loss. This value is in the nature of liquidated damages. [Cases: Insurance 2171. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1108–1109, 1204.]

voyage policy. A marine-insurance policy that insures a vessel or its cargo during a specified voyage.

wager policy. An insurance policy issued to a person who is shown to have no insurable interest in the person or property covered by the policy. • Wager policies are illegal in most states. — Also termed gambling policy; graveyard insurance. See insurable interest under INTEREST(2). Cf. interest policy; viatical settlement under SETTLEMENT(3). [Cases: Insurance 1784.]

INSURANCE POOL

insurance pool. A group of several insurers that, to spread the risk, combine and share premiums and losses.

INSURANCE PREMIUM

insurance premium. See PREMIUM(1).

INSURANCE RATING

insurance rating. The process by which an insurer arrives at a policy premium for a particular risk. — Often shortened to rating. [Cases: Insurance 1541. C.J.S. Insurance § 68.]

INSURANCE SERVICES OFFICE

Insurance Services Office. A nonprofit organization that provides analytical and decision-support services and tools to the insurance industry, including statistical, actuarial, underwriting, and claims data, and drafts of model insurance policy forms and coverage provisions. • The organization is composed of member insurers. It provides data and information to its members and also to nonmember subscribers, such as risk managers, insurance regulators, and self-insureds. — Abbr. ISO.

INSURANCE TRUST

insurance trust. See TRUST.

INSURANCE UNDERWRITER

insurance underwriter. See UNDERWRITER.

INSURANT

insurant, n. A person who obtains insurance or to whom an insurance policy is issued. • This term is much less common than the attributive noun insured.

INSURE

insure, vb. 1. To secure, by payment of a premium, the payment of a sum of money in the event of a loss. [Cases: Insurance 1001. C.J.S. Insurance § 2.] 2. To issue or procure an insurance policy on or for (someone or something).

INSURED

insured, n. A person who is covered or protected by an insurance policy. — Also termed assured. [Cases: Insurance 2100. C.J.S. Insurance § 389.]

additional insured. A person who is covered by an insurance policy but who is not the primary insured. • An additional insured may, or may not, be specifically named in the policy. If the person is named, then the term is sometimes named additional insured. — Also termed secondary insured. [Cases: Insurance 2100. C.J.S. Insurance § 389.]

class-one insured. In a motor-vehicle policy, the named insured and any relative residing with the named insured. [Cases: Insurance 2660–2661. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 928, 1044–1047, 1054, 1596, 1599, 1672–1673.]

class-two insured. In a motor-vehicle policy, a person lawfully occupying a vehicle at the time of an accident. [Cases: Insurance 2660. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 928, 1044–1045, 1047, 1054, 1596, 1599, 1672.]

first-named insured. See primary insured.

named insured. A person designated in an insurance policy as the one covered by the policy. [Cases: Insurance 2100. C.J.S. Insurance § 389.]

primary insured. The individual or entity whose name appears first in the declarations of an insurance policy. — Also termed first-named insured.

INSURER

insurer. One who agrees, by contract, to assume the risk of another's loss and to compensate for that loss. — Also termed underwriter; insurance underwriter; carrier; assurer (for life insurance). [Cases: Insurance 1002. C.J.S. Insurance § 32.]

excess insurer. An insurer who is liable for settling any part of a claim not covered by an insured's primary insurer. — Also termed secondary insurer. See primary insurer.

primary insurer. An insurer who is contractually committed to settling a claim up to the applicable policy limit before any other insurer becomes liable for any part of the same claim. See excess insurer.

quasi-insurer. A service provider who is held to strict liability in the provision of services, such as an innkeeper or a common carrier.

secondary insurer. See excess insurer.

INSURGENT

insurgent, n. A person who, for political purposes, engages in armed hostility against an established government. — insurgent, adj. — insurgency, n.

INSURING AGREEMENT

insuring agreement. See INSURING CLAUSE.

INSURING CLAUSE

insuring clause. A provision in an insurance policy or bond reciting the risk assumed by the insurer or establishing the scope of the coverage. — Also termed insuring agreement. [Cases: Insurance 2097. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 282–283, 395, 860.]

INSURRECTION

insurrection. A violent revolt against an oppressive authority, usu. a government.

“Insurrection is distinguished from rout, riot, and offense connected with mob violence by the fact that in insurrection there is an organized and armed uprising against authority or operations of government, while crimes growing out of mob violence, however serious they may be and however numerous the participants, are simply unlawful acts in disturbance of the peace which do not threaten the stability of the government or the existence of political society.” 77 C.J.S. Riot; Insurrection § 29, at 579 (1994).

INTACT FAMILY

intact family. See FAMILY.

IN TAIL

in tail. See TAIL.

intangible, adj. Not capable of being touched; impalpable; INCORPOREAL.

intangible, n. Something that lacks a physical form; an abstraction, such as responsibility; esp., an asset that is not corporeal, such as intellectual property.

general intangible. Any intangible personal property other than goods, accounts, chattel paper, documents, instruments, investment property, rights to proceeds of written letters of credit, and money. • Some examples are goodwill, things in action, and literary rights. UCC § 9-102(a)(42). See intangible property under PROPERTY. [Cases: Secured Transactions 11.1, 14.1, 115.1. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 3, 11, 13, 84.]

payment intangible. A general intangible under which the account debtor's principal obligation is a monetary obligation. UCC § 9-102(a)(61).

INTANGIBLE ASSET

intangible asset.1.ASSET. 2.INTANGIBLE TRADE VALUE.

INTANGIBLE DRILLING COST

intangible drilling cost.Oil & gas. An expense that is incident to and necessary for drilling and completing an oil or gas well and that has no salvage value. • Intangible drilling costs may be deducted in the year they are incurred rather than capitalized and depreciated. 26 USCA § 612.

INTANGIBLE MOVABLE

intangible movable.See MOVABLE.

INTANGIBLE PROPERTY

intangible property.See PROPERTY.

INTANGIBLE TAX

intangible tax.See TAX.

INTANGIBLE THING

intangible thing.See incorporeal thing under THING.

INTANGIBLE TRADE PROPERTY

intangible trade property.See INTANGIBLE TRADE VALUE.

INTANGIBLE TRADE VALUE

intangible trade value.Intellectual property. The measure of an enterprise's proprietary information, ideas, goodwill, and other nonphysical commercial assets. • The law of misappropriation provides some protection against the taking of intangible trade values to compete unfairly with their original owner. — Also termed intangible asset; intangible trade property.

IN TANTUM

in tantum (in tan-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. To that extent; insofar. Cf. PRO TANTO .

INTEGER

integer (in-t<<schwa>>-j<<schwa>>r), adj.[Latin] Archaic. Whole; untouched. See RES NOVA.

INTEGRATED AGREEMENT integrated agreement.See INTEGRATED CONTRACT.

INTEGRATED BAR

integrated bar.See BAR.

INTEGRATED CONTRACT

integrated contract. One or more writings constituting a final expression of one or more terms of an agreement. — Also termed integrated agreement; integrated writing. See INTEGRATION(2). [Cases: Contracts 245; Evidence 397(2). C.J.S. Contracts § 416; Evidence §§ 1159–1160, 1278–1280.]

completely integrated contract. An integrated agreement adopted by the parties as a full and exclusive statement of the terms of the agreement. • The parties are therefore prohibited from varying or supplementing the contractual terms through parol (extrinsic) evidence. [Cases: Evidence 397(2). C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1159–1160, 1278–1280.]

partially integrated contract. An agreement in which some, but not all, of the terms are integrated; any agreement other than a completely integrated agreement. [Cases: Evidence 397(2). C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1159–1160, 1278–1280.]

INTEGRATED PROPERTY SETTLEMENT integrated property settlement. See PROPERTY SETTLEMENT(2).

INTEGRATED WRITING

integrated writing. See integrated contract under CONTRACT.

INTEGRATION

integration. 1. The process of making whole or combining into one. 2. Contracts. The full expression of the parties' agreement, so that all earlier agreements are superseded, the effect being that neither party may later contradict or add to the contractual terms. — Also termed merger. See PAROL-EVIDENCE RULE E. [Cases: Contracts 245; Evidence 397(2). C.J.S. Contracts § 416; Evidence §§ 1159–1160, 1278–1280.]

complete integration. The fact or state of fully expressing the intent of the parties. • Parol evidence is therefore inadmissible. [Cases: Evidence 397(2). C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1159–1160, 1278–1280.]

partial integration. The fact or state of not fully expressing the parties' intent. • Parol (extrinsic) evidence is admissible to clear up ambiguities with respect to the terms that are not integrated. [Cases: Evidence 397(2). C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1159–1160, 1278–1280.]

3. Wills & estates. The combining of more than one writing into a single document to form the testator's last will and testament. • The other writing must be present at the time of execution and intended to be included in the will. The issue of integration is more complicated when it concerns a holographic will, which may be composed of more than one document written at different times. 4. The incorporation of different races into existing institutions (such as public schools) for the purpose of reversing the historical effects of racial discrimination. Cf. DESEGREGATION. [Cases: Schools 13(4). C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 111–114, 120, 128–129.] 5. Antitrust. A firm's performance of a function that it could have obtained on the open market. • A firm can achieve integration by entering a new market on its own, by acquiring a firm that operates in a secondary market, or by entering into a contract with a firm that operates in a secondary market. — Also termed vertical integration. See vertical merger under MERGER.

backward integration.A firm's acquisition of ownership of facilities that produce raw materials or parts for the firm's products.

6.Securities. The requirement that all security offerings over a given period are to be considered a single offering for purposes of determining an exemption from registration. • The Securities and Exchange Commission and the courts apply five criteria to determine whether two or more transactions are part of the same offering of securities: (1) whether the offerings are part of a single plan of financing, (2) whether the offerings involve issuance of the same class of securities, (3) whether the offerings are made at or about the same time, (4) whether the same type of consideration is received, and (5) whether the offerings are made for the same general purpose. 17 CFR § 230.502. [Cases: Securities Regulation 18.14. C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 64.]

INTEGRATION CLAUSE

integration clause.A contractual provision stating that the contract represents the parties' complete and final agreement and supersedes all informal understandings and oral agreements relating to the subject matter of the contract. — Also termed merger clause; entire-agreement clause. See INTEGRATION(2); PAROL-EVIDENCE RULE. [Cases: Contracts 245; Evidence 397(2). C.J.S. Contracts § 416; Evidence §§ 1159–1160, 1278–1280.]

INTEGRATION RULE

integration rule.The rule that if the parties to a contract have embodied their agreement in a final document, any other action or statement is without effect and is immaterial in determining the terms of the contract. See PAROL EVIDENCE RULE . [Cases: Contracts 245; Evidence 397(2).C.J.S. Contracts § 416; Evidence §§ 1159–1160, 1278–1280.]

INTEGRITY RIGHT

integrity right.Copyright. The right of authors and artists to insist that their creative works not be changed without their authorization. • Integrity is one of the moral rights of artists recognized in civil-law countries, including much of Europe, but largely unavailable in the United States. Cf. MORAL RIGHT; ATTRIBUTION RIGHT.

INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY

intellectual property. 1. A category of intangible rights protecting commercially valuable products of the human intellect. • The category comprises primarily trademark, copyright, and patent rights, but also includes trade-secret rights, publicity rights, moral rights, and rights against unfair competition. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 1. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 2, 4–5.] 2. A commercially valuable product of the human intellect, in a concrete or abstract form, such as a copyrightable work, a protectable trademark, a patentable invention, or a trade secret. — Abbr. IP.

“While there is a close relationship between intangible property and the tangible objects in which they are embodied, intellectual property rights are distinct and separate from property rights in tangible goods. For example, when a person posts a letter to someone, the personal property in the ink and parchment is transferred to the recipient.... [T]he sender (as author) retains intellectual property rights in the letter.” Lionel Bently & Brad Sherman, Intellectual Property Law 1–2 (2001).

INTEMPERANCE

intemperance. A lack of moderation or temperance; esp., habitual or excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages. [Cases: Chemical Dependents 1.C.J.S. Chemical Dependents §§ 2–3.]

IN TEMPUS INDEBITUM

in tempus indebitum (in tem-p<<schwa>>s in-deb-i-t<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. At an undue time.

INTEND

intend,vb.1. To have in mind a fixed purpose to reach a desired objective; to have as one's purpose <Daniel intended to become a lawyer>.2. To contemplate that the usual consequences of one's act will probably or necessarily follow from the act, whether or not those consequences are desired for their own sake <although he activated the theater's fire alarm only on a dare, the jury found that Wilbur intended to cause a panic>.3. To signify or mean <the parties intended for the writing to supersede their earlier handshake deal>.

INTENDANT

intendant (in-ten-d<<schwa>>nt). A director of a government agency, esp. (as used in 17th- and 18th-century France) a royal official charged with the administration of justice or finance.

INTENDED BENEFICIARY intended beneficiary.See BENEFICIARY.

INTENDED CHILD

intended child.See CHILD.

INTENDED PARENT

intended parent.See intentional parent under PARENT.

INTENDED TO BE RECORDED intended to be recorded.(Of a deed or other instrument) not yet filed with a public registry, but forming a link in a chain of title. [Cases: Deeds 88; Records 19. C.J.S. Deeds § 157; Records § 30.]

INTENDED-USE DOCTRINE

intended-use doctrine.Products liability. The rule imposing a duty on a manufacturer to develop a product so that it is reasonably safe for its intended or foreseeable users. • In determining the scope of responsibility, the court considers the defendant's marketing scheme and the foreseeability of the harm. [Cases: Products Liability 15. C.J.S. Products Liability §§ 30–31.]

intendment (in-tend-m<<schwa>>nt).1. The sense in which the law understands something <the intendment of a contract is that the contract is legally enforceable>. — Also termed intendment of law. 2. A decision-maker's inference about the true meaning or intention of a legal instrument <there is no need for intendment, the court reasoned, when the text of the statute is clear>. — Formerly also spelled entendment.

common intendment.The natural or common meaning in legal interpretation.

3. A person's expectations when interacting with others within the legal sphere.“Our institutions and our formalized interactions with one another are accompanied by certain interlocking expectations that may be called intendments, even though there is seldom occasion to bring these underlying expectations across the threshold of consciousness. In a very real sense when I cast my vote in an election my conduct is directed and conditioned by an anticipation that my ballot will be counted in favor of the candidate I actually vote for. This is true even though the possibility that my ballot will be thrown in the wastebasket, or counted for the wrong man, may never enter my mind as an object of conscious attention. In this sense the institution of elections may be said to contain an intendment that the votes cast will be faithfully tallied, though I might hesitate to say, except in a mood of rhetoric, that the election authorities had entered a contract with me to count my vote as I had cast it.” Lon L. Fuller, The Morality of Law 217 (rev. ed. 1969).

INTENT

intent. 1. The state of mind accompanying an act, esp. a forbidden act. • While motive is the inducement to do some act, intent is the mental resolution or determination to do it. When the intent to do an act that violates the law exists, motive becomes immaterial. Cf. MOTIVE; SCIENTER.

“The phrase ‘with intent to,’ or its equivalents, may mean any one of at least four different things: — (1) That the intent referred to must be the sole or exclusive intent; (2) that it is sufficient if it is one of several concurrent intents; (3) that it must be the chief or dominant intent, any others being subordinate or incidental; (4) that it must be a determining intent, that is to say, an intent in the absence of which the act would not have been done, the remaining purposes being insufficient motives by themselves. It is a question of construction which of those meanings is the true one in the particular case.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 383–84 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

constructive intent.A legal principle that actual intent will be presumed when an act leading to the result could have been reasonably expected to cause that result.

“Constructive intent is a fiction which permits lip service to the notion that intention is essential to criminality, while recognizing that unintended consequences of an act may sometimes be sufficient for guilt of some offenses.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 835 (3d ed. 1982).

criminal intent. 1.MENS REA. 2. An intent to commit an actus reus without any justification, excuse, or other defense. — Also termed felonious intent. See specific intent. [Cases: Criminal Law 20. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 31–33, 35–39; Negligence § 913.]

“The phrase ‘criminal intent’ is one that has been bandied about with various meanings not carefully distinguished. At times it has been used in the sense of the ‘intent to do wrong’ (the outline of the mental pattern which is necessary for crime in general), — as, for example, in the phrase ‘the mental element commonly called criminal intent.’ At times it has been used in the sense of mens rea as the mental element requisite for guilt of the very offense charged, ‘a varying state of mind which is the contrary of an innocent state of mind, whatever may be pointed out by the nature of the crime as an innocent state of mind.’ Often it is used to include criminal negligence as well as an actual intent to do the harmful deed, although at other times such negligence is referred to as a substitute, so to speak, for criminal intent in connection with certain offenses. Occasionally it is found in the sense of an intent to violate the law, — implying a knowledge of the law violated. On the other hand, as such knowledge is a factor not ordinarily required for conviction it has been pointed out that to establish ignorance of the law does not disprove criminal intent. Thus it has been said (assuming the absence of any circumstance of exculpation) ‘whenever an act is criminal, the party doing the act is chargeable with criminal intent.’ ... This suggests a helpful guide for the use of the phrase ‘criminal intent.’ Some other term such as mens rea or guilty mind should be employed for more general purposes, and ‘criminal intent’ be restricted to those situations in which there is (1) an intent to do the actus reus, and (2) no circumstance of exculpation.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 832–34 (3d ed. 1982).

donative intent.The intent to surrender dominion and control over the gift that is being made.

felonious intent.See criminal intent.

general intent.The intent to perform an act even though the actor does not desire the consequences that result. • This is the state of mind required for the commission of certain common-law crimes not requiring a specific intent or not imposing strict liability. General intent usu. takes the form of recklessness (involving actual awareness of a risk and the culpable taking of that risk) or negligence (involving blameworthy inadvertence). — Also termed general criminal intent; general mens rea. [Cases: Criminal Law 20, 23. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 31–33, 35–39; Negligence §§ 913–914.]

immediate intent.The intent relating to a wrongful act; the part of the total intent coincident with the wrongful act itself.

implied intent.A person's state of mind that can be inferred from speech or conduct, or from language used in an instrument to which the person is a party.

intent to kill.An intent to cause the death of another; esp., a state of mind that, if found to exist during an assault, can serve as the basis for an aggravated-assault charge. [Cases: Assault and Battery 49; Homicide 526. C.J.S. Assault and Battery §§ 67, 71.]

larcenous intent. A state of mind existing when a person (1) knowingly takes away the goods of another without any claim or pretense of a right to do so, and (2) intends to permanently deprive the owner of them or to convert the goods to personal use. See LARCENY. [Cases: Larceny 3. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 25–29.]

manifest intent. Intent that is apparent or obvious based on the available circumstantial evidence, even if direct evidence of intent is not available. • For example, some fidelity bonds cover an employer's losses caused by an employee's dishonest or fraudulent acts committed with a manifest intent to cause a loss to the employer and to obtain a benefit for the employee. Establishing manifest intent sufficient to trigger coverage does not require direct evidence that the employee intended the employer's loss. Even if the employee did not actively want that result, but the result was substantially certain to follow from the employee's conduct, the requisite intent will be inferred.

predatory intent. Antitrust. A business's intent to injure a competitor by unfair means, esp. by sacrificing revenues to drive a competitor out of business. [Cases: Monopolies 12(1.6). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 32, 40–42, 48, 52, 54, 65, 69, 72–73.]

specific intent. The intent to accomplish the precise criminal act that one is later charged with. • At common law, the specific-intent crimes were robbery, assault, larceny, burglary, forgery, false pretenses, embezzlement, attempt, solicitation, and conspiracy. — Also termed criminal intent. See SPECIFIC-INTENT DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law 20. Criminal Law §§ 31–33, 35–39; Negligence § 913.]

testamentary intent. A testator's intent that a particular instrument function as his or her last will and testament. • Testamentary intent is required for a will to be valid. [Cases: Wills 438. C.J.S. Wills § 831.]

transferred intent. Intent that has been shifted from the originally intended wrongful act to the wrongful act actually committed. • For example, if a person intends to kill one person but kills another, the intent may be transferred to the actual act. See TRANSFERRED-INTENT DOCTRINE. [Cases: Criminal Law 25; Homicide 555, 702, 731. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 43.]

ulterior intent. The intent that passes beyond a wrongful act and relates to the objective for the sake of which the act is done; MOTIVE. • For example, a thief's immediate intent may be to steal another's money, but the ulterior intent may be to buy food with that money.

2. A lawmaker's state of mind and purpose in drafting or voting for a measure. [Cases: Statutes 181(1), 184. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 315–316.]

legislative intent. See LEGISLATIVE INTENT.

original intent. The mental state of the drafters or enactors of the U.S. Constitution, a statute, or another document.

INTENTIO

intentio (in-ten-shee-oh), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. The part of a formula in which the plaintiff's claim against the defendant is stated. See FORMULA(1).2.Hist. A count or declaration in a real action. • Intention was an earlier name for narratio. See NARRATIO. Pl. intentiones (in-ten-shee-oh-nee-z).

INTENTION

intention,n. The willingness to bring about something planned or foreseen; the state of being set to do something. — intentional,adj.

“Intention is the purpose or design with which an act is done. It is the foreknowledge of the act, coupled with the desire of it, such foreknowledge and desire being the cause of the act, inasmuch as they fulfil themselves through the operation of the will. An act is intentional if, and in so far as, it exists in idea before it exists in fact, the idea realising itself in the fact because of the desire by which it is accompanied.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 378 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“Intention. — This signifies full advertence in the mind of the defendant to his conduct, which is in question, and to its consequences, together with a desire for those consequences.” P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 10, at 19 (5th ed. 1950).

INTENTIONAL

intentional,adj. Done with the aim of carrying out the act.

INTENTIONAL ACT

intentional act.See ACT.

INTENTIONAL FATHER

intentional father.See intentional parent under PARENT.

INTENTIONAL FRAUD

intentional fraud.See FRAUD(1).

INTENTIONAL INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS

intentional infliction of emotional distress.The tort of intentionally or recklessly causing another person severe emotional distress through one's extreme or outrageous acts. • In a few jurisdictions, a physical manifestation of the mental suffering is required for the plaintiff to recover. — Also termed (in some states) outrage. See EMOTIONAL DISTRESS. Cf. NEGLIGENT INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS. — Abbr. IIED. [Cases: Damages 50.10. C.J.S. Damages §§ 95, 98–104; Torts §§ 67–75, 78.]

INTENTIONAL-INJURY EXCLUSION intentional-injury exclusion.See expected/intended exclusion under EXCLUSION (3).

INTENTIONAL INVASION intentional invasion.See INVASION.

INTENTIONAL MANSLAUGHTER intentional manslaughter. See voluntary manslaughter under MANSLAUGHTER.

INTER-AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION

Inter-American Bar Association. An organization of lawyers from North America, Central America, and South America whose purpose is to promote education, cooperation, and professional exchanges among lawyers from different American countries. — Abbr. IABA.

INTER-AMERICAN FOUNDATION

Inter-American Foundation. An independent federal foundation that supports social and economic development in Latin America and the Caribbean by making grants to private, indigenous organizations that carry out self-help projects benefiting poor people. • The agency is governed by a nine-member board — six from the private sector and three from the government. It was created in 1969 as an experimental foreign-assistance program. 22 USCA § 290f. — Abbr. IAF.

INTER APICES JURIS

inter apices juris (in-t<<schwa>>r ay-p<<schwa>>-seez [orap-<<schwa>>-seez] joor-is), adv.[Law Latin] Among the subtleties of the law. See APEX JURIS.

INTERCALARE

intercalare (in-t<<schwa>>r-k<<schwa>>-lair-ee), vb.[Latin] Civil law. To introduce or insert among others; esp., to introduce a day or month into the calendar. • From this Latin term derives the rare English word intercalate, roughly synonymous with interpolate.

INTERCEDERE

intercedere (in-t<<schwa>>r-see-d<<schwa>>-ree), vb.[Latin] Roman law. To assume another's debt; esp., to act as surety for another.

INTERCEPT

intercept, n. Family law. A mechanism by which a portion of an obligor's unemployment benefits, disability income, income-tax refund, or lottery winnings is automatically diverted to a child-support-enforcement agency to satisfy past-due support obligations.

intercept, vb. 1. To divert (money) from a payee to satisfy a financial obligation of the payee. 2. To covertly receive or listen to (a communication). • The term usu. refers to covert reception by a law-enforcement agency. See WIRETAPPING. [Cases: Telecommunications 494.C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television §§ 247–249, 254, 264–265.]

INTERCHANGEABLE BOND

INTERDICT

interdict (in-t<<schwa>>r-dikt), n. Roman & civil law. 1. An injunction or other prohibitory, exhibitory, or restitutory decree. [Cases: Injunction 1. C.J.S. Injunctions §§ 2–4, 12, 14, 22, 24, 166.]

decretal interdict (di-kreet-<<schwa>>l). An interdict that signified the praetor's order or decree by applying the remedy in a pending case.

edictal interdict (ee-dik-t<<schwa>>l). An interdict that declared the praetor's intention to give a remedy in certain cases, usu. in a way that preserves or restores possession.

exhibitory interdict.An interdict by which a praetor compelled a person or thing to be produced.

possessory interdict.An interdict that protected a person whose possession was disturbed without due process. • A possessor in bad faith could obtain a possessory interdict because the interdict did not depend on title. It would, however, establish whether the possessor would be the defendant or the plaintiff in any subsequent claim. See INTERDICTUM. [Cases: Injunction 39. C.J.S. Injunctions § 68.]

prohibitory interdict.An interdict by which a praetor forbade something to be done.

restitutory interdict (ri-stich-<<schwa>>-tor-ee or res-ti-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>-ree). An interdict by which a praetor directed something to be restored to someone who had been dispossessed of it.

2.Civil law. A person who has been interdicted; a natural person who, because of an infirmity, cannot make reasoned decisions about personal care or property or communicate those decisions; a person deprived of the capacity to make juridical acts. La. Civ. Code arts. 389, 390, 394.

limited interdict.A person whose right to care for himself or herself is restricted by a court decision because of mental incapacity; a person subject to limited interdiction. La. Civ. Code art. 390. [Cases: Mental Health 36. C.J.S. Insane Persons §§ 49–52.]

interdict (in-t<<schwa>>-r-dikt), vb.1. To forbid or restrain. 2. To intercept and seize (contraband, etc.).3.Civil law. To remove a person's right to handle personal affairs because of mental incapacity. [Cases: Mental Health 36. C.J.S. Insane Persons §§ 49–52.]

interdiction. 1. The act of forbidding or restraining.

interdiction of commercial intercourse.Int'l law. A governmental prohibition of commercial trade.

2. The interception and seizure of something, esp. contraband. 3.Civil law. The act of depriving a person of the right to handle his or her own affairs because of mental incapacity. See EX CAPITE INTERDICTIONIS. Cf. GUARDIANSHIP (1); CURATORSHIP; CURATOR(2).“Interdiction, now scarcely known in practice, was a means formerly adopted for the protection of those who were weak, facile, and easily imposed upon, and also for the protection of those who, being reckless and profuse, were unable to manage their estate with care and prudence. Interdiction was either judicial or voluntary: and in whichever of these modes the interdiction was effected and imposed, any disposition of heritage thereafter by the interdicted, without the consent of his interdictors, was liable to reduction on the ground of interdiction, except where the conveyances were onerous and rational.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 193 (4th ed. 1894).

complete interdiction.See full interdiction.

full interdiction.The complete removal of one's right to care for oneself and one's affairs or estate because of mental incapacity. La. Civ. Code art. 389. — Also termed complete interdiction. [Cases: Mental Health 36. C.J.S. Insane Persons §§ 49–52.]

limited interdiction.See partial interdiction.

partial interdiction.The partial removal of one's right to care for oneself and one's affairs or estate because of mental incapacity. — Also termed limited interdiction. [Cases: Mental Health 36. C.J.S. Insane Persons §§ 49–52.]

INTERDICTORY

interdictory (in-t<<schwa>>-r-dik-t<<schwa>>-r-ee), adj.1. Of or relating to an interdiction. 2.

Having the power to interdict. — Also termed interdictive.

INTERDICTUM

interdictum (in-t<<schwa>>r-dik-t<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman law. A summary order to secure the applicant's rights by preventing something from being done (prohibitory interdict) or requiring property to be produced (exhibitory interdict) or restored (restitutory interdict). • A party might apply for an interdictum when some wrong had been done, or was likely to be done, and it was necessary either to redress or to prevent the wrong at once, without waiting for the ordinary legal processes; often it was a preliminary to an ordinary action (e.g., by settling which party was entitled to be defendant in the action). Pl. interdicta.

INTERDICTUM QUOD VI AUT CLAM interdictum quod vi aut clam (in-t<<schwa>>r-dik-t<<schwa>>m kwod vI awt klam). [Latin “interdict because of force or stealth”] Roman law. An interdict issued against a person who forcibly (vi) or secretly (clam) altered or occupied the claimant's property. • The interdict required the defendant to restore the property to its previous condition. Cf. actio vi bonorum raptorum under ACTIO.

INTER EOSDEM

inter eosdem (in-t<<schwa>>r ee-ahs-d<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. Between the same persons.

INTERESSE

interesse (in-t<<schwa>>r-es-ee). [Latin] 1. Monetary interest. 2. A legal interest in property.

INTERESSEE

interessee (in-t<<schwa>>-re-see). See real party in interest under PARTY(2).

INTERESSE TERMINI

interesse termini (in-t<<schwa>>r-es-ee t<<schwa>>r-m<<schwa>>-nI). [Latin “interest of term or end”] Archaic. A lessee's right of entry onto the leased property; esp., a lessee's interest in real property before taking possession. • An interesse termini is not an estate; it is an interest for the term. It gives the lessee a claim against any person who prevents the lessee from entering or accepting delivery of the property.

“There was a troublesome doctrine of the common law which established, in the case of a lease not operating under the Statute of Uses, that the lessee acquired no estate in the land until he actually entered into possession. Until that time he was said to have a mere right to take possession, and this right was called an interesse termini. This requisite of entry to perfect a lease has, however, been swept away by the Law of Property Act, 1925, and all terms of years absolute, whether created before or after the commencement of the Act, can take effect from the date fixed for the commencement of the term without actual entry." G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 128–29 (3d ed. 1933).

INTEREST

interest, n. 1. The object of any human desire; esp., advantage or profit of a financial nature <conflict of interest>. 2. A legal share in something; all or part of a legal or equitable claim to or right in property <right, title, and interest>. • Collectively, the word includes any aggregation of rights, privileges, powers, and immunities; distributively, it refers to any one right, privilege, power, or immunity.

absolute interest. An interest that is not subject to any condition.

beneficial interest. A right or expectancy in something (such as a trust or an estate), as opposed to legal title to that thing. • For example, a person with a beneficial interest in a trust receives income from the trust but does not hold legal title to the trust property. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 68–81; Trusts 1. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 68–71, 73–77, 82–88, 116; Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18.] concurrent interest. See concurrent estate under ESTATE(1).

contingent interest. An interest that the holder may enjoy only upon the occurrence of a condition precedent.

controlling interest. Sufficient ownership of stock in a company to control policy and management; esp., a greater-than-50% ownership interest in an enterprise. [Cases: Corporations 180. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 327–330.]

defeasible interest. An interest that the holder may enjoy until the occurrence of a condition.

direct interest. A certain, absolute interest <the juror was disqualified because she had a direct interest in the lawsuit>.

entailed interest. An interest that devolves through lineal descendants only as a result of a fee tail.

entire interest. A whole interest or right, without diminution. See FEE SIMPLE.

equitable interest. An interest held by virtue of an equitable title or claimed on equitable grounds, such as the interest held by a trust beneficiary. [Cases: Trusts 139. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 251.]

executory interest. See EXECUTORY INTEREST.

expectation interest. The interest of a nonbreaching party in being put in the position that would have resulted if the contract had been performed. See expectation damages under DAMAGES; BENEFIT-OF-THE-BARGAIN RULE. [Cases: Damages 117; Fraud 59(2).]

financial interest. An interest involving money or its equivalent; esp., an interest in the nature of an investment. — Also termed pecuniary interest.

future interest. See FUTURE INTEREST.

inalienable interest. An interest that cannot be sold or traded.

inchoate interest. A property interest that has not yet vested. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy 29–53. C.J.S. Dower §§ 41–63, 141, 153–162.]

insurable interest. A legal interest in another person's life or health or in the protection of property from injury, loss, destruction, or pecuniary damage. • To take out an insurance policy, the purchaser or the potential insured's beneficiary must have an insurable interest. If a policy does not have an insurable interest as its basis, it will usu. be considered a form of wagering and thus be held unenforceable. See wager policy under INSURANCE POLICY. [Cases: Insurance 1779–1795. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 218–231, 233–252.]

interest in the use and enjoyment of land. The pleasure, comfort, and advantage that a person may derive from the occupancy of land. • The term includes not only the interests that a person may have for residential, agricultural, commercial, industrial, and other purposes, but also interests in having the present-use value of the land unimpaired by changes in its physical condition.

joint interest. An interest that is acquired at the same time and by the same title as another person's. See joint tenancy under TENANCY.

junior interest. An interest that is subordinate to a senior interest.

legal interest. 1. An interest that has its origin in the principles, standards, and rules developed by courts of law as opposed to courts of chancery. 2. An interest recognized by law, such as legal title.

legally protected interest. A property interest that the law will protect against impairment or destruction, whether in law or in equity.

liberty interest. An interest protected by the due-process clauses of state and federal constitutions. See FUNDAMENTAL RIGHT(2). [Cases: Constitutional Law 254.1. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 977–978, 980, 1418; Right to Die § 2.]

multiple interest. A property interest that is good against an indefinitely large number of people.

pecuniary interest. See financial interest.

possessory interest. See POSSESSORY INTEREST.

present interest. 1. A property interest in which the privilege of possession or enjoyment is present and not merely future; an interest entitling the holder to immediate possession. — Also termed present estate. Cf. FUTURE INTEREST. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.] 2. A trust interest in which the beneficiary has the immediate beneficial enjoyment of the trust's proceeds. 3. A trust interest in which the trustee has the immediate right to control and manage the property in trust.

proprietary interest. The interest held by a property owner together with all appurtenant rights, such as a stockholder's right to vote the shares. [Cases: Corporations 63.1.]

reliance interest. The interest of a nonbreaching party in being put in the position that would have resulted if the contract had not been made, including out-of-pocket costs. [Cases: Damages 117.]

restitution interest. A nonbreaching party's interest in preventing the breaching party from retaining a benefit received under the contract and thus being unjustly enriched. • The benefit may have been received from the nonbreaching party or from a third party.

reversionary interest. A future interest left in the transferor or successor in interest. See REVERSION.

senior interest. An interest that takes precedence over others; esp., a debt security or preferred share that has a higher claim on a corporation's assets and earnings than that of a junior obligation or common share.

terminable interest. An interest that may be terminated upon the lapse of time or upon the occurrence of some condition.

undivided interest. An interest held under the same title by two or more persons, whether their rights are equal or unequal in value or quantity. — Also termed undivided right; undivided title. See joint tenancy; tenancy in common under TENANCY. [Cases: Joint Tenancy 1; Tenancy in Common 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Joint Tenancy §§ 2, 4, 7–9; Tenancy in Common §§ 2–5.]

vested interest. An interest the right to the enjoyment of which, either present or future, is not subject to the happening of a condition precedent.

working interest. See WORKING INTEREST.

3. The compensation fixed by agreement or allowed by law for the use or detention of money, or for the loss of money by one who is entitled to its use; esp., the amount owed to a lender in return for the use of borrowed money. — Also termed finance charge. See USURY. [Cases: Interest 1, 8. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 2–3, 5–6, 12.]

accrued interest. Interest that is earned but not yet paid, such as interest that accrues on real estate and that will be paid when the property is sold if, in the meantime, the rental income does not cover the mortgage payments.

add-on interest. Interest that is computed on the original face amount of a loan and that remains the same even as the principal declines. • A $10,000 loan with add-on interest at 8% payable over three years would require equal annual interest payments of $800 for three years, regardless of the unpaid principal amount. With add-on interest, the effective rate of interest is typically about twice the stated add-on interest rate. In the example just cited, then, the effective rate of interest would be about 16%. — Also termed block interest. See add-on loan under LOAN.

Boston interest. Interest computed by using a 30-day month rather than the exact number of days in the month. — Also termed New York interest.

compound interest. Interest paid on both the principal and the previously accumulated interest. Cf. simple interest. [Cases: Interest 60; Usury 49. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 6, 71, 156.]

conventional interest. Interest at a rate agreed to by the parties themselves, as distinguished from that prescribed by law. Cf. interest as damages. [Cases: Interest 4, 32. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit § 9, 38.]

discount interest. The interest that accrues on a discounted investment instrument (such as a government bond) as it matures. • The investor receives the interest when the instrument is redeemed. [Cases: United States 91. C.J.S. United States §§ 164, 167.]

gross interest. A borrower's interest payment that includes administrative, service, and insurance charges.

imputed interest. Interest income that the IRS attributes to a lender regardless of whether the lender actually receives interest from the borrower. • This is common esp. in loans between family members. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3132.20. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 75.]

interest as damages. Interest allowed by law in the absence of a promise to pay it, as compensation for a delay in paying a fixed sum or a delay in assessing and paying damages. Cf. conventional interest.

lawful interest. 1. A rate of interest that is less than or equal to the statutory maximum. 2. See legal interest.

legal interest. 1. Interest at a rate usu. prescribed by statute. • Courts often order monetary judgments to accumulate legal interest until paid. Cf. legal rate under INTEREST RATE. 2. See lawful interest.

moratory interest. See prejudgment interest.

New York interest. See Boston interest.

prejudgment interest. Statutorily prescribed interest accrued either from the date of the loss or from the date when the complaint was filed up to the date the final judgment is entered. • Prejudgment interest is usu. calculated only for liquidated sums. Depending on the statute, it may or may not be an element of damages. — Also termed moratory interest.

prepaid interest. Interest paid before it is earned. [Cases: Usury 44. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 135, 142, 147–150.]

qualified residence interest. Tax. Interest paid on debt that is secured by one's home and that was incurred to purchase, build, improve, or refinance the home. • This type of interest is deductible from adjusted gross income. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3282. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 286.]

simple interest. Interest paid on the principal only and not on accumulated interest. • Interest accrues only on the principal balance regardless of how often interest is paid. — Also termed straight-line interest. Cf. compound interest. [Cases: Interest 60. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 6, 71.]

straight-line interest. See simple interest.

unearned interest. Interest received by a financial institution before it is earned.

unlawful interest. See USURY.

INTEREST-ANALYSIS TECHNIQUE interest-analysis technique. Conflict of laws. A method of resolving choice-of-law questions by reviewing a state's laws and the state's interests in enforcing those laws to determine whether that state's laws or those of another state should apply. — Also termed governmental-interest-analysis technique. [Cases: Action 17. C.J.S. Actions §§ 18–20; Conflict of Laws §§ 2–3, 12, 15, 20, 23, 27–32, 34–40, 42–48, 50–65, 96–97, 100, 102, 105–107.]

“Professor Brainerd Currie gets the major credit for developing the interest analysis, or governmental interest analysis, technique. Interest analysis requires an examination into competing laws to determine their underlying policies and the strength of the relative interests the competing sovereigns have in the application of their respective laws in the particular situation. The facts will vary and the strength of the relevant policies will wax and wane accordingly.” David D. Siegel, Conflicts in a Nutshell 237 (2d ed. 1994).

INTEREST FACTOR

interest factor. Insurance. In life-insurance ratemaking, an estimate of the interest or rate of return that the insurer will earn on premium payments over the life of a policy. • The interest factor is one element that a life insurer uses to calculate premium rates. See PREMIUM RATE; gross premium (1) under PREMIUM(1). Cf. MORTALITY FACTOR; RISK FACTOR. [Cases: Insurance 1542(1). C.J.S. Insurance § 66.]

INTEREST-FREE LOAN

interest-free loan. See LOAN.

INTEREST ON LAWYERS' TRUST ACCOUNTS

Interest on Lawyers' Trust Accounts. A program that allows a lawyer or law firm to deposit a client's retained funds into an interest-bearing account that designates the interest payments to charitable, law-related purposes, such as providing legal aid to the poor. • Almost all states have either a voluntary or mandatory IOLTA program. — Abbr. IOLTA. [Cases: Attorney and Client 129.5. C.J.S. Attorney and Client § 279.]

INTEREST-ONLY MORTGAGE interest-only mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

INTEREST POLICY

interest policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

INTEREST RATE

interest rate. The percentage that a borrower of money must pay to the lender in return for the use of the money, usu. expressed as a percentage of the principal payable for a one-year period. — Often shortened to rate. — Also termed rate of interest. [Cases: Interest 27–38. C.J.S. Admiralty § 281; Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 34–41; Mortgages § 166.]

annual percentage rate. The actual cost of borrowing money, expressed in the form of an annualized interest rate. — Abbr. APR.

bank rate. The rate of interest at which the Federal Reserve lends funds to member banks.

contract rate. The interest rate printed on the face of a bond certificate.

coupon rate. The specific interest rate for a coupon bond. — Also termed coupon interest rate. See coupon bond under BOND(3).

discount rate. 1. The interest rate at which a member bank may borrow money from the Federal Reserve. • This rate controls the supply of money available to banks for lending. Cf. rediscount rate. 2. The percentage of a commercial paper's face value paid by an issuer who sells the instrument to a financial institution. 3. The interest rate used in calculating present value.

effective rate. The actual annual interest rate, which incorporates compounding when calculating interest, rather than the stated rate or coupon rate.

face rate. See nominal rate.

floating rate. A varying interest rate that is tied to a financial index such as the prime rate.

illegal rate. An interest rate higher than the rate allowed by law. See USURY. [Cases: Usury 42. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 135–141, 143, 146, 152, 157.]

legal rate. 1. The interest rate imposed as a matter of law when none is provided by contract. [Cases: Interest 31. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit § 37.] 2. The maximum interest rate, set by statute, that may be charged on a loan. See legal interest under INTEREST(3). Cf. USURY. [Cases: Usury 42. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 135–141, 143, 146, 152, 157.]

lock rate. A mortgage-application interest rate that is established and guaranteed for a specified period. — Also termed locked-in rate.

nominal rate. The interest rate stated in a loan agreement or on a bond, with no adjustment made for inflation. — Also termed coupon rate; face rate; stated rate; stated interest rate.

prime rate. The interest rate that a commercial bank holds out as its lowest rate for a short-term loan to its most creditworthy borrowers, usu. large corporations. • This rate, which can vary slightly from bank to bank, often dictates other interest rates for various personal and commercial loans. — Often shortened to prime. — Also termed prime lending rate.

real rate. An interest rate that has been adjusted for inflation over time.

rediscount rate. The interest rate at which a member bank may borrow from the Federal Reserve on a loan secured by commercial paper that has already been resold by the bank.

stated rate. See nominal rate.

variable rate. An interest rate that varies at preset intervals in relation to the current market rate (usu. the prime rate).

INTEREST-RATE SWAP

interest-rate swap. An agreement to exchange interest receipts or interest-payment obligations, usu. to adjust one's risk exposure, to speculate on interest-rate changes, or to convert an instrument or obligation from a fixed to a floating rate — or from a floating to a fixed rate. • The parties to such an agreement are termed “counterparties.”

generic swap. See plain-vanilla swap.

plain-vanilla swap. A typical interest-rate swap that involves one counterparty's paying a fixed interest rate while the other assumes a floating interest rate based on the amount of the principal of the underlying debt. • The underlying debt, called the “notional” amount of the swap, does not change hands — only the interest payments are exchanged. — Also termed generic swap.

INTEREST UNITY

interest unity. See unity of interest under UNITY.

INTEREST WARRANT

INTERFERANT

interferant. 1. Something that interferes with the proper function of a chemical analysis; specif., a chemical contaminant that renders the results of a blood, breath, or urine test unreliable. 2. Patents. A party to an interference proceeding in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • This term declined in use after the 1960s; today the PTO and courts use the term “contestant.” — Also termed (in sense 2) contestant. See CONTESTANT(3).

INTERFERENCE

interference, n. 1. The act of meddling in another's affairs. 2. An obstruction or hindrance. 3. Patents. An administrative proceeding in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to determine who is entitled to the patent when two or more applicants claim the same invention, or when an application interferes with an existing patent. • This proceeding occurs when the same invention is claimed (1) in two pending applications, or (2) in one pending application and a patent issued within a year of the pending application's filing date. — Also termed priority contest. [Cases: Patents 106. C.J.S. Patents §§ 159–162, 165.] 4. Trademarks. An administrative proceeding in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to determine whether a mark that one party wants to register will cause confusion among consumers with another party's mark. • An administrative hearing may be held to determine whose mark prevails, but applicants usu. withdraw their applications and devise new marks instead. [Cases: Trade Regulation 215. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 179, 181.] — interfere, vb.

INTERNAL ACT

internal act.See ACT.

INTERNAL-AFFAIRS DOCTRINE internal-affairs doctrine.Conflict of laws. The rule that in disputes involving a corporation and its relationships with its shareholders, directors, officers, or agents, the law to be applied is the law of the state of incorporation. • This doctrine applies in the majority of states. In a few states, notably California and New York, foreign corporations must meet state-law requirements in specified circumstances. [Cases: Corporations 640. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 893, 900.]

“Broadly speaking, ‘corporate internal affairs’ refers to the powers and obligations of a corporation’s manager vis-a-vis the corporation and its shareholders, and the rights and duties of the corporation’s shareholders vis-a-vis the corporation, its management and the other shareholders. Put differently, corporate internal affairs pretty much encompass the subject matter of those state laws typically referred to as corporate law. In dealing with a corporation’s internal affairs, courts ... have looked to the law of the state of incorporation for the governing rule. Courts often refer to this choice of law principle as the ‘internal affairs doctrine.’ ” Franklin A. Gevurtz, Corporation Law 36 (2000).

INTERNAL AFFAIRS OF A FOREIGN CORPORATION internal affairs of a foreign corporation.Conflict of laws. Matters that involve only the inner workings of a corporation, such as dividend declarations and the selection of officers. [Cases: Corporations 640.C.J.S. Corporations §§ 893, 900.]

“The old statement that a court will not hear cases involving the internal affairs of a foreign corporation has been practically dropped from the law today, and the result when appropriate is achieved under the forum non conveniens rule. Modern courts recognize their jurisdiction to entertain such suits, and insist only upon a discretionary power to refuse to exercise the existent jurisdiction when the facts make it both feasible and more desirable for the case to be heard by a court of the state of incorporation.” Robert A. Leflar, American Conflicts Law § 255, at 512–13 (3d ed. 1977).

INTERNAL LAW

internal law. See LAW.

INTERNALLY DISPLACED PERSON

internally displaced person. A person who has been forced to migrate within a national territory because of threats to life, limb, or freedom, and who cannot establish a new residence because of continuing threats. • Internally displaced persons flee for the same reasons as refugees — fear of persecution, human-rights abuses, civil war, natural or man-made disasters, etc. — but do not cross national borders and have no legal protection under international law. — Abbr. IDP.

INTERNAL RATE OF RETURN internal rate of return. See RATE OF RETURN.

INTERNAL REVENUE

internal revenue. Governmental revenue derived from domestic taxes rather than from customs or import duties. — Also termed (outside the United States) inland revenue.

INTERNAL REVENUE CODE

Internal Revenue Code. Title 26 of the U.S. Code, containing all current federal tax laws. — Abbr. IRC. — Also termed tax law.

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

Internal Revenue Service. A unit in the U.S. Department of the Treasury responsible for enforcing and administering the internal-revenue laws and other tax laws except those relating to alcohol, tobacco, firearms, and explosives. — Abbr. IRS. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3003, 4440–4443. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 4, 607–611, 616, 618.]

INTERNAL SECURITY

internal security. The field of law dealing with measures taken to protect a country from subversive activities.

INTERNAL-SECURITY ACT

internal-security act. A statute illegalizing and controlling subversive activities of organizations whose purpose is believed to be to overthrow or disrupt the government. • In the United States, many provisions in such statutes have been declared unconstitutional. One such law was repealed in 1993. See 50 USCA § 781. [Cases: Treason 1. C.J.S. Treason §§ 2–3, 5.]

INTERNAL SOVEREIGNTY

internal sovereignty. See SOVEREIGNTY(3).

INTERNAL WATERS

internal waters. Any natural or artificial body or stream of water within the territorial limits of a country, such as a bay, gulf, river mouth, creek, harbor, port, lake, or canal. — Also termed inland waters.

“Waters on the landward side of the baseline of the territorial sea form part of the internal waters of a State.” Geneva Convention on the Territorial Sea and the Contiguous Zone, Apr. 29, 1958, art. 5, ¶ 1.

INTERNATIONAL ADMINISTRATIVE LAW international administrative law. See ADMINISTRATIVE LAW.

INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT international agreement. A treaty or other contract between different countries, such as GATT or NAFTA. See GENERAL AGREEMENT ON TARIFFS AND TRADE; NORTH AMERICAN FREE TRADE AGREEMENT. [Cases: Treaties 1–14. C.J.S. Treaties §§ 2–17.]

“Though international agreements are known by a variety of titles, such as treaties, conventions, pacts, acts, declarations, protocols, accords, arrangements, concordats, and modi vivendi, none of these terms has an absolutely fixed meaning. The more formal political agreements, however, are usually called treaties or conventions.” Oscar Svarlien, An Introduction to the Law of Nations 261 (1955).

INTERNATIONAL APPLICATION

international application. See PATENT APPLICATION.

INTERNATIONAL APPLICATION DESIGNATING THE UNITED STATES international application designating the United States. See PATENT APPLICATION .

INTERNATIONAL APPLICATION ORIGINATING IN THE UNITED STATES INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT

International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. See WORLD BANK.

INTERNATIONAL BILL OF EXCHANGE

international bill of exchange. See foreign draft under DRAFT.

INTERNATIONAL BUREAU FOR THE PROTECTION OF INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY

International Bureau for the Protection of Intellectual Property. Copyright. A predecessor of the World Intellectual Property Organization. • The bureau was created by combining the Paris Convention's Secretariat (the International Bureau for the Paris Convention) with the Berne Copyright Convention of 1886. It was supervised by the Swiss government until 1970, when the bureau became part of WIPO. — Also termed Bureaux Internationaux Reunis pour la Protection de la Propriete Intellectuelle; BIRPI.

INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR THE SETTLEMENT OF INVESTMENT DISPUTES

International Centre for the Settlement of Investment Disputes. An organization created by the United Nations Convention on the Settlement of Investment Disputes between States and the Nationals of Other States to help mediate and arbitrate disputes between member states and individuals who are citizens of other member states in an effort to promote continued private international investment, esp. in developing countries. — Abbr. ICSID.

INTERNATIONAL COMMERCE

international commerce. See COMMERCE.

INTERNATIONAL CONTROL

international control. Int'l law. The supervision over countries and their subdivisions for the purpose of ensuring the conformity of their conduct with international law.

“[S]upervision is exercised increasingly not only over the conduct of governmental and intergovernmental institutions, but also over the acts and omissions of individuals to establish their conformity with requirements of public international law. Yet even where supranational entities, notably the European Communities, exercise international control over the conduct of individuals and corporate bodies, generally the supervision is destined to verify or secure conformity of governmental measures with relevant rules of law.” Hugo J. Hahn, “International Controls,” in 2 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 1079–80 (1995).

INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION FOR THE PROTECTION OF PERFORMERS, PRODUCERS OF PHONOGRAMS

International Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations. See ROME CONVENTION ON RELATED RIGHTS .

INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

International Court of Justice. The 15-member permanent tribunal that is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. • The Court sits in The Hague, Netherlands. It has jurisdiction to decide disputes submitted to it by nations, and to render advisory opinions requested by the United Nations and its specialized agencies. The U.N. Security Council has the express power to enforce the Court's judgments. — Abbr. ICJ. — Also termed World Court. [Cases: International Law 10.45. C.J.S. International Law §§ 59–65.]

INTERNATIONAL CRIME international crime.Int'l law. A grave breach of international law, such as genocide and crimes against humanity, made punishable offenses by treaties and applicable rules of customary international law. • An international crime occurs when three conditions are satisfied: (1) the criminal norm must derive either from a treaty concluded under international law or from customary international law, and must have direct binding force on individuals without intermediate provisions of municipal law, (2) the provision must be made for the prosecution of acts penalized by international law in accordance with the principle of universal jurisdiction, so that the international character of the crime might show in the mode of prosecution itself (e.g., before the International Criminal Court), and (3) a treaty establishing liability for the act must bind the great majority of countries. — Also termed international offense. [Cases: International Law 1–2. C.J.S. International Law §§ 2–5.]

INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT

International Criminal Court.A court established by a treaty known as the Statute of the International Criminal Court (effective 2002), with jurisdiction over genocides, crimes against humanity, war crimes, and aggression. • It sits in The Hague, Netherlands. — Abbr. ICC. [Cases: International Law 10.45. C.J.S. International Law §§ 59–65.]

INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL POLICE ORGANIZATION

International Criminal Police Organization.An international law-enforcement group founded in 1923 and headquartered in Lyons, France. • The organization gathers and shares information on transnational criminals for more than 180 member nations. — Also termed Interpol.

“Interpol is something of a legal curiosity: it engages in intergovernmental activities and yet is not based on any treaty, convention, or other similar instrument. Its founding document is a constitution, drawn up by a group of police officers, that has neither been submitted for diplomatic signatures nor ratified by governments. Nevertheless, the organization received de facto recognition from the outset.... Interpol was formally granted the status of an ‘intergovernmental agency’ by the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations in 1971, and this is regarded as a form of de jure legitimization.” Michael Fooner, “Interpol,” in 3 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 910, 910 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC LAW international economic law.International law relating to investment, economic relations, economic development, economic institutions, and regional economic integration.

INTERNATIONAL FILING DATE international filing date. See PCT FILING DATE.

INTERNATIONAL FUND

international fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

INTERNATIONALIZATION

internationalization. The act or process of bringing a territory of one country under the protection or control of another or of several countries.

“[T]he concept of internationalization is characterized by three elements: the abolition or limitation of the sovereignty of a specific State; the serving of community interests or at least the interests of a group of States; and the establishment of an international institutional framework, not necessarily involving an international organization.” Rüdiger Wolfrum, “Internationalization,” in 2 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 1395 (1995).

INTERNATIONAL JURISDICTION

international jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

INTERNATIONAL LAW

international law. The legal system governing the relationships between nations; more modernly, the law of international relations, embracing not only nations but also such participants as international organizations and individuals (such as those who invoke their human rights or commit war crimes). — Also termed public international law; law of nations; law of nature and nations; jus gentium; jus gentium publicum; jus inter gentes; foreign-relations law; interstate law; law between states (the word state, in the latter two phrases, being equivalent to nation or country). Cf. TRANSNATIONAL LAW. [Cases: International Law 1–13. C.J.S. International Law §§ 2–65.]

“[I]nternational law or the law of nations must be defined as law applicable to states in their mutual relations and to individuals in their relations with states. International law may also, under this hypothesis, be applicable to certain interrelationships of individuals themselves, where such interrelationships involve matters of international concern.” Philip C. Jessup, A Modern Law of Nations 17 (1949).

customary international law. International law that derives from the practice of states and is accepted by them as legally binding. • This is one of the principal sources or building blocks of the international legal system.

private international law. International conflict of laws. • Legal scholars frequently lament the name “private international law” because it misleadingly suggests a body of law somehow parallel to public international law, when in fact it is merely a part of each legal system's private law. — Also termed international private law; jus gentium privatum; intermunicipal law; comity; extraterritorial recognition of rights. See CONFLICT OF LAWS(2).

“[A] word must be said about the name or title of the subject. No name commands universal approval. The expression ‘Private International Law,’ coined by Story in 1834 [Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Conflict of Laws § 9 (1834)], and used on the Continent by [Jean Jacques Gaspard] Foelix in 1838, has been adopted by Westlake and Foote and most French authors. The chief criticism directed against its use is its tendency to confuse private international law with the law of nations or public international law, as it is usually called. There are obvious differences between the two. The latter primarily governs the relations between sovereign states and it may perhaps be regarded as the common law of mankind in an early state of development; the former is designed to regulate disputes of a private nature, notwithstanding that one of the parties may be a private state. There is, at any rate in theory, one common system of public international law ... ; but ... there are as many systems of private international law as there are systems of municipal law.” G.C. Cheshire, Private International Law 15 (6th ed. 1961).

INTERNATIONAL LAW COMMISSION

International Law Commission. A body created in 1947 by the United Nations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development and codification of international law. • The Commission is composed of experts in international law. It has drafted many important treaties that have become binding treaty law, including the Vienna Convention on the Law on Treaties.

INTERNATIONAL LEGAL COMMUNITY

international legal community. 1. The collective body of countries whose mutual legal relations are based on sovereign equality. 2. More broadly, all organized entities having the capacity to take part in international legal relations. 3. An integrated organization on which a group of countries, by international treaty, confer part of their powers for amalgamated enterprise. • In this sense, the European Union is a prime example.

INTERNATIONAL LEGISLATION

international legislation. Int'l law. 1. Law-making among countries or intergovernmental organizations, displaying structural and procedural characteristics that are the same as national legislation. 2. The product of any concerted effort to change international law by statute. 3. The process of trying to change international law by statute. 4. Loosely, the adoption by international bodies of binding decisions, other than judicial and arbitral decisions, concerning specific situations or disputes.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND

International Monetary Fund. A U.N. specialized agency established to stabilize international exchange rates and promote balanced trade. — Abbr. IMF. [Cases: International Law 10.45. C.J.S. International Law §§ 59–65.]

INTERNATIONAL OFFENSE

international offense.See INTERNATIONAL CRIME.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION

international organization.Int'l law. 1. An intergovernmental association of countries, established by and operated according to multilateral treaty, whose purpose is to pursue the common aims of those countries. • Examples include the World Health Organization, the International Civil Aviation Organization, and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. [Cases: International Law 10.45. C.J.S. International Law §§ 59–65.] 2. Loosely, an intergovernmental or nongovernmental international association.

INTERNATIONAL PARENTAL KIDNAPPING CRIME ACT OF 1993

Internet-protocol address. The ten-digit identification tag used by computers to locate specific websites.

INTERNET SCRIP

Internet scrip. See SCRIP.

INTERNET SERVICE PROVIDER

Internet service provider. A business that offers Internet access through a subscriber's phone line, usu. charging the user for the time spent connected to the business's server. — Abbr. ISP.

INTERNMENT

internment (in-t<<schwa>>rn-m<<schwa>>nt), n. The government-ordered detention of people suspected of disloyalty to the government, such as the confinement of Japanese Americans during World War II. [Cases: War and National Emergency 51. C.J.S. War and National Defense § 68.] — intern, vb.

INTERNUNCIO

internuncio (in-t<<schwa>>r-n<<schwa>>n-shee-oh), n. [fr. Latin internuntius] 1. A messenger between two parties. 2. A broker who serves as agent of both parties to a transaction. — Also termed internuncius. 3. A papal representative at a foreign court, ranking below a nuncio. Cf.

NUNCIO(1); LEGATE(3). — internuncial,adj.

INTER PARES

inter pares (in-t<<schwa>>r pair-eez), adv. & adj.[Latin] Between peers; between people in an equal position.

INTER PARTES

inter partes (in-t<<schwa>>r pahr-teez), adv.[Latin “between parties”] Between two or more parties; with two or more parties in a transaction. — inter partes,adj.

INTER PARTES REEXAMINATION inter partes reexamination.See REEXAMINATION(2).

INTERPEL

interpel. See INTERPELLATE.

INTERPELLATE

interpellate (in-t<<schwa>>r-pel-ayt), vb.1. (Of a judge) to interrupt, with a question, a lawyer's argument. 2. (Of a legislator) to interrupt a legislature's calendar by bringing into question a ministerial policy, esp. in the legislature of France, Italy, or Germany. — Also termed (in Scots law) interpel (in-t<<schwa>>r-pel). — interpellation,n.

INTERPELLATIO

interpellatio (in-t<<schwa>>r-p<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh), n. [Latin “a demand, interruption”] Roman law. 1. A demand for payment of a debt or for desistance from a course of action. 2. The interruption of a process, e.g., of the acquisition of title by possession. 3. The institution of a legal process or appeal. Pl. interpellationes (in-t<<schwa>>r-p<<schwa>>-lay-shee-oh-nee-z).

INTERPLEA

interplea. A pleading by which a stakeholder places the disputed property into the court's registry; the plea made by an interpleader. See INTERPLEADER.

INTERPLEAD

interplead,vb.1. (Of a claimant) to assert one's own claim regarding property or an issue already before the court. 2. (Of a stakeholder) to institute an interpleader action, usu. by depositing disputed property into the court's registry to abide the court's decision about who is entitled to the property. Cf. IMPLEAD. [Cases: Interpleader 1. C.J.S. Interpleader §§ 2–4, 7, 9.]

INTERPLEADER

interpleader,n.1. A suit to determine a right to property held by a usu. disinterested third party (called a stakeholder) who is in doubt about ownership and who therefore deposits the property with the court to permit interested parties to litigate ownership. • Typically, a stakeholder initiates an interpleader both to determine who should receive the property and to avoid multiple liability.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 22. See STAKEHOLDER(1). Cf. IMPLAIDER; INTERVENTION(1). [Cases: Interpleader 1. C.J.S. Interpleader §§ 2-4, 7, 9.] 2. Loosely, a party who interpleads. — Also termed (in civil law) concursus.

“Interpleader is a form of joinder open to one who does not know to which of several claimants he or she is liable, if liable at all. It permits him or her to bring the claimants into a single action, and to require them to litigate among themselves to determine which, if any, has a valid claim. Although the earliest records of a procedure similar to interpleader were at common law, it soon became an equitable rather than a legal procedure.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 74, at 531 (5th ed. 1994).

INTERPOL

Interpol (in-t<<schwa>>r-pohl). See INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL POLICE ORGANIZATION.

INTERPOLATION

interpolation (in-t<<schwa>>r-p<<schwa>>-lay-sh<<schwa>>n), n.1. The act of inserting words into a document to change or clarify the meaning. • In a negative sense, interpolation can refer to putting extraneous or false words into a document to change its meaning. Cf. INTERLINEATION. 2. (often pl.) Roman law. An editorial change made by one of the compilers of the Digests and the Justinian Code. • The compilers made insertions, deletions, and juxtapositions in the texts, but made few real changes to the substantive law. — interpolate,vb. — interpolative,adj. — interpolator,n.

INTERPOSITION

interposition,n.1. The act of submitting something (such as a pleading or motion) as a defense to an opponent's claim. 2.Archaic. The action of a state, while exercising its sovereignty, in rejecting a federal mandate that it believes is unconstitutional or overreaching. • The Supreme Court has declared that interposition is an illegal defiance of constitutional authority. — interpose,vb.

INTERPRETATIO

interpretatio (in-t<<schwa>>r-pri-tay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. An opinion of a Roman jurist (an interpreter of the law, not an advocate) who did not usu. appear in court. • Such an opinion was not originally binding, but by the Law of Citations (A.D. 426), the opinions of five jurists acquired binding force. See CITATIONS, LAW OF. Pl. interpretations (in-t<<schwa>>r-pri-tay-shee-oh-nee-z).

INTERPRETATIO LIMITATA interpretatio limitata.See restrictive interpretation under INTERPRETATION.

INTERPRETATION

interpretation,n.1. The process of determining what something, esp. the law or a legal document, means; the ascertainment of meaning to be given to words or other manifestations of intention. [Cases: Contracts 143. C.J.S. Contracts § 302.]

“Interpretation, as applied to written law, is the art or process of discovering and expounding the intended signification of the language used, that is, the meaning which the authors of the law designed it to convey to others.” Henry Campbell Black, Handbook on the Construction and Interpretation of the Laws 1 (1896).

“There is more to interpretation in general than the discovery of the meaning attached by the author to his words. Even if, in a particular case, that meaning is discoverable with a high degree of certitude from external sources, the question whether it has been adequately expressed remains.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 149 (1976).

administrative interpretation. An interpretation given to a law or regulation by an administrative agency. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 413; Statutes 219. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 95; Statutes § 344.]

authentic interpretation. Interpretation arrived at by asking the drafter or drafting body what the intended meaning was.

“The procedure of referring the doubtful statute to its author has acquired a name in the literature of jurisprudence. It is called ‘authentic interpretation.’ ... [Although] this device has been tried in ... recent times in certain European countries, ... [it] has always failed, and no thoughtful adviser would recommend it to any government today.” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 29–30 (1968).

comparative interpretation. A method of statutory construction by which parts of the statute are compared to each other, and the statute as a whole is compared to other documents from the same source on a similar subject.

customary interpretation. Interpretation based on earlier rulings on the same subject. [Cases: Customs and Usages 15. C.J.S. Customs and Usages §§ 21–23.]

extensive interpretation. A liberal interpretation that applies a statutory provision to a case not falling within its literal words.

grammatical interpretation. Interpretation that is based exclusively on the words themselves. [Cases: Statutes 189. C.J.S. Statutes § 324.]

liberal interpretation. Interpretation according to what the reader believes the author reasonably intended, even if, through inadvertence, the author failed to think of it. — Also termed mixed interpretation. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 656; Statutes 235. C.J.S. Statutes § 376.]

limited interpretation. See restrictive interpretation.

logical interpretation. Interpretation that departs from the literal words on the ground that there may be other, more satisfactory evidence of the author's true intention. — Also termed rational interpretation.

mixed interpretation. See liberal interpretation.

practical interpretation. See contemporaneous construction under CONSTRUCTION.

rational interpretation. See logical interpretation.

restrictive interpretation. An interpretation that is bound by a principle or principles existing outside the interpreted text. — Also termed restricted interpretation; limited interpretation; interpretatio limitata. Cf. unrestrictive interpretation.

statutory interpretation. See STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.

strict interpretation. Interpretation according to what the reader believes the author must have been thinking at the time of the writing, and no more. • Typically, this type of reading gives a text a narrow meaning. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 656; Statutes 235. C.J.S. Statutes § 376.]

unrestrictive interpretation. Interpretation in good faith, without reference to any specific principle. Cf. restrictive interpretation.

2. The understanding one has about the meaning of something. [Cases: Statutes 174–278. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 306–431.] 3. A translation, esp. oral, from one language to another. 4. CHARACTERIZATION(1). See CONSTRUCTION(2). — interpret, vb. — interpretative, interpretive, adj.

INTERPRETATION CLAUSE

interpretation clause. A legislative or contractual provision giving the meaning of words frequently used or explaining how the document as a whole is to be construed. [Cases: Statutes 179. C.J.S. Statutes § 309.]

INTERPRETATIO VIPERINA

interpretatio viperina (in-t<<schwa>>r-pri-tay-shee-oh vI-p<<schwa>>-rI-n<< schwa>>). [Law Latin “a viper's interpretation”] Hist. A disapproved method of construction, by which ambiguous documents are interpreted in a way that destroys their effectiveness.

INTERPRETATIVE RULE

interpretative rule. Administrative law. 1. The requirement that an administrative agency explain the statutes under which it operates. 2. An administrative rule explaining an agency's interpretation of a statute. — Also termed interpretive rule. Cf. LEGISLATIVE RULE. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 382.1.]

INTERPRETED TESTIMONY interpreted testimony. See TESTIMONY.

INTERPRETER

interpreter. A person who translates, esp. orally, from one language to another; esp., a person who is sworn at a trial to accurately translate the testimony of a witness who is deaf or who speaks a foreign language. [Cases: Criminal Law 642; Trial 22; Witnesses 230. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1152; Trial § 95; Witnesses § 399.]

INTERPRETIVE RULE

interpretive rule. See INTERPRETATIVE RULE.

INTERPRETIVISM

interpretivism. A doctrine of constitutional interpretation holding that judges must follow norms or values expressly stated or implied in the language of the Constitution. Cf. NONINTERPRETIVISM; ORIGINALISM.

“A long-standing dispute in constitutional theory has gone under different names at different times, but today's terminology seems as helpful as any. Today we are likely to call the contending sides ‘interpretivism’ and ‘noninterpretivism’ — the former indicating that judges deciding constitutional issues should confine themselves to enforcing norms that are stated or clearly implicit in the written Constitution, the latter the contrary view that courts should go beyond that set of references and enforce norms that cannot be discovered within the four corners of the instrument.” John Hart Ely, Democracy and Distrust 1 (1980).

INTER QUATTUOR PARIETES inter quattuor parietes (in-t<<schwa>>r kwah-too-<<schwa>>r p<<schwa>>-rI-<<schwa>>-teez), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] Within the four walls.

INTERRACIAL ADOPTION

interracial adoption. See transracial adoption under ADOPTION.

INTERRACIAL MARRIAGE interracial marriage. See MISCEGENATION.

INTER REGALIA

inter regalia (in-t<<schwa>>r ri-gay-lee-<<schwa>>), adj. [Latin] Included in the royal powers or prerogatives; among other things belonging to the sovereign. — Also termed in patrimonio principis. See REGALIA(1)–(3).

INTERREGNUM

interregnum (in-t<<schwa>>-reg-n<<schwa>>m). 1. An interval between reigns; the time when a throne is vacant between the reign of a sovereign and the accession of a successor. 2. Archaic. Authority exercised during a temporary vacancy of the throne or a suspension of the regular government. 3. A break or pause in a continuous event.

INTERROGATEE

interrogatee (in-ter-<<schwa>>-g<<schwa>>-tee). A person who is interrogated. — Also termed interrogee (in-ter-<<schwa>>-gee).

INTERROGATION

interrogation, n. The formal or systematic questioning of a person; esp., intensive questioning by the police, usu. of a person arrested for or suspected of committing a crime. • The Supreme Court has held that, for purposes of the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, interrogation includes not only express questioning but also words or actions that the police should know are reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response. Rhode Island v. Innis, 446 U.S. 291, 100 S.Ct. 1682 (1980). — interrogate, vb. — interrogative, adj.

custodial interrogation. Police questioning of a detained person about the crime that he or she is suspected of having committed. • Miranda warnings must be given before a custodial interrogation. [Cases: Criminal Law 412.1(4). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 897–898, 900, 904.]

investigatory interrogation. Routine, nonaccusatory questioning by the police of a person who is not in custody.

noncustodial interrogation. Police questioning of a suspect who has not been detained and can leave at will. • Miranda warnings are usu. not given before a noncustodial interrogation.

INTERROGATIVE QUESTION

interrogative question. Civil law. In a criminal trial, a question asked of a witness to elicit inadmissible evidence relating to the crime at issue in the case. Cf. ASSERTIVE QUESTION.

INTERROGATOR

interrogator (in-ter-<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>r). One who poses questions to another.

INTERROGATORY

interrogatory (in-t<<schwa>>-rog-<<schwa>>-tor-ee), n. A written question (usu. in a set of questions) submitted to an opposing party in a lawsuit as part of discovery. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1471–1542; Pretrial Procedure 241–248. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 4, 8–11, 14–24, 32, 55–61; Pretrial Procedure § 57.]

cross-interrogatory. An interrogatory from a party who has received a set of interrogatories. [Cases: Pretrial Procedure 241–248. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 4, 8–11, 14–24, 32, 55–61; Pretrial Procedure § 57.]

special interrogatory. A written jury question whose answer is required to supplement a general verdict. • This term is not properly used in federal practice, which authorizes interrogatories and special verdicts, but not special interrogatories. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49. The term is properly used, however, in the courts of some states. — Also termed special issue. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2211–2220; Trial 346–366. C.J.S. Trial §§ 818, 820, 824–825, 928–1017.]

One nation's interference by force, or threat of force, in another nation's internal affairs or in questions arising between other nations. — intervene, vb. — interventionary, adj.

“Intervention may or may not involve the use of force. It is frequently possible for a powerful state to impair the political independence of another weaker state without actually utilizing its armed forces. This result may be accomplished by lending open approval, as by the relaxation of an arms embargo, to a revolutionary group headed by individuals ready to accept the political or economic dominance of the intervening state. It may be accomplished by the withholding of recognition of a new government, combined with various forms of economic and financial pressure until the will of the stronger state prevails through the resignation or overthrow of the government disapproved.” Philip C. Jessup, A Modern Law of Nations 172–73 (1949).

humanitarian intervention. An intervention by the international community to curb abuses of human rights within a country, even if the intervention infringes the country's sovereignty.

INVENTION

invention, n. Patents. 1. A patentable device or process created through independent effort and characterized by an extraordinary degree of skill or ingenuity; a newly discovered art or operation. • Invention embraces the concept of nonobviousness. [Cases: Patents 16(1). C.J.S. Patents § 68.] 2. The act or process of creating such a device or process. 3. Generally, anything that is created or devised. — invent, vb.

“The truth is, the word cannot be defined in such manner as to afford any substantial aid in determining whether a particular device involves an exercise of the inventive faculty or not. In a given case we may be able to say that there is present invention of a very high order. In another we can see that there is lacking that palpable something that distinguishes invention from simple mechanical skill. Courts, adopting fixed principles as a guide, have by a process of exclusion determined that certain variations in old devices do or do not involve invention; but whether the variation relied upon in a particular case is anything more than ordinary mechanical skill is a question which cannot be answered by applying the test of any general definition.” McClain v. Ortmyer, 141 U.S. 419, 427, 12 S.Ct. 76, 78 (1891).

“An ‘invention’ is any art, machine, manufacture, design, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, or any variety of plant, which is or may be patentable under the patent laws. [37 CFR § 501.3(d).]” 60 Am. Jur. 2d Patents § 894, at 601 n.98 (1987).

abandoned invention. An invention that an inventor has either deliberately stopped trying to exploit, or else acted in a way that precludes claiming the invention in a later patent. • Under § 102(c) of the Patent Act, abandonment bars a patent on that invention. But abandonment of an imperfect form of an invention does not bar a patent on a later-perfected form. Unless publicly known, an abandoned invention is not prior art to a later inventor. Under § 102(g) of the Patent Act, abandonment of the same invention by a first inventor also prevents the first inventor from blocking the second inventor's patent application in an interference. Cf. ABANDONED APPLICATION.

distinct invention. One part of an invention that can be used on its own, and the absence of which will not prevent the remainder of the invention from working. • When the subject matter of a patent application is found to be multiple distinct inventions, the examiner requires the inventor to restrict the application to a single invention. See RESTRICTION(4). Cf. independent invention.

improvement invention. A nontrivial and nonobvious betterment of an existing device or process. • The improvement may be patented, but the protection applies only to the improvement, not to the invention improved on.

independent invention. An invention that bears no relation to another invention, esp. to another invention covered in the same patent application. • A single patent may not cover multiple independent inventions; the applicant must elect one and drop any others from the application. See RESTRICTION(4). Cf. distinct invention.

new-use invention. Discovery of a new use for an existing invention. • As long as the new use is nonobvious — and actually useful — it may be patented. 35 USCA §§ 101–102.

small invention. See UTILITY MODEL.

software-based invention. A device or machine that uses innovative software to achieve results. • A software-based invention, process, or method may qualify for a patent, but the physical components and the underlying software are usu. not separately patentable.

INVENTIVELY NEW

inventively new, adj. Patents. Original in any way. • The phrase is sometimes used to distinguish “new” in the usual sense from the term of art in patent law.

INVENTORY

inventory, n. 1. A detailed list of assets; esp., an executor's or administrator's detailed list of the probate-estate assets <make an inventory of the estate>. • The term also sometimes denotes a divorcing spouse's detailed list of all his or her marital and separate assets and liabilities. — Also termed inventory and appraisal. See PROBATE ESTATE; ACCOUNTING. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 62–73. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators §§ 152–162.] 2. Accounting. The portion of a financial statement reflecting the value of a business's raw materials, works-in-progress, and finished products <the company's reported inventory was suspiciously low>. 3. Raw materials or goods in stock <the dealership held a sale to clear out its October inventory>. 4. Bankruptcy. Personal property leased or furnished, held for sale or lease, or to be furnished under a contract for service; raw materials, work in process, or materials used or consumed in a business, including farm products such as crops or livestock <the debtor was found to have inventory that was valued at $300,000>. — inventory, vb.

“Section 547 itself defines ‘inventory’ and ‘receivable.’ Do not use the U.C.C. definitions of these terms, or the definitions of them learned in business law classes. It is especially important to note that, for purposes of section 547, ‘inventory’ includes ‘farm products such as crops or livestock’” David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 6-35, at 351 (1993).

INVENTORY FEE

inventory fee. A probate court's fee for services rendered to a decedent's estate.

INVENTORY SEARCH

inventory search. See SEARCH.

INVENTORY-TURNOVER RATIO inventory-turnover ratio. Accounting. The result of dividing the cost of goods by the average inventory. • This calculation is used to determine the effectiveness of the company's inventory-management policy.

IN VENTRE SA MERE

in ventre sa mere (in ven-tree sa mer). See EN VENTRE SA MERE.

INVENTUS

inventus (in-ven-t<<schwa>>s), p.pl.[Latin] Found. • This word appears in various phrases, such as thesaurus inventus (“treasure trove”) and non est inventus (“he is not found”).

INVERITARE

inveritare (in-ve-r<<schwa>>-tair-ee), vb.[Law Latin] To make proof of a thing.

outlay. [Cases: Contracts 193.]

fixed-dollar investment. An investment whose value is the same when sold as it was when purchased. • Examples are bonds held to maturity, certain government securities, and savings accounts.

fixed-income investment. An investment (including preferred stock) that pays a fixed dividend throughout its life and is not redeemable unless the corporation makes a special call.

net investment. 1. The net cash required to start a new project. 2. The gross investment in capital goods less capital consumption, including depreciation.

2. The asset acquired or the sum invested. 3. INVESTITURE(1). 4. LIVERY OF SEISIN.

INVESTMENT ADVISER investment adviser. A person who, for pay, advises others, either directly or through publications or writings, about the value of securities or the advisability of investing in, purchasing, or selling securities, or who is in the business of issuing reports on securities. • The term generally excludes an employee of an investment adviser; a depository institution, such as a bank; lawyers, accountants, engineers, and teachers whose investment advice is solely incidental to the practice of their profession; a broker-dealer whose advice is incidental to the conduct of business and who receives no special compensation for that advice; and publishers of bona fide newspapers, newsmagazines, or business or financial publications of general, regular, or paid circulation. [Cases: Securities Regulation 223–224. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 360–365.]

INVESTMENT ADVISORS ACT

Investment Advisors Act. A federal statute — administered by the Securities and Exchange Commission — that regulates investment advisers. 15 USCA §§ 80b-1 et seq. [Cases: Securities Regulation 223–224. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 360–365.]

INVESTMENT BANK

investment bank. See BANK.

INVESTMENT BANKER

investment banker. A person or institution that underwrites, sells, or assists in raising capital for businesses, esp. for new issues of stocks or bonds; a trader at an investment bank. See investment bank under BANK.

INVESTMENT BANKING

investment banking. The business of underwriting or selling securities; esp., the marketing of new stocks or bonds.

“The term ‘investment banking’ can be used to encompass [underwriting, and acting as a dealer, broker, and market maker], and any person in a firm performing any of those functions could be called an investment banker. By convention, however, those terms are used less broadly.

In large securities firms, for example, there are a number of departments. The one most visible to the public handles trades for individuals. The technical term for the persons working with customers in that department is 'registered representative,' but those persons are often called brokers or stockbrokers. Insiders would not call them investment bankers. A department almost invisible to the public handles underwritings and performs a wide range of services primarily for client companies. Among those are: (1) assisting companies in the sale of securities, almost always in large amounts, to such private purchasers as insurance companies; (2) finding acquisition partners for companies that wish to acquire or be acquired by others; and (3) giving financial advice of various sorts to client companies. That department is likely to be called the investment banking department. In any case, its functions are at the heart of the insiders' conception of investment banking." Larry D. Soderquist & Theresa A. Gabaldon, Securities Law 30 (1998).

INVESTMENT BILL

investment bill. See BILL(6).

INVESTMENT COMPANY

investment company. See COMPANY.

INVESTMENT COMPANY ACT

Investment Company Act. A 1940 federal statute enacted to curb financial malpractices and abuses by regulating investment-company activities and transactions — specifically, by requiring registration of investment companies and prohibiting transactions by unregistered companies; by making certain persons ineligible as affiliated persons or underwriters; by regulating affiliations of directors, officers, and employees; by barring changes in investment policy without shareholder approval; and by regulating contracts of advisers and underwriters. 15 USCA §§ 80a-1 et seq. [Cases: Securities Regulation 211–222. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 332–359.]

INVESTMENT CONTRACT

investment contract. 1. A contract in which money is invested in a common enterprise with profits to come solely from the efforts of others; an agreement or transaction in which a party invests money in expectation of profits derived from the efforts of a promoter or other third party. 2. A transaction in which an investor furnishes initial value or risk capital to an enterprise, a portion of that amount being subjected to the risks of the enterprise. • In such an arrangement, the investor typically does not receive the right to exercise control over the managerial decisions of the enterprise. [Cases: Securities Regulation 5.10, 252. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 3, 9–10, 33, 381–382, 384–386, 392.]

“[A]n investment contract for purposes of the Securities Act means a contract, transaction or scheme whereby a person invests his money in a common enterprise and is led to expect profits solely from the efforts of the promoter or a third party.... It embodies a flexible rather than a static principle, one that is capable of adaptation to meet the countless and variable schemes devised by those who seek the use of the money of others on the promise of profits.” SEC v. Howey Co., 328 U.S. 293, 298–99, 66 S.Ct. 1100, 1103 (1946).

guaranteed investment contract. An investment contract under which an institutional investor invests a lump sum (such as a pension fund) with an insurer that promises to return the principal (the lump sum) and a certain amount of interest at the contract's end. — Abbr. GIC.

INVESTMENT-DIRECTION AGREEMENT investment-direction agreement. A contract by which a trustee agrees not to diversify the trust's assets, even though the trustee has the legal right to do so, and the beneficiary agrees to hold the trustee harmless for any losses resulting from not diversifying. — Abbr. IDA.

INVESTMENT DISCRETION

investment discretion. The ability of a person to (1) determine what will be purchased or sold by or for an account, (2) decide what will be purchased or sold by or for the account even though another may have the responsibility, or (3) influence the purchase or sale of securities or property in a way that, according to an administrative agency such as the Securities and Exchange Commission, should be subject to the agency's governing rules and regulations.

INVESTMENT-GRADE BOND investment-grade bond. See BOND(3).

INVESTMENT-GRADE RATING

accredited investor. An investor treated under the Securities Act of 1933 as being knowledgeable and sophisticated about financial matters, esp. because of the investor's large net worth. • In a securities offering that is exempt from registration, an accredited investor (either a person or an entity) is not entitled to protection under the Act's disclosure provisions, although the investor does keep its remedies for fraud. [Cases: Securities Regulation 18.11. C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 64.]

institutional investor. One who trades large volumes of securities, usu. by investing other people's money into large managed funds. • Institutional investors are often pension funds, investment companies, trust managers, or insurance companies. See MUTUAL FUND.

qualified investor. Securities. An investor who is an individual and has an investment portfolio worth at least $5 million, or a company that owns or manages investments worth at least $25 million.

sophisticated investor. Securities. An investor who has sufficient knowledge and experience of financial matters to be capable of evaluating a security's qualities. • Sophisticated investors do not require the full protection of securities laws.

INVIDIOUS DISCRIMINATION

invidious discrimination (in-vid-ee-<<schwa>>s di-skrim-<<schwa>>-nay-sh<< schwa>>n). See DISCRIMINATION.

IN VINCULIS

in vinculis (in ving-ky<<schwa>>-lis). [Latin "in chains"] In actual custody.

"The engagement of a magistrate to an accomplice, that if he will give his evidence, he will experience favor, is merely in the nature of a recommendation to mercy, for no authority is given to a justice of the peace to pardon an offender, and to tell him that he shall be a witness against others. He is not therefore assured of his pardon, but gives his evidence in vinculis, in custody; and it depends on his behaviour, whether he shall or shall not be admitted to mercy." 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 82–83 (2d ed. 1826).

INVIOABILITY

invioability (in-vI-<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>-bil-<<schwa>>-tee), n. The quality or fact of being safe from violation.

The principle that equitable relief (such as an injunction) is available only when no adequate legal remedy (such as monetary damages) exists. • Although this rule is one that courts continue to cite, the courts do not usu. follow it literally in practice. — Also termed adequacy test. [Cases: Injunction 14, 138.6. C.J.S. Injunctions §§ 24, 27–28.]

“The irreparable injury rule has received considerable scholarly attention. In 1978, Owen Fiss examined the possible reasons for the rule and found them wanting. A vigorous debate over the economic wisdom of applying the rule to specific performance of contracts began about the same time, and soon came to center on the transaction costs of administering the two remedies. Both Fiss and Dan Dobbs have noted that the rule does not seem to be taken very seriously, and in a review of Fiss's book, I argued that the definition of adequacy pulls most of the rule's teeth. The Restatement (Second) of Torts dropped the rule from the blackletter and condemned it as misleading, but replaced it only with a long and unstructured list of factors to be considered.... [M]any sophisticated lawyers believe that the rule continues to reflect a serious preference for legal over equitable remedies.” Douglas Laycock, The Death of the Irreparable Injury Rule 9 (1991).

IRREPLEVIABLE

irrepleviable (i-r<<schwa>>-plev-ee-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. (Of property) not capable of being replevied. — Formerly also spelled irreplevisable. Cf. REPLEVIABLE.

IRRESISTIBLE FORCE

irresistible force. See FORCE.

IRRESISTIBLE-IMPULSE TEST irresistible-impulse test. Criminal law. A test for insanity, holding that a person is not criminally responsible for an act if mental disease prevented that person from controlling potentially criminal conduct. • The few jurisdictions that have adopted this test have combined it with the McNaghten rules. — Also termed control test; volitional test. See INSANITY DEFENSE; MCNAGHTEN RULES. [Cases: Criminal Law 50.]

“The first reaction of the legal profession to the irresistible impulse defense, when it was introduced to the law many years ago, was inclined to be favorable. Then a change set in and for many years the prevailing view was strongly against its recognition. Present indications are that the tide is changing again. There seems to be a growing belief to the effect that ignoring the possibility of such a defense fails to give full recognition to the fundamental concept of mens rea.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 975 (3d ed. 1982).

IRRESISTIBLE SUPERHUMAN CAUSE irresistible superhuman cause. See ACT OF GOD.

ISSUABLE PLEA

issuable plea.See PLEA(3).

ISSUE

issue,n.1. A point in dispute between two or more parties.

“In federal civil procedure, an issue is a single, certain, and material point arising out of the allegations and contentions of the parties; it is matter affirmed on one side and denied on the other, and when a fact is alleged in the complaint and denied in the answer, the matter is then put in issue between the parties.” 35A C.J.S. Federal Civil Procedure § 357, at 541 (1960).

collateral issue. A question or issue not directly connected with the matter in dispute. [Cases: Evidence 99; Witnesses 405. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 2–5, 197–199, 204, 206; Witnesses § 770.]

deep issue. The fundamental issue to be decided by a court in ruling on a point of law. • A deep issue is usu. briefly phrased in separate sentences, with facts interwoven (in chronological order) to show precisely what problem is to be addressed. Cf. surface issue.

“Essentially, a deep issue is the ultimate, concrete question that a court needs to answer to decide a point your way. Deep refers to the deep structure of the case — not to deep thinking. The deep issue is the final question you pose when you can no longer usefully ask the follow-up question, ‘And what does that turn on?’ ” Bryan A. Garner, The Winning Brief 56 (2d ed. 2004).

fact issue. See issue of fact.

general issue. 1. A plea (often a general denial) by which a party denies the truth of every material allegation in an opposing party's pleading. 2. The issue arising from such a plea. [Cases: Pleading 115. C.J.S. Pleading § 185.]

“The general issue is a denial of the legal conclusion sought to be drawn from the declaration. It denies by a general form of expression the defendant's liability, and enables the defendant to contest, without specific averments of the defense to be asserted, most of the allegations which the plaintiff may be required to prove to sustain his action, and in some actions to raise also various affirmative defenses. It fails to perform the functions of pleading, either in giving notice or in reducing the case to specific issues.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 169, at 304 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

immaterial issue. An issue not necessary to decide the point of law. Cf. material issue.

informal issue. Rare. An issue that arises when a defendant does not properly or fully plead in answer to a material allegation.

issue of fact. A point supported by one party's evidence and controverted by another's. — Also termed fact issue.

issue of law. A point on which the evidence is undisputed, the outcome depending on the court's interpretation of the law. — Also termed legal issue.

legal issue. 1. A legal question, usu. at the foundation of a case and requiring a court's decision. 2. See issue of law.

material issue. An issue that must be decided in order to resolve a controversy. • The existence of a material issue of disputed fact precludes summary judgment. Cf. immaterial issue.

multifarious issue. An issue that inquires about several different points (esp. facts) when each one should be inquired about in a separate issue.

special issue. 1. At common law, an issue arising from a specific allegation in a pleading. • Special issues are no longer used in most jurisdictions. 2. See special interrogatory under INTERROGATORY.

surface issue. A superficially stated issue phrased in a single sentence, without many facts, and usu. beginning with the word whether. Cf. deep issue.

ultimate issue. A not-yet-decided point that is sufficient either in itself or in connection with other points to resolve the entire case. — Also termed ultimate question.

2. A class or series of securities that are simultaneously offered for sale. — Also termed bond issue; stock issue. See OFFERING.

hot issue. A security that, after an initial or secondary offering, is traded in the open market at a substantially higher price. — Also termed hot stock.

new issue. A stock or bond sold by a corporation for the first time, often to raise working capital. See BLUE-SKY LAW.

original issue. The first issue of securities of a particular type or series.

shelf issue. An issue of securities that were previously registered but not released at the time of registration.

3. Wills & estates. Lineal descendants; offspring.

issue female. 1. Female descendants. 2. A female whose descent from a specified ancestor is traceable through the direct female line. See tail female under TAIL.

issue male. 1. Male descendants. 2. A male whose descent from a specified ancestor is traceable through the direct male line. See tail male under TAIL.

lawful issue. Descendants, including descendants more remote than children. • At common law, the term included only those who were children of legally recognized subsisting marriages. See DESCENDANT; HEIR. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 25. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 32.]

4. Commercial law. The first delivery of a negotiable instrument by its maker or holder.

issue, vb. 1. To accrue <rents issuing from land>. 2. To be put forth officially <without probable cause, the search warrant will not issue>. 3. To send out or distribute officially <issue process> <issue stock>. — issuance, n.

ITA

ITA. abbr. INTERNATIONAL TRADE ADMINISTRATION.

ITA LEX SCRIPTA EST

ita lex scripta est (I-t<<schwa>> leks skrip-t<<schwa>> est). [Latin] So the law is written. • This expression means that the law must be obeyed despite the apparent rigor of its application. The idea is that we must be content with the law as it stands, without inquiring into its reasons. — Sometimes shortened to ita scripta est [“so it is written”].

“If practice be the whole he is taught, practice must also be the whole he will ever know: if he be uninstructed in the elements and first principles upon which the rule of practice is founded, the least variation from established precedents will totally distract and bewilder him: ita lex scripta est is the utmost his knowledge will arrive at; he must never aspire to form, and seldom expect to comprehend, any arguments drawn a priori, from the spirit of the laws and the natural foundations of justice.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 32 (1765).

ITA TE DEUS ADJUVET

ita te Deus adjuvet (I-t<<schwa>> tee dee-<<schwa>>s aj-<<schwa>>-vet). [Latin] So help you God. • An old form of administering an oath in England, usu. in connection with other words, such as: Ita te Deus adjuvet, et sacrosancta Dei Evangelia (“So help you God, and God's holy gospels”), and Ita te Deus adjuvet et omnes sancti (“So help you God and all the saints”).

ITC

JACKSON–DENNO HEARING

Jackson–Denno hearing.A court proceeding held outside the jury's presence, to determine whether the defen-dant's confession was voluntary and therefore admissible as evidence. Jackson v. Denno, 378 U.S. 368, 84 S.Ct. 1774 (1964). — Also termed Jackson v. Denno hearing. [Cases: Criminal Law 531–532. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 932, 938–939, 941.]

JACKSON<TT> STANDARD

Jackson standard.Criminal law. The principle that the standard of review on appeal — when a criminal defen-dant claims that there is insufficient evidence to support the conviction — is to determine whether, after consi-dering the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, any rational trier of fact could have found the essential elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt. Jackson v. Virginia, 443 U.S. 307, 99 S.Ct. 2781 (1979). [Cases: Criminal Law 1144.13(3), 1159.2(7).]

JAILHOUSE LAWYER

jailhouse lawyer. A prison inmate who seeks release through legal procedures or who gives legal advice to other inmates. — Also termed guardhouse lawyer.

JAIL LIBERTIES

jail liberties. Bounds within which a jail or prison lies and throughout which certain prisoners are allowed to move freely, usu. after giving bond for the liberties. • The bounds are considered an extension of the prison walls. Historically, jail liberties were given in England to those imprisoned for debt. The prisoners were allowed to move freely within the city in which the prison was located. — Also spelled (esp. in BrE) gaol liberties. — Also termed jail limits.

“[S]tatutes were from time to time passed enlarging the gaol liberties, in order to mitigate the hardships of imprisonment: thus, the whole city of Boston was held the ‘gaol liberties’ of its county gaol. And so with a large part of New York City.... The prisoner, while within the limits, is considered as within the walls of the prison.” 1 John Bouvier, Bouvier's Law Dictionary 1333–34 (8th ed. 1914).

JAMAICAN SWITCH

Jamaican switch. An illegal scheme whereby one conspirator convinces the victim of a need for help in handling a large sum of money, usu. by claiming to have found the money or by claiming to be an unsophisticated foreigner, and promises to share part of the money with the victim or asks the victim for help in finding a suitable charity to donate to, at which time the other conspirator appears and promises to assist if both the victim and first conspirator provide good-faith money, the intent being for the two conspirators to leave with all the money, including the victim's. • The name given to this scheme is likely to be considered offensive by some. — Also termed pigeon drop. [Cases: False Pretenses 16.]

JAMES<TT> HEARING

James hearing. A court proceeding held to determine whether the out-of-court statements of a coconspirator should be admitted into evidence, by analyzing whether there was a conspiracy, whether the declarant and the defendant were part of the conspiracy, and whether the statement was made in furtherance of the conspiracy. United States v. James, 590 F.2d 575 (5th Cir. 1979); Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(E). [Cases: Criminal Law 427. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 972.]

jettison (jet-<<schwa>>-s<<schwa>>n), n. Maritime law. 1. The act of voluntarily throwing cargo overboard to lighten or stabilize a ship that is in immediate danger. — Also termed equitable jettison; jactura; jactus mercium navis levandae causa. See general average under AVERAGE. 2. JETSAM. — jettison, vb.

“The goods must not be swept away by the violence of the waves, for then the loss falls entirely upon the merchant or his insurer, but they must be intentionally sacrificed by the mind and agency of man, for the safety of the ship and the residue of the cargo. The jettison must be made for sufficient cause, and not from groundless timidity. It must be made in a case of extremity, when the ship is in danger of perishing by the fury of a storm, or is laboring upon rocks or shallows, or is closely pursued by pirates or enemies; and then if the ship and the residue of the cargo be saved by means of the sacrifice, nothing can be more reasonable than that the property saved should bear its proportion of the loss.” 3 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *232–33 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

JEUX DE BOURSE

jeux de bourse (zhoo d<<schwa>> b<<schwa>>rs), n. [French “games of the stock exchange”] Speculation in stocks or bonds, as by dealing in options or futures.

JEWELL<TT> INSTRUCTION

Jewell instruction (joo-w<<schwa>>l). Criminal procedure. A court's instruction to the jury that the defendant can be found to have the requisite criminal mental state despite being deliberately ignorant of some of the facts surrounding the crime. • If a defendant claims ignorance of some fact essential to the crime, such as not knowing that a particular bag contained drugs, but the surrounding circumstances would put a reasonable person on notice that there was a high probability of illegality, as when the defendant has taken the bag from a known drug-dealer and has noticed the smell of marijuana coming from the bag, then the court may instruct the jury that it is entitled to infer the defendant's guilty knowledge if the defendant deliberately avoided knowledge of the critical facts. United States v. Jewell, 532 F.2d 697 (9th Cir. 1976). — Also termed deliberate-indifference instruction. [Cases: Criminal Law 772(5). C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1312.]

jocus partitus (joh-k<<schwa>>s pahr-tI-t<<schwa>>s), n. [Law Latin “divided game”] Hist. A gambling arrangement made by the parties on a lawsuit's outcome.

JOHN-A-NOKES

John-a-Nokes. Archaic. A fictitious name for an unknown party to a legal proceeding, esp. the first party. • The name is short for “John who dwells at the oak.” — Abbr. J.N. — Also spelled John-a-Noakes.

JOHN-A-STILES

John-a-Stiles. Archaic. A fictitious name for an unknown party to a legal proceeding, esp. the second party. • The name is short for “John who dwells at the stile.” — Abbr. J.S. — Also spelled John-a-Styles.

JOHN DOE

John Doe. A fictitious name used in a legal proceeding to designate a person whose identity is unknown, to protect a person's known identity, or to indicate that a true defendant does not exist. Cf. JANE DOE; RICHARD ROE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 101; Parties 67, 73. C.J.S. Parties §§ 170, 172.]

“Sheriffs in time growing remiss in their duty, allowed of any persons as pledges, sometimes returning the names of fictitious persons as pledges, at others, neglecting to require or return any at all.... And the legislature, to supply the want of real persons as pledges, and recompense the defendant where he has been unjustly or vexatiously sued, has by various statutes, either given him the costs he has incurred in making his defence; or else deprived the plaintiff of recovering those costs he is entitled to by law, in cases of obtaining a verdict, by leaving it to the judge at the trial to certify on the record, that he had little or no cause of action. Since these statutes for allowing the defendant his costs, where the plaintiff fails, or is nonsuited, the writ to the coroner to affect the pledges has fallen into disuse, and two good-natured personages, John Doe and Richard Roe, from their universal acquaintance and peculiar longevity, have become the ready and common pledges of every suitor.” 1 George Crompton, Rules and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas xlvii (3d ed. 1787).

“The fictitious names John Doe and Richard Roe regularly appeared in actions of ejectment ... at common law. Doe was the nominal plaintiff, who by a fiction was said to have entered land under a valid lease; Roe was said to have ejected Doe, and the lawsuit took the title Doe v. Roe. These fictional allegations disappeared upon the enactment of the Common Law Procedure Act of 1852.... Beyond actions of ejectment, and esp. in the U.S., John Doe, Jane Doe, Richard Roe, Jane Roe, and Peter Poe have come to identify a party to a lawsuit whose true name is either unknown or purposely shielded.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 290–91 (2d ed. 1995).

JOINDER

joinder, n. The uniting of parties or claims in a single lawsuit. Cf. CONSOLIDATION(3). [Cases: Action 39–52; Federal Civil Procedure 81, 201–267; Parties 49. C.J.S. Actions §§ 143–176; Insurance §§ 1407, 1409–1410, 1567; Parties § 127.] — join, vb.

collusive joinder. Joinder of a defendant, usu. a nonresident, in order to have a case removed to federal court. See manufactured diversity under DIVERSITY OF CITIZENSHIP. [Cases: Removal of Cases 36. C.J.S. Removal of Causes § 115.]

compulsory joinder. The necessary joinder of a party if either of the following is true: (1) in that party's absence, those already involved in the lawsuit cannot receive complete relief; or (2) the absence of such a party, claiming an interest in the subject of an action, might either impair the protection of that interest or leave some other party subject to multiple or inconsistent obligations. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a). — Also termed mandatory joinder. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 201.]

fraudulent joinder. The bad-faith joinder of a party, usu. a resident of the state, to prevent removal of a case to federal court. [Cases: Removal of Cases 36. C.J.S. Removal of Causes § 115.]

joinder in demurrer. Common-law pleading. A set form of words by which either party accepts or joins in a legal issue; esp., the plaintiff's acceptance of the defendant's issue of law.

joinder in issue. See joinder of issue.

joinder in pleading. Common-law pleading. One party's acceptance of the opposing party's proposed issue and mode of trial.

joinder of error. A written denial of the errors alleged in an assignment of errors in a criminal case.

Crim. P. 8(a). [Cases: Indictment and Information 125. C.J.S. Indictments and Informations §§ 146–148.]

joinder of remedies. The joinder of alternative claims, such as breach of contract and quantum meruit, or of one claim with another prospective claim, such as a creditor's claim against a debtor to recover on a loan and the creditor's claim against a third party to set aside the transfer of the loan's collateral. [Cases: Action 43; Federal Civil Procedure 81. C.J.S. Actions §§ 154, 156.]

mandatory joinder. See compulsory joinder.

misjoinder. See MISJOINDER.

nonjoinder. See NONJOINDER.

permissive joinder. The optional joinder of parties if (1) their claims or the claims asserted against them are asserted jointly, severally, or in respect of the same transaction or occurrence, and (2) any legal or factual question common to all of them will arise. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 241.]

pretensive joinder. Joinder of defendants solely to obtain venue in a jurisdiction in which the action could not otherwise be tried.

JOINT-CHECK RULE

joint-check rule.The principle that, when an owner or general contractor issues a check that is made jointly payable to a subcontractor and the subcontractor's materialman, the materialman's indorsement on the check certifies that it has been paid all amounts due to it, up to the amount of the check. • This rule protects the owner or general contractor from lien foreclosure by a materialman who was not paid by the subcontractor. By issuing a joint check, the owner or general contractor is not left merely to hope that the subcontractor pays all the materialmen. And the materialman is protected because it can refuse to indorse the check until it is satisfied that the subcontractor will pay it the appropriate amount. [Cases: Mechanics' Liens 240. C.J.S. Mechanics' Liens §§ 277, 286–287.]

JOINTURE

jointure (joyn-ch<<schwa>>r). 1. Archaic. A woman's freehold life estate in land, made in consideration of marriage in lieu of dower and to be enjoyed by her only after her husband's death; a settlement under which a wife receives such an estate. • The four essential elements are that (1) the jointure must take effect immediately upon the husband's death, (2) it must be for the wife's own life, and not for another's life or for a term of years, (3) it must be held by her in her own right and not in trust for her, and (4) it must be in lieu of her entire dower. See DOWER. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy 29, 40. C.J.S. Dower §§ 41, 52.]

equitable jointure. A premarital arrangement for a woman to enjoy a jointure, accepted by the woman in lieu of dower. — Also termed equitable dower.

2. A settlement under which a wife receives such an estate. — Also termed legal jointure. 3. An estate in lands given jointly to a husband and wife before they marry. See JOINTRESS.

JOINTURESS

joyriding, n. The illegal driving of someone else's automobile without permission, but with no intent to deprive the owner of it permanently. • Under the Model Penal Code, the offender's reasonable belief that the owner would have consented is an affirmative defense. See Model Penal Code § 223.9. — Also termed unauthorized use of a vehicle. [Cases: Automobiles 339. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 1511–1523.] — joyride, vb. — joyrider, n.

“When the automobile began to appear and was limited to the possession of a few of the more fortunate members of the community, many persons who ordinarily respected the property rights of others, yielded to the temptation to drive one of these new contrivances without the consent of the owner. This became so common that the term ‘joyrider’ was coined to refer to the person who indulged in such unpermitted use of another's car. For the most part it was a relatively harmless type of trespass” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 333 (3d ed. 1982).

puisne judge (pyoo-nee). [Law French puisé “later born”] 1. A junior judge; a judge without distinction or title. • This was the title formerly used in English common-law courts for a judge other than the chief judge. Today puisne judge refers to any judge of the English High Court, apart from the Chief Justice. 2. See associate judge.

senior administrative patent judge. Patents. A semiretired administrative patent judge who remains active in hearing interferences in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. — Abbr. SAPJ.

senior judge. 1. The judge who has served for the longest time on a given court. 2. A federal or state judge who qualifies for senior status and chooses this status over retirement. See SENIOR STATUS.

side judge. Archaic. A judge — or one of two judges — of inferior rank, associated with a judge of a higher rank for the purpose of constituting a court.

special judge. A judge appointed or selected to sit, usu. in a specific case, in the absence or disqualification of the regular judge or otherwise as provided by statute. [Cases: Judges 13–19, 25. C.J.S. Judges §§ 161–183, 185.]

“Many, if not all, jurisdictions have made provision for the selection of a substitute or special judge to serve in place of the regular judge in the event of disqualification, voluntary recusal, disability, or other absence of the regular judge. The circumstances under which a special or substitute judge may act in place of the regular judge, and the manner in which such a judge may be chosen, are matters of purely local regulation, entirely dependent on local constitutions and statutes.” 46 Am. Jur. 2d Judges § 248, at 331 (1994).

temporary judge. See visiting judge.

trial judge. The judge before whom a case is tried. • This term is used most commonly on appeal from the judge's rulings.

United States Magistrate Judge. See UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE.

visiting judge. A judge appointed by the presiding judge of an administrative region to sit temporarily on a given court, usu. in the regular judge's absence. — Also termed temporary judge; judge pro tempore. [Cases: Judges 13–19, 25. C.J.S. Judges §§ 161–183, 185.]

JUDGE-SHOPPING

judge-shopping. The practice of filing several lawsuits asserting the same claims — in a court or a district with multiple judges — with the hope of having one of the lawsuits assigned to a favorable judge and of nonsuiting or voluntarily dismissing the others. Cf. FORUM-SHOPPING.

JUDGE TRIAL

judge trial. See bench trial under TRIAL.

JUDGMENT

judgment. 1. A court's final determination of the rights and obligations of the parties in a case.

• The term judgment includes an equitable decree and any order from which an appeal lies. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54. — Abbr. J. — Also spelled (esp. in BrE) judgement. — Also termed (historically) judgment ex cathedra. Cf. RULING(1); OPINION(1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2391–2628; Judgment 1. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 2–3, 6, 8, 13.] 2.English law. An opinion delivered by a member of the appellate committee of the House of Lords; a Law Lord's judicial opinion. — Also termed (in sense 2) speech.

“An action is instituted for the enforcement of a right or the redress of an injury. Hence a judgment, as the culmination of the action declares the existence of the right, recognizes the commission of the injury, or negatives the allegation of one or the other. But as no right can exist without a correlative duty, nor any invasion of it without a corresponding obligation to make amends, the judgment necessarily affirms, or else denies, that such a duty or such a liability rests upon the person against whom the aid of the law is invoked.” 1 Henry Campbell Black, A Treatise on the Law of Judgments § 1, at 2 (2d ed. 1902).

accumulative judgment.A second or additional judgment against a person who has already been convicted, the execution of which is postponed until the completion of any prior sentence.

agreed judgment.A settlement that becomes a court judgment when the judge sanctions it. • In effect, an agreed judgment is merely a contract acknowledged in open court and ordered to be recorded, but it binds the parties as fully as other judgments. — Also termed consent judgment; stipulated judgment; judgment by consent. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2397; Judgment 71–91. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 182–194, 370–374.]

alternative judgment.A determination that gives the losing party options for satisfying that party's duties.

cognovit judgment (kog-noh-vit). A debtor's confession of judgment; judgment entered in accordance with a cognovit. See CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT; COGNOVIT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2396; Judgment 54. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 140, 143–144, 170.]

conditional judgment.A judgment whose force depends on the performance of certain acts to be done in the future by one of the parties. • For example, a conditional judgment may order the sale of mortgaged property in a foreclosure proceeding unless the mortgagor pays the amount decreed within the time specified. — Also termed common order.

confession of judgment.See CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT.

consent judgment.See agreed judgment.

contradictory judgment.Civil law. A judgment that has been given after the court has heard the parties make their claims and defenses. • In Louisiana, this term is opposed to default judgment. Cf. contradictory motion under MOTION.

declaratory judgment.A binding adjudication that establishes the rights and other legal relations of the parties without providing for or ordering enforcement. • Declaratory judgments are often sought, for example, by insurance companies in determining whether a policy covers a given insured or peril. — Also termed declaratory decree; declaration. [Cases: Declaratory Judgment 1.

C.J.S. Declaratory Judgments § 1.]

default judgment. See DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

deferred judgment. A judgment placing a convicted defendant on probation, the successful completion of which will prevent entry of the underlying judgment of conviction. • This type of probation is common with minor traffic offenses. — Also termed deferred adjudication; deferred-adjudication probation; deferred prosecution; probation before judgment; probation without judgment; pretrial intervention; adjudication withheld. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 2050.]

deficiency judgment. A judgment against a debtor for the unpaid balance of the debt if a foreclosure sale or a sale of repossessed personal property fails to yield the full amount of the debt due. — Also termed deficiency decree. [Cases: Mortgages 375, 559; Secured Transactions 240. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 674–676, 933; Secured Transactions §§ 164–166, 168–169, 172, 174–175, 180–183.]

definitive judgment. See final judgment.

determinative judgment. See final judgment.

domestic judgment. A judgment rendered by the courts of the state or country where the judgment or its effect is at issue.

dormant judgment. A judgment that has not been executed or enforced within the statutory time limit. • As a result, any judgment lien may have been lost and execution cannot be issued unless the judgment creditor first revives the judgment. See REVIVAL(1).

erroneous judgment. A judgment issued by a court with jurisdiction to issue it, but containing an improper application of law. • This type of judgment is not void, but can be corrected by a trial court while the court retains plenary jurisdiction, or in a direct appeal. — Also termed judgment in error. See ERROR(2).

excess judgment. Insurance. A judgment that exceeds all of the defendant's insurance coverage. [Cases: Insurance 2934(3), 3346, 3374.]

executory judgment (eg-zek-y<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A judgment that has not been carried out, such as a yet-to-be-fulfilled order for the defendant to pay the plaintiff.

final appealable judgment. See final judgment.

final judgment. A court's last action that settles the rights of the parties and disposes of all issues in controversy, except for the award of costs (and, sometimes, attorney's fees) and enforcement of the judgment. — Also termed final appealable judgment; final decision; final decree; definitive judgment; determinative judgment; final appealable order. See FINAL-JUDGMENT RULE. [Cases: Appeal and Error 76(1); Federal Civil Procedure 2579. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 82–83.]

foreign judgment. A judgment rendered by a court of a state or country different from that where the judgment or its effect is at issue. [Cases: Judgment 813–832. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 965–1038, 1053.]

in personam judgment. See personal judgment.

in rem judgment. See judgment in rem.

interlocutory judgment (in-t<<schwa>>r-lok-[y]<<schwa>>-tor-ee). An intermediate judgment that determines a preliminary or subordinate point or plea but does not finally decide the case. • A judgment or order given on a provisional or accessory claim or contention is generally interlocutory. — Also termed interlocutory decree. [Cases: Appeal and Error 68; Federal Civil Procedure 2578. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 82–84.]

irregular judgment. A judgment that may be set aside because of some irregularity in the way it was rendered, such as a clerk's failure to send a defendant notice that a default judgment has been rendered.

judgment as a matter of law. A judgment rendered during a jury trial — either before or after the jury's verdict — against a party on a given issue when there is no legally sufficient basis for a jury to find for that party on that issue. • In federal practice, the term judgment as a matter of law has replaced both the directed verdict and the judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50. Cf. SUMMARY JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2111, 2601; Judgment 199; Trial 167. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 62–68, 70; Trial §§ 432–433, 437–438.]

judgment of discontinuance. 1. A judgment dismissing a plaintiff's action based on interruption in the proceedings occasioned by the plaintiff's failure to continue the suit at the appointed time or times. 2. NONSUIT(1). — Often shortened to discontinuance. See DISCONTINUANCE.

judgment of dismissal. A final determination of a case (against the plaintiff in a civil action or the government in a criminal action) without a trial on its merits. See DISMISSAL. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1837; Pretrial Procedure 694. C.J.S. Dismissal and Nonsuit §§ 48, 80.]

judgment of nolle prosequi (nahl-ee prahs-<<schwa>>-kwI). A judgment entered against a plaintiff who, after appearance but before judgment on the merits, has decided to abandon prosecution of the lawsuit. See NOLLE PROSEQUI.

judgment of nonsuit. 1.Hist. The judgment given against a plaintiff who fails to be present in court to hear the jury render its verdict or who, after issue is joined, fails to bring the issue to be tried in due time. • This judgment does not prevent the plaintiff from filing the same case again. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2116.] 2.NONSUIT(2).

judgment of repleader.See REPLEADER.

judgment of retraxit (ri-trak-sit).Hist. A judgment against a plaintiff who has voluntarily retracted the claim. • Such a judgment bars the plaintiff from relitigating the claim. — Also termed judgment in retraxit. See RETRAXIT.

judgment on the merits.A judgment based on the evidence rather than on technical or procedural grounds. — Also termed decision on the merits.

judgment on the pleadings.A judgment based solely on the allegations and information contained in the pleadings, and not on any outside matters. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c). Cf. SUMMARY JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1041–1068; Pleading 342. C.J.S. Pleading § 594.]

judgment on the verdict.A judgment for the party receiving a favorable jury verdict.

judgment quasi in rem (kway-sI [or -zI] in rem). A judgment based on the court's jurisdiction over the defendant's interest in property rather than on its jurisdiction over the defendant or the property. • Such a judgment affects only particular persons' interests in a thing — that is, only the persons who are named or described in the proceeding. [Cases: Judgment 805. C.J.S. Judgments § 1059.]

judgment quod billa cassetur (kwod bil-<<schwa>> k<<schwa>>-see-t<<schwa>>r). Judgment that the bill be quashed. • This is a judgment for the defendant.

judgment quod breve cassetur (kwod breevorbree-vee k<<schwa>>-see-t<< schwa>>r). Judgment that the writ be quashed. • This is a judgment for the defendant.

junior judgment.A judgment rendered or entered after the rendition or entry of another judgment, on a different claim, against the same defendant.

money judgment.A judgment for damages subject to immediate execution, as distinguished from equitable or injunctive relief. — Also termed judgment for money.

nunc pro tunc judgment (n<<schwa>>ngk proh t<<schwa>>ngk). A procedural device by which the record of a judgment is amended to accord with what the judge actually said and did, so that the record will be accurate. • This device is often used to correct defects in real-estate titles. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2625; Judgment 273, 326. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 123–125, 299.]

personal judgment. 1. A judgment that imposes personal liability on a defendant and that may therefore be satisfied out of any of the defendant's property within judicial reach. 2. A judgment resulting from an action in which a court has personal jurisdiction over the parties. 3. A judgment against a person as distinguished from a judgment against a thing, right, or status. — Also termed judgment in personam (in p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>m); in personam judgment; judgment inter partes (in-t<<schwa>>r pahr-teez).

simulated judgment.Civil law. A judgment that, although founded on an actual debt and intended for collection by the usual legal processes, is actually entered into by the parties to give one of them an undeserving advantage or to defraud third parties.

stipulated judgment.See agreed judgment.

summary judgment.See SUMMARY JUDGMENT.

suspension of judgment.See STAY.

take-nothing judgment.A judgment for the defendant providing that the plaintiff recover nothing in damages or other relief. — Also termed (in some states) no cause of action.

valid judgment. 1. A judgment that will be recognized by common-law states as long as it is in force in the state where the judgment was rendered. 2. A judicial act rendered by a court having jurisdiction over the parties and over the subject matter in a proceeding in which the parties have had a reasonable opportunity to be heard.

voidable judgment.A judgment that, although seemingly valid, is defective in some material way; esp., a judgment that, although rendered by a court having jurisdiction, is irregular or erroneous. [Cases: Judgment 27, 353, 501. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 308, 526, 546, 549.]

void judgment.A judgment that has no legal force or effect, the invalidity of which may be asserted by any party whose rights are affected at any time and any place, whether directly or collaterally. • From its inception, a void judgment continues to be absolutely null. It is incapable of being confirmed, ratified, or enforced in any manner or to any degree. One source of a void judgment is the lack of subject-matter jurisdiction. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2392; Judgment 5–27, 346, 486. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 4–5, 13–28, 30, 43–46, 48, 73, 75, 82, 201, 203–205, 207, 307, 403, 499, 512, 546, 548–549.]

JUDICIAL ACT

judicial act.See ACT.

JUDICIAL ACTIVISM

judicial activism,n. A philosophy of judicial decision-making whereby judges allow their personal views about public policy, among other factors, to guide their decisions, usu. with the suggestion that adherents of this philosophy tend to find constitutional violations and are willing to ignore precedent. Cf. JUDICIAL RESTRAINT(3). — judicial activist,n.

“[I]f to resolve the dispute the court must create a new rule or modify an old one, that is law creation. Judges defending themselves from accusations of judicial activism sometimes say they do not make law, they only apply it. It is true that in our system judges are not supposed to and generally do not make new law with the same freedom that legislatures can and do; they are, in Oliver Wendell Holmes's phrase, ‘confined from molar to molecular motions.’ The qualification is important, but the fact remains that judges make, and do not just find and apply, law.” Richard A. Posner, The Federal Courts: Crisis and Reform 3 (1985).

JUDICIAL ACTIVITY REPORT

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL

Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. A tribunal created in 1833 with jurisdiction to hear certain admiralty and ecclesiastical appeals, and certain appeals from the Commonwealth. • From the 16th century until the 19th, the Court of Delegates was the final court of appeal in England for ecclesiastical suits. During the reign of William IV, the power to hear final appeals was transferred to the Privy Council, and then to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The committee consists entirely of laypeople; ecclesiastics become members of the court only if an appeal is brought under the Church Discipline Act. Even then the ecclesiastics must be episcopal privy counselors. The Judicial Committee's decisions are not treated as binding precedent in the United Kingdom, but they are influential because of the overlapping composition of members of the Privy Council and the House of Lords in its judicial capacity. — Also termed Court of Final Appeal.

JUDICIAL COMPENSATION

judicial compensation. 1. The remuneration that judges receive for their work. [Cases: Judges 22. C.J.S. Judges § 75.] 2. Civil law. A court's judgment finding that two parties are mutually obligated to one another and crafting the amount of the judgment in accordance with the amount that each party owes. • A claim for compensation is usu. contained in a reconventional demand. La. Code Civ. Proc. 1902. See reconventional demand under DEMAND (1). [Cases: Set-off and Counterclaim 8. C.J.S. Set-off and Counterclaim §§ 3, 6.]

JUDICIAL CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED STATES

Judicial Conference of the United States. judicium publicum (p⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩b-li-k⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m). [Latin “public trials”] A criminal proceeding under a public statute. • The term derived from the Roman rule allowing any member of the public to initiate a prosecution. See COMITIA.

“Judicium publicum may have originally meant trial by or before the actual popular assembly, though it is doubtful whether the phrase existed at all before the ‘people’ had come to be replaced by quaestores. There is much to be said, in spite of Justinian's explanation [Inst. 4.18.1], for the view that these criminal trials were called ‘public’ as being ‘of public interest,’ because, to use Blackstone's words, their subject-matter affects the whole community.” 2 E.C. Clark, History of Roman Private Law § 10, at 441 (1914).

JUDICIUM DEI

judicium Dei (joo-dish-ee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m dee-I).Hist. God's supposed judgment on the merits of the case, made manifest by the outcome of an observable event. • Examples dating from Norman times were the trial by combat and the ordeal. See ORDEAL; TRIAL BY COMBAT.

“A variety of contextual frames of reference have been employed by commentators to explain and clarify the basis for judicial decision-making, the most fundamental aspect of the judge's job. These range from exploration of the judge's personality to the employment of small group theory, game theory and Guttman scaling to measure and apprehend the nature of judicial decision-making. Indeed, the disciplined effort to identify with mathematical precision the decision process has been dubiously termed ‘jurimetrics.’ ” Alexander B. Smith & Abraham S. Blumberg, “The Problem of Objectivity,” in 2 Crime and Justice 485–86 (1971).

JURIS

juris (joo-ris), adj. [Latin] 1. Of law. 2. Of right.

JURISDICTION

jurisdiction,n.1. A government's general power to exercise authority over all persons and things within its territory; esp., a state's power to create interests that will be recognized under common-law principles as valid in other states <New Jersey's jurisdiction>. [Cases: States 1. C.J.S. States §§ 2, 16.] 2. A court's power to decide a case or issue a decree < the constitutional grant of federal-question jurisdiction>. — Also termed (in sense 2) competent jurisdiction; (in both senses) coram iudice. [Cases: Courts 3; Federal Courts 3.1, 161. C.J.S. Courts §§ 9, 18.]

“Rules of jurisdiction in a sense speak from a position outside the court system and prescribe the authority of the courts within the system. They are to a large extent constitutional rules. The provisions of the U.S. Constitution specify the outer limits of the subject-matter jurisdiction of the federal courts and authorize Congress, within those limits, to establish by statute the organization and jurisdiction of the federal courts. Thus, Article III of the Constitution defines the judicial power of the United States to include cases arising under federal law and cases between parties of diverse state citizenship as well as other categories. The U.S. Constitution, particularly the Due Process Clause, also establishes limits on the jurisdiction of the state courts. These due process limitations traditionally operate in two areas: jurisdiction of the subject matter and jurisdiction over persons. Within each state, the court system is established by state constitutional provisions or by a combination of such provisions and implementing legislation, which together define the authority of the various courts within the system.” Fleming James Jr., Geoffrey C. Hazard Jr. & John Leubsdorf, Civil Procedure § 2.1, at 55 (5th ed. 2001).

3. A geographic area within which political or judicial authority may be exercised <the accused fled to another jurisdiction>.4. A political or judicial subdivision within such an area agency jurisdiction.The regulatory or adjudicative power of a government administrative agency over a subject matter or matters.

<other jurisdictions have decided the issue differently>. Cf. VENUE. — jurisdictional,adj.

ancillary jurisdiction.A court's jurisdiction to adjudicate claims and proceedings related to a claim that is properly before the court. • For example, if a plaintiff brings a lawsuit in federal court based on a federal question (such as a claim under Title VII), the defendant may assert a counterclaim over which the court would not otherwise have jurisdiction (such as a state-law claim of stealing company property). The concept of ancillary jurisdiction has now been codified, along with the concept of pendent jurisdiction, in the supplemental-jurisdiction statute. 28 USCA § 1367. See supplemental jurisdiction. Cf. pendent jurisdiction. [Cases: Admiralty 1(3); Courts 27; Equity 35; Federal Courts 20. C.J.S. Courts § 66; Equity §§ 9, 80, 87.]

anomalous jurisdiction. 1. Jurisdiction that is not granted to a court by statute, but that is inherent in the court's authority to govern lawyers and other officers of the court, such as the power to issue a preindictment order suppressing illegally seized property. [Cases: Criminal Law 394.5(1); Federal Courts 7; Searches and Seizures 84. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 794, 797; Equity § 20; Searches and Seizures §§ 217–226.] 2. An appellate court's provisional jurisdiction to review the denial of a motion to intervene in a lower-court case, so that if the court finds that the denial was correct, then its jurisdiction disappears — and it must dismiss the appeal for want of jurisdiction — because an order denying a motion to intervene is not a final, appealable order. See ANOMALOUS-JURISDICTION RULE. [Cases: Federal Courts 555.]

appellate jurisdiction.The power of a court to review and revise a lower court's decision. • For example, U.S. Const. art. III, § 2 vests appellate jurisdiction in the Supreme Court, while 28 USCA §§ 1291–1295 grant appellate jurisdiction to lower federal courts of appeals. Cf. original jurisdiction. [Cases: Appeal and Error 17; Courts 203–209; Federal Courts 751. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 31–32, 40.]

arising-in jurisdiction.A bankruptcy court's jurisdiction over issues relating to the administration of the bankruptcy estate, and matters that occur only in a bankruptcy case. 28 USCA §§ 157, 1334. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2043–2063. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 5, 9–12, 14–15, 17–18, 22.]

assistant jurisdiction.The incidental aid provided by an equity court to a court of law when justice requires both legal and equitable processes and remedies. — Also termed auxiliary jurisdiction.

common-law jurisdiction. 1. A place where the legal system derives fundamentally from the English common-law system <England, the United States, Australia, and other common-law jurisdictions>.2. A court's jurisdiction to try such cases as were cognizable under the English common law <in the absence of a controlling statute, the court exercised common-law jurisdiction over those claims>.

complete jurisdiction.A court's power to decide matters presented to it and to enforce its decisions.

concurrent jurisdiction. 1. Jurisdiction that might be exercised simultaneously by more than one court over the same subject matter and within the same territory, a litigant having the right to choose the court in which to file the action. [Cases: Admiralty 1(1); Courts 472, 489, 510; Federal Courts 1131. C.J.S. Courts §§ 186, 203, 222, 225.] 2. Jurisdiction shared by two or more states, esp. over the physical boundaries (such as rivers or other bodies of water) between them. — Also termed coordinate jurisdiction; overlapping jurisdiction. Cf. exclusive jurisdiction.

“In several cases, two States divided by a river exercise concurrent jurisdiction over the river, no matter where the inter-state boundary may be; in some cases by the Ordinance of 1787 for organizing Territories northwest of the Ohio River, in some cases by Acts of Congress organizing Territories or admitting States, and in some cases by agreements between the States concerned.” 1 Joseph H. Beale, A Treatise on the Conflict of Laws § 44.3, at 279 (1935).

consent jurisdiction. Jurisdiction that parties have agreed to, either by accord, by contract, or by general appearance. • Parties may not, by agreement, confer subject-matter jurisdiction on a federal court that would not otherwise have it. [Cases: Courts 22. C.J.S. Courts § 61.]

contentious jurisdiction. 1. A court's jurisdiction exercised over disputed matters. 2. Eccles. law. The branch of ecclesiastical-court jurisdiction that deals with contested proceedings.

continuing jurisdiction. A court's power to retain jurisdiction over a matter after entering a judgment, allowing the court to modify its previous rulings or orders. See CONTINUING-JURISDICTION DOCTRINE. [Cases: Courts 30; Federal Courts 26.1. C.J.S. Courts §§ 71–73.]

coordinate jurisdiction. See concurrent jurisdiction.

criminal jurisdiction. A court's power to hear criminal cases. [Cases: Criminal Law 83. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 149–150.]

default jurisdiction. Family law. In a child-custody matter, jurisdiction conferred when it is in the best interests of the child and either (1) there is no other basis for jurisdiction under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act or the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act, or (2) another state has declined jurisdiction in favor of default jurisdiction. • Jurisdiction is rarely based on default because either home-state jurisdiction or significant-connection jurisdiction almost always applies, or else emergency jurisdiction is invoked. Default jurisdiction arises only if none of those three applies, or a state with jurisdiction on any of those bases declines to exercise it and default jurisdiction serves the best interests of the child.

delinquency jurisdiction. The power of the court to hear matters regarding juvenile acts that, if committed by an adult, would be criminal. Cf. status-offense jurisdiction.

diversity jurisdiction. A federal court's exercise of authority over a case involving parties who are citizens of different states and an amount in controversy greater than a statutory minimum. 28 USCA § 1332. See DIVERSITY OF CITIZENSHIP; AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY. [Cases: Federal Courts 281–360.]

emergency jurisdiction. Family law. A court's ability to take jurisdiction of a child who is physically present in the state when that child has been abandoned or when necessary to protect the child from abuse. • Section 3(a)(3) of the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act allows for emergency jurisdiction. It is usu. temporary, lasting only as long as is necessary to protect the child.

equity jurisdiction. In a common-law judicial system, the power to hear certain civil actions according to the procedure of the court of chancery, and to resolve them according to equitable rules. [Cases: Equity 1; Federal Courts 7. C.J.S. Equity §§ 2–5, 7–8, 10, 20.]

“[T]he term equity jurisdiction does not refer to jurisdiction in the sense of the power conferred by the sovereign on the court over specified subject-matters or to jurisdiction over the res or the persons of the parties in a particular proceeding but refers rather to the merits. The want of equity jurisdiction does not mean that the court has no power to act but that it should not act, as on the ground, for example, that there is an adequate remedy at law.” William Q. de Funiak, Handbook of Modern Equity 38 (2d ed. 1956).

exclusive jurisdiction. A court's power to adjudicate an action or class of actions to the exclusion of all other courts <federal district courts have exclusive jurisdiction over actions brought under the Securities Exchange Act>. Cf. concurrent jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 472, 489, 510; Equity 44; Federal Courts 1131. C.J.S. Courts §§ 186, 203, 222, 225; Equity §§ 19, 51–53.]

extraterritorial jurisdiction. A court's ability to exercise power beyond its territorial limits. See LONG-ARM STATUTE. [Cases: Courts 12(2); Federal Courts 76. C.J.S. Courts §§ 39, 44.]

federal jurisdiction. 1. The exercise of federal-court authority. [Cases: Federal Courts 3.1.] 2. The area of study dealing with the jurisdiction of federal courts.

federal-juvenile-delinquency jurisdiction. A federal court's power to hear a case in which a person under the age of 18 violates federal law. • In such a case, the federal court derives its jurisdictional power from 18 USCA §§ 5031 et seq. The Act severely limits the scope of federal-juvenile-delinquency jurisdiction because Congress recognizes that juvenile delinquency is essentially a state issue. The acts that typically invoke federal jurisdiction are (1) acts committed on federal lands (military bases, national parks, Indian reservations), and (2) acts that violate federal drug laws or other federal criminal statutes.

federal-question jurisdiction. The exercise of federal-court power over claims arising under the U.S. Constitution, an act of Congress, or a treaty. 28 USCA § 1331. [Cases: Federal Courts 161–247.] foreign jurisdiction. 1. The powers of a court of a sister state or foreign country. 2. Extraterritorial process, such as long-arm service of process.

general jurisdiction. 1. A court's authority to hear a wide range of cases, civil or criminal, that arise within its geographic area. [Cases: Courts 118–158.1; Federal Courts 3.1, 76.5. C.J.S. Courts §§ 3, 23–31, 33–35.] 2. A court's authority to hear all claims against a defendant, at the place of the defendant's domicile or the place of service, without any showing that a connection exists between the claims and the forum state. Cf. limited jurisdiction; specific jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 12(2.5); Federal Courts 76.10. C.J.S. Courts § 45.]

home-state jurisdiction.Family law. In interstate child-custody disputes governed by the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act, jurisdiction based on the child's having been a resident of the state for at least six consecutive months immediately before the commencement of the suit. See HOME STATE.

in personam jurisdiction.See personal jurisdiction.

in rem jurisdiction (in rem). A court's power to adjudicate the rights to a given piece of property, including the power to seize and hold it. — Also termed jurisdiction in rem. See IN REM. Cf. personal jurisdiction; subject-matter jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 18–19; Federal Courts 93. C.J.S. Courts §§ 50–53.]

international jurisdiction.A court's power to hear and determine matters between different countries or persons of different countries.

judicial jurisdiction.The legal power and authority of a court to make a decision that binds the parties to any matter properly brought before it.

jurisdiction in personam.See personal jurisdiction.

jurisdiction in rem.See in rem jurisdiction.

jurisdiction of the person.See personal jurisdiction.

jurisdiction over the person.See personal jurisdiction.

jurisdiction quasi in rem.See quasi-in-rem jurisdiction.

legislative jurisdiction.A legislature's general sphere of authority to enact laws and conduct all business related to that authority, such as holding hearings. [Cases: States 1. C.J.S. States §§ 2, 16.]

limited jurisdiction.Jurisdiction that is confined to a particular type of case or that may be exercised only under statutory limits and prescriptions. — Also termed special jurisdiction. Cf. general jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 26, 59; Federal Courts 5. C.J.S. Courts §§ 3, 8, 64–65, 67.]

“It is a principle of first importance that the federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction.... The federal courts ... cannot be courts of general jurisdiction. They are empowered to hear only such cases as are within the judicial power of the United States, as defined in the Constitution, and have been entrusted to them by a jurisdictional grant by Congress.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 7, at 27 (5th ed. 1994).

long-arm jurisdiction.Jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant who has had some contact with the jurisdiction in which the petition is filed.

original jurisdiction.A court's power to hear and decide a matter before any other court can review the matter. Cf. appellate jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 118–158.1, 206; Federal Courts overlapping jurisdiction. See concurrent jurisdiction.

3.1. C.J.S. Courts §§ 3, 23–31, 33–35.]

pendent jurisdiction (pen-d<<schwa>>nt). A court's jurisdiction to hear and determine a claim over which it would not otherwise have jurisdiction, because the claim arises from the same transaction or occurrence as another claim that is properly before the court. • For example, if a plaintiff brings suit in federal court claiming that the defendant, in one transaction, violated both a federal and a state law, the federal court has jurisdiction over the federal claim (under federal-question jurisdiction) and also has jurisdiction over the state claim that is pendent to the federal claim. Pendent jurisdiction has now been codified as supplemental jurisdiction. 28 USCA § 1367. — Also termed pendent-claim jurisdiction. See supplemental jurisdiction. Cf. ancillary jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 27; Equity 35; Federal Courts 14. C.J.S. Courts § 66; Equity §§ 9, 80, 87.]

pendent-party jurisdiction. A court's jurisdiction to adjudicate a claim against a party who is not otherwise subject to the court's jurisdiction, because the claim by or against that party arises from the same transaction or occurrence as another claim that is properly before the court. • Pendent-party jurisdiction has been a hotly debated subject, and was severely limited by the U.S. Supreme Court in Finley v. United States, 490 U.S. 545, 109 S.Ct. 2003 (1989). The concept is now codified in the supplemental-jurisdiction statute, and it applies to federal-question cases but not to diversity-jurisdiction cases. 28 USCA § 1367. Neither pendent-party jurisdiction nor supplemental jurisdiction may be used to circumvent the complete-diversity requirement in cases founded on diversity jurisdiction. See supplemental jurisdiction. [Cases: Federal Courts 23.]

personal jurisdiction. A court's power to bring a person into its adjudicative process; jurisdiction over a defendant's personal rights, rather than merely over property interests. — Also termed in personam jurisdiction; jurisdiction in personam; jurisdiction of the person; jurisdiction over the person. See IN PERSONAM. Cf. in rem jurisdiction. [Cases: Admiralty 5; Constitutional Law 305(5, 6); Courts 10; Federal Courts 71–97. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 23–25, 29, 67; Constitutional Law §§ 1151–1152; Courts §§ 39–40.] plenary jurisdiction (plee-n<<schwa>>-ree or plen-<<schwa>>-ree). A court's full and absolute power over the subject matter and the parties in a case.

primary jurisdiction. The power of an agency to decide an issue in the first instance when a court, having concurrent jurisdiction with the agency, determines that it would be more pragmatic for the agency to handle the case initially. See PRIMARY-JURISDICTION DOCTRINE.

“The doctrine of primary jurisdiction typically is raised, not in a proceeding before an administrative agency, but in litigation before a court. Agency and court jurisdiction to resolve disputes and issues frequently overlap. Primary jurisdiction is a concept used by courts to allocate initial decision-making responsibility between agencies and courts where such overlaps exist.... A holding that an agency has primary jurisdiction to resolve an issue raised in a judicial proceeding has two important consequences. First, it transfers some of the power to resolve that issue to the agency.... Second, if the issues referred to the agency as within its primary jurisdiction are critical to judicial resolution of the underlying dispute, the court cannot proceed with the trial of the case until the agency has resolved those issues and the agency's decision has been either affirmed or reversed by a reviewing court." Richard J. Pierce Jr. et al., Administrative Law Process 206, 207–08 (3d ed. 1999).

probate jurisdiction. Jurisdiction over matters relating to wills, settlement of decedents' estates, and (in some states) guardianship and the adoption of minors. [Cases: Courts 198; Federal Courts 9.]

prorogated jurisdiction. Civil law. Jurisdiction conferred by the express consent of all the parties on a judge who would otherwise be disqualified. Cf. tacit prorogation under PROROGATION.

quasi-in-rem jurisdiction (kway-sI in remorkway-zI). Jurisdiction over a person but based on that person's interest in property located within the court's territory. — Also termed jurisdiction quasi in rem. See quasi in rem under IN REM. [Cases: Courts 18; Federal Courts 93. C.J.S. Courts § 53.]

significant-connection jurisdiction. Family law. In a child-custody matter, jurisdiction based on (1) the best interests of the child, (2) at least one parent's (or litigant's) significant connection to the state, and (3) the presence in the state of substantial evidence about the child's present or future care, protection, training, and personal relationships. • This type of jurisdiction is conferred by both the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act and the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act. Generally, the home state will also be the state with significant connections and substantial evidence. Jurisdiction based on a significant connection or substantial evidence alone is conferred only when the child has no home state. — Also termed significant-connection/substantial-evidence jurisdiction; significant connection-substantial evidence jurisdiction; substantial-evidence jurisdiction. See HOME STATE.

special jurisdiction. See limited jurisdiction.

specific jurisdiction. Jurisdiction that stems from the defendant's having certain minimum contacts with the forum state so that the court may hear a case whose issues arise from those minimum contacts. Cf. general jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 12(2.10); Federal Courts 76.10. C.J.S. Courts §§ 40, 45, 47.]

state jurisdiction. 1. The exercise of state-court authority. 2. A court's power to hear all matters, both civil and criminal, arising within its territorial boundaries.

status-offense jurisdiction. The power of the court to hear matters regarding noncriminal conduct committed by a juvenile. See status offense under OFFENSE (1). Cf. delinquency jurisdiction.

subject-matter jurisdiction. Jurisdiction over the nature of the case and the type of relief sought; the extent to which a court can rule on the conduct of persons or the status of things. — Also termed jurisdiction of the subject matter; jurisdiction of the cause; jurisdiction over the action. Cf. personal jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 4; Federal Courts 3.1. C.J.S. Courts §§ 9–10, 18.]

summary jurisdiction. 1. A court's jurisdiction in a summary proceeding. 2. The court's authority to issue a judgment or order (such as a finding of contempt) without the necessity of a trial or other process. 3. English law. A court's power to make an order immediately, without obtaining authority or referral, as in a magistrate's power to dispose of a criminal case without referring it to the Crown Court for a formal trial or without drawing a jury.

supplemental jurisdiction. Jurisdiction over a claim that is part of the same case or controversy as another claim over which the court has original jurisdiction. • Since 1990, federal district courts have had supplemental jurisdiction, which includes jurisdiction over both ancillary and pendent claims. 28 USCA § 1367. See ancillary jurisdiction; pendent jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts 27; Equity 35; Federal Courts 14. C.J.S. Courts § 66; Equity §§ 9, 80, 87.]

territorial jurisdiction. 1. Jurisdiction over cases arising in or involving persons residing within a defined territory. [Cases: Courts 171; Federal Courts 71.] 2. Territory over which a government, one of its courts, or one of its subdivisions has jurisdiction.

transient jurisdiction (tran-sh<<schwa>>nt). Personal jurisdiction over a defendant who is served with process while in the forum state only temporarily (such as during travel). [Cases: Courts 13. C.J.S. Courts § 41.]

voluntary jurisdiction. 1. Jurisdiction exercised over unopposed matters. 2. Eccles. law. Jurisdiction that does not require a judicial proceeding, as with granting a license or installing a nominee to a benefice.

JURISDICTIONAL AMOUNT jurisdictional amount. See AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY.

JURISDICTIONAL FACT

jurisdictional fact. See FACT.

JURISDICTIONAL-FACT DOCTRINE jurisdictional-fact doctrine. Administrative law. The principle that if evidence is presented challenging the factual findings that triggered an agency's action, then a court will review the facts to determine whether the agency had authority to act in the first place. • This doctrine is generally no longer applied. Cf. CONSTITUTIONAL-FACT DOCTRINE. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 795. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 241.]

JURISDICTIONAL GERRYMANDERING jurisdictional gerrymandering. See GERRYMANDERING(2).

JURISDICTIONAL LIMITS

jurisdictional limits. The geographic boundaries or the constitutional or statutory limits within which a court's authority may be exercised.

JURISDICTIONAL PLEA

jurisdictional plea. See PLEA(3).

JURISDICTIONAL STATEMENT

jurisdictional statement. See JURISDICTION CLAUSE(1).

JURISDICTIONAL STRIKE

jurisdictional strike. See STRIKE.

JURISDICTION CLAUSE

jurisdiction clause. 1. At law, a statement in a pleading that sets forth the court's jurisdiction to act in the case. — Also termed jurisdictional statement. 2. Equity practice. The part of the bill intended to show that the court has jurisdiction, usu. by an averment that adequate relief is unavailable outside equitable channels.

JURISDICTION IN PERSONAM jurisdiction in personam. See personal jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

JURISDICTION IN REM jurisdiction in rem. See in rem jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

JURISDICTIONIS FUNDANDAE jurisdictionis fundandae (joo-r-is-dik-shee-oh-nis f<<schwa>>n-dan-dee). [Law Latin] Scots law. For the purpose of founding jurisdiction. See ARRESTUM JURISDICTIONIS FUNDANDAE CAUSA .

JURISDICTION OF THE CAUSE jurisdiction of the cause. See subject-matter jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

JURISDICTION OF THE PERSON jurisdiction of the person. See personal jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

JURISDICTION OF THE SUBJECT MATTER jurisdiction of the subject matter. See subject-matter jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

JURISDICTION OVER THE ACTION jurisdiction over the action. See subject-matter jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

JURISDICTION OVER THE PERSON jurisdiction over the person. See personal jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

JURISDICTION QUASI IN REM jurisdiction quasi in rem. See quasi-in-rem jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

JURISDICTIO VOLUNTARIA jurisdictio voluntaria (joor-is-dik-shee-oh vol-*<<schwa>>n-tair-ee-<<schwa>>*). [Latin] Roman law. Voluntary jurisdiction. See voluntary jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

JURIS DOCTOR

Juris Doctor (joor-is dok-t*<<schwa>>*r). Doctor of law — the law degree most commonly conferred by an American law school. — Abbr. J.D. — Also termed Doctor of Jurisprudence; Doctor of Law. Cf. MASTER OF LAWS; LL.B.; DOCTOR OF LAWS .

JURIS ET DE JURE

juris et de jure (joor-is et dee joor-ee). [Latin] Of law and of right .

JURISINCEPTOR

jurisinceptor (joor-is-in-sep-t*<<schwa>>*r). [Latin] Hist. A student of the civil law.

JURISPERITUS

jurisperitus (joor-is-p*<<schwa>>-rI-t<<schwa>>*s), adj.[Latin] (Of a person) skilled or learned in law. Cf. LEGISPERITUS.

JURIS POSITIVII

juris positivii. See JURIS.

JURIS PRIVATI

juris privati. See JURIS.

JURISPRUDE

jurisprude (joor-is-prood), n.1. A person who makes a pretentious display of legal knowledge or who is overzealous about the importance of legal doctrine. 2. JURISPRUDENT.

JURISPRUDENCE

jurisprudence (joor-is-prood-*<<schwa>>*nts), n.1. Originally (in the 18th century), the study of the first principles of the law of nature, the civil law, and the law of nations. — Also termed jurisprudentia naturalis (joor-is-proo-den-shee-<<schwa>> nach-<<schwa>>-ray-lis). 2. More modernly, the study of the general or fundamental elements of a particular legal system, as opposed to its practical and concrete details. 3. The study of legal systems in general. 4. Judicial precedents considered collectively. 5. In German literature, the whole of legal knowledge. 6. A system, body, or division of law. 7. CASELAW.

“Jurisprudence addresses the questions about law that an intelligent layperson of speculative bent — not a lawyer — might think particularly interesting. What is law? ... Where does law come from? ... Is law an autonomous discipline? ... What is the purpose of law? ... Is law a science, a humanity, or neither? ... A practicing lawyer or a judge is apt to think questions of this sort at best irrelevant to what he does, at worst naive, impractical, even childlike (how high is up?).” Richard A. Posner, The Problems of Jurisprudence 1 (1990).

analytical jurisprudence. A method of legal study that concentrates on the logical structure of law, the meanings and uses of its concepts, and the formal terms and the modes of its operation.

ensorial jurisprudence. See LAW REFORM.

comparative jurisprudence. See COMPARATIVE LAW.

equity jurisprudence. 1. The legal science treating the rules, principles, and maxims that govern the decisions of a court of equity. 2. The cases and controversies that are considered proper subjects of equity. 3. The nature and form of the remedies that equity grants.

ethical jurisprudence. The branch of legal philosophy concerned with the law from the viewpoint of its ethical significance and adequacy. • This area of study brings together moral and legal philosophy. — Also termed (in German) Rechtsphilosophie; (in French) philosophie du droit.

expository jurisprudence. The scholarly exposition of the contents of an actual legal system as it now exists or once existed. — Also termed systematic jurisprudence.

feminist jurisprudence. A branch of jurisprudence that examines the relationship between women and law, including the history of legal and social biases against women, the elimination of those biases in modern law, and the enhancement of women's legal rights and recognition in society.

“The first published use of the phrase ‘feminist jurisprudence’ occurred in 1978 when Professor Ann Scales published an article called Toward a Feminist Jurisprudence. Feminist legal theory is diverse, and anything but monolithic. Many feminists believe that it is difficult to generalize about feminist jurisprudence. It is, however, possible to understand feminist legal theory as a reaction to the jurisprudence of modern legal scholars (primarily male scholars) who tend to see law as a process for interpreting and perpetuating a universal, gender-neutral public morality. Feminist legal scholars, despite their differences, appear united in claiming that ‘masculine’ jurisprudence of ‘all stripes’ fails to acknowledge, let alone respond to, the interests, values, fears, and harms experienced by women.” Gary Minda, Postmodern Legal Movements 129–30 (1995).

general jurisprudence. 1. The scholarly study of the fundamental elements of a given legal system. — Also termed jurisprudentia generalis.

“The term ‘general jurisprudence’ involves the misleading suggestion that this branch of legal science is that which relates not to any single system of law, but to those conceptions and principles that are to be found in all developed legal systems, and which are therefore in this sense general. It is true that a great part of the matter with which it is concerned is common to all mature systems of law. All of these have the same essential nature and purposes, and therefore agree to a large extent in their first principles. But it is not because of universal reception that any principles pertain to the theory or philosophy of law. For this purpose such reception is neither sufficient nor necessary. Even if no system in the world save that of England recognised the legislative efficacy of judicial precedents, the theory of case-law would none the less be a fit and proper subject of general jurisprudence. Jurisprudentia generalis is not the study of legal systems in general, but the study of the general or fundamental elements of a particular legal system.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 3 n.(b) (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

2. The scholarly study of the law, legal theory, and legal systems generally. — Also termed jurisprudentia universalis; philosophy of law; legal philosophy.

“According to Austin (1790–1859), general jurisprudence is the study of the ‘principles, notions and distinctions’ common to the maturer systems of law.” Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 2 (4th ed. 1991).

historical jurisprudence. The branch of legal philosophy concerned with the history of the first principles and conceptions of a legal system, dealing with (1) the general principles governing the origin and development of law, and (2) the origin and development of the legal system's first principles.

“Historical jurisprudence was a passive restraining mode of thought on legal subjects by way of reaction from the active creative thought of the era of philosophy. It was a reaction, too, from the confident disregard of traditional legal institutions and conditions of time and place which characterized the French Revolution. We were not ready for it in the fore part of the last century. But we accepted it eagerly toward the end of that century when it was already moribund in Europe.” Roscoe Pound, The Formative Era of American Law 113 (1938).

jurisprudence constante (k<<schwa>>n-stan-tee). Civil law. The doctrine that a court should give great weight to a rule of law that is accepted and applied in a long line of cases, and should not overrule or modify its own decisions unless clear error is shown and injustice will arise from continuation of a particular rule of law. • Civil-law courts are not bound by the common-law doctrine of stare decisis. But they do recognize the doctrine of jurisprudence constante, which is similar to stare decisis, one exception being that jurisprudence constante does not command strict adherence to a legal principle applied on one occasion in the past. Cf. STARE DECISIS. [Cases: Courts 89. C.J.S. Courts §§ 139–140, 144–146, 161–164, 166–167.]

jurisprudence of conceptions. The extension of a maxim or definition, usu. to a logical extreme, with relentless disregard for the consequences. • The phrase appears to have been invented by Roscoe Pound. See Mechanical Jurisprudence, 8 Colum. L. Rev. 605, 608 (1908).

normative jurisprudence. See NATURAL LAW(2).

particular jurisprudence. The scholarly study of the legal system within a particular jurisdiction, the focus being on the fundamental assumptions of that system only.

positivist jurisprudence. A theory that denies validity to any law that is not derived from or sanctioned by a sovereign or some other determinate source. — Also termed positivistic jurisprudence.

sociological jurisprudence. A philosophical approach to law stressing the actual social effects of legal institutions, doctrines, and practices. • This influential approach was started by Roscoe Pound in 1906 and became a precursor to legal realism. — Also termed sociology of law. See LEGAL REALISM.

systematic jurisprudence. See expository jurisprudence.

JURISPRUDENT

jurisprudent, n. A person learned in the law; a specialist in jurisprudence. — Also termed jurisprude.

JURISPRUDENTIA GENERALIS jurisprudentia generalis. See general jurisprudence (1) under JURISPRUDENCE.

JURIST

jurist. 1. One who has thorough knowledge of the law; esp., a judge or an eminent legal scholar. — Also termed legist. 2. JURISPRUDENT.

JURISTIC

juristic, adj. 1. Of or relating to a jurist <juristic literature>. 2. Of or relating to law . — Also termed juristical.

JURISTIC ACT

juristic act. See act in the law under ACT.

JURISTIC PERSON

juristic person. See artificial person under PERSON(3).

JURIS UTRISQUE DOCTOR

juris utriusque doctor. See J.U.D.

JUROR

juror (joo-r<<schwa>>r also joo-r-or). A person serving on a jury panel. — Also formerly termed layperson; juryman; jurator.

grand juror. A person serving on a grand jury.

petit juror (pet-ee). A trial juror, as opposed to a grand juror.

presiding juror. The juror who chairs the jury during deliberations and speaks for the jury in court by announcing the verdict. • The presiding juror is usu. elected by the jury at the start of deliberations. — Also termed foreman; foreperson; (in Scots law) jury chancellor. [Cases: Jury 147. C.J.S. Juries § 495.]

stealth juror. A juror who hides a potentially disqualifying bias or conflict of interest in order to serve on a jury. • A stealth juror may want to influence the outcome of the trial or may plan to reap a financial benefit from having inside access to the jury deliberations, esp. by writing a book about a high-profile trial.

tales-juror (tay-leez- ortaylz-joor-<<schwa>>r). See TALESMAN.

JUROR MISCONDUCT

juror misconduct. See MISCONDUCT.

JURY

jury, n. A group of persons selected according to law and given the power to decide questions of fact and return a verdict in the case submitted to them. • In certain contexts, jury embraces any fact-trier, including an arbitrator or a trial judge sitting in a nonjury proceeding. — Also termed empaneled jury; impaneled jury.

advisory jury. A jury empaneled to hear a case when the parties have no right to a jury trial. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(c). • The judge may accept or reject the advisory jury's verdict. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2252; Trial 369. C.J.S. Trial § 1029.]

blue-ribbon jury. A jury consisting of jurors who are selected for their special qualities, such as advanced education or special training, sometimes used in a complex civil case (usu. by stipulation of the parties) and sometimes also for a grand jury (esp. one investigating governmental corruption). • A blue-ribbon jury is not allowed in criminal trials because it would violate the defendant's right to trial by a jury of peers. An even more elite group of jurors, involving specialists in a technical field, is called a blue-blue-ribbon jury.

common jury. See petit jury.

coroner's jury. A jury summoned by a coroner to investigate the cause of death. [Cases: Coroners 12. C.J.S. Coroners and Medical Examiners § 15.]

deadlocked jury. See hung jury.

death-qualified jury. Criminal law. A jury that is fit to decide a case involving the death penalty because the jurors have no absolute ideological bias against capital punishment. Cf.

life-qualified jury. [Cases: Jury 33(2.15). C.J.S. Juries §§ 409, 446.]

fair and impartial jury. See impartial jury.

A jury charge, beyond the original instructions, that is usu. given in response to the jury's question about the evidence or some point of law. — Also termed further instruction. [Cases: Criminal Law 863; Federal Civil Procedure 1975; Trial 312, 314(1). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1382, 1384–1385, 1540; Trial §§ 811–812, 815.]

affirmative converse instruction. An instruction presenting a hypothetical that, if true, commands a verdict in favor of the defendant. • An affirmative converse instruction usu. begins with language such as “your verdict must be for the defendant if you believe” [Cases: Trial 203(3). C.J.S. Trial § 559.]

affirmative instruction. An instruction that removes an issue from the jury's consideration, such as an instruction that whatever the evidence, the defendant cannot be convicted under the indictment count to which the charge is directed. — Also termed affirmative charge. [Cases: Trial 194, 234(4), 253. C.J.S. Trial §§ 526, 626, 672.]

argumentative instruction. An instruction that assumes facts not in evidence, that singles out or unduly emphasizes a particular issue, theory, or defense, or that otherwise invades the jury's province regarding the weight, probative value, or sufficiency of the evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 807; Federal Civil Procedure 2173.1; Trial 240. C.J.S. Trial § 582.]

binding instruction. See mandatory instruction.

cautionary instruction. 1. A judge's instruction to the jurors to disregard certain evidence or consider it for specific purposes only. [Cases: Criminal Law 673, 783, 783.5; Federal Civil Procedure 2173; Trial 207. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1206; Trial §§ 489, 567.] 2. A judge's instruction for the jury not to be influenced by outside factors and not to talk to anyone about the case while the trial is in progress. [Cases: Criminal Law 768, 852; Federal Civil Procedure 2173; Trial 201, 217. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1308, 1371; Trial §§ 543–546, 552–553.]

JUS CANONICUM

jus canonicum (j<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>-non-i-k<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin] See CANON LAW(1).

JUS CAPIENDI

jus capiendi (j<<schwa>>s kap-ee-en-dI). [Latin “the right to take or receive”] Roman law. The right of taking property under a will.

JUS CIVILE

jus civile (j<<schwa>>s si-vI-lee). [Latin] Roman law. The traditional law of the city of Rome, beginning with the Twelve Tables and developed by juristic interpretation. • It covered areas of law restricted to Roman citizens, such as the formalities of making a will. Over time, the jus civile was modified by, for example, the jus honorarium (which modified the requisites for a valid will) and the jus sentium (which modified the stipulation). The original jus civile was eventually absorbed into a general Roman law. See CIVIL LAW(1); JUS QUIRITIUM.

JUS CIVITATIS

jus civitatis (j<<schwa>>s siv-i-tay-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. The right of citizenship; the right of a Roman citizen.

“Jus domino proximum Such a right is enjoyed by one who holds lands in feu, for he is entitled to sell the subjects, or alter or use them in any way he thinks proper. And yet the property is not absolutely his — that is, he does not hold the property so absolutely as did the superior from whom he acquired, because the land is burdened with the feu-duty payable to the superior, and to this extent the absolute right of property is restricted. Similar to the right of a feuar under our law, was that of the emphyteuta under the civil law.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 304–05 (4th ed. 1894).

JUS DUPLICATUM

jus duplicatum (j<<schwa>>s d[y]oo-pIi-kay-t<<schwa>>m). See DROIT-DROIT.

JUS GENTIUM

jus gentium (j<<schwa>>s jen-shee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin "law of nations"]
 1.INTERNATIONAL LAW. 2.Roman law. The body of law, taken to be common to all civilized peoples, and applied in dealing with the relations between Roman citizens and foreigners. — Also termed jus inter gentes.

“The early Roman law (the jus civile) applied only to Roman citizens. It was formalistic and hard and reflected the status of a small, unsophisticated society rooted in the soil. It was totally unable to provide a relevant background for an expanding, developing nation. This need was served by the creation and progressive augmentation of the jus gentium. This provided simplified rules to govern the relations between foreigners, and between foreigners and citizens.... The progressive rules of the jus gentium gradually overrode the narrow jus civile until the latter system ceased to exist. Thus, the jus gentium became the common law of the Roman Empire and was deemed to be of universal application.” Malcolm N. Shaw, International Law 15 (4th ed. 1997).

JUS GENTIUM PRIVATUM

jus gentium privatum (j<<schwa>>s jen-shee-<<schwa>>m prI-vay-t<<schwa>>m). See private international law under INTERNATIONAL LAW.

JUS PROPRIETATIS jus proprietatis (j<<schwa>>s pr<<schwa>>-prI-<<schwa>>-tay-tis), n.[Latin] Civil law. A right in property based on ownership rather than actual possession. Cf. JUS POSSESSIONIS.

JUS PROTEGENDI

jus protegendi (j<<schwa>>s proh-t<<schwa>>-jen-dI), n.[Latin] Civil law. A servitude granting the right to make the roof or tiling of one's house extend over a neighbor's house.

JUS PROVOCATIONIS

jus provocationis (j<<schwa>>s prov-<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Roman law. The right possessed by every Roman citizen to appeal to the people in their Comitia, or later the emperor, from the infliction of summary punishment by a magistrate (coercitio). • Modern Romanists disagree about the precise meaning of this term. — Also termed jus provocatio.

JUS PUBLICUM

jus publicum (j<<schwa>>s p<<schwa>>b-li-k<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin “public law”] 1.Roman & civil law. Public law, consisting of constitutional law, administrative law, criminal law and procedure, and the law relating to sacred rites (jus sacrum).2. The right, title, or dominion of public ownership; esp., the government's right to own real property in trust for the public benefit. See PUBLIC LAW. Cf. JUS PRIVATUM.

JUS QUAESITUM

jus quaesitum (j<<schwa>>s kwi-sI-t<<schwa>>m or -zI-t<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin] Civil law.

1. A right to ask or recover, as from one who is under an obligation. 2. An acquired right.

JUS QUAESITUM TERTIO

jus quaesitum tertio (j<<schwa>>s kwi-sI-t<<schwa>>m t<<schwa>>r-shee-oh). [Law Latin] Scots law. A contractual right conferred on a third party. • A third-party right may be conferred on a specified individual or on an identifiable class of people.

“Where, in a contract between two parties, a stipulation is introduced in favour of a third, who is not a contracting party, the right thus created is said to be jus quaesitum tertio. Such a right, generally speaking, cannot be recalled by the contracting parties, and the third party, so far as he is concerned, may require exhibition and implementation of the contract.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Laws of Scotland 622 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

JUS QUIRITIUM

jus quiritorium (j<<schwa>>s kwi-rI-shee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. The ancient, primitive law of the Romans before the development of the jus praetorium and the jus gentium; the original jus civile.

JUS RECUPERANDI

jus recuperandi (j<<schwa>>s ri-k[y]oo-p<<schwa>>-ran-dI), n.[Latin] Civil law. The right of recovering, esp. lands.

JUS REGALE

jus regale (j<<schwa>>s ri-gay-lee). [Law Latin] Scots law. A royal right; a sovereign's right.

JUS REGENDI

jus regendi (j<<schwa>>s ri-jen-dI), n.[Law Latin] A proprietary right vested in a sovereign.

JUS RELICTAE

jus relictæ (j<<schwa>>s ri-lik-tee), n.[Law Latin “right of a widow”] Civil & Scots law. A widow's claim to her share of her deceased husband's movable estate. • If the widow has children, her share is one-third; if not, her share is one-half.

JUS RELICTI

jus relictæ (j<<schwa>>s ri-lik-tI), n.[Law Latin “right of a widower”] Civil & Scots law. A widower's right in his deceased wife's separate movable estate, historically two-thirds if there were surviving children, and otherwise one-half. Under the Married Women's Property Act of 1881, the amount became one-third in the case of surviving children, and otherwise one-half.

JUS REPRAESENTATIONIS

jus repraesentationis (j<<schwa>>s rep-ri-zen-tay-shee-oh-nis), n.[Latin] Civil law. The right to represent or be represented by another.

JUS RERUM

jus rerum (j<<schwa>>s reer-<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin "law of things"] Civil law. The law regulating the rights and powers of persons over things, as how property is acquired, enjoyed, and transferred. See LAW OF THINGS. Cf. JUS PERSONARUM .

JUS RESPONDENDI

jus respondendi (j<<schwa>>s ree-spon-den-dI). [Latin "the right of responding"] Roman law. The authority conferred on certain jurists when delivering legal opinions. • Modern Romanists disagree about the precise meaning of this term.

JUS RETENTIONIS

jus retentionis (j<<schwa>>s ri-ten-shee-oh-nis), n.[Latin] Civil law. The right to retain a thing until the delivery of something else that the person retaining the thing is entitled to.

JUS RETINENDI ET INSISTENDI jus retinendi et insistendi (j<<schwa>>s ret-i-nen-dI et in-sis-ten-dI). [Law Latin] Scots law. A right of retention and of insisting. • The phrase usu. referred to a seaman's right to recover wages both by taking a lien against the ship and by proceeding against the owner for payment.

JUS RETRACTUS

jus retractus (j<<schwa>>s ri-trak-t<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin "the right of retraction"] Civil law. 1. The right of certain relatives of one who has sold immovable property to repurchase it. 2. A debtor's right, upon sale of the debt by the creditor, to have a third person redeem it within a year for the price paid by the purchaser.

JUS RUSTICORUM PRAEDIORUM jus rusticorum praediorum. See rural servitude under SERVITUDE(2).

JUS SACRUM

jus sacrum (j<<schwa>>s say-kr<<schwa>>m). [Latin "sacred law"] Roman law. The body of law regulating matters of public worship, such as sacrifices and the appointment of priests. Cf. JUS NON SACRUM.

JUS SANGUINIS

jus sanguinis (j<<schwa>>s sang-gw<<schwa>>-nis), n.[Latin "right of blood"] The rule that a child's citizenship is determined by the parents' citizenship. • Most nations follow this rule. Cf. JUS SOLI.

JUS SCRIPTUM

jus scriptum (j<<schwa>>s skrip-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] See WRITTEN LAW.

JUS SIBI DICERE

jus sibi dicere (j<<schwa>>s sib-IdI-s<<schwa>>r-ee). [Latin] Hist. To declare the law for oneself; to take the law into one's own hand.

JUS SINGULARE

jus singulare (j<<schwa>>s sing-gy<<schwa>>-lair-ee), n.[Latin “individual law”] Roman & civil law. A law or right established for special purposes, as opposed to the common or public law or right. Cf. JUS COMMUNE(1).

JUS SOLI

jus soli (j<<schwa>>s soh-II), n.[Latin “right of the soil”] The rule that a child's citizenship is determined by place of birth. • This is the U.S. rule, as affirmed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution. Cf. JUS SANGUINIS.

JUS SPATIANDI

jus spatiani (j<<schwa>>s spay-shee-an-dI), n.[Latin “right of walking about”] Civil law. The public's right-of-way over specific land for purposes of recreation and instruction.

JUS STAPULAE

jus stapulae (j<<schwa>>s stay-py<<schwa>>-lee), n.[Law Latin “right of staple”] Civil law. A town's right or privilege of stopping imported merchandise and forcing it to be offered for sale in its own market. See STAPLE.

JUS STRICTUM

jus strictum (j<<schwa>>s strik-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin “strict law”] Roman law. Law rigorously interpreted according to the letter. — Also termed strictum jus. See STRICTI JURIS. Cf. JUS AEQUUM.

JUS SUFFRAGII

jus suffragii (j<<schwa>>s s<<schwa>>-fray-jee-I). [Latin] Roman law. The right of a citizen to vote. Cf. JUS HONORUM.

JUST

just,adj. Legally right; lawful; equitable.

JUSTA CAUSA

justa causa (j<<schwa>>s-t<<schwa>> kaw-z<<schwa>>), n.[Latin] Civil law. A just cause; a lawful ground. See good cause under CAUSE(2).

JUSTAE NUPTIAE

justae nuptiae (j<<schwa>>s-tee n<<schwa>>p-shee-ee). [Latin “legal marriage”] Roman law. A marriage between two persons who had the legal capacity to wed. • Justae nuptiae was the only union that created the familial relationship known as patria potestas. — Also termed justum matrimonium. See patria potestas under POTESTAS. Cf. CONCUBINATUS.

“Justae nuptiae is such a marriage as satisfies all the rules of civil law. Any marriage between two persons who had the capacity of civil marriage with each other (conubium) was necessarily iustae nuptiae, for if the union was defective in any other respect it was no marriage at all. On the other hand, if there was no conubium between the parties it might still be actually a marriage (nuptiae, nuptiae non iustae), the wife being uxor non iusta, the children liberi non iusti. Such a marriage, in which one party at least would not be a civis, did not produce patria potestas over children” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 63–64 (2d ed. 1953).

JUS TALIONIS

jus talionis. See LEX TALIONIS.

JUST-AS-PROBABLE RULE

just-as-probable rule. Workers' compensation. A doctrine whereby a workers'-compensation claim will be denied if it is equally likely that the injury resulted from a non-work-related cause as from a work-related cause. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 1487–1492. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 1035–1040, 1046.]

JUST CAUSE

just cause. See good cause under CAUSE(2).

JUST COMPENSATION

just compensation. See COMPENSATION.

JUST COMPENSATION CLAUSE

Just Compensation Clause. See TAKINGS CLAUSE.

JUST DESERTS

just deserts (di-z<<schwa>>rts). What one really deserves; esp., the punishment that a person deserves for having committed a crime. — Also termed deserts.

JUS TERTII

jus tertii (j<<schwa>>s t<<schwa>>r-shee-I), n. [Latin] 1. The right of a third party. [Cases: Action 13; Federal Civil Procedure 103.4. C.J.S. Actions §§ 57–63.]

“[N]o defendant in an action of trespass can plead the jus tertii — the right of possession outstanding in some third person — as against the fact of possession in the plaintiff.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 46 (17th ed. 1977).

2. The doctrine that, particularly in constitutional law, courts do not decide what they do not need to decide. “Jus tertii ... says nothing about the nature of legal argument on the merits of a case once formed, but as a symbol for the separability of cases is a useful term of art. Translated, however, it reads ‘right of a third person.’ It may once have been associated with a presumption of common-law jurisprudence that one cannot be harmed by an action that achieves its effect through effects upon others, cannot be ‘indirectly’ harmed.” Joseph Vining, Legal Identity 120 (1978).

JUSTICE

justice. 1. The fair and proper administration of laws.

commutative justice (k<<schwa>>-myoo-t<<schwa>>-tiv orkom-y<<schwa>>-tay-tiv). Justice concerned with the relations between persons and esp. with fairness in the exchange of goods and the fulfillment of contractual obligations.

distributive justice. Justice owed by a community to its members, including the fair allocation of common advantages and sharing of common burdens.

Jedburgh justice (jed-b<<schwa>>r<<schwa>>). A brand of justice involving punishment (esp. execution) first and trial afterwards. • The term alludes to Jedburgh, a Scottish border town where in the 17th century raiders were said to have been hanged without the formality of a trial. Jedburgh justice differs from lynch law in that the former was administered by an established court (albeit after the fact). — Also termed Jeddart justice; Jedwood justice. Cf. LIDFORD LAW; LYNCH LAW.

justice in personam. See personal justice.

justice in rem. See social justice.

natural justice. Justice as defined in a moral, as opposed to a legal, sense. — Also termed justitia naturalis. Cf. NATURAL LAW.

“Although the judges have frequently asserted that a foreign judgment which contravenes the principles of natural justice cannot be enforced in England, it is extremely difficult to fix with precision the exact cases in which the contravention is sufficiently serious to justify a refusal of enforcement. Shadwell V.-C. once said that ‘whenever it is manifest that justice has been disregarded, the court is bound to treat the decision as a matter of no value and no substance.’ [Price v. Dewhurst, 8 Sim 279, 302 (1837).] But this goes too far.... The expression ‘contrary to natural justice’ has, however, figured so prominently in judicial statements that it is essential to fix, if possible, its exact scope. The only statement that can be made with any approach to accuracy is that in the present context, the expression is confined to something glaringly defective in the procedural rules of the foreign law.... In other words, what the courts are vigilant to watch is that the defendant has not been deprived of an opportunity to present his side of the case.” G.C. Cheshire, Private International Law 675 (6th ed. 1961).

personal justice. Justice between parties to a dispute, regardless of any larger principles that might be involved. — Also termed justice in personam.

popular justice. Demotic justice, which is usu. considered less than fully fair and proper even though it satisfies prevailing public opinion in a particular case. Cf. social justice.

“Nothing is more treacherous than popular justice in many of its manifestations, subject as it is to passion, to fallacy, and to the inability to grasp general notions or to distinguish the essential from the inessential.” Carleton K. Allen, Law in the Making 387 (7th ed. 1964).

positive justice. Justice as it is conceived, recognized, and incompletely expressed by the civil law or some other form of human law. Cf. POSITIVE LAW.

JUSTIFICATION

justification,n.1. A lawful or sufficient reason for one's acts or omissions; any fact that prevents an act from being wrongful. 2. A showing, in court, of a sufficient reason why a defendant did what the prosecution charges the defendant to answer for. • Under the Model Penal Code, the defendant must believe that the action was necessary to avoid a harm or evil and that the harm or evil to be avoided was greater than the harm that would have resulted if the crime had been committed. Model Penal Code § 3.02. — Also termed justification defense; necessity defense. See lesser-evils defense under DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law 38. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 49–53.] 3. A surety's proof of having enough money or credit to provide security for the party for whom it is required. — justify,vb. — justificatory (j<< schwa>>s-ti-fi-k<<schwa>>-tor-ee), adj.

“A little bit of history: the term ‘justification’ was formerly used for cases where the aim of the law was not frustrated, while ‘excuse’ was used for cases where it was not thought proper to punish. Killing a dangerous criminal who had tried to avoid arrest was justified, since the law (if one may personify) wished this to happen, whereas killing in self-defence was merely excused. The distinction was important because justification was a defence to the criminal charge while an excuse was not, being merely the occasion for a royal pardon. By the end of the middle ages (it is difficult to assign a fixed date) even excuses were recognised by the courts, since when there has been no reason to distinguish between justification and excuse.” Glanville Williams, Textbook of Criminal Law 39 (1978).

defensive-force justification.A justification defense available when an aggressor has threatened harm to the particular interest that is the subject of the defense — usu. to the actor (self-defense), to other persons (defense of others), or to property (defense of property).

imperfect justification.A reason or cause that is insufficient to completely justify a defendant's behavior but that can be used to mitigate criminal punishment. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 72. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1465, 1526.]

judicial-authority justification.A justification defense available when an actor has engaged in conduct constituting an offense in order to comply with a court order.

public-authority justification.A justification defense available when an actor has been specifically authorized to engage in the conduct constituting an offense in order to protect or further a public interest.

JUSTIFICATION DEFENSE

justification defense. Criminal & tort law. A defense that arises when the defendant has acted in a way that the law does not seek to prevent. • Traditionally, the following defenses were justifications: consent, self-defense, defense of others, defense of property, necessity (choice of evils), the use of force to make an arrest, and the use of force by public authority. — Sometimes shortened to justification. Cf. EXCUSE(2). [Cases: Criminal Law 38; Torts 16. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 49–53; Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 20, 28, 31–33, 44; Torts §§ 7, 12, 14–15, 51, 64, 92–93.]

JUSTINIAN CODE

Justinian Code (j<<schwa>>s-tin-ee-<<schwa>>n). Roman law. A collection of imperial constitutions drawn up by a commission of ten persons appointed by Justinian, and published in A.D. 529. • Ten jurists, headed by Tribonian, carried out the project beginning in February A.D. 528 and ending in April 529. It replaced all prior imperial law, but was in force only until A.D. 534, when it was supplanted by a revision, the Codex Repetitae Praelectionis. The precise contents of the first work are unknown. But the second work, containing the 12 books of the revised code, includes the imperial constitutions of the Gregorian, Hermogenian, and Theodosian Codes, together with later legislation, revised and harmonized into one systematic whole. It deals with ecclesiastical law, criminal law, administrative law, and private law. In modern writings, the A.D. 534 version is the work referred to as the Justinian Code. — Also termed Justinianean Code (j<<schwa>>s-tin-ee-an-ee-<<schwa>>n); Code of Justinian; Codex Justinianus (koh-deks j<<schwa>>s-tin-ee-ay-n<<schwa>>s); Codex Vetus (“Old Code”); Codex Iustinianus Repetitae Praelectionis.

“By the time when the Digest and Institutes had been completed it was obvious that the Codex, published little more than four years earlier, was incomplete, since in the interval Justinian ... had promulgated other new constitutions. Tribonian, therefore, was appointed to revise the Code, so as to bring it fully up to date, and at the end of the year A.D. 534 this new Code, known as the Codex Repetitae Praelectionis, was promulgated, and is the only Code which survives to the present day. Justinian seems to have laboured under the erroneous impression that the system he had framed would be adequate for all time. But as there is nothing static about law, further legislative enactments, termed Novellae Constitutiones, were issued during his reign.... In modern times Justinian's various compilations came to be called collectively the Corpus Juris Civilis: the Corpus being regarded as a single work, made up of the Institutes, the Digest, the Codex Repetitae Praelectionis, and the Novels.” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 44 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

kindlie (kInd-lee). Scots law. A tenant's right to a lease's renewal.

KINDRED kindred. 1. KIN. 2. KINSHIP.

KING

King. English law. The British government; the Crown.

“In modern times it has become usual to speak of the Crown rather than of the King, when we refer to the King in his public capacity as a body politic. We speak of the property of the Crown, when we mean the property which the King holds in right of his Crown. So we speak of the debts due by the Crown, of legal proceedings by and against the Crown, and so on. The usage is one of great convenience, because it avoids a difficulty which is inherent in all speech and thought concerning corporations sole, the difficulty, namely, of distinguishing adequately between the body politic and the human being by whom it is represented and whose name it bears.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 341–42 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

KING'S ADVOCATE

King's advocate. See LORD ADVOCATE.

KING'S BENCH

King's Bench. Historically, the highest common-law court in England, presided over by the reigning monarch. • When a queen begins to reign, the name automatically changes to Queen's Bench. In 1873, during Queen Victoria's reign, the court's jurisdiction was transferred to the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice. — Abbr. K.B. — Also termed Court of King's Bench; Coram Rege Court. Cf. QUEEN'S BENCH; QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION.

“The court of King's Bench is the highest court of ordinary justice in criminal cases within the realm, and paramount to the authority of justices of gaol delivery, and commissions of oyer and terminer. It has jurisdiction over all criminal causes, from high treason down to the most trivial misdemeanor or breach of the peace.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 156 (2d ed. 1826).

KING'S CHAMBERS

King's Chambers. In the United Kingdom, waters lying within an imaginary line drawn from headland to headland around the coast of Great Britain.

KING'S COUNSEL

King's Counsel. In the United Kingdom, Canada, and territories that have retained the rank, an elite, senior-level barrister or advocate. • Originally, a King's Counsel was appointed to serve as counsel to the reigning monarch. — Abbr. K.C. — Also termed senior counsel. Cf. QUEEN'S COUNSEL .

KING'S COURT

King's Court. See CURIA REGIS.

KING'S EVIDENCE

King's evidence. See Queen's evidence under EVIDENCE.

KING'S GREAT SESSIONS IN WALES

King's Great Sessions in Wales. See COURT OF GREAT SESSIONS IN WALES.

KING'S PEACE

King's peace. Hist. A royal subject's right to be protected from crime (to “have peace”) in certain areas subject to the king's immediate control, such as the king's palace or highway. • A breach of the peace in one of these areas subjected the offender to punishment in the king's court. Over time, the area subject to the king's peace grew, which in turn increased the jurisdiction of the royal courts. — Also written King's Peace. Cf. AGAINST THE PEACE AND DIGNITY OF THE STATE .

“A breach of the King's Peace was at one time the most comprehensive of all offences against the Crown; it indeed included, and still includes, all the more serious crimes. At one time, in fact, every indictment charged the accused with an offence ‘against the peace of our Sovereign Lord the King’; and, though this form is no longer employed, that is mainly because the imperative duty of not disturbing the King's Peace has by now evolved into an elaborate system of Criminal Law.” Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 134 (P.B. Fairest ed., 6th ed. 1967).

KING'S PROCTOR

King's proctor. See QUEEN'S PROCTOR.

KING'S SILVER

King's silver.Hist. Money paid in the Court of Common Pleas for a license to levy a feudal fine; an amount due on granting a cong  d'accorder in levying a fine of lands. • It amounted to three-twentieths of the supposed annual value of the land, or ten shillings for every five marks of land. — Also termed post-fine. See CONG  D'ACCORDER; FINE(1).

KINSHIP

kinship. Relationship by blood, marriage, or adoption. — Also termed kindred.

KINSMAN

kinsman. See RELATIVE.

KINTAL

kintal. See QUINTAL.

KISSING THE BOOK

kissing the Book.Hist. The practice of touching one's lips to a copy of the Bible (esp. the New Testament) after taking an oath in court. • This practice — formerly used in England — was replaced by the practice of placing one's hand on the Bible while swearing.

kitchen cabinet.See CABINET.

kiting. 1.CHECK-KITING. 2.Commercial law. Slang. Raising money on credit, often by using accommodation paper.

KLAXON DOCTRINE

Klaxon doctrine (klak-s<<schwa>>n).Conflict of laws. The principle that a federal court exercising diversity jurisdiction must apply the choice-of-law rules of the state where the court sits. • In Klaxon Co. v. Stentor Elec. Mfg. Co., the Supreme Court extended the rule of Erie v. Tompkins to choice-of-law issues. 313 U.S. 487, 61 S.Ct. 1020 (1941). — Also termed Erie/Klaxon doctrine. See ERIE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Federal Courts 409.1. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws § 101.]

KLEPTOMANIA

kleptomania (klep-t<<schwa>>-may-nee-<<schwa>>), n. A compulsive urge to steal, esp. without economic motive. — kleptomaniac,n. & adj.

KNIGHT

knight. 1.Hist. In the Middle Ages, a person of noble birth who, having been trained in arms and chivalry, was bound to follow an earl, baron, or other superior lord into battle. 2. In modern Britain, a man upon whom the monarch has bestowed an honorary dignity (kighthood) as a reward for personal merit of some kind. • The status of kighthood no longer relates to birth or possessions and does not involve military service.

KNIGHT BACHELOR

knight bachelor. See BACHELOR(3).

KNIGHT OF THE POST

knight of the post. Hist. A hired perjurer.

KNIGHT-SERVICE

knight-service. Hist. A type of lay tenure in which a knight held land of another person or the Crown in exchange for a pledge of military service. — Also termed knight's service; (Scots law) ward holding. Cf. BASE SERVICE; SOCAGE; VILLEINAGE.

“By far the greater part of England is held of the king by knight's service (per servitium militare): it is comparatively rare for the king's tenants in chief to hold by any of the other tenures. In order to understand this tenure we must form the conception of a unit of military service. That unit seems to be the service of one knight or fully armed horseman (servitium unius militis) to be done to the king in his army for forty days in the year, if it be called for.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 254 (2d ed. 1898).

KNIGHT'S FEE

knight's fee. Hist. The amount of land that gave rise to the obligation of knight-service. • The amount varied from less than a hide to more than six hides. See HIDE.

KNIGHT'S SERVICE

knight's service. See KNIGHT-SERVICE.

KNOCK-AND-ANNOUNCE RULE

knock-and-announce rule. Criminal procedure. The requirement that the police knock at the door and announce their identity, authority, and purpose before entering a residence to execute an arrest or search warrant. — Also termed knock-and-notice rule. Cf. no-knock search warrant under SEARCH WARRANT; no-knock search under SEARCH. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 54, 143.1. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 64–65, 195–201.]

KNOCK-FOR-KNOCK AGREEMENT

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS know all men by these presents.Take note. • This archaic form of address — a loan translation of the Latin noverint universi per praesentes — was traditionally used to begin certain legal documents such as bonds and powers of attorney, but in modern drafting style the phrase is generally considered deadwood. See NOVERINT UNIVERSI PER PRAESENTES. Cf. PATEAT UNIVERSIS PER PRAESENTES .

KNOW-HOW

know-how. The information, practical knowledge, techniques, and skill required to achieve some practical end, esp. in industry or technology. • Know-how is considered intangible property in which rights may be bought and sold. See TRADE SECRET.

KNOWING

knowing,adj.1. Having or showing awareness or understanding; well-informed .2. Deliberate; conscious . — knowingly,adv.

KNOWING CONSENT

knowing consent.See informed consent under CONSENT(1).

KNOWLEDGE

knowledge. 1. An awareness or understanding of a fact or circumstance; a state of mind in which a person has no substantial doubt about the existence of a fact. Cf. INTENT(1); NOTICE(1), (2); SCIENTER.

“It is necessary ... to distinguish between producing a result intentionally and producing it knowingly. Intention and knowledge commonly go together, for he who intends a result usually knows that it will follow, and he who knows the consequences of his act usually intends them. But there may be intention without knowledge, the consequence being desired but not foreknown as certain or even probable. Conversely, there may be knowledge without intention, the consequence being foreknown as the inevitable concomitant of that which is desired, but being itself an object of repugnance rather than desire, and therefore not intended. When King David ordered Uriah the Hittite to be set in the forefront of the hottest battle, he intended the death of Uriah only, yet he knew for a certainty that many others of his men would fall at the same time and place.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 380–81 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“ ‘Knowingly’ or ‘knowledge’ has a broad sweep when used in connection with the element of a crime, and an untrue representation has been ‘knowingly’ made if by one who knows it is untrue, believes it is untrue or is quite aware that he has not the slightest notion whether it is true or not.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 379 (3d ed. 1982).

“[B]ecause there are several areas of the criminal law in which there may be good reason for distinguishing between one's objectives and [one's] knowledge, the modern approach is to define separately the mental states of knowledge and intent This is the approach taken in the Model Penal Code [§ 2.02(2)(a) & (b)].” Wayne R. LaFare & Austin W. Scott Jr., Criminal Law 218 (2d ed. 1986).

actual knowledge. 1. Direct and clear knowledge, as distinguished from constructive knowledge <the employer, having witnessed the accident, had actual knowledge of the worker's injury>. — Also termed express actual knowledge. 2. Knowledge of such information as would lead a reasonable person to inquire further <under the discovery rule, the limitations period begins to run once the plaintiff has actual knowledge of the injury>. — Also termed (in sense 2) implied actual knowledge.

“The third issue in section 523(a)(3) is the meaning of ‘notice or actual knowledge.’ Under the Uniform Commercial Code knowledge means actually knowing something; notice means having received information from which one could infer the existence of the relevant fact. What the adjective ‘actual’ adds to the idea of ‘knowledge’ is unclear.” David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 7-27, at 516 (1993).

common knowledge. See COMMON KNOWLEDGE.

constructive knowledge. Knowledge that one using reasonable care or diligence should have, and therefore that is attributed by law to a given person <the court held that the partners had constructive knowledge of the partnership agreement even though none of them had read it>.

firsthand knowledge. See personal knowledge.

implied actual knowledge. See actual knowledge (2).

imputed knowledge. Knowledge attributed to a given person, esp. because of the person's legal responsibility for another's conduct <the principal's imputed knowledge of its agent's dealings>.

personal knowledge. Knowledge gained through firsthand observation or experience, as distinguished from a belief based on what someone else has said. • Rule 602 of the Federal Rules of Evidence requires lay witnesses to have personal knowledge of the matters they testify about. An affidavit must also be based on personal knowledge, unless the affiant makes it clear that a statement relies on “information and belief.” — Also termed firsthand knowledge. [Cases: Witnesses 37(2). C.J.S. Witnesses § 95.]

reckless knowledge. A person's awareness that a prohibited circumstance may exist, regardless of which the person accepts the risk and goes on to act.

scientific knowledge. Evidence. Knowledge that is grounded on scientific methods that have been supported by adequate validation. • Four primary factors are used to determine whether evidence amounts to scientific knowledge: (1) whether it has been tested; (2) whether it has been subject to peer review and publication; (3) the known or potential rate of error; and (4) the degree of acceptance within the scientific community. See DAUBERT TEST; SCIENTIFIC METHOD. [Cases: Criminal Law 486; Evidence 555. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1080; Evidence §§ 597–598, 601, 649, 652, 713.] superior knowledge. Knowledge greater than that had by another person, esp. so as to adversely affect that person <in its fraud claim, the subcontractor alleged that the general contractor had superior knowledge of the equipment shortage>. [Cases: Fraud 17; Negligence 1088, 1286(2). C.J.S. Negligence §§ 484–486, 500, 539, 545, 557–559, 563, 634.]

2. Archaic. CARNAL KNOWLEDGE.

laches (lach-iz). [Law French “remissness; slackness”] 1. Unreasonable delay in pursuing a right or claim — almost always an equitable one — in a way that prejudices the party against whom relief is sought. — Also termed sleeping on rights.

“Early in its history, Chancery developed the doctrine that where the plaintiff in equity delayed beyond the period of the statute applicable at law, relief would be refused on the ground of laches even though no specific prejudice to the defendant was shown. Today, in most states, there are statutes of limitations applying to suits in equity. Despite these, however, the doctrine still holds that even if the delay is for a shorter period of time than that of the statute, it may still bar equitable relief if it is unreasonable and prejudicial to the defendant.” John F. O’Connell, Remedies in a Nutshell 16 (2d ed. 1985).

prosecution laches. Patents. In a claim for patent infringement, the equitable defense that the patentee did not timely enforce the patent rights.

2. The equitable doctrine by which a court denies relief to a claimant who has unreasonably delayed in asserting the claim, when that delay has prejudiced the party against whom relief is sought. Cf. LIMITATION(3). [Cases: Equity 67. C.J.S. Equity §§ 128–132.] “The doctrine of laches ... is an instance of the exercise of the reserved power of equity to withhold relief otherwise regularly given where in the particular case the granting of such relief would be unfair or unjust.” William F. Walsh, A Treatise on Equity 472 (1930).

LAESIO ENORMIS

laesio enormis (lee-shee-oh i-nor-mis). [Law Latin “excessive loss” or “abnormal loss of more than half”] Roman & civil law. 1. The sale of a thing for which the buyer paid less than half its real value. • The seller could rescind the sale, but the buyer could keep the item purchased by paying the full value. Generally, this doctrine was limited to land sales. 2. The injury sustained by one party to an onerous contract when the overreaching party receives twice the value of that party's money or property, such as a purchaser who pays less than half the value of the property sold, or a seller who receives more than double the property's value. • If coowner coheirs partition or sell property, laesio enormis may exist when the purchaser pays less than one-fourth of the value rather than one-half. See La. Civ. Code arts. 824, 1406. — Also spelled lesio enormis. — Also termed lesion; enorm lesion; (in full) laesio enormis vel ultra dimidium (lee-shee-oh i-nor-mis vel <<schwa>>l-tr<<schwa>> di-mid-ee-<<schwa>>m); (in Louisiana) lesion beyond moiety.

“Lesion (laesio enormis) was the rule, established very late, that a seller could rescind a contract if he had received less than half its real value [I]n spite of its imperfections, lesion not only was adopted in all modern civilian systems (French Code Civil 1674–1683), but became the means of testing the validity of contracts generally by their fairness, a principle embodied in the German Civil Code (section 138) and the Swiss Code of Obligations (section 21). Such a test is no more difficult to apply in law than in equity, where it has long been established in our system. As the Romans applied it, it was a clumsy and inadequate way of reaching this result. In modern courts, in civil-law countries, it invests judges with a discretion not very likely to be abused, but sufficient to act as a deterrent to the grosser forms of economic exploitation.” Max Radin, Handbook of Roman Law 233–34 (1927).

LAESIO ENORMIS VEL ULTRA DIMIDIUM laesio enormis vel ultra dimidium. See LAESIO ENORMIS.

LAND

land, n. 1. An immovable and indestructible three-dimensional area consisting of a portion of the earth's surface, the space above and below the surface, and everything growing on or permanently affixed to it. 2. An estate or interest in real property. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.]

“In its legal significance, ‘land’ is not restricted to the earth's surface, but extends below and above the surface. Nor is it confined to solids, but may encompass within its bounds such things as gases and liquids. A definition of ‘land’ along the lines of ‘a mass of physical matter occupying space’ also is not sufficient, for an owner of land may remove part or all of that physical matter, as by digging up and carrying away the soil, but would nevertheless retain as part of his ‘land’ the space that remains. Ultimately, as a juristic concept, ‘land’ is simply an area of three-dimensional space, its position being identified by natural or imaginary points located by reference to the earth's surface. ‘Land’ is not the fixed contents of that space, although, as we shall see, the owner of that space may well own those fixed contents. Land is immoveable, as distinct from chattels, which are moveable; it is also, in its legal significance, indestructible. The contents of the space may be physically severed, destroyed or consumed, but the space itself, and so the ‘land’, remains immutable.” Peter Butt, Land Law 9 (2d ed. 1988).

accommodation land. Land that is bought by a builder or speculator who erects houses or improvements on it and then leases it at an increased rent.

acquired federal land. (usu. pl.) Federal land that was never in the public domain. See federal land.

acquired land. Land acquired by the government from private hands or from another governmental entity; esp., property acquired by the federal government from private or state ownership. • This term is frequently contrasted with public domain. — Also termed acquired lands. See PUBLIC DOMAIN(1).

“ ‘Acquired lands’ are lands the United States acquired from private or state owners by gift, purchase, exchange, or condemnation. In most but not all cases, such lands actually have been ‘reacquired,’ because the United States previously had purchased or won them from foreign and Indian sovereigns. Distinguishing between lands because of ownership origins that go back over a century is a policy with little to recommend it, but some statutes and judicial opinions maintain the distinction.” George Cameron Coggins, Public Natural Resources Law § 1.02[1] (1990).

arable land (ar-<<schwa>>-b*<<schwa>>*l). Land fit for cultivation. — Formerly also termed araturia; aralia; aratia. bounty land. A portion of public land given or donated as a reward, esp. for military service. See MILITARY BOUNTY LAND. [Cases: Public Lands 46. C.J.S. Public Lands § 64.]

certificate land. Land in the western part of Pennsylvania set apart after the American Revolution to be bought with certificates that the soldiers received in lieu of pay. Cf. donation land.

Crown land. Demesne land of the Crown; esp., in England and Canada, land belonging to the sovereign personally, or to the government, as distinguished from land held under private ownership. — Also termed demesne land of the Crown. See demesne land.

demesne land (di-maynor di-meen). Hist. Land reserved by a lord for personal use.

donation land. Land granted from the public domain to an individual as a gift, usu. as a reward for services or to encourage settlement in a remote area. • The term was initially used in Pennsylvania to reward Revolutionary War soldiers. Cf. certificate land. [Cases: Public Lands 45. C.J.S. Public Lands §§ 67–70.]

earned land. Public land that is conveyed by a land patent to a private person who has performed a certain condition, usu. one spelled out in an earlier grant. See PATENT(2).

enclosed land. Land that is actually enclosed and surrounded with fences.

fabric land. Hist. Land given toward the maintenance, repair, or rebuilding of a cathedral or other church. • This term derives from funds given ad fabricam ecclesiae reparandam (“to repair the fabric of the church”).

“Fabrick-Lands are lands given towards the maintenance, rebuilding, or repair of Cathedrals or other churches In antient time almost every one gave by his Will more or less to the Fabrick of the Cathedral or Parish-Church where he liv'd.” Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

fast land. (often pl.) Land that is above the high-water mark and that, when flooded by a government project, is subjected to a governmental taking. • Owners of fast lands are entitled to just compensation for the taking. See TAKING(2). [Cases: Eminent Domain 2(10). C.J.S. Eminent Domain §§ 18, 90–96.]

federal land. (usu. pl.) Land owned by the United States government. • Federal lands are classified as public lands (also termed “lands in the public domain”) or acquired federal lands, depending on how the land was obtained. See acquired federal land.

made land. Artificially formed land, usu. land that has been reclaimed by filling or created by dredging.

mineral land. Land that contains deposits of valuable minerals in quantities justifying the costs of extraction and using the land for mining, rather than agricultural or other purposes.

place land. See INDEMNITY LAND.

public land. Lands or land interests held by the government, without regard to how the government acquired ownership; unappropriated land belonging to the federal or state government. — Also termed public lands; government land; public ground. [Cases: Public Lands 1. C.J.S. Public Lands § 3.]

“The terms ‘public lands’ and ‘federal lands’ may ... include less than full fee interests, such as severed mineral estates. They usually do not, however, refer to submerged lands off the seacoasts (over which the United States asserts jurisdiction but not title), or lands held in trust for Indians.” George Cameron Coggins et al., Federal Public Land and Resources Law 3 (3d ed. 1993).

reserved land. See RESERVATION(3).

riparian land. 1. Land that includes part of the bed of a watercourse or lake. 2. Land that borders on a public watercourse or public lake whose bed is owned by the public.

school land. Public real estate set apart for sale or exploitation by a state to establish and fund public schools. [Cases: Public Lands 51. C.J.S. Public Lands §§ 76–79, 82–83.]

seated land. Land that is occupied, cultivated, improved, reclaimed, farmed, or used as a place of residence, with or without cultivation.

settled land. Any land — or any interest in it — that is the subject of any document that limited it to, or put it into trust for, a person by way of succession.

swamp and overflowed land. Land that, because of its boggy, marshy, fenlike character, is unfit for cultivation, requiring drainage or reclamation to render it available for beneficial use. • Such lands were granted out of the U.S. public domain to the littoral states by acts of Congress in 1850 and thereafter. 43 USCA §§ 981 et seq. [Cases: Public Lands 58. C.J.S. Public Lands §§ 102–103, 106–107.]

LAND-USE REGULATION

land-use regulation. An ordinance or other legislative enactment governing the development or use of real estate. — Also spelled landuse regulation. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 1. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 2, 5–7, 17–18.]

“Public regulation of the use and development of land comes in a variety of forms which generally focus on four aspects of land use: (1) the type of use, such as whether it will be used for agricultural, commercial, industrial, or residential purposes; (2) the density of use, manifested in concerns over the height, width, bulk, or environmental impact of the physical structures on the land; (3) the aesthetic impact of the use, which may include the design and placement of structures on the land; and (4) the effect of the particular use of the land on the cultural and social values of the community, illustrated by community conflicts over adult entertainment, housing for service-dependent groups such as low-income families and developmentally disabled persons, and whether the term family should be defined in land use regulations to include persons who are not related by blood or marriage.” Peter W. Salsich Jr., Land Use Regulation 1 (1991).

LAND WAITER

LARCENOUS INTENT

larcenous intent.See INTENT(1).

LARCENY

larceny (lahr-s<<schwa>>-nee), n. The unlawful taking and carrying away of someone else's personal property with the intent to deprive the possessor of it permanently. • Common-law larceny has been broadened by some statutes to include embezzlement and false pretenses, all three of which are often subsumed under the statutory crime of “theft.” [Cases: Larceny 1.C.J.S. Larceny §§ 1(1, 2), 9.]

“The criminal offence of larceny or theft in the Common Law was intimately connected with the civil wrong of trespass. ‘Where there has been no trespass,’ said Lord Coleridge, ‘there can at law common be no larceny.’ Larceny, in other words, is merely a particular kind of trespass to goods which, by virtue of the trespasser's intent, is converted into a crime. Trespass is a wrong, not to ownership but to possession, and theft, therefore, is not the violation of a person's right to ownership, but the infringement of his possession, accompanied with a particular criminal intent.” 4 Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England 72–73 (L. Crispin Warmington ed., 21st ed. 1950).

“[T]he distinctions between larceny, embezzlement and false pretenses serve no useful purpose in the criminal law but are useless handicaps from the standpoint of the administration of criminal justice. One solution has been to combine all three in one section of the code under the name of ‘larceny.’ This has one disadvantage, however, because it frequently becomes necessary to add a modifier to make clear whether the reference is to common-law larceny or to statutory larceny.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 389 (3d ed. 1982).

aggravated larceny.Larceny accompanied by some aggravating factor (as when the theft is from a person). — Also termed compound larceny. [Cases: Larceny 23. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 60(1, 2, 3), 61–65.]

complicated larceny. See mixed larceny.

compound larceny. 1. See aggravated larceny. 2. See mixed larceny.

constructive larceny. Larceny in which the perpetrator's felonious intent to appropriate the goods is construed from the defendant's conduct at the time of asportation, although a felonious intent was not present before that time.

grand larceny. Larceny of property worth more than a statutory cutoff amount, usu. $100. Cf. petit larceny. [Cases: Larceny 23. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 60(1, 2, 3), 61–65.]

larceny by a constructive trespass. Larceny that occurs when a property owner mistakenly gives another person more property than is due, and the recipient knows about the error but does not disclose it before taking the excess property with the intent of converting it to his or her own use.

larceny by bailee. Larceny committed by a bailee who converts the property to personal use or to the use of a third party. [Cases: Embezzlement 16; Larceny 15. C.J.S. Embezzlement § 20; Larceny §§ 30–32, 45–48.]

larceny by extortion. See theft by extortion under THEFT.

larceny by fraud and deception. See larceny by trick.

larceny by trick. Larceny in which the taker misleads the rightful possessor, by misrepresentation of fact, into giving up possession of (but not title to) the goods. — Also termed larceny by trick and deception; larceny by trick and device; larceny by fraud and deception. Cf. FALSE PRETENSES; cheating by false pretenses under CHEATING. [Cases: Larceny 14. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 7, 36, 50.]

larceny from the person. Larceny in which the goods are taken directly from the person, but without violence or intimidation, the victim usu. being unaware of the taking. • Pickpocketing is a typical example. This offense is similar to robbery except that violence or intimidation is not involved. Cf. ROBBERY. [Cases: Larceny 19. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 8, 10–11.]

larceny of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake. See theft of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake under THEFT.

mixed larceny. 1. Larceny accompanied by aggravation or violence to the person. Cf. simple larceny. 2. Larceny involving a taking from a house. — Also termed compound larceny; complicated larceny.

petit larceny.Larceny of property worth less than an amount fixed by statute, usu. $100. — Also spelled petty larceny. Cf. grand larceny. [Cases: Larceny 23. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 60(1, 2, 3), 61–65.]

simple larceny.Larceny unaccompanied by aggravating factors; larceny of personal goods unattended by an act of violence. Cf. mixed larceny (1).

LARGER PARCEL

larger parcel.Eminent domain. A portion of land that is not a complete parcel, but is the greater part of a bigger tract, entitling the owner to damages both for the parcel taken and for severance from the larger tract. • To grant both kinds of damages, a court generally requires the owner to show unity of ownership, unity of use, and contiguity of the land. But some states and the federal courts do not require contiguity when there is strong evidence of unity of use. [Cases: Eminent Domain 96, 135. C.J.S. Eminent Domain §§ 126–127.]

LARON

laron (lar-<<schwa>>n), n.[Law French] Hist. A thief.

LARRISON<TT> RULE

Larrison rule (lar-<<schwa>>-s<<schwa>>n).Criminal law. The doctrine that a defendant may be entitled to a new trial on the basis of newly discovered evidence of false testimony by a government witness if the jury might have reached a different conclusion without the evidence and it unfairly surprised the defendant at trial. Larrison v. United States, 24 F.2d 82 (7th Cir. 1928). [Cases: Criminal Law 942. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1451.]

lascivious cohabitation.See illicit cohabitation under COHABITATION.

L'ASSOCIATION LITTERAIRE ET ARTISTIQUE INTERNATIONALE

L'Association Litteraire et Artistique Internationale. Copyright. An organization of authors, artists, and other supporters of international copyright protection. • In 1878, the Association drafted five resolutions that would become the starting point for the Berne Convention. In 1883, the organization called the first meeting in Berne, Switzerland for the purpose of creating a union to enforce international copyrights. — Often shortened to the International Association. — Abbr. ALAI.

LAST

last, n. Hist. 1. A burden. 2. A measure of weight used for bulky commodities.

LAST ANTECEDENT, RULE OF THE last antecedent, rule of the. See RULE OF THE LAST ANTECEDENT.

LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE

last-clear-chance doctrine. Torts. The rule that a plaintiff who was contributorily negligent may nonetheless recover from the defendant if the defendant had the last opportunity to prevent the harm but failed to use reasonable care to do so (in other words, if the defendant's negligence is later in time than the plaintiff's). • This doctrine allows the plaintiff to rebut the contributory-negligence defense in the few jurisdictions where contributory negligence completely bars recovery. — Also termed discovered-peril doctrine; humanitarian doctrine; last-opportunity doctrine; subsequent-negligence doctrine; supervening-negligence doctrine. [Cases: Automobiles 227; Negligence 530, 1297. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 963–970; Negligence §§ 281–290, 313, 318.]

LAST-EMPLOYER RULE

last-employer rule. The doctrine that liability for an occupational injury or illness falls to the employer that exposed the worker to the injurious substance just before the first onset of the disease or injury. — Also termed last-injurious-exposure rule. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 201. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 120, 125–127.]

LAST HEIR

last heir. Hist. The person — either the lord of the manor or the sovereign — to whom lands come by escheat when there is no lawful heir.

LAST ILLNESS

last illness. The sickness ending in the person's death. — Also termed last sickness.

LAST-IN, FIRST-OUT

last-in, first-out. An accounting method that assumes that the most recent purchases are sold or used first, matching current costs against current revenues. — Abbr. LIFO. Cf. FIRST-IN, FIRST-OUT; NEXT-IN, FIRST-OUT. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3105.1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 27–29, 31–33.]

LAST-INJURIOUS-EXPOSURE RULE

last-injurious-exposure rule. See LAST-EMPLOYER RULE.

LAST-IN-TIME-MARRIAGE PRESUMPTION

last-in-time-marriage presumption. Family law. A presumption that the most recently contracted marriage is valid. • This presumption generally arises in a situation similar to this: A person, believing himself or herself to be divorced, remarries. This person dies, and the new spouse makes a claim for the decedent's pension benefits. Then a former spouse, claiming that there was never a valid divorce, also claims the right to receive the benefits. The last-in-time-marriage presumption operates so that the former spouse bears the burden of proving that there was no valid divorce.

LAST-LINK DOCTRINE

last-link doctrine. The rule that an attorney need not divulge nonprivileged information if doing so would reveal information protected by the attorney–client privilege, particularly if the information would provide essential evidence to support indicting or convicting the client of a crime. • This doctrine is often relied on as an exception to the rule that a client's identity is not privileged. For example, if divulging the client's name would supply the last link of evidence to indict or convict the client of a crime, the name need not be disclosed. [Cases: Witnesses 201(1). C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 329–330, 332–335, 337–340.]

LAST-OPPORTUNITY DOCTRINE last-opportunity doctrine. See LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE.

LAST-PROXIMATE-ACT TEST

last-proximate-act test. Criminal law. A common-law test for the crime of attempt, based on whether the defendant does the final act necessary to commit an offense (such as pulling the trigger of a gun, not merely aiming it). • Most courts have rejected this test as being too lenient. See ATTEMPT (2). [Cases: Criminal Law 44. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 114–123.]

LAST RESORT, COURT OF

last resort, court of. See court of last resort under COURT.

LAST SICKNESS

last sickness. See LAST ILLNESS.

LAST-STRAW DOCTRINE

last-straw doctrine. Employment law. The rule that the termination of employment may be justified by a series of incidents of poor performance, not one of which alone would justify termination, followed by a final incident showing a blatant disregard for the employer's interests.

LAST-SURVIVOR LIFE INSURANCE

last-survivor life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

LAST-TREATMENT RULE

last-treatment rule. The doctrine that, for an ongoing physician–patient relationship, the statute of limitations on a medical-malpractice claim begins to run when the treatment stops or the relationship ends. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 55(3). C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 159, 166, 171–175; Physicians, Surgeons, and Other Health-Care Providers § 108.]

late-term abortion. See ABORTION.

LATIFUNDIUM

latifundium (lat-⟨schwa⟩-f⟨schwa⟩n-dee-⟨schwa⟩m), n. [Latin fr. latus “broad” + fundus “land”] Roman law. A large private estate, common in the late Republic.

LATIN

Latin. The language of the ancient Romans and a primary language of the civil and canon law, and formerly of the common law. — Abbr. L.

“The value of the Latin has always consisted in its peculiar expressiveness as a language of law terms, in its superior conciseness which has made it the appropriate language of law maxims, and in its almost unlimited capacity of condensation by means of abbreviations and contractions, many of which are retained in popular use at the present day.” 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 131 (2d ed. 1867).

“The Latin maxims have largely disappeared from arguments and opinions. In their original phraseology they convey no idea that cannot be well expressed in modern English.” William C. Anderson, Law Dictionaries, 28 Am. L. Rev. 531, 532 (1894).

LATINARIUS

latinarius (lat-⟨schwa⟩-nair-ee-⟨schwa⟩s), n.[Latin] Hist. An interpreter of Latin.

LATINI JUNIANI

Latini Juniani (l⟨schwa⟩-tī-nī joo-nee-ay-nī), n. pl.[Latin “Junian Latins”] Roman law. Informally manumitted slaves who acquired some rights and privileges as free people, but not Roman citizenship. • They were a special class of freedmen (libertini) who could one day become citizens. If a Latinus Junianus did not become a citizen, then upon death that person's status reverted to slavery, and his or her patron acquired all the decedent's property. — Also termed libertine Junian Latins. See LEX JUNIA NORBANA. Cf. INGENUUS; SERVUS(1).

“Upon all these persons ... a new and definite status was conferred; they were henceforth to be known as Latini Juniani, their position being based upon Latinitas, a status which had been enjoyed by certain Latin colonists. A Latinus Junianus had no public rights But he had part of the commercium, i.e. he could acquire proprietary and other rights inter vivos, but not mortis causâ. A Latinus Junianus, therefore, could neither take under a will ... nor could he make one But, subject to these disabilities, a Latinus Junianus was a free man, and his children, though not, like the children of citizens, under his potestas, were free-born citizens.” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 68–69 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

latitat (lat-⟨schwa⟩-tat), n.[Law Latin “he lurks”] Hist. A writ issued in a personal action after the sheriff returned a bill of Middlesex with the notation that the defendant could not be found. • The writ was called latitat because of its fictitious recital that the defendant lurks about in the county. It was abolished by the Process in Courts of Law at Westminster Act of 1832 (St. 2, Will. 4, ch. 39). See BILL OF MIDDLESEX; TESTATUM.

“Latitat is a writ by which all men in personal actions are originally called in the king's bench to answer. And it is called latitat, because it is supposed by the writ that the defendant cannot be found in the county of Middlesex, as it appears by the return of the sheriff of that county, but that he lurks in another county: and therefore to the sheriff of that county is this writ directed to apprehend him.” Termes de la Ley 277 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

LATITATIO

latitatio (lat-⟨schwa⟩-tay-shee-oh), n.[Law Latin] Civil law. A lurking; a hiding; a concealment, esp. to avoid a trial.

LATIUM MAIUS

Latium maius (lay-shee-<<schwa>>m may-j<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. The greater rights conferred on the inhabitants of Latium and, later, of colonies outside Italy, giving citizenship to all members of the local curia or town council and their children. Cf. LATIUM MINUS.

“Under the Principate there is a distinction between Latium maius and Latium minus. The former referred to the rights granted to colonies founded as a coloniae Latinae outside Italy, combined with the concession of Roman citizenship to a larger group of individuals than Latium minus, in which only the municipal magistrates and members of the municipal council ... were rewarded with Roman citizenship.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 537–38 (1953).

LATIUM MINUS

Latium minus (lay-shee-<<schwa>>m mI-n<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. The right of citizenship granted to the superior magistrates of provincial colonies. — Also termed minus Latium. Cf. LATIUM MAIUS.

LATOR

lator (lay-t<<schwa>>r), n.[Latin “a bearer, proposer”] Civil law. 1. A bearer; a messenger. 2. A maker or giver of laws.

LATORI PRAESSENTIUM

latori praesentium (lay-tor-Ior l<<schwa>>-tor-I pri-sen-shee-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Scots law. To the bearer of these presents. • The phrase appeared in reference to written notes or bonds made payable to an unnamed creditor.

LATO SENSU

laudare (law-dair-ee), vb.[Latin] 1.Civil law. To name; to cite or quote as authority. 2.Hist. To determine or pass upon (a case, etc.) judicially.

LAUDATIO

laudatio (law-day-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Roman law. Court testimony concerning an accused person's good behavior and integrity of life. • This testimony resembles the practice in modern criminal trials of calling persons to speak favorably about a defendant's character. Pl. laudationes (law-day-shee-oh-neeZ).

LAUDATOR

laudator (law-day-t<<schwa>>r), n.[Latin] 1.Roman law. A character witness in a criminal trial. 2.Hist. An arbitrator. Pl. laudatores (law-d<<schwa>>-tor-eeZ).

LAUDATORY WORDS

laudatory words.Patents. In a patent claim, descriptive but self-serving and conclusory words about the invention's quality or features, such as "faster" or "more effective." • Laudatory words are usu. not allowed in the claims of utility-patent applications, but they are allowed in plant-patent applications.

LAUDEMIO

laudemio (law-dee-mee-<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin] Hist. A sum paid to a landowner by a person succeeding to a particular form of land contract by gift, devise, exchange, or sale; HERIOT. • The payment equaled 2% of the purchase money, and was paid to the landowner for acceptance of the successor. — Also termed (in old English law) acknowledgment money. See EMPHYTEUSIS.

LAUDERE AUCTOREM

laudere auctorem (law-deer-ee awk-tor-<<schwa>>m). See NOMINATIO AUCTORIS.

LAUREATE

laureate (lor-ee-it), n.1.Hist. An officer of the sovereign's household, who composed odes annually on the sovereign's birthday, on the new year, and occasionally on the occurrence of a remarkable victory. 2. A person honored for great achievement in the arts and sciences, and esp. in poetry.

LAUS DEO

laus Deo (laws dee-oh orlows day-oh). [Latin] Archaic. Praise be to God. • This was a heading to a bill of exchange.

LAW

law. 1. The regime that orders human activities and relations through systematic application of the force of politically organized society, or through social pressure, backed by force, in such a society; the legal system <respect and obey the law>.2. The aggregate of legislation, judicial precedents, and accepted legal principles; the body of authoritative grounds of judicial and administrative action; esp., the body of rules, standards, and principles that the courts of a particular jurisdiction apply in deciding controversies brought before them <the law of the land>.3. The set of rules or principles dealing with a specific area of a legal system <copyright law>.4. The judicial and administrative process; legal action and proceedings < when settlement negotiations failed, they submitted their dispute to the law>.5. A statute <Congress passed a law>. — Abbr. L. 6.COMMON LAW <law but not equity>. 7.The legal profession <she spent her entire career in law>.

“Some twenty years ago I pointed out two ideas running through definitions of law: one an imperative idea, an idea of a rule laid down by the lawmaking organ of a politically organized society, deriving its force from the authority of the sovereign; and the other a rational or ethical idea, an idea of a rule of right and justice deriving its authority from its intrinsic reasonableness or conformity to ideals of right and merely recognized, not made, by the sovereign.” Roscoe Pound, “More About the Nature of Law,” in Legal Essays in Tribute to Orrin Kip McMurray at 513, 515 (1935).

“All law is the law of a group of individuals or of groups made up of individuals. No one can make a law purely for himself. He may form a resolution, frame an ambition, or adopt a rule, but these are private prescriptions, not laws.” Tony Honoré, Making Law Bind: Essays Legal and Philosophical 33 (1987).

“It will help to distinguish three senses of the word ‘law.’ The first is law as a distinctive social institution; that is the sense invoked when we ask whether primitive law is really law. The second is law as a collection of sets of propositions — the sets we refer to as antitrust law, the law of torts, the Statute of Frauds, and so on. The third is law as a source of rights, duties, and powers, as in the sentence ‘The law forbids the murdering heir to inherit.’ ” Richard A. Posner, The Problems of Jurisprudence 220–21 (1990).

customary law. See CUSTOMARY LAW.

divine law. See DIVINE LAW.

enacted law. Law that has its source in legislation; WRITTEN LAW.

federal law. See FEDERAL LAW.

general law. 1. Law that is neither local nor confined in application to particular persons. • Even if there is only one person or entity to which a given law applies when enacted, it is general law if it purports to apply to all persons or places of a specified class throughout the jurisdiction. — Also termed general statute; law of a general nature. Cf. special law. [Cases: Statutes 68. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 154–161.] 2. A statute that relates to a subject of a broad nature.

imperative law. A rule in the form of a command; a rule of action imposed on people by some authority that enforces obedience.

“Strictly speaking, it is not possible to say that imperative law is a command in the ordinary sense of the word. A ‘command’ in the ordinary meaning of the word is an expression of a wish by a person or body as to the conduct of another person, communicated to that other person. But (1) in the case of the law there is no determinate person who as a matter of psychological fact commands all the law. We are all born into a community in which law already exists, and at no time in our lives do any of us command the whole law. The most that we do is to play our part in enforcing or altering particular portions of it. (2) Ignorance of the law is no excuse; thus a rule of law is binding even though not communicated to the subject of the law.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 21 n.(c) (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

internal law. 1. Law that regulates the domestic affairs of a country. Cf. INTERNATIONAL LAW. 2.LOCAL LAW(3).

unenacted law.Law that does not have its source in legislation; UNWRITTEN LAW(1).

LAW AGENT

law agent.Scots law. See SOLICITOR(4).

LAW AND ECONOMICS

law and economics.(often cap.) 1. A discipline advocating the economic analysis of the law, whereby legal rules are subjected to a cost-benefit analysis to determine whether a change from one legal rule to another will increase or decrease allocative efficiency and social wealth. • Originally developed as an approach to antitrust policy, law and economics is today used by its proponents to explain and interpret a variety of legal subjects. 2. The field or movement in which scholars devote themselves to this discipline. 3. The body of work produced by these scholars.

LAW AND LITERATURE

law and literature.(often cap.) 1. Traditionally, the study of how lawyers and legal institutions are depicted in literature; esp., the examination of law-related fiction as sociological evidence of how a given culture, at a given time, views law. — Also termed law in literature. 2. More modernly, the application of literary theory to legal texts, focusing esp. on lawyers' rhetoric, logic, and style, as well as legal syntax and semantics. — Also termed law as literature. 3. The field or movement in which scholars devote themselves to this study or application. 4. The body of work produced by these scholars.

LAWBURROWS lawburrows (law-b<<schwa>>r-ohz). Scots law. 1. An action requiring security for the peaceable behavior of a party. 2. Security obtained by a party apprehensive of danger to safeguard the peace.

LAW CLERK

law clerk. See CLERK(4).

LAW COMMISSION

law commission. (often cap.) An official or quasi-official body of people formed to propose legal reforms intended to improve the administration of justice. • Such a body is often charged with the task of reviewing the law with an eye toward systematic development and reform, esp. through codification.

LAW COURT

law court. 1. COURT(1). 2. COURT(2). — Also spelled law-court.

LAW COURT OF APPEALS

law court of appeals. Hist. An appellate tribunal, formerly existing in South Carolina, for hearing appeals from the courts of law.

LAW-CRAFT

law-craft,n. The practice of law.

“This quest for ever-broader empirical understanding must, of course, be kept under reasonable control in practical law-craft, lest it delay necessary decisions in a continually expanding and pointlessly expensive fact-finding spiral.” Bruce A. Ackerman, Reconstructing American Law 30 (1984).

LAW DAY

law day. 1.Archaic. The yearly or twice-yearly meeting of one of the early common-law courts. 2.Archaic. The day appointed for a debtor to discharge a mortgage or else forfeit the property to the lender. [Cases: Mortgages 301, 322, 335. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 506–511, 515, 579, 602, 604.] 3. (cap.) A day on which American schools, public assemblies, and courts draw attention to the importance of law in modern society. • Since 1958, the ABA has sponsored Law Day on May 1 of each year.

LAW DEPARTMENT

law department.A branch of a corporation, government agency, university, or the like charged with handling the entity's legal affairs.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

law enforcement. 1. The detection and punishment of violations of the law. • This term is not limited to the enforcement of criminal laws. For example, the Freedom of Information Act contains an exemption from disclosure for information compiled for law-enforcement purposes and furnished in confidence. That exemption is valid for the enforcement of a variety of noncriminal laws (such as national-security laws) as well as criminal laws. 5 USCA § 552(b)(7). 2.CRIMINAL JUSTICE(2).3. Police officers and other members of the executive branch of government charged with carrying out and enforcing the criminal law.

LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ADMINISTRATION

Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.A former federal agency (part of the Department of Justice) that was responsible for administering law-enforcement grants under the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968. • It has been replaced by a variety of federal agencies, including the National Institute of Corrections and National Institute of Justice. — Abbr. LEAA.

Corporations §§ 450–452, 474–476, 497, 502, 505, 508, 534.]

LAW-ENFORCEMENT SYSTEM

law-enforcement system. See CRIMINAL-JUSTICE SYSTEM.

LAW FIRM

law firm. An association of lawyers who practice law together, usu. sharing clients and profits, in a business organized traditionally as a partnership but often today as either a professional corporation or a limited-liability company. • Many law firms have a hierarchical structure in which the partners (or shareholders) supervise junior lawyers known as “associates,” who are usu. employed on a track to partnership. [Cases: Attorney and Client 30. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 145–147, 164.]

captive law firm. A law firm staffed by employees of an insurance company. • These lawyers typically defend insureds in lawsuits covered under the insurer's liability policies. The insurer's use of a captive firm to defend an insured raises ethical questions about whether the lawyers will act in the insured's best interests. — Often shortened to captive firm.

LAW FRENCH

Law French. The corrupted form of the Norman French language that arose in England in the centuries after William the Conqueror invaded England in 1066 and that was used for several centuries as the primary language of the English legal system; the Anglo-French used in medieval England in judicial proceedings, pleadings, and lawbooks. — Abbr. L.F. — Also written law French. See NORMAN FRENCH.

“That Law French was barbarous in its decrepitude does not in the least diminish the value of it to our law when it was full of vitality. It helped to make English law one of the four indigenous systems of the civilized world, for it exactly expressed legal ideas in a technical language which had no precise equivalent.” Percy H. Winfield, The Chief Sources of English Legal History 14 (1925).

“To the linguist, law French is a corrupt dialect by definition. Anglo-French was in steady decline after 1300. Lawyers such as Fortescue, on the other hand, were probably serious in maintaining that it was the vernacular of France which was deteriorating by comparison with the pristine Norman of the English courts. That Fortescue could make such a claim, while living in France, is in itself a clear demonstration that by the middle of the fifteenth century there was a marked difference between the French of English lawyers and the French of France.” J.H. Baker, A Manual of Law French 11 (1979).

“Law French refers to the Anglo-Norman patois used in legal documents and all judicial proceedings from the 1260s to the reign of Edward III (1327–1377), and used with frequency in legal literature up to the early 18th century. When first introduced into England, this brand of French was the standard language used in Normandy; by the 1300s, through linguistic isolation, it became a corrupted language — by French standards, at any rate.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 504–05 (2d ed. 1995).

LAW LATIN

Law Latin. A corrupted form of Latin formerly used in law and legal documents, including judicial writs, royal charters, and private deeds. • It primarily consists of a mixture of Latin, French, and English words used in English sentence structures. — Abbr. L.L.; L. Lat. — Also written law Latin.

“LAW LATIN. A technical kind of Latin, in which the pleadings and proceedings of the English courts were enrolled and recorded from a very early period to the reign of George II The principal peculiarities of this language consist first, in its construction, which is adapted so closely to the English idiom as to answer to it sometimes word for word; and, secondly, in the use of numerous words ‘not allowed by grammarians nor having any countenance of Latin,’ but framed from the English by merely adding a Latin termination, as murdrum from murder” 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 135 (2d ed. 1867).

“Law Latin, sometimes formerly called ‘dog Latin,’ is the bastardized or debased Latin formerly used in law and legal documents. For the most part, we have escaped its clutches. In 1730, Parliament abolished Law Latin in legal proceedings, but two years later found it necessary to allow Latin phrases that had previously been in common use, such as fieri facias, habeas corpus, ne exeat, and nisi prius. As Blackstone would later say, some Latinisms were ‘not ... capable of an English dress with any degree of seriousness.’ 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries 323 (1768).” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 505 (2d ed. 1995).

A survey used to determine the amount of working capital that a utility company must reserve and include in its rate base, by comparing the time the company has to pay its bills and the time taken by its customers to pay for service. • The term comes from the phrases “lead time” and “lag time.” Lead time is the average number of days between the company's receipt and payment of invoices it receives. Lag time is the average number of days between the company's billing of its customers and its receipt of payment. By analyzing the difference in timing between inward cash flow and outward cash flow, the company can calculate the amount of necessary reserves. [Cases: Public Utilities 124. C.J.S. Public Utilities §§ 23–26, 30–33, 48–49.]

leads doctrine. Tax. In a tax-evasion case, the rule that the government must investigate all the taxpayer's leads that are reasonably accessible and that, if true, would establish the taxpayer's innocence, or the government risks having the trial judge presume that any leads not investigated are true and exonerating. [Cases: Internal Revenue 5312.]

LEAGUE

league. 1. A covenant made by nations, groups, or individuals for promoting common interests or ensuring mutual protection. 2. An alliance or association of nations, groups, or individuals formed by such a covenant. 3. A unit of distance, usu. measuring about three miles (chiefly, nautical). [Cases: Weights and Measures 3. C.J.S. Weights and Measures § 3.]

marine league. A geographical measure of distance equal to one-twentieth part of a degree of latitude, or three nautical miles. [Cases: Weights and Measures 3. C.J.S. Weights and Measures §

LEAGUE OF NATIONS

League of Nations. An organization of nations formed in 1919 to promote international cooperation and peace. • President Woodrow Wilson endorsed the League in an address to Congress, but the United States never joined. The League dissolved in 1946 and turned its assets over to the United Nations.

LEAKAGE

leakage. 1. The waste of a liquid caused by its leaking from a storage container. 2. An allowance against duties granted by customs to an importer of liquids for losses sustained by this waste. 3. Intellectual property. Loss in value of a piece of intellectual property because of unauthorized copying. • The types of intellectual property most susceptible to leakage are recordable media such as compact discs and videotapes. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 87(1). C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 77, 79.]

LEAL

leal (leel), adj. [Law French] Hist. Loyal.

LEAN

lean, vb. 1. To incline or tend in opinion or preference. • A court is sometimes said to “lean toward” or “lean against” an advocate's position, meaning that the court regards that position favorably or unfavorably. 2. To yield; to submit.

LEAPFROG DEVELOPMENT

leapfrog development. An improvement of land that requires the extension of public facilities from their current stopping point, through undeveloped land that may be scheduled for future development, to the site of the improvement.

LEARNED

learned (l<<schwa>>r-nid), adj. 1. Having a great deal of learning; erudite. • A lawyer might refer to an adversary as a “learned colleague” or “learned opponent” — a comment that, depending on the situation and tone of voice, may be either a genuine compliment or a sarcastic slight. 2. Well versed in the law and its history. • Statutes sometimes require that judges be “learned in the law,” a phrase commonly construed as meaning that they must have earned a law degree and been admitted to the bar.

LEARNED INTERMEDIARY learned intermediary. See informed intermediary under INTERMEDIARY.

LEARNED-INTERMEDIARY DOCTRINE learned-intermediary doctrine. The principle that a prescription-drug manufacturer fulfills its duty to warn of a drug's potentially harmful effects by informing the prescribing physician, rather than the end-user, of those effects. [Cases: Products Liability 46. C.J.S. Products Liability § 54.]

LEARNED-TREATISE RULE learned-treatise rule.Evidence. An exception to the hearsay rule, by which a published text may be established as authoritative, either by expert testimony or by judicial notice. • Under the Federal Rules of Evidence, a statement contained in a published treatise, periodical, or pamphlet on sciences or arts (such as history and medicine) can be established as authoritative — and thereby admitted into evidence for the purpose of examining or cross-examining an expert witness — by expert testimony or by the court's taking judicial notice of the authoritative nature or reliability of the text. If the statement is admitted into evidence, it may be read into the trial record, but it may not be received as an exhibit. Fed. R. Evid. 803(18). [Cases: Criminal Law 439; Evidence 363. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1032, 1038; Evidence §§ 1005–1006.]

LEARNING

learning,n.1.Hist. Legal doctrine. 2. The act of acquiring knowledge.

LEASE

lease,n.1. A contract by which a rightful possessor of real property conveys the right to use and occupy the property in exchange for consideration, usu. rent. • The lease term can be for life, for a fixed period, or for a period terminable at will. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.] 2. Such a conveyance plus all covenants attached to it. 3. The written instrument memorializing such a conveyance and its covenants. — Also termed lease agreement; lease contract. 4. The piece of real property so conveyed. 5. A contract by which the rightful possessor of personal property conveys the right to use that property in exchange for consideration. [Cases: Bailment 1. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 2–13, 15, 19, 22–24, 31.]

assignable lease.A lease that the lessee can transfer to a successor. See SUBLEASE. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 74. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 30, 53.]

building lease.A long-term lease of land that includes a covenant to erect or alter a building or other improvement. Cf. ground lease.

capital lease.See LEASE-PURCHASE AGREEMENT.

commercial lease.A lease for business purposes. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.]

community lease.A lease in which a number of lessors owning interests in separate tracts execute a lease in favor of a single lessee.

concurrent lease.A lease that begins before a previous lease ends, entitling the new lessee to be paid all rents that accrue on the previous lease after the new lease begins, and to remedies against the holding tenant.

“A landlord who has granted a lease may nevertheless grant another lease of the same land for all or some of the period of the first lease. The second lease does not deprive the lessee under the first lease of the right to possession of the property, but is, in reality, a lease of the reversion. Because the two leases operate concurrently during at least some part of their respective durations, they are known as 'concurrent leases.' ” Peter Butt, Land Law 233 (2d ed. 1988).

consumer lease. 1. A lease of goods by a person who is in the business of selling or leasing a product primarily for the lessee's personal or household use. UCC § 2A-103(1)(e). [Cases: Bailment 2. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 5, 14, 16–18.] 2. A residential — rather than commercial — lease.

derivative lease. See SUBLEASE.

durable lease. A lease that reserves a rent payable annually, usu. with a right of reentry for nonpayment.

edge lease. Oil & gas. A lease located on the edge of a field.

finance lease. A fixed-term lease used by a business to finance capital equipment. • The lessor's service is usu. limited to financing the asset, and the lessee pays maintenance costs and taxes and has the option of purchasing the asset at lease-end for a nominal price. Finance leases strongly resemble security agreements and are written almost exclusively by financial institutions as a way to help a commercial customer obtain an expensive capital item that the customer might not otherwise be able to afford. UCC § 2A-103(1)(g). — Also termed full payout lease; tripartite lease. [Cases: Bailment 2. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 5, 14, 16–18.]

“By carving out the ‘finance lease’ for special treatment, the drafters of Article 2A have recognized a distinct species of lease that is written almost exclusively by financial institutions and — although treated as a true lease — does not normally carry with it certain of the responsibilities that the typical lessor bears under Article 2A.” 2 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 13-3, at 4 (4th ed. 1995).

“A finance lease is the product of a three-party transaction. The supplier manufactures or supplies the goods pursuant to the lessee's specification, perhaps even pursuant to a purchase order, sales agreement, or lease agreement between the supplier and the lessee. After the prospective finance lease is negotiated, a purchase order, sales agreement, or lease agreement is entered into by the lessor (as buyer or prime lessee) or an existing order, agreement, or lease is assigned by the lessee to the lessor, and the lessor and the lessee then enter into a lease or sublease of the goods. Due to the limited function usually performed by the lessor, the lessee looks almost entirely to the supplier for representations, covenants, and warranties. If a manufacturer's warranty carries through, the lessee may also look to that. Yet, this definition does not restrict the lessor's function solely to the supply of funds; if the lessor undertakes or performs other functions, express warranties, covenants, and the common law will protect the lessee.” UCC § 2A-102 cmt. at 14–15 (Proposed Final Draft, 30 Apr. 1999).

full-service lease. A lease in which the lessor agrees to pay all maintenance expenses, insurance premiums, and property taxes. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 148(1), 156. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 374–376, 378–386.]

graduated lease.A lease in which rent varies depending on future contingencies, such as operating expenses or gross income.

gross lease.A lease in which the lessee pays a flat amount for rent, out of which the lessor pays all the expenses (such as fuel, water, and electricity).

ground lease.A long-term (usu. 99-year) lease of land only. • Such a lease typically involves commercial property, and any improvements built by the lessee usu. revert to the lessor. — Also termed ground-rent lease; land lease. [Cases: Estates in Property 13. C.J.S. Estates §§ 159–192.]

headlease. See HEADLEASE.

index lease.A lease that provides for increases in rent according to the increases in the consumer price index. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 200.7.]

land lease.See ground lease.

leveraged lease.A lease that is collateral for the loan through which the lessor acquired the leased asset, and that provides the lender's only recourse for nonpayment of the debt; a lease in which a creditor provides nonrecourse financing to the lessor (who has substantial leverage in the property) and in which the lessor's net investment in the lease, apart from nonrecourse financing, declines during the early years and increases in later years. — Also termed third-party equity lease; tax lease.

master lease.A lease that controls later leases or subleases, particularly of parts of the leased property.

mineral lease.A lease in which the lessee has the right to explore for and extract oil, gas, or other minerals. • The rent is usu. based on the amount or value of the minerals extracted. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 56–81. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 194–325, 442.]

mining lease.A lease of a mine or mining claim, in which the lessee has the right to work the mine or claim, usu. with conditions on the amount and type of work to be done. • The lessor is compensated in the form of either fixed rent or royalties based on the amount of ore mined. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 62–71. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 200–232.]

month-to-month lease.A tenancy with no written contract. • Rent is paid monthly, and usu. one month's notice by the landlord or tenant is required to terminate the tenancy. See periodic tenancy under TENANCY. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 113. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 130(1, 2), 131, 145, 151–155.]

net lease.A lease in which the lessee pays rent plus property expenses (such as taxes and insurance).

net-net-net lease.A lease in which the lessee pays all the expenses, including mortgage interest and amortization, leaving the lessor with an amount free of all claims. — Also termed triple-net lease.

oil-and-gas lease.A lease granting the right to extract oil and gas from a specified piece of land. • Although called a “lease,” this interest is typically considered a determinable fee in the minerals rather than a grant of possession for a term of years. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 73–81. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 210, 233, 238–283, 285–325, 442.]

operating lease. A lease of property (esp. equipment) for a term that is shorter than the property's useful life. • Under an operating lease, the lessor is typically responsible for paying taxes and other expenses on the property. Cf. LEASE-PURCHASE AGREEMENT.

“or” lease. Oil & gas. A mineral lease with a drilling-delay rental clause structured so that the lessee promises to start drilling operations or to pay delay rentals from time to time during the primary term. • If the lessee fails to do one or the other, the lease does not automatically terminate, but the lessee is liable for the delay-rental amount.

parol lease (p<<schwa>>-rohlorpar-<<schwa>>l). A lease based on an oral agreement; an unwritten lease. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 23. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 211(2).]

percentage lease. A lease in which the rent is based on a percentage of gross (or net) sales or profits, typically with a set minimum rent. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 200.2.]

perpetual lease. 1. An ongoing lease not limited in duration. 2. A grant of lands in fee with a reservation of a rent in fee; a fee farm. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 87. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 61.]

perpetually renewable lease. Hist. A lease that a tenant may renew for another period as often as it expires, usu. by making a payment upon exercising the right. • In 1922, this type of lease was effectively abolished in England by the Law of Property Act, which provided for the conversion of existing and future perpetually renewable leases to term-of-years leases, and set the maximum term at 2,000 years.

proprietary lease. A lease between a cooperative apartment association and a tenant.

reversionary lease. A lease that will take effect when a prior lease terminates.

sandwich lease. A lease in which the lessee subleases the property to a third party, esp. for more rent than under the original lease. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 74. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 30, 53.]

short lease. A lease of brief duration, often less than six months.

sublease. See SUBLEASE.

synthetic lease. A method for financing the purchase of real estate, whereby the lender creates a special-purpose entity that buys the property and then leases it to the ultimate user (usu. a corporation). • A synthetic lease is treated as a loan for tax purposes and as an operating lease for accounting purposes, so that the “lessee” can deduct the property's depreciation and the loan's interest yet keep both the asset and the debt off its balance sheet.

tax lease. 1. The instrument or estate given to the purchaser of land at a tax sale when the law does not permit the sale of an estate in fee for nonpayment of taxes but instead directs the sale of an estate for years. 2. See leveraged lease.

third-party equity lease. See leveraged lease.

timber lease. A real-property lease that contemplates that the lessee will cut timber on the leased premises. [Cases: Logs and Logging 3. C.J.S. Logs and Logging §§ 9, 20.]

top lease. Oil & gas. A lease granted on property already subject to an oil-and-gas lease. • Generally, any rights granted by a top lease are valid only if the existing lease ends. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 56. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 194–195, 233.]

tripartite lease. See finance lease.

triple-net lease. See net-net-net lease.

“unless” lease. Oil & gas. An oil-and-gas lease with a drilling-delay rental clause structured as a special limitation to the primary term. • Unless delay rentals are paid or drilling operations are started from time to time as specified, an “unless” lease automatically terminates, and the lessee has no liability for its failure to perform. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 78.1(3, 9). C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 260–263, 269–270.]

lease, vb. 1. To grant the possession and use of (land, buildings, rooms, movable property, etc.) to another in return for rent or other consideration <the city leased the stadium to the football team>. [Cases: Bailment 1; Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 2–13, 15, 19, 22–24, 31; Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.] 2. To take a lease of; to hold by a lease <Carol leased the townhouse from her uncle>.

LEASE AGREEMENT

lease agreement. See LEASE(3).

LEASE AND RELEASE

lease and release. Hist. A method of transferring seisin without livery, whereby the owner and the transferee would enter into a lease for a term of years, to take effect only when the transferee entered the property, whereupon the owner would release all interest in the property to the transferee by written instrument. • Once the transferee owned both the term and the freehold interest, the two interests would merge to form one estate in fee simple. This lease-and-release procedure was fully acceptable to the courts, on the theory that livery of seisin to one already occupying the land was unnecessary.

LEASEBACK

leaseback, n. The sale of property on the understanding, or with the express option, that the seller may lease the property from the buyer immediately upon the sale. — Also termed sale and leaseback. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.]

LEASE CONTRACT

lease contract. See LEASE(3).

LEASE FOR LIFE

lease for life. Hist. A lease of land for the duration of a specified number of lives instead of for a specified term of years. • Unlike a tenant for a term of years, a lessee for life could recover the land if dispossessed.

“The rent payable was usually fairly small, but a fine was paid when the lease was granted; a further fine was payable when, on the termination of the lives, the tenant exercised the right the lease gave him to replace them and so extend the lease. If the lessor was a corporation such as a monastery or college, the fines were treated as income by the then members of the corporation, to the disadvantage of their successors. Leases for life finally lost their popularity when legislation in the first half of the nineteenth century compelled corporations to add such fines to their capital.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 306 (6th ed. 1993).

LEASE FOR YEARS

lease for years. See tenancy for a term under TENANCY.

LEASEHOLD

leasehold, n. A tenant's possessory estate in land or premises, the four types being the tenancy for years, the periodic tenancy, the tenancy at will, and the tenancy at sufferance. • Although a leasehold has some of the characteristics of real property, it has historically been classified as a chattel real. — Also termed leasehold estate; leasehold interest. See TENANCY. Cf. FREEHOLD. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 70, 113, 117. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 26, 130(1, 2), 131, 145, 151–156, 202(3, 9).]

LEASEHOLDER ROYALTY

leaseholder royalty. See landowner's royalty under ROYALTY(2).

LEASEHOLD IMPROVEMENTS

leasehold improvements. Beneficial changes to leased property (such as a parking lot or driveway) made by or for the benefit of the lessee. • The phrase is used in a condemnation proceeding to determine the share of compensation to be allocated to the lessee.

LEASEHOLD INTEREST

leasehold interest. 1. LEASEHOLD; esp., for purposes of eminent domain, the lessee's interest in the lease itself, measured by the difference between the total remaining rent and the rent the lessee would pay for similar space for the same period. [Cases: Eminent Domain 147. C.J.S. Eminent Domain §§ 131–132, 153.] 2. A lessor's or lessee's interest under a lease contract. UCC § 2A-103(m). 3. WORKING INTEREST. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.]

LEASEHOLD MORTGAGE

leasehold mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

LEASEHOLD-MORTGAGE BOND

leasehold-mortgage bond. See BOND(3).

LEASEHOLD ROYALTY

leasehold royalty. See landowner's royalty under ROYALTY(2).

LEASEHOLD VALUE

leasehold value. The value of a leasehold interest. • This term usu. applies to a long-term lease when the rent paid under the lease is lower than current market rates. Some states permit the lessee to claim the leasehold interest from the landlord in a condemnation proceeding, unless the lease prohibits such a claim. Other states prohibit these claims by statute. See LEASEHOLD INTEREST ; NO-BONUS CLAUSE.

LEASE INSURANCE

lease insurance. See INSURANCE.

LEASE-LEND

lease-lend. See LEND-LEASE.

LEASE-PURCHASE AGREEMENT

lease-purchase agreement. A rent-to-own purchase plan under which the buyer takes possession of the goods with the first payment and takes ownership with the final payment; a lease of property (esp. equipment) by which ownership of the property is transferred to the lessee at the end of the lease term. • Such a lease is usu. treated as an installment sale. Under a capital lease, the lessee is responsible for paying taxes and other expenses on the property. — Also termed lease-to-purchase agreement; hire-purchase agreement; capital lease. Cf. operating lease under LEASE. [Cases: Bailment 2; Bills and Notes 22. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 5, 14, 16–18; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 20.]

LEASING-MAKING

leasing-making. Hist. Scots law. Oral sedition.

LEAST-INTRUSIVE-MEANS DOCTRINE least-intrusive-means doctrine. A doctrine requiring the government to exhaust all other investigatory means before seeking sensitive testimony, as by compelling an attorney to testify before a grand jury on matters that may be protected by the attorney–client privilege.

LEAST-INTRUSIVE-REMEDY DOCTRINE least-intrusive-remedy doctrine. The rule that a legal remedy should provide the damaged party with appropriate relief, without unduly penalizing the opposing party or the jurisdiction's legal system, as by striking only the unconstitutional portion of a challenged statute while leaving the rest intact. [Cases: Statutes 64(1). C.J.S. Statutes §§ 83–85.]

LEAST-RESTRICTIVE EDUCATIONAL ENVIRONMENT least-restrictive educational environment. See LEAST-RESTRICTIVE ENVIRONMENT.

LEAST-RESTRICTIVE ENVIRONMENT least-restrictive environment. Under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, the school setting that, to the greatest extent appropriate, educates a disabled child together with children who are not disabled. 20 USCA § 1412(5). — Also termed least-restrictive-educational environment. Cf. MAINSTREAMING. [Cases: Schools 148(2). C.J.S. Schools and School Districts §§ 700–702, 717, 719.]

LEAST-RESTRICTIVE-MEANS TEST

least-restrictive-means test. The rule that a law or governmental regulation, even when based on a legitimate governmental interest, should be crafted in a way that will protect individual civil liberties as much as possible, and should be only as restrictive as is necessary to accomplish a legitimate governmental purpose.

LEAUTE

leaute (low-tay), n. [Law French “legality”] Hist. Legality; the condition of a lawful man (legalis homo). See LEGALIS HOMO.

LEAVE

leave, n. 1. Departure; the act of going away <took his leave>. 2. Extended absence for which one has authorization; esp., a voluntary vacation from military duties with the chance to visit home; furlough <on a three-month leave from the Army>. 3. Permission <by leave of court>.

leave, vb. 1. To give by will; to bequeath or devise <she left her ranch to her stepson>. • This usage has historically been considered loose by the courts, and it is not always given testamentary effect. 2. To be survived by <he left no brothers or sisters>. 3. To depart; voluntarily go away; quit (a place). 4. To depart willfully with the intent not to return <Nelson left Texas and became a resident of Massachusetts>. 5. To deliver (a summons, money, an article, etc.) by dropping off at a certain place, esp. to await the return of someone; esp., to post (a copy of a writ, etc.).

LEAVE AND LICENSE

leave and license. In an action for trespass to land, the defense that the plaintiff consented to the defendant's presence. [Cases: Trespass 25. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 54–55, 167.]

LEAVE NO ISSUE

leave no issue, vb. To die without any surviving child or other descendant. • The spouse of a deceased child is usu. not issue. See FAILURE OF ISSUE. [Cases: Wills 545. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1033, 1039–1048.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

leave of absence. A worker's temporary absence from employment or duty with the intention to return. • Salary and seniority are typically unaffected by a leave of absence.

LEAVE OF COURT

leave of court. Judicial permission to follow a nonroutine procedure <the defense sought leave of court to allow the defendant to exit the courtroom when the autopsy photographs are shown>. — Often shortened to leave.

LEAVE TO SIT

leave to sit. Parliamentary law. Permission from a deliberative assembly for a committee or other subordinate body to meet while the assembly is meeting.

LEC

LEC. abbr. LOCAL-EXCHANGE CARRIER.

LECCATOR

leccator (l<<schwa>>-kay-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin] Archaic. A debauched person; a lecher. — Also termed lecator.

LEGABLE

legable, adj. (Of property) capable of being bequeathed.

LEGACY

legacy (leg-<<schwa>>-see), n. A gift by will, esp. of personal property and often of money. Cf. BEQUEST; DEVISE. [Cases: Wills 565. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1135–1136.]

absolute legacy. A legacy given without condition and intended to vest immediately. Cf. vested legacy.

accumulated legacy. A legacy that has not yet been paid to a legatee.

accumulative legacy. See additional legacy.

additional legacy. A second legacy given to a legatee in the same will (or in a codicil to the same will) that gave another legacy. • An additional legacy is supplementary to another and is not considered merely a repeated expression of the same gift. — Also termed accumulative legacy; cumulative legacy. [Cases: Wills 585. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1171–1175.]

alternate legacy. A legacy by which the testator allows the legatee to choose one of two or more items.

conditional legacy. A legacy that will take effect or be defeated subject to the occurrence or nonoccurrence of an event. [Cases: Wills 639–668. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1380–1424.]

contingent legacy. A legacy that depends on an uncertain event and thus has not vested. • An example is a legacy given to one's granddaughter “if she attains the age of 21.” [Cases: Wills 628–638. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1320–1379, 1551.]

cumulative legacy. See additional legacy.

demonstrative legacy (di-mon-str<<schwa>>-tiv). A legacy paid from a particular source if that source has enough money. • If it does not, the amount of the legacy not paid from that source is taken from the estate's general assets. [Cases: Wills 755. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1664, 1667–1677, 1679–1683.]

failed legacy. See lapsed legacy.

general legacy. 1. A gift of personal property that the testator intends to come from the estate's general assets, payable in money or items indistinguishable from each other, such as shares of publicly traded stock. [Cases: Wills 756. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1663, 1667–1677, 1679–1683.]

2.Civil law. A testator's gift of a fraction or proportion of the estate remaining after particular legacies have been satisfied. 3.Civil law. A testator's gift of all, a fraction, or a proportion of one of certain categories of property, as specified by statute. See La. Civ. Code arts. 1586, 3506(28). — Also termed legacy under a general title. Cf. particular legacy; universal legacy.

lapsed legacy.A legacy to a legatee who dies either before the testator dies or before the legacy is payable. • It falls into the residual estate unless the jurisdiction has an antilapse statute. — Also termed failed legacy; failed gift. See ANTILAPSE STATUTE. [Cases: Wills 774–777. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1791–1808.]

legacy under a general title.See general legacy.

legacy under a particular title.See particular legacy.

legacy under a universal title.Louisiana law. A testamentary disposition of all immovable property, or all movable property, or a fixed proportion of all immovable property or of all movable property. La. Civ. Code art. 1612. Cf. general legacy; particular legacy; universal legacy.

modal legacy (moh-d<<schwa>>l). A legacy accompanied by directions about the manner in which it will be applied to the legatee's benefit .

particular legacy.Civil law. A testamentary gift that is not expressed as a fraction or proportion and is less than all the estate; any testamentary gift that does not meet the definition of a general legacy or a universal legacy. See La. Civ. Code arts. 1587, 3506(28). — Also termed legacy under a particular title. Cf. general legacy; universal legacy.

pecuniary legacy (pi-kyoo-nee-er-ee). A legacy of a sum of money. [Cases: Wills 567. C.J.S. Wills § 1141.]

residuary legacy (ri-zij-oo-er-ee). A legacy of the estate remaining after the satisfaction of all claims and all specific, general, and demonstrative legacies. [Cases: Wills 586. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1176–1179, 1184.]

special legacy.See specific legacy.

specific legacy.A legacy of a specific or unique item of property, such as any real estate or a particular piece of furniture. — Also termed special legacy. [Cases: Wills 753, 754. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1662, 1666–1677, 1679–1683.]

substitutional legacy.A legacy that replaces a different legacy already given to a legatee.

trust legacy.A legacy of personal property to trustees to be held in trust, with the income usu. paid to a specified beneficiary.

universal legacy.Louisiana law. A testamentary disposition of all property, movable and immovable, to one or more persons. La. Civ. Code art. 1585. Cf. general legacy; legacy under a universal title; particular legacy.

vested legacy.A legacy given in such a way that the legatee has a fixed, indefeasible right to its payment. • A legacy is said to be vested when the testator's words making the bequest convey a transmissible interest, whether present or future, to the legatee. Thus, a legacy to be paid when the legatee reaches the age of 21 is a vested legacy because it is given unconditionally and absolutely. Although the legacy is vested, the legatee's enjoyment of it is deferred. Cf. absolute legacy; contingent legacy. [Cases: Wills 628–638. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1320–1379, 1551.]

void legacy. A legacy that never had any legal existence. • The subject matter of such a legacy is treated as a part of the estate and passes under the residuary clause of a will or (in the absence of a residuary clause) under the rules for intestate succession. [Cases: Wills 849–872. C.J.S. Wills §§ 96, 1822–1840, 1974–1994.]

LEGACY DUTY

legacy duty. See legacy tax under TAX.

LEGACY TAX

legacy tax. See TAX.

LEGAL

legal, adj. 1. Of or relating to law; falling within the province of law <pro bono legal services>. 2. Established, required, or permitted by law; LAWFUL <it is legal to carry a concealed handgun in some states>. 3. Of or relating to law as opposed to equity. [Cases: Action 21. C.J.S. Actions § 124.]

LEGAL ACT

legal act. 1. Any act not condemned as illegal. • For example, a surgeon's incision is a legal act, while stabbing is an illegal one. 2. An action or undertaking that creates a legally recognized obligation; an act that binds a person in some way.

“A lunatic, though capable of holding property, was in Roman law incapable of any legal act.” Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 354 (13th ed. 1924).

3. See act in the law under ACT. 4. See ACT OF THE LAW.

LEGAL-ACUMEN DOCTRINE

legal-acumen doctrine (lee-g<<schwa>>l <<schwa>>-kyoo-m<<schwa>>n). The principle that if a defect in, or the invalidity of, a claim to land cannot be discovered without legal expertise, then equity may be invoked to remove the cloud created by the defect or invalidity.

LEGAL-ADVICE EXCEPTION

legal-advice exception. 1. The rule that an attorney may withhold as privileged the client's identity and information regarding fees, if there is a strong probability that disclosing the information would implicate the client in the criminal activity for which the attorney was consulted. [Cases: Witnesses 201(1). C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 329–330, 332–335, 337–340.] 2. An exemption contained in open-meetings legislation, permitting a governmental body to meet in closed session to consult with its attorney about certain matters. [Cases: Administrative Law and

Procedure 124. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 19.]

LEGAL AGE

legal age. 1. See age of capacity under AGE. 2. See age of majority (1) under AGE.

LEGAL CAUSE

legal cause. See proximate cause under CAUSE(1).

LEGAL CENTRALISM

legal centralism. The theory suggesting that state-constructed legal entities form the center of legal life and control lesser normative systems (such as the family or business networks) that define appropriate behavior and social relationships. — Also termed legal centrism; legocentrism (lee-goh-sen-triz-<<schwa>>m).

LEGAL-CERTAINTY TEST

legal-certainty test. Civil procedure. A test designed to determine whether the amount in controversy satisfies the minimum needed to establish the court's jurisdiction. • The amount claimed in the complaint will control unless there is a "legal certainty" that the claim is actually less than the minimum amount. See AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY. [Cases: Federal Courts 350, 359; Removal of Cases 75, 107(7). C.J.S. Removal of Causes §§ 5–6, 115, 127, 130, 157, 188–191.]

legal citology (sI-tol-<<schwa>>-jee). The study of citations (esp. in footnotes) and their effect on legal scholarship. — Often shortened to citology. — legal citologist (sI-tol-<<schwa>>-jist), n.

LEGAL ESTATE

legal estate. See ESTATE(1).

LEGAL ESTOPPEL

legal estoppel. See ESTOPPEL.

LEGAL ETHICS

legal ethics. 1. The minimum standards of appropriate conduct within the legal profession, involving the duties that its members owe one another, their clients, and the courts. — Also termed etiquette of the profession. 2. The study or observance of those duties. 3. The written regulations governing those duties. See MODEL RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT. [Cases: Attorney and Client 32(2). C.J.S. Attorney and Client § 44.]

“In one sense, the term ‘legal ethics’ refers narrowly to the system of professional regulations governing the conduct of lawyers. In a broader sense, however, legal ethics is simply a special case of ethics in general, as ethics is understood in the central traditions of philosophy and religion. From this broader perspective, legal ethics cuts more deeply than legal regulation: it concerns the fundamentals of our moral lives as lawyers.” Deborah L. Rhode & David Luban, Legal Ethics 3 (1992).

LEGAL EVIDENCE

legal evidence. See EVIDENCE.

LEGAL EXCUSE

legal excuse. See EXCUSE(2).

LEGAL FACT

legal fact. See FACT.

LEGAL FATHER

legal father. See FATHER.

LEGAL FENCE

legal fence. See LAWFUL FENCE.

LEGAL FICTION

legal fiction. An assumption that something is true even though it may be untrue, made esp. in judicial reasoning to alter how a legal rule operates; specif., a device by which a legal rule or institution is diverted from its original purpose to accomplish indirectly some other object. • The constructive trust is an example of a legal fiction. — Also termed fiction of law; fictio juris. [Cases: Trusts 91. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 10, 12, 174, 195.]

“I ... employ the expression ‘Legal Fiction’ to signify any assumption which conceals, or affects to conceal, the fact that a rule of law has undergone alteration, its letter remaining unchanged, its operation being modified.... It is not difficult to understand why fictions in all their forms are particularly congenial to the infancy of society. They satisfy the desire for improvement, which is not quite wanting, at the same time that they do not offend the superstitious disrelish for change which is always present.” Henry S. Maine, Ancient Law 21–22 (17th ed. 1901).

“Legal fiction is the mask that progress must wear to pass the faithful but blear-eyed watchers of our ancient legal treasures. But though legal fictions are useful in thus mitigating or absorbing the shock of innovation, they work havoc in the form of intellectual confusion.” Morris R. Cohen, Law and the Social Order 126 (1933).

LEGAL FORCE

legal force. See reasonable force under FORCE.

LEGAL FORMALISM

legal formalism, n. The theory that law is a set of rules and principles independent of other political and social institutions. • Legal formalism was espoused by such scholars as Christopher Columbus Langdell and Lon Fuller. Cf. LEGAL REALISM. — legal formalist, n.

LEGALIS HOMO

legalis homo (l<<schwa>>-gay-lis hoh-moh). [Latin "lawful man"] Hist. A person who has full legal capacity and full legal rights; one who has not been deprived of any rights in court by outlawry, excommunication, or infamy. • A legalis homo was said to stand rectus in curia ("right in court"). A lawful man was able to serve as a juror and to swear an oath. — Also termed legal man; lawful man; lageman; liber et legalis homo. See RECTUS IN CURIA. Pl. legales homines (l<<schwa>>-gay-leez hom-<<schwa>>-neez).

LEGALISM

legalism, n. 1. Formalism carried almost to the point of meaninglessness; an inclination to exalt the importance of law or formulated rules in any area of action.

"What is legalism? It is the ethical attitude that holds moral conduct to be a matter of rule following, and moral relationships to consist of duties and rights determined by rules." Judith N. Shklar, Legalism: Law, Morals, and Political Trials 1 (1964).

"If ... the law and the lawyer are to make a socially valuable contribution to the operation of the social security system, there must be abandoned old-established habits of thought as to the nature of law and the whole gamut of practices summed up in the layman's word of deadly insult, 'legalism' — his word for rigid attachment to legal precedent, the substitution of legal rule for policy, the fettering of discretion, the adversary style, the taking of technical points, formality." Leslie Scarman, English Law — The New Dimension 43 (1974).

2. A mode of expression characteristic of lawyers; a jargonistic phrase characteristic of lawyers, such as "pursuant to."

LEGALIS MONETA ANGLIAE

legalis moneta Angliae (l<<schwa>>-gay-lis m<<schwa>>-nee-t<<schwa>> ang-gee-ee), n. [Latin] Lawful money of England.

LEGAL MAN

legal man.See LEGALIS HOMO.

LEGAL MAXIM

legal maxim.See MAXIM.

LEGAL MEMORY

legal memory.The period during which a legal right or custom can be determined or established. • Traditionally, common-law legal memory began in the year 1189, but in 1540 it became a steadily moving period of 60 years. Cf. TIME IMMEMORIAL(1).

“Because of the importance to feudal landholders of seisin and of real property in general, the writ of right has been called ‘the most solemn of all actions.’ Nevertheless, it was believed that the time within which such a complainant would be allowed to prove an ancestor to have been seised of the estate in question must be limited. At first this was done by selecting an arbitrary date in the past, before which ‘legal memory’ would not run. The date initially was Dec. 1, 1135 (the death of Henry I); in 1236 it was changed by statute to Dec. 19, 1154 (the coronation of Henry II); and in 1275 it became Sept. 3, 1189 (the coronation of Richard I). Finally, in 1540, an arbitrary period of sixty years was set as the period of ‘legal memory.’ The latter change was probably made because it was felt that a 350-year statute of limitations was somewhat awkward.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 45 n.65 (2d ed. 1984).

LEGAL MIND

legal mind. The intellect, legal capacities, and attitudes of a well-trained lawyer — often used as a personified being <although this distinction occurs naturally to the legal mind, it is too technical to be satisfactory>.

LEGAL PORTION

legal portion. See LEGITIME.

LEGAL POSITIVISM

legal positivism, n. The theory that legal rules are valid only because they are enacted by an existing political authority or accepted as binding in a given society, not because they are grounded in morality or in natural law. • Legal positivism has been espoused by such scholars as H.L.A. Hart. See POSITIVE LAW. Cf. LOGICAL POSITIVISM. — legal positivist, n.

“[I]t will be helpful to offer some comparisons between legal positivism and its counterpart in science. Scientific positivism condemns any inquiry projecting itself beyond observable phenomena; it abjures metaphysics, it renounces in advance any explanation in terms of ultimate causes. Its program of research is to chart the regularities discernible in the phenomena of nature at the point where they become open to human observation, without asking — as it were — how they got there. In the setting of limits to inquiry there is an obvious parallel between scientific and legal positivism. The legal positivist concentrates his attention on law at the point where it emerges from the institutional processes that brought it into being. It is the finally made law itself that furnishes the subject of his inquiries. How it was made and what directions of human effort went into its creation are for him irrelevancies.” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 177–78 (1968).

LEGAL POSSESSOR

legal possessor. See POSSESSOR.

LEGAL PRACTICE

legator (l*schwa*-gay-t*schwa*r or leg-schwa-tor), n. Rare. One who bequeaths a legacy; TESTATOR.

LEGATORY

legatory (leg-schwa-tor-ee), n. Hist. The one-third portion of a freeman's estate in land that he could dispose of by will. • The other two portions of the estate were subject to claims of the wife and children.

LEGATUM

legatum (l*schwa*-gay-t*schwa*m), n.[Latin fr. legare “to bequeath”] 1.Roman law. A special bequest; a gift left by a deceased person to be paid from the estate by the heir. • Unlike an heir, a legatee acquired a benefit and no duties attached. 2.Hist. A legacy or bequest to the church, esp. for tithes not paid while the donor lived. See MORTUARY .

legatum debiti (l*schwa*-gay-t*schwa*m deb-schwa-tI). [Latin “legacy of debt”] Roman law. A legacy to the decedent's creditor of what the decedent owes. • This type of legacy was void unless it bettered the creditor's position in some way, as by removing a valid defense that the debtor had to the creditor's claim.

legatum dotis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m doh-tis). [Latin] Roman law. A legacy of dowry. • A husband might bequeath a dowry back to his wife, the result being that the husband's heirs were not entitled to retain the usual deductions for children, and the widow could receive her dowry immediately.

legatum generis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m jen<<schwa>>-ris). [Latin “legacy of a genus”] Roman law. A legacy of a subject of a general class; a legacy of a kind of thing, rather than a specifically named item. • For example, the testator might make a gift of a horse without specifically naming which one of ten horses in the estate.

“Legatum generis Normally the testator set in his testament who had to make the choice from among the things of the same kind (slaves, horses) belonging to the estate: the heir, the legatee or a third person. The jurists did not agree about the solution [when] ... the testator did not entitle any person to make the selection. Apparently the rules varied according to the form in which such a legacy (legatum) was left. The Justinian law favored the choice by the legatee.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 540 (1953).

legatum liberationis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m lib<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh-nis). [Latin “legacy of a discharge”] Roman law. A legacy by which a testator released the indebted legatee from a debt. — Also termed liberatio legata (lib<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>).

legatum nominis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m nahm<<schwa>>-nis). [Latin “legacy of a name”] Roman law. A legacy by which a testator willed to the legatee a debt owed to the testator from a third party. • The heir was obliged to hand over the relevant documents and cede any rights of action on them.

legatum optionis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m op-shee-oh-nis). [Latin “legacy of an option”] Roman law. A legacy of one of several items that the designated beneficiary chooses from the testator's estate. • Originally, if the legatee died after the testator but before making the selection, the legacy failed. Justinian later changed the law to make selection by the legatee's representative under these circumstances valid.

legatum peculii (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m pi-kyoo-lee-I). [Latin] Roman law. A legacy of a peculium to a free person or to a manumitted slave; a legacy of a slave's peculium with or without the slave. See PECULIUM.

legatum quantitatis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m kwon-ti-tay-tis). [Latin “a legacy of quantity”] Roman law. A general legacy of a certain amount, such as a legacy of two horses.

legatum rei alienae (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m ree-I ay-lee-ee-nee or al-ee-). [Latin “a legacy of something belonging to another”] Roman law. A legacy of an item that belongs to a third party. • The heir was obliged to purchase the item from the third party, if that was possible, and give it to the legatee or otherwise pay its value to the legatee.

legatum universitatis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-tay-tis). [Latin “a universal legacy”] Hist. A legacy of the testator's entire estate.

LEGATUS

legatus (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>s), n. A legate. Pl. legati (l<<schwa>>-gay-t I). See LEGATE.

legatus a latere (ay lat-<<schwa>>-ree). [Latin “legate from the (Pope's) side”] A papal legate (esp. a cardinal) appointed for a special diplomatic mission and not as a permanent representative. • This is a type of legatus missus. — Also termed legate a latere. Cf. NUNCIO.

legatus datus (day-t<<schwa>>s). See legatus missus.

legatus missus (mis-<<schwa>>s). [Latin “legate sent”] A legate sent on a special mission. — Also termed legate missus; legatus datus (day-t<<schwa>>s).

legatus natus (nay-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin “legate born”] A bishop or archbishop who claims to be a legate by virtue of office in an important see, such as Canterbury. — Also termed legate natus.

LEGEM AMITTERE

LEGERWITE

legerwite. See LAIRWITE.

LEGES

leges (lee-jeez), n. pl.[Latin] 1.LEX. 2.LEGES PUBLICAE.

LEGES ANGLIAE

leges Angliae (lee-jeez ang-gee-ee). [Latin] Hist. The laws of England, as distinguished from the civil law and other legal systems.

LEGES BARBARORUM

leges barbarorum (lee-jeez bahr-b<<schwa>>-ror-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “laws of the barbarians”] Hist. The customary laws of medieval European law; esp., the customary laws of Germanic tribes during the Middle Ages. • These include the lex romana Visigothorum, the lex Burgundionum, and the lex Salica. — Also termed folk laws. See SALIC LAW.

“Many of the conquering Germanic tribes sought to state their own tribal customs in writing. Several of these so-called codes or leges barbarorum were published from time to time shortly after the fall of the Western Empire in the middle of the fifth century until about the time of Charlemagne, 800. The most famous is a Frankish one, the Lex Salica, which probably dates from the second half of the fifth century.” W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 1 (2d ed. 1949).

LEGES CENTURIATAE

leges centuriatae. See LEX CENTURIATA.

LEGES CURIATAE

leges curiatae. See LEX CURIATA.

LEGES DE IMPERIO

leges de imperio. See LEGES IMPERII.

LEGES EDWARDI CONFESSORIS

leges Edwardi Confessoris (lee-jeez ed-wahr-dI kon-f<<schwa>>-sor-is), n.[Latin "Laws of Edward the Confessor"] Hist. A legal treatise written between 1130 and 1135, of dubious authority, compiling English law as it stood at the end of the reign of Henry I.

"[W]e have a book [leges Edwardi Confessoris] written in Latin which expressly purports to give us the law of Edward as it was stated to the Conqueror in the fourth year of his reign by juries representing the various parts of England It is a private work of a bad and untrustworthy kind. It has about it something of the political pamphlet and is adorned with pious legends. The author, perhaps a secular clerk of French parentage, writes in the interest of the churches, and, it is to be feared, tells lies for them." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 103 (2d ed. 1898).

LEGES ET CONSUECUDINES REGNI

leges et consuetudines regni (lee-jeez et kon-sw<<schwa>>-t[y]oo-d<<schwa>>-neeZ reg-nI), n.[Latin "laws and customs of the kingdom"] Hist. The common law. • This was the accepted term for the common law since at least the late 12th century.

LEGES HENRICI

leges Henrici (lee-jeez hen-rI-sI), n.[Latin] Hist. A book anonymously written between 1114 and 1118 containing Anglo-Saxon and Norman law. • The book lends insight to the period before the full development of Norman law in England. — Also termed leges Henrici Primi.

"Closely connected with the Quadripartitus is a far more important book, the so-called Leges Henrici. It seems to have been compiled shortly before the year 1118. After a brief preface, it gives us Henry's coronation charter (this accounts for the name which has unfortunately been given in modern days to the whole book), and then the author makes a gallant, if forlorn, attempt to state the law of England. At first sight the outcome seems to be a mere jumble of fragments But the more closely we examine the book, the more thoroughly convinced we shall be that its author has undertaken a serious task in a serious spirit; he means to state the existing law of the land" 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 99 (2d ed. 1898).

LEGES IMPERII

leges imperii (lee-jeez im-peer-ee-I). [Latin] Roman law. Laws conferring lawmaking and other powers on the emperor. — Also termed leges de imperio.

LEGES JULIAE

leges Juliae (lee-jeez joo-lee-ee). See lex Julia iudiciorum publicorum under LEX JULIA.

LEGES NON SCRIPTAE

leges non scriptae (lee-jeez non skrip-tee). [Latin] Hist. Unwritten or customary laws, including ancient acts of Parliament. Cf. LEGES SCRIPTAE.

LEGES PUBLICAE

leges publicae (lee-jeez p<<schwa>>b-l<<schwa>>-see). [Latin] Roman law. Statutes passed by the vote of the Roman people in popular assemblies. • Most leges publicae were of temporary political interest but some, such as the lex Aquilia or the lex Falcidia, had a long life. — Often shortened to leges.

LEGES REGIAE

leges regiae (lee-jeez ree-ji-ee). [Latin] Roman law. Fragments of customary law relating mostly to religious rites and traditionally attributed to Roman kings.

LEGES SACRATAE

LEGIS ACTIO SACRAMENTO

legis actio sacramento. See SACRAMENTO.

LEGISLATE

legislate, vb. 1. To make or enact laws <the role of our lawmakers is to legislate, not to adjudicate>. 2. To bring (something) into or out of existence by making laws; to attempt to control (something) by legislation < virtually every attempt to legislate morality has failed>.

LEGISLATION

legislation. 1. The process of making or enacting a positive law in written form, according to some type of formal procedure, by a branch of government constituted to perform this process. — Also termed lawmaking; statute-making. 2. The law so enacted. 3. The whole body of enacted laws.

ancillary legislation. Legislation that is auxiliary to principal legislation.

antideficiency legislation. 1. Legislation enacted to provide revenue to cover a budget deficiency. 2. Legislation enacted to limit the rights of secured creditors to recover in excess of the security. — Also termed (in sense 2) antideficiency statute.

class legislation. See local and special legislation.

general legislation. Legislation that applies to the community at large. [Cases: Statutes 68. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 154–161.]

judicial legislation. The making of new legal rules by judges; JUDGE-MADE LAW(2).

“It has been said to be ‘merely misleading’ to speak of judicial legislation, and it must be admitted that to do so is to use highly metaphorical language. There is no equivalent to the authoritative text of a statute, and, even when they are not bound by a statute or indistinguishable precedent, the judges' power to innovate is limited by what they cannot consider as well as by what they must consider. They cannot conduct those extensive examinations of empirical data and considerations of social policy which precede, or should precede, much legislation.” Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 34 (4th ed. 1991).

local and special legislation. Legislation that affects only a specific geographic area or a particular class of persons. • Such legislation is unconstitutional if it arbitrarily or capriciously distinguishes between members of the same class. — Also termed class legislation. [Cases: Statutes 76–104. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 148–149, 151–155, 159, 162–201.] pork-barrel legislation. Legislation that favors a particular local district by allocating funds or resources to projects (such as constructing a highway or a post office) of economic value to the district and of political advantage to the district's legislator.

subordinate legislation. 1. Legislation that derives from any authority other than the sovereign power in a state and that therefore depends for its continued existence and validity on some superior or supreme authority. 2.REGULATION(3).

supreme legislation.Legislation that derives directly from the supreme or sovereign power in a state and is therefore incapable of being repealed, annulled, or controlled by any other legislative authority.

4. A proposed law being considered by a legislature <gun-control legislation was debated in the House>.5. The field of study concentrating on statutes.

LEGISLATIVE-EQUIVALENCY DOCTRINE legislative-equivalency doctrine.The rule that a law should be amended or repealed only by the same procedures that were used to enact it. [Cases: Statutes 129, 149. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 143–144, 243, 246, 250, 276–278.]

LEGISLATIVE FACT legislative fact.See FACT.

LEGISLATIVE FUNCTION

legislative function. 1. The duty to determine legislative policy. 2. The duty to form and determine future rights and duties. See LEGISLATIVE POWER.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

legislative history.The background and events leading to the enactment of a statute, including hearings, committee reports, and floor debates. • Legislative history is sometimes recorded so that it can later be used to aid in interpreting the statute. [Cases: Statutes 217.2–217.4. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 340–341.]

LEGISLATIVE IMMUNITY legislative immunity.See IMMUNITY(1).

LEGISLATIVE INTENT

legislative intent.The design or plan that the legislature had at the time of enacting a statute. — Also termed intention of the legislature; intent of the legislature; congressional intent; parliamentary intent. [Cases: Statutes 181(1). C.J.S. Statutes § 315.]

“The intention of the legislature is a common but very slippery phrase, which, popularly understood, may signify anything from intention embodied in positive enactment to speculative opinion as to what the legislature probably would have meant, although there has been an omission to enact it. In a court of law or equity, what the legislature intended to be done or not to be done can only be legitimately ascertained from that which it has chosen to enact, either in express words or by reasonable and necessary implication.” Saloman v. Saloman & Co., [1897] dormant legislative intent. The intent that the legislature would have had if a given ambiguity, inconsistency, or omission had been called to the legislators' minds. — Sometimes shortened to dormant intent. — Also termed latent intent; latent intention.

A.C. 22, at 38 (as quoted in Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 36–37 (1976)).

LEGISLATIVE INVESTIGATION legislative investigation. A formal inquiry conducted by a legislative body incident to its legislative authority. • A legislature has many of the same powers as a court to support a legislative inquiry, including the power to subpoena and cross-examine a witness and to hold a witness in contempt. [Cases: United States 23. C.J.S. United States § 39.]

LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION legislative jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

LEGISLATIVE LAW

legislative law. See STATUTORY LAW.

LEGISLATIVE OFFICER

legislative officer. See OFFICER(1).

LEGISLATIVE POWER legislative power. Constitutional law. The power to make laws and to alter them; a legislative body's exclusive authority to make, amend, and repeal laws. • Under federal law, this power is vested in Congress, consisting of the House of Representatives and the Senate. A legislative body may delegate a portion of its lawmaking authority to agencies within the executive branch for purposes of rulemaking and regulation. But a legislative body may not delegate its authority to the judicial branch, and the judicial branch may not encroach on legislative duties. [Cases: Constitutional Law 50–66. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 54, 58–59, 111–168.]

LEGISLATIVE PRIVILEGE

legislative privilege. See PRIVILEGE(1).

LEGISLATIVE RULE

legislative rule. An administrative rule created by an agency's exercise of delegated quasi-legislative authority. • A legislative rule has the force of law. — Also termed substantive rule. Cf. INTERPRETATIVE RULE. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 382.1.]

LEGITIM

legitim.Scots law. The right of any surviving lawful issue to share in the movable estate of the father. • The legitim comprised one-third of the estate if there was a surviving spouse, or one-half otherwise. — Also termed the bairn's part. Cf. LEGITIME.

LEGITIMACY

legitimacy. 1. Lawfulness. 2. The status of a person who is born within a lawful marriage or who acquires that status by later action of the parents; legal kinship between a child and its parent or parents. Cf. ILLEGITIMACY. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock 1. C.J.S. Children Out-of-Wedlock §§ 2–11.]

“In this age of equality, the question might fairly be asked whether a discussion of child support should even be concerned about ‘legitimacy’ and ‘illegitimacy.’ The answer is ‘yes,’ for several reasons. Most rules regarding child support were fashioned at a time when legitimacy was the precondition to full support entitlement and illegitimate paternity had only limited legal consequences. True, by U.S. Supreme Court doctrine, distinctions between ‘legitimate’ and ‘illegitimate’ children should no longer be maintainable, but many state statutes have not yet been adapted to this view. Distinctions on the basis of legitimacy, however unconstitutional, continue to be made.” Harry D. Krause, Child Support in America 103 (1981).

LEGITIMACY PRESUMPTION legitimacy presumption.See PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY.

[Cases: Consumer Protection 9. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 52–55, 64.] 2. By extension, a statute designed to protect a consumer who buys any product of inferior quality. — Also termed (in sense 2) quality-of-products legislation.

LEMON<TT> TEST

Lemon test. A legal standard for judging the state's violation of the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment. • The Lemon test has most often been used in school-related cases. It employs a three-pronged test to determine the state's action: (1) Does the state's action have a religious purpose? (2) Does the state's action have the primary effect of either promoting or inhibiting religion? (3) Does the state's action create an “excessive entanglement” between church and state? Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 91 S.Ct. 2105 (1971). In recent years, the Court has not overturned Lemon but has declined to apply it when deciding Establishment Clause cases.

LE MORT SAISIT LE VIF DOCTRINE

le mort saisit le vif doctrine (l*<<schwa>> mor se-zee l<<schwa>> veef*). [French “the dead seizes the living”] The principle requiring that there be no gap in the possession of a freehold estate in land, so that legal title vests immediately in the heirs upon the death of the person through whom they claim title. • The doctrine does not exclude unknown heirs or heirs absent at the date of death.

LEND

lend,vb.1. To allow the temporary use of (something), sometimes in exchange for compensation, on condition that the thing or its equivalent be returned. 2. To provide (money) temporarily on condition of repayment, usu. with interest. [Cases: Contracts 194.]

LE ROY

le roy (l-<<schwa>>r wahor l-<<schwa>> roy), n.[Law French] The king. — Also spelled le roi.

LE ROY LE VEUT

le roy le veut (l-<<schwa>>r wah l-<<schwa>> voo). [Law French] Hist. The king (or the queen) wills it. • This is the form of the king's or queen's approval to a public bill passed by Parliament. For a queen, the sentence is la reine le veut.

“If the king consents to a public bill, the clerk usually declares, ‘le roy le veut, the king wills it so to be:’ if to a private bill, ‘soit fait comme il est désiré, be it as it is desired.’ If the king refuses his assent, it is in the gentle language of ‘le roy s'avisera, the king will advise upon it.’ ” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 184 (1765).

LE ROY REMERCIE SES LOYAL SUJETS, ACCEPTE LEUR BENEVOLENCE

le roy remercie ses loyal sujets, accepte leur benevolence, et ainsi le veut (l-<<schwa>>r wah ruu-mair-see say lwĭ-ahl soo-zhay, ak-sept luu[r] bay-nay-voh-lawns, ay an-see l-<<schwa>> vuu). [Law French] Hist. The king thanks his loyal subjects, accepts their benevolence, and therefore wills it to be so. • This is a form of the royal assent to a bill of supply, authorizing money for public purposes. For a queen, the sentence was la reine remercie ses loyal sujets

LE ROY S'AVISERA

le roy s'avisera (l-<<schwa>>r wah sa-veez-rah). [Law French] The king will advise upon it. • This is a form of the refusal of royal assent to a public bill in Parliament (not exercised since lesion (lee-zh<<schwa>>n). 1. An injury or wound; esp., an area of wounded tissue. 2. Civil law. Loss from another's failure to perform a contract; the injury suffered by one who did not receive the equivalent value of what was bargained for. La. Civ. Code art. 2589. — Also spelled (in sense 2) lésion. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 89. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 182, 184–185.] 3. LAESIO ENORMIS.

“The concept of lésion, unknown as such to the common law, may be defined as a detriment to one of the parties to a contract which results from an imbalance or disparity between the performance promised on the two sides. Down through the ages, civilians have differed over whether it gave the injured party a right of avoidance or rescission. Classical Roman law, designed for a society whose members were strong enough to protect their own interests, denied the right, but by the time of the French Revolution the right had come to be recognized, particularly by the canonists and Pothier. But the Revolution, both because of its emphasis on individual will and because of economic reasons, was hostile to the concept of lésion and the Civil Code provided that it did not affect the validity of a contract except in certain prescribed instances, most notably the case of the vendor of real property. The number of exceptions was enlarged both by subsequent legislation and, at least indirectly, by judicial decision, and this raised a question of the reversal of the general principle that rejected the concept.” Allan Farnsworth, “The Development of the Civil Law of Obligations in New States: Senegal, Madagascar, and Ethiopia,” in Essays on the Civil Law of Obligations 64 (Joseph Dainow ed., 1969).

LESION BEYOND MOIETY lesion beyond moiety. See LAESIO ENORMIS.

LESSOR

lessor (les-or or le-sor). One who conveys real or personal property by lease; esp., LANDLORD. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 1. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 1, 2(1, 2), 6(1), 7, 202(5).]

LESSOR OF THE PLAINTIFF

lessor of the plaintiff. Hist. The true party in interest prosecuting an action for ejectment. • At common law, an ejectment action was theoretically only for the recovery of the unexpired term of the lease. Conventions of pleadings at the time required the true plaintiff to grant a fictitious lease, thereby becoming a lessor, to an equally fictitious plaintiff in whose name the action would be prosecuted.

LESSOR'S INTEREST

lessor's interest. The present value of the future income under a lease, plus the present value of the property after the lease expires. Cf. LESSEE'S INTEREST .

LET

LETTER OF CREDENCE

letter of credence. Int'l law. A document that accredits a diplomat to the government of the country to which he or she is sent. — Abbr. LC; L/C. — Also termed letters of credence.

LETTER OF CREDIT

letter of credit. Commercial law. An instrument under which the issuer (usu. a bank), at a customer's request, agrees to honor a draft or other demand for payment made by a third party (the beneficiary), as long as the draft or demand complies with specified conditions, and regardless of whether any underlying agreement between the customer and the beneficiary is satisfied. • Letters of credit are governed by Article 5 of the UCC. — Abbr. LC; L/C. — Often shortened to credit. — Also termed circular letter of credit; circular note; bill of credit. [Cases: Banks and Banking 191. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 341–366, 368–370, 372–376.]

“There is some confusion over the exact nature of credits. They resemble a number of commercial devices that are not credits. Often, there is confusion between letters of credit and guaranties, and occasionally between letters of credit and lines of credit. In the credit transaction itself, it is important to distinguish the credit from other contracts and from the acceptance.

Generally, the broad credit transaction consists of three separate relationships. These include those that are (1) between the issuer and the beneficiary; (2) between the beneficiary and the account party; and (3) between the account party and the issuer. The first is the letter-of-credit engagement. The second is usually called the underlying contract, and the third is called the application agreement.” John F. Dolan, The Law of Letters of Credit ¶ 2.01, at 2-2 (1984).

“A credit is an original undertaking by one party (the issuer) to substitute his financial strength for that of another (the account party), with that undertaking to be triggered by the presentation of a draft or demand for payment and, often, other documents. The credit arises in a number of situations, but generally the account party seeks the strength of the issuer's financial integrity or reputation so that a third party (the beneficiary of the credit) will give value to the account party.” Id. ¶ 2.02, at 2-3.

“A seller hesitates to give up possession of its goods before it is paid. But a buyer wishes to have control of the goods before parting with its money. To relieve this simple tension, merchants developed the device known as the ‘letter of credit’ or simply the ‘credit’ or the ‘letter.’ Today, letters of credit come in two broad varieties. The ‘commercial’ letter dates back at least 700 years. It is a mode of payment in the purchase of goods, mostly in international sales. The ‘standby’ letter of credit is a much more recent mutant. It ‘backs up’ obligations in a myriad of settings. In the most common standby a bank promises to pay a creditor upon documentary certification of the applicant's default.” 3 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 26-1, at 105 (4th ed. 1995).

clean letter of credit. A letter of credit that is payable on its presentation. • No document needs to be presented along with it. — Also termed suicide letter of credit. Cf. documentary letter of credit.

commercial letter of credit. A letter of credit used as a method of payment in a sale of goods (esp. in an international transaction), with the buyer being the issuer's customer and the seller being the beneficiary, so that the seller can obtain payment directly from the issuer instead of from the buyer.

confirmed letter of credit. A letter of credit that directly obligates a financing agency (such as a bank) doing business in the seller's financial market to a contract of sale. UCC § 2-325(3).

documentary letter of credit. A letter of credit that is payable when presented with another document, such as a certificate of title or invoice. — Abbr. DL/C. Cf. clean letter of credit.

export letter of credit. A commercial letter of credit issued by a foreign bank, at a foreign buyer's request, in favor of a domestic exporter.

general letter of credit. A letter of credit addressed to any and all persons without naming anyone in particular. Cf. special letter of credit.

guaranty letter of credit. See standby letter of credit.

import letter of credit. A commercial letter of credit issued by a domestic bank, at an importer's request, in favor of a foreign seller.

irrevocable letter of credit (i-rev-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). 1. A letter of credit that the issuing bank guarantees will not be withdrawn or canceled before the expiration date. 2. A letter of credit that cannot be modified or revoked without the customer's consent. 3. A letter of credit that cannot be modified or canceled without the consent of all parties.

negotiation letter of credit. A letter of credit in which the issuer's engagement runs to drawers and indorsers under a standard negotiation clause.

“Letter-of-credit law has long distinguished the straight credit from the negotiation credit. The engagement of the former runs to the beneficiary; the engagement of the latter runs to ‘drawers, endorsers, and bona fide holders.’ This quoted phrase is the traditional negotiation clause. The significance of it is that it obviously extends the credit engagement to parties other than the person with whom the account party is doing business.” John F. Dolan, The Law of Letters of Credit ¶ 8.02[6], at 8-11 (1984).

open letter of credit. A letter of credit that can be paid on a simple draft without the need for documentary title.

revocable letter of credit (rev-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). A letter of credit in which the issuing bank reserves the right to cancel and withdraw from the transaction upon appropriate notice. • The letter cannot be revoked if the credit has already been paid by a third party. [Cases: Banks and Banking 191.10. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 341–366, 368–370, 372–376.]

revolving letter of credit. A letter of credit that self-renews by providing for a continuing line of credit that the beneficiary periodically draws on and the bank customer periodically repays. • A revolving letter of credit is used when there will be multiple drafts under a single transaction or multiple transactions under a single credit. — Abbr. RL/C.

special letter of credit. A letter of credit addressed to a particular individual, firm, or corporation. Cf. general letter of credit.

standby letter of credit. A letter of credit used to guarantee either a monetary or a nonmonetary obligation (such as the performance of construction work), whereby the issuing bank agrees to pay the beneficiary if the bank customer defaults on its obligation. — Abbr. SL/C. — Also termed guaranty letter of credit. [Cases: Banks and Banking 191.10. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 341–366, 368–370, 372–376.]

straight letter of credit. A letter of credit requiring that drafts drawn under it be presented to a specified party.

suicide letter of credit. See clean letter of credit.

time letter of credit. A letter of credit that is duly honored by the issuer accepting drafts drawn under it. — Also termed acceptance credit; usance credit.

transferable letter of credit. A letter of credit that authorizes the beneficiary to assign the right to draw under it. [Cases: Banks and Banking 191.10. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§

341–366, 368–370, 372–376.]

traveler's letter of credit. 1. A letter of credit addressed to a correspondent bank, from which one can draw credit by identifying oneself as the person in whose favor the credit is drawn. 2. A letter of credit used by a person traveling abroad, by which the issuing bank authorizes payment of funds to the holder in the local currency by a local bank. • The holder signs a check on the issuing bank, and the local bank forwards it to the issuing bank for its credit.

LETTER OF EXCHANGE

letter of exchange. See DRAFT(1).

LETTER OF INTENT

letter of intent. A written statement detailing the preliminary understanding of parties who plan to enter into a contract or some other agreement; a noncommittal writing preliminary to a contract. • A letter of intent is not meant to be binding and does not hinder the parties from bargaining with a third party. Businesspeople typically mean not to be bound by a letter of intent, and courts ordinarily do not enforce one; but courts occasionally find that a commitment has been made. — Abbr. LOI. — Also termed memorandum of intent; memorandum of understanding; term sheet; commitment letter. Cf. precontract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Contracts 25. C.J.S. Contracts § 60.]

LETTER OF LICENSE

letter of license. English law. An agreement signed by all the creditors of a financially troubled business that does the following: (1) grants the debtor more time to pay debts, (2) permits the debtor to continue business in the hope of overcoming its financial distress, and (3) protects the debtor from arrest, lawsuit, or other interference while the letter is in effect. See ARRANGEMENT WITH CREDITORS.

LETTER OF RECALL

letter of recall. 1. A document sent from one nation's executive to that of another, summoning a minister back to his or her own country. 2. A manufacturer's letter to a buyer of a particular product, asking the buyer to bring the product back to the dealer for repair or replacement. — Also termed recall letter.

LETTER OF RECREDENTIALS letter of recredentials (ree-kr<<schwa>>-den-sh<<schwa>>lz). A formal letter from a host country's diplomatic secretary of state to a minister or ambassador who has been recalled by his or her own country. • The letter officially accredits the foreign minister back to his or her home country.

LETTER OF REQUEST

letter of request. 1. A document issued by one court to a foreign court, requesting that the foreign court (1) take evidence from a specific person within the foreign jurisdiction or serve process on an individual or corporation within the foreign jurisdiction and (2) return the testimony or proof of service for use in a pending case. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 28. — Also termed letter rogatory (rog-<<schwa>>-tor-ee); rogatory letter; requisitory letter (ri-kwiz-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1312.] 2. An instrument by which an inferior court withdraws or waives jurisdiction so that a matter can be heard in the court immediately above. Pl. letters of request.

LETTER OF THE LAW

letter of the law.The strictly literal meaning of the law, rather than the intention or policy behind it. — Also termed litera legis. Cf. SPIRIT OF THE LAW . [Cases: Statutes 183. C.J.S. Statutes § 317.]

LETTER OF UNDERTAKING

letter of undertaking.An agreement by which a shipowner — to avoid having creditors seize the ship and release it on bond — agrees to post security on the ship, and to enter an appearance, acknowledge ownership, and pay any final decree entered against the vessel whether it is lost or not. • A letter of undertaking is often issued by the shipowner's liability insurer. [Cases: Admiralty 57. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 162–168.]

“Such informal or extra-legal agreements save court costs and the marshal's fees, avoid the annoyance of having the vessel even temporarily arrested and may well be cheaper than the usual surety bond In Continental Grain Co. v. Federal Barge Lines, Inc., [268 F.2d 240 (5th Cir. 1959), aff'd, 364 U.S. 19, 80 S.Ct. 1470 (1960)], Judge Brown commented that a letter of undertaking given by a shipowner would be treated ‘as though, upon the libel being filed, the vessel had actually been seized, a claim filed, a stipulation to abide decrees with sureties executed and filed by claimant, and the vessel formally released. Any other course would imperil the desirable avoidance of needless cost, time and inconvenience to litigants, counsel, ships, clerks, marshals, keepers and court personnel through the ready acceptance of such letters of undertakings.’ [268 F.2d at 243.] If, as Judge Brown suggests, the informal agreement is treated as having the same effect as a formal release under bond or stipulation, few questions relating to their use will ever have to be litigated.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 9-89, at 800–01 (2d ed. 1975).

LETTER ROGATORY

letter rogatory.See LETTER OF REQUEST.

LETTER RULING

property, and affairs of a minor or an incapacitated adult. • It defines the scope of the guardian's rights and duties, including the extent of control over the ward's education and medical issues. See GUARDIAN. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 16.]

LETTERS OF HORNING

letters of horning.Hist. Scots law. An execution process in which the creditor holding a decree obtained royal letters commanding the debtor to either perform or be outlawed. See HORNING.

LETTERS OF MARQUE

letters of marque (mahrk). A license authorizing a private citizen to engage in reprisals against citizens or vessels of another nation. • Congress has the exclusive power to grant letters of marque (U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 11), but it has not done so since the 19th century. — Also termed letters of marque and reprisal.

“[F]ormerly it was not uncommon for a state to issue ‘letters of marque’ to one of its own subjects, who had met with a denial of justice in another state, authorizing him to redress the wrong for himself by forcible action, such as the seizure of the property of subjects of the delinquent state.” J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 321 (5th ed. 1955).

LETTERS OF SAFE CONDUCT

letters of safe conduct.Hist. Formal written permission from the English sovereign to a citizen of a nation at war with England, permitting that person to travel and ship goods, to England or on the high seas, without risk of seizure. • Passports or licenses from foreign ambassadors now may serve the same purpose. See SAFE CONDUCT.

LETTERS OF SLAINS

letters of slains.Hist. Letters to the Crown from the relatives of a slain person concurring with the offender's application for a royal pardon. • A pardon could not be granted without the family's concurrence. — Also spelled letters of slanes.

LEX APULEIA lex Apuleia (leks ap-y<<schwa>>-lee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law giving a coguarantor, who had paid more than the proper share of debt, an action of reimbursement against the remaining guarantors. — Also spelled lex Appuleia.

LEX AQUILIA

lex Aquilia (leks <<schwa>>-kwil-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin “Aquilian law”] Roman law. A Roman statute imposing liability for pecuniary loss tortiously caused and generally regulating loss caused by damage to property, including compensation to be paid for injury to another's slave or livestock. • A loss had to be financially measurable and caused wrongfully. If the liable party denied liability, then damages were doubled. This law applied to negligence as well as dolus. The law, enacted around 287 B.C., superseded the earlier provisions of the Twelve Tables. — Also termed Aquilian law. See DAMNUM INJURIA DATUM; DOLUS; actio legis Aquiliae under ACTIO.

LEX ATILIA

lex Atilia (leks <<schwa>>-til-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law granting to magistrates the right to appoint guardians. • The law is named after the person who proposed it, perhaps the tribune L. Atilius Regulus. It was enacted about 210 B.C. — Also termed Atilian law.

LEX COMMISSORIA

lex commissoria (leks kom-i-sor-ee-a). [Latin “forfeiture clause” or “cancellation clause”] Roman law. 1. A term in a contract of sale allowing the seller to rescind the sale if the price was not paid by the agreed time. 2. A clause by which, in a pledge agreement, a debtor and creditor could agree that if the debtor fails to timely pay the debt, the creditor obtains absolute title of the pledged property.

“By the lex commissoria at Rome, the debtor and creditor might agree that if the debtor did not pay at the day, the pledge should become the absolute property of the creditor. But a law of Constantine abolished this power, as unjust and oppressive, and having a growing asperity in practice.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *583 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

3. An agreement in which such a failure-to-timely-pay clause appears. — Also written commissoria lex. 4. LEX COMMERCII. “But the position of the seller was a good deal more awkward, especially if he had sold a unique object, such as a piece of land, for, apart from express agreement, he would have to retain the land or other object in case the buyer later came along with the price and demanded delivery. The difficulty could be avoided by the insertion of a term known as lex commissoria, which gave the seller an option of declaring the contract at an end if the buyer did not pay within the agreed time. This term probably became common form in Roman law, but was never implied. It always had to be expressly inserted in the contract Not until the time of Lord Mansfield was a similar development complete in English law, though in the end we carried it much further than the Romans.” W.W. Buckland & Arnold D. McNair, Roman Law & Common Law: A Comparison in Outline 231 (F.H. Lawson ed., 2d ed. 1952).

LEX COMMUNIS

lex Cornelia de edictis (leks kor-nee-lee-<<schwa>> dee ee-dik-t<<schwa>>s). See lex Cornelia de jurisdictione.

lex Cornelia de falsis (leks kor-nee-lee-<<schwa>> dee fal-sis or fawl-sis). [Latin] Roman law. See lex cornelia nummaria testamentaria.

lex Cornelia de iniuriis (leks kor-nee-lee-<<schwa>> dee in-joor-ee-is). [Latin] Roman law. The Cornelian law providing a civil action for the recovery of a penalty in certain cases of bodily injury and violent invasion of property. • The precise boundary between the crime and the delict is not clear. But the two procedures probably existed side by side.

“Lex Cornelia de iniuriis Punished three kinds of injury committed by violence: pulsare (beating), verberare (striking, causing pains) and domum introire (forcible invasion of another's domicile)." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 549 (1953).

lex Cornelia de jurisdictione (leks kor-nee-lee-<<schwa>> dee joor-is-dik-shee-oh-nee). [Latin] Roman law. The law forbidding a praetor from departing, during his term of office, from the edict he had promulgated at the term's commencement. • It did not, however, forbid the offer of new remedies. — Also termed lex Cornelia de edictis.

lex Cornelia de sicariis et veneficis (leks kor-nee-lee-<<schwa>> dee si-kair-ee-is et v*<<schwa>>-nee-f<<schwa>>*-sis). [Latin] Roman law. A law combining jurisdiction over gangster-type killings and poisoning, or attempts at such crimes, and addressing the bringing of false witness and bribery of a judge or juror, if those actions brought about a person's death. • The statute was soon extended to cover murder generally when committed within or close to Rome. Emperor Antoninus Pius added a provision for murder to include a slave owner who deliberately killed his own slave.

lex Cornelia de sponsu (leks kor-nee-lee-<<schwa>> dee spon-s[y]oo). [Latin] Roman law. A law prohibiting a person from acting as surety for the same debtor to the same creditor in the same year for more than a specified amount.

lex Cornelia nummaria testamentaria (leks kor-nee-lee-<<schwa>> n*<<schwa>>-mair-ee-<<schwa>>* tes-t*<<schwa>>-men-tair-ee-<<schwa>>*). Roman law. A statute making forgery (falsum) a crime, and creating a special court to try forgery cases. • Until the later Roman Empire, falsum included both coining and document forgery. — Also termed lex Cornelia de falsis. See FALSUM(2).

"It is not absolutely clear whether Sulla passed two laws, one on forging wills and the other on forging money, or whether the one lex Cornelia nummaria testamentaria provided for both sorts of offence to be heard by the quaestio de falsis which it created." O.F. Professor Robinson, The Criminal Law of Ancient Rome 36 (1995).

LEX FURIA TESTAMENTARIA

lex Furia testamentaria (leks fyoor-ee-<<schwa>> tes-t<<schwa>>-men-tair-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law.A law prohibiting a testator from bequeathing more than 1,000 asses (i.e., 722 pounds) of copper or the equivalent. • This law, dating from the middle of the republic, was one of the first to restrict legacies. It was passed between 204 and 169 B.C.

“The lex Furia... provided that no one except [close] relatives ... should take by will or gift in view of death more than 1000 asses [copper coins]. It did not rescind the disposition, but enacted a penalty of four times the amount, recoverable by a stringent procedure from anyone who took such a legacy or gift, contrary to the law. But this law left it open to a testator to leave nothing to the heir, supposing he made a sufficient number of legatees up to the statutable limit.” 1 Henry John Roby, Roman Private Law 344–45 (1902).

LEX FUSIA CANINIA

LEX JULIA

lex Julia (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. One of several Roman statutes dating from the reign of the Emperor Augustus (27 B.C.–A.D. 14) or sometimes from Julius Caesar (47–44 B.C.).

lex Julia de adulteriis coarcerendis (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> dee <<schwa>>-d<<schwa>>l-t<<schwa>>r-ee-is koh-<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-ren-d<<schwa>>s).

[Latin] Roman law. A statute of 18 B.C. making adultery a public crime, justiciable before a quaestio perpetua. — Sometimes shortened to lex Julia de adulteriis.

lex Julia de ambitu (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> dee am-bi-t[y]oo). [Latin] Roman law. A law of 18 B.C. discouraging electoral corruption by a would-be magistrate.

lex Julia de annona (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> dee <<schwa>>-noh-n*<<schwa>>*). [Latin] Roman law. A law against business combinations that negatively affected the grain supply, esp. attempts to raise the price of corn.

lex Julia de cessione bonorum (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> dee ses[h]-ee-oh-nee b*<<schwa>>-nor-<<schwa>>*m). [Latin] Roman law. A law governing bankruptcies allowing a debtor to avoid further adverse action by ceding all the debtor's property to the creditors.

lex Julia de majestate (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> dee maj-<<schwa>>-stay-tee). [Latin] Roman law. A treason law imposing capital punishment on a person acting against the emperor or state. • Enacted about 8 B.C., this was the last specific law on treason.

lex Julia de maritandis ordinibus (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> dee mar-<<schwa>>-tan-dis or-din-<<schwa>>-b*<<schwa>>*s). [Latin] Roman law. A law regulating marriages, imposing a duty to be married on all men between 25 and 60, and on all women between 20 and 50, and forbidding marriages between senators and freedwomen, and forbidding senators and all other freeborn citizens from marrying actresses, prostitutes, and the like. • This 18 B.C. statute is usu. considered as one law with the lex Papia Poppea of A.D. 9, which exempted women with three children or more from being placed under guardianship.

lex Julia de peculatu (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> dee pek-y-<<schwa>>-lay-t [y]oo). [Latin] Roman law. A law punishing the embezzlement of public moneys. • Originally a magistrate determined the punishment. The same court had jurisdiction for transgressions under lex Julia de residuis and for sacrilege, the wrongful taking of money dedicated to sacred or religious purposes. See lex Julia de residuis.

lex Julia de residuis (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> dee ri-zij-oo-is). [Latin] Roman law. A law punishing persons who could not account for public money lawfully in their charge. See lex Julia de peculatu.

lex Julia judiciorum privatorum (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> joo-dish-ee-or-*<< schwa>>*m p*r*I-v-<<schwa>>-tor-*<<schwa>>*m). See lex Julia judiciorum publicorum.

lex Julia judiciorum publicorum (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> joo-dish-ee-or-*<< schwa>>m p-<<schwa>>-bli-kor-<<schwa>>*m). [Latin] Roman law. An Augustan law that, with the lex Julia judiciorum privatorum, reformed various aspects of civil procedure. • The two laws are often referred to together as leges Juliae, or duae Juliae. Together with the lex Aebutia, the leges Juliae largely abolished the legis actiones, the ancient form of Roman civil procedure that relied on fixed oral forms.

LEX JUNIA NORBANA

lex Junia Norbana (leks joo-nee-<<schwa>> nor-bay-n<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law creating the status of Junian Latin for informally manumitted slaves. — Often shortened to lex Junia. See LATINI JUNIANI.

“After the lex Junia Norbana, we find the following classes of persons, under the division of the law of persons into free men or slaves: 1. Ingenui, or persons born free. 2. Libertini... ex-slaves who, on gaining their freedom, became cives. 3. Latini Juniani... ex-slaves who, on manumission and by reason of some defect therein, became something short of full citizens. 4. Dediticii.... 5. Slaves proper.” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 70 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

LEX JUNIA VELLEIA

lex Junia Velleia (leks joo-nee-<<schwa>> v<<schwa>>-lee-y<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law providing that certain kinds of descendants must be treated as posthumously born children of a decedent for purposes of heirship. • This was probably enacted in A.D. 26.

LEX KANTIAE

lex Kantiae (leks kan-shee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. A body of customs, mainly concerning land tenure, prevailing in Kent during the time of Edward I.

LEX LANGOBARDORUM

lex Langobardorum. See LEX LONGOBARDORUM.

LEX LIGEANTIAE

lex ligeantiae (leks lij-ee-an-shee-ee). [Law Latin] The law of the country to which a person owes national allegiance. • Some jurists have thought that this law ought to decide many of the questions that have usu. been determined by the lex domicilii.

LEX LOCI

lex loci (leks loh-sI). [Latin] 1. The law of the place; local law. Cf. LEX FORI . 2. LEX LOCI CONTRACTUS.

LEX LOCI ACTUS

lex loci actus (leks loh-sIak-t<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] The law of the place where an act is done or a transaction is completed. — Often shortened to lex actus.

LEX LOCI CELEBRATIONIS

lex loci celebrationis (leks loh-sI sel-<<schwa>>-bray-shee-oh-nis). [Latin “law of the place of the ceremony”] The law of the place where a contract, esp. of marriage, is made. • This law usu. governs when the validity of a marriage is at issue. Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 283(2) (1971).

LEX LOCI CONTRACTUS

lex loci contractus (leks loh-sI k<<schwa>>n-trak-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin] The law of the place where a contract is executed or to be performed. • Lex loci contractus is often the proper law by which to decide contractual disputes. — Often shortened to lex loci; lex contractus. [Cases: Contracts 144. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 91–93; Contracts §§ 13–23, 25.]

“The lex loci contractus controls the nature, construction, and validity of the contract; and on this broad foundation the law of contracts, founded on necessity and commercial convenience, is said to have been originally established. If the rule were otherwise, the citizens of one country could not safely contract, or carry on commerce, in the territories of another.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *454 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

LEX LOCI DELICTI

lex loci delicti (leks loh-sI d<<schwa>>-lik-tI). [Latin] The law of the place where the tort or other wrong was committed. — Often shortened to lex delicti. — Also termed lex loci delictus; lex loci delicti commissi; place-of-wrong rule; place-of-wrong law. Cf. LOCUS DELICTI. [Cases: Negligence 204; Torts 2. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace § 272; Conflict of Laws §§ 16–17, 99; Negligence §§ 3, 651–652; Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 3, 40; Torts §§ 27–29.]

LEX LOCI REI SITAE

lex loci rei sitae (leks loh-sIree-IsI-tee). [Latin] LEX SITUS.

LEX LOCI SOLUTIONIS

lex loci solutionis (leks loh-sI s<<schwa>>-loo-shee-oh-nis). [Latin “law of the place of solution”] The law of the place where a contract is to be performed (esp. by payment). — Often shortened to lex solutionis.

LEX LONGOBARDORUM

lex Longobardorum (leks long-goh-bahr-dor-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “law of the Lombards”] Hist. An ancient legal code developed between the fifth and eighth centuries, in force until the reign of Charlemagne; the laws of the Lombards, seen cumulatively from the Edict of Rothari in A.D. 643, and added to by Liutprand. • It was a subject of study in the early law school at Pavia. — Also spelled lex Langobardorum; lex Langobardica.

LEX MAJORIS PARTIS

lex majoris partis (leks m<<schwa>>-jor-is pahr-tis). [Latin “law of the major party”] Majority rule. See MAJORITY RULE.

“The voice of the majority decides. For the lex majoris partis is the law of all councils, elections, &c. where not otherwise expressly provided. But if the house be equally divided, ‘semper presumatur pro negante:’ that is, the former law is not to be changed but by a majority.” Thomas Jefferson, A Manual of Parliamentary Practice 105 (1801) (citation omitted).

LEX MANIFESTA

lex manifesta (leks man-<<schwa>>-fes-t<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. Open law; manifest law. 2. Trial by duel or ordeal. — Also termed manifest law.

LEX MARITYMA

lex marityma (leks mair-i-tee-m<<schwa>>).Hist. The body of customs, usage, and local rules governing seagoing commerce that developed in the maritime countries of medieval Europe.

LEX MERCATORIA

LEX MERCIORUM

lex merciorum (leks m<<schwa>>r-shee-or-<<schwa>>m). See MERCENLAGE.

LEX MONETAE

lex monetae (leks m<<schwa>>-nee-tee). [Latin] The law of the country whose money is in question.

LEX NATURAE

lex naturae (leks n<<schwa>>-tyoor-ee). See NATURAL LAW.

LEX NATURALE

lex naturale (leks nach-<<schwa>>-ray-lee). [Law Latin] See NATURAL LAW.

LEX NON SCRIPTA

lex non scripta (leks non skrip-t<<schwa>>). [Latin “unwritten law”] Common law, including customs and local laws, as distinguished from statutory law; UNWRITTEN LAW. Pl. leges non scriptae.Cf. LEX SCRIPTA.

LEX ORDINANDI

lex ordinandi (leks or-d<<schwa>>-nan-di). See LEX FORI.

LEX PAPIA POPPEA

lex Papia Poppea (leks pay-pee-<<schwa>> pah-pee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law proposed by the consuls Papius and Poppeus at the request of Augustus. • It is usu. considered with the lex Julia de maritandis ordinibus as one law. — Also termed Papian law; Poppean law. See lex Julia de maritandis ordinibus under LEX JULIA.

LEX PATRIAE

lex patriae (leks pay-tree-ee orpa-tree-ee). [Latin] National law; the law of one's country. See PERSONAL LAW.

LEX PETRONIA

lex Petronia (leks p<<schwa>>-troh-nee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law.A law forbidding masters from sending their slaves to fight wild beasts in the arena, without a magistrate's authorization. • This law was enacted sometime before A.D. 79.

LEX PLAETORIA

lex Plaetoria (leks pli- or plee-tor-ee-⟨schwa⟩). [Latin] Roman law. A law protecting minors against frauds and probably permitting them to apply for a guardian or curator to assist them.

LEX POETELIA

lex Poetelia (leks poh-⟨schwa⟩-tee-lee-⟨schwa⟩). [Latin] Roman law. A law abolishing a creditor's right to reduce his debtor to slave-like treatment. • This law was enacted sometime before 300 B.C.

LEX POMPEIA DE PARRICIDIIS

lex Pompeia de parricidiis (leks pom-pee-⟨schwa⟩ dee par-⟨schwa⟩-sI-dee-is). [Latin] Roman law. A law of 70 or 55 B.C. defining what murders amounted to parricide and establishing a special expiatory punishment, in which the offender was executed by being sewn up in a sack with a dog, a rooster, a viper, and a monkey, and thrown into the sea or a river.

LEX POSTERIOR DEROGAT PRIORI lex posterior derogat priori (leks pah-steer-ee-⟨schwa⟩r der-⟨schwa⟩-gat pr I-or-I). [Latin “a later law prevails over an earlier one”] The principle that a later statute negates the effect of a prior one if the later statute expressly repeals, or is obviously repugnant to, the earlier law.

LEX PRAETORIA

lex praetoria (leks pri- or pree-tor-ee-⟨schwa⟩). [Latin “praetorian law”] 1. Roman law. Law laid down in the praetor's edict. Cf. JUS PRAETORIUM. 2. Hist. The applicable rules in a court of equity.

LEX PRIVATA

lex privata (leks prI-vay-t⟨schwa⟩). [Latin “private law”] Roman law. A term in a private contract. — Sometimes shortened to lex.

LEX PUBLICA

lex publica (leks p⟨schwa⟩b-li-k⟨schwa⟩). [Latin “public law”] Roman law. 1. A law passed by a popular assembly and binding on all people. 2. A written law. — Sometimes shortened to lex.

LEX PUBLILIA

lex Publilia (leks p[y]oo-blil-ee-⟨schwa⟩). [Latin “Publilian law”] Roman law. A law dispensing with senatorial approval for the enactments of the plebs (common citizens). • In 339 B.C. these laws strengthened the force of the plebiscita and indirectly weakened the patrician element in the Senate by permitting auctoritas patrum to be given in advance for some legislation, and requiring one of the censors to be a plebeian. — Also termed leges Publiliae Philonis.

LEX REGIA

lex regia (leks ree-jee-<<schwa>>). [Latin “royal law”] Roman law. A law ostensibly enacted by the Roman people granting wide legislative and executive powers to the emperor, later interpreted as providing that the emperor was a source of law, the emperor had full legislative powers, and the emperor's will or pleasure had the full force of law. See LEGES IMPERII.

LEX REI SITAE

lex rei sitae (leks ree-IsI-tee). [Law Latin] Scots law. The law of the place where the property is situated.

LEX RHODIA

lex Rhodia (leks roh-dee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. The Rhodian law governing the subject of jettison. • This began as the common law of the ancient Mediterranean Sea. It required that all consignors and the shipmaster share losses equally. — Also termed lex Rhodia de jactu. See RHODIAN LAW.

LEX ROMANA

lex Romana (leks r*<<schwa>>-may-n<<schwa>>*). [Latin] ROMAN LAW.

LEX ROMANA VISIGOTHORUM

Lex Romana Visigothorum (leks r*<<schwa>>-may-n<<schwa>>* viz-<<schwa>>-gah-thor-*<<schwa>>*m). See BREVIARIUM ALARICIANUM.

LEX SALICA

lex Salica (leks sal-<<schwa>>-k*<<schwa>>*). [Latin] See SALIC LAW.

LEX SCRIBONIA

lex Scribonia (leks skri-boh-nee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law of the late Republic abolishing the acquisition of praedial servitudes through prescription.

LEX SCRIPTA

lex scripta (leks skrip-t-<<schwa>>). [Latin “written law”] Law authorized or created by statute rather than custom or usage; WRITTEN LAW. Pl. leges scriptae. Cf. LEX NON SCRIPTA.

LEX SEMPRONIA

lex Sempronia (leks sem-proh-nee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law of 122 B.C. transferring the duty of jury service from the senators to the equestrians (knights). • The control of the juries in the quaestiones perpetuae, particularly in extortion (repetundae) trials, was one of the key areas of political conflict in the late Republic.

LEX SILIA

lex Silia (leks sil-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law providing for personal actions for a fixed sum of money; specif., a law from perhaps 250 B.C. introducing the legis actio per conditionem to claim a fixed sum of money.

LEX SITUS

lex situs (leks sI-t<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] The law of the place where property is located. — Also termed lex loci rei sitae. See Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws §§ 222 et seq. (1971).

LEX SOLUTIONIS

lex solutionis. See LEX LOCI SOLUTIONIS.

LEX TALIONIS

lex talionis (leks tal-ee-oh-nis). [Law Latin] The law of retaliation, under which punishment should be in kind — an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, and so on — but no more. — Also termed eye for an eye; jus talionis; principle of retribution.

“Kant, for example, expresses the opinion that punishment cannot rightly be inflicted for the sake of any benefit to be derived from it either by the criminal himself or by society, and that the sole and sufficient reason and justification of it lies in the fact that evil has been done by him who suffers it. Consistently with this view, he derives the measure of punishment, not from any elaborate considerations as to the amount needed for the repression of crime, but from the simple principle of lex talionis: ‘Thine eye shall not pity; but life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot’ [Deuteronomy, xix 21]. No such principle, indeed, is capable of literal interpretation; but subject to metaphorical and symbolical applications it is in Kant's view the guiding rule of the ideal scheme of criminal justice.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 118 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“But if the old form of the lex talionis, an eye for an eye or a tooth for a tooth, sounds too barbaric today, may we not reformulate the retributive theory and put it thus: Everyone is to be punished alike in proportion to the gravity of his offense or to the extent to which he has made others suffer?” Morris R. Cohen, Reason and Law 53 (1961).

LEX TERRAE

lex terrae (leks ter-ee). [Law Latin] See LAW OF THE LAND.

LEX THEODOSIANA

lex Theodosiana (leks thee-<<schwa>>-doh-see-an-<<schwa>>). See THEODOSIAN CODE .

LEX VALERIA HORATIA

lex Valeria Horatia (leks v<<schwa>>-leer-ee-<<schwa>> h<<schwa>>-ray-shee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law making enactments by the assembly of the people in tribes binding on all citizens. • Several laws of this name were passed in 449 B.C. One was aimed at strengthening the force of plebiscita. Another protected plebeian tribunes with sacrosanctity. A third, more dubious, law falls between the lex Valeria of 509 B.C. and the lex Valeria of 300 B.C. in granting the right of provocatio to the Roman citizen oppressed by a magistrate. Cf. LEX HORTENSIA.

LEX VALIDITATIS

lex validitatis (leks val-<<schwa>>-tay-tis). [Latin] Conflict of laws. The presumption of validity given to marriages, contracts, and other matters.

LEX VISIGOTHORUM

lex Visigothorum (leks viz-<<schwa>>-gah-thor-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “law of the Visigoths”] The law of a division of the Goths (a Germanic tribe) known as the Visigoths, who conquered Spain in the 5th century. • In the late 7th century, Kings Recceswinth and Erwig imposed a Visigothic common law, and it is to this law that the phrase lex Visigothorum usu applies. — Also spelled lex Wisigothorum. — Also termed liber iudiciorum.

LEX VOCONIA

lex Voconia (leks v<<schwa>>-koh-nee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law enacted in 169 B.C. to regulate inheritance (esp. by women) by capping the amount receivable by anyone as legacy or gift in view of death at no more than the heirs took. • The Falcidian law superseded the lex Voconia. — Also termed Voconian law. See FALCIDIAN LAW.

“Lex Voconia Contained several provisions concerned with the law of succession: (1) No woman could be heir ... to an estate having a value greater than a fixed amount (2) Admitted among female agnates only the sisters of the deceased to intestate succession. (3) No one person — male or female — could receive by legacy more than the heir (or all heirs together) instituted in the last will.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 561 (1953).

LEX WALLENSICA

lex Wallensica (leks wawl-en-z<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>), n.[Latin] Welsh law.

LEX WISIGOTHORUM

LHWCA

LHWCA.abbr.LONGSHORE AND HARBOR WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT.

LIABILITY

liability,n.1. The quality or state of being legally obligated or accountable; legal responsibility to another or to society, enforceable by civil remedy or criminal punishment <liability for injuries caused by negligence>. — Also termed legal liability; responsibility; subjection. 2. (often pl.) A financial or pecuniary obligation; DEBT <tax liability> <assets and liabilities>.

“The term ‘liability’ is one of at least double signification. In one sense it is the synonym of duty, the correlative of right; in this sense it is the opposite of privilege or liberty. If a duty rests upon a party, society is now commanding performance by him and threatening penalties. In a second sense, the term ‘liability’ is the correlative of power and the opposite of immunity. In this case society is not yet commanding performance, but it will so command if the possessor of the power does some operative act. If one has a power, the other has a liability. It would be wise to adopt the second sense exclusively. Accurate legal thinking is difficult when the fundamental terms have shifting senses.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 9 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“Liability or responsibility is the bond of necessity that exists between the wrongdoer and the remedy of the wrong. This vinculum juris is not one of mere duty or obligation; it pertains not to the sphere of ought but to that of must.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 364 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

absolute liability.See strict liability.

accomplice liability.Criminal responsibility of one who acts with another before, during, or (in some jurisdictions) after a crime. See 18 USCA § 2. [Cases: Criminal Law 59. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 127, 998.]

accrued liability. A debt or obligation that is properly chargeable in a given accounting period but that is not yet paid.

alternative liability. Liability arising from the tortious acts of two or more parties — when the plaintiff proves that one of the defendants has caused harm but cannot prove which one caused it — resulting in a shifting of the burden of proof to each defendant. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 433B(3) (1965). [Cases: Products Liability 23; Torts 21. C.J.S. Products Liability §§ 40, 42; Torts §§ 36–38.]

civil liability. 1. Liability imposed under the civil, as opposed to the criminal, law. 2. The state of being legally obligated for civil damages.

contingent liability. A liability that will occur only if a specific event happens; a liability that depends on the occurrence of a future and uncertain event. • In financial statements, contingent liabilities are usu. stated in footnotes.

current liability. A business liability that will be paid or otherwise discharged with current assets or by creating other current liabilities within the next year (or operating cycle). — Also termed short-term debt.

derivative liability. Liability for a wrong that a person other than the one wronged has a right to redress. • Examples include liability to a widow in a wrongful-death action and liability to a corporation in a shareholder's derivative suit.

enterprise liability. 1. Liability imposed on each member of an industry responsible for manufacturing a harmful or defective product, allotted by each manufacturer's market share of the industry. — Also termed industry-wide liability. See market-share liability. [Cases: Products Liability 23.1, 24. C.J.S. Products Liability § 41.] 2. Criminal liability imposed on a business (such as a corporation or partnership) for certain offenses, such as public-welfare offenses or offenses for which the legislature specifically intended to impose criminal sanctions. See Model Penal Code § 2.07. See public-welfare offense under OFFENSE(1).

fault liability. Liability based on some degree of blameworthiness. — Also termed fault-based liability. Cf. strict liability.

industry-wide liability. See enterprise liability.

joint and several liability. Liability that may be apportioned either among two or more parties or to only one or a few select members of the group, at the adversary's discretion. • Thus, each liable party is individually responsible for the entire obligation, but a paying party may have a right of contribution and indemnity from nonpaying parties. See solidary liability. [Cases: Contracts 181; Negligence 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 366, 371; Negligence §§ 154–156; Torts §§ 39–44.]

joint liability. Liability shared by two or more parties. [Cases: Negligence 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 154–156; Torts §§ 39–44.]

liability in solido. See solidary liability.

liability without fault. See strict liability.

limited liability. Liability restricted by law or contract; esp., the liability of a company's owners for nothing more than the capital they have invested in the business. [Cases: Corporations 215. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 414, 417, 425, 427.]

market-share liability. Liability that is imposed, usu. severally, on each member of an industry, based on each member's share of the market or respective percentage of the product that is placed on the market. • This theory of liability usu. applies only in the situation in which a plaintiff cannot trace the harmful exposure to a particular product, as when several products contain a fungible substance. For example, it is sometimes applied to a claim that the plaintiff was harmed by exposure to asbestos. See enterprise liability. [Cases: Products Liability 23.1, 24. C.J.S. Products Liability § 41.]

official liability. Liability of an officer or receiver for a breach of contract or a tort committed during the officer's or receiver's tenure, but not involving any personal liability.

penal liability. Liability arising from a proceeding intended at least partly to penalize a wrongdoer. Cf. remedial liability.

personal liability. Liability for which one is personally accountable and for which a wronged party can seek satisfaction out of the wrongdoer's personal assets.

premises liability. See PREMISES LIABILITY.

primary liability. Liability for which one is directly responsible, as opposed to secondary liability.

products liability. See PRODUCTS LIABILITY.

remedial liability. Liability arising from a proceeding whose object contains no penal element. • The two types of proceedings giving rise to this liability are specific enforcement and restitution. Cf. penal liability.

secondary liability. Liability that does not arise unless the primarily liable party fails to honor its obligation.

several liability. Liability that is separate and distinct from another's liability, so that the plaintiff may bring a separate action against one defendant without joining the other liable parties. [Cases: Negligence 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 154–156; Torts §§ 39–44.]

shareholder's liability. 1. The statutory, added, or double liability of a shareholder for a corporation's debts, despite full payment for the stock. 2. The liability of a shareholder for any unpaid stock listed as fully owned on the stock certificate, usu. occurring either when the shareholder agrees to pay full par value for the stock and obtains the certificate before the stock is paid for, or when partially paid-for stock is intentionally issued by a corporation as fully paid, the consideration for it being entirely fictitious. — Also termed stockholder's liability. [Cases: Corporations 215, 227. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 414, 417, 425, 427.]

solidary liability (sol-<<schwa>>-dair-ee). Civil law. The liability of any one debtor among two or more joint debtors to pay the entire debt if the creditor so chooses. La. Civ. Code art. 1794. • This is equivalent to joint and several liability in the common law. — Also termed liability in solido. See joint and several liability. [Cases: Negligence 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 154–156; Torts §§ 39–44.] statutory liability. Liability that is created by a statute (or regulation) as opposed to common law.

stockholder's liability. See shareholder's liability.

strict liability. Liability that does not depend on actual negligence or intent to harm, but that is based on the breach of an absolute duty to make something safe. • Strict liability most often applies either to ultrahazardous activities or in products-liability cases. — Also termed absolute liability; liability without fault. Cf. fault liability; OUTCOME RESPONSIBILITY. [Cases: Negligence 301–307; Products Liability 5. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 170–179; Products Liability §§ 7–8.]

tortious liability. Liability that arises from the breach of a duty that (1) is fixed primarily by the law, (2) is owed to persons generally, and (3) when breached, is redressable by an action for unliquidated damages.

vicarious liability (vI-kair-ee-<<schwa>>s). Liability that a supervisory party (such as an employer) bears for the actionable conduct of a subordinate or associate (such as an employee) based on the relationship between the two parties. See RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR. [Cases: Master and Servant 300, 315; Negligence 483. C.J.S. Employer-Employee Relationship §§ 181–184, 188–193, 203, 231–235, 242, 244–246, 248, 251–252, 254–255; Negligence §§ 152–153.]

“The vicarious liability of an employer for torts committed by employees should not be confused with the liability an employer has for his own torts. An employer whose employee commits a tort may be liable in his own right for negligence in hiring or supervising the employee. If in my business I hire a truck driver who has a record of drunk driving and on whom one day I detect the smell of bourbon, I (along with my employee) may be held liable for negligence if his driving causes injury. But that is not ‘vicarious’ liability — I am held liable for my own negligence in hiring that employee or letting him drive after I know he has been drinking.” Kenneth S. Abraham, The Forms and Functions of Tort Law 166 (2002).

LIABLE

liable (II-l-b<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l also II-b<<schwa>>l), adj. 1. Responsible or answerable in law; legally obligated. 2. (Of a person) subject to or likely to incur (a fine, penalty, etc.). — Also termed legally liable. See LIABILITY.

LIBEL

libel (II-b<<schwa>>l), n. 1. A defamatory statement expressed in a fixed medium, esp. writing but also a picture, sign, or electronic broadcast. • Libel is classified as both a crime and a tort but is no longer prosecuted as a crime. — Also termed defamatory libel. 2. The act of making such a statement; publication of defamatory matter by written or printed words, by its embodiment in physical form, or by any other form of communication that has the potentially harmful qualities characteristic of written or printed words. See DEFAMATION. Cf. SLANDER. [Cases: Libel and Slander 1, 25. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5–6, 10, 47–52.]

“Libel is written or visual defamation; slander is oral or aural defamation.” Robert D. Sack & Sandra S. Baron, Libel, Slander, and Related Problems § 2.3, at 67 (2d ed. 1994).

“The distinction itself between libel and slander is not free from difficulty and uncertainty. As it took form in the seventeenth century, it was one between written and oral words. But later on libel was extended to include pictures, signs, statues, motion pictures, and even conduct carrying a defamatory imputation, such as hanging the plaintiff in effigy, erecting a gallows before his door, dishonoring his valid check drawn upon the defendant's bank, or even ... following him over a considerable period in a conspicuous manner. From this it has been concluded that libel is that which is communicated by the sense of sight, or perhaps also by touch or smell, while slander is that which is conveyed by the sense of hearing.” W. Page Keeton ed., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 112, at 786 (5th ed. 1984).

criminal libel. At common law, a malicious libel that is designed to expose a person to hatred, contempt, or ridicule and that may subject the author to criminal sanctions. • Because of constitutional protections of free speech, libel is no longer criminally prosecuted. [Cases: Libel and Slander 141. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 7–8.]

false-implication libel.Libel that creates a false implication or impression even though each statement in the article, taken separately, is true. See FALSE LIGHT; INVASION OF PRIVACY.

group libel.Libel that defames a class of persons, esp. because of their race, sex, national origin, religious belief, or the like. • Civil liability for group libel is rare because the plaintiff must prove that the statement applied particularly to him or her. Cf. hate speech under SPEECH. [Cases: Libel and Slander 21. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 15.]

libel per quod (p<<schwa>>r kwod).1. Libel that is actionable only on allegation and proof of special damages. • Most jurisdictions do not recognize libel per quod, holding instead that general damages from libel are presumed. 2. Libel in which the defamatory meaning is not apparent from the statement on its face but rather must be proved from extrinsic circumstances. See INNUENDO (2). [Cases: Libel and Slander 11, 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

libel per se (p<<schwa>>r say).1. Libel that is actionable in itself, requiring no proof of special damages. • Most jurisdictions do not distinguish between libel per se and libel per quod, holding instead that general damages from libel are presumed. 2. Libel that is defamatory on its face, such as the statement “Frank is a thief.” [Cases: Libel and Slander 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

obscene libel.Hist. 1.The common-law crime of publishing, with the intent to corrupt, material (esp. sexual words or pictures) that tends to deprave or corrupt those whose minds are open to immoral influences. 2. A writing, book, picture, or print that is so obscene that it shocks the public sense of decency.

sedition libel.Libel made with the intent of inciting sedition. • Like other forms of criminal libel, seditious libel is no longer prosecuted. See SEDITION. [Cases: Libel and Slander 141, 145. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 7–8.]

trade libel.Trade defamation that is written or recorded. See trade defamation under DEFAMATION. Cf. trade slander under SLANDER. [Cases: Libel and Slander 130. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 204–206, 209.]

3. The complaint or initial pleading in an admiralty or ecclesiastical case. [Cases: Admiralty 60. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 171–173.] — Also termed (in sense 3) libel of information.

libel,vb.1. To defame (someone) in a permanent medium, esp. in writing. [Cases: Libel and Slander 1, 25. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5–6, 10, 47–52.] 2.Hist. Maritime law. To sue in admiralty or ecclesiastical court. • This use of the term was eliminated with the merging of the Admiralty Rules into the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in 1986.

LIBELANT

libelant (II-b<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>>nt).1. The party who institutes a suit in admiralty or ecclesiastical court by filing a libel. [Cases: Admiralty 41. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 142–145, 147.] 2.LIBELER. — Also spelled libellant.

LIBELEEE

libelee (II-b<<schwa>>l-ee). The party against whom a libel has been filed in admiralty or ecclesiastical court. — Also spelled libellee. [Cases: Admiralty 42. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 146–147.]

LIBELER

libeler. One who publishes a written defamatory statement. — Also spelled libeller. — Also termed libelant. [Cases: Libel and Slander 77. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 126.]

libertini (lib-schwa-r-tl-nl), n. pl.[Latin] Roman law. See LATINI JUNIANI.

liberty. 1. Freedom from arbitrary or undue external restraint, esp. by a government <give me liberty or give me death>.2. A right, privilege, or immunity enjoyed by prescription or by grant; the absence of a legal duty imposed on a person <the liberties protected by the Constitution>. [Cases: Constitutional Law 83, 254.1. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 472, 511, 977–978, 980, 1418; Right to Die§ 2.]

“[Liberty] denotes not merely freedom from bodily restraint but also the right of the individual to contract, to engage in any of the common occupations of life, to acquire useful knowledge, to marry, establish a home and bring up children, to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and generally to enjoy those privileges long recognized at common law as essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free men.” Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390, 399, 43 S.Ct. 625, 626 (1923).

“The sphere of my legal liberty is that sphere of activity within which the law is content to leave me alone.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 239 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“The word liberty has become a symbol around which have clung some of the most generous human emotions. We have been brought up to thrill with admiration at the men who say, Give me liberty or give me death. But the philosopher asks whether all those who are devoted to liberty mean the same thing. Does liberty or freedom, for instance, involve free trade? Does it involve freedom to preach race hatred or the overthrow of all that we regard as sacred? Many who believe in liberty characterize the freedom which they are not willing to grant, as license, and they do it so often that one may be inclined to think that what we really need is less liberty and more license. Moreover, there is a confusion between the absence of legal restraint and the presence of real freedom as positive power to do what we want. The legal freedom to earn a million dollars is not worth a cent to one who has no real opportunity. It is fashionable to assert that men want freedom above all other things, but a strong case may be made out for the direct contrary. Absolute freedom is just what people do not want” Morris R. Cohen, Reason and Law 101–02 (1961).

civil liberty. See CIVIL LIBERTY.

individual liberty. See personal liberty.

natural liberty. The power to act as one wishes, without any restraint or control, unless by nature.

“This natural liberty ... [is] a right inherent in us by birth But every man, when he enters into society, gives up a part of his natural liberty, as the price of so valuable a purchase; and, in consideration of receiving the advantages of mutual commerce, obliges himself to conform to those laws, which the community has thought proper to establish.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 121 (1765).

personal liberty. One's freedom to do as one pleases, limited only by the government's right to regulate the public health, safety, and welfare. — Also termed individual liberty. [Cases: Constitutional Law 83. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 472, 511.]

political liberty. A person's freedom to participate in the operation of government, esp. in elections and in the making and administration of laws.

religious liberty. Freedom — as guaranteed by the First Amendment — to express, without external control other than one's own conscience, any or no system of religious opinion and to engage in or refrain from any form of religious observance or public or private religious worship, as long as it is consistent with the peace and order of society. [Cases: Constitutional Law 84. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 513–517.]

LIBERTY CLAUSE

Liberty Clause. The Due Process Clause in the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. See DUE PROCESS CLAUSE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 251–320.5. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 455, 461–467, 470, 501, 503, 513, 518, 540, 557, 576–581, 585, 587, 596, 612, 614–618, 704, 883, 945–1348, 1350–1396, 1399–1401, 1405–1427; Right to Die § 2; Zoning and Land Planning § 23.]

The seller then receives the bronze as a sign of the purchase money. See MANCIPATION.

LICENSE

license, n. 1. A permission, usu. revocable, to commit some act that would otherwise be unlawful; esp., an agreement (not amounting to a lease or profit à prendre) that it is lawful for the licensee to enter the licensor's land to do some act that would otherwise be illegal, such as hunting game. See SERVITUDE(1). [Cases: Licenses 43. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses § 88.]

“[A] license is an authority to do a particular act, or series of acts, upon another's land, without possessing any estate therein. It is founded in personal confidence, and is not assignable, nor within the statute of frauds.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *452–53 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

2. The certificate or document evidencing such permission. — license,vb.

artistic license.An open-source license that prohibits the sale of modified software unless it is included in a package with other software.

bare license.A license in which no property interest passes to the licensee, who is merely not a trespasser. • It is revocable at will. — Also termed naked license; mere license. [Cases: Licenses 43, 57. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses §§ 88, 95, 101–102.]

blanket license.Copyright. A license granted by a performing-rights society, such as ASCAP or BMI, to use all works in the society's portfolio in exchange for a fixed percentage of the user's revenues.

box-top license.See shrink-wrap license.

BSD license.A form of open-source license that allows users to incorporate the source code into proprietary products as long as the names of the original creator or contributors are not used to endorse or promote the products without permission. — Also termed BSD-style license.

click-wrap license.See POINT-AND-CLICK AGREEMENT.

compulsory license. 1.Copyright. A statutorily created license that allows certain parties to use copyrighted material without the explicit permission of the copyright owner in exchange for a specified royalty. — Also termed equitable remuneration. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 48.1. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 86–91.] 2.Patents. A statutorily created license that allows certain people to pay a royalty and use an invention without the patentee's permission. • While some nations currently recognize compulsory licenses, the United States never has.

cross-license.Patents. An agreement between two or more patentees to exchange licenses for their mutual benefit and mutual use of the licensed products. [Cases: Patents 206. C.J.S. Patents § 342.]

distribution license.A marketing license, usu. limited by geography.

exclusive license.A license that gives the licensee the sole right to perform the licensed act, often in a defined territory, and that prohibits the licensor from performing the licensed act and from granting the right to anyone else; esp., such a license of a copyright, patent, or trademark right. [Cases: Patents 211(1). C.J.S. Patents § 348.]

general-public license.See open-source license.

implied license.A royalty-free license arising from a property owner's conduct regarding another person's use of the property even though the owner has not expressly consented to the property's use. • In a patent context, the circumstances surrounding the conduct give rise to an affirmative grant of consent or permission to infringe a patent's claims. For example, the conduct of a patentee who encourages the manufacture of infringing products may constitute an implied license to use the patent. An implied license may also arise when a patentee authorizes the sale or express grant of a license to a buyer, who then resells the license to a third party; the third party is the patentee's implied licensee. [Cases: Patents 210. C.J.S. Patents § 346.]

implied license by acquiescence.An implied license that arises from the patentee's tacit or passive acceptance of or implied consent to an otherwise infringing act.

implied license by conduct.An implied license based on the patentee's course of conduct, including language, from which another person could properly infer that the patentee consented to the other's use of the patent. See implied license by equitable estoppel; implied license by legal estoppel.

implied license by equitable estoppel.An implied license usu. based on the patentee's failure to take timely action to enforce patent rights against an infringer after objecting to the infringer's actions, thereby misleading the infringer into believing that the patentee will not act. See A.C. Aukerman Co. v. R.L. Chaides Constr. Co., 960 F.2d 1020, 1042–43 (Fed. Cir. 1992).

implied license by legal estoppel.An implied license usu. based on the patentee's broadcast grant of a right or interest that cannot be derogated by the patentee's later acts.

label license.A notice on an item's package granting the purchaser a license to practice the process by using the item without additional payments to the licensor.

license coupled with an interest.An irrevocable license in real estate that confers the right (not the mere permission) to perform an act or acts upon the property; esp., a license incidental to the ownership of an interest in a chattel located on the land with respect to which the license exists. • This type of license is considered an interest in the land itself. An injunction may be obtained to prevent the wrongful revocation of such a license. — Also termed license coupled with the grant of an interest. [Cases: Licenses 43, 57. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses §§ 88, 95, 101–102.]

“A licence may be coupled with some interest in the land or chattels thereon. Thus the right to enter another man's land to hunt and take away the deer killed, or to cut down a tree and remove it, involves the grant of an interest in the deer or tree and also a licence annexed to it to come on the land. The interest must be a recognised interest in the property, and it must have been validly created. Thus at law a right to take game or minerals, being a profit à prendre, must have been created by deed or prescription, whereas no formalities are required for the grant of a right to take away chattels, such as felled timber or cut hay. Equity will give effect to a specifically enforceable agreement to grant an interest, so that a licence coupled with a profit à prendre granted merely in writing but for value may be protected by injunction.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 428 (6th ed. 1993).

mechanical license.A grant of the right to produce and release a copyrighted work in exchange for a royalty based on the number of units manufactured and sold.

mere license.See bare license.

Mozilla public license.An open-source license that allows software users to modify and publicly distribute the software, but requires users to release the changed software under the same copyright as the original source code, and to release all claims to patent rights. • The Mozilla public license was developed for the Netscape and Netscape Communicator browsers but is not limited to use with them. — Abbr. MPL.

naked license. 1. A license allowing a licensee to use a trademark on any goods and services the licensee chooses. [Cases: Trade Regulation 108. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 209–212.] 2. See bare license.

nonexclusive license. A license of intellectual-property rights that gives the licensee a right to use, make, or sell the licensed item on a shared basis with the licensor and possibly other licensees.

nonmetered license. Patents. An agreement to allow a patent's use in exchange for a flat percentage of sales, regardless of how much the patent is actually used. • The Supreme Court rejected a nonmetered license as patent misuse, saying the buyer has a right to insist on paying only for actual use. Zenith Radio Co. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 89 S.Ct. 1562 (1969). See PATENT-MISUSE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents 218(5). C.J.S. Patents § 371.]

open-source license. A license that allows open-source software users to copy, distribute, or modify the source code, and publicly distribute derived works based on the source code. • Open-source licenses usu. do not require royalty or other fees on distribution. The license typically requires a user who redistributes original or modified software that was received under an open-source license to provide the original license terms, including all disclaimers, to all future users, and to distribute the source code with any machine-executable software. It is unclear who has the right or power to enforce the terms of an open-source license. — Sometimes termed general-public license.

proprietary license. A license that restricts a software user's ability to copy, distribute, or modify the software.

shrink-wrap license. A license printed on the outside of a software package to advise the buyer that by opening the package, the buyer becomes legally bound to abide by the terms of the license. • Shrink-wrap licenses usu. seek to (1) prohibit users from making unauthorized copies of the software, (2) prohibit modifications to the software, (3) limit use of the software to one computer, (4) limit the manufacturer's liability, and (5) disclaim warranties. — Also written shrinkwrap license. — Also termed box-top license; tear-me-open license. See POINT-AND-CLICK AGREEMENT. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 107.]

site license. Copyright. A software license that allows a company to install a set number of copies on individual computers within the company.

synchronization license. A license to reproduce and synchronize a copyrighted musical composition with visual images that are not covered by the musical work's copyright. • Synchronization rights are commonly associated with audiovisual productions, such as music videos or movies.

tear-me-open license.See shrink-wrap license.

use-based license.An open-source software license to which the user assents by acting according to the license's terms, namely, by using, modifying, or distributing the licensed software.

• Unlike a point-and-click agreement, a use-based license does not require the user to expressly declare acceptance of the license terms before using the software.

LICENSE BOND

license bond.See BOND(2).

LICENSE COUPLED WITH THE GRANT OF AN INTEREST license coupled with the grant of an interest.See license coupled with an interest under LICENSE.

LICENSEE

licensee. 1. One to whom a license is granted. 2. One who has permission to enter or use another's premises, but only for one's own purposes and not for the occupier's benefit. • The occupier has a duty to warn the licensee of any dangerous conditions known to the occupier but unknown to the licensee. An example of a licensee is a social guest. Cf. INVITEE; TRESPASSER. [Cases: Licenses 43. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses § 88.]

bare licensee.A licensee whose presence on the premises the occupier tolerates but does not necessarily approve, such as one who takes a shortcut across another's land. — Also termed naked licensee; mere licensee. [Cases: Licenses 43. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses § 88.]

licensee by invitation.One who is expressly or impliedly permitted to enter another's premises to transact business with the owner or occupant or to perform an act benefiting the owner or occupant. [Cases: Licenses 43. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses § 88.]

licensee by permission.One who has the owner's permission or passive consent to enter the owner's premises for one's own convenience, curiosity, or entertainment. [Cases: Licenses 43. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses § 88.]

licensee with an interest.See INVITEE.

mere licensee.See bare licensee.

naked licensee.See bare licensee.

LICENSE FEE

license fee. 1. A monetary charge imposed by a governmental authority for the privilege of pursuing a particular occupation, business, or activity. — Also termed license tax. [Cases: Licenses 1. C.J.S. Architects § 8; Licenses §§ 2–4.] 2. A charge of this type accompanied by a requirement that the licensee take some action, or be subjected to regulations or restrictions. [Cases: Licenses 1. C.J.S. Architects § 8; Licenses §§ 2–4.]

LICENSE IN AMORTIZATION license in amortization.Hist. A license authorizing the conveyance of property otherwise invalid under the statutes of mortmain. See MORTMAIN.

LICENSE TAX

license tax.See LICENSE FEE(1).

LICENSING

licensing. 1. The sale of a license authorizing another to use something (such as computer software) protected by copyright, patent, or trademark. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 48; Patents 206; Trade Regulation 108. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 27, 29, 33–34, 93; Patents § 342; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 209–212.] 2. A governmental body's process of issuing a license. — Also termed (in sense 2) licensure. [Cases: Licenses 1. C.J.S. Architects § 8; Licenses §§ 2–4.]

LICENSOR licensor. One who grants a license to another. — Also spelled licenser. [Cases: Licenses 43. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses § 88.]

LIEGE POUSTIE

liege poustie (leej pow-stee). [Law French “liege power” fr. Latin legitima potestas “lawful power”] Scots law. The lawful power of one in good health, as a result of which the person might dispose of heritable property. • The phrase often appeared attributively, as in liege poustie conveyance. Cf. LEGITIMA POTESTAS.

“LIEGE POUSTIE; is that state of health which gives a person full power to dispose mortis causa, or otherwise, of his heritable property. The term, according to our institutional writers, is derived from the words legitima potestas, signifying the lawful power of disposing of property at pleasure. It is used in contradistinction to deathbed — a liege poustie conveyance being a conveyance not challengeable on the head of deathbed The tests of liege poustie, opposed to the presumption of deathbed, are survivance during sixty days, and going to kirk or market unsupported.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 662 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

“[A] liege poustie conveyance being one not challengeable by the heir on the ground of death-bed. This condition of health the granter of a deed was held to have enjoyed, if at the time of granting it he was not affected by the disease of which he died, or if, after executing it, he attended kirk or market, unsupported, or survived for sixty days.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 329 (4th ed. 1894).

lien (leen orlee-<<schwa>>n), n. A legal right or interest that a creditor has in another's property, lasting usu. until a debt or duty that it secures is satisfied. • Typically, the creditor does not take possession of the property on which the lien has been obtained. Cf. PLEDGE(3). [Cases:

Liens 1.C.J.S. Liens §§ 2–3, 12, 18.] — lien,vb. — lienable, liened,adj.

accountant's lien.The right of an accountant to retain a client's papers until the accountant's fees have been paid.

agent's lien.A lien against property of the estate, in favor of an agent, to secure the agent's compensation as well as all necessary expenses incurred under the agent's power. [Cases: Principal and Agent 90. C.J.S. Agency § 357.]

agister's lien (<<schwa>>-jis-t<<schwa>>rz). A lien on the animals under an agister's care, to secure payment of the agister's fee. See AGISTER; AGISTMENT. [Cases: Animals 26. C.J.S. Animals § 62.]

agricultural lien. 1. A statutory lien that protects a seller of farming equipment by giving the seller a lien on crops grown with the equipment. [Cases: Agriculture 10. C.J.S. Agriculture §§ 105, 113–114, 119–120.] 2.Secured transactions. An interest (other than a security interest) in farm products having three characteristics: (1) it must secure payment or performance of an obligation for goods or services furnished in connection with a debtor's farming operation, or of an obligation for rent on real property leased by a debtor in connection with farming; (2) it must be created by statute in favor of a person either who in the ordinary course of business furnished goods or services to a debtor in connection with the debtor's farming, or who leased real property to a debtor in connection with the debtor's farming; and (3) the effectiveness of the interest must not depend on the person's possession of the personal property. UCC § 9-102(a)(5).

architect's lien.A statutory lien on real property in favor of an architect who has drawn the plans for and supervised the construction of improvements on the property. [Cases: Mechanics' Liens 36. C.J.S. Mechanics' Liens § 33.]

artisan's lien.See mechanic's lien.

attachment lien.A lien on property seized by prejudgment attachment. • Such a lien is initially inchoate but becomes final and perfected upon entry of a judgment for the attaching creditor and relates back to the date when the lien first arose. — Also termed lien of attachment. See ATTACHMENT. [Cases: Attachment 177; Federal Civil Procedure 589. C.J.S. Attachment §§ 203–205.]

attorney's lien.The right of an attorney to hold or retain a client's money or property (a retaining lien) or to encumber money payable to the client (a charging lien) until the attorney's fees have been properly determined and paid. [Cases: Attorney and Client 171. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 357–359.]

banker's lien.The right of a bank to satisfy a customer's matured debt by seizing the customer's money or property in the bank's possession. [Cases: Banks and Banking 134, 136. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 293, 301–305, 312–313, 316.]

blanket lien.A lien that gives a creditor the entitlement to take possession of any or all of the debtor's real property to cover a delinquent loan.

carrier's lien. A carrier's right to retain possession of cargo until the owner of the cargo pays its shipping costs. [Cases: Carriers 197. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace § 232; Carriers §§ 484, 486.]

charging lien. 1. An attorney's lien on a claim that the attorney has helped the client perfect, as through a judgment or settlement. [Cases: Attorney and Client 182. C.J.S. Attorney and Client § 359.] 2. A lien on specified property in the debtor's possession.

chattel lien. See mechanic's lien.

choate lien (koh-it). A lien in which the lienholder, the property, and the monetary amount are established so that the lien is perfected and nothing else needs to be done to make it enforceable. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4781; Liens 1, 12. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 719; Liens §§ 2–3, 12, 14, 18.]

common-law lien. 1. A lien granted by the common law, rather than by statute, equity, or agreement by the parties. [Cases: Liens 1. C.J.S. Liens §§ 2–3, 12, 18.] 2. The right of one person to retain possession of property belonging to another until certain demands of the possessing party are met. • This type of lien, unlike an equitable lien, cannot exist without possession.

concurrent lien. One of two or more liens of equal priority attaching to the same property.

construction lien. See mechanic's lien.

consummate lien (k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>m-it). A judgment lien arising after the denial of a motion for a new trial. Cf. inchoate lien.

conventional lien. A lien that is created by the express agreement of the parties, in circumstances in which the law would not create a lien.

deferred lien. A lien effective at a future date, as distinguished from a present lien that is currently possessory.

demurrage lien (di-m<<schwa>>r-ij). A carrier's lien on goods for any unpaid demurrage charges. See DEMURRAGE. [Cases: Shipping 185. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 431, 439.]

dragnet lien. A lien that is enlarged to cover any additional credit extended to the debtor by the same creditor. [Cases: Secured Transactions 114. C.J.S. Secured Transactions § 83.]

equitable lien. A right, enforceable only in equity, to have a demand satisfied from a particular fund or specific property, without having possession of the fund or property. • It arises mainly in four circumstances: (1) when an occupant of land, believing in good faith to be the owner of that land, makes improvements, repairs, or other expenditures that permanently increase the land's value, (2) when one of two or more joint owners makes expenditures of that kind, (3) when a tenant for life completes permanent and beneficial improvements to the estate begun earlier by the testator, and (4) when land or other property is transferred subject to the payment of debts, legacies, portions, or annuities to third persons. — Also termed equitable levy. [Cases: Liens 7. C.J.S. Liens §§ 5–8.]

execution lien.A lien on property seized by a levy of execution. • Such a lien gives the execution creditor priority over later transferees of the property and over prior unrecorded conveyances of interests in the property. See EXECUTION(3). [Cases: Execution 106. C.J.S. Executions § 137.]

factor's lien.A lien, usu. statutory, on property held on consignment by a factor. • It allows the factor to keep possession of the property until the account has been settled. See FACTOR(2). [Cases: Factors 47.]

first lien.A lien that takes priority over all other charges or encumbrances on the same property and that must be satisfied before other charges may share in proceeds from the property's sale.

floating lien. 1. A lien that is expanded to cover any additional property obtained by the debtor while the debt is outstanding. [Cases: Secured Transactions 116. C.J.S. Secured Transactions § 85.] 2. A lien that continues to exist even when the collateral changes in character, classification, or location. — Also termed floating charge.

garnishment lien.A lien on a debtor's property held by a garnishee. • Such a lien attaches in favor of the garnishing creditor when a garnishment summons is served and also impounds any credits the garnishee owes the debtor so that they must be paid to the garnishing creditor. — Also termed lien of garnishment. See GARNISHMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 609; Garnishment 106.]

general lien.A possessory lien by which the lienholder may retain any of the debtor's goods in the lienholder's possession until any debt due from the debtor, whether in connection with the retained goods or otherwise, has been paid. • Factors, insurance brokers, packers, stockbrokers, and bankers have a general lien over the property of their clients or customers. Cf. particular lien.

“The usage of any trade sufficient to establish a general lien, must ... have been so uniform and notorious, as to warrant the inference that the party against whom the right is claimed had knowledge of it. This general lien may also be created by express agreement; as, where one or more persons give notice that they will not receive any property for the purpose of their trade or business, except on condition that they shall have a lien upon it, not only in respect to the charges arising on the particular goods, but for the general balance of account. All persons who afterwards deal with them, with the knowledge of such notice, will be deemed to have acceded to that agreement.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *637 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

grantor's lien.See vendor's lien (1).

healthcare lien.A statutory lien asserted by an HMO, insurer, medical group, or independent practice association against those liable to the patient for damages, to recover money paid or claim money payable for healthcare services provided under a healthcare service plan or a disability insurance policy. — Also termed medical lien. Cf. hospital lien; workers'-compensation lien.

hospital lien.A statutory lien asserted by a hospital to recover the costs of emergency and ongoing medical and other services. • The lien applies against any judgment, compromise, or settlement received by a hospital patient either from a third person who caused the patient's injuries or from the third person's insurer. See healthcare lien.

hotelkeeper's lien.A possessory or statutory lien allowing an innkeeper to hold, as security for payment, personal property that a guest brought into the hotel. — Also termed innkeeper's lien. [Cases: Innkeepers 13. C.J.S. Inns, Hotels and Eating Places § 19.]

inchoate lien (in-koh-it). A judgment lien that may be defeated if the judgment is vacated or a motion for new trial is granted. Cf. consummate lien.

innkeeper's lien.See hotelkeeper's lien.

involuntary lien.A lien arising without the debtor's consent.

judgment lien.A lien imposed on a judgment debtor's nonexempt property. • This lien gives the judgment creditor the right to attach the judgment debtor's property. — Also termed lien of judgment. See EXEMPT PROPERTY. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2671; Judgment 752–802. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 551–616.]

judicial lien.A lien obtained by judgment, levy, sequestration, or other legal or equitable process or proceeding. • If a debtor is adjudged to owe money to a creditor and the judgment has not been satisfied, the creditor can ask the court to impose a lien on specific property owned and possessed by the debtor. After the court imposes the lien, it usu. issues a writ directing the local sheriff to seize the property, sell it, and turn over the proceeds to the creditor. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2671; Judgment 752. C.J.S. Judgments § 552.]

junior lien.A lien that is subordinate to one or more other liens on the same property.

laborer's lien.See mechanic's lien.

landlord's lien. 1. At common law, a lien that gave a landlord the right to seize a tenant's property and sell it publicly to satisfy overdue rent. See DISTRESS. 2. Generally, a statutory lien on a tenant's personal property at the leased premises in favor of a landlord who receives preferred-creditor status on that property. • Such a lien usu. secures the payment of overdue rent or compensation for damage to the premises. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 239–257. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 605–609, 611–615, 619–634, 636, 638, 640–657.]

lien of attachment.See attachment lien.

lien of factor at common law.Hist. A lien not created by statute; a common-law lien. [Cases: Factors 47.]

lien of garnishment.See garnishment lien.

lien of judgment.See judgment lien.

manufacturer's lien.A statutory lien that secures payment for labor or materials expended in producing goods for another.

maritime lien.A lien on a vessel, given to secure the claim of a creditor who provided maritime services to the vessel or who suffered an injury from the vessel's use. — Also termed tacit hypothecation. [Cases: Maritime Liens 1. C.J.S. Maritime Liens §§ 2–3, 7, 13, 16.]

“The maritime lien has been described as one of the most striking peculiarities of Admiralty law, constituting a charge upon ships of a nature unknown alike to common law and equity. It arises by operation of law and exists as a claim upon the property, secret and invisible. A maritime lien may be defined as: (1) a privileged claim, (2) upon maritime property, (3) for service done to it or injury caused by it, (4) accruing from the moment when the claim attaches, (5) travelling with the property unconditionally, (6) enforced by means of an action in rem.” Griffith Price, The Law of Maritime Liens 1 (1940).

mechanic's lien.A statutory lien that secures payment for labor or materials supplied in improving, repairing, or maintaining real or personal property, such as a building, an automobile, or the like. — Also termed artisan's lien; chattel lien (for personal property); construction lien (for labor); garageman's lien (for repaired vehicles); laborer's lien (for labor); materialman's lien (for materials). [Cases: Bailment 18(2); Mechanics' Liens 1. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 80–81, 84; Mechanics' Liens§ 2.]

medical lien.See healthcare lien.

mortgage lien.A lien on the mortgagor's property securing the mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages 145. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 198, 200.]

municipal lien.A lien by a municipal corporation against a property owner for the owner's proportionate share of a public improvement that specially and individually benefits the owner. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 519. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 1388–1389, 1391–1392.]

particular lien.A possessory lien by which the possessor of goods has the right to retain specific goods until a debt incurred in connection with those goods has been paid. — Also termed special lien. Cf. general lien.

“A general lien is the right to retain the property of another, for a general balance of accounts; but a particular lien is a right to retain it only for a charge on account of labor employed or expenses bestowed upon the identical property detained. The former is taken strictly, but the latter is favored in law. The right rests on principles of natural equity and commercial necessity, and it prevents circuitry of action, and gives security and confidence” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *634 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866). possessory garageman's lien.A lien on a vehicle in the amount of the repairs performed by the garage. [Cases: Automobiles 374. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 1627–1629, 1631–1633, 1639–1677.]

possessory lien.A lien allowing the creditor to keep possession of the encumbered property until the debt is satisfied. • A power of sale may or may not be combined with this right of possession. Examples include pledges of chattels, the liens of innkeepers, garageman's liens, and vendor's liens. See PLEDGE.

prior lien. A lien that is superior to one or more other liens on the same property, usu. because it was perfected first. — Also termed priority lien.

retaining lien. An attorney's right to keep a client's papers until the client has paid for the attorney's services. • The attorney's retaining lien is not recognized in some states. [Cases: Attorney and Client 182(3). C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 376–377.]

second lien. A lien that is next in rank after a first lien on the same property and therefore is next entitled to satisfaction out of the proceeds from the property's sale.

secret lien. A lien not appearing of record and unknown to purchasers; a lien reserved by the vendor and kept hidden from third parties, to secure the payment of goods after delivery.

senior lien. A lien that has priority over other liens on the same property.

special lien. See particular lien.

specific lien. A lien secured on a particular thing by a contract or by a judgment, execution, attachment, or other legal proceeding.

statutory lien. 1. A lien arising solely by force of statute, not by agreement of the parties. • Examples are federal tax liens and mechanic's liens. 2. Bankruptcy. Either of two types of liens: (1) a lien arising solely by force of a statute on specified circumstances or conditions, or (2) a lien of distress for rent, whether or not statutory. • For bankruptcy purposes, a statutory lien does not include a security interest or judicial lien, whether or not the interest or lien arises from or is made effective by a statute. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2580, 2583. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 130.]

superlien. See SUPERLIEN.

tax lien. 1. A lien on property, and all rights to property, imposed by the federal government for unpaid federal taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4765–4806. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 499, 715–720, 751, 753–756, 759, 762, 764, 766–767; Social Security and Public Welfare § 202.] 2. A lien on real estate in favor of a state or local government that may be foreclosed for nonpayment of taxes. • A majority of states have adopted the Uniform Federal Tax Lien Registration Act. [Cases: Taxation 501, 902, 1090, 1320. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare § 202; Taxation §§ 824, 828–829, 834, 1779, 1972–1975, 2065.]

vendee's lien. Real estate. A buyer's lien on the purchased land as security for repayment of purchase money paid in, enforceable if the seller does not or cannot convey good title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 337. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 639, 653–654.]

vendor's lien. 1. Real estate. A seller's lien on land as security for the purchase price. • This lien may be foreclosed in the same way as a mortgage: the buyer usu. has a redemption period within which to pay the full purchase price. — Also termed grantor's lien. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 246. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 529–530.] 2. A lien held by a seller of goods, who retains possession of the goods until the buyer has paid in full. [Cases: Sales 300. C.J.S. Sales § 328.]

voluntary lien.A lien created with the debtor's consent.

warehouse's lien.A lien covering storage charges for goods stored with a bailee. — Also termed warehouseman's lien. [Cases: Warehousemen 29. C.J.S. Warehousemen and Safe Depositaries § 106.]

workers'-compensation lien. 1. A statutory lien, asserted by a healthcare provider, to recover the costs of emergency and ongoing medical and other services. • The lien applies against any workers'-compensation benefits paid to a patient. 2. A statutory lien, asserted by a workers'-compensation insurance carrier, against an insured worker's recovery from a third-party tortfeasor, to recover benefits paid to the injured worker. — Also termed workers'-compensation subrogation lien. Cf. healthcare lien.

LIEN STATE

lien state. See LIEN THEORY.

LIEN-STRIPPING

lien-stripping. Bankruptcy. The practice of splitting a mortgagee's secured claim into secured and unsecured components and reducing the claim to the market value of the debtor's residence, thereby allowing the debtor to modify the terms of the mortgage and reduce the amount of the debt. • The U.S. Supreme Court has prohibited lien-stripping in all Chapter 7 cases (Nobelman v. American Savs. Bank, 508 U.S. 324, 113 S.Ct. 2106 (1993)) and in Chapter 13 cases involving a debtor's principal residence (Dewsnup v. Timm, 502 U.S. 410, 112 S.Ct. 773 (1992)), and the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 modified the Bankruptcy Code to prohibit lien-stripping in Chapter 11 cases involving an individual's principal residence. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2575. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 110.]

LIEN THEORY

lien theory. The idea that a mortgage resembles a lien, so that the mortgagee acquires only a lien on the property and the mortgagor retains both legal and equitable title unless a valid foreclosure occurs. • Most American states — commonly called lien states, lien jurisdictions, or lien-theory jurisdictions — have adopted this theory. Cf. TITLE THEORY. [Cases: Mortgages 136. C.J.S. Mortgages § 183.]

LIEN WAIVER

general listing.See open listing.

multiple listing.A listing providing that the agent will allow other agents to try to sell the property. • Under this agreement, the original agent gives the selling agent a percentage of the commission or some other stipulated amount. [Cases: Brokers 40, 66. C.J.S. Brokers §§ 117–120, 125, 135, 141, 143, 185.]

net listing.A listing providing that the agent agrees to sell the owner's property for a set minimum price, any amount over the minimum being retained by the agent as commission. — Also termed net sale contract. [Cases: Brokers 40. C.J.S. Brokers §§ 117–120, 125, 143.]

open listing. A listing that allows selling rights to be given to more than one agent at a time, obligates the owner to pay a commission when a specified broker makes a sale, and reserves the owner's right to personally sell the property without paying a commission. — Also termed nonexclusive listing; general listing; simple listing. [Cases: Brokers 46. C.J.S. Brokers §§ 170, 175.]

2. Securities. The contract between a firm and a stock exchange by which the trading of the firm's securities on the exchange is handled. See listed security under SECURITY. [Cases: Exchanges 13.10. C.J.S. Exchanges §§ 17–18.]

dual listing. The listing of a security on more than one exchange.

3. Tax. The creation of a schedule or inventory of a person's taxable property; the list of a person's taxable property. [Cases: Taxation 328, 366. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 483, 535–536, 541, 544.]

A public grant from the sovereign to a subject, conferring the right to land, a franchise, a title, liberty, or some other endowment. • The modern "patent" and, more closely, "letters patent" derive from this term. See LETTERS PATENT(1).

"The term 'patent' is short for 'letters patent,' derived from the Latin litterae patentes, meaning open letters. Generally, letters patent were letters addressed by the sovereign 'to all whom these presents shall come,' reciting a grant of some dignity, office, franchise, or other privilege that has been given by the sovereign to the patentee." Donald S. Chisum et al., Principles of Patent Law 2 (1998).

LITERAE PROCURATORIAE litterae procuratoriae (lit-⟨schwa⟩r-ee prok-y⟨schwa⟩-r⟨schwa⟩-tor-ee-ee), n.[Law Latin] Hist. Letters of procuracy; letters of attorney; power of attorney. See POWER OF ATTORNEY.

vexatious litigant. A litigant who repeatedly files frivolous lawsuits. • Many jurisdictions have statutes or local rules requiring a vexatious litigant to obtain the court's permission to file any further lawsuits or pleadings.

LITIGATION

litigation, n. 1. The process of carrying on a lawsuit <the attorney advised his client to make a generous settlement offer in order to avoid litigation>. 2. A lawsuit itself <several litigations pending before the court>. — litigate, vb. — litigatory, litigational, adj.

complex litigation. Litigation involving several parties who are separately represented, and usu. involving multifarious factual and legal issues.

“What exactly is ‘complex litigation’? The problem is that no one really knows — or, more accurately perhaps, various definitions don't agree. Complex civil litigation has an ‘I-know-it-when-I-see-it’ quality. Nearly everyone agrees that matters like the massive asbestos litigation, the AT&T antitrust suit, or the remedial phase of a school desegregation case are complex. But trying to find a common thread that both describes these cases and distinguishes them from the run-of-the-mill car crash is difficult.” Jay Tidmarsh & Roger H. Transgrud, Complex Litigation 1 (2002).

LITIGATION COSTS

litigation costs. See COST(3).

LITIGATION PRIVILEGE

Of or relating to lawsuits; litigatory <they couldn't settle the litigious dispute>. — litigiousness, litigiosity (li-tij-ee-os-<<schwa>>-tee), n.

LITIGIOUS RIGHT

litigious right. Civil law. A right that cannot be exercised without first being determined in a lawsuit. La. Civ. Code art. 2652. • If the right is sold, it must be in litigation at the time of sale to be considered a litigious right.

LITIS AESTIMATIO

litis aestimatio (II-tis es-t<<schwa>>-may-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. The judicial estimate of the measure of damages.

LITIS CONTESTATIO

litis contestatio (II-tis kon-tes-tay-shee-oh). [Latin] 1. Roman law. The final agreement of the parties to a suit on the formula the praetor would issue to the judex. — Also termed contestatio litis. See FORMULA.

“Both parties being present, or represented, before the praetor, the plaintiff stated the nature of his claim and asked for an action. It lay in the discretion of the praetor to give or to refuse it.... If, in the event, the praetor refused any action at all, or any action which the plaintiff was willing to accept, the matter was at an end.... If, on the other hand, subject to the direction and approval of the praetor, the parties agreed upon the issues to be referred ... [a] document framed in identical terms was issued to the judex by the praetor as his authority to act. This ceremonial in which three persons concurred (plaintiff, defendant, praetor) was the litis contestatio.” R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 179–80 (4th ed. 1956).

2.Hist. A contested point in a lawsuit; a litigable issue developed by the litigants' alternating statements. 3.CONTESTATION OF SUIT.

LIVERY

livery (liv-<<schwa>>-ree orliv-ree).1. The delivery of the possession of real property. Cf. DELIVERY. 2.Hist. An heir's writ, upon reaching the age of majority, to obtain seisin of his lands from the king. 3. The boarding and care of horses for a fee. 4. A business that rents vehicles.

LIVERY IN CHIVALRY

livery in chivalry.Hist. The delivery of possession of real property from a guardian to a ward in chivalry when the ward reached majority.

LIVERY OFFICE

livery office.An office designated for the delivery of lands.

LIVERY OF SEISIN

livery of seisin.Hist. The ceremony by which a grantor conveyed land to a grantee. • Livery of seisin involved either (1) going on the land and having the grantor symbolically deliver possession of the land to the grantee by handing over a twig, a clod of dirt, or a piece of turf (called livery in deed) or (2) going within sight of the land and having the grantor tell the grantee that possession was being given, followed by the grantee's entering the land (called livery in law). See SEISIN. [Cases: Deeds 21.C.J.S. Deeds §§ 12–13.]

“[W]e may now pause to wonder how transfer of these potentially infinite interests was accomplished. Without a modern system of land records, it would be desirable that the transfer be effected with sufficient ceremony not only to mark itself indelibly in the memories of the participants, but also to give notice to interested persons such as the mesne lord above the transferor. The central idea was to make ritual livery (meaning ‘delivery,’ from the Old French livrer) of seisin (meaning, roughly, ‘possession,’ from the Old French saisir or seisir). The transferor and transferee would go to the land to be transferred, and the transferor would then hand to the transferee a lump of soil or a twig from a tree — all the while intoning the appropriate words of grant, together with the magical words ‘and his heirs’ if the interest transferred was to be a potentially infinite one.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 10–11 (2d ed. 1984).

LIVES IN BEING

lives in being. See LIFE IN BEING.

LIVESTOCK

livestock, n. Domestic animals and fowls that (1) are kept for profit or pleasure, (2) can normally be confined within boundaries without seriously impairing their utility, and (3) do not normally intrude on others' land in such a way as to harm the land or growing crops.

LIVE STORAGE

live storage. The storage of cars in active daily use, rather than cars put away for an extended period. • A garage owner's responsibility sometimes depends on whether a car is in live or dead storage. Cf. DEAD STORAGE. [Cases: Automobiles 370. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 1564–1568, 1586, 1589.]

LIVE THALWEG

LLOYD'S

Lloyd's. See LLOYD'S OF LONDON.

LLOYD'S ASSOCIATION

Lloyd's association. See LLOYD'S UNDERWRITERS.

LLOYD'S BOND

Lloyd's bond. See BOND(3).

LLOYD'S INSURANCE

Lloyd's insurance. See INSURANCE.

LLOYD'S OF LONDON

Lloyd's of London. Insurance. 1. A London insurance mart where individual underwriters gather to quote rates and write insurance on a wide variety of risks. 2. A voluntary association of merchants, shipowners, underwriters, and brokers formed not to write policies but instead to issue a notice of an endeavor to members who may individually underwrite a policy by assuming shares of the total risk of insuring a client. • The names of the bound underwriters and the attorney-in-fact appear on the policy. — Also termed Lloyd's; London Lloyd's. [Cases: Insurance 1220. C.J.S. Insurance § 1709.]

“[I]t is not the corporation of Lloyd's which undertakes insurance risks and enters into policies of insurance; that is done by the individual members of Lloyd's, acting usually in groups or 'syndicates,' which are not partnerships or companies but merely fortuitous aggregations of, say, five, ten, or more members represented in common by one underwriting agent having power to bind them each individually and separately to contracts of insurance. These members are frequently referred to as 'names'; and their agent is said to 'write' for them. If, as is commonly the case, he also is a member of Lloyd's, then he will 'write' for himself, too.” 2 Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England 237 (L. Crispin Warmington ed., 21st ed. 1950).

LLOYD'S UNDERWRITERS

Lloyd's underwriters. An unincorporated association of underwriters who, under a common name, engage in the insurance business through an attorney-in-fact having authority to obligate the underwriters severally, within specified limits, on insurance contracts that the attorney makes or issues in the common name. — Also termed Lloyd's association; American Lloyd's. [Cases: Insurance 1220. C.J.S. Insurance § 1709.]

L.L.P.

L.L.P. See limited-liability partnership under PARTNERSHIP.

LOAD

load, n. An amount added to a security's price or to an insurance premium in order to cover the sales commission and expenses <the mutual fund had a high front-end load>. — Also termed sales load; acquisition cost.

LOAD FACTOR

load factor. 1. The ratio of a utility customer's usage levels during a given period compared to the customer's demand during peak periods. [Cases: Electricity 11.3. C.J.S. Electricity § 30.] 2. An analysis of the number of passengers on an airplane or other common carrier compared to available capacity.

LOAD FUND

load fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

LOADING

loading. Insurance. An amount added to a life-insurance premium to cover the insurer's business expenses and contingencies. — Also termed expense loading. See gross premium (1) under PREMIUM(1). [Cases: Insurance 2000, 2005. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 436–439.]

LOAD LINE

load line. Maritime law. 1. The depth to which a safely loaded ship will sink in salt water. 2. One of a set of graduated marks on the side of a ship, indicating the depth to which the ship can be loaded in varying waters (such as salt water or freshwater) and weather conditions. • Load lines must, by law in most maritime countries, be cut and painted amidships. — Also termed (in sense 2) load-line marks; Plimsoll marks.

“The interest of shipowners led them, in early times, to load vessels to a point beyond safety; the greater the weight of the vessel's load, of course, the lower she rides in the water, and the more vulnerable she is to heavy seas. Many seamen consequently lost their lives. Britain led the way in establishing standards of depth in the water believed to be safe; Samuel Plimsoll, M.P., was the moving spirit, and gave his name to the Plimsoll mark, now seen on the side of all large vessels, which marks the limits of safety for different seas and seasons. Since 1929, the United States has made mandatory the placing of and compliance with loadline marks” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 11-12, at 987 (2d ed. 1975).

loadmanage. Hist. 1. The fee paid to loadsman, who sail in small vessels acting as pilots for larger ships. 2. The hiring of a pilot for a vessel. 3. A pilot's or loadsman's skill. — Also spelled lodemanage; lode manage.

LOADSMAN

loadsman. Hist. 1. A person who directs a ship's course from a small boat traveling in front of the larger ship rather than from the ship itself. • The loadsman had a monopoly on piloting in the cinque ports. See CINQUE PORTS. 2. A person who took the ship to a berth after a pilot had brought it into port. — Also spelled loadman; lodeman; lodesman.

LOAN

loan,n. 1. An act of lending; a grant of something for temporary use <Turner gave the laptop as a loan, not a gift>. [Cases: Contracts 194.] 2. A thing lent for the borrower's temporary use; esp., a sum of money lent at interest <Hull applied for a car loan>.

accommodation loan. A loan for which the lender receives no consideration in return. See ACCOMMODATION.

add-on loan. A loan in which the interest is calculated at the stated rate for the loan agreement's full term for the full principal amount, and then the interest is added to the principal before installment payments are calculated, resulting in an interest amount higher than if it were calculated on the monthly unpaid balance. • Consumer loans are typically add-on loans. — Also termed contract loan. See add-on interest under INTEREST(3).

amortized loan. A loan calling for periodic payments that are applied first to interest and then to principal, as provided by the terms of the note. See AMORTIZATION(1).

back-to-back loan. A loan arrangement by which two firms lend each other funds denominated in different currencies for a specified period.

below-market loan. See interest-free loan.

bridge loan. A short-term loan that is used to cover costs until more permanent financing is arranged. — Also termed swing loan.

broker call loan. See call loan.

building loan. A type of bridge loan used primarily for erecting a building. • The loan is typically advanced in parts as work progresses and is used to pay the contractor, subcontractors, and material suppliers. See interim financing under FINANCING.

call loan. A loan for which the lender can demand payment at any time, usu. with 24 hours' notice, because there is no fixed maturity date. — Also termed broker call loan; demand loan. Cf. term loan. [Cases: Bills and Notes 129(3). C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 90.]

character loan. A loan made in reliance on the borrower's character and stable earnings. • Character loans are usu. secured by a mortgage or by other property, but sometimes they are unsecured.

clearing loan. A loan made to a bond dealer pending the sale of a bond issue.

collateral loan. See secured loan.

commercial loan. A loan that a financial institution gives to a business, generally for 30 to 90 days.

commodity loan. A loan secured by a commodity (such as cotton or wool) in the form of a warehouse receipt or other negotiable instrument.

consolidation loan. A loan whose proceeds are used to pay off other individual loans, thereby creating a more manageable debt.

consumer loan. A loan that is given to an individual for family, household, personal, or agricultural purposes and that is generally governed by truth-in-lending statutes and regulations. [Cases: Consumer Credit 1. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit § 274.]

contract loan. See add-on loan.

Crown loan. Tax. An interest-free demand loan, usu. from parent to child, in which the borrowed funds are invested and the income from the investment is taxed at the child's rate. • This type of loan is named for one Harry Crown of Chicago, reputedly one of the first persons to use it. See kiddie tax under TAX.

day loan. A short-term loan to a broker to finance daily transactions.

demand loan. See call loan.

discount loan. A loan in which interest is deducted in advance, at the time the loan is made.

doorstep loan. A loan offered by a door-to-door solicitor, usu. for home repairs at a high interest rate and under misleading or fraudulent terms. • The term is used primarily in the United home-equity loan. A line of bank credit given to a homeowner, using as collateral the homeowner's equity in the home. — Often shortened to equity loan. — Also termed home-equity line of credit. See EQUITY(7).

installment loan. A loan that is to be repaid in usu. equal portions over a specified period.

interest-free loan. Money loaned to a borrower at no charge or, under the Internal Revenue Code, with a charge that is lower than the market rate. IRC (26 USCA) § 7872. — Also termed (in the IRC) below-market loan.

maritime loan. A loan providing that a lender will not be repaid if the cargo is damaged or lost because of a navigational peril, but that the lender will be repaid plus interest if the cargo arrives safely or is damaged because of the carrier's negligence. — Also termed marine loan.

mortgage loan. A loan secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on real property. [Cases: Mortgages 14. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 143–150.]

nonperforming loan. An outstanding loan that is not being repaid.

nonrecourse loan. A secured loan that allows the lender to attach only the collateral, not the borrower's personal assets, if the loan is not repaid. [Cases: Bills and Notes 44; Secured Transactions 227, 240. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 11; Secured Transactions §§ 152, 164–166, 168–169, 172, 174–175, 180–183.]

participation loan. A loan issued by two or more lenders. See LOAN PARTICIPATION. [Cases: Contracts 194.]

policy loan. An insurer's loan to an insured, secured by the policy's cash reserve. [Cases: Insurance 1868. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 352–356.]

precarious loan. 1. A loan that may be recalled at any time. 2. A loan in danger of not being repaid.

premium loan. A loan made to an insured by the insurer to enable the insured to pay further premiums. • The reserve value of the policy serves as collateral. [Cases: Insurance 1868, 2037. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 352–356, 518–519, 742–745, 749–754.]

recourse loan. A loan that allows the lender, if the borrower defaults, not only to attach the collateral but also to seek judgment against the borrower's (or guarantor's) personal assets. [Cases: Secured Transactions 227, 240. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 152, 164–166, 168–169, 172, 174–175, 180–183.]

revolver loan. A single loan that a debtor takes out in lieu of several lines of credit or other loans from various creditors, and that is subject to review and approval at certain intervals. • A revolver loan is usu. taken out in an attempt to resolve problems with creditors. Cf. revolving credit under CREDIT (4).

revolving loan. A loan that is renewed at maturity.

secured loan.A loan that is secured by property or securities. — Also termed collateral loan.

short-term loan.A loan with a due date of less than one year, usu. evidenced by a note.

signature loan.An unsecured loan based solely on the borrower's promise or signature. • To obtain such a loan, the borrower must usu. be highly creditworthy.

swing loan.See bridge loan.

term loan.A loan with a specified due date, usu. of more than one year. • Such a loan typically cannot be repaid before maturity without incurring a penalty. — Also termed time loan. Cf. call loan. [Cases: Bills and Notes 129(1). C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 86–89, 91.]

loan,vb. To lend, esp. money.

LOAN-AMORTIZATION SCHEDULE

loan-amortization schedule.A schedule that divides each loan payment into an interest component and a principal component. • Typically, the interest component begins as the largest part of each payment and declines over time. See AMORTIZATION(1).

LOAN ASSOCIATION

loan association.See SAVINGS-AND-LOAN ASSOCIATION.

LOAN BROKER

loan broker.See BROKER.

LOAN-BROKERAGE FEE

loan-brokerage fee.See MORTGAGE DISCOUNT.

LOAN CERTIFICATE

loan certificate.A certificate that a clearinghouse issues to a borrowing bank in an amount equal to a specified percentage of the value of the borrowing bank's collateral on deposit with the clearinghouse's loan committee.

LOAN COMMITMENT

loan commitment.A lender's binding promise to a borrower to lend a specified amount of money at a certain interest rate, usu. within a specified period and for a specified purpose (such as buying real estate). See MORTGAGE COMMITMENT . [Cases: Contracts 194.]

LOANED EMPLOYEE

loaned employee.See borrowed employee under EMPLOYEE.

LOANED SERVANT

loaned servant.See borrowed employee under EMPLOYEE.

LOAN FOR CONSUMPTION

loan for consumption. An agreement by which a lender delivers goods to a borrower who consumes them and who is obligated to return goods of the same quantity, type, and quality. [Cases: Contracts 194.]

LOAN FOR EXCHANGE

loan for exchange. A contract by which a lender delivers personal property to a borrower who agrees to return similar property, usu. without compensation for its use.

LOAN FOR USE

loan for use. An agreement by which a lender delivers an asset to a borrower who must use it according to its normal function or according to the agreement, and who must return it when finished using it. • No interest is charged.

LOANLAND

loanland. Hist. A tenancy involving the loan of land by one person to another. — Also spelled laenland. Cf. BOOKLAND; FOLKLAND.

“Laenlands were loaned lands, that is, lands granted for a period, either the life of the grantee or some longer time such as three lives. In return the grantees performed services, usually of an agricultural nature, or made payments in kind to their landlords. Laenlands, like boclands, were usually held under a written instrument, and they are therefore sometimes included in the boclands. But strictly, laenland and bocland differed. Bocland, we may say, was held directly as a result of a charter from the king, whereas laenland was temporarily held by grant from some great landlord.” W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 28 (2d ed. 1949).

LOAN PARTICIPATION

loan participation. The coming together of multiple lenders to issue a large loan (called a participation loan) to one borrower, thereby reducing each lender's individual risk. [Cases: Contracts 194.]

LOAN RATIO

loan ratio. See LOAN-TO-VALUE RATIO.

LOAN-RECEIPT AGREEMENT

loan-receipt agreement. Torts. A settlement agreement by which the defendant lends money to the plaintiff interest-free, the plaintiff not being obligated to repay the loan unless he or she recovers money from other tortfeasors responsible for the same injury. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement 7; Insurance 3524. C.J.S. Compromise and Settlement § 29; Insurance §§ 1465, 1467.]

LOANSHARKING

loansharking, n. The practice of lending money at excessive and esp. usurious rates, and often threatening or using extortion to enforce repayment. — Also termed extortionate credit transaction.

— loan-shark,vb. — loan shark,n.

LOAN SOCIETY

loan society.English law. A club organized to collect deposits from and make loans to industrial workers. • The loan societies were forerunners of the American savings-and-loan associations.

LOAN-TO-VALUE RATIO

loan-to-value ratio.The ratio, usu. expressed as a percentage, between the amount of a mortgage loan and the value of the property pledged as security for the mortgage. • For example, an $80,000 loan on property worth $100,000 results in a loan-to-value ratio of 80% — which is usu. the highest ratio that lenders will agree to without requiring the debtor to buy mortgage insurance. — Often shortened to LTV ratio. — Also termed loan ratio. [Cases: Mortgages 145. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 198, 200.]

LOAN VALUE

loan value.Insurance. 1. The maximum amount that may be lent safely on property or life insurance without jeopardizing the lender's need for protection from the borrower's default. 2. The amount of money an insured can borrow against the cash value of his or her life-insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance 1868. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 352–356.]

LOBBY

lobby,vb.1. To talk with a legislator, sometimes in a luxurious setting, in an attempt to influence the legislator's vote <she routinely lobbies for tort reform in the state legislature>. [Cases: Statutes 24. C.J.S. Statutes § 7.] 2. To support or oppose (a measure) by working to influence a legislator's vote <the organization lobbied the bill through the Senate>.3. To try to influence (a decision-maker) <the lawyer lobbied the judge for a favorable ruling>. — lobbying,n. — lobbyist,n.

LOBBYING ACT

lobbying act.A federal or state law governing the conduct of lobbyists, usu. by requiring them to register and file reports. • An example is the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act, 12 USCA § 261. [Cases: Statutes 24.C.J.S. Statutes § 7.]

LOCAL-EXCHANGE CARRIER

local-exchange carrier. Telecommunications law. An entity that provides telephone service, usu. on a local basis, through a local-exchange network. 47 USCA § 153(26). — Abbr. LEC. See LOCAL-EXCHANGE NETWORK. [Cases: Telecommunications 46, 267, 323. C.J.S.

Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television §§ 31–32.]

LOCAL-EXCHANGE NETWORK

local-exchange network. Telecommunications law. A system for providing telephone service on a local basis. • A local-exchange network usu. consists of such elements as switches, local loops, and transport trunks, and capabilities such as billing databases and operator services. Switches are pieces of equipment that direct calls to the appropriate destination. Local loops are the wires that connect telephones to the switches. Transport trunks are the wires that carry calls from switch to switch. All the elements of a local-exchange network are often referred to as a bundle, and there are federal requirements that a local-exchange carrier who controls a local-exchange network permit competition by selling some access, including unbundled access, to its local-exchange network. 47 USCA § 251(c). See LOCAL-EXCHANGE CARRIER; UNBUNDLING RULES. [Cases: Telecommunications 46, 267, 323. C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television §§ 31–32.]

LOCALITY

locality, n. 1. A definite region; vicinity; neighborhood; community. 2. Hist. Scots law. The land held by a widow in usufruct under the terms of her marriage contract. • If a widow has locality lands, she cannot assert her statutory claim to a one-third share of her husband's real property.

LOCALITY OF A LAWSUIT

locality of a lawsuit. The place where a court may exercise judicial authority.

LOCALITY-PLUS TEST

locality-plus test. Maritime law. The requirement that, for a federal court to exercise admiralty tort jurisdiction, not only must the alleged wrong occur on navigable waters, it must also relate to a traditional maritime activity. Executive Jet Aviation, Inc. v. Cleveland, 409 U.S. 249, 93 S.Ct. 493 (1972). — Also termed locality-plus rule; maritime-connection doctrine. [Cases: Admiralty 17. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 62–63.]

LOCALITY RULE

locality rule. 1. The doctrine that, in a professional-malpractice suit, the standard of care to be applied to the professional's conduct is the reasonable care exercised by similar professionals in the same vicinity and professional community. [Cases: Health 620.]

“With respect to medical doctors (and sometimes dentists and others), the standard of care has been further limited by the so-called ‘locality rule.’ A physician historically was required only to possess and apply the knowledge and use the skill and care that is ordinarily used by reasonably well-qualified physicians in the locality in which he practices, or, usually, in ‘similar localities.’ This frequently made it difficult or impossible for a plaintiff to prove the applicable standard since other doctors in the same locality are notoriously reluctant to testify against their professional colleagues. However, with the advent of improved communication and continuing medical education, the reason for the rule has abated, and today the trend is toward its abolition.” Edward J. Kionka, Torts in a Nutshell 270–71 (2d ed. 1992).

2. The doctrine that, in determining the appropriate amount of attorney's fees to be awarded in a suit, the proper basis is the rate charged by similar attorneys for similar work in the vicinity. [Cases: Costs 194.18; Federal Civil Procedure 2737.4. C.J.S. Costs § 132.]

locality test. Maritime law. The requirement that, for a federal court to exercise admiralty tort jurisdiction, the alleged wrong must have occurred on navigable waters. • The test was replaced by the locality-plus test in Executive Jet Aviation, Inc. v. Cleveland, 409 U.S. 249, 93 S.Ct. 493 (1972). — Also termed locality rule. See LOCALITY-PLUS TEST.

LOCALIZATION DOCTRINE

localization doctrine. The doctrine that a foreign corporation, by doing sufficient business in a state, will subject itself to that state's laws. [Cases: Corporations 638. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 893–896.]

LOCAL LAW

local law. 1. A statute that relates to or operates in a particular locality rather than the entire state. 2. A statute that applies to particular persons or things rather than an entire class of persons or things. — Also termed (in senses 1 & 2) local act; local statute. [Cases: Statutes 76–104. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 148–149, 151–155, 159, 162–201.] 3. The law of a particular jurisdiction, as opposed to the law of a foreign state. — Also termed internal law. 4. Conflict of laws. The body of standards, principles, and rules — excluding conflict-of-laws rules — that the state courts apply to controversies before them. Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 4(1) (1971). [Cases: Action 17. C.J.S. Actions §§ 18–20; Conflict of Laws §§ 2–3, 12, 15, 20, 23, 27–32, 34–40, 42–48, 50–65, 96–97, 100, 102, 105–107.]

LOCAL-LAW THEORY

local-law theory. Conflict of laws. The view that, although a court of the forum recognizes and enforces a local right (that is, one created under its own law), in a foreign-element case it does not necessarily apply the rule that would govern an analogous case of a purely domestic character, but instead takes into account the law of the foreign country by fashioning a local right as nearly as possible upon the law of the country in which the decisive facts have occurred. • This theory is credited to Walter Wheeler Cook, who expounded it in the first chapter of his Logical and Legal Bases of the Conflict of Laws (1949).

“Since the court of the forum adopts the view that the chosen law would have taken not of the actual case, but of an equivalent domestic case, it does not necessarily recognize the right that would have been vested in the plaintiff according to that law.... It is scarcely deniable, however, that this local law theory is little more than what a learned writer has stigmatized as a sterile truism — sterile because it affords no basis for the systematic development of private international law. To remind an English judge, about to try a case containing a foreign element, that whatever decision he gives he must enforce only the lex fori, is a technical quibble that explains nothing and solves nothing. It provides no guidance whatever upon the limits within which he must have regard to the foreign law.” G.C. Cheshire, Private International Law 35 (6th ed. 1961).

LOCAL OPTION

local option. An option that allows a municipality or other governmental unit to determine a particular course of action without the specific approval of state officials. — Also termed local veto. Cf. HOME RULE. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors 24–43; Municipal Corporations 65. C.J.S. Intoxicating Liquors §§ 49–89; Municipal Corporations §§ 122, 140–141, 143.]

LOCATARIUS

locatarius (loh-k<<schwa>>-tair-ee-<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin] Hist. A person with whom something is deposited; a deposittee.

LOCATIO

locatio (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Roman & civil law. Any contract by which the use of the thing bailed, or the use of the labor or services, is agreed to be given for a compensation. • This type of contract benefits both parties. — Also termed lease; hiring. Cf. ABLOCATION. Pl. locationes (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh-nee-z).

locatio conductio (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh k<<schwa>>n-duk-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. A letting for hire; specif., a contract by which one person agreed to give to another the use, or the use and enjoyment, of a thing or of services or labor in return for remuneration, usu. money. • In Roman law, it covered a broad range of circumstances in return for a merces or rent.

locatio custodiae (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh k<<schwa>>s-toh-dee-ee). [Latin] Roman law. The hiring of care or service, as when the bailee is to protect the thing bailed.

locatio mercium vehendarum. See locatio operis mercium vehendarum.

locatio operarum (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh op-<<schwa>>-rair-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “the letting of services”] Roman & civil law. A contract of employment; specif., contract in which someone, usu. a day laborer, hires out his services for a specified price. — Also termed locatio operis faciendi. Cf. REDEMPTIO OPERIS.

locatio operis faciendi (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh op-<<schwa>>-ris fay-shee-en-di). [Latin “the letting of a job to be done”] Roman law. A contract by which someone hires a contractor (conductor) to undertake work (e.g., to build a home or teach a slave to read) on behalf of the hirer. — Sometimes shortened to locatio operis. Cf. locatio operarum.

locatio operis mercium vehendarum (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh op-<<schwa>>-ris m<<schwa>>-r-shee-<<schwa>>m vee-h<<schwa>>n-dair-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “the letting of the job of carrying goods”] Roman law. A bailment in which goods are delivered to the bailee for transport elsewhere, esp. by sea. — Also termed locatio mercium vehendarum.

locatio rei (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh ree-I). [Latin “letting of a thing”] Roman law. The hiring of a thing for use, by which the hirer gains the temporary use of the thing for a fee.

“Locatio rei was the letting of a res for hire. Roman law differed in several aspects from the relevant rules of English law. Firstly, there was not in Roman law a fundamental distinction between the hiring of personal property and the lease of real property: locatio rei applied both to land and movables. Secondly, in Roman law the hirer did not obtain possession. Thirdly, the locatio was a mere contract and even the tenant of land did not have a right to be restored if he were [wrongfully] ejected, his sole remedy being an action for breach of contract. Fourthly, the Roman contract gave more consideration to the tenant or hirer than does English law.” G.W. Paton, Bailment in the Common Law 53 (1952).

LOCATION

location. 1. The specific place or position of a person or thing. 2. The act or process of locating. 3. Real estate. The designation of the boundaries of a particular piece of land, either on the record or on the land itself. [Cases: Boundaries 7–9. C.J.S. Boundaries §§ 10–23.] 4. Mining law. The act of appropriating a mining claim. See MINING CLAIM. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 9–38. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 13, 26–93, 95–110, 112, 131.] 5. The claim so appropriated. — Also termed (in senses 4 & 5) mining location. 6. Civil law. A contract for the temporary use of something for hire; a leasing for hire. See LOCATIO.

LOCATION-DAMAGE CLAUSE

location-damage clause. See SURFACE-DAMAGE CLAUSE.

LOCATIVE CALLS

locative calls (lok-<<schwa>>-tiv). Property. In land descriptions, specific descriptions that fix the boundaries of the land. • Locative calls may be marks of location, landmarks, or other physical objects. If calls in a description conflict, locative calls control over those indicating a general area of a boundary. See CALL(5); DIRECTORY CALL. [Cases: Boundaries 1–23. C.J.S. Boundaries §§ 2–61.]

LOCATOR

locator (loh-kay-t<<schwa>>r), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. (usu. ital.) One who lets out property or services for reward, or who contracts to have another person (the conductor) perform work for reward; a lessor or landlord. See CONDUCTOR(2).

LOCKED-IN RATE

locked-in rate.See lock rate under INTEREST RATE.

LOCKOUT

lockout. 1. An employer's withholding of work and closing of a business because of a labor dispute. [Cases: Labor Relations 290. C.J.S. Labor Relations §§ 273–274, 277–278.]

defensive lockout. A lockout that is called to prevent imminent and irreparable financial harm to the company or to protect a legal right. • Defensive lockouts were legal, but the U.S. Supreme Court abolished the distinction between defensive and offensive lockouts in favor of a balancing test. American Ship Bldg. Co. v. NLRB, 380 U.S. 300, 85 S.Ct. 955 (1965).

offensive lockout. A lockout called by management to assert economic pressure on workers and thereby gain a bargaining advantage over a union. • Offensive lockouts were illegal before the U.S. Supreme Court abolished the legal distinction between offensive and defensive lockouts in favor of a balancing test. American Ship Bldg. Co. v. NLRB, 380 U.S. 300, 85 S.Ct. 955 (1965).

2. Loosely, an employee's refusal to work because the employer unreasonably refuses to abide by an expired employment contract while a new one is being negotiated. Cf. STRIKE; BOYCOTT; PICKETING.

[Cases: Corporations 312(5). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 500–501, 503, 524.]

LOCO PARENTIS

loco parentis. See IN LOCO PARENTIS.

LOCO RERUM IMMOBILIUM

loco rerum immobilium (loh-koh reer-*<<schwa>>m im-<<schwa>>-bil-ee-<<schwa>>*m). [Latin] Scots law. Treated as immovable things. • The phrase appeared in reference to a determination of whether certain items (such as shares of stock) should be treated as movable or immovable property.

LOCO TUTORIS

loco tutoris (loh-koh t[y]oo-tor-is). [Latin] Scots law. In the place of a tutor.

“The Court of Session is in the practice of appointing, on application made for such appointment, a factor loco tutoris on the estates of pupils not having tutors. Such an appointment places the factor in the same position towards the pupil, both as regards his person and the administration of his estate, as if he held the office by virtue of relationship and was tutor-at-law, or had received the appointment of tutor from the pupil's father under his testamentary settlement, the only difference being that the office of a tutor appointed by the Court is not gratuitous." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 336–37 (4th ed. 1894).

LOCUM TENENS

locum tenens (loh-k<<schwa>>m tee-nenz orten-<<schwa>>nz), n.[Law Latin “holding the place”] Hist. A deputy; a substitute; a representative.

LOCUS CONTRACTUS

locus contractus (loh-k<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>n-trak-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin “place of the contract”] The place where a contract was made. Cf. LEX LOCI CONTRACTUS . [Cases: Contracts 144, 145. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 91–93; Contracts §§ 13–23, 25, 372.]

LOCUS CRIMINIS

locus criminis (loh-k<<schwa>>s krim-<<schwa>>-nis), n.[Latin] The place where a crime was committed.

LOCUS DELICTI

locus delicti (loh-k<<schwa>>s d<<schwa>>-lik-tl). [Latin “place of the wrong”] The place where an offense was committed; the place where the last event necessary to make the actor liable occurred. Cf. LEX LOCI DELICTI. [Cases: Torts 2. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace § 272; Conflict of Laws §§ 16–17, 99; Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 3, 40; Torts §§ 27–29.]

“When a statute does not indicate where Congress considered the place of committing the crime to be, the site or locus delicti must be determined from the nature of the crime and the location of the acts or omissions constituting the offense.” United States v. Clinton, 574 F.2d 464, 465 (9th Cir. 1978).

LOCUS IN QUO

locus in quo (loh-k<<schwa>>s in kwoh). [Latin “place in which”] The place where something is alleged to have occurred.

LOCUS POENITENTIAE

locus poenitentiae (loh-k<<schwa>>s pen-<<schwa>>-ten-shee-ee). [Latin “place of repentance”] 1. A point at which it is not too late for one to change one's legal position; the possibility of withdrawing from a contemplated course of action, esp. a wrong, before being committed to it.

“The requirement of an overt act before conspirators can be prosecuted and punished exists ... to provide a locus poenitentiae an opportunity for the conspirators to reconsider, terminate the agreement, and thereby avoid punishment.” People v. Zamora, 557 P.2d 75, 82 (Cal. 1976).

2. The opportunity to withdraw from a negotiation before finally concluding the contract. [Cases: Contracts 138(3). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 280–281, 283, 290.]

locus publicus (loh-k<<schwa>>s p<<schwa>>b-li-k<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. A public place.

“Locus publicus A parcel of public land. It is property of the Roman people and is protected by various interdicts ... against violation by private individuals who might endanger its public character or its use by the people.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 568 (1953).

LOCUS REGIT ACTUM

locus regit actum (loh-k<<schwa>>s ree-jit ak-t<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin “the place rules the act”] Int'l law. The rule that a transaction complying with the legal formalities of the country where it is created will be considered valid in the country where it is to be effective, even if that country requires additional formalities.

LOCUS REI SITAE

locus rei sitae (loh-k<<schwa>>s ree-IsI-tee), n.[Latin “place where a thing is situated”] Civil law. The rule that the place where the land is located is the proper forum in a case involving real estate.

LOCUS SIGILLI

locus sigilli (loh-k<<schwa>>s si-jil-I), n.[Latin] The place of the seal. • Today this phrase is almost always abbreviated “L.S.” These are the traditional letters appearing on many notarial certificates to indicate where the notary public's embossed seal should be placed. If a rubber-stamp seal is used, it should be placed near but not over this abbreviation. See NOTARY SEAL . [Cases: Seals 3. C.J.S. Seals § 4.]

“For some period in history seals were required to consist of wax affixed to the parchment or paper on which the terms of the instrument were written. The wax was required to have an identifiable impression made upon it. Usually this was made by a signet ring. In time when ordinary people, who did not have signet rings, learned to read and write, it was to be expected that substitutes for the traditional seal would be accepted by the law. Thus, today it would be generally accurate to say that a seal may consist of wax, a gummed wafer, an impression on the paper, the word ‘seal,’ the letters ‘L.S.’ (locus sigilli) or even a pen scratch.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 7-3, at 296 (3d ed. 1987).

LOCUS SOLUTIONIS

lodestar. 1. A guiding star; an inspiration or model. 2. A reasonable amount of attorney's fees in a given case, usu. calculated by multiplying a reasonable number of hours worked by the prevailing hourly rate in the community for similar work, and often considering such additional factors as the degree of skill and difficulty involved in the case, the degree of its urgency, its novelty, and the like. • Most statutes that authorize an award of attorney's fees use the lodestar method for computing the award. [Cases: Costs 194.18; Federal Civil Procedure 2737.4. C.J.S. Costs § 132.]

lodge. See FILE(1).

LODGER

lodger. 1. A person who rents and occupies a room in another's house. [Cases: Innkeepers 8; Landlord and Tenant 1. C.J.S. Inns, Hotels and Eating Places § 5; Landlord and Tenant §§ 1, 2(1, 2), 6(1), 7, 202(5).] 2. LOGIA logia (loj-ee-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] Hist. A small house or cottage.

LOGICAL-CAUSE DOCTRINE logical-cause doctrine. The principle that, if the plaintiff proves that an injury occurred and proves a logical cause of it, a party desiring to defeat the claim cannot succeed merely by showing that there is another imaginable cause, but must also show that the alternative cause is more probable than the cause shown by the plaintiff. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 1356. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 960, 974.]

LOGICAL INTERPRETATION logical interpretation. See INTERPRETATION.

LOGICAL POSITIVISM

logical positivism. A philosophical system or movement requiring that meaningful statements be in principle verifiable. Cf. LEGAL POSITIVISM.

LOGICAL-RELATIONSHIP STANDARD logical-relationship standard. Civil procedure. A test applied to determine whether a defendant's counterclaim is compulsory, by examining whether both claims are based on the same operative facts or whether those facts activate additional rights, otherwise dormant, for the defendant. • One of the most important factors considered is whether hearing the claims together would promote judicial economy and efficiency. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 776; Set-off and Counterclaim 60.C.J.S. Set-off and Counterclaim §§ 102–103.]

“[U]nder the fourth test — frequently referred to as the ‘logical relationship’ standard — the principal consideration in determining whether a counterclaim is compulsory rests on the efficiency or economy of trying the counterclaim in the same litigation as the main claim. As a result, the convenience of the court, rather than solely the counterclaim's relationship to the facts or issues of the opposing claim, is controlling. The hallmark of this approach is flexibility. Although the fourth test has been criticized for being overly broad in scope and uncertain in application, it has by far the widest acceptance among the courts.” Jack H. Friedenthal et al., Civil Procedure § 6.7, at 352 (2d ed. 1993).

LOGIC BOMB

logic bomb. Destructive or disruptive computer software that is planted on a computer, server, or network and waits until a certain time to activate itself.

LOGOGRAPHUS logographus (log-<<schwa>>-graf-<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin fr. Greek] Roman law. A bookkeeper or public clerk.

LOGROLLING

logrolling, n. 1. The exchanging of political favors; esp., the trading of votes among legislators to gain support of measures that are beneficial to each legislator's constituency. 2. The legislative practice of including several propositions in one measure or proposed constitutional amendment so that the legislature or voters will pass all of them, even though these propositions might not have passed if they had been submitted separately. • Many state constitutions have single-subject clauses that prohibit this practice. [Cases: Constitutional Law 9(1); Statutes 107.C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 13–14; Statutes § 208.] — logroll, vb.

LOI

LOI. abbr. LETTER OF INTENT.

LOITERING

loitering, n. The criminal offense of remaining in a certain place (such as a public street) for no apparent reason. • Loitering statutes are generally held to be unconstitutionally vague. Cf. VAGRANCY. [Cases: Disorderly Conduct 1; Vagrancy 1. C.J.S. Disorderly Conduct §§ 2–5; Vagrancy §§ 2–12, 22–27, 31–32, 35–37.] — loiter, vb.

LONDON INTERBANK OFFERED RATE

London Interbank Offered Rate.A daily compilation by the British Bankers Association of the rates that major international banks charge each other for large-volume, short-term loans of Eurodollars, with monthly maturity rates calculated out to one year. • These daily rates are used as the underlying interest rates for derivative contracts in currencies other than the euro. — Abbr. LIBOR. Cf. EURO INTERBANK OFFERED RATE.

LONDON LLOYD'S

London Lloyd's.See LLOYD'S OF LONDON.

LONE PINE ORDER

Lone Pine order. A case-management order in a toxic-tort lawsuit involving many plaintiffs, establishing procedures and deadlines for discovery, including requiring the plaintiffs to timely produce evidence and expert opinions to substantiate each plaintiff's exposure to the hazardous substance, the injury suffered, and the cause of the injury. Lore v. Lone Pine Corp., No. L-33606-85 (N.J. Super. Ct. Nov. 18, 1986). • Although the Lone Pine opinion is unreported, it has become famous for the kind of case-management order involved, in part because the plaintiffs' claims were dismissed for failure to timely provide expert opinions. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1925.1; Pretrial Procedure 747.1. C.J.S. Trial § 47.]

LONG

long,adj.1. Holding a security or commodity in anticipation of a rise in price .2. Of or relating to a purchase of securities or commodities in anticipation of rising prices . Cf. SHORT.

LONG-RUN INCREMENTAL COST

long-run incremental cost. Antitrust. A cost threshold for determining whether predatory pricing has occurred, consisting of all costs that, over a several-year period, would not be incurred if the product in question were not offered. • It differs from average variable cost because it includes some costs that do not vary in the short run but that do vary over a longer period, depending on whether a particular product is offered. — Abbr. LRIC. Cf. AVERAGE VARIABLE COST.

LONGSHORE AND HARBOR WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT

Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act. A federal law designed to provide workers'-compensation benefits to persons, other than seamen, who work in maritime occupations, esp. stevedoring and ship service. 33 USCA §§ 901–950. — Abbr. LHWCA. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 93, 260, 2085. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 96, 98–99, 170, 1593–1596.]

“Employees who are engaged in maritime-related activities but who do not qualify as ‘seamen’ may be classified as ‘maritime workers’ entitled to the benefits provided by the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act Persons covered by the act, which has the attributes of the usual workers' compensation law, include (1) employees injured on the Outer Continental Shelf in the course of mineral exploration and production activities, and (2) employees within American territorial waters who fall within the Congressional definition of a ‘maritime worker,’ and who are injured on ‘navigable waters.’” Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 44 (2d ed. 1988).
