LOOSELEAF SERVICE

looseleaf service. A type of lawbook having pages that are periodically replaced with updated pages, designed to cope with constant change and increasing bulk.

“The first loose leaf service covered the federal income tax, and was published in 1913 shortly after the Federal Income Tax Law of 1913 went into effect. It was followed in 1914 by a service reporting on the activities of the Federal Trade Commission, which had just been established. The loose leaf method was, therefore, first used as a means of reporting new tax and business laws which were to be subject to administrative interpretation These first loose leaf services were designed ... not to reprint just the bare text of the revenue and commission acts, but to follow up and report each new development on these new laws as it occurred.” Arthur Sydney Beardsley, Legal Bibliography and the Use of Law Books § 185, at 313–314 (1937).

Cf. ADVOCATE GENERAL .

LORD-AND-MASTER RULE

lord-and-master rule.See HEAD-AND-MASTER RULE.

LORD CAMPBELL'S ACT

Lord Campbell's Act. 1. The 1846 English statute that created a wrongful-death claim for the relatives of a decedent when the decedent would have had a claim if he or she had been merely injured and not killed. • Technically known as the Fatal Accidents Act of 1846, this statute changed the earlier rule, under which a tortfeasor who would have been liable to another escaped liability if the victim died. Cf. WRONGFUL-DEATH ACTION.

“The common law not only denied a tort recovery for injury once the tort victim had died, it also refused to recognize any new and independent cause of action in the victim's dependents or heirs for their own loss at his death.... The result was that it was cheaper for the defendant to kill the plaintiff than to injure him, and that the most grievous of all injuries left the bereaved family of the victim, who frequently were destitute, without a remedy. Since this was intolerable, it was changed in England by the passage of the Fatal Accidents Act of 1846, otherwise known as Lord Campbell's Act, which has become a generic name for similar statutes.” W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 127, at 945 (5th ed. 1984).

2. An American state's wrongful-death statute patterned after the original English act.

LOSER-PAYS RULE

loser-pays rule. See ENGLISH RULE.

LOSS

actual loss. A loss resulting from the real and substantial destruction of insured property.

actual total loss. 1. See total loss. 2. Marine insurance. The total loss of a vessel covered by an insurance policy (1) by its real and substantive destruction, (2) by injuries that destroy its existence as a distinct individual of a particular class, (3) by its being reduced to a wreck irretrievably beyond repair, or (4) by its being placed beyond the insured's control and beyond the insured's power of recovery. [Cases: Insurance 2235. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1195–1196, 1216–1217.]

capital loss.The loss realized upon selling or exchanging a capital asset. Cf. CAPITAL GAIN.

casualty loss.For tax purposes, the total or partial destruction of an asset resulting from an unexpected or unusual event, such as an automobile accident or a tornado. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3416; Taxation 1039.]

consequential loss.A loss arising from the results of damage rather than from the damage itself. • A consequential loss is proximate when the natural and probable effect of the wrongful conduct, under the circumstances, is to set in operation the intervening cause from which the loss directly results. When the loss is not the natural and probable effect of the wrongful conduct, the loss is remote. — Also termed indirect loss; consequential injury. Cf. direct loss. [Cases: Damages 15–23. C.J.S. Damages §§ 21–37.]

disaster loss.A casualty loss sustained in a geographic area that the President designates as a disaster area. • It may be treated as having occurred during the previous tax year so that a victim may receive immediate tax benefits.

economic loss.See ECONOMIC LOSS.

extraordinary loss.A loss that is both unusual and infrequent, such as a loss resulting from a natural disaster.

general average loss.Marine underwriting. A loss at sea usu. incurred when cargo is thrown overboard to save the ship; a loss due to the voluntary and intentional sacrifice of part of a venture (usu. cargo) to save the rest of the venture from imminent peril. • Such a loss is borne equally by all the interests concerned in the venture. See AVERAGE(3). [Cases: Insurance 2240. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1198, 1206.]

hobby loss.A nondeductible loss arising from a personal hobby, as contrasted with an activity engaged in for profit. • The law generally presumes that an activity is engaged in for profit if profits are earned during at least three of the last five years. IRC (26 USCA) § 183. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3396, 3397.]

long-term capital loss.A loss on a capital asset held for an extended period, usu. at least 12 months. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3260. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 127.]

net loss. The excess of all expenses and losses over all revenues and gains.

net operating loss. The excess of operating expenses over revenues, the amount of which can be deducted from gross income if other deductions do not exceed gross income. — Abbr. NOL. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3399. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 200.]

ordinary loss. Tax. A loss incurred from the sale or exchange of an item that is used in a trade or business. • The loss is deductible from ordinary income, and thus is more beneficial to the taxpayer than a capital loss.

out-of-pocket loss. The difference between the value of what the buyer paid and the market value of what was received in return. • In breach-of-contract cases, out-of-pocket loss is used to measure restitution damages. [Cases: Fraud 59(3).]

paper loss. A loss that is realized only by selling something (such as a security) that has decreased in market value. — Also termed unrealized loss.

partial loss. A loss of part of the insured property; damage not amounting to a total loss. Cf. total loss. [Cases: Insurance 2177. C.J.S. Insurance § 1104.]

particular average loss. Marine underwriting. A loss suffered by and borne alone by particular interests in a maritime venture. • Such a loss is usu. a partial loss. [Cases: Insurance 2241. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1199–1203, 1208, 1211–1214.]

passive loss. A loss, with limited tax deductibility, from an activity in which the taxpayer does not materially participate, from a rental activity, or from a tax-shelter activity. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3418. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 199.]

progressive loss. 1. Loss that spreads or becomes more expensive to repair over time. 2. Late-manifesting harm that is related to an event that caused immediate harm, worsens over time, and is not catalyzed by any additional causative agent. • A classic example is asbestosis, a disease that manifests long after exposure to asbestos fibers.

recognized loss. Tax. The portion of a loss that is subject to income taxation. IRC (26 USCA) § 1001(c).

salvage loss. 1. Generally, a loss that presumptively would have been a total loss if certain services had not been rendered. 2. Marine underwriting. The difference between the salvage value, less the salvage charges, and the original value of the insured property. [Cases: Insurance 2233.]

total loss. The complete destruction of insured property so that nothing of value remains and the subject matter no longer exists in its original form. • Generally, a loss is total if, after the damage occurs, no substantial remnant remains standing that a reasonably prudent uninsured owner, desiring to rebuild, would use as a basis to restore the property to its original condition. —

Also termed actual total loss. Cf. partial loss; constructive total loss. [Cases: Insurance 2175. C.J.S. Insurance § 1103.]

unrealized loss. See paper loss.

LOSS CARRYBACK

loss carryback. See CARRYBACK.

LOSS CARRYFORWARD loss carryforward. See CARRYOVER.

LOSS CARRYOVER

loss carryover. See CARRYOVER.

LOSS INSURANCE

loss insurance. See INSURANCE.

LOSS LEADER

loss leader. A good or commodity sold at a very low price, usu. below cost, to attract customers to buy other items. — Sometimes shortened to leader. See BAIT AND SWITCH.

LOSS-OF-BARGAIN DAMAGES

loss-of-bargain damages. See benefit-of-the-bargain damages under DAMAGES.

LOSS-OF-BARGAIN RULE

loss-of-bargain rule. The doctrine that damages for a breach of a contract should put the injured party in the position it would have been in if both parties had performed their contractual duties. [Cases: Damages 117, 120(1). C.J.S. Damages §§ 108–110.]

acts, a wife's action for negligent impairment of consortium was first recognized. Hitaffer v. Argonne Co., 183 F.2d 811 (D.C. Cir. 1950). Today 48 states and the District of Columbia recognize both a husband's and a wife's right to sue for loss of consortium (Utah and Virginia do not). [Cases: Husband and Wife 209(3, 4).] 2. A similar loss of benefits that one is entitled to receive from a parent or child. See CONSORTIUM.

LOSS-OF-USE EXCLUSION

loss-of-use exclusion. See failure-to-perform exclusion under EXCLUSION(3).

LOSS-PAYABLE CLAUSE

loss payee. Insurance. A person or entity named in an insurance policy (under a loss-payable clause) to be paid if the insured property suffers a loss. [Cases: Insurance 3450. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1404, 1520.]

loss ratio. 1. Insurance. The ratio between premiums paid and losses incurred during a given period. [Cases: Insurance 1540. C.J.S. Insurance § 65.] 2. A bank's loan losses compared to its loan assets; a business's receivable losses compared to its receivables.

LOSS RESERVE

LOST

lost, adj. 1. (Of property) beyond the possession and custody of its owner and not locatable by diligent search <lost at sea> <lost papers>. 2. (Of a person) missing <lost child>. 3. Parliamentary law. (Of a motion) rejected; not adopted <the motion is lost>.

LOST-CHANCE DOCTRINE

lost-chance doctrine. 1. LOSS-OF-CHANCE DOCTRINE. 2. A rule permitting a claim, in limited circumstances, against someone who fails to come to the aid of a person who is in imminent danger of being injured or killed. Cf. GOOD SAMARITAN DOCTRINE .

LOST CORNER

lost corner. See CORNER.

lost earning capacity. A person's diminished earning power resulting from an injury. • This impairment is recoverable as an element of damages in a tort action. Cf. lost earnings under EARNINGS. [Cases: Damages 38.C.J.S. Damages § 56.]

“To some extent the phrases ‘loss of earnings’ and ‘loss of earning capacity’ are used interchangeably. But the preferred view is that they are different concepts. The former covers real loss which can be proved at the trial; the latter covers loss of the chances of getting equivalent work in the future.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 572 (17th ed. 1977).

LOST EARNINGS

lost earnings. See EARNINGS.

LOST-EXPECTATION DAMAGES

lost-expectation damages. See expectation damages under DAMAGES.

LOST OR NOT LOST

LOST PROFITS

lost profits. 1. Contracts. A measure of damages that allows a seller to collect the profits that would have been made on the sale if the buyer had not breached. UCC § 2-708(2). [Cases: Damages 40; Sales 384(1). C.J.S. Damages §§ 58–61; Sales §§ 363, 365–366.] 2. Patents. A measure of damages set by estimating the net amount lost by a plaintiff-inventor because of the infringing defendant's actions. • The plaintiff can ask for a lost-profits recovery by showing that the patent is in demand, that the plaintiff is able to meet demand, and that there are no acceptable alternatives on the market. [Cases: Patents 318. C.J.S. Patents §§ 561–562.]

lost property. See PROPERTY.

LOST-SALES-OF-UNPATENTED-ITEMS THEORY

lost-sales-of-unpatented-items theory. Patents. A theory of lost-profits remedy whereby compensation is sought for sales of unpatented items that the plaintiff would have sold along with patented items but for the defendant's infringement.

LOST-VOLUME SELLER

lost-volume seller. A seller of goods who, after a buyer has breached a sales contract, resells the goods to a different buyer who would have bought identical goods from the seller's inventory even if the original buyer had not breached. • Such a seller is entitled to lost profits, rather than contract price less market price, as damages from the original buyer's breach. UCC § 2-708(2). [Cases: Sales 384(1, 7). C.J.S. Sales §§ 363, 365–366.]

lost will. See WILL.

LOT

lot. 1. A tract of land, esp. one having specific boundaries or being used for a given purpose.

minimum lot. A lot that has the least amount of square footage allowed by a local zoning law. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 63, 254. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 48–49, 116.]

nonconforming lot. A previously lawful lot that now violates a newly adopted or an amended zoning ordinance. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 321. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 154–155, 157–159.]

2. An article that is the subject of a separate sale, lease, or delivery, whether or not it is sufficient to perform the contract. UCC §§ 2-105(5), 2A-103(1)(s). 3. A specified number of shares or a specific quantity of a commodity designated for trading.

round lot. The established unit of trading for stocks and bonds. • A round lot of stock is usu. 100 shares, and a round lot of bonds is usu. $1,000 or $5,000 par value. — Also termed even lot; board lot.

lot and scot. Hist. A collection of duties paid by voters before voting in certain cities and boroughs.

LOT LINE

lot line. A land boundary that separates one tract from another <from the street to the alley, the lot line is 150 feet>.

LOTTERY

lottery. A method of raising revenues, esp. state-government revenues, by selling tickets and giving prizes (usu. large cash prizes) to those who hold tickets with winning numbers that are drawn at random. — Also termed lotto. [Cases: Lotteries 3. C.J.S. Lotteries §§ 2–7, 11.]

Dutch lottery. A lottery in which tickets are drawn from classes, and the number and value of prizes are fixed and increasing with each class. • This type of lottery originated in Holland in the 16th century. — Also termed class lottery.

Genoese lottery (jen-oh-eezor -ees). A lottery in which, out of 90 consecutive numbers, five are drawn by lot, each player wagering that one or more of the numbers they have chosen will be drawn. • This type of lottery originated in Genoa in about 1530. — Also termed number lottery; numerical lottery.

LOVE DAY

love day. See DAY.

LOVELY CLAIM

Lovely claim. Hist. Property. An entitlement to settle on and take ownership of public land in Arkansas, created by the federal government for Lovely County settlers who were displaced by an 1828 treaty that gave the settlers' land to the Cherokee nation. • The term gets its name from Lovely County in the Arkansas territory, which straddled what is now the Oklahoma–Arkansas border. The treaty divided the county, granted the portion west of the Mississippi River to the Cherokee nation, and required the settlers in that territory to relocate. On May 24, 1828, Congress passed an act granting relief to Lovely County settlers who were forced to leave the Cherokee land and granted them land on the eastern side of the river. Lovely claims are found in chains of title in Arkansas.

lucre (loo-k<<schwa>>r), n. Monetary gain; profit.

lucri causa (loo-krIkw-z<<schwa>>). [Latin] For the sake of gain. • Lucri causa was formerly an essential element of larceny, but today the thief's intent to deprive the possessor of property is generally sufficient. See LARCENY.

“ ‘Lucri causa’ literally means for the sake of gain. On rare occasions the suggestion has been made that no taking is with intent to steal unless the thief is motivated by some purpose of gain or advantage. Even those advancing this suggestion have not insisted upon an intent to gain a pecuniary advantage. An intent to take away property and destroy it for the purpose of destroying evidence has been held to be sufficient even by those who have been inclined to insist upon lucri causa as essential to an intent to steal. The generally accepted view does not include this element at all. It regards intent to deprive the owner of his property permanently, or an intent to deal with another's property unlawfully in such a manner as to create an obviously unreasonable risk of permanent deprivation, as all that is required to constitute the animus furandi — or intent to steal.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 332–33 (3d ed. 1982).

LUCRO CAPTANDO

laches (lach-iz). [Law French “remissness; slackness”] 1. Unreasonable delay in pursuing a right or claim — almost always an equitable one — in a way that prejudices the party against whom relief is sought. — Also termed sleeping on rights.

“Early in its history, Chancery developed the doctrine that where the plaintiff in equity delayed beyond the period of the statute applicable at law, relief would be refused on the ground of laches even though no specific prejudice to the defendant was shown. Today, in most states, there are statutes of limitations applying to suits in equity. Despite these, however, the doctrine still holds that even if the delay is for a shorter period of time than that of the statute, it may still bar equitable relief if it is unreasonable and prejudicial to the defendant.” John F. O’Connell, Remedies in a Nutshell 16 (2d ed. 1985).

prosecution laches. Patents. In a claim for patent infringement, the equitable defense that the patentee did not timely enforce the patent rights.

2. The equitable doctrine by which a court denies relief to a claimant who has unreasonably delayed in asserting the claim, when that delay has prejudiced the party against whom relief is sought. Cf. LIMITATION(3). [Cases: Equity 67. C.J.S. Equity §§ 128–132.] “The doctrine of laches ... is an instance of the exercise of the reserved power of equity to withhold relief otherwise regularly given where in the particular case the granting of such relief would be unfair or unjust.” William F. Walsh, A Treatise on Equity 472 (1930).

laesio enormis (lee-shee-oh i-nor-mis). [Law Latin “excessive loss” or “abnormal loss of more than half”] Roman & civil law. 1. The sale of a thing for which the buyer paid less than half its real value. • The seller could rescind the sale, but the buyer could keep the item purchased by paying the full value. Generally, this doctrine was limited to land sales. 2. The injury sustained by one party to an onerous contract when the overreaching party receives twice the value of that party's money or property, such as a purchaser who pays less than half the value of the property sold, or a seller who receives more than double the property's value. • If coowner coheirs partition or sell property, laesio enormis may exist when the purchaser pays less than one-fourth of the value rather than one-half. See La. Civ. Code arts. 824, 1406. — Also spelled lesio enormis. — Also termed lesion; enorm lesion; (in full) laesio enormis vel ultra dimidium (lee-shee-oh i-nor-mis vel <<schwa>>l-tr<<schwa>> di-mid-ee-<<schwa>>m); (in Louisiana) lesion beyond moiety.

“Lesion (laesio enormis) was the rule, established very late, that a seller could rescind a contract if he had received less than half its real value [I]n spite of its imperfections, lesion not only was adopted in all modern civilian systems (French Code Civil 1674–1683), but became the means of testing the validity of contracts generally by their fairness, a principle embodied in the German Civil Code (section 138) and the Swiss Code of Obligations (section 21). Such a test is no more difficult to apply in law than in equity, where it has long been established in our system. As the Romans applied it, it was a clumsy and inadequate way of reaching this result. In modern courts, in civil-law countries, it invests judges with a discretion not very likely to be abused, but sufficient to act as a deterrent to the grosser forms of economic exploitation.” Max Radin, Handbook of Roman Law 233–34 (1927).

land, n. 1. An immovable and indestructible three-dimensional area consisting of a portion of the earth's surface, the space above and below the surface, and everything growing on or permanently affixed to it. 2. An estate or interest in real property. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.]

“In its legal significance, ‘land’ is not restricted to the earth's surface, but extends below and above the surface. Nor is it confined to solids, but may encompass within its bounds such things as gases and liquids. A definition of ‘land’ along the lines of ‘a mass of physical matter occupying space’ also is not sufficient, for an owner of land may remove part or all of that physical matter, as by digging up and carrying away the soil, but would nevertheless retain as part of his ‘land’ the space that remains. Ultimately, as a juristic concept, ‘land’ is simply an area of three-dimensional space, its position being identified by natural or imaginary points located by reference to the earth's surface. ‘Land’ is not the fixed contents of that space, although, as we shall see, the owner of that space may well own those fixed contents. Land is immovable, as distinct from chattels, which are moveable; it is also, in its legal significance, indestructible. The contents of the space may be physically severed, destroyed or consumed, but the space itself, and so the ‘land’, remains immutable.” Peter Butt, Land Law 9 (2d ed. 1988).

accommodation land. Land that is bought by a builder or speculator who erects houses or improvements on it and then leases it at an increased rent.

acquired federal land. (usu. pl.) Federal land that was never in the public domain. See federal land.

acquired land. Land acquired by the government from private hands or from another governmental entity; esp., property acquired by the federal government from private or state ownership. • This term is frequently contrasted with public domain. — Also termed acquired lands. See PUBLIC DOMAIN(1).

“ ‘Acquired lands’ are lands the United States acquired from private or state owners by gift, purchase, exchange, or condemnation. In most but not all cases, such lands actually have been ‘reacquired,’ because the United States previously had purchased or won them from foreign and Indian sovereigns. Distinguishing between lands because of ownership origins that go back over a century is a policy with little to recommend it, but some statutes and judicial opinions maintain the distinction.” George Cameron Coggins, Public Natural Resources Law § 1.02[1] (1990).

arable land (ar-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). Land fit for cultivation. — Formerly also termed araturia; aralia; aratia.

Crown land. Demesne land of the Crown; esp., in England and Canada, land belonging to the sovereign personally, or to the government, as distinguished from land held under private ownership. — Also termed demesne land of the Crown. See demesne land.

demesne land (di-maynor di-meen). Hist. Land reserved by a lord for personal use.

donation land. Land granted from the public domain to an individual as a gift, usu. as a reward for services or to encourage settlement in a remote area. • The term was initially used in Pennsylvania to reward Revolutionary War soldiers. Cf. certificate land. [Cases: Public Lands 45. C.J.S. Public Lands §§ 67–70.]

earned land. Public land that is conveyed by a land patent to a private person who has performed a certain condition, usu. one spelled out in an earlier grant. See PATENT(2).

enclosed land. Land that is actually enclosed and surrounded with fences.

fabric land. Hist. Land given toward the maintenance, repair, or rebuilding of a cathedral or other church. • This term derives from funds given ad fabricam ecclesiae reparandam (“to repair the fabric of the church”).

“Fabrick-Lands are lands given towards the maintenance, rebuilding, or repair of Cathedrals or other churches In antient time almost every one gave by his Will more or less to the Fabrick of the Cathedral or Parish-Church where he liv'd.” Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

fast land. (often pl.) Land that is above the high-water mark and that, when flooded by a government project, is subjected to a governmental taking. • Owners of fast lands are entitled to just compensation for the taking. See TAKING(2). [Cases: Eminent Domain 2(10). C.J.S. Eminent Domain §§ 18, 90–96.]

federal land. (usu. pl.) Land owned by the United States government. • Federal lands are classified as public lands (also termed “lands in the public domain”) or acquired federal lands, depending on how the land was obtained. See acquired federal land.

government land. See public land.

LAND TITLES AND TRANSFER ACT

Land Titles and Transfer Act. Hist. An 1875 statute establishing a registry for titles to real property, and providing for the transfer of lands and recording of those transfers. 38 & 39 Vict., ch. 87. • The act is analogous in some respects to American recording laws, such as those providing for a registry of deeds. A system of title registration superseded this registry system in 1925.

LAND TRUST

land trust. See TRUST.

LAND TRUST CERTIFICATE

land trust certificate. An instrument granting the holder a share of the benefits of property ownership, while the trustee retains legal title. See land trust under TRUST.

LAND-USE PLANNING

land-use planning. The deliberate, systematic development of real estate through methods such as zoning, environmental-impact studies, and the like. — Also spelled landuse planning. — Also termed urban planning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 1. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 2, 5–7, 17–18.]

LAND-USE REGULATION

land-use regulation. An ordinance or other legislative enactment governing the development or use of real estate. — Also spelled landuse regulation. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 1. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 2, 5–7, 17–18.]

“Public regulation of the use and development of land comes in a variety of forms which generally focus on four aspects of land use: (1) the type of use, such as whether it will be used for agricultural, commercial, industrial, or residential purposes; (2) the density of use, manifested in concerns over the height, width, bulk, or environmental impact of the physical structures on the land; (3) the aesthetic impact of the use, which may include the design and placement of structures on the land; and (4) the effect of the particular use of the land on the cultural and social values of the community, illustrated by community conflicts over adult entertainment, housing for service-dependent groups such as low-income families and developmentally disabled persons, and whether the term family should be defined in land use regulations to include persons who are not related by blood or marriage.” Peter W. Salsich Jr., Land Use Regulation 1 (1991).

languidus (lang-gwi-d<<schwa>>s), n.[Law Latin “sick”] Hist. At common law, a return of process made by the sheriff when a defendant whom the sheriff had taken into custody was too sick to be removed.

LANHAM ACT

Lanham Act (lan-<<schwa>>m). A federal trademark statute, enacted in 1946, that provides for a national system of trademark registration and protects the owner of a federally registered mark against the use of similar marks if any confusion might result or if the strength of a strong mark would be diluted. • The Lanham Act's scope is independent of and concurrent with state common law.15 USCA §§ 1051 et seq. — Also termed Federal Trademark Act; Trademark Act of 1946.

lapidation (lap-<<schwa>>-day-sh<<schwa>>n), n. An execution by stoning. — lapidate (lap-<<schwa>>-dayt), vb.

lappage (lap-ij). Interference; lap and overlap; conflict. • Lappage applies when two different owners claim under deeds or grants that, in part, cover the same land.

lapping. An embezzlement technique by which an employee takes funds from one customer's accounts receivable and covers it by using a second customer's payment to pay the first account, then a third customer's payment to pay the second account, and so on. [Cases: Embezzlement 12. C.J.S. Embezzlement § 26.]

lapse,n.1. The termination of a right or privilege because of a failure to exercise it within some time limit or because a contingency has occurred or not occurred. 2.Wills & estates. The failure of a testamentary gift, esp. when the beneficiary dies before the testator dies. See lapse,vb.1. (Of an estate or right) to pass away or revert to someone else because conditions have not been fulfilled or because a person entitled to possession has failed in some duty. See lapsed policy under INSURANCE POLICY. 2. (Of a devise, grant, etc.) to become void.

LAPSED DEVISE

lapsed devise.See DEVISE.

LAPSED LEGACY

lapsed legacy.See LEGACY.

LAPSED POLICY

lapsed policy.See INSURANCE POLICY.

LAPSE PATENT

lapse patent.See PATENT(2).

LAPSE STATUTE

lapse statute.See ANTILAPSE STATUTE.

LAPSUS BONIS

lapsus bonis (lap-s<<schwa>>s boh-nis). [Latin] Scots law. Reduced in worldly circumstances. • The phrase appeared in reference to a person who was having temporary financial difficulties.

LARCENABLE

larcenable (lahr-s<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. Subject to larceny < because it cannot be carried away, real estate is not larcenable>. [Cases: Larceny 4–10. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 2, 3(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7), 13–19, 37–42, 44, 49.]

larcenist,n. One who commits larceny. See LARCENY.

LARCENOUS

larcenous (lahr-s<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>s), adj.1. Of, relating to, or characterized by larceny .2. (Of a person) contemplating or tainted with larceny; thievish .

LARCENOUS INTENT

larcenous intent.See INTENT(1).

LARCENY

larceny (lahr-s<<schwa>>-nee), n. The unlawful taking and carrying away of someone else's personal property with the intent to deprive the possessor of it permanently. • Common-law larceny has been broadened by some statutes to include embezzlement and false pretenses, all three of which are often subsumed under the statutory crime of “theft.” [Cases: Larceny 1.C.J.S. Larceny §§ 1(1, 2), 9.]

“[T]he distinctions between larceny, embezzlement and false pretenses serve no useful purpose in the criminal law but are useless handicaps from the standpoint of the administration of criminal justice. One solution has been to combine all three in one section of the code under the name of ‘larceny.’ This has one disadvantage, however, because it frequently becomes necessary to add a modifier to make clear whether the reference is to common-law larceny or to statutory larceny.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 389 (3d ed. 1982).

aggravated larceny.Larceny accompanied by some aggravating factor (as when the theft is from a person). — Also termed compound larceny. [Cases: Larceny 23. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 60(1, 2, 3), 61–65.]

complicated larceny.See mixed larceny.

compound larceny.1. See aggravated larceny. 2. See mixed larceny.

constructive larceny.Larceny in which the perpetrator's felonious intent to appropriate the goods is construed from the defendant's conduct at the time of asportation, although a felonious intent was not present before that time.

grand larceny.Larceny of property worth more than a statutory cutoff amount, usu. $100. Cf. petit larceny. [Cases: Larceny 23. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 60(1, 2, 3), 61–65.]

larceny by a constructive trespass. Larceny that occurs when a property owner mistakenly gives another person more property than is due, and the recipient knows about the error but does not disclose it before taking the excess property with the intent of converting it to his or her own use.

larceny by bailee. Larceny committed by a bailee who converts the property to personal use or to the use of a third party. [Cases: Embezzlement 16; Larceny 15. C.J.S. Embezzlement § 20; Larceny §§ 30–32, 45–48.]

larceny by fraud and deception. See larceny by trick.

larceny by trick. Larceny in which the taker misleads the rightful possessor, by misrepresentation of fact, into giving up possession of (but not title to) the goods. — Also termed larceny by trick and deception; larceny by trick and device; larceny by fraud and deception. Cf. FALSE PRETENSES; cheating by false pretenses under CHEATING. [Cases: Larceny 14. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 7, 36, 50.]

larceny from the person. Larceny in which the goods are taken directly from the person, but without violence or intimidation, the victim usu. being unaware of the taking. • Pickpocketing is a typical example. This offense is similar to robbery except that violence or intimidation is not involved. Cf. ROBBERY. [Cases: Larceny 19. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 8, 10–11.]

larceny of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake. See theft of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake under THEFT.

mixed larceny. 1. Larceny accompanied by aggravation or violence to the person. Cf. simple larceny. 2. Larceny involving a taking from a house. — Also termed compound larceny; complicated larceny.

petit larceny. Larceny of property worth less than an amount fixed by statute, usu. $100. — Also spelled petty larceny. Cf. grand larceny. [Cases: Larceny 23. C.J.S. Larceny §§ 60(1, 2, 3), 61–65.]

simple larceny. Larceny unaccompanied by aggravating factors; larceny of personal goods unattended by an act of violence. Cf. mixed larceny (1).

LARGER PARCEL

larger parcel. Eminent domain. A portion of land that is not a complete parcel, but is the greater part of a bigger tract, entitling the owner to damages both for the parcel taken and for severance from the larger tract. • To grant both kinds of damages, a court generally requires the owner to show unity of ownership, unity of use, and contiguity of the land. But some states and the federal courts do not require contiguity when there is strong evidence of unity of use. [Cases:

Eminent Domain 96, 135. C.J.S. Eminent Domain §§ 126–127.]

laron (lar-<<schwa>>n), n.[Law French] Hist. A thief.

LARRISON<TT> RULE

Larrison rule (lar-<<schwa>>-s<<schwa>>n).Criminal law. The doctrine that a defendant may be entitled to a new trial on the basis of newly discovered evidence of false testimony by a government witness if the jury might have reached a different conclusion without the evidence and it unfairly surprised the defendant at trial. Larrison v. United States, 24 F.2d 82 (7th Cir. 1928). [Cases: Criminal Law 942. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1451.]

lascivious cohabitation.See illicit cohabitation under COHABITATION.

L'ASSOCIATION LITTERAIRE ET ARTISTIQUE INTERNATIONALE

L'Association Litteraire et Artistique Internationale.Copyright. An organization of authors, artists, and other supporters of international copyright protection. • In 1878, the Association drafted five resolutions that would become the starting point for the Berne Convention. In 1883, the organization called the first meeting in Berne, Switzerland for the purpose of creating a union to enforce international copyrights. — Often shortened to the International Association. — Abbr. ALAI.

LAST

last,n. Hist. 1.A burden. 2. A measure of weight used for bulky commodities.

LAST ANTECEDENT, RULE OF THE last antecedent, rule of the.See RULE OF THE LAST ANTECEDENT.

LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE

last-clear-chance doctrine. Torts. The rule that a plaintiff who was contributorily negligent may nonetheless recover from the defendant if the defendant had the last opportunity to prevent the harm but failed to use reasonable care to do so (in other words, if the defendant's negligence is later in time than the plaintiff's). • This doctrine allows the plaintiff to rebut the contributory-negligence defense in the few jurisdictions where contributory negligence completely bars recovery. — Also termed discovered-peril doctrine; humanitarian doctrine; last-opportunity doctrine; subsequent-negligence doctrine; supervening-negligence doctrine. [Cases: Automobiles 227; Negligence 530, 1297. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 963–970; Negligence §§ 281–290, 313, 318.]

LAST-EMPLOYER RULE

last-employer rule. The doctrine that liability for an occupational injury or illness falls to the employer that exposed the worker to the injurious substance just before the first onset of the disease or injury. — Also termed last-injurious-exposure rule. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 201. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 120, 125–127.]

last heir. Hist. The person — either the lord of the manor or the sovereign — to whom lands come by escheat when there is no lawful heir.

LAST ILLNESS

last illness. The sickness ending in the person's death. — Also termed last sickness.

LAST-IN, FIRST-OUT

last-in, first-out. An accounting method that assumes that the most recent purchases are sold or used first, matching current costs against current revenues. — Abbr. LIFO. Cf. FIRST-IN, FIRST-OUT; NEXT-IN, FIRST-OUT. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3105.1. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 27–29, 31–33.]

LAST-INJURIOUS-EXPOSURE RULE

last-injurious-exposure rule. See LAST-EMPLOYER RULE.

LAST-IN-TIME-MARRIAGE PRESUMPTION

last-in-time-marriage presumption. Family law. A presumption that the most recently contracted marriage is valid. • This presumption generally arises in a situation similar to this: A person, believing himself or herself to be divorced, remarries. This person dies, and the new spouse makes a claim for the decedent's pension benefits. Then a former spouse, claiming that there was never a valid divorce, also claims the right to receive the benefits. The last-in-time-marriage presumption operates so that the former spouse bears the burden of proving that there was no valid divorce.

LAST-LINK DOCTRINE

last-link doctrine. The rule that an attorney need not divulge nonprivileged information if doing so would reveal information protected by the attorney–client privilege, particularly if the information would provide essential evidence to support indicting or convicting the client of a crime. • This doctrine is often relied on as an exception to the rule that a client's identity is not privileged. For example, if divulging the client's name would supply the last link of evidence to indict or convict the client of a crime, the name need not be disclosed. [Cases: Witnesses 201(1). C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 329–330, 332–335, 337–340.]

LAST-OPPORTUNITY DOCTRINE

last-opportunity doctrine. See LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE.

LAST-PROXIMATE-ACT TEST

last-proximate-act test. Criminal law. A common-law test for the crime of attempt, based on whether the defendant does the final act necessary to commit an offense (such as pulling the trigger of a gun, not merely aiming it). • Most courts have rejected this test as being too lenient. See ATTEMPT (2). [Cases: Criminal Law 44. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 114–123.]

LAST RESORT, COURT OF

last resort, court of. See court of last resort under COURT.

LAST SICKNESS

last sickness. See LAST ILLNESS.

LAST-STRAW DOCTRINE

last-straw doctrine. Employment law. The rule that the termination of employment may be justified by a series of incidents of poor performance, not one of which alone would justify termination, followed by a final incident showing a blatant disregard for the employer's interests.

LAST-SURVIVOR LIFE INSURANCE

last-survivor life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

LAST-TREATMENT RULE

last-treatment rule. The doctrine that, for an ongoing physician–patient relationship, the statute of limitations on a medical-malpractice claim begins to run when the treatment stops or the relationship ends. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 55(3). C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 159, 166, 171–175; Physicians, Surgeons, and Other Health-Care Providers § 108.]

latifundium (lat-⟨schwa⟩-f⟨schwa⟩n-dee-⟨schwa⟩m), n. [Latin fr. latus “broad” + fundus “land”] Roman law. A large private estate, common in the late Republic.

LATIN

Latin. The language of the ancient Romans and a primary language of the civil and canon law, and formerly of the common law. — Abbr. L.

“The value of the Latin has always consisted in its peculiar expressiveness as a language of law terms, in its superior conciseness which has made it the appropriate language of law maxims, and in its almost unlimited capacity of condensation by means of abbreviations and contractions, many of which are retained in popular use at the present day.” 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 131 (2d ed. 1867).

“The Latin maxims have largely disappeared from arguments and opinions. In their original phraseology they convey no idea that cannot be well expressed in modern English.” William C. Anderson, Law Dictionaries, 28 Am. L. Rev. 531, 532 (1894).

LATINARIUS

latinarius (lat-⟨schwa⟩-nair-ee-⟨schwa⟩s), n. [Latin] Hist. An interpreter of Latin.

LATINI JUNIANI

Latini Juniani (l<<schwa>>-tI-nI joo-nee-ay-nI), n. pl.[Latin “Junian Latins”] Roman law. Informally manumitted slaves who acquired some rights and privileges as free people, but not Roman citizenship. • They were a special class of freedmen (libertini) who could one day become citizens. If a Latinus Junianus did not become a citizen, then upon death that person's status reverted to slavery, and his or her patron acquired all the decedent's property. — Also termed libertine Junian Latins. See LEX JUNIA NORBANA. Cf. INGENUUS; SERVUS(1).

“Upon all these persons ... a new and definite status was conferred; they were henceforth to be known as Latini Juniani, their position being based upon Latinitas, a status which had been enjoyed by certain Latin colonists. A Latinus Junianus had no public rights But he had part of the commercium, i.e. he could acquire proprietary and other rights inter vivos, but not mortis causâ. A Latinus Junianus, therefore, could neither take under a will ... nor could he make one But, subject to these disabilities, a Latinus Junianus was a free man, and his children, though not, like the children of citizens, under his potestas, were free-born citizens.” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 68–69 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

latitat (lat-<<schwa>>-tat), n.[Law Latin “he lurks”] Hist. A writ issued in a personal action after the sheriff returned a bill of Middlesex with the notation that the defendant could not be found. • The writ was called latitat because of its fictitious recital that the defendant lurks about in the county. It was abolished by the Process in Courts of Law at Westminster Act of 1832 (St. 2, Will. 4, ch. 39). See BILL OF MIDDLESEX; TESTATUM.

“Latitat is a writ by which all men in personal actions are originally called in the king's bench to answer. And it is called latitat, because it is supposed by the writ that the defendant cannot be found in the county of Middlesex, as it appears by the return of the sheriff of that county, but that he lurks in another county: and therefore to the sheriff of that county is this writ directed to apprehend him.” Termes de la Ley 277 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

latitatio (lat-<<schwa>>-tay-shee-oh), n.[Law Latin] Civil law. A lurking; a hiding; a concealment, esp. to avoid a trial.

LATIUM MAIUS

Latium maius (lay-shee-<<schwa>>m may-j<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. The greater rights conferred on the inhabitants of Latium and, later, of colonies outside Italy, giving citizenship to all members of the local curia or town council and their children. Cf. LATIUM MINUS.

“Under the Principate there is a distinction between Latium maius and Latium minus. The former referred to the rights granted to colonies founded as a coloniae Latinae outside Italy, combined with the concession of Roman citizenship to a larger group of individuals than Latium minus, in which only the municipal magistrates and members of the municipal council ... were rewarded with Roman citizenship.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 537–38 (1953).

LATIUM MINUS

Latium minus (lay-shee-*<<schwa>>m ml-n<<schwa>>*s). [Latin] Roman law. The right of citizenship granted to the superior magistrates of provincial colonies. — Also termed minus Latium. Cf. LATIUM MAIUS.

LATOR

lator (lay-t*<<schwa>>*r), n.[Latin “a bearer, proposer”] Civil law. 1. A bearer; a messenger. 2. A maker or giver of laws.

LATORI PRAESSENTIUM

latori praesentium (lay-tor-Ior l*<<schwa>>-tor-I pri-sen-shee-<<schwa>>*m). [Law Latin] Scots law. To the bearer of these presents. • The phrase appeared in reference to written notes or bonds made payable to an unnamed creditor.

LATO SENSU

laudare (law-dair-ee), vb.[Latin] 1.Civil law. To name; to cite or quote as authority. 2.Hist. To determine or pass upon (a case, etc.) judicially.

LAUDATIO

laudatio (law-day-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Roman law. Court testimony concerning an accused person's good behavior and integrity of life. • This testimony resembles the practice in modern criminal trials of calling persons to speak favorably about a defendant's character. Pl. laudationes (law-day-shee-oh-nee-z).

LAUDATOR

laudator (law-day-t<<schwa>>r), n.[Latin] 1.Roman law. A character witness in a criminal trial. 2.Hist. An arbitrator. Pl. laudatores (law-d<<schwa>>-tor-ee-z).

LAUDATORY WORDS

laudatory words.Patents. In a patent claim, descriptive but self-serving and conclusory words about the invention's quality or features, such as "faster" or "more effective." • Laudatory words are usu. not allowed in the claims of utility-patent applications, but they are allowed in plant-patent applications.

LAUDEMIIUM

laudemium (law-dee-mee-<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin] Hist. A sum paid to a landowner by a person succeeding to a particular form of land contract by gift, devise, exchange, or sale; HERIOT. • The payment equaled 2% of the purchase money, and was paid to the landowner for acceptance of the successor. — Also termed (in old English law) acknowledgment money. See EMPHYTEUSIS.

LAUDERE AUCTOREM

laudere auctorem (law-deer-ee awk-tor-<<schwa>>m). See NOMINATIO AUCTORIS.

laundering, n. See MONEY-LAUNDERING.

LAUNDRY LIST

laundry list. Slang. An enumeration of items, as in a statute or court opinion <Texas's consumer-protection law contains a laundry list of deceptive trade practices>.

LAUREATE

laureate (lor-ee-it), n. 1. Hist. An officer of the sovereign's household, who composed odes annually on the sovereign's birthday, on the new year, and occasionally on the occurrence of a remarkable victory. 2. A person honored for great achievement in the arts and sciences, and esp. in poetry.

LAUS DEO

laus Deo (laws dee-oh or lows day-oh). [Latin] Archaic. Praise be to God. • This was a heading to a bill of exchange.

law. 1. The regime that orders human activities and relations through systematic application of the force of politically organized society, or through social pressure, backed by force, in such a society; the legal system <respect and obey the law>. 2. The aggregate of legislation, judicial precedents, and accepted legal principles; the body of authoritative grounds of judicial and administrative action; esp., the body of rules, standards, and principles that the courts of a particular jurisdiction apply in deciding controversies brought before them <the law of the land>. 3. The set of rules or principles dealing with a specific area of a legal system <copyright law>. 4. The judicial and administrative process; legal action and proceedings < when settlement negotiations failed, they submitted their dispute to the law>. 5. A statute <Congress passed a law>. — Abbr. L. 6. COMMON LAW <law but not equity>. 7. The legal profession <she spent her entire career in law>.

“Some twenty years ago I pointed out two ideas running through definitions of law: one an imperative idea, an idea of a rule laid down by the lawmaking organ of a politically organized society, deriving its force from the authority of the sovereign; and the other a rational or ethical idea, an idea of a rule of right and justice deriving its authority from its intrinsic reasonableness or conformity to ideals of right and merely recognized, not made, by the sovereign.” Roscoe Pound, “More About the Nature of Law,” in Legal Essays in Tribute to Orrin Kip McMurray at 513, 515 (1935).

“All law is the law of a group of individuals or of groups made up of individuals. No one can make a law purely for himself. He may form a resolution, frame an ambition, or adopt a rule, but these are private prescriptions, not laws.” Tony Honoré, Making Law Bind: Essays Legal and Philosophical 33 (1987).

divine law. See DIVINE LAW.

enacted law. Law that has its source in legislation; WRITTEN LAW.

federal law. See FEDERAL LAW.

general law. 1. Law that is neither local nor confined in application to particular persons. • Even if there is only one person or entity to which a given law applies when enacted, it is general law if it purports to apply to all persons or places of a specified class throughout the jurisdiction. — Also termed general statute; law of a general nature. Cf. special law. [Cases: Statutes 68. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 154–161.] 2. A statute that relates to a subject of a broad nature.

imperative law. A rule in the form of a command; a rule of action imposed on people by some authority that enforces obedience.

“Strictly speaking, it is not possible to say that imperative law is a command in the ordinary sense of the word. A ‘command’ in the ordinary meaning of the word is an expression of a wish by a person or body as to the conduct of another person, communicated to that other person. But (1) in the case of the law there is no determinate person who as a matter of psychological fact commands all the law. We are all born into a community in which law already exists, and at no time in our lives do any of us command the whole law. The most that we do is to play our part in enforcing or altering particular portions of it. (2) Ignorance of the law is no excuse; thus a rule of law is binding even though not communicated to the subject of the law.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 21 n.(c) (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

internal law. 1. Law that regulates the domestic affairs of a country. Cf. INTERNATIONAL LAW. 2.LOCAL LAW(3).

unenacted law.Law that does not have its source in legislation; UNWRITTEN LAW(1).

LAW AGENT

law agent.Scots law. See SOLICITOR(4).

LAW AND ECONOMICS

law and economics.(often cap.) 1. A discipline advocating the economic analysis of the law, whereby legal rules are subjected to a cost-benefit analysis to determine whether a change from one legal rule to another will increase or decrease allocative efficiency and social wealth. • Originally developed as an approach to antitrust policy, law and economics is today used by its proponents to explain and interpret a variety of legal subjects. 2. The field or movement in which scholars devote themselves to this discipline. 3. The body of work produced by these scholars.

LAW AND LITERATURE

law and literature.(often cap.) 1. Traditionally, the study of how lawyers and legal institutions are depicted in literature; esp., the examination of law-related fiction as sociological evidence of how a given culture, at a given time, views law. — Also termed law in literature. 2. More modernly, the application of literary theory to legal texts, focusing esp. on lawyers' rhetoric, logic, and style, as well as legal syntax and semantics. — Also termed law as literature. 3. The field or movement in which scholars devote themselves to this study or application. 4. The body of work produced by these scholars.

law court. 1. COURT(1). 2. COURT(2). — Also spelled law-court.

LAW COURT OF APPEALS

law court of appeals. Hist. An appellate tribunal, formerly existing in South Carolina, for hearing appeals from the courts of law.

LAW-CRAFT

law-craft,n. The practice of law.

“This quest for ever-broader empirical understanding must, of course, be kept under reasonable control in practical law-craft, lest it delay necessary decisions in a continually expanding and pointlessly expensive fact-finding spiral.” Bruce A. Ackerman, Reconstructing American Law 30 (1984).

LAW DAY

law day. 1.Archaic. The yearly or twice-yearly meeting of one of the early common-law courts. 2.Archaic. The day appointed for a debtor to discharge a mortgage or else forfeit the property to the lender. [Cases: Mortgages 301, 322, 335. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 506–511, 515, 579, 602, 604.] 3. (cap.) A day on which American schools, public assemblies, and courts draw attention to the importance of law in modern society. • Since 1958, the ABA has sponsored Law Day on May 1 of each year.

LAW DEPARTMENT

law department.A branch of a corporation, government agency, university, or the like charged with handling the entity's legal affairs.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

law enforcement. 1. The detection and punishment of violations of the law. • This term is not limited to the enforcement of criminal laws. For example, the Freedom of Information Act contains an exemption from disclosure for information compiled for law-enforcement purposes and furnished in confidence. That exemption is valid for the enforcement of a variety of noncriminal laws (such as national-security laws) as well as criminal laws. 5 USCA § 552(b)(7). 2.CRIMINAL JUSTICE(2).3. Police officers and other members of the executive branch of government charged with carrying out and enforcing the criminal law.

LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ADMINISTRATION

Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.A former federal agency (part of the Department of Justice) that was responsible for administering law-enforcement grants under the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968. • It has been replaced by a variety of federal agencies, including the National Institute of Corrections and National Institute of Justice. — Abbr. LEAA.

LAW-ENFORCEMENT SYSTEM

law-enforcement system. See CRIMINAL-JUSTICE SYSTEM.

law firm. An association of lawyers who practice law together, usu. sharing clients and profits, in a business organized traditionally as a partnership but often today as either a professional corporation or a limited-liability company. • Many law firms have a hierarchical structure in which the partners (or shareholders) supervise junior lawyers known as “associates,” who are usu. employed on a track to partnership. [Cases: Attorney and Client 30. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 145–147, 164.]

captive law firm. A law firm staffed by employees of an insurance company. • These lawyers typically defend insureds in lawsuits covered under the insurer's liability policies. The insurer's use of a captive firm to defend an insured raises ethical questions about whether the lawyers will act in the insured's best interests. — Often shortened to captive firm.

LAW FRENCH

Law French. The corrupted form of the Norman French language that arose in England in the centuries after William the Conqueror invaded England in 1066 and that was used for several centuries as the primary language of the English legal system; the Anglo-French used in medieval England in judicial proceedings, pleadings, and lawbooks. — Abbr. L.F. — Also written law French. See NORMAN FRENCH.

“That Law French was barbarous in its decrepitude does not in the least diminish the value of it to our law when it was full of vitality. It helped to make English law one of the four indigenous systems of the civilized world, for it exactly expressed legal ideas in a technical language which had no precise equivalent.” Percy H. Winfield, The Chief Sources of English Legal History 14 (1925).

proceedings from the 1260s to the reign of Edward III (1327–1377), and used with frequency in legal literature up to the early 18th century. When first introduced into England, this brand of French was the standard language used in Normandy; by the 1300s, through linguistic isolation, it became a corrupted language — by French standards, at any rate.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 504–05 (2d ed. 1995).

LAWFUL

lawful,adj. Not contrary to law; permitted by law <the police officer conducted a lawful search of the premises>. See LEGAL.

LAW JOURNAL

law journal. 1. A legal periodical or magazine, esp. one published by a bar association. 2. LAW REVIEW(1). — Abbr. L.J.

LAW LATIN

Law Latin. A corrupted form of Latin formerly used in law and legal documents, including judicial writs, royal charters, and private deeds. • It primarily consists of a mixture of Latin, French, and English words used in English sentence structures. — Abbr. L.L.; L. Lat. — Also written law Latin.

“LAW LATIN. A technical kind of Latin, in which the pleadings and proceedings of the English courts were enrolled and recorded from a very early period to the reign of George II The principal peculiarities of this language consist first, in its construction, which is adapted so closely to the English idiom as to answer to it sometimes word for word; and, secondly, in the use of numerous words ‘not allowed by grammarians nor having any countenance of Latin,’ but framed from the English by merely adding a Latin termination, as murdrum from murder” 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 135 (2d ed. 1867).

“Law Latin, sometimes formerly called ‘dog Latin,’ is the bastardized or debased Latin formerly used in law and legal documents. For the most part, we have escaped its clutches. In 1730, Parliament abolished Law Latin in legal proceedings, but two years later found it necessary to allow Latin phrases that had previously been in common use, such as fieri facias, habeas corpus, ne exeat, and nisi prius. As Blackstone would later say, some Latinisms were ‘not ... capable of an English dress with any degree of seriousness.’ 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries 323 (1768).” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 505 (2d ed. 1995).

LAW LIST

law list. 1. LEAD COUNSEL lead counsel.See COUNSEL.

LEADING CASE

leading case. 1. A judicial decision that first definitively settled an important legal rule or principle and that has since been often and consistently followed. • An example is Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S.Ct. 1602 (1966) (creating the exclusionary rule for evidence improperly obtained from a suspect being interrogated while in police custody). Cf. LANDMARK DECISION. 2. An important, often the most important, judicial precedent on a particular legal issue. 3. Loosely, a reported case that is cited as the dispositive authority on an issue being litigated. — Also termed (in sense 3) ruling case.

LEADING COUNSEL

leading counsel.See lead counsel under COUNSEL.

LEADING ECONOMIC INDICATOR leading economic indicator.See ECONOMIC INDICATOR.

LEADING INDICATOR

leading indicator.See INDICATOR.

LEADING-OBJECT RULE

leading-object rule.See MAIN-PURPOSE RULE.

LEADING OF A USE

leading of a use.Hist. In a deed, the specification, before the levy of a fine of land, of the person to whose use the fine will inure. • If the deed is executed after the fine, it “declares” the use.

“As if A., tenant in tail, with reversion to himself in fee, would settle his estate on B. for life, remainder to C. in tail, remainder to D. in fee He therefore usually, after making the settlement proposed, covenants to levy a fine ... and directs that the same shall enure to the uses in such settlement mentioned. This is now a deed to lead the uses of the fine or recovery, and the fine when levied, or recovery when suffered, shall enure to the uses so specified, and no other.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 363 (1766).

leading question. A question that suggests the answer to the person being interrogated; esp., a question that may be answered by a mere “yes” or “no.” • Leading questions are generally allowed only in cross-examination. — Also termed categorical question; suggestive question; suggestive interrogation. [Cases: Witnesses 239. C.J.S. Witnesses § 415.]

lead-lag study. A survey used to determine the amount of working capital that a utility company must reserve and include in its rate base, by comparing the time the company has to pay its bills and the time taken by its customers to pay for service. • The term comes from the phrases “lead time” and “lag time.” Lead time is the average number of days between the company's receipt and payment of invoices it receives. Lag time is the average number of days between the company's billing of its customers and its receipt of payment. By analyzing the difference in timing between inward cash flow and outward cash flow, the company can calculate the amount of necessary reserves. [Cases: Public Utilities 124. C.J.S. Public Utilities §§ 23–26, 30–33, 48–49.]

leads doctrine. Tax. In a tax-evasion case, the rule that the government must investigate all the taxpayer's leads that are reasonably accessible and that, if true, would establish the taxpayer's innocence, or the government risks having the trial judge presume that any leads not investigated are true and exonerating. [Cases: Internal Revenue 5312.]

league. 1. A covenant made by nations, groups, or individuals for promoting common interests or ensuring mutual protection. 2. An alliance or association of nations, groups, or individuals formed by such a covenant. 3. A unit of distance, usu. measuring about three miles (chiefly, nautical). [Cases: Weights and Measures 3. C.J.S. Weights and Measures § 3.]

marine league. A geographical measure of distance equal to one-twentieth part of a degree of latitude, or three nautical miles. [Cases: Weights and Measures 3. C.J.S. Weights and Measures § 3.]

LEAGUE OF NATIONS

League of Nations. An organization of nations formed in 1919 to promote international cooperation and peace. • President Woodrow Wilson endorsed the League in an address to Congress, but the United States never joined. The League dissolved in 1946 and turned its assets over to the United Nations.

leakage. 1. The waste of a liquid caused by its leaking from a storage container. 2. An allowance against duties granted by customs to an importer of liquids for losses sustained by this waste. 3. Intellectual property. Loss in value of a piece of intellectual property because of unauthorized copying. • The types of intellectual property most susceptible to leakage are recordable media such as compact discs and videotapes. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 87(1). C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 77, 79.]

leal (leel), adj.[Law French] Hist. Loyal.

LEAN

lean, vb.1. To incline or tend in opinion or preference. • A court is sometimes said to “lean toward” or “lean against” an advocate's position, meaning that the court regards that position favorably or unfavorably. 2. To yield; to submit.

LEAPFROG DEVELOPMENT

leapfrog development. An improvement of land that requires the extension of public facilities from their current stopping point, through undeveloped land that may be scheduled for future development, to the site of the improvement.

LEARNED

learned (l<<schwa>>r-nid), adj.1. Having a great deal of learning; erudite. • A lawyer might refer to an adversary as a “learned colleague” or “learned opponent” — a comment that, depending on the situation and tone of voice, may be either a genuine compliment or a sarcastic slight. 2. Well versed in the law and its history. • Statutes sometimes require that judges be “learned in the law,” a phrase commonly construed as meaning that they must have earned a law degree and been admitted to the bar.

LEARNED INTERMEDIARY

learned intermediary. See informed intermediary under INTERMEDIARY.

LEARNED-INTERMEDIARY DOCTRINE learned-intermediary doctrine. The principle that a prescription-drug manufacturer fulfills its duty to warn of a drug's potentially harmful effects by informing the prescribing physician, rather than the end-user, of those effects. [Cases: Products Liability 46. C.J.S. Products Liability § 54.]

learned-treatise rule. Evidence. An exception to the hearsay rule, by which a published text may be established as authoritative, either by expert testimony or by judicial notice. • Under the Federal Rules of Evidence, a statement contained in a published treatise, periodical, or pamphlet on sciences or arts (such as history and medicine) can be established as authoritative — and thereby admitted into evidence for the purpose of examining or cross-examining an expert witness — by expert testimony or by the court's taking judicial notice of the authoritative nature or reliability of the text. If the statement is admitted into evidence, it may be read into the trial record, but it may not be received as an exhibit. Fed. R. Evid. 803(18). [Cases: Criminal Law 439;

Evidence 363. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1032, 1038; Evidence §§ 1005–1006.]

learning, n. 1. Hist. Legal doctrine. 2. The act of acquiring knowledge.

LEASE

lease, n. 1. A contract by which a rightful possessor of real property conveys the right to use and occupy the property in exchange for consideration, usu. rent. • The lease term can be for life, for a fixed period, or for a period terminable at will. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.] 2. Such a conveyance plus all covenants attached to it. 3. The written instrument memorializing such a conveyance and its covenants. — Also termed lease agreement; lease contract. 4. The piece of real property so conveyed. 5. A contract by which the rightful possessor of personal property conveys the right to use that property in exchange for consideration. [Cases: Bailment 1. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 2–13, 15, 19, 22–24, 31.]

assignable lease. A lease that the lessee can transfer to a successor. See SUBLEASE. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 74. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 30, 53.]

building lease. A long-term lease of land that includes a covenant to erect or alter a building or other improvement. Cf. ground lease.

capital lease. See LEASE-PURCHASE AGREEMENT.

commercial lease. A lease for business purposes. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.]

community lease. A lease in which a number of lessors owning interests in separate tracts execute a lease in favor of a single lessee.

concurrent lease. A lease that begins before a previous lease ends, entitling the new lessee to be paid all rents that accrue on the previous lease after the new lease begins, and to remedies against the holding tenant.

“A landlord who has granted a lease may nevertheless grant another lease of the same land for all or some of the period of the first lease. The second lease does not deprive the lessee under the first lease of the right to possession of the property, but is, in reality, a lease of the reversion. Because the two leases operate concurrently during at least some part of their respective durations, they are known as ‘concurrent leases.’” Peter Butt, Land Law 233 (2d ed. 1988).

consumer lease. 1. A lease of goods by a person who is in the business of selling or leasing a product primarily for the lessee's personal or household use. UCC § 2A-103(1)(e). [Cases: Bailment 2. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 5, 14, 16–18.] 2. A residential — rather than commercial — lease.

derivative lease. See SUBLEASE.

durable lease. A lease that reserves a rent payable annually, usu. with a right of reentry for nonpayment.

edge lease. Oil & gas. A lease located on the edge of a field.

finance lease. A fixed-term lease used by a business to finance capital equipment. • The lessor's service is usu. limited to financing the asset, and the lessee pays maintenance costs and taxes and has the option of purchasing the asset at lease-end for a nominal price. Finance leases strongly resemble security agreements and are written almost exclusively by financial institutions as a way to help a commercial customer obtain an expensive capital item that the customer might not otherwise be able to afford. UCC § 2A-103(1)(g). — Also termed full payout lease; tripartite lease. [Cases: Bailment 2. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 5, 14, 16–18.]

“By carving out the ‘finance lease’ for special treatment, the drafters of Article 2A have recognized a distinct species of lease that is written almost exclusively by financial institutions and — although treated as a true lease — does not normally carry with it certain of the responsibilities that the typical lessor bears under Article 2A.” 2 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 13-3, at 4 (4th ed. 1995).

“A finance lease is the product of a three-party transaction. The supplier manufactures or supplies the goods pursuant to the lessee's specification, perhaps even pursuant to a purchase order, sales agreement, or lease agreement between the supplier and the lessee. After the prospective finance lease is negotiated, a purchase order, sales agreement, or lease agreement is entered into by the lessor (as buyer or prime lessee) or an existing order, agreement, or lease is assigned by the lessee to the lessor, and the lessor and the lessee then enter into a lease or sublease of the goods. Due to the limited function usually performed by the lessor, the lessee looks almost entirely to the supplier for representations, covenants, and warranties. If a manufacturer's warranty carries through, the lessee may also look to that. Yet, this definition does not restrict the lessor's function solely to the supply of funds; if the lessor undertakes or performs other functions, express warranties, covenants, and the common law will protect the lessee.” UCC § 2A-102 cmt. at 14–15 (Proposed Final Draft, 30 Apr. 1999).

full-service lease. A lease in which the lessor agrees to pay all maintenance expenses, insurance premiums, and property taxes. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 148(1), 156. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 374–376, 378–386.]

graduated lease. A lease in which rent varies depending on future contingencies, such as operating expenses or gross income.

gross lease. A lease in which the lessee pays a flat amount for rent, out of which the lessor pays all the expenses (such as fuel, water, and electricity).

ground lease. A long-term (usu. 99-year) lease of land only. • Such a lease typically involves commercial property, and any improvements built by the lessee usu. revert to the lessor. — Also termed ground-rent lease; land lease. [Cases: Estates in Property 13. C.J.S. Estates §§ 159–192.]

headlease. See HEADLEASE.

index lease. A lease that provides for increases in rent according to the increases in the consumer price index. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 200.7.]

land lease. See ground lease.

leveraged lease. A lease that is collateral for the loan through which the lessor acquired the leased asset, and that provides the lender's only recourse for nonpayment of the debt; a lease in which a creditor provides nonrecourse financing to the lessor (who has substantial leverage in the property) and in which the lessor's net investment in the lease, apart from nonrecourse financing, declines during the early years and increases in later years. — Also termed third-party equity lease; tax lease.

master lease. A lease that controls later leases or subleases, particularly of parts of the leased property.

mineral lease. A lease in which the lessee has the right to explore for and extract oil, gas, or other minerals. • The rent is usu. based on the amount or value of the minerals extracted. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 56–81. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 194–325, 442.]

mining lease. A lease of a mine or mining claim, in which the lessee has the right to work the mine or claim, usu. with conditions on the amount and type of work to be done. • The lessor is compensated in the form of either fixed rent or royalties based on the amount of ore mined. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 62–71. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 200–232.]

month-to-month lease. A tenancy with no written contract. • Rent is paid monthly, and usu. one month's notice by the landlord or tenant is required to terminate the tenancy. See periodic tenancy under TENANCY. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 113. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 130(1, 2), 131, 145, 151–155.]

net lease. A lease in which the lessee pays rent plus property expenses (such as taxes and insurance).

net-net-net lease. A lease in which the lessee pays all the expenses, including mortgage interest and amortization, leaving the lessor with an amount free of all claims. — Also termed triple-net lease.

oil-and-gas lease. A lease granting the right to extract oil and gas from a specified piece of land. • Although called a “lease,” this interest is typically considered a determinable fee in the minerals rather than a grant of possession for a term of years. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 73–81. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 210, 233, 238–283, 285–325, 442.]

operating lease. A lease of property (esp. equipment) for a term that is shorter than the property's useful life. • Under an operating lease, the lessor is typically responsible for paying taxes and other expenses on the property. Cf. LEASE-PURCHASE AGREEMENT.

“or” lease. Oil & gas. A mineral lease with a drilling-delay rental clause structured so that the lessee promises to start drilling operations or to pay delay rentals from time to time during the primary term. • If the lessee fails to do one or the other, the lease does not automatically terminate, but the lessee is liable for the delay-rental amount.

parol lease (p<<schwa>>-rohlorpar-<<schwa>>l). A lease based on an oral agreement; an unwritten lease. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 23. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 211(2).]

percentage lease. A lease in which the rent is based on a percentage of gross (or net) sales or profits, typically with a set minimum rent. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 200.2.]

perpetual lease. 1. An ongoing lease not limited in duration. 2. A grant of lands in fee with a reservation of a rent in fee; a fee farm. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 87. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 61.]

perpetually renewable lease. Hist. A lease that a tenant may renew for another period as often as it expires, usu. by making a payment upon exercising the right. • In 1922, this type of lease was effectively abolished in England by the Law of Property Act, which provided for the conversion of existing and future perpetually renewable leases to term-of-years leases, and set the maximum term at 2,000 years.

proprietary lease. A lease between a cooperative apartment association and a tenant.

reversionary lease. A lease that will take effect when a prior lease terminates.

sandwich lease. A lease in which the lessee subleases the property to a third party, esp. for more rent than under the original lease. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 74. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 30, 53.]

short lease. A lease of brief duration, often less than six months.

sublease. See SUBLEASE.

synthetic lease. A method for financing the purchase of real estate, whereby the lender creates a special-purpose entity that buys the property and then leases it to the ultimate user (usu. a corporation). • A synthetic lease is treated as a loan for tax purposes and as an operating lease for accounting purposes, so that the “lessee” can deduct the property's depreciation and the loan's interest yet keep both the asset and the debt off its balance sheet.

tax lease. 1. The instrument or estate given to the purchaser of land at a tax sale when the law does not permit the sale of an estate in fee for nonpayment of taxes but instead directs the sale of an estate for years. 2. See leveraged lease.

third-party equity lease. See leveraged lease.

timber lease. A real-property lease that contemplates that the lessee will cut timber on the leased premises. [Cases: Logs and Logging 3. C.J.S. Logs and Logging §§ 9, 20.]

top lease.Oil & gas. A lease granted on property already subject to an oil-and-gas lease. • Generally, any rights granted by a top lease are valid only if the existing lease ends. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 56. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 194–195, 233.]

triple-net lease.See net-net-net lease.

“unless” lease.Oil & gas. An oil-and-gas lease with a drilling-delay rental clause structured as a special limitation to the primary term. • Unless delay rentals are paid or drilling operations are started from time to time as specified, an “unless” lease automatically terminates, and the lessee has no liability for its failure to perform. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 78.1(3, 9).C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 260–263, 269–270.]

lease,vb.1. To grant the possession and use of (land, buildings, rooms, movable property, etc.) to another in return for rent or other consideration <the city leased the stadium to the football team>. [Cases: Bailment 1; Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 2–13, 15, 19, 22–24, 31; Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.] 2. To take a lease of; to hold by a lease <Carol leased the townhouse from her uncle>.

LEASE AGREEMENT

lease agreement.See LEASE(3).

LEASE AND RELEASE

lease and release.Hist. A method of transferring seisin without livery, whereby the owner and the transferee would enter into a lease for a term of years, to take effect only when the transferee entered the property, whereupon the owner would release all interest in the property to the transferee by written instrument. • Once the transferee owned both the term and the freehold interest, the two interests would merge to form one estate in fee simple. This lease-and-release procedure was fully acceptable to the courts, on the theory that livery of seisin to one already occupying the land was unnecessary.

leaseback,n. The sale of property on the understanding, or with the express option, that the seller may lease the property from the buyer immediately upon the sale. — Also termed sale and leaseback. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.]

LEASE CONTRACT

lease contract.See LEASE(3).

LEASE FOR LIFE

lease for life.Hist. A lease of land for the duration of a specified number of lives instead of for a specified term of years. • Unlike a tenant for a term of years, a lessee for life could recover the land if dispossessed.

“The rent payable was usually fairly small, but a fine was paid when the lease was granted; a further fine was payable when, on the termination of the lives, the tenant exercised the right the lease gave him to replace them and so extend the lease. If the lessor was a corporation such as a monastery or college, the fines were treated as income by the then members of the corporation, to the disadvantage of their successors. Leases for life finally lost their popularity when legislation in the first half of the nineteenth century compelled corporations to add such fines to their capital.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 306 (6th ed. 1993).

LEASE FOR YEARS

lease for years.See tenancy for a term under TENANCY.

LEASEHOLD

leasehold,n. A tenant's possessory estate in land or premises, the four types being the tenancy for years, the periodic tenancy, the tenancy at will, and the tenancy at sufferance. • Although a leasehold has some of the characteristics of real property, it has historically been classified as a chattel real. — Also termed leasehold estate; leasehold interest. See TENANCY. Cf. FREEHOLD. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 70, 113, 117. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 26, 130(1, 2), 131, 145, 151–156, 202(3, 9).]

LEASEHOLDER ROYALTY

leaseholder royalty.See landowner's royalty under ROYALTY(2).

LEASEHOLD IMPROVEMENTS

leasehold improvements.Beneficial changes to leased property (such as a parking lot or driveway) made by or for the benefit of the lessee. • The phrase is used in a condemnation proceeding to determine the share of compensation to be allocated to the lessee.

LEASEHOLD INTEREST

leasehold interest. 1.LEASEHOLD; esp., for purposes of eminent domain, the lessee's interest in the lease itself, measured by the difference between the total remaining rent and the rent the lessee would pay for similar space for the same period. [Cases: Eminent Domain 147. C.J.S. Eminent Domain §§ 131–132, 153.] 2. A lessor's or lessee's interest under a lease contract. UCC § 2A-103(m). 3.WORKING INTEREST. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 27, 202(1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10), 203.]

LEASEHOLD MORTGAGE

leasehold mortgage.See MORTGAGE.

LEASEHOLD-MORTGAGE BOND

leasehold-mortgage bond. See BOND(3).

LEASEHOLD ROYALTY

leasehold royalty. See landowner's royalty under ROYALTY(2).

LEASEHOLD VALUE

leasehold value. The value of a leasehold interest. • This term usu. applies to a long-term lease when the rent paid under the lease is lower than current market rates. Some states permit the lessee to claim the leasehold interest from the landlord in a condemnation proceeding, unless the lease prohibits such a claim. Other states prohibit these claims by statute. See LEASEHOLD INTEREST ; NO-BONUS CLAUSE.

LEASE INSURANCE

lease insurance. See INSURANCE.

LEASE-LEND

lease-lend. See LEND-LEASE.

LEASE-PURCHASE AGREEMENT

lease-purchase agreement. A rent-to-own purchase plan under which the buyer takes possession of the goods with the first payment and takes ownership with the final payment; a lease of property (esp. equipment) by which ownership of the property is transferred to the lessee at the end of the lease term. • Such a lease is usu. treated as an installment sale. Under a capital lease, the lessee is responsible for paying taxes and other expenses on the property. — Also termed lease-to-purchase agreement; hire-purchase agreement; capital lease. Cf. operating lease under LEASE. [Cases: Bailment 2; Bills and Notes 22. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 5, 14, 16–18; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 20.]

LEASING-MAKING

leasing-making. Hist. Scots law. Oral sedition.

LEAST-INTRUSIVE-MEANS DOCTRINE least-intrusive-means doctrine. A doctrine requiring the government to exhaust all other investigatory means before seeking sensitive testimony, as by compelling an attorney to testify before a grand jury on matters that may be protected by the attorney–client privilege.

LEAST-INTRUSIVE-REMEDY DOCTRINE least-intrusive-remedy doctrine. The rule that a legal remedy should provide the damaged party with appropriate relief, without unduly penalizing the opposing party or the jurisdiction's legal system, as by striking only the unconstitutional portion of a challenged statute while leaving the rest intact. [Cases: Statutes 64(1). C.J.S. Statutes §§ 83–85.]

LEAST-RESTRICTIVE EDUCATIONAL ENVIRONMENT

least-restrictive educational environment. See LEAST-RESTRICTIVE ENVIRONMENT.

LEAST-RESTRICTIVE ENVIRONMENT least-restrictive environment. Under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, the school setting that, to the greatest extent appropriate, educates a disabled child together with children who are not disabled. 20 USCA § 1412(5). — Also termed least-restrictive-educational environment. Cf. MAINSTREAMING. [Cases: Schools 148(2). C.J.S. Schools and School Districts §§ 700–702, 717, 719.]

LEAST-RESTRICTIVE-MEANS TEST

least-restrictive-means test. The rule that a law or governmental regulation, even when based on a legitimate governmental interest, should be crafted in a way that will protect individual civil liberties as much as possible, and should be only as restrictive as is necessary to accomplish a legitimate governmental purpose.

leaute (low-tay), n. [Law French “legality”] Hist. Legality; the condition of a lawful man (legalis homo). See LEGALIS HOMO.

leave, n. 1. Departure; the act of going away <took his leave>. 2. Extended absence for which one has authorization; esp., a voluntary vacation from military duties with the chance to visit home; furlough <on a three-month leave from the Army>. 3. Permission <by leave of court>.

leave, vb. 1. To give by will; to bequeath or devise <she left her ranch to her stepson>. • This usage has historically been considered loose by the courts, and it is not always given testamentary effect. 2. To be survived by <he left no brothers or sisters>. 3. To depart; voluntarily go away; quit (a place). 4. To depart willfully with the intent not to return <Nelson left Texas and became a resident of Massachusetts>. 5. To deliver (a summons, money, an article, etc.) by dropping off at a certain place, esp. to await the return of someone; esp., to post (a copy of a writ, etc.).

LEAVE AND LICENSE

leave and license. In an action for trespass to land, the defense that the plaintiff consented to the defendant's presence. [Cases: Trespass 25. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 54–55, 167.]

LEAVE NO ISSUE

leave no issue, vb. To die without any surviving child or other descendant. • The spouse of a deceased child is usu. not issue. See FAILURE OF ISSUE. [Cases: Wills 545. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1033, 1039–1048.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

leave of absence. A worker's temporary absence from employment or duty with the intention to return. • Salary and seniority are typically unaffected by a leave of absence.

LEAVE OF COURT

leave of court. Judicial permission to follow a nonroutine procedure <the defense sought leave of court to allow the defendant to exit the courtroom when the autopsy photographs are shown>. — Often shortened to leave.

LEAVE TO SIT

leave to sit. Parliamentary law. Permission from a deliberative assembly for a committee or other subordinate body to meet while the assembly is meeting.

legabilis (l<<schwa>>-gay-b<<schwa>>-lis), n.[Latin] Hist. Property or goods that may be given by will. • As an adjective, the term also meant “bequeathable.”

legable,adj. (Of property) capable of being bequeathed.

LEGACY

legacy (leg-<<schwa>>-see), n. A gift by will, esp. of personal property and often of money. Cf. BEQUEST; DEVISE. [Cases: Wills 565. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1135–1136.]

absolute legacy.A legacy given without condition and intended to vest immediately. Cf. vested legacy.

accumulated legacy.A legacy that has not yet been paid to a legatee.

accumulative legacy.See additional legacy.

additional legacy.A second legacy given to a legatee in the same will (or in a codicil to the same will) that gave another legacy. • An additional legacy is supplementary to another and is not considered merely a repeated expression of the same gift. — Also termed accumulative legacy; cumulative legacy. [Cases: Wills 585. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1171–1175.]

alternate legacy.A legacy by which the testator allows the legatee to choose one of two or more items.

conditional legacy.A legacy that will take effect or be defeated subject to the occurrence or nonoccurrence of an event. [Cases: Wills 639–668. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1380–1424.]

contingent legacy.A legacy that depends on an uncertain event and thus has not vested. • An example is a legacy given to one's granddaughter “if she attains the age of 21.” [Cases: Wills 628–638. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1320–1379, 1551.]

cumulative legacy.See additional legacy.

demonstrative legacy (di-mon-str<<schwa>>-tiv). A legacy paid from a particular source if that source has enough money. • If it does not, the amount of the legacy not paid from that source is taken from the estate's general assets. [Cases: Wills 755. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1664, 1667–1677, 1679–1683.]

failed legacy. See lapsed legacy.

general legacy. 1. A gift of personal property that the testator intends to come from the estate's general assets, payable in money or items indistinguishable from each other, such as shares of publicly traded stock. [Cases: Wills 756. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1663, 1667–1677, 1679–1683.] 2. Civil law. A testator's gift of a fraction or proportion of the estate remaining after particular legacies have been satisfied. 3. Civil law. A testator's gift of all, a fraction, or a proportion of one of certain categories of property, as specified by statute. See La. Civ. Code arts. 1586, 3506(28). — Also termed legacy under a general title. Cf. particular legacy; universal legacy.

lapsed legacy. A legacy to a legatee who dies either before the testator dies or before the legacy is payable. • It falls into the residual estate unless the jurisdiction has an antilapse statute. — Also termed failed legacy; failed gift. See ANTILAPSE STATUTE. [Cases: Wills 774–777. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1791–1808.] legacy under a general title. See general legacy.

legacy under a particular title. See particular legacy.

legacy under a universal title. Louisiana law. A testamentary disposition of all immovable property, or all movable property, or a fixed proportion of all immovable property or of all movable property. La. Civ. Code art. 1612. Cf. general legacy; particular legacy; universal legacy.

modal legacy (moh-d<<schwa>>l). A legacy accompanied by directions about the manner in which it will be applied to the legatee's benefit .

particular legacy. Civil law. A testamentary gift that is not expressed as a fraction or proportion and is less than all the estate; any testamentary gift that does not meet the definition of a general legacy or a universal legacy. See La. Civ. Code arts. 1587, 3506(28). — Also termed legacy under a particular title. Cf. general legacy; universal legacy.

pecuniary legacy (pi-kyoo-nee-er-ee). A legacy of a sum of money. [Cases: Wills 567. C.J.S. Wills § 1141.]

residuary legacy (ri-zij-oo-er-ee). A legacy of the estate remaining after the satisfaction of all claims and all specific, general, and demonstrative legacies. [Cases: Wills 586. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1176–1179, 1184.]

special legacy. See specific legacy.

specific legacy. A legacy of a specific or unique item of property, such as any real estate or a particular piece of furniture. — Also termed special legacy. [Cases: Wills 753, 754. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1662, 1666–1677, 1679–1683.]

substitutional legacy. A legacy that replaces a different legacy already given to a legatee.

trust legacy. A legacy of personal property to trustees to be held in trust, with the income usu. paid to a specified beneficiary.

universal legacy.Louisiana law. A testamentary disposition of all property, movable and immovable, to one or more persons. La. Civ. Code art. 1585. Cf. general legacy; legacy under a universal title; particular legacy.

vested legacy.A legacy given in such a way that the legatee has a fixed, indefeasible right to its payment. • A legacy is said to be vested when the testator's words making the bequest convey a transmissible interest, whether present or future, to the legatee. Thus, a legacy to be paid when the legatee reaches the age of 21 is a vested legacy because it is given unconditionally and absolutely. Although the legacy is vested, the legatee's enjoyment of it is deferred. Cf. absolute legacy; contingent legacy. [Cases: Wills 628–638. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1320–1379, 1551.] void legacy.A legacy that never had any legal existence. • The subject matter of such a legacy is treated as a part of the estate and passes under the residuary clause of a will or (in the absence of a residuary clause) under the rules for intestate succession. [Cases: Wills 849–872. C.J.S. Wills §§ 96, 1822–1840, 1974–1994.]

legal ethics. 1. The minimum standards of appropriate conduct within the legal profession, involving the duties that its members owe one another, their clients, and the courts. — Also termed etiquette of the profession. 2. The study or observance of those duties. 3. The written regulations governing those duties. See MODEL RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT. [Cases: Attorney and Client 32(2). C.J.S. Attorney and Client § 44.]

“In one sense, the term ‘legal ethics’ refers narrowly to the system of professional regulations governing the conduct of lawyers. In a broader sense, however, legal ethics is simply a special case of ethics in general, as ethics is understood in the central traditions of philosophy and religion. From this broader perspective, legal ethics cuts more deeply than legal regulation: it concerns the fundamentals of our moral lives as lawyers.” Deborah L. Rhode & David Luban, Legal Ethics 3 (1992).

LEGAL EVIDENCE

legal evidence. See EVIDENCE.

LEGAL EXCUSE

legal excuse. See EXCUSE(2).

LEGAL FACT

legal fact. See FACT.

LEGAL FATHER

legal father. See FATHER.

LEGAL FENCE

legal fence. See LAWFUL FENCE.

LEGAL FICTION

legal fiction. An assumption that something is true even though it may be untrue, made esp. in judicial reasoning to alter how a legal rule operates; specif., a device by which a legal rule or institution is diverted from its original purpose to accomplish indirectly some other object. • The constructive trust is an example of a legal fiction. — Also termed fiction of law; fictio juris. [Cases: Trusts 91. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 10, 12, 174, 195.]

“Legal fiction is the mask that progress must wear to pass the faithful but blear-eyed watchers of our ancient legal treasures. But though legal fictions are useful in thus mitigating or absorbing the shock of innovation, they work havoc in the form of intellectual confusion.” Morris R. Cohen, Law and the Social Order 126 (1933).

LEGAL FORCE

legal force. See reasonable force under FORCE.

LEGAL FORMALISM

legal formalism, n. The theory that law is a set of rules and principles independent of other political and social institutions. • Legal formalism was espoused by such scholars as Christopher Columbus Langdell and Lon Fuller. Cf. LEGAL REALISM. — legal formalist, n.

LEGALIS HOMO

legalis homo (l<<schwa>>-gay-lis hoh-moh). [Latin “lawful man”] Hist. A person who has full legal capacity and full legal rights; one who has not been deprived of any rights in court by outlawry, excommunication, or infamy. • A legalis homo was said to stand rectus in curia (“right in court”). A lawful man was able to serve as a juror and to swear an oath. — Also termed legal man; lawful man; lageman; liber et legalis homo. See RECTUS IN CURIA. Pl. legales homines (l<<schwa>>-gay-leez hom-<<schwa>>-neez).

legalism, n. 1. Formalism carried almost to the point of meaninglessness; an inclination to exalt the importance of law or formulated rules in any area of action.

“What is legalism? It is the ethical attitude that holds moral conduct to be a matter of rule following, and moral relationships to consist of duties and rights determined by rules.” Judith N. Shklar, Legalism: Law, Morals, and Political Trials 1 (1964).

“If ... the law and the lawyer are to make a socially valuable contribution to the operation of the social security system, there must be abandoned old-established habits of thought as to the nature of law and the whole gamut of practices summed up in the layman's word of deadly insult, ‘legalism’ — his word for rigid attachment to legal precedent, the substitution of legal rule for policy, the fettering of discretion, the adversary style, the taking of technical points, formality.” Leslie Scarman, English Law — The New Dimension 43 (1974).

2. A mode of expression characteristic of lawyers; a jargonistic phrase characteristic of lawyers, such as “pursuant to.”

LEGALIS MONETA ANGLIAE

legal man. See LEGALIS HOMO.

LEGAL MAXIM

legal maxim. See MAXIM.

LEGAL MEMORY

legal memory. The period during which a legal right or custom can be determined or established. • Traditionally, common-law legal memory began in the year 1189, but in 1540 it became a steadily moving period of 60 years. Cf. TIME IMMEMORIAL(1).

“Because of the importance to feudal landholders of seisin and of real property in general, the writ of right has been called ‘the most solemn of all actions.’ Nevertheless, it was believed that the time within which such a complainant would be allowed to prove an ancestor to have been seised of the estate in question must be limited. At first this was done by selecting an arbitrary date in the past, before which ‘legal memory’ would not run. The date initially was Dec. 1, 1135 (the death of Henry I); in 1236 it was changed by statute to Dec. 19, 1154 (the coronation of Henry II); and in 1275 it became Sept. 3, 1189 (the coronation of Richard I). Finally, in 1540, an arbitrary period of sixty years was set as the period of ‘legal memory.’ The latter change was probably made because it was felt that a 350-year statute of limitations was somewhat awkward.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 45 n.65 (2d ed. 1984).

LEGAL MIND

legal mind. The intellect, legal capacities, and attitudes of a well-trained lawyer — often used as a personified being <although this distinction occurs naturally to the legal mind, it is too technical to be satisfactory>.

LEGAL POSITIVISM

legal positivism, n. The theory that legal rules are valid only because they are enacted by an existing political authority or accepted as binding in a given society, not because they are grounded in morality or in natural law. • Legal positivism has been espoused by such scholars as H.L.A. Hart. See POSITIVE LAW. Cf. LOGICAL POSITIVISM. — legal positivist, n.

“[I]t will be helpful to offer some comparisons between legal positivism and its counterpart in science. Scientific positivism condemns any inquiry projecting itself beyond observable phenomena; it abjures metaphysics, it renounces in advance any explanation in terms of ultimate causes. Its program of research is to chart the regularities discernible in the phenomena of nature at the point where they become open to human observation, without asking — as it were — how they got there. In the setting of limits to inquiry there is an obvious parallel between scientific and legal positivism. The legal positivist concentrates his attention on law at the point where it emerges from the institutional processes that brought it into being. It is the finally made law itself that furnishes the subject of his inquiries. How it was made and what directions of human effort went into its creation are for him irrelevancies.” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 177–78 (1968).

LEGAL POSSESSOR

legal possessor. See POSSESSOR.

LEGAL PRACTICE

legal practice. See PRACTICE OF LAW.

LEGAL PRACTITIONER

legal practitioner. 1. A lawyer. 2. In the traditional English system, a member of one of the recognized branches of practice.

“Legal practitioners may be either barristers, special pleaders not at the bar, certified conveyancers, or solicitors. The three latter may recover their fees, but the first may not, their acting being deemed of a voluntary nature, and their fees merely in the light of honorary payments; and it follows from this, that no action lies against them for negligence or unskilfulness.” John Indermaur, Principles of the Common Law 169 (Edmund H. Bennett ed., 1st Am. ed. 1878).

LEGAL PREJUDICE

legal prejudice. See PREJUDICE.

legatum (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin fr. legare “to bequeath”] 1.Roman law. A special bequest; a gift left by a deceased person to be paid from the estate by the heir. • Unlike an heir, a legatee acquired a benefit and no duties attached. 2.Hist. A legacy or bequest to the church, esp. for tithes not paid while the donor lived. See MORTUARY .

legatum debiti (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m deb-<<schwa>>-tI). [Latin “legacy of debt”] Roman law. A legacy to the decedent's creditor of what the decedent owes. • This type of legacy was void unless it bettered the creditor's position in some way, as by removing a valid defense that the debtor had to the creditor's claim.

legatum dotis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m doh-tis). [Latin] Roman law. A legacy of dowry. • A husband might bequeath a dowry back to his wife, the result being that the husband's heirs were not entitled to retain the usual deductions for children, and the widow could receive her dowry immediately.

legatum generis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m jen-<<schwa>>-ris). [Latin “legacy of a genus”] Roman law. A legacy of a subject of a general class; a legacy of a kind of thing, rather than a specifically named item. • For example, the testator might make a gift of a horse without specifically naming which one of ten horses in the estate.

legatum liberationis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m lib-<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh-nis). [Latin “legacy of a discharge”] Roman law. A legacy by which a testator released the indebted legatee from a debt. — Also termed liberatio legata (lib-<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>).

legatum nominis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m nahm-<<schwa>>-nis). [Latin “legacy of a name”] Roman law. A legacy by which a testator willed to the legatee a debt owed to the testator from a third party. • The heir was obliged to hand over the relevant documents and cede any rights of action on them.

legatum optionis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m op-shee-oh-nis). [Latin “legacy of an option”] Roman law. A legacy of one of several items that the designated beneficiary chooses from the testator's estate. • Originally, if the legatee died after the testator but before making the selection, the legacy failed. Justinian later changed the law to make selection by the legatee's representative under these circumstances valid.

legatum peculii (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m pi-kyoo-lee-I). [Latin] Roman law. A legacy of a peculium to a free person or to a manumitted slave; a legacy of a slave's peculium with or without the slave. See PECULIUM.

legatum quantitatis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m kwon-ti-tay-tis). [Latin “a legacy of quantity”] Roman law. A general legacy of a certain amount, such as a legacy of two horses.

legatum rei alienae (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m ree-I ay-lee-ee-nee or al-ee-). [Latin “a legacy of something belonging to another”] Roman law. A legacy of an item that belongs to a third party. • The heir was obliged to purchase the item from the third party, if that was possible, and give it to the legatee or otherwise pay its value to the legatee.

legatum universitatis (l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>m yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-tay-tis). [Latin “a universal legacy”] Hist. A legacy of the testator's entire estate.

LEGES EDWARDI CONFESSORIS

leges Edwardi Confessoris (lee-jeez ed-wahr-dī kon-f<<schwa>>-sor-is), n.[Latin “Laws of Edward the Confessor”] Hist. A legal treatise written between 1130 and 1135, of dubious authority, compiling English law as it stood at the end of the reign of Henry I.

“[W]e have a book [leges Edwardi Confessoris] written in Latin which expressly purports to give us the law of Edward as it was stated to the Conqueror in the fourth year of his reign by juries representing the various parts of England It is a private work of a bad and untrustworthy kind. It has about it something of the political pamphlet and is adorned with pious legends. The author, perhaps a secular clerk of French parentage, writes in the interest of the churches, and, it is to be feared, tells lies for them.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 103 (2d ed. 1898).

LEGES ET CONSUECUDINES REGNI

leges et consuetudines regni (lee-jeez et kon-sw<<schwa>>-t[y]oo-d<<schwa>>-nee-z reg-nI), n.[Latin “laws and customs of the kingdom”] Hist. The common law. • This was the accepted term for the common law since at least the late 12th century.

leges Henrici (lee-jeez hen-rI-sI), n.[Latin] Hist. A book anonymously written between 1114 and 1118 containing Anglo-Saxon and Norman law. • The book lends insight to the period before the full development of Norman law in England. — Also termed leges Henrici Primi.

“Closely connected with the Quadripartitus is a far more important book, the so-called Leges Henrici. It seems to have been compiled shortly before the year 1118. After a brief preface, it gives us Henry's coronation charter (this accounts for the name which has unfortunately been given in modern days to the whole book), and then the author makes a gallant, if forlorn, attempt to state the law of England. At first sight the outcome seems to be a mere jumble of fragments But the more closely we examine the book, the more thoroughly convinced we shall be that its author has undertaken a serious task in a serious spirit; he means to state the existing law of the land” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 99 (2d ed. 1898).

leges imperii (lee-jeez im-peer-ee-I). [Latin] Roman law. Laws conferring lawmaking and other powers on the emperor. — Also termed leges de imperio.

LEGES JULIAE

leges Juliae (lee-jeez joo-lee-ee). See lex Julia iudiciorum publicorum under LEX JULIA.

LEGES NON SCRIPTAE

leges non scriptae (lee-jeez non skrip-tee). [Latin] Hist. Unwritten or customary laws, including ancient acts of Parliament. Cf. LEGES SCRIPTAE.

LEGES PUBLICAE

leges publicae (lee-jeez p<<schwa>>b-l<<schwa>>-see). [Latin] Roman law. Statutes passed by the vote of the Roman people in popular assemblies. • Most leges publicae were of temporary political interest but some, such as the lex Aquilia or the lex Falcidia, had a long life. — Often shortened to leges.

LEGES REGIAE

leges regiae (lee-jeez ree-ji-ee). [Latin] Roman law. Fragments of customary law relating mostly to religious rites and traditionally attributed to Roman kings.

LEGES SACRATAE

leges sacrae (lee-jeez s<<schwa>>-kray-tee). [Latin] Roman law. Laws whose violation was punished by devoting the offender to the infernal gods.

LEGES SCRIPTAE

legis actio (lee-jis ak-shee-oh). Roman law. A legal or lawful action; an action at law requiring the use of a fixed form of words. • These actions were abolished by the leges Juliae. — Also termed actio legis. Pl. legis actiones (lee-jis ak-shee-oh-nee-z).

LEGIS ACTIO SACRAMENTO

legis actio sacramento. See SACRAMENTO.

LEGISLATE

legislate, vb. 1. To make or enact laws <the role of our lawmakers is to legislate, not to adjudicate>. 2. To bring (something) into or out of existence by making laws; to attempt to control (something) by legislation < virtually every attempt to legislate morality has failed>.

LEGISLATION

legislation. 1. The process of making or enacting a positive law in written form, according to some type of formal procedure, by a branch of government constituted to perform this process. — Also termed lawmaking; statute-making. 2. The law so enacted. 3. The whole body of enacted laws.

ancillary legislation. Legislation that is auxiliary to principal legislation.

antideficiency legislation. 1. Legislation enacted to provide revenue to cover a budget deficiency. 2. Legislation enacted to limit the rights of secured creditors to recover in excess of the security. — Also termed (in sense 2) antideficiency statute.

class legislation. See local and special legislation.

general legislation. Legislation that applies to the community at large. [Cases: Statutes 68. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 154–161.]

judicial legislation. The making of new legal rules by judges; JUDGE-MADE LAW(2).

local and special legislation. Legislation that affects only a specific geographic area or a particular class of persons. • Such legislation is unconstitutional if it arbitrarily or capriciously distinguishes between members of the same class. — Also termed class legislation. [Cases: Statutes 76–104. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 148–149, 151–155, 159, 162–201.] pork-barrel legislation. Legislation that favors a particular local district by allocating funds or resources to projects (such as constructing a highway or a post office) of economic value to the district and of political advantage to the district's legislator.

subordinate legislation. 1. Legislation that derives from any authority other than the sovereign power in a state and that therefore depends for its continued existence and validity on some superior or supreme authority. 2.REGULATION(3).

supreme legislation.Legislation that derives directly from the supreme or sovereign power in a state and is therefore incapable of being repealed, annulled, or controlled by any other legislative authority.

4. A proposed law being considered by a legislature <gun-control legislation was debated in the House>.5. The field of study concentrating on statutes.

LEGISLATIVE-EQUIVALENCY DOCTRINE legislative-equivalency doctrine. The rule that a law should be amended or repealed only by the same procedures that were used to enact it. [Cases: Statutes 129, 149. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 143–144, 243, 246, 250, 276–278.]

LEGISLATIVE FACT

legislative fact. See FACT.

LEGISLATIVE FUNCTION

legislative function. 1. The duty to determine legislative policy. 2. The duty to form and determine future rights and duties. See LEGISLATIVE POWER.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

legislative history. The background and events leading to the enactment of a statute, including hearings, committee reports, and floor debates. • Legislative history is sometimes recorded so that it can later be used to aid in interpreting the statute. [Cases: Statutes 217.2–217.4. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 340–341.]

LEGISLATIVE IMMUNITY

legislative immunity. See IMMUNITY(1).

LEGISLATIVE INTENT

legislative intent. The design or plan that the legislature had at the time of enacting a statute. — Also termed intention of the legislature; intent of the legislature; congressional intent; parliamentary intent. [Cases: Statutes 181(1). C.J.S. Statutes § 315.]

“The intention of the legislature is a common but very slippery phrase, which, popularly understood, may signify anything from intention embodied in positive enactment to speculative opinion as to what the legislature probably would have meant, although there has been an omission to enact it. In a court of law or equity, what the legislature intended to be done or not to be done can only be legitimately ascertained from that which it has chosen to enact, either in express words or by reasonable and necessary implication.” Saloman v. Saloman & Co., [1897] A.C. 22, at 38 (as quoted in Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 36–37 (1976)).

dormant legislative intent. The intent that the legislature would have had if a given ambiguity, inconsistency, or omission had been called to the legislators' minds. — Sometimes shortened to dormant intent. — Also termed latent intent; latent intention.

LEGISLATIVE INVESTIGATION legislative investigation. A formal inquiry conducted by a legislative body incident to its legislative authority. • A legislature has many of the same powers as a court to support a legislative inquiry, including the power to subpoena and cross-examine a witness and to hold a witness in contempt. [Cases: United States 23. C.J.S. United States § 39.]

LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION

legislative jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

LEGISLATIVE LAW

legislative law. See STATUTORY LAW.

LEGISLATIVE OFFICER

legislative officer. See OFFICER(1).

LEGISLATIVE POWER

legislative power. Constitutional law. The power to make laws and to alter them; a legislative body's exclusive authority to make, amend, and repeal laws. • Under federal law, this power is vested in Congress, consisting of the House of Representatives and the Senate. A legislative body may delegate a portion of its lawmaking authority to agencies within the executive branch for purposes of rulemaking and regulation. But a legislative body may not delegate its authority to the judicial branch, and the judicial branch may not encroach on legislative duties. [Cases: Constitutional Law 50–66. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 54, 58–59, 111–168.]

LEGISLATIVE PRIVILEGE

legislative privilege. See PRIVILEGE(1).

LEGISLATIVE RULE

legitim. Scots law. The right of any surviving lawful issue to share in the movable estate of the father. • The legitim comprised one-third of the estate if there was a surviving spouse, or one-half otherwise. — Also termed the bairn's part. Cf. LEGITIME.

legitimacy. 1. Lawfulness. 2. The status of a person who is born within a lawful marriage or who acquires that status by later action of the parents; legal kinship between a child and its parent or parents. Cf. ILLEGITIMACY. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock 1. C.J.S. Children Out-of-Wedlock §§ 2–11.]

“In this age of equality, the question might fairly be asked whether a discussion of child support should even be concerned about ‘legitimacy’ and ‘illegitimacy.’ The answer is ‘yes,’ for several reasons. Most rules regarding child support were fashioned at a time when legitimacy was the precondition to full support entitlement and illegitimate paternity had only limited legal consequences. True, by U.S. Supreme Court doctrine, distinctions between ‘legitimate’ and

'illegitimate' children should no longer be maintainable, but many state statutes have not yet been adapted to this view. Distinctions on the basis of legitimacy, however unconstitutional, continue to be made." Harry D. Krause, Child Support in America 103 (1981).

LEGITIMACY PRESUMPTION legitimacy presumption. See PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY.

LEGITIMA GUBERNATIO

lemon law. 1. A statute designed to protect a consumer who buys a substandard automobile, usu. by requiring the manufacturer or dealer either to replace the vehicle or to refund the full purchase price. • Almost all states have lemon laws in effect. — Also termed lemon protection. [Cases: Consumer Protection 9. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 52–55, 64.] 2. By extension, a statute designed to protect a consumer who buys any product of inferior quality. — Also termed (in sense 2) quality-of-products legislation.

LEMON TEST

Lemon test. A legal standard for judging the state's violation of the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment. • The Lemon test has most often been used in school-related cases. It employs a three-pronged test to determine the state's action: (1) Does the state's action have a religious purpose? (2) Does the state's action have the primary effect of either promoting or inhibiting religion? (3) Does the state's action create an “excessive entanglement” between church and state? Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 91 S.Ct. 2105 (1971). In recent years, the Court has not overturned Lemon but has declined to apply it when deciding Establishment Clause cases.

LE MORT SAISIT LE VIF DOCTRINE

le mort saisit le vif doctrine (l<<schwa>> mor se-zee l<<schwa>> veef). [French “the dead seizes the living”] The principle requiring that there be no gap in the possession of a freehold estate in land, so that legal title vests immediately in the heirs upon the death of the person through whom they claim title. • The doctrine does not exclude unknown heirs or heirs absent at the date of death.

LEND

lend, vb. 1. To allow the temporary use of (something), sometimes in exchange for compensation, on condition that the thing or its equivalent be returned. 2. To provide (money) temporarily on condition of repayment, usu. with interest. [Cases: Contracts 194.]

lender. A person or entity from which something (esp. money) is borrowed.

lending right. Copyright. The power of a copyright owner to control the use of copies of the work beyond the first sale when that use involves offering the copy to the public for temporary use with no consideration required. • Lending rights are recognized among members of the European Commission. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 38.5. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 47, 97.]

LEND-LEASE

le roy (l-*<<schwa>>r wahor l-<<schwa>>* roy), n. [Law French] The king. — Also spelled le roi.

LE ROY LE VEUT

le roy le veut (l-*<<schwa>>r wah l-<<schwa>>* voo). [Law French] Hist. The king (or the queen) wills it. • This is the form of the king's or queen's approval to a public bill passed by Parliament. For a queen, the sentence is la reine le veut.

“If the king consents to a public bill, the clerk usually declares, ‘le roy le veut, the king wills it so to be:’ if to a private bill, ‘soit fait comme il est désiré, be it as it is desired.’ If the king refuses his assent, it is in the gentle language of ‘le roy s'avisera, the king will advise upon it.’” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 184 (1765).

LE ROY REMERCIE SES LOYAL SUJETS, ACCEPTE LEUR BENEVOLENCE

le roy remercie ses loyal sujets, accepte leur benevolence, et ainsi le veut (l<<schwa>>r wah ruu-mair-see say lwI-ahl soo-zhay, ak-sept luu[r] bay-nay-voh-lawns, ay an-see l<<schwa>> vuu). [Law French] Hist. The king thanks his loyal subjects, accepts their benevolence, and therefore wills it to be so. • This is a form of the royal assent to a bill of supply, authorizing money for public purposes. For a queen, the sentence was la reine remercie ses loyal sujets le roy s'avisera (l<<schwa>>r wah sa-veez-rah). [Law French] The king will advise upon it. • This is a form of the refusal of royal assent to a public bill in Parliament (not exercised since 1713). It corresponds to the judicial phrase curia advisari vult. For a queen, the sentence was la reine s'avisera. See CURIA ADVISARI VULT.

LESE MAJESTY

lese majesty (leez maj-<<schwa>>s-tee). [Law French “injured majesty”] 1. A crime against the state, esp. against the ruler. — Also termed laesa majestas; crimen laesae majestatis; crimen majestatis. LESION lesion (lee-zh<<schwa>>n). 1. An injury or wound; esp., an area of wounded tissue. 2. Civil law. Loss from another's failure to perform a contract; the injury suffered by one who did not receive the equivalent value of what was bargained for. La. Civ. Code art. 2589. — Also spelled (in sense 2) lésion. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 89. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 182, 184–185.] 3. LAESIO ENORMIS.

“The concept of lésion, unknown as such to the common law, may be defined as a detriment to one of the parties to a contract which results from an imbalance or disparity between the performance promised on the two sides. Down through the ages, civilians have differed over whether it gave the injured party a right of avoidance or rescission. Classical Roman law, designed for a society whose members were strong enough to protect their own interests, denied the right, but by the time of the French Revolution the right had come to be recognized, particularly by the canonists and Pothier. But the Revolution, both because of its emphasis on individual will and because of economic reasons, was hostile to the concept of lésion and the Civil Code provided that it did not affect the validity of a contract except in certain prescribed instances, most notably the case of the vendor of real property. The number of exceptions was enlarged both by subsequent legislation and, at least indirectly, by judicial decision, and this raised a question of the reversal of the general principle that rejected the concept." Allan Farnsworth, "The Development of the Civil Law of Obligations in New States: Senegal, Madagascar, and Ethiopia," in Essays on the Civil Law of Obligations 64 (Joseph Dainow ed., 1969).

LESION BEYOND MOIETY

lesser-interest clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease allowing the lessee to reduce payments proportionately if the lessor turns out to own less than 100% of the mineral interest. — Also termed proportionate-reduction clause.

LESSER OFFENSE

lesser offense. See lesser included offense under OFFENSE(1).

LESSOR

lessor (les-or or le-sor). One who conveys real or personal property by lease; esp., LANDLORD. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 1. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 1, 2(1, 2), 6(1), 7, 202(5).]

LESSOR OF THE PLAINTIFF

lessor of the plaintiff. Hist. The true party in interest prosecuting an action for ejectment. • At common law, an ejectment action was theoretically only for the recovery of the unexpired term of the lease. Conventions of pleadings at the time required the true plaintiff to grant a fictitious lease, thereby becoming a lessor, to an equally fictitious plaintiff in whose name the action would be prosecuted.

LESSOR'S INTEREST

lessor's interest. The present value of the future income under a lease, plus the present value of the property after the lease expires. Cf. LESSEE'S INTEREST .

LET

let, n. An impediment or obstruction <free to act without let or hindrance>.

let, vb. 1. To allow or permit <the court, refusing to issue an injunction, let the nuisance continue>. 2. LETTER OF CREDENCE letter of credence. Int'l law. A document that accredits a diplomat to the government of the country to which he or she is sent. — Abbr. LC; L/C. — Also termed letters of credence.

LETTER OF CREDIT

letter of credit. Commercial law. An instrument under which the issuer (usu. a bank), at a customer's request, agrees to honor a draft or other demand for payment made by a third party (the beneficiary), as long as the draft or demand complies with specified conditions, and regardless of whether any underlying agreement between the customer and the beneficiary is satisfied. • Letters of credit are governed by Article 5 of the UCC. — Abbr. LC; L/C. — Often shortened to credit. — Also termed circular letter of credit; circular note; bill of credit. [Cases: Banks and Banking 191. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 341–366, 368–370, 372–376.]

“There is some confusion over the exact nature of credits. They resemble a number of commercial devices that are not credits. Often, there is confusion between letters of credit and guaranties, and occasionally between letters of credit and lines of credit. In the credit transaction itself, it is important to distinguish the credit from other contracts and from the acceptance. Generally, the broad credit transaction consists of three separate relationships. These include those that are (1) between the issuer and the beneficiary; (2) between the beneficiary and the account party; and (3) between the account party and the issuer. The first is the letter-of-credit engagement. The second is usually called the underlying contract, and the third is called the application agreement.” John F. Dolan, The Law of Letters of Credit ¶ 2.01, at 2-2 (1984).

“A seller hesitates to give up possession of its goods before it is paid. But a buyer wishes to have control of the goods before parting with its money. To relieve this simple tension, merchants developed the device known as the ‘letter of credit’ or simply the ‘credit’ or the ‘letter.’ Today, letters of credit come in two broad varieties. The ‘commercial’ letter dates back at least 700 years. It is a mode of payment in the purchase of goods, mostly in international sales. The ‘standby’ letter of credit is a much more recent mutant. It ‘backs up’ obligations in a myriad of settings. In the most common standby a bank promises to pay a creditor upon documentary certification of the applicant's default.” 3 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 26-1, clean letter of credit. A letter of credit that is payable on its presentation. • No document needs to be presented along with it. — Also termed suicide letter of credit. Cf. documentary letter of credit.

commercial letter of credit. A letter of credit used as a method of payment in a sale of goods (esp. in an international transaction), with the buyer being the issuer's customer and the seller being the beneficiary, so that the seller can obtain payment directly from the issuer instead of from the buyer.

confirmed letter of credit. A letter of credit that directly obligates a financing agency (such as a bank) doing business in the seller's financial market to a contract of sale. UCC § 2-325(3).

documentary letter of credit. A letter of credit that is payable when presented with another document, such as a certificate of title or invoice. — Abbr. DL/C. Cf. clean letter of credit.

export letter of credit. A commercial letter of credit issued by a foreign bank, at a foreign buyer's request, in favor of a domestic exporter.

general letter of credit. A letter of credit addressed to any and all persons without naming anyone in particular. Cf. special letter of credit.

guaranty letter of credit. See standby letter of credit.

import letter of credit. A commercial letter of credit issued by a domestic bank, at an importer's request, in favor of a foreign seller.

irrevocable letter of credit (i-rev-k-*b*l). 1. A letter of credit that the issuing bank guarantees will not be withdrawn or canceled before the expiration date. 2. A letter of credit that cannot be modified or revoked without the customer's consent. 3. A letter of credit that cannot be modified or canceled without the consent of all parties.

negotiation letter of credit. A letter of credit in which the issuer's engagement runs to drawers and indorsers under a standard negotiation clause.

“Letter-of-credit law has long distinguished the straight credit from the negotiation credit. The engagement of the former runs to the beneficiary; the engagement of the latter runs to ‘drawers, endorsers, and bona fide holders.’ This quoted phrase is the traditional negotiation clause. The significance of it is that it obviously extends the credit engagement to parties other than the person with whom the account party is doing business.” John F. Dolan, The Law of Letters of Credit ¶ 8.02[6], at 8-11 (1984).

open letter of credit. A letter of credit that can be paid on a simple draft without the need for documentary title.

revocable letter of credit (rev-k-*b*l). A letter of credit in which the issuing bank reserves the right to cancel and withdraw from the transaction upon appropriate notice. • The letter cannot be revoked if the credit has already been paid by a third party. [Cases: Banks and Banking 191.10. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 341–366, 368–370, 372–376.]

revolving letter of credit. A letter of credit that self-renews by providing for a continuing line of credit that the beneficiary periodically draws on and the bank customer periodically repays. • A revolving letter of credit is used when there will be multiple drafts under a single transaction or multiple transactions under a single credit. — Abbr. RL/C.

special letter of credit. A letter of credit addressed to a particular individual, firm, or corporation. Cf. general letter of credit.

standby letter of credit. A letter of credit used to guarantee either a monetary or a nonmonetary obligation (such as the performance of construction work), whereby the issuing bank agrees to pay the beneficiary if the bank customer defaults on its obligation. — Abbr. SL/C. — Also termed guaranty letter of credit. [Cases: Banks and Banking 191.10. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 341–366, 368–370, 372–376.]

straight letter of credit. A letter of credit requiring that drafts drawn under it be presented to a specified party.

suicide letter of credit. See clean letter of credit.

time letter of credit. A letter of credit that is duly honored by the issuer accepting drafts drawn under it. — Also termed acceptance credit; usance credit.

transferable letter of credit. A letter of credit that authorizes the beneficiary to assign the right to draw under it. [Cases: Banks and Banking 191.10. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 341–366, 368–370, 372–376.]

traveler's letter of credit. 1. A letter of credit addressed to a correspondent bank, from which one can draw credit by identifying oneself as the person in whose favor the credit is drawn. 2. A letter of credit used by a person traveling abroad, by which the issuing bank authorizes payment of funds to the holder in the local currency by a local bank. • The holder signs a check on the issuing bank, and the local bank forwards it to the issuing bank for its credit.

LETTER OF EXCHANGE

letter of exchange. See DRAFT(1).

LETTER OF INTENT

letter of intent. A written statement detailing the preliminary understanding of parties who plan to enter into a contract or some other agreement; a noncommittal writing preliminary to a contract. • A letter of intent is not meant to be binding and does not hinder the parties from bargaining with a third party. Businesspeople typically mean not to be bound by a letter of intent, and courts ordinarily do not enforce one; but courts occasionally find that a commitment has been made. — Abbr. LOI. — Also termed memorandum of intent; memorandum of understanding; term sheet; commitment letter. Cf. precontract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Contracts 25. C.J.S. Contracts § 60.]

LETTER OF LICENSE

letter of license.English law. An agreement signed by all the creditors of a financially troubled business that does the following: (1) grants the debtor more time to pay debts, (2) permits the debtor to continue business in the hope of overcoming its financial distress, and (3) protects the debtor from arrest, lawsuit, or other interference while the letter is in effect. See ARRANGEMENT WITH CREDITORS.

LETTER OF RECALL

letter of recall. 1. A document sent from one nation's executive to that of another, summoning a minister back to his or her own country. 2. A manufacturer's letter to a buyer of a particular product, asking the buyer to bring the product back to the dealer for repair or replacement. — Also termed recall letter.

LETTER OF RECREDENTIALS letter of recredentials (ree-kr<<schwa>>-den-sh<<schwa>>lz). A formal letter from a host country's diplomatic secretary of state to a minister or ambassador who has been recalled by his or her own country. • The letter officially accredits the foreign minister back to his or her home country.

LETTER OF REQUEST

letter of request. 1. A document issued by one court to a foreign court, requesting that the foreign court (1) take evidence from a specific person within the foreign jurisdiction or serve process on an individual or corporation within the foreign jurisdiction and (2) return the testimony or proof of service for use in a pending case. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 28. — Also termed letter rogatory (rog-<<schwa>>-tor-ee); rogatory letter; requisitory letter (ri-kwiz-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1312.] 2. An instrument by which an inferior court withdraws or waives jurisdiction so that a matter can be heard in the court immediately above. Pl. letters of request.

LETTER OF THE LAW

letter of the law.The strictly literal meaning of the law, rather than the intention or policy behind it. — Also termed litera legis. Cf. SPIRIT OF THE LAW . [Cases: Statutes 183. C.J.S. Statutes § 317.]

LETTER OF UNDERTAKING

letter of undertaking.An agreement by which a shipowner — to avoid having creditors seize the ship and release it on bond — agrees to post security on the ship, and to enter an appearance, acknowledge ownership, and pay any final decree entered against the vessel whether it is lost or not. • A letter of undertaking is often issued by the shipowner's liability insurer. [Cases: Admiralty 57. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 162–168.]

“Such informal or extra-legal agreements save court costs and the marshal's fees, avoid the annoyance of having the vessel even temporarily arrested and may well be cheaper than the usual surety bond In Continental Grain Co. v. Federal Barge Lines, Inc., [268 F.2d 240 (5th Cir. 1959), aff'd, 364 U.S. 19, 80 S.Ct. 1470 (1960)], Judge Brown commented that a letter of undertaking given by a shipowner would be treated ‘as though, upon the libel being filed, the vessel had actually been seized, a claim filed, a stipulation to abide decrees with sureties executed and filed by claimant, and the vessel formally released. Any other course would imperil the desirable avoidance of needless cost, time and inconvenience to litigants, counsel, ships, clerks, marshals, keepers and court personnel through the ready acceptance of such letters of undertakings.’ [268 F.2d at 243.] If, as Judge Brown suggests, the informal agreement is treated as having the same effect as a formal release under bond or stipulation, few questions relating to their use will ever have to be litigated.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 9-89, at 800–01 (2d ed. 1975).

LETTER ROGATORY

letter rogatory. See LETTER OF REQUEST.

LETTER RULING

letter ruling. Tax. A written statement issued by the IRS to an inquiring taxpayer, explaining the tax implications of a particular transaction. — Also termed private letter ruling. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3049.]

letters. Wills & estates. A court order giving official authority to a fiduciary to conduct appointed tasks. • Examples are letters of administration, letters of conservatorship, letters of guardianship, and letters testamentary. Unif. Probate Code § 1-201(23). See LETTER(2). [Cases: Executors and Administrators 27; Guardian and Ward 16. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators § 79.]

LETTERS AD COLLIGENDUM BONA DEFUNCTI

letters ad colligendum bona defuncti (ad kol-<<schwa>>-jen-d*<<schwa>>m boh-n<<schwa>>* di-fungk-ti), n. [Law Latin] Hist. An authorization from a judicial officer to an approved person to collect and maintain the goods of a person who died intestate. • These letters were issued only if no representative or creditor existed to exercise this function.

LETTERS OF MARQUE

letters of marque (mahrk). A license authorizing a private citizen to engage in reprisals against citizens or vessels of another nation. • Congress has the exclusive power to grant letters of marque (U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 11), but it has not done so since the 19th century. — Also termed letters of marque and reprisal.

“[F]ormerly it was not uncommon for a state to issue ‘letters of marque’ to one of its own subjects, who had met with a denial of justice in another state, authorizing him to redress the wrong for himself by forcible action, such as the seizure of the property of subjects of the delinquent state.” J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 321 (5th ed. 1955).

LETTERS OF SAFE CONDUCT

letters of safe conduct.Hist. Formal written permission from the English sovereign to a citizen of a nation at war with England, permitting that person to travel and ship goods, to England or on the high seas, without risk of seizure. • Passports or licenses from foreign ambassadors now may serve the same purpose. See SAFE CONDUCT.

LETTERS OF SLAINS

letters of slains.Hist. Letters to the Crown from the relatives of a slain person concurring with the offender's application for a royal pardon. • A pardon could not be granted without the family's concurrence. — Also spelled letters of slanes.

LEVERAGE CONTRACT

leverage contract. An agreement for the purchase or sale of a contract for the future delivery of a specified commodity, usu. silver, gold, or another precious metal, in a standard unit and quantity, for a particular price, with no right to a particular lot of the commodity. • A leverage contract operates much like a futures contract, except that there is no designated contract market for leverage contracts. The market sets the uniform terms of a futures contract. But in a leverage contract, the individual merchant sets the terms, does not guarantee a repurchase market, and does not guarantee to continue serving or acting as the broker for the purchaser. Leverage contracts are generally forbidden for agricultural commodities. 7 USCA § 23(a). Cf. FUTURES CONTRACT. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation 10. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 455, 470.]

LEX COMMISSORIA

lex commissoria (leks kom-i-sor-ee-a). [Latin “forfeiture clause” or “cancellation clause”] Roman law. 1. A term in a contract of sale allowing the seller to rescind the sale if the price was not paid by the agreed time. 2. A clause by which, in a pledge agreement, a debtor and creditor could agree that if the debtor fails to timely pay the debt, the creditor obtains absolute title of the pledged property.

“By the lex commissoria at Rome, the debtor and creditor might agree that if the debtor did not pay at the day, the pledge should become the absolute property of the creditor. But a law of Constantine abolished this power, as unjust and oppressive, and having a growing asperity in practice.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *583 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

3. An agreement in which such a failure-to-timely-pay clause appears. — Also written commissoria lex. 4. LEX COMMERCII. “But the position of the seller was a good deal more awkward, especially if he had sold a unique object, such as a piece of land, for, apart from express agreement, he would have to retain the land or other object in case the buyer later came along with the price and demanded delivery. The difficulty could be avoided by the insertion of a term known as lex commissoria, which gave the seller an option of declaring the contract at an end if the buyer did not pay within the agreed time. This term probably became common form in Roman law, but was never implied. It always had to be expressly inserted in the contract Not until the time of Lord Mansfield was a similar development complete in English law, though in the end we carried it much further than the Romans.” W.W. Buckland & Arnold D. McNair, Roman Law & Common Law: A Comparison in Outline 231 (F.H. Lawson ed., 2d ed. 1952).

LEX COMMUNIS

lex communis (leks k<<schwa>>-myoo-nis), n. [Latin] The common law. See JUS COMMUNE.

lex Cornelia de edictis (leks kor-nee-lee-<<schwa>> dee ee-dik-t<<schwa>>s). See lex Cornelia de jurisdictione.

lex Cornelia de falsis (leks kor-nee-lee-<<schwa>> dee fal-sis or fawl-sis). [Latin] Roman law. See lex cornelia nummaria testamentaria.

lex Cornelia de injuriis (leks kor-nee-lee-⟨schwa⟩ dee in-joor-ee-is). [Latin] Roman law. The Cornelian law providing a civil action for the recovery of a penalty in certain cases of bodily injury and violent invasion of property. • The precise boundary between the crime and the delict is not clear. But the two procedures probably existed side by side.

“Lex Cornelia de iniuriis Punished three kinds of injury committed by violence: pulsare (beating), verberare (striking, causing pains) and domum introire (forcible invasion of another's domicile).” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 549 (1953).

lex Cornelia de jurisdictione (leks kor-nee-lee-⟨schwa⟩ dee joor-is-dik-shee-oh-nee). [Latin] Roman law. The law forbidding a praetor from departing, during his term of office, from the edict he had promulgated at the term's commencement. • It did not, however, forbid the offer of new remedies. — Also termed lex Cornelia de edictis.

lex Cornelia de sicariis et veneficis (leks kor-nee-lee-⟨schwa⟩ dee si-kair-ee-is et v⟨schwa⟩-nee-f⟨schwa⟩-sis). [Latin] Roman law. A law combining jurisdiction over gangster-type killings and poisoning, or attempts at such crimes, and addressing the bringing of false witness and bribery of a judge or juror, if those actions brought about a person's death. • The statute was soon extended to cover murder generally when committed within or close to Rome. Emperor Antoninus Pius added a provision for murder to include a slave owner who deliberately killed his own slave.

lex Cornelia de sponsu (leks kor-nee-lee-⟨schwa⟩ dee spon-s[y]oo). [Latin] Roman law. A law prohibiting a person from acting as surety for the same debtor to the same creditor in the same year for more than a specified amount.

lex Cornelia nummaria testamentaria (leks kor-nee-lee-⟨schwa⟩ n⟨schwa⟩-mair-ee-⟨schwa⟩ tes-t⟨schwa⟩-men-tair-ee-⟨schwa⟩). Roman law. A statute making forgery (falsum) a crime, and creating a special court to try forgery cases. • Until the later Roman Empire, falsum included both coining and document forgery. — Also termed lex Cornelia de falsis. See FALSUM(2).

“It is not absolutely clear whether Sulla passed two laws, one on forging wills and the other on forging money, or whether the one lex Cornelia nummaria testamentaria provided for both sorts of offence to be heard by the quaestio de falsis which it created.” O.F. Professor Robinson, The Criminal Law of Ancient Rome 36 (1995).

LEX CURIATA

lex curiata (leks kyoor-ee-ay-t⟨schwa⟩). [Latin] Roman law. Laws passed in the comitia curiata. Pl. leges curiatae (lee-jeez kyoor-ee-ay-tee). See comitia curiata under COMITIA.

lex Furia testamentaria (leks fyoor-ee-<<schwa>> tes-t<<schwa>>-men-tair-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law.A law prohibiting a testator from bequeathing more than 1,000 asses (i.e., 722 pounds) of copper or the equivalent. • This law, dating from the middle of the republic, was one of the first to restrict legacies. It was passed between 204 and 169 B.C.

“The lex Furia... provided that no one except [close] relatives ... should take by will or gift in view of death more than 1000 asses [copper coins]. It did not rescind the disposition, but enacted a penalty of four times the amount, recoverable by a stringent procedure from anyone who took such a legacy or gift, contrary to the law. But this law left it open to a testator to leave nothing to the heir, supposing he made a sufficient number of legatees up to the statutable limit.” 1 Henry John Roby, Roman Private Law 344–45 (1902).

lex Julia de cessione bonorum (leks joo-lee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩ dee ses[h]-ee-oh-nee b⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-nor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-m). [Latin] Roman law. A law governing bankruptcies allowing a debtor to avoid further adverse action by ceding all the debtor's property to the creditors.

lex Julia de majestate (leks joo-lee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩ dee maj-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-stay-tee). [Latin] Roman law. A treason law imposing capital punishment on a person acting against the emperor or state. • Enacted about 8 B.C., this was the last specific law on treason.

lex Julia de maritandis ordinibus (leks joo-lee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩ dee mar-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-tan-dis or-din-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-b⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-s). [Latin] Roman law. A law regulating marriages, imposing a duty to be married on all men between 25 and 60, and on all women between 20 and 50, and forbidding marriages between senators and freedwomen, and forbidding senators and all other freeborn citizens from marrying actresses, prostitutes, and the like. • This 18 B.C. statute is usu. considered as one law with the lex Papia Poppea of A.D. 9, which exempted women with three children or more from being placed under guardianship.

lex Julia de peculatu (leks joo-lee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩ dee pek-y⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-lay-t [y]oo). [Latin] Roman law. A law punishing the embezzlement of public moneys. • Originally a magistrate determined the punishment. The same court had jurisdiction for transgressions under lex Julia de residuis and for sacrilege, the wrongful taking of money dedicated to sacred or religious purposes. See lex Julia de residuis.

lex Julia de residuis (leks joo-lee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩ dee ri-zij-oo-is). [Latin] Roman law. A law punishing persons who could not account for public money lawfully in their charge. See lex Julia de peculatu.

lex Julia judiciorum privatorum (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> joo-dish-ee-or-*<< schwa>>m prI-v<<schwa>>-tor-<<schwa>>*m). See lex Julia judiciorum publicorum.

lex Julia judiciorum publicorum (leks joo-lee-<<schwa>> joo-dish-ee-or-*<< schwa>>m p<<schwa>>-bli-kor-<<schwa>>*m). [Latin] Roman law. An Augustan law that, with the lex Julia judiciorum privatorum, reformed various aspects of civil procedure. • The two laws are often referred to together as leges Juliae, or duae Juliae. Together with the lex Aebutia, the leges Juliae largely abolished the legis actiones, the ancient form of Roman civil procedure that relied on fixed oral forms.

LEX JUNIA NORBANA

lex Junia Norbana (leks joo-nee-<<schwa>> nor-bay-n-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law creating the status of Junian Latin for informally manumitted slaves. — Often shortened to lex Junia. See LATINI JUNIANI.

“After the lex Junia Norbana, we find the following classes of persons, under the division of the law of persons into free men or slaves: 1. Ingenui, or persons born free. 2. Libertini... ex-slaves who, on gaining their freedom, became cives. 3. Latini Juniani... ex-slaves who, on manumission and by reason of some defect therein, became something short of full citizens. 4. Dediticii.... 5. Slaves proper.” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 70 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

LEX LIGEANTIAE

lex ligeantiae (leks lij-ee-an-shee-ee). [Law Latin] The law of the country to which a person owes national allegiance. • Some jurists have thought that this law ought to decide many of the questions that have usu. been determined by the lex domicilii.

LEX LOCI

lex loci (leks loh-sI). [Latin] 1. The law of the place; local law. Cf. LEX FORI . 2. LEX LOCI CONTRACTUS.

LEX LOCI ACTUS

lex loci actus (leks loh-sIak-t<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] The law of the place where an act is done or a transaction is completed. — Often shortened to lex actus.

LEX LOCI CELEBRATIONIS

lex loci celebrationis (leks loh-sI sel-<<schwa>>-bray-shee-oh-nis). [Latin “law of the place of the ceremony”] The law of the place where a contract, esp. of marriage, is made. • This law usu. governs when the validity of a marriage is at issue. Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 283(2) (1971).

LEX LOCI CONTRACTUS

lex loci contractus (leks loh-sI k<<schwa>>n-trak-t<<schwa>>s). [Latin] The law of the place where a contract is executed or to be performed. • Lex loci contractus is often the proper law by which to decide contractual disputes. — Often shortened to lex loci; lex contractus. [Cases: Contracts 144. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 91–93; Contracts §§ 13–23, 25.]

“The lex loci contractus controls the nature, construction, and validity of the contract; and on this broad foundation the law of contracts, founded on necessity and commercial convenience, is said to have been originally established. If the rule were otherwise, the citizens of one country could not safely contract, or carry on commerce, in the territories of another.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *454 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

LEX LOCI DELICTI

lex loci delicti (leks loh-sI d<<schwa>>-lik-tI). [Latin] The law of the place where the tort or other wrong was committed. — Often shortened to lex delicti. — Also termed lex loci delictus; lex loci delicti commissi; place-of-wrong rule; place-of-wrong law. Cf. LOCUS DELICTI. [Cases: Negligence 204; Torts 2. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace § 272; Conflict of Laws §§ 16–17, 99; Negligence §§ 3, 651–652; Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 3, 40; Torts §§ 27–29.]

LEX LONGOBARDORUM

lex Longobardorum (leks long-goh-bahr-dor-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “law of the Lombards”] Hist. An ancient legal code developed between the fifth and eighth centuries, in force until the reign of Charlemagne; the laws of the Lombards, seen cumulatively from the Edict of Rothari in A.D. 643, and added to by Liutprand. • It was a subject of study in the early law school at Pavia. — Also spelled lex Langobardorum; lex Langobardica.

LEX MAJORIS PARTIS

lex majoris partis (leks m<<schwa>>-jor-is pahr-tis). [Latin “law of the major party”] Majority rule. See MAJORITY RULE.

“The voice of the majority decides. For the lex majoris partis is the law of all councils, elections, &c. where not otherwise expressly provided. But if the house be equally divided, ‘semper presumatur pro negante:’ that is, the former law is not to be changed but by a majority.” Thomas Jefferson, A Manual of Parliamentary Practice 105 (1801) (citation omitted).

LEX MANIFESTA

lex manifesta (leks man-<<schwa>>-fes-t<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. Open law; manifest law. 2. Trial by duel or ordeal. — Also termed manifest law.

LEX MARITYMA

lex maritima (leks mair-i-tee-m<<schwa>>). Hist. The body of customs, usage, and local rules governing seagoing commerce that developed in the maritime countries of medieval Europe.

LEX MERCATORIA

lex mercatoria (leks m<<schwa>>-r-k<<schwa>>-tor-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin “mercantile law”] See LAW MERCHANT.

LEX MERCIORUM

lex merciorum (leks m<<schwa>>-r-shee-or-<<schwa>>m). See MERCENLAGE.

LEX MONETAE

lex monetae (leks m<<schwa>>-nee-tee). [Latin] The law of the country whose money is in question.

LEX NATURAE

lex naturae (leks n<<schwa>>-tyoor-ee). See NATURAL LAW.

LEX NATURALE

lex naturale (leks nach-<<schwa>>-ray-lee). [Law Latin] See NATURAL LAW.

LEX NON SCRIPTA

lex non scripta (leks non skrip-t<<schwa>>). [Latin “unwritten law”] Common law, including customs and local laws, as distinguished from statutory law; UNWRITTEN LAW. Pl. leges non scriptae. Cf. LEX SCRIPTA.

LEX ORDINANDI

lex ordinandi (leks or-d<<schwa>>-nan-dI). See LEX FORI.

LEX PAPIA POPPEA

lex Papia Poppea (leks pay-pee-<<schwa>> pah-pee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law proposed by the consuls Papius and Poppeus at the request of Augustus. • It is usu. considered with the lex Julia de maritandis ordinibus as one law. — Also termed Papian law; Poppean law. See lex Julia de maritandis ordinibus under LEX JULIA.

LEX PATRIAE

lex patriae (leks pay-tree-ee orpa-tree-ee). [Latin] National law; the law of one's country. See PERSONAL LAW.

LEX PETRONIA

lex Petronia (leks p<<schwa>>-troh-nee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law forbidding masters from sending their slaves to fight wild beasts in the arena, without a magistrate's authorization. • This law was enacted sometime before A.D. 79.

LEX PLAETORIA

lex Plaetoria (leks pli- or plee-tor-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law protecting minors against frauds and probably permitting them to apply for a guardian or curator to assist them.

LEX POETELIA

lex Poetelia (leks poh-<<schwa>>-tee-lee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law abolishing a creditor's right to reduce his debtor to slave-like treatment. • This law was enacted sometime before 300 B.C.

LEX POMPEIA DE PARRICIDIIS

lex Pompeia de parricidiis (leks pom-pee-<<schwa>> dee par-<<schwa>>-sI-dee-is). [Latin] Roman law. A law of 70 or 55 B.C. defining what murders amounted to parricide and establishing a special expiatory punishment, in which the offender was executed by being sewn up in a sack with a dog, a rooster, a viper, and a monkey, and thrown into the sea or a river.

LEX POSTERIOR DEROGAT PRIORI lex posterior derogat priori (leks pah-steer-ee-<<schwa>>r der-<<schwa>>-gat pr I-or-I). [Latin “a later law prevails over an earlier one”] The principle that a later statute negates the effect of a prior one if the later statute expressly repeals, or is obviously repugnant to, the earlier law.

LEX PRAETORIA

lex praetoria (leks pri- or pree-tor-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin “praetorian law”] 1. Roman law. Law laid down in the praetor's edict. Cf. JUS PRAETORIUM. 2. Hist. The applicable rules in a court of equity.

LEX PRIVATA

lex privata (leks prI-vay-t<<schwa>>). [Latin "private law"] Roman law. A term in a private contract. — Sometimes shortened to lex.

LEX PUBLICA

lex publica (leks p<<schwa>>b-li-k<<schwa>>). [Latin "public law"] Roman law. 1. A law passed by a popular assembly and binding on all people. 2. A written law. — Sometimes shortened to lex.

LEX PUBLILIA

lex Publilia (leks p[y]oo-blil-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin "Publilian law"] Roman law. A law dispensing with senatorial approval for the enactments of the plebs (common citizens). • In 339 B.C. these laws strengthened the force of the plebiscita and indirectly weakened the patrician element in the Senate by permitting auctoritas patrum to be given in advance for some legislation, and requiring one of the censors to be a plebeian. — Also termed leges Publiliae Philonis.

LEX REGIA

lex regia (leks ree-jee-<<schwa>>). [Latin "royal law"] Roman law. A law ostensibly enacted by the Roman people granting wide legislative and executive powers to the emperor, later interpreted as providing that the emperor was a source of law, the emperor had full legislative powers, and the emperor's will or pleasure had the full force of law. See LEGES IMPERII.

LEX REI SITAE

lex rei sitae (leks ree-IsI-tee). [Law Latin] Scots law. The law of the place where the property is situated.

LEX RHODIA

lex Rhodia (leks roh-dee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. The Rhodian law governing the subject of jettison. • This began as the common law of the ancient Mediterranean Sea. It required that all consignors and the shipmaster share losses equally. — Also termed lex Rhodia de jactu. See RHODIAN LAW.

LEX ROMANA

lex Romana (leks r<<schwa>>-may-n<<schwa>>). [Latin] ROMAN LAW.

LEX ROMANA VISIGOTHORUM

Lex Romana Visigothorum (leks r<<schwa>>-may-n<<schwa>> viz-<<schwa>>-gah-thor-<<schwa>>m). See BREVIARIUM ALARICIANUM.

LEX SALICA

lex Salica (leks sal-<<schwa>>-k*<<schwa>>*). [Latin] See SALIC LAW.

LEX SCRIBONIA

lex Scribonia (leks skri-boh-nee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law of the late Republic abolishing the acquisition of praedial servitudes through prescription.

LEX SCRIPTA

lex scripta (leks skrip-t*<<schwa>>*). [Latin “written law”] Law authorized or created by statute rather than custom or usage; WRITTEN LAW. Pl. leges scriptae. Cf. LEX NON SCRIPTA.

LEX SEMPRONIA

lex Sempronia (leks sem-proh-nee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law of 122 B.C. transferring the duty of jury service from the senators to the equestrians (knights). • The control of the juries in the quaestiones perpetuae, particularly in extortion (repetundae) trials, was one of the key areas of political conflict in the late Republic.

LEX SILIA

lex Silia (leks sil-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law providing for personal actions for a fixed sum of money; specif., a law from perhaps 250 B.C. introducing the legis actio per conditionem to claim a fixed sum of money.

LEX SITUS

lex situs (leks sI-t*<<schwa>>*s). [Law Latin] The law of the place where property is located. — Also termed lex loci rei sitae. See Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws §§ 222 et seq. (1971).

LEX SOLUTIONIS

lex solutionis. See LEX LOCI SOLUTIONIS.

LEX TALIONIS

lex talionis (leks tal-ee-oh-nis). [Law Latin] The law of retaliation, under which punishment should be in kind — an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, and so on — but no more. — Also termed eye for an eye; jus talionis; principle of retribution.

“Kant, for example, expresses the opinion that punishment cannot rightly be inflicted for the sake of any benefit to be derived from it either by the criminal himself or by society, and that the sole and sufficient reason and justification of it lies in the fact that evil has been done by him who suffers it. Consistently with this view, he derives the measure of punishment, not from any elaborate considerations as to the amount needed for the repression of crime, but from the simple principle of lex talionis: ‘Thine eye shall not pity; but life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot' [Deuteronomy, xix 21]. No such principle, indeed, is capable of literal interpretation; but subject to metaphorical and symbolical applications it is in Kant's view the guiding rule of the ideal scheme of criminal justice." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 118 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

"But if the old form of the lex talionis, an eye for an eye or a tooth for a tooth, sounds too barbaric today, may we not reformulate the retributive theory and put it thus: Everyone is to be punished alike in proportion to the gravity of his offense or to the extent to which he has made others suffer?" Morris R. Cohen, Reason and Law 53 (1961).

LEX TERRAE

lex terrae (leks ter-ee). [Law Latin] See LAW OF THE LAND.

LEX THEODOSIANA

lex Theodosiana (leks thee-<<schwa>>-doh-see-an-<<schwa>>). See THEODOSIAN CODE .

LEX VALERIA HORATIA

lex Valeria Horatia (leks v-<<schwa>>-leer-ee-<<schwa>> h-<<schwa>>-ray-shee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law making enactments by the assembly of the people in tribes binding on all citizens. • Several laws of this name were passed in 449 B.C. One was aimed at strengthening the force of plebiscita. Another protected plebeian tribunes with sacrosanctity. A third, more dubious, law falls between the lex Valeria of 509 B.C. and the lex Valeria of 300 B.C. in granting the right of provocatio to the Roman citizen oppressed by a magistrate. Cf. LEX HORTENSIA.

LEX VALIDITATIS

lex validitatis (leks val-<<schwa>>-tay-tis). [Latin] Conflict of laws. The presumption of validity given to marriages, contracts, and other matters.

LEX VISIGOTHORUM

lex Visigothorum (leks viz-<<schwa>>-gah-thor-<<schwa>>m). [Latin "law of the Visigoths"] The law of a division of the Goths (a Germanic tribe) known as the Visigoths, who conquered Spain in the 5th century. • In the late 7th century, Kings Recceswinth and Erwig imposed a Visigothic common law, and it is to this law that the phrase lex Visigothorum usu applies. — Also spelled lex Wisigothorum. — Also termed liber iudiciorum.

LEX VOCONIA

lex Voconia (leks v-<<schwa>>-koh-nee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A law enacted in 169 B.C. to regulate inheritance (esp. by women) by capping the amount receivable by anyone as legacy or gift in view of death at no more than the heirs took. • The Falcidian law superseded the lex Voconia. — Also termed Voconian law. See FALCIDIAN LAW.

“Lex Voconia Contained several provisions concerned with the law of succession: (1) No woman could be heir ... to an estate having a value greater than a fixed amount (2) Admitted among female agnates only the sisters of the deceased to intestate succession. (3) No one person — male or female — could receive by legacy more than the heir (or all heirs together) instituted in the last will.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 561 (1953).

LEX WALLENSICA

lex Wallensica (leks wawl-en-z<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>), n.[Latin] Welsh law.

LIABILITY

liability, n. 1. The quality or state of being legally obligated or accountable; legal responsibility to another or to society, enforceable by civil remedy or criminal punishment <liability for injuries caused by negligence>. — Also termed legal liability; responsibility; subjection. 2. (often pl.) A financial or pecuniary obligation; DEBT <tax liability> <assets and liabilities>.

“The term ‘liability’ is one of at least double signification. In one sense it is the synonym of duty, the correlative of right; in this sense it is the opposite of privilege or liberty. If a duty rests upon a party, society is now commanding performance by him and threatening penalties. In a second sense, the term ‘liability’ is the correlative of power and the opposite of immunity. In this case society is not yet commanding performance, but it will so command if the possessor of the power does some operative act. If one has a power, the other has a liability. It would be wise to adopt the second sense exclusively. Accurate legal thinking is difficult when the fundamental terms have shifting senses.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 9 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“Liability or responsibility is the bond of necessity that exists between the wrongdoer and the remedy of the wrong. This vinculum juris is not one of mere duty or obligation; it pertains not to the sphere of ought but to that of must.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 364 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

absolute liability. See strict liability.

accomplice liability. Criminal responsibility of one who acts with another before, during, or (in some jurisdictions) after a crime. See 18 USCA § 2. [Cases: Criminal Law 59. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 127, 998.]

accrued liability. A debt or obligation that is properly chargeable in a given accounting period but that is not yet paid.

alternative liability. Liability arising from the tortious acts of two or more parties — when the plaintiff proves that one of the defendants has caused harm but cannot prove which one caused it — resulting in a shifting of the burden of proof to each defendant. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 433B(3) (1965). [Cases: Products Liability 23; Torts 21. C.J.S. Products Liability §§ 40, 42; Torts §§ 36–38.]

civil liability. 1. Liability imposed under the civil, as opposed to the criminal, law. 2. The state of being legally obligated for civil damages.

contingent liability. A liability that will occur only if a specific event happens; a liability that depends on the occurrence of a future and uncertain event. • In financial statements, contingent liabilities are usu. stated in footnotes.

current liability. A business liability that will be paid or otherwise discharged with current assets or by creating other current liabilities within the next year (or operating cycle). — Also termed short-term debt.

derivative liability.Liability for a wrong that a person other than the one wronged has a right to redress. • Examples include liability to a widow in a wrongful-death action and liability to a corporation in a shareholder's derivative suit.

enterprise liability. 1. Liability imposed on each member of an industry responsible for manufacturing a harmful or defective product, allotted by each manufacturer's market share of the industry. — Also termed industry-wide liability. See market-share liability. [Cases: Products Liability 23.1, 24. C.J.S. Products Liability § 41.] 2. Criminal liability imposed on a business (such as a corporation or partnership) for certain offenses, such as public-welfare offenses or offenses for which the legislature specifically intended to impose criminal sanctions. See Model Penal Code § 2.07. See public-welfare offense under OFFENSE(1).

fault liability.Liability based on some degree of blameworthiness. — Also termed fault-based liability. Cf. strict liability.

industry-wide liability.See enterprise liability.

joint and several liability.Liability that may be apportioned either among two or more parties or to only one or a few select members of the group, at the adversary's discretion. • Thus, each liable party is individually responsible for the entire obligation, but a paying party may have a right of contribution and indemnity from nonpaying parties. See solidary liability. [Cases: Contracts 181; Negligence 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 366, 371; Negligence §§ 154–156; Torts §§ 39–44.]

joint liability.Liability shared by two or more parties. [Cases: Negligence 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 154–156; Torts §§ 39–44.]

liability in solido.See solidary liability.

liability without fault.See strict liability.

limited liability.Liability restricted by law or contract; esp., the liability of a company's owners for nothing more than the capital they have invested in the business. [Cases: Corporations 215. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 414, 417, 425, 427.]

market-share liability.Liability that is imposed, usu. severally, on each member of an industry, based on each member's share of the market or respective percentage of the product that is placed on the market. • This theory of liability usu. applies only in the situation in which a plaintiff cannot trace the harmful exposure to a particular product, as when several products contain a fungible substance. For example, it is sometimes applied to a claim that the plaintiff was harmed by exposure to asbestos. See enterprise liability. [Cases: Products Liability 23.1, 24. C.J.S. Products Liability § 41.]

official liability.Liability of an officer or receiver for a breach of contract or a tort committed during the officer's or receiver's tenure, but not involving any personal liability.

penal liability.Liability arising from a proceeding intended at least partly to penalize a wrongdoer. Cf. remedial liability.

personal liability. Liability for which one is personally accountable and for which a wronged party can seek satisfaction out of the wrongdoer's personal assets.

premises liability. See PREMISES LIABILITY.

primary liability. Liability for which one is directly responsible, as opposed to secondary liability.

products liability. See PRODUCTS LIABILITY.

remedial liability. Liability arising from a proceeding whose object contains no penal element. • The two types of proceedings giving rise to this liability are specific enforcement and restitution. Cf. penal liability.

secondary liability. Liability that does not arise unless the primarily liable party fails to honor its obligation.

several liability. Liability that is separate and distinct from another's liability, so that the plaintiff may bring a separate action against one defendant without joining the other liable parties. [Cases: Negligence 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 154–156; Torts §§ 39–44.]

shareholder's liability. 1. The statutory, added, or double liability of a shareholder for a corporation's debts, despite full payment for the stock. 2. The liability of a shareholder for any unpaid stock listed as fully owned on the stock certificate, usu. occurring either when the shareholder agrees to pay full par value for the stock and obtains the certificate before the stock is paid for, or when partially paid-for stock is intentionally issued by a corporation as fully paid, the consideration for it being entirely fictitious. — Also termed stockholder's liability. [Cases: Corporations 215, 227. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 414, 417, 425, 427.]

solidary liability (sol-<<schwa>>-dair-ee). Civil law. The liability of any one debtor among two or more joint debtors to pay the entire debt if the creditor so chooses. La. Civ. Code art. 1794. • This is equivalent to joint and several liability in the common law. — Also termed liability in solido. See joint and several liability. [Cases: Negligence 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 154–156; Torts §§ 39–44.] statutory liability. Liability that is created by a statute (or regulation) as opposed to common law.

stockholder's liability. See shareholder's liability.

strict liability. Liability that does not depend on actual negligence or intent to harm, but that is based on the breach of an absolute duty to make something safe. • Strict liability most often applies either to ultrahazardous activities or in products-liability cases. — Also termed absolute liability; liability without fault. Cf. fault liability; OUTCOME RESPONSIBILITY. [Cases: Negligence 301–307; Products Liability 5. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 170–179; Products Liability tortious liability. Liability that arises from the breach of a duty that (1) is fixed primarily by the law, (2) is owed to persons generally, and (3) when breached, is redressable by an action for unliquidated damages.

vicarious liability (vI-kair-ee-*<<schwa>>*s). Liability that a supervisory party (such as an employer) bears for the actionable conduct of a subordinate or associate (such as an employee) based on the relationship between the two parties. See RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR. [Cases: Master and Servant 300, 315; Negligence 483. C.J.S. Employer-Employee Relationship §§ 181–184, 188–193, 203, 231–235, 242, 244–246, 248, 251–252, 254–255; Negligence §§ 152–153.]

“The vicarious liability of an employer for torts committed by employees should not be confused with the liability an employer has for his own torts. An employer whose employee commits a tort may be liable in his own right for negligence in hiring or supervising the employee. If in my business I hire a truck driver who has a record of drunk driving and on whom one day I detect the smell of bourbon, I (along with my employee) may be held liable for negligence if his driving causes injury. But that is not ‘vicarious’ liability — I am held liable for my own negligence in hiring that employee or letting him drive after I know he has been drinking.” Kenneth S. Abraham, The Forms and Functions of Tort Law 166 (2002).

3.NO-RIGHT.

liability in solido. See solidary liability under LIABILITY.

LIABILITY INSURANCE

liability insurance. See INSURANCE.

LIABILITY LIMIT

liability limit. Insurance. The maximum amount of coverage that an insurance company will provide on a single claim under an insurance policy. — Also termed limit of liability; policy limits. [Cases: Insurance 2105. C.J.S. Insurance § 420.]

LIABILITY WITHOUT FAULT

liability without fault. See strict liability under LIABILITY.

LIABLE

liable (II-l-b*l* also II-l-b*l*), adj. 1. Responsible or answerable in law; legally obligated. 2. (Of a person) subject to or likely to incur (a fine, penalty, etc.). — Also termed legally liable. See LIABILITY.

LIBEL

libel (II-l-b*l*), n. 1. A defamatory statement expressed in a fixed medium, esp. writing but also a picture, sign, or electronic broadcast. • Libel is classified as both a crime and a tort but is no longer prosecuted as a crime. — Also termed defamatory libel. 2. The act of making such a statement; publication of defamatory matter by written or printed words, by its embodiment in physical form, or by any other form of communication that has the potentially harmful qualities characteristic of written or printed words. See DEFAMATION. Cf. SLANDER. [Cases: Libel and Slander 1, 25. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5–6, 10, 47–52.]

“Libel is written or visual defamation; slander is oral or aural defamation.” Robert D. Sack & Sandra S. Baron, Libel, Slander, and Related Problems § 2.3, at 67 (2d ed. 1994).

“The distinction itself between libel and slander is not free from difficulty and uncertainty. As it took form in the seventeenth century, it was one between written and oral words. But later on libel was extended to include pictures, signs, statues, motion pictures, and even conduct carrying a defamatory imputation, such as hanging the plaintiff in effigy, erecting a gallows before his door, dishonoring his valid check drawn upon the defendant's bank, or even ... following him over a considerable period in a conspicuous manner. From this it has been concluded that libel is that which is communicated by the sense of sight, or perhaps also by touch or smell, while slander is that which is conveyed by the sense of hearing.” W. Page Keeton ed., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 112, at 786 (5th ed. 1984).

criminal libel. At common law, a malicious libel that is designed to expose a person to hatred, contempt, or ridicule and that may subject the author to criminal sanctions. • Because of constitutional protections of free speech, libel is no longer criminally prosecuted. [Cases: Libel and Slander 141. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 7–8.]

false-implication libel. Libel that creates a false implication or impression even though each statement in the article, taken separately, is true. See FALSE LIGHT; INVASION OF PRIVACY.

group libel. Libel that defames a class of persons, esp. because of their race, sex, national origin, religious belief, or the like. • Civil liability for group libel is rare because the plaintiff must prove that the statement applied particularly to him or her. Cf. hate speech under SPEECH. [Cases: Libel and Slander 21. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 15.]

libel per quod (p*l*-b*l* kwod). 1. Libel that is actionable only on allegation and proof of special damages. • Most jurisdictions do not recognize libel per quod, holding instead that general damages from libel are presumed. 2. Libel in which the defamatory meaning is not apparent from the statement on its face but rather must be proved from extrinsic circumstances.

See INNUENDO (2). [Cases: Libel and Slander 11, 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

libel per se (p<<schwa>>r say).1. Libel that is actionable in itself, requiring no proof of special damages. • Most jurisdictions do not distinguish between libel per se and libel per quod, holding instead that general damages from libel are presumed. 2. Libel that is defamatory on its face, such as the statement “Frank is a thief.” [Cases: Libel and Slander 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

obscene libel.Hist. 1.The common-law crime of publishing, with the intent to corrupt, material (esp. sexual words or pictures) that tends to deprave or corrupt those whose minds are open to immoral influences. 2. A writing, book, picture, or print that is so obscene that it shocks the public sense of decency.

sedition libel.Libel made with the intent of inciting sedition. • Like other forms of criminal libel, seditious libel is no longer prosecuted. See SEDITION. [Cases: Libel and Slander 141, 145. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 7–8.]

trade libel.Trade defamation that is written or recorded. See trade defamation under DEFAMATION. Cf. trade slander under SLANDER. [Cases: Libel and Slander 130. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 204–206, 209.]

3. The complaint or initial pleading in an admiralty or ecclesiastical case. [Cases: Admiralty 60. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 171–173.] — Also termed (in sense 3) libel of information.

libel,vb.1. To defame (someone) in a permanent medium, esp. in writing. [Cases: Libel and Slander 1, 25. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5–6, 10, 47–52.] 2.Hist. Maritime law. To sue in admiralty or ecclesiastical court. • This use of the term was eliminated with the merging of the Admiralty Rules into the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in 1986.

libelant (II-b<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>>nt).1. The party who institutes a suit in admiralty or ecclesiastical court by filing a libel. [Cases: Admiralty 41. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 142–145, 147.] 2.LIBELER. — Also spelled libellant.

libelee (II-b<<schwa>>l-ee). The party against whom a libel has been filed in admiralty or ecclesiastical court. — Also spelled libellee. [Cases: Admiralty 42. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 146–147.]

libeler. One who publishes a written defamatory statement. — Also spelled libeller. — Also termed libelant. [Cases: Libel and Slander 77. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 126.]

LIBELLARY PROCEDURE

libertini (lib-*<<schwa>>*r-tI-nI), n. pl.[Latin] Roman law. See LATINI JUNIANI.

liberty. 1. Freedom from arbitrary or undue external restraint, esp. by a government <give me liberty or give me death>.2. A right, privilege, or immunity enjoyed by prescription or by grant; the absence of a legal duty imposed on a person <the liberties protected by the Constitution>. [Cases: Constitutional Law 83, 254.1. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 472, 511, 977–978, 980, 1418; Right to Die§ 2.]

“The sphere of my legal liberty is that sphere of activity within which the law is content to leave me alone.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 239 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“The word liberty has become a symbol around which have clung some of the most generous human emotions. We have been brought up to thrill with admiration at the men who say, Give me liberty or give me death. But the philosopher asks whether all those who are devoted to liberty mean the same thing. Does liberty or freedom, for instance, involve free trade? Does it involve freedom to preach race hatred or the overthrow of all that we regard as sacred? Many who believe in liberty characterize the freedom which they are not willing to grant, as license, and they do it so often that one may be inclined to think that what we really need is less liberty and more license. Moreover, there is a confusion between the absence of legal restraint and the presence of real freedom as positive power to do what we want. The legal freedom to earn a million dollars is not worth a cent to one who has no real opportunity. It is fashionable to assert that men want freedom above all other things, but a strong case may be made out for the direct contrary. Absolute freedom is just what people do not want” Morris R. Cohen, Reason and Law 101–02 (1961).

individual liberty. See personal liberty.

natural liberty. The power to act as one wishes, without any restraint or control, unless by nature.

“This natural liberty ... [is] a right inherent in us by birth But every man, when he enters into society, gives up a part of his natural liberty, as the price of so valuable a purchase; and, in consideration of receiving the advantages of mutual commerce, obliges himself to conform to those laws, which the community has thought proper to establish.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 121 (1765).

personal liberty. One's freedom to do as one pleases, limited only by the government's right to regulate the public health, safety, and welfare. — Also termed individual liberty. [Cases: Constitutional Law 83. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 472, 511.]

political liberty. A person's freedom to participate in the operation of government, esp. in elections and in the making and administration of laws.

religious liberty. Freedom — as guaranteed by the First Amendment — to express, without external control other than one's own conscience, any or no system of religious opinion and to engage in or refrain from any form of religious observance or public or private religious worship, as long as it is consistent with the peace and order of society. [Cases: Constitutional Law 84. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 513–517.]

LIBERTY CLAUSE

Liberty Clause. The Due Process Clause in the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. See DUE PROCESS CLAUSE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 251–320.5. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 455, 461–467, 470, 501, 503, 513, 518, 540, 557, 576–581, 585, 587, 596, 612, 614–618, 704, 883, 945–1348, 1350–1396, 1399–1401, 1405–1427; Right to Die § 2; Zoning and Land Planning § 23.]

Headed by a Librarian appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, it was established in 1860.2 USCA §§ 131 et seq.

LIBRIPENS

libripens (lib-r<<schwa>>-penz), n.[Latin] Roman law.A person who holds a bronze balance during actual or ritual sales, such as the ceremonies of emancipating a son from his father or conveying important property; a scale-holder. • The purchaser strikes the balance with a piece of bronze to symbolize completion of the sale. The seller then receives the bronze as a sign of the purchase money. See MANCIPATION.

LICENSE

license,n.1. A permission, usu. revocable, to commit some act that would otherwise be unlawful; esp., an agreement (not amounting to a lease or profit à prendre) that it is lawful for the licensee to enter the licensor's land to do some act that would otherwise be illegal, such as hunting game. See SERVITUDE(1). [Cases: Licenses 43. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses § 88.]

“[A] license is an authority to do a particular act, or series of acts, upon another's land, without possessing any estate therein. It is founded in personal confidence, and is not assignable, nor within the statute of frauds.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *452–53 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

2. The certificate or document evidencing such permission. — license,vb.

artistic license.An open-source license that prohibits the sale of modified software unless it is included in a package with other software.

bare license.A license in which no property interest passes to the licensee, who is merely not a trespasser. • It is revocable at will. — Also termed naked license; mere license. [Cases: Licenses 43, 57. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses §§ 88, 95, 101–102.]

blanket license.Copyright. A license granted by a performing-rights society, such as ASCAP or BMI, to use all works in the society's portfolio in exchange for a fixed percentage of the user's revenues.

box-top license.See shrink-wrap license.

BSD license.A form of open-source license that allows users to incorporate the source code into proprietary products as long as the names of the original creator or contributors are not used to endorse or promote the products without permission. — Also termed BSD-style license.

click-wrap license.See POINT-AND-CLICK AGREEMENT.

compulsory license. 1.Copyright. A statutorily created license that allows certain parties to use copyrighted material without the explicit permission of the copyright owner in exchange for a specified royalty. — Also termed equitable remuneration. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 48.1. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 86–91.] 2.Patents. A statutorily created license that allows certain people to pay a royalty and use an invention without the patentee's permission. • While some nations currently recognize compulsory licenses, the United States never has.

cross-license.Patents. An agreement between two or more patentees to exchange licenses for their mutual benefit and mutual use of the licensed products. [Cases: Patents 206. C.J.S. Patents § 342.]

distribution license.A marketing license, usu. limited by geography.

exclusive license.A license that gives the licensee the sole right to perform the licensed act, often in a defined territory, and that prohibits the licensor from performing the licensed act and from granting the right to anyone else; esp., such a license of a copyright, patent, or trademark right. [Cases: Patents 211(1). C.J.S. Patents § 348.]

general-public license. See open-source license.

implied license. A royalty-free license arising from a property owner's conduct regarding another person's use of the property even though the owner has not expressly consented to the property's use. • In a patent context, the circumstances surrounding the conduct give rise to an affirmative grant of consent or permission to infringe a patent's claims. For example, the conduct of a patentee who encourages the manufacture of infringing products may constitute an implied license to use the patent. An implied license may also arise when a patentee authorizes the sale or express grant of a license to a buyer, who then resells the license to a third party; the third party is the patentee's implied licensee. [Cases: Patents 210. C.J.S. Patents § 346.]

implied license by acquiescence. An implied license that arises from the patentee's tacit or passive acceptance of or implied consent to an otherwise infringing act.

implied license by conduct. An implied license based on the patentee's course of conduct, including language, from which another person could properly infer that the patentee consented to the other's use of the patent. See implied license by equitable estoppel; implied license by legal estoppel.

implied license by equitable estoppel. An implied license usu. based on the patentee's failure to take timely action to enforce patent rights against an infringer after objecting to the infringer's actions, thereby misleading the infringer into believing that the patentee will not act. See A.C. Aukerman Co. v. R.L. Chaides Constr. Co., 960 F.2d 1020, 1042–43 (Fed. Cir. 1992).

implied license by legal estoppel. An implied license usu. based on the patentee's broadcast grant of a right or interest that cannot be derogated by the patentee's later acts.

label license. A notice on an item's package granting the purchaser a license to practice the process by using the item without additional payments to the licensor.

license coupled with an interest. An irrevocable license in real estate that confers the right (not the mere permission) to perform an act or acts upon the property; esp., a license incidental to the ownership of an interest in a chattel located on the land with respect to which the license exists. • This type of license is considered an interest in the land itself. An injunction may be obtained to prevent the wrongful revocation of such a license. — Also termed license coupled with the grant of an interest. [Cases: Licenses 43, 57. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses §§ 88, 95, 101–102.]

writing but for value may be protected by injunction.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 428 (6th ed. 1993).

mechanical license. A grant of the right to produce and release a copyrighted work in exchange for a royalty based on the number of units manufactured and sold.

mere license. See bare license.

Mozilla public license. An open-source license that allows software users to modify and publicly distribute the software, but requires users to release the changed software under the same copyright as the original source code, and to release all claims to patent rights. • The Mozilla public license was developed for the Netscape and Netscape Communicator browsers but is not limited to use with them. — Abbr. MPL.

naked license. 1. A license allowing a licensee to use a trademark on any goods and services the licensee chooses. [Cases: Trade Regulation 108. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 209–212.] 2. See bare license.

nonexclusive license. A license of intellectual-property rights that gives the licensee a right to use, make, or sell the licensed item on a shared basis with the licensor and possibly other licensees.

nonmetered license. Patents. An agreement to allow a patent's use in exchange for a flat percentage of sales, regardless of how much the patent is actually used. • The Supreme Court rejected a nonmetered license as patent misuse, saying the buyer has a right to insist on paying only for actual use. Zenith Radio Co. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 89 S.Ct. 1562 (1969). See PATENT-MISUSE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents 218(5). C.J.S. Patents § 371.]

open-source license. A license that allows open-source software users to copy, distribute, or modify the source code, and publicly distribute derived works based on the source code. • Open-source licenses usu. do not require royalty or other fees on distribution. The license typically requires a user who redistributes original or modified software that was received under an open-source license to provide the original license terms, including all disclaimers, to all future users, and to distribute the source code with any machine-executable software. It is unclear who has the right or power to enforce the terms of an open-source license. — Sometimes termed general-public license.

proprietary license. A license that restricts a software user's ability to copy, distribute, or modify the software.

shrink-wrap license. A license printed on the outside of a software package to advise the buyer that by opening the package, the buyer becomes legally bound to abide by the terms of the license. • Shrink-wrap licenses usu. seek to (1) prohibit users from making unauthorized copies of the software, (2) prohibit modifications to the software, (3) limit use of the software to one computer, (4) limit the manufacturer's liability, and (5) disclaim warranties. — Also written shrinkwrap license. — Also termed box-top license; tear-me-open license. See site license.Copyright. A software license that allows a company to install a set number of copies on individual computers within the company.

synchronization license.A license to reproduce and synchronize a copyrighted musical composition with visual images that are not covered by the musical work's copyright. • Synchronization rights are commonly associated with audiovisual productions, such as music videos or movies.

tear-me-open license.See shrink-wrap license.

use-based license.An open-source software license to which the user assents by acting according to the license's terms, namely, by using, modifying, or distributing the licensed software. • Unlike a point-and-click agreement, a use-based license does not require the user to expressly declare acceptance of the license terms before using the software.

LICENSE BOND

license bond.See BOND(2).

LICENSE COUPLED WITH THE GRANT OF AN INTEREST license coupled with the grant of an interest.See license coupled with an interest under LICENSE.

LICENSEE licensee. 1. One to whom a license is granted. 2. One who has permission to enter or use another's premises, but only for one's own purposes and not for the occupier's benefit. • The occupier has a duty to warn the licensee of any dangerous conditions known to the occupier but unknown to the licensee. An example of a licensee is a social guest. Cf. INVITEE; TRESPASSER. [Cases: Licenses 43. C.J.S. Easements § 9; Licenses § 88.]

liege poustie (leej pow-see). [Law French “liege power” fr. Latin legitima potestas “lawful power”] Scots law. The lawful power of one in good health, as a result of which the person might dispose of heritable property. • The phrase often appeared attributively, as in liege poustie conveyance. Cf. LEGITIMA POTESTAS.

“LIEGE POUSTIE; is that state of health which gives a person full power to dispose mortis causa, or otherwise, of his heritable property. The term, according to our institutional writers, is derived from the words legitima potestas, signifying the lawful power of disposing of property at pleasure. It is used in contradistinction to deathbed — a liege poustie conveyance being a conveyance not challengeable on the head of deathbed The tests of liege poustie, opposed to the presumption of deathbed, are survivance during sixty days, and going to kirk or market unsupported.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 662 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

“[A] liege poustie conveyance being one not challengeable by the heir on the ground of death-bed. This condition of health the granter of a deed was held to have enjoyed, if at the time of granting it he was not affected by the disease of which he died, or if, after executing it, he attended kirk or market, unsupported, or survived for sixty days.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 329 (4th ed. 1894).

Agriculture §§ 105, 113–114, 119–120.] 2.Secured transactions. An interest (other than a security interest) in farm products having three characteristics: (1) it must secure payment or performance of an obligation for goods or services furnished in connection with a debtor's farming operation, or of an obligation for rent on real property leased by a debtor in connection with farming; (2) it must be created by statute in favor of a person either who in the ordinary course of business furnished goods or services to a debtor in connection with the debtor's farming, or who leased real property to a debtor in connection with the debtor's farming; and (3) the effectiveness of the interest must not depend on the person's possession of the personal property. UCC § 9-102(a)(5). architect's lien.A statutory lien on real property in favor of an architect who has drawn the plans for and supervised the construction of improvements on the property. [Cases: Mechanics' Liens 36. C.J.S. Mechanics' Liens § 33.]

artisan's lien. See mechanic's lien.

attachment lien. A lien on property seized by prejudgment attachment. • Such a lien is initially inchoate but becomes final and perfected upon entry of a judgment for the attaching creditor and relates back to the date when the lien first arose. — Also termed lien of attachment. See ATTACHMENT. [Cases: Attachment 177; Federal Civil Procedure 589. C.J.S. Attachment §§ 203–205.]

attorney's lien. The right of an attorney to hold or retain a client's money or property (a retaining lien) or to encumber money payable to the client (a charging lien) until the attorney's fees have been properly determined and paid. [Cases: Attorney and Client 171. C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 357–359.]

banker's lien. The right of a bank to satisfy a customer's matured debt by seizing the customer's money or property in the bank's possession. [Cases: Banks and Banking 134, 136. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 293, 301–305, 312–313, 316.]

charging lien. 1. An attorney's lien on a claim that the attorney has helped the client perfect, as through a judgment or settlement. [Cases: Attorney and Client 182. C.J.S. Attorney and Client § 359.] 2. A lien on specified property in the debtor's possession.

chattel lien. See mechanic's lien.

choate lien (koh-it). A lien in which the lienholder, the property, and the monetary amount are established so that the lien is perfected and nothing else needs to be done to make it enforceable. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4781; Liens 1, 12. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 719; Liens §§ 2–3, 12, 14, 18.]

common-law lien. 1. A lien granted by the common law, rather than by statute, equity, or agreement by the parties. [Cases: Liens 1. C.J.S. Liens §§ 2–3, 12, 18.] 2. The right of one person to retain possession of property belonging to another until certain demands of the possessing party are met. • This type of lien, unlike an equitable lien, cannot exist without possession.

concurrent lien. One of two or more liens of equal priority attaching to the same property.

construction lien. See mechanic's lien.

consummate lien (k<<schwa>>n-s<<schwa>>m-it). A judgment lien arising after the denial of a motion for a new trial. Cf. inchoate lien.

conventional lien. A lien that is created by the express agreement of the parties, in circumstances in which the law would not create a lien.

deferred lien. A lien effective at a future date, as distinguished from a present lien that is currently possessory.

demurrage lien (di-m<<schwa>>r-ij). A carrier's lien on goods for any unpaid demurrage charges. See DEMURRAGE. [Cases: Shipping 185. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 431, 439.]

dragnet lien. A lien that is enlarged to cover any additional credit extended to the debtor by the same creditor. [Cases: Secured Transactions 114. C.J.S. Secured Transactions § 83.]

equitable lien. A right, enforceable only in equity, to have a demand satisfied from a particular fund or specific property, without having possession of the fund or property. • It arises mainly in four circumstances: (1) when an occupant of land, believing in good faith to be the owner of that land, makes improvements, repairs, or other expenditures that permanently increase the land's value, (2) when one of two or more joint owners makes expenditures of that kind, (3) when a tenant for life completes permanent and beneficial improvements to the estate begun earlier by the testator, and (4) when land or other property is transferred subject to the payment of debts, legacies, portions, or annuities to third persons. — Also termed equitable levy. [Cases: Liens 7. C.J.S. Liens §§ 5–8.]

execution lien. A lien on property seized by a levy of execution. • Such a lien gives the execution creditor priority over later transferees of the property and over prior unrecorded conveyances of interests in the property. See EXECUTION(3). [Cases: Execution 106. C.J.S. Executions § 137.]

factor's lien. A lien, usu. statutory, on property held on consignment by a factor. • It allows the factor to keep possession of the property until the account has been settled. See FACTOR(2). [Cases: Factors 47.]

first lien. A lien that takes priority over all other charges or encumbrances on the same property and that must be satisfied before other charges may share in proceeds from the property's sale.

floating lien. 1. A lien that is expanded to cover any additional property obtained by the debtor while the debt is outstanding. [Cases: Secured Transactions 116. C.J.S. Secured Transactions § 85.] 2. A lien that continues to exist even when the collateral changes in character, classification, or location. — Also termed floating charge.

garnishment lien. A lien on a debtor's property held by a garnishee. • Such a lien attaches in favor of the garnishing creditor when a garnishment summons is served and also impounds any credits the garnishee owes the debtor so that they must be paid to the garnishing creditor. — Also termed lien of garnishment. See GARNISHMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 609; Garnishment 106.]

general lien. A possessory lien by which the lienholder may retain any of the debtor's goods in the lienholder's possession until any debt due from the debtor, whether in connection with the retained goods or otherwise, has been paid. • Factors, insurance brokers, packers, stockbrokers, and bankers have a general lien over the property of their clients or customers. Cf. particular lien.

“The usage of any trade sufficient to establish a general lien, must ... have been so uniform and notorious, as to warrant the inference that the party against whom the right is claimed had knowledge of it. This general lien may also be created by express agreement; as, where one or more persons give notice that they will not receive any property for the purpose of their trade or business, except on condition that they shall have a lien upon it, not only in respect to the charges arising on the particular goods, but for the general balance of account. All persons who afterwards deal with them, with the knowledge of such notice, will be deemed to have acceded to that agreement.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *637 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

grantor's lien. See vendor's lien (1).

healthcare lien. A statutory lien asserted by an HMO, insurer, medical group, or independent practice association against those liable to the patient for damages, to recover money paid or claim money payable for healthcare services provided under a healthcare service plan or a disability insurance policy. — Also termed medical lien. Cf. hospital lien; workers'-compensation lien.

hospital lien. A statutory lien asserted by a hospital to recover the costs of emergency and ongoing medical and other services. • The lien applies against any judgment, compromise, or settlement received by a hospital patient either from a third person who caused the patient's injuries or from the third person's insurer. See healthcare lien.

hotelkeeper's lien. A possessory or statutory lien allowing an innkeeper to hold, as security for payment, personal property that a guest brought into the hotel. — Also termed innkeeper's lien. [Cases: Innkeepers 13. C.J.S. Inns, Hotels and Eating Places § 19.]

inchoate lien (in-koh-it). A judgment lien that may be defeated if the judgment is vacated or a motion for new trial is granted. Cf. consummate lien.

innkeeper's lien. See hotelkeeper's lien.

involuntary lien. A lien arising without the debtor's consent.

judgment lien. A lien imposed on a judgment debtor's nonexempt property. • This lien gives the judgment creditor the right to attach the judgment debtor's property. — Also termed lien of judgment. See EXEMPT PROPERTY. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2671; Judgment 752–802. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 551–616.]

judicial lien. A lien obtained by judgment, levy, sequestration, or other legal or equitable process or proceeding. • If a debtor is adjudged to owe money to a creditor and the judgment has not been satisfied, the creditor can ask the court to impose a lien on specific property owned and possessed by the debtor. After the court imposes the lien, it usu. issues a writ directing the local sheriff to seize the property, sell it, and turn over the proceeds to the creditor. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2671; Judgment 752. C.J.S. Judgments § 552.]

junior lien.A lien that is subordinate to one or more other liens on the same property.

laborer's lien.See mechanic's lien.

landlord's lien. 1. At common law, a lien that gave a landlord the right to seize a tenant's property and sell it publicly to satisfy overdue rent. See DISTRESS. 2. Generally, a statutory lien on a tenant's personal property at the leased premises in favor of a landlord who receives preferred-creditor status on that property. • Such a lien usu. secures the payment of overdue rent or compensation for damage to the premises. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 239–257. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant §§ 605–609, 611–615, 619–634, 636, 638, 640–657.]

lien of attachment.See attachment lien.

lien of factor at common law.Hist. A lien not created by statute; a common-law lien. [Cases: Factors 47.]

lien of garnishment.See garnishment lien.

lien of judgment.See judgment lien.

manufacturer's lien.A statutory lien that secures payment for labor or materials expended in producing goods for another.

maritime lien.A lien on a vessel, given to secure the claim of a creditor who provided maritime services to the vessel or who suffered an injury from the vessel's use. — Also termed tacit hypothecation. [Cases: Maritime Liens 1. C.J.S. Maritime Liens §§ 2–3, 7, 13, 16.]

“The maritime lien has been described as one of the most striking peculiarities of Admiralty law, constituting a charge upon ships of a nature unknown alike to common law and equity. It arises by operation of law and exists as a claim upon the property, secret and invisible. A maritime lien may be defined as: (1) a privileged claim, (2) upon maritime property, (3) for service done to it or injury caused by it, (4) accruing from the moment when the claim attaches, (5) travelling with the property unconditionally, (6) enforced by means of an action in rem.” Griffith Price, The Law of Maritime Liens 1 (1940).

mechanic's lien.A statutory lien that secures payment for labor or materials supplied in improving, repairing, or maintaining real or personal property, such as a building, an automobile, or the like. — Also termed artisan's lien; chattel lien (for personal property); construction lien (for labor); garageman's lien (for repaired vehicles); laborer's lien (for labor); materialman's lien (for materials). [Cases: Bailment 18(2); Mechanics' Liens 1. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 80–81, 84; Mechanics' Liens § 2.]

medical lien.See healthcare lien.

mortgage lien.A lien on the mortgagor's property securing the mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages 145. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 198, 200.]

municipal lien.A lien by a municipal corporation against a property owner for the owner's proportionate share of a public improvement that specially and individually benefits the owner. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 519. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 1388–1389, 1391–1392.]

particular lien.A possessory lien by which the possessor of goods has the right to retain specific goods until a debt incurred in connection with those goods has been paid. — Also termed special lien. Cf. general lien.

“A general lien is the right to retain the property of another, for a general balance of accounts; but a particular lien is a right to retain it only for a charge on account of labor employed or expenses bestowed upon the identical property detained. The former is taken strictly, but the latter is favored in law. The right rests on principles of natural equity and commercial necessity, and it prevents circuitry of action, and gives security and confidence” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *634 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

possessory garageman's lien.A lien on a vehicle in the amount of the repairs performed by the garage. [Cases: Automobiles 374. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 1627–1629, 1631–1633, 1639–1677.]

possessory lien.A lien allowing the creditor to keep possession of the encumbered property until the debt is satisfied. • A power of sale may or may not be combined with this right of possession. Examples include pledges of chattels, the liens of innkeepers, garageman's liens, and vendor's liens. See PLEDGE.

prior lien.A lien that is superior to one or more other liens on the same property, usu. because it was perfected first. — Also termed priority lien.

retaining lien.An attorney's right to keep a client's papers until the client has paid for the attorney's services. • The attorney's retaining lien is not recognized in some states. [Cases: Attorney and Client 182(3). C.J.S. Attorney and Client §§ 376–377.]

second lien.A lien that is next in rank after a first lien on the same property and therefore is next entitled to satisfaction out of the proceeds from the property's sale.

secret lien.A lien not appearing of record and unknown to purchasers; a lien reserved by the vendor and kept hidden from third parties, to secure the payment of goods after delivery.

senior lien.A lien that has priority over other liens on the same property.

special lien.See particular lien.

specific lien.A lien secured on a particular thing by a contract or by a judgment, execution, attachment, or other legal proceeding.

statutory lien. 1. A lien arising solely by force of statute, not by agreement of the parties. • Examples are federal tax liens and mechanic's liens. 2. Bankruptcy. Either of two types of liens: (1) a lien arising solely by force of a statute on specified circumstances or conditions, or (2) a lien of distress for rent, whether or not statutory. • For bankruptcy purposes, a statutory lien does not include a security interest or judicial lien, whether or not the interest or lien arises from or is made effective by a statute. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2580, 2583. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 130.]

superlien. See SUPERLIEN.

tax lien. 1. A lien on property, and all rights to property, imposed by the federal government for unpaid federal taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4765–4806. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 499, 715–720, 751, 753–756, 759, 762, 764, 766–767; Social Security and Public Welfare § 202.] 2. A lien on real estate in favor of a state or local government that may be foreclosed for nonpayment of taxes. • A majority of states have adopted the Uniform Federal Tax Lien Registration Act. [Cases: Taxation 501, 902, 1090, 1320. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare § 202; Taxation §§ 824, 828–829, 834, 1779, 1972–1975, 2065.]

vendee's lien. Real estate. A buyer's lien on the purchased land as security for repayment of purchase money paid in, enforceable if the seller does not or cannot convey good title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 337. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 639, 653–654.]

vendor's lien. 1. Real estate. A seller's lien on land as security for the purchase price. • This lien may be foreclosed in the same way as a mortgage: the buyer usu. has a redemption period within which to pay the full purchase price. — Also termed grantor's lien. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 246. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 529–530.] 2. A lien held by a seller of goods, who retains possession of the goods until the buyer has paid in full. [Cases: Sales 300. C.J.S. Sales § 328.] voluntary lien. A lien created with the debtor's consent.

warehouseman's lien. A lien covering storage charges for goods stored with a bailee. — Also termed warehouseman's lien. [Cases: Warehousemen 29. C.J.S. Warehousemen and Safe Depositaries § 106.]

workers'-compensation lien. 1. A statutory lien, asserted by a healthcare provider, to recover the costs of emergency and ongoing medical and other services. • The lien applies against any workers'-compensation benefits paid to a patient. 2. A statutory lien, asserted by a workers'-compensation insurance carrier, against an insured worker's recovery from a third-party tortfeasor, to recover benefits paid to the injured worker. — Also termed workers'-compensation subrogation lien. Cf. healthcare lien.

LIEN STATE

lien state. See LIEN THEORY.

LIEN-STRIPPING

lien-stripping. Bankruptcy. The practice of splitting a mortgagee's secured claim into secured and unsecured components and reducing the claim to the market value of the debtor's residence, thereby allowing the debtor to modify the terms of the mortgage and reduce the amount of the debt. • The U.S. Supreme Court has prohibited lien-stripping in all Chapter 7 cases (Nobelman v. American Savs. Bank, 508 U.S. 324, 113 S.Ct. 2106 (1993)) and in Chapter 13 cases involving a debtor's principal residence (Dewsnup v. Timm, 502 U.S. 410, 112 S.Ct. 773 (1992)), and the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 modified the Bankruptcy Code to prohibit lien-stripping in Chapter 11 cases involving an individual's principal residence. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2575. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 110.]

lien theory. The idea that a mortgage resembles a lien, so that the mortgagee acquires only a lien on the property and the mortgagor retains both legal and equitable title unless a valid foreclosure occurs. • Most American states — commonly called lien states, lien jurisdictions, or lien-theory jurisdictions — have adopted this theory. Cf. TITLE THEORY. [Cases: Mortgages 136. C.J.S. Mortgages § 183.]

Cf. group insurance; industrial life insurance. 2. See whole life insurance.

partnership life insurance. See partnership insurance (1) under INSURANCE.

single-premium life insurance. Life insurance that is paid for in one installment rather than a series of premiums over time. — Also termed single-premium insurance.

split-dollar life insurance. An arrangement between two people (often an employer and employee) by which life insurance is written on the life of one, though both share the premium payments. • On the insured's death or other event terminating the plan, the noninsured person receives the cash value of the insurance as reimbursement, and the beneficiary named by the insured is entitled to the remainder. — Also termed split-dollar insurance.

straight life insurance. See whole life insurance.

term life insurance. Life insurance that covers the insured for only a specified period. • It pays a fixed benefit to a named beneficiary upon the insured's death but is not redeemable for a cash value during the insured's life. Cf. whole life insurance.

universal life insurance. A form of term life insurance in which the premiums are paid from the insured's earnings from a money-market fund.

variable life insurance. A form of life insurance in which the premiums are invested in securities and whose death benefits thus depend on the securities' performance, though there is a minimum guaranteed death benefit.

whole life insurance. Life insurance that covers an insured for life, during which the insured pays fixed premiums, accumulates savings from an invested portion of the premiums, and receives a guaranteed benefit upon death, to be paid to a named beneficiary. • Such a policy may provide that at a stated time, premiums will end or benefits will increase. — Also termed ordinary life insurance; straight life insurance. Cf. term life insurance.

liquidation, n. 1. The act of determining by agreement or by litigation the exact amount of something (as a debt or damages) that before was uncertain. 2. The act of settling a debt by payment or other satisfaction. 3. The act or process of converting assets into cash, esp. to settle debts.

one-month liquidation. A special election, available to certain shareholders, that determines how the distributions received in liquidation by electing shareholders will be treated for federal income-tax purposes. • To qualify for the election, the corporation must be completely liquidated within one month. IRC § 333.

partial liquidation. A liquidation that does not completely dispose of a company's assets; esp., a liquidation occurring when some corporate assets are distributed to shareholders (usu. on a pro rata basis) and the corporation continues to operate in a restricted form. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3820. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 398–399, 402.]

twelve-month liquidation. A liquidation occurring within 12 months from adoption of the liquidation plan to complete liquidation, subject to a tax law prohibiting the company from recognizing any gains or losses on property sold within that time frame. • Generally, inventory will not be included unless a bulk sale occurs. IRC § 337. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3698, 3711. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 400, 403.]

4. Bankruptcy. The process — under Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code — of collecting a debtor's nonexempt property, converting that property to cash, and distributing the cash to the various creditors. • Upon liquidation, the debtor hopes to obtain a discharge, which releases the debtor from any further personal liability for prebankruptcy debts. See CHAPTER 7. Cf. REHABILITATION (3). [Cases: Bankruptcy 2251. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 50.]

LIQUIDATION BANKRUPTCY

liquidation bankruptcy. See CHAPTER 7 (2).

LISTER

lister. A person authorized to compile lists of taxable property for assessment and appraisal; an assessor.

listing. 1.Real estate. An agreement between a property owner and an agent, whereby the agent agrees to try to secure a buyer or tenant for a specific property at a certain price and terms in return for a fee or commission. — Also termed listing agreement. [Cases: Brokers 40. C.J.S. Brokers §§ 117–120, 125, 143.]

exclusive-agency listing.A listing providing that one agent has the right to be the only person, other than the owner, to sell the property during a specified period. — Also termed exclusive listing; exclusive-authorization-to-sell listing. [Cases: Brokers 40, 46. C.J.S. Brokers §§ 117–120, 125, 143, 170, 175.]

general listing.See open listing.

multiple listing.A listing providing that the agent will allow other agents to try to sell the property. • Under this agreement, the original agent gives the selling agent a percentage of the commission or some other stipulated amount. [Cases: Brokers 40, 66. C.J.S. Brokers §§ 117–120, 125, 135, 141, 143, 185.]

net listing.A listing providing that the agent agrees to sell the owner's property for a set minimum price, any amount over the minimum being retained by the agent as commission. — Also termed net sale contract. [Cases: Brokers 40. C.J.S. Brokers §§ 117–120, 125, 143.]

open listing.A listing that allows selling rights to be given to more than one agent at a time, obligates the owner to pay a commission when a specified broker makes a sale, and reserves the owner's right to personally sell the property without paying a commission. — Also termed nonexclusive listing; general listing; simple listing. [Cases: Brokers 46. C.J.S. Brokers §§ 170, 175.]

2.Securities. The contract between a firm and a stock exchange by which the trading of the firm's securities on the exchange is handled. See listed security under SECURITY. [Cases: Exchanges 13.10. C.J.S. Exchanges §§ 17–18.]

dual listing.The listing of a security on more than one exchange.

3.Tax. The creation of a schedule or inventory of a person's taxable property; the list of a person's taxable property. [Cases: Taxation 328, 366. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 483, 535–536, 541, 544.]

LISTING AGENT

LITEM

litem (II-tem or -t<<schwa>>m). See AD LITEM.

LITEM DENUNTIARE

litem denuntiare (II-tem d<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>n-shee-air-ee). [Latin “to announce a suit”] Roman law. 1. The summoning of a defendant by a magistrate exercising cognitio in the late classical period. 2. The notification by a buyer to the seller of a claim by a third party to the things sold. — Also spelled litem denunciare. Cf. LITIS DENUNTIATIO.

LITEM SUAM FACERE

litem suam facere (II-tem s[y]oo-<<schwa>>m fay-s<<schwa>>-ree). [Latin “to make a suit one's own”] Roman law. (Of a judex) to fail in his official duty through imprudence, such as not adhering to the formula, or not following due procedure. • This failure amounted to misconduct in the judex's duties, and a litigant was given a private action against him. The scope of actionable misconduct is not certain. It included not obeying the formula and not adjourning the trial properly, but it may also have included overt acts of corruption, such as accepting bribes.

LITE PENDENTE

lite pendente (II-tee pen-den-tee). [Latin] See PENDENTE LITE.

LITERA

litera (lit-<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin “letter”] Hist. 1. A letter. 2. The letter of a law, as distinguished from its spirit. — Also spelled littera. Pl. litterae. See LETTER(3). public grant from the sovereign to a subject, conferring the right to land, a franchise, a title, liberty, or some other endowment. • The modern “patent” and, more closely, “letters patent” derive from this term. See LETTERS PATENT(1).

“The term ‘patent’ is short for ‘letters patent,’ derived from the Latin litterae patentes, meaning open letters. Generally, letters patent were letters addressed by the sovereign ‘to all whom these presents shall come,’ reciting a grant of some dignity, office, franchise, or other privilege that has been given by the sovereign to the patentee.” Donald S. Chisum et al., Principles of Patent Law 2 (1998).

LITERAE PROCURATORIAE

litterae procuratoriae (lit-*<<schwa>>r-ee prok-y<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>*-tor-ee-ee), n.[Law Latin] Hist. Letters of procuration; letters of attorney; power of attorney. See POWER OF ATTORNEY.

LITERAE RECOGNITIONIS

litigation,n.1. The process of carrying on a lawsuit <the attorney advised his client to make a generous settlement offer in order to avoid litigation>.2. A lawsuit itself <several litigations pending before the court>. — litigate,vb. — litigatory, litigational,adj.

complex litigation.Litigation involving several parties who are separately represented, and usu. involving multifarious factual and legal issues.

“What exactly is ‘complex litigation’? The problem is that no one really knows — or, more accurately perhaps, various definitions don't agree. Complex civil litigation has an ‘I-know-it-when-I-see-it’ quality. Nearly everyone agrees that matters like the massive asbestos litigation, the AT&T antitrust suit, or the remedial phase of a school desegregation case are complex. But trying to find a common thread that both describes these cases and distinguishes them from the run-of-the-mill car crash is difficult.” Jay Tidmarsh & Roger H. Transgrud, Complex Litigation 1 (2002).

LITIGATION COSTS

litigation costs.See COST(3).

LITIGATION PRIVILEGE

litigation privilege.See PRIVILEGE(1).

LITIGATOR

litigiosity (li-tij-ee-os-<<schwa>>-tee), n.

LITIGIOUS RIGHT

litigious right. Civil law. A right that cannot be exercised without first being determined in a lawsuit. La. Civ. Code art. 2652. • If the right is sold, it must be in litigation at the time of sale to be considered a litigious right.

LITIS AESTIMATIO

litis aestimatio (II-tis es-t*<<schwa>>-may-shee-oh*). [Latin] Roman law. The judicial estimate of the measure of damages.

LITIS CONTESTATIO

litis contestatio (II-tis kon-tes-tay-shee-oh). [Latin] 1. Roman law. The final agreement of the parties to a suit on the formula the praetor would issue to the judex. — Also termed contestatio litis. See FORMULA.

2. Hist. A contested point in a lawsuit; a litigable issue developed by the litigants' alternating statements. 3. CONTESTATION OF SUIT.

LITIS DENUNTIATIO

litis denuntiatio (II-tis d*<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>n-s[h]ee-ay-shee-oh*), n. [Latin] Civil law. The process by which a land purchaser, sued for possession of the land by a third party, notified the land seller and demanded aid in defending the suit under the seller's warranty of title. — Also spelled litis denunciatio. Cf. LITEM DENUNTIARE.

LITIS DOMINIUM

litis dominium (II-tis d*<<schwa>>-min-ee-<<schwa>>m*), n. [Latin] See DOMINUS LITIS .

LITIS ORDINATIO

litis ordinatio (II-tis or-di-nay-shee-oh). [Latin “the order or regulation of a lawsuit”] Scots law. The form under which a lawsuit is conducted.

LITISPENDENCE

litispence (II-tis-pen-d<<schwa>>nts).Archaic. The time during which a lawsuit is pending.

LITTERA

LIVERY IN CHIVALRY

livery in chivalry.Hist. The delivery of possession of real property from a guardian to a ward in chivalry when the ward reached majority.

LIVERY OFFICE

livery office.An office designated for the delivery of lands.

LIVERY OF SEISIN

livery of seisin.Hist. The ceremony by which a grantor conveyed land to a grantee. • Livery of seisin involved either (1) going on the land and having the grantor symbolically deliver possession of the land to the grantee by handing over a twig, a clod of dirt, or a piece of turf (called livery in deed) or (2) going within sight of the land and having the grantor tell the grantee that possession was being given, followed by the grantee's entering the land (called livery in law). See SEISIN. [Cases: Deeds 21.C.J.S. Deeds §§ 12–13.]

“[W]e may now pause to wonder how transfer of these potentially infinite interests was accomplished. Without a modern system of land records, it would be desirable that the transfer be effected with sufficient ceremony not only to mark itself indelibly in the memories of the participants, but also to give notice to interested persons such as the mesne lord above the transferor. The central idea was to make ritual livery (meaning ‘delivery,’ from the Old French livrer) of seisin (meaning, roughly, ‘possession,’ from the Old French saisir or seisir). The transferor and transferee would go to the land to be transferred, and the transferor would then hand to the transferee a lump of soil or a twig from a tree — all the while intoning the appropriate words of grant, together with the magical words ‘and his heirs’ if the interest transferred was to be a potentially infinite one.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 10–11 (2d ed. 1984).

LIVES IN BEING lives in being.See LIFE IN BEING.

LIVESTOCK

livestock,n. Domestic animals and fowls that (1) are kept for profit or pleasure, (2) can normally be confined within boundaries without seriously impairing their utility, and (3) do not normally intrude on others' land in such a way as to harm the land or growing crops.

LIVE STORAGE

live storage.The storage of cars in active daily use, rather than cars put away for an extended period. • A garage owner's responsibility sometimes depends on whether a car is in live or dead storage. Cf. DEAD STORAGE. [Cases: Automobiles 370. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 1564–1568, 1586, 1589.]

LIVE THALWEG

live thalweg.See THALWEG.

LIVING

living,n. One's source of monetary support or resources; esp., one's employment.

LIVING SEPARATE AND APART living separate and apart.(Of a husband and wife) living away from each other, along with at least one spouse's intent to dissolve the marriage. • One basis for no-fault divorce in many states exists if the spouses have lived apart for a specified period. — Sometimes shortened to separate and apart. [Cases: Divorce 35, 36, 37(2, 3, 4); Husband and Wife 272(1). C.J.S. Divorce §§ 20–21, 42, 52, 70.]

LLOYD'S INSURANCE

Lloyd's insurance. See INSURANCE.

LLOYD'S OF LONDON

Lloyd's of London. Insurance. 1. A London insurance mart where individual underwriters gather to quote rates and write insurance on a wide variety of risks. 2. A voluntary association of merchants, shipowners, underwriters, and brokers formed not to write policies but instead to issue a notice of an endeavor to members who may individually underwrite a policy by assuming shares of the total risk of insuring a client. • The names of the bound underwriters and the attorney-in-fact appear on the policy. — Also termed Lloyd's; London Lloyd's. [Cases: Insurance 1220. C.J.S. Insurance § 1709.]

“[I]t is not the corporation of Lloyd's which undertakes insurance risks and enters into policies of insurance; that is done by the individual members of Lloyd's, acting usually in groups or 'syndicates,' which are not partnerships or companies but merely fortuitous aggregations of, say, five, ten, or more members represented in common by one underwriting agent having power to bind them each individually and separately to contracts of insurance. These members are frequently referred to as 'names'; and their agent is said to 'write' for them. If, as is commonly the case, he also is a member of Lloyd's, then he will 'write' for himself, too.” 2 Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England 237 (L. Crispin Warmington ed., 21st ed. 1950).

LLOYD'S UNDERWRITERS

Lloyd's underwriters. An unincorporated association of underwriters who, under a common name, engage in the insurance business through an attorney-in-fact having authority to obligate the underwriters severally, within specified limits, on insurance contracts that the attorney makes or issues in the common name. — Also termed Lloyd's association; American Lloyd's. [Cases: Insurance 1220. C.J.S. Insurance § 1709.]

load factor. 1. The ratio of a utility customer's usage levels during a given period compared to the customer's demand during peak periods. [Cases: Electricity 11.3. C.J.S. Electricity § 30.] 2. An analysis of the number of passengers on an airplane or other common carrier compared to available capacity.

LOAD FUND

load fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

LOADING

loading. Insurance. An amount added to a life-insurance premium to cover the insurer's business expenses and contingencies. — Also termed expense loading. See gross premium (1) under PREMIUM(1). [Cases: Insurance 2000, 2005. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 436–439.]

load line. Maritime law. 1. The depth to which a safely loaded ship will sink in salt water. 2. One of a set of graduated marks on the side of a ship, indicating the depth to which the ship can be loaded in varying waters (such as salt water or freshwater) and weather conditions. • Load lines must, by law in most maritime countries, be cut and painted amidships. — Also termed (in sense 2) load-line marks; Plimsoll marks.

“The interest of shipowners led them, in early times, to load vessels to a point beyond safety; the greater the weight of the vessel's load, of course, the lower she rides in the water, and the more vulnerable she is to heavy seas. Many seamen consequently lost their lives. Britain led the way in establishing standards of depth in the water believed to be safe; Samuel Plimsoll, M.P., was the moving spirit, and gave his name to the Plimsoll mark, now seen on the side of all large vessels, which marks the limits of safety for different seas and seasons. Since 1929, the United States has made mandatory the placing of and compliance with loadline marks” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 11-12, at 987 (2d ed. 1975).

loadmanage.Hist. 1. The fee paid to loadsmen, who sail in small vessels acting as pilots for larger ships. 2. The hiring of a pilot for a vessel. 3. A pilot's or loadsmen's skill. — Also spelled lodemanage; lode manage.

loadsmen.Hist.1. A person who directs a ship's course from a small boat traveling in front of the larger ship rather than from the ship itself. • The loadsmen had a monopoly on piloting in the cinque ports. See CINQUE PORTS. 2. A person who took the ship to a berth after a pilot had brought it into port. — Also spelled loadman; lodeman; lodesman.

LOAN

loan,n.1. An act of lending; a grant of something for temporary use <Turner gave the laptop as a loan, not a gift>. [Cases: Contracts 194.] 2. A thing lent for the borrower's temporary use; esp., a sum of money lent at interest <Hull applied for a car loan>.

accommodation loan.A loan for which the lender receives no consideration in return. See ACCOMMODATION.

add-on loan.A loan in which the interest is calculated at the stated rate for the loan agreement's full term for the full principal amount, and then the interest is added to the principal before installment payments are calculated, resulting in an interest amount higher than if it were calculated on the monthly unpaid balance. • Consumer loans are typically add-on loans. — Also termed contract loan. See add-on interest under INTEREST(3).

amortized loan.A loan calling for periodic payments that are applied first to interest and then to principal, as provided by the terms of the note. See AMORTIZATION(1).

back-to-back loan.A loan arrangement by which two firms lend each other funds denominated in different currencies for a specified period.

below-market loan.See interest-free loan.

bridge loan.A short-term loan that is used to cover costs until more permanent financing is arranged. — Also termed swing loan.

broker call loan.See call loan.

building loan.A type of bridge loan used primarily for erecting a building. • The loan is typically advanced in parts as work progresses and is used to pay the contractor, subcontractors, and material suppliers. See interim financing under FINANCING.

call loan.A loan for which the lender can demand payment at any time, usu. with 24 hours' notice, because there is no fixed maturity date. — Also termed broker call loan; demand loan. Cf. term loan. [Cases: Bills and Notes 129(3). C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit§ 90.]

collateral loan.See secured loan.

commercial loan.A loan that a financial institution gives to a business, generally for 30 to 90 days.

commodity loan.A loan secured by a commodity (such as cotton or wool) in the form of a warehouse receipt or other negotiable instrument.

consolidation loan.A loan whose proceeds are used to pay off other individual loans, thereby creating a more manageable debt.

consumer loan.A loan that is given to an individual for family, household, personal, or agricultural purposes and that is generally governed by truth-in-lending statutes and regulations. [Cases: Consumer Credit 1. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit § 274.]

contract loan.See add-on loan.

Crown loan.Tax. An interest-free demand loan, usu. from parent to child, in which the borrowed funds are invested and the income from the investment is taxed at the child's rate. • This type of loan is named for one Harry Crown of Chicago, reputedly one of the first persons to use it. See kiddie tax under TAX.

day loan.A short-term loan to a broker to finance daily transactions.

demand loan.See call loan.

discount loan.A loan in which interest is deducted in advance, at the time the loan is made.

doorstep loan.A loan offered by a door-to-door solicitor, usu. for home repairs at a high interest rate and under misleading or fraudulent terms. • The term is used primarily in the United Kingdom.

home-equity loan.A line of bank credit given to a homeowner, using as collateral the homeowner's equity in the home. — Often shortened to equity loan. — Also termed home-equity line of credit. See EQUITY(7).

installment loan.A loan that is to be repaid in usu. equal portions over a specified period.

interest-free loan.Money loaned to a borrower at no charge or, under the Internal Revenue Code, with a charge that is lower than the market rate. IRC (26 USCA) § 7872. — Also termed (in the IRC) below-market loan.

maritime loan.A loan providing that a lender will not be repaid if the cargo is damaged or lost because of a navigational peril, but that the lender will be repaid plus interest if the cargo arrives safely or is damaged because of the carrier's negligence. — Also termed marine loan.

mortgage loan.A loan secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on real property. [Cases: Mortgages 14. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 143–150.]

nonperforming loan.An outstanding loan that is not being repaid.

nonrecourse loan.A secured loan that allows the lender to attach only the collateral, not the borrower's personal assets, if the loan is not repaid. [Cases: Bills and Notes 44; Secured Transactions 227, 240. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 11; Secured Transactions §§ 152, 164–166, 168–169, 172, 174–175, 180–183.]

participation loan.A loan issued by two or more lenders. See LOAN PARTICIPATION. [Cases: Contracts 194.]

policy loan.An insurer's loan to an insured, secured by the policy's cash reserve. [Cases: Insurance 1868. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 352–356.]

precarious loan. 1. A loan that may be recalled at any time. 2. A loan in danger of not being repaid.

premium loan.A loan made to an insured by the insurer to enable the insured to pay further premiums. • The reserve value of the policy serves as collateral. [Cases: Insurance 1868, 2037. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 352–356, 518–519, 742–745, 749–754.]

recourse loan.A loan that allows the lender, if the borrower defaults, not only to attach the collateral but also to seek judgment against the borrower's (or guarantor's) personal assets. [Cases: Secured Transactions 227, 240. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 152, 164–166, 168–169, 172, 174–175, 180–183.]

revolver loan.A single loan that a debtor takes out in lieu of several lines of credit or other loans from various creditors, and that is subject to review and approval at certain intervals. • A revolver loan is usu. taken out in an attempt to resolve problems with creditors. Cf. revolving credit under CREDIT (4).

revolving loan.A loan that is renewed at maturity.

secured loan.A loan that is secured by property or securities. — Also termed collateral loan.

short-term loan.A loan with a due date of less than one year, usu. evidenced by a note.

signature loan.An unsecured loan based solely on the borrower's promise or signature. • To obtain such a loan, the borrower must usu. be highly creditworthy.

swing loan. See bridge loan.

term loan. A loan with a specified due date, usu. of more than one year. • Such a loan typically cannot be repaid before maturity without incurring a penalty. — Also termed time loan. Cf. call loan. [Cases: Bills and Notes 129(1). C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 86–89, 91.]

loan, vb. To lend, esp. money.

LOAN-AMORTIZATION SCHEDULE

loan-amortization schedule. A schedule that divides each loan payment into an interest component and a principal component. • Typically, the interest component begins as the largest part of each payment and declines over time. See AMORTIZATION(1).

LOAN ASSOCIATION

loan commitment. A lender's binding promise to a borrower to lend a specified amount of money at a certain interest rate, usu. within a specified period and for a specified purpose (such as buying real estate). See MORTGAGE COMMITMENT . [Cases: Contracts 194.]

LOANED EMPLOYEE

loaned employee. See borrowed employee under EMPLOYEE.

LOANED SERVANT

loaned servant. See borrowed employee under EMPLOYEE.

LOAN FOR CONSUMPTION

loan for consumption. An agreement by which a lender delivers goods to a borrower who consumes them and who is obligated to return goods of the same quantity, type, and quality. [Cases: Contracts 194.]

LOAN FOR EXCHANGE

loan for exchange. A contract by which a lender delivers personal property to a borrower who agrees to return similar property, usu. without compensation for its use.

LOAN FOR USE

loan for use. An agreement by which a lender delivers an asset to a borrower who must use it according to its normal function or according to the agreement, and who must return it when finished using it. • No interest is charged.

loanland. Hist. A tenancy involving the loan of land by one person to another. — Also spelled laenland. Cf. BOOKLAND; FOLKLAND.

LOAN PARTICIPATION

loan participation. The coming together of multiple lenders to issue a large loan (called a participation loan) to one borrower, thereby reducing each lender's individual risk. [Cases: Contracts 194.]

LOAN RATIO

loan ratio. See LOAN-TO-VALUE RATIO.

LOAN-RECEIPT AGREEMENT

loan-receipt agreement. Torts. A settlement agreement by which the defendant lends money to the plaintiff interest-free, the plaintiff not being obligated to repay the loan unless he or she recovers money from other tortfeasors responsible for the same injury. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement 7; Insurance 3524. C.J.S. Compromise and Settlement § 29; Insurance §§ 1465, 1467.]

loansharking, n. The practice of lending money at excessive and esp. usurious rates, and often threatening or using extortion to enforce repayment. — Also termed extortionate credit transaction. — loan-shark, vb. — loan shark, n.

LOAN SOCIETY

loan society.English law. A club organized to collect deposits from and make loans to industrial workers. • The loan societies were forerunners of the American savings-and-loan associations.

LOAN-TO-VALUE RATIO loan-to-value ratio.The ratio, usu. expressed as a percentage, between the amount of a mortgage loan and the value of the property pledged as security for the mortgage. • For example, an $80,000 loan on property worth $100,000 results in a loan-to-value ratio of 80% — which is usu. the highest ratio that lenders will agree to without requiring the debtor to buy mortgage insurance. — Often shortened to LTV ratio. — Also termed loan ratio. [Cases: Mortgages 145. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 198, 200.]

LOAN VALUE

loan value.Insurance. 1. The maximum amount that may be lent safely on property or life insurance without jeopardizing the lender's need for protection from the borrower's default. 2. The amount of money an insured can borrow against the cash value of his or her life-insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance 1868. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 352–356.]

lobby,vb.1. To talk with a legislator, sometimes in a luxurious setting, in an attempt to influence the legislator's vote <she routinely lobbies for tort reform in the state legislature>. [Cases: Statutes 24. C.J.S. Statutes § 7.] 2. To support or oppose (a measure) by working to influence a legislator's vote <the organization lobbied the bill through the Senate>.3. To try to influence (a decision-maker) <the lawyer lobbied the judge for a favorable ruling>. — lobbying,n. — lobbyist,n.

LOBBYING ACT

lobbying act.A federal or state law governing the conduct of lobbyists, usu. by requiring them to register and file reports. • An example is the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act, 12 USCA § 261. [Cases: Statutes 24.C.J.S. Statutes § 7.]

LOCAL COURT

local court. See COURT.

LOCAL CUSTOM

local custom. See CUSTOM.

LOCAL-EXCHANGE CARRIER

local-exchange carrier. Telecommunications law. An entity that provides telephone service, usu. on a local basis, through a local-exchange network. 47 USCA § 153(26). — Abbr. LEC. See LOCAL-EXCHANGE NETWORK. [Cases: Telecommunications 46, 267, 323. C.J.S.

Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television §§ 31–32.]

LOCAL-EXCHANGE NETWORK

local-exchange network. Telecommunications law. A system for providing telephone service on a local basis. • A local-exchange network usu. consists of such elements as switches, local loops, and transport trunks, and capabilities such as billing databases and operator services. Switches are pieces of equipment that direct calls to the appropriate destination. Local loops are the wires that connect telephones to the switches. Transport trunks are the wires that carry calls from switch to switch. All the elements of a local-exchange network are often referred to as a bundle, and there are federal requirements that a local-exchange carrier who controls a local-exchange network permit competition by selling some access, including unbundled access, to its local-exchange network. 47 USCA § 251(c). See LOCAL-EXCHANGE CARRIER; UNBUNDLING RULES. [Cases: Telecommunications 46, 267, 323. C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television §§ 31–32.]

locality, n. 1. A definite region; vicinity; neighborhood; community. 2. Hist. Scots law. The land held by a widow in usufruct under the terms of her marriage contract. • If a widow has locality lands, she cannot assert her statutory claim to a one-third share of her husband's real property.

LOCALITY OF A LAWSUIT

locality of a lawsuit. The place where a court may exercise judicial authority.

LOCALITY-PLUS TEST locality-plus test. Maritime law. The requirement that, for a federal court to exercise admiralty tort jurisdiction, not only must the alleged wrong occur on navigable waters, it must also relate to a traditional maritime activity. Executive Jet Aviation, Inc. v. Cleveland, 409 U.S. 249, 93 S.Ct. 493 (1972). — Also termed locality-plus rule; maritime-connection doctrine. [Cases: Admiralty 17. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 62–63.]

locality rule. 1. The doctrine that, in a professional-malpractice suit, the standard of care to be applied to the professional's conduct is the reasonable care exercised by similar professionals in the same vicinity and professional community. [Cases: Health 620.]

“With respect to medical doctors (and sometimes dentists and others), the standard of care has been further limited by the so-called ‘locality rule.’ A physician historically was required only to possess and apply the knowledge and use the skill and care that is ordinarily used by reasonably well-qualified physicians in the locality in which he practices, or, usually, in ‘similar localities.’ This frequently made it difficult or impossible for a plaintiff to prove the applicable standard since other doctors in the same locality are notoriously reluctant to testify against their professional colleagues. However, with the advent of improved communication and continuing medical education, the reason for the rule has abated, and today the trend is toward its abolition.” Edward J. Kionka, Torts in a Nutshell 270–71 (2d ed. 1992).

2. The doctrine that, in determining the appropriate amount of attorney's fees to be awarded in a suit, the proper basis is the rate charged by similar attorneys for similar work in the vicinity. [Cases: Costs 194.18; Federal Civil Procedure 2737.4. C.J.S. Costs § 132.]

locality test. Maritime law. The requirement that, for a federal court to exercise admiralty tort jurisdiction, the alleged wrong must have occurred on navigable waters. • The test was replaced by the locality-plus test in Executive Jet Aviation, Inc. v. Cleveland, 409 U.S. 249, 93 S.Ct. 493 (1972). — Also termed locality rule. See LOCALITY-PLUS TEST.

LOCALIZATION DOCTRINE

localization doctrine. The doctrine that a foreign corporation, by doing sufficient business in a state, will subject itself to that state's laws. [Cases: Corporations 638. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 893–896.]

LOCAL LAW

local law. 1. A statute that relates to or operates in a particular locality rather than the entire state. 2. A statute that applies to particular persons or things rather than an entire class of persons or things. — Also termed (in senses 1 & 2) local act; local statute. [Cases: Statutes 76–104. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 148–149, 151–155, 159, 162–201.] 3. The law of a particular jurisdiction, as opposed to the law of a foreign state. — Also termed internal law. 4. Conflict of laws. The body of standards, principles, and rules — excluding conflict-of-laws rules — that the state courts apply to controversies before them. Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 4(1) (1971). [Cases: Action 17. C.J.S. Actions §§ 18–20; Conflict of Laws §§ 2–3, 12, 15, 20, 23, 27–32, 34–40, 42–48, 50–65, 96–97, 100, 102, 105–107.]

LOCAL-LAW THEORY

local-law theory. Conflict of laws. The view that, although a court of the forum recognizes and enforces a local right (that is, one created under its own law), in a foreign-element case it does not necessarily apply the rule that would govern an analogous case of a purely domestic character, but instead takes into account the law of the foreign country by fashioning a local right as nearly as possible upon the law of the country in which the decisive facts have occurred. • This theory is credited to Walter Wheeler Cook, who expounded it in the first chapter of his Logical and Legal Bases of the Conflict of Laws (1949).

“Since the court of the forum adopts the view that the chosen law would have taken not of the actual case, but of an equivalent domestic case, it does not necessarily recognize the right that would have been vested in the plaintiff according to that law.... It is scarcely deniable, however, that this local law theory is little more than what a learned writer has stigmatized as a sterile truism — sterile because it affords no basis for the systematic development of private international law. To remind an English judge, about to try a case containing a foreign element, that whatever decision he gives he must enforce only the lex fori, is a technical quibble that explains nothing and solves nothing. It provides no guidance whatever upon the limits within which he must have regard to the foreign law.” G.C. Cheshire, Private International Law 35 (6th ed. 1961).

LOCAL OPTION

local option. An option that allows a municipality or other governmental unit to determine a particular course of action without the specific approval of state officials. — Also termed local veto. Cf. HOME RULE. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors 24–43; Municipal Corporations 65.C.J.S. Intoxicating Liquors §§ 49–89; Municipal Corporations §§ 122, 140–141, 143.]

LOCAL RECEIVER

local receiver. See RECEIVER.

LOCAL RULE

local rule. 1. A rule based on the physical conditions of a state and the character, customs, and beliefs of its people. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 25.] 2. A rule by which an individual court supplements the procedural rules applying generally to all courts within the jurisdiction. • Local rules deal with a variety of matters, such as requiring extra copies of motions to be filed with the court or prohibiting the reading of newspapers in the courtroom. Fed. R. Civ. P. 83.

LOCAL STATUTE

local statute. 1. LOCAL LAW(1). 2. LOCAL LAW(2).

LOCAL UNION

local union. See UNION.

LOCAL USAGE

local usage. See USAGE.

LOCAL VETO

local veto. See LOCAL OPTION.

LOCARE

locare (l<<schwa>>-kair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To let or hire out. See LOCATOR.

LOCARE ALIQUID FACIENDUM locare aliquid faciendum (l<<schwa>>-kair-ee al-i-kwid fay-shee-en-d<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. To contract to have someone perform work for remuneration. Cf. CONDOCERE ALIQUID FACIENDUM.

LOCARE ALIQUID UTENDUM

locare aliquid utendum (l<<schwa>>-kair-ee al-i-kwid yoo-ten-d<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. To let something on hire for the use of the lessee; to accept consideration for the use of an object. Cf. CONDOCERE ALIQUID UTENDUM.

LOCARIUM

locarium (l<<schwa>>-kair-ee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Law Latin] Hist. Rent.

LOCATARIUS

locatarius (loh-k<<schwa>>-tair-ee-<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin] Hist. A person with whom something is deposited; a deposittee.

locatio (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. Any contract by which the use of the thing bailed, or the use of the labor or services, is agreed to be given for a compensation. • This type of contract benefits both parties. — Also termed lease; hiring. Cf. ABLOCATION. Pl. locationes (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh-nee-z).

locatio conductio (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh k<<schwa>>n-duk-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. A letting for hire; specif., a contract by which one person agreed to give to another the use, or the use and enjoyment, of a thing or of services or labor in return for remuneration, usu. money. • In Roman law, it covered a broad range of circumstances in return for a merces or rent.

locatio custodiae (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh k<<schwa>>s-toh-dee-ee). [Latin] Roman law. The hiring of care or service, as when the bailee is to protect the thing bailed.

locatio mercium vehendarum. See locatio operis mercium vehendarum.

locatio operarum (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh op-<<schwa>>-rair-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “the letting of services”] Roman & civil law. A contract of employment; specif., contract in which someone, usu. a day laborer, hires out his services for a specified price. — Also termed locatio operis faciendi. Cf. REDEMPTIO OPERIS.

locatio operis faciendi (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh op-<<schwa>>-ris fay-shee-en-dI). [Latin “the letting of a job to be done”] Roman law. A contract by which someone hires a contractor (conductor) to undertake work (e.g., to build a home or teach a slave to read) on behalf of the hirer. — Sometimes shortened to locatio operis. Cf. locatio operarum.

locatio operis mercium vehendarum (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh op-<<schwa>>-ris m<<schwa>>r-shee-<<schwa>>m vee-h<<schwa>>n-dair-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “the letting of the job of carrying goods”] Roman law. A bailment in which goods are delivered to the bailee for transport elsewhere, esp. by sea. — Also termed locatio mercium vehendarum.

locatio rei (l<<schwa>>-kay-shee-oh ree-I). [Latin “letting of a thing”] Roman law. The hiring of a thing for use, by which the hirer gains the temporary use of the thing for a fee.

“Locatio rei was the letting of a res for hire. Roman law differed in several aspects from the relevant rules of English law. Firstly, there was not in Roman law a fundamental distinction between the hiring of personal property and the lease of real property: locatio rei applied both to land and movables. Secondly, in Roman law the hirer did not obtain possession. Thirdly, the locatio was a mere contract and even the tenant of land did not have a right to be restored if he were [wrongfully] ejected, his sole remedy being an action for breach of contract. Fourthly, the Roman contract gave more consideration to the tenant or hirer than does English law.” G.W. Paton, Bailment in the Common Law 53 (1952).

LOCATION

location. 1. The specific place or position of a person or thing. 2. The act or process of locating. 3. Real estate. The designation of the boundaries of a particular piece of land, either on the record or on the land itself. [Cases: Boundaries 7–9. C.J.S. Boundaries §§ 10–23.] 4. Mining law. The act of appropriating a mining claim. See MINING CLAIM. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 9–38. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 13, 26–93, 95–110, 112, 131.] 5. The claim so appropriated. — Also termed (in senses 4 & 5) mining location. 6. Civil law. A contract for the temporary use of something for hire; a leasing for hire. See LOCATIO.

LOCATION-DAMAGE CLAUSE

lockout. 1. An employer's withholding of work and closing of a business because of a labor dispute. [Cases: Labor Relations 290. C.J.S. Labor Relations §§ 273–274, 277–278.]

defensive lockout.A lockout that is called to prevent imminent and irreparable financial harm to the company or to protect a legal right. • Defensive lockouts were legal, but the U.S. Supreme Court abolished the distinction between defensive and offensive lockouts in favor of a balancing test. American Ship Bldg. Co. v. NLRB, 380 U.S. 300, 85 S.Ct. 955 (1965).

offensive lockout.A lockout called by management to assert economic pressure on workers and thereby gain a bargaining advantage over a union. • Offensive lockouts were illegal before the U.S. Supreme Court abolished the legal distinction between offensive and defensive lockouts in favor of a balancing test. American Ship Bldg. Co. v. NLRB, 380 U.S. 300, 85 S.Ct. 955 (1965).

2. Loosely, an employee's refusal to work because the employer unreasonably refuses to abide by an expired employment contract while a new one is being negotiated. Cf. STRIKE; BOYCOTT; PICKETING.

LOCK RATE

LOCKUP

lockup,n.1.JAIL. 2.LOCKUP OPTION.

LOCKUP OPTION

lockup option.A defense against a corporate takeover, in which a friendly party is entitled to buy parts of a corporation for a set price when a person or group acquires a certain percentage of the corporation's shares. • An agreement of this kind may be illegal, to the extent it is not undertaken to serve the best interests of the shareholders. — Often shortened to lockup. [Cases: Corporations 312(5). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 500–501, 503, 524.]

LOCO PARENTIS

loco parentis.See IN LOCO PARENTIS.

LOCO RERUM IMMOBILIUM

loco rerum immobilium (loh-koh reer-*<<schwa>>m im-<<schwa>>-bil-ee-<<schwa>>*m). [Latin] Scots law. Treated as immovable things. • The phrase appeared in reference to a determination of whether certain items (such as shares of stock) should be treated as movable or immovable property.

LOCO TUTORIS

loco tutoris (loh-koh t[y]oo-tor-is). [Latin] Scots law. In the place of a tutor.

“The Court of Session is in the practice of appointing, on application made for such appointment, a factor loco tutoris on the estates of pupils not having tutors. Such an appointment places the factor in the same position towards the pupil, both as regards his person and the administration of his estate, as if he held the office by virtue of relationship and was tutor-at-law, or had received the appointment of tutor from the pupil's father under his testamentary settlement, the only difference being that the office of a tutor appointed by the Court is not gratuitous.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 336–37 (4th ed. 1894).

LOCUM TENENS

locum tenens (loh-k*<<schwa>>m tee-nenz orten-<<schwa>>*nz), n. [Law Latin “holding the place”] Hist. A deputy; a substitute; a representative.

LOCUS CONTRACTUS

locus contractus (loh-k*<<schwa>>s k<<schwa>>n-trak-t<<schwa>>*s). [Latin “place of the contract”] The place where a contract was made. Cf. LEX LOCI CONTRACTUS . [Cases: Contracts 144, 145. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 91–93; Contracts §§ 13–23, 25, 372.]

LOCUS CRIMINIS

locus criminis (loh-k<<schwa>>s krim-<<schwa>>-nis), n.[Latin] The place where a crime was committed.

LOCUS DELICTI

locus delicti (loh-k<<schwa>>s d<<schwa>>-lik-tl). [Latin “place of the wrong”] The place where an offense was committed; the place where the last event necessary to make the actor liable occurred. Cf. LEX LOCI DELICTI. [Cases: Torts 2. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace § 272; Conflict of Laws §§ 16–17, 99; Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 3, 40; Torts §§ 27–29.]

“When a statute does not indicate where Congress considered the place of committing the crime to be, the site or locus delicti must be determined from the nature of the crime and the location of the acts or omissions constituting the offense.” United States v. Clinton, 574 F.2d 464, 465 (9th Cir. 1978).

LOCUS IN QUO

locus in quo (loh-k<<schwa>>s in kwoh). [Latin “place in which”] The place where something is alleged to have occurred.

LOCUS POENITENTIAE

locus poenitentiae (loh-k<<schwa>>s pen-<<schwa>>-ten-shee-ee). [Latin “place of repentance”] 1. A point at which it is not too late for one to change one's legal position; the possibility of withdrawing from a contemplated course of action, esp. a wrong, before being committed to it.

“The requirement of an overt act before conspirators can be prosecuted and punished exists ... to provide a locus poenitentiae an opportunity for the conspirators to reconsider, terminate the agreement, and thereby avoid punishment.” People v. Zamora, 557 P.2d 75, 82 (Cal. 1976).

2. The opportunity to withdraw from a negotiation before finally concluding the contract. [Cases: Contracts 138(3). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 280–281, 283, 290.]

locus publicus (loh-k<<schwa>>s p<<schwa>>b-li-k<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Roman law. A public place.

“Locus publicus A parcel of public land. It is property of the Roman people and is protected by various interdicts ... against violation by private individuals who might endanger its public character or its use by the people.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law

568 (1953).

LOCUS REGIT ACTUM

locus regit actum (loh-k<<schwa>>s ree-jit ak-t<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin “the place rules the act”] Int'l law. The rule that a transaction complying with the legal formalities of the country where it is created will be considered valid in the country where it is to be effective, even if that country requires additional formalities.

LOCUS REI SITAE

locus rei sitae (loh-k<<schwa>>s ree-IsI-tee), n.[Latin “place where a thing is situated”] Civil law. The rule that the place where the land is located is the proper forum in a case involving real estate.

LOCUS SIGILLI

locus sigilli (loh-k<<schwa>>s si-jil-I), n.[Latin] The place of the seal. • Today this phrase is almost always abbreviated “L.S.” These are the traditional letters appearing on many notarial certificates to indicate where the notary public's embossed seal should be placed. If a rubber-stamp seal is used, it should be placed near but not over this abbreviation. See NOTARY SEAL . [Cases: Seals 3. C.J.S. Seals § 4.]

“For some period in history seals were required to consist of wax affixed to the parchment or paper on which the terms of the instrument were written. The wax was required to have an identifiable impression made upon it. Usually this was made by a signet ring. In time when ordinary people, who did not have signet rings, learned to read and write, it was to be expected that substitutes for the traditional seal would be accepted by the law. Thus, today it would be generally accurate to say that a seal may consist of wax, a gummed wafer, an impression on the paper, the word ‘seal,’ the letters ‘L.S.’ (locus sigilli) or even a pen scratch.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 7-3, at 296 (3d ed. 1987).

LOCUS SOLUTIONIS

locus solutionis (loh-k<<schwa>>s s<<schwa>>-loo-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Hist. The place of performance.

LOCUS STANDI

locus standi (loh-k<<schwa>>s stan-dIor-dee). [Latin “place of standing”] The right to bring an action or to be heard in a given forum; STANDING.

LODESMAN

lodesman. See LOADSMAN.

LODESTAR

lodestar. 1. A guiding star; an inspiration or model. 2. A reasonable amount of attorney's fees in a given case, usu. calculated by multiplying a reasonable number of hours worked by the prevailing hourly rate in the community for similar work, and often considering such additional factors as the degree of skill and difficulty involved in the case, the degree of its urgency, its novelty, and the like. • Most statutes that authorize an award of attorney's fees use the lodestar method for computing the award. [Cases: Costs 194.18; Federal Civil Procedure 2737.4. C.J.S. Costs § 132.]

lodge. See FILE(1).

LODGER

lodger. 1. A person who rents and occupies a room in another's house. [Cases: Innkeepers 8; Landlord and Tenant 1. C.J.S. Inns, Hotels and Eating Places § 5; Landlord and Tenant §§ 1, 2(1, 2), 6(1), 7, 202(5).] 2. LOGIA logia (loj-ee-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] Hist. A small house or cottage.

LOGICAL-CAUSE DOCTRINE logical-cause doctrine. The principle that, if the plaintiff proves that an injury occurred and proves a logical cause of it, a party desiring to defeat the claim cannot succeed merely by showing that there is another imaginable cause, but must also show that the alternative cause is more probable than the cause shown by the plaintiff. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 1356.C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 960, 974.]

LOGICAL INTERPRETATION

logical interpretation. See INTERPRETATION.

LOGICAL POSITIVISM logical positivism. A philosophical system or movement requiring that meaningful statements be in principle verifiable. Cf. LEGAL POSITIVISM.

LOGICAL-RELATIONSHIP STANDARD logical-relationship standard. Civil procedure. A test applied to determine whether a defendant's counterclaim is compulsory, by examining whether both claims are based on the same operative facts or whether those facts activate additional rights, otherwise dormant, for the defendant. • One of the most important factors considered is whether hearing the claims together would promote judicial economy and efficiency. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 776; Set-off and Counterclaim 60.C.J.S. Set-off and Counterclaim §§ 102–103.]

“[U]nder the fourth test — frequently referred to as the ‘logical relationship’ standard — the principal consideration in determining whether a counterclaim is compulsory rests on the efficiency or economy of trying the counterclaim in the same litigation as the main claim. As a result, the convenience of the court, rather than solely the counterclaim's relationship to the facts or issues of the opposing claim, is controlling. The hallmark of this approach is flexibility. Although the fourth test has been criticized for being overly broad in scope and uncertain in application, it has by far the widest acceptance among the courts.” Jack H. Friedenthal et al., Civil Procedure § 6.7, at 352 (2d ed. 1993).

LOGIC BOMB

logic bomb. Destructive or disruptive computer software that is planted on a computer, server, or network and waits until a certain time to activate itself.

LOGROLLING

logrolling,n.1. The exchanging of political favors; esp., the trading of votes among legislators to gain support of measures that are beneficial to each legislator's constituency. 2. The legislative practice of including several propositions in one measure or proposed constitutional amendment so that the legislature or voters will pass all of them, even though these propositions might not have passed if they had been submitted separately. • Many state constitutions have single-subject clauses that prohibit this practice. [Cases: Constitutional Law 9(1); Statutes 107.C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 13–14; Statutes § 208.] — logroll,vb.

LOI

LOI.abbr.LETTER OF INTENT.

LOITERING

loitering,n. The criminal offense of remaining in a certain place (such as a public street) for no apparent reason. • Loitering statutes are generally held to be unconstitutionally vague. Cf. VAGRANCY. [Cases: Disorderly Conduct 1; Vagrancy 1. C.J.S. Disorderly Conduct §§ 2–5; Vagrancy §§ 2–12, 22–27, 31–32, 35–37.] — loiter,vb.

LOMBARD LAW

Lombard law.A Germanic customary law based primarily on a code called the Edict of Rothar, published in A.D. 643. • Rothar was the King of the Lombards at the time (A.D. 636–652), and his code (written in Latin) was more complete than the Germanic leges barbarorum. — Also termed law of Lombardy; law of Langobardi. Cf. LEGES BARBARORUM.

LONDON COMMODITY OPTION

London commodity option.An agreement to buy or sell a futures contract for a commodity traded on the London markets, for a particular price and within a particular time.

LONDON INTERBANK OFFERED RATE

London Interbank Offered Rate.A daily compilation by the British Bankers Association of the rates that major international banks charge each other for large-volume, short-term loans of Eurodollars, with monthly maturity rates calculated out to one year. • These daily rates are used as the underlying interest rates for derivative contracts in currencies other than the euro. — Abbr. LIBOR. Cf. EURO INTERBANK OFFERED RATE.

LONDON LLOYD'S

London Lloyd's.See LLOYD'S OF LONDON.

LONE PINE ORDER

Lone Pine order. A case-management order in a toxic-tort lawsuit involving many plaintiffs, establishing procedures and deadlines for discovery, including requiring the plaintiffs to timely produce evidence and expert opinions to substantiate each plaintiff's exposure to the hazardous substance, the injury suffered, and the cause of the injury. Lore v. Lone Pine Corp., No. L-33606-85 (N.J. Super. Ct. Nov. 18, 1986). • Although the Lone Pine opinion is unreported, it has become famous for the kind of case-management order involved, in part because the plaintiffs' claims were dismissed for failure to timely provide expert opinions. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1925.1; Pretrial Procedure 747.1. C.J.S. Trial § 47.]

long,adj.1. Holding a security or commodity in anticipation of a rise in price .2. Of or relating to a purchase of securities or commodities in anticipation of rising prices . Cf. SHORT.

LONG-RUN INCREMENTAL COST

long-run incremental cost. Antitrust. A cost threshold for determining whether predatory pricing has occurred, consisting of all costs that, over a several-year period, would not be incurred if the product in question were not offered. • It differs from average variable cost because it includes some costs that do not vary in the short run but that do vary over a longer period, depending on whether a particular product is offered. — Abbr. LRIC. Cf. AVERAGE VARIABLE COST.

LONGSHORE AND HARBOR WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT

Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act. A federal law designed to provide workers'-compensation benefits to persons, other than seamen, who work in maritime occupations, esp. stevedoring and ship service. 33 USCA §§ 901–950. — Abbr. LHWCA. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 93, 260, 2085. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 96, 98–99, 170, 1593–1596.]

“Employees who are engaged in maritime-related activities but who do not qualify as ‘seamen’ may be classified as ‘maritime workers’ entitled to the benefits provided by the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act Persons covered by the act, which has the attributes of the usual workers' compensation law, include (1) employees injured on the Outer Continental Shelf in the course of mineral exploration and production activities, and (2) employees within American territorial waters who fall within the Congressional definition of a ‘maritime worker,’ and who are injured on ‘navigable waters.’” Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 44 (2d ed. 1988).

“The first loose leaf service covered the federal income tax, and was published in 1913 shortly after the Federal Income Tax Law of 1913 went into effect. It was followed in 1914 by a service reporting on the activities of the Federal Trade Commission, which had just been established. The loose leaf method was, therefore, first used as a means of reporting new tax and business laws which were to be subject to administrative interpretation These first loose leaf services were designed ... not to reprint just the bare text of the revenue and commission acts, but to follow up and report each new development on these new laws as it occurred.” Arthur Sydney Beardsley, Legal Bibliography and the Use of Law Books § 185, at 313–314 (1937).

lord-and-master rule.See HEAD-AND-MASTER RULE.

Lord Campbell's Act. 1. The 1846 English statute that created a wrongful-death claim for the relatives of a decedent when the decedent would have had a claim if he or she had been merely injured and not killed. • Technically known as the Fatal Accidents Act of 1846, this statute changed the earlier rule, under which a tortfeasor who would have been liable to another escaped liability if the victim died. Cf. WRONGFUL-DEATH ACTION.

2. An American state's wrongful-death statute patterned after the original English act.

loser-pays rule. See ENGLISH RULE.

actual loss. A loss resulting from the real and substantial destruction of insured property.

actual total loss. 1. See total loss. 2. Marine insurance. The total loss of a vessel covered by an insurance policy (1) by its real and substantive destruction, (2) by injuries that destroy its existence as a distinct individual of a particular class, (3) by its being reduced to a wreck irretrievably beyond repair, or (4) by its being placed beyond the insured's control and beyond the insured's power of recovery. [Cases: Insurance 2235. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1195–1196, 1216–1217.]

capital loss. The loss realized upon selling or exchanging a capital asset. Cf. CAPITAL GAIN.

casualty loss. For tax purposes, the total or partial destruction of an asset resulting from an unexpected or unusual event, such as an automobile accident or a tornado. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3416; Taxation 1039.]

consequential loss. A loss arising from the results of damage rather than from the damage itself. • A consequential loss is proximate when the natural and probable effect of the wrongful conduct, under the circumstances, is to set in operation the intervening cause from which the loss directly results. When the loss is not the natural and probable effect of the wrongful conduct, the loss is remote. — Also termed indirect loss; consequential injury. Cf. direct loss. [Cases: Damages 15–23. C.J.S. Damages §§ 21–37.]

constructive total loss. 1. Such serious damage to the insured property that the cost of repairs would exceed the value of the thing repaired. — Also termed constructive loss. [Cases: Insurance 2176. C.J.S. Insurance § 1103.] 2. Marine underwriting. According to the traditional American rule, such serious damage to the insured property that the cost of repairs would exceed half the value of the thing repaired. See total loss. [Cases: Insurance 2236. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1216, 1218–1220.]

disaster loss. A casualty loss sustained in a geographic area that the President designates as a disaster area. • It may be treated as having occurred during the previous tax year so that a victim may receive immediate tax benefits.

economic loss. See ECONOMIC LOSS.

extraordinary loss. A loss that is both unusual and infrequent, such as a loss resulting from a natural disaster.

general average loss. Marine underwriting. A loss at sea usu. incurred when cargo is thrown overboard to save the ship; a loss due to the voluntary and intentional sacrifice of part of a venture (usu. cargo) to save the rest of the venture from imminent peril. • Such a loss is borne equally by all the interests concerned in the venture. See AVERAGE(3). [Cases: Insurance 2240. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1198, 1206.]

hobby loss. A nondeductible loss arising from a personal hobby, as contrasted with an activity engaged in for profit. • The law generally presumes that an activity is engaged in for profit if profits are earned during at least three of the last five years. IRC (26 USCA) § 183. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3396, 3397.]

long-term capital loss. A loss on a capital asset held for an extended period, usu. at least 12 months. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3260. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 127.]

net loss. The excess of all expenses and losses over all revenues and gains.

net operating loss. The excess of operating expenses over revenues, the amount of which can be deducted from gross income if other deductions do not exceed gross income. — Abbr. NOL. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3399. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 200.]

ordinary loss. Tax. A loss incurred from the sale or exchange of an item that is used in a trade or business. • The loss is deductible from ordinary income, and thus is more beneficial to the

out-of-pocket loss. The difference between the value of what the buyer paid and the market value of what was received in return. • In breach-of-contract cases, out-of-pocket loss is used to measure restitution damages. [Cases: Fraud 59(3).]

paper loss. A loss that is realized only by selling something (such as a security) that has decreased in market value. — Also termed unrealized loss.

particular average loss. Marine underwriting. A loss suffered by and borne alone by particular interests in a maritime venture. • Such a loss is usu. a partial loss. [Cases: Insurance 2241. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1199–1203, 1208, 1211–1214.]

passive loss. A loss, with limited tax deductibility, from an activity in which the taxpayer does not materially participate, from a rental activity, or from a tax-shelter activity. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3418. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 199.]

progressive loss. 1. Loss that spreads or becomes more expensive to repair over time. 2. Late-manifesting harm that is related to an event that caused immediate harm, worsens over time, and is not catalyzed by any additional causative agent. • A classic example is asbestosis, a disease that manifests long after exposure to asbestos fibers.

salvage loss. 1. Generally, a loss that presumptively would have been a total loss if certain services had not been rendered. 2. Marine underwriting. The difference between the salvage value, less the salvage charges, and the original value of the insured property. [Cases: Insurance 2233.]

unrealized loss. See paper loss.

loss-of-bargain damages.See benefit-of-the-bargain damages under DAMAGES.

loss of consortium (k<<schwa>>n-sor-shee-<<schwa>>m).1. A loss of the benefits that one spouse is entitled to receive from the other, including companionship, cooperation, aid, affection, and sexual relations. • Loss of consortium can be recoverable as damages from a tortfeasor in a personal-injury or wrongful-death action. Originally, only the husband could sue for loss of consortium. But in 1950, nearly a century after the enactment of the married women's property acts, a wife's action for negligent impairment of consortium was first recognized. Hitaffer v. Argonne Co., 183 F.2d 811 (D.C. Cir. 1950). Today 48 states and the District of Columbia recognize both a husband's and a wife's right to sue for loss of consortium (Utah and Virginia do not). [Cases: Husband and Wife 209(3, 4).] 2. A similar loss of benefits that one is entitled to receive from a parent or child. See CONSORTIUM.

loss-of-use exclusion. See failure-to-perform exclusion under EXCLUSION(3).

loss payee. Insurance. A person or entity named in an insurance policy (under a loss-payable clause) to be paid if the insured property suffers a loss. [Cases: Insurance 3450. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1404, 1520.]

loss ratio. 1. Insurance. The ratio between premiums paid and losses incurred during a given period. [Cases: Insurance 1540. C.J.S. Insurance § 65.] 2. A bank's loan losses compared to its loan assets; a business's receivable losses compared to its receivables.

LOSS RESERVE

LOST

lost, adj. 1. (Of property) beyond the possession and custody of its owner and not locatable by diligent search <lost at sea> <lost papers>. 2. (Of a person) missing <lost child>. 3. Parliamentary law. (Of a motion) rejected; not adopted <the motion is lost>.

LOST-CHANCE DOCTRINE

lost-chance doctrine. 1. LOSS-OF-CHANCE DOCTRINE. 2. A rule permitting a claim, in limited circumstances, against someone who fails to come to the aid of a person who is in imminent danger of being injured or killed. Cf. GOOD SAMARITAN DOCTRINE .

LOST CORNER

lost corner. See CORNER.

lost earning capacity. A person's diminished earning power resulting from an injury. • This impairment is recoverable as an element of damages in a tort action. Cf. lost earnings under EARNINGS. [Cases: Damages 38.C.J.S. Damages § 56.]

“To some extent the phrases ‘loss of earnings’ and ‘loss of earning capacity’ are used interchangeably. But the preferred view is that they are different concepts. The former covers real loss which can be proved at the trial; the latter covers loss of the chances of getting equivalent work in the future.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 572 (17th ed. 1977).

lost earnings. See EARNINGS.

lost-expectation damages. See expectation damages under DAMAGES.

LOST OR NOT LOST

LOST PROFITS

lost profits. 1. Contracts. A measure of damages that allows a seller to collect the profits that would have been made on the sale if the buyer had not breached. UCC § 2-708(2). [Cases: Damages 40; Sales 384(1). C.J.S. Damages §§ 58–61; Sales §§ 363, 365–366.] 2. Patents. A measure of damages set by estimating the net amount lost by a plaintiff-inventor because of the infringing defendant's actions. • The plaintiff can ask for a lost-profits recovery by showing that the patent is in demand, that the plaintiff is able to meet demand, and that there are no acceptable alternatives on the market. [Cases: Patents 318. C.J.S. Patents §§ 561–562.]

lost property. See PROPERTY.

lost-sales-of-unpatented-items theory. Patents. A theory of lost-profits remedy whereby compensation is sought for sales of unpatented items that the plaintiff would have sold along with patented items but for the defendant's infringement.

LOST-VOLUME SELLER

lost-volume seller. A seller of goods who, after a buyer has breached a sales contract, resells the goods to a different buyer who would have bought identical goods from the seller's inventory even if the original buyer had not breached. • Such a seller is entitled to lost profits, rather than contract price less market price, as damages from the original buyer's breach. UCC § 2-708(2).

[Cases: Sales 384(1, 7). C.J.S. Sales §§ 363, 365–366.]

lost will. See WILL.

LOT

minimum lot. A lot that has the least amount of square footage allowed by a local zoning law.

[Cases: Zoning and Planning 63, 254. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 48–49, 116.]

nonconforming lot. A previously lawful lot that now violates a newly adopted or an amended zoning ordinance. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 321. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 154–155, 157–159.]

2. An article that is the subject of a separate sale, lease, or delivery, whether or not it is sufficient to perform the contract. UCC §§ 2-105(5), 2A-103(1)(s). 3. A specified number of shares or a specific quantity of a commodity designated for trading.

odd lot. A number of shares of stock or the value of a bond that is less than a round lot.

round lot. The established unit of trading for stocks and bonds. • A round lot of stock is usu. 100 shares, and a round lot of bonds is usu. $1,000 or $5,000 par value. — Also termed even lot; board lot.

LOVELY CLAIM

Lovely claim. Hist. Property. An entitlement to settle on and take ownership of public land in Arkansas, created by the federal government for Lovely County settlers who were displaced by an 1828 treaty that gave the settlers' land to the Cherokee nation. • The term gets its name from Lovely County in the Arkansas territory, which straddled what is now the Oklahoma–Arkansas border. The treaty divided the county, granted the portion west of the Mississippi River to the Cherokee nation, and required the settlers in that territory to relocate. On May 24, 1828, Congress passed an act granting relief to Lovely County settlers who were forced to leave the Cherokee land and granted them land on the eastern side of the river. Lovely claims are found in chains of title in Arkansas.

lucri causa (loo-krIkaw-z<<schwa>>). [Latin] For the sake of gain. • Lucri causa was formerly an essential element of larceny, but today the thief's intent to deprive the possessor of property is generally sufficient. See LARCENY.

“ ‘Lucri causa’ literally means for the sake of gain. On rare occasions the suggestion has been made that no taking is with intent to steal unless the thief is motivated by some purpose of gain or advantage. Even those advancing this suggestion have not insisted upon an intent to gain a pecuniary advantage. An intent to take away property and destroy it for the purpose of destroying evidence has been held to be sufficient even by those who have been inclined to insist upon lucri causa as essential to an intent to steal. The generally accepted view does not include this element at all. It regards intent to deprive the owner of his property permanently, or an intent to deal with another's property unlawfully in such a manner as to create an obviously unreasonable risk of permanent deprivation, as all that is required to constitute the animus furandi — or intent to steal.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 332–33 (3d ed. 1982).

MAD PARLIAMENT

Mad Parliament.In 1258, an assembly of 24 barons summoned to Oxford by Henry III that ultimately carried out certain reforms to settle differences between the king and the barons. • The assembly was called the Mad Parliament because it abridged the king's power and gave unprecedented powers to the barons. The parliament produced the Provisions of Oxford. — Also termed parliamentum insanum. See PROVISIONS OF OXFORD.

MADRID AGREEMENT

Madrid Agreement.Trademarks. 1. An 1890 treaty establishing a system for the international registration of trademarks. • The agreement's official name is the Madrid Arrangement Concerning the International Registration of Marks. A product of the Madrid Revision Conference of the Paris Convention in 1890, it was last revised in 1967. Under this treaty's registration system, called the Madrid Union, a mark registered in a treaty nation that is also registered (in French) with the World Intellectual Property Organization receives equal protection in all signatory nations. The United States ratified the treaty in 2002. — Also termed Madrid Arrangement; Madrid Registration of Marks Treaty; Madrid Union. 2. An 1890 treaty designed to discourage false indications of geographic source by permitting member nations to seize falsely marked imported goods. • Also a product of the Madrid Revision Conference of the Paris Convention in 1890, the treaty's official name is the Madrid Arrangement Concerning the Prevention of False or Deceptive Indications of Source. It applies to manufactured and handmade goods, and agricultural products. — Also termed (in sense 2) Madrid Agreement for the Repression of False or Deceptive Indications of Source of Goods.

MADRID PROTOCOL

Madrid Protocol.Trademarks. 1. A 1996 international agreement that allows citizens of a Madrid Agreement signatory nation to apply for a single international trademark through the World Intellectual Property Organization instead of registering the trademark in each individual nation. • An applicant must apply for the trademark's registration in a treaty-member nation before applying for international trademark protection. 2. A 1989 international trademark-registration agreement that supplements the Madrid Agreement on trademark registration, harmonizes the Agreement's registration system with that of the European Union, and allows citizens of nonmember nations to apply for international trademark registration without first registering the trademark in a member nation. • When referred to along with the Madrid Registration of Marks Treaty, it is sometimes also termed the Madrid System. MAGISTRATE magistrate (maj-<<schwa>>-strayt), n.1. The highest-ranking official in a government, such as the king in a monarchy, the president in a republic, or the governor in a state. — Also termed chief magistrate; first magistrate. [Cases: States 41. C.J.S. States §§ 88–90, 130–131.] 2. A local official who possesses whatever power is specified in the appointment or statutory grant of authority. 3. A judicial officer with strictly limited jurisdiction and authority, often on the local level and often restricted to criminal cases. Cf. JUSTICE OF THE PEACE. [Cases: Justices of the Peace 31. C.J.S. Justices of the Peace §§ 26, 47.] 4. See judicial officer (3) under OFFICER. — magisterial (maj-<<schwa>>-stir-ee-<<schwa>>l), adj.

committing magistrate.A judicial officer who conducts preliminary criminal hearings and may order that a defendant be released for lack of evidence, sent to jail to await trial, or released on bail. See examining court under COURT.

district-court magistrate.In some states, a quasi-judicial officer given the power to set bail, accept bond, accept guilty pleas, impose sentences for traffic violations and similar offenses, and conduct informal hearings on civil infractions. [Cases: Justices of the Peace 31. C.J.S. Justices of the Peace §§ 26, 47.]

investigating magistrate.A quasi-judicial officer responsible for examining and sometimes ruling on certain aspects of a criminal proceeding before it comes before a judge.

“The institution of the investigating magistrate is another measure for preserving the integrity of the law at the level of enforcement. In this case the measure is directed not toward curing the evils of a lax or sporadic enforcement, but toward the evils of an opposite nature, those resulting from an excess of zeal on the part of the prosecutor. Under the system in question, before a criminal charge may be brought before the regular courts it must be investigated by a special official and, in effect, certified as deserving trial in court. The investigating magistrate is thus a kind of quasi-judge standing halfway between the prosecutor and the regular court. The danger of the institution lies precisely in this twilight zone of function which it occupies. The certification of a case for trial inevitably tends to confirm the criminal charge against the suspect, thus creating what may amount in practice to a strong presumption of guilt. The element of prejudgment involved constitutes a threat to the integrity of the trial in open court; the accused has, in effect, had a kind of half-trial in advance of the real trial, and this half-trial is conducted, not before but metropolitan stipendiary magistrate (stI-pen-dee-er-ee).English law. A stipendiary magistrate with jurisdiction in inner London areas. • Under the Access to Justice Act 1999, these magistrates have been renamed district judges (magistrates' courts). See stipendiary magistrate.

magistratus (maj-<<schwa>>-stray-t<<schwa>>s), n. [fr. Latin magister “a master”] Roman law. 1. A magistrate. 2. A magistrate's office.

“Magistratus. Denotes both the public office and the official himself. Magistracy was a Republican institution; under the Principate some magistratus continued to exist but with gradually diminishing importance; in the post-Diocletian Empire some former magistracies still exist but reduced nearly completely to an honorific title The most characteristic features of the Republican magistracy were the limited duration (one year) and collegiality since each magistracy was covered by at least two persons ... with equal power Magistrates were elected by the people During his year of service a magistratus could not be removed. Misdemeanor in office could be prosecuted only after the term, hence the tenure of an office for two consecutive years was prohibited The tenure of a public office was considered an honor; for that reason the magistrates did not receive any compensation. Their political influence was, however, of greatest importance” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 571–72 (1953).

MAGISTRATUS MAJORES

magistratus majores (maj-<<schwa>>-stray-t<<schwa>>s m<<schwa>>-jor-eez). [Latin “superior magistrates”] Roman law. Magistrates with superior powers, including the power to review their own judgments. Cf. MAGISTRATUS MINORES.

MAGISTRATUS MINORES

magistratus minores (maj-<<schwa>>-stray-t<<schwa>>s mi-nor-eez). [Latin “lesser magistrates”] Roman law. Magistrates with limited powers. Cf. MAGISTRATUS MAJORES.

“The magistratus minores were officials of minor importance, they had no imperium and were vested with a restricted jurisdiction and some functions in specific fields The tenure of a minor magistracy opened the way for the quaestorship, the first step in the career of magistratus maiores.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 572 (1953).

MAGNA ASSISA

MAGNA ASSISA ELIGENDA

magna assisa eligenda (mag-n<<schwa>> <<schwa>>-sI-z<<schwa>> el-<<schwa>>-jen-d<<schwa>>). See DE MAGNA ASSISA ELIGENDA.

MAGNA CARTA

Magna Carta (mag-n<<schwa>> kahr-t<<schwa>>). [Latin “great charter”] The English charter that King John granted to the barons in 1215 and that Henry III and Edward I later confirmed. • It is generally regarded as one of the great common-law documents and as the foundation of constitutional liberties. The other three great charters of English liberty are the Petition of Right (3 Car. (1628)), the Habeas Corpus Act (31 Car. 2 (1679)), and the Bill of Rights (1 Will. & M. (1689)). — Also spelled Magna Charta.

“The history of Magna Carta is the history not only of a document but also of an argument. The history of the document is a history of repeated re-interpretation. But the history of the argument is a history of a continuous element of political thinking. In this light there is no inherent reason why an assertion of law originally conceived in aristocratic interests should not be applied on a wider scale." J.C. Holt, Magna Carta 16 (1965).

MAGNA CENTUM

magna centum (mag-n<<schwa>> sen-t<<schwa>>m), n. [Law Latin "great hundred"] Six score, or 120.

MAGNA CULPA

[Cases: Consumer Protection 6. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 29–31, 33–39, 60–65.]

MAGNUS ROTULUS STATUTORUM

magnus rotulus statutorum (mag-n<<schwa>>s roch-<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>s stach-<<schwa>>-tor-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin "the great statute roll"] The first of the English statute rolls, beginning with Magna Carta and ending with Edward III.

MAHR

mahr, n. Islamic law. A gift of money or property that must be made by a man to the woman he marries. • The parties agree to the mahr's amount and time of payment before marrying. If the time of payment is indefinite or if the mahr's outstanding balance is not paid sooner, the agreed amount or outstanding balance becomes due on divorce or the husband's death. Despite the religious basis for a mahr, secular courts may uphold the agreement if its secular terms are enforceable as a prenuptial contract. — Also termed sadaq.

maiden. 1. A young unmarried woman. 2. Scots law. An instrument used to behead criminals. • The Earl of Morton, who had introduced the instrument to Scotland, was the first to be executed by it, in 1581. It was the prototype of the guillotine. Hence, "to kiss the maiden was to be put to death." H. Percy Smith, Glossary of Terms and Phrases 307 (1883).

Postal Service and Offenses Against Postal Laws §§ 6, 15.] 2. An official system for delivering such items; the postal system. [Cases: Postal Service 3. C.J.S. Postal Service and Offenses Against Postal Laws §§ 3, 9.] 3. One or more written or oral messages sent electronically (e.g., through e-mail or voicemail). [Cases: Telecommunications 461.15. C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television § 221.]

certified mail. Mail for which the sender requests proof of delivery in the form of a receipt signed by the addressee. • The receipt (a green card, which is usu. referred to as such) must be signed before the mail will be delivered. — Also termed certified mail, return receipt requested. [Cases: Postal Service 19, 22, 23. C.J.S. Postal Service and Offenses Against Postal Laws §§ 20, 22.]

registered mail. Mail that the U.S. Postal Service records at the time of mailing and at each point on its route so as to guarantee safe delivery. [Cases: Postal Service 19, 22, 23. C.J.S. Postal Service and Offenses Against Postal Laws §§ 20, 22.]

mail, vb. 1. To deposit (a letter, package, etc.) with the U.S. Postal Service; to ensure that a letter, package, etc. is properly addressed, stamped, and placed into a receptacle for mail pickup. [Cases: Postal Service 19. C.J.S. Postal Service and Offenses Against Postal Laws § 20.] 2. To deliver (a letter, package, etc.) to a private courier service that undertakes delivery to a third person, often within a specified time. [Cases: Carriers 39–45. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace mailable,adj. (Of a letter or package) lawful to send through a postal service. [Cases: Postal Service 13. C.J.S. Postal Service and Offenses Against Postal Laws §§ 6, 15.]

MAILBOX RULE

mailbox rule. 1.Contracts. The principle that an acceptance becomes effective — and binds the offeror — once it has been properly mailed. • The mailbox rule does not apply, however, if the offer provides that an acceptance is not effective until received. [Cases: Contracts 22(1).C.J.S. Contracts §§ 46–51, 53–54; Trading Stamps and Coupons §§ 7–9.] 2. The principle that when a pleading or other document is filed or served by mail, filing or service is deemed to have occurred on the date of mailing. • The mailbox rule varies from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. For example, it sometimes applies only to certain types of filings, and it may apply when a party uses an overnight courier instead of U.S. mail. — Also termed dispatch rule. [Cases: Habeas Corpus 603; Pleading 40; Process 149; Time 3. C.J.S. Pleading § 109; Process §§ 87–88; Time §§ 2, 4.]

mail cover.A process by which the U.S. Postal Service provides a government agency with information on the face of an envelope or package (such as a postmark) for the agency's use in locating a fugitive, identifying a coconspirator, or obtaining other evidence necessary to solve a crime. [Cases: Postal Service 47. C.J.S. Postal Service and Offenses Against Postal Laws §§ 64–65.]

maim,n. Archaic. The type of injury required for the commission of mayhem; esp., serious injury to part of a person's body that is necessary for fighting. — Also termed maihem; maihemium. See MAYHEM. [Cases: Mayhem 1. C.J.S. Mayhem §§ 2–6.] — maim,vb.

“Maihem or maim is where by the wrongful act of another any member is hurt or taken away, whereby the party is made unperfect to fight: as if a bone be taken out of the hand But the cutting of an ear or nose, or breaking of the hinder teeth, or such like, is no maihem, because it is rather a deformity of body than diminishing of strength; and that is commonly tried by the justices beholding the party. And if the justices stand in doubt whether the hurt be a maihem or not, they use and will of their own discretion take the help and opinion of some skilful chirurgeon, to consider thereof, before they determine upon the cause.” Termes de la Ley 283–84 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

“ ‘Maim’ is the modern equivalent of the old word ‘mayhem,’ and some have long been inclined to abandon the earlier word entirely. There is a tendency, on the other hand, to retain ‘mayhem’ for the offense and to use ‘maim’ for the type of injury originally required for such a crime. This usage has a distinct advantage because statutory enlargements have included another type of injury within the scope of this offense, and today mayhem (the offense) may involve something other than maim (the injury).” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 239 (3d ed. 1982).

MAJOR FEDERAL ACTION

major federal action. Environmental law. An undertaking by a federal agency, or one that must be approved by a federal agency, that may have a significant impact on the environment, such as constructing an aqueduct or dam, constructing a highway through wetlands, or adopting certain agency regulations. • Under the National Environmental Policy Act, a federal agency that plans to take a major federal action that may significantly affect the environment is required to prepare and file an environmental-impact statement, along with any public comments, with the Environmental Protection Agency. 40 CFR §§ 1506.9, 1508. [Cases: Environmental Law 587.]

MAJORI MINUS INEST

majori minus inest (m<<schwa>>-jor-ImI-n<<schwa>>s in-est). [Latin] Scots law. The greater includes the less. • The phrase refers to the principle that any conveyance of a primary right to property includes any lesser rights to that property.

MAJORITY

majority. 1. The status of one who has attained the age of majority (usu. 18). See age of majority under AGE. Cf. MINORITY(1). [Cases: Infants 1.C.J.S. Infants §§ 2–4.] 2. A number that is more than half of a total; a group of more than 50% <the candidate received 50.4% of the votes — barely a majority>. • A majority always refers to more than half of some defined or assumed set. In parliamentary law, that set may be all the members or some subset, such as all members present or all members voting on a particular question. A “majority” without further qualification usu. means a simple majority. See simple majority. Cf. PLURALITY; MINORITY(2); HALF PLUS ONE.

absolute majority.A majority of all those who are entitled to vote in a particular election, whether or not they actually cast ballots. See QUORUM. [Cases: Elections 126(6), 215. C.J.S. Elections §§ 114, 118(1).]

MAJOR LIFE ACTIVITY

major life activity. Any activity that an average person in the general population can perform with little or no difficulty, such as seeing, hearing, sleeping, eating, walking, traveling, and working. • A person who is substantially limited in a major life activity is protected from discrimination under a variety of disability laws, most significantly the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Rehabilitation Act. 42 USCA § 12102(2); 29 USCA § 705(9)(B). See AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT. [Cases: Civil Rights 1019(2), 1218(2). C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 2, 6–7, 9–10, 19, 21, 61.]

MAJOR–MINOR FAULT RULE

major–minor fault rule. Maritime law. The principle that if the fault of one vessel in a collision is uncontradicted and sufficient to account for the accident, then the other vessel is presumed not to have been at fault and therefore not to have contributed to the accident. • The elimination of the divided-damages rule has made this rule obsolete. — Also termed major-and-minor fault rule. [Cases: Collision 122. C.J.S. Collision §§ 210, 212–220, 241.]

MALFUNCTION THEORY

malfunction theory. Products-liability law. A principle permitting a products-liability plaintiff to prove that a product was defective by proving that the product malfunctioned, instead of requiring the plaintiff to prove a specific defect. • A plaintiff relying on the malfunction theory usually must also prove that the product was not misused, and must disprove all reasonable explanations for the occurrence other than a defect. [Cases: Products Liability 75.1, 82.1.]

MAL GREE

mal gree (mal gree). [Law French “against the will”] Hist. Against the will; without consent.

MALICE

malice, n. 1. The intent, without justification or excuse, to commit a wrongful act. 2. Reckless disregard of the law or of a person's legal rights. 3. Ill will; wickedness of heart. • This sense is most typical in nonlegal contexts.

“[M]alice in the legal sense imports (1) the absence of all elements of justification, excuse or recognized mitigation, and (2) the presence of either (a) an actual intent to cause the particular harm which is produced or harm of the same general nature, or (b) the wanton and wilful doing of an act with awareness of a plain and strong likelihood that such harm may result.... The Model Penal Code does not use ‘malice’ because those who formulated the Code had a blind prejudice against the word. This is very regrettable because it represents a useful concept despite some unfortunate language employed at times in the effort to express it.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 860 (3d ed. 1982).

actual malice. 1. The deliberate intent to commit an injury, as evidenced by external circumstances. — Also termed express malice; malice in fact. Cf. implied malice. 2. Defamation. Knowledge (by the person who utters or publishes a defamatory statement) that a statement is false, or reckless disregard about whether the statement is true. • To prevail, a plaintiff who is a public official or public figure must overcome the defendant's qualified privilege by proving the defendant's actual malice. And for certain other types of claims, a plaintiff must prove actual malice to recover presumed or punitive damages. — Also termed New York Times malice; constitutional malice; common-law malice. See reckless disregard (2) under DISREGARD. [Cases: Libel and Slander 51. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 66, 105.]

constructive malice. See implied malice.

express malice. 1. Criminal law. The intent to kill or seriously injure arising from a deliberate, rational mind. [Cases: Assault and Battery 49; Homicide 529. C.J.S. Assault and Battery §§ 67, 71.] 2. See actual malice (1). 3. Defamation. The bad-faith publication of defamatory material. [Cases: Libel and Slander 3, 51. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 3, 44, 46, 66, 105.]

general malice. Malice that is necessary for any criminal conduct; malice that is not directed at a specific person. Cf. particular malice.

implied malice. Malice inferred from a person's conduct. — Also termed constructive malice; legal malice; malice in law. Cf. actual malice (1).

malice in fact. See actual malice (1).

particular malice. Malice that is directed at a particular person. — Also termed special malice.

transferred malice. Malice directed to one person or object but instead harming another in the way intended for the first. [Cases: Assault and Battery 49; Homicide 555. C.J.S. Assault and Battery §§ 67, 71.]

“[I]f A shoots at B intending to kill him, but the shot actually kills C, this is held to be murder of C. So also if A throws a stone at one window and breaks another, it is held to be malicious damage to the window actually broken. This doctrine, which is known as the doctrine of transferred malice, applies only where the harm intended and the harm done are of the same kind. If A throws a stone at a human being and unintentionally breaks a window, he cannot be convicted of malicious damage to the window.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 382 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

universal malice. The state of mind of a person who determines to take a life on slight provocation, without knowing or caring who may be the victim.

malice aforethought. The requisite mental state for common-law murder, encompassing any one of the following: (1) the intent to kill, (2) the intent to inflict grievous bodily harm, (3) extremely reckless indifference to the value of human life (the so-called abandoned and malignant heart), or (4) the intent to commit a dangerous felony (which leads to culpability under the felony-murder rule). — Also termed premeditated malice; preconceived malice; malice prepense; malitia praecogitata. [Cases: Homicide 529, 541, 546.]

“Malice aforethought is the term which came into use during medieval times to indicate the mental element necessary in the felony of murder. It has been the subject of voluminous jurisprudential enquiry” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 27 (16th ed. 1952).

“Every intentional killing is with malice aforethought unless under circumstances sufficient to constitute (1) justification, (2) excuse, or (3) mitigation.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 58 (3d ed. 1982).

MALICE EXCEPTION

malice exception. A limitation on a public official's qualified immunity, by which the official can face civil liability for willfully exercising discretion in a way that violates a known or well-established right. See qualified immunity under IMMUNITY(1). [Cases: Civil Rights 1376.C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 143–144, 146, 157, 160.]

MALICIOUS KILLING

malicious killing. An intentional killing without legal justification or excuse. — Also termed killing with malice. Cf. ACCIDENTAL KILLING. [Cases: Homicide 529, 546.]

MALICIOUSLY DAMAGING THE PROPERTY OF ANOTHER

maliciously damaging the property of another. See MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF

malicious mischief. The common-law misdemeanor of intentionally destroying or damaging another's property. • Although modern statutes predominantly make this offense a misdemeanor, a few make it a felony (depending on the nature of the property or its value). See Model Penal Code § 220.3. — Also termed malicious mischief and trespass; malicious injury; malicious trespass; malicious damage; maliciously damaging the property of another; (in the Model Penal Code) criminal mischief. [Cases: Malicious Mischief 1. C.J.S. Malicious or Criminal Mischief or Damage to Property §§ 2–5.]

“Such phrases as ‘malicious mischief and trespass,’ ‘malicious injury,’ and ‘maliciously damaging the property of another,’ are merely additional labels used at times to indicate the same offense. It was a misdemeanor according to the common law of England, although some confusion has resulted from Blackstone's statement that it was ‘only a trespass at common law.’ Before the word ‘misdemeanor’ became well established the old writers tended to use the word ‘trespass’ to indicate an offense below the grade of felony. And it was used at times by Blackstone for this purpose, as in the phrase ‘treason, felony, or trespass.’ ” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 405 (3d ed. 1982).

MALICIOUS MOTIVE

malicious motive. See MOTIVE.

malicious prosecution. 1. The institution of a criminal or civil proceeding for an improper purpose and without probable cause. • The tort requires an adversary to prove four elements: (1) the initiation or continuation of a lawsuit; (2) lack of probable cause; (3) malice; and (4) favorable termination of the lawsuit. Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 674–681B (1977). 2. The tort claim resulting from the institution of such a proceeding. • Once a wrongful prosecution has ended in the defendant's favor, he or she may sue for tort damages. — Also termed (in the context of civil proceedings) malicious use of process; (archaically) malicious institution of civil proceedings. Cf. ABUSE OF PROCESS; VEXATIOUS SUIT. [Cases: Malicious Prosecution 16. C.J.S. Malicious Prosecution or Wrongful Litigation §§ 5, 23–24.]

“The distinction between an action for malicious prosecution and an action for abuse of process is that a malicious prosecution consists in maliciously causing process to be issued, whereas an abuse of process is the employment of legal process for some purpose other than that which it was intended by the law to effect — the improper use of a regularly issued process. For instance, the initiation of vexatious civil proceedings known to be groundless is not abuse of process, but is governed by substantially the same rules as the malicious prosecution of criminal proceedings.” 52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 2, at 187 (1970).

MALICIOUS TRESPASS

malicious trespass. See MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.

MALICIOUS USE OF PROCESS

malitia (m⟨schwa⟩-lish-ee-⟨schwa⟩). [Latin “malice”] Hist. An actual evil design; express malice. • Malitia originally signified general wrongdoing, and did not describe a wrongdoer's state of mind; malitia praecogitata, for example, indicated only the seriousness of the offense, though it was eventually rendered malice aforethought.

malitia capitalis (m⟨schwa⟩-lish-ee-⟨schwa⟩ kap-i-tay-lis). [Latin] Hist. Deadly malice.

malitia excogitata (eks-koj-<<schwa>>-tay-t*<<schwa>>*). See malitia praecogitata.

malitia praecogitata (pree-koj-<<schwa>>-tay-t*<<schwa>>*). See MALICE AFORETHOUGHT. — Also termed malitia excogitata.

“[T]he word felony is often coupled with what will in the future be another troublesome term of art, to wit, malice aforethought or malice prepense (malitia excogitata, praecogitata)... When it first came into use, it hardly signified a state of mind; some qualifying adjective such as praemeditata or excogitata was needed if much note was to be taken of intention or of any other psychical fact. When we first meet with malice prepense it seems to mean little more than intentional wrong-doing; but the somewhat weighty adjectives which are coupled with malitia in its commonest context — adjectives such as excogitata — are, if we mistake not, traces of the time when forsteal, guetapens, waylaying, the setting of ambush, was (what few crimes were) a specially reserved plea of the crown to be emended, if indeed it was emendable, by a heavy wite.”
2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 468–69 (2d ed. 1899).

malum (mal-⟨schwa⟩m alsomay-l⟨schwa⟩m), n. [Latin] Something bad or evil. Pl. mala.

MALUM IN SE

malum in se (mal-⟨schwa⟩m in sayorse), n. [Latin “evil in itself”] A crime or an act that is inherently immoral, such as murder, arson, or rape. — Also termed malum per se. Pl. mala in se. Cf. MALUM PROHIBITUM. — malum in se, adj.

“The basis for the distinction between mala in se and mala prohibita, between what one might call a crime and an offence — or between what one might call a felony and a misdemeanour, if one could modernize those terms so that the latter was given its natural meaning — is that crime means to the ordinary man something that is sinful or immoral, and an offence at worst a piece of misbehaviour.” Patrick Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals 33 (1968).

“The distinction between offenses mala in se and offenses mala prohibita was recognized at least as early as the fifteenth century. It has been criticized repeatedly. About a century and a half ago the distinction was said to be one ‘not founded upon any sound principle’ and which had ‘long since been exploded.’ [Quoting Bensley v. Bignold, 5 B. & A. 335, 341, 106 Eng. Rep. 1214, 1216 (1822); other citations omitted.] The Supreme Court, however, has shown that it is just as firmly entrenched today as it was in 1495.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 880 (3d ed. 1982).

MALUM PROHIBITUM

malum prohibitum (mal-⟨schwa⟩m proh-hib-i-t⟨schwa⟩m), n. [Latin “prohibited evil”] An act that is a crime merely because it is prohibited by statute, although the act itself is not necessarily immoral. • Misdemeanors such as jaywalking and running a stoplight are mala prohibita, as are many regulatory violations. Pl. mala prohibita. Cf. MALUM IN SE. — malum prohibitum, adj.

“Much of the criminal law that is regulatory in character — the part of it that deals with malum prohibitum rather than malum in se — is based upon the ... principle ... that the choice of the individual must give way to the convenience of the many.” Patrick Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals 16 (1968).

“As customarily used these phrases are mutually exclusive. An offense malum prohibitum is not a wrong which is prohibited, but something which is wrong only in the sense that it is against the law. This is emphasized at times by such phrases as ‘malum prohibitum only’ or ‘but malum prohibitum,’ although it is understood without any such qualification. A failure to understand this usage of the terms has led some to assume that all statutory additions to the common law of crimes are mala prohibita. One writer emphasized his confusion by speaking of embezzlement as malum prohibitum. This assumption is utterly without foundation. An act may be malum in se although no punishment is provided by law. If this defect is corrected by appropriate legislation, what previously was malum in se does not cease to be so by reason of having been defined and made punishable by law.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 884–85 (3d ed. 1982).

malum regimen (mal-⟨schwa⟩m rej-⟨schwa⟩-men). [Law Latin] Scots law. Bad medical treatment. • A defendant in a homicide case may assert as a defense that the decedent actually died as a result of bad medical treatment, not the defendant's actions.

MALUS ANIMUS

malus animus (mal-⟨schwa⟩s an-⟨schwa⟩-m⟨schwa⟩s). [Latin] Scots law. Bad intention. • This intention, coupled with a prohibited act carrying it out, resulted in a crime. See DOLE; MENS REA.

MANCIPATIO

mancipatio (man-s<<schwa>>-pay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] See MANCIPATION.

mancipation (man-si-pay-sh<<schwa>>n), n.[fr. Latin mancipatio “hand-grasp”] 1.Roman law. A legal formality for transferring property by either an actual or a simulated purchase; a formal conveyance in the guise of a sale. • The formality required the presence of the thing being conveyed (res Mancipi), and of five adult male citizens acting as witnesses. Another person (the libripens) held the bronze scales with which the purchase price had been weighed out. The buyer made an assertion of ownership, struck the scales with a piece of bronze or copper, then gave the metal piece to the seller as a symbolic price. In Roman classical law, either this procedure or cessio in jure was necessary to pass legal title. This form of sale was abolished by Justinian. 2. A similar form used for making a will, adoption, emancipation of children, etc. — Also termed mancipatio. See RES MANCIPI. Cf. EMANCIPATION. — mancipate, vb. — mancipatory (man-si-p<<schwa>>-tohr-ee), adj.

“Mancipatio is the solemn sale per aes et libram. In the presence of five witnesses (cives Romani puberes) a skilled weighmaster (libripens) weighs out to the vendor a certain amount of uncoined copper (aes, raudus, raudusculum) which is the purchase-money, and the purchaser, with solemn words, takes possession with his hand — hence the description of the act as ‘hand-grasp’ — of the thing purchased as being his property.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 48 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

MANCIPATORY WILL

mancipium (man-sip-ee<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin “a slave”] Roman law. 1. A slave, esp. by virtue of being captured by an enemy in war. 2. A temporary quasi-servile status, necessarily occurring in an emancipation, and also when a father noxally surrendered a son to answer for a delict. See EMANCIPATION; NOXAL ACTION(1).

3. MANCIPATION(1).

M & A

M & A. abbr. Mergers and acquisitions. See MERGER.

MANDAMUS

mandamus (man-day-m<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin “we command”] A writ issued by a superior court to compel a lower court or a government officer to perform mandatory or purely ministerial duties correctly. — Also termed writ of mandamus; mandate; (in BrE) order. [Cases: Mandamus 1. C.J.S. Mandamus §§ 2–6.] Pl. mandamuses. — mandamus,vb.

alternative mandamus.A mandamus issued upon the first application for relief, commanding the defendant either to perform the act demanded or to appear before the court at a specified time to show cause for not performing it. [Cases: Mandamus 158. C.J.S. Mandamus § 343.]

peremptory mandamus.An absolute and unqualified command to the defendant to do the act in question. • It is issued when the defendant defaults on, or fails to show sufficient cause in answer to, an alternative mandamus. [Cases: Mandamus 179. C.J.S. Mandamus § 376.]

man-endangering state of mind. See PERSON-ENDANGERING STATE OF MIND.

MANERIUM

manerium (m<<schwa>>-neer-ee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Law Latin, fr. Latin manere “to remain”] Hist. A manor.

“The term manerium seems to have come in with the Conqueror, though other derivatives from the Latin verb manere, in particular mansa, mansio, mansiuncula had been freely employed by the scribes of the land-books. But these had as a rule been used as representatives of the English hide, and just for this reason they were incapable of expressing the notion that the Normans desired to express by the word manerium. In its origin that word is but one more name for a house. Throughout the Exeter Domesday the word mansio is used instead of the manerium of the Exchequer record, and even in the Exchequer record we may find these two terms used interchangeably” Frederic W. Maitland, Domesday Book and Beyond 108–09 (1921).

mangonare (mang-g<<schwa>>-nair-ee), vb. [fr. Latin mango “a dealer”] To buy in a market; to deal.

MANHOOD

manhood. 1. A male person's majority. 2.Hist. A ceremony of a vassal paying homage to the vassal's lord. — Also termed homagium.

“Besides an oath of fealty, or profession of faith to the lord, which was the parent of our oath of allegiance, the vassal or tenant upon investiture did usually homage to his lord; openly and humbly kneeling, being ungirt, uncovered, and holding up his hands both together between those of the lord, who sate before him; and there professing that ‘he did become his man, from that day forth, of life and limb and earthly honour:’ and then he received a kiss from his lord. Which ceremony was denominated homagium, or manhood, by the feudists.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 53 (1766).

MANIA A POTU

mania a potu.See DELIRIUM TREMENS.

MANIA TRANSITORIA

mania transitoria.Hist. Insanity of brief duration, experienced while committing a criminal act. • In a memorandum opinion, the Supreme Court used the term to mean emotional insanity. See Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Terry, 82 U.S. 580, 583–84 (1872). But other courts have applied the literal meaning (temporary insanity). See, e.g., Rush v. Megee, 36 Ind. 69 (1871). Cf. emotional insanity, temporary insanity under INSANITY.

MANIFEST

manifest,n. A document listing the cargo or passengers carried on a ship, airplane, or other vehicle.

MANIFESTATION OF INTENTION manifestation of intention.Wills & estates. The external expression of the testator's intention, as distinguished from an undisclosed intention. — Also termed manifestation of intent.

MANIFESTATION THEORY

manifestation theory. Insurance. The doctrine that coverage for an injury or disease falls to the policy in effect when the symptoms of the covered injury or disease first appear. Cf. EXPOSURE THEORY; ACTUAL-INJURY TRIGGER; TRIPLE TRIGGER . [Cases: Insurance 2265. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 429–430.]

“Some injuries do not manifest themselves until a period of time has elapsed between the occurrence of the event that produces the harm and the time when it becomes apparent. Particularly when these claims result from what often were not recognized as dangerous products or chemicals when the exposure occurred, such as asbestos or dioxin, the consequences are referred to as ‘delayed manifestation’ injuries [Under the] ‘[m]anifestation’ theory ... [some] courts have concluded that coverage is provided by the insurance policy in place at the time the injury becomes apparent, that is, when the injury is manifested.” Robert E. Keeton & Alan I. Widiss, Insurance Law: A Guide to Fundamental Principles, Legal Doctrines, and Commercial Practices § 5.10(d)(3), at 598 (1988).

MANIFEST CONSTITUTIONAL ERROR

MANIFEST-DISREGARD DOCTRINE manifest-disregard doctrine. The principle that an arbitration award will be vacated if the arbitrator knows the applicable law and deliberately chooses to disregard it, but will not be vacated for a mere error or misunderstanding of the law. [Cases: Arbitration 63.1.]

MANIFEST ERROR

manifest error. See ERROR(2).

MANIFEST-ERROR-OR-CLEARLY-WRONG RULE manifest-error-or-clearly-wrong rule. In some jurisdictions, the doctrine that an appellate court cannot set aside a trial court's finding of fact unless a review of the entire record reveals that the finding has no reasonable basis. [Cases: Appeal and Error 999(1), 1008.1(5, 7). C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 784, 805, 810.]

MANIFEST INJUSTICE

manifest injustice. An error in the trial court that is direct, obvious, and observable, such as a defendant's guilty plea that is involuntary or that is based on a plea agreement that the prosecution rescinds. [Cases: Criminal Law 273.1(2), 274(3.1). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 365–374.]

MANNOPUS

mannopus (man-oh-p<<schwa>>s). [fr. Latin manus “hand” + opus “work”] Hist. 1. Manual labor. 2. A day's work. 3. MAINOUR.

MANOR

manor. 1. A feudal estate, usu. granted by the king to a lord or other high person and cultivated as a unit. • In more ancient times, the lord's manor included a village community, usu. composed of serfs.

“[T]o ask for a definition of a manor is to ask for what can not be given. We may however draw a picture of a typical manor, and, this done, we may discuss the deviations from this type [W]e may regard the typical manor (1) as being, qua vill, a unit of public law, of police and fiscal law, (2) as being a unit in the system of agriculture, (3) as being a unit in the management of property, (4) as being a jurisdictional unit. But we ... see that hardly one of these traits can be considered as absolutely essential. The most important is the connection between the manor and the vill” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 596–97 (2d ed. 1898).

“The term [manor] applied, after the Norman conquest, to estates organized under knights, ecclesiastical corporations, or otherwise, and managed and cultivated as units. By the end of the 11th century, the main element was the feudal lord, and soon he came to be regarded as the owner of the manor, and to have authority over the tenants, and the right to hold a court for them In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, a manor also implied a right of jurisdiction exercised through a court baron, attended by both freeholders and villein tenants In the eighteenth century the manorial court decayed rapidly, cases being generally brought in the King's courts, the only surviving business being copyhold conveyancing.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 803 (1980).

reputed manor. A manor in which the demesne lands and services become absolutely separated. • The manor is no longer a manor in actuality, only in reputation. — Also termed seigniory in gross.

2. A jurisdictional right over tenants of an estate, usu. exercised through a court baron. See COURT BARON. 3. Hist. In the United States, a tract of land occupied by tenants who pay rent to a proprietor. 4. A mansion on an estate.

manser (man-s<<schwa>>r), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A bastard.

MANSFIELD RULE

Mansfield rule. The doctrine that a juror's testimony or affidavit about juror misconduct may not be used to challenge the verdict. • The Mansfield rule is intended to ensure that jurors are heard through their verdict, not through their postverdict testimony. In practice, the rule lessens the possibility that losing parties will seek to penetrate the secrets of the jury room. The rule was first announced in Vaise v. Delaval, 99 Eng. Rep. 944 (K.B. 1785), in an opinion by William Murray, first Earl of Mansfield, the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench. [Cases: Criminal Law 957; Federal Civil Procedure 2371; Trial 344. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1415–1418; Trial §§ 921–926.]

mansio (man-shee-oh), n. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. An inn. 2. A house.

MANSION HOUSE

mansion house. 1. Hist. The residence of the lord of a manor. 2. DWELLING HOUSE .

MANSION-HOUSE RULE

mansion-house rule. The doctrine that a tract of land lying in two counties will be assessed, for property-tax purposes, in the county in which the house is located. [Cases: Taxation 98. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 153–157, 160, 283.]

MANSLAUGHTER

manslaughter, n. The unlawful killing of a human being without malice aforethought. — Also termed (in some jurisdictions) culpable homicide. Cf. MURDER. [Cases: Homicide 654.] — manslaughter, vb.

first-degree manslaughter. See voluntary manslaughter.

intentional manslaughter. See voluntary manslaughter.

involuntary manslaughter. Homicide in which there is no intention to kill or do grievous bodily harm, but that is committed with criminal negligence or during the commission of a crime not included within the felony-murder rule. — Also termed negligent manslaughter; second-degree manslaughter; manslaughter in the second degree. Cf. ACCIDENTAL KILLING. [Cases: Homicide 659.]

“The only differences between the legal use and the everyday use of ‘voluntary,’ ‘not voluntary,’ and ‘involuntary’ seem to be (a) a more frequent use of ‘involuntary’ as a synonym of ‘not voluntary’ and (b) a technical use of ‘involuntary’ in the crime of ‘involuntary manslaughter,’ where it seems to have the meaning of ‘unintentional.’ Thus, as contrasted with ‘voluntary manslaughter,’ there is no suggestion that death, as contrasted with harm, was intended or foreseen. Though it is often confined to cases of assault and battery where death results, for example either from the withholding of food or from excessive chastisement of a child, some jurists say that it can be due to any unlawful and dangerous action causing death.” Alan R. White, Grounds of Liability 61–62 (1985).

manumission (man-y<<schwa>>-mish-<<schwa>>n), n. [Latin manumissio “I send out of hand”] Roman law. The granting of freedom to a slave. • In the Republic and early Empire, there were three usual methods, all of which made the freed slave a citizen. These were (1) manumission vindicta (by the rod), a fictitious lawsuit in which a liberator touched the slave with a wand or rod in the presence of the praetor and alleged that he was free; (2) manumission censu, by which the slave's name was enrolled in the census as a citizen; and (3) manumission testamento, by will. Under Justinian, a grant of freedom in any form (except in fraud of creditors) made the slave free and a citizen. — Also termed manumissio. [Cases: Slaves 22.]

“Manumission is a kind of new birth. The master (patronus) therefore stands to his freedman in a relation analogous to the relation between father and son. The patron, as such, is entitled, as against his libertus, to a father's rights of succession and guardianship. He has the right of moderate chastisement (levis coercitio). He has the same claim to be treated with respect as he has against his son. He can claim to be supported by the libertus, if he falls into poverty. He is, lastly, entitled to certain services on the part of the freedman, which he can, if necessary, enforce by action, provided only the freedman had promised them after his manumission and in a manner not derogatory to his liberty.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 170 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

manumission censu. The freeing of a slave by having the censor enter the slave's name on the census roll, the slave professing to be a freeman in the presence of the master. • Once the censor entered the slave's name on the census roll, the slave became a freeman and a citizen — by a simple stroke of the pen. — Also termed manumissio censu.

manumission sacrorum causa. The freeing of a slave by the master's solemnly declaring that the slave was to be free while holding a limb of the slave and promising to pay a sum of money if the freedman later departs from the sacra (family rites). • The master then turned around and released the slave, who became free but was bound to perform the family rites. — Also termed manumissio sacrorum causa.

manumission testamento. The freeing of a slave by will in either of two ways: (1) the master's granting the slave freedom outright in the will, or (2) the master's imposing on an heir the obligation of freeing the slave, in which case the slave became the freedman of the heir. — Also termed manumissio testamento.

manumission vindicta. The ceremonial freeing of a slave whereby a third party, in the presence of the praetor, placed a rod (vindicta) on the slave while claiming that the slave was a freedman, whereupon the master admitted the slave's freedom and the praetor then declared the slave to be free. • This ceremony was actually a fictitious action at law. — Also termed manumissio vindicta.

MANUMIT

march.Hist. A boundary between countries or territories, esp. the border between England and Wales or between England and Scotland.

MARCHERS

Marchers.Hist. Lords who lived on the borders of Scotland and Wales, and operated, with the permission of the English sovereigns, under their own private laws. • The laws were eventually abolished by the statute 27 Hen. 8, ch. 26. — Also termed Lords Marchers.

“Thus the Lords Marchers were practically independent potentates of a kind very unusual in England. From this two consequences flowed. In the first place there grew up in their jurisdictions a mixture of Welsh custom and English law known as the custom of the Marches. In the second place, although they held of the king, their allegiance sat so lightly upon them that it was necessary to declare in 1354 that ‘all the Lords of the Marches of Wales shall be perpetually attending and annexed to the crown of England, and not to the principality of Wales, in whose hands so ever the same principality be.' ” 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 121 (7th ed. 1956).

marchet (mahr-chet).Hist. A fee paid by a feudal tenant to the lord so that the tenant's daughter could marry someone outside the lord's jurisdiction or so that the lord would waive the droit du seigneur. — Also termed marcheta; marchetum; merchet; mercheta; merchetum; maiden rent. See DROIT DU SEIGNEUR.

“Any service which stamps the tenant as an unfree man, stamps his tenure as unfree; and in common opinion such services there are, notably the merchetum. Now among the thousands of entries in English documents relating to this payment, it would we believe be utterly impossible to find one which gave any sanction to the tales of a ius primae noctis. The context in which this duty is usually mentioned explains at least one of the reasons which underlie it. The tenant may not give his daughter (in some cases his son or daughter) in marriage — at least not outside the manor No doubt a subjection to this restraint was regarded as very base, and sometimes it is described in vigorous words which express a free man's loathing for servility: — ‘he must buy, he must make ransom for, his flesh and blood.’ ” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 372 (2d ed. 1898).

MARCH-IN RIGHTS

march-in rights.Patents. The government's right to step in and grant a new license or revoke an existing license if the owner of a federally funded invention (or the owner's licensee) has not adequately developed or applied the invention within a reasonable time. 35 USCA § 203. [Cases: Patents 221. C.J.S. Patents §§ 393, 397–399.]

marchioness (mahr-sh<<schwa>>-nis or mahr-sh<<schwa>>-nes), n. [fr. Law Latin marchionissa, the feminine counterpart to marchio “marquess”] A female dignity, equivalent to a marquis, conferred by creation or by marriage with a marquis. See MARQUIS.

MARCUS MODEL

Marcus model.Labor law. A method for determining whether a union member's state-law claim against the employer is preempted by federal law, by focusing on whether the state-law claim can be maintained independently of an interpretation of the collective-bargaining agreement. • In Lingle v. Norge Div. of Magic Chef, Inc., 486 U.S. 399, 108 S.Ct. 1877 (1988), the Supreme Court held that a union member's state-law retaliatory-discharge claim was not preempted by the Labor-Management Relations Act because the claim could be resolved without interpreting the collective-bargaining agreement. There are at least two models for applying the Lingle test: the White model, which focuses on whether the claim is negotiable or nonnegotiable (that is, whether state law allows the claim to be waived by a private contract), and the Marcus model, which focuses on the independence of the claim in relation to the collective-bargaining agreement. Under the Marcus model, if the claim can be maintained separately from an interpretation of the collective-bargaining agreement, it is not preempted regardless of whether the claim is generally waivable in contract. The Marcus model is named for the author of the law-review note in which it was proposed. Stephanie R. Marcus, Note, The Need for a New Approach to Federal Preemption of Union Members' State Law Claims, 99 Yale L.J. 209 (1989). See LINGLE TEST.Cf. WHITE MODEL.

MARITIME

maritime (mar-i-tIm), adj. 1. Connected with or situated near the sea. 2. Of or relating to sea navigation or commerce.

“The word ‘maritime’ has in the Constitution its appropriate meaning, i.e., relating to the sea, and 'sea' is a word of wide extension and application Its classical and scriptural equivalents are applied to all sorts of navigable waters. It is not restricted, even in common speech, to waters where the tide ebbs and flows, for the Baltic Sea, the Black Sea, the Sea of Azof, the Sea of Marmora, the Mediterranean Sea, the great scenes of early maritime enterprise, have no visible tide." 1 Steven F. Friedell, Benedict on Admiralty § 103, at 7–5 (7th ed. 1996).

MARITIME ADMINISTRATION

Maritime Administration.A unit in the U.S. Department of Transportation responsible for subsidizing certain costs of operating ships under the U.S. flag; constructing or supervising the construction of merchant-type ships for the U.S. government; administering the War Risk Insurance Program; and operating the Merchant Marine Academy, which trains merchant-marine officers. — Abbr. MARAD. [Cases: Shipping 3, 14. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 2–4, 9–10, 13.]

MARITIME BELT

maritime belt. See territorial waters under WATER.

MARITIME COMMISSION

Maritime Commission. See FEDERAL MARITIME COMMISSION.

MARITIME-CONNECTION DOCTRINE maritime-connection doctrine. See LOCALITY-PLUS TEST.

MARITIME CONTRACT

maritime contract. See CONTRACT.

MARITIME COURT

maritime court. See ADMIRALTY(1).

MARITIME EMPLOYMENT

maritime employment. Under the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, a job that is related to the loading, unloading, construction, or repair of a vessel. 33 USCA § 902(3). [Cases: Workers' Compensation 260, 262. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 170, 172.]

MARITIME FLAVOR

maritime flavor. The relation of a given case to shipping concerns. • This is a factor used in determining federal admiralty jurisdiction over a particular matter by analyzing whether the matter sufficiently relates to marine and shipping concerns and whether there is need for a federal response. [Cases: Admiralty 10(2), 17. C.J.S. Admiralty §§ 62–63.]

“There is perhaps no more elusive concept in the law of admiralty than ‘maritime flavor.’ ... While ‘maritime flavor’ is incapable of precise definition, certain observations may be helpful. Generally, courts find ‘maritime flavor’ in those events and transactions which are major concerns of the shipping industry. This is tempered by the realization that exercise of federal control will not necessarily promote maritime shipping with the same vigor as control by a coastal or predominantly maritime state. Since federal law will not necessarily be more favorable, courts may find 'maritime flavor' only when there is a perceived need for a uniform national rule, which can only be provided by the federal sovereign." Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 23 (2d ed. 1988).

MARITIME INTEREST

maritime interest. Interest charged on a loan secured by a sea vessel or its cargo, or both. • Because of the lender's considerable risk, the interest rate may be extraordinarily high. — Also termed marine interest.

MARITIME JURISDICTION

maritime jurisdiction. See ADMIRALTY AND MARITIME JURISDICTION.

MARITIME LAW

maritime law. The body of law governing marine commerce and navigation, the carriage at sea of persons and property, and marine affairs in general; the rules governing contract, tort, and workers'-compensation claims or relating to commerce on or over water. — Also termed admiralty; admiralty law; sea law. Cf. GENERAL MARITIME LAW; LAW OF THE SEA.

MARITIME LIEN

maritime lien. See LIEN.

MARITIME LOAN

maritime loan. See LOAN.

MARITIME PERIL

maritime peril. A danger or risk arising from navigating or being at sea.

MARITIME SERVICE

maritime service. Maritime law. Work performed in connection with a ship or commerce on navigable waters, such as service to preserve a ship's crew, cargo, or equipment. — Also termed marine service. [Cases: Admiralty 13. C.J.S. Admiralty § 44.]

MARITIME STATE

maritime state. Hist. The collective officers and mariners of the British navy.

MARITIME TORT

maritime tort. See TORT.

maritus (m<<schwa>>-rI-t<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin] A husband; a married man.

MARK

mark, n. 1. A symbol, impression, or feature on something, usu. to identify it or distinguish it from something else. 2. TRADEMARK(1). 3. SERVICEMARK.

benchmark. See BENCHMARK.

certification mark. See certification trademark under TRADEMARK.

collective mark. See collective trademark under TRADEMARK.

markdown. A reduction in a selling price.

MARKED MONEY

marked money. Money that bears a telltale mark so that the money can be traced, usu. to a perpetrator of a crime, as when marked money is given to a kidnapper as ransom.

MARKET

market, n. 1. A place of commercial activity in which goods or services are bought and sold <the farmers' market>. — Also termed mart. 2. A geographic area or demographic segment considered as a place of demand for particular goods or services; esp., prospective purchasers of goods, wherever they are <the foreign market for microchips>. 3. Hist. The privilege of having a public market. 4. The opportunity for buying and selling goods or services; the extent of economic demand . 5. A securities or commodities exchange <the stock market closed early because of the blizzard>. [Cases: Exchanges 1–10.10. C.J.S. Exchanges §§ 2–6, 9–16, 19, 21–43.] 6. The business of such an exchange; the enterprise of buying and selling securities or commodities <the stock market is approaching an all-time high>. [Cases: Exchanges 1–13.10. C.J.S. Exchanges §§ 2–7, 9–43.] 7. The price at which the buyer and seller of a security or commodity agree <the market for oil is $16 per barrel>. [Cases: Exchanges 13. C.J.S. Exchanges §§ 2, 18.] advancing market. See bull market.

aftermarket. See secondary market.

auction market. A market (such as the New York Stock Exchange) in which securities are bought and sold by competitive bidding through brokers. Cf. negotiated market.

bear market. A securities market characterized by falling prices over a prolonged period. — Also termed down market; receding market.

black market. An illegal market for goods that are controlled or prohibited by the government, such as the underground market for prescription drugs.

bull market. A securities market characterized by rising prices over a prolonged period. — Also termed advancing market; strong market.

buyer's market. A market in which supply significantly exceeds demand, resulting in lower prices.

capital market. A securities market in which stocks and bonds with long-term maturities are traded. See financial market.

common market. An economic association formed by several nations to reduce or eliminate trade barriers among them, and to establish uniform trade barriers against nonmembers; esp. (usu. cap.), EUROPEAN UNION.

currency market. See foreign-exchange market.

derivative market. A market for the exchange of derivative instruments. — Also termed paper market. See DERIVATIVE.

discount market. The portion of the money market in which banks and other financial institutions trade commercial paper.

down market. See bear market.

financial market. A market for the exchange of capital and debt instruments. See capital market; money market.

foreign-exchange market. A market where various currencies are traded internationally. • Foreign-exchange markets take the form of spot, futures, and options markets. — Also termed currency market. See futures market; spot market.

forward market. See futures market.

free market. See open market.

Friday market. The normal tendency for stock prices to decline on Fridays. • The tendency occurs because many investors balance their accounts before the weekend to avoid any adverse changes in market prices over the weekend.

futures market. A commodity exchange in which futures contracts are traded; a market for a trade (e.g., commodities futures contracts and stock options) that is negotiated at the current price but calls for delivery at a future time. — Also termed forward market. See FUTURES CONTRACT. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation 6. C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 455.]

geographic market. Antitrust. The part of a relevant market that identifies the regions in which a firm might compete. • If a firm can raise prices or cut production without causing a quick influx of supply to the area from outside sources, that firm is operating in a distinct geographic market. [Cases: Monopolies 20(7). C.J.S. Monopolies § 120.]

“For purposes of [the Sherman Act], the relevant geographic market comprises the area in which the defendant effectively competes with other individuals or businesses for distribution of the relevant product. Stated differently, the relevant geographic market consists of the area from which the sellers of a particular product derive their customers, and the area within which the purchasers of the product can practically seek the product.” 54 Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies, Restraints of Trade, and Unfair Trade Practices § 57, at 119–20 (1996).

gray market.A market in which the seller uses legal but sometimes unethical methods to avoid a manufacturer's distribution chain and thereby sell goods (esp. imported goods) at prices lower than those envisioned by the manufacturer. See PARALLEL IMPORTS.

“One of the most controversial areas of customs law concerns ‘gray market goods,’ goods produced abroad with authorization and payment but which are imported into unauthorized markets. Trade in gray market goods has increased dramatically in recent years, in part because fluctuating currency exchange rates create opportunities to import and sell such goods at a discount rate from local price levels.” Ralph H. Folsom & Michael W. Gordon, International Business Transactions § 20.8 (1995).

institutional market.The demand among large investors and corporations for short-term funds and commercial paper.

market overt.An open, legally regulated public market where buyers, with some exceptions, acquire good title to products regardless of any defects in the seller's title. Cf. FAIR. [Cases: Sales 234(2).]

money market.The financial market for dealing in short-term negotiable instruments such as commercial paper, certificates of deposit, banker's acceptances, and U.S. Treasury securities. See financial market.

negotiated market.A market (such as an over-the-counter securities market) in which buyers and sellers seek each other out and negotiate prices. Cf. auction market.

open market.A market in which any buyer or seller may trade and in which prices and product availability are determined by free competition. — Also termed free market.

original market.See primary market.

over-the-counter market.See OVER-THE-COUNTER MARKET.

paper market.See derivative market.

primary market.The market for goods or services that are newly available for buying and selling; esp. the securities market in which new securities are issued by corporations to raise capital. — Also termed original market.

product market.Antitrust. The part of a relevant market that applies to a firm's particular product by identifying all reasonable substitutes for the product and by determining whether these substitutes limit the firm's ability to affect prices. [Cases: Monopolies 20(8). C.J.S. Monopolies § 119.]

“For purposes of an antitrust claim under ... the Sherman Act, the relevant product market includes those services or commodities which are reasonably interchangeable by consumers for the same purposes. In order to establish the relevant product market, therefore, a plaintiff must sufficiently identify what types of products are reasonably interchangeable substitutes for the defendant's product within the appropriate area of competition.” 54 Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies, Restraints of Trade, and Unfair Trade Practices § 58, at 121 (1996).

public market.A market open to both buyers and sellers.

receding market.See bear market.

recognized market.A market where the items bought and sold are numerous and similar, where competitive bidding and bartering are not prevalent, and where prices paid in sales of comparable items are publicly quoted. • Examples of recognized markets include stock and commodities exchanges. Under the UCC, a secured creditor may, upon the debtor's default, sell the collateral in a recognized market without notifying the debtor. Such a sale is presumed to be commercially reasonable.

relevant market.Antitrust. A market that is capable of being monopolized — that is, a market in which a firm can raise prices above the competitive level without losing so many sales that the price increase would be unprofitable. • The relevant market includes both the product market and the geographic market. [Cases: Monopolies 12(1.3). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 28–37, 52, 64–66.]

secondary market.The market for goods or services that have previously been available for buying and selling; esp. the securities market in which previously issued securities are traded among investors. — Also termed aftermarket.

seller's market.A market in which demand exceeds (or approaches) supply, resulting in raised prices.

soft market.A market (esp. a stock market) characterized by falling or drifting prices and low volume.

spot market.A market (esp. in commodities) in which payment or delivery is immediate <the spot market in oil>.

strong market.See bull market.

thin market.A market in which the number of bids or offerings is relatively low.

MARKETABILITY

marketability. Salability; the probability of selling property, goods, securities, or services at specified times, prices, and terms. [Cases: Sales 272; Vendor and Purchaser 130(.5). C.J.S. Sales §§ 254–256; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 325, 330–331, 334–343, 345.]

MARKETABILITY TEST

marketability test.Mining law. The principle that, for someone to obtain a patent on a mining claim on federal land, there must be a showing that a reasonably prudent person could extract and market the claimed mineral at a profit, and that at the time of discovery, a large enough market for the mineral existed to attract the efforts of a reasonably prudent person. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 39. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 114, 129–130.]

MARKETABLE

marketable,adj. Of commercially acceptable quality; fit for sale and in demand by buyers. — Also termed merchantable. [Cases: Sales 272. C.J.S. Sales §§ 254–256.]

MARKETABLE-PRODUCT RULE

marketable-product rule.Oil & gas. For royalty-calculation purposes, the doctrine that “production” occurs when oil or gas is pumped up, stored, and made marketable through processing. • Until producing a marketable product, the lessee bears all costs of capturing and handling oil and gas. Cf. CAPTURE-AND-HOLD RULE.

MARKETABLE SECURITY

marketable security.See SECURITY.

MARKETABLE TITLE

marketable title.See TITLE(2).

MARKETABLE-TITLE ACT

marketable-title act.A state statute providing that a person can establish good title to land by searching the public records only back to a specified time (such as 40 years). See marketable title under TITLE(2). [Cases: Limitation of Actions 19(1); Vendor and Purchaser 231(1).C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 40, 43; Vendor and Purchaser § 496.]

MARKET ACTIVITY

market activity.See MARKET VOLUME.

MARKET APPROACH

market approach.A method of appraising real property, by surveying the market and comparing the property to similar pieces of property that have been recently sold, and making appropriate adjustments for differences between the properties, including location, size of the property, and the dates of sale. — Also termed comparative-sales approach; market-comparison approach; market-data approach. Cf. COST APPROACH; INCOME APPROACH.

MARKET AVERAGE

market average.A price level for a specific group of stocks.

MARKET-COMPARISON APPROACH market-comparison approach.See MARKET APPROACH.

MARKET CORRECTION market correction.See DOWN REVERSAL.

MARKET-DATA APPROACH

market-data approach.See MARKET APPROACH.

MARKET EQUITY

market equity.The percentage of the total market value that a particular company's securities account for, represented by each class of security. Cf. BOOK EQUITY.

MARKETING

marketing,n. 1. The act or process of promoting and selling, leasing, or licensing products or services. 2. The part of a business concerned with meeting customers' needs. 3. The area of study concerned with the promotion and selling of products or services.

MARKETING CONTRACT

marketing contract.See CONTRACT.

MARKETING COVENANT

marketing covenant.Oil & gas. In a mineral lease, the implied promise that the lessee will market the production from the lease within a reasonable time and at a reasonable price. See REASONABLY-PRUDENT-OPERATOR STANDARD.

MARKETING DEFECT

marketing defect.See DEFECT.

MARKET INTERMEDIARY

market intermediary.Securities. A person whose business is to enter into transactions on both sides of the market. Investment Company Act, 15 USCA § 80a-3(c)(2)(B)(i).

MARKET-MAKER

market-maker.Securities. One who helps establish a market for securities by reporting bid-and-asked quotations. • A market-maker is typically a specialist permitted to act as a dealer, a dealer acting in the capacity of block positioner, or a dealer who, with respect to a security, routinely enters quotations in an interdealer communication system or otherwise and is willing to buy and sell securities for the dealer's own account. [Cases: Securities Regulation 53.17(3).]

MARKET-MAKING

market-making,n. The practice of establishing prices for over-the-counter securities by reporting bid-and-asked quotations. • A broker-dealer engaged in this practice, which is regulated by both the NASD and the SEC, buys and sells securities as a principal for its own account, and thus accepts two-way bids (both to buy and to sell). See BID AND ASKED. [Cases: Securities Regulation 53.17(3).]

MARKET MANIPULATION

market manipulation.See MANIPULATION.

MARKET ORDER

market order. See ORDER(8).

MARKET-OUT CLAUSE

market-out clause. Oil & gas. A contract provision permitting a pipeline-purchaser of natural gas to lower the purchase price if market conditions make it uneconomical to continue buying at the contract price, and permitting the well owner to respond by accepting the lower price or by rejecting it and canceling the contract. • Market-out clauses often refer to competing fuels such as fuel oil. — Also termed economic-out clause. [Cases: Gas 13(1).]

MARKET OVERT

market overt. See MARKET.

MARKET-PARTICIPANT DOCTRINE market-participant doctrine. The principle that, under the Commerce Clause, a state does not discriminate against interstate commerce by acting as a buyer or seller in the market, by operating a proprietary enterprise, or by subsidizing private business. • Under the Dormant Commerce Clause principle, the Commerce Clause — art. I, § 8, cl. 3 of the U.S. Constitution — disallows most state regulation of, or discrimination against, interstate commerce. But if the state is participating in the market instead of regulating it, the Dormant Commerce Clause analysis does not apply, and the state activity will generally stand. See Dormant Commerce Clause under COMMERCE CLAUSE. [Cases: Commerce 56. C.J.S. Commerce §§ 4, 38, 63, 73, 90, 93.]

MARKETPLACE OF IDEAS

marketplace of ideas. A forum in which expressions of opinion can freely compete for acceptance without governmental restraint. • Although Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes was the first jurist to discuss the concept as a metaphor for explaining freedom of speech, the phrase marketplace of ideas dates in American caselaw only from 1954.

MARKET PORTFOLIO

market portfolio. See PORTFOLIO.

MARKET POWER

market power. The ability to reduce output and raise prices above the competitive level — specifically, above marginal cost — for a sustained period, and to make a profit by doing so. • In antitrust law, a large amount of market power may constitute monopoly power. See MONOPOLIZATION. Cf. MARKET SHARE .

“In economic terms, market power is the ability to raise prices without a total loss of sales; without market power, consumers shop around to find a rival offering a better deal.” 54 Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies, Restraints of Trade, and Unfair Trade Practices § 49, at 110 n.87 (1996).

MARKET PRICE

market price.See PRICE.

MARKET QUOTATION

market quotation.See QUOTATION.

MARKET-RECOVERY PROGRAM

market-recovery program.See JOB-TARGETING PROGRAM.

MARKET SHARE

market share.The percentage of the market for a product that a firm supplies, usu. calculated by dividing the firm's output by the total market output. • In antitrust law, market share is used to measure a firm's market power, and if the share is high enough — generally 70% or more — then the firm may be guilty of monopolization. See MONOPOLIZATION. Cf. MARKET POWER. [Cases: Monopolies 12(1.3). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 28–37, 52, 64–66.]

MARKET-SHARE LIABILITY

market-share liability.See LIABILITY.

MARKET-SHARE THEORY

market-share theory.Antitrust. 1. A method of determining damages for lost profits by calculating the impact of the defendant's violation on the plaintiff's output or market share. Cf. BEFORE-AND-AFTER THEORY; YARDSTICK THEORY . [Cases: Monopolies 12(1.3). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 28–37, 52, 64–66.] 2.Patents. A theory of lost-profits remedy offered when the patentee and the infringer share the market with a noninfringing competitor. • Using this method, the court assumes that the percentage of the market that the patentee holds is the same as the percentage of the infringer's market that the patentee would have captured but for the infringement.

MARKET STRUCTURE

market structure.The broad organizational characteristics of a particular market, including seller concentration, product differentiation, and barriers to entry.

MARKET TREND

market trend.See TREND.

MARKET VALUE

market value.See fair market value under VALUE(2).

MARKET VALUE AT THE WELL

market value at the well.Oil & gas. The value of oil or gas at the place where it is sold, minus the reasonable cost of transporting it and processing it to make it marketable.

MARKET VOLUME

market volume. 1. The total number of shares traded on one day on a stock exchange. 2. The total number of shares of one stock traded on one day. — Also termed market activity.

MARK HOPKINS<TT> DOCTRINE

Mark Hopkins doctrine. The principle that when an employee leaves a job because of a labor dispute, any later employment the employee has must be bona fide and intended as permanent for the employee to avoid a labor-dispute disqualification from unemployment benefits if the employee leaves the later job. Mark Hopkins, Inc. v. Employment Comm'n, 151 P.2d 229 (Cal. 1944). [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 458. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare § 253.]

MARKING ESTOPPEL

marking estoppel. See ESTOPPEL.

MARKMAN<TT> HEARING

Markman hearing. Patents. A hearing at which the court receives evidence and argument concerning the construction to be given to terms in a patent claim. Markman v. Westview Instruments, Inc., 52 F.3d 967, 984–85 (Fed. Cir. 1995) (en banc), aff'd, 517 U.S. 370, 116 S.Ct. 1384 (1996). • In the namesake decision, the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals held that the construction of patent claims — and therefore the scope of the patentee's rights — is a question of law. In a Markman hearing, the court interprets the claims before the question of infringement is submitted to the fact-finder. [Cases: Patents 314. C.J.S. Patents §§ 517–522.]

markmoot (mahrk-moot), n. Hist. An early English or Scottish court that held hearings on a territorial border (i.e., a march or mark) between counties, hundreds, or countries. — Also spelled markmote.

MARKON

markon. An amount (usu. expressed as a percentage) initially added to a product's cost to obtain the list price. • Further increases or decreases in price are called markups or markdowns, respectively.

MARKSMAN

marksman. 1. A person who signs documents with some kind of character or symbol instead of writing his or her name. 2. A highly skilled shooter.

MARKS<TT> RULE

Marks rule. The doctrine that, when the U.S. Supreme Court issues a fractured, plurality opinion, the opinion of the justices concurring in the judgment on the narrowest grounds — that is, the legal standard with which a majority of the Court would agree — is considered the Court's holding. Marks v. United States, 430 U.S. 188, 97 S.Ct. 990 (1977). [Cases: Courts 90(2). C.J.S. Courts § 141.]

mark up,vb. 1. To increase (the price of goods, etc.) 2. To revise or amend (a legislative bill, a rule, etc.).3. To place (a case) on the trial calendar.

MARKUP

markup,n. 1. An amount added to an item's cost to determine its selling price. See PROFIT MARGIN. 2. A session of a congressional committee during which a bill is revised and put into final form before it is reported to the appropriate house. [Cases: United States 23(3). C.J.S. United States §§ 35, 37.]

MARKUSH CLAIM

Markush claim.See PATENT CLAIM.

MARKUSH DOCTRINE

Markush doctrine (mahr-k<<schwa>>sh).Patents. An exception to the policy against the use of alternative language in claims, by which in certain claims (esp. those involving chemical components) a claimant can use an alternative, subgeneric phrase when there is no applicable, commonly accepted generic expression. • Characterized by a phrase such as “selected from the group consisting of,” the claim includes a group of substances any one of which could serve the same function in the process. The term Markush comes from Dr. Eugene A. Markush, who was granted a dye-preparation patent in 1923. Ex parte Markush, 1925 Dec. Comm'r Pat. 126. See MARKUSH GROUP. [Cases: Patents 101(7).]

“The Patent Office early adopted a policy against use of alternative language in claims. Thus, a claimant could not use the specific alternative phrase ‘glass or plastic’ but could use a generic phrase (such as ‘impervious transparent material’) that would cover effectively the desired alternatives. The Markush doctrine developed as an exception With chemical compounds there may be no suitable phrase to cover the alternatives. Under limited circumstances a claimant could use an artificial or coined subgeneric group in the form of ‘material selected from the group consisting of X, Y, and Z.’ ” 2 Donald S. Chisum, Patents§ 8.06[2], at 8-119 to 8-120 (1992).

MARKUSH GROUP

Markush group.Patents. A limited form of generic claim that recites an element, states that the element is a member of a group, and names the other group members, any of which could substitute for the first recited element. • All Markush group members must have at least one common property that is mainly responsible for their function in the claimed relationship. Although each material in the group is different, each must be able to serve the same function. See MARKUSH DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents 101(7).]

MARQUE

marque (mahrk).Archaic. Reprisal. See LETTERS OF MARQUE.

MARQUE, LAW OF

marque, law of. Archaic. A reprisal entitling one who has been wronged and is unable to receive ordinary justice to take the goods of the wrongdoer (if they can be found within one's own precinct) in satisfaction for the wrong. See LETTERS OF MARQUE.

MARQUIS

marquis (mahr-kwis or mahr-kee). An English nobleman below and next in order to a duke. — Also termed marquess.

MARQUISATE

marquisate (mahr-kwi-sit or -zit), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The seigniorship of a marquis.

marriage, n. 1. The legal union of a couple as husband and wife. • The essentials of a valid marriage are (1) parties legally capable of contracting to marry, (2) mutual consent or agreement, and (3) an actual contracting in the form prescribed by law. Marriage has important consequences in many areas of the law, such as torts, criminal law, evidence, debtor–creditor relations, property, and contracts. — Also termed matrimony; conjugal union. [Cases: Marriage 12.1. C.J.S. Marriage § 9.]

attempted marriage. See void marriage.

clandestine marriage (klan-des-tin). 1. A marriage that rests merely on the agreement of the parties. 2. A marriage entered into in a secret way, as one solemnized by an unauthorized person or without all required formalities. See Fleet marriage. [Cases: Marriage 20(1). C.J.S. Marriage §§ 21–22, 84.]

common-law marriage. A marriage that takes legal effect, without license or ceremony, when two people capable of marrying live together as husband and wife, intend to be married, and hold themselves out to others as a married couple. • The common-law marriage traces its roots to the English ecclesiastical courts, which until 1753 recognized a kind of informal marriage known as sponsalia per verba de praesenti, which was entered into without ceremony. Today a common-law marriage, which is the full equivalent of a ceremonial marriage, is authorized in 11 states and in the District of Columbia. If a common-law marriage is established in a state that recognizes such marriages, other states, even those that do not authorize common-law marriage, must give full faith and credit to the marriage. A common-law marriage can be dissolved only by annulment, divorce, or death. — Also termed consensual marriage; informal marriage. See common-law husband under HUSBAND; common-law wife under WIFE. See SPONSALIA PER VERBA DE PRAESENTI. [Cases: Marriage 13, 22. C.J.S. Marriage §§ 10, 19–20, 24–25.]

confidential marriage. In some jurisdictions (such as California), a marriage between a man and a woman in which only the two parties and the officiant are present at the ceremony. • Confidential marriages are neither witnessed nor recorded in public records. They are recorded in nonpublic records. Although rarely performed, they are generally legal. To obtain a confidential marriage, the parties must each be at least 18, must be of the opposite sex, and usu. must have lived together for an extended period. In ecclesiastical law, such a marriage is termed an occult marriage or, if performed in the strictest secrecy, a marriage of conscience.

“A few states provide for confidential marriages. This allows parties to go through all the formalities but have the records of the marriage, including the license, remain confidential.... A key practical effect of confidential marriage is to allow parties who have been living as husband and wife in a jurisdiction that does not recognize informal marriages to achieve marital status without publicity. However, it does not relate back to the time when the parties started holding themselves out as a married couple and thus it can have consequences in determining the extent of marital or community property or various other rights.” Walter Wadlington & Raymond C. O'Brien, Family Law in Perspective 26 (2001).

consensual marriage. Marriage by consent alone, without any formal process. See common-law marriage. [Cases: Marriage 18. C.J.S. Marriage §§ 19–20, 36.]

consular marriage. A marriage solemnized in a foreign country by a consul or diplomatic official of the United States. • Consular marriages are recognized in some jurisdictions. [Cases: Marriage 27. C.J.S. Marriage § 31.]

covenant marriage. A special type of marriage in which the parties agree to more stringent requirements for marriage and divorce than are otherwise imposed by state law for ordinary marriages. • In the late 1990s, several states (beginning with Louisiana: see Acts 1997, No. 1380, § 5) passed laws providing for covenant marriages. The requirements vary, but most of these laws require couples who opt for covenant marriage to undergo premarital counseling. A divorce will be granted only after the couple has undergone marital counseling and has been separated for a specified period (usu. at least 18 months). The divorce prerequisites typically can be waived with proof that a spouse has committed adultery, been convicted of a felony, abandoned the family for at least one year, or physically or sexually abused the other spouse or a child. — Also termed (in slang) high-test marriage.

cross-marriage. A marriage by a brother and sister to two people who are also brother and sister.

dead marriage. A marriage whose substance has disintegrated; a marriage that has irretrievably broken down.

de facto marriage (di fak-toh). A marriage that, despite the parties' living as husband and wife, is defective for some reason. [Cases: Marriage 12. C.J.S. Marriage § 9.]

defunct marriage. A marriage in which both parties, by their conduct, indicate their intent to no longer be married. [Cases: Husband and Wife 272(1).]

Fleet marriage. Hist. 1. A clandestine ceremonial marriage performed in the 17th or 18th century in the Fleet prison in London by a chaplain who had been imprisoned for debt. 2. A clandestine ceremonial marriage performed by unscrupulous itinerant clergymen in the area in London near the Fleet Prison. • Parliament attempted to stop the practice, but it was not until the statute of 26 Geo. 2, ch. 33, declaring marriages performed outside public chapels or churches to be void and punishable as a felony, that the practice ceased.

fraudulent marriage. A marriage based on a misrepresentation regarding some issue of fundamental importance to the innocent party, who relies on the misrepresentation in the decision to marry. • The misrepresentation must concern something of fundamental importance to a marriage, such as religious beliefs, the ability to have sexual relations, or the ability or desire to have children. Cf. sham marriage.

green-card marriage. Slang. A sham marriage in which a U.S. citizen marries a foreign citizen for the sole purpose of allowing the foreign citizen to become a permanent U.S. resident. • The Marriage Fraud Amendments were enacted to regulate marriages entered into for the purpose of circumventing U.S. immigration laws. 8 USCA §§ 1154 (h), 1255(e). See sham marriage.

Gretna Green marriage. A marriage entered into in a jurisdiction other than where the parties reside to avoid some legal impediment that exists where they live; a runaway marriage. • Gretna Green, a Scottish village close to the English border, served as a convenient place for eloping English couples to wed since in Scots law parties over 16 did not need parental consent.

“A ‘Gretna-Green marriage’ was a marriage solemnized in Scotland by parties who went there to avoid the delay and formalities required in England.... In the United States, the term describes marriages celebrated between residents of a State who go to a place beyond and yet near to the boundary line of an adjoining State, on account of some advantage afforded by the law of that State.” William C. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 496 (1889).

handfast marriage. 1. Hist. A marriage, often lacking only solemnization by clergy, characterized by the couple's joining of hands to conclude a marriage contract. 2. Hist. A betrothal with all the binding effects of a marriage, including conjugal rights and cohabitation, followed by a later formal marriage. 3. A trial or probationary marriage wherein the couple agrees to cohabit and behave as spouses for a definite period, usu. one year, at the end of which they will mutually decide to separate or go through a permanently binding ceremony. • The legal status of such a trial marriage is unsettled, as many are initiated with a ritual ceremony including an exchange of vows before a presiding officer legally empowered to perform marriages, yet the couple intends to remain free to end the relationship without legal proceedings. Cf. marriage in jest; common-law marriage. 4. A binding form of marriage practiced by some modern pagan religions. • Unlike in sense 3, such marriages are entered into with the expectation of permanent duration. — Also termed (in senses 3 & 4) handfasting.

high-test marriage. See covenant marriage.

homosexual marriage. See same-sex marriage.

informal marriage. See common-law marriage.

in-marriage. Marriage between relatives; inbreeding.

left-handed marriage. See morganatic marriage.

limited-purpose marriage. A marriage in which the parties agree to be married only for certain reasons. • An example is a marriage in which the parties agree to marry so that a child will not be born illegitimate but agree not to live together or to have any duties toward each other. Courts have usu. found these marriages to be binding for all purposes. Cf. sham marriage; green-card marriage.

marriage by habit and repute. Scots law. An irregular marriage created by cohabitation that implies a mutual agreement to be married. • This type of marriage is still recognized in Scotland. See Scotch marriage.

marriage in jest. A voidable marriage in which the parties lack the requisite intent to marry. [Cases: Marriage 13. C.J.S. Marriage §§ 10, 19–20.]

marriage of conscience. Eccles. law. See confidential marriage.

marriage of convenience. 1. A marriage entered into for social or financial advantages rather than out of mutual love. — Also termed marriage de convenance. 2. Loosely, an ill-considered marriage that, at the time, is convenient for the parties involved.

marriage of the left hand. See morganatic marriage.

marriage per verba de futuro subsequente copula. Scots law. Hist. An irregular marriage created by a promise to marry in the future followed by an act of sexual intercourse. • Originally medieval canon law, this type of marriage was recognized in Scotland until 1940. See Scotch marriage.

marriage per verba de praesenti. Scots law. Hist. An irregular marriage created at the time of a mutual agreement to be married. • Originally medieval canon law, this type of marriage was recognized in Scotland until 1940. See Scotch marriage.

mixed marriage. See MISCEGENATION.

morganatic marriage (mor-g<<schwa>>-nat-ik). Hist. A marriage between a man of superior status to a woman of inferior status, with the stipulation that the wife and her children have no claims to the husband's title or possessions. • By extension, the term later referred to the marriage of a woman of superior status to a man of inferior status. The concept is now limited to royal marriages. — Also termed left-handed marriage; marriage of the left hand; salic marriage.

occult marriage. Eccles. law. See confidential marriage.

plural marriage. A marriage in which one spouse is already married to someone else; a bigamous or polygamous union; POLYGAMY. [Cases: Marriage 11. C.J.S. Marriage § 18.]

putative marriage (pyoo-t<<schwa>>-tiv). A marriage in which either the husband or the wife believes in good faith that the two are married, but for some technical reason they are not formally married (as when the ceremonial official was not authorized to perform a marriage). • A putative marriage is typically treated as valid to protect the innocent spouse. The concept of a putative marriage was adopted from the Napoleonic Code in those states having a civil-law tradition, such as California, Louisiana, and Texas. This type of marriage is also recognized in the Uniform Marriage and Divorce Act. The legal rule by which putative marriages exist is sometimes referred to as the putative-spouse doctrine. — Also termed putative matrimony. [Cases: Marriage 12. C.J.S. Marriage § 9.]

same-sex marriage. The ceremonial union of two people of the same sex; a marriage or marriage-like relationship between two women or two men. • The United States government and most American states do not recognize same-sex marriages, even if legally contracted in another U.S. state or in a foreign country such as Canada, so couples usu. do not acquire the legal status of spouses. But same-sex couples have successfully challenged the laws against same-sex marriage. See Goodridge v. Dept. of Pub. Health, 798 N.E.2d 941 (Mass. 2003). Cf. Baehr v. Lewin, 852 P.2d 44 (Haw. 1993); Baehr v. Miike, 994 P.2d 566 (Haw. 1999); Baker v. State, 744 A.2d 864 (Vt. 1999). — Also termed gay marriage; homosexual marriage. Cf. CIVIL COMMITMENT(2); CIVIL UNION; DOMESTIC PARTNERSHIP.

Scotch marriage. Scots law. A marriage by consensual contract, without the necessity of a formal ceremony. • Until 1940, Scots law retained the medieval canon-law forms of marriage per verba de praesenti and per verba de futuro subsequente copula. These promises constituted irregular but valid marriages. Scots law still retains the irregular marriage by cohabitation with habit and repute. No ceremony needs to be proved but, after the death of one spouse, the surviving spouse or any child can obtain a court's confirmation that a marriage existed, based on the general belief of neighbors, friends, and family. [Cases: Marriage 20(1). C.J.S. Marriage §§ 21–22, 84.]

sham marriage. A purported marriage in which all the formal requirements are met or seemingly met, but in which the parties go through the ceremony with no intent of living together as husband and wife. Cf. green-card marriage; fraudulent marriage; limited-purpose marriage. [Cases: Aliens 53.4. C.J.S. Aliens §§ 78, 81, 114, 142–143, 145–148, 217.] valid marriage. See MARRIAGE(1).

voidable marriage. A marriage that is initially invalid but that remains in effect unless terminated by court order. • For example, a marriage is voidable if either party is underage or otherwise legally incompetent, or if one party used fraud, duress, or force to induce the other party to enter the marriage. The legal imperfection in such a marriage can be inquired into only during the lives of both spouses, in a proceeding to obtain a judgment declaring it void. A voidable marriage can be ratified once the impediment to a legal marriage has been removed. [Cases: Marriage 53–54. C.J.S. Marriage §§ 43–45.] void marriage. A marriage that is invalid from its inception, that cannot be made valid, and that can be terminated by either party without obtaining a divorce or annulment. • For example, a marriage is void if the parties are too closely related or if either party is already married. A void marriage does not exist, has never existed, and needs no formal act to be dissolved — although a judicial declaration may be obtained. — Also termed attempted marriage. See NULLITY OF MARRIAGE(1). [Cases: Marriage 53–54. C.J.S. Marriage §§ 43–45.]

2.Roman law. A consensual agreement between a man and a woman to be married. • The consent of both parties and of any paterfamilias was necessary. Other requirements were the attainment of puberty and legal capacity (conubium). If either or both withdrew consent to be married, the marriage ended in divorce; no specific grounds were necessary. In the Christian empire, divorce without adequate grounds was penalized. 3.MARRIAGE CEREMONY. — marital,adj.

ceremonial marriage.A wedding that follows all the statutory requirements and that has been solemnized before a religious or civil official. [Cases: Marriage 23–32. C.J.S. Marriage §§ 27–35.]

civil marriage.A wedding ceremony conducted by an official, such as a judge, or by some other authorized person — as distinguished from one solemnized by a member of the clergy. [Cases: Marriage 27. C.J.S. Marriage § 31.]

proxy marriage.A wedding in which someone stands in for an absent bride or groom, as when one party is stationed overseas in the military. • Proxy marriages are prohibited in most states. [Cases: Marriage 23. C.J.S. Marriage § 30.]

marriage article.A premarital stipulation between spouses who intend to incorporate the stipulation in a postnuptial agreement. [Cases: Husband and Wife 29.]

MARRIAGE BONUS

marriage broker.One who arranges a marriage in exchange for consideration. • A marriage broker may be subject to criminal liability.

MARRIAGE-BROKERAGE CONTRACT

marriage-brokerage contract.An agreement under which a person, acting for compensation, procures someone for a marriage. • Traditionally, these contracts have been void as being against public policy.

MARRIAGE CEREMONY marriage ceremony. The religious or civil proceeding that solemnizes a marriage. — Sometimes shortened to marriage. — Also termed wedding. [Cases: Contracts 111; Marriage 26. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 245–248; Marriage §§ 30, 33.]

MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE

marriage certificate. A document that is executed by the religious or civil official presiding at a marriage ceremony and filed with a public authority (usu. the county clerk) as evidence of the marriage. — Also termed certificate of marriage. Cf. MARRIAGE LICENSE. [Cases: Marriage 31. C.J.S. Marriage § 35.]

MARRIAGE CONTRACT

marriage contract. See CONTRACT.

MARRIAGE LICENSE

marriage license. A document, issued by a public authority, that grants a couple permission to marry. Cf. MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE. [Cases: Marriage 25(2).]

marriage mill. A place that facilitates hasty, often secret, marriages by requiring few or no legal formalities. • Marriage-mill unions may be voidable but are rarely void in the absence of absolute impediments to marriage.

MARRIAGE-NOTICE BOOK

marriage-notice book. An English registry of marriage applications and licenses.

MARRIAGE PENALTY

marriage penalty. Tax. The difference between the greater income-tax liability owed by a married couple filing a joint income-tax return and the lesser amount they would owe had they been single and filed individually. • A marriage penalty exists whenever a married couple is treated disadvantageously under a tax code in comparison with an unmarried couple. Cf. MARRIAGE BONUS.

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT

marriage settlement.1.MARITAL AGREEMENT. 2.PRENUPTIAL AGREEMENT.

MARRIED WOMAN'S SEPARATE ESTATE IN EQUITY married woman's separate estate in equity.Hist. At common law, a trust that a rich family could set up for a daughter so that she would not lose control of her own money and property to her husband. • The daughter could escape the severe limits of coverture by having her family establish a separate estate in equity, allowing her the benefit of income that was not controlled by her husband even if the husband was named as trustee. See COVERTURE; MARRIED WOMEN'S PROPERTY ACTS .

MARRIED WOMEN'S PROPERTY ACTS

married women's property acts.(sometimes cap.) Statutes enacted to remove a married woman's disabilities; esp. statutes that abolished the common-law prohibitions against a married woman's contracting, suing and being sued, or acquiring, holding, and conveying property in her own right, free from any restrictions by her husband. • For example, these acts abolished the spousal-unity doctrine. In actual usage, the term almost always appears in the plural form (acts, not act), except when referring to a particular statute. — Also termed married women's acts; married woman's property acts; married woman's acts; emancipation acts; married women's emancipation acts. See MERGER DOCTRINE OF HUSBAND AND WIFE ; LEGAL-UNITIES DOCTRINE.

“The women's rights movement existed throughout the nineteenth century. It succeeded in partially reducing the legal disabilities of married women during the second half of that century by bringing about the enactment in all states of Married Women's Property Acts. The purpose of these Acts was to place married women on an equal footing with their husbands with respect to contracts, earnings, the ownership of property and the right to sue or be sued, but as they were construed by the courts they frequently failed to accomplish the intended reforms.” Homer H. Clark Jr. & Ann Laquer Estin, Domestic Relations: Cases and Problems 8 (6th ed. 2000).

MARSHAL

martial law (mahr-sh<<schwa>>l). 1. The law by which during wartime the army, instead of civil authority, governs the country because of a perceived need for military security or public safety. • The military assumes control purportedly until civil authority can be restored. 2. A body of firm, strictly enforced rules that are imposed because of a perception by the country's rulers that civil government has failed, or might fail, to function. • Martial law is usu. imposed when the rulers foresee an invasion, insurrection, economic collapse, or other breakdown of the rulers' desired social order. [Cases: War and National Emergency 31. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 47–48.]

“Martial law is the public law of necessity. Necessity calls it forth, necessity justifies its exercise, and necessity measures the extent and degree to which it may be employed. That necessity is no formal, artificial, legalistic concept but an actual and factual one: it is the necessity of taking action to safeguard the state against insurrection, riot, disorder, or public calamity. What constitutes necessity is a question of fact in each case.” Frederick B. Wiener, A Practical Manual of Martial Law 16 (1940).

“[M]artial law is nothing more and nothing less than an application of the common law doctrine that force, to whatever degree necessary, may be used to repress illegal force. Martial law is the public right of self-defense against a danger threatening the order or the existence of the state. Where the ordinary civil authorities — the police — are unable to resist or subdue a disturbance, additional force, military in nature, may be applied. The extent of military force used depends in each instance upon the extent of the disturbance.” Id. at 16–17.

absolute martial law. The carrying on of government functions entirely by military agencies, as a result of which the authority of civil agencies is superseded. [Cases: War and National Emergency 31. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 47–48.]

qualified martial law. The carrying on of government functions partly by military agencies, as a result of which the authority of some civil agencies is superseded. [Cases: War and National Emergency 31. C.J.S. War and National Defense §§ 47–48.]

3. The law by which the army in wartime governs foreign territory that it occupies. 4. Loosely, MILITARY LAW.

master, n. 1. One who has personal authority over another's services; specif., a principal who employs another to perform one or more services and who controls or has the right to control the physical conduct of the other in the performance of the services; EMPLOYER <the law of master and servant>. [Cases: Master and Servant 1. C.J.S. Apprentices §§ 2, 11; Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 2–3, 6–12.]

“[A] master is a species of principal. All masters are principals, but all principals are not necessarily masters. A principal becomes a master only if his control of the agent's physical conduct is sufficient.” William A. Gregory, The Law of Agency and Partnership 5 (3d ed. 2001).

2. A parajudicial officer (such as a referee, an auditor, an examiner, or an assessor) specially appointed to help a court with its proceedings. • A master may take testimony, hear and rule on discovery disputes, enter temporary orders, and handle other pretrial matters, as well as computing interest, valuing annuities, investigating encumbrances on land titles, and the like — usu. with a written report to the court. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53. — Also termed special master. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1871–1908; Reference 35–77. C.J.S. References §§ 40–72, 141–148.]

MCCARRAN INTERNAL SECURITY ACT

McCarran Internal Security Act.See MCCARRAN ACT.

MCCLANAHAN PRESUMPTION

McClanahan presumption. The presumption that the states do not have jurisdiction to tax members of a Native American tribe who live or work on tribal land. • The presumption is not limited to tribal members who live or work on a formal reservation. Instead, it includes those who live or work on informal reservations, in dependent tribal communities, and on tribal allotments. McClanahan v. Arizona Tax Comm'n, 411 U.S. 164, 93 S.Ct. 1257 (1973). [Cases: Taxation 181, 940. C.J.S. Indians §§ 131–132; Taxation §§ 256–258, 301–302, 1702.]

MCDONNELL DOUGLAS TEST

McDonnell Douglas test. Employment law. The principle for applying a shifting burden of proof in employment-discrimination cases, essentially requiring the plaintiff to come forward with evidence of discrimination and the defendant to come forward with evidence showing that the employment action complained of was taken for nondiscriminatory reasons. • Under this test, the plaintiff is first required to establish a prima facie case of discrimination, as by showing that the plaintiff is a member of a protected group and suffered an adverse employment action. If the plaintiff satisfies that burden, then the defendant must articulate a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the employment action complained of. If the defendant satisfies that burden, then the plaintiff must prove that the defendant's stated reason is just a pretext for discrimination and that discrimination was the real reason for the employment action. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411 U.S. 792, 93 S.Ct. 1817 (1973). [Cases: Civil Rights 1118, 1536. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 25, 168–169.]

MCNABB–MALLORY RULE

McNabb–Mallory rule. Criminal procedure. The doctrine that a confession is inadmissible if obtained during an unreasonably long detention period between arrest and a preliminary hearing. • Because of the broader protections afforded under the Miranda rule, the McNabb–Mallory rule is rarely applied in modern cases. McNabb v. United States, 318 U.S. 332, 63 S.Ct. 608 (1943); Mallory v. United States, 354 U.S. 449, 77 S.Ct. 1356 (1957). — Often shortened to Mallory rule. [Cases: Criminal Law 519(8). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 929–930.]

MENAGHTEN RULES

McNaghten rules (mik-nawt-<<schwa>>n). Criminal law. The doctrine that a person is not criminally responsible for an act when a mental disability prevented the person from knowing either the nature and quality of the act or whether the act was right or wrong. • The federal courts and most states have adopted this test in some form. McNaghten's Case, 8 Eng. Rep. 718 (H.L. 1843). — Also spelled McNaughten rules; M'Naghten rules; M'Naughten rules. — Also termed right-and-wrong test; right–wrong test. See INSANITY DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law 48.]

“Four points stand out and should be understood whenever reference to M'Naghten is made other than in regard to procedure. (1) It applies only in case of ‘a defect of reason, from disease of the mind’ and without this the following do not apply except that ‘disease’ as so used will be interpreted to include congenital defect or traumatic injury. (2) If, because of this ‘defect of reason,’ the defendant did not know what he was doing he is not guilty of crime. (3) Even if the defendant knew what he was doing he is not guilty of crime if, because of this 'defect of reason,' he did not know he was doing wrong. (4) If the defendant acted under an insane delusion, and was not otherwise insane, his accountability to the criminal law is the same as if the facts were as they seemed to him to be." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 959–60 (3d ed. 1982).

MCNARY <TT> COMITY

McNary comity. The principle that a U.S. district court should not hear a taxpayer's civil-rights challenge to the administration of a state's tax system. Fair Assessment in Real Estate Ass'n v. McNary, 454 U.S. 100, 102 S.Ct. 177 (1981). [Cases: Federal Courts 27.]

media sententia (mee-dee-<<schwa>> sen-ten-shee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. A middle view.

A method of nonbinding dispute resolution involving a neutral third party who tries to help the disputing parties reach a mutually agreeable solution; CONCILIATION. — Also termed case evaluation; facilitated negotiation. [Cases: Arbitration 1–47. C.J.S. Arbitration §§ 2–90, 92–93, 107, 109–110, 179–188; Architects § 25.] 2. Int'l law. A process whereby a neutral country helps other countries peacefully resolve disputes between them. Cf. ARBITRATION. — mediate (mee-dee-ayt), vb. — mediatory (mee-dee-<<schwa>>-tor-ee), adj.

“The distinction between mediation and conciliation is widely debated among those interested in ADR, arbitration, and international diplomacy. Some suggest that conciliation is ‘a nonbinding arbitration,’ whereas mediation is merely ‘assisted negotiation.’ Others put it this way: conciliation involves a third party's trying to bring together disputing parties to help them reconcile their differences, whereas mediation goes further by allowing the third party to suggest terms on which the dispute might be resolved. Still others reject these attempts at differentiation and contend that there is no consensus about what the two words mean — that they are generally interchangeable. Though a distinction would be convenient, those who argue that usage indicates a broad synonymy are most accurate.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 554 (2d ed. 1995).

MEDIATION AND CONCILIATION SERVICE

Mediation and Conciliation Service. A federal agency that tries to prevent the interruption of commerce resulting from labor disputes, by assisting parties in settling their disputes through mediation and conciliation. • The agency can intervene on its own motion or on the motion of a party to the dispute. — Also termed Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. 29 USCA §§ 172–173.

MEETING

meeting, n. Parliamentary law. The gathering of people to discuss or act on matters in which they have a common interest; esp. the convening of a deliberative assembly to transact business. • A deliberative assembly's meeting begins with a call to order and continues until the assembly adjourns. See call to order under CALL(1); ADJOURN. Cf. SESSION. — meet, vb.

“The distinction should be noted between the assembly (that is, the body of people who assemble) and the meeting (which is the event of their being assembled to transact business).” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 1, at 2 (10th ed. 2000).

adjourned meeting. 1. See continued meeting. 2. A meeting that has adjourned. • These two senses are opposite in meaning, so the term “continued meeting” is preferable for sense 1.

annual meeting. A yearly meeting to elect or install officers or directors and to conduct other routine organizational business. • An organization's governing documents usu. specify the time and place of such a meeting. [Cases: Corporations 193. C.J.S. Corporations § 363.]

business meeting. A formal meeting called for considering business, as opposed to a purely educational or social event. • A business meeting may fall within a program that also includes social and informational events. See PROGRAM(1).

called meeting. See special meeting.

continued meeting. A meeting that will be or has been resumed after a recess (or a so-called adjournment, which may last for several days but is still technically a recess, since it does not end the meeting). • A continued meeting is technically not an “adjourned meeting,” and an “adjourned meeting” may also mean a meeting that has adjourned, so the term “continued meeting” is preferable. — Also loosely termed adjourned meeting. See RECESS(2).

creditors' meeting. Bankruptcy. The first meeting of a debtor's creditors and equity security holders, presided over by the U.S. Trustee and at which a bankruptcy trustee may be elected and the debtor may be examined under oath. 11 USCA § 341. — Also termed meeting of creditors; 341 meeting. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3024. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 193, 373.]

mass meeting. A meeting of an unorganized body called to discuss a particular issue or to organize for a particular purpose and usu. open to anyone interested in that issue or purpose.

organizational meeting. 1. A mass meeting that establishes a permanent or ongoing organization. 2. A meeting that begins an ongoing organization's proceedings under its regular order, such as adopting governing documents and electing officers, usu. following a mass meeting and an interval when the organization operates under provisional officers while its governing documents are drafted. • If the organizational meeting is for a corporation and the articles of incorporation name the initial directors, the directors hold the meeting. Otherwise, the incorporator holds the meeting. [Cases: Corporations 24. C.J.S. Corporations § 40.] 3. The first meeting after a dissolution, at which a newly reconstituted deliberative assembly — such as a legislative body or a convention whose members are assuming the seats to which they have been elected or re-elected for a new term — elects officers, adopts rules, and otherwise organizes for the new session.

regular meeting. A periodic meeting held at a time set in an organization's governing documents or under a standing rule or schedule that the deliberative assembly has adopted. — Also termed stated meeting. Cf. special meeting.

special meeting. A meeting that is not a regular meeting; a meeting called for a particular purpose, usu. between regular meetings. — Also termed called meeting. Cf. regular meeting. [Cases: Corporations 194, 298(3). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 364–367, 464.]

stated meeting. See regular meeting.

341 meeting. See creditors' meeting.

MEETING-COMPETITION DEFENSE meeting-competition defense. Antitrust. A defense to a charge of price discrimination whereby the defendant shows that the lower price was a good-faith attempt to match what it believed to be a competitor's equally low offer.

MEETING OF CREDITORS

meeting of creditors. See creditors' meeting under MEETING.

MEETING OF THE MINDS meeting of the minds. Contracts. Actual assent by both parties to the formation of a contract, meaning that they agree on the same terms, conditions, and subject matter. • This was required under the traditional subjective theory of assent, but modern contract doctrine requires only objective manifestations of assent. — Also termed mutuality of assent; aggregatio mentium; assensio mentium. See mutual assent under ASSENT. [Cases: Contracts 15. C.J.S. Contracts §§ megalopolis (meg-<<schwa>>-lop-<<schwa>>-lis). A heavily populated, continuous urban area that is one vast city or composed of several cities and towns.

MEGAN'S LAW

Megan's law (meg-<<schwa>>n ormay-g<<schwa>>n). A statute that requires sex offenders who are released from prison to register with a local board and that provides the means to disseminate information about the registrants to the community in which they dwell. • Although many of these statutes were enacted in the late 1980s, they took their popular name from Megan Kanka of New Jersey, a seven-year-old who in 1994 was raped and murdered by a twice-convicted sex offender who lived across the street from her house. All states have these laws, but only some require community notification (as by publishing offenders' pictures in local newspapers); in others, people must call a state hotline or submit names of persons they suspect. The federal version of Megan's law may be found at 42 USCA § 14071. — Also termed registration and community-notification law; community-notification law. [Cases: Mental Health 452, 469.]

meliorations (meel-y*<<schwa>>-ray-sh<<schwa>>nz*). 1. Scots law. Improvements — other than repairs — made to an estate by a tenant or liferenter. • The cost of meliorations is not recoverable from the landlord or fiar. 2. Lasting improvements.

MELIORIBUS DAMNIS

melioribus damnis. See DE MELIORIBUS DAMNIS.

MELIUS INQUIRENDUM

melius inquirendum (mee-lee-<<schwa>>s in-kw<<schwa>>-ren-d<<schwa>>m), n. [Law

Latin “to be better inquired into”] Hist. A writ ordering the escheator to investigate a matter further, as by inquiring who is the next heir of a party who died seised of lands.

MELSON FORMULA

Melson formula.Family law. A method of calculating a noncustodial parent's child-support obligation to ensure that (1) neither parent falls below the poverty level in meeting child-support obligations, and (2) a child of a wealthier noncustodial parent shares in that parent's higher standard of living. • Named for Judge Elwood F. Melson of Delaware Family Court, the formula has been adopted in several states, such as Delaware, Hawaii, Montana, and West Virginia. The formula works as follows. A self-support reserve is first deducted from the parent-obligor's net income. Next, a primary support amount per child is calculated at an established subsistence level, added to actual work-related child-care expenses, and allocated between the parents. After deducting the support obligor's self-support reserve and pro rata share of the child's adjusted primary support amount, a percentage of the obligor's remaining income is allocated to additional child support as a cost-of-living adjustment. Total child support is determined by adding together the noncustodial parent's share of primary support and the standard-of-living allowance.

MEMBER

member. 1.Parliamentary law. One of the individuals of whom an organization or a deliberative assembly consists, and who enjoys the full rights of participating in the organization — including the rights of making, debating, and voting on motions — except to the extent that the organization reserves those rights to certain classes of membership.

MEMORANDUM CHECK

memorandum check. See CHECK.

MEMORANDUM CLAUSE

memorandum clause. A marine-insurance clause protecting underwriters from liability for injury to goods that are particularly perishable, or for minor damages. [Cases: Insurance 2235, 2241. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1195–1196, 1199–1203, 1208, 1211–1214, 1216–1217.]

“This clause was first introduced into the English [marine-insurance] policies about the year 1749. Before that time the insurer was liable for every injury, however small, that happened to the thing insured.... The memorandum clause ... usually declares that the enumerated articles, and any other articles that are perishable in their own nature, shall be free from average under a given rate, unless general, or the ship be stranded. In consequence of this exception, all small partial losses, however inconsiderable, are to be borne by a general average, provided they were incurred in a case proper for such an average” 3 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *294–95 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

MENSOR

mentor (men-sor), n. [fr. Latin metiri “to measure”] Roman law. A measurer of land; a surveyor.

MENS REA

mens rea (menz ree-<<schwa>>). [Law Latin “guilty mind”] The state of mind that the prosecution, to secure a conviction, must prove that a defendant had when committing a crime; criminal intent or recklessness <the mens rea for theft is the intent to deprive the rightful owner of the property>. • Mens rea is the second of two essential elements of every crime at common law, the other being the actus reus. — Also termed mental element; criminal intent; guilty mind. Pl. mentes reae (men-teez ree-ee). Cf. ACTUS REUS. [Cases: Criminal Law 20. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 31–33, 35–39; Negligence § 913.]

“There are only two states of mind which constitute mens rea, and they are intention, and recklessness.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 29–30 (16th ed. 1952).

“Most English lawyers would however now agree with Sir James Fitzjames Stephen that the expression mens rea is unfortunate, though too firmly established to be expelled, just because it misleadingly suggests that, in general, moral culpability is essential to a crime, and they would assent to the criticism expressed by a later judge that the true translation of mens rea is 'an intention to do the act which is made penal by statute or by the common law.' [Allard v. Selfridge, (1925) 1 K.B. at 137 (per Shearman, J.).]” H.L.A. Hart, “Legal Responsibility and Excuses,” in Punishment and Responsibility 28, 36 (1968).

“Some years ago the mens-rea doctrine was criticized on the ground that the Latin phrase is ‘misleading.’ If the words ‘mens rea’ were to be regarded as self-explanatory they would be open to this objection, but they are to be considered merely as a convenient label which may be attached to any psychical fact sufficient for criminal guilt (in connection with socially harmful conduct). This includes a field too complex for any brief self-explanatory phrase, and since it is important to have some sort of dialectic shorthand to express the idea, this time-honored label will do as well as any.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 826–27 (3d ed. 1982).

mensularius (men-s<<schwa>>-lair-ee-<<schwa>>s), n. [fr. Latin mensa “a table”] Roman law. A dealer in money; a moneychanger; a banker.

mercedary (m-<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-der-ee), n. [Latin] An employer; one who hires.

MERCENARIUS

mercenarius (m<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-nair-ee-<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin] 1. An employee; a servant. 2. A soldier of fortune. — Also spelled mercennarius.

MERCENARY

mercenary (m<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-ner-ee). Int'l law. A professional soldier hired by someone other than his or her own government to fight in a foreign country.

MERCENLAGE

mercenlage (m<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>n-law). [fr. Saxon myrcnalag] The law of the Mercians. • This was one of the three principal legal systems prevailing in England at the beginning of the 11th century. It was observed in many midland counties and those bordering on Wales. — Also spelled merchenlage (m<< schwa>>r-sh<<schwa>>n-law). — Also termed lex merciorum (leks m<<schwa>>r-shee-or-<<schwa>>m); Mercian law (m<<schwa>>r-shee-<<schwa>>n orm<<schwa>>r-sh<<schwa>>n). See DANELAW; WEST-SAXON LAW.

merces (m<<schwa>>r-seez), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. An agreed payment for a thing or services specifically contracted for; rent, hire.

2. A reward, esp. for a gratuitous service. Cf. HONORARIUM. “A recompense paid for any kind of services, without a preceding agreement (e.g., for saving one's life) is also called merces.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 581 (1953).

merchandise (m<<schwa>>r-ch<<schwa>>n-dIz also -dIs). 1. In general, a movable object involved in trade or traffic; that which is passed from hand to hand by purchase and sale. 2. In particular, that which is dealt in by merchants; an article of trading or the class of objects in which trade is carried on by physical transfer; collectively, mercantile goods, wares or commodities, or any subjects of regular trade, animate as well as inanimate. • This definition generally excludes real estate, ships, intangibles such as software, and the like, and does not apply to money, stocks, bonds, notes, or other mere representatives or measures of actual commodities or values. — Also termed (in senses 1 & 2) article of merchandise. 3. Purchase and sale; trade; traffic, dealing, or advantage from dealing.

MERCHANDISE BROKER

merchandise broker. See BROKER.

MERCHANDISE MARKS ACTS

Merchandise Marks Acts. Hist. An 1887 statute (50 & 51 Vict., ch. 28) making it a misdemeanor to fraudulently mark merchandise for sale or to sell merchandise so marked. • This statute was repealed in 1968.

MERCHANT

merchant. One whose business is buying and selling goods for profit; esp. a person or entity that holds itself out as having expertise peculiar to the goods in which it deals and is therefore held by the law to a higher standard of expertise than that of a nonmerchant. • Because the term relates solely to goods, a supplier of services is not considered a merchant. [Cases: Sales 15.1. C.J.S. Sales § 10.]

“The definition of ‘merchant’ in [UCC] Section 2-104(1) identifies two separate but often interrelated criteria: Does the seller ‘deal in goods’ of that kind, or does the seller ‘otherwise by his occupation’ hold himself out as having special knowledge with respect to the goods? It should be emphasized that the drafters have placed these two criteria in the alternative by use of the word ‘or.’ Thus, the definition clearly catches all those who regularly sell inventory even though they may have no expertise regarding the particular product. This would include distributors, wholesalers, and retail dealers. Dealers who sell prepackaged goods containing a defect over which they have no control might be surprised to learn that they have given an implied warranty of merchantability with respect to the goods, but such is the law.” Barkley Clark & Christopher Smith, The Law of Product Warranties § 5.02[1], at 5-25 (1984).

MERCHANTABLE

merchantable (m<<schwa>>r-ch<<schwa>>nt-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. Fit for sale in the usual course of trade at the usual selling prices; MARKETABLE. — Also termed salable. See implied warranty of merchantability under WARRANTY (2). [Cases: Sales 272. C.J.S. Sales §§ 254–256.] — merchantability, n.

MERCHANTABLE TITLE

merchantable title. See marketable title under TITLE(2).

MERCHANT APPRAISER

merchant appraiser. An expert appointed by a customs officer to reexamine and revalue imported goods for customs purposes. • The appraiser is usu. an experienced merchant who deals in or has dealt in goods of the character and quality of those at issue. An appraiser is appointed only when an importer requests one.

MERCHANT EXCEPTION

merchant exception. Contracts. In a sale of goods, an exemption from the statute of frauds whereby a contract between merchants is enforceable if, within a reasonable time after they reach an oral agreement, a written confirmation of the terms is sent, to which the recipient does not object within ten days of receiving it. • The only effect of failing to object to the written confirmation is that the recipient will be precluded from relying on the statute of frauds — or the lack of a formal, written agreement — as a defense to a breach-of-contract claim. The party seeking to enforce an agreement must still prove that an agreement was reached. UCC § 2-201(2). [Cases: Frauds, Statute of 127.]

MERCHANT LESSEE

merchant lessee. See LESSEE.

MERCHANTMAN

merchantman. Archaic. A vessel employed in foreign or interstate commerce or in the merchant service.

MERCHANT'S ACCOUNTS

merchant's accounts. Current, mutual accounts between merchants showing debits and credits for merchandise.

MERCHANT'S DEFENSE

merchant's defense. The principle that a store owner will not be held liable for reasonably detaining a suspected shoplifter, to facilitate an investigation by a law-enforcement officer, if probable cause exists to suspect the detained person of wrongfully removing merchandise from the store. [Cases: False Imprisonment 11.]

MERCHANT SEAMAN

merchant seaman. See SEAMAN.

MERCHANT'S FIRM OFFER

merchant's firm offer. See irrevocable offer under OFFER.

MERCHANT SHIPPING ACTS

Merchant Shipping Acts. English statutes to improve shipping conditions by, among other things, vesting the superintendence of merchant shipping in the board of trade.

MERCHENLAGE

merchenlage. See MERCENLAGE.

MERCHET

merchet (m<<schwa>>r-chet). See MARCHET.

MERCHETA

mercheta. See MARCHET.

MERCHETUM

merchetum. See MARCHET.

MERCIAMENT

merciament (m<<schwa>>r-see-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>nt).Archaic. See AMERCEMENT.

MERCIAN LAW

Mercian law.See MERCENLAGE.

MERCIMONIATUS ANGLIAE

Mercimoniatus Angliae (m<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-moh-nee-ay-t<<schwa>>s ang-gee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. English customs duties on merchandise brought into the country.

MERCY

mercy. Compassionate treatment, as of criminal offenders or of those in distress; esp. imprisonment, rather than death, imposed as punishment for capital murder. See CLEMENCY.

MERCY KILLING

mercy killing.See EUTHANASIA.

MERCY RULE

mercy rule.Evidence. The principle that a defendant is entitled to offer character evidence as a defense to a criminal charge. • This type of evidence is often offered by the defendant's friends and relatives. Fed. R. Evid. 404(a)(1).

MERE

mere (mair or mer), n. [Law French] Mother, as in the phrase en ventre sa mere (“in its mother's womb”).

MERE-CONTINUATION DOCTRINE mere-continuation doctrine.A principle under which a successor corporation will be held liable for the acts of a predecessor corporation, if only one corporation remains after the transfer of assets, and both corporations share an identity of stock, shareholders, and directors. — Also termed continuity-of-entity doctrine. Cf. SUBSTANTIAL-CONTINUITY DOCTRINE. [Cases: Corporations 445.1. C.J.S. Corporations § 657.]

MERE-EVIDENCE RULE

mere-evidence rule.Criminal procedure. The former doctrine that a search warrant allows seizure of the instrumentalities of the crime (such as a murder weapon) or the fruits of the crime (such as stolen goods), but does not permit the seizure of items that have evidentiary value only (such as incriminating documents). • The Supreme Court has abolished this rule, and today warrants may be issued to search for and seize all evidence of a crime. Warden v. Hayden, 387 U.S. 294, 87 S.Ct. 1642 (1967); Fed. R. Crim. P. 41(b). [Cases: Searches and Seizures 102. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 132–134.]

MERE LICENSE

mere license.See bare license under LICENSE.

MERE LICENSEE

mere licensee.See bare licensee under LICENSEE.

mere right.An abstract right in property, without possession or even the right of possession. — Also termed jus merum; merum jus; meer dreit.

“The mere right of property, the jus proprietatis, without either possession or even the right of possession. This is frequently spoken of in our books under the name of the mere right, jus merum; and the estate of the owner is in such cases said to be totally divested, and put to a right. A person in this situation may have the true ultimate property of the lands in himself: but by the intervention of certain circumstances, either by his own negligence, the solemn act of his ancestor, or the determination of a court of justice, the presumptive evidence of that right is strongly in favour of his antagonist; who has thereby obtained the absolute right of possession The heir therefore in this case has only a mere right, and must be strictly held to the proof of it, in order to recover the lands.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 197–98 (1766).

MERESTONE

merestone (meer-stohn).Archaic. A stone that marks land boundaries. — Also spelled nearstone.

MERETRICIOUS

meretricious (mer-<<schwa>>-trish-<<schwa>>s), adj.1. Involving prostitution < a meretricious encounter>.2. (Of a romantic relationship) involving either unlawful sexual connection or lack of capacity on the part of one party .3. Superficially attractive but fake nonetheless; alluring by false show <meretricious advertising claims>.

MERETRICIOUS RELATIONSHIP

meretricious relationship.Archaic. A stable, marriage-like relationship in which the parties cohabit knowing that a lawful marriage between them does not exist.

MERGEE

mergee (m<<schwa>>r-jee). A participant in a corporate merger.

merger. 1. The act or an instance of combining or uniting. 2.Contracts. The substitution of a superior form of contract for an inferior form, as when a written contract supersedes all oral agreements and prior understandings. [Cases: Contracts 245. C.J.S. Contracts § 416.]

“Where two parties have made a simple contract for any purpose, and afterwards have entered into an identical engagement by deed, the simple contract is merged in the deed and becomes extinct. This extinction of a lesser in a higher security, like the extinction of a lesser in a greater interest in lands, is called merger.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 85 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

3.Contracts. The replacement of a contractual duty or of a duty to compensate with a new duty between the same parties, based on different operative facts, for the same performance or for a performance differing only in liquidating a duty that was previously unliquidated. 4.Property. The absorption of a lesser estate into a greater estate when both become the same person's property. Cf. SURRENDER(3). [Cases: Estates in Property 10.C.J.S. Estates §§ 129, 152.]“[I]t would be absurd to allow a person to have two distinct estates, immediately expectant on each other, while one of them includes the time of both There would be an absolute incompatibility in a person filling, at the same time, the characters of tenant and reversioner in one and the same estate; and hence the reasonableness, and even necessity, of the doctrine of merger.” 3 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *99 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

5.Criminal law. The absorption of a lesser included offense into a more serious offense when a person is charged with both crimes, so that the person is not subject to double jeopardy. • For example, a defendant cannot be convicted of both attempt (or solicitation) and the completed crime — though merger does not apply to conspiracy and the completed crime. — Also termed merger of offenses. [Cases: Criminal Law 30. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 14, 16–18.] 6.Civil procedure. The effect of a judgment for the plaintiff, which absorbs any claim that was the subject of the lawsuit into the judgment, so that the plaintiff's rights are confined to enforcing the judgment. Cf. BAR(5). [Cases: Judgment 582. C.J.S. Judgments § 704.] 7. The joining of the procedural aspects of law and equity. 8.The absorption of one organization (esp. a corporation) that ceases to exist into another that retains its own name and identity and acquires the assets and liabilities of the former. • Corporate mergers must conform to statutory formalities and usu. must be approved by a majority of the outstanding shares. Cf. CONSOLIDATION(4); BUYOUT. [Cases: Corporations 581. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 792–797.]

bust-up merger.A merger in which the acquiring corporation sells off lines of business owned by the target corporation to repay the loans used in the acquisition.

cash merger.A merger in which shareholders of the target company must accept cash for their shares. — Also termed cash-out merger; freeze-out merger. [Cases: Corporations 584. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 799–801.]

conglomerate merger. A merger between unrelated businesses that are neither competitors nor customers or suppliers of each other. [Cases: Monopolies 20(9). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 110, 114.]

“A merger which is neither vertical nor horizontal is a conglomerate merger. A pure conglomerate merger is one in which there are no economic relationships between the acquiring and the acquired firm. Mixed conglomerate mergers involve horizontal or vertical relationships, such as the acquisition of a firm producing the same product as the acquirer but selling it in a different geographical market, which is not a horizontal merger because the merging companies are not competitors” 54 Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies, Restraints of Trade, and Unfair Trade Practices § 169, at 226 (1996).

de facto merger (di fak-toh). A transaction that has the economic effect of a statutory merger but that is cast in the form of an acquisition or sale of assets or voting stock. • Although such a transaction does not meet the statutory requirements for a merger, a court will generally treat it as a statutory merger for purposes of the appraisal remedy. [Cases: Corporations 445.1. C.J.S. Corporations § 657.]

downstream merger. A merger of a parent corporation into its subsidiary.

forward triangular merger. See triangular merger.

freeze-out merger. See cash merger.

horizontal merger. A merger between two or more businesses that are on the same market level because they manufacture similar products in the same geographic region; a merger of direct competitors. — Also termed horizontal integration.

product-extension merger. A merger in which the products of the acquired company are complementary to those of the acquiring company and may be produced with similar facilities, marketed through the same channels, and advertised by the same media.

reverse triangular merger. A merger in which the acquiring corporation's subsidiary is absorbed into the target corporation, which becomes a new subsidiary of the acquiring corporation. — Also termed reverse subsidiary merger.

short-form merger. A statutory merger that is less expensive and time-consuming than an ordinary statutory merger, usu. permitted when a subsidiary merges into a parent that already owns most of the subsidiary's shares. • Such a merger is generally accomplished when the parent adopts a merger resolution, mails a copy of the plan to the subsidiary's record shareholders, and files the executed articles of merger with the secretary of state, who issues a certificate of merger.

statutory merger. A merger provided by and conducted according to statutory requirements.

stock merger. A merger involving one company's purchase of another company's capital stock.

triangular merger. A merger in which the target corporation is absorbed into the acquiring corporation's subsidiary, with the target's shareholders receiving stock in the parent corporation. — Also termed subsidiary merger; forward triangular merger.

upstream merger.A merger of a subsidiary corporation into its parent.

vertical merger.A merger between businesses occupying different levels of operation for the same product, such as between a manufacturer and a retailer; a merger of buyer and seller.

9. The merger of rights and duties in the same person, resulting in the extinction of obligations; esp. the blending of the rights of a creditor and debtor, resulting in the extinguishment of the creditor's right to collect the debt. • As originally developed in Roman law, a merger resulted from the marriage of a debtor and creditor, or when a debtor became the creditor's heir. — Also termed confusion; confusion of debts; confusion of rights. Cf. CONFUSION OF TITLES.
10.The absorption of a contract into a court order, so that an agreement between the parties (often a marital agreement incident to a divorce or separation) loses its separate identity as an enforceable contract when it is incorporated into a court order.

MERGER CLAUSE

merger clause.See INTEGRATION CLAUSE.

MERGER DOCTRINE

merger doctrine. 1.Copyright. The principle that since an idea cannot be copyrighted, neither can an expression that must inevitably be used in order to express the idea. • When the idea and expression are very difficult to separate, they are said to merge. For example, courts have refused copyright protection for business-ledger forms (Baker v. Selden, 101 U.S. 99 (1879)), and for contest rules that were copied almost verbatim (Morrissey v. Procter & Gamble, 379 F.2d 675 (1st Cir. 1967)). — Also termed Baker v. Selden doctrine. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 4.5. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 10.] 2.Hist. Family law. The common-law principle that, upon marriage, the husband and wife combined to form one legal entity. — Often shortened to merger. See SPOUSAL-UNITY DOCTRINE ; LEGAL-UNITIES DOCTRINE.

metus (mee-t<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. Fear of imminent danger; apprehension of serious danger, esp. in the form of duress to force a person to do something; the use of threats to bring about some end. • Metus was more comprehensive than duress is in Anglo-American law. It included fear of any evil that was serious enough to affect a reasonable person.

“Fear (metus) had the same effect as fraud as regards the avoidance of the contract. It might be set up by way of defence (exceptio metus) or be the ground of restitutio in integrum, or give rise to an action (actio metus) It was not any kind of fear which grounded this action. The evil threatened must be of a serious character” R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 352 (4th ed. 1956).

2. A threat that diminishes the value of another's property. • In both senses, a victim was allowed to seek fourfold damages against the perpetrator. Cf. DOLUS.

METUS PERJURII

metus perjurii (mee-t<<schwa>>s p<<schwa>>r-juur-ee-I). [Law Latin] Scots law. The fear of perjury.

“On this ground the evidence of the parties to a cause, and that of their relatives, was formerly excluded. It was feared that their own, or their relatives', interest in the result of the cause might lead them to give false evidence, in order to bring about a favourable decision. This, however, is no longer law. The desire to obtain all the light possible on the facts in dispute, has overcome the metus perjurii.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 353–54 (4th ed. 1894).

MIGRATORY DIVORCE

migratory divorce.See DIVORCE.

MIKE O'CONNOR RULE

Mike O'Connor rule.Labor law. The doctrine that unilateral changes that an employer makes after a union victory in an initial-representation election — but before the employer's objections have been resolved — are automatic violations of the National Labor Relations Act if the employer's objections are rejected. • If the employer's objections are sustained, any failure-to-bargain charge will be dismissed because the employer had no duty to bargain. But if the employer's objections are rejected, the employer is considered to have been under a duty to bargain as of the date of the election, which is why the unilateral changes are automatic violations of the Act. Mike O'Connor Chevrolet–Buick–GMC Co., 209 NLRB Dec. (CCH) 701 (1974).

MILD EXIGENCY

mild exigency.A circumstance that justifies a law-enforcement officer's departure from the knock-and-announce rule, such as the likelihood that the building's occupants will try to escape, resist arrest, or destroy evidence. See KNOCK-AND-ANNOUNCE RULE.

MILITARY LAW

military law. The branch of public law governing military discipline and other rules regarding service in the armed forces. • It is exercised both in peacetime and in war, is recognized by civil courts, and includes rules far broader than for the punishment of offenders. — Also termed military justice. — Sometimes loosely termed martial law. Cf. MARTIAL LAW.

“Military Law ... is largely, but not exclusively, statutory in character, and prescribes the rights of, and imposes duties and obligations upon, the several classes of persons composing its military establishment; it creates military tribunals, endows them with appropriate jurisdiction and regulates their procedure; it also defines military offenses and, by the imposition of adequate penalties, endeavors to prevent their occurrence.” George B. Davis, A Treatise on the Military Law of the United States 1 (3d ed. 1915).

military leave. A policy contained in employment policies or collective-bargaining agreements allowing a long-term leave of absence, without an accompanying loss of benefits, for a person in active service in the U.S. armed forces.

MILITARY NECESSITY

military necessity.Int'l law. A principle of warfare allowing coercive force to achieve a desired end, as long as the force used is not more than is called for by the situation. • This principle dates from the Hague Convention on Laws and Customs of War on Land of October 18, 1907, which prohibits the destruction or seizure of enemy property “unless such destruction or seizure be imperatively demanded by the necessities of war.” [Cases: War and National Emergency 9. C.J.S. War and National Defense § 4.]

MILITARY OBJECTIVE

military objective.Int'l law. An object that by its nature, location, or use contributes to military action, and is thus susceptible to attack. • Under Geneva Convention Protocol 1 (1977), only military — rather than civilian — objects are proper targets.

MILITARY OFFENSE

military offense.An offense, such as desertion, that lies within the jurisdiction of a military court. See COURT-MARTIAL. [Cases: Armed Services 35; Military Justice 550–789. C.J.S. Military Justice §§ 2, 31–115, 183–184, 188.]

MINERAL ENTRY

mineral entry.The right of entry on public land to mine valuable mineral deposits. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 9–38. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 13, 26–93, 95–110, 112, 131.]

MINERAL INTEREST

mineral interest.Oil & gas. The right to search for, develop, and remove minerals from land or to receive a royalty based on the production of minerals. • Mineral interests are granted by an oil-and-gas lease. — Also termed mineral right. “It has generally been held that the law governing ordinary commercial or trading partnerships applies, with a few exceptions, to mining partnerships. The principal exception and the main distinction between mining partnerships and commercial partnerships generally is based on the fact that the principle of delectus personae, meaning the right of a partner to exercise choice and preference as to the admission of any new members to the firm, and as to the persons to be so admitted, does not apply to mining partnerships” 58 C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 387, at 380 (1998).

mining rent. Consideration given for a mining lease, whether the lease creates a tenancy, conveys a fee, or grants a mere license or incorporeal right. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 70, 79. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 218, 223–224, 289–290, 296, 298–299, 303.]

minitrial. A private, voluntary, and informal form of dispute resolution in which each party's attorney presents an abbreviated version of its case to a neutral third party and to the opponent's representatives, who have settlement authority. • The third party may render an advisory opinion on the anticipated outcome of litigation. Cf. summary jury trial under TRIAL.

“The idea behind the minitrial is that the parties can resolve a dispute on their own more efficiently if litigant representatives with settling authority are educated about the strengths and weaknesses of each side, giving summary presentations of their best cases under the eye of a jointly selected neutral advisor. After each case is presented, the parties meet privately to negotiate an agreement. The minitrial is confidential and nonbinding. Usually, no transcript is made of the proceeding. Minitrials have had some success in saving both time and money.” Alfred C. Aman Jr. & William T. Mayton, Administrative Law 291 (2d ed. 2001).

MINOR

minor, n. 1. A person who has not reached full legal age; a child or juvenile. — Also termed infant. Cf. ADULT. [Cases: Infants 1. C.J.S. Infants §§ 2–4.]

emancipated minor. A minor who is self-supporting and independent of parental control, usu. as a result of a court order. See EMANCIPATION. [Cases: Child Support 389; Infants 1; Parent and Child 16. C.J.S. Infants §§ 2–4; Parent and Child §§ 13–37.]

minor in need of supervision. See child in need of supervision under CHILD. — Abbr. MINS.

2. Roman law. A person who is past puberty but less than 25 years old. — Also termed minor quam 25 annis.

MINOR AETAS

minor aetas (mĪ-n<<schwa>>r ee-tas). [Latin] Hist. Lesser age; minority; infancy.

MINORA REGALIA

minora regalia (mi-nor-<<schwa>> ri-gay-lee-<<schwa>>). See reglia minora under REGALIA.

MINOR CRIME

minor crime. See MISDEMEANOR.

MINOR DISPUTE

minor dispute. See DISPUTE.

MINOR FACT

minor fact. See FACT.

MINORITY

minority. 1. The state or condition of being under legal age. • In Scots law, legal minority begins at the end of puberty; until then, a person is a pupil. — Also termed infancy; nonage; immaturity. Cf. MAJORITY(1). [Cases: Infants 1. C.J.S. Infants §§ 2–4.] 2. A group having fewer than a controlling number of votes. Cf. MAJORITY(2). [Cases: Corporations 182.3. C.J.S. Corporations § 344.] 3. A group that is different in some respect (such as race or religious belief) from the majority and that is sometimes treated differently as a result; a member of such a group. • Some courts have held that the term minority, in this sense, is not limited to a group that is outnumbered. It may also be applied to a group that has been traditionally discriminated against or socially suppressed, even if its members are in the numerical majority in an area. [Cases: Civil Rights 1007. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 2–5, 7–9, 11–13, 18, 44.]

MINORITY BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

Minority Business Development Agency. A unit in the U.S. Department of Commerce responsible for developing and coordinating a national program for minority business enterprise. — Abbr. MBDA.

MINORITY DISCOUNT

minority discount. A reduction in the value of a closely held business's shares that are owned by someone who has only a minority interest in the business. • The concept underlying a minority discount is recognition that controlling shares — those owned by someone who can control the business — are worth more in the market than noncontrolling shares. But when dissenting shareholders object to a corporate act, such as a merger, and become entitled to have their shares appraised and bought by the corporation, many courts hold that incorporating a minority discount into the valuation of the dissenters' shares is inequitable and is not permitted. See APPRAISAL REMEDY . [Cases: Corporations 182.4(5), 584. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 348, 799–801.]

MINORITY OPINION

minority opinion. See dissenting opinion under OPINION(1).

MINORITY REPORT

minority report. See REPORT(1).

MINORITY SHAREHOLDER

minority shareholder. See SHAREHOLDER.

MINOR PARTICIPANT

minor participant. Criminal law. Under the federal sentencing guidelines, a defendant who is less culpable for a crime than the other members of the group committing the crime, but who has more culpability than a minimal participant. • A defendant who is a minor participant can have the offense level for the crime decreased by two levels. U.S. Sentencing Guidelines Manual § 3B1.2(b). Cf. MINIMAL PARTICIPANT. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 764.]

MINOR QUAM 25 ANNIS minor quam 25 annis (mĪ-n<<schwa>>r kwam 25 an-is). [Latin]. See MINOR(2).

MINOR'S ESTATE

minor's estate. See ESTATE(1).

MINOR'S TRUST

minor's trust. See 2503(c) trust under TRUST.

MINS

MINS. abbr. Minor in need of supervision. See child in need of supervision under CHILD.

MINT

mint, n. 1. A government-authorized place for coining money. [Cases: United States 34. C.J.S. United States §§ 162–163.] 2. A large supply, esp. of money.

MINTAGE

mintage. 1. The mint's charge for coining money. 2. The product of minting; money.

MINT-MARK

mint-mark. An authorized mark on a coin showing where it was minted.

MINUEND

minuend (min-yoo-end). In a mathematical equation, the number from which another number (the subtrahend) is subtracted to arrive at a remainder or balance. • The term is used in law in a variety of accounting and mathematical contexts. Cf. SUBTRAHEND.

MINUS

minus (mI-n<<schwa>>s), adj. & adv. [Latin] Roman law. Less; less than; not at all. • A debt remaining wholly unpaid was called minus solutum.

MINUS LATIUM

minus Latium. See LATIUM MINUS.

MINUTE BOOK

minute book. 1. A book in which a court clerk enters minutes of court proceedings. [Cases: Clerks of Courts 69. C.J.S. Courts § 252.] 2. A record of the subjects discussed and actions taken at a corporate directors' or shareholders' meeting. — Also termed minutes book.

MINUTE ENTRY

minute entry. See minute order (1) under ORDER(2).

MINUTE ORDER

minute order. See ORDER(2).

MINUTES

minutes. 1. Memoranda or notes of a transaction or proceeding. 2. Parliamentary law. The formal record of a deliberative assembly's proceedings, approved (as corrected, if necessary) by the assembly. — Also termed journal; record; report. See DISPENSE WITH THE READING OF THE MINUTES; SPREAD UPON THE MINUTES .

“The minutes of an organization include a record of all official actions taken, the presiding officer, the presence of a quorum, and information showing that the meeting was duly called and thus legal. The other contents of the minutes will depend upon the degree of detail desired.... The minutes should be an official record of actions taken by the organization, not a transcript of what individuals say in meetings.” Ray E. Keesey, Modern Parliamentary Procedure 84 (1994).

“The record of the proceedings of a deliberative assembly is usually called the minutes, or sometimes — particularly in legislative bodies — the journal. In an ordinary society, unless the minutes are to be published, they should contain mainly a record of what was done at the meeting, not what was said by the members. The minutes should never reflect the secretary's opinion, favorable or otherwise, on anything said or done.” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 48, at 451 (10th ed. 2000).

3. Scots law. Written forms for preserving evidence. “When it is necessary to preserve evidence of any incidental judicial act or statement, this is done in the Court of Session, and also in the inferior courts, by a minute. Thus, where the pursuer restricts his libel, or makes a reference to the defender's oath ... this is done by a minute. Strictly speaking, those minutes ought to be prepared by the clerk of court, as their form imports. They commence with the name of the counsel ... and purport to be a statement made by him" William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 721 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

MINUTES BOOK

minutes book. See MINUTE BOOK.

MINUTIO

minutio (mi-n[y]oo-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A lessening or reduction. See DEMINUTIO.

MIRANDA HEARING

Miranda hearing (m<<schwa>>-ran-d<<schwa>>). A pretrial proceeding held to determine whether the Miranda rule has been followed and thus whether the prosecutor may introduce into evidence the defendant's statements to the police made after arrest. See MIRANDA RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law 414.C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 932–935, 937–941.]

MIRANDA RULE

Miranda rule. The doctrine that a criminal suspect in police custody must be informed of certain constitutional rights before being interrogated. • The suspect must be advised of the right to remain silent, the right to have an attorney present during questioning, and the right to have an attorney appointed if the suspect cannot afford one. If the suspect is not advised of these rights or does not validly waive them, any evidence obtained during the interrogation cannot be used against the suspect at trial (except for impeachment purposes). Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S.Ct. 1602 (1966). [Cases: Criminal Law 412.2(3), 517.2(3), 518. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 918–922.]

MIRANDA WARNING

Miranda warning. See MIRANDA RULE.

MIRANDIZE

Mirandize (m<<schwa>>-ran-dIz), vb. Slang. To read (an arrestee) rights under the Miranda rule <the suspect was arrested, Mirandized, and interrogated>. See MIRANDA RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law 412.2(3), 517.2(3), 518.C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 918–922.]

MIRROR-IMAGE RULE

mirror-image rule. Contracts. The doctrine that the acceptance of a contractual offer must be positive, unconditional, unequivocal, and unambiguous, and must not change, add to, or qualify the terms of the offer; the common-law principle that for a contract to be formed, the terms of an acceptance must correspond exactly with those of the offer. • In modern commercial contexts, the mirror-image rule has been replaced by a UCC provision that allows parties to enforce their agreement despite minor discrepancies between the offer and the acceptance. The rule still applies to international sales contracts governed by the UN Convention on Contracts for the International Sales of Goods (article 19). — Also termed ribbon-matching rule. See BATTLE OF THE FORMS . [Cases: Contracts 24. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 52–53.]

“If an offeree purports to accept an offer but in doing so adds various conditions and qualifications of his own, is the acceptance binding on the offeror, at least in part? Generally speaking, the answer is no: the common law rule, reflected in Restatement Section 59, is that a statement of acceptance is effective only if it is a mirror image of the offer and expresses unconditional assent to all of the terms and conditions imposed by the offeror.” Marvin A. Chirelstein, Concepts and Case Analysis in the Law of Contracts 54 (1990).

MISA

misa (mI-z<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] Hist. 1.The issue in a writ of right; a mise. 2. An agreement; a compromise.

MISADMINISTRATION

misadministration. See MALADMINISTRATION.

MISADVENTURE

misadventure. 1. A mishap or misfortune. 2. Homicide committed accidentally by a person doing a lawful act and having no intent to injure; ACCIDENTAL KILLING . [Cases: Homicide 762.]

misallege,vb. To erroneously assert (a fact, a claim, etc.).

MISAPPLICATION

misapplication,n. The improper or illegal use of funds or property lawfully held. — misapply,vb.

MISAPPROPRIATION

misappropriation,n. 1. The application of another's property or money dishonestly to one's own use. See EMBEZZLEMENT. Cf. APPROPRIATION; EXPROPRIATION. 2.Intellectual property. The common-law tort of using the noncopyrightable information or ideas that an organization collects and disseminates for a profit to compete unfairly against that organization, or copying a work whose creator has not yet claimed or been granted exclusive rights in the work. Int'l News Serv. v. Associated Press, 248 U.S. 215, 39 S.Ct. 68 (1918). • The elements of misappropriation are: (1) the plaintiff must have invested time, money, or effort to extract the information; (2) the defendant must have taken the information with no similar investment; and (3) the plaintiff must have suffered a competitive injury because of the taking. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 108. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 107.] 3. The doctrine giving rise to such a tort claim. — misappropriate,vb.

“The doctrine of ‘misappropriation,’ which is a distinct branch of unfair competition, ... has been applied to a variety of situations in which the courts have sensed that one party was dealing ‘unfairly’ with another, but which were not covered by the three established statutory systems protecting intellectual property: copyright, patent, and trademark/deception as to origin.” U.S. Golf Ass'n v. St. Andrews Systems, Data-Max, Inc., 749 F.2d 1028, 1034–35 (3d Cir. 1984)(Becker, J.).

misappropriation theory.Securities. The doctrine that a person who wrongfully uses confidential information to buy or sell securities in violation of a duty owed to the one who is the information source is guilty of securities fraud. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.28(2.1). C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 179, 182.]

MISBEHAVIOR IN OFFICE

misbehavior in office.See official misconduct under MISCONDUCT.

MISBRANDING

misbranding,n. The act or an instance of labeling one's product falsely or in a misleading way. • Misbranding is prohibited by federal and state law. [Cases: Food 15; Health 311; Products Liability 46.C.J.S. Products Liability § 54.] — misbrand,vb.

MISCARRIAGE

miscarriage. Spontaneous and involuntary premature expulsion of a nonviable fetus. — Also termed spontaneous abortion.

criminal miscarriage.Hist. See ABORTION(1).

MISCARRIAGE OF JUSTICE

miscarriage of justice.A grossly unfair outcome in a judicial proceeding, as when a defendant is convicted despite a lack of evidence on an essential element of the crime. — Also termed failure of justice.

MISCEGENATION

miscegenation (mi-sej-<<schwa>>-nay-sh<<schwa>>n). A marriage between persons of different races, formerly considered illegal in some jurisdictions. • In 1967, the U.S. Supreme Court held that laws banning interracial marriages are unconstitutional. Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1, 87 S.Ct. 1817 (1967). But for years, such laws technically remained on the books in some states. The last remaining state-law ban on interracial marriages was a provision in the Alabama constitution. The Alabama legislature voted to repeal the ban, subject to a vote of the state's citizens, in 1999; the repeal became effective in 2000. — Also termed mixed marriage; interracial marriage. [Cases: Criminal Law 45.45. C.J.S. Marriage § 8.]

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMIZED DEDUCTION

miscellaneous itemized deduction. See DEDUCTION.

MISCHARGE

mischarge. An erroneous jury instruction that may be grounds for reversing a verdict. — Also termed misdirection. [Cases: Trial 242. C.J.S. Trial § 583.]

mischievous (mis-ch<<schwa>>f). 1. A condition in which a person suffers a wrong or is under some hardship, esp. one that a statute seeks to remove or for which equity provides a remedy <this legislation seeks to eliminate the mischief of racially restrictive deed covenants>. 2. Injury or damage caused by a specific person or thing <the vandals were convicted of criminal mischief>. 3. The act causing such injury or damage <their mischief damaged the abbey>.

MISCHIEF RULE

mischievous rule. In statutory construction, the doctrine that a statute should be interpreted by first identifying the problem (or “mischief”) that the statute was designed to remedy and then adopting a construction that will suppress the problem and advance the remedy. — Also termed rule in Heydon's Case; purpose approach. Cf. GOLDEN RULE; PLAIN-MEANING RULE; EQUITY-OF-THE-STATUTE RULE . [Cases: Statutes 184. C.J.S. Statutes § 316.]

affirmative misconduct. 1. An affirmative act of misrepresentation or concealment of a material fact; intentional wrongful behavior. • Some courts hold that there must be an ongoing pattern of misrepresentation or false promises, as opposed to an isolated act of providing misinformation. 2. With respect to a claim of estoppel against the federal government, a misrepresentation or concealment of a material fact by a government employee — beyond a merely innocent or negligent misrepresentation. [Cases: Estoppel 62.2(3, 4). C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 174, 177–182.]

juror misconduct. A juror's violation of the court's charge or the law, committed either during trial or in deliberations after trial, such as (1) communicating about the case with outsiders, witnesses, attorneys, bailiffs, or judges, (2) bringing into the jury room information relating to the case but not in evidence, and (3) conducting experiments regarding theories of the case outside the court's presence. [Cases: Criminal Law 855; Federal Civil Procedure 1974; Trial 304–311. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1365; Trial §§ 775–799, 803–808, 813–814.] misconduct in office. See official misconduct.

official misconduct. A public officer's corrupt violation of assigned duties by malfeasance, misfeasance, or nonfeasance. — Also termed misconduct in office; misbehavior in office; malconduct in office; misdemeanor in office; corruption in office; official corruption; political corruption. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 121. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees wanton misconduct. An act, or a failure to act when there is a duty to do so, in reckless disregard of another's rights, coupled with the knowledge that injury will probably result. — Also termed wanton and reckless misconduct. [Cases: Negligence 275. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 98–103, 106–113.]

willful and wanton misconduct. Conduct committed with an intentional or reckless disregard for the safety of others, as by failing to exercise ordinary care to prevent a known danger or to discover a danger. — Also termed willful indifference to the safety of others. [Cases: Automobiles 181(1); Negligence 275. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 793–794, 796, 798–804, 807, 810; Negligence §§ 98–103, 106–113.]

willful misconduct. Misconduct committed voluntarily and intentionally. [Cases: Carriers 307(6.1); Negligence 275; Social Security and Public Welfare 388. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 98–103, 106–113; Social Security and Public Welfare § 220.]

“This term of art [willful misconduct] has defied definition, but it is clear that it means something more than negligence. Two classic examples of misconduct which will defeat the seaman's claim are intoxication and venereal disease.” Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 185–86 (3d ed. 1996).

willful misconduct of an employee. The deliberate disregard by an employee of the employer's interests, including its work rules and standards of conduct, justifying a denial of unemployment compensation if the employee is terminated for the misconduct. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 388. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare § 220.]

2. An attorney's dishonesty or attempt to persuade a court or jury by using deceptive or reprehensible methods. [Cases: Criminal Law 700(1); Federal Civil Procedure 1970; Trial 113. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 486, 490, 495–496, 1233–1234, 1236, 1252; Trial § 318.]

miscontinuance. A continuance erroneously ordered by a court.

miscreant (mis-kree-<<schwa>>nt). 1. A wrongdoer. 2. An apostate; an unbeliever.

MISDATE

misdate. To erroneously date (a document, etc.).

MISDELIVERY

misdelivery. Delivery not according to contractual specifications; esp. delivery to the wrong person or delivery of goods in a damaged condition. • This concept applies to contracts of carriage and contracts of sale, lease, etc., requiring delivery in some form. [Cases: Carriers 93; Shipping 117. C.J.S. Carriers § 408; Shipping § 272.]

misdemeanant (mis-d<<schwa>>-mee-n<<schwa>>nt), n. A person who has been convicted of a misdemeanor.

MISDEMEANOR

misdemeanor (mis-di-mee-n<<schwa>>r).1. A crime that is less serious than a felony and is usu. punishable by fine, penalty, forfeiture, or confinement (usu. for a brief term) in a place other than prison (such as a county jail). — Also termed minor crime; summary offense. Cf. FELONY(1). [Cases: Criminal Law 27. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 9–12.]

high misdemeanor.1.gross misdemeanor2. See serious misdemeanor.

serious misdemeanor.One of a class of misdemeanors having more severe penalties than most other misdemeanors. • Conduct rising to the level of a serious misdemeanor can, in some jurisdictions, be charged as either a felony or a misdemeanor. — Also termed high misdemeanor; indictable misdemeanor; penitentiary misdemeanor; aggravated misdemeanor.

treasonable misdemeanor.See TREASONABLE MISDEMEANOR.

2.Archaic. Any crime, including a felony.“A crime, or misdemeanor, is an act committed, or omitted, in violation of a public law, either forbidding or commanding it. This general definition comprehends both crimes and misdemeanors; which, properly speaking, are mere synonymous terms: though, in common usage, the word, ‘crimes,’ is made to denote such offences as are of a deeper and more atrocious dye; while smaller faults, and omissions of less consequence, are comprised under the gentler names of ‘misdemeanors’ only.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 5 (1769).

MISDEMEANOR IN OFFICE

misdemeanor in office.See official misconduct under MISCONDUCT.

MISDEMEANOR MANSLAUGHTER

misdemeanor manslaughter.See MANSLAUGHTER.

MISDEMEANOR-MANSLAUGHTER RULE

misdemeanor-manslaughter rule. The doctrine that a death occurring during the commission of a misdemeanor (or sometimes a nondangerous felony) is involuntary manslaughter. • Many states and the Model Penal Code have abolished this rule. Cf. FELONY-MURDER RULE. [Cases: Homicide 620–652.]

“Companion to the felony-murder rule is the so-called misdemeanor-manslaughter rule[:] ... Homicide resulting from the perpetration or attempted perpetration of an unlawful act, less than a dangerous felony, is manslaughter if the unlawful act is malum in se.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 108 (3d ed. 1982).

misdescription. 1. A contractual error or falsity that deceives, injures, or materially misleads one of the contracting parties. 2. A bailee's inaccurate identification, in a document of title, of goods received from the bailor. 3. An inaccurate legal description of land in a deed. [Cases: Deeds 37.C.J.S. Deeds § 53.]

MISDIRECTION

misdirection. See MISCHARGE.

mise (meez or mIz), n. [Law French] Hist. 1. Expenses incurred in litigation. 2. The general issue in a writ of right. • When a tenant pleads superior title to the plaintiff, the tenant is said to join the mise on the mere right. 3. A settlement; a compromise, as in the Mise of Lewes between Henry III and the rebelling barons.

MISE MONEY

mise money. Hist. Money paid by contract to purchase a privilege.

MISERABILE DEPOSITUM

miserabile depositum (miz-⟨schwa⟩-rab-⟨schwa⟩-lee di-poz-⟨schwa⟩-t⟨schwa⟩m). [Law Latin “a pitiful deposit”] Civil law. A deposit or bailment made in an emergency, as in a shipwreck, fire, or insurrection.

MISERERE

miserere (miz-⟨schwa⟩-reer-ee). [Latin] Hist. Have mercy. • This is the first phrase of the 51st psalm, used to test a person claiming benefit of clergy. See NECK VERSE.

MISERICORDIA

misericordia (miz-⟨schwa⟩-ri-kor-dee-⟨schwa⟩). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. Mercy. 2. An arbitrary fine as a punishment. 3. An exemption from a fine.

MISERICORDIA COMMUNIS

misericordia communis (miz-⟨schwa⟩-ri-kor-dee-⟨schwa⟩ k⟨schwa⟩-myoo-nis).

[Law Latin] Hist. A fine levied on a whole county.

MISFEASANCE

misfeasance (mis-fee-z<<schwa>>nts), n. 1. A lawful act performed in a wrongful manner. [Cases: Negligence 200. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 5–13, 15–20, 33, 64.] 2. More broadly, a transgression or trespass; MALFEASANCE. Cf. NONFEASANCE. — misfeasant,adj. — misfeasor,n.

MISFEASANCE IN PUBLIC OFFICE

misfeasance in public office.The tort of excessive, malicious, or negligent exercise of statutory powers by a public officer. — Also termed malfeasance. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 116. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 249–251, 254–258.]

mishering. See MISKERING.

MISHERSING

mishersing. See MISKERING.

MISJOINDER

misjoinder (mis-joyn-d<<schwa>>r).1. The improper union of parties in a civil case. See JOINDER. Cf. DISJOINDER; NONJOINDER. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 387; Parties 85, 89. C.J.S. Parties §§ 212, 217.] 2. The improper union of offenses in a criminal case. [Cases: Indictment and Information 126. C.J.S. Indictments and Informations § 159.]

miskenning (mis-ken-ing). [fr. French misw “wrong” + Saxon cennan “to declare”] 1. A wrongful summons. 2. A pleading mistake or irregularity.

“But every defeated plaintiff could be amerced ‘for a false claim.’ Incidentally too any falsehood ... that is, any fraudulent misuse of the machinery of the law, would be punished by imprisonment. Then again every default in appearance brought an amercement on the defaulter and his pledges. Every mistake in pleading, every miskening... brought an amercement on the pleader if the mistake was to be retrieved. A litigant who hoped to get to the end of his suit without an amercement must have been a sanguine man; for he was playing a game of forfeits.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 519 (2d ed. 1899).

miskering (mis-k<<schwa>>r-ing).Hist. Freedom or immunity from amercement. — Also termed abishering; abishersing; mishering; mishersing.

MISLAID PROPERTY

mislaid property. See PROPERTY.

MISLAY

mislay, vb. To deposit (property, etc.) in a place not afterwards recollected; to lose (property, etc.) by forgetting where it was placed. See mislaid property under PROPERTY.

MISLEADING

misleading, adj. (Of an instruction, direction, etc.) delusive; calculated to be misunderstood. [Cases: Fraud 13(1).]

misnomer (mis-noh-m<<schwa>>r). A mistake in naming a person, place, or thing, esp. in a legal instrument. • In federal pleading — as well as in most states — misnomer of a party can be corrected by an amendment, which will relate back to the date of the original pleading. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(3). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 382; Parties 94. C.J.S. Parties § 227.]

misperformance. A faulty attempt to discharge an obligation (esp. a contractual one). Cf. PERFORMANCE; NONPERFORMANCE.

MISPLEADING

mispleading. Pleading incorrectly. • A party who realizes that its pleading is incorrect can usually amend the pleading, as a matter of right, within a certain period, and can thereafter amend with the court's permission.

MISPRISION

misprision (mis-prizh-<<schwa>>n). 1. Concealment or nondisclosure of a serious crime by one who did not participate in the crime. [Cases: Compounding Offenses 3.5; Criminal Law 77. C.J.S. Compounding Offenses § 5; Criminal Law § 142.]

clerical misprision. A court clerk's mistake or fraud that is apparent from the record.

misprision of felony. Concealment or nondisclosure of someone else's felony. See 18 USCA § 4. [Cases: Compounding Offenses 1.1. C.J.S. Compounding Offenses §§ 1–3, 9, 13.]

“In fact, whatever the law may be, it is not the general custom to prosecute for misprision of felony, even where a person who knows of a felony is questioned by the police and refuses to make a statement. Indeed, Stephen, writing in the nineteenth century, regarded the offence as ‘practically obsolete’; and American courts have refused to recognise it as subsisting. But there have been four successful prosecutions in England during the last quarter-century” Glanville Williams, Criminal Law 424 (2d ed. 1961).

misprision of treason. Concealment or nondisclosure of someone else's treason.

negative misprision. The wrongful concealment of something that should be revealed <misprision of treason>.

positive misprision. The active commission of a wrongful act <sedition conduct against the government is positive misprision>.

2. Seditious conduct against the government. 3. An official's failure to perform the duties of public office. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 121. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 329–334.] 4. Misunderstanding; mistake. “The word ‘misprision’ has been employed with different meanings. While Blackstone thought of it as referring to a grave misdemeanor, it seems to have been used earlier to indicate the entire field of crime below the grade of treason or felony before the word ‘misdemeanor’ became the generally accepted label for this purpose. More recently it has been said: ‘Misprision is nothing more than a word used to describe a misdemeanor which does not possess a specific name.’ [United States v. Perlstein, 126 F.2d 789, 798 (3d Cir. 1942).] It has been associated with two specific offenses, and only these, from the earliest times. They are misprision of treason and misprision of felony, which consist of the criminal default of one in regard to the crime of another.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 572 (3d ed. 1982).

misprisor (mis-prī-z<<schwa>>r). One who commits misprision of felony.

MISREADING

misreading. An act of fraud in which a person incorrectly reads the contents of an instrument to an illiterate or blind person with the intent to deceitfully obtain that person's signature. [Cases: Fraud 4.5.]

MISRECITAL

misrecital. An incorrect statement of a factual matter in a contract, deed, pleading, or other instrument.

MISREPRESENTATION

misrepresentation, n. 1. The act of making a false or misleading assertion about something, usu. with the intent to deceive. • The word denotes not just written or spoken words but also any other conduct that amounts to a false assertion. [Cases: Fraud 9.] 2. The assertion so made; an assertion that does not accord with the facts. — Also termed false representation; (redundantly) false misrepresentation. Cf. REPRESENTATION(1). — misrepresent, vb.

fraudulent misrepresentation. A false statement that is known to be false or is made recklessly — without knowing or caring whether it is true or false — and that is intended to induce a party to detrimentally rely on it. — Also termed fraudulent representation; deceit. [Cases: Fraud 8.]

“A misrepresentation is fraudulent if the maker intends his assertion to induce a party to manifest his assent and the maker (a) knows or believes that the assertion is not in accord with the facts, or (b) does not have the confidence that he states or implies in the truth of the assertion, or (c) knows that he does not have the basis that he states or implies for the assertion.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 162(1) (1979).

innocent misrepresentation. A false statement that the speaker or writer does not know is false; a misrepresentation that, though false, was not made fraudulently. [Cases: Fraud 13(2).]

material misrepresentation. 1. Contracts. A false statement that is likely to induce a reasonable person to assent or that the maker knows is likely to induce the recipient to assent. [Cases: Contracts 94. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 136, 139–140, 156, 158–160, 170–171, 173–174.] 2. Torts. A false statement to which a reasonable person would attach importance in deciding how to act in the transaction in question or to which the maker knows or has reason to know that the recipient attaches some importance. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 538 (1979). [Cases: Fraud 18.]

“The materiality of a misrepresentation is determined from the viewpoint of the maker, while the justification of reliance is determined from the viewpoint of the recipient.... The requirement of materiality may be met in either of two ways. First, a misrepresentation is material if it would be likely to induce a reasonable person to manifest his assent. Second, it is material if the maker knows that for some special reason it is likely to induce the particular recipient to manifest his assent. There may be personal considerations that the recipient regards as important even though they would not be expected to affect others in his situation, and if the maker is aware of this the misrepresentation may be material even though it would not be expected to induce a reasonable person to make the proposed contract. One who preys upon another's known idiosyncrasies cannot complain if the contract is held voidable when he succeeds in what he is endeavoring to accomplish.... Although a nonfraudulent misrepresentation that is not material does not make the contract voidable under the rules stated in this Chapter, the recipient may have a claim to relief under other rules, such as those relating to breach of warranty.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 162 cmt. c (1979).

misrepresentation of source. See PASSING OFF.

negligent misrepresentation. A careless or inadvertent false statement in circumstances where care should have been taken. [Cases: Fraud 13(3).]

MISREPRESENTEE

misrepresentee. A person to whom a fact has been misrepresented.

MISREPRESENTER

misrepresenter. A person who misrepresents a fact to another. — Also spelled misrepresentor.

MISSILE DEFENSE AGENCY

Missile Defense Agency. A unit in the U.S. Department of Defense responsible for developing and deploying a missile-defense system capable of protecting the United States, its armed forces, and others from missile attack. — Abbr. MDA.

MISSILIA

missilia (mi-sI-lee-<<schwa>>), n. pl.[fr. Latin mittere “to throw”] Roman law. Money that the praetors, consuls, or wealthy individuals throw as gifts to people on the street; largesse.

MISSING-EVIDENCE RULE missing-evidence rule. The doctrine that, when a party fails at trial to present evidence that the party controls and that would have been proper to present, the jury is entitled to infer that the evidence would have been unfavorable to that party. [Cases: Evidence 74. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 165, 168.]

MISSING PERSON

missing person. 1. Someone whose whereabouts are unknown and, after a reasonable time, seem to be unascertainable. 2. Someone whose continuous and unexplained absence entitles the heirs to petition a court to declare the person dead and to divide up the person's property. See SEVEN-YEARS'-ABSENCE RULE . Cf. DISAPPEARED PERSON. [Cases: Death 2. C.J.S. Death §§ 8–14.]

MISSING SHIP

missing ship. Maritime law. A vessel that has been gone for an unreasonably long time, leading to the presumption that it is lost at sea; esp. a vessel that has been gone longer than the average time it takes a vessel to make a similar voyage in the same season.

MISSING-WITNESS RULE missing-witness rule. The doctrine that, when a party fails at trial to present a witness who is available only to that party and whose testimony would have been admissible, the jury is entitled to infer that the witness's testimony would have been unfavorable to that party. [Cases: Criminal Law 317; Evidence 77; Trial 211. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 705–706; Evidence §§ 169–173; Trial §§ 501–504, 568.]

MISSIO IN BONA

missio in bona (mis[h]-ee-oh in boh-n<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. 1. A praetor's grant to a creditor of individual items of the judgment debtor's property already in the creditor's possession. 2. A praetor's grant to a creditor in possession of the debtor's whole estate, as a form of execution of judgment.

MISSIO IN POSSESSIONEM

missio in possessionem (mis[h]-ee-oh in p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh-n<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. A praetor's grant to a creditor of the debtor's entire estate as a form of execution of judgment.

mistake, n. 1. An error, misconception, or misunderstanding; an erroneous belief. See ERROR. 2. Contracts. The situation in which either (1) the parties to a contract did not mean the same thing, or (2) at least one party had a belief that did not correspond to the facts or law. • As a result, the contract may be voidable. [Cases: Contracts 93. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 136, 147–148.]

“In this Restatement the word ‘mistake’ is used to refer to an erroneous belief. A party's erroneous belief is therefore said to be a ‘mistake’ of that party. The belief need not be an articulated one, and a party may have a belief as to a fact when he merely makes an assumption with respect to it, without being aware of alternatives. The word ‘mistake’ is not used here, as it is sometimes used in common speech, to refer to an improvident act, including the making of a contract, that is the result of such an erroneous belief. This usage is avoided here for the sake of clarity and consistency. Furthermore, the erroneous belief must relate to the facts as they exist at the time of the making of the contract. A party's prediction or judgment as to events to occur in the future, even if erroneous, is not a ‘mistake’ as that word is defined here. An erroneous belief as to the contents or effect of a writing that expresses the agreement is, however, a mistake. Mistake alone, in the sense in which the word is used here, has no legal consequences. The legal consequences of mistake in connection with the creation of contractual liability are determined by [substantive rules].” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 151 cmt. a (1979).

“The word mistake is generally used in the law of contracts to refer to an erroneous belief — ‘a belief that is not in accord with the facts.’ To avoid confusion, it should not be used, as it sometimes is in common speech, to refer to an improvident act, such as the making of a contract, that results from such an erroneous belief. Nor should it be used, as it sometimes is by courts and writers, to refer to what is more properly called a misunderstanding, a situation in which two parties attach different meanings to their language.” E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 9.2, at 619 (3d ed. 1999) (quoting Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 151 (1979)).

basic mistake. A mistake of fact or of law constituting the basis on which a transaction rests.

bilateral mistake. See mutual mistake (1). common mistake. See mutual mistake (2).

essential mistake. Contracts. A mistake serious enough that no real consent could have existed, so that there was no real agreement. [Cases: Contracts 93. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 136, 147–148.]

inessential mistake. See unessential mistake.

mistake of fact. 1. A mistake about a fact that is material to a transaction; any mistake other than a mistake of law. — Also termed error in fact; error of fact. [Cases: Contracts 93. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 136, 147–148.] 2. The defense asserting that a criminal defendant acted from an innocent misunderstanding of fact rather than from a criminal purpose.

mistake of law. 1. A mistake about the legal effect of a known fact or situation. — Also termed error in law; error of law. [Cases: Contracts 93(4). C.J.S. Contracts § 150.] 2. The defense asserting that a defendant did not understand the criminal consequences of certain conduct. • This defense is generally not as effective as a mistake of fact.

mutual mistake. 1. A mistake in which each party misunderstands the other's intent. — Also termed bilateral mistake. [Cases: Contracts 93(5). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 149, 155.] 2. A mistake that is shared and relied on by both parties to a contract. • A court will often revise or nullify a contract based on a mutual mistake about a material term. — Also termed (in sense 2) common mistake. [Cases: Contracts 93(5); Reformation of Instruments 19. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 149, 155; Reformation of Instruments §§ 29–30.]

“The term ‘common mistake’ is more usually, but less grammatically, referred to as ‘mutual mistake’. Cheshire and Fifoot on Contract have made a heroic effort to introduce and establish the more correct term, and it does seem to be gaining ground. However, the beginner is warned that the term ‘mutual mistake’ is nearly always used by the Courts to mean what we here call ‘common mistake’.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 190 n.7 (3d ed. 1981).

nonessential mistake. See unessential mistake.

unessential mistake. Contracts. A mistake that does not relate to the nature of the contents of an agreement, but only to some external circumstance, so that the mistake has no effect on the validity of the agreement. — Also termed inessential mistake; nonessential mistake; collateral mistake. [Cases: Contracts 93. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 136, 147–148.]

unilateral mistake. A mistake by only one party to a contract. • A unilateral mistake is generally not as likely to be a ground for voiding the contract as is a mutual mistake. [Cases: Contracts 93. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 136, 147–148.]

mistakenly induced revocation. See DEPENDENT RELATIVE REVOCATION.

MISTERY

mistry (mis-t<<schwa>>r-ee). Hist. A business; a trade. — Also spelled mystery.

MISTRIAL

mistrial. 1. A trial that the judge brings to an end, without a determination on the merits, because of a procedural error or serious misconduct occurring during the proceedings. [Cases: Criminal Law 867; Federal Civil Procedure 1951; Trial 18. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1388–1390; Trial §§ 91–92.] 2. A trial that ends inconclusively because the jury cannot agree on a verdict. — Also termed abortive trial. [Cases: Criminal Law 867. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1388–1390.]

MISUNDERSTANDING

misunderstanding. 1. A flawed interpretation of meaning or significance. 2. A situation in which the words or acts of two people suggest assent, but one or both of them in fact intend something different from what the words or acts express. 3. A quarrel; an instance of usu. mild wrangling.

MISUSE

misuse, n. 1. Products liability. A defense alleging that the plaintiff used the product in an improper, unintended, or unforeseeable manner. [Cases: Products Liability 27. C.J.S. Products Liability §§ 45–47.] 2. Patents. The use of a patent either to improperly extend the granted monopoly to nonpatented goods or to violate antitrust laws. [Cases: Patents 283(1). C.J.S. Patents §§ 436–439.]

MISUSER

misuser. An abuse of a right or office, as a result of which the person having the right might lose it <it is an act of misuser to accept a bribe>. Cf. USER. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 64. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees § 132.]

mitch. See MICHE.

MITIGATE

mitigate (mit-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-gayt), vb. To make less severe or intense <the fired employee mitigated her damages for wrongful termination by accepting a new job>. Cf. MILITATE. — mitigation, n. — mitigatory (mit-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-g⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-tor-ee), adj.

MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCE

mitigating circumstance. See CIRCUMSTANCE.

MITIGATION COST

mitigation cost. See COST(1).

MITIGATION-OF-DAMAGES DOCTRINE

mitigation-of-damages doctrine. The principle requiring a plaintiff, after an injury or breach of contract, to make reasonable efforts to alleviate the effects of the injury or breach. • If the defendant can show that the plaintiff failed to mitigate damages, the plaintiff's recovery may be reduced. — Also termed avoidable-consequences doctrine. [Cases: Damages 62. C.J.S. Damages §§ 46–52, 168.]

MITIGATION OF PUNISHMENT

mitigation of punishment. Criminal law. A reduction in punishment due to mitigating circumstances that reduce the criminal's level of culpability, such as the existence of no prior convictions. See mitigating circumstance under CIRCUMSTANCE.

MITIGATOR

mitigator. A factor tending to show that a criminal defendant, though guilty, is less culpable than the act alone would indicate <the fact that he was coerced into taking part in the robbery may have been a mitigator in the minds of the jurors>. Cf. AGGRAVATOR.

MITIORI SENSU

mitiori sensu. See IN MITIORI SENSU.

MITTER AVANT

mitter avant (mit-⟨schwa⟩r ⟨schwa⟩-vant), vb. [Law French] Hist. To present or produce (evidence, etc.) to a court.

MITTIMUS

mittimus (mit-⟨schwa⟩-m⟨schwa⟩s). [Law Latin “we send”] Hist. 1. A court order or warrant directing a jailer to detain a person until ordered otherwise; COMMITMENT(4). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 462, 463.] 2. A certified transcript of a prisoner's conviction or sentencing proceedings. 3. A writ directing the transfer of records from one court to another. Pl. mittimuses.

MIXED LARCENY

mixed larceny.See LARCENY.

MIXED LAW

mixed law.A law concerning both persons and property.

MIXED MARRIAGEMIXED-MOTIVE DOCTRINE

mixed-motive doctrine.Employment law. The principle that, when the evidence in an employment-discrimination case shows that the complained-of employment action was based in part on a nondiscriminatory reason and in part on a discriminatory reason, the plaintiff must show that discrimination was a motivating factor for the employment action and, if the plaintiff makes that showing, then the defendant must show that it would have taken the same action without regard to the discriminatory reason. [Cases: Civil Rights 1137. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 34, 39–40.]

MIXED NUISANCE

mixed nuisance.See NUISANCE.

MIXED POLICY

mixed policy.See INSURANCE POLICY.

mixed property.See PROPERTY.

MIXED QUESTION

mixed question. 1.MIXED QUESTION OF LAW AND FACT. 2. An issue involving conflicts of foreign and domestic law.

MIXED QUESTION OF LAW AND FACT mixed question of law and fact.An issue that is neither a pure question of fact nor a pure question of law. • Mixed questions of law and fact are typically resolved by juries. — Often shortened to mixed question. — Also termed mixed question of fact and law. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 781; Appeal and Error 842(9); Criminal Law 735;

Federal Courts 754; Trial 137. C.J.S. Appeal and Error § 778; Criminal Law §§ 998, 1273, 1275; Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 227; Trial § 336.]

“Many issues in a lawsuit involve elements of both law and fact. Whether these be referred to as mixed questions of law and fact, or legal inferences from the facts, or the application of law to the facts, there is substantial authority that they are not protected by the ‘clearly erroneous’ rule and are freely reviewable. This principle has been applied to antitrust violations, bankruptcy, contracts, copyright, taxation, and to other areas of the law.” 9A Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2589, at 608–11 (2d ed. 1995).

MOBILE GOODS

mobile goods. See GOODS.

MOBILE–SIERRA DOCTRINE

Mobile–Sierra doctrine. The principle that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission may not grant a rate increase to a natural-gas producer unless the producer's contract authorizes a rate increase, or unless the existing rate is so low that it may adversely affect the public interest (as by threatening the continued viability of the public utility to continue its service). United Gas Pipe Line Co. v. Mobile Gas Serv. Corp., 350 U.S. 332, 76 S.Ct. 373 (1956); Federal Power Comm'n v. Sierra Pac. Power Co., 350 U.S. 348, 76 S.Ct. 368 (1956). — Also termed Sierra–Mobile doctrine. [Cases: Gas 14.4(1).]

mobilia (moh-bil-ee-<<schwa>>), n. pl. [Latin “movables”] Roman law. Movable things. • The term primarily refers to inanimate objects but sometimes also refers to slaves and animals.

MOBILIA SEQUUNTUR PERSONAM

mobilia sequuntur personam (moh-bil-ee-<<schwa>> si-kw*<<schwa>>n-t<<schwa>>r p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>*m). [Latin] Int'l law. Movable things follow the person — i.e., the law of the person. • This is the general principle that rights of ownership and transfer of movable property are determined by the law of the owner's domicile. [Cases: Property 6; Taxation 98.C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 66–70, 74, 77, 80; Taxation §§ 153–157, 160, 283.]

“The maxim mobilia sequuntur personam is the exception rather than the rule, and is probably to be confined to certain special classes of general assignments such as marriage settlements and devolutions on death and bankruptcy.” Handel v. Slatford, 1953 Q.B. 248, 257 (Eng. C.A.).

“Under the influence of Savigny many Continental systems in the mid-nineteenth century led the way for Anglo-American law in limiting the operation of the doctrine of mobilia sequuntur personam to universal assignments of movables, adopting for particular assignments the single principle of the lex situs of the movable.” R.H. Graveson, Conflict of Laws 457 (7th ed. 1974).

MOCK TRIAL

mock trial. 1. A fictitious trial organized to allow law students, or sometimes lawyers, to practice the techniques of trial advocacy. 2. A fictitious trial, arranged by a litigant's attorney, to assess trial strategy, to estimate the case's value or risk, and to evaluate the case's strengths and weaknesses. • In this procedure, people from the relevant jury pool are hired to sit as mock jurors who, after a condensed presentation of both sides, deliberate and reach a verdict (often while being observed by the participants behind a one-way glass). The jurors may later be asked specific questions about various arguments, techniques, and other issues. Because the mock jurors usu. do not know which side has hired them, their candid views are thought to be helpful in formulating trial strategies. Cf. MOOT COURT.

MODAL LEGACY

modal legacy. See LEGACY.

MODE

mode. A manner of doing something <mode of proceeding> <mode of process>.

model act. A statute drafted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and proposed as guideline legislation for the states to borrow from or adapt to suit their individual needs. • Examples of model acts include the Model Employment Termination Act and the Model Punitive Damages Act. Cf. UNIFORM LAW.

MODEL CODE OF PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY

Model Code of Professional Responsibility. A set of ethical guidelines for lawyers, organized in the form of canons, disciplinary rules, and ethical considerations. • Published by the ABA in 1969, this code has been replaced in most states by the Model Rules of Professional Conduct. MODIFICATION modification. 1. A change to something; an alteration . [Cases: Contracts 236. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 407, 409–411.] 2. A qualification or limitation of something . 3. Parliamentary law. A change in a motion that its mover initiates or accepts, usu. before the chair has stated the motion. • The mover controls a motion only until the chair states the question, after which the motion belongs to the assembly and the mover cannot modify it without the assembly's permission. See request for permission to modify a motion under REQUEST.

MODIFICATION ORDER

modification order. Family law. A post-divorce order that changes the terms of child support, custody, visitation, or alimony. • A modification order may be agreed to by the parties or may be ordered by the court. The party wishing to modify an existing order must show a material change in circumstances from the time when the order sought to be modified was entered. See CHANGE IN CIRCUMSTANCES .

MODIUS

modus (moh-dee-<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin “a measure”] Hist. 1. A bushel. 2. An uncertain measure, as of land.

MODO ET FORMA

modo et forma (moh-doh et for-m<<schwa>>). [Latin] In manner and form. • In common-law pleading, this phrase began the conclusion of a traverse. Its object was to put the burden on the party whose pleading was being traversed not only to prove the allegations of fact but also to establish as correct the manner and form of the pleading. — Also termed manner and form.

MODUS

modus (moh-d<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin “mode”] 1. Criminal procedure. The part of a charging instrument describing the manner in which an offense was committed. 2. Roman & civil law. Mode; manner; consideration; esp., the manner in which a gift, bequest, servitude, etc. is to be employed. 3. Eccles. law. See DE MODO DECIMANDI . Cf. MODUS OPERANDI.

MODUS DECIMANDI

modus vacandi (moh-d<<schwa>>s v<<schwa>>-kan-dI). [Law Latin] Hist. The manner of vacating. • This term was often used in determining the circumstances under which a vassal surrendered an estate to a lord.

MODUS VIVENDI

modus vivendi (moh-d<<schwa>>s vi-ven-dIor -dee). [Latin “means of living (together)”] Int'l law. A temporary, provisional arrangement concluded between subjects of international law and giving rise to binding obligations on the parties.

“[Modus vivendi] is an instrument of toleration looking towards a settlement, by preparing for or laying down the basis of a method of living together with a problem or by bridging over some difficulty pending a permanent settlement. Normally it is used for provisional and interim arrangements which ultimately are to be replaced by a formal agreement of a more permanent and detailed character. There is no clear distinction of a modus vivendi from other treaties. The most distinguishing feature is its provisional character; nevertheless a modus vivendi may be exercised for an indefinite period of time if it is prolonged sine die or if a definitive solution to the problem cannot be reached by treaty. Some 'temporary' arrangements have actually turned out to be quite durable." Walter Rudolf, "Modus Vivendi," in 3 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 443 (1997).

mooble (myoo-b<<schwa>>l), adj. [Law French] Hist. Movable, as in the phrase biens meubles ("movable goods").

[Cases: Mental Health 3.1.] — monomaniacal, adj. — monomaniac, n.

MONOPOLIUM

monopolium (mon-<<schwa>>-poh-lee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin fr. Greek monopolion “a selling alone”] Hist. The sole power of sale; a monopoly.

monopolization,n. The act or process of obtaining a monopoly. • In federal antitrust law, monopolization is an offense with two elements: (1) the possession of monopoly power — that is, the power to fix prices and exclude competitors — within the relevant market, and (2) the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power, as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historical accident. United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 86 S.Ct. 1698 (1966). [Cases: Monopolies 12(1.3). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 28–37, 52, 64–66.] — monopolize,vb. — monopolistic,adj. — monopolist,n.

attempted monopolization.The effort to monopolize any part of interstate or foreign commerce, consisting in (1) a specific intent to control prices or destroy competition in the relevant market, (2) predatory or anticompetitive conduct, and (3) a “dangerous probability” of success in achieving monopoly in the relevant market.

MONOPOLY

monopoly,n. 1. Control or advantage obtained by one supplier or producer over the commercial market within a given region. Cf. OLIGOPOLY. 2. The market condition existing when only one economic entity produces a particular product or provides a particular service. • The term is now commonly applied also to situations that approach but do not strictly meet this definition. [Cases: Monopolies 12(1.3). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 28–37, 52, 64–66.]

“[Ninety per cent] is enough to constitute a monopoly; it is doubtful whether sixty or sixty-four per cent is enough; and certainly thirty-three per cent is not.” United States v. Aluminum Co. of Am., 148 F.2d 416, 424 (2d Cir. 1945)(Hand, J.).

hands of a single person or corporation, or a few persons or corporations acting together, that they have power, for all practical purposes, to control the prices of a commodity and thus to suppress competition. In brief, a monopoly is the practical suppression of effective business competition which thereby creates a power to control prices to the public harm.” 54A Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies, Restraints of Trade, and Unfair Trade Practices § 781, at 107 (1996).

bilateral monopoly.A hypothetical market condition in which there is only one buyer and one seller, resulting in transactional delays because either party can hold out for a better deal without fearing that the other party will turn to a third party.

legal monopoly.The exclusive right granted by government to business to provide utility services that are, in turn, regulated by the government. [Cases: Public Utilities 113. C.J.S. Public Utilities §§ 4, 69, 71.]

natural monopoly.A monopoly resulting from a circumstance over which the monopolist has no power, as when the market for a product is so limited that only one plant is needed to meet demand.

3.Patents. The exclusive right of a patentee to make, use, sell, offer for sale, or import an invention for a certain period, subject to the rights of the owners of other patents that would be infringed. [Cases: Patents 185.C.J.S. Patents § 10.][T]he statute of monopolies, 21 Jac. I. c. 3, allows a royal patent of privilege to be granted for fourteen years to any inventor of a new manufacture, for the sole working or making of the same; by virtue whereof a temporary property becomes vested in the patentee.” William Blackstone, 2 Commentaries on the Laws of England 407 (1766).

MONOPOLY LEVERAGING

monopoly leveraging.A theory of liability holding that a party violates the antitrust laws when it exploits its monopoly power in one market to gain a competitive advantage in another market.

MONOPOLY POWER

monopoly power.The power to control prices or to exclude competition. • The size of the market share is a primary determinant of whether monopoly power exists. [Cases: Monopolies 12(1.3). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 28–37, 52, 64–66.]

monopsony (m<<schwa>>-nop-s<<schwa>>-nee), n. A market situation in which one buyer controls the market. — monopsonistic,adj.

“Monopsony is often thought of as the flip side of monopoly. A monopolist is a seller with no rivals; a monopsonist is a buyer with no rivals. A monopolist has power over price exercised by limiting output. A monopsonist also has power over price, but this power is exercised by limiting aggregate purchases. Monopsony injures efficient allocation by reducing the quantity of the input product or service below the efficient level.” Lawrence A. Sullivan & Warren S. Grimes, The Law of Antitrust: An Integrated Handbook 137–38 (2000).

MONROE DOCTRINE

Monroe Doctrine.The principle that the United States will allow no intervention or domination by any non-American nation in the Western Hemisphere. • This principle, which has some recognition in international law (though not as a formal doctrine), was first announced by President James Monroe in 1823.

“The Monroe doctrine is a policy which the United States has followed in her own interest more or less consistently for more than a century, and in itself is not contrary to international law, though possible applications of it might easily be so. But it certainly is not a rule of international law. It is comparable to policies such as the ‘balance of power’ in Europe, or the British policies of maintaining the independence of Belgium or the security of our sea-routes to the East, or the former Japanese claim to something like a paramount influence over developments in the Far East. Apart from other objections, it is impossible to regard as a rule of law a doctrine which the United States claims the sole right to interpret, which she interprets in different senses at different times, and which she applies only as and when she chooses. Nor is the doctrine, as Article 21 of the Covenant described it, a ‘regional understanding’, for the other states of the region concerned, that is to say, the Continent of America, have never been parties to it and indeed have often resented it.” J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 314 (5th ed. 1955).

MONSTRANS DE DROIT

monstrans de droit (mon-str<<schwa>>nz d<<schwa>> droyt). [Law French] Hist. A manifestation of right as a method of obtaining restitution from the Crown. • It was replaced by the writ of right. Currently, restitution is obtained by an ordinary action against the government.

monstraverunt (mon-str<<schwa>>-veer<<schwa>>nt). [Latin “they have showed”] Hist. A writ of relief for tenants of ancient demesne who were distrained by their lord to do more than the tenure required. — Also termed writ of monstraverunt.

“The little writ serves the turn of a man who claims land according to the custom of the manor; but the tenants of whom we are speaking are protected, and protected collectively, against any increase of their services. This is very plain when the manor is in the hands of a mesne lord. If he attempts to increase the customary services, some of the tenants, acting on behalf of all, will go to the royal chancery and obtain a writ against him. Such a writ begins with the word Monstraverunt. The king addresses the lord: — ‘A, B and C, men of your manor of X, which is of the ancient demesne of the crown of England, have shown us that you exact from them other customs and services than those which they owe, and which their ancestors did in the time when that manor was in the hands of our predecessors, kings of England; therefore we command you to cease from such exactions, otherwise we shall order our sheriff to interfere.’ ” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 388 (2d ed. 1898).

MONTES PIETATIS

moot court. 1. A fictitious court held usu. in law schools to argue moot or hypothetical cases, esp. at the appellate level. 2. A practice session for an appellate argument in which a lawyer presents the argument to other lawyers, who first act as judges by asking questions and who later provide criticism on the argument. — Also termed practice court. Cf. MOCK TRIAL.

MOOT MAN

moot man.Hist. A person who argued cases in the Inns of Court.

MOOTNESS DOCTRINE

mootness doctrine.The principle that American courts will not decide moot cases — that is, cases in which there is no longer any actual controversy. Cf. RIPENESS. [Cases: Action 6; Appeal and Error 781; Federal Courts 12.1. C.J.S. Actions §§ 38–45; Appeal and Error § 33.]

mop. See STATUTE FAIR.

MORA

mora (mor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩), n. [Latin] Roman law. Willful delay or default in fulfilling a legal obligation. • A creditor or debtor in mora could be required to pay interest on any money owed.

“The word mora means delay or default. In its technical sense it means a culpable delay in making or accepting performance.... The definition includes both mora debitoris and mora creditoris. In French law and other civil law systems mora debitoris seems (sometimes, if not always) to occur as a mean term between failure to perform a duty timeously and liability for breach....Mora usually attaches to a debtor, but it may also attach to a creditor who fails to accept performance duly tendered” R.W. Lee, An Introduction to Roman–Dutch Law 445 (4th ed. 1946).

“Mora. This was wrongful failure to discharge a legal obligation on demand made at a fitting time and place. It must be wilful: failure to appear, by mistake, or in a bona fide belief that there was no obligatio, or doubt about it, or by mishap, did not suffice to put a debtor in mora.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 338 (2d ed. 1939).

mora (mor-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A moor; unprofitable ground.

MORAL ABSOLUTISM

moral absolutism.The view that a person's action can always properly be seen as right or wrong, regardless of the situation or the consequences. — Also termed ethical absolutism; objective ethics. Cf. MORAL RELATIVISM.

MORAL CERTAINTY moral certainty.Absolute certainty. • Moral certainty is not required to sustain a criminal conviction. See REASONABLE DOUBT; proof beyond a reasonable doubt under PROOF. [Cases: Criminal Law 561(1). C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1108.]

MORAL COERCION

moral coercion.See UNDUE INFLUENCE(1).

MORAL CONSIDERATION

moral consideration. See good consideration under CONSIDERATION(1).

MORAL DEPRAVITY

MORAL DUTY

moral duty. See DUTY(1).

MORAL EVIDENCE

moral evidence. See EVIDENCE.

MORAL FRAUD

moral fraud. See actual fraud under FRAUD.

MORAL HAZARD moral hazard. See HAZARD(2).

morality. 1. Conformity with recognized rules of correct conduct. 2. The character of being virtuous, esp. in sexual matters.

“[T]he terms ‘morality’ and ‘immorality’ ... are understood to have a sexual connotation. In fact, the terms ‘ethics’ and ‘morals’ are no longer interchangeable in everyday speech. A governmental official arraigned on a ‘morals charge’ will be accused of something quite different from one accused of an ‘ethics violation.’” William P. Golding, Philosophy of Law 55 (1975).

3. A system of duties; ethics.

private morality. A person's ideals, character, and private conduct, which are not valid governmental concerns if the individual is to be considered sovereign over body and mind and if the need to protect the individual's physical or moral well-being is insufficient to justify governmental intrusion. • In his essay On Liberty (1859), John Stuart Mill distinguished between conduct or ideals that affect only the individual from conduct that may do harm to others. Mill argued that governmental intrusion is justified only to prevent harm to others, not to influence a person's private morality.

public morality. 1. The ideals or general moral beliefs of a society. 2. The ideals or actions of an individual to the extent that they affect others.

MORAL LAW

moral law. A collection of principles defining right and wrong conduct; a standard to which an action must conform to be right or virtuous.

“It quite often happens that the moral law disapproves of something which the secular permits as a concession to human frailty.” Patrick Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals 78 (1968).

MORAL NECESSITY

moral necessity. See NECESSITY.

MORAL OBLIGATION

moral obligation. See OBLIGATION.

MORAL PERSON

moral person. See artificial person under PERSON(3).

MORAL RELATIVISM

moral relativism. The view that there are no absolute or constant standards of right and wrong. — Also termed ethical relativism; subjective ethics. Cf. MORAL ABSOLUTISM.

moral right. (usu. pl.) Copyright. The right of an author or artist, based on natural-law principles, to guarantee the integrity of a creation despite any copyright or property-law right of its owner. • Moral rights include rights of (1) attribution (also termed “paternity”): the right to be given credit and to claim credit for a work, and to deny credit if the work is changed; (2) integrity: the right to ensure that the work is not changed without the artist's consent; (3) publication: the right not to reveal a work before its creator is satisfied with it; and (4) retraction: the right to renounce a work and withdraw it from sale or display. Moral rights are recognized by law in much of Europe, but very little in the United States. Cf. INTEGRITY RIGHT; ATTRIBUTION RIGHT. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 101.C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 102–104.]

“The recognition of moral rights is founded in the notion that works of art belong to their creators in a way that transcends the sale or transfer of the work to a new owner, because the artist has imbued the work with her personality.” Eric M. Brooks, “Titled” Justice: Site-Specific Art and Moral Rights After U.S. Adherence to the Berne Convention, 77 Cal. L. Rev. 1431, 1434 (1989).

“Moral rights protect an author's non-pecuniary or non-economic interests. The 1988 [Copyright] Act provides authors and directors with the right to be named when a work is copied or communicated (the right of attribution), the right not to be named as the author of a work which one did not create (the right to object against false attribution), and the right to control the form of the work (the right of integrity).” Lionel Bently & Brad Sherman, Intellectual Property Law 233 (2001).

MORAL SUASION

moral suasion. The act or effort of persuading by appeal to principles of morality.

MORAL TURPITUDE

moral turpitude. 1. Conduct that is contrary to justice, honesty, or morality. • In the area of legal ethics, offenses involving moral turpitude — such as fraud or breach of trust — traditionally make a person unfit to practice law. — Also termed moral depravity. 2. Military law. Any conduct for which the applicable punishment is a dishonorable discharge or confinement not less than one year.

“Moral turpitude means, in general, shameful wickedness — so extreme a departure from ordinary standards of honest, good morals, justice, or ethics as to be shocking to the moral sense of the community. It has also been defined as an act of baseness, vileness, or depravity in the private and social duties which one person owes to another, or to society in general, contrary to the accepted and customary rule of right and duty between people.” 50 Am. Jur. 2d Libel and Slander § 165, at 454 (1995).

MORAL WRONG

moral wrong. See WRONG.

MORAL-WRONG DOCTRINE

moral-wrong doctrine. The doctrine that if a wrongdoer acts on a mistaken understanding of the facts, the law will not exempt the wrongdoer from culpability when, if the facts had been as the actor believed them to be, his or her conduct would nevertheless be immoral.

MORANDAE SOLUTIONIS CAUSA morandae solutionis causa (m<<schwa>>-ran-dee s<<schwa>>-loo-shee-oh-nis kaw-z<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. For the purpose of delaying payment.

MORATORIUM

moratorium (mor-<<schwa>>-tor-ee-<<schwa>>m). 1. An authorized postponement, usu. a lengthy one, in the deadline for paying a debt or performing an obligation. 2. The period of this delay. 3. The suspension of a specific activity. Pl. moratoriums; moratoria.

MORATORY

moratory (mor-<<schwa>>-tor-ee), adj. Of or relating to a delay; esp. of or relating to a moratorium.

MORATORY DAMAGES

moratory damages. See DAMAGES.

MORATORY INTEREST

moratory interest. See prejudgment interest under INTEREST(3).

MORE BURGI

more burgi (mor-ee b<<schwa>>r-jI). [Law Latin] Hist. According to the custom in burgage tenure. See BURGAGE(2).

MORE OR LESS

more or less.(Of a quantity) larger or smaller. • This phrase often appears in deeds <the property contains 120 acres, more or less> and sometimes in contracts <seller's wheat field will produce 50 bushels per acre, more or less>. It qualifies a good-faith representation of quantity. By using the phrase, the parties mutually acknowledge that the true circumstances may differ from what the parties believe they are when the contract is made, and accept a risk that the true quantity will be slightly different. When the qualifying phrase is present, neither party can recover for a surplus or deficiency.

MORGANATIC MARRIAGE

morganatic marriage.See MARRIAGE(1).

MORGANGIVA

morgangiva (mor-gan-j<<schwa>>-v<<schwa>>), n. [Law Latin “morning gift” from Old Norse] Hist. A gift made to the bride on the morning after the wedding; a type of dowry. — Also spelled morgangina.

MORGAN NICK ALERT

Morgan Nick Alert.See AMBER ALERT.

MORGAN PRESUMPTION

Morgan presumption.A presumption that shifts the burden of proof by requiring the person against whom it operates to produce sufficient evidence to outweigh the evidence that supports the presumed fact, as in requiring a criminal defendant who was arrested while in possession of an illegal substance — and is thereby presumed to have knowingly possessed it — to produce sufficient evidence to entitle the jury to find that the defendant's evidence outweighs the evidence of knowing possession. See Edmund M. Morgan, Instructing the Jury Upon Presumptions and Burdens of Proof, 47 Harv. L. Rev. 59, 82–83 (1933). Cf. THAYER PRESUMPTION. [Cases: Controlled Substances 68; Criminal Law 324; Evidence 85. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 695; Evidence § 135.]

mors naturalis (morz nach-<<schwa>>-ray-lis). See natural death under DEATH.

MORTALITY FACTOR

mortality factor. Insurance. In life-insurance ratemaking, an estimate of the average number of deaths that will occur each year at each specific age, calculated by using an actuarial table. • The mortality factor is one element that a life insurer uses to calculate premium rates. See ACTUARIAL TABLE; PREMIUM RATE. Cf. INTEREST FACTOR; RISK FACTOR. [Cases: Insurance 1542(1). C.J.S. Insurance § 66.]

MORTALITY TABLE

mortality table. See ACTUARIAL TABLE.

MORT CIVILE

mort civile (mor[t] see-veel). [Law French] See civil death under DEATH.

MORT D'ANCESTOR

mort d'ancestor (mor[t] dan-ses-t<<schwa>>r). [Law French “death of an ancestor”] Hist. An assize founded on the death of an ancestor. — Also termed (in Scots law) briefe of mortancestry.

mortgage (mor-gij), n. 1. A conveyance of title to property that is given as security for the payment of a debt or the performance of a duty and that will become void upon payment or performance according to the stipulated terms. — Also termed (archaically) dead pledge. [Cases: Mortgages 1. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 2–6.] 2. A lien against property that is granted to secure an obligation (such as a debt) and that is extinguished upon payment or performance according to stipulated terms. [Cases: Mortgages 145. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 198, 200.] 3. An instrument (such as a deed or contract) specifying the terms of such a transaction. 4. Loosely, the loan on which such a transaction is based. 5. The mortgagee's rights conferred by such a transaction. 6. Loosely, any real-property security transaction, including a deed of trust. — Abbr. M. — mortgage, vb.

“The chief distinction between a mortgage and a pledge is that by a mortgage the general title is transferred to the mortgagee, subject to be revested by performance of the condition; while by a pledge the pledgor retains the general title in himself, and parts with the possession for a special purpose. By a mortgage the title is transferred; by a pledge, the possession.” Leonard A. Jones, A Treatise on the Law of Mortgages § 4, at 5–6 (5th ed. 1908).

adjustable-rate mortgage. A mortgage in which the lender can periodically adjust the mortgage's interest rate in accordance with fluctuations in some external market index. — Abbr. ARM. — Also termed variable-rate mortgage; flexible-rate mortgage.

all-inclusive mortgage. See wraparound mortgage.

amortized mortgage. A mortgage in which the mortgagor pays the interest as well as a portion of the principal in the periodic payment. • At maturity, the periodic payments will have completely repaid the loan. — Also termed self-liquidating mortgage. See AMORTIZATION(1). Cf. straight mortgage.

balloon-payment mortgage. A mortgage requiring periodic payments for a specified time and a lump-sum payment of the outstanding balance at maturity.

blanket mortgage. A mortgage covering two or more properties that are pledged to support a debt.

bulk mortgage. 1. A mortgage of personal property in bulk; a pledge of an aggregate of goods in one location. 2. A mortgage of more than one real-estate parcel.

chattel mortgage (chat-<<schwa>>l). A mortgage on goods purchased on installment, whereby the seller transfers title to the buyer but retains a lien securing the unpaid balance. • Chattel mortgages have generally been replaced by security agreements, which are governed by Article 9 of the UCC. Cf. retail installment contract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Chattel Mortgages 1.]

closed-end mortgage. A mortgage that does not permit either prepayment or additional borrowing against the collateral. Cf. open-end mortgage. — Also termed closed mortgage.

closed mortgage. See closed-end mortgage.

collateral mortgage. Civil law. A mortgage securing a promissory note pledged as collateral security for a principal obligation.

common-law mortgage. See deed of trust under DEED.

consolidated mortgage. A mortgage created by combining two or more mortgages.

construction mortgage. A mortgage used to finance a construction project.

contingent-interest mortgage. A mortgage whose interest rate is directly related to the economic performance of the pledged property.

conventional mortgage. A mortgage, not backed by government insurance, by which the borrower transfers a lien or title to the lending bank or other financial institution. • These mortgages, which feature a fixed periodic payment of principal and interest throughout the mortgage term, are typically used for home financing. — Also termed conventional loan.

direct-reduction mortgage. An amortized mortgage in which the principal and interest payments are paid at the same time — usu. monthly in equal amounts — with interest being computed on the remaining balance. — Abbr. DRM.

dry mortgage.A mortgage that creates a lien on property but does not impose on the mortgagor any personal liability for any amount that exceeds the value of the premises.

equitable mortgage.A transaction that has the intent but not the form of a mortgage, and that a court of equity will treat as a mortgage. Cf. technical mortgage.

“Courts of equity are not governed by the same principles as courts of law in determining whether a mortgage has been created, and generally, whenever a transaction resolves itself into a security, or an offer or attempt to pledge land as security for a debtor liability, equity will treat it as a mortgage, without regard to the form it may assume, or the name the parties may choose to give it. The threshold issue in an action seeking imposition of an equitable mortgage is whether the plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law. In applying the doctrine of equitable mortgages doubts are resolved in favor of the transaction being a mortgage.” 59 C.J.S. Mortgages § 12, at 62 (1998).

extended first mortgage.See wraparound mortgage.

FHA mortgage.A mortgage that is insured fully or partially by the Federal Housing Administration.

first mortgage.A mortgage that is senior to all other mortgages on the same property. [Cases: Mortgages 151. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 210–212, 226.]

fixed-rate mortgage.A mortgage with an interest rate that remains the same over the life of the mortgage regardless of market conditions. — Abbr. FRM.

flexible-rate mortgage.1. See adjustable-rate mortgage. 2. See renegotiable-rate mortgage.

flip mortgage.A graduated-payment mortgage allowing the borrower to place all or some of the down payment in a savings account and to use the principal and interest to supplement lower mortgage payments in the loan's early years.

future-advances mortgage.A mortgage in which part of the loan proceeds will not be paid until a future date. [Cases: Mortgages 16, 116. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 154–156.]

general mortgage.Civil law.A blanket mortgage against all the mortgagor's present and future property. La. Civ. Code art. 3285.

graduated-payment adjustable-rate mortgage.A mortgage combining features of the graduated-payment mortgage and the adjustable-rate mortgage. — Abbr. GPARM.

graduated-payment mortgage.A mortgage whose initial payments are lower than its later payments. • The payments are intended to gradually increase, as the borrower's income increases over time.

growing-equity mortgage.A mortgage that is fully amortized over a significantly shorter term than the traditional 25- to 30-year mortgage, with increasing payments each year. — Abbr. GEM.

indemnity mortgage.See deed of trust under DEED.

interest-only mortgage.A balloon-payment mortgage on which the borrower must at first make only interest payments, but must make a lump-sum payment of the full principal at maturity. — Also termed standing mortgage; straight-term mortgage. — Abbr. IO mortgage.

joint mortgage.A mortgage given to two or more mortgagees jointly.

judicial mortgage.Civil law. A judgment lien created by a recorded legal judgment. [Cases: Judgment 752–766. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 551–553, 555–560, 562, 566.]

jumbo mortgage.A mortgage loan in a principal amount that exceeds the dollar limits for a government guarantee.

junior mortgage.A mortgage that is subordinate to another mortgage on the same property. — Also termed puisne mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages 151. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 210–212, 226.]

leasehold mortgage.A mortgage secured by a lessee's leasehold interest.

legal mortgage.Civil law. A creditor's mortgage arising by operation of law on the debtor's property. — Also termed tacit mortgage.

open-end mortgage.A mortgage that allows the mortgagor to borrow additional funds against the same property. Cf. closed-end mortgage.

package mortgage.A mortgage that includes both real and incidental personal property, such as a refrigerator or stove.

participation mortgage. 1. A mortgage that permits the lender to receive profits of the venture in addition to the normal interest payments. 2. A mortgage held by more than one lender.

price-level-adjusted mortgage.A mortgage with a fixed interest rate but the principal balance of which is adjusted to reflect inflation. — Abbr. PLAM.

puisne mortgage.See junior mortgage.

purchase-money mortgage.A mortgage that a buyer gives the seller, when the property is conveyed, to secure the unpaid balance of the purchase price. — Abbr. PMM. See SECURITY AGREEMENT. [Cases: Mortgages 1, 115. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 2–6, 151.]

renegotiable-rate mortgage.A government-sponsored mortgage that requires the mortgagee to renegotiate its terms every three to five years, based on market conditions. — Also termed flexible-rate mortgage; rollover mortgage.

reverse annuity mortgage.A mortgage in which the lender disburses money over a long period to provide regular income to the (usu. elderly) borrower, and in which the loan is repaid in a lump sum when the borrower dies or when the property is sold. — Abbr. RAM. — Also termed reverse mortgage.

rollover mortgage.See renegotiable-rate mortgage.

second mortgage.A mortgage that is junior to a first mortgage on the same property, but that is senior to any later mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages 151. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 210–212, 226.]

“A landowner who already holds land subject to a mortgage may wish to hypothecate his equity. He does this by taking out a ‘second mortgage.’ Should the mortgagor default in his obligation on the first mortgage, the first mortgagee may foreclose. If there is a deficiency upon sale, the second mortgagee loses his security in the equity because there is no equity. If the mortgagee does not default on the first mortgage, but does on the second, the second mortgagee can foreclose on the mortgagor's equity. Such a foreclosure would not affect the first mortgagee's rights.” Edward H. Rabin, Fundamentals of Modern Real Property Law 1087 (1974).

self-liquidating mortgage. See amortized mortgage.

senior mortgage. A mortgage that has priority over another mortgage (a junior mortgage) on the same property. [Cases: Mortgages 151. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 210–212, 226.]

shared-appreciation mortgage. A mortgage giving the lender the right to recover (as contingent interest) an agreed percentage of the property's appreciation in value when it is sold or at some other specified, future date. — Abbr. SAM.

shared-equity mortgage. A mortgage in which the lender shares in the profits from the property's resale. • The lender must usu. first purchase a portion of the property's equity by providing a portion of the down payment.

special mortgage. Civil law. A mortgage burdening only particular, specified property of the mortgagor. La. Civ. Code art. 3285.

standing mortgage. See interest-only mortgage.

straight mortgage. A mortgage in which the mortgagor is obligated to pay interest during the mortgage term along with a final payment of principal at the end of the term. Cf. amortized mortgage.

straight-term mortgage. See interest-only mortgage.

submortgage. See SUBMORTGAGE.

tacit mortgage. See legal mortgage.

technical mortgage. A traditional, formal mortgage, as distinguished from an instrument having the character of an equitable mortgage. Cf. equitable mortgage.

VA mortgage. A veteran's mortgage that is guaranteed by the Veterans Administration.

variable-rate mortgage. See adjustable-rate mortgage.

Welsh mortgage. A type of mortgage, formerly common in Wales and Ireland, by which the mortgagor, without promising to pay the debt, transfers title and possession of the property to the mortgagee, who takes the rents and profits and applies them to the interest, often with a stipulation that any surplus will reduce the principal. • The mortgagee cannot compel the mortgagor to redeem, and cannot foreclose the right to redeem, because no time is fixed for payment. The mortgagor is never in default, but may redeem at any time.

wraparound mortgage. A second mortgage issued when a lender assumes the payments on the borrower's low-interest first mortgage (usu. issued through a different lender) and lends additional funds. • Such a mortgage covers both the outstanding balance of the first mortgage and the additional funds loaned. 12 CFR § 226.17 cmt. 6. — Also termed extended first mortgage; all-inclusive mortgage.

zero-rate mortgage. A mortgage with a large down payment but no interest payments, with the balance paid in equal installments.

MORTGAGE-BACKED SECURITY

mortgage-backed security. See SECURITY.

MORTGAGE BANKER

mortgage banker. An individual or organization that originates real-estate loans for a fee, resells them to other parties, and services the monthly payments.

MORTGAGE BOND

mortgage bond. See BOND(3).

MORTGAGE BROKER

mortgage broker. See BROKER.

MORTGAGE CERTIFICATE

mortgage certificate. A document evidencing part ownership of a mortgage.

MORTGAGE CLAUSE

mortgage clause. An insurance-policy provision that protects the rights of a mortgagee when the insured property is subject to a mortgage. • Such a clause usu. provides that any insurance proceeds must be allocated between the named insured and the mortgagee “as their interests may appear.” — Also termed mortgagee clause. See LOSS-PAYABLE CLAUSE; ATIMA. [Cases: Mortgages 201. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 311–314.]

open mortgage clause. A mortgage clause that does not protect the mortgagee if the insured mortgagor does something to invalidate the policy (such as committing fraud). • This type of clause has been largely superseded by the mortgage-loss clause, which affords the mortgagee more protection. — Also termed simple mortgage clause. Cf. MORTGAGE-LOSS CLAUSE.

standard mortgage clause. A mortgage clause that protects the mortgagee's interest even if the insured mortgagor does something to invalidate the policy. • In effect, this clause creates a separate contract between the insurer and the mortgagee. — Also termed union mortgage clause.

MORTGAGE COMMITMENT

mortgage commitment. A lender's written agreement with a borrower stating the terms on which it will lend money for the purchase of specified real property, usu. with a time limitation.

[Cases: Mortgages 211.C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 274–276.]

mortgage company.A company that makes mortgage loans and then sells or assigns them to investors.

MORTGAGE-CONTINGENCY CLAUSE

mortgage-contingency clause.A real-estate-sale provision that conditions the buyer's performance on obtaining a mortgage loan. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 79. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 125, 141.]

MORTGAGE DEED

mortgage deed.See DEED.

MORTGAGE DISCOUNT

mortgage discount.The difference between the mortgage principal and the amount the mortgage actually sells for; the up-front charge by a lender at a real-estate closing for the costs of financing. • Although usu. paid by the buyer, the discount is sometimes paid by the seller when required by law, as with a VA mortgage. — Also termed point; mortgage point; loan-brokerage fee; new-loan fee.

MORTGAGEE

mortgagee (mor-g<<schwa>>-jee). One to whom property is mortgaged; the mortgage creditor, or lender. — Also termed mortgage-holder. [Cases: Mortgages 23. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 73–75, 77.]

mortgagee in possession.A mortgagee who takes control of mortgaged land by agreement with the mortgagor, usu. upon default of the loan secured by the mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages 187. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 57, 288.]

MORTGAGEE CLAUSE

mortgagee clause.See MORTGAGE CLAUSE.

MORTGAGEE POLICY

mortgagee policy.A title-insurance policy that covers only the mortgagee's title and not the owner's title. Cf. OWNER'S POLICY. [Cases: Mortgages 201. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 311–314.]

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE

mortgage foreclosure.See FORECLOSURE.

MORTGAGE-GUARANTEE INSURANCE mortgage-guarantee insurance.Insurance provided by the Mortgage Guarantee Insurance Company to mortgage lenders that grant mortgages to parties having less than a 20% down payment. • The cost of the insurance is included in the closing costs. [Cases: Mortgages 201. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 311–314.]

MORTGAGE-HOLDER

mortgage-holder. See MORTGAGEE.

MORTGAGE INSURANCE

mortgage insurance. See INSURANCE.

MORTGAGE LIEN

mortgage lien. See LIEN.

MORTGAGE LOAN

mortgage loan. See LOAN.

MORTGAGE-LOSS CLAUSE

mortgage-loss clause. A mortgage clause providing that title insurance will not be invalidated by the mortgagor's acts. • Thus, even if the mortgagor does an act that would otherwise make the policy void, the act merely voids the policy as against the mortgagor, but it remains in full force for the benefit of the mortgagee. — Also termed New York standard clause; union-loss clause. Cf. open mortgage clause under MORTGAGE CLAUSE. [Cases: Mortgages 201. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 311–314.]

MORTGAGE MARKET

mortgage market. The conditions that provide the demand for new mortgage loans and the later resale of those loans in the secondary mortgage market.

primary mortgage market. The national market in which mortgages are originated.

secondary mortgage market. The national market in which existing mortgages are bought and sold, usu. on a package basis.

MORTGAGE NOTE

mortgage note. See NOTE(1).

MORTGAGE POINT

mortgage point. 1. POINT(3). 2. MORTGAGE DISCOUNT.

MORTGAGE SERVICING

mortgage servicing. The administration of a mortgage loan, including the collection of payments, release of liens, and payment of property insurance and taxes. • Servicing is usu. performed by the lender or the lender's agent, for a fee. [Cases: Mortgages 211. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 274–276.]

MORTGAGE WAREHOUSING

mortgage warehousing. An arrangement in which a mortgage company holds loans for later resale at a discount.

MORTGAGING OUT

mortgaging out. The purchase of real property by financing 100% of the purchase price.

MORTGAGOR

mortgagor (mor-g<<schwa>>-jorormor-g<<schwa>>-j<<schwa>>r). One who mortgages property; the mortgage-debtor, or borrower. — Also spelled mortgager; mortgageor. [Cases: Mortgages 23. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 73–75, 77.]

MORTIFICATION

mortification. The act of disposing of or contributing property for religious, charitable, or public purposes.

MORTIS CAUSA

mortis causa (mor-tis kaw-z<<schwa>>). See gift causa mortis under GIFT.

MORTMAIN

mortmain (mort-mayn). [French “deadhand”] The condition of lands or tenements held in perpetuity by an ecclesiastical or other corporation. • Land alienated in mortmain is not inalienable, but it will never escheat or pass by inheritance (and thus no inheritance taxes will ever be paid) because a corporation does not die. See AMORTIZE(3); DEADHAND CONTROL. [Cases: Corporations 435; Religious Societies 15. C.J.S. Corporations § 647; Religious Societies §§ 53–54.]

MORTMAIN STATUTE

mortmain statute. A law that limits gifts and other dispositions of land to corporations (esp. charitable ones) and that prohibits corporations from holding land in perpetuity. • In England, laws such as the Provisions of Westminster and Magna Carta essentially required the Crown's authorization before land could vest in a corporation. The object was to prevent lands from being held by religious corporations in perpetuity. Although this type of restriction was not generally part of the common law in the United States, it influenced the enactment of certain state laws restricting the amount of property that a corporation could hold for religious or charitable purposes. — Also termed mortmain act; statute of mortmain. [Cases: Corporations 434. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 644–646.]

MORTUA MANUS

mortua manus. See DEADHAND CONTROL.

MORTUARY

mortuary. 1. A place where cadavers are prepared for burial; a place where dead bodies are held before burial. [Cases: Dead Bodies 2. C.J.S. Dead Bodies § 4.] 2. A burial place. 3.Hist. A customary gift left by a deceased to a parish church for past tithes owed. — Also termed (in sense 3) soul scot.

MORTUUS

mortuus (mor-choo-*<<schwa>>*s), adj. [Latin] Hist. 1. Dead. 2. A sheriff's return that the named party is dead.

MORTUUS CIVILITER

mortuus civiliter (mor-choo-*<<schwa>>s s<<schwa>>-vil-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>*r). [Latin “civilly dead”] A person civilly dead, deprived of civil rights. See civil death under DEATH.

MORTUUS SINE PROLE

mortuus sine prole (mor-choo-*<<schwa>>*s si-nee proh-lee). [Latin] Dead without issue. — Abbr. m.s.p.

MOST FAVORABLE LIGHT

most favorable light.See LIGHT MOST FAVORABLE.

MOST FAVORED NATION

most favored nation.A treaty status granted to a nation, usu. in international trade, allowing it to enjoy the privileges that the other party accords to other nations under similar circumstances. • The primary effect of most-favored-nation status is lower trade tariffs. — Sometimes shortened to favored nation. — Also termed most-favored-nation status. — Abbr. MFN. [Cases: Treaties 8. C.J.S. Treaties § 6.]

MOST-FAVORED-NATION CLAUSE

most-favored-nation clause. 1. A clause in an agreement between two nations providing that each will treat the other as well as it treats any other nation that is given preferential treatment. [Cases: Treaties 8.C.J.S. Treaties § 6.] 2. By extension, such a clause in any contract, esp. an oil-and-gas contract. — Often shortened to favored-nation clause; MFN clause. — Also termed most-favored-nations clause. Cf. preferential tariff under TARIFF.

MOST-FAVORED-NATION STATUS

most-favored-nation status.See MOST FAVORED NATION.

MOST-FAVORED-NATION TREATMENT

most-favored-nation treatment. Intellectual property. The practice or policy of automatically and unconditionally granting any intellectual-property protection, advantage, favor, privilege, or immunity that by treaty is extended to nationals of any member country to the nationals of all member countries. • This treatment is incorporated into the TRIPs Agreement. — Abbr. MFN treatment.

MOST-FAVORED-TENANT CLAUSE

most-favored-tenant clause. A commercial-lease provision ensuring that the tenant will be given the benefit of any negotiating concessions given to other tenants. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 39. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 234.]

MOST-SIGNIFICANT-CONTACTS TEST

most-significant-contacts test. See MOST-SIGNIFICANT-RELATIONSHIP TEST.

MOST-SIGNIFICANT-RELATIONSHIP TEST

most-significant-relationship test. Conflict of laws. The doctrine that, to determine the state law to apply to a dispute, the court should determine which state has the most substantial connection to the occurrence and the parties. • For example, in a tort case, the court should consider where the injury occurred, where the conduct that caused the injury occurred, the residence, place of business, or place of incorporation of the parties, and the place where the relationship between the parties, if any, is centered. Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 145 (1971). In a case involving a contract, the court should consider where the contract was made, where the contract was negotiated, where the contract was to be performed, and the domicile, place of business, or place of incorporation of the parties. Id. § 188. — Also termed most-significant-contacts test. [Cases: Action 17. C.J.S. Actions §§ 18–20; Conflict of Laws §§ 2–3, 12, 15, 20, 23, 27–32, 34–40, 42–48, 50–65, 96–97, 100, 102, 105–107.]

MOST SUITABLE USE

most suitable use. See highest and best use under USE(1).

MOST-SUITABLE-USE VALUE

most-suitable-use value. See optimal-use value under VALUE(2).

MOTEER

moteer (moh-teer). Hist. A customary payment or service made at the lord's court.

MOTHER

mother. A woman who has given birth to, provided the egg for, or legally adopted a child. • The term is sometimes interpreted as including a pregnant woman who has not yet given birth. [Cases: Parent and Child 1. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 1–12, 201.]

adoptive mother. See adoptive parent under PARENT.

biological mother.The woman who provides the egg that develops into an embryo. • With today's genetic-engineering techniques, the biological mother may not be the birth mother, but she is usu. the legal mother. — Also termed genetic mother; natural mother.

birth mother.The woman who carries an embryo during the gestational period and who delivers the child. • When a child is conceived through artificial insemination, the birth mother may not be the genetic or biological mother. And she may not be the legal mother. — Also termed gestational mother. See surrogate mother; natural mother; biological mother.

de facto mother.See de facto parent under PARENT.

foster mother.See foster parent under PARENT.

genetic mother.See biological mother.

gestational mother.See birth mother.

surrogate mother. 1. A woman who carries out the gestational function and gives birth to a child for another; esp. a woman who agrees to provide her uterus to carry an embryo throughout pregnancy, typically on behalf of an infertile couple, and who relinquishes any parental rights she may have upon the birth of the child. • A surrogate mother may or may not be the genetic mother of a child. — Often shortened to surrogate. — Also termed surrogate parent; gestational surrogate; gestational carrier; surrogate carrier. [Cases: Adoption 6. C.J.S. Adoption of Persons §§ 25–40.] 2. A person who performs the role of a mother. [Cases: Parent and Child 15. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 345–350, 357–358.]

MOTHER COUNTRY

mother country.A colonizing nation; a colonial power. Cf. COLONY.

MOTHER HUBBARD CLAUSE

Mother Hubbard clause. 1. A clause stating that a mortgage secures all the debts that the mortgagor may at any time owe to the mortgagee. — Also termed anaconda clause; dragnet clause. [Cases: Mortgages 14, 114, 121. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 143–150, 157–161, 169.] 2.Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease protecting the lessee against errors in the description of the property by providing that the lease covers all the land owned by the lessor in the area. • A Mother Hubbard clause is sometimes combined with an after-acquired-title clause. — Also termed cover-all clause. 3. A court's written declaration that any relief not expressly granted in a specific ruling or judgment is denied. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 55, 73.1. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 158–160, 169, 240–246, 265, 291, 442.]

MOTHER-IN-LAW

mother-in-law. The mother of a person's spouse.

MOTION

motion. 1. A written or oral application requesting a court to make a specified ruling or order. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 921–928.]

calendar motion. A motion relating to the time of a court appearance • Examples include motions to continue, motions to advance, and motions to reset. [Cases: Trial 9–16. C.J.S. Trial §§ 60–90.]

contradictory motion. Civil law. A motion that is likely to be contested or that the nonmoving side should have an opportunity to contest. Cf. contradictory judgment under JUDGMENT.

cross-motion. A competing request for relief or orders similar to that requested by another party against the cross-moving party, such as a motion for summary judgment or for sanctions.

enumerated motion. Archaic. A motion directly related to the proceeding or the merits of the case.

ex parte motion (eks pahr-tee). A motion made to the court without notice to the adverse party; a motion that a court considers and rules on without hearing from all sides. — Also termed ex parte application. [Cases: Motions 19. C.J.S. Motions and Orders §§ 10, 14–16.]

motion for reduction. Family law. A motion to lessen the amount of child-support payments. • This is a type of motion to modify.

motion for resettlement. A request to clarify or correct the form of an order or judgment that does not correctly state the court's decision. • The motion cannot be used to request a substantial change to or amplification of the court's decision.

motion of course. A party's request that the court may grant as a matter of routine, without investigating or inquiring further.

motion to modify. A post-final-decree motion asking the court to change one of its earlier orders; esp. a request to change child support or visitation. — Also termed complaint for modification; motion for modification.

omnibus motion. A motion that makes several requests or asks for multiple forms of relief. [Cases: Motions 5. C.J.S. Motions and Orders § 8.]

posttrial motion. A motion made after judgment is entered, such as a motion for new trial. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2368, 2605; New Trial 124. C.J.S. New Trial §§ 147, 170, 174–175, 177, 185–186.]

speaking motion. A motion that addresses matters not raised in the pleadings. [Cases: Federal special motion.A motion specifically requiring the court's discretion upon hearing, as distinguished from one granted as a matter of course. [Cases: Motions 36. C.J.S. Motions and Orders §§ 34–35, 37.]

Civil Procedure 1834.]

2.Parliamentary law. A proposal made in a meeting, in a form suitable for its consideration and action, that the meeting (or the organization for which the meeting is acting) take a certain action or view. • A motion may be a main motion or a secondary motion. A motion technically becomes a “question” when the chair states it for the meeting's consideration. But for most purposes, the parliamentary terms “motion” and “question” are interchangeable. Cf. REQUEST.

coexisting motion.Parliamentary law. A main motion, such as one raising a question of privilege, that is pending at the same time as another main motion of lower precedence.

dilatory motion (dil-<<schwa>>-tor-ee).1. A motion made solely for the purpose of delay or obstruction. 2. A motion that delays the proceedings.

immediately pending motion.The pending motion directly under consideration; the pending motion last stated by the chair and next in line for a vote. See pending motion; PRECEDENCE(4).

improper motion.A motion that is out of order. See OUT OF ORDER.

incidental main motion.A main motion that relates to a procedural rather than a substantive matter; an otherwise secondary motion, made when no main motion is pending. — Also termed procedural main motion; quasi-main motion; specific main motion. See main motion. Cf. original main motion.

incidental motion.A secondary motion that relates to the procedure under which other business is considered. See secondary motion.

main motion.A motion that brings business before a meeting. • A main motion may be an original main motion or an incidental main motion. — Also termed principal motion; proposition.

ordinary main motion.See original main motion.

original main motion.A main motion that relates to a substantive rather than a procedural matter; a main motion that is not an incidental main motion. — Also termed ordinary main motion; substantive main motion; substantive motion. See main motion. Cf. incidental main motion.

parliamentary motion. 1. Any motion that is not an original main motion — that is, any motion that is either a secondary motion or an incidental main motion. 2. A motion under parliamentary law; MOTION(2).

pending motion.A motion under consideration, even though other pending motions of higher rank may have taken precedence over it. Cf. immediately pending motion.

principal motion.See main motion.

privileged motion.A secondary motion that does not relate to other business, but rather to the organization, the meeting, its members, and their rights and privileges, and is thus entitled to prompt attention in preference over other pending business. See secondary motion; PRIVILEGE(6).

procedural main motion. See incidental main motion.

procedural motion. A motion that relates to the manner in which a meeting conducts its business, rather than to the business itself. • A procedural motion may be either an incidental motion (including an incidental main motion) or a privileged motion.

quasi-main motion. See incidental main motion.

restorative motion. A motion that renews consideration of a question already disposed of. — Also termed restoratory motion.

restoratory motion. See restorative motion.

secondary motion. A motion that does not itself bring business before the meeting, and is therefore in order when a main motion is pending. • A secondary motion may be either an incidental motion (although not an incidental main motion), a privileged motion, or a subsidiary motion. Cf. main motion.

specific main motion. See incidental main motion.

subsidiary motion. A secondary motion that directly affects the main motion's form or consideration. See secondary motion.

substantive main motion. See original main motion.

substantive motion. See original main motion.

MOTION FOR A DIRECTED VERDICT motion for a directed verdict. See MOTION FOR DIRECTED VERDICT.

MOTION FOR A MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT motion for a more definite statement. See MOTION FOR MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT.

MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL

motion for a new trial. See MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

MOTION FOR A PROTECTIVE ORDER motion for a protective order. See MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER.

MOTION FOR A REPLEADER motion for a repleader. Common-law pleading. An unsuccessful party's posttrial motion asking that the pleadings begin anew because the issue was joined on an immaterial point. • The court never awards a repleader to the party who tendered the immaterial issue. [Cases: Pleading 286. C.J.S. Pleading § 477.]

MOTION FOR DIRECTED VERDICT motion for directed verdict. A party's request that the court enter judgment in its favor before submitting the case to the jury because there is no legally sufficient evidentiary foundation on which a reasonable jury could find for the other party. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the equivalent court paper is known as a motion for judgment as a matter of law. — Abbr. MDV. — Also termed motion for a directed verdict. See MOTION FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW ; directed verdict under VERDICT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2121; Trial 167. C.J.S. Trial §§ 432–433, 437–438.]

MOTION FOR J.N.O.V

motion for j.n.o.v. See MOTION FOR JUDGMENT NOTWITHSTANDING THE VERDICT.

MOTION FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW motion for judgment as a matter of law. A party's request that the court enter a judgment in its favor before the case is submitted to the jury, or after a contrary jury verdict, because there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis on which a jury could find for the other party. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a party may move for judgment as a matter of law anytime before the case has been submitted to the jury. This kind of motion was formerly known as a motion for directed verdict (and still is in many jurisdictions). If the motion is denied and the case is submitted to the jury, resulting in an unfavorable verdict, the motion may be renewed within ten days after entry of the judgment. This aspect of the motion replaces the court paper formerly known as a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2121, 2605; Judgment 199; Trial 167. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 62–68, 70; Trial §§ 432–433, 437–438.]

MOTION FOR JUDGMENT NOTWITHSTANDING THE VERDICT motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. A party's request that the court enter a judgment in its favor despite the jury's contrary verdict because there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a jury to find for the other party. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, this procedure has been replaced by the provision for a motion for judgment as a matter of law, which must be presented before the case has been submitted to the jury but can be reasserted if it is denied and the jury returns an unfavorable verdict. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50. — Also termed motion for j.n.o.v. See MOTION FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2605; Judgment 199. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 62–68, 70.]

MOTION FOR JUDGMENT OF ACQUITTAL motion for judgment of acquittal. A criminal defendant's request, at the close of the government's case or the close of all evidence, to be acquitted because there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis on which a reasonable jury could return a guilty verdict. • If the motion is granted, the government has no right of appeal. Fed. R. Crim. P. 29(a). — Abbr. MJOA. [Cases: Criminal Law 753.2. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1276.]

MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS motion for judgment on the pleadings. A party's request that the court rule in its favor based on the pleadings on file, without accepting evidence, as when the outcome of the case rests on the court's interpretation of the law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1052; Pleading 342. C.J.S. Pleading § 594.]

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO APPEAL motion for leave to appeal. A request that an appellate court review an interlocutory order that meets the standards of the collateral-order doctrine. — Abbr. MLA. See COLLATERAL-ORDER DOCTRINE. [Cases: Appeal and Error 358; Federal Courts 660.30. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 63, 81, 298–299, 312.]

MOTION FOR MODIFICATION motion for modification. See motion to modify under MOTION(1).

MOTION FOR MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT motion for more definite statement. A party's request that the court require an opponent to amend a vague or ambiguous pleading to which the party cannot reasonably be required to respond. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e). — Also termed motion for a more definite statement. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 957; Pleading 367. C.J.S. Pleading § 685.]

“Another disfavored motion is the motion for a more definite statement. By a 1948 amendment to the rules, the old bill of particulars was abolished. The motion for more definite statement, which serves much the same function, is to be granted only where a pleading to which a responsive pleading is permitted is so vague or ambiguous that the party cannot reasonably be required to frame a responsive pleading. If the pleading is sufficiently definite that the opponent can reply to it, the motion for more definite statement should be denied and any particulars that the opponent needs to prepare for trial obtained by depositions, interrogatories, and similar discovery procedures. The motion is never proper where no responsive pleading is permitted, nor should it be used to force the plaintiff to include additional particulars that may make the complaint vulnerable to a motion to dismiss.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 66, at 461–62 (5th ed. 1994).

MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL

motion for new trial. A party's postjudgment request that the court vacate the judgment and order a new trial for such reasons as factually insufficient evidence, newly discovered evidence, and jury misconduct. • In many jurisdictions, this motion is required before a party can raise such a matter on appeal. — Also termed motion for a new trial. [Cases: Criminal Law 948; Federal Civil Procedure 2368; New Trial 124(1). C.J.S. New Trial §§ 147, 170, 174–175, 177, 185–186.]

MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER

motion for protective order. A party's request that the court protect it from potentially abusive action by the other party, usu. relating to discovery, as when one party seeks discovery of the other party's trade secrets. • A court will sometimes craft a protective order to protect one party's trade secrets by ordering that any secret information exchanged in discovery be used only for purposes of the pending suit and not be publicized. — Also termed motion for a protective order. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1271; Pretrial Procedure 41. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 12, 47.]

MOTION FOR REDUCTION

motion for reduction. See MOTION(1).

MOTION FOR RELIEF FROM STAY motion for relief from stay. See MOTION TO LIFT THE STAY.

MOTION FOR RELIEF FROM THE JUDGMENT motion for relief from the judgment. A party's request that the court correct a clerical mistake in the judgment — that is, a mistake that results in the judgment's incorrectly reflecting the court's intentions — or relieve the party from the judgment because of such matters as (1) inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, (2) newly discovered evidence that could not have been discovered through diligence in time for a motion for new trial, (3) the judgment's being the result of fraud, misrepresentation, or misconduct by the other party, or (4) the judgment's being void or having been satisfied or released. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60. Cf. MOTION TO ALTER OR AMEND THE JUDGMENT . [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2659; Judgment 336–402. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 275–278, 305–331, 333–359, 375.]

MOTION FOR RESETTLEMENT motion for resettlement. See MOTION(1).

MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT motion for summary judgment. A request that the court enter judgment without a trial because there is no genuine issue of material fact to be decided by a fact-finder — that is, because the evidence is legally insufficient to support a verdict in the nonmovant's favor. • In federal court and in most state courts, the movant-defendant must point out in its motion the absence of evidence on an essential element of the plaintiff's claim, after which the burden shifts to the nonmovant-plaintiff to produce evidence raising a genuine fact issue. But if a party moves for summary judgment on its own claim or defense, then it must establish each element of the claim or defense as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. 56. — Abbr. MSJ. — Also termed summary-judgment motion; motion for summary disposition. See SUMMARY JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2533; Judgment 181(2), 183. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 252, 254–257, 259, 267–268, 274.]

MOTION IN ARREST OF JUDGMENT motion in arrest of judgment. 1. A defendant's motion claiming that a substantial error appearing on the face of the record vitiates the whole proceeding and the judgment. 2. A postjudgment motion in a criminal case claiming that the indictment is insufficient to sustain a judgment or that the verdict is somehow insufficient. [Cases: Criminal Law 966–976.C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1453–1457.]

MOTION IN LIMINE

motion in limine (in lim-schwa-nee). A pretrial request that certain inadmissible evidence not be referred to or offered at trial. • Typically, a party makes this motion when it believes that mere mention of the evidence during trial would be highly prejudicial and could not be remedied by an instruction to disregard. If, after the motion is granted, the opposing party mentions or attempts to offer the evidence in the jury's presence, a mistrial may be ordered. A ruling on a motion in limine does not always preserve evidentiary error for appellate purposes. To raise such an error on appeal, a party may be required to formally object when the evidence is actually admitted or excluded during trial. [Cases: Criminal Law 632(4); Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Pretrial Procedure 3. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 448, 456, 458.]

MOTION OF COURSE

motion of course. See MOTION(1).

MOTION PAPERS

motion papers. See MOVING PAPERS.

MOTION TO ALTER OR AMEND THE JUDGMENT motion to alter or amend the judgment. A party's request that the court correct a substantive error in the judgment, such as a manifest error of law or fact. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a motion to alter or amend the judgment must be filed within ten days after the judgment is entered. It should not ordinarily be used to correct clerical errors in a judgment. Those types of errors — that is, errors that result in the judgment not reflecting the court's intention — may be brought in a motion for relief from the judgment, which does not have the ten-day deadline. A motion to alter or amend the judgment is usu. directed to substantive issues regarding the judgment, such as an intervening change in the law or newly discovered evidence that was not available at trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(e). Cf. MOTION FOR RELIEF FROM THE JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2659; Judgment 294–333. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 275–304, 362, 370, 374.]

MOTION TO COMPEL DISCOVERY motion to compel discovery. A party's request that the court force the party's opponent to respond to the party's discovery request (as to answer interrogatories or produce documents). Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a). — Often shortened to motion to compel. — Also termed motion to enforce discovery. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1278; Pretrial Procedure 44, 310, 434. C.J.S. Discovery §§ 31, 79.]

MOTION TO CORRECT INVENTORSHIP motion to correct inventorship. Patents. A request in an interference proceeding to add one or more unnamed coinventors to the patent application. • The motion will be granted unless the unnamed coinventor acted with the intent to deceive.

MOTION TO DISMISS

motion to dismiss. A request that the court dismiss the case because of settlement, voluntary withdrawal, or a procedural defect. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss the case (under Rule 41(a)) or the defendant may ask the court to dismiss the case, usu. based on one of the defenses listed in Rule 12(b). These defenses include lack of personal or subject-matter jurisdiction, improper venue, insufficiency of process, the plaintiff's failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted, and the failure to join an indispensable party. A defendant will frequently file a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, which is governed by Rule 12(b)(6), claiming that even if all the plaintiff's allegations are true, they would not be legally sufficient to state a claim on which relief might be granted. — Abbr. MTD. See DEMURRER. [Cases: Criminal Law 303.5–303.35; Federal Civil Procedure 1707, 1825; Pretrial Procedure 501–563. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 419–424; Dismissal and Nonsuit §§ 2–47, 49–66.]

MOTION TO DISSOLVE INTERFERENCE motion to dissolve interference. Patents. A request by the senior party to dismiss challenges to its priority as the first inventor. [Cases: Patents 106(5). C.J.S. Patents § 166.]

MOTION TO ENFORCE DISCOVERY motion to enforce discovery. See MOTION TO COMPEL DISCOVERY.

MOTION TO LIFT THE STAY motion to lift the stay. Bankruptcy. A party's request that the bankruptcy court alter the automatic bankruptcy stay to allow the movant to act against the debtor or the debtor's property, as when a creditor seeks permission to foreclose on a lien because its security interest is not adequately protected. — Also termed motion for relief from stay; motion to modify the stay. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2435. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 89.]

MOTION TO MODIFY

motion to modify. See MOTION(1).

MOTION TO MODIFY THE STAY motion to modify the stay. See MOTION TO LIFT THE STAY.

MOTION TO QUASH

motion to quash (kwahsh). A party's request that the court nullify process or an act instituted by the other party, as in seeking to nullify a subpoena. [Cases: Witnesses 9, 16. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 21, 32–52.]

MOTION TO REMAND

motion to remand. In a case that has been removed from state court to federal court, a party's request that the federal court return the case to state court, usu. because the federal court lacks jurisdiction or because the procedures for removal were not properly followed. 28 USCA § 1447(c). [Cases: Removal of Cases 107. C.J.S. Removal of Causes §§ 183–184, 193.]

MOTION TO STRIKE

motion to strike. 1.Civil procedure. A party's request that the court delete insufficient defenses or immaterial, redundant, impertinent, or scandalous statements from an opponent's pleading. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1144; Pleading 351, 361. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 624–625.] 2.Evidence. A request that inadmissible evidence be deleted from the record and that the jury be instructed to disregard it. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2018; Trial 88. C.J.S. Trial §§ 232, 234, 237–239.]

MOTION TO SUPPRESS

motion to suppress.A request that the court prohibit the introduction of illegally obtained evidence at a criminal trial. [Cases: Criminal Law 394.6. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 794.]

MOTION TO TRANSFER VENUE motion to transfer venue.A request that the court transfer the case to another district or county, usu. because the original venue is improper under the applicable venue rules or because of local prejudice. See VENUE; CHANGE OF VENUE . [Cases: Criminal Law 115–144; Federal Courts 141; Venue 58. C.J.S. Corporations § 252; Criminal Law §§ 187–195; Venue §§ 224, 227, 231.]

motive. Something, esp. willful desire, that leads one to act. — Also termed ulterior intent. Cf. INTENT.

bad motive.A person's knowledge that an act is wrongful while the person commits the act.

malicious motive.A motive for bringing a prosecution, other than to do justice. [Cases: Malicious Prosecution 30.]

MOTOR CARRIER ACT

Motor Carrier Act. A federal statute, originally enacted in 1935 (49 USCA §§ 502–507), subjecting commercial motor carriers of freight and passengers in interstate commerce to the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission, now the U.S. Department of Transportation. • The Act was repealed in the 1980s. [Cases: Automobiles 60. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 107–108, 110.]

movable, n. (usu. pl.) 1. Property that can be moved or displaced, such as personal goods; a tangible or intangible thing in which an interest constitutes personal property; specif., anything that is not so attached to land as to be regarded as a part of it as determined by local law. — Also termed movable property; movable thing. [Cases: Property 4. C.J.S. Property §§ 14–21, 23.]

intangible movable. A physical thing that can be moved but that cannot be touched in the usual sense. • Examples are light and electricity.

“ ‘Intangible movables' is a term of art in the common law which has been applied more widely than its meaning literally justifies, which is merely to those things that have physical existence and can be moved, though cannot be touched in the normal sense, such as light, electricity and radioactive waves. In English law the term has been generally applied to interests created by law which have only a legal, not a physical existence, and are accordingly capable only of legal, not physical, movement. It is convenient, however, to retain a term which is generally accepted and understood in this special legal meaning.” R.H. Graveson, Conflict of Laws 470 (7th ed. 1974).

2. Scots law. A nonheritable right. — Also spelled (in BrE) moveable. Cf. IMMOVABLE. — movable, adj. “Moveables are, in the phraseology of the law of Scotland, opposed to heritage; so that every species of property, and every right a person can hold, is by that law either heritable or moveable. Hence, moveables are not merely corporeal subjects capable of being moved, but every species of property, corporeal or incorporeal, which does not descend to the heir in heritage.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 662 (George Watson ed., 1882).

MUG BOOK

mug book. A collection of mug shots of criminal suspects maintained by law-enforcement agencies (such as the FBI and police departments) to be used in identifying criminal offenders.

MUG SHOT

mug shot. A photograph of a person's face taken after the person has been arrested and booked. [Cases: Criminal Law 438(3). C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1042.]

MULCT

mulct (m<<schwa>>kt), n. A fine or penalty.

mulct,vb. 1. To punish by a fine. 2. To deprive or divest of, esp. fraudulently.

MULCT LAW

mulct law.Hist. An Iowa law that allowed some saloons to pay the state a sum of money and continue to operate despite a statewide prohibition against alcohol sales. • While the money paid was called a mulct, it was effectively a licensing tax rather than a criminal penalty because continuing violations of the liquor law were not prosecuted.

MULIER

mulier (myoo-lee-<<schwa>>r), n. [Latin] 1.Roman law. A woman. • This term at various times referred to a marriageable virgin, a woman not a virgin, a wife, or a mistress. 2.Hist. & Scots law. A legitimate son; the son of a mulier (“lawful wife”).

MULIERATUS FILIUS

MULIER PUISNE

mulier puisne (myoo-lee-<<schwa>>r pyoo-nee). [Law Latin] Hist. The younger lawful son, usu. distinguished from the bastard eigné (“the elder bastard son”).

parents after the marriage (the mulier puisné), and upon the ancestor's death the bastard eigné entered as heir and remained in undisturbed possession until his own death, the bastard eigné was treated as if he had been legitimate with respect to the inheritance of that land. The reason given by Littleton was that a person who was legitimate by the Canon law could not be bastardised posthumously, when he no longer had the opportunity to contest the issue." J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 559 (3d ed. 1990).

MULIERTY

multital (m<<schwa>>l-ti-t<<schwa>>l), adj. 1. Of or relating to legal relations that exist among three or more people, esp. a multitude of people. Cf. UNITAL.

“Tort and breach of contract are alike breaches of duty, but in the case of tort the pre-existing duty of the wrong-doer was one that was shared by every other member of society; and the injured party whose right was violated had not merely one right, he had a multitude of rights. His rights and the correlative duties of others were ‘multital.’ The secondary right and duty, however, arising from the tort, are relations that exist between the two persons only. They are ‘unital.’ In the case of a breach of contract, both the primary right and duty and the secondary right and duty are ‘unital.’ ” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 11 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

Munchausen syndrome by proxy (m<<schwa>>n-chow-z<<schwa>>n). A condition in which a caregiver, usu. a parent, fabricates or induces a child's medical condition and seeks medical treatment for the child on the basis of the fabrications or induced condition. • This syndrome is a kind of child abuse, esp. when the victim is subjected to repeated medical examinations and treatment, often of an invasive nature, and sometimes even to physical injuries that induce symptoms consistent with the falsified medical condition. The parent is usu. emotionally deprived and fabricates or causes the child's illness or medical condition as an attention-getting device.

mund (m<<schwa>>nd or muund). [Old English "hand"] Hist. A right to protection or guardianship; a guardian. Cf. MANUS(1).

"Once more we see prerogative rights growing, while feudal claims fall into the background; and in the case of lunacy we see a guardianship, a mund, which is not profitable to the guardian, and this at present is a novel and noteworthy thing." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 481 (2d ed. 1898).

mundium (m<<schwa>>n-dee-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] The legal protection and representation granted to a person who is socially and physically weak.

"In a society of persons in which the authority to maintain the law was in the hands of its members, and of which the membership rested on the ability to bear arms and defend oneself ('weer'), those who, for want of strength or some other reason, were unable to do so, could not play an active part, and were necessarily placed under the authority of those whose protection they needed. Originally, mundium was not limited to family law. Gradually it lost its wider meaning, and in its restricted sense it received different applications, as family relations became classified into separate groups, and the conception of mundium appeared under different forms, with special rules and special names — e.g., marital power, parental power, guardianship, and curatorship." Alexander Wood Renton & George Grenville Phillimore, The Comparative Law of Marriage and Divorce 10 (1910).

MUNERA

munera (myoo-n<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>), n. [Law Latin "graces"] Hist. Tenancies at will; tenancies made at the grantor's pleasure.

munera publica (myoo-n<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>> p<<schwa>>b-li-k<<schwa>>). [Latin] Roman law. Public duties, such as performing the offices of tutor and curator, and of index privatus. Sing. munus publicum.

"Among the Romans there were certain offices regarded as public duties, which no citizen (unless he could plead certain specified excuses) could refuse to accept of and fulfil; and among these were included the offices of tutor and curator. These offices are voluntary by the law of Scotland, and their acceptance, as well as the performance of the attendant duties, cannot be imposed upon any one against his own wish. But if the office has been once accepted and acted upon, the tutor or curator cannot resign it. He must perform the duties of his office until it expires through the death, attainment of minority or majority, as the case may be, or it may be through the marriage of the ward, and he will be liable for the consequences of his neglect, as well as the consequences of his actings and intromissions." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 364 (4th ed. 1894).

murder, n. The killing of a human being with malice aforethought. • At common law, the crime of murder was not subdivided, but many state statutes have adopted the degree structure outlined below, though the Model Penal Code has not. Model Penal Code § 210.2. See MALICE AFORETHOUGHT. Cf. MANSLAUGHTER. [Cases: Homicide 520.] — murder, vb. — murderous, adj.

“The word ‘murder’ has ... had a devious history. Its original sense is the particularly heinous crime of secret slaying. After the conquest it was observed that Normans were frequently found dead under mysterious circumstances, and so William I enacted that if anyone were found slain and the slayer were not caught, then the hundred should pay a fine; this fine is a murdrum. The practice soon grew up to taking inquests and if it were presented that the dead man was English, then the fine was not due. In 1267 it was enacted that accidental deaths should not give rise to murdrum, and finally in 1340 presentment of Englishry and murdrum were abolished. Henceforth the word slowly tends to get linked up with 'malice aforethought' and so we get the classical formulae describing the crime of murder." Theodore F.T. Plucknett, A Concise History of the Common Law 445 (5th ed. 1956).

depraved-heart murder. A murder resulting from an act so reckless and careless of the safety of others that it demonstrates the perpetrator's complete lack of regard for human life. [Cases: Homicide 533.]

felony murder. Murder that occurs during the commission of a dangerous felony (often limited to rape, kidnapping, robbery, burglary, and arson). — Also termed (in English law) constructive murder. See FELONY-MURDER RULE. [Cases: Homicide 580.]

first-degree murder. Murder that is willful, deliberate, or premeditated, or that is committed during the course of another dangerous felony. • All murder perpetrated by poisoning or by lying in wait is considered first-degree murder. All types of murder not involving willful, deliberate, and premeditated killing are usu. considered second-degree murder. — Also termed murder of the first degree; murder one. [Cases: Homicide 539.]

mass murder. A murderous act or series of acts by which a criminal kills many victims at or near the same time, usu. as part of one act or plan. Cf. serial murder.

murder by torture. A murder preceded by the intentional infliction of pain and suffering on the victim.

"In some jurisdictions, a murder by torture may constitute murder in the first degree. It occurs when a defendant intentionally inflicts pain and suffering upon his victim for the purpose of revenge, extortion, or persuasion." 2 Charles E. Torcia, Wharton's Criminal Law § 144, at 281 (15th ed. 1994).

murder of the first degree. See first-degree murder.

murder of the second degree. See second-degree murder.

murder of the third degree. See third-degree murder.

murder one. See first-degree murder.

murder three. See third-degree murder.

murder two. See second-degree murder.

second-degree murder. Murder that is not aggravated by any of the circumstances of first-degree murder. — Also termed murder of the second degree; murder two. [Cases: Homicide 544.]

serial murder. A murder in which a criminal kills one of many victims over time, often as part of a pattern in which the criminal targets victims who have some similar characteristics. Cf. mass murder.

third-degree murder. A wrong that did not constitute murder at common law. • Only a few states have added to their murder statutes a third degree of murder. The other states classify all murders in two degrees. Manslaughter is not a degree of the crime of murder, but instead is a distinct offense. — Also termed murder of the third degree; murder three. [Cases: Homicide 548.]

willful murder. The unlawful and intentional killing of another without excuse or mitigating circumstances.

MURDER CLAUSE

murder clause. A contract provision that imposes onerous — often unreasonable — obligations on one party. • Murder clauses are usu. found in construction contracts.

MURDRUM

murdrum (m<<schwa>>r-dr<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. The secret killing of someone. 2. A fine against the tithing where the secret and unsolved homicide took place.

“The readiness with which the Norman administrators seized on this Anglo-Saxon system was probably due to its effectiveness in collecting the murdrum, the murder fine. In ordinary cases of homicide, the whole district — except the kin of the suspect — would be zealous to bring the malefactor to justice. But we can readily see that, if the person killed was a Norman, every effort would be made to shield the murderer. The Norman rulers had recourse to the device ... of imposing a group responsibility. The tithing within which the murdered Norman was found was compelled to pay a fine or to discover and surrender the homicide. The word murdrum is a word of uncertain etymology, and has given us our term for willful homicide.” Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 175–76 (1936).

3. Murder; specif., murder with malice aforethought. See MALICE AFORETHOUGHT.

MURORUM OPERATIO

murorum operatio (myuur-or-<<schwa>>m op-<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh). [Latin] Hist. Repair work to the fortifications of buildings, cities, or castles, performed by their inhabitants.

MUTATIO NOMINIS

mutatio nominis (myoo-tay-shee-oh nom-<<schwa>>-nis). [Latin] Roman law. Change of name. • It was allowed provided that no prejudice was thereby caused to others. The related phrase mutato nomine (myoo-tay-toh nom-<<schwa>>-nee) means “the name having been changed.”

MUTATIS MUTANDIS

mutatis mutandis (myoo-tay-tis myoo-tan-dis). [Latin] All necessary changes having been made; with the necessary changes <what was said regarding the first contract applies mutatis mutandis to all later ones>. [Cases: Contracts 159. C.J.S. Contracts § 323.]

MUTE

mute, n. 1. A person who cannot speak. [Cases: Witnesses 229. C.J.S. Witnesses § 398.] 2. A person (esp. a prisoner) who stands silent when required to answer or plead. • Formerly, if a prisoner stood mute, a jury was empaneled to determine whether the prisoner was intentionally mute or mute by an act of God. By the Criminal Law Act of 1827 (7 & 8 Geo. 4, ch. 28), if a prisoner was mute by malice, the officer automatically entered a plea of not guilty and the trial proceeded. If adjudicated to be insane, the prisoner was kept in custody until the Crown determined what should be done. — Also termed (in sense 2) standing mute.

MUTILATION

mutilation, n. 1. The act or an instance of rendering a document legally ineffective by subtracting or altering — but not completely destroying — an essential part through cutting, tearing, burning, or erasing. [Cases: Alteration of Instruments 1. C.J.S. Alteration of Instruments §§ 2–4.] 2. Criminal law. The act of cutting off or permanently damaging a body part, esp. an essential one. See MAYHEM. [Cases: Mayhem 1. C.J.S. Mayhem §§ 2–6.] — mutilate, vb. — mutilator, n.

MUTINY

mutiny (myoo-t*<<schwa>>*-nee), n. 1. An insubordination or insurrection of armed forces, esp. sailors, against the authority of their commanders; a forcible revolt by members of the military against constituted authority, usu. their commanding officers. [Cases: Armed Services 37; Military Justice 680. C.J.S. Armed Services § 155; Military Justice §§ 63, 114.]

“Both mutiny and failure to prevent, suppress, or report a mutiny are capital offenses.... The elements of mutiny are (1) creation of any violence or disturbance or acting in concert with others to refuse to obey orders (2) with the intent to usurp or override lawful military authority. One fails to prevent, suppress, or report mutiny when he does not take all reasonable means to overcome or report mutiny. Concert of action is not required for mutiny when the accused creates violence or disturbance.” Charles A. Shanor & L. Lynn Hogue, Military Law in a Nutshell 197–98 (2d ed. 1996).

2. Loosely, any uprising against authority. — Also termed (in both senses) inciting revolt. — mutinous,adj.

MUTINY ACT

Mutiny Act.Hist. An English statute enacted annually from 1689 to 1879 to provide for a standing army and to punish mutiny, desertion, and other military offenses. • It was merged into the Army Discipline and Regulation Act of 1879 (ch. 33).

mutuality. The state of sharing or exchanging something; a reciprocation; an interchange <mutuality of obligation>. [Cases: Contracts 10. C.J.S. Contracts § 108.]

MUTUALITY DOCTRINE

mutuality doctrine.The collateral-estoppel requirement that, to bar a party from relitigating an issue determined against that party in an earlier action, both parties must have been in privity with one another in the earlier proceeding. — Also termed mutuality of parties. [Cases: Judgment 666, 678. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 830, 833, 835, 861, 912.]

MUTUALITY OF ASSENT

mutuality of assent.See MEETINGS OF THE MINDS.

MUTUALITY OF BENEFITS

mutuality of benefits.See RECIPROCITY(2).

MUTUALITY OF CONTRACT

mutuality of contract.See MUTUALITY OF OBLIGATION.

MUTUALITY OF DEBTS

mutuality of debts. Bankruptcy. For purposes of setoff, the condition in which debts are owed between parties acting in the same capacity, even though the debts are not of the same character and did not arise out of the same transaction. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2674.]

MUTUALITY OF ESTOPPEL

mutuality of estoppel. The collateral-estoppel principle that a judgment is not conclusively in favor of someone unless the opposite decision would also be conclusively against that person. [Cases: Judgment 625, 666. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 833, 835.]

MUTUALITY OF OBLIGATION

mutuality of obligation. The agreement of both parties to a contract to be bound in some way. — Also termed mutuality of contract. See mutual assent under ASSENT. [Cases: Contracts 10. C.J.S. Contracts § 108.]

“[The] so-called doctrine of ‘mutuality of obligation’ in bilateral contracts ... unfortunately has been the cause of no little confusion. This confusion is evident from the fact that, while it is commonly admitted there is such a doctrine, there is a lack of unanimity, both in the statement of it and in regard to its application. The most common mode of statement is: ‘In a bilateral agreement both promises must be binding or neither is binding.’ This statement is obviously ambiguous, since it does not indicate in what sense the promises must be binding. The fact is that it has been variously interpreted and applied by the courts with results that have sometimes been inconsistent with other well settled principles of the law of consideration. Usually it has been held to mean that a promise that is not legally obligatory cannot be consideration in spite of the fact that it may satisfy all the usual requirements of consideration. However, at times it has in effect been held to involve the requirement that the undertaking of the promise relied upon as a consideration must be reasonably commensurate with, or equivalent to, the undertaking of the promise which it supports, before it can constitute consideration — a kind of doctrine of mutuality of undertaking.” John Edward Murray Jr., Murray on Contracts § 90, at 190–91 (2d ed. 1974).

“The doctrine of mutuality of obligation is commonly expressed in the phrase that in a bilateral contract ‘both parties must be bound or neither is bound.’ But this phrase is over-generalization because the doctrine is not one of mutuality of obligation but rather one of mutuality of consideration. Phrasing the rule in terms of mutuality of obligation rather than in terms of consideration has led to so-called exceptions and judicial circumventions It has been suggested that the term ‘mutuality of obligation’ should be abandoned and we must agree in the light of the confusion that this term has engendered.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 4–12, at 226 (3d ed. 1987).

MUTUALITY OF PARTIES

mutuality of parties. See MUTUALITY DOCTRINE.

MUTUALITY OF REMEDY

mutuality of remedy. The availability of a remedy, esp. equitable relief, to both parties to a transaction, sometimes required before either party can be granted specific performance. See SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE. [Cases: Specific Performance 6. C.J.S. Specific Performance §§ 11–14.]

mutuary (myoo-choo-er-ee). The recipient of property in a mutuum. See MUTUUM. Cf. MUTUANT. [Cases: Bailment 2. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 5, 14, 16–18.]

mutuatus (myoo-choo-ay-t<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin] A borrowing; a loan of money.

MUTUI DATIO

mutui datio (myoo-choo-Iday-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. The lending of objects that could be weighed, measured, or counted (such as bullion, corn, wine, oil, and coined money), on the understanding that the borrower would repay by restoring an equal amount of the object borrowed. See MUTUUM(2).

MUTUS ET SURDUS

mutus et surdus (myoo-t<<schwa>>s et s<<schwa>>r-d<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Hist. Deaf and dumb.

MUTUUM

mutuum (myoo-choo-<<schwa>>m), n. 1. A transaction (sometimes referred to as a bailment) in which goods are delivered but, instead of being returned, are replaced by other goods of the same kind. • At common law such a transaction is regarded as a sale or exchange, not as a bailment, because the particular goods are not returned. [Cases: Bailment 2. C.J.S. Bailments §§ 5, 14, 16–18.] 2. Roman law. A real contract in which money or fungible goods were delivered from the lender to the borrower, who was strictly liable to return an equivalent amount. • Because the contract was gratuitous, any interest had to be demanded by stipulation. This was one of the real contracts, along with the loan for use (commodatum (kom-<<schwa>>-day-t<<schwa>>m)) and deposit and pledge (pignoratium (pig-n<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh)). See MUTUI DATIO.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE

mysterious disappearance. A loss of property under unknown or baffling circumstances that are difficult to understand or explain. • The term is used in insurance policies covering theft. [Cases: Insurance 2152.]

“Under a policy insuring against loss of property by ‘mysterious disappearance’ recovery is generally allowed where the article disappears from the place the insured left it, while recovery is ordinarily disallowed where the insured has no recollection of when he last had possession of the article and cannot say when or from what place it disappeared. Thus the addition of the words ‘mysterious disappearance’ to a theft policy does not transform it to an ‘all loss’ policy covering lost or mislaid articles, but it remains a theft policy.” 43 Am. Jur. 2d Insurance § 501, at 575–76 (1982).

NARR-AND-COGNOVIT LAW

narr-and-cognovit law (nahr-and-kahg-noh-vit). [Latin narratio “declaration” and cognovit “the person has conceded”] Hist. A law providing that a plaintiff will be granted judgment on a note through an attorney's confession that the amount shown on the note, together with interest and costs, constitutes a legal and just claim. Cf. cognovit judgment under JUDGMENT; CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT. [Cases: Judgment 29, 54. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 138, 140, 143–144, 152–153, 169–170.]

narratio (n<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh), n. [Latin “narrative”] Hist. A declaration, complaint, or petition in which the plaintiff sets out the facts of a case; an oral narrative by the plaintiff of the facts and legal arguments on which the claim is based. • The term has also been called the “conte” or “tale.” — Abbr. narr.

“[T]he making of the count, in Latin the narratio, was the very centre of the legal process. We do not know how it came about that the litigant was allowed to speak through the mouth of another, though it has been suggested that it was not to prevent mistakes being made but to prevent them being fatal. Certainly the litigant could disavow what was said on his behalf; and perhaps it was only ‘said’ by him when he formally adopted it. If this is right, our modern barrister began as one who could harmlessly blunder.” S.F.C. Milsom, Historical Foundations of the Common Law 28 (1969).

NARRATIVE RECITAL

narrative recital. See RECITAL.

NARRATOR

narrator (na-ray-tor or na-ray-t<<schwa>>r), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A pleader or counter; a person who prepares pleadings (i.e., narrs). • For example, a serjeant-at-law was also known as serviens narrator. Pl. narratores (na-r<<schwa>>-tor-eez).

“The Latin narrator and its French equivalent contour became technical terms. If an English term was in use, it was perhaps forspeaker.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 215 n.1 (2d ed. 1898).

NARROW-CHANNEL RULE

narrow-channel rule. The navigational requirement that a vessel traveling down a slim fairway must keep as near to the fairway wall on the vessel's starboard side as is safe and practicable. 33 USCA § 2009(a)(i). [Cases: Collision 90. C.J.S. Collision §§ 160, 162, 165–174, 177, 180.]

NARROWLY TAILORED

narrowly tailored, adj. (Of a content-neutral restriction on the time, place, or manner of speech in a designated public forum) being only as broad as is reasonably necessary to promote a substantial governmental interest that would be achieved less effectively without the restriction; no broader than absolutely necessary. See designated public forum under PUBLIC FORUM. [Cases: Constitutional Law 90.1(4). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 556–557, 559–561, 568, 570–572, 580, 608.]

NATIO

natio (nay-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Hist. 1. A nation. 2. A group of students. 3. A native place.

nation, n.1. A large group of people having a common origin, language, and tradition and usu. constituting a political entity. • When a nation is coincident with a state, the term nation-state is often used. — Also termed nationality.

“The nearest we can get to a definition is to say that a nation is a group of people bound together by common history, common sentiment and traditions, and, usually (though not always, as, for example, Belgium or Switzerland) by common heritage. A state, on the other hand, is a society of men united under one government. These two forms of society are not necessarily coincident. A single nation may be divided into several states, and conversely a single state may comprise several nations or parts of nations.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 136 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

2. A community of people inhabiting a defined territory and organized under an independent government; a sovereign political state. Cf. STATE.

NATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY ACT

National Environmental Policy Act. A 1969 federal statute establishing U.S. environmental policy. • The statute requires federal agencies to submit an environmental-impact statement with every proposal for a program or law that would affect the environment. 42 USCA §§ 4321–4347 — Abbr. NEPA. See ENVIRONMENTAL-IMPACT STATEMENT. [Cases: Environmental Law 571–615.]

“One should not assume that NEPA's emphasis upon procedural consideration of environmental consequences somehow diminishes its stature. To the contrary, NEPA is the key environmental statute to be reckoned with in lawsuits challenging agency action on NEPA grounds. As a result of the popularity of NEPA in court, federal agencies have become extremely sensitive to NEPA's procedural commands. They have not only sought to articulate the environmental impacts of their decisions before-the-fact, they have also either abandoned projects or mitigated their adverse environmental consequences after performing NEPA studies.” Jan G. Laitos, Natural Resources Law § 4.01, at 119 (2002).

NATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL SATELLITE, DATA, AND INFORMATION SERVICE

National Environmental Satellite, Data, and Information Service. See NATIONAL OCEANIC AND ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION .

NATIONAL FIREARMS ACT

National Firearms Act. A 1934 federal statute that governs the manufacture, possession, and transfer of certain types of firearms and other weapons. • In its original form, the act banned gangster-type weapons, such as machine guns and sawn-off shotguns. It has been expanded by amendments to cover most rifles and handguns, and also “destructive devices” such as grenades and land mines.²⁶ USCA §§ 5801 et seq.

NATIONAL FOUNDATION ON THE ARTS AND THE HUMANITIES

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF STANDARDS AND TECHNOLOGY

National Institute of Standards and Technology. See TECHNOLOGY ADMINISTRATION.

NATIONALITY

nationality. 1. NATION(1). 2. The relationship between a citizen of a nation and the nation itself, customarily involving allegiance by the citizen and protection by the state; membership in a nation. • This term is often used synonymously with citizenship. See CITIZENSHIP. 3. The formal relationship between a ship and the nation under whose flag the ship sails. See FLAG STATE . [Cases: Shipping 2. C.J.S. Shipping § 1.]

“ ‘Nationality’ is a term which has long been used to define the legal relationship between a state and a ship which is authorized by the state to fly its flag.... Discussions in the International Law Commission in 1951 reflected concern that the use of the term ‘nationality’ in reference to ships was misleading as it implied similarity to the term's use in defining the legal relationship between a state and its citizen. Nonetheless, the term has continued to be the one most often employed in describing the relationship between a ship and its flag state. It is important to realize, however, that in spite of their common names, the legal relationship ascribed to the nationality of ships does differ from that arising from the nationality of natural or juridical persons.” Louis B. Sohn & Kristen Gustafson, The Law of the Sea in a Nutshell 1–2 (1984).

NATIONALITY ACT

Nationality Act. See IMMIGRATION AND NATIONALITY ACT.

NATIONALITY THEORY

NTSB. [Cases: Aviation 31. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace §§ 15–18, 27, 34.]

NATIONAL TREATMENT

national treatment. Intellectual property. The policy or practice of a country that accords the citizens of other countries the same intellectual-property protection as it gives its own citizens, with no formal treaty of reciprocity required. • The principle of national treatment underlay the first international intellectual-property treaties in the 19th century, the Paris and Berne Conventions, and is also embodied in the TRIPs Agreement. Cf. RECIPROCITY(3); UNIVERSALITY.

“The beauty of the principle of national treatment is that it allows countries the autonomy to develop and enforce their own laws, while meeting the demands for international protection.

Effectively, national treatment is a mechanism of international protection without harmonization.”
Lionel Bently & Brad Sherman, Intellectual Property Law 5 (2001).

NATIONAL-TREATMENT CLAUSE

national-treatment clause. A provision contained in some treaties, usu. commercial ones, according foreigners the same rights, in certain respects, as those accorded to nationals. [Cases: Treaties 8. C.J.S. Treaties § 6.]

NATURAL LAW

natural law. 1. A physical law of nature <gravitation is a natural law>. 2. A philosophical system of legal and moral principles purportedly deriving from a universalized conception of human nature or divine justice rather than from legislative or judicial action; moral law embodied in principles of right and wrong <many ethical teachings are based on natural law>. — Also termed law of nature; natural justice; lex aeterna; eternal law; lex naturae; lex naturalae; divine law; jus divinum; jus naturale; jus naturae; normative jurisprudence; jure naturae. Cf. FUNDAMENTAL LAW; POSITIVE LAW.

“Natural law, as it is revived today, seeks to organize the ideal element in law, to furnish a critique of old received ideals and give a basis for formulating new ones, and to yield a reasoned canon of values and a technique of applying it. I should prefer to call it philosophical jurisprudence. But one can well sympathize with those who would salvage the good will of the old name as an asset of the science of law.” Roscoe Pound, The Formative Era of American Law 29 (1938).

“It is true that when medieval writers spoke of natural law as being discoverable by reason, they meant that the best human reasoning could discover it, and not, of course, that the results to which any and every individual's reasoning led him was natural law. The foolish criticism of Jeremy Bentham: ‘a great multitude of people are continually talking of the law of nature; and then they go on giving you their sentiments about what is right and what is wrong; and these sentiments, you are to understand, are so many chapters and sections of the law of nature,’ merely showed a contempt for a great conception which Bentham had not taken the trouble to understand.” J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 20–21 (5th ed. 1955).

“[N]atural law is often an idealization of the opposite to that which prevails. Where inequality or privilege exists, natural law demands its abolition.” Morris R. Cohen, Reason and Law 96 (1961).

NATURAL LIBERTY

nautae, caupones, stabularii (naw-tee, kaw-poh-nee-z, stab-y<<schwa>>-lair-ee-I). [Latin] Roman law. Carriers by sea, innkeepers, stablers. • The phrase was used in an edict holding shippers, innkeepers, and stablers liable for damages to goods entrusted to them for safekeeping (receptum). Members of this group were also vicariously liable for the torts of their employees and slaves.

"The edict is in these terms: 'NAUTAE, CAUPONES, STABULARII, QUOD CUJUSQUE SALVUM FORE REPERINT, NISI RESTITUENT, IN EOS JUDICIUM DABO .’ This rule, from its expediency, has been, with some variations, received into the law of Scotland. Persons of this description are liable for their servants, or even for the acts of guests and passengers; and the extent of the damage may be proved by the oath of the claimant.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 737 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

NAUTICAL

nautical,adj. Of or relating to ships or shipping, carriage by sea, or navigation.

NAUTICAL ASSESSOR

nautical assessor.A person skilled in maritime matters who is summoned in an admiralty case to assist the judge on points requiring special expertise.

NAUTICAL MILE

nautical mile.A measure of distance for air and sea navigation, equal to one minute of arc of a great circle of the earth. • Different measures have been used by different countries because the earth is not a perfect sphere. Since 1959, however, the United States has used an international measure for a nautical mile, set by the Hydrographic Bureau, equal to 6,076.11549 feet, or 1,852 meters.

NAUTICUM FENUS

nauticum fenus (naw-ti-k<<schwa>>m fee-n<<schwa>>s), n.[Greek nautikon “nautical” + Latin fenus “interest”] Roman & civil law. A loan to finance the transport of goods by sea; specif., a loan on bottomry made to a transporter of merchandise by ship. • The loan is subject to an extremely high rate of interest because it does not have to be repaid unless the ship safely reaches its destination. The nauticum fenus is both a loan and marine insurance. The rate, originally unlimited because of the risks of sea travel, was eventually fixed at 12%. The money loaned is pecunia trajecticia (money conveyed overseas). — Also spelled nauticum foenus. — Also termed fenus nauticum; nautica pecunia; foenus nauticum.

NAVIGABLE

navigable (nav-i-g<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj.1. Capable of allowing vessels or vehicles to pass, and thereby usable for travel or commerce <the channel was barely navigable because it was so narrow>. [Cases: Navigable Waters 1. C.J.S. Navigable Waters § 1.]

navigable in fact,adj. Naturally usable for travel or commerce in the present condition. • A stream is navigable in fact if, in its natural and ordinary state, it can be used for travel or commerce. For admiralty jurisdiction, the water must be capable of being used as a route in interstate or international commerce in customary modes of travel. [Cases: Navigable Waters 1. C.J.S. Navigable Waters § 1.]

2. Capable of being steered <navigable aircraft>. — Also termed boatable. See NAVIGABLE WATER.

NAVIGABLE AIRSPACE

navigable airspace.See AIRSPACE.

NAVIGABLE SEA

navigable sea.Int'l law. The ocean waters divided into three zones of control among nations: (1) the inland waters, which are near a nation's shores and over which a nation has complete sovereignty; (2) territorial waters, which are measured from the seaward edge of the inland waters, over which a nation has extensive control but over which innocent parties must be allowed to travel to other nations; and (3) the high seas, which are international waters not subject to the domain of any single nation. [Cases: International Law 7. C.J.S. International Law §§ 23–24.]

NAVIGABLE WATER

navigable water. 1. At early common law, any body of water affected by the ebb and flow of the tide. • This test was first adopted in England because most of England's in-fact navigable waters are influenced by the tide, unlike the large inland rivers that are capable of supporting commerce in the United States. — Also termed boatable water. [Cases: Navigable Waters 1.C.J.S. Navigable Waters § 1.]

“In addition to its bearing on admiralty jurisdictional inquiries, the navigable waters issue comes up in cases involving the scope of Congress's regulatory authority under the commerce clause; the validity and interpretation of a variety of statutes and regulations administered by the Coast Guard; the powers of the Corps of Engineers over waterways, dams, marinas, etc., under the Rivers & Harbors Act and other statutes; the Federal Power Commission's authority to inspect and license electricity-generating dams; the existence and exercise of a servitude of navigation, which affects both public access to waterways on private land and governmental regulatory authority over such waters; and disputes over the ownership of stream beds. The foregoing is not an exhaustive listing. Well over a thousand federal statutes use the term 'navigable waters.' ” David W. Robertson, Steven F. Friedell & Michael F. Sturley, Admiralty and Maritime Law in the United States 53 n.1 (2001).

2. (usu. pl.) A body of water that is used, or typically can be used, as a highway for commerce with ordinary modes of trade and travel on water. • Under the Commerce Clause, Congress has broad jurisdiction over all navigable waters of the United States. [Cases: Navigable Waters 1. C.J.S. Navigable Waters § 1.] navigable water of the United States. Navigable water that alone — or in combination with other waters — forms a continuous highway for commerce with other states or foreign countries.

NAVIGATE

navigate, vb. 1. To travel or sail in a vessel on water <to navigate from New York to Bermuda>. [Cases: Collision 3, 90, 103. C.J.S. Collision §§ 28, 160, 162, 165–174, 177, 180, 184–185.] 2. To steer <to navigate the plane>. 3. To make way through, on, or about something <the plaintiff was unable to navigate the stairs in the dark>.

necessaries. 1. Things that are indispensable to living <an infant's necessities include food, shelter, and clothing>. • Necessaries include whatever food, medicine, clothing, shelter, and personal services are usu. considered reasonably essential for the preservation and enjoyment of life, to the extent that a person having a duty of protection must furnish them. — Also termed necessities; necessities of life. [Cases: Husband and Wife 19.] 2. Things that are essential to maintaining the lifestyle to which one is accustomed . • The term includes whatever is reasonably needed for subsistence, health, comfort, and education, considering the person's age, station in life, and medical condition, but it excludes (1) anything purely ornamental, (2) anything solely for pleasure, (3) what the person is already supplied with, (4) anything that concerns someone's estate or business as opposed to personal needs, and (5) borrowed money. Under the common law, a husband was required to pay debts incurred by his wife or children for necessities. Beginning in the late 1960s, most states began to change their statutes regarding the obligation to provide necessities to include both husband and wife. See DOCTRINE OF NECESSARIES; FAMILY-EXPENSE STATUTE .

3. Maritime law. Supplies and services needed for the maintenance and operation of a vessel, including repairs, tow fees, and the costs of loading and unloading. • Authorized provision of necessaries automatically confers a maritime lien to the provider under the Federal Maritime Lien Act, 46 USCA §§ 31341–31343. “The case law is clear that ‘necessaries’ does not mean absolutely indispensable; rather, the term refers to what is reasonably needed in the ship’s business.” Thomas J. Schoenbaum, Admiralty and Maritime Law 256 (1987).

NECESSARILY INCLUDED OFFENSE necessarily included offense. See lesser included offense under OFFENSE(1).

NECESSARIUS

necessarius (ne-s<<schwa>>-sair-ee-<<schwa>>s), adj. [Latin] 1. Necessary; essential. 2. Unavoidable; obligatory; compelling.

NECESSARY AND PROPER

necessary and proper, adj. Being appropriate and well adapted to fulfilling an objective.

NECESSARY AND PROPER CLAUSE

Necessary and Proper Clause. The clause of the U.S. Constitution permitting Congress to make laws “necessary and proper” for the execution of its enumerated powers. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 18. • The Supreme Court has broadly interpreted this clause to grant Congress the implied power to enact any law reasonably designed to achieve an express constitutional power. McCulloch v. Maryland, 17 U.S. (4 Wheat.) 316 (1819). — Also termed Basket Clause; Coefficient Clause; Elastic Clause; Sweeping Clause. [Cases: United States 22. C.J.S. United States §§ 30, 33.]

NECESSITAS

necessitas (n<<schwa>>-ses-i-tas), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. Necessity. 2. A force or influence that compels an unwilling person to act. • The term refers to a lack of free will to do a legal act, as opposed to libera voluntas (“free will”).

NECESSITAS CULPABILIS necessitas culpabilis (n<<schwa>>-ses-i-tas k<<schwa>>l-pay-b<<schwa>>-lis). [Latin “culpable necessity”] Hist. An unfortunate necessity that, while essentially excusing the act done under its compulsion, does not necessarily relieve the actor from blame.

“And as to the necessity which excuses a man who kills another se defendendo lord Bacon entitles it necessitas culpabilis For the law intends that the quarrel or assault arose from some unknown wrong ... and since in quarrels both parties may be, and usually are, in some fault; and it scarce can be tried who was originally in the wrong; the law will not hold the survivor entirely guiltless. But it is clear, in the other case, that where I kill a thief that breaks into my house, the original default can never be upon my side.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 186–87 (1769).

NECESSITATE JURIS

necessitate juris (n<<schwa>>-ses-i-tay-tee joor-is). [Latin] Hist. By necessity of law. • That phrase appeared in reference to acts necessarily arising from the effect of a legal rule.

NECESSITIES

necessities. 1. Indispensable things of any kind. 2. NECESSARIES(1).

NECESSITIES OF LIFE

necessities of life. See NECESSARIES(1).

NECESSITOUS

necessitous, adj. Living in a state of extreme want; hard up.

NECESSITOUS CIRCUMSTANCES

necessitous circumstances. The situation of one who is very poor; extreme want.

NECESSITUDO

necessitudo (n<<schwa>>-ses-i-t[y]oo-doh), n. [Latin "need"] Hist. 1. An obligation. 2. A close connection or relationship between persons, such as a family relationship.

NECESSITY

necessity. 1. Criminal law. A justification defense for a person who acts in an emergency that he or she did not create and who commits a harm that is less severe than the harm that would have occurred but for the person's actions. • For example, a mountain climber lost in a blizzard can assert necessity as a defense to theft of food and blankets from another's cabin. — Also termed choice of evils; duress of circumstances; lesser-evils defense. See lesser-evils defense under DEFENSE(1). [Cases: Criminal Law 38. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 49–53.] 2. Torts. A privilege that may relieve a person from liability for trespass or conversion if that person, having no alternative, harms another's property in an effort to protect life or health.

“In some cases even damage intentionally done may not involve the defendant in liability when he is acting under necessity to prevent a greater evil. The precise limits of the defence are not clear, for it has affinities with certain other defences, such as act of God, self-help, duress, or inevitable accident. It is distinguishable from self-defence on the ground that this presupposes that the plaintiff is prima facie a wrongdoer: the defence of necessity contemplates the infliction of harm on an innocent plaintiff. The defence, if it exists, enables a defendant to escape liability for the intentional interference with the security of another's person or property on the ground that the acts complained of were necessary to prevent greater damage to the commonwealth or to another or to the defendant himself, or to their or his property. The use of the term necessity serves to conceal the fact that the defendant always has a choice between two evils. This is what distinguishes the defence of necessity from that of impossibility.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 493 (17th ed. 1977).

manifest necessity. A sudden and overwhelming emergency, beyond the court's and parties' control, that makes conducting a trial or reaching a fair result impossible and that therefore authorizes the granting of a mistrial. • The standard of manifest necessity must be met to preclude a defendant from successfully raising a plea of former jeopardy after a mistrial. [Cases: Double Jeopardy 99. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 230.]

military necessity. See MILITARY NECESSITY.

moral necessity. A necessity arising from a duty incumbent on a person to act in a particular way.

physical necessity. A necessity involving an actual, tangible force that compels a person to act in a particular way.

private necessity. Torts. A necessity that involves only the defendant's personal interest and thus provides only a limited privilege. • For example, if the defendant harms the plaintiff's dock by keeping a boat moored to the dock during a hurricane, the defendant can assert private necessity but must compensate the plaintiff for the dock's damage. [Cases: Negligence 510(3). C.J.S. Negligence §§ 240, 317.]

public necessity. Torts. A necessity that involves the public interest and thus completely excuses the defendant's liability. • For example, if the defendant destroys the plaintiff's house to stop the spread of a fire that threatens the town, the defendant can assert public necessity.

3. RULE OF NECESSITY.

NECESSITY DEFENSE

necessity defense. See JUSTIFICATION(2).

NECK VERSE

neck verse. Hist. A verse, usu. consisting of the opening verse of Psalm 51 (Miserere mei, Deus "Have mercy on me, O God"), which was used as a literacy test for an accused who claimed benefit of clergy. • An accused who read the passage satisfactorily would not receive the maximum sentence (the person's neck would be saved). Although judges could assign any passage, they usu. chose Psalm 51, so that for many years criminals memorized this verse and pretended to read it. Still, the records show that many accused persons failed the test. The reading of the neck verse was abolished in 1707. See BENEFIT OF CLERGY.

"During the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries the judges' attitudes to benefit of clergy changed completely, and they came to see it as a regular means of escape from the mandatory death penalty. Physical appearance was disregarded, and reading became the sole test of clerical status. When a man was convicted of a felony, he would fall on his knees and 'pray the book'; he would then be tendered a passage from the psalter, known as the neck-verse, and if he could read or recite it satisfactorily his clergy was taken to be proved Strictly speaking, the decision whether the convict read 'as a clerk' was for the ordinary; but he was subject to the control of the judges, and could be fined for refusing to accept someone. By the end of the sixteenth century as many as half of all men convicted of felony were recorded as having successfully claimed benefit of clergy." J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 587 (3d ed. 1990).

NEC MANIFESTUM

nec manifestum (nek man-i-fes-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Civil law. Not manifest. • The phrase usu. referred to a theft in which the thief was not caught in the act.

NE CONJUGES MUTUO AMORE SE INVICEM SPOLIANT

ne conjuges mutuo amore se invicem spoliant (nee k<<schwa>>n-joo-jeez myoo-choo-oh <<schwa>>-mor-ee see in-vI-s<<schwa>>m spoh-lee-<<schwa>>nt). [Latin] Roman & civil law.

Lest spouses through their mutual love should impoverish one another. • The phrase appeared in reference to the rationale for holding that donations between husband and wife were invalid. A similar phrase, ne mutuato amore invicem spoliarentur (“lest they should be impoverished by each other through their mutual affection”), was also used.

NECROPSY

necropsy (nek-rop-see). See AUTOPSY(1).

NE DISTURBA PAS

ne disturba pas (n<<schwa>> di-st<<schwa>>r-b<<schwa>> pah), n.[Law French “did not disturb”] Eccles. law. A defendant's general denial (plea of the general issue) in a quare impedit action. See QUARE IMPEDIT.

NE DOMINIA RERUM SINT INCERTA, NEVE LITES SINT PERPETUAE

ne dominia rerum sint incerta, neve lites sint perpetuae (nee d<<schwa>>-min-ee-<<schwa>> reer-<<schwa>>m sint in-s<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>, nee-vee II-teez sint p<<schwa>>r-pech-oo-ee). [Latin] Hist. Lest the ownership of things should remain uncertain or lawsuits never come to an end. • The phrase appeared in reference to the principle on which all actions prescribed after (usu.) 30 years. See PRESCRIPTION.

NE DONA PAS

ne dona pas (n<<schwa>> doh-n<<schwa>> pah), n.[Law French “did not give”] Hist. A defendant's general denial (plea of the general issue) in a formedon action, alleging that the plaintiff was given the right to land under a gift of tail. — Also termed non dedit. See FORMEDON.

NÉE

née (nay), adj.[French] (Of a woman) born. • This term is sometimes used after a married woman's name to indicate her maiden name <Mrs. Robert Jones, née Thatcher>. The masculine form (not common in English) is né. — Also spelled nee.

NEED

need, n.1. The lack of something important; a requirement. 2. Indigence. — need, vb.

NEEDY needy, adj.1. Needful; necessary. 2. Indigent; very poor. • Needy implies a more permanent and less urgent condition than necessitous. See NECESSITOUS.

NE EXEAT

ne exeat (nee ek-see-<<schwa>>t [orek-see-at]). [Latin “that he not depart”].1. A writ restraining a person from leaving the republic; specif., an equitable writ ordering the person to whom it is addressed not to leave the jurisdiction of the court or the state. • Ne exeat writs are usu. issued to ensure the satisfaction of a claim against the defendant. The full phrase is ne exeat republica (nee ek-see-<<schwa>>t [orek-see-at] ri-p<<schwa>>b-li-k<<schwa>>h) [Latin “let him not go out of the republic”]. 2. Family law. An equitable writ restraining a person from leaving, or removing a child or property from, the jurisdiction. • A ne exeat is often issued to prohibit a person from removing a child or property from the jurisdiction — and sometimes from leaving the jurisdiction. — Also termed writ of ne exeat; ne exeat republica; ne exeat regno. [Cases: Ne Exeat 1. C.J.S. Ne Exeat §§ 2–4, 6, 9–10.]

“The district courts of the United States ... shall have such jurisdiction to make and issue in civil actions, writs and orders of injunction, and of ne exeat republica, orders appointing receivers, and such other orders and processes ... as may be necessary or appropriate for the enforcement of the internal revenue laws.” IRC (26 USCA) § 7402(a).

“Such a writ [ne exeat] might be issued upon the commencement of the suit for equitable relief, during the pendency of the suit, or upon issuance of the final decree to secure its enforcement. But such writ related primarily to the person of the defendant and issued only upon satisfactory proof that he planned or intended to remove himself beyond the court's jurisdiction so that he might escape obedience to such command as might be or had been laid upon him. The writ has been frequently termed an equitable bail. It involves taking and keeping the defendant in custody until he gives bail or bond in a designated amount, conditioned upon his keeping himself amenable to the effective processes of the court.” William Q. de Funiak, Handbook of Modern Equity 21 (2d ed. 1956).

NE EXEAT REGNO

ne exeat regno. See NE EXEAT.

NE EXEAT REPUBLICA

ne exeat republica. See NE EXEAT.

NEFAS

nefas (nee-fas), n. [Latin ne “not” + fas “right”] 1. Roman law. Something that the gods forbid. 2. Roman law. Something against the law or custom. 3. Hist. Something that is wicked. Cf. FAS.

NEFASTUS

nefastus (ni-fas-t<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin ne “not” + fastus “lawful for public business”] Roman law. A day when it is unlawful to open the courts, administer justice, or hold public assemblies. • The priests in charge of supervising the laws and religious observances established an official calendar, on which certain days, marked “nefasti,” were to be devoted to religious or public ceremonies. — Also termed dies nefasti. Cf. dies fasti under DIES.

NEGATE

negate, vb. 1. To deny. 2. To nullify; to render ineffective.

NEGATIVE

negative, adj. 1. Of or relating to something bad; not positive . 2. Of or relating to refusal of consent; not affirmative .

negative,n.1. A word or phrase of denial or refusal <“no” and “not” are negatives>.2. A word expressing the opposite of the positive <two negatives and one positive>.3. The original plate of a photograph, on which light and shadows are the opposite of the positive images later created and printed < not only the pictures, but also the negatives, were required to be returned>.4.Archaic. NEGLECT neglect, n. 1. The omission of proper attention to a person or thing, whether inadvertent, negligent, or willful; the act or condition of disregarding. 2. The failure to give proper attention, supervision, or necessities, esp. to a child, to such an extent that harm results or is likely to result. Cf. ABUSE. — neglect, vb. — neglectful, adj.

“ ‘Neglect’ is not the same thing as ‘negligence.’ In the present connection the word ‘neglect’ indicates, as a purely objective fact, that a person has not done that which it was his duty to do; it does not indicate the reason for this failure. ‘Negligence,’ on the other hand, is a subjective state of mind, and it indicates a particular reason why the man has failed to do his duty, namely because he has not kept the performance of the duty in his mind as he ought to have done. A man can ‘neglect’ his duty either intentionally or negligently.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 108 n.1 (16th ed. 1952).

child neglect. The failure of a person responsible for a minor to care for the minor's emotional or physical needs. • Child neglect is a form of child abuse. Local child-welfare departments investigate reports of child neglect. In a severe case, criminal charges may be filed against a person suspected of child neglect. [Cases: Infants 156.] culpable neglect. Censurable or blameworthy neglect; neglect that is less than gross carelessness but more than the failure to use ordinary care.

developmental neglect. Failure to provide necessary emotional nurturing and physical or cognitive stimulation, as a result of which a child could suffer from serious developmental delays.

educational neglect. Failure to ensure that a child attends school in accordance with state law.

excusable neglect. A failure — which the law will excuse — to take some proper step at the proper time (esp. in neglecting to answer a lawsuit) not because of the party's own carelessness, inattention, or willful disregard of the court's process, but because of some unexpected or unavoidable hindrance or accident or because of reliance on the care and vigilance of the party's counsel or on a promise made by the adverse party. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2656;

Judgment 362. C.J.S. Judgments § 320.]

inexcusable neglect.Unjustifiable neglect; neglect that implies more than unintentional inadvertence. • A finding of inexcusable neglect in, for example, failing to file an answer to a complaint will prevent the setting aside of a default judgment. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2656; Judgment 362. C.J.S. Judgments § 320.]

medical neglect.Failure to provide medical, dental, or psychiatric care that is necessary to prevent or to treat serious physical or emotional injury or illness. • In determining whether a parent's refusal to consent to medical treatment is neglectful, courts use any of three approaches: (1) an ad hoc test, (2) a best-interests-of-the-child test, or (3) a balancing test that weighs the interests of the parents, the child, and the state. Cf. FAITH-HEALING EXEMPTION.

physical neglect.Failure to provide necessities, the lack of which has caused or could cause serious injury or illness.

willful neglect.Intentional or reckless failure to carry out a legal duty, esp. in caring for a child.

NEGLECTED CHILD

neglected child.See CHILD.

NEGLECT HEARING

neglect hearing.See HEARING.

NEGLEGENTIA

neglegentia (neg-li-jen-shee-<<schwa>>), n.[Latin] Roman law. Carelessness; inattentive omission. • Neglegentia can be of varying degrees, which may or may not result in actionable liability. — Also spelled negligencia. See CULPA. Cf. DILIGENTIA.

“In the sources negligencia is tantamount to culpa, and similarly graduated (magna, lata negligencia). Precision in terminology is no more to be found here than in the field of culpa. One text declares ... ‘gross negligence (magna negligencia) is culpa, magna culpa is dolus’; another says: ‘gross negligence (dissoluta negligencia) is near to dolus (prope dolum).’ In the saying ‘lata culpa is exorbitant (extreme) negligence, i.e., not to understand (intelligere) what all understand’ ...negligencia is identified with ignorance.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 593 (1953).

lata neglegentia (lay-t<<schwa>> neg-li-jen-shee-<<schwa>>). Extreme negligence resulting from an unawareness of something that the actor should have known.

magna neglegentia (mag-n<<schwa>> neg-li-jen-shee-<<schwa>>). See gross negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

NEGLIGENCE

negligence,n.1. The failure to exercise the standard of care that a reasonably prudent person would have exercised in a similar situation; any conduct that falls below the legal standard established to protect others against unreasonable risk of harm, except for conduct that is intentionally, wantonly, or willfully disregarding of others' rights. • The term denotes culpable carelessness. The Roman-law equivalents are culpa and neglegentia, as contrasted with dolus (wrongful intention). — Also termed actionable negligence; ordinary negligence; simple negligence. [Cases: Negligence 201, 233, 250. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 14, 34, 59, 118–121, 125–127, 130–131, 133.] 2. A tort grounded in this failure, usu. expressed in terms of the following elements: duty, breach of duty, causation, and damages. [Cases: Negligence 202. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 21–31, 64, 649.]

“Negligence in law ranges from inadvertence that is hardly more than accidental to sinful disregard of the safety of others.” Patrick Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals 36 (1968).

“During the first half of the nineteenth century, negligence began to gain recognition as a separate and independent basis of tort liability. Its rise coincided in a marked degree with the Industrial Revolution; and it very probably was stimulated by the rapid increase in the number of accidents caused by industrial machinery, and in particular by the invention of railways. It was greatly encouraged by the disintegration of the old forms of action, and the disappearance of the distinction between direct and indirect injuries, found in trespass and case Intentional injuries, whether direct or indirect, began to be grouped as a distinct field of liability, and negligence remained as the main basis for unintended torts. Negligence thus developed into the dominant cause of action for accidental injury in this nation today.” W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 28, at 161 (5th ed. 1984).

“Negligence is a matter of risk — that is to say, of recognizable danger of injury In most instances, it is caused by heedlessness or inadvertence, by which the negligent party is unaware of the results which may follow from his act. But it may also arise where the negligent party has considered the possible consequences carefully, and has exercised his own best judgment. The almost universal use of the phrase ‘due care’ to describe conduct which is not negligent should not obscure the fact that the essence of negligence is not necessarily the absence of solicitude for those who may be adversely affected by one's actions but is instead behavior which should be recognized as involving unreasonable danger to others.” Id. § 31, at 169.

active negligence. Negligence resulting from an affirmative or positive act, such as driving through a barrier. Cf. passive negligence.

advertent negligence. Negligence in which the actor is aware of the unreasonable risk that he or she is creating; RECKLESSNESS. — Also termed willful negligence; supine negligence.

casual negligence. A plaintiff's failure to (1) pay reasonable attention to his or her surroundings, so as to discover the danger created by the defendant's negligence, (2) exercise reasonable competence, care, diligence, and skill to avoid the danger once it is perceived, or (3) prepare as a reasonable person would to avoid future dangers.

collateral negligence. An independent contractor's negligence, for which the employer is generally not liable. See COLLATERAL-NEGLIGENCE DOCTRINE.

comparative negligence. A plaintiff's own negligence that proportionally reduces the damages recoverable from a defendant. — Also termed comparative fault. See COMPARATIVE-NEGLIGENCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence 549. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 262–264.]

concurrent negligence. The negligence of two or more parties acting independently but causing the same damage. Cf. joint negligence.

contributory negligence. 1. A plaintiff's own negligence that played a part in causing the plaintiff's injury and that is significant enough (in a few jurisdictions) to bar the plaintiff from recovering damages. • In most jurisdictions, this defense has been superseded by comparative negligence. See CONTRIBUTORY-NEGLIGENCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence 547. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 293, 297.] 2. Rare. The negligence of a third party — neither the plaintiff nor the defendant — whose act or omission played a part in causing the plaintiff's injury. [Cases: Negligence 540. C.J.S. Negligence § 267.]

“The contributory negligence of a third party is no excuse for the negligence of the defendant.” Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 154 (13th ed. 1924).

criminal negligence. Gross negligence so extreme that it is punishable as a crime. • For example, involuntary manslaughter or other negligent homicide can be based on criminal negligence, as when an extremely careless automobile driver kills someone. — Also termed culpable negligence; gross negligence. [Cases: Criminal Law 23; Negligence 1800–1802. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 38; Negligence §§ 913–914, 916.]

culpable negligence. 1. Negligent conduct that, while not intentional, involves a disregard of the consequences likely to result from one's actions. 2. See criminal negligence.

“‘Culpable negligence,’ while variously defined, has been held incapable of exact definition; it means something more than negligence In connection with negligence, the word ‘culpable’ is sometimes used in the sense of ‘blamable,’ and it has been regarded as expressing the thought of a breach of a duty or the commission of a fault; but culpable negligence has been held to amount to more than ‘blameworthy’ conduct It does not involve the element of intent On the other hand, it has been said to be intentional conduct which the actor may not intend to be harmful but which an ordinary and reasonably prudent man would recognize as involving a strong probability of injury to others.” 65 C.J.S. Negligence § 1(13) (1966).

gross negligence. 1. A lack of slight diligence or care. [Cases: Negligence 273. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 91–97.] 2. A conscious, voluntary act or omission in reckless disregard of a legal duty and of the consequences to another party, who may typically recover exemplary damages. — Also termed reckless negligence; wanton negligence; willful negligence; willful and wanton negligence; hazardous negligence; magna neglegentia. [Cases: Damages 91; Negligence 273. C.J.S. Damages §§ 202–207; Negligence §§ 91–97.] 3. See criminal negligence.

“Negligence is gross if the precautions to be taken against harm are very simple, such as persons who are but poorly endowed with physical and mental capacities can easily take.” H.L.A. Hart, “Negligence, Mens Rea and Criminal Responsibility,” in Punishment and Responsibility 136, 149 (1968).

“Gross Negligence. As it originally appeared, this was very great negligence, or the want of even slight or scant care. It has been described as a failure to exercise even that care which a careless person would use. Several courts, however, dissatisfied with a term so nebulous ... have construed gross negligence as requiring willful, wanton, or reckless misconduct, or such utter lack of all care as will be evidence thereof But it is still true that most courts consider that ‘gross negligence’ falls short of a reckless disregard of the consequences, and differs from ordinary negligence only in degree, and not in kind.” W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 34, at 211–12 (5th ed. 1984).

hazardous negligence. 1. Careless or reckless conduct that exposes someone to extreme danger of injury or to imminent peril. 2. See gross negligence.

imputed negligence. Negligence of one person charged to another; negligence resulting from a party's special relationship with another party who is originally negligent — so that, for example, a parent might be held responsible for some acts of a child. [Cases: Negligence 483, 575; Parent and Child 13.5(2). C.J.S. Negligence §§ 152–153, 268–280; Parent and Child § 191.]

inadvertent negligence. Negligence in which the actor is not aware of the unreasonable risk that he or she is creating, but should have foreseen and avoided it. — Also termed simple negligence.

joint negligence. The negligence of two or more persons acting together to cause an accident. Cf. concurrent negligence.

legal negligence. See negligence per se.

negligence in law. Failure to observe a duty imposed by law. See negligence per se.

negligence per se. Negligence established as a matter of law, so that breach of the duty is not a jury question. • Negligence per se usu. arises from a statutory violation. — Also termed legal negligence. [Cases: Negligence 259. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 134–147.]

ordinary negligence. Lack of ordinary diligence; the failure to use ordinary care. • The term is most commonly used to differentiate between negligence and gross negligence. [Cases: Negligence 232.]

passive negligence. Negligence resulting from a person's failure or omission in acting, such as failing to remove hazardous conditions from public property. Cf. active negligence.

professional negligence. See MALPRACTICE.

reckless negligence. See gross negligence.

simple negligence. See inadvertent negligence.

slight negligence. The failure to exercise the great care of an extraordinarily prudent person, resulting in liability in special circumstances (esp. those involving bailments or carriers) in which lack of ordinary care would not result in liability; lack of great diligence.

subsequent negligence. The negligence of the defendant when, after the defendant's initial negligence and the plaintiff's contributory negligence, the defendant discovers — or should have discovered — that the plaintiff was in a position of danger and fails to exercise due care in preventing the plaintiff's injuries. — Also termed supervening negligence. See LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence 530. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 281–290, 313, 318.]

supine negligence. See advertent negligence.

tax negligence. Negligence arising out of the disregard of tax-payment laws, for which the Internal Revenue Service may impose a penalty — 5% of the amount underpaid. IRC (26 USCA) § 6651(a). [Cases: Internal Revenue 5219. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 824.]

wanton negligence. See gross negligence.

willful and wanton negligence. See gross negligence.

willful negligence. See advertent negligence.

NEGLIGENCE RULE

negligence rule. Commercial law. The principle that if a party's negligence contributes to an unauthorized signing or a material alteration in a negotiable instrument, that party is estopped from raising this issue against later parties who transfer or pay the instrument in good faith. • Examples of negligence include leaving blanks or spaces on the amount line of the instrument, erroneously mailing the instrument to a person with the same name as the payee, and failing to follow internal procedures designed to prevent forgeries. [Cases: Banks and Banking 148(3); Bills and Notes 279, 365(2). C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 434–435; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 29–30, 33, 150–151.]

negligent, adj. Characterized by a person's failure to exercise the degree of care that someone of ordinary prudence would have exercised in the same circumstance <the negligent driver went through the stop sign> <negligent construction caused the bridge to collapse>. [Cases: Automobiles 146; Negligence 200, 232. C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 18, 41, 500–503, 506–510, 545–546, 550–552, 554–555, 1299; Negligence §§ 5–13, 15–20, 33, 64.] — negligently, adv.

“[A] careful consideration is needed of the differences between the meaning of expressions like ‘inadvertently’ and ‘while his mind was a blank’ on the one hand, and ‘negligently’ on the other. In ordinary English, and also in lawyers' English, when harm has resulted from someone's negligence, if we say of that person that he has acted negligently we are not thereby merely describing the frame of mind in which he acted. 'He negligently broke a saucer' is not the same kind of expression as 'he inadvertently broke a saucer'. The point of the adverb 'inadvertently' is merely to inform us of the agent's psychological state, whereas if we say 'He broke it negligently' we are not merely adding to this an element of blame or reproach, but something quite specific, viz. we are referring to the fact that the agent failed to comply with a standard of conduct with which any ordinary reasonable man could and would have complied: a standard requiring him to take precautions against harm. The word 'negligently', both in legal and in non-legal contexts, makes an essential reference to an omission to do what is thus required: it is not a flatly descriptive psychological expression like 'his mind was a blank'." H.L.A. Hart, "Negligence, Mens Rea and Criminal Responsibility," in Punishment and Responsibility 136, 147–48 (1968).

NEGLIGENT ACT

negligent act. See ACT.

NEGLIGENT ENTRUSTMENT

negligent entrustment. The act of leaving a dangerous article (such as a gun or car) with a person who the lender knows, or should know, is likely to use it in an unreasonably risky manner. [Cases: Automobiles 192(11); Negligence 351–355; Weapons 18(1). C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 838–840; Negligence §§ 157–160, 170; Weapons §§ 52–53.]

NEGLIGENT ESCAPE

negligent escape. See ESCAPE(3).

NEGLIGENT HIRING

negligent hiring. Torts. An employer's lack of care in selecting an employee who the employer knew or should have known was unfit for the position, thereby creating an unreasonable risk that another person would be harmed.

NEGLIGENT HOMICIDE

negligent homicide. See HOMICIDE.

NEGLIGENTIA

negligentia (neg-li-jen-shee-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] Roman law. See NEGLEGENCIA.

NEGLIGENT INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS negligent infliction of emotional distress. The tort of causing another severe emotional distress through one's negligent conduct. • Most courts will allow a plaintiff to recover damages for emotional distress if the defendant's conduct results in physical contact with the plaintiff or, when no contact occurs, if the plaintiff is in the zone of danger. See EMOTIONAL DISTRESS; ZONE-OF-DANGER RULE. Cf. INTENTIONAL INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS. — Abbr. NIED. [Cases: Damages 49.10. C.J.S. Damages § 95; Torts §§ 67, 76–79, 82–83.]

NEGLIGENT MANSLAUGHTER

negligent manslaughter. See involuntary manslaughter under MANSLAUGHTER.

NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION negligent misrepresentation. See MISREPRESENTATION.

NEGLIGENT OFFENSE

negligent offense. See OFFENSE(1).

NEGLIGENT TORT

negligent tort. See TORT.

NÉGOCE

négoce (ni-gohs), n. [French] Trade; business.

NEGOTIABILITY

negotiability. The capability of commercial paper to have its title transferred by indorsement and delivery, or by delivery alone, so that the transferee has a rightful claim on it. • Negotiability (which pertains to commercial paper) differs from assignability (which pertains to contracts in general) because an assignee traditionally takes title subject to all equities, and an assignment is not complete without notice to the debtor, whereas an indorsee takes free of all equities and without any notice to the debtor. [Cases: Bills and Notes 144–175. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 3–4, 127–138, 143, 148, 155, 159.]

negotiable, adj. 1. (Of a written instrument) capable of being transferred by delivery or indorsement when the transferee takes the instrument for value, in good faith, and without notice of conflicting title claims or defenses. [Cases: Bills and Notes 144. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 127, 129–130, 143.] 2. (Of a deal, agreement, etc.) capable of being accomplished. 3. (Of a price or deal) subject to further bargaining and possible change. Cf. NONNEGOTIABLE; ASSIGNABLE.

“The term ‘negotiable,’ in its enlarged signification, is used to describe any written security which may be transferred by indorsement and delivery, or by delivery merely, so as to vest in the indorsee the legal title, and thus enable him to bring a suit thereon in his own name. But in a strictly commercial classification, and as the term is technically used, it applies only to those instruments which, like bills of exchange, not only carry the legal title with them by indorsement, or delivery, but carry as well, when transferred before maturity, the right of the transferee to demand the full amounts which their faces call for. ‘Assignable’ is the more appropriate term to describe bonds, and ordinary notes, or notes of hand as they are most commonly called; as ‘negotiable’ is the more fitting term to describe the peculiar instruments of commerce.” 1 John W. Daniel, A Treatise on the Law of Negotiable Instruments § 2, at 3 (Thomas H. Calvert ed., 7th ed. 1933).

NEGOTIABLE BILL OF LADING negotiable bill of lading. See BILL OF LADING.

NEGOTIABLE BOND

negotiable bond. See BOND(2).

NEGOTIABLE CERTIFICATE OF DEPOSIT negotiable certificate of deposit. See CERTIFICATE OF DEPOSIT.

NEGOTIABLE DOCUMENT OF TITLE negotiable document of title. See DOCUMENT OF TITLE.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT

negotiable instrument. A written instrument that (1) is signed by the maker or drawer, (2) includes an unconditional promise or order to pay a specified sum of money, (3) is payable on demand or at a definite time, and (4) is payable to order or to bearer. UCC § 3-104(a). — Also termed negotiable paper; negotiable note. • Among the various types of negotiable instruments are bills of exchange, promissory notes, bank checks, certificates of deposit, and other negotiable securities. [Cases: Bills and Notes 5, 144–175. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 3–4, 9, 127–138, 143, 148, 155, 159.]

“What are called ‘negotiable instruments,’ or ‘paper to bearer,’ such as bills of exchange, or promissory notes, do really pass from hand to hand, either by delivery or indorsement, giving to each successive recipient a right against the debtor, to which no notice to the debtor is essential, and which, if the paper is held bona fide and for value, is unaffected by flaws in the title of intermediate assignors.” Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 315–16 (13th ed. 1924).

“One must first understand that a negotiable instrument is a peculiar animal and that many animals calling for the payment of money and others loosely called ‘commercial paper’ are not negotiable instruments and not subject to the rules of Article 3.” 2 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 16-1, at 70 (4th ed. 1995).

NEGOTIABLE NOTE

negotiable note. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT.

NEGOTIABLE ORDER OF WITHDRAWAL negotiable order of withdrawal. A negotiable instrument (such as a check) payable on demand and issued against funds deposited with a financial institution. — Abbr. NOW.

NEGOTIABLE-ORDER-OF-WITHDRAWAL ACCOUNT negotiable-order-of-withdrawal account. See NOW account under ACCOUNT.

NEGOTIABLE PAPER

negotiable paper. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT.

NEGOTIABLE WORDS

negotiable words. The terms and phrases that make a document a negotiable instrument. — Also termed words of negotiability. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT . [Cases: Bills and Notes 147. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 128.]

NEGOTIATE

negotiate, vb. 1. To communicate with another party for the purpose of reaching an understanding <they negotiated with their counterparts for weeks on end>. 2. To bring about by discussion or bargaining <she negotiated a software license agreement>. 3. To transfer (an instrument) by delivery or indorsement, whereby the transferee takes the instrument for value, in good faith, and without notice of conflicting title claims or defenses <Jones negotiated the check at the neighborhood bank>. [Cases: Bills and Notes 176, 208. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 139, 143, 146, 148.]

NEGOTIATED AGREEMENT

negotiated agreement. A settlement that disputing parties reach between themselves, usu. with the help of their attorneys, but without benefit of formal mediation. — Also termed negotiated settlement.

NEGOTIATED MARKET

negotiated market. See MARKET.

NEGOTIATED OFFERING

negotiated offering. See OFFERING.

NEGOTIATED PLEA

negotiated plea. See PLEA(1).

NEGOTIATING BANK

negotiating bank. See BANK.

NEGOTIATION

negotiation, n. 1. A consensual bargaining process in which the parties attempt to reach agreement on a disputed or potentially disputed matter. • Negotiation usu. involves complete autonomy for the parties involved, without the intervention of third parties. [Cases: Contracts 25. C.J.S. Contracts § 60.]

“Negotiation, we may say, ought strictly to be viewed simply as a means to an end; it is the road the parties must travel to arrive at their goal of mutually satisfactory settlement. But like other means, negotiation is easily converted into an end in itself; it readily becomes a game played for its own sake and a game played with so little reserve by those taken up with it that they will sacrifice their own ultimate interests in order to win it.” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 128

2. (usu. pl.) Dealings conducted between two or more parties for the purpose of reaching an understanding. 3. The transfer of an instrument by delivery or indorsement whereby the transferee takes it for value, in good faith, and without notice of conflicting title claims or defenses. See HOLDER IN DUE COURSE. [Cases: Bills and Notes 176, 208. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 139, 143, 146, 148.] — negotiate,vb. — negotiable,adj. — negotiability,n.

due negotiation.The transfer of a negotiable document of title so that the transferee takes it free of certain claims enforceable against the transferor. • This is the good-faith-purchase exception to the doctrine of derivative title. UCC §§ 7-501(4); 7-502(1). [Cases: Warehousemen 15. C.J.S. Warehousemen and Safe Depositaries § 36.]

NEGOTIATION LETTER OF CREDIT negotiation letter of credit.See LETTER OF CREDIT.

NEGOTIORUM GESTIO

negotiorum gestio (ni-goh-shee-or-<<schwa>>m jes-chee-oh), n.[Latin “management of another's affairs”] Roman & civil law. A quasi-contractual situation in which an actor (negotiorum gestor) manages or interferes in the business transaction of another person (dominus negotii) in that person's absence, without authority but out of concern or friendship. La. Civ. Code art. 2292. • By such conduct, the actor is bound to conduct the matter to a conclusion and to deliver the transaction's proceeds to the person, who likewise must reimburse the actor for any expenses incurred. La. Civ. Code art. 2297. A negotiorum gestio does not exist if the gestor acted self-interestedly or if the owner expressly forbade the gestor from acting on the owner's behalf. See actio negotiorum gestorum under ACTIO. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts 2.1; Principal and Agent 149(2).C.J.S. Agency §§ 362, 372–374.]

“The negotiorum gestio, according to the civilians, is a species of spontaneous agency, or an interference by one in the affairs of another, in his absence, from benevolence or friendship, and without authority. The negotiorum gestor acquires no right of property by means of the interference, and he is strictly bound not only to good faith, but to ordinary care and diligence; and in some cases he is held responsible for the slightest neglect.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *616 n.(c) (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

NEGOTIORUM GESTOR

negotiorum gestor (ni-goh-shee-or-<<schwa>>m jes-tor), n.[Latin “a manager of another's affairs”] Roman & civil law. A person who acts without authority to protect another person's interests, in the reasonable belief that the owner would approve the action if made aware of the circumstances. La. Civ. Code art. 2292. • The actor has a claim to be compensated by the owner for the trouble taken, and the owner has a claim for any loss that results from the negotiorum gestor's fault. — Sometimes shortened to gestor. Pl. negotiorum gestores.See NEGOTIORUM GESTIO.

NEGOTIUM

negotium (ni-goh-shee-<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin] Roman law. 1. A matter; an affair, as in negotium absentis, a matter concerning an absent person. 2. A transaction; an agreement. 3. A trade; a business. 4. A civil or criminal trial. Pl. negotia.

NEIFE

neife (neef), n.[Law French] Hist. A person born into bondage or serfdom; specif., a female serf. — Also spelled naif; neif; niefe.

“For the children of villeins were also in the same state of bondage with their parents; whence they were called in Latin, nativi, which gave rise to the female appellation of a villein, who was called a neife.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 93–94 (1766).

NEIGHBOR

neighbor,n.1. A person who lives near another <Jensen's neighbor spotted the fire>.2. A person or thing situated near something <Canada is the United States' neighbor to the north>.3. A person in relation to humankind <love thy neighbor>.

NEIGHBORHOOD

neighborhood. 1. The immediate vicinity; the area near or next to a specified place. 2. People living in a particular vicinity, usu. forming a community within a larger group and having similar economic statuses and social interests. 3. The condition of being close together.

NEIGHBORHOOD EFFECT

neighborhood effect.See EXTERNALITY.

neighboring right.(usu. pl.) Copyright. An intellectual-property right of a performer or of an entrepreneur such as a publisher, broadcaster, or producer, as distinguished from a moral right belonging to an author or artist as the work's creator. • In civil-law systems, neighboring rights and moral rights are typically protected by different laws, while in common-law systems both are typically protected by the same copyright laws. — Also termed related right; entrepreneurial right; (in French) droit voisins; (in German) Leistungsschutzrecht; (in Italian) diritto connessi. Cf. MORAL RIGHT . [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41(3).]

“Civil law countries have generally, but not consistently, consigned protection of collaborative technological productions to regimes of neighboring rights. Common law countries, with their utilitarian emphasis on the products rather than the processes of creative work, have generally, but not consistently, included these productions in the subject matter of copyright, alongside such traditional objects as novels and musical works.” Paul Goldstein, International Copyright: Principles, Law, and Practice 157 (2001).

NEIGHBOR PRINCIPLE

neighbor principle. The doctrine that one must take reasonable care to avoid acts or omissions that one can reasonably foresee will be likely to injure one's neighbor. • According to this principle, neighbor includes all persons who are so closely and directly affected by the act that the actor should reasonably think of them when engaging in the act or omission in question.

NE INJUSTE VEXES

ne injuste vexes (nee in-j<<schwa>>s-tee vek-seez), n. [Law Latin “do not trouble unjustly”] Hist. A writ prohibiting a lord from demanding more services from a tenant than the tenure allowed.

“The writ of ne injuste vexes... which prohibits distresses for greater services than are really due to the lord; being itself of the prohibitory kind, and yet in the nature of a writ of right. It lies, where the tenant in fee-simple and his ancestors have held of the lord by certain services; and the lord hath obtained seisin of more or greater services, by the inadvertent payment or performance of them by the tenant himself. Here the tenant cannot ... avoid the lord's possessory right, because of the seisin given by his own hands; but is driven to this writ, to divest the lord's possession, and establish the mere right of property, by ascertaining the services, and reducing them to their proper standard.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 234 (1768).

NEITHER PARTY

neither party. A docket entry reflecting the parties' agreement not to continue to appear to prosecute and defend a lawsuit. • This entry is equivalent to a dismissal.

NE LUMINIBUS OFFICIATUR

ne luminibus officiatur (nee loo-min-i-b<<schwa>>s <<schwa>>-fish-ee-ay-t<< schwa>>r). [Latin “that lights be not impeded”] Roman law. An urban praedial servitude restraining a homeowner from constructing anything that blocks light to an adjoining house.

NEMINE CONTRADICENTE

nemine contradicente (nem-i-nee kahn-tr<<schwa>>-di-sen-tee). [fr. Latin nemo “nobody” + contradicere “contradict”] Without opposition or dissent. • This phrase expresses the lack of opposition by members of a court, legislative body, or other group to a resolution or vote <the motion passed nemine contradicente>. It is used in the English House of Commons. — Abbr. nem. con.; n.c.d. — Also termed nemine dissentiente.

NEMINE DISSENTIENTE

nemine dissentiente (nem-i-nee di-sen-shee-en-tee). [fr. Latin nemo “nobody” + dissentio “dissents”] See NEMINE CONTRADICENTE. • This phrase is used in the House of Lords. — Abbr. nem dis.; n.d.

NEMO

nemo (nee-moh), n.[Latin] No one; no man. • This term is the first word of many Latin maxims, such as nemo est supra leges (“no one is above the law”).

NE MUTUATO AMORE INVICEM SPOLIARENTUR ne mutuato amore invicem spoliarentur (nee myoo-choo-ay-toh <<schwa>>-mor-ee in-vI-s<<schwa>>m spoh-lee-<<schwa>>-ren-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin] See NE CONJUGES MUTUO AMORE SE INVICEM SPOLIANT .

ne unques accouple (nee <<schwa>>ng-kweez <<schwa>>k<<schwa>>p-<<schwa>>l), n. [Law French “never married”] In a dower action by a widow to recover the estate of her deceased husband, a tenant's plea denying the woman's marriage to the decedent. — Also termed ne unques accouple en loiall matrimonies. See DOWER.

NE UNQUES EXECUTOR

ne unques executor (nee <<schwa>>ng-kweez ig-zek-y<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r), n. [Law French “never executor”] A plea that the defendant or plaintiff is not an executor as alleged.

NE UNQUES SEISE QUE DOWER

ne unques seise que dower (nee <<schwa>>ng-kweez see-zee k<<schwa>> dow-<<schwa>>r), n. [Law French “never seised of a dowable estate”] Hist. In a dower action, the tenant's general denial (plea of general issue) that the widow's husband was never seised of a dowable estate of inheritance.

NE UNQUES SON RECEIVER

ne unques son receiver (nee <<schwa>>ng-kweez sawn ri-see-v<<schwa>>r), n.[Law French “never a receiver”] In an action for an accounting, the defendant's plea denying the receipt of anything from the plaintiff. — Also termed ne unques receivour.

NE URBS RUINIS DEFORMETUR

ne urbs ruinis deformetur (nee <<schwa>>rbz roo-I-nis di-for-m<<schwa>>-t<< schwa>>r). [Latin] Scots law. Lest the city should be disfigured by ruinous houses. • The phrase appeared in reference to the jurisdiction of the Dean of Guild, who presided over construction projects, to order repairs to or demolition of unsafe buildings.

NEUTRAL

neutral,adj.1. Indifferent. 2. (Of a judge, mediator, arbitrator, or actor) refraining from taking sides in a dispute.

neutral,n. 1. A person or country taking no side in a dispute; esp., a country that is at peace and is committed to aid neither of two or more belligerents. Cf. BELLIGERENT.

“The rights of neutrals have grown up to be an important part of international law in modern times.... Now, when a war arises between two states, the interests of all neutrals are more affected than formerly; or, in other words, neutral power has increased more than war power, and the tendency is more and more towards such alterations of the code of war as will favor neutral commerce” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 163, at 276 (5th ed. 1878).

2. A nonpartisan arbitrator typically selected by two other arbitrators — one of whom has been selected by each side in the dispute.

NEUTRALITY

neutrality,n. The condition of a nation that in time of war takes no part in the dispute but continues peaceful dealings with the belligerents. — neutral,adj.

armed neutrality.A condition of neutrality that the neutral state is willing to maintain by military force.

NEUTRALITY LAW

neutrality law.Int'l law. An act that prohibits a nation from militarily aiding either of two or more belligerent powers with which the nation is at peace; esp., a federal statute forbidding acts — such as the equipping of armed vessels or the enlisting of troops — designed to assist either of two belligerents that are at peace with the United States. 22 USCA §§ 441–457. [Cases: Neutrality Laws 1–5. C.J.S. Neutrality Laws §§ 2–7.]

NEUTRALITY PROCLAMATION

neutrality proclamation.Int'l law. At the outbreak of a war between two nations, an announcement by the President that the United States is neutral and that its citizens may not violate the neutrality laws, as in the Neutrality Proclamation of 1793, issued during the war between France and Great Britain.

NEUTRALIZATION

neutralization. 1. The act of making something ineffective. 2.Int'l law. The process by which a country's integrity has been permanently guaranteed by international treaty, conditionally on its maintaining a perpetual neutrality except in its own defense. • Switzerland is the only remaining example, having been neutralized by the Treaty of Vienna in 1815 — a provision reaffirmed by the Treaty of Versailles in 1919. 3. The act of declaring certain persons or property neutral and safe from capture. See NEUTRAL PROPERTY . 4.Evidence. The cancellation of unexpected harmful testimony from a witness by showing, usu. by cross-examination, that the witness has made conflicting statements. • For example, a prosecutor may attempt to neutralize testimony of a state witness who offers unexpected adverse testimony. See IMPEACHMENT(2).

NEUTRAL PRINCIPLES

neutral principles.Constitutional law. Rules grounded in law, as opposed to rules based on personal interests or beliefs. • In this context, the phrase was popularized by Herbert Wechsler. See Toward Neutral Principles of Constitutional Law, 73 Harv. L. Rev. 1 (1959).

NEUTRAL PROPERTY

neutral property.Things belonging to citizens of a country that is not a party to a war, as long as the things are properly used and labeled. • For example, harmless neutral property aboard a captured belligerent ship would not normally be subject to seizure. But the hiding of explosives in otherwise neutral property could allow the property to be seized as contraband.

NEUTRON-ACTIVATION ANALYSIS

neutron-activation analysis.A method of identifying and analyzing physical evidence by measuring gamma rays emitted by a sample of material after that material has been bombarded with neutrons in a nuclear reactor. • This technique can be used, for example, to detect gunshot residue on the hand of someone who recently fired a gun. The analysis is usu. expensive to perform, but most courts allow the results into evidence. — Abbr. NAA.

NE VARIETUR

ne varietur (nee vair-ee-ee-t<<schwa>>r), n.[Latin “it must not be altered”] A notation of identity that a person, usu. a notary, places on documents or translations of documents. • In Louisiana, this notation is typically placed on a collateral mortgage note to bind and identify the note with the collateral mortgage.

NEVER INDEBTED, PLEA OF

never indebted, plea of.A common-law traverse — or denial — by which the defendant in an action on a contract debt denies that an express or implied contract existed. — Also termed non debit. See TRAVERSE. [Cases: Bills and Notes 474; Contracts 339. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 271; Contracts §§ 657–658.]

NEW-DEBTOR SYNDROME

new-debtor syndrome.Conduct showing a debtor's bad faith in filing for bankruptcy, as a result of which the court may dismiss the bankruptcy petition. • An example is the debtor's formation of a corporation, immediately before the bankruptcy filing, solely to take advantage of the bankruptcy laws. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2252.1.]

NEW DRUG

new drug. See DRUG.

NEW-FOR-OLD

new-for-old. 1. Marine insurance. In adjusting a partial marine-insurance loss, the principle that old materials apply toward payment of the new, so that the old material's value is deducted from the total repair expenses, and then from that balance one-third of the cost of repairs (one-third of the new materials for the old on the balance) is deducted and charged against the insured shipowner. — Also termed deduction for new. [Cases: Insurance 2244. C.J.S. Insurance § 1208.] 2. The principle that a party whose property has been damaged is entitled to recover only the amount necessary to restore the property to the condition it was in before the damage, instead of acquiring a new item to replace one that was old and depreciated. [Cases: Damages 103. C.J.S. Damages §§ 129, 142.]

NEW INN

New Inn. Hist. English law. One of the Inns of Chancery (collegiate houses) in which law students were placed before entering the Inns of Court. • This practice continued until approximately 1650, when the buildings began to be used only by barristers and solicitors. See INN OF CHANCERY. Cf. INN OF COURT .

NEW MATTER

new matter. 1. MATTER. 2. Patents. Additional information in an amended patent application that departs from the original disclosure. • Since the new matter was reduced to practice after the application was filed, it cannot carry the same filing date. Rather, it must be included in a continuation-in-part application. — Also termed disconformity. [Cases: Patents 109. C.J.S. Patents §§ 152–155.]

NEW-MATTER REJECTION

new-matter rejection. See REJECTION.

NEW PROMISE

new promise. See PROMISE.

NEW-RULE PRINCIPLE

new-rule principle. Criminal procedure. A doctrine barring federal courts from granting habeas corpus relief to a state prisoner because of a rule, not dictated by existing precedent, announced after the prisoner's conviction and sentence became final. — Also termed nonretroactivity principle. See HABEAS CORPUS . [Cases: Courts 100(1). C.J.S. Courts §§ 147–148.]

NEW RULING

new ruling. Criminal procedure. A Supreme Court ruling not dictated by precedent existing when the defendant's conviction became final and thus not applicable retroactively to habeas cases. • For example, when the Court in Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 106 S.Ct. 2595 (1986), ruled that the Eighth Amendment prohibits execution of insane prisoners, this new ruling was nonretroactive because it departed so widely from prior doctrine. Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288, 109 S.Ct. 1060 (1989). See HABEAS CORPUS. [Cases: Courts 100(1). C.J.S. Courts §§ 147–148.]

daily newspaper. A newspaper customarily published five to seven days every week. — Often shortened to daily.

legal newspaper. A newspaper containing matters of legal interest including summaries of cases, legal advertisements, legislative or regulatory changes, and local bankruptcy notices. [Cases: Newspapers 1–7. C.J.S. Newspapers §§ 2–29.]

newspaper of general circulation. A newspaper that contains news and information of interest to the general public, rather than to a particular segment, and that is available to the public within a certain geographic area. • Legal notices (such as a class-action notice) are often required by law to be published in a newspaper of general circulation. [Cases: Newspapers 3(5). C.J.S. Newspapers §§ 4–5.]

“The phrase ‘newspaper of general circulation’ is a term of art in most states and does not necessarily mean the newspaper best calculated to reach interested persons.” Ann Taylor Schwing, Open Meeting Laws § 5.28, at 190–91 (2d ed. 2000).

official newspaper. A newspaper designated to contain all the public notices, resolves, acts, and advertisements of a state or municipal legislative body. [Cases: Newspapers 1–7. C.J.S. Newspapers §§ 2–29.]

NEWSPAPER PROSPECTUS

newspaper prospectus. See PROSPECTUS.

NEW STYLE

new style. The modern system for ordering time according to the Gregorian method, introduced by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582 and adopted in England and the American colonies in 1752. • Because the Julian calendar was slightly longer than the astronomical year, the vernal equinox was displaced by ten days. Pope Gregory reformed the calendar by announcing that October 5, 1582 would be called October 15. And, while generally retaining a leap year for years divisible by 4, he skipped leap years in years divisible by 100 (such as 1800 and 1900), but retained leap years for years divisible by 400 (such as 2000). Thus, the years 2000, 2004, 2008, etc. are leap years, but 2100 is not. — Abbr. n.s. — Also termed Gregorian calendar. Cf. OLD STYLE.

Cf. guardian ad litem under GUARDIAN. [Cases: Infants 76; Mental Health 485.C.J.S. Infants § 222; Insane Persons § 264.]

NEXT-IN, FIRST-OUT

next-in, first-out.A method of inventory valuation (but not a generally accepted accounting principle) whereby the cost of goods is based on their replacement cost rather than their actual cost. — Abbr. NIFO. Cf. FIRST-IN, FIRST-OUT ; LAST-IN, FIRST-OUT.

NEXT OF KIN

next of kin. 1. The person or persons most closely related to a decedent by blood or affinity. Cf. RELATIVE. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 20–43; Wills 508. C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 23–49; Wills§ 921.] 2. An intestate's heirs — that is, the person or persons entitled to inherit personal property from a decedent who has not left a will. See HEIR.

NEXT PRESENTATION

next presentation. See PRESENTATION.

NEXUM

nexum (nek-s<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman law. A transaction or practice of early Roman law under which a debtor, upon a failure to repay the debt, could be seized and held in bondage until the debt was repaid. • This practice was allowed in very early Roman law.

“Nexum. This highly controversial matter will be briefly dealt with as nexum had long been obsolete in classical law. Little is really known of it: it has been doubted whether there ever was such an institution. No text tells us that there was a contract called nexum But we have texts which speak of nexum as creative of obligation ... and many literary texts dealing with debtors who were nexi, so that it may be taken as certain that there was such a transaction ... which in some way reduced debtors to a sort of slavery, that great hardships resulted and that a l. Poetelia... practically ended this state of things, presumably by requiring an actual judgment before seizure. The effect was not to abolish nexum, but, by depriving it of its chief value, the power of seizure ... to leave it with no advantages to counterbalance its clumsiness, so that it went out of use.” W.W. Buckland, A Text-Book of Roman Law from Augustus to Justinian 429–30 (Peter Stein ed., 3d ed. 1963).

nexus, n. 1. A connection or link, often a causal one <cigarette packages must inform consumers of the nexus between smoking and lung cancer>. Pl. nexuses; nexus. 2. Roman law. (ital.) In very early times, a debtor given in bondage to creditors until the debts have been paid. Pl. nexi. See NEXUM.

NEXUS REALIS

nexus realis (nek-s<<schwa>>s ree-ay-lis). [Latin “a real fetter”] Scots law. An encumbrance to property, such as a servitude.

NEXUS TEST

nexus test. The standard by which a private person's act is considered state action — and may give rise to liability for violating someone's constitutional rights — if the conduct is so closely related to the government's conduct that the choice to undertake it may fairly be said to be that of the state. • While similar to the symbiotic-relationship test, the nexus test focuses on the particular act complained of, instead of on the overall relationship of the parties. Still, some courts use the terms and analyses interchangeably. — Also termed close-nexus test. Cf. SYMBIOTIC-RELATIONSHIP TEST T. See JOINT PARTICIPATION; STATE-COMPULSION TEST. [Cases: Civil Rights 1326(4, 7). C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 92–94.]

“The complaining party must ... show that there is a sufficiently close nexus between the State and the challenged action of the regulated entity so that the action of the latter may be fairly treated as that of the State itself. The purpose of this requirement is to assure that constitutional standards are invoked only when it can be said that the State is responsible for the specific conduct of which the plaintiff complains.... [O]ur precedents indicate that a State normally can be held responsible for a private decision only when it has exercised coercive power or has provided such significant encouragement, either overt or covert, that the choice must in law be deemed to be that of the State.” Blum v. Yaretsky, 457 U.S. 991, 1004, 102 S.Ct. 2777, 2786 (1982).

night. 1. The time from sunset to sunrise. 2. Darkness; the time when a person's face is not discernible. • This definition was used in the common-law definition of certain offenses, such as burglary. [Cases: Burglary 8. C.J.S. Burglary §§ 26, 36.]

“The definition of a burglar, as given by Sir Edward Coke, is, ‘he that by night breaketh and entereth into a mansion-house, with intent to commit a felony.’ ... The time must be by night, and not by day; for in the daytime there is no burglary As to what is reckoned night, and what day, for this purpose anciently the day was accounted to begin only at sunrising, and to end immediately upon sunset; but the better opinion seems to be, that if there be daylight ... enough, begun or left, to discern a man's face withal, it is no burglary. But this does not extend to moonlight; for then many midnight burglaries would go unpunished: and besides, the malignity of the offence does not so properly arise from its being done in the dark, as at the dead of night when all the creation, except beasts of prey, are at rest; when sleep has disarmed the owner, and rendered his castle defenceless.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 224 (1769).

3. Thirty minutes after sunset and thirty minutes before sunrise, or a similar definition as set forth by statute, as in a statute requiring specific authorization for night searches. 4. Evening. — Also termed nighttime. Cf. DAY.

nightwalker. 1.Hist. A person who suspiciously wanders about at night and who might disturb the peace. • Nightwalking was an example of a “common” offense requiring no specific facts to be asserted in the indictment. 2. A prostitute who walks the streets at night; a streetwalker. [Cases: Prostitution 1. C.J.S. Prostitution and Related Offenses §§ 2–4, 8–13, 17, 21–24.] 3. A sleepwalker.

nihil dicit (nI-hil dI-sit), n.[Latin “he says nothing”] 1. The failure of a defendant to answer a lawsuit. [Cases: Judgment 106. C.J.S. Judgments § 212.] 2. See nil dicit default judgment under DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

NIHIL DICIT DEFAULT JUDGMENT

nihil dicit default judgment.See nil dicit default judgment under DEFAULT JUDGMENT .

NIHIL EST

nihil est (nI-hil est). [Latin “there is nothing”] A form of return by a sheriff or constable who was unable to serve a writ because nothing was found to levy on. — Often shortened to nihil. Cf. NULLA BONA. [Cases: Execution 334. C.J.S. Executions §§ 324–325.]

NIHIL HABET

nihil habet (nI-hil hay-b<<schwa>>t). [Latin “he has nothing”] A form of return by a sheriff or constable who was unable to serve a scire facias or other writ on the defendant. See SCIRE FACIAS.

nihilism (nI-<<schwa>>l-iz-<<schwa>>m).1. A doctrine maintaining that there is no rational justification for moral principles and that there is no objective truth. 2. The view that traditional beliefs are unfounded and that life is meaningless and useless. 3. A theory that the existing economic, social, or political institutions should be destroyed, regardless of the result, because of the basic undesirability of those institutions. • This theory, featured by Ivan Turgenev in his 1861 novel Fathers and Sons, was popular among Russian extremists until the collapse of the czarist government.

NIHILIST

nihilist, n. A person who advocates nihilism. See NIHILISM.

NIHIL NOVIT

nihil novit (nī-hil noh-vit). [Law Latin] Scots law. He knew nothing. • The phrase appeared in reference to a defendant's oath denying any knowledge of the matter in issue.

“[A] defender may swear that he knows nothing of the matter referred, and so obtain absolvitor; but such an answer would not avail any defender in regard to a factum proprium. In regard to such a matter, an answer of nihil novit would, in the general case, be regarded as simply an evasion, and be treated as an admission of the debt.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 387 (4th ed. 1894).

NIL

nil (nil). [Latin] Nothing. • This word is a contracted form of nihil. See NIHIL EST.

NIL DEBET

nil debet (nil deb-<<schwa>>t). [Latin “he owes nothing”] Hist. A general denial in a debt action on a simple contract.

“The proper general issue in debt on simple contracts and statutes is ‘nil debet,’ which is a formal denial of the debt. It denies not only the existence of any contract, but under it any matters in excuse or in discharge may also be shown.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 184, at 327 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

NIL DICIT DEFAULT JUDGMENT

nil dicit default judgment. See DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

NIL HABUIT IN TENEMENTIS

nil habuit in tenementis (nil hab-yoo-it in ten-<<schwa>>-men-tis), n. [Law Latin “he has nothing in the tenements”] Hist. In an action to recover rent on a lease, the defendant's plea that the landlord has no title or interest in the property at issue.

NINETY-DAY LETTER

ninety-day letter. Statutory notice of a tax deficiency sent by the IRS to a taxpayer. • During the 90 days after receiving the notice, the taxpayer must pay the taxes (and, if desired, seek a refund) or challenge the deficiency in tax court. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 6212, 6213. — Also written 90-day letter. — Also termed notice of deficiency; deficiency notice; tax-deficiency notice. Cf. THIRTY-DAY LETTER. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4542. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 650.]

NINTH AMENDMENT

Ninth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified with the Bill of Rights in 1791, providing that rights listed in the Constitution must not be construed in a way that denies or disparages unlisted rights, which are retained by the people. [Cases: Constitutional Law 82(2). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 445–446, 630.]

NISI

nisi (nĪ-sĪ), adj. [Latin “unless”] (Of a court's ex parte ruling or grant of relief) having validity unless the adversely affected party appears and shows cause why it should be withdrawn . See decree nisi under DECREE. [Cases: Motions 24. C.J.S. Motions and Orders §§ 20–23.]

NISI ALIUD CONVENERIT

nisi aliud convenerit (nĪ-sĪ-lee-lee-ə-ven-ə-rĪt). [Latin] Hist. Unless it has been otherwise agreed; unless something else has been agreed to.

NISI DECREE

NO-ACTION CLAUSE

no-action clause.An insurance-policy provision that bars suit against the insurer until the liability of the insured has been determined by a judgment. [Cases: Insurance 3549(4).]

NO-ACTION LETTER

no-action letter.A letter from the staff of a governmental agency stating that if the facts are as represented in a person's request for an agency ruling, the staff will advise the agency not to take action against the person. • Typically, a no-action letter is requested from the SEC on such matters as shareholder proposals, resales of stock, and marketing techniques. [Cases: Securities Regulation 81. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 242–244.]

NOACTUS REUS

no actus reus (noh ak-t<<schwa>>s ree-<<schwa>>s). A plea in which a criminal defendant either denies involvement with a crime or asserts that the harm suffered is too remote from the criminal act to be imputable to the defendant.

NO-ANSWER DEFAULT JUDGMENT

no-answer default judgment.See DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

NO ARRIVAL, NO SALE

no arrival, no sale.A delivery term, included in some sales contracts, by which the seller assumes the duty to deliver the goods to a specified place, and assumes the risk of loss for the goods while they are in transit. • If the goods arrive damaged or late, the buyer can either avoid the contract or accept the goods at a discount. [Cases: Sales 201(2).]

NO AWARD

no award. In an action to enforce an award, the defendant's plea denying that an award was made.

NOBILE OFFICIUM

nobile officium (noh-b<<schwa>>-lee <<schwa>>-fish-ee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin "noble office or privilege"] Scots law. The power of a superior court, the Court of Session, or the High Court to give equitable relief when none is possible under law.

NOBILITY

nobility, n. pl. 1. Persons of social or political preeminence, usu. derived by inheritance or from the sovereign. • In English law, there are various degrees of nobility, or peerage, such as dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts, and barons, and their female counterparts. Nobility is generally created either by a writ of summons to sit in Parliament or by a royal grant through letters patent, and was once usu. accompanied by a large land grant. Nobility by writ descended to a person's bodily heirs. The modern practice is to grant nobility by letters patent, which provide limitations as to future heirs. The U.S. Constitution prohibits granting a title of nobility. U.S. Const. art. I, § 9, cl. 8.

"In England nobility is apt to be confounded with the peculiar institution of the British peerage. Yet nobility, in some shape or another, has existed in most places and times or the world's history, while the British peerage is an institution purely local, and one which has actually hindered the existence of a nobility in the sense which the word bears in most other countries.... Nobility, then, in the strict sense of the word, is the hereditary handing on from generation to generation of some acknowledged pre-eminence, a pre-eminence founded on hereditary succession, and on nothing else.... The pre-eminence so handed on may be of any kind, from substantial political power to mere social respect and precedence." 17 Encyclopaedia Britannica 538 (9th ed. 1907).

2. Persons of high or noble character. 3. The collective body of persons making up the noble class.

NO BILL

no bill, n. A grand jury's notation that insufficient evidence exists for an indictment on a criminal charge <the grand jury returned a no bill instead of the indictment the prosecutors expected>. <the grand jury no-billed three of the charges>. Cf. TRUE BILL. [Cases: Grand Jury 42.] — no-bill, vb.

NO-BONUS CLAUSE

no-bonus clause. Landlord–tenant law. A lease provision that takes effect upon governmental condemnation, limiting the lessee's damages to the value of any improvements to the property and preventing the lessee from recovering the difference between the lease's fixed rent and the property's market rental value. See CONDEMNATION. [Cases: Eminent Domain 155. C.J.S. Eminent Domain § 190.]

NO CAUSE OF ACTION

no cause of action. See take-nothing judgement under JUDGMENT.

NOCENT

nocent (noh-s<<schwa>>nt), adj. [fr. Latin nocere “harm”] Archaic. 1. Injurious; harmful. 2. Guilty; criminal. • This word is the little-used antonym of innocent.

nocent (noh-s<<schwa>>nt), n. [fr. Latin nocere “harm”] Hist. A person who is guilty.

NO-CLAIM

no-claim, n. The lack of a claim. • Legal philosophers devised this term to denote the opposite of a claim. As one jurist has said apologetically, “there is no word in English which expresses the lack of a claim and therefore the rather barbarous ‘no-claim’ has been suggested.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 291 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

NO-CONFIDENCE VOTE

no-confidence vote. The formal legal method by which a legislative body, by a majority vote, forces the resignation of a cabinet or ministry. — Also termed vote of no confidence.

NO-CONTACT ORDER

no-contact order. See STAY-AWAY ORDER.

NO CONTEST

no contest. A criminal defendant's plea that, while not admitting guilt, the defendant will not dispute the charge. • This plea is often preferable to a guilty plea, which can be used against the defendant in a later civil lawsuit. — Also termed no-contest plea; nolo contendere; non vult contendere. Cf. ALFORD PLEA. [Cases: Criminal Law 275. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 398–407, 417.]

NO-CONTEST CLAUSE

no-contest clause. A provision designed to threaten one into action or inaction; esp., a testamentary provision that threatens to dispossess any beneficiary who challenges the terms of the will. — Also termed in terrorem clause; noncontest clause; terrorem clause; anticontest clause; forfeiture clause. [Cases: Wills 651, 656. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1391–1392, 1403–1404, 1422.]

noctanter (nok-tan-t<<schwa>>r), n. [Latin “by night”] Hist. A chancery writ issued to a sheriff as a first step in the recovery of damages for destroying a ditch or hedge. • The neighboring villagers (vills) were held liable for the damages unless they indicted the offender.

NOCTEM DE FIRMA

noctem de firma (nok-t<<schwa>>m dee f<<schwa>>r-m<<schwa>>), n. [Law Latin “night of duty (payable)”] Hist. The duty or custom of providing entertainment or provisions for a night. • At the time of the Norman Conquest, this was the duty or custom of entertaining the king for one night. — Also termed noctes; firma noctis.

NOCUMENTUM

nocumentum (nok-y<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>m). [fr. Latin nocere “to harm”] Hist. A nuisance. • There was no remedy at law for a nuisance causing only property damage, but there was a remedy for a nuisance causing injury.

NO CURE, NO PAY

no cure, no pay. Maritime law. The common-law principle that compensation for salvage must come from the material salvaged, and that if no material is salvaged there can be no compensation. • By contrast, civil-law tradition awards compensation even for a failed effort. Cf. ASSISTANCE.

NO-DUTY

no-duty, n. Liberty not to do an act. — Also termed liberty not.

NO-DUTY DOCTRINE

no-duty doctrine. Torts. 1. The rule that a defendant who owes no duty to the plaintiff is not liable for the plaintiff's injury. 2. The rule that the owner or possessor of property has no duty to warn or protect an invitee from known or obvious hazards. [Cases: Negligence 1037(4). C.J.S. Negligence §§ 469–471, 487, 492–493, 527, 537–538, 542–554, 560, 562–563, 565, 569–570, 572.]

NOERR–PENNINGTON DOCTRINE

Noerr–Pennington doctrine. The principle that the First Amendment shields from liability (esp. under antitrust laws) companies that join together to lobby the government. • The doctrine derives from a line of Supreme Court cases beginning with Eastern R.R. Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127, 81 S.Ct. 523 (1961), and United Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 85 S.Ct. 1585 (1965). [Cases: Civil Rights 1374; Constitutional Law 91. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 143–144, 146, 157, 160; Constitutional Law §§ 461–462, 466, 612–629.]

NO EVIDENCE

no evidence. 1. The lack of a legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable fact-finder to rule in favor of the party who bears the burden of proof <there is no evidence in the record about his whereabouts at midnight>. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a party can move for judgment as a matter of law to claim that the other party — who bears the burden of proof — has been fully heard and has not offered sufficient evidence to prove one or more essential elements of the suit or defense. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50. Though such a contention is usually referred to as a no-evidence motion, the issue is not whether there was actually no evidence, but rather whether the evidence was sufficient for the fact-finder to be able to reasonably rule in favor of the other party. [Cases: Evidence 597; Federal Civil Procedure 2142.1. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1301, 1304, 1306, 1339.]

“Since judgment as a matter of law deprives the party opposing the motion of a determination of the facts by a jury, it should be granted cautiously and sparingly. Nevertheless, the federal courts do not follow the rule that a scintilla of evidence is enough to create an issue for the jury. The question is not whether there is literally no evidence upon which the jury properly could find a verdict for that party.” 9A Charles Alan Wright & Arthur Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2524, at 252–54 (2d ed. 1995).

2. Evidence that has no value in an attempt to prove a matter in issue <that testimony is no evidence of an alibi>.

NO-EYEWITNESS RULE

no-eyewitness rule. Torts. The largely defunct principle that if no direct evidence shows what a dead person did to avoid an accident, the jury may infer that the person acted with ordinary care for his or her own safety. • In a jurisdiction where the rule persists, a plaintiff in a survival or wrongful-death action can assert the rule to counter a defense of contributory negligence. [Cases: Death 58(1). C.J.S. Death §§ 141–145, 213–214.]

NO-FAULT

no-fault,adj. Of or relating to a claim that is adjudicated without any determination that a party is blameworthy <no-fault divorce>. [Cases: Divorce 12. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 13–18, 70.]

NOLENS VOLENS

nolens volens (noh-lenz voh-lenz), adv. & adj.[Latin] Willing or unwilling < nolens volens, the school district must comply with the court's injunction>.

NO-LIMIT ORDER

no-limit order.See ORDER(8).

NOLISSEMENT

nolisement (n<<schwa>>-lis-mahn), n.[French] French law. The chartering of a ship; AFFREIGHTMENT.

NOLITION

nolition (noh-lish-<<schwa>>n). The absence of volition; unwillingness.

NOLLE PROSEQUI

nolle prosequi (nahl-ee prahs-<<schwa>>-kwI), n.[Latin “not to wish to prosecute”] 1. A legal notice that a lawsuit or prosecution has been abandoned. [Cases: Pretrial Procedure 511. C.J.S. Dismissal and Nonsuit §§ 30–32, 34–35.] 2. A docket entry showing that the plaintiff or the prosecution has abandoned the action. — Often shortened to nolle. [Cases: Criminal Law 303.5–303.35. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 419–424.]

“In America the term [nolle prosequi] bears the same meaning as in England, with one exception. The attorney-general has not the same discretion with which English law invests him. Although in some States the prosecuting officer may enter a nolle prosequi at his discretion, in others the leave of the court must be obtained.” 17 Encyclopaedia Britannica 546 (9th ed. 1907).

“Nolle prosequi is a formal entry on the record by the prosecuting officer by which he declares that he will not prosecute the case further, either as to some of the counts of the indictment, or as to part of a divisible count, or as to some of the persons accused, or altogether. It is a judicial determination in favor of accused and against his conviction, but it is not an acquittal, nor is it equivalent to a pardon.” 22A C.J.S. Criminal Law § 419, at 1 (1989).

nolle prosequi (nahl-ee prahs-<<schwa>>-kwI), vb. To abandon (a suit or prosecution); to have (a case) dismissed by a nolle prosequi <the state nolle prosequed the charges against Johnson>. — Often shortened to nolle pros; nol-pros; nol-pro. [Cases: Criminal Law 303.5–303.35; Pretrial Procedure 501. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 419–424; Dismissal and Nonsuit §§ 2–7, 9–10, 12, 14–16, 24.]

NO-LOAD FUND

no-load fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

NOLO CONTENDERE

nolo contendere (noh-loh k<<schwa>>n-ten-d<<schwa>>-ree). [Latin "I do not wish to contend"] NO CONTEST. — Often shortened to nolo. [Cases: Criminal Law 275. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 398–407, 417.]

NOLO PLEA

nolo plea. See PLEA(1).

NO MAN'S LAND

no man's land. Labor law. The lack of clear jurisdiction between a state government and the federal government over labor disputes. • This term was common in the 1950s, but its use has declined as later laws have clarified jurisdictional issues.

NOM CLAUSE

NOM clause. abbr. NO-ORAL-MODIFICATION CLAUSE.

NOMEN

nomen (noh-men or -m<<schwa>>n), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A personal name. • A Roman citizen generally had three names: a praenomen ("first name"), a nomen ("the name of the family group"), and cognomen ("a surname"). 2. Hist. A person's first name. 3. More broadly, any name. Pl. nomina. See AGNOMEN.

nomen collectivum (noh-men kol-<<schwa>>k-t-i-v<<schwa>>m). [Latin] A collective name; a name of a class of things.

nomen generale (noh-men jen-<<schwa>>-ray-lee). [Latin] A general name; a genus.

nomen generalissimum (noh-men jen-<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>-lis-i-m<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] A name with the most general meaning.

"Nomen generalissimum. A very general name: a comprehensive term. Such are the terms crime, demand, draft, estate, goods, grant, heir, house, instrument, interest, land, merchandise, obligation, offense." William C. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 711 (1889).

nomen juris (noh-men joor-is). [Latin] A legal name or designation.

nomen universitatis (noh-men yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>-r-s<<schwa>>-tay-tis). [Latin] Hist. The name of the whole together.

"Thus the name Barony is, in our law, a nomen universitatis, for it includes not only the lands over which the rights of barony extend, but also the rights competent to the owner of the barony themselves." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 390 (4th ed. 1894).

NOMEN TRANSCRIPTICIUM nomen transcripticum (noh-men tran-skrip-tish-ee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin "entry (in an account) transferred"] Roman law. A creditor's entry of a money debt into a new account (expensilatio) after closing another account, thereby creating, with the debtor's permission, a literal contract from an existing obligation, which may or may not have been enforceable. Pl. nomina transcripticia.

"The subject will, perhaps, become clearer by examples: ... A has in the past had dealings by way of sale, exchange, etc., with B, of which an account appears in his codex showing a balance against B for 500 aurei. A, with B's consent, closes this account by a statement on the opposite page (contrary to fact) that B has paid the aurei... and opens a new account with the statement (contrary to strict fact) that he has advanced to B the sum of 500 aurei. Hence the expensilatio represents a nomen transcripticium; a nomen (debt) has been transferred from one account to another In effect the old contracts between A and B have been novated, i.e. extinguished, one single obligation having been substituted in their place; obviously a course which offered many advantages to both parties, as it simplified the accounts, and saved disputes about the previous transactions." R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 317–18 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

NO-MERIT BRIEF

NON ACCREVIT INFRA SEX ANNOS<TT>

non accrevit infra sex annos (non <<schwa>>-kree-vit in-fr<<schwa>> seks an-ohs), n.[Latin “it did not accrue in six years”] Hist. The general pleading form for the statute-of-limitations defense.

NONACQUIESCENCE

nonacquiescence (non-ak-wee-es-<<schwa>>nts).Administrative law. An agency's policy of declining to be bound by lower-court precedent that is contrary to the agency's interpretation of its organic statute, but only until the Supreme Court has ruled on the issue.

“Too much nonacquiescence, however, would interfere with the courts’ ability to prevent an agency from violating its statutory mandate. The practice is generally upheld, but is considered questionable when an agency adheres to its legal position in a case that could only be reviewed in a circuit that has already rejected the agency's stance. When the Social Security Administration made frequent use of the latter kind of nonacquiescence in the administration of its disability benefits program in the 1980's, it was widely criticized.” Ernest Gellhorn & Ronald M. Levin, Administrative Law and Process in a Nutshell 98 n.2 (4th ed. 1997).

age or capacity. Cf. SUI JURIS.

NONSUIT

nonsuit, n.1. A plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of a case or of a defendant, without a decision on the merits. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a voluntary dismissal is equivalent to a nonsuit. Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a). — Also termed voluntary discontinuance. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1691; Pretrial Procedure 501. C.J.S. Dismissal and Nonsuit §§ 2–7, 9–10, 12, 14–16, 24.] 2. A court's dismissal of a case or of a defendant because the plaintiff has failed to make out a legal case or to bring forward sufficient evidence. — Also termed involuntary nonsuit; compulsory nonsuit. See judgment of nonsuit under JUDGMENT. [Cases: Trial 139.1, 159, 384. C.J.S. Trial §§ 346–368, 405–408, 410, 415, 423, 1052–1057.] — nonsuit, vb.

“Nonsuit ... is equivalent to a demurrer to the evidence in that, even if all facts that plaintiff presents are true, the evidence is not, as a matter of law, sufficient to entitle plaintiff to a judgment. However, a voluntary nonsuit, unlike a demurrer or a directed verdict which resolves the action on its merits, may result in another trial of the cause.” 75A Am. Jur. 2d Trial § 853 (1991).

NON SUM INFORMATUS

non sum informatus (non s<<schwa>>m in-f<<schwa>>r-may-t<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin “I am not informed”] Hist. A type of default judgment based on a defense attorney's statement that the client gave no instructions to answer the lawsuit.

Cf. RETREAT RULE. [Cases: Homicide 769.]

no-right,n. The absence of right against another in some particular respect. • A no-right is the correlative of a privilege. — Also termed liability.

“A says to B, ‘If you will agree to pay me $100 for this horse you may have him and you may indicate your agreement by taking him.’ This is a physical fact, called an offer, consisting of certain muscular acts of A having certain physical results in B. The legal relations immediately following are (in part) as follows: B now has the privilege of taking the horse and A has no-right that he shall not” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 321 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“ ‘No-right’ is sometimes derided as being a purely negative concept. If a no-right is something that is not a right, the class of no-rights must, it is said, include elephants. The answer is that negative terms are often useful as alternative ways of stating propositions involving negatives. For instance, the terms ‘alien,’ ‘cold,’ and ‘dark’ are all negative or privative, because their meaning includes the idea of the absence of something else. The proposition that A is an alien means that A is not a British subject; in the one mode of statement the negative is incorporated in the noun, whereas in the other it is expressed as a separate word. Similarly the word ‘liberty’ is negative, and critics who attack the concept of no-right should logically attack the concept of liberty also.... [L]iberty means ‘no-duty not.’ ... [F]or the sake of clear thinking it is necessary to give each of the four meanings [of right] a separate name. Words like ‘no-right’ and ‘no-duty’ may seem uncouth at first sight, but it is surely a clear and useful statement to say that ‘right’ sometimes means ‘no-duty not.’ ” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 240–41 n.(u) (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

norm. 1. A model or standard accepted (voluntarily or involuntarily) by society or other large group, against which society judges someone or something. • An example of a norm is the standard for right or wrong behavior. 2. An actual or set standard determined by the typical or most frequent behavior of a group.

basic norm. In the legal theory of Hans Kelsen, the law from which all the other laws in a society derive. • Kelsen's “pure theory of law” maintains that laws are norms. Therefore, a society's legal system is made up of its norms, and each legal norm derives its validity from other legal norms. Ultimately, the validity of all laws is tested against the “basic norm,” which may be as simple as the concept that all pronouncements of the monarch are to be obeyed. Or it may be an elaborate system of lawmaking, such as a constitution. — Also termed grundnorm. See PURE THEORY.

NORMAL

normal, adj. 1. According to a regular pattern; natural <it is normal to be nervous in court>. • The term describes not just forces that are constantly and habitually operating but also forces that operate periodically or with some degree of frequency. NOTARY PUBLIC notary public (noh-t<<schwa>>-ree), n. A person authorized by a state to administer oaths, certify documents, attest to the authenticity of signatures, and perform official acts in commercial matters, such as protesting negotiable instruments. — Often shortened to notary. [Cases: Notaries 1. C.J.S. Notaries § 2.] — Abbr. n.p. Pl. notaries public. — notarize, vb. — notarial, adj.

"A notary public is an officer long known to the civil law, and designated as registrarius, actuarius, or scrivarius." John Proffatt, A Treatise on the Law Relating to the Office and Duties of Notaries Public § 1, at 1 (John F. Tyler & John J. Stephens eds., 2d ed. 1892).

"The notary public, or notary, is an official known in nearly all civilized countries. The office is of ancient origin. In Rome, during the republic, it existed, the title being tabelliones forenses, or personae publicae; and there are records of the appointment of notaries by the Frankish kings and the Popes as early as the ninth century. They were chiefly employed in drawing up legal documents; as scribes or scriveners they took minutes and made short drafts of writings, either of a public or a private nature. In modern times their more characteristic duty is to attest the genuineness of any deeds or writings, in order to render the same available as evidence of the facts therein contained.” Benjamin F. Rex, The Notaries' Manual § 1, at 1–2 (J.H. McMillan ed., 6th ed. 1913).

“In jurisdictions where the civilian law prevails, such as in the countries of continental Europe, a notary public is a public official who serves as a public witness of facts transacted by private parties ... and also serves as impartial legal advisor for the parties involved.... In colonial Louisiana, the notary public had the same rank and dignity as his continental civilian ancestor.... Although notaries still constitute a protected profession in present-day Louisiana, holding office for life provided they renew their bonds periodically in compliance with the governing statute, the importance of their function has diminished over the years to the point that it has been said that a Louisiana notary is no longer a truly civilian notary. Indeed, the trained lawyer is nowadays the Louisiana, and American, counterpart of the continental civilian notary.” Saul Litvinoff, 5 Louisiana Civil Law Treatise: The Law of Obligations 296–97 (2d ed. 2001).

NOTARY RECORD BOOK

notary record book. See JOURNAL OF NOTARIAL ACTS.

NOTARY'S CERTIFICATE

NOTARY SEAL

notary seal. 1. The imprint or embossment made by a notary public's seal. [Cases: Notaries 8. C.J.S. Notaries § 8.] 2. A device, usu. a stamp or embosser, that makes an imprint on a notarized document. — Also termed notarial seal.

embossed seal. 1. A notary seal that is impressed onto a document, raising the impression above the surface. • An embossed seal clearly identifies the original document because the seal is only faintly reproducible. For this reason, this type of seal is required in some states and on some documents notarized for federal purposes. [Cases: Notaries 8. C.J.S. Notaries § 8.] 2. The embossment made by this seal.

rubber-stamp seal. 1. In most states, a notary public's official seal, which is ink-stamped onto documents and is therefore photographically reproducible. • It typically includes the notary's name, the state seal, the words “Notary Public,” the name of the county where the notary's bond is filed, and the expiration date of the notary's commission. [Cases: Notaries 8. C.J.S. Notaries § 8.] 2. The imprint made by this seal.

NOTATION CREDIT

notation credit. A letter of credit specifying that anyone purchasing or paying a draft or demand for payment made under it must note the amount of the draft or demand on the letter. NOTE RECEIVABLE note receivable.See account receivable under ACCOUNT.

NO-TERM LEASE

no-term lease.Oil & gas. A mineral lease with a drilling-delay rental clause that allows the lessee to extend the primary term indefinitely by paying delay rentals. • No-term leases were common at the end of the 19th century. Some courts refused to enforce them on the ground that they created a mere estate at will, terminable at the will of either the lessor or the lessee. Other courts upheld them, but with the stipulation that the lessee had an obligation to either test or release the lease within a reasonable time.

NOTE VERBAL

note verbal (noht v<<schwa>>r-b<<schwa>>l).Int'l law. An unsigned diplomatic note, usu. written in the third person, that sometimes accompanies a diplomatic message or note of protest to further explain the country's position or to request certain action. — Also spelled note verbale (vair-bahl).

NOT GUILTY

not guilty. 1. A defendant's plea denying the crime charged. [Cases: Criminal Law 299. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 378.] 2. A jury verdict acquitting the defendant because the prosecution failed to prove the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Cf. INNOCENT.

not guilty by reason of insanity. 1. A not-guilty verdict, based on mental illness, that usu. does not release the defendant but instead results in commitment to a mental institution. [Cases: Criminal Law 47. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 99–108.] 2. A criminal defendant's plea of not guilty that is based on the insanity defense. — Abbr. NGRI. — Also termed not guilty on the ground of insanity. See INSANITY DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law 286.5. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 380.]

3. Common-law pleading. A defendant's plea denying both an act of trespass alleged in a plaintiff's declaration and the plaintiff's right to possess the property at issue. [Cases: Trespass 41. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 86–89.] “In trespass, whether to person or property, the general issue is ‘not guilty.’ It operates in the first place as a denial that the defendant committed the act of trespass alleged, to wit, the application of force to the plaintiff's person, the entry on his land, or the taking or damages of his goods. It also denies the plaintiff's possession, title, or right of possession of the land or goods.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 170, at 307–08 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

not guilty by statute. Hist. Under certain acts of Parliament, the pleading form for a defendant's general denial in a civil action. • This pleading form allowed a public officer to indicate action under a statute. The officer had to write the words “by statute” in the margin along with the year, chapter, and section of the applicable statute, and the defendant could not file any other defense without leave of court. The right to plead “not guilty by statute” was essentially removed by the Public Authorities Protection Act of 1893.

4. A general denial in an ejectment action. [Cases: Ejectment 68. C.J.S. Ejectment §§ 63–64.] “The general issue in ejectment is not guilty. This plea operates as follows: (1) As a denial of the unlawfulness of the withholding; i.e., of the plaintiff's title and right of possession. (2) All defenses in excuse or discharge, including the statute of limitations, are available under the general issue in ejectment.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 188, at 333 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

NOT-GUILTY PLEA

NOTICE

notice, n. 1. Legal notification required by law or agreement, or imparted by operation of law as a result of some fact (such as the recording of an instrument); definite legal cognizance, actual or constructive, of an existing right or title <under the lease, the tenant must give the landlord written notice 30 days before vacating the premises>. • A person has notice of a fact or condition if that person (1) has actual knowledge of it; (2) has received information about it; (3) has reason to know about it; (4) knows about a related fact; or (5) is considered as having been able to ascertain it by checking an official filing or recording. [Cases: Constitutional Law 251.6, 309; Notice 1. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 968, 1154, 1165–1166, 1168–1169; Notice §§ 2–3, 9.] 2. The condition of being so notified, whether or not actual awareness exists <all prospective buyers were on notice of the judgment lien>. Cf. KNOWLEDGE. 3. A written or printed announcement <the notice of sale was posted on the courthouse bulletin board>. [Cases: Sales 235; Vendor and Purchaser 225. C.J.S. Sales § 233; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 486–487, 491.]

actual notice. Notice given directly to, or received personally by, a party. — Also termed express notice. [Cases: Notice 1.5. C.J.S. Notice § 4.] adequate notice. See due notice.

commercial-law notice. Under the UCC, notice of a fact arising either as a result of actual knowledge or notification of the fact, or as a result of circumstances under which a person would have reason to know of the fact. UCC § 1-201(25) (2d ed. 1995). [Cases: Sales 235. C.J.S. Sales § 233.]

constructive notice. Notice arising by presumption of law from the existence of facts and circumstances that a party had a duty to take notice of, such as a registered deed or a pending lawsuit; notice presumed by law to have been acquired by a person and thus imputed to that person. — Also termed legal notice. [Cases: Notice 4; Vendor and Purchaser 229. C.J.S. Notice § 7; Vendor and Purchaser § 488.]

direct notice. Actual notice of a fact that is brought directly to a party's attention. — Also termed positive notice.

due notice. Sufficient and proper notice that is intended to and likely to reach a particular person or the public; notice that is legally adequate given the particular circumstance. — Also termed adequate notice; legal notice.

express notice. Actual knowledge or notice given to a party directly, not arising from any inference, duty, or inquiry. See actual notice. [Cases: Notice 2. C.J.S. Notice §§ 4–5.]

fair notice. 1. Sufficient notice apprising a litigant of the opposing party's claim. 2. The requirement that a pleading adequately apprise the opposing party of a claim. • A pleading must be drafted so that an opposing attorney of reasonable competence would be able to ascertain the nature and basic issues of the controversy and the evidence probably relevant to those issues. 3. FAIR WARNING. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 673; Pleading 48. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 116–124, 132–133.]

immediate notice. 1. Notice given as soon as possible. 2. More commonly, and esp. on notice of an insurance claim, notice that is reasonable under the circumstances. [Cases: Insurance 3154.]

implied notice. Notice that is inferred from facts that a person had a means of knowing and that is thus imputed to that person; actual notice of facts or circumstances that, if properly followed up, would have led to a knowledge of the particular fact in question. — Also termed indirect notice; presumptive notice. [Cases: Notice 3. C.J.S. Notice § 6.]

imputed notice. Information attributed to a person whose agent, having received actual notice of the information, has a duty to disclose it to that person. • For example, notice of a hearing may be imputed to a witness because it was actually disclosed to that witness's attorney of record. [Cases: Principal and Agent 177(1). C.J.S. Agency §§ 433–435, 442–444, 446.]

indirect notice. See implied notice.

inquiry notice. Notice attributed to a person when the information would lead an ordinarily prudent person to investigate the matter further; esp., the time at which the victim of an alleged securities fraud became aware of facts that would have prompted a reasonable person to investigate. [Cases: Notice 6; Vendor and Purchaser 229. C.J.S. Notice §§ 12–14; Vendor and Purchaser § 488.]

judicial notice. See JUDICIAL NOTICE.

legal notice. 1. See constructive notice. 2. See due notice.

public notice. Notice given to the public or persons affected, usu. by publishing in a newspaper of general circulation. • This notice is usu. required, for example, in matters of public concern. — Also termed notice by publication. [Cases: Notice 11. C.J.S. Notice §§ 16, 32.]

reasonable notice. Notice that is fairly to be expected or required under the particular circumstances.

record notice. Constructive notice of the contents of an instrument, such as a deed or mortgage, that has been properly recorded. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 231. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser § 496.]

short notice. Notice that is inadequate or not timely under the circumstances.

4. Intellectual property. A formal sign attached to an item that embodies or reproduces an intellectual-property right. • Notice of patent is made by placing the word “patent” (or its abbreviation, “pat.”) and the item's patent number on an item made by a patentee or licensee. There are three statutory notice forms for U.S. trademark and servicemark registration. The most common is the symbol with the letter R (®) but “Reg. U.S. Pat. & Tm. Off.” or “Registered in U.S. Patent and Trademark Office” affords the same legal protection. A copyright notice also takes several forms. The first part may be the symbol with the letter C in a circle (©), or the word “Copr.” or “Copyright.” It must be followed by the copyright owner's name and the year that the work was first published. Informal signs, such as “Brand,” “TM,” “Trademark,” “SM,” and “Service Mark,” adjacent to words or other symbols considered to be protectable marks are not legal notices of exclusive rights. 5.Parliamentary law. A meeting's published call. See call of a meeting under CALL(1).6.Parliamentary law. A formal statement that certain business may come before a meeting, usu. made at an earlier meeting or published with the call of the meeting that will consider the business, and made as a prerequisite to the business's consideration. See call of a meeting under CALL(1). — Also termed previous notice.

NOTICE DOCTRINE

notice doctrine.The equitable doctrine that when a new owner takes an estate with notice that someone else had a claim on it at the time of the transfer, that claim may still be asserted against the new owner even if it might have been disregarded at law. — Also termed doctrine of notice.

NOTICE FILING

notice filing.The perfection of a security interest under Article 9 of the UCC by filing only a financing statement, as opposed to a copy or abstract of the security agreement. • The financing statement must contain (1) the debtor's signature, (2) the secured party's name and address, (3) the debtor's name and mailing address, and (4) a description of the types of, or items of, collateral. [Cases: Secured Transactions 92. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 65–66.]

NOTICE-OF-ALIBI RULE

notice-of-alibi rule. The principle that, upon written demand from the government, a criminal defendant who intends to call an alibi witness at trial must give notice of who that witness is and where the defendant claims to have been at the time of the alleged offense. • The government is, in turn, obligated to give notice to the defendant of any witness it intends to call to rebut the alibi testimony. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 12.1.

NOTICE OF ALLOWABILITY

notice of allowability. Patents. Notification from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that the claims in a patent application have been approved on their merits. • This notice is followed by the Notice of Allowance. The notice may also be issued if the claims are allowable but the application is under a secrecy order. It may include examiner's amendments incorporating some formal changes. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.]

NOTICE OF ALLOWANCE

notice of allowance. 1. Patents. The formal notification from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that a patent application has been approved and that a patent can be issued. • The patent itself is not issued until the applicant has paid the issue fee. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.] 2. Trademarks. The formal notification from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that a trademark may be placed on the Principal Register if it is actually used in commerce.

NOTICE OF APPEAL

notice of appeal. A document filed with a court and served on the other parties, stating an intention to appeal a trial court's judgment or order. • In most jurisdictions, filing a notice of appeal is the act by which the appeal is perfected. For instance, the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure provide that an appeal is taken by filing a notice of appeal with the clerk of the district court from which the appeal is taken, and that the clerk is to send copies of the notice to all the other parties' attorneys, as well as the court of appeals. Fed. R. App. P. 3(a), (d). — Also termed claim of appeal. See APPEAL. [Cases: Appeal and Error 396–430; Federal Courts 665.1. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 270, 274–282, 290, 295–297, 314, 353–389.]

UCC § 3-503. — Also termed certificate of protest; certificate of dishonor. [Cases: Bills and Notes 393, 411. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 97, 210, 212, 257.]

NOTICE OF INCOMPLETE APPLICATION

notice of incomplete application. Patents. A notice sent to the applicant by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office when a patent application lacks a required document or the filing fee. • The applicant generally has two months to complete the application, with an extension available upon payment of a surcharge. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.]

NOTICE OF LIS PENDENS

notice of lis pendens. See LIS PENDENS(3).

NOTICE OF MOTION

notice of motion. Written certification that a party to a lawsuit has filed a motion or that a motion will be heard or considered by the court at a particular time. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the requirement that a motion be made in writing is fulfilled if the motion is stated in a written notice of the hearing on the motion. Also, the courts in most jurisdictions require all motions to include a certificate, usu. referred to as a certificate of service, indicating that the other parties to the suit have been given notice of the motion's filing. Notice of any hearing or other submission of the motion must usu. be provided to all parties by the party requesting the hearing or submission. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d), 7(b)(1); Fed. R. Civ. P. Form 19. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 921; Motions 18.1. C.J.S. Motions and Orders § 13.]

NOTICE OF ORDERS OR JUDGMENTS

notice of orders or judgments. Written notice of the entry of an order or judgment, provided by the court clerk or one of the parties. • Notice of a judgment is usu. provided by the clerk of the court in which the judgment was entered. If the court does not provide notice, a party is usu. required to provide it. Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, the clerk is required to provide immediate notice of any order or judgment to any party to the case who is not in default. Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(d); Fed. R. Crim. P. 49(c). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2628; Judgment 276; Motions 57. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 112, 114, 117; Motions and Orders §§ 63–64.]

NOTICE OF REMOVAL

notice of removal. The pleading by which the defendant removes a case from state court to federal court. • A notice of removal is filed in the federal district court in the district and division in which the suit is pending. The notice must contain a short and plain statement of the grounds for removal and must include a copy of all process, pleadings, and orders that have been served on the removing party while the case has been pending. The removing party must also notify the state court and other parties to the suit that the notice of removal has been filed. A notice of removal must be filed, if at all, within 30 days after the defendant is served with process in the suit. 28 USCA § 1446; Murphy Bros., Inc. v. Michetti Pipe Stringing, Inc., 526 U.S. 344, 119 S.Ct. 1322 (1999). [Cases: Removal of Cases 86, 87. C.J.S. Removal of Causes § 163.]

NOTICE OF TRIAL

notice of trial. A document issued by a court informing the parties of the date on which the lawsuit is set for trial. • While the court typically provides the notice to all parties, it may instead instruct one party to send the notice to all the others. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1966; Trial 6. C.J.S. Trial §§ 31–38.]

NOTICE PLEADING

Notice. 4.A list of ecclesiastical sees.

NOT LAW

not law.A judicial decision regarded as wrong by the legal profession.

“Even when it is not possible to point out any decision that affects the point in question in any one of the ways enumerated, it sometimes happens that the profession has grown to ignore the old decision as wrong or obsolete; and though this does not happen often, when it does happen, the old decision is very likely not to be followed in case the point is squarely raised again. This is one of the instances in which lawyers rather mystically, though soundly, say that a decision is ‘not law.’ ” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 329 (3d ed. 1914).

NOTORIAL

notorial. See NOTARIAL.

notoriety. 1. The state of being generally, and often unfavorably, known and spoken of <the company executive achieved notoriety when she fled the country to avoid paying taxes>.2. A person in such a state <the notoriety gave a rare interview>.

NOTORIOUS

notorious,adj.1. Generally known and spoken of, usu. unfavorably. 2. (Of the possession of property) so conspicuous as to impute notice to the true owner. — Also termed (in sense 2) open and notorious. See ADVERSE POSSESSION . [Cases: Adverse Possession 30. C.J.S. Adverse Possession § 49.]

NOTORIOUS COHABITATION notorious cohabitation.See COHABITATION.

NOTORIOUS INSOLVENCY

notorious insolvency.Scots law. A bankruptcy; the stage of insolvency in which the debtor has publicly acknowledged insolvency under the statute. • This stage is usu. followed by sequestration, which is notorious insolvency coupled with the appointment of a trustee for creditors. — Also termed notour bankruptcy.

“Bankruptcy, according to the law of Scotland, is public or notorious insolvency. When a debtor in an obligation cannot fulfil his obligation as undertaken ... a position which constitutes insolvency — and makes public acknowledgment, in manner determined by statute, of his inability, the status or condition of bankruptcy has arisen, and the insolvent debtor is, in the language of the statutes, a ‘notour’ bankrupt The law of notour bankruptcy is mainly statutory. Legislation has fixed the circumstances which constitute the status, and determined all the most important results.” George Watson, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 78 (3d ed. 1882).

NOTORIOUS POSSESSION notorious possession.See POSSESSION.

NOT OTHERWISE INDEXED BY NAME not otherwise indexed by name.A phrase used in shipping and tariff construction, usu. to show a classification of something generally rather than specifically. • For example, a shipment of aircraft and boat engines merely labeled “other articles” is not otherwise indexed by name. — Abbr. NOIBN. [Cases: Carriers 189. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace § 231; Carriers §§ 470–472, 474.]

NOTOUR BANKRUPTCY

notour bankruptcy.See NOTORIOUS INSOLVENCY.

NOT POSSESSED

not possessed.Common-law pleading. In an action in trover, the defendant's plea denying possession of the articles allegedly converted. See TROVER.

NOT PROVEN

not proven. An archaic jury verdict — now used only in Scots criminal law — equivalent in result to not guilty, but carrying with it a strong suspicion of guilt not fully proved. — Also termed Scotch verdict.

NOT SATISFIED

not satisfied. A form of return by a sheriff or constable, on a writ of execution, indicating only that the amount due on a judgment was not paid. • A general return of this type is usu. viewed as technically deficient because it does not state why the writ was not satisfied. Cf. NULLA BONA. [Cases: Execution 334. C.J.S. Executions §§ 324–325.]

NOT SUFFICIENT FUNDS

not sufficient funds. The notation of dishonor (of a check) indicating that the drawer's account does not contain enough money to cover payment. — Abbr. NSF. — Also termed insufficient funds.

NOTWITHSTANDING

notwithstanding, prep. Despite; in spite of <notwithstanding the conditions listed above, the landlord can terminate the lease if the tenant defaults>.

NOVA CAUSA INTERVENIENS nova causa interveniens. See intervening cause under CAUSE(1).

NOVA CAUSA OBLIGATIONIS

nova causa obligationis (noh-v<<schwa>> kaw-z<<schwa>> ahb-li-gay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Hist. A new ground of obligation.

NOVA CUSTUMA

nova custuma (noh-v<<schwa>> k<<schwa>>s-t[y]<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>), n. [Law Latin “new custom”] Hist. A tax; an imposition. Cf. ANTIQUA CUSTUMA.

NOVA DEBITA

nova debita (noh-v<<schwa>> deb-i-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Scots law. New debts, as distinguished from preexisting ones.

“A security granted by a debtor within sixty days of his bankruptcy for a debt contracted before that period is reducible as a fraudulent preference. But security or payment granted in consideration of a novum debitum — a debt presently contracted — is not reducible although granted within the sixty days.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 402 (4th ed. 1894).

NOVAE NARRATIONES

novae narrationes (noh-vee n<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh-nee-z), n. [Law Latin “new counts or tales”] Hist. A collection of pleading forms published during the reign of Edward III.

NOVALIA

novalia (noh-vay-lee-<<schwa>>). [Law Latin “new lands” or “newly tilled land”] Scots law. Land newly cultivated. • Exemptions from paying teinds, or tithes, were sometimes granted for novalia.

NOVA STATUTA

nova statuta (noh-v<<schwa>> st<<schwa>>-t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>), n. pl. [Law Latin] Hist. New statutes. • This term refers to the statutes passed beginning with the reign of Edward III. Cf. VETERA STATUTA.

NOVATION

novation (noh-vay-sh<<schwa>>n), n.1. The act of substituting for an old obligation a new one that either replaces an existing obligation with a new obligation or replaces an original party with a new party. • A novation may substitute (1) a new obligation between the same parties, (2) a new debtor, or (3) a new creditor. 2. A contract that (1) immediately discharges either a previous contractual duty or a duty to make compensation, (2) creates a new contractual duty, and (3) includes as a party one who neither owed the previous duty nor was entitled to its performance. — Also termed substituted agreement; (Scots law) innovation.; (Roman law) novatio (noh-vay-shee-oh). See STIPULATIO AQUILIANA; substituted contract under CONTRACT; ACCORD(2). [Cases: Novation 1. C.J.S. Novation §§ 2–4, 9–10, 14–16.] — novate (noh-vay-tornoh-vayt), vb. — novatory (noh-v<<schwa>>-tor-ee), adj.

“Novation is the emerging and transfer of a prior debt into another obligation either civil or natural, that is, the constitution of a new obligation in such a way as to destroy a prior one.” Ulpian, D. 46.2.1 pr.

“The only way in which it is possible to transfer contractual duties to a third party is by the process of novation, which requires the consent of the other party to the contract. In fact novation really amounts to the extinction of the old obligation, and the creation of a new one, rather than to the transfer of the obligation from one person to another. Thus if B owes A £100, and C owes B the same amount, B cannot transfer to C the legal duty of paying his debt to A without A's consent. But if A agrees to accept C as a debtor in place of B, and if C agrees to accept A as his creditor in place of B, the three parties may make a tripartite agreement to this effect, known as novation. The effect of this is to extinguish B's liability to A and create a new liability on the part of C.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 283 (3d ed. 1981).

“The word ‘novation’ is used in a variety of senses. Courts frequently use it as synonymous with ‘substituted contract.’ Most academic writers and both contracts restatements, however, restrict its use to describe a substituted contract involving at least one obligor or obligee who was not a party to the original contract.... The development of a separate category under the rubric ‘novation’ is doubtless traceable to problems of consideration formerly thought to be present in such contracts because of the former common law rule that consideration must be supplied by the promisee. This rule has long been laid to rest almost everywhere.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 11–8, at 444–45 (3d ed. 1987).

objective novation.Civil law. A novation involving the substitution of a new obligation for an old one. [Cases: Novation 4. C.J.S. Novation §§ 2, 11–14, 29.]

subjective novation.Civil law. A novation involving the substitution of a new obligor for a previous obligor who has been discharged by the obligee.

NOVEL ASSIGNMENT

NOVELLAE CONSTITUTIONES

Novellae Constitutiones.See NOVELS.

NOVELLAE LEONIS

Novellae Leonis (n<<schwa>>-vel-ee lee-oh-nis), n.[Latin “novels of Leo”] A collection of 113 ordinances issued by Emperor Leo during the years A.D. 887–893.

NOVELS

Novels. A collection of 168 constitutions issued by the Roman emperor Justinian and his immediate successors. • Taken together, the Novels make up one of four component parts of the Corpus Juris Civilis. — Also termed Novellae; Novellae Constitutiones. See CORPUS JURIS CIVILIS.

NOVELTY

novelty. 1.Trade secrets. The newness of information that is generally unused or unknown and that gives its owner a competitive advantage in a business field. • In the law of trade secrets, novelty does not require independent conception or even originality. A rediscovered technique with marketable applications can qualify as a novelty and be protected as a trade secret. 2.Patents. Newness of an invention both in form and in function or performance; the strict statutory requirement that this originality be demonstrated before an invention is patentable. • Proving novelty is one purpose of the rigorous and expensive examination process. If the invention has been previously patented, described in a publication, known or used by others, or sold, it is not novel. 35 USCA § 102. Cf. NONOBVIOUSNESS. [Cases: Patents 37.C.J.S. Patents §§ 29–30.]

“Although the statute uses the words ‘not known,’ these are not to be taken literally. Novelty consists primarily in the invention not having been used by others in the United States or patented or described in any printed publication in this or any foreign country.” Roger Sherman Hoar, Patent Tactics and the Law 36–37 (3d ed. 1950).

absolute novelty. Patents. The rule in most countries, but not in the United States, that an inventor must always file a patent application before the invention is publicly used, placed on sale, or disclosed. • Under U.S. law, an inventor is given a one-year grace period — beginning on the date of any public use, sale, offer of sale, or publication by the inventor or the inventor's agent — in which to file a patent application. After that, the patent is barred. Canada and Mexico also give the first inventor or the inventor's assignees a one-year grace period for filing, but they bar a patent for the first inventor if the invention is independently developed and disclosed by someone else during that time. — Also termed absolute-novelty requirement. Cf. BAR DATE.

noverca (n<<schwa>>-v<<schwa>>r-k<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] A stepmother.

NOVERINT UNIVERSI PER PRAESENTES

noverint universi per praesentes (noh-v<<schwa>>-r<<schwa>>nt yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>r-sI p<<schwa>>r pri-zen-teez). [Latin] Know all men by these presents. • This is a formal phrase once found at the beginning of deeds of release. In translation, the phrase still sometimes appears on various types of legal documents. See KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS; PATEAT UNIVERSIS PER PRAESENTES .

NOVIGILD

novigild (noh-v<<schwa>>-gild), n. [fr. Latin novem “nine” + Anglo-Saxon gid or geld “a payment”] Hist. The money a person must pay for damaging another person's property, the amount equaling nine times the purchase price of the property damaged.

NOVI OPERIS NUNTIATIO

novi operis nuntiatio (noh-vIahp-<<schwa>>-ris n<<schwa>>n-shee-ay-shee-oh). [Latin “new work protest”] Roman law. A protest against an opus novum (“new work”). • A person whose rights were impaired by the building of a new structure could protest to the praetor. The praetor could order the builder to give the protestor a security against any loss caused by the construction (edictum de novi operis nuntiatione). If the builder refused, the praetor could prohibit further construction with a prohibitory interdict (interdictum de novi operis nuntiatione). — Also written operis novi nuntiatio. Cf. JACTUS LAPILLI.

NOVITER PERVENTA

noviter perventa (noh-v<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r p<<schwa>>r-ven-t<<schwa>>), n. pl. [Law Latin “newly known”] Eccles. law. Newly discovered facts, which are usu. allowed to be introduced in a case even after the pleadings are closed.

NOVODAMUS

novodamus (noh-v<<schwa>>-day-m<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin novo damus “we grant anew”] Scots law. 1. A clause in a charter that progressively grants certain rights anew. • The phrase appeared in reference to any charter by which a superior renewed a previous land grant to a vassal.

2. A charter containing such a clause.

“This clause is subjoined to the dispositive clause; and by it the superior, whether the Crown or a subject, grants de novo the subjects, rights, or privileges therein described. Such a clause is usually inserted where the vassal is sensible of some defect or flaw in the former right This was also the correct form of proceeding ... when the vassal wished to get free of burdens chargeable upon the subject for casualties due to the superior; for a charter of novodamus is accounted in law an original right, which imports a discharge of all prior burdens.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 747 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

NOVUS ACTUS INTERVENIENS

novus actus interveniens (noh-v<<schwa>>s ak-t<<schwa>>s noxia (nok-s<<schwa>>), n.[Latin “injury”] Hist. 1.Roman law. A harm done or an offense committed such as injury to a person or property, esp. by a slave or son. • This gave rise to noxal liability. 2.Roman law. The obligation to pay for damage committed by a son, slave, or animal. • The father or owner generally had to pay damages or else surrender the tortfeasor offending person or animal to the injured party (noxal surrender). — Also termed noxal liability. See NOXAL ACTION. 3. An offense, generally. 4. The punishment for an offense. 5. Something that exerts a harmful effect on the body.

NOXAL

noxal (nok-s<<schwa>>l), adj. Archaic. Of or relating to a claim against a father or owner for damage done by a son, a slave, or an animal.

NOXAL ACTION

noxal action.[fr. Latin actio noxalis “injurious action”] 1.Roman law. The claim against an owner or father for a tort committed by a son, a slave, or an animal. • The head of the family could be sued either to pay a penalty due or to surrender the tortfeasor to the injured party. Roman law also provided for the surrender of animals that caused damage under the actio de pauperie. See actio de pauperie under ACTIO. 2.Hist. A person's claim to recover for damages committed by a person's son, slave, or animal.

NUDA DETENTIO

nuda detentio (n[y]oo-d<<schwa>> di-ten-shee-oh). [Latin] See possessio naturalis under POSSESSIO.

NUDA PATIENTIA

nuda patientia (n[y]oo-d<<schwa>> pash-ee-en-shee-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Mere sufferance. • In a servitude, the servient estate owner's obligation is one of mere sufferance because, while the owner has to submit to the dominant estate, the owner does not have to take any positive steps (such as fixing a sidewalk) to enhance the exercise of the dominant servitude.

NUDA POSSESSIO

nuda possessio (n[y]oo-d<<schwa>> p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh). [Latin] Mere possession.

nudum officium (n[y]oo-d<<schwa>>m <<schwa>>-fish-ee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Scots law. The bare office, without the usual emoluments. Pl. nuda officia.

NUDUM PACTUM

nudum pactum (n[y]oo-d<<schwa>>m pak-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin “bare agreement”] 1.Roman law.An informal agreement that is not legally enforceable, because it does not fall within the specific classes of agreements that can support a legal action. • But a pactum could create an exception to or modification of an existing obligation. 2. An agreement that is unenforceable as a contract because it is not “clothed” with consideration. — Also termed naked contract; nude contract; nude pact. [Cases: Contracts 47, 54(1).C.J.S. Contracts §§ 83–84, 87.]

NUGATORY

nugatory (n[y]oo-g<<schwa>>-tor-ee), adj. Of no force or effect; useless; invalid <the Supreme Court rendered the statute nugatory by declaring it unconstitutional>.

NUISANCE nuisance. 1. A condition, activity, or situation (such as a loud noise or foul odor) that interferes with the use or enjoyment of property; esp., a nontransitory condition or persistent activity that either injures the physical condition of adjacent land or interferes with its use or with the enjoyment of easements on the land or of public highways. • Liability might or might not arise from the condition or situation. — Formerly also termed annoyance. [Cases: Nuisance 1–4. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 2–8, 10–14, 17–23, 25–45, 47–57, 59–62.]

“A nuisance may be merely a right thing in the wrong place, like a pig in the parlor instead of the barnyard.” Village of Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co., 272 U.S. 365, 388, 47 S.Ct. 114, 118 (1926).

“A ‘nuisance’ is a state of affairs. To conduct a nuisance is a tort. In torts, the word ‘nuisance’ has had an extremely elastic meaning; sometimes it is little more than a pejorative term, a weasel word used as a substitute for reasoning The general distinction between a nuisance and a trespass is that the trespass flows from a physical invasion and the nuisance does not.” Roger A. Cunningham et al., The Law of Property § 7.2, at 417 (2d ed. 1993).

2. Loosely, an act or failure to act resulting in an interference with the use or enjoyment of property. • In this sense, the term denotes the action causing the interference, rather than the resulting condition <the Slocums' playing electric guitars in their yard constituted a nuisance to their neighbors>. [Cases: Nuisance 3, 61. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 4, 10–14, 18, 20–21, 25–26, 28, 31–57, 59–62.]“There is perhaps no more impenetrable jungle in the entire law than that which surrounds the word ‘nuisance.’ It has meant all things to all people, and has been applied indiscriminately to everything from an alarming advertisement to a cockroach baked in a pie.” Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 86, at 616 (W. Page Keeton et al., 5th ed. 1984).

3. The class of torts arising from such conditions, acts, or failures to act when they occur unreasonably. — Also termed actionable nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance 3, 61. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 4, 10–14, 18, 20–21, 25–26, 28, 31–57, 59–62.]“Nuisance is really a field of tortious liability rather than a single type of tortious conduct: the feature which gives it unity is the interest invaded — that of the use and enjoyment of land. The tort emphasises the harm to the plaintiff rather than the conduct of the defendant.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 50–51 (17th ed. 1977).

abatable nuisance. 1. A nuisance so easily removable that the aggrieved party may lawfully cure the problem without notice to the liable party, such as overhanging tree branches. [Cases:

Nuisance 19. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 92–97, 99.] 2. A nuisance that reasonable persons would regard as being removable by reasonable means.

absolute nuisance. 1. Interference with a property right that a court considers fixed or invariable, such as a riparian owner's right to use a stream in its natural condition. [Cases: Nuisance 1–7. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 2–8, 10–15, 17–45, 47–57, 59–62.] 2. See nuisance per se. 3. Interference in a place where it does not reasonably belong, even if the interfering party is careful. 4. Interference for which a defendant is held strictly liable for resulting harm, esp. in the nature of pollution. Cf. qualified nuisance.

Sense (4) has been disapproved: “[T]he use of the term ‘nuisance’ to describe the tort liability that sometimes results from accidental invasions produces too much confusion.” W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 89, at 637 (5th ed. 1984).

anticipatory nuisance. A condition that, although not yet at the level of a nuisance, is very likely to become one, so that a party may obtain an injunction prohibiting the condition. — Also termed prospective nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance 1. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 2–8, 10–14, 18–21.]

attractive nuisance. A dangerous condition that may attract children onto land, thereby causing a risk to their safety. See ATTRACTIVE-NUISANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence 1172, 1175. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 399, 476–477, 494–526.]

“[T]he doctrine acquired the unfortunate misnomer ‘attractive nuisance,’ a label which persists to this day. It cannot be taken literally, since the courts have now largely rejected the notion that the child must be attracted by that which injures him, and whether or not the condition is in fact a ‘nuisance’ has nothing at all to do with defendant's liability to the child.” Edward J. Kionka, Torts in a Nutshell 89 (2d ed. 1992).

cognate nuisance. Rare. Interference with an easement.

“The term nuisance is applied to torts of two distinct groups, first, acts of wrongful user by an owner or possessor of land resulting in an unreasonable interference with the rights of enjoyment of the owner or possessor of neighboring land, and, second, wrongful interferences with easements or other incorporeal rights.” William F. Walsh, A Treatise on Equity 170 (1930).

“When an easement was interfered with, an action on the case lay as a matter of course.... Such an interference is sometimes called ‘cognate nuisance’ to distinguish it from interferences with the personal enjoyment of the incidents of occupying the land.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 486 (3d ed. 1990).

common nuisance. See public nuisance.

continuing nuisance. A nuisance that is either uninterrupted or frequently recurring. • It need not be constant or unceasing, but it must occur often enough that it is almost continuous. [Cases: Nuisance 4, 19. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 25–27, 92–97, 99.]

legalized nuisance. A nuisance sanctioned by legislative, executive, or other official action and therefore immune from liability, such as a city park.

mixed nuisance.A condition that is both a private nuisance and a public nuisance, so that it is dangerous to the community at large but also causes particular harm to private individuals. [Cases: Nuisance 72. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 65–66.]

nuisance at law.See nuisance per se.

nuisance dependent on negligence.See qualified nuisance.

nuisance in fact.A nuisance existing because of the circumstances of the use or the particular location. • For example, a machine emitting high-frequency sound may be a nuisance only if a person's dog lives near enough to the noise to be disturbed by it. — Also termed nuisance per accidens.

nuisance per se (p<<schwa>>r say). Interference so severe that it would constitute a nuisance under any circumstances; a nuisance regardless of location or circumstances of use, such as a leaky nuclear-waste storage facility. — Also termed nuisance at law; absolute nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance 4. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 25–27.]

permanent nuisance.A nuisance that cannot readily be abated at reasonable expense. Cf. temporary nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance 1, 4. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 2–8, 10–14, 18–21, 25–27.]

private nuisance.A condition that interferes with a person's enjoyment of property; esp., a structure or other condition erected or put on nearby land, creating or continuing an invasion of the actor's land and amounting to a trespass to it. • The condition constitutes a tort for which the adversely affected person may recover damages or obtain an injunction. [Cases: Nuisance 1. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 2–8, 10–14, 18–21.]

“Trespass and private nuisance are alike in that each is a field of tort liability rather than a single type of tortious conduct. In each, liability may arise from an intentional or an unintentional invasion. For an intentional trespass, there is liability without harm; for a private nuisance, there is no liability without significant harm.... In private nuisance an intentional interference with the plaintiff's use or enjoyment is not of itself a tort, and unreasonableness of the interference is necessary for liability.” Restatement (Second) of Torts § 821D cmt. d (1979).

“The different ways and combinations of ways in which the interest in the use or enjoyment of land may be invaded are infinitely variable. A private nuisance may consist of an interference with the physical condition of the land itself, as by vibration or blasting which damages a house, the destruction of crops, flooding, raising the water table, or the pollution of a stream or of an underground water supply.” W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 87, at 619 (5th ed. 1984).

prospective nuisance.See anticipatory nuisance.

public nuisance.An unreasonable interference with a right common to the general public, such as a condition dangerous to health, offensive to community moral standards, or unlawfully obstructing the public in the free use of public property. • Such a nuisance may lead to a civil injunction or criminal prosecution. — Also termed common nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance 59–96. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 344; Nuisances §§ 4, 9–10, 14–16, 18, 20–21, 24, 34–39, 41–66,

70–76, 78, 84–86, 88–91, 94–97, 103–115, 117–118, 120–122, 124–133, 149–158.]

“Public and private nuisances are not in reality two species of the same genus at all. There is no generic conception which includes the crime of keeping a common gaming-house and the tort of allowing one's trees to overhang the land of a neighbour. A public nuisance falls within the law of torts only in so far as it may in the particular case constitute some form of tort also. Thus the obstruction of a highway is a public nuisance; but if it causes any special and peculiar damage to an individual, it is also a tort actionable at his suit.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 49–50 (17th ed. 1977).

“[P]ublic nuisance ... is an amorphous and unsatisfactory area of the law covering an ill-assorted collection of wrongs, some of which have little or no association with tort and only appear to fill a gap in criminal law. Others cover what could be generally described as ‘noisome trade,’ which could be dealt with under some form of statutory nuisance. Yet a third group deals with what we would generally describe as ‘abuses of the highway’” R.W.M. Dias & B.S. Markesinis, Tort Law 254 (1984).

qualified nuisance. A condition that, though lawful in itself, is so negligently permitted to exist that it creates an unreasonable risk of harm and, in due course, actually results in injury to another. • It involves neither an intentional act nor a hazardous activity. — Also termed nuisance dependent on negligence. Cf. absolute nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance 1, 6, 59. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 2–8, 10–15, 18–21, 24.]

recurrent nuisance. A nuisance that occurs from time to time with distinct intervals between occurrences, rather than being continuous or only briefly interrupted.

temporary nuisance. A nuisance that can be corrected by a reasonable expenditure of money or labor. Cf. permanent nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance 4, 19. C.J.S. Nuisances §§ 25–27, 92–97, 99.]

NUL FAIT AGARD

nul fait agard (n<<schwa>>l fay <<schwa>>-gahrd). [Law French] No award was made. Cf. AGARD.

NULL

null,adj. Having no legal effect; without binding force; VOID <the contract was declared null and void>. • The phrase null and void is a common redundancy. [Cases: Contracts 98, 135. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 137, 139–140, 145, 153–155, 157, 171, 173–174, 185, 188, 280.]

NULLA BONA

nulla bona (n<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>> boh-n<<schwa>>). [Latin “no goods”] A form of return by a sheriff or constable upon an execution when the judgment debtor has no seizable property within the jurisdiction. Cf. NIHIL EST. [Cases: Execution 334. C.J.S. Executions §§ 324–325.]

NULLA PERSONA

nulla persona (n<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>> p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>). [Latin] Hist. No person. • The phrase appeared in reference to the status of one who essentially has no legal rights usu. because of that person's actions, such as committing a crime, or that person's status, such as being a minor.

NULLA POENA SINE LEGE

nulla poena sine lege (n<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>> pee-n<<schwa>> sI-nee lee-jee orsin-ay lay-gay). [Latin] No punishment without a law authorizing it.

NULLA SASINA, NULLA TERRA nulla sasina, nulla terra (n<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>> say-si-n<<schwa>> [orsay-zi-], n<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>> ter-<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] Scots law. No seisin (or enfeoffment), no land. • The phrase appeared in reference to the principle that there could be no indefeasible right in land until an enfeoffment was taken.

NULLIFICATION

nullification (n<<schwa>>l-i-fi-kay-sh<<schwa>>n), n.1. The act of making something void; specif., the action of a state in abrogating a federal law, on the basis of state sovereignty. [Cases: States 4.1(1).] 2. The state or condition of being void. See JURY NULLIFICATION.

NULLIFICATION DOCTRINE

nullification doctrine.The theory — espoused by southern states before the Civil War — advocating a state's right to declare a federal law unconstitutional and therefore void.

NULLIFY

nullify,vb. To make void; to render invalid.

NULLITY

nullity (n<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>>-tee).1. Something that is legally void <the forged commercial transfer is a nullity>. [Cases: Contracts 98, 135. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 137, 139–140, 145, 153–155, 157, 171, 173–174, 185, 188, 280.] 2. The fact of being legally void <she filed a petition for nullity of marriage>.

absolute nullity.Civil law. 1. An act that is void because it is against public policy, law, or order. • The nullity is noncurable. It may be invoked by any party or by the court. See La. Civ. Code arts 7, 2030. 2. The state of such a nullity. See NULLITY OF MARRIAGE.

relative nullity.Civil law. 1. A legal nullity that can be cured by confirmation because the object of the nullity is valid. • The nullity may be invoked only by those parties for whose interest it was established. See La. Civ. Code art. 2031. 2. The state of such a nullity.

NULLITY OF MARRIAGE

nullity of marriage. 1. The invalidity of a presumed or supposed marriage because it is void on its face or has been voided by court order. • A void marriage, such as an incestuous marriage, is invalid on its face and requires no formality to end. See void marriage under MARRIAGE(1). [Cases: Marriage 53. C.J.S. Marriage § 45.]

“The declaration of nullity is appropriate if the marriage is relatively null or absolutely null yet one or both spouses were in good faith. If the marriage is relatively null, civil effects flow until the declaration of nullity. On the other hand, the marriage that is absolutely null generally produces civil effects only if one or both of the spouses were in good faith and only so long as good faith lasts.” 16 Katherine S. Spaht & W. Lee Hargrave, Louisiana Civil Law Treatise: Matrimonial Regimes § 7.6, at 348 (2d ed. 1997).

2. A suit brought to nullify a marriage. — Also termed nullity suit. See ANNULMENT. [Cases: Marriage 56. C.J.S. Marriage § 63.]

NULLITY SUIT

nullity suit.See NULLITY OF MARRIAGE(2).

NULLIUS FILIUS

nullius filius (n<<schwa>>-II-<<schwa>>s fil-ee-<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin “son of no one”] An illegitimate child. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock 1.C.J.S. Children Out-of-Wedlock §§ 2–11.]

NULLIUS IN BONIS

nullius in bonis (n<<schwa>>-II-<<schwa>>s in boh-nis), adj.[Latin “among the property of no person”] Hist. Belonging to no one. • Wild animals were considered to be nullius in bonis. — Also termed in nullius bonis.

NULLIUS JURIS

nullius juris (n<<schwa>>-II-<<schwa>>s joor-is). [Latin] Hist. Of no legal force.

NULLUM ARBITRIUM

nullum arbitrium (n<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>>m ahr-bi-tree-<<schwa>>m), n.[Law Latin “no decision”] Hist. In an action to enforce an arbitration bond, a plea denying the existence of an arbitration award.

NULLUM EST ERRATUM

nullum est erratum (n<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>>m est <<schwa>>-ray-t<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin “there is no error in the record”] In response to an assignment of error, the common plea that there is no error in the record. • The effect of the plea is essentially to admit well-pleaded facts.

NULLUM FECERUNT ARBITRIUM nullum fecerunt arbitrium (n<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>>m f<<schwa>>-see-r<<schwa>>nt ahr-bi-tree-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “they never submitted to arbitration”] Hist. In an action to enforce an arbitration award, the defendant's plea denying that there had been an arbitration.

NULLUM TEMPUS ACT

Nullum Tempus Act (n<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>>m tem-p<<schwa>>s akt), n.[Latin] Hist. English law. The Crown Suits Act of 1769 (amended in 1862) that limited the Crown's time to sue, in land and other specified matters, to 60 years. • The statute altered the common-law rule of nullum tempus aut locus occurrit regi (“no time or place affects the Crown”), which was based on the idea that the Crown was too busy with governmental affairs to timely attend to its legal affairs.

NULLUM TEMPUS OCCURRIT REIPUBLICAE nullum tempus occurrit reipublicae (n<<schwa>>l-<<schwa>>m tem-p<<schwa>>s <<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>-r-it ree-I-p<<schwa>>b-l<<schwa>>-see), n.[Latin “no time runs against the state”] The principle that a statute of limitations does not apply to a commonwealth or state unless a statute specifically provides that it does. • The purpose of the rule is to fully protect public rights and property from injury. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 11. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions § 17.]

NUL TIEL

nul tiel (n<<schwa>>l teel). [Law Latin] No such. • This phrase typically denotes a plea that denies the existence of something.

NUL TIEL CORPORATION

nul tiel corporation, n. [Law French “no such corporation exists”] A plea denying the existence of an alleged corporation. • The defense of nul tiel corporation must usu. be affirmatively pleaded by a defendant before a plaintiff is required to prove its corporate existence. [Cases: Corporations 514.]

NUL TIEL RECORD

nul tiel record, n. [Law French “no such record”] A plea denying the existence of the record on which the plaintiff bases a claim. • Evidence may generally be introduced to invalidate the record only, not the statements in the record. See trial by record under TRIAL. [Cases: Judgment 914.]

“The proper general issue in debt on judgments is ‘nul tiel record,’ which denies the existence of the record alleged. Nul tiel record sets up: (1) the defense either that there is no record at all in existence; or (2) one different from that which the defendant has declared of; or (3) that the judgment is void on the face of the record.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 186, at 330 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

NUL TORT

nul tort (n<<schwa>>l tort), n. [Law French “no wrong”] Hist. A type of general denial in an action to recover lands and tenements, by which the defendant claims that no wrong was done. See NUL DISSEISIN.

“The general issue, or general plea, is what traverses, thwarts, and denies at once the whole declaration; without offering any special matter whereby to evade it [I]n real actions, nul tort, no wrong done; nul disseisin, no disseisin; and in a writ of right, that the tenant has more right to hold than the demandant has to demand. These pleas are called the general issue, because, by importing an absolute and general denial of what is alleged in the declaration, they amount at once to an issue; by which we mean a fact affirmed on one side and denied on the other.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 305 (1768).

NUL WASTE

nul waste (n<<schwa>>l wayst), n. [Law French “no waste”] Hist. The defendant's general denial in an action to recover damages for the destruction of lands and tenements. See NUL TORT.

OATH

oath. 1. A solemn declaration, accompanied by a swearing to God or a revered person or thing, that one's statement is true or that one will be bound to a promise. • The person making the oath implicitly invites punishment if the statement is untrue or the promise is broken. The legal effect of an oath is to subject the person to penalties for perjury if the testimony is false. [Cases: Oath 1; Witnesses 227. C.J.S. Oaths and Affirmations §§ 1–2, 8–11; Witnesses § 394.] 2. A statement or promise made by such a declaration. 3. A form of words used for such a declaration. 4. A formal declaration made solemn without a swearing to God or a revered person or thing; AFFIRMATION.

“The word ‘oath’ (apart from its use to indicate a profane expression) has two very different meanings: (1) a solemn appeal to God in attestation of the truth of a statement or the binding character of such a promise; (2) a statement or promise made under the sanction of such an appeal.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 515 (3d ed. 1982).

assertory oath (<<schwa>>-s<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>-ree). An oath by which one attests to some factual matter, rather than making a promise about one's future conduct. • A courtroom witness typically takes such an oath.

corporal oath (kor-p<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>l). An oath made solemn by touching a sacred object, esp. the Bible. — Also termed solemn oath; corporale sacramentum.

“Oath (Juramentum) Is a calling Almighty God to witness that the Testimony is true; therefore it is aptly termed Sacramentum, a Holy Band, a Sacred Tye, or Godly Vow. And it is called a Corporal Oath, because the party when he swears, toucheth with his right hand the Holy Evangelists or Book of the New Testament.” Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

decisive oath. Civil law. An oath by a party in a lawsuit, used to decide the case because the party's adversary, not being able to furnish adequate proof, offered to refer the decision of the case to the party. — Also termed decisory oath.

obiter, n. See OBITER DICTUM.

OBITER DICTUM

obiter dictum (ob-i-t<<schwa>>r dik-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin “something said in passing”] A judicial comment made while delivering a judicial opinion, but one that is unnecessary to the decision in the case and therefore not precedential (although it may be considered persuasive). — Often shortened to dictum or, less commonly, obiter. Pl. obiter dicta. See DICTUM. Cf. HOLDING(1); RATIO DECIDENDI. [Cases: Courts 92. C.J.S. Courts §§ 142–143.]

“Strictly speaking an ‘obiter dictum’ is a remark made or opinion expressed by a judge, in his decision upon a cause, ‘by the way’ — that is, incidentally or collaterally, and not directly upon the question before the court; or it is any statement of law enunciated by the judge or court merely by way of illustration, argument, analogy, or suggestion.... In the common speech of lawyers, all such extrajudicial expressions of legal opinion are referred to as ‘dicta,’ or ‘obiter dicta,’ these two terms being used interchangeably.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 304 (3d ed. 1914).

OBITER EX POST FACTO

obiter ex post facto (ob-i-t<<schwa>>r eks post fak-toh). A court's holding that, according to a later court, was expressed in unnecessarily broad terms. • Some authorities suggest that this is not, properly speaking, a type of obiter dictum at all.

OBJECT

object (ob-jekt), n.1. A person or thing to which thought, feeling, or action is directed <the natural object of one's bounty>. See NATURAL OBJECT.

object of a power. A person appointable by a donee. See POWER OF APPOINTMENT.

2. Something sought to be attained or accomplished; an end, goal, or purpose <the financial objects of the joint venture>.

object of an action. The legal relief that a plaintiff seeks; the remedy demanded or relief sought in a lawsuit. Cf. SUBJECT OF AN ACTION.

object of a statute. The aim or purpose of legislation; the end or design that a statute is meant to accomplish.

object (<<schwa>>b-jekt), vb.1. To state in opposition; to put forward as an objection <the prosecution objected that the defendant's discovery requests were untimely>.2. To state or put forward an objection, esp. to something in a judicial proceeding <the defense objected to the testimony on the ground that it was privileged>.[Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2017; Trial 77. C.J.S. Trial §§ 220–221.] — objector, n.

OBJECTANT

objectant. See CONTESTANT.

OBJECT CODE

object code. Copyright. The machine-readable language compiled from a computer programmer's source code. • Object code is difficult to reverse-engineer, so publicly available software is always in this form. Object code is protected by copyright and patent laws. Because people cannot read or understand it, object code is deposited with the U.S. Copyright Office more often than source code. Cf. SOURCE CODE.

OBJECTION

objection,n.1. A formal statement opposing something that has occurred, or is about to occur, in court and seeking the judge's immediate ruling on the point. • The party objecting must usu. state the basis for the objection to preserve the right to appeal an adverse ruling. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2017; Trial 77. C.J.S. Trial §§ 220–221.]

continuing objection.A single objection to all the questions in a given line of questioning. • A judge may allow a lawyer to make a continuing objection when the judge has overruled an objection applicable to many questions, and the lawyer wants to preserve the objection for the appellate record. — Also termed running objection. [Cases: Criminal Law 694; Trial 79. C.J.S. Trial § 222.]

general objection.An objection made without specifying any grounds in support of the objection. • A general objection preserves only the issue of relevancy. — Also termed broadside objection. [Cases: Trial 82. C.J.S. Trial §§ 209–211.]

speaking objection.An objection that contains more information (often in the form of argument) than needed by the judge to sustain or overrule it. • Many judges prohibit lawyers from using speaking objections, and sometimes even from stating the grounds for objections, because of the potential for influencing the jury.

specific objection.An objection that is accompanied by a statement of one or more grounds in support of the objection. [Cases: Trial 82, 83. C.J.S. Trial §§ 209–211, 223–224.]

2.Parliamentary law. A motion that suppresses a main motion, esp. one that will or may inflame controversy, immediately and without debate. • The motion, because it disposes of the main motion without any debate, usu. requires a supermajority. — Also termed question of consideration; objection to consideration of a question.“Objection to the consideration of a question is used when an original main motion is of a delicate or personal nature, or is contentious or inflammatory (such as sectarian, political, racial, etc.), or is irrelevant, unprofitable, or otherwise objectionable or discriminatory. The motion can be avoided altogether by instantly objecting to the consideration of the question.” George Demeter, Demeter's Manual of Parliamentary Law and Procedure 141 (1969).

3.Parliamentary law. A negative vote, esp. one that defeats a request for general consent.
4.Patents. An examiner's action identifying a defect in the form of a patent application, usu. in the specification or a drawing. • An objection does not raise questions about the merit of the claims. An examiner might object, for instance, to a defective oath or to a trademark appearing on the drawings. Cf. REJECTION(4). [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.]

OBJECTIONABLE

objectionable,adj. Open to opposition, esp. adverse reason or contrary argument. — Also termed exceptionable.

OBJECTION IN POINT OF LAW objection in point of law.A defensive pleading by which the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff but objects that they do not make out a legal claim. See DEMURRER. [Cases: Pleading 351. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 624–625.]

OBJECTION TO CONSIDERATION OF A QUESTION objection to consideration of a question.See OBJECTION(2).

OBJECTIVE

objective,adj.1. Of, relating to, or based on externally verifiable phenomena, as opposed to an individual's perceptions, feelings, or intentions <the objective facts>.2. Without bias or prejudice; disinterested <because her son was involved, she felt she could not be objective>. Cf. SUBJECTIVE.

OBJECTIVE BUT-FOR TEST

objective but-for test.See BUT-FOR MATERIALITY.

OBJECTIVE ENTRAPMENT

objective entrapment.See ENTRAPMENT.

OBJECTIVE ETHICS

objective ethics.See MORAL ABSOLUTISM.

OBJECTIVE IMPOSSIBILITY objective impossibility.See IMPOSSIBILITY.

OBJECTIVE MEANING

objective meaning.See MEANING.

OBJECTIVE METHOD

objective method.See HYPOTHETICAL-PERSON DEFENSE.

OBJECTIVE NOVATION

objective novation.See NOVATION.

OBJECTIVE STANDARD

objective standard.See STANDARD.

OBJECTIVE THEORY OF CONTRACT objective theory of contract.The doctrine that a contract is not an agreement in the sense of a subjective meeting of the minds but is instead a series of external acts giving the objective semblance of agreement. — Often shortened to objective theory. Cf. SUBJECTIVE THEORY OF CONTRACT; MEETING OF THE MINDS . [Cases: Contracts 15, 147(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 35–36, 38, 308; Parent and Child § 178.]

OBJECT OF A POWER

object of a power. See permissible appointee under APPOINTEE.

OBJECT OF A RIGHT

object of a right. The thing in respect of which a right exists; the subject matter of a right. — Also termed subject of a right. See SUBJECT OF A RIGHT.

OBJECT OFFENSE

object offense. See OFFENSE(1).

OBJECT OF THE POWER

object of the power. See permissible appointee under APPOINTEE.

OBJECT OF THE POWER OF APPOINTMENT object of the power of appointment. See permissible appointee under APPOINTEE.

OBJURGATRIX

objurgatrix (ob-j<<schwa>>r-gay-triks). Hist. A common scold. See SCOLD.

OBLATIO

oblatio (ah-blai-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A tender of payment or performance due. Pl. oblationes (ah-blai-shee-oh-nee-z).

OBLATION

oblation (ah-blai-sh<<schwa>>n). An offering or sacrifice, esp. one in a religious or ritualistic ceremony. — oblatory, adj.

OBLIGANT

obligant (ob-l<<schwa>>-g<<schwa>>nt). Scots law. A debtor in an obligation; OBLIGOR.

OBLIGATE

obligate, vb. 1. To bind by legal or moral duty. 2. To commit (funds, property, etc.) to meet or secure an obligation.

OBLIGATIO

obligatio (ah-bl<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. An obligation; a legal bond. Pl. oblationes (ah-bl<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh-nee-z).

obligatio civilis (ah-bl<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh s<<schwa>>-vi-lis). [Latin “civil obligation”]

Roman law. 1. An obligation recognized under jus civile as opposed to one recognized only under jus honorarium. 2. A legally enforceable obligation, such as one by contract.

obligatio ex contractu (ah-bl<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh eks k<<schwa>>n-trak-t [y]oo). Roman law. [Latin “contractual obligation”] A contractual obligation.

obligatio ex delicto (ah-bl<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh eks d<<schwa>>-lik-toh). [Latin “tortious obligation”] Roman law. An obligation arising from a wrongdoing against the person or property of another; an obligation enforceable in tort. — Also termed obligatio ex maleficio (mal-<<schwa>>-fish-ee-oh).

obligatio honoraria (ah-bl<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh [h]on-<<schwa>>-rair-ee-<<schwa>>). Roman law. An obligation that the praetor or an aedile declares actionable.

obligatio litteris (ah-bl<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh lit-<<schwa>>r-is). [Latin “written obligation”] 1. Hist. A written contract. — Also termed obligatio litterarum. 2. Scots law. A contract that must be constituted in formal writing. — Also spelled obligatio literis. 3. Roman law. Literal contract, strictly comprising only the nomen transcripticum. See NOMEN TRANSCRIPTICUM.

obligatio naturalis (ah-bl<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh nach-<<schwa>>-ray-lis). [Latin “natural obligation”] Roman law. An obligation that is not legally enforceable, although it may produce legal effects; an obligation deriving only from the law of nature.

obligatio quasi ex contractu (ah-bl<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh kway-sI [or -zI] eks k<<schwa>>n-trak-t[y]oo). [Latin “obligation from quasi-contract”] Roman law. An obligation arising between two persons who have not contracted with each other but have formed a relationship similar to a contractual one, or where a payment is made in error; a quasi-contractual obligation. See implied-in-law contract under CONTRACT.

obligatio quasi ex delicto (ah-bl<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh kway-sI [or -zI] eks d<<schwa>>-lik-toh). [Latin “obligation from something resembling a tort”] Roman law. An obligation arising from a wrong that is not covered by an obligatio ex delicto but that nonetheless creates liability. — Also termed obligatio quasi ex maleficio (mal-<<schwa>>-fish-ee-oh).

obligatio verborum (ah-bl<<schwa>>-gay-shee-oh v<<schwa>>r-bor-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “a verbal obligation”] Roman law. An obligation arising from a solemn question and answer using specific words.

OBLIGATION

obligation, n. 1. A legal or moral duty to do or not do something. • The word has many wide and varied meanings. It may refer to anything that a person is bound to do or forbear from doing, whether the duty is imposed by law, contract, promise, social relations, courtesy, kindness, or morality. 2. A formal, binding agreement or acknowledgment of a liability to pay a certain amount or to do a certain thing for a particular person or set of persons; esp., a duty arising by contract. — Also termed (in sense 2) civil obligation. See DUTY(1); LIABILITY(1). [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.] 3. Civil law. A legal relationship in which one person, the obligor, is bound to render a performance in favor of another, the obligee. La. Civ. Code art. 1756.

“[I]n English-speaking countries an unfortunate habit has arisen of using ‘obligation’ in a lax manner as co-extensive with duties of every kind.” Frederick Pollock, A First Book of Jurisprudence 82 (1896).

“Obligation in its popular sense is merely a synonym for duty. Its legal sense, derived from Roman law, differs from this in several respects. In the first place, obligations are merely one class of duties, namely, those which are the correlatives of rights in personam. An obligation is the vinculum juris, or bond of legal necessity, which binds together two or more determinate individuals.... Secondly, the term obligatio is in law the name, not merely of the duty, but also of the correlative right. It denotes the legal relation or vinculum juris in its entirety, including the right of the one party, no less than the liability of the other. Looked at from the point of view of the person entitled, an obligation is a right; looked at from the point of view of the person bound, it is a duty.... An obligation, therefore, may be defined as a proprietary right in personam or a duty which corresponds to such a right.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 460 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“[I]n its more general acceptance, the word ‘obligation’ means something that the law or morals command a person to do, a command that is made effective by the imposition of a sanction if the person fails to obey or comply. When given that reference, the word ‘obligation’ is made synonymous with the word ‘duty.’ In that sense it is said, for example, that all citizens of a certain age are under an obligation to fulfill their military duties accessory obligation.An obligation that is incidental to another obligation. • For example, a mortgage to secure payment of a bond is an accessory obligation. The primary obligation is to pay the bond itself. Cf. primary obligation (1).

alternative obligation.An obligation that can be satisfied in at least two different ways, at the choice of the obligor. — Also termed disjunctive obligation.

bifactoral obligation (bI-fak-t<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>l). An obligation created by two parties.

civil obligation.See conventional obligation.

community obligation.A debt or other obligation incurred by either spouse after marriage in a community-property state. • Such an obligation is presumed to be an obligation of the community and not of the individual spouse.

conditional obligation. An obligation that depends on an uncertain event. [Cases: Contracts 218. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 355, 358.]

conjunctive obligation. An obligation composed of multiple performances that can be separately rendered or enforced; esp., an obligation in which several objects are connected by and (not or) or are in some other way clearly meant to be separately included in the contract. • For example, a loan agreement's conjunctive obligation may require payment of four loan installments and delivery of a deed of trust. Each loan installment and the deed's delivery is a separate, enforceable performance.

contractual obligation. An obligation arising from a contract or agreement.

conventional obligation. An obligation that results from agreement of the parties; a contractual obligation. Cf. obediential obligation. — Also termed express obligation; civil obligation.

correal obligation (kor-ee-<<schwa>>l or k<<schwa>>-ree-<<schwa>>l). Roman & civil law. A joint and several obligation.

“A correal obligation means a plurality of obligations based on a community of obligation: a joint liability in respect of the whole of the same debt or a joint right in respect of the whole of the same claim.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 361 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

current obligation. An obligation that is presently enforceable, but not past due.

determinate obligation. An obligation that has a specific thing as its object. • For example, an obligation to deliver the 1491 Venice edition of Vocabularium Iuris that once belonged to H.L.A. Hart can be discharged only by delivering the specified book. Cf. indeterminate obligation.

disjunctive obligation. See alternative obligation.

divisible obligation. An obligation that can be divided without the consent of the parties. • Either the performing party or the receiving party may unilaterally divide the obligation.

express obligation. See conventional obligation.

heritable obligation. An obligation that may be enforced by a successor of the creditor or against a successor of the debtor. — Also termed inheritable obligation.

imperfect obligation. See moral obligation.

implied obligation. See obediential obligation.

indeterminate obligation. 1. An obligation by which the obligor is bound to deliver one of a certain species of items. • For example, an obligation to deliver a pre-1509 edition of Vocabularium Iuris can be discharged by delivering any edition published before that date. 2. An obligation that is not specific in amount or form, or is subject to being changed by a third party. Cf. determinate obligation.

inheritable obligation. See heritable obligation.

joint obligation. 1. An obligation that binds two or more debtors to a single performance for one creditor. 2. An obligation that binds one debtor to a single performance for two or more creditors.

moral obligation. A duty that is based only on one's conscience and that is not legally enforceable; an obligation with a purely moral basis, as opposed to a legal one. • In contract law, moral obligation may support a promise in the absence of traditional consideration, but only if the promisor has previously received some actual benefit from the promisee. — Also termed imperfect obligation; natural obligation. [Cases: Contracts 76. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 102, 127, 130.]

natural obligation. 1. Civil law. A moral duty that is not enforceable by judicial action. • Natural obligations are recognized in civil-law jurisdictions. While they are not enforceable by judicial action, something that has been performed under a natural obligation may not be reclaimed. For example, if an indigent patient in a hospital has no legal obligation to pay for the treatment but does so anyway, that person cannot later reclaim the payments voluntarily made. — Also termed obligatio naturalis. 2. See moral obligation.

obediential obligation (<<schwa>>-bee-dee-en-sh<<schwa>>l). An obligation imposed on a person because of a situation or relationship, such as an obligation of parents to care for their children. — Also termed implied obligation. Cf. conventional obligation.

perfect obligation. A legally enforceable obligation; one that is recognized and sanctioned by positive law.

personal obligation. 1. An obligation performable only by the obligor, not by the obligor's heirs or representatives. 2. An obligation in which the obligor is bound to perform without encumbering his or her property for its performance.

primary obligation. 1. An obligation that arises from the essential purpose of the transaction between the parties. Cf. accessory obligation. 2. A fundamental contractual term imposing a requirement on a contracting party from which other obligations may arise. — Also termed principal obligation.

primitive obligation. The obligation designated as the first to be satisfied.

principal obligation. See primary obligation (2).

pure obligation. Scots law. An absolute obligation already due and immediately enforceable. — Also termed pure debt.

secondary obligation. A duty, promise, or undertaking that is incident to a primary obligation; esp., a duty to make reparation upon a breach of contract. — Also termed accessory obligation.

several obligation. 1. An obligation that binds two or more debtors to separate performances for one creditor. 2. An obligation that binds one debtor to separate performances for two or more creditors.

simple obligation. An obligation that does not depend on an outside event; an unconditional obligation.

single obligation. An obligation with no penalty attached for nonperformance, as when one party simply promises to pay 20 dollars to another.

solidary obligation (sol-<<schwa>>-der-ee). Roman & civil law. An obligation that binds each of two or more debtors for the entire performance at the option of the creditor. • Solidary obligations are analogous to common-law joint and several obligations.

statutory obligation. An obligation — whether to pay money, perform certain acts, or discharge duties — that is created by or arises out of a statute, rather than based on an independent contractual or legal relationship.

substitute obligation. Civil law. An obligation that takes the place of an extinguished obligation by novation. See NOVATION.

unifactoral obligation (yoo-n*<<schwa>>-fak-t<<schwa>>r<<schwa>>l*). An obligation created by one party.

OBLIGATION, MUTUALITY OF obligation, mutuality of. See MUTUALITY OF OBLIGATION.

OBLIGATIONAL

obligational. See OBLIGATORY.

OBLIGATIO NATURALIS

obligatio naturalis. See OBLIGATIO.

OBLIGATION BOND

obligation bond. See general obligation bond under BOND(3).

OBLIGATIONES INNOMINATI obligationes innominati. See INNOMINATE OBLIGATIONS.

OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS CLAUSE

Obligation of Contracts Clause. See CONTRACTS CLAUSE.

OBLIGATIONS, LAW OF obligations, law of. See LAW OF OBLIGATIONS.

OBLIGATIO QUASI EX CONTRACTU obligatio quasi ex contractu. See OBLIGATIO.

OBLIGATIO QUASI EX DELICTO obligatio quasi ex delicto. See OBLIGATIO.

OBLIGATIO QUASI EX MALEFICIO obligatio quasi ex maleficio. See obligatio quasi ex delicto under OBLIGATIO.

OBLIGATORY

obligatory (<<schwa>>-blig-<<schwa>>-tor-ee), adj. 1. Legally or morally binding <an obligatory promise>. 2. Required; mandatory <attendance is not obligatory>. 3. Creating or recording an obligation . — Also termed (rarely) obligational.

OBLIGE

oblige (<<schwa>>-blj), vb. 1. To bind by legal or moral duty; OBLIGATE. 2. To bind by doing a favor or service.

OBLIGEE

obligee (ob-l<<schwa>>-jee). 1. One to whom an obligation is owed; a promisee, creditor, or donor beneficiary. 2. Under the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act, any person to whom a duty of support is owed. 3. Archaic. One who is obliged to do something; OBLIGOR(1).

“Several dictionaries, such as The Random House College Dictionary (rev. ed. 1988) and Webster's New World Dictionary (1979), define obligee in its etymological sense [‘obliged’], as if it were synonymous with obligor. Random House, for example, defines obligee as ‘a person who is under obligation,’ but that meaning ought to be reserved for obligor. An obligee, in modern usage, is one to whom an obligation is owed.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 609 (2d ed. 1995).

OBLIGOR

obligor (ob-l<<schwa>>-gor) or ob-l<<schwa>>-gor). 1. One who has undertaken an obligation; a promisor or debtor. UCC § 9-102(a)(59). 2. Under the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act, any person who owes a duty of support. 3. Archaic. One who obliges another to do something; OBLIGEE(1). principal obligor. A person who is under a duty of indemnity.

OBLIQUE

oblique (oh-blee-ko or <<schwa>>-bleek), adj. 1. Not direct in descent; collateral <an oblique heir>. 2. Indirect; circumstantial <oblique evidence>.

OBLIQUE EVIDENCE

oblique evidence. See circumstantial evidence (1) under EVIDENCE.

OBLIQUUS

obliquus (ob-II-kw<<schwa>>s). [Latin "oblique"] Hist. (Of a line of descent) collateral; indirect. Cf. RECTUS.

OBLITERATE

obliterate, vb. 1. To wipe out, rub off, or erase (a writing or other markings). 2. To remove from existence; to destroy all traces of. — obliteration, n.

OBLITERATED CORNER

obliterated corner. See CORNER.

OBLIVION

oblivion. 1. The act or fact of forgetting or having forgotten <the oblivion of sleep>. 2. The state of being completely forgotten or unknown . 3. An official disregard of an offense; pardon; amnesty <an act of oblivion by Parliament>.

OBLOQUY

obloquy (ob-I<<schwa>>-kwee). 1. Abusive or defamatory language; CALUMNY. 2. The state or condition of being ill spoken of; disgrace or bad repute.

OB MAJOREM CAUTELAM

ob majorem cautelam (ob m<<schwa>>-jor<<schwa>>m kaw-tee-I<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. For greater security.

OB METUM PERJURII

ob metum perjurii (ob mee-t<<schwa>>m p<<schwa>>r-juur-ee-I). [Law Latin] Scots law. On account of the fear of perjury. See METUS PERJURII.

OB NON SOLUTUM CANONEM

ob non solutum canonem (ob non s<<schwa>>-loo-t<<schwa>>m k<<schwa>>-noh-n<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Scots law. On account of unpaid canon or feu duty. • A vassal could forfeit land if the vassal failed to pay the feu duty for two (later five) years. See FEU.

OBNOXIOUS

obnoxious, adj. 1. Offensive; objectionable <obnoxious behavior>. 2. Contrary; opposed . 3. Archaic. Exposed to harm; liable to something undesirable <actions obnoxious to criticism>.

OB PIAS CAUSAS

ob pias causas (ob pI-<<schwa>>s kaw-z<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Hist. On account of religious or charitable reasons; for dutiful considerations.

“Provisions made by a son to his father ob pias causas are those which proceed from the affectionate regard and natural duty which the son is bound morally to render to his father.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 412 (4th ed. 1894).

OB POENAM NEGLIGENTIAE

ob poenam negligentiae (ob pee-n<<schwa>>m neg-li-jen-shee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of punishment for negligence. • The law punished those who were negligent in protecting their own interests.

OB PUBLICAM UTILITATEM

ob publicam utilitatem (ob p<<schwa>>b-li-k<<schwa>>m yoo-til-<<schwa>>-tay-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. On account of public utility; for the public advantage.

OBREPTION

obreption (ob-rep-sh<<schwa>>n). The fraudulent obtaining of a gift or dispensation, esp. from a sovereign or ecclesiastical authority. Cf. SUBREPTIO.

OBREPTIONE

obreptione (ob-rep-shee-oh-nee). [Latin] Hist. By surprise; by deceit.

OB REVERENTIAM PERSONAE ET METUM PERJURII

ob reverentiam personae et metum perjurii (ob rev-<<schwa>>-ren-shee-<<schwa>>m p<<schwa>>r-soh-nee et mee-t<<schwa>>m p<<schwa>>r-juur-ee-I). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of reverence to the person and the fear of perjury. • On this basis, certain witnesses could be excluded or could decline to answer certain questions that might cause them to commit perjury rather than admit to some act. This principle is essentially the forerunner to the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. See METUS PERJURII.

OBROGATE

obrogate (ob-r<<schwa>>-gayt), vb. Civil law. To modify or repeal (a law) in whole or in part by passing a new law. Cf. ABROGATE. — obrogation,n.

OBSCENE obscene,adj. Extremely offensive under contemporary community standards of morality and decency; grossly repugnant to the generally accepted notions of what is appropriate. • Under the Supreme Court's three-part test, material is legally obscene — and therefore not protected under the First Amendment — if, taken as a whole, the material (1) appeals to the prurient interest in sex, as determined by the average person applying contemporary community standards; (2) portrays sexual conduct, as specifically defined by the applicable state law, in a patently offensive way; and (3) lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value. Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93

S.Ct. 2607 (1973). [Cases: Constitutional Law 82(10), 90.4; Obscenity 1. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 464, 546, 631, 635–637, 639, 644, 646–648; Obscenity §§ 1–8.]

“If there be no abstract definition, ... should not the word ‘obscene’ be allowed to indicate the present critical point in the compromise between candor and shame at which the community may have arrived here and now?” United States v. Kennerley, 209 F. 119, 121 (S.D.N.Y. 1913)(per Hand, J.).

OBSCENE LIBEL

obscene libel.See LIBEL.

OBSCENITY

obscenity,n.1. The characteristic or state of being morally abhorrent or socially taboo, esp. as a result of referring to or depicting sexual or excretory functions. [Cases: Constitutional Law 82(10), 90.4; Obscenity 1. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 464, 546, 631, 635–637, 639, 644, 646–648; Obscenity §§ 1–8.] 2. Something (such as an expression or act) that has this characteristic. See CONTEMPORARY COMMUNITY STANDARD. Cf. INDECENCY.

“Obscenity is not deemed to be protected by the First Amendment, and the operative legal tests for obscenity are spongy and leave much to the vagaries of juries asked to evaluate expert testimony on literary merit, offensiveness, and other unmeasurables.” Richard A. Posner, Law and Literature: A Misunderstood Relation 329 (1988).

commercialized obscenity.Obscenity produced and marketed for sale to the public.

OBSERVE

observe,vb. To adhere to or abide by (a law, rule, or custom) .

OBSERVER observer.Int'l law. A representative of a country or international organization who attends meetings of an international body (such as the United Nations) to which the observer's country does not belong. • Observers do not vote or sign documents, but they are sometimes allowed to participate in discussions. [Cases: International Law 10.45. C.J.S. International Law §§ 59–65.]

OBSES

obses (ob-seez), n.[Latin] A hostage in wartime. Pl. obsides.

OBSIGNARE

obsignare (ob-sig-nair-ee), vb.[Latin] Civil law. To seal up, as with money that has been tendered and refused.

OBSIGNATION

(ob-sig-n<<schwa>>-tor-ee), adj.

OBSIGNATOR

obsignator (ahb-sig-nay-tor or -t<<schwa>>r), n. [Latin] Roman law. One who affixes a seal, esp. as a witness, to a will or other document. Pl. obsignatores (ahb-sig-n<<schwa>>-tor-eez).

OBSOLESCENCE

obsolescence (ob-s<<schwa>>-les-<<schwa>>nts).1. The process or state of falling into disuse or becoming obsolete. 2. A diminution in the value or usefulness of property, esp. as a result of technological advances. • For tax purposes, obsolescence is usu. distinguished from physical deterioration. Cf. DEPRECIATION. [Cases: Taxation 348(4).]

economic obsolescence.Obsolescence that results from external economic factors, such as decreased demand or changed governmental regulations. — Also termed external obsolescence. Cf. functional obsolescence.

external obsolescence.See economic obsolescence.

functional obsolescence.Obsolescence that results either from inherent deficiencies in the property, such as inadequate equipment or design, or from improvements in the property since its use began. Cf. economic obsolescence.

planned obsolescence.A system or policy of deliberately producing consumer goods that will wear out or become outdated after limited use, thus inducing consumers to buy new items more frequently. — Also termed built-in obsolescence.

OBSOLESCENT

obsolescent,adj. Going out of use; becoming obsolete.

OBSOLETE

obsolete,adj. No longer in general use; out-of-date.

OBSTACLE PREEMPTION

obstacle preemption.See PREEMPTION.

OBSTANTE

obstante (ob-stan-tee or <<schwa>>b-). [Latin] Withstanding; hindering. See NON OBSTANTE VEREDICTO .

OBSTA PRINCIPIIS

obsta principiis (ob-st<<schwa>> prin-sip-ee-is). [Latin] Withstand beginnings; resist the first approaches or encroachments.

OBSTINATE DESERTION obstinate desertion.See DESERTION.

OBSTRUCT

obstruct (<<schwa>>b-strikt), vb. To coerce. — obstructiveness,n. — obstructive,adj.

“The element of coercion or obstructiveness. The contrast here is between voluntary and obstructed (or coerced) conduct. The coercion need not be actual (objective), but may be merely potential (subjective) by fear of the possible force; as, when the faithful canine, Towser, susceptible to the sight of a feline enemy, is tempted to pursue, but upon his owner's stern voice and a shake of the stick, Towser turns humbly back and crushes his impulse.” John Henry Wigmore, Problems of Law 7–8 (1920).

OBSTRUCTION

obstruction.Archaic. Obligation; bond.

OBSTRUCTING PROCESS

obstructing process.See OBSTRUCTION OF PROCESS.

OBSTRUCTION

obstruction. 1. Something that impedes or hinders, as in a street, river, or design; an obstacle. 2. The act of impeding or hindering something; interference. 3.Oil & gas. A common-law doctrine that suspends the running of time under an oil-and-gas lease or extends the lease for a reasonable period of time if rights granted under the lease are interfered with by the lessor or someone claiming through the lessor.

OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE

obstruction of justice.Interference with the orderly administration of law and justice, as by giving false information to or withholding evidence from a police officer or prosecutor, or by harming or intimidating a witness or juror. • Obstruction of justice is a crime in most jurisdictions. — Also termed obstructing justice; obstructing public justice. [Cases: Obstructing Justice 1; Sentencing and Punishment 761. C.J.S. Obstructing Justice or Governmental Administration §§ 1, 3–14, 16, 18–20, 25–30, 33, 35–36, 38.]

“The goal, — to proscribe every wilful act of corruption, intimidation or force which tends in any way to distort or impede the administration of law either civil or criminal — has been very largely attained, partly by aid of legislation. And any punishable misdeed of such a nature which is not recognized as a distinct crime, is usually called ‘obstruction of justice,’ or ‘obstructing justice,’ — a common-law misdemeanor.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 552 (3d ed. 1982).

OBSTRUCTION OF PROCESS

obstruction of process.Interference of any kind with the lawful service or execution of a writ, warrant, or other process. • Most jurisdictions make this offense a crime. — Also termed obstructing process; resisting process.

OBTAINING PROPERTY BY FALSE PRETENSES obtaining property by false pretenses. See FALSE PRETENSES.

OBTAIN THE FLOOR

obtain the floor. Parliamentary law. To receive recognition from the chair after claiming the floor.

OBTORTO COLLO

obtorto collo (ob-tor-toh kah-loh). [Latin] Roman law. Dragged by the neck. • Because a plaintiff could not sue an absent defendant, the plaintiff was sometimes said to have to bring a defendant obtorto collo to court.

OBTULIT SE

obtulit se (ob-t[y]<<schwa>>-lit see). [Latin] Offered himself. • In old English practice, these words were entered on the record when one party appeared (“offered himself”) in court against an opposing party who did not appear.

OB TURPEM CAUSAM

ob turpem causam (ob t<<schwa>>r-p<<schwa>>m [or -pem] kaw-z<<schwa>>m). [Latin] For an immoral consideration; on account of disgraceful consideration. • An obligation ob turpem causam (i.e., founded on what was termed turpis causa) could not be enforced.

OBVENTION

obvention (ob- or <<schwa>>b-ven-sh<<schwa>>n). Eccles. law. An incoming fee or revenue, esp. one that comes occasionally or incidentally.

OBVIATE

obviate (ob-vee-ayt), vb. 1. To dispose of or do away with (a thing); to anticipate and prevent from arising <they obviated the growing problem through legislation>. 2. To make unnecessary <the movant obviated the all-night drafting session by getting the opponent to agree to an extension>. — obviation, n. — obviator, n.

OBVIOUS ERROR

obvious error. A standard of review that applies to unobjected-to actions and omissions at trial that are so seriously prejudicial as to result in manifest injustice.

OBVIOUSNESS

obviousness, n. Patents. The quality or state of being easily apparent to a person with ordinary skill in a given art, considering the scope and content of the prior art, so that the person could reasonably believe that, at the time it was conceived, the invention was to be expected. • An invention that is determined to be obvious cannot be patented. Although an obviousness inquiry is rife with questions of fact, the ultimate conclusion is a question of law. See 35 USCA § 103. Cf. NONOBVIOUSNESS. [Cases: Patents 16.C.J.S. Patents § 68.] — obvious,adj.

OBVIOUSNESS DOUBLE PATENTING obviousness double patenting. See DOUBLE PATENTING(2).

OBVIOUSNESS-TYPE DOUBLE PATENTING obviousness-type double patenting. See judicially created double patenting under DOUBLE PATENTING(2).

OCCULT MARRIAGE

occult marriage. See confidential marriage under MARRIAGE(1).

OCCUPANCY

occupancy. 1. The act, state, or condition of holding, possessing, or residing in or on something; actual possession, residence, or tenancy, esp. of a dwelling or land. • In this sense, the term denotes whatever acts are done on the land to manifest a claim of exclusive control and to indicate to the public that the actor has appropriated the land. Hence, erecting and maintaining a substantial enclosure around a tract of land usu. constitutes occupancy of the whole tract.

constructive occupancy. A manifest intent to occupy property physically, followed within a reasonable time by actual occupancy.

2. The act of taking possession of something that has no owner (such as abandoned property) so as to acquire legal ownership. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. 3. The period or term during which one owns, rents, or otherwise occupies property. 4. The state or condition of being occupied. 5. The use to which property is put.

OCCUPANT

occupant. 1. One who has possessory rights in, or control over, certain property or premises. 2. One who acquires title by occupancy.

general occupant. A person who occupies land in the interim arising after the death of a pur autre vie tenant but before the death of the person who serves as the measuring life for the estate. • The pur autre vie tenant does not state who may occupy the land after the death of the first tenant; the land can be occupied by the first possessor of the land. — Also termed common occupant. Cf. CESTUI QUE VIE.

special occupant. A person specifically designated in a conveyance as being entitled to a life estate if the conveyee dies before the end of the life estate; specif., a pur autre vie tenant's heir who occupies land in the interim between the death of the tenant and the death of the person who serves as the measuring life for the estate. • A special occupancy can arise when the grant to the pur autre vie tenant provides that possession is for the life of the tenant, then to the tenant's heirs.

OCCUPANT STATUTE

occupant statute. See BETTERMENT ACT.

occupare (ok-y<<schwa>>-pair-ee), vb. [Latin] Civil law. To seize or take possession of (property); to enter (land) upon a vacant possession.

occupation. 1. An activity or pursuit in which a person is engaged; esp., a person's usual or principal work or business.

dangerous occupation. An occupation that involves an appreciable risk of death or serious bodily injury.

2. The possession, control, or use of real property; OCCUPANCY. 3. The seizure and control of a territory by military force; the condition of territory that has been placed under the authority of a hostile army. [Cases: War and National Emergency 30(1). C.J.S. War and National Defense § 46.] 4. The period during which territory seized by military force is held.

OCCUPATIONAL CRIME

occupational crime. See CRIME.

OCCUPATIONAL-DISABILITY INSURANCE

occupational-disability insurance. See INSURANCE.

OCCUPATIONAL DISEASE

occupational disease. A disease that is contracted as a result of exposure to debilitating conditions or substances in the course of employment. • Employees who suffer from occupational diseases are eligible for workers' compensation. Courts have construed the term to include a variety of ailments, including lung conditions (such as asbestosis or black lung), hearing loss, and carpal tunnel syndrome. — Also termed industrial disease. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 547–551. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 315–324.]

“Certain diseases and infirmities which develop gradually and imperceptibly as a result of engaging in particular employments and which are generally known and understood to be usual incidents or hazards thereof, are distinguished from those having a traumatic origin, or otherwise developing suddenly and unexpectedly, by the terms ‘occupational,’ and ‘industrial.’” 82 Am. Jur. 2d Workers' Compensation § 326 (1992).

OCCUPATIONAL HAZARD

occupational hazard. See HAZARD(1).

OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH ACT OF 1970

Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970. A federal statute that requires employers to (1) keep the workplace free from recognized hazards that cause or are likely to cause death or serious physical harm to employees, and (2) comply with standards promulgated by the Secretary of Labor. — Abbr. OSHA (oh-sh<<schwa>>). [Cases: Labor Relations 9.6.]

“Although OSHA has been one of the most controversial pieces of protective legislation ever enacted, Congress has not passed any substantive amendments to the Act. There have been, however, some limitations on OSHA enforcement activity attached to appropriations bills. In addition, OSHA has been affected by newer laws such as the Criminal Fine Enforcement Act, the Equal Access to Justice Act, and the Surface Transportation Assistance Act.... The Act covers employment in every state, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and all American territories, an estimated 5 million workplaces and 75 million employees.” Mark A. Rothstein, Occupational Safety and Health Law 7 (1990).

OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH ADMINISTRATION

Occupational Safety and Health Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Labor responsible for setting and enforcing workplace safety and health standards and for helping employers comply with them. • It was created under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970. 29 USCA §§ 651 et seq. There are ten regional offices. — Abbr. OSHA. [Cases: Labor Relations 9.6, 27.1.]

OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH REVIEW COMMISSION

Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission. An independent, quasi-judicial commission that resolves allegations of unsafe or unhealthy working conditions. • It was established by the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970. 29 USCA §§ 651–678. — Abbr. OSHRC.

OCCUPATIONAL TAX

occupavit (ok-y<<schwa>>-pay-vit). [Law Latin] Hist. A writ to regain possession to land or a tenement from which one was ejected in time of war.

OCCUPYING CLAIMANT occupying claimant. A person who claims the right under a statute to recover for the cost of improvements done to land that is later found not to belong to the person. [Cases: Improvements 4. C.J.S. Improvements § 5.]

OCCUPYING-CLAIMANT ACT

occupying-claimant act. See BETTERMENT ACT.

OCCURRENCE

occurrence. Something that happens or takes place; specif., an accident, event, or continuing condition that results in personal injury or property damage that is neither expected nor intended from the standpoint of an insured party. • This specific sense is the standard definition of the term under most liability policies. [Cases: Insurance 2101, 2275. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 935, 941, 943, 949.]

OCCURRENCE-BASED LIABILITY INSURANCE occurrence-based liability insurance. See INSURANCE.

OCCURRENCE POLICY occurrence policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

OCCURRENCE RULE

occurrence rule. Civil procedure. The rule that a limitations period begins to run when the alleged wrongful act or omission occurs, rather than when the plaintiff discovers the injury. • This rule applies, for example, to most breach-of-contract claims. See STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. Cf. DISCOVERY RULE. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 43. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 81–84.]

OCEAN

ocean. 1. The continuous body of salt water that covers more than 70% of the earth's surface; the high seas; the open sea. Cf. SEA. 2. Any of the principal geographic divisions of this body. • There are generally considered to be five oceans: Atlantic, Pacific, Indian, Arctic, and Antarctic.

ODD LOT

odd lot.See LOT(3).

ODD-LOT

odd-lot,adj. Of, relating to, or designating a worker who is so substantially disabled as to be unable to find stable employment in the ordinary labor market, and thus is considered totally disabled and entitled to workers'-compensation benefits under the odd-lot doctrine <an odd-lot worker who could find only sporadic employment>. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 847.C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 558–559.]

ODD-LOT DOCTRINE

odd-lot doctrine.Workers' compensation. The doctrine that permits a finding of total disability for an injured claimant who, though able to work sporadically, cannot obtain regular employment and steady income and is thus considered an “odd lot” in the labor market. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 847. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 558–559.]

offender. A person who has committed a crime.

adult offender. 1. A person who has committed a crime after reaching the age of majority. 2. A person who, having committed a crime while a minor, has been convicted after reaching the age of majority. 3. A juvenile who has committed a crime and is tried as an adult rather than as a juvenile. [Cases: Infants 68.5. C.J.S. Infants §§ 43–45.]

career offender.Under the federal-sentencing guidelines, an adult who, after being convicted of two violent felonies or controlled-substance felonies, commits another such felony. U.S. Sentencing Guidelines Manual § 4B1.1.

first offender.A person who authorities believe has committed a crime but who has never before been convicted of a crime. • First offenders are often treated leniently at sentencing or in plea negotiations. [Cases: Criminal Law 273.1(2); Sentencing and Punishment 102, 868. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 365–374, 1459–1460, 1463, 1465, 1472, 1477, 1479, 1492–1493, 1495, 1530.]

habitual offender. 1. A person who commits the same or a similar offense a certain number of times in a certain period, as set by statute, and is therefore eligible for an enhanced sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1200. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1638–1639, 1641.]
2.RECIDIVIST.

repeat offender.A person who has been convicted of a crime more than once; RECIDIVIST. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1202. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1643, 1650, 1652.]

situational offender.A first-time offender who is unlikely to commit future crimes.

status offender.A youth who engages in conduct that — though not criminal by adult standards — is considered inappropriate enough to bring a charge against the youth in juvenile court; a juvenile who commits a status offense. Cf. youthful offender; JUVENILE DELINQUENT. [Cases: Infants 153. C.J.S. Infants §§ 33–35, 41–42, 64, 67.]

youthful offender. 1. A person in late adolescence or early adulthood who has been convicted of a crime. • A youthful offender is often eligible for special programs not available to older offenders, including community supervision, the successful completion of which may lead to erasing the conviction from the offender's record. [Cases: Infants 69(3). C.J.S. Infants § 211.]
2.JUVENILE DELINQUENT. — Also termed young offender; youth offender. Cf. status offender.

OFFENSE

offense (<<schwa>>-fents).1. A violation of the law; a crime, often a minor one. See CRIME. — Also termed criminal offense. [Cases: Criminal Law 1. C.J.S. Affray §§ 2–12; Criminal Law §§ 2–8, 13.]

“The terms ‘crime,’ ‘offense,’ and ‘criminal offense’ are all said to be synonymous, and ordinarily used interchangeably. ‘Offense’ may comprehend every crime and misdemeanor, or may be used in a specific sense as synonymous with ‘felony’ or with ‘misdemeanor,’ as the case may be, or as signifying a crime of lesser grade, or an act not indictable, but punishable summarily or by the forfeiture of a penalty.” 22 C.J.S. Criminal Law § 3, at 4 (1989).

acquisitive offense.An offense characterized by the unlawful appropriation of another's property. • This is a generic term that refers to a variety of crimes (such as larceny) rather than a particular one.

allied offense.A crime with elements so similar to those of another that the commission of the one is automatically the commission of the other.

anticipatory offense.See inchoate offense.

arrestable offense.English law. An offense for which the punishment is fixed by law or for which a statute authorizes imprisonment for five years, or an attempt to commit such an offense. • This statutory category, created in 1967, abolished the traditional distinction between felonies and misdemeanors. — Also spelled (esp. in BrE) arrestable offence.

bailable offense. A criminal charge for which a defendant may be released from custody after providing proper security <misdemeanor theft is a bailable offense>. [Cases: Bail 43. C.J.S. Bail; Release and Detention Pending Proceedings §§ 18–23.]

capital offense. A crime for which the death penalty may be imposed. — Also termed capital crime. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1666.]

civil offense. See public tort under TORT.

cognate offense. A lesser offense that is related to the greater offense because it shares several of the elements of the greater offense and is of the same class or category. • For example, shoplifting is a cognate offense of larceny because both crimes require the element of taking property with the intent to deprive the rightful owner of that property. Cf. lesser included offense. [Cases: Indictment and Information 191(.5).]

compound offense. An offense composed of one or more separate offenses. • For example, robbery is a compound offense composed of larceny and assault.

continuing offense. A crime (such as a conspiracy) that is committed over a period of time, so that the last act of the crime controls when the statute of limitations begins to run. [Cases: Criminal Law 150. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 200–201.]

cumulative offense. An offense committed by repeating the same act at different times.

divisible offense. A crime that includes one or more crimes of lesser grade. • For example, murder is a divisible offense comprising assault, battery, and assault with intent to kill.

extraneous offense. An offense beyond or unrelated to the offense for which a defendant is on trial. [Cases: Criminal Law 369.2(1). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 825–826.]

graded offense. A crime that is divided into various degrees of severity with corresponding levels of punishment, such as murder (first-degree and second-degree) or assault (simple and aggravated). See DEGREE(2). [Cases: Criminal Law 28. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 9, 13.]

impeachable offense. See IMPEACHABLE OFFENSE.

inchoate offense. A step toward the commission of another crime, the step in itself being serious enough to merit punishment. • The three inchoate offenses are attempt, conspiracy, and solicitation. The term is sometimes criticized (see quot. below). — Also termed anticipatory offense; inchoate crime; preliminary crime. [Cases: Conspiracy 23.1; Criminal Law 44. C.J.S. Conspiracy §§ 98, 100–103, 110; Criminal Law §§ 114–123.]

“These preliminary crimes have sometimes been erroneously described as ‘inchoate’ offences. This is misleading because the word ‘inchoate’ connotes something which is not yet completed, and it is therefore not accurately used to denote something which is itself complete, even though it be a link in a chain of events leading to some object which is not yet attained. The offence of incitement is fully performed even though the person incited immediately repudiates the suggested deed, a conspiracy is committed although the conspirators have not yet moved to execute their purposed crime, and the performance of a criminal attempt must always have been reached before the end is gained. In all these instances it is the ultimate crime which is inchoate and not the preliminary crime, the position indeed being just the same as in the example imagined above of a man who stole a revolver and committed other crimes in order to effect his purpose of murder. There the murder was inchoate, but the larceny and other crimes (including the attempt) were completed." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 77 (16th ed. 1952).

included offense. See lesser included offense.

index offense. One of eight classes of crimes reported annually by the FBI in the Uniform Crime Report. • The eight classes are murder (and nonnegligent homicide), rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny-theft, arson, and auto theft. — Also termed index crime.

indictable offense. A crime that can be prosecuted only by indictment. • In federal court, such an offense is one punishable by death or by imprisonment for more than one year or at hard labor. Fed. R. Crim. P. 7(a). See INDICTMENT. [Cases: Indictment and Information 3. C.J.S. Indictments and Informations § 6.]

international offense. See INTERNATIONAL CRIME.

joint offense. An offense (such as conspiracy) committed by the participation of two or more persons.

lesser included offense. A crime that is composed of some, but not all, of the elements of a more serious crime and that is necessarily committed in carrying out the greater crime <battery is a lesser included offense of murder>. • For double-jeopardy purposes, a lesser included offense is considered the "same offense" as the greater offense, so that acquittal or conviction of either offense precludes a separate trial for the other. — Also termed lesser offense; included offense; necessarily included offense. Cf. cognate offense predicate act; predicate offense. [Cases: Indictment and Information 189, 191. C.J.S. Indictments and Informations §§ 218, 220, 230–231, 242.]

liquor offense. Any crime involving the inappropriate use or sale of intoxicating liquor. See DRAM-SHOP LIABILITY; DRIVING WHILE INTOXICATED. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors 131–176. C.J.S. Intoxicating Liquors §§ 2–20, 222, 237–288.] major offense. An offense the commission of which involves one or more lesser included offenses, as murder may include assault and battery.

military offense. See MILITARY OFFENSE.

multiple offense. An offense that violates more than one law but that may require different proof so that an acquittal or conviction under one statute does not exempt the defendant from prosecution under another. [Cases: Double Jeopardy 134. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 253.]

necessarily included offense. See lesser included offense.

negligent offense. A violation of law arising from a defective discharge of duty or from criminal negligence. See criminal negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

object offense. The crime that is the object of the defendant's attempt, solicitation, conspiracy, or complicity. • For example, murder is the object offense in a charge of attempted murder. — Also termed target offense.

offense against property. A crime against another's personal property. • The common-law offenses against property were larceny, embezzlement, cheating, cheating by false pretenses, robbery, receiving stolen goods, malicious mischief, forgery, and uttering forged instruments. Although the term crimes against property, a common term in modern usage, includes crimes against real property, the term offense against property is traditionally restricted to personal property. Cf. CRIMES AGAINST PROPERTY.

offense against public justice and authority. A crime that impairs the administration of justice. • The common-law offenses of this type were obstruction of justice, barratry, maintenance, champerty, embracery, escape, prison breach, rescue, misprision of felony, compounding a crime, subornation of perjury, bribery, and misconduct in office.

offense against the habitation. A crime against another's house — traditionally either arson or burglary.

offense against the person. A crime against the body of another human being. • The common-law offenses against the person were murder, manslaughter, mayhem, rape, assault, battery, robbery, false imprisonment, abortion, seduction, kidnapping, and abduction. Cf. CRIMES AGAINST PERSONS.

offense against the public health, safety, comfort, and morals. A crime traditionally viewed as endangering the whole of society. • The common-law offenses of this type were nuisance, bigamy, adultery, fornication, lewdness, illicit cohabitation, incest, miscegenation, sodomy, bestiality, buggery, abortion, and seduction.

offense against the public peace. A crime that tends to disturb the peace. • The common-law offenses of this type were riot, unlawful assembly, dueling, rout, affray, forcible entry and detainer, and libel on a private person. [Cases: Breach of the Peace 1–14. C.J.S. Breach of the Peace §§ 2–13; Domestic Abuse and Violence §§ 3, 6.]

petty offense. A minor or insignificant crime. 18 USCA § 19. See MISDEMEANOR. Cf. serious offense.

“[W]e find ... an apparent implication that a ‘petty offense’ is not a ‘crime.’ Much could be said for such a position but it is not the law at the present time. In the federal penal code, for example, it is provided that any misdemeanor ‘the penalty for which does not exceed imprisonment for a period of six months or a fine of not more than $500, or both, is a petty offense.’ ” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 22 (3d ed. 1982) (quoting 18 USCA § 1(3)).

political offense. See POLITICAL OFFENSE.

predicate offense. 1. An earlier offense that can be used to enhance a sentence levied for a later conviction. • Predicate offenses are defined by statute and are not uniform from state to state. 2. See lesser included offense.

public offense. An act or omission forbidden by law.

public-welfare offense. A minor offense that does not involve moral delinquency and is prohibited only to secure the effective regulation of conduct in the interest of the community. • An example is driving a car with one brake-light missing. — Also termed regulatory offense; contravention.

regulatory offense. 1. A statutory crime, as opposed to a common-law crime. 2. See public-welfare offense.

same offense. 1. For double-jeopardy purposes, the same criminal act, omission, or transaction for which the person has already stood trial. See DOUBLE JEOPARDY. [Cases: Double Jeopardy 132.1.] 2. For sentencing and enhancement-of-punishment purposes, an offense that is quite similar to a previous one.

second offense. An offense committed after conviction for a first offense. • The previous conviction, not the indictment, forms the basis of the charge of a second offense.

separate offense. 1. An offense arising out of the same event as another offense but containing some differences in elements of proof. • A person may be tried, convicted, and sentenced for each separate offense. 2. An offense arising out of a different event entirely from another offense under consideration.

serious offense. An offense not classified as a petty offense and usu. carrying at least a six-month sentence. — Also termed serious crime. Cf. petty offense.

sexual offense. An offense involving unlawful sexual conduct, such as prostitution, indecent exposure, incest, pederasty, and bestiality.

status offense. 1. See status crime under CRIME. 2. A minor's violation of the juvenile code by doing some act that would not be considered illegal if an adult did it, but that indicates that the minor is beyond parental control. • Examples include running away from home, truancy, and incorrigibility. See JUVENILE DELINQUENCY.

strict-liability offense. An offense for which the action alone is enough to warrant a conviction, with no need to prove a mental state. • For example, illegal parking is a strict-liability offense.

substantive offense (s<<schwa>>b-st<<schwa>>n-tiv). A crime that is complete in itself and is not dependent on another crime for one of its elements. — Also termed substantive crime; substantive felony.

summary offense. An offense (such as a petty misdemeanor) that can be prosecuted without an indictment. Cf. indictable offense.

target offense. See object offense.

unnatural offense. See SODOMY.

unrelated offense. A crime that is independent from the charged offense.

violent offense. A crime characterized by extreme physical force, such as murder, forcible rape, and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. — Also termed violent felony.

2. Civil law. An intentional unlawful act that causes injury or loss to another and that gives rise to a claim for damages. La. Civ. Code art. 2315. • This sense of offense is essentially the same as the common-law intentional tort. [Cases: Torts 1. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2–7.]

quasi-offense. Civil law. A negligent unlawful act that causes injury or loss to another and that gives rise to a claim for damages. • This is equivalent to the common-law tort of negligence. — Also termed quasi-delict. [Cases: Torts 1. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2–7.]

3. Parliamentary law. A breach of order or other misconduct for which the applicable rules subject a member to a penalty.

OFFENSIVE

offensive (<<schwa>>-fen-siv), adj. 1. Of or for attack <an offensive weapon>. 2. Unpleasant or disagreeable to the senses; obnoxious <an offensive odor>. 3. Causing displeasure, anger, or resentment; esp., repugnant to the prevailing sense of what is decent or moral <patently offensive language and photographs>. See OBSCENE.

OFFENSIVE AND DEFENSIVE LEAGUE offensive and defensive league. Int'l law. A league binding the parties not only to aid one another when attacked but also to support one another when attacking in offensive warfare.

OFFENSIVE COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL offensive collateral estoppel. See COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL.

OFFENSIVE LOCKOUT

offensive lockout. See LOCKOUT.

OFFENSIVE TREATY

offensive treaty. See TREATY(1).

OFFENSIVE-USE WAIVER

offensive-use waiver. An exemption from the attorney–client privilege, whereby a litigant is considered to have waived the privilege by seeking affirmative relief, if the claim relies on privileged information that would be outcome-determinative and that the opposing party has no other way to obtain. Cf. AT-ISSUE WAIVER R. [Cases: Witnesses 219(3).]

offer, n.1. The act or an instance of presenting something for acceptance <the prosecutor's offer of immunity>.2. A promise to do or refrain from doing some specified thing in the future, conditioned on an act, forbearance, or return promise being given in exchange for the promise or its performance; a display of willingness to enter into a contract on specified terms, made in a way that would lead a reasonable person to understand that an acceptance, having been sought, will result in a binding contract <she accepted the $750 offer on the Victorian armoire>. Cf. ACCEPTANCE. [Cases: Contracts 16; Sales 22(.5), 23(.5); Vendor and Purchaser 16(1), 17. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 37–41, 44, 46, 55–56, 58; Sales §§ 29–31, 33; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 9–18.]

irrevocable offer (i-rev-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). An offer that includes a promise to keep it open for a specified period, during which the offer cannot be withdrawn without the offeror's becoming subject to liability for breach of contract. • Traditionally, this type of promise must be supported by consideration to be enforceable, but under UCC § 2-205, a merchant's signed, written offer giving assurances that it will be held open — but lacking consideration — is nonetheless irrevocable for the stated period (or, if not stated, for a reasonable time not exceeding three months). — Also termed (in the UCC) firm offer; (specif.) merchant's firm offer. [Cases: Contracts 16; Sales 22; Vendor and Purchaser 18(.5). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 37–41, 44, 46, 55–56, 58; Sales §§ 29–31, 33; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 98–100, 103–106, 115–116.]

“It has sometimes been asserted that an irrevocable offer is ‘a legal impossibility.’ See Langdell, Summary of the Law of Contracts, § 178, also § 4; Wormser, ‘The True Conception of Unilateral Contracts,’ 26 Yale Law Journal, 137, note; Lee, Title Contracts, in Jenks' Dig. of Eng. Civ. Law, § 195; Ashley, Contracts, § 13. A close analysis shows that there is nothing impossible either in the conception itself or in its application. If we define ‘offer’ as an act on the part of the offeror ..., then no offer can ever be revoked, for it is of yesterday — it is indeed factum. But if we mean by ‘offer’ the legal relation that results from the offeror's act, the power then given to the offeree of creating contractual relations by doing certain voluntary acts on his part, then the offer may be either revocable or irrevocable according to the circumstances. The idea of an irrevocable power is not at all an unfamiliar one.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 53–54 n.3 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

offer to all the world. An offer, by way of advertisement, of a reward for the rendering of specified services, addressed to the public at large. • As soon as someone renders the services, a contract is made. — Also termed public offer.

offer to chaffer. See INVITATION TO NEGOTIATE.

public-exchange offer. A takeover attempt in which the bidder corporation offers to exchange some of its securities for a specified number of the target corporation's voting shares. Cf. TENDER OFFER. [Cases: Securities Regulation 52.30–52.50. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 121–122, 127–128, 131–138, 140–141.]

public offer. See offer to all the world.

standing offer. An offer that is in effect a whole series of offers, each of which is capable of being converted into a contract by a distinct acceptance.

tender offer. See TENDER OFFER.

two-tier offer. See TWO-TIER OFFER.

3. A price at which one is ready to buy or sell; BID <she lowered her offer to $200>. 4. ATTEMPT(2) <an offer to commit battery>. — offer, vb. — offeror, n. “Where criminal assault has been given this dual scope, a definition in terms of ‘an attempt or offer’ to commit a battery is assumed to represent both grounds. The word ‘offer,’ it is said, signifies a threat that places the other in reasonable apprehension of receiving an immediate battery. It would be a mistake, however, to assume that the word carried any such significance when it first appeared in the definition of this offense. In one of its meanings, ‘offer’ is a synonym of ‘attempt.’ ” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 163 (3d ed. 1982).

offeree (ah-f<<schwa>>r-ee). One to whom an offer is made.

OFFER OF COMPROMISE

offer of compromise. An offer by one party to settle a dispute amicably (usu. by paying money) to avoid or end a lawsuit or other legal action. • An offer of compromise is usu. not admissible at trial as evidence of the offering party's liability but may be admissible for other purposes. Fed. R. Evid. 408. — Also termed offer in compromise; offer of settlement. [Cases: Evidence 212. C.J.S. Evidence § 379.]

OFFER OF JUDGMENT

offer of judgment. A settlement offer by one party to allow a specified judgment to be taken against the party. • In federal procedure (and in many states), if the adverse party rejects the offer, and if a judgment finally obtained by that party is not more favorable than the offer, then that party must pay the costs incurred after the offer was made. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2725; Judgment 74. C.J.S. Judgments § 188.]

OFFER OF PERFORMANCE

offer of performance.Contracts. One party's reasonable assurance to the other, through words or conduct, of a present ability to fulfill contractual obligations. • When performances are to be exchanged simultaneously, each party is entitled to refuse to proceed with the exchange until the other party makes an appropriate offer of performance. Cf. TENDER(1). [Cases: Contracts 279; Sales 153, 185. C.J.S. Contracts § 548; Sales §§ 161–162, 164, 182.]

“The requirement of an offer of performance is to be applied in the light of what is reasonably to be expected by the parties in view of the practical difficulties of absolute simultaneity and is subject to the agreement of the parties, as supplemented or qualified by usage and course of dealing.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 238 cmt. b (1979).

OFFER OF PROOF

offer of proof.Procedure. A presentation of evidence for the record (but outside the jury's presence) usu. made after the judge has sustained an objection to the admissibility of that evidence, so that the evidence can be preserved on the record for an appeal of the judge's ruling. • An offer of proof, which may also be used to persuade the court to admit the evidence, consists of three parts: (1) the evidence itself, (2) an explanation of the purpose for which it is offered (its relevance), and (3) an argument supporting admissibility. Such an offer may include tangible evidence or testimony (through questions and answers, a lawyer's narrative description, or an affidavit).Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(2). — Also termed avowal. [Cases: Criminal Law 670; Federal Civil Procedure 2013; Trial 44. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1203–1205; Trial §§ 163, 170.]

A government official whose duties relate primarily to the enactment of laws, such as a federal or state senator, representative, or assembly member. • State and federal constitutions generally restrict legislative officers' duties to the enactment of legislation. But legislative officers occasionally exercise judicial functions, such as presenting or hearing cases of impeachment of other government officers.

ministerial officer. An officer who primarily executes mandates issued by the officer's superiors. • One who performs specified legal duties when the appropriate conditions have been met, but who does not exercise personal judgment or discretion in performing those duties. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 123. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 328, 330.]

municipal officer. A person who occupies a municipal office — usu. mandated by statute or charter — and who may be required to take an oath and exercise sovereign authority in carrying out public duties, with compensation incident to the office irrespective of the actual services rendered. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 123. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 328, 330.]

officer de facto (di fak-toh). 1. An officer who exercises the duties of an office under color of an appointment or election, but who has failed to qualify for office for any one of various reasons, as by being under the required age, having failed to take the oath, having not furnished a required bond, or having taken office under a statute later declared unconstitutional. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 39. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 339, 341, 343, 347.] 2. Corporations. One who is acting under color of right and with apparent authority, but who is not legally a corporate officer. • The corporation is bound by all acts and contracts of an officer de facto in the same way as it is with those of an officer de jure. — Also termed de facto officer. [Cases: Corporations 289. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 458–459.]

officer de jure (di juur-ee). 1. An officer who exercises the duties of an office for which the holder has fulfilled all the qualifications. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 35. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees § 58.] 2. A duly authorized corporate officer. — Also termed de jure officer.

OFFSET

offset,n. Something (such as an amount or claim) that balances or compensates for something else; SETOFF.

“Both setoff and recoupment existed at common law, but their scope has been modified, expanded, and ultimately merged by subsequent statutory and decisional law. The final equitable concept of ‘offset’ recognizes that the debtor may satisfy a creditor's claim by acquiring a claim that serves to counterbalance or to compensate for the creditor's claim.... [C]ourts use the terms ‘offset’ and ‘setoff’ interchangeably, often switching between them from sentence to sentence, supporting the conclusion that there is no substantive difference between them.” 4 Ann Taylor Schwing, California Affirmative Defenses 2d § 44:1, at 4–5 (1996).

offset,vb. To balance or calculate against; to compensate for <the gains offset the losses>.

OFFSET ACCOUNT

old style.The system of ordering time according to the Julian method, introduced by Julius Caesar in 46 B.C., by which all years have 365 days except the years divisible by 4, which have 366 days. • This differs from the modern calendar in that it assumes that there are exactly 365.25 days in a year. But there are actually slightly less than 365.25 days in a year, so the old-style calendar adds too many days over time. The Julian calendar was reformed by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582. — Abbr. o.s. — Also termed Julian calendar. Cf. NEW STYLE.

oligopoly (ol-<<schwa>>-gop-<<schwa>>-lee), n. Control or domination of a market by a few large sellers, creating high prices and low output similar to those found in a monopoly. Cf. MONOPOLY. — oligopolistic,adj. — oligopolist,n.

“One reason for the difficulty in describing and delimiting oligopoly power is the large number of variables that confront any theorist building an oligopoly model. Pure monopoly is akin to a single player game, such as solitaire, but the oligopoly model may be more like a multihand poker game.... Unlike poker, where for any hand one player will win all of the money bet, the players in an oligopolistic market can actually increase the returns that all of them receive through disciplined pricing.” Lawrence A. Sullivan & Warren S. Grimes, The Law of Antitrust: An Integrated Handbook 38–39 (2000).

oligopsony (ol-<<schwa>>-gop-s<<schwa>>-nee), n. Control or domination of a market by a few large buyers or customers. — oligopsonistic,adj. — oligopsonist,n.

“An ombudsman serves as an alternative to the adversary system for resolving disputes, especially between citizens and government agencies An ombudsman is ... (1) an independent and nonpartisan officer of the legislature who supervises the administration; (2) one who deals with specific complaints from the public against administrative injustice and maladministration; and (3) one who has the power to investigate, criticize and publicize, but not to reverse administration action.” 4 Am. Jur. 2d Alternative Dispute Resolution § 23 (1995).

OMISSA ET MALE APPRETIATA omissa et male appretiata (<<schwa>>-mis-<<schwa>> et mal-ee <<schwa>>-pree-shee-ay-t<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] Hist. Things omitted and erroneously valued.

“When an executor confirms and omits in the inventory part of the defunct's effects, he may have the mistake corrected. But if he do not take steps for this purpose, any one interested in the succession may apply, either to have the executor compelled to confirm the omission, or himself to confirm it. Ordinary executors ad omissa et male appretiata ought to call the principal executor to their confirmation, or it will be null; but this rule does not hold in the case of executors–creditors.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 753 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

OMISSION

omission,n.1. A failure to do something; esp., a neglect of duty <the complaint alleged that the driver had committed various negligent acts and omissions>.2. ONE-COURT-OF-JUSTICE DOCTRINE one-court-of-justice doctrine.A principle in some states holding that there is but a single court in the state and that this court is composed of several divisions, such as the supreme court, the courts of appeals, and district courts, probate courts, and any other legislatively created courts. • Michigan, for example, has embodied this doctrine in its constitution (art. VI, § 1). — Also termed one court of justice. [Cases: Courts 1.C.J.S. Courts §§ 2, 6, 9, 12–15.]

ONE-DAY, ONE-TRIAL METHOD

one-day, one-trial method. A system of summoning and using jurors whereby a person answers a jury summons and participates in the venire for one day only, unless the person is actually empaneled for a trial, in which event the juror's service lasts for the entire length of the trial. • This system, which is used in several states, reduces the average term of service and expands the number of individual jurors called. [Cases: Jury 76.C.J.S. Juries §§ 352, 511–512.]

ONERA REALIA

onera realia (on-*<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>* ree-ay-lee-<<schwa>>). [Law Latin] Scots law. Real burdens.

“Onera realia ... are burdens or encumbrances affecting land, and exigible from it. They are distinguished from personal burdens, which only affect and are exigible from the person upon whom they lie. A single example may illustrate the nature of both. It is a common enough practice, when lands are sold, for the seller not to insist on payment of the full price at the time of the sale, but to allow a part of the price to remain on the lands as a burden. If the balance so left be declared ... to be a real lien ... it is a burden for which the lands may be attached and sold, into whose possession soever they may come. But if the burden of payment of the remainder of the price be laid upon the purchaser alone, and not upon the lands, then the burden is personal, and a subsequent purchaser from him incurs no liability therefor, the lands not being affected. John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 423 (4th ed. 1894).

ONERARI NON

onerari non (on-<<schwa>>-rair-I non). [Law Latin] Hist. Ought not to be charged. • In pleading, these words were used by a defendant to begin a plea in a debt action. Cf. ACTIO NON.

OPIC

OPIC. abbr. OVERSEAS PRIVATE INVESTMENT CORPORATION.

OPINIO JURIS SIVE NECESSITATIS

opinio juris sive necessitatis (<<schwa>>-pin-ee-oh joor-is sI-vee n<<schwa>>-ses-i-tay-tis). [Latin “opinion that an act is necessary by rule of law”] Int'l law. The principle that for conduct or a practice to become a rule of customary international law, it must be shown that nations believe that international law (rather than moral obligation) mandates the conduct or practice. — Also termed opinio juris.

opinion. 1. A court's written statement explaining its decision in a given case, usu. including the statement of facts, points of law, rationale, and dicta. — Abbr. op. — Also termed judicial opinion. See DECISION. Cf. JUDGMENT(1); RULING(1). [Cases: Courts 103. C.J.S. Courts §§ 170, 173–174, 176.]

advisory opinion. 1. A nonbinding statement by a court of its interpretation of the law on a matter submitted for that purpose. • Federal courts are constitutionally prohibited from issuing advisory opinions by the case-or-controversy requirement, but other courts, such as the International Court of Justice, render them routinely. See CASE-OR-CONTROVERSY REQUIREMENT. [Cases: Constitutional Law 69. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 174.] 2. A written statement, issued only by an administrator of an employee benefit plan, that interprets ERISA and applies it to a specific factual situation. • Only the parties named in the request for the opinion can rely on it, and its reliability depends on the accuracy and completeness of all material facts.

concurring opinion. See CONCURRENCE(3).

depublished opinion. An intermediate appellate court's opinion that has been struck from the official reports, esp. by the highest court.

dissenting opinion. An opinion by one or more judges who disagree with the decision reached by the majority. — Often shortened to dissent. — Also termed minority opinion.

extrajudicial opinion. 1. An opinion that is beyond the court's authority to render. • Such opinions are void. 2. A judge's personal or scholarly opinion expressed in a medium other than a judicial opinion.

majority opinion. An opinion joined in by more than half the judges considering a given case. — Also termed main opinion.

memorandum opinion. A unanimous appellate opinion that succinctly states the decision of the court; an opinion that briefly reports the court's conclusion, usu. without elaboration because the decision follows a well-established legal principle or does not relate to any point of law. — Also termed memorandum decision; memorandum disposition; (slang) memdispo. [Cases: Courts 103, 107. C.J.S. Courts §§ 165, 170, 173–176; Criminal Law § 1665.]

minority opinion. See dissenting opinion.

per curiam opinion (p<<schwa>>r kyoor-ee-<<schwa>>m). An opinion handed down by an appellate court without identifying the individual judge who wrote the opinion. — Sometimes shortened to per curiam. [Cases: Courts 107. C.J.S. Courts §§ 165, 175; Criminal Law § 1665.]

“The most controversial form of summary disposition is a per curiam opinion that simultaneously grants certiorari and disposes of the merits at some length, discussing both the facts and the issues involved. The result is usually a reversal of the judgment below The parties are given no opportunity to file briefs on the merits or to argue orally before the Court. Indeed, they are given no formal notice whatever of the Court's intention to dispose of the certiorari papers in this manner” Robert L. Stern et al., Supreme Court Practice 320 (8th ed. 2002).

plurality opinion. An opinion lacking enough judges' votes to constitute a majority, but receiving more votes than any other opinion. [Cases: Courts 90(2), 102. C.J.S. Courts §§ 138, 141.]

qualified opinion. See QUALIFIED OPINION.

seriatim opinions (seer-ee-ay-tim). A series of opinions written individually by each judge on the bench, as opposed to a single opinion speaking for the court as a whole.

slip opinion. 1. A court opinion that is published individually after being rendered and then collectively in advance sheets before being released for publication in a reporter. • Unlike an unpublished opinion, a slip opinion can usu. be cited as authority. Cf. ADVANCE SHEETS. [Cases: Courts 107. C.J.S. Courts §§ 165, 175; Criminal Law § 1665.] 2. Archaic. A preliminary draft of a court opinion not yet ready for publication. — Also termed slip decision. Cf. unpublished opinion.

unpublished opinion. An opinion that the court has specifically designated as not for publication. • Court rules usu. prohibit citing an unpublished opinion as authority. Such an opinion is considered binding only on the parties to the particular case in which it is issued. Cf. slip opinion. [Cases: Courts 107. C.J.S. Courts §§ 165, 175; Criminal Law § 1665.]

2. A formal expression of judgment or advice based on an expert's special knowledge; esp., a document, usu. prepared at a client's request, containing a lawyer's understanding of the law that applies to a particular case. — Also termed opinion letter. “The essence of a lawyer's job is to obtain the facts and the law with due diligence and then to give advice. But, strangely, no controlling definition has evolved for what is an ‘opinion.’ The lack of a definition is not crucial for some purposes. On the other hand, a definition is vital in other areas; for example, to determine within a law firm when peer review is necessary” 8 Arnold S. Jacobs, Opinion Letters in Securities Matters § 3, at Intro-12 (1998).

adverse opinion. An outside auditor's opinion that a company's financial statements do not conform with generally accepted accounting principles or do not accurately reflect the company's financial position.

audit opinion. A certified public accountant's opinion regarding the audited financial statements of an entity.

comfort opinion. Securities. An attorney's written opinion that there is no reason to believe that the registration statement contains any material misrepresentations or omissions that would violate § 11 of the Securities Act of 1933. • The attorney usu. participates in the registration statement's preparation and confers with the securities issuer's representatives, underwriters, and public accountants before writing the opinion. The comfort opinion's purpose is to reassure the parties that the registration statement complies with securities laws; it is not part of the statement and is usu. not included.

coverage opinion. A lawyer's opinion on whether a particular event is covered by a given insurance policy.

infringement opinion. Patents. A patent attorney's opinion about the probable outcome of an infringement hearing or trial on whether a particular product or process infringes one or more claims of another's patent.

legal opinion. A written document in which an attorney provides his or her understanding of the law as applied to assumed facts. • The attorney may be a private attorney or attorney representing the state or other governmental entity. Private attorneys frequently render legal opinions on the ownership of real estate or minerals, insurance coverage, and corporate transactions. A party may be entitled to rely on a legal opinion, depending on factors such as the identity of the parties to whom the opinion was addressed, the nature of the opinion, and the law governing these opinions. See coverage opinion.

patentability opinion. Patents. A patent attorney's or patent agent's opinion on the patent office's probable holding about the allowability of a patent application's claims. • The opinion is almost a mini-examination report because it is based on consideration of the invention's subject matter, prior art, etc.

title opinion. A lawyer's or title company's opinion on the state of title for a given piece of real property, usu. describing whether the title is clear and marketable or whether it is encumbered. See TITLE SEARCH.

unqualified opinion. An audit opinion given by an accountant who is satisfied that the financial statements reviewed were fairly presented and consistent with the previous year, and that the audit was performed in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards.

validity opinion. Patents. A patent attorney's opinion about the likelihood that a patent or patent claim will be invalidated in light of evidence suggesting obviousness, lack of invention, unenforceability, etc.

3. A person's thought, belief, or inference, esp. a witness's view about facts in dispute, as opposed to personal knowledge of the facts themselves. — Also termed (in sense 3) conclusion. See opinion evidence under EVIDENCE.

fixed opinion. A bias or prejudice that disqualifies a potential juror. [Cases: Jury 99.4. C.J.S. Juries § 399.]

OPINION EVIDENCE

opinion evidence. See EVIDENCE.

OPINION LETTER

opinion letter. See OPINION(2).

OPINION RULE

opinion rule. Evidence. The principle that a witness should testify to facts, not opinions, and that a nonexpert witness's opinions are often excludable from evidence. • Traditionally, this principle is regarded as one of the important exclusionary rules in evidence law. It is based on the idea that a witness who has observed data should provide the most factual evidence possible, leaving the jury to draw inferences and conclusions from the evidence. Under this system, the witness's opinion is unnecessary. Today, opinions are admissible if rationally based on a witness's perceptions and helpful to the fact-finder. [Cases: Criminal Law 448; Evidence 471, 505. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1050; Evidence §§ 509–512, 518–519, 528–529, 533, 535–537, 542, 556, 558–562, 582, 588–590, 592–593, 596–597, 609; Executions § 435.]

“This rule [the opinion rule] is an historical blunder, for the early cases excluding ‘opinion’ meant a belief by a person who had personally seen and known nothing, and was therefore not qualified to speak; whereas the modern rule applies it to witnesses who have had personal observation as a basis for their inference. Moreover, it is a senseless rule, for not once in a thousand times can the observed data be exactly and fully reproduced in words. Still further, no harm could be done by letting the witness offer his inference, except perhaps the waste of a moment's time, whereas the application of the rule wastes vastly more time. And finally the rule is so pedantically applied by most courts that it excludes the most valuable testimony, such as would be used in all affairs of life outside a court room.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 156 (1935).

“The [opinion] rule in its stark simplicity might be interpreted as excluding all value judgments, that is to say all statements not being factual propositions susceptible of some sort of empirical proof or disproof. The rule, if it is to be given any purely logical meaning at all, must be interpreted as excluding at least all inferences drawn from perceived data. Even if value judgments are saved by construing the rule as having application only to factual propositions, the rule would seem to purport to exclude all such propositions in the formulation of which inference by the witness has played some part.” Zelman Cowen, Essays on the Law of Evidence 162 (1956).

OPPORTUNITY COST

opportunity cost. See COST(1).

OPPORTUNITY TO BE HEARD opportunity to be heard. The chance to appear in a court or other tribunal and present evidence and argument before being deprived of a right by governmental authority. • The opportunity to be heard is a fundamental requirement of procedural due process. It ordinarily includes the right to receive fair notice of the hearing, to secure the assistance of counsel, and to cross-examine adverse witnesses. See procedural due process under DUE PROCESS . [Cases: Constitutional Law 251.6. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 968, 1165–1166, 1168–1169.]

OPPOSER

opposer. 1. Intellectual property. One who formally seeks to prevent the grant of a patent or the registration of a trademark. [Cases: Patents 104; Trade Regulation 216. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 181–182, 184–187.] 2. Hist. APPOSER.

OPPOSITION

opposition. 1.Patents. An action or procedure by which a third party can request a patent application's refusal or an issued patent's annulment. • Most countries allow opposition in some form. 2.Trademarks. A procedure by which a third party can contest an application to place a proposed trademark on the Principal Register before the placement occurs. Cf. CANCELLATION. [Cases: Trade Regulation 216. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 181–182, 184–187.]

OPPRESSION

oppression. 1. The act or an instance of unjustly exercising authority or power. 2. An offense consisting in the abuse of discretionary authority by a public officer who has an improper motive, as a result of which a person is injured. • This offense does not include extortion, which is typically a more serious crime. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 121. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 329–334.] 3.Contracts. Coercion to enter into an illegal contract. • Oppression is grounds for the recovery of money paid or property transferred under an illegal contract. See DURESS; UNCONSCIONABILITY. [Cases: Contracts 138(3), 139. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 280–283, 286, 290, 299.] 4.Corporations. Unfair treatment of minority shareholders (esp. in a close corporation) by the directors or those in control of the corporation. — Also termed (in sense 4) shareholder oppression. See FREEZE-OUT. [Cases: Corporations 182.3, 597. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 344, 826.] — oppress,vb. — oppressive,adj.

OPPRESSIVE CHILD LABOR

oppressive child labor.See CHILD LABOR.

OPPRESSOR

oppressor. A public official who unlawfully or wrongfully exercises power under color of authority in a way that causes a person harm; one who commits oppression. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 121. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 329–334.]

nonforfeiture option.A policyholder's option, upon the lapse of premium payments, to continue an insurance policy for a shorter period than the original term, to surrender the policy for its cash value, to continue the policy for a reduced amount, or to take some other action rather than forfeit the policy. [Cases: Insurance 2037. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 518–519, 742–745, 749–754.]

option to purchase real property.A contract by which an owner of realty enters an agreement with another allowing the latter to buy the property at a specified price within a specified time, or within a reasonable time in the future, but without imposing an obligation to purchase upon the person to whom it is given. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 18. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 98, put option. An option to sell something (esp. securities) at a fixed price even if the market declines; the right to require another to buy. — Often shortened to put. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation 10; Corporations 116; Securities Regulation 5.25(3). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 233–240, 242; Securities Regulation §§ 28–29, 455, 470.]

seller's option. A special stock-exchange transaction that gives the seller the right to deliver the security within a specified period, usu. 5 to 60 days.

settlement option. Insurance. A life-insurance-policy clause providing choices in the method of paying benefits to a beneficiary, as by lump-sum payment or periodic installments. [Cases: Insurance 2443, 3402. C.J.S. Insurance § 1194.]

stock option. See STOCK OPTION.

uncovered option. See naked option.

5.Hist. Eccles. law. The requirement that a newly elected bishop convey to the archbishop the right to fill the next vacant ecclesiastical benefice in the new bishop's see.

option, vb. To grant or take an option on (something) <Ward optioned his first screenplay to the studio for $50,000>.

OPTION AGREEMENT

option agreement. Corporations. A share-transfer restriction that commits the shareholder to sell, but not the corporation or other shareholders to buy, the shareholder's shares at a fixed price when a specified event occurs. Cf. BUY–SELL AGREEMENT(2); OPTION(2). [Cases: Corporations 82, 113. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 180–181, 193–195, 220–225.]

An applicant may submit a generic-drug application at any time, but the applicant must either accept deferral of FDA approval until the patent expires or contest the patent's validity. The Orange Book's official title is Approved Drug Products with Therapeutic Equivalence Evaluations.

ORATOR

orator (or-<<schwa>>-t*<<schwa>>*r), n. 1. Roman law. (ital.) An advocate or pleader. 2. Hist. A plaintiff or petitioner in an action in chancery.

ORATRIX

oratrix (or-<<schwa>>-triks). Hist. A female orator.

ORBATION

orbation (or-bay-sh*<<schwa>>*n). Hist. Bereavement or deprivation of one's parents or children.

ORDEAL

ordeal. Hist. A primitive form of trial in which an accused person was subjected to a usu. dangerous or painful physical test, the result being considered a divine revelation of the person's guilt or innocence. • The participants believed that God would reveal a person's culpability by protecting an innocent person from some or all consequences of the ordeal. The ordeal was commonly used in Europe until the 13th century, but only sporadically after 1215, when the Fourth Lateran Council forbade the clergy from participating in ordeals. — Also termed trial by ordeal; judicium Dei (“judgment of God”); vulgaris purgatio. Cf. CANFARA.

“Ordeals involved an appeal to God to reveal the truth in human disputes, and they required priestly participation to achieve this rapport with the Deity. Several forms of ordeal were recognised by the early Christian Church, but in England they usually took the form of fire or water. In the former, a piece of iron was put into a fire and then in the party's hand; the hand was bound, and inspected a few days later: if the burn had festered, God was taken to have decided against the party. The ordeal of cold water required the party to be trussed and lowered into a pond; if he sank, the water was deemed to have 'received him' with God's blessing, and so he was quickly fished out.... In 1215, the Lateran Council ... took the decisive step of forbidding clergy to participate any more in ordeals. This led in England to the introduction of the criminal trial jury." J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 5–6 (3d ed. 1990).

bread-and-cheese ordeal. See ordeal of the morsel.

ordeal by fire. An ordeal in which the accused person was forced to hold a piece of hot metal or to walk barefoot across a hot surface, the judgment of guilt or innocence depending on how quickly and cleanly the person's hands or feet healed. • Typically the person's hand was bandaged and, upon the bandage's removal three days later, was examined for festers (indicating guilt). — Also termed fire ordeal; ordeal by hot iron; ordeal of fire.

"Such evidence as we have seems to show that the ordeal of hot iron was so arranged as to give the accused a considerable chance of escape." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 599 (2d ed. 1899).

ordeal by hot iron. See ordeal by fire.

ordeal by water. 1. An ordeal in which guilt or innocence depended on whether the accused person floated or sank after being submerged in cold water. • A priest would first consecrate the pool of water, adjuring it to receive the innocent but reject the guilty. An accused who sank was declared innocent; one who floated was adjudged guilty because floating revealed the water's (and therefore God's) rejection of the person. This type of ordeal was used esp. in witchcraft trials. — Also termed ordeal by cold water; cold-water ordeal; ordeal of cold water; (in ecclesiastical law) aquae frigidae iudicium. 2. An ordeal in which guilt or innocence was determined by how quickly the accused person's arm healed after being placed in boiling water. • Often the person was forced to retrieve a stone from the bottom of a pot of boiling water. The person's hand and arm were then bandaged and, upon the bandage's removal three days later, were examined for festers (indicating guilt). — Also termed (in sense 2) ordeal by hot water; hot-water ordeal; ordeal of hot water; (in both senses) water ordeal; ordeal of water; (in ecclesiastical law) aquae ferventis iudicium; aenum.

"The ordeal of water was a very singular institution. Sinking was the sign of innocence, floating the sign of guilt. As any one would sink unless he understood how to float, and intentionally did so, it is difficult to see how any one could ever be convicted by this means. Is it possible that this ordeal may have been an honourable form of suicide, like the Japanese happy despatch? In nearly every case the accused would sink. This would prove his innocence, indeed, but there would be no need to take him out. He would thus die honourably. If by any accident he floated, he would be put to death disgracefully." 1 James Fitzjames Stephen, A History of the Criminal Law of England 73 (1883).

ordeal of the morsel. An ordeal in which the person who was to make the proof was given a one-ounce piece of bread or cheese that a priest had solemnly charged to stick in the throat of the guilty. • A person who choked was declared guilty; a person who did not was declared innocent. — Also termed corsnaed; corsned; trial by corsnaed; judicial morsel; morsel of execration.

single ordeal. An ordeal prescribed for someone accused of a less serious crime and involving less risk or torture than a triple ordeal. • For example, a single ordeal by fire required the accused to pick up a red-hot piece of iron weighing one pound, while a triple ordeal involved a piece of iron weighing three pounds.

triple ordeal. An ordeal prescribed for someone accused of a more serious crime and involving more risk or torture than a single ordeal. • For example, a triple ordeal by water required the accused to submerge an arm into boiling water up to the elbow, while a single ordeal required the arm to be submerged only to the wrist. — Also termed threefold ordeal.

ORDELF

ordelf (or-delf). See OREDELFF.

ORDELS

ordels (or-deelz). Hist. English law. The right to conduct trials by ordeal within a given jurisdiction.

ORDER

order, n. 1. A command, direction, or instruction. See MANDATE(1). 2. A written direction or command delivered by a court or judge. • The word generally embraces final decrees as well as interlocutory directions or commands. — Also termed court order; judicial order. See MANDAMUS. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 928; Motions 46. C.J.S. Motions and Orders §§ 1–3, 13, 50, 59.]

“An order is the mandate or determination of the court upon some subsidiary or collateral matter arising in an action, not disposing of the merits, but adjudicating a preliminary point or directing some step in the proceedings.” 1 Henry Campbell Black, A Treatise on the Law of Judgments § 1, at 5 (2d ed. 1902).

“While an order may under some circumstances amount to a judgment, they must be distinguished, owing to the different consequences flowing from them, not only in the matter of enforcement and appeal but in other respects, as, for instance, the time within which proceedings to annul them must be taken. Rulings on motions are ordinarily orders rather than judgments. The class of judgments and of decrees formerly called interlocutory is included in the definition given in [modern codes] of the word ‘order.’ ” 1 A.C. Freeman, A Treatise of the Law of Judgments § 19, at 28 (Edward W. Tuttle ed., 5th ed. 1925).

administrative order. 1. An order issued by a government agency after an adjudicatory hearing. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 489. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 147–148.] 2. An agency regulation that interprets or applies a statutory provision. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 381. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure §§ 87, 91.]

affiliation order. See filiation order.

alternative order. An order commanding the person to whom it is directed either to do a specific thing or to show cause why the court should not order it to be done.

common order. See conditional judgment under JUDGMENT.

decretal order (di-kree-t<<schwa>>l). A court of chancery's interlocutory order that is issued on motion of a party and has the effect of a final decree. See decree nisi under DECREE. [Cases: Equity 428–430.]

docket order. A court order memorialized only as an entry on the docket sheet.

ex parte order (eks pahr-tee). An order made by the court upon the application of one party to an action without notice to the other.

filiation order. Family law. A court's determination of paternity, usu. including a direction to pay child support. • Governments usu. seek filiation orders so that some or all of the public funds spent on the child's welfare can be recovered from a nonmarital child's father. Until the early 20th century, municipalities, not the state, had the legal duty to support the poor, including unwed mothers and their children. In some states, two judges had to determine who an unacknowledged child's father was before the municipality could recover its expenditures. — Also termed affiliation order; order of filiation.

final order. An order that is dispositive of the entire case. See final judgment under JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 928; Motions 51. C.J.S. Motions and Orders §§ 2, 52–53, 55.]

foreign support order. See SUPPORT ORDER.

health-insurance order. See HEALTH-INSURANCE ORDER.

income-withholding order. See INCOME-WITHHOLDING ORDER.

interim order. 1. A temporary court decree that takes effect until something else occurs. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 928; Motions 51. C.J.S. Motions and Orders §§ 2, 52–53, 55.] 2. See interlocutory order.

interlocutory order (in-t<<schwa>>r-lok-y<<schwa>>-tor-ee). An order that relates to some intermediate matter in the case; any order other than a final order. • Most interlocutory orders are not appealable until the case is fully resolved. But by rule or statute, most jurisdictions allow some types of interlocutory orders (such as preliminary injunctions and class-certification orders) to be immediately appealed. — Also termed interlocutory decision; interim order; intermediate order. See appealable decision under DECISION; COLLATERAL-ORDER DOCTRINE. [Cases: Appeal and Error 67; Federal Courts 572, 576; Motions 51. C.J.S. Appeal and Error § 84; Motions and Orders §§ 2, 52–53, 55.]

minute order. 1. An order recorded in the minutes of the court rather than directly on a case docket. • Although practice varies, traditionally when a trial judge is sitting officially, with or without a court reporter, a clerk or deputy clerk keeps minutes. When the judge makes an oral order, the only record of that order may be in the minutes. It is therefore referred to as a minute order. — Also termed minute entry. [Cases: Appeal and Error 123; Courts 107. C.J.S. Appeal and Error § 150; Courts §§ 165, 175; Criminal Law § 1665.] 2. A court order not directly relating to a case, such as an order adopting a local rule of court. • In this sense, the court is not a single judge acting in an adjudicatory capacity, but a chief judge, or a group of two or more judges, acting for a court in an administrative or some other nonadjudicatory capacity. [Cases: Motions 56(1). C.J.S. Motions and Orders §§ 59–60, 62.]

modification order. See MODIFICATION ORDER.

preclusion order. An order barring a litigant from presenting or opposing certain claims or defenses for failing to comply with a discovery order. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1278; Pretrial Procedure 44.1.]

pretrial order. See PRETRIAL ORDER.

protective order. See PROTECTIVE ORDER.

qualified domestic-relations order. See QUALIFIED DOMESTIC-RELATIONS ORDER.

receiving order. A court's direction to a bankruptcy receiver to take some action.

restraining order. See RESTRAINING ORDER.

separation order. A court order granting a married person's request for a legal separation. See SEPARATION AGREEMENT(1).

show-cause order. An order directing a party to appear in court and explain why the party took (or failed to take) some action or why the court should or should not grant some relief. — Also termed order to show cause; rule to show cause; show-cause rule. [Cases: Motions 24. C.J.S. Motions and Orders §§ 20–23.]

standing order. A forward-looking order that applies to all cases pending before a court. • Some individual judges issue a standing order on a subject when there is no local rule bearing on it, often because a rule would not be acceptable to other judges on the court. Standing orders are frequently criticized because they undermine uniformity of procedural rules, esp. at the local level. Cf. standing rule under RULE(3).

supervision order. Family law. A court's order placing a child or young person under the supervision of a child-welfare agency or a probation officer in a case of neglect, abuse, or delinquency.

support order. See SUPPORT ORDER.

temporary order. A court order issued during the pendency of a suit, before the final order or judgment has been entered.

temporary restraining order. See TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER.

turnover order. An order by which the court commands a judgment debtor to surrender certain property to a judgment creditor, or to the sheriff or constable on the creditor's behalf. • Such an order is usu. directed to property that is difficult to acquire by the ordinary judgment-collection process, such as share certificates and accounts receivable. [Cases: Execution 402. C.J.S.

Executions § 390.]

visitation order. See VISITATION ORDER.

3. Parliamentary law. The principles and practices of parliamentary law; the conduct of business according to those principles and practices; DECORUM. See IN ORDER; OUT OF ORDER. 4. Parliamentary law. An item of business, or an agenda or series of such items <call for the orders of the day>. See AGENDA.

general order. An order of the day other than a special order. See order of the day (1). Cf. special order.

order of business. 1. AGENDA. 2. The sequence in which a meeting considers its business.

“A settled order of business is, however, necessary for the government of the presiding person, and to restrain individual members from calling up favorite measures, or matters under their special patronage, out of their just turn. It is useful also for directing the discretion of the house, when they are moved to take up a particular matter, to the prejudice of others having priority of right to their attention in the general order of business.” Thomas Jefferson, A Manual of Parliamentary Practice 30 (1801).

order of the day. 1. An item of business scheduled for consideration at a certain upcoming meeting, at a certain time, or in a certain order. • An order of the day is either a general order or a special order. 2. The daily order of business. See order of business.

special order. An order of the day scheduled for consideration at a certain time, and that outranks and interrupts any other business except another special order scheduled earlier for the same time. See TIME CERTAIN.

5. Parliamentary law. A vote that assigns a duty to an officer, employee, or other agent, customarily in the form, “Ordered, That” 6. Parliamentary law. RULE(3). 7. Commercial law. The words in a draft (such as a check) directing one person to pay money to or deliver something to a designated person. • An order should appear to be the demand of a right as opposed to the request for a favor. See order paper under PAPER. [Cases: Bills and Notes 4. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 10.] 8. Securities. A customer's instructions to a broker about how and when to buy or sell securities.

all-or-none order. An order to buy a security to be executed either in its entirety or not at all.

alternative order. An order to buy a security by either of two alternatives (e.g., buy a stock at a limited price or buy on a stop order). — Also termed either-or order.

buy order. An investor's instruction to purchase stock.

day order. An order to buy or sell on one particular day only. Cf. open order.

discretionary order. An order to buy or sell at any price acceptable to the broker.

either-or order. See alternative order.

fill-or-kill order. An order that must be executed as soon as it reaches the trading floor. • If the order is not filled immediately, it is canceled.

limit order. An order to buy or sell at a specified price, regardless of market price. Cf. no-limit order.

market order. An order to buy or sell at the best price immediately available on the market. — Also termed order at the market.

matched order. An order to buy and sell the same security, at about the same time, in about the same quantity, and at about the same price.

no-limit order. An order to buy or sell securities with no limits on price. Cf. limit order.

open order. An order that remains in effect until filled by the broker or canceled by the customer. Cf. day order.

order at the market. See market order.

percentage order. An order to buy or sell a stated amount of a certain stock after a fixed number of shares of the stock have traded.

scale order. An order to buy or sell a security at varying price ranges.

sell order. An investor's instruction to sell stock.

split order. An order directing a broker to sell some stock at one price and some stock at another price.

stop order. An order to buy or sell when the security's price reaches a specified level (the stop price) on the market. • By fixing the price beforehand, the investor is cushioned against stock fluctuations. — Also termed stop-loss order; stop-limit order. [Cases: Brokers 24(1). C.J.S. Brokers §§ 71–72.]

time order. An order that becomes a market or limited-price order at a specified time.

ORDINANCE

ordinance (or-d<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>nts). An authoritative law or decree; esp., a municipal regulation. • Municipal governments can pass ordinances on matters that the state government allows to be regulated at the local level. — Also termed bylaw; municipal ordinance. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 105. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 247–251.]

“An ordinance ... may be purely administrative in nature, establishing offices, prescribing duties, or setting salaries; it may have to do with the routine or procedure of the governing body. Or it may be a governmental exercise of the power to control the conduct of the public — establishing rules which must be complied with, or prohibiting certain actions or conduct. In any event it is the determination of the sovereign power of the state as delegated to the municipality. It is a legislative enactment, within its sphere, as much as an act of the state legislature.” 1 Judith O’Gallagher, Municipal Ordinances § 1A.01, at 3 (2d ed. 1998).

ORDINANDI LEX

ordinandi lex (or-d<<schwa>>-nan-dlleks). [Latin] The law of procedure, as distinguished from substantive law.

OUTCOME RESPONSIBILITY

outcome responsibility.The view that those who cause harm are responsible for it even in the absence of fault. Cf. strict liability under LIABILITY.

“Outcome responsibility serves to foster a sense of identity because it does not stretch indefinitely into the future but enables each of us to claim for ourselves, or to share with a few others, outcomes of limited extent, whether successes or failures. Yet outcome responsibility for harm to another does not by itself create a duty to compensate. The form that our responsibility for an outcome should take remains an open question. An apology or telephone call will often be enough. But outcome responsibility is a basis on which the law can erect a duty to compensate if there is reason to do so. There will be some reason to do so if the conduct in question is socially undesirable and if there is also reason to treat the harm suffered as the infringement of a right.” Tony Honoré, Responsibility and Fault 77–78 (1999).

OUTER BAR

outer bar.English law. A group of junior barristers who sit outside the dividing bar in the court. • These barristers rank below the King's Counsel or Queen's Counsel. — Also termed utter bar. Cf. INNER BAR.

OUT OF ORDER

out of order. 1. (Of a motion) not in order <the motion is out of order because it conflicts with the bylaws>. See IN ORDER. • A motion may be “out of order” because it is inherently inappropriate for the deliberative assembly's consideration at any time (e.g., because it proposes an unlawful action). A motion that is not appropriate simply because it is brought before the meeting at the wrong time but that may be appropriate for consideration at another time is more precisely referred to as “not in order.”

“Motions that conflict with the corporate charter, constitution or bylaws of a society, or with procedural rules prescribed by national, state, or local laws, are out of order, and if any motion of this kind is adopted, it is null and void. Likewise, motions are out of order if they conflict with a motion that has been adopted by the society and has been neither rescinded, nor reconsidered and rejected after adoption. Such conflicting motions, if adopted, are null and void unless adopted by the vote required to rescind or amend the motion previously adopted.” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 39, at 332 (10th ed. 2000).

2. (Of a person) guilty of a breach of decorum or other misconduct during a meeting <the member is out of order>.

(Of a court) to overturn or set aside (a precedent) by expressly deciding that it should no longer be controlling law <in Brown v. Board of Education, the Supreme Court overruled Plessy v. Ferguson>. Cf. VACATE(1). [Cases: Courts 100(1). C.J.S. Courts §§ 147–148.]

“If a decision is not a recent one, and especially if it seems to be very poor, it should not be relied upon without ascertaining whether it may not have been expressly or impliedly overruled by some subsequent one; that is, whether the court may not have laid down a contrary principle in a later case.” Frank Hall Childs, Where and How to Find the Law 94 (1922).

“Overruling is an act of superior jurisdiction. A precedent overruled is definitely and formally deprived of all authority. It becomes null and void, like a repealed statute, and a new principle is authoritatively substituted for the old.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 189 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

beneficial owner. 1. One recognized in equity as the owner of something because use and title belong to that person, even though legal title may belong to someone else; esp., one for whom property is held in trust. — Also termed equitable owner. [Cases: Trusts 139. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 251.] 2. A corporate shareholder who has the power to buy or sell the shares, but who is not registered on the corporation's books as the owner. [Cases: Corporations 135. C.J.S. Corporations § 282.] 3.Intellectual property. A person or entity who is entitled to enjoy the rights in a patent, trademark, or copyright even though legal title is vested in someone else. • The beneficial owner has standing to sue for infringement. A corporation is typically a beneficial owner if it has a contractual right to the assignment of the patent but the employee who owns the patent has failed to assign it. Similarly, a patent or copyright owner who has transferred title as collateral to secure a loan would be a beneficial owner entitled to sue for infringement.

copyright owner.See COPYRIGHT OWNER.

equitable owner.See beneficial owner (1).

general owner.One who has the primary or residuary title to property; one who has the ultimate ownership of property. Cf. special owner.

legal owner.One recognized by law as the owner of something; esp., one who holds legal title to property for the benefit of another. See TRUSTEE(1). [Cases: Trusts 133. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 245–246.]

limited owner.A tenant for life; the owner of a life estate. See life estate under ESTATE(1). [Cases: Life Estates 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 28–29, 31, 34.]

naked owner. Civil law. A person whose property is burdened by a usufruct. • The naked owner has the right to dispose of the property subject to the usufruct, but not to derive its fruits. See USUFRUCT. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.]

owner of record. See record owner.

owner pro hac vice (proh hahk vee-chay). See demise charter under CHARTER (8). record owner. 1. A property owner in whose name the title appears in the public records. 2. STOCKHOLDER OF RECORD.

sole and unconditional owner. Insurance. The owner who has full equitable title to, and exclusive interest in, the insured property. [Cases: Insurance 2992(2).]

special owner. One (such as a bailee) with a qualified interest in property. Cf. general owner.

OWNERS' ASSOCIATION

owners' association. The basic governing entity for a condominium or planned unit development. • It is usu. an unincorporated association or a nonprofit corporation. [Cases: Condominium 8. C.J.S. Estates §§ 211–216, 230.]

OWNERS' EQUITY

owners' equity. The aggregate of the owners' financial interests in the assets of a business entity; the capital contributed by the owners plus any retained earnings. • Owners' equity is calculated as the difference in value between a business entity's assets and its liabilities. — Also termed (in a corporation) shareholders' equity; stockholders' equity. [Cases: Corporations 182.1(2). C.J.S. Corporations § 340.]

“Owner's equity is the residual claim of the owners of the business on its assets after recognition of the liabilities of the business. Owner's equity represents the amounts contributed by the owners to the business, plus the accumulated income of the business since its formation, less any amounts that have been distributed to the owners.” Charles H. Meyer, Accounting and Finance for Lawyers in a Nutshell 4 (1995).

OWNERSHIP

ownership. The bundle of rights allowing one to use, manage, and enjoy property, including the right to convey it to others. • Ownership implies the right to possess a thing, regardless of any actual or constructive control. Ownership rights are general, permanent, and heritable. Cf. POSSESSION; TITLE(1). [Cases: Property 7, 11. C.J.S. Property §§ 24–31, 33–34.]

“Ownership does not always mean absolute dominion. The more an owner, for his advantage, opens up his property for use by the public in general, the more do his rights become circumscribed by the statutory and constitutional powers of those who use it.” Marsh v. Alabama, 326 U.S. 501, 506, 66 S.Ct. 276, 278 (1946) (Black, J.).

“Possession is the de facto exercise of a claim; ownership is the de jure recognition of one. A thing is owned by me when my claim to it is maintained by the will of the state as expressed in the law; it is possessed by me, when my claim to it is maintained by my own self-assertive will. Ownership is the guarantee of the law; possession is the guarantee of the facts. It is well to have both forms if possible; and indeed they normally co-exist.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 311 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

bare ownership. See trust ownership.

beneficial ownership. 1. A beneficiary's interest in trust property. — Also termed equitable ownership. [Cases: Trusts 139. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 251.] 2. A corporate shareholder's power to buy or sell the shares, though the shareholder is not registered on the corporation's books as the owner.

bonitary ownership (bahn-<<schwa>>-tair-ee). Roman law. A type of equitable ownership recognized by the praetor when the property was conveyed by an informal transfer, or by a formal transfer by one not the true owner. — Also termed bonitarian ownership; in bonis habere.

complete ownership. Hist. Louisiana law. See perfect ownership.

contingent ownership. Ownership in which title is imperfect but is capable of becoming perfect on the fulfillment of some condition; conditional ownership.

corporeal ownership. The actual ownership of land or chattels.

equitable ownership. See beneficial ownership (1).

full ownership. Hist. Louisiana law. See perfect ownership.

imperfect ownership. Louisiana law. Ownership of property subject to a usufruct interest held by another. See La. Civ. Code art. 478. — Also termed naked ownership.

incorporeal ownership. The ownership of rights in land or chattels.

joint ownership. Undivided ownership shared by two or more persons. • Typically, an owner's interest, at death, passes to the surviving owner or owners by virtue of the right of survivorship. [Cases: Joint Tenancy 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Joint Tenancy §§ 2, 4, 7–9.] naked ownership. Louisiana law. See imperfect ownership.

ownership in common. Ownership shared by two or more persons whose interests are divisible. • Typically their interests, at death, pass to the dead owner's heirs or successors. [Cases: Tenancy in Common 1. C.J.S. Estates § 19; Tenancy in Common §§ 2–5.]

perfect ownership. Hist. Louisiana law. The complete bundle of rights to use, enjoy, and dispose of property without limitation. — Also termed full ownership; complete ownership.

qualified ownership. Ownership that is shared, restricted to a particular use, or limited in the extent of its enjoyment.

trust ownership. A trustee's interest in trust property. — Also termed bare ownership. [Cases: Trusts 133. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 245–246.]

unqualified ownership.Absolute ownership.

vested ownership.Ownership in which title is perfect; absolute ownership.

OWNERSHIP-IN-PLACE THEORY

ownership-in-place theory.Oil & gas. A characterization of oil-and-gas rights used in a majority of jurisdictions, holding that the owner has the right to present possession of the oil and gas in place as well as the right to use the land surface to search, develop, and produce from the property, but that the interest in the minerals terminates if the oil and gas flows out from under the owner's land. • This theory is used in Texas, New Mexico, Kansas, Mississippi, and other major producing states. The rights of a severed-mineral-interest owner to oil and gas in these states are often described as an estate in fee simple absolute, but ownership of specific oil-and-gas molecules is subject to the rule of capture. See NONOWNERSHIP THEORY.

OWNER'S POLICY

owner's policy.Real estate. A title-insurance policy covering the owner's title as well as the mortgagee's interest. Cf. MORTGAGEE POLICY. [Cases: Insurance 2610; Mortgages 201. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 57, 1061, 1232–1235, 1237; Mortgages §§ 311–314.]

OWN-PRODUCT EXCLUSION own-product exclusion.See EXCLUSION(3).

OWN-WORK EXCLUSION

own-work exclusion.See EXCLUSION(3).

OXFIELD

oxfield (oks-fild).Hist. A restitution made by a county or hundred for a wrong done by someone within that region.

OXGANG

oxgang (oks-gang).Hist. An amount of land equal to what an ox plows in one year, usu. 12 to 15 acres. • An oxgang, equaling one-eighth of a carucate, was used to assess land for tax purposes. — Also termed oxgate; bovata terrae. Cf. CARUCATE.

OYER

oyer (oy-<<schwa>>r oroh-y<<schwa>>r). [fr. Old French oïr “to hear”] Hist. 1.A criminal trial held under a commission of oyer and terminer. See COMMISSION OF OYER AND TERMINER. 2. The reading in open court of a document (esp. a deed) that is demanded by one party and read by the other. 3.Common-law pleading. A prayer to the court by a party opposing a profert, asking to have the instrument on which the opponent relies read aloud. • Oyer can be demanded only when a profert has been properly made, but it is disallowed for a private writing under seal. [Cases: Bills and Notes 488; Pleading 306. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 267, 293; Pleading §§ 520–522.]

“A party having a right to demand oyer is yet not obliged, in all cases, to exercise that right; nor is he obliged, in all cases, after demanding it, to notice it in the pleading he afterwards files or delivers. Sometimes, however, he is obliged to do both, namely, where he has occasion to found his answer upon any matter contained in the deed of which profert is made, and not set forth by his adversary. In these cases the only admissible method of making such matter appear to the court is to demand oyer, and, from the copy given, set forth the whole deed verbatim in his pleading.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 289, at 483 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

OYER, DEMAND OF

oyer, demand of. See DEMAND OF OYER.

OYER AND TERMINER

oyer and terminer (oy-<<schwa>>r an[d] t<<schwa>>r-m<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>r). [Law French oyer et terminer “to hear and determine”] 1.COMMISSION OF OYER AND TERMINER . 2.COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER.

OYEZ

oyez (oh-yes oroh-yez oroh-yay). [Law French] Hear ye. • The utterance oyez, oyez, oyez is usu. used in court by the public crier to call the courtroom to order when a session begins or when a proclamation is about to be made.

PAC-MAN DEFENSE

Pac-Man defense (pak-man). An aggressive antitakeover defense by which the target company attempts to take over the bidder company by making a cash tender offer for the bidder company's shares. • The name derives from a video game popular in the 1980s, the object of which was to gobble up the enemy. This defense is seldom used today. Cf. CROWN-JEWEL DEFENSE; SCORCHED-EARTH DEFENSE .

PACT

pact. An agreement between two or more parties; esp., an agreement (such as a treaty) between two or more nations or governmental entities.

“Popular understanding notwithstanding, there is no legal difference between various kinds of international instruments because of the name they are given. In other words, ‘treaties,’ ‘pacts,’ ‘protocols,’ ‘conventions,’ ‘covenants,’ and ‘declarations’ are all terms to convey international agreements. Some of these terms may connote more or less solemnity or formality, but it does not matter for purposes of characterizing an accord as an international agreement, binding under international law.” David J. Bederman, International Law Frameworks 25 (2001).

PACTA SUNT SERVANDA

pacta sunt servanda (pak-t<<schwa>> s<<schwa>>nt s<<schwa>>r-van-d<<schwa>>). [Latin “agreements must be kept”] The rule that agreements and stipulations, esp. those contained in treaties, must be observed <the Quebec courts have been faithful to the pacta sunt servanda principle>. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

pact de non alienando (pakt dee non ay-lee-<<schwa>>-nan-doh). [Latin] Civil law. An agreement not to alienate encumbered (esp. mortgaged) property. • This stipulation will not void a sale to a third party, but it does allow the mortgagee to proceed directly against the mortgaged property without notice to the purchaser.

PACTIO

pactio (pak-shee-oh). [Latin] Civil law. 1. The negotiating process that results in a pactum. 2. The pactum arrived at; an agreement. Pl. pactiones.

PACTION

paction (pak-sh<<schwa>>n). 1. PACTIO. 2. Int'l law. An agreement between two nations to be performed by a single act.

PACTUM

pactum (pak-t<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. An agreement or convention, usu. falling short of a contract; a pact. — Also termed pactum conventum. Pl. pacta.

pactum constitutae pecuniae (pak-t<<schwa>>m kon-st<<schwa>>-t[y]oo-tee pi-kyoo-nee-ee). [Latin “agreement for a fixed sum of money”] See pactum de constituto.

pactum corvinum de hereditate viventis (pak-t<<schwa>>m kor-vi-n<<schwa>>m dee h<<schwa>>-red-i-tay-tee vI-ven-tis). [Latin “a raven-like contract on the inheritance of the living”] An agreement concerning the succession of one still living. — Also termed pactum de successione viventis; pactum super hereditate viventis.

“It is supposed that the Romans called this a corvine agreement (pactum corvinum) on account of the eager rapacity of ravens, which prompts them to attack and commence to devour animals weakened and dying before death has actually taken place.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 429 (4th ed. 1894).

pactum de constituto (pak-t<<schwa>>m dee kon-sti-t[y]oo-toh). [Latin “an agreement”] An informal agreement to pay an existing debt, one's own or another's, at a fixed time. • The agreement was enforceable by a praetor. Justinian extended the pactum de constituto from money to debts of any kind. The pactum could also be used to give security; it differs from fidejussion mainly in its informality. — Also termed pactum constitutae pecuniae. See CONSTITUTUM. Cf. FIDEJUSSION.

pactum de non petendo (pak-t<<schwa>>m dee non p<<schwa>>-ten-doh). [Latin “agreement not to sue”] An agreement in which a creditor promises not to enforce the debt.

pactum de quota litis (pak-t<<schwa>>m dee kwoh-t<<schwa>> II-tis). [Latin “agreement about a portion of the amount in issue”] An agreement in which a creditor promises to pay a portion of a difficult-to-collect debt to a person attempting to collect it; an agreement to share the proceeds of a litigation.

pactum de retrovendendo (pak-t<<schwa>>m dee re-troh-ven-den-doh). [Latin] An agreement concerning the selling back of an object. • This agreement gave the seller the right to repurchase the item sold within a certain period and at a fixed price.

pactum de successione viventis (pak-t<<schwa>>m dee s<<schwa>>k-ses[h]-ee-oh-nee vI-ven-tis). [Latin] See pactum corvinum de hereditate viventis.

pactum displicentiae (pak-t<<schwa>>m dis-pli-sen-shee-I). Roman law. A sale on approval. • The buyer had the property on trial and could reject it.

pactum donationis (pak-t<<schwa>>m doh-nay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] An agreement to make a gift. • Justinian made such agreements enforceable. If informal, the agreement would be valid up to a fixed sum (500 solidi).

pactum illicitum (pak-t<<schwa>>m i-lis-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] An illegal agreement.

pactum legis commissoriae (pak-t<<schwa>>m lee-jis kom-i-sor-ee-ee). [Latin] An agreement under which the seller received the benefit of the lex commissoria. See LEX COMMISSORIA.

pactum legis commissoriae in pignoribus (pak-t<<schwa>>m lee-jis kom-i-sor-ee-ee in pig-nor-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] An agreement giving the pledgee the benefit of a forfeiture clause. See LEX COMMISSORIA.

pactum liberatorium (pak-t<<schwa>>m lib-<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>-tor-ee-<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin “a liberating agreement”] An agreement liberating parties from honoring a real right. • This type of agreement appears to have been long defunct.

pactum super hereditate viventis (pak-t<<schwa>>m s[y]oo-p<<schwa>>r h<<schwa>>-red-i-tay-tee vI-ven-tis). [Law Latin] See pactum corvinum de hereditate viventis.

PALACE COURT

Palace Court.Hist. A court having jurisdiction over all personal actions arising within 12 miles of Whitehall. • This court was created by James I in response to complaints about the inconvenience of using the itinerant Court of the Marshalsea; its jurisdiction was similar, but the court remained in Whitehall. It was abolished along with the Court of the Marshalsea in 1849. — Formerly also termed curia palatii. See COURT OF THE MARSHALSEA.

“The court of the marshalsea, and the palace court at Westminster, though two distinct courts, are frequently confounded together. The former was originally holden before the steward and marshal of the king's house, and was instituted to administer justice between the king's domestic servants, that they might not be drawn into other courts, and thereby the king lose their service.... But this court being ambulatory, and obliged to follow the king in all his progresses, so that by the removal of the household, actions were frequently discontinued, and doubts having arisen as to the extent of its jurisdiction ... [the king] erected a new court of record, called the curia palatii, or palace-court, to be held before the steward of the household and knight marshal, and the steward of the court, or his deputy; with jurisdiction to hold plea of all manner of personal actions whatsoever, which shall arise between any parties within twelve miles of his majesty's palace at Whitehall.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 76 (1768).

palimony (pal-<<schwa>>-moh-nee). [Portmanteau word from pal + alimony] 1. A court's award of post-relationship support or compensation for services, money, and goods contributed during a long-term nonmarital relationship, esp. where a common-law marriage cannot be established.The term originated in the press coverage of Marvin v. Marvin, 557 P.2d 106 (Cal. 1976). Cf. alimony. [Cases: Marriage54. C.J.S. Marriage ?? 43?44.] 2. Loosely, child support.This sense is esp. common in the United Kingdom.

PALLIO COOPERIRE

pallio cooperire (pal-ee-oh koh-op-<<schwa>>-ri-ree). [Latin “to cover with a pallium”] Hist. A marriage of persons who have already had a child together. • The pallium was a veil or cover over the bride, which was extended to cover the bastard child. Its removal at the wedding was deemed to legitimate the child.

PALMER'S ACT

Palmer's Act. An English statute, enacted in 1856, giving a person accused of a crime falling outside the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court the right to have the case tried in that court. St. 19 & 20 Vict., ch. 16. — Also termed Central Criminal Court Act. See CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

PALMING OFF

palming off. See PASSING OFF.

PALSGRAF<TT> RULE

Palsgraf rule (pawlz-graf). Torts. The principle that negligent conduct resulting in injury will lead to liability only if the actor could have reasonably foreseen that the conduct would cause the injury. • In Palsgraf v. Long Island R.R., 162 N.E. 99 (N.Y. 1928), two railroad attendants negligently dislodged a package of fireworks from a man they were helping board a train. The package exploded on impact and knocked over some scales that fell on Mrs. Palsgraf. The New York Court of Appeals, in a 4–3 majority opinion written by Chief Justice Benjamin Cardozo, held that the attendants could not have foreseen the possibility of injury to Palsgraf and therefore did not breach any duty to her. In the dissenting opinion, Justice William S. Andrews asserted that the duty to exercise care is owed to all, and thus a negligent act will subject the actor to liability to all persons proximately harmed by it, whether or not the harm is foreseeable. Both opinions have been widely cited to support the two views expressed in them. [Cases: Negligence 213. C.J.S. Negligence § 34.]

PAN-AMERICAN CONVENTION

Pan-American Convention. Copyright. One of a series of copyright conventions held among Western Hemisphere countries to negotiate treaties patterned after the Berne Convention. • The first Convention was held in 1902, the last in 1946. The largest was the 1910 Pan American Convention in Buenos Aires.

PANDECT

pandect (pan-dekt). 1. A complete legal code, esp. of a nation or a system of law, together with commentary. 2. (cap. & pl.) The 50 books constituting Justinian's Digest (one of the four works making up the Corpus Juris Civilis), first published in A.D. 533. • The substance of 2,000 treatises was distilled into this abridgment. One estimate is that 3 million lines were reduced to 150,000. This prodigious amount of work was carried out in three short years (A.D. 530–533) by a commission of 17 jurists headed by Tribonian. — Also spelled (in reference to German law) pandekt. — Also termed (in sense 2) Digest. Pl. pandects, pandectae. See CORPUS JURIS CIVILIS .

PANDER

pander, n. One who engages in pandering. — Also termed panderer. See PIMP.

PANDERING

pandering (pan-d<<schwa>>r-ing), n. 1. The act or offense of recruiting a prostitute, finding a place of business for a prostitute, or soliciting customers for a prostitute. — Also termed promoting prostitution. [Cases: Prostitution 1. C.J.S. Prostitution and Related Offenses §§ 2–4, 8–13, 17, 21–24.] 2. The act or offense of selling or distributing textual or visual material (such as magazines or videotapes) openly advertised to appeal to the recipient's sexual interest. • Although the concept of pandering was invoked by the U.S. Supreme Court in Ginzburg v. United States, 383 U.S. 463, 86 S.Ct. 942 (1966), it has seldom been discussed by the Court since then. — pander, vb.

P & L

P & L. abbr. Profit and loss. See INCOME STATEMENT.

PANDUIT TEST

Panduit test. Patents. A four-factor test for measuring profits lost because of patent infringement. • The patentee must prove (1) that there was a demand for the product; (2) that the patentee had the manufacturing and marketing capacity to meet that demand; (3) that there were no acceptable noninfringing alternatives on the market; and (4) how much was lost in profits. Panduit Corp. v. Stahlin Bros. Fibre Works, Inc., 575 F.2d 1152 (6th Cir. 1978). [Cases: Patents 318. C.J.S. Patents §§ 561–562.]

PANEL

panel. 1. A list of persons summoned as potential jurors. 2. A group of persons selected for jury duty; VENIRE. [Cases: Jury 66, 78. C.J.S. Juries §§ 271, 312, 340–341.] 3. A set of judges selected from a complete court to decide a specific case; esp., a group of three judges designated to sit for an appellate court. [Cases: Courts 90(2). C.J.S. Courts § 141.] 4. Scots law. A person indicted in a crime; the accused. — Also spelled (in sense 4) pannel.

chattel paper (chat-<<schwa>>l). See CHATTEL PAPER.

commercial paper. 1. An instrument, other than cash, for the payment of money. • Commercial paper — typically existing in the form of a draft (such as a check) or a note (such as a certificate of deposit) — is governed by Article 3 of the UCC. But even though the UCC uses the term commercial paper when referring to negotiable instruments of a particular kind (drafts, checks, certificates of deposit, and notes as defined by Article 3), the term long predates the UCC as a business and legal term in common use. Before the UCC, it was generally viewed as synonymous with negotiable paper or bills and notes. It was sometimes applied even to nonnegotiable instruments. — Also termed mercantile paper; company's paper. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT. [Cases: Bills and Notes 1. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 2–3, 5–6, 8–9, 17–18, 22.]

“ ‘Commercial paper’ is rather a popular than a technical expression, often used, however, both in statutes and in decisions of courts, to designate those simple forms of contract long recognized in the world's commerce and governed by the law merchant.” 1 Joseph F. Randolph, A Treatise on the Law of Commercial Paper § 1, at 1 (2d ed. 1899).

“Defined most broadly, commercial paper refers to any writing embodying rights that are customarily conveyed by transferring the writing. A large subset of commercial paper consists of such writings that are negotiable, which means that the law enables a transferee to acquire the embodied rights free of claims and defenses against the transferor.” Richard E. Speidel, Negotiable Instruments and Check Collection in a Nutshell 1 (4th ed. 1993).

2. Such instruments collectively. — Also termed bills and notes. 3. Loosely, a short-term unsecured promissory note, usu. issued and sold by one company to meet another company's immediate cash needs.

commodity paper.An instrument representing a loan secured by a bill of lading or warehouse receipt.

order paper.An instrument payable to a specific payee or to any person that the payee designates. — Also termed order document; order instrument. [Cases: Bills and Notes 208. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 139, 143, 146.]

PAR DELICTUM

par delictum (pahr di-lik-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Equal guilt; equal wrong.

PARDON

pardon,n. The act or an instance of officially nullifying punishment or other legal consequences of a crime. • A pardon is usu. granted by the chief executive of a government. The President has the sole power to issue pardons for federal offenses, and state governors have the power to issue pardons for state crimes. — Also termed executive pardon. See CLEMENCY. Cf. COMMUTATION (2); REPRIEVE. [Cases: Pardon and Parole 23. C.J.S. Pardon and Parole §§ 11–12, 14–16, 22–26, 29–30.] — pardon,vb.

“The term pardon is first found in early French law and derives from the Late Latin perdonare (‘to grant freely’), suggesting a gift bestowed by the sovereign. It has thus come to be associated with a somewhat personal concession by a head of state to the perpetrator of an offense, in mitigation or remission of the full punishment that he has merited.” Leslie Sebba, “Amnesty and Pardon,” in 1 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 59, 59 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

absolute pardon.A pardon that releases the wrongdoer from punishment and restores the offender's civil rights without qualification. — Also termed full pardon; unconditional pardon. [Cases: Pardon and Parole 23. C.J.S. Pardon and Parole §§ 11–12, 14–16, 22–26, 29–30.]

conditional pardon.A pardon that does not become effective until the wrongdoer satisfies a prerequisite or that will be revoked upon the occurrence of some specified act. [Cases: Pardon and Parole 23. C.J.S. Pardon and Parole §§ 11–12, 14–16, 22–26, 29–30.]

faultless pardon. A pardon granted because the act for which the person was convicted was not a crime.

general pardon. See AMNESTY.

partial pardon. A pardon that exonerates the offender from some but not all of the punishment or legal consequences of a crime. [Cases: Pardon and Parole 23. C.J.S. Pardon and Parole §§ 11–12, 14–16, 22–26, 29–30.]

PARDON ATTORNEY

pardon attorney. A Justice Department lawyer who considers applications for federal pardons and forwards those of promising candidates for review by the President.

PARENS BINUBUS

parens binubus (par-enz bI-n[y]oo-b<<schwa>>s). [Latin “twice-married parent”] Roman law. A parent who has remarried.

PARENS PATRIAE

parens patriae (par-enz pay-tree-ee or pa-tree-I). [Latin “parent of his or her country”] 1. The state regarded as a sovereign; the state in its capacity as provider of protection to those unable to care for themselves <the attorney general acted as parens patriae in the administrative hearing>; in Roman law, the emperor. [Cases: States 1. C.J.S. States §§ 2, 16.] 2. A doctrine by which a government has standing to prosecute a lawsuit on behalf of a citizen, esp. on behalf of someone who is under a legal disability to prosecute the suit <parens patriae allowed the state to institute proceedings>. • The state ordinarily has no standing to sue on behalf of its citizens, unless a separate, sovereign interest will be served by the suit. — Also termed doctrine of parens patriae. [Cases: Infants 2; States 190. C.J.S. Infants §§ 12, 108, 198; States §§ 297, 314.]

PARENT

parent. 1. The lawful father or mother of someone. • In ordinary usage, the term denotes more than responsibility for conception and birth. The term commonly includes (1) either the natural father or the natural mother of a child, (2) the adoptive father or adoptive mother of a child, (3) a child's putative blood parent who has expressly acknowledged paternity, and (4) an individual or agency whose status as guardian has been established by judicial decree. In law, parental status based on any criterion may be terminated by judicial decree. In other words, a person ceases to be a legal parent if that person's status as a parent has been terminated in a legal proceeding. — Also termed legal parent. [Cases: Parent and Child 1. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 1–12, 201.] absent parent. See noncustodial parent.

adoptive parent. A parent by virtue of legal adoption. See ADOPTION. [Cases: Adoption 4. C.J.S. Adoption of Persons §§ 13–17, 23–24.]

biological parent. The woman who provides the egg or the man who provides the sperm to form the zygote that grows into an embryo. — Also termed genetic parent.

birth parent. Either the biological father or the mother who gives birth to a child. — Sometimes written birthparent.

constructive parent. See equitable parent.

custodial parent. The parent awarded physical custody of a child in a divorce. See PHYSICAL CUSTODY(2). Cf. noncustodial parent.

de facto parent. An adult who (1) is not the child's legal parent, (2) has, with consent of the child's legal parent, resided with the child for a significant period, and (3) has routinely performed a share of the caretaking functions at least as great as that of the parent who has been the child's primary caregiver without any expectation of compensation for this care. • Because the status of de facto parent is subordinate to that of legal parent, a person who expects to be afforded the status of parent should, if possible, adopt the child. The primary function of this conceptual status is to provide courts with a means for maintaining a relationship between a child and an adult who has functioned as a parent when that adult is prohibited from legally adopting the child. The status is usu. limited to a person who has assumed the role of parent with the knowledge and consent, either express or implied, of the legal parent. But it may also arise when there is a total failure or inability of the legal parent to perform parental duties. Cf. equitable parent; psychological parent.

Disneyland parent. A noncustodial parent who indulges his or her child with gifts and good times during visitation and leaves most or all disciplinary responsibilities to the other parent; esp., a noncustodial parent who provides luxuries that the custodial parent cannot afford but performs no disciplinary duties, in an effort to gain or retain the child's affection. See LOLLIPOP SYNDROME.

domiciliary parent. A parent with whom a child lives.

dual-residential parent. A parent who shares primary residential responsibility for a child with the other parent when each provides a residence that is substantially a primary residence. • In many jurisdictions, dual residence is referred to as joint physical custody. See RESIDENTIAL RESPONSIBILITY; CUSTODY(2). Cf. residential parent.

equitable parent. 1. A husband who, though not the biological father, is treated by the court as the father in an action for custody or visitation, usu. when the husband (1) has treated the child as his own while married to the child's mother, (2) is the only father the child has ever known, and (3) seeks the rights of fatherhood. 2. A mother or father, not by blood or adoption, but by virtue of the close parent-like relationship that exists between that person and a child. • The status of equitable parent is a legal fiction that is used as an equitable remedy. Most commonly, the status of equitable parent arises when a person, living with the child and one of his or her legal or natural parents, forms a close bond with the child and assumes the duties and responsibilities of a parent. — Also termed constructive parent. See adoption by estoppel under ADOPTION. Cf. psychological parent; de facto parent.

foster parent. An adult who, though without blood ties or legal ties, cares for and rears a child, esp. an orphaned or neglected child who might otherwise be deprived of nurture, usu. under the auspices and direction of an agency and for some compensation or benefit. • Foster parents sometimes give care and support temporarily until a child is legally adopted by others. See FOSTER CARE. Cf. foster child under CHILD. [Cases: Infants 226. C.J.S. Adoption of Persons §§ 10–12.]

genetic parent. See biological parent.

godparent. See GODPARENT.

intended parent. See intentional parent.

intentional parent. The person whose idea it is to have and raise a child and who (1) enters into a surrogacy contract with a surrogate mother, and (2) is the legal parent of the child regardless of any genetic link to the child. — Also termed intended parent. See intended child under CHILD.

noncustodial parent. In the child-custody laws of some states, a parent without the primary custody rights of a child; esp., the parent not awarded physical custody of a child in a divorce. • The noncustodial parent is typically awarded visitation with the child. — Also termed nonresidential parent; possessory conservator; absent parent. See PHYSICAL CUSTODY(2). Cf. custodial parent. [Cases: Child Custody 175–231.]

nonresidential parent. See noncustodial parent.

parent by estoppel. A man who, though not a child's legal father, is estopped from denying liability for child support. • This estoppel usu. arises when the man (1) has lived with the child for at least two years, (2) has believed in good faith that he was the child's father, (3) has accepted parental responsibilities, and (4) has entered into a coparenting agreement with the child's mother — and when the court finds that recognition of the status of parent is in the child's best interests. See ESTOPPEL.

primary domiciliary parent. In a joint-custody arrangement, the parent who exercises primary physical custody. See joint custody under CUSTODY(2). psychological parent. A person who, on a continuing and regular basis, provides for a child's emotional and physical needs. • The psychological parent may be the biological parent, a foster parent, a guardian, a common-law parent, or some other person unrelated to the child.

residential parent. A parent who has primary residential responsibility for a child and who is not a dual-residential parent. See RESIDENTIAL RESPONSIBILITY. Cf. dual-residential parent.

stepparent. The spouse of one's mother or father by a later marriage. [Cases: Parent and Child 15. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 345–350, 357–358.]

surrogate parent. 1. A person who carries out the role of a parent by court appointment or the voluntary assumption of parental responsibilities. [Cases: Parent and Child 15. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 345–350, 357–358.] 2. See surrogate mother (2) under MOTHER.

2. See parent corporation under CORPORATION.

PARENTAGE

parentage (pair-*<<schwa>>*n-tij orpar-). The state or condition of being a parent; kindred in the direct ascending line. [Cases: Parent and Child 1. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 1–12, 201.]

PARENTAGE ACTION

parentage action. See PATERNITY SUIT.

PARENTAL ACCESS

parental access. See VISITATION(2).

PARENTAL-ALIENATION SYNDROME parental-alienation syndrome. See PARENT-ALIENATION SYNDROME.

PARENTAL-AUTONOMY DOCTRINE

parental-autonomy doctrine. The principle that a parent has a fundamental right to raise his or her child and to make all decisions regarding that child free from governmental intervention, unless (1) the child's health and welfare are jeopardized by the parent's decisions, or (2) public health, welfare, safety, and order are threatened by the parent's decisions. • The Supreme Court first recognized the doctrine of parental autonomy over the family in Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390, 43 S.Ct. 625 (1923). — Also termed family-autonomy doctrine. Cf. PARENTAL-PRIVILEGE DOCTRINE.

PARENTAL-CONSENT STATUTE

parental-consent statute. A statute that requires a minor to obtain his or her parent's consent before receiving elective medical treatment. • Without parental consent, a physician or other medical professional commits a battery upon a child when giving nonemergency medical treatment. To pass constitutional muster, a parental-consent statute must include a judicial-bypass provision. Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pa. v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 112 S.Ct. 2791 (1992). — Also termed parental-consent treatment statute. See JUDICIAL-BYPASS PROVISION. Cf. PARENTAL-NOTIFICATION STATUTE; MATURE-MINOR DOCTRINE.

PARENTAL-CONSENT TREATMENT STATUTE parental-consent treatment statute. See PARENTAL-CONSENT STATUTE.

PARENTAL CONSORTIUM

parental consortium. See CONSORTIUM.

PARENTAL-DISCIPLINE PRIVILEGE parental-discipline privilege. A parent's right to use reasonable force or to impose reasonable punishment on a child in a way that is necessary to control, train, and educate. • Several factors are used to determine the reasonableness of the action, including whether the actor is the parent; the child's age, sex, and physical and mental state; the severity and foreseeable consequences of the punishment; and the nature of the misconduct. Cf. PARENTAL-PRIVILEGE DOCTRINE.

PARENTAL FUNCTIONS

parental functions. See PARENTING FUNCTIONS.

PARENT-ALIENATION SYNDROME

parent-alienation syndrome. A situation in which one parent has manipulated a child to fear or hate the other parent; a condition resulting from a parent's actions that are designed to poison a child's relationship with the other parent. • Some mental-health specialists deny that this phenomenon amounts to a "psychological syndrome." — Also termed parental-alienation syndrome.

PARENTAL IMMUNITY

parental immunity. See IMMUNITY(2).

PARENTAL-IMMUNITY DOCTRINE parental-immunity doctrine. See parental immunity (1) under IMMUNITY(2).

PARENTAL KIDNAPPING

parental kidnapping. See KIDNAPPING.

PARENTAL KIDNAPPING PREVENTION ACT

Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act. A federal law, enacted in 1980, providing a penalty for child-kidnapping by a noncustodial parent and requiring a state to recognize and enforce a child-custody order rendered by a court of another state. 28 USCA § 1738A; 42 USCA §§ 654, 655, 663. — Abbr. PKPA. Cf. UNIFORM CHILD CUSTODY JURISDICTION ACT; FEDERAL KIDNAPPING ACT. [Cases: Child Custody 723, 738.]

PARENTAL-LIABILITY STATUTE parental-liability statute. A law obliging parents to pay damages for torts (esp. intentional ones) committed by their minor children. • All states have these laws, but most limit the parents' monetary liability to about $3,000 per tort. Parents can also be held criminally liable for the acts of their children. One group of laws is aimed at contributing to the delinquency and endangering the welfare of a minor. More recently, the laws have been directed at improper supervision and failure to supervise. The first law aimed at punishing parents for the acts of their children was enacted in Colorado in 1903. By 1961 all but two states had enacted similar laws. At least five states make it a felony for a parent to intentionally, knowingly, and recklessly provide a firearm to a child, or permit the child to handle a firearm, when the parent is aware of a substantial risk that the child will use the weapon to commit a crime. — Also termed parental-responsibility statute; failure-to-supervise statute. Cf. PARENTAL-RESPONSIBILITY STATUTE. [Cases: Parent and Child 13.5. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 191, 309–315.]

PARENTAL-NOTIFICATION STATUTE parental-notification statute. A law that requires a physician to notify a minor's parent of her intention to have an abortion. Cf. PARENTAL-CONSENT STATUTE .

PARENTAL-PREFERENCE DOCTRINE parental-preference doctrine. The principle that custody of a minor child should ordinarily be granted to a fit parent rather than another person. • The preference can be rebutted by proof that the child's best interests are to the contrary. — Also termed parental-rights doctrine; parental-superior-rights doctrine; parental-presumption rule. Cf. BEST INTERESTS OF THE CHILD. [Cases: Child Custody 460.]

PARENTAL-PRESUMPTION RULE parental-presumption rule. See PARENTAL-PREFERENCE DOCTRINE.

PARENTAL-PRIVILEGE DOCTRINE

parental-privilege doctrine. The parent's right to discipline his or her child reasonably, to use reasonable child-rearing practices free of governmental interference, and to exercise decision-making authority over the child. Cf. PARENTAL-AUTONOMY DOCTRINE; PARENTAL-DISCIPLINE PRIVILEGE.

PARENTAL-RESPONSIBILITY STATUTE parental-responsibility statute. 1. A law imposing criminal sanctions (such as fines) on parents whose minor children commit crimes as a result of the parents' failure to exercise sufficient control over them. — Also termed control-your-kid law. 2. PARENTAL-LIABILITY STATUTE. [Cases: Parent and Child 13.5(2, 4). C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 191, 312–315.]

PARENTAL RIGHTS

parental rights. A parent's rights to make all decisions concerning his or her child, including the right to determine the child's care and custody, the right to educate and discipline the child, and the right to control the child's earnings and property. See TERMINATION OF PARENTAL RIGHTS. [Cases: Parent and Child 1–8. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 1–12, 40–54, 192, 201, 257–278, 327, 329–344.]

PARENT CORPORATION

parent corporation. See CORPORATION.

PARENTELA

parentela (par-<<schwa>>n-tee-l<<schwa>>), n. pl. [Law Latin] Persons who can trace descent from a common ancestor.

PARENTELIC METHOD

parentelic method (par-<<schwa>>n-tee-lik or -tel-ik). A scheme of computation used to determine the paternal or maternal collaterals entitled to inherit when a childless intestate decedent is not survived by parents or their issue. • Under this method, the estate passes to grandparents and their issue; if there are none, to great-grandparents and their issue; and so on down each line until an heir is found. The Uniform Probate Code uses a limited parentelic system: it looks first to the grandparents and their issue, but if no heir is found in that line, the search ends and the estate escheats to the state. See DEGREE(5). Cf. GRADUAL METHOD.

PARENT FILING DATE

parent filing date. See effective filing date under DATE.

PARENTICIDE

parenticide (p-<<schwa>>-ren-t<<schwa>>-sId). 1. The act of murdering one's parent. 2. A person who murders his or her parent. — parenticidal, adj.

PARENTING

parenting, n. 1. Performance of the functions of a parent. 2. One or more methods of child-rearing.

parallel parenting. A situation in which divorced parents, although disagreeing on some aspects of child-rearing, allow each other to handle discipline and daily regimens in their own individual ways when with the child.

shared parenting.Cooperation between divorced parents in child-rearing.

PARENTING AGREEMENT

parenting agreement.See PARENTING PLAN.

PARENTING FUNCTION

parenting function.A task that serves the direct or day-to-day needs of a child or of a child's family. • Parenting functions include providing necessities, making decisions about the child's welfare, and maintaining the family residence. Cf. CARETAKING FUNCTIONS.

PARENTING PLAN

parenting plan.A plan that allocates custodial responsibility and decision-making authority for what serves the child's best interests and that provides a mechanism for resolving any later disputes between parents. — Also termed parenting agreement. See CUSTODY(2); CUSTODIAL RESPONSIBILITY; DECISION-MAKING RESPONSIBILITY Y.

PARENTING TIME

parenting time.See VISITATION(2).

PARES CURIAE

pares curiae (par-eez kyoor-ee-ee). [Law Latin “peers of the court”] Hist. 1. A lord's tenants who sat in judgment of a fellow tenant. 2.PARES CURTIS.

PARES CURTIS

pares curtis (par-eez k<<schwa>>r-tis). [Law Latin] Hist. The peers of the court. — Also termed pares curiae.

“The lord was, in early times, the legislator and judge over all his feudatories: and therefore the vassals of the inferior lords were bound by their fealty to attend their domestic courts baron, (which were instituted in every manor or barony, for doing speedy and effectual justice to all the tenants) in order as well to answer such complaints as might be alleged against themselves, as to form a jury or homage for the trial of their fellow-tenants; and upon this account, in all the feudal institutions both here and on the continent, they are distinguished by the appellation of the peers of the court; pares curtis, or pares curiae.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 54 (1766).

PARES REGNI

pares regni (par-eez reg-nI). [Law Latin] Hist. Peers of the realm.

PARETO OPTIMALITY

Pareto optimality (p<<schwa>>-ray-toh or p<<schwa>>-ret-oh), n. An economic situation in which no person can be made better off without making someone else worse off. • The term derives from the work of Vilfredo Pareto (1848–1923), an Italian economist and sociologist. — Pareto-optimal,adj.

PARETO SUPERIORITY

Pareto superiority,n. An economic situation in which an exchange can be made that benefits someone and injures no one. • When such an exchange can no longer be made, the situation becomes one of Pareto optimality. — Pareto-superior,adj.

PARIS CONVENTION

Paris Convention. See PARIS CONVENTION FOR THE PROTECTION OF INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY .

PARIS CONVENTION FOR THE PROTECTION OF INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY

Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property. A treaty designed to unify and streamline patent prosecutions and trademark applications among the signatories. • The Convention eased the harsh effects of the first-to-file priority rule by allowing an applicant in any member country one year in which to apply in other member countries while maintaining the application's original priority date. It also banned patent-protection discrimination against residents of other member nations. Now administered by the World Intellectual Property Organization, an agency of the United Nations, the Convention was first signed in 1883 and revised most recently in 1970. — Often shortened to Paris Convention. — Also termed Paris Industrial Property Convention.

“The 1883 Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property is the cornerstone of the international patent granting system. It represents the first efforts of several countries to adopt a common approach to industrial property. The fundamental principles of ‘right of priority’ and ‘national treatment’ set out by the Convention have been of capital importance to the internationalization of intellectual property rights over the last century.” Marta Pertegás Sender, Cross-Border Enforcement of Patent Rights 4 (2002).

PARISH

parish. 1. In Louisiana, a governmental subdivision analogous to a county in other U.S. states. [Cases: Counties 1. C.J.S. Counties §§ 2–4.] 2. Eccles. law. A division of a town or district, subject to the ministry of one pastor.

district parish. Eccles. law. A geographical division of an English parish made by the Crown's commissioners for the building of new churches for worship, celebration of marriages, christenings, and burials.

PARISH COURT

parish court. See county court under COURT.

PARIUM JUDICIUM

parium judicium (pair-ee-*<<schwa>>m joo-dish-ee-<<schwa>>*m). [Law Latin] The judgment of peers; trial by a jury of one's peers or equals.

PARKER DOCTRINE

Parker doctrine. See STATE-ACTION DOCTRINE.

PARKING

parking. 1. The sale of securities subject to an agreement that the seller will buy them back at a later time for a similar price. • Parking is illegal if done to circumvent securities regulations or tax laws. It is often a method of evading the net-capital requirements of the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD), which requires a brokerage firm to discount the value of any stock it holds in its own account when it files its monthly report about its net-capital condition. To reach technical compliance with the NASD's net-capital requirements, a brokerage firm “sells” stock from its own account to a customer at market price, thereby avoiding the discount for reporting purposes. Having filed its report, it can then “buy” the shares back from the customer, usu. at the same price at which it “sold” the stock, plus interest. [Cases: Securities Regulation 40.14. C.J.S. Securities Regulation § 160.] 2. The placement of assets in a safe, short-term investment while other investment opportunities are being considered. — Also termed (in sense 1) stock-parking.

PARKING-LOT RULE

parking-lot rule. The principle that workers'-compensation insurance covers the injuries suffered by an employee on the employer's premises when the employee is arriving at or leaving work. — Also termed premises rule. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 750. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation § 445.]

PARLIAMENT

parliament. The supreme legislative body of some nations; esp. (cap.), in the United Kingdom, the national legislature consisting of the monarch, the House of Lords, and the House of Commons.

PARLIAMENTARIAN

parliamentarian. Parliamentary law. A consultant trained in parliamentary law who advises the chair and others on matters of parliamentary law and procedure. • The parliamentarian, who is often a professional, only advises and never “rules” on procedural issues. See PARLIAMENTARY LAW; PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE .

“The parliamentarian is a consultant, commonly a professional, who advises the president and other officers, committees, and members on matters of parliamentary procedure. The parliamentarian's role during a meeting is purely an advisory and consultative one — since parliamentary law gives to the chair alone the power to rule on questions of order or to answer parliamentary inquiries.... After the parliamentarian has expressed an opinion on a point, the chair has the duty to make the final ruling and, in doing so, has the right to follow the advice of the parliamentarian or to disregard it.” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 47, at 449–50 (10th ed. 2002).

PARLIAMENTARY

parliamentary,adj. 1. Of or relating to a parliament. 2.Parliamentary law. Of or relating to rules of order for the conduct of business in deliberative assemblies.

PARLIAMENTARY AUTHORITY

parliamentary authority.A parliamentary manual that an organization has adopted for its deliberations, and whose provisions govern the organization in every case to which they apply, as long as they are consistent with law and with the organization's governing documents. See PARLIAMENTARY MANUAL.

parliamentary inquiry.See INQUIRY.

PARLIAMENTARY INTENT

parliamentary intent.See LEGISLATIVE INTENT.

PARLIAMENTARY LAW

parliamentary law.The body of rules and precedents governing the proceedings of legislative bodies and other deliberative assemblies. — Also termed parliamentary procedure. [Cases: Parliamentary Law 1. C.J.S. Parliamentary Law § 1.]

“Thomas Jefferson speaks of ‘the Parliamentary branch of the law.’ From this country's beginning, it has been an underlying assumption of our culture that what has been authoritatively established as parliamentary law is law — in the sense of being binding within all assemblies except as they may adopt special rules varying from the general parliamentary law.” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised xxvi (10th ed. 2000).

“Parliamentary law differs somewhat from the other branches of common law in that it is based in an important measure upon precedents of legislative and administrative bodies. Particularly in America, however, where the courts have the power to make final decisions on all constitutional questions, the law has been evolving upon the basis of court decisions, and a considerable volume of judicial precedents has accumulated. The application of parliamentary rules to new situations is subject to the same rules of reasoning as the application of established common law rules to new legal situations.” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 44, at 40–41 (2000).

common parliamentary law. 1. See general parliamentary law. 2. The common law as applied to parliamentary law; parliamentary law as it is found in judicial decisions.

general parliamentary law. The basic principles and practices of parliamentary law, as commonly understood among a meeting's members based on their experience in other deliberative assemblies, that apply in the absence of adopted rules of order. • A parliamentary manual is evidence of the general parliamentary law. — Also termed common parliamentary law.

“A deliberative assembly that has not adopted any rules is commonly understood to hold itself bound by the rules and customs of the general parliamentary law — or common parliamentary law... — to the extent that there is agreement in the meeting body as to what these rules and practices are.” Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 1, at 3 (10th ed. 2000).

PARLIAMENTARY MANUAL

parliamentary manual. A code or reference, usu. a commercially published book, that contains parliamentary rules and is offered for adoption by organizations as their parliamentary authority. • The leading parliamentary manuals in print in the United States are Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised for nonlegislative bodies, and Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure for state legislatures. Cf. PARLIAMENTARY AUTHORITY.

PARLIAMENTUM INSANUM parliamentum insanum. See MAD PARLIAMENT.

PARODY

parody. Intellectual property. A transformative use of a well-known work for purposes of satirizing, ridiculing, critiquing, or commenting on the original work, as opposed to merely alluding to the original to draw attention to the later work. • In constitutional law, a parody is protected as free speech. In copyright law, a work must meet the definition of a parody and be a fair use of the copyrighted material, or else it may constitute infringement. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 53.2. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 45–46, 48–50.]

“Trademark parodies, even when offensive, do convey a message. The message may be simply that business and product images need not always be taken too seriously; a trademark parody reminds us that we are free to laugh at the images and associations linked with the mark.” L.L. Bean, Inc. v. Drake Publishers, Inc., 811 F.2d 26, 34 (1st Cir. 1987)(per Bownes, J.).

“We do not, of course, suggest that a parody may not harm the market at all, but when a parody, like a scathing theater review, kills demand for the original, it does not produce a harm cognizable under the Copyright Act. Because ‘parody may quite legitimately aim at garroting the original, destroying it commercially as well as artistically,’ the role of the courts is to distinguish between ‘biting criticism [that merely] suppresses demand [and] copyright infringement[, which] usurps it.’ ” Campbell v. Acuff–Rose Music, Inc., 510 U.S. 569, 591, 114 S.Ct. 1164, 1178 (1994) (Souter, J.) (citations omitted).

PAR OF EXCHANGE

par of exchange. The equality of a given sum of one country's currency and the like sum of money of a foreign country into which it is to be exchanged.

PAROL

parol (p<<schwa>>-rohlorpar-<<schwa>>l), adj. 1. Oral; unwritten <parol evidence>. [Cases: Evidence 397. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1159, 1165, 1189.] 2. Not under seal <parol contract>. [Cases: Contracts 36, 239. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 76, 415.]

parol (p<<schwa>>-rohlorpar-<<schwa>>l), n. 1. An oral statement or declaration. 2. Hist. The oral pleadings in a case.

“Anciently pleadings were conducted in court orally, and the whole pleadings were called the parol; but for centuries the pleadings in civil actions have been required to be in writing.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 178–79 (2d ed. 1899).

PAROL AGREEMENT

parol agreement. See parol contract (1) under CONTRACT.

PAROL ARREST

PAROL DEMURRER

parol demurrer. See DEMURRER.

PAROLE

parole (p<<schwa>>-roh), n. The release of a prisoner from imprisonment before the full sentence has been served. • Although not available under some sentences, parole is usu. granted for good behavior on the condition that the parolee regularly report to a supervising officer for a specified period. Cf. PARDON; PROBATION(1). [Cases: Pardon and Parole 41. C.J.S. Pardon and Parole § 42.] — parole, vb.

“The essence of parole is release from prison, before completion of the sentence, on condition that the prisoner abide by certain rules during the balance of the sentence. Parole is not freedom.” 59 Am. Jur. 2d Pardon and Parole § 6 (1987).

bench parole. See bench probation under PROBATION.

juvenile parole. The conditional release of a juvenile offender from confinement. — Also termed aftercare. [Cases: Infants 281. C.J.S. Infants §§ 57, 69–85, 198–199, 206–214, 280.]

PAROLE BOARD

parole board. A governmental body that decides whether prisoners may be released from prison before completing their sentences. — Also termed board of parole; parole commission. [Cases: Pardon and Parole 55. C.J.S. Pardon and Parole §§ 45–47.]

PAROLEE

parolee (p<<schwa>>-roh-lee). A prisoner who is released on parole.

PAROLE REVOCATION parole revocation. The administrative act of returning a parolee to prison because of the parolee's failure to abide by the conditions of parole (as by committing a new offense). [Cases: Pardon and Parole 69. C.J.S. Pardon and Parole § 65.]

PAROL EVIDENCE

parol evidence. See EVIDENCE.

PAROL-EVIDENCE RULE

parol-evidence rule. Contracts. The common-law principle that a writing intended by the parties to be a final embodiment of their agreement cannot be modified by evidence of earlier or contemporaneous agreements that might add to, vary, or contradict the writing. • This rule usu. operates to prevent a party from introducing extrinsic evidence of negotiations that occurred before or while the agreement was being reduced to its final written form. See INTEGRATION(2); MERGER(2). Cf. FOUR-CORNERS RULE. [Cases: Evidence 397. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1159, 1165, 1189.]

“The basic principle is often called the ‘parol evidence rule’, and according to this rule evidence is not admissible to contradict or qualify a complete written contract. The rule is usually stated in the form of a rule of evidence, but it is probably best regarded as a rule of substantive law. The question is not really whether evidence can be admitted which might vary the written document, but whether, if the evidence is admitted, it will have the legal effect of varying the document.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 161–62 (3d ed. 1981).

“The parol evidence rule assumes that the formal writing reflects the parties' minds at a point of maximum resolution and, hence, that duties and restrictions that do not appear in the written document, even though apparently accepted at an earlier stage, were not intended by the parties to survive. In addition, and quite apart from the survival of matters discarded in the course of negotiations, there is the obvious danger of outright fraud.” Marvin A. Chirelstein, Concepts and Case Analysis in the Law of Contracts 82–83 (1990).

PAROL LEASE

parol lease. See LEASE.

PAROLS DE LEY

parols de ley (p<<schwa>>-rohly d<<schwa>> lay). [Law French] Words of law; technical words.

PAROL TRUST

parol trust. See oral trust (1) under TRUST.

PARRATT–HUDSON DOCTRINE

Parratt–Hudson doctrine. The principle that a state actor's random, unauthorized deprivation of someone's property does not amount to a due-process violation if the state provides an adequate postdeprivation remedy. Parratt v. Taylor, 451 U.S. 527, 101 S.Ct. 1908 (1981); Hudson v. Palmer, 468 U.S. 517, 104 S.Ct. 3194 (1984). [Cases: Constitutional Law 278(1). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 982–984, 987–990, 1211–1215, 1269, 1420–1421, 1424; Zoning and Land Planning § 23.]

PARRICIDE

parricide (par-<<schwa>>-sld), n. 1. The act of killing a close relative, esp. a parent. 2. One who kills such a relative. Cf. PATRICIDE. — parricidal, adj.

PARRICIDIUM

parricidium (par-<<schwa>>-sid-ee-<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. The murder of a near relative, esp. a parent. 2. Perhaps in ancient law, the murder of any free citizen. • This ancient, broad sense of parricidium gave way in pre-Imperial law to homicidium (homicide), which extended to the killing of a slave.

PARS

pars (pahrz). [Latin] Hist. A party to an action.

PARS CONTRACTUS

pars contractus (pahrz k<<schwa>>n-trak-t<<schwa>>s). [Law Latin] Hist. Part of the contract.

“Verbal consensual contracts are binding upon the contracting parties immediately upon their consents being interchanged, and neither of them can afterwards resile from the transaction But if it be agreed that their contract shall be reduced to writing, such agreement being pars contractus, the contract is not finally entered into, nor does it become binding, until the writing has been executed.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 436 (4th ed. 1894).

PARS EJUSDEM NEGOTII

pars ejusdem negotii (pahrz ee-j<<schwa>>s-d<<schwa>>m ni-goh-shee-I). [Latin] Hist. Part of the same transaction. • The phrase refers, for example, to an obligation attached to a condition, both of which must be considered together to constitute one transaction.

PARS ENITIA

pars enitia (pahrz i-ni-shee-<<schwa>>). [Law Latin “oldest's part”] Hist. An oldest child's portion of lands divided by lot.

PARTE NON COMPARENTE

parte non comparente (pahr-tee non kom-p<<schwa>>-ren-tee).Hist. The party not having appeared. • In civil cases, a party's failure to appear usu. resulted in a default judgment against the defendant. But in criminal cases, the accused's failure to appear raised no presumption of guilt; still, the offender was cited for contempt and made an outlaw. See OUTLAW.

PARTES BENEFICII

partes beneficii (pahr-teez ben-<<schwa>>-fish-ee-I). [Law Latin] Hist. Parts of a benefice.

PARTES FINIS NIHIL HABUERUNT partes finis nihil habuerunt (pahr-teez fl-nis nI-hil hab-yoo-eer-<<schwa>>nt). [Law Latin “the parties to the fine had nothing”] Hist. A plea to set aside a conveyance of land on grounds that the transferor did not have a sufficient ownership interest in the property to alienate it.

“Yet where a stranger... officiously interferes in an estate which in nowise belongs to him, his fine is of no effect; and may at any time be set aside ... by pleading that ‘partes finis nihil habuerunt.’ ” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 356–57 (1765).

particeps (pahr-t*<<schwa>>*-seps), n. [Latin] 1. A participant. 2. A part owner.

PARTICEPS CRIMINIS

particeps criminis (pahr-t*<<schwa>>-seps krim-<<schwa>>*-nis), n. [Latin "partner in crime"]
1. An accomplice or accessory. See ACCESSORY. Pl. participes criminis (pahr-tis-<<schwa>>-pez). [Cases: Criminal Law 59, 68. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 127, 137, 998.]

“The courts of justice will allow the objection that the consideration of the contract was immoral or illegal to be made even by the guilty party to the contract, for the allowance is not for the sake of the party who raises the objection, but is grounded on general principles of policy. A particeps criminis has been held to be entitled, in equity, on his own application to relief against his own contract, when the contract was illegal, or against the policy of the law, and relief became necessary to prevent injury to others.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *467 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

“Even in felonies but little practical importance now attaches to the distinctions between the first three of these four classes of ‘accomplices’ — a term which the law applies to all the participes criminis, whatever their degree of ‘complicity’ in the offence, though popular use generally limits it to those who take only a minor part. For the maximum punishment prescribed for any given crime is the same in the case of all three classes.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 90 (16th ed. 1952).

2. The doctrine that one participant in an unlawful activity cannot recover in a civil action against another participant in the activity. • This is a civil doctrine only, having nothing to do with criminal responsibility. Cf. IN PARI DELICTO DOCTRINE. [Cases: Contracts 138. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 280, 286.]

PARTICEPS FRAUDIS

PARTITIO

partitio (pah-r-tish-ee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. Division; partition.

partitio legata (pah-r-tish-ee-oh l<<schwa>>-gay-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] A directive from a testator to an heir to divide the inheritance and deliver a designated portion to a named legatee; a testamentary partition.

PARTITION

partition, n. 1. Something that separates one part of a space from another. 2. The act of dividing; esp., the division of real property held jointly or in common by two or more persons into individually owned interests. — Also termed partition in kind. [Cases: Common Lands 14; Partition 1–10. C.J.S. Common Lands §§ 17–19; Partition §§ 1–2, 4–21, 23, 26.]

definitive partition. A partition that is irrevocable.

partition of succession. Louisiana law. The division of an estate among an intestate's heirs. See La. Civ. Code art. 1293.

provisional partition. A temporary partition, often made before the remainder of the property can be divided.

3. Oil & gas. The division of an undivided mineral interest by voluntary agreement or judicial action. — partition, vb. — partible, adj.

PARTITION IN KIND

partition in kind. See PARTITION(2).

PARTNER

partner. 1. One who shares or takes part with another, esp. in a venture with shared benefits and shared risks; an associate or colleague <partners in crime>. 2. One of two or more persons who jointly own and carry on a business for profit <the firm and its partners were sued for malpractice>. See PARTNERSHIP. [Cases: Partnership 1. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 1–7, 17.] 3. One of two persons who are married or who live together; a spouse or companion <my partner in life>. [Cases: Husband and Wife 1; Marriage 54. C.J.S. Marriage §§ 43–44.]

dormant partner. See silent partner.

general partner. A partner who ordinarily takes part in the daily operations of the business, shares in the profits and losses, and is personally responsible for the partnership's debts and liabilities. — Also termed full partner. [Cases: Partnership 353, 366. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 405, 407, 422–423, 425, 430, 432.]

junior partner. A partner whose participation is limited with respect to both profits and management.

limited partner. A partner who receives profits from the business but does not take part in managing the business and is not liable for any amount greater than his or her original investment. — Also termed special partner; (in civil law) partner in commendam. See limited partnership under PARTNERSHIP. [Cases: Partnership 353, 366, 371. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 405, 407, 422–423, 425, 429–432, 438.]

liquidating partner. The partner appointed to settle the accounts, collect the assets, adjust the claims, and pay the debts of a dissolving or insolvent firm. [Cases: Partnership 280. C.J.S. Partnership § 347.]

name partner. A partner whose name appears in the name of the partnership < Mr. Tibbs is a name partner in the accounting firm of Gibbs & Tibbs>. — Also termed named partner; title member.

nominal partner. A person who is held out as a partner in a firm or business but who has no actual interest in the partnership. — Also termed ostensible partner; partner by estoppel.

partner in commendam (in k<<schwa>>-men-d<<schwa>>m). See limited partner.

quasi-partner. A person who joins others in an enterprise that appears to be, but is not, a partnership. • A joint venturer, for example, is a quasi-partner.

secret partner. A partner whose connection with the firm is concealed from the public. — Also termed sleeping partner.

senior partner. A high-ranking partner, as in a law firm.

silent partner. A partner who shares in the profits but who has no active voice in management of the firm and whose existence is often not publicly disclosed. — Also termed dormant partner. [Cases: Partnership 90. C.J.S. Partnership § 39.]

“It is worth emphasizing that control does not necessarily mean active involvement. One of the most interesting figures in partnership law, in fact, is the ‘silent’ partner — typically a person who has invested in a business in return for a profit share, and who reserves the right to, and to some extent may in fact, participate in routine management decisions, may participate in no decisions at all, and may even be unaware of what is happening in the business for long periods of time. The fact of the person's financial interest in the partnership may be a secret from everyone except the other partners (indeed, such secrecy may be vital). Such a person is nonetheless a partner like any other for purposes, among other things, of personal liability for the debts of the partnership. The law simply does not distinguish between active and passive partners.” William A. Klein & John C. Coffee Jr., Business Organization and Finance 64 (2002).

sleeping partner. See secret partner.

special partner. See limited partner.

surviving partner. The partner who, upon the partnership's dissolution because of another partner's death, serves as a trustee to administer the firm's remaining affairs. [Cases: Partnership 280. C.J.S. Partnership § 347.]

PARTNERSHIP

partnership. A voluntary association of two or more persons who jointly own and carry on a business for profit. • Under the Uniform Partnership Act, a partnership is presumed to exist if the persons agree to share proportionally the business's profits or losses. Cf. JOINT VENTURE; STRATEGIC ALLIANCE. [Cases: Partnership 1. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 1–7, 17.]

collapsible partnership. Tax. A partnership formed by partners who intend to dissolve it before they realize any income. • Any partner's gain resulting from unrealized receivables or inventory that has increased substantially in value will be treated by the IRS as ordinary income rather than as capital gain. IRC (26 USCA) § 751. Cf. collapsible corporation under CORPORATION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3931, 3935.]

commercial partnership. See trading partnership.

family partnership. A business partnership in which the partners are related. IRC (26 USCA) § 704(e). See FAMILY-PARTNERSHIP RULES.

general partnership. A partnership in which all partners participate fully in running the business and share equally in profits and losses (though the partners' monetary contributions may vary). [Cases: Partnership 79, 86, 87. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 90, 94–95.]

implied partnership. See partnership by estoppel.

limited-liability partnership. A partnership in which a partner is not liable for a negligent act committed by another partner or by an employee not under the partner's supervision. • All states have enacted statutes that allow a business (typically a law firm or accounting firm) to register as this type of partnership. — Abbr. L.L.P. [Cases: Partnership 371. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 429, 431, 438.]

limited partnership. A partnership composed of one or more persons who control the business and are personally liable for the partnership's debts (called general partners), and one or more persons who contribute capital and share profits but who cannot manage the business and are liable only for the amount of their contribution (called limited partners). • The chief purpose of a limited partnership is to enable persons to invest their money in a business without taking an active part in managing the business, and without risking more than the sum originally contributed, while securing the cooperation of others who have ability and integrity but insufficient money. — Abbr. L.P. — Also termed special partnership; (in civil law) partnership in commendam. [Cases: Partnership 349–376. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 402–441.]

“Unknown at common law, the limited partnership was derived from the commenda or societe en commandite of continental Europe to permit a person to invest and share in the profits of a partnership business and yet limit one's liability to one's investment. It was first recognized in the United States by a New York statute of 1822. It is now recognized by statute in all American jurisdictions.” Henry G. Henn & John R. Alexander, Laws of Corporations § 28, at 86 (3d ed. 1983).

“[T]he two primary characteristics of a limited partnership [are] liability of limited partners only for their agreed contributions, and a hierarchical structure with management in one or more general partners and very little power or authority in the limited partners. Thus, limited partners are typically — although not necessarily — passive contributors of capital.... In this respect they resemble shareholders in a corporation, but, depending on the details of the organizational documents, they may have greater or lesser rights.” 3 Alan R. Bromberg & Larry E. Ribstein, Bromberg and Ribstein on Partnerships § 12.01, at 12:5–12:6 (1999).

master limited partnership. A limited partnership whose interests or shares are publicly traded. See publicly traded partnership.

nontrading partnership. A partnership that does not buy and sell but instead is a partnership of employment or occupation. — Also termed noncommercial partnership.

particular partnership. A partnership in which the members unite to share the benefits of a single transaction or enterprise.

partnership at will. A partnership that any partner may dissolve at any time without thereby incurring liability. Cf. partnership for a term. [Cases: Partnership 259.5. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 303–305.]

partnership by estoppel. A partnership implied by law when one or more persons represent themselves as partners to a third party who relies on that representation. • A person who is deemed a partner by estoppel becomes liable for any credit extended to the partnership by the third party. — Also termed implied partnership. [Cases: Partnership 24. C.J.S. Partnership § 24.]

partnership for a term. A partnership that exists for a specified duration or until a specified event occurs. • Such a partnership can be prematurely dissolved by any partner, but that partner may be held liable for breach of the partnership agreement. Cf. partnership at will.

partnership in commendam. See limited partnership.

publicly traded partnership. A partnership whose interests are traded either over-the-counter or on a securities exchange. • These partnerships are treated as corporations for income-tax purposes. — Abbr. PTP.

special partnership. 1. See limited partnership. 2. A partnership formed only for a single venture.

subpartnership. An arrangement between a firm's partner and a nonpartner to share the partner's profits and losses in the firm's business, but without forming a legal partnership between the partner and the nonpartner.

tiered partnership. An ownership arrangement consisting of one parent partnership that is a partner in one or more subsidiary partnerships.

trading partnership. A partnership whose usual business involves buying and selling. — Also termed commercial partnership.

umbrella limited partnership. A limited partnership used by a real-estate investment trust to acquire investment properties in exchange for shares in the partnership. See umbrella-partnership real-estate investment trust under REAL-ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUSTT.

universal partnership. A partnership formed by persons who agree to contribute all their individually owned property — and to devote all their skill, labor, and services — to the partnership. [Cases: Partnership 22. C.J.S. Partnership § 9.]

PARTNERSHIP AGREEMENT

partnership agreement. A contract defining the partners' rights and duties toward one another — not the partners' relationship with third parties. — Also termed articles of partnership. [Cases: Partnership 71. C.J.S. Partnership § 78.]

PARTNERSHIP ASSOCIATION partnership association. A business organization that combines the features of a limited partnership and a close corporation. • Partnership associations are statutorily recognized in only a few states. — Also termed statutory partnership association; limited partnership association. [Cases: Partnership 349–376. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 402–441.]

PARTNERSHIP AT WILL

partnership at will. See PARTNERSHIP.

PARTNERSHIP CERTIFICATE

partnership certificate. A document that evidences the participation of the partners in a partnership. • The certificate is often furnished to financial institutions when the partnership borrows money.

PARTNERSHIP DISTRIBUTION partnership distribution. See DISTRIBUTION.

PARTNERSHIP INSURANCE

partnership insurance. See INSURANCE.

PARTNERSHIP LIFE INSURANCE

partnership life insurance. See partnership insurance (1) under INSURANCE.

PARTNER'S LIEN

partner's lien. A partner's right to have the partnership property applied in payment of the partnership's debts and to have whatever is due the firm from fellow partners deducted from what would otherwise be payable to them for their shares. [Cases: Partnership 89. C.J.S. Partnership § 97.]

PART PAYMENT

part payment. See PAYMENT.

PART PERFORMANCE

part performance. 1. PERFORMANCE. 2. PART-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE.

PART-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE part-performance doctrine. The equitable principle by which a failure to comply with the statute of frauds is overcome by a party's execution, in reliance on an opposing party's oral promise, of an oral contract's requirements. — Sometimes shortened to part performance. See part performance under PERFORMANCE. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of 129.]

“Part performance is not an accurate designation of such acts as taking possession and making improvements when the contract does not provide for such acts, but such acts regularly bring the doctrine into play. The doctrine is contrary to the words of the Statute of Frauds, but it was established by English courts of equity soon after the enactment of the Statute. Payment of purchase-money, without more, was once thought sufficient to justify specific enforcement, but a contrary view now prevails, since in such cases restitution is an adequate remedy. English decisions treated a transfer of possession of the land as sufficient, if unequivocally referable to the oral agreement, apparently on the ground that the promise to transfer had been executed by a common-law conveyance. Such decisions are not generally followed in the United States. Enforcement has instead been justified on the ground that repudiation after ‘part performance’ amounts to a ‘virtual fraud.’ A more accurate statement is that courts with equitable powers are vested by tradition with what in substance is a dispensing power based on the promisee's reliance, a discretion to be exercised with caution in the light of all the circumstances.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 129 cmt. a (1979).

PART-SOVEREIGN STATE

part-sovereign state. See SOVEREIGN STATE.

PARTY

party. 1. One who takes part in a transaction . [Cases: Contracts 177. C.J.S. Contracts § 363.]

“Note, that if an Indenture be made between two as Parties thereto in the Beginning, and in the Deed one of them grants or lets a Thing to another who is not named in the Beginning, he is not Party to the Deed, nor shall take any Thing thereby.” John Rastell, Les Termes de la Ley 471 (26th ed. 1721).

“A person who takes part in a legal transaction or proceeding is said to be a party to it. Thus, if an agreement, conveyance, lease, or the like, is entered into between A. and B., they are said to be parties to it; and the same expression is often, though not very correctly, applied to the persons named as the grantors or releasors in a deed-poll.” 2 Stewart Rapalje & Robert L. Lawrence, A Dictionary of American and English Law 930 (1883).

party of the first part.Archaic. The party named first in a contract; esp., the owner or seller.

party of the second part.Archaic. The party named second in a contract; esp., the buyer.

2. One by or against whom a lawsuit is brought . • For purposes of res judicata, a party to a lawsuit is a person who has been named as a party and has a right to control the lawsuit either personally or, if not fully competent, through someone appointed to protect the person's interests. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 101.]

adverse party.A party whose interests are opposed to the interests of another party to the action. Cf. hostile witness under WITNESS.

aggrieved party.A party entitled to a remedy; esp., a party whose personal, pecuniary, or property rights have been adversely affected by another person's actions or by a court's decree or judgment. — Also termed party aggrieved; person aggrieved. [Cases: Action 13; Appeal and Error 151; Federal Civil Procedure 103.2. C.J.S. Actions § 57–63; Appeal and Error § 168.]

coparty. See COPARTY.

fictitious party.A person who is named in a writ, complaint, or record as a party in a suit, but who does not actually exist, or a person who is named as a plaintiff but is unaware of the suit and did not consent to be named.

formal party.See nominal party.

indispensable party.A party who, having interests that would inevitably be affected by a court's judgment, must be included in the case. • If such a party is not included, the case must be dismissed. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b). Cf. necessary party. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 203; Parties 18, 29. C.J.S. Parties §§ 3–5, 48–49.]

innocent party.A party who did not consciously or intentionally participate in an event or transaction.

interested party.A party who has a recognizable stake (and therefore standing) in a matter. —

Abbr. IP. [Cases: Action 13; Federal Civil Procedure 103.2. C.J.S. Actions §§ 57–63.]

joint party. See COPARTY.

necessary party. A party who, being closely connected to a lawsuit, should be included in the case if feasible, but whose absence will not require dismissal of the proceedings. See compulsory joinder under JOINDER. Cf. indispensable party. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 202; Parties 18, 29. C.J.S. Parties §§ 3–5, 48–49.]

nominal party. A party to an action who has no control over it and no financial interest in its outcome; esp., a party who has some immaterial interest in the subject matter of a lawsuit and who will not be affected by any judgment, but who is nonetheless joined in the lawsuit to avoid procedural defects. • An example is the disinterested stakeholder in a garnishment action. — Also termed formal party. Cf. real party in interest. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 102; Parties 4. C.J.S. Parties §§ 7, 17–20.]

party aggrieved. See aggrieved party.

party cast. The losing party in a lawsuit.

party in interest. See real party in interest.

party opponent. An adversary in a legal proceeding. — Sometimes written party-opponent.

party to be charged. A defendant in an action to enforce a contract falling within the statute of frauds.

prevailing party. A party in whose favor a judgment is rendered, regardless of the amount of damages awarded <in certain cases, the court will award attorney's fees to the prevailing party>. — Also termed successful party. See Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home, Inc. v. West Va. Dep't of Health & Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 603, 121 S.Ct. 1835, 1839 (2001) (relying on the seventh edition of Black's Law Dictionary [1999]). [Cases: Costs 32, 194.14; Federal Civil Procedure 2737.1. C.J.S. Costs §§ 10, 126.]

proper party. A party who may be joined in a case for reasons of judicial economy but whose presence is not essential to the proceeding. See permissive joinder under JOINDER. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 241; Parties 14, 25. C.J.S. Parties §§ 3–5, 41–43, 45–47, 56–57, 59–63.]

real party in interest. A person entitled under the substantive law to enforce the right sued upon and who generally, but not necessarily, benefits from the action's final outcome. — Also termed party in interest; (archaically) interessee. Cf. nominal party. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 131; Parties 6(2). C.J.S. Parties §§ 23–24.]

“[T]he ‘real party in interest’ is the party who, by the substantive law, possesses the right sought to be enforced, and not necessarily the person who will ultimately benefit from the recovery.... The concept of real party in interest should not be confused with the concept of standing. The standing question arises in the realm of public law, when governmental action is attacked on the ground that it violates private rights or some constitutional principle... Unfortunately, ... confusion between standing on the one hand and real party in interest or capacity on the other has been increasing.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 70, at 490 & n.2 (5th ed. 1994).

successful party. See prevailing party.

third party. See THIRD PARTY.

3. POLITICAL PARTY.

PARTY-COLUMN BALLOT

party-column ballot. See BALLOT(4).

PARTY WALL

party wall. See WALL.

PARUM CAVISSE VIDETUR

parum cavisse videtur (par-*<<schwa>>m k<<schwa>>-vis-ee vI-dee-t<<schwa>>*r). [Latin] Hist. He seems to have taken too little care; he seems to have been incautious. • This expression was used by a judge when pronouncing a death sentence.

PAR VALUE

par value. The value of an instrument or security as shown on its face; esp., the arbitrary dollar amount assigned to a stock share by the corporate charter, or the principal of a bond. — Often shortened to par. — Also termed face amount; face value; nominal value; stated value. [Cases: Corporations 99(3). C.J.S. Corporations § 170.]

“At one time par value had considerable importance because it was widely viewed as the amount for which the shares would be issued: shares with a par value of one hundred dollars could be subscribed for at one hundred dollars per share with confidence that all other identical shares would also be issued for $100. This practice, however, long ago fell into disuse. Today, par value serves only a minor function and is in no way an indication of the price at which the shares are issued, with this one exception: The one basic rule about setting the price for shares of common stock with a par value is that the price must be equal to or greater than par value.” Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 109 (3d ed. 1991).

PAR-VALUE STOCK

par-value stock. See STOCK.

PARVIS

parvis (pahr-vis). [fr. Old Fr. pareis “paradise,” fr. Late Latin paradus “garden,” fr. Greek paradeises] Hist. An academic exercise, such as a moot court. — Also spelled pervise; parvise.

PASS

pass,vb.1. To pronounce or render an opinion, ruling, sentence, or judgment < the court refused to pass on the constitutional issue, deciding the case instead on procedural grounds>.2. To transfer or be transferred <the woman's will passes title to the house to her nephew, much to her husband's surprise> <title passed when the nephew received the deed>.3. To enact (a legislative bill or resolution); to adopt <Congress has debated whether to pass a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution>. See ADOPTION(5).4. To approve or certify (something) as meeting specified requirements <the mechanic informed her that the car had passed inspection>.5. To publish, transfer, or circulate (a thing, often a forgery) <he was found guilty of passing counterfeit bills>.6. To forgo or proceed beyond <the case was passed on the court's trial docket because the judge was presiding over a criminal trial>.7.ABSTAIN(1).

PASSAGE

passage,n.1.ADOPTION(5); esp., the passing of a legislative measure into law. [Cases: Statutes 17. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 34–36.] 2. A right, privilege, or permission to pass over land or water; an easement to travel through another's property.

PASS-ALONG

pass-along,adj. See PASS-THROUGH.

PASSBOOK

passbook. A depositor's book in which a bank records all the transactions on an account. — Also termed bankbook.

PASSED DIVIDEND

passed dividend.See DIVIDEND.

PASSIM

passim (pas-im), adv.[Latin] Here and there; throughout (the cited work). • In modern legal writing, the citation signal see generally is preferred to passim as a general reference, although passim can be useful in a brief's index of authorities to show that a given authority is cited throughout the brief.

PASSING OFF

passing off,n. Intellectual property. The act or an instance of falsely representing one's own product as that of another in an attempt to deceive potential buyers. • Passing off is actionable in tort under the law of unfair competition. It may also be actionable as trademark infringement. — Also termed palming off; misrepresentation of source. Cf. MISAPPROPRIATION. [Cases: Trade Regulation 404. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 103.] — pass off,vb.

reverse passing off.The act or an instance of falsely representing another's product as one's own in an attempt to deceive potential buyers. — Also termed reverse palming off.

PASSING ON passing on.See pass-on defense under DEFENSE(1).

PASSIVE

passive,adj. Not involving active participation; esp., of or relating to a business enterprise in which an investor does not have immediate control over the activity that produces income.

PASSIVE ACTIVITY

passive activity.Tax. A business activity in which the taxpayer does not materially participate and therefore does not have immediate control over the income. • A typical example is the ownership and rental of real property by someone not in the real-property business. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3418. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 199.]

PASSIVE ADOPTION-REGISTRY STATUTE passive adoption-registry statute.See ADOPTION-REGISTRY STATUTE.

PASSIVE NEGLIGENCE

passive negligence.See NEGLIGENCE.

PASSIVE TRUST

passive trust.See TRUST.

PASS-ON DEFENSE

pass-on defense.See DEFENSE(1).

PASSPORT

passport. 1. A formal document certifying a person's identity and citizenship so that the person may travel to and from a foreign country. [Cases: Citizens 10.2. C.J.S. Citizens §§ 24–27.] 2.SEA LETTER. 3.SAFE CONDUCT .

“A passport is the universally accepted evidence of a person's identity and nationality. It does not give its bearer the right to travel in another country, but it does request that other governments permit him to travel in their territories or within their jurisdictions. It also entitles him to the protection and assistance of his own diplomatic and consular officers abroad.” Burdick H. Brittin, International Law for Seagoing Officers 183 (4th ed. 1981).

PASSPORT OFFICE

Passport Office.See BUREAU OF CONSULAR AFFAIRS.

PASS THE WITNESS

pass the witness.See TAKE THE WITNESS.

PASS-THROUGH

pass-through,adj. (Of a seller's or lessor's costs) chargeable to the buyer or lessee. — Also termed pass-along.

PASS-THROUGH SECURITY

pass-through security.See SECURITY.

PASS-THROUGH TAXATION

pass-through taxation.See TAXATION.

PAST CONSIDERATION

past consideration.See CONSIDERATION(1).

PAST RECOLLECTION RECORDED past recollection recorded.Evidence. A document concerning events that a witness once knew about but can no longer remember. • The document itself is evidence and, despite being hearsay, may be admitted (or read into the record) if it was prepared or adopted by the witness when the events were fresh in the witness's memory. Fed. R. Evid. 803(5). — Also termed recorded recollection; past recorded recollection. Cf. PRESENT RECOLLECTION REFRESHED . [Cases: Criminal Law 435; Evidence 355(6). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1047–1048; Evidence § 976.]

PASULA–ROBINETTE TEST

Pasula–Robinette test.The principle that if a miner establishes a prima facie case of retaliation for filing a claim under the Mine Safety and Health Act, the mine operator can still prevail by proving, as an affirmative defense, that (1) the miner did not engage in a protected activity, (2) the adverse action was based on the miner's unprotected activity, and (3) the mine operator would have taken the same action based solely on the unprotected activity. • To establish a prima facie case of retaliation, the evidence must show that the miner engaged in a protected activity and that an adverse employment action occurred based at least in part on that activity. 30 USCA § 815(c); Secretary ex rel. Pasula v. Consolidation Coal Co., 2 FMSHRC 2786 (1980); Secretary ex rel. Robinette v. United Coal Co., 3 FMSHRC 802 (1981).

PAT-DOWN

pat-down,n. See FRISK.

PATEAT UNIVERSIS PER PRAESENTES

pateat universis per praesentes (pat-ee-at yoo-n<<schwa>>-v<<schwa>>r-sis p<< schwa>>r pri-zen-teez). [Law Latin] Let it be open to all men by these presents. Cf. KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS; NOVERINT UNIVERSI PER PRAESENTES .

PATE<TT> HEARING

Pate hearing. A proceeding in which the trial court seeks to determine whether a criminal defendant is competent to stand trial. Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. 375, 86 S.Ct. 836 (1966); 18 USCA §§ 4241–4247. — Also termed competency hearing; incompetency hearing. [Cases: Criminal Law 625.10–625.35. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 551, 554–555, 557.]

patent (pay-t<<schwa>>nt), adj. Obvious; apparent . Cf. LATENT. [Cases: Evidence 451. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 1222, 1224–1225.]

patent (pat-<<schwa>>nt), n.1. The governmental grant of a right, privilege, or authority. 2. The official document so granting. — Also termed public grant. See LETTERS PATENT.

call patent.A land patent in which the corners have been staked but the boundary lines have not been run out at the time of the grant.

escheat patent.See escheat grant under GRANT.

land patent. An instrument by which the government conveys a grant of public land to a private person. [Cases: Public Lands 114(1). C.J.S. Public Lands §§ 136, 139.]

lapse patent. A land patent substituting for an earlier patent to the same land that lapsed because the previous patentee did not claim it.

3. The right to exclude others from making, using, marketing, selling, offering for sale, or importing an invention for a specified period (20 years from the date of filing), granted by the federal government to the inventor if the device or process is novel, useful, and nonobvious. 35 USCA §§ 101–103. • The holding of a patent does not by itself grant any right to make, use, or sell anything if that activity would infringe another's blocking patent. — Also termed patent right; patent grant. [Cases: Patents 1. C.J.S. Patents §§ 1–5, 10–12, 15.] “The franchise which the patent grants consists altogether in the right to exclude everyone from making, using or vending the patented article, without the permission of the patentee. This is all he obtains by the patent.” Bloomer v. McQuewan, 55 U.S. 539, 549 (1852).

“What, exactly, is a patent and how does it operate to foster the ‘progress of the useful arts’? In its simplest terms a patent is an agreement between an inventor and the public, represented by the federal government: in return for a full public disclosure of the invention the inventor is granted the right for a fixed period of time to exclude others from making, using, or selling the defined invention in the United States. It is a limited monopoly, designed not primarily to reward the inventor (this may or may not follow), but to encourage a public disclosure of inventions so that after the monopoly expires, the public is free to take unrestricted advantage of the invention.” Earl W. Kintner & Jack L. Lahr, An Intellectual Property Law Primer 7–11 (2d ed. 1982).

basic patent. See pioneer patent.

blocking patent. One of two patents, neither of which can be effectively practiced without infringing the other. • For example, if A patents an improvement of B's patented invention, A cannot practice the improvement without infringing B's patent. Nor can B use the improvement without infringing A's patent. Owners of blocking patents often cross-license each other. See fencing patent; DOMINATION.

broadened reissue patent. Patents. A patent that is issued again, having broader claims than the original, surrendered patent. • Under 35 USCA § 251, a patent may be reissued, under certain circumstances, with broader claims than the original patent if the reissue application is filed within two years of the grant of the original patent. See INTERVENING RIGHTS.

business-method patent. A U.S. patent that describes and claims a series of process steps that, as a whole, constitutes a method of doing business. • Until 1998, methods for doing business were not expressly recognized as being patentable. In that year, the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals held in State Street Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Fin. Group, Inc., 149 F.3d 1368 (Fed. Cir. 1998), that business methods are subject to the same legal requirements for patentability as any other process or method. — Also termed cyberpatent.

combination patent. A patent granted for an invention that unites existing components in a novel way. [Cases: Patents 26. C.J.S. Patents §§ 83–84.]

Community patent. An international patent issued by the European Patent Convention. • Community patents are good for 20 years from the application date. They may be registered in any nation in the European Union and other EPC signatories.

copending patent. A patent whose application is being prosecuted at or near the same time as another, similar patent. • Continuing applications must be copending with an existing patent application. A copending patent may affect another patent's validity if it discloses the same invention, or discloses some part of the invention that, combined with other prior art, results in anticipation (esp. if the copending patent is issued before the affected patent). A copending patent may be shown to be an unpatentable improvement on another copending patent's invention. 35 USCA § 102(e). See COPENDING.

cyberpatent. 1. See business-method patent. 2. See Internet patent.

design patent. A patent granted for a new, original, and ornamental design for an article of manufacture; a patent that protects a product's appearance or nonfunctional aspects. • Design patents — which, unlike utility patents, have a term of only 14 years from the date on which the patent is granted — are similar to copyrights. 36 USCA § 171. [Cases: Patents 15. C.J.S. Patents §§ 100, 103.]

dominating patent. See fencing patent.

fencing patent. A patent procured for some aspect of an invention that the inventor does not intend to produce but that the inventor wants to prevent competitors from using in making improvements. • By making a claim whose only purpose is to protect other claims, the inventor seeks to “fence in” any such competing improvements. Courts disfavor fencing claims. — Also termed dominating patent. [Cases: Patents 121. C.J.S. Patents § 213.]

improvement patent. A patent having claims directed to an improvement on a preexisting invention. • If the preexisting invention is patented by another, the owner of the improvement patent may need a license to practice the invention covered by the claims of the improvement patent. Similarly, the owner of the preexisting invention's patent may need a license to practice the invention in the improvement patent. Cf. pioneer patent. [Cases: Patents 9. C.J.S. Patents § 23.]

in-force patent. A patent that has not expired or been ruled invalid.

Internet patent. A type of utility patent granted on an invention that combines business methods and software programs for Internet applications. — Also termed cyberpatent.

method patent. A patent having method or process claims that define a series of actions leading to a tangible physical result. — Also termed process patent. See process patent.

paper patent. A patent granted for a discovery or invention that has never been used commercially. • A paper patent may receive less protection under the law than a patent granted for a device that is actually used in industry. As a prior-art reference, a paper patent may carry less weight with examiners than one for an invention that has been commercially exploited because it may suggest that the invention did not work as claimed. [Cases: Patents 172. C.J.S. Patents §§ 283, 306.]

pioneer patent.A patent covering a function or a major technological advance never before performed, a wholly novel device, or subject matter of such novelty and importance as to mark a distinct step in the progress of the art, as distinguished from a mere improvement or perfection of what had gone before. • Under U.S. law, the claims of a pioneer patent are entitled to broader interpretation and to be given a broader range of equivalents. A pioneer patent is usu. the first one documented by a patent-tracking service, although it may not be the first patent published by a national registry, such as the PTO. — Cf. improvement patent. [Cases: Patents 173. C.J.S. Patents § 307.]

“To what liberality of construction these claims are entitled depends to a certain extent upon the character of the invention, and whether it is what is termed in ordinary parlance a ‘pioneer.’ This word, although used somewhat loosely, is commonly understood to denote a patent covering a function never before performed, a wholly novel device, or one of such novelty and importance as to mark a distinct step in the progress of the art, distinguished from a mere improvement or perfection of what had gone before.” Boyden Power-Brake Co. v. Westinghouse, 170 U.S. 537, 561–62, 18 S.Ct. 707, 718 (1898).

plant patent.A patent granted for the invention or discovery of a new and distinct variety of asexually reproducing plant. 36 USCA § 161. [Cases: Patents 14. C.J.S. Patents § 22.]

process patent.A patent for a method of treating specified materials to produce a certain result; a patent outlining a means of producing a physical result independently of the producing mechanism. • The result might be brought about by chemical action, by applying some element or power of nature, by mixing certain substances together, or by heating a substance to a certain temperature. See method patent. [Cases: Patents 7. C.J.S. Patents §§ 17–19.]

reissue patent.A patent that is issued to correct unintentional or unavoidable errors in an original patent, such as to revise the specification or to fix an invalid claim. • A reissue may correct patent defects that might call the validity of the patent into question. It is also used, although rarely, to make the claims broader or narrower. The patentee risks the possibility that previously allowed claims may be rejected. It does not change the term of the patent. 35USCA § 251. — Sometimes shortened to reissue. [Cases: Patents 135. C.J.S. Patents § 239.]

submarine patent.Slang. A patent that is delayed in prosecution by the applicant in order to let an infringing user continue to develop its business, with the intention of taking in later-invented technology once the patent finally “surfaces” from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • Typically, the patent applicant is aware of the developments and consciously delays the PTO's issuance of a patent, so that the invention's unwitting users will be forced to pay license fees. As of November 29, 2000, most patent applications must be published within 18 months of filing, so submarine patents are relatively rare now. See CONTINUATION-APPLICATION LACHES DOCTRINE.

utility-model patent.See UTILITY MODEL.

utility patent.A patent granted for one of the following types of inventions: a process, a machine, a manufacture, or a composition of matter (such as a new chemical). • Utility patents are the most commonly issued patents. 35 USCA § 101. [Cases: Patents 1. C.J.S. Patents §§ 1–5, 10–12, 15.]

PATENTABILITY OPINION

patentability opinion. See OPINION(2).

PATENTABILITY SEARCH

patentability search. An inventor's research into a field's state of the art to determine whether an invention will qualify for patent protection. Cf. INFRINGEMENT SEARCH; VALIDITY SEARCH.

PATENTABLE

patentable, adj. Capable of being patented <patentable processes>.

PATENTABLE COMBINATION

patentable combination. A series of process steps or mechanical elements, or a mixture of materials, that produce a desirable result or effect that is not obvious from the qualities of the individual components or steps.

PATENTABLE SUBJECT MATTER patentable subject matter. Things that by law can be patented; any machine, process, manufacture, or material composition, or an improvement to such things, that (1) is discovered or invented, (2) is new and useful, and (3) meets the statutory conditions and requirements to qualify for a patent. • Patents may be issued for “any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof.” 35 USCA § 101. Patents may not be issued for laws of nature, naturally occurring materials, physical phenomena, or abstract ideas and formulas. But if a naturally occurring material is processed in a way that gives it a new use, that process may be patentable. — Often shortened to subject matter. — Also termed statutory subject matter. [Cases: Patents 1. C.J.S. Patents §§ 1–5, 10–12, 15.]

PATENT ACT

Patent Act. The current federal statute governing patent registrations and rights, enacted in 1952. 35 USCA §§ 1 et seq. • The Act reversed several Supreme Court doctrines of patentability by eliminating the synergism and “flash of genius” requirements for combination patents (§ 103), making “means-plus-function” claims valid once again (§ 112), and narrowing the patent-misuse doctrine of contributory infringement (§ 271). — Also termed Patent Act of 1952.

PATENT ACT OF 1790

Patent Act of 1790. Hist. The first U.S. patent statute, establishing a board to examine patent applications, specifications, and drawings to determine whether the inventions are “sufficiently useful and important” to justify the granting of patents. • The examining board, comprising the Secretary of State, the Secretary of War, and the Attorney General, was abolished three years later in favor of a simple registration system.

PATENT ACT OF 1793

Patent Act of 1793.Hist. An early U.S. patent law that (1) abandoned the examination process in favor of simple registration; (2) established the infringement defenses of invalidity for lack of novelty or public use; and (3) articulated the four categories of patentable subject matter as machine, manufacture, composition of matter, and art (now called process). • The State Department handled the registration of patents, and the question of their validity was left up to the courts.

PATENT ACT OF 1836

Patent Act of 1836.Hist. The U.S. statute that charged the Patent Office with examining patent applications for novelty and utility, and that first required claims in patent applications.

PATENT ACT OF 1870

Patent Act of 1870.A U.S. statute that shifted the burden of disclosing the exact nature of an invention to the patent applicant by requiring a rigorous listing of distinct claims. • Before the Act was passed, patent claims were less important than the description and drawings, and the scope of the patent grant was often ambiguous.

PATENT ACT OF 1952

Patent Act of 1952.See PATENT ACT.

PATENT AGENT

patent agent.See AGENT(2).

PATENT AMBIGUITY

patent ambiguity.See AMBIGUITY.

PATENT AND COPYRIGHT CLAUSE

Patent and Copyright Clause.The constitutional provision granting Congress the authority to promote the advancement of science and the arts by establishing a national system for patents and copyrights. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 8. [Cases: Patents 3. C.J.S. Patents §§ 6–9.]

PATENT AND TRADEMARK DEPOSITORY LIBRARY

Patent and Trademark Depository Library.A library that has been designated by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office as an official repository for information to aid in a patent or trademark search. — Abbr. PTDL.

PATENT AND TRADEMARK LAW AMENDMENTS ACT

Patent and Trademark Law Amendments Act.See BAYH–DOLE ACT.

PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE

Patent and Trademark Office.See UNITED STATES PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE.

PATENT APPLICATION

patent application. An inventor's request for a patent, filed with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and accompanied by a specification (ending with at least one claim), drawings, the filing fee, and (except for a provisional patent application) an oath or a declaration. [Cases: Patents 98. C.J.S. Patents §§ 137–139.]

allowed application. A patent application for which the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office examiner has determined that all pending claims meet the conditions for patentability. • When an application is allowed, the PTO notifies the applicant through a Notice of Allowability and a Notice of Allowance. Once a patent application is allowed, a patent normally issues after the applicant has paid the required issue fee.

application for a reissue patent. An application by a patentee to change the scope of a patent that has already been issued, or to correct clerical or technological errors in the issued patent. • The scope of the claims can be broadened only if the application is made within two years of the date on which the patent was issued. See reissue patent under PATENT(3). Cf. CERTIFICATE OF CORRECTION.

child application. A later-filed application in a chain of continuing applications filed during the pendency of an earlier application and sharing common subject matter. • The first-filed application is called the parent application. Cf. parent application. [Cases: Patents 110. C.J.S. Patents § 156.]

continued-prosecution application. A request to abandon a patent application after final rejection and reopen a new case with the same file wrapper as the parent application. • CPAs are available only for applications filed before May 29, 2000. They are authorized in 37 CFR § 1.53(d). — Abbr. CPA. — Also termed Rule 1.53 application. Cf. REQUEST FOR CONTINUED EXAMINATION. [Cases: Patents 110. C.J.S. Patents § 156.]

continuing application. A patent application that is filed while the parent application is pending and that carries on prosecution of some or all of the original application. • Continuation, continuation-in-part, divisional, and reissue applications are all forms of continuing applications. [Cases: Patents 110. C.J.S. Patents § 156.]

Convention application. A patent application filed in accordance with the terms of an international patent treaty such as the Paris Convention or the Patent Cooperation Treaty.

divisional application. A patent application based on the same disclosure as the original application but claiming a different invention. • If an examiner finds that a disclosure reveals two or more distinct inventions, the applicant must restrict the original application to claiming one of the inventions. A divisional application can then be filed on any nonelected invention, and it will keep the same filing date as the parent application. — Often shortened to divisional. — Also termed restriction application. [Cases: Patents 109. C.J.S. Patents §§ 152–155.]

file-wrapper continuation application. See CONTINUATION; CONTINUATION-IN-PARTT.

grandparent application. The first-filed application in a chain of at least three continuation or continuation-in-part patent applications. [Cases: Patents 110. C.J.S. Patents § 156.]

informal application. A patent application that is not in the correct form as required by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • According to the Manual of Patent Examining Procedure, an application is informal if it is printed on both sides of the paper, or is not permanent, legible, or reproducible. An informal application may be corrected and still retain the original filing date.

international application. An application under the Patent Cooperation Treaty for patent protection in specified member nations. • A PCT filing may be added as long as 30 months after the initial filing in a national patent office. It allows for simultaneous patent searches and examinations in multiple countries. — Also termed PCT application; PCT filing. See PATENT COOPERATION TREATY.

international application designating the United States. An international-patent application that is filed in accordance with the Patent Cooperation Treaty and specifically seeks patent protection in the United States. • The application may be filed in any nation, including the U.S., that is a party to the treaty.

international application originating in the United States. An international-patent application that is filed in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office in accordance with the Patent Cooperation Treaty. • Under the treaty, the PTO acts as a receiving office for international applications. The applicant may or may not be seeking patent protection in the U.S. [Cases: Patents 97. C.J.S. Patents §§ 135–138, 145, 178.]

parent application. The first-filed application in a chain of later-filed continuation or continuation-in-part applications. • An application becomes the parent application when another type of application (such as continuation, divisional, or substitute) is filed. The term “parent” is generally not used to refer to a provisional application. Cf. child application. [Cases: Patents 110. C.J.S. Patents § 156.]

provisional application. An application that can be filed up to a year before the patent application itself, in order to establish a date for prior art and constructive reduction to practice. • The PPA must include a full description of the invention, but claims, drawings, and prior-art disclosures are not required. — Abbr. PPA. — Also termed provisional patent application. [Cases: Patents 98. C.J.S. Patents §§ 137–139.]

restriction application. See divisional application.

Rule 1.53 application. See continued-prosecution application.

substitute application. A duplicate application filed after the response period for a first office action has expired and the first application has been deemed abandoned. • A substitute application carries some danger for the applicant: the original filing date is lost, and any developments since that date become prior art that the examiner must consider before granting the patent. [Cases: Patents 110. C.J.S. Patents § 156.]

PATENT-APPLICATION AMENDMENT patent-application amendment.A modification to a patent application, usu. narrowing or eliminating some claims in response to an examiner's rejection. [Cases: Patents 109. C.J.S. Patents §§ 152–155.]

amendment after allowance.An amendment submitted to the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office after the PTO has mailed notice of a patent application's approval. • Once a notice of allowance has been mailed, prosecution of the application is closed on the merits, and the entry of any amendment is within the discretion of the patent examiner. Amendments after allowance commonly address such matters as an amendment to the specification or claims, a change in the drawings or the list of inventors, and the submission of prior art. Amendments that merely correct formal matters in the specification or drawings, change the claims without changing their scope, or cancel a claim are typically approved by the Office. Amendments of greater significance require approval of the supervisory examiner under policies established by the group director. — Also termed 312 amendment; Rule 312 amendment. See amendment after payment of issue fee.

amendment after appeal.An amendment made after an appeal is taken from a patent application's final rejection. • Such an amendment is not made as a matter of right but is frequently allowed if it puts the case in better form for consideration on appeal or helps implement an examiner's recommendation.

amendment after final action.An amendment made after final rejection of the patent application. • The amendment may drop claims but not add them. To be entered, it may make changes in form, but may not raise new issues for the examiner. — Also termed Rule 116 amendment.

amendment after payment of issue fee.An amendment made by the applicant after the application has been allowed and the issue fee paid. • Such an amendment is not made as a matter of right but is governed by 37 CFR § 1.312. It must be accompanied by a petition to the Commissioner showing good and sufficient reasons why the amendment was not presented earlier. See amendment after allowance.

amendment before first action.See preliminary amendment.

amendment in excess of filing fee.An amendment to a patent application that increases the number of claims in the original application and requires payment of an additional fee.

preliminary amendment.An amendment filed before the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office issues an office action on a patent application. • An amendment that is not filed with the original application is not considered part of the original disclosure. — Also termed amendment before first action.

Rule 116 amendment.See amendment after final action.

Rule 312 amendment.See amendment after allowance.

312 amendment.See amendment after allowance.

PATENT ATTORNEY

patent attorney.A lawyer who drafts and prosecutes patent applications, and who represents inventors in infringement suits and interference hearings. • In addition to a law license, a patent attorney must have a scientific or technical background, pass the patent bar examination, and be licensed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

PATENT CLAIM

patent claim.A formal statement describing the novel features of an invention and defining the scope of the patent's protection <claim #3 of the patent describes an electrical means for driving a metal pin>. Cf. SPECIFICATION (3). [Cases: Patents 101. C.J.S. Patents §§ 140–142.]

“[The patent] application concludes with one or more ‘claims,’ which are summaries of the points of novelty of the invention disclosed by the specification, said claims also following certain fixed forms. If they are broad and in general terms, the patentee will be well protected, and will be the possessor of a worth while patent; but if, on the other hand, the claims are limited in scope, if they recite a multiplicity of exactly stated and unimportant elements, or if they are bad in any one of a number of other ways, the chances of success are small, the patent will be full of loop-holes of which infringers will be prompt to take advantage, the inventor will not have received all he is entitled to, nor all he has paid for, and, if the claims are very limited, it is more than likely that he will have obtained a patent not worth the paper upon which it is printed.” Richard B. Owen, Patents, Trademarks, Copyrights, Departmental Practice 14 (1925).

apparatus claim.A patent claim on a mechanical device, explaining how the components are connected and function together. • The preamble of an apparatus claim typically states the function of the machine; the body explains its elements and how they work together.

appendant claim.See dependent claim.

closed-ended claim.A patent claim that expressly limits its scope to a list of elements, typically introduced by the phrase “consisting of.” Cf. nearly closed-ended claim; open-ended claim.

coined-name claim.A chemical-patent claim consisting only of the name of the new material. • A coined-name claim is allowed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office only on the rare occasion when the name is established in the field before the patent is applied for. The chemical composition, its physical properties, and the process for making it must still be disclosed in the specification.

dependent claim.A patent claim that refers to and further limits another claim or set of claims in the same patent application. — Also termed appendant claim. [Cases: Patents 165(5). C.J.S. Patents §§ 283, 287, 290, 293.]

design claim.The single claim allowed in an application for a design patent, incorporating by reference the drawing and other specifications. • The brief claim typically starts with “an ornamental design for” and ends with “as shown” or “as shown and described.” Cf. omnibus claim. [Cases: Patents 101(4).]

fingerprint claim.A chemical-patent claim that differentiates the material from prior art in terms of some physical feature, such as melting point or spectrum, rather than its chemical composition. • Fingerprint claims are allowed only when the chemical composition cannot be determined or cannot be distinguished from prior art.

generic claim.A claim that encompasses a class of elements, any of which could function as equivalents. • For a generic claim to be valid, the specific elements it encompasses must have a definable feature in common that makes them fit for the purpose. — Also termed genus claim. Cf. species claim.

improvement claim.See Jepson claim.

independent claim.A patent claim that does not refer to any other claim.

Jepson claim.An improvement-patent claim characterized by a preamble setting forth the current state of the art, followed by the phrase “the improvement comprising” and a description of the claimed patentable improvement. • The name comes from Ex parte Jepson, 1917 C.D. 62, 243 O.G. 526 (Ass't Comm'r Pat. 1917) in which this type of claim was first approved and sanctioned by the Commissioner of Patents. — Also termed improvement claim.

Markush claim.A patent claim that includes elements listing alternative chemicals, materials, or steps in a process. • A Markush claim typically has language such as “selected from the group consisting of.” The alternatives must all give the same result, rather than patentably distinct products. The name derives from Ex parte Markush, 1925 Dec. Comm'r Pat. 126. See MARKUSH DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents 101(7).]

means-combination claim.A type of claim in a patent application that includes multiple limitations, at least one of which is in means-plus-function or step-plus-function form. • Means-combination claims are acceptable to examiners. [Cases: Patents 101(10).]

means-plus-function claim.See MEANS-PLUS-FUNCTION CLAUSE.

method claim.A patent claim that describes what is done to a workpiece in order to achieve the useful result claimed. • A method claim is the same thing as a process claim, but “method” is used more often in applications for mechanical and electrical devices. [Cases: Patents 101(11).]

multiple-dependent claim.A dependent claim that refers to more than one other preceding claim.

nearly closed-ended claim.A patent claim that limits its scope to a list of elements but does not expressly exclude close analogues. The claim is typically introduced by a phrase such as “consisting essentially of.” Cf. closed-ended claim; open-ended claim.

new-use claim.A method claim for a new way of using an existing invention. [Cases: Patents 27(1).]

nonelected claim.A claim that has been withdrawn from consideration based on the examiner's finding that the application claims more than one invention. • The applicant must elect to prosecute one invention. Other claims may either be abandoned or else be prosecuted separately under a divisional application. See RESTRICTION(4).

nonstatutory claim. See omnibus claim.

omnibus claim. A claim in a patent application that does not distinctly narrate a means to carry out a function but rather refers to the drawings or description with phrases such as “as described and shown.” • Omnibus claims are rejected in the United States but are accepted elsewhere. — Also termed nonstatutory claim. Cf. design claim.

open-ended claim. A patent claim that contains a nonexclusive list of elements, typically introduced by the phrase “consisting of.” • A later patent applicant cannot avoid infringement by merely adding an analogue to the list. Cf. closed-ended claim; nearly closed-ended claim.

plant-patent claim. The single claim in a plant-patent application, describing the principal distinguishing characteristics of the plant.

process claim. A patent claim that describes by steps what is done to the subject matter, usu. a substance, in order to achieve a useful result. • A process claim is the same thing as a method claim, but “process” is used more often in applications for chemical patents. [Cases: Patents 101(11).]

product-by-process claim. A patent claim defining a product through the process by which it is made. • The product-by-process claim is most often used to define new chemical compounds, such as drugs. [Cases: Patents 101(11).]

product claim. A patent claim that covers the structure, apparatus, or composition of a product.

single-means claim. A type of claim in a patent application that indicates a process, result, or function but does not describe the method of reaching that end . • When no other method is obvious, such an assertion claims rights to all possible ways of achieving the result — ways not specified in the application and even ways that have not yet been invented. Single-means claims are rejected as too broad. — Also termed single-element means claim. Cf. MEANS-PLUS-FUNCTION CLAUSE. [Cases: Patents 101(8).]

species claim. A claim that is limited to a single apparatus, process, composition of matter, or article of manufacture, rather than to a range of similar and related items. Cf. generic claim.

Squires claim. A utility-patent claim that incorporates a drawing or table by reference. • This claim is allowed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office only if there is no practical way to define the invention in words, but the invention is simple to illustrate with the drawing or table. See SQUIRES DOCTRINE.

subcombination claim. A patent claim, usu. on a device, describing a subsystem of a larger combination. • A subcombination may be patented separately if it has its own utility.

PATENT COOPERATION TREATY

Patent Cooperation Treaty. A 1970 treaty that streamlined the process of securing patents in multiple countries by establishing a single filing date and providing for a single preliminary patent search. • An inventor who wants to qualify for patents from several member countries files a standard application in one country, thus preserving the priority date, then submits a PCT filing that designates which other countries' patents are being applied for. WIPO, the United Nations' World Intellectual Property Organization, administers the treaty. — Abbr. PCT. See international application under PATENT APPLICATION.

PATENT DANGER

patent danger. See apparent danger (1) under DANGER.

PATENT DEED

patent deed. See LETTERS PATENT(2).

PATENT DEFECT

patent defect. See DEFECT.

PATENT DISCLAIMER

patent disclaimer. See statutory disclaimer under DISCLAIMER.

PATENTEE

patentee (pat-<<schwa>>n-tee). One who either has been granted a patent or has succeeded in title to a patent. • Although it might seem helpful to distinguish a patentee as a person to whom a patent is issued and a patent-holder as the owner of a patent, including the original grantee's assigns, the Patent Act explicitly includes all title-holders under the term “patentee.” 35 USCA § 100(d). — Also termed patent-holder; patent-owner. [Cases: Patents 90, 117. C.J.S. Patents §§ 120–125, 209.]

PATENT-EXHAUSTION DOCTRINE

patent-exhaustion doctrine. Patents. The rule that the unconditioned sale of a patented article ends the patentee's monopoly right to control its use. • That control may still be exercised by limitations in a contract or license, as long as it does not amount to anticompetitive patent misuse. Adams v. Burke, 84 U.S. (17 Wall.) 453 (1874). See FIRST-SALE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents 191. C.J.S. Patents §§ 217, 314, 339.]

PATENT GRANT

patent grant. See PATENT(3).

PATENT-HOLDER

patent-holder. See PATENTEE.

PATENT INFRINGEMENT

patent infringement. See INFRINGEMENT.

PATENT INSURANCE

patent insurance. See INSURANCE.

PATENT MARKING

patent marking. The incorporation or affixation of a patent number to a patented article's surface or surrounding packaging. • Affixing the patent number to a product gives constructive notice of patent rights to infringers. Without the number in place, a patentee cannot recover losses that occur before the infringer has actual notice of the patent. See PATENT NUMBER. [Cases: Patents 222. C.J.S. Patents §§ 394–395.]

PATENT MEDICINE

patent medicine. A packaged drug that is protected by trademark and is available without prescription. [Cases: Health 302–305.]

PATENT-MISUSE DOCTRINE

patent-misuse doctrine. An equitable rule that a patentee should not be allowed to use a patent to effectively broaden the scope of the patentee's monopoly in restraint of trade or otherwise against the public interest. • Two common examples of anticompetitive broadening are (1) using a patent to restrain competition from an unpatented product or process, and (2) employing the patent beyond its life span to exclude others from gaining commercial advantages by using the product or process. The practical effect of finding patent misuse is the loss of patent protection. The doctrine operates independently of antitrust law but overlaps it in many ways and arose in the same era, at the turn of the 20th century. It has been described as an application of the equitable rule of “unclean hands.” See nonmetered license under LICENSE. [Cases: Monopolies 17.5(14); Patents 283(1). C.J.S. Monopolies § 135; Patents §§ 436–439.]

PATENT NUMBER

patent number. Patents. The number assigned by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to a patent. See PATENT MARKING.

PATENT OFFICE

Patent Office. See UNITED STATES PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE.

PATENT OFFICE REPORTS

Patent Office Reports. Hist. The former official publication of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • It was replaced in 1872 by the Official Gazette of the United States Patent and Trademark Office.

PATENT OF PRECEDENCE

patent of precedence. Hist. A royal grant to barristers that the Crown wished to honor by conferring such rank and precedence as assigned in the grant.

PATENTOR

patentor (pat-⟨schwa⟩n-t⟨schwa⟩r or pat-⟨schwa⟩n-tor). One who grants a patent.

PATENT-OWNER

patent-owner. See PATENTEE.

PATENT PENDING

patent pending. The designation given to an invention while the Patent and Trademark Office is processing the patent application. • No protection against infringement exists, however, unless an actual patent is granted. — Abbr. pat. pend. [Cases: Patents 104. C.J.S. Patents §§ 145–147, 149–151, 173–175.]

PATENT POOLING

patent pooling. The cross-licensing of patents among patentees. • Patent pooling does not violate antitrust laws unless it is done to suppress competition or control an industry. [Cases: Monopolies 12(15). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 129–135.]

PATENT-PROSECUTION PROCESS patent-prosecution process. See PROSECUTION(4).

PATENT RIGHT

patent-right dealer. A person who sells or brokers the sale of patent rights.

PATENT ROLL

Patent Roll. A list of the letters patent issued in the United Kingdom in any given year. • The first Patent Roll was issued in England in 1201. The Rolls were originally used to grant offices, lands, licenses, peerages, and pensions. In later centuries, the Patent Rolls included grants of patents for inventions.

PATENT SEARCH

patent search. 1. INFRINGEMENT SEARCH. 2. PATENTABILITY SEARCH. 3. VALIDITY SEARCH .

PATENT SOLICITOR

patent solicitor. See patent agent under AGENT(2).

PATENT SUPPRESSION

patent suppression. The deliberate nonuse of a patent, esp. in order to deny the public or competitors the benefit of the invention. • Patent suppression is a rich source of urban legend, such as the rumor of oil companies sitting on inventions that would greatly improve gas mileage, or pantyhose companies suppressing a patent on no-run nylon. But the stories are not always fictional: in 1942 Standard Oil admitted trying to delay the advancement of synthetic-rubber technology in order to protect its market in natural rubber.

PATENT TERM

patent term. The period during which a patent is in force. [Cases: Patents 131. C.J.S. Patents § 236.]

PATENT-TERM ADJUSTMENT

patent-term adjustment. A compulsory extension of the time a utility or plant patent remains in force, following administrative delays in prosecuting the application. • A provision of the American Inventors' Protection Act of 1999, the extension is available for new applications, continuation applications, and divisional applications filed since May 29, 2000. — Abbr. PTA. Cf. PATENT-TERM EXTENSION. [Cases: Patents 133. C.J.S. Patents §§ 234–235.]

PATENT-TERM EXTENSION

patent-term extension. A lengthening of the time a patent remains in force, given to compensate inventors for time lost because of administrative delays such as interferences, secrecy orders, or appeals. • The extension applies to utility and plant patents issued after June 7, 1995 and before May 29, 2000. Its maximum length is five years. Cf. PATENT-TERM ADJUSTMENT. [Cases: Patents 133. C.J.S. Patents §§ 234–235.]

PATENT-TERM GUARANTEE

patent-term guarantee. An inventor's statutory right to extend the term of a patent if the application was delayed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • The term can be extended up to five years if the application was delayed because of an interference proceeding or appellate review, or if the PTO missed a statutory deadline for certain steps in the prosecution, or failed to grant the patent within three years of the filing date. The guarantee took effect May 29, 2000. [Cases: Patents 133. C.J.S. Patents §§ 234–235.]

PATENT WATCH

patent watch. A system for continually monitoring published patent applications and granted patents in a particular scientific or technological field to detect or ensure against infringements.

PATENT WRIT

patent writ. See WRIT.

PATER

pater (pay-t<<schwa>>r), n. [Latin] Father.

PATERFAMILIAS

paterfamilias (pay-t<<schwa>>r-f<<schwa>>-mil-ee-<<schwa>>s or pah-t<<schwa>>r-), n. [Latin] Roman law. The male head of a family or household; the senior ascendant male; esp., one invested with potestas (power) over another. — Also termed homo sui juris. See patria potestas under POTESTAS.

PATERNAL

paternal,adj. Of, relating to, or coming from one's father <paternal property>. Cf. MATERNAL.

PATERNALISM

paternalism,n. A government's policy or practice of taking responsibility for the individual affairs of its citizens, esp. by supplying their needs or regulating their conduct in a heavy-handed manner. — paternalistic,adj.

PATERNAL LINE

paternal line.See LINE.

PATERNAL-LINE DESCENT

paternal-line descent.See DESCENT.

PATERNAL PROPERTY

paternal property.See PROPERTY.

PATERNA PATERNIS

paterna paternis (p<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r-n<<schwa>> p<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r-nis). [Law Latin] Hist. Goods acquired through the father descend to those connected with him. • The phrase invoked the distinction between the succession of consanguinean half-brothers and uterine half-brothers. Cf. peers of fees. Hist. Vassals or tenants of the same lord who judged disputes arising out of fees.

PEINE FORTE ET DURE

peine forte et dure (pen for tay doororpayn fort ay dyoor). [French “strong and hard punishment”] Hist. The punishment of an alleged felon who refused to plead, consisting of pressing or crushing the person's body under heavy weights until the accused either pleaded or died.

“In all other felonies, however, the punishment of peine forte et dure was, until lately, denounced as the consequence of an obstinate silence. The greatest caution and deliberation were indeed to be exercised before it was resorted to; and the prisoner was not only to have ‘trina admonitio,’ but a respite of a few hours, and the sentence was to be distinctly read to him, that he might be fully aware of the penalty he was incurring.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 425–26 (2d ed. 1826).

“In old English law, a person charged with felony who, refusing to accept jury trial, was pressed to death (peine forte et dure), was not regarded as committing suicide, so that he did not forfeit his property.” Glanville Williams, The Sanctity of Life and the Criminal Law 270 n.4 (1957).

PELL

pell. See CLERK OF THE PELLs.

PELLEX

pellex (pel-eks), n.[Latin] Roman law. A concubine.

PENAL

penal (pee-n<<schwa>>l), adj. Of, relating to, or being a penalty or punishment, esp. for a crime.

“The general rule is that penal statutes are to be construed strictly. By the word ‘penal’ in this connection is meant not only such statutes as in terms impose a fine, or corporal punishment, or forfeiture as a consequence of violating laws, but also all acts which impose by way of punishment damages beyond compensation for the benefit of the injured party, or which impose any special burden, or take away or impair any privilege or right.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 344 (3d ed. 1914).

“The word penal connotes some form of punishment imposed on an individual by the authority of the state. Where the primary purpose of a statute is expressly enforceable by fine, imprisonment, or similar punishment the statute is always construed as penal.” 3 Norman J. Singer, Sutherland Statutes and Statutory Construction § 59.01, at 113 (5th ed. 2001).

PENAL ACTION

penal action. See ACTION(4).

PENAL BILL

PENAL STATUTE

penal statute.See STATUTE.

PENAL SUM

penal sum.The monetary amount specified as a penalty in a penal bond. See penal bond under BOND(2).

PENALTY

penalty. 1. Punishment imposed on a wrongdoer, usu. in the form of imprisonment or fine; esp., a sum of money exacted as punishment for either a wrong to the state or a civil wrong (as distinguished from compensation for the injured party's loss). • Though usu. for crimes, penalties are also sometimes imposed for civil wrongs. [Cases: Penalties 1. C.J.S. Penalties §§ 2–4.]

civil penalty. A fine assessed for a violation of a statute or regulation < the EPA levied a civil penalty of $10,000 on the manufacturer for exceeding its pollution limits>.

statutory penalty. A penalty imposed for a statutory violation; esp., a penalty imposing automatic liability on a wrongdoer for violation of a statute's terms without reference to any actual damages suffered. [Cases: Penalties 1. C.J.S. Penalties §§ 2–4.]

2. An extra charge against a party who violates a contractual provision.

prepayment penalty. A charge assessed against a borrower who elects to pay off a loan before it is due. [Cases: Bills and Notes 429; Usury 61. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 100, 234–236, 238; Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit § 172.]

3. Excessive stipulated damages that a contract purports to impose on a party that breaches. • If the damages are excessive enough to be considered a penalty, a court will usu. not enforce that particular provision of the contract. Some contracts specify that a given sum of damages is intended “as liquidated damages and not as a penalty” — but even that language is not foolproof. [Cases: Damages 80. C.J.S. Damages §§ 185, 190–192.] “A penalty is a sum which a party ... agrees to pay or forfeit in the event of a breach, but which is fixed, not as a pre-estimate of probable actual damages, but as a punishment, the threat of which is designed to prevent the breach, or as security, where the sum is deposited or the covenant to pay is joined in by one or more sureties, to insure that the person injured shall collect his actual damages. Penalties ... are not recoverable or retainable as such by the person in whose favor they are framed” Charles T. McCormick, Handbook on the Law of Damages § 146, at 600 (1935).

4. PENALTY CLAUSE.

penalty clause. A contractual provision that assesses against a defaulting party an excessive monetary charge unrelated to actual harm. • Penalty clauses are generally unenforceable. — Often shortened to penalty. — Also termed penal clause. Cf. LIQUIDATED-DAMAGES CLAUSE; LIMITATION-OF-REMEDIES CLAUSE . [Cases: Damages 76, 80. C.J.S. Damages §§ 176, 185–187, 190–192, 194.]

“It not infrequently happens that contracts provide for what is to happen in the event of a breach by the parties, or by one of them. Such provisions may be perfectly simple attempts to avoid future disputes, and to quantify the probable amount of any loss. That is unobjectionable. But sometimes clauses of this kind are not designed to quantify the amount of the probable loss, but are designed to terrorize, or frighten, the party into performance. For example, a contract may provide that the promisor is to pay £5 on a certain event, but if he fails to do so, he must then pay £500. Now a clause of that kind is called a penalty clause by lawyers, and for several hundred years it has been the law that such promises cannot be enforced. The standard justification for the law here is that it is unfair and unconscionable to enforce clauses which are designed to act in terrorem." P.S. Atiyah, Promises, Morals, and Law 57–58 (1981).

PENALTY PHASE

penalty phase. The part of a criminal trial in which the fact-finder determines the punishment for a defendant who has been found guilty. — Also termed sentencing phase. Cf. GUILT PHASE.

PENALTY POINT

penalty point. A punishment levied for a traffic offense and accumulated on the driver's record.

- If a driver receives a statutorily set number of points, the driver's license may be restricted, suspended, or terminated.

PENANCE

penance. Eccles. law. A punishment assessed by an ecclesiastical court for some spiritual offense.

PEND

pend, vb. (Of a lawsuit) to be awaiting decision or settlement.

PENDENCY

pendency (pen-d<<schwa>>n-see), n. The state or condition of being pending or continuing undecided.

PENDENT-VENUE DOCTRINE

pendent-venue doctrine. The principle that once venue is established for a federal claim, proof of venue for additional federal claims, cross-claims, and counterclaims is unnecessary.

PENDING

pending, adj. 1. Remaining undecided; awaiting decision . 2. Parliamentary law. (Of a motion) under consideration; moved by a member and stated by the chair as a question for the meeting's consideration. See CONSIDERATION(2); ON THE FLOOR. • A motion may be immediately pending, meaning that it is directly under consideration, being the last motion stated by the chair and next in line for a vote; or it may be pending subject to other motions of higher rank that have taken precedence over it. See immediately pending motion, pending motion under MOTION(2).

pending, prep. 1. Throughout the continuance of; during <in escrow pending arbitration>. 2. While awaiting; until <the injunction was in force pending trial>.

PENDING MOTION

pending motion. See MOTION(2).

PENDING-ORDINANCE DOCTRINE pending-ordinance doctrine. The principle that a municipality may properly deny an application for a property use that, although it would satisfy existing law, would violate a law that is pending when the application is made. • This doctrine was judicially created, mainly to short-circuit landowners' attempts to circumvent a new ordinance by applying for a nonconforming use on the eve of its approval. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 376. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 71, 199.]

penetration, n. 1. Criminal law. The entry of the penis or some other part of the body or a foreign object into the vagina or other bodily orifice. • This is the typical meaning today in statutes defining sexual offenses. — Also termed intromission. See RAPE(1). 2. The depth reached by a bullet or other projectile in something against which the projectile is fired. 3. The act of piercing or passing something into or through a body or object. — penetrate, vb.

PENETRATION PRICING penetration pricing. Pricing of a new product below its anticipated market price to enter a market, discourage competition, and recover the initial investment.

PENITENTIARY

penitentiary (pen-<<schwa>>-ten-sh<<schwa>>-ree), n. A correctional facility or other place of long-term confinement for convicted criminals; PRISON. [Cases: Prisons 1. C.J.S. Prisons and Rights of Prisoners §§ 2–3.] — penitentiary, adj.

PENITENTIARY MISDEMEANOR penitentiary misdemeanor. See serious misdemeanor under MISDEMEANOR.

PENNOYER<TT> RULE

Pennoyer rule (p*<<schwa>>-noy-<<schwa>>r*). The principle that a court may not issue a personal judgment against a defendant over which it has no personal jurisdiction. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714 (1877). [Cases: Judgment 16. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 18, 546.]

PENNSYLVANIA<TT> RULE

Pennsylvania rule. Torts. The principle that a tortfeasor who violates a statute in the process of causing an injury has the burden of showing that the violation did not cause the injury. The Pennsylvania, 86 U.S. (19 Wall.) 125, 136 (1874). [Cases: Collision 123; Shipping 86(2.3). C.J.S. Collision §§ 211–220.]

PENNY STOCK

penny stock. See STOCK.

PENOLOGY

penology (pee-nol-<<schwa>>-jee), n. The study of penal institutions, crime prevention, and the punishment and rehabilitation of criminals, including the art of fitting the right treatment to an offender. Cf. CRIMINOLOGY. — penological (pee-n*<<schwa>>-loj-i-k<<schwa>>l*), adj. — penologist (pee-nol-<<schwa>>-jist), n.

PEN REGISTER

pen register. A mechanical device that logs dialed telephone numbers by monitoring electrical impulses. • Because a pen register does not record the telephone conversation, it does not constitute a Fourth Amendment search requiring a warrant (though it does need a court order). Some states, however, do consider the use of a pen register invasive enough to require a search warrant. Cf. WIRETAPPING. [Cases: Telecommunications 521.C.J.S. Telegraphs, Telephones, Radio, and Television §§ 247, 264, 298, 313.]

PENSIO

pensio (pen-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Roman & civil law. A payment for the use of a thing, such as rent for the use of another's house.

PENSION

pension. A fixed sum paid regularly to a person (or to the person's beneficiaries), esp. by an employer as a retirement benefit. Cf. ANNUITY (3). [Cases: Pensions 2, 24–27. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 7, 16–17, 19.]

vested pension. A pension in which an employee (or employee's estate) has rights to benefits purchased with the employer's contributions to the plan, even if the employee is no longer employed by this employer at the time of retirement. • The vesting of qualified pension plans is governed by ERISA. See EMPLOYEE RETIREMENT INCOME SECURITY ACT. [Cases: Pensions 62. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 73, 78–81, 83.]

PENSION AND WELFARE BENEFITS ADMINISTRATION

Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Labor responsible for regulating employee pension plans under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) and for enforcing the Act through its field offices. — Abbr. PWBA.

PENSION BENEFIT GUARANTY CORPORATION

Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation. A self-financing federal corporation that guarantees payment of pension benefits in covered benefit pension plans. — Abbr. PBGC. [Cases: Pensions 90. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 115–120, 123, 131.]

PENSIONER

pensioner. A recipient or beneficiary of a pension plan. [Cases: Pensions 2, 21. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits § 7.]

PENSION PLAN

pension plan. 1. Under ERISA, any plan, fund, or program established or maintained by an employer or an employee organization that provides retirement income to employees or results in a deferral of income by employees extending to the termination of employment or beyond. 29 USCA § 1002(2)(A). [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.] 2. Under the Internal Revenue Code, an employer's plan established and maintained primarily to provide systematically for the payment of definitely determinable benefits to employees over a period of years, usu. for life, after retirement. See EMPLOYEE RETIREMENT INCOME SECURITY ACT. Cf. EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

contributory pension plan.A pension plan in which both the employer and the employee contribute. [Cases: Pensions 101–107. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 53–68, 121–129.]

defined-contribution pension plan.See defined-contribution plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

defined pension plan.A pension plan in which the employer promises specific benefits to each employee. — Also termed fixed-benefit plan. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

noncontributory pension plan.A pension plan contributed to only by the employer. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

nonqualified pension plan.A deferred-compensation plan in which an executive increases retirement benefits by annual additional contributions to the company's basic plan. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

qualified pension plan.A pension plan that complies with federal law (ERISA) and thus allows the employee to receive tax benefits for contributions and tax-deferred investment growth. — Often shortened to qualified plan. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

top-hat pension plan.An unfunded pension plan that is maintained by an employer primarily for the purpose of providing deferred compensation for a select group of managers or highly paid employees. • Top-hat plans are generally not subject to the broad remedial provisions of ERISA because Congress recognized that certain individuals, by virtue of position or compensation level, can substantially influence the design or operation of their deferred-compensation plans. — Often shortened to top-hat plan. [Cases: Pensions 24.1, 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

PENSION TRUST

pension trust.See TRUST.

PENTAGON FORCE PROTECTION AGENCY

Pentagon Force Protection Agency.A unit in the U.S. Department of Defense responsible for operating the Pentagon police force and providing basic law enforcement and security for the Pentagon and other military installations in the Washington, D.C. area. • The Agency was formed after the Pentagon was attacked on September 11, 2001. — Abbr. PFPA.

PENUMBRA

penumbra (pi-n<<schwa>>m-br<<schwa>>), n. A surrounding area or periphery of uncertain extent. • In constitutional law, the Supreme Court has ruled that the specific guarantees in the Bill of Rights have penumbras containing implied rights, esp. the right of privacy. Pl. penumbras, penumbrae (pi-n<<schwa>>m-bree). — penumbral (pi-n<<schwa>>m-br<<schwa>>l), adj.

“Problems of fringe meaning are sometimes spoken of as ‘problems of the penumbra’, the point being that, in the case of a great many words, there is no doubt about the hard core of their meanings, but different views may well be taken on the question whether the words are applicable to things or situations outside that hard core.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 57 (1976).

PENURIA PERITORUM

penuria peritorum (p<<schwa>>-nyoor-ee-<<schwa>> per-i-tor-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. A scarcity of (legally) skilled men. • The phrase appeared in reference to the grantor's lack of proper assistance in preparing and executing a conveyance.

PENURIA TESTIUM

penuria testium (p<<schwa>>-nyoor-ee-<<schwa>> tes-tee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. A scarcity of witnesses.

“The disqualifications formerly attaching to witnesses, and especially that of relationship, were sometimes disregarded in occult or private facts, where there must, from the nature of the case, be a scarcity of unexceptionable witnesses It was not enough in this sense, to constitute a penuria testium, to prove that the other evidence was scanty and defective; it had to be shown farther that the penuria was necessarily occasioned by the very nature of the question at issue.” William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 798 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

PEONAGE

peonage (pee-<<schwa>>-nij), n. Illegal and involuntary servitude in satisfaction of a debt. [Cases: Slaves 24. C.J.S. Peonage §§ 3–5.] — peon,n.

“Peonage, which is a term descriptive of a condition that existed in Spanish America, and especially in Mexico, and in the territory of New Mexico, and which may be defined as the status or condition of compulsory service based upon the indebtedness of the peon to the master, the basic fact being the indebtedness, is abolished and prohibited by an act of Congress which further declares that any statute, resolution, regulation, ordinance, or usage of any territory or state designed or operating to establish, maintain, or enforce, directly or indirectly, the voluntary or involuntary service or labor of any persons as peons, in liquidation of any debt or obligation, or otherwise, shall be null and void [42 USCA § 1994].” 45 Am. Jur. 2d Involuntary Servitude and Peonage § 10, at 935–36 (1969).

PEOPLE

people. (usu. cap.) The citizens of a state as represented by the prosecution in a criminal case <People v. Snyder>.

PEOPLE'S COURT

people's court. 1. A court in which individuals can resolve small disputes. See small-claims court under COURT. [Cases: Courts 174.1.] 2. In totalitarian countries, a group of nonlawyer citizens, often illiterate commoners, convened at the scene of a crime to pass judgment or impose punishment on the accused criminal. 3. (cap.) In Nazi Germany, a tribunal that dealt with political offenses.

PEPPERCORN

peppercorn. A small or insignificant thing or amount; nominal consideration < the contract was upheld despite involving mere peppercorn>. See nominal consideration under CONSIDERATION. [Cases: Contracts 54. C.J.S. Contracts § 87.]

PER

per (p<<schwa>>r), prep. 1. Through; by <the dissent, per Justice Thomas>.2. For each; for every <55 miles per hour>.3. In accordance with the terms of; according to <per the contract>.

PER AEQUIPOLLENS per aequipollens (p<<schwa>>r ee-kwi-pol-enz). [Latin] Hist. By an equivalent.

PER AES ET LIBRAM

per aes et libram (p<<schwa>>r ees et li-br<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. By bronze (or copper) and scales. • The phrase typically referred to the fictitious sale in a mancipation during which the purchaser struck the scales with a piece of bronze or copper and then gave it to the seller as a symbol of the price. See MANCIPATION.

PER ALIUM STETIT per alium stetit (p<<schwa>>r ay-lee-<<schwa>>m stet-it). [Latin] Hist. It was owing to (something done by) another.

P/E RATIO

P/E ratio.abbr.PRICE-EARNINGS RATIO.

PER AUTRE VIE

per autre vie.See PUR AUTRE VIE.

PER AVERSIONEM

per aversionem (p<<schwa>>r <<schwa>>-v<<schwa>>r-zhee-oh-n<<schwa>>m). [Latin “for a lump sum”] Roman & civil law. Of or relating to a sale in which goods are taken in bulk or land is bought by estimation of the number of acres. • This type of sale is so called because the buyer “turns away” from a careful scrutiny of the things purchased.

“It is a fundamental principle, pervading everywhere the doctrine of sales of chattels, that if the goods of different value be sold in bulk, and not separately, and for a single price, or per aversionem, in the language of the civilians, the sale is perfect, and the risk with the buyer; but if they be sold by number, weight, or measure, the sale is incomplete, and the risk continues with the seller, until the specific property be separated and identified.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *496 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

PER BOUCHE

per bouche (p<<schwa>>r boosh). [Law French] By the mouth; orally.

PER CAPITA

per capita (p<<schwa>>r kap-i-t<<schwa>>), adj.[Latin “by the head”] 1. Divided equally among all individuals, usu. in the same class <the court will distribute the property to the descendants on a per capita basis>. Cf. PER STIRPES . [Cases: Descent and Distribution 43; Wills 530.C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 27–28; Wills §§ 1015–1016.]

“Per capita means taking as an individual and not as a representative of an ancestor. Suppose the testator ... with three living children and three grandchildren who are the issue of a deceased son, had desired and had so stated in his will that his own children and the children of his deceased son should share equally in the estate. In that event the estate would be divided into six parts and each of the three children and each of the three grandchildren would receive an equal portion of the total estate — namely, one-sixth.” Gilbert Thomas Stephenson, Wills 30 (1934).

per capita with representation.Divided equally among all members of a class of takers, including those who have predeceased the testator, so that no family stocks are cut off by the prior death of a taker. • For example, if T (the testator) has three children — A, B, and C — and C has two children but predeceases T, C's children will still take C's share when T's estate is distributed.

2. Allocated to each person; possessed by each individual <the average annual per capita income has increased over the last two years>. — per capita,adv.

PER CAPITA TAX

per capita tax.See poll tax under TAX.

PERCENTAGE DEPLETION percentage depletion.Oil & gas. A method of allowing a taxpayer who owns an economic interest in a producing oil or gas well to deduct a specified percentage of the gross income from the well in lieu of depleting the actual basis. 23 USCA § 611. Cf. COST DEPLETION.

PERCENTAGE GAME

PER CURIAM

per curiam (p<<schwa>>r kyoor-ee-<<schwa>>m), adv. & adj.[Latin] By the court as a whole. [Cases: Courts 107. C.J.S. Courts §§ 165, 175; Criminal Law § 1665.]

per curiam,n. See per curiam opinion under OPINION(1).

PER CURIAM OPINION

per curiam opinion.See OPINION(1).

PER DIEM

per diem,adj. Based on or calculated by the day <per diem interest>.

per diem (p<<schwa>>r dI-<<schwa>>m orde-<<schwa>>m), adv.[Latin] By the day; for each day <reimbursed per diem>. Cf. IN DIEM.

per diem,n.1. A monetary daily allowance, usu. to cover expenses. 2. A daily fee.

PERDONATIO UTLAGARIAE

perdonatio utlagariae (p<<schwa>>r-d<<schwa>>-nay-shee-oh <<schwa>>t-l<<schwa>>-gair-ee-ee). [Law Latin “pardon of outlawry”] Hist. A pardon given to a person outlawed for failing to obey a court's summons. • A person who voluntarily surrendered was eligible for this type of pardon.

PERDUELLIO

perduellio (p<<schwa>>r-d[y]oo-el-ee-oh), n. [Latin “treason”] Roman law. The crime of hostility to one's native country; treasonous conduct, such as joining the enemy or deserting the battlefield. • This term corresponds to the English phrase high treason. In the Roman republic, several acts might constitute perduellio, such as assuming regal power; trying to subvert, by violence, the established form of government, esp. by fomenting internal rebellion; and promoting the designs of external foes. Perduellio was later absorbed into a broader category of crimes against the state, the crimen laesae majestatis. — Also termed (in English) perduellion (p<<schwa>>r-d [y]oo-el-y<<schwa>>n). See CRIMEN MAJESTATIS.

PERDURABLE

perdurable (p<<schwa>>r-d[y]uur-<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj. (Of an estate in land) lasting or enduring; durable; permanent.

PEREGRINUS

peregrinus (per-i-grI-n<<schwa>>s), n. Roman law. A free person who was not a Roman citizen; a free foreigner. Pl. peregrini.

PEREMPT

perempt (p<<schwa>>r-empt), vb.1.Civil law. To quash, do away with, or extinguish. 2.Slang. To exercise a peremptory challenge.

PEREMPTION

peremption (p<<schwa>>r-emp-sh<<schwa>>n), n. Civil law. A period of time fixed by statute for the existence of a right. • If the right is not exercised during this period, it is extinguished. Whereas prescription simply bars a specific remedy, peremption bars the action itself. Cf. PRESCRIPTION(1). See STATUTE OF REPOSE. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 1, 165. C.J.S. Limitations of Actions §§ 2–4, 10–11.]

PEREMPTORIA LITIS ET CAUSAE

peremptoria litis et causae (p<<schwa>>r-emp-tor-ee-<<schwa>> II-tis et kaw-zee). [Law Latin] Hist. Decisive of the suit and cause. • The phrase appeared in reference to peremptory defenses, to which there could be no reply.

PEREMPTORY

peremptory (p<<schwa>>r-emp-t<<schwa>>-ree), adj.1. Final; absolute; conclusive; incontrovertible <the king's peremptory order>.2. Not requiring any shown cause; arbitrary <peremptory challenges>.

PEREMPTORY WRIT

peremptory writ. See WRIT.

PER EUNDEM

per eundem (p<<schwa>>r ee-<<schwa>>n-d<<schwa>>m). [Latin] By the same. • This term often appears in the phrase per eundem in eadem (“by the same judge in the same case”).

PER EXPRESSUM

per expressum (p<<schwa>>r ek-spres-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. Expressly; explicitly.

PER FAS AUT NEFAS

per fas aut nefas (p<<schwa>>r fas awt nee-fas). [Latin] Hist. By lawful or unlawful means.

PERFECT

perfect (p<<schwa>>r-fekt), vb. To take all legal steps needed to complete, secure, or record (a claim, right, or interest); to provide necessary public notice in final conformity with the law <perfect a security interest> <perfect the title>. [Cases: Secured Transactions 81. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 3, 50–51, 53, 57, 62–64.]

PERFECT ATTESTATION CLAUSE perfect attestation clause. A testamentary provision asserting that all actions required to make a valid testamentary disposition have been performed. [Cases: Wills 113, 289, 302(5). C.J.S. Wills §§ 253–255, 582–588.]

PERFECT COMPETITION

perfect competition. See COMPETITION.

PERFECT DEFENSE

PERFECT DUTY

perfect duty. See DUTY(1).

PERFECTED SECURITY INTEREST perfected security interest. See SECURITY INTEREST.

PERFECT EQUITY

perfect equity. See EQUITY.

PERFECT GRANT

perfect grant. See GRANT.

PERFECTING AMENDMENT

perfecting amendment. See AMENDMENT(3).

PERFECT INSTRUMENT

perfect instrument. See INSTRUMENT(3).

PERFECTION

perfection. Validation of a security interest as against other creditors, usu. by filing a statement with some public office or by taking possession of the collateral. Cf. ATTACHMENT(4). [Cases: Secured Transactions 81–96, 138–145. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 3, 50–51, 53–77, 88, 90–102, 105–107, 118.]

automatic perfection. The self-operative perfection of a purchase-money security interest without filing or without possession of the collateral. • The security interest is perfected simply by the attachment of the security interest, without any additional steps. See purchase-money security interest under SECURITY INTEREST. [Cases: Secured Transactions 83, 146. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 10, 55, 103–105.]

temporary perfection. The continuous perfection of a security interest for a limited period. • For example, a security interest in proceeds from the original collateral is perfected for ten days after the debtor receives the proceeds; the interest will become unperfected after this ten-day period unless certain statutory requirements are met. On most instruments, a secured party who advances new value under a written security agreement obtains a 21-day perfection period, even if the secured party does not file a financing statement and the collateral remains with the debtor. UCC § 9-312. [Cases: Secured Transactions 135, 168. C.J.S. Secured Transactions §§ 52, 119–124.]

PERFECT OBLIGATION

perfect obligation. See OBLIGATION.

PERFECT OWNERSHIP

perfect ownership. See OWNERSHIP.

PERFECT RIGHT

perfect right. See RIGHT.

PERFECT SELF-DEFENSE

perfect self-defense. See SELF-DEFENSE.

PERFECT TENDER

perfect tender. See TENDER(2).

PERFECT-TENDER RULE

perfect-tender rule. Commercial law. The principle that a buyer may reject a seller's goods if the quality, quantity, or delivery of the goods fails to conform precisely to the contract. • Although the perfect-tender rule was adopted by the UCC (§ 2-601), other Code provisions — such as the seller's right to cure after rejection — have softened the rule's impact. Cf. SUBSTANTIAL-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Sales 177. C.J.S. Sales §§ 162, 189, 194, 197–198.]

“At common law, a buyer of goods possessed a legal right to insist upon ‘perfect tender’ by the seller. If the goods failed to conform exactly to the description in the contract — whether as to quality, quantity or manner of delivery — the buyer could reject the goods and rescind the contract, which meant that the parties would be returned to the positions they occupied before the contract was entered into.” Marvin A. Chirelstein, Concepts and Case Analysis in the Law of Contracts 112 (1990).

PERFECT TITLE

perfect title. See TITLE(2).

PER FELONIAM

per feloniam (p<<schwa>>r f<<schwa>>-loh-nee-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. With criminal intent.

PERFICERE SUSCEPTUM MUNUS perficere susceptum munus (p<<schwa>>r-fis-<<schwa>>r-ee s<<schwa>>-sep-t<<schwa>>m myoo-n<<schwa>>s). [Latin] Scots law. To perform the duties of an office undertaken. • One assuming an office could not then capriciously resign from the office. See REBUS INTEGRIS.

PERFIDY

perfidy (p<<schwa>>r-f<<schwa>>-dee). Int'l law. A combatant's conduct that creates the impression that an adversary is entitled to, or is obliged to accord, protection under international law, when in fact the conduct is a ruse to gain an advantage. • Acts of perfidy include feigning an intent to negotiate under a flag of truce, or feigning protected status by using signs, emblems, or uniforms of the United Nations or of a neutral country.

PER FORMAM DONI

per formam doni (p<<schwa>>r for-m<<schwa>>m doh-nl). [Law Latin] By the form of the gift; by the designation of the giver rather than by operation of law.

PERFORMANCE

performance, n.1. The successful completion of a contractual duty, usu. resulting in the performer's release from any past or future liability; EXECUTION(2). — Also termed full performance. Cf. NONPERFORMANCE; MISPERFORMANCE. [Cases: Contracts 275. C.J.S. Contracts § 502.]

defective performance. A performance that, whether partial or complete, does not fully comply with the contract. • One example is late performance. [Cases: Contracts 280(1), 302. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 561, 592.]

future performance. Performance in the future of an obligation that will become due under a contract.

misperformance. See MISPERFORMANCE.

nonperformance. See NONPERFORMANCE.

part performance. 1. The accomplishment of some but not all of one's contractual obligations. [Cases: Contracts 319. C.J.S. Contracts § 593.] 2. A party's execution, in reliance on an opposing party's oral promise, of enough of an oral contract's requirements that a court may hold the statute of frauds not to apply. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of 129.] 3. PART-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE.

specific performance. See SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

substantial performance. Performance of the primary, necessary terms of an agreement. See SUBSTANTIAL-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Contracts 293. C.J.S. Contracts § 589.]

vicarious performance. Performance carried by an employee, agent, or other nominee.

2. The equitable doctrine by which acts consistent with an intention to fulfill an obligation are construed to be in fulfillment of that obligation, even if the party was silent on the point. 3. A company's earnings. 4. The ability of a corporation to maintain or increase earnings.

PERFORMANCE BOND

performance bond. 1. A bond given by a surety to ensure the timely performance of a contract. • In major international agreements, performance bonds are typically issued by banks, but sometimes also by insurance companies. The face amount of the bond is typically 2% of the value of performance, but occasionally as much as 5%. [Cases: Principal and Surety 59–87; Public Contracts 45. C.J.S. Principal and Surety §§ 8, 70–94, 111, 120; Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 45.] 2. A third party's agreement to guarantee the completion of a construction contract upon the default of the general contractor. — Also termed completion bond; surety bond; contract bond. Cf. common-law bond under BOND (2).

nonoperative performance bond. A performance bond that is not currently in effect but is activated upon the issuance of the buyer's letter of credit or other approved financing.

operative performance bond. A performance bond that has been activated by the issuance of the buyer's letter of credit or other approved financing. [Cases: Public Contracts 45. C.J.S. Public Administrative Law and Procedure § 45.]

revolving performance bond. A performance bond that is in continuous effect for the duration of the contract, usu. plus an additional number of days (often 45).

up-front performance bond. A performance bond given before the issuance of the buyer's letter of credit or other financing.

PERFORMANCE BONUS

performance bonus. See BONUS.

PERFORMANCE CONTRACT

performance contract. See CONTRACT.

PERFORMANCE FUND

performance fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

PERFORMANCE PLAN

performance plan. A bonus compensation plan in which executives are paid according to the company's growth.

PERFORMANCE RIGHT performance right. A copyright holder's exclusive right to recite, play, act, show, or otherwise render the protected work publicly, whether directly or by technological means (as by broadcasting the work on television). • Every public performance of a copyrighted work requires authorization from the copyright owner or its representative, unless a statutory ephemeral-recording exemption applies. — Also termed public-performance right. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 36. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 10, 40–41, 97.]

PERFORMANCE SHARES

performance shares. Stock given to an executive when the corporation meets a performance objective.

PERFORMANCE SPECIFICATION performance specification. See STATEMENT OF WORK.

PERFORMANCE STOCK

performance stock. See glamour stock under STOCK.

PER FRAUDEM

per fraudem (p<<schwa>>r fraw-d<<schwa>>m), adv. [Latin] By fraud; fraudulently.

PERICULO PETENTIS

periculo petentis (p<<schwa>>-rik-y<<schwa>>-loh p<<schwa>>-ten-tis). [Latin] Hist. At the risk of the person seeking. • A private person was liable in damages for a judicial warrant wrongfully issued at that person's insistence.

“[A] creditor seeking a warrant for the apprehension of his debtor as in meditatione fugae, obtains it periculo petentis, and he, not the judge, will be liable in damages if the debtor can show that the obtaining of the warrant and the using of it were illegal.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 454 (4th ed. 1894).

PERICULOSUS

periculosus (p<<schwa>>r-ik-y<<schwa>>-loh-s<<schwa>>s), adj.[Latin] Dangerous; perilous.

PERICULUM

periculum (p<<schwa>>-rik-y<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin] Civil law. Peril; danger; risk. Pl. pericula.

PERIL

peril. 1. Exposure to the risk of injury, damage, or loss <the perils of litigation>.

inescapable peril.A danger that one cannot avoid without another's help. See LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence 530(1). C.J.S. Negligence §§ 281–290, 313, 318.]

2.Insurance. The cause of a risk of loss to person or property; esp., the cause of a risk such as fire, accident, theft, forgery, earthquake, flood, or illness <insured against all perils>. Cf. RISK(3). [Cases: Insurance 2219. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 434, 996–997, 1000, 1003, 1010, 1014.]

PERIL OF THE SEA

peril of the sea.An action of the elements at sea of such force as to overcome the strength of a well-founded ship and the normal precautions of good marine practice. • A peril of the sea may relieve a carrier from liability for the resulting losses. — Also termed danger of navigation; danger of river; marine peril; marine risk; (in regard to the Great Lakes) perils of the lakes; danger of the sea. [Cases: Insurance 2220; Shipping 120. C.J.S. Insurance § 998; Shipping §§ 276–277.]

“Of the marine perils, by far the most important are those ‘of the seas’. What is covered is not any loss that may happen on the sea, but fortuitous losses occurring through extraordinary action of the elements at sea, or any accident or mishap in navigation. By far the greatest number of claims for marine loss, and of the insurance problems connected with other topics treated in this book arise under this clause. Extraordinary action of the wind and waves is a sea peril. Collision, foundering, stranding, striking on rocks and icebergs, are all covered under these words. Even a swell from a passing ship may be a ‘peril of the sea’. On the other hand, ordinary wear and tear are not included under the coverage of this or any other phrase in the clause, nor are losses which are anticipatable as regular incidents of sea carriage in general or of navigation in a particular part of the world.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 2-9, at 72–73 (2d ed. 1975).

PERIMERE CAUSAM

perimere causam (p<<schwa>>-rim-<<schwa>>-ree kaw-z<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. To put an end to the cause. • The phrase appeared in reference to the legal effect of a peremptory defense. See peremptory defense under DEFENSE(1).

PERINATAL

perinatal (per-i-nayt-<<schwa>>l), adj. Of or relating to the period from about the 12th week of gestation through the 28th day of life. Cf. NEONATAL.

PER INCURIAM

per incuriam (p<<schwa>>r in-kyoor-ee-<<schwa>>m), adj. (Of a judicial decision) wrongly decided, usu. because the judge or judges were ill-informed about the applicable law.

“There is at least one exception to the rule of stare decisis. I refer to judgments rendered per incuriam. A judgment per incuriam is one which has been rendered inadvertently. Two examples come to mind: first, where the judge has forgotten to take account of a previous decision to which the doctrine of stare decisis applies. For all the care with which attorneys and judges may comb the case law, errare humanum est, and sometimes a judgment which clarifies a point to be settled is somehow not indexed, and is forgotten. It is in cases such as these that a judgment rendered in contradiction to a previous judgment that should have been considered binding, and in ignorance of that judgment, with no mention of it, must be deemed rendered per incuriam; thus, it has no authority... The same applies to judgments rendered in ignorance of legislation of which they should have taken account. For a judgment to be deemed per incuriam, that judgment must show that the legislation was not invoked.” Louis-Philippe Pigeon, Drafting and Interpreting Legislation 60 (1988).

“As a general rule the only cases in which decisions should be held to have been given per incuriam are those of decisions given in ignorance or forgetfulness of some inconsistent statutory provision or of some authority binding on the court concerned, so that in such cases some features of the decision or some step in the reasoning on which it is based is found on that account to be demonstrably wrong. This definition is not necessarily exhaustive, but cases not strictly within it which can properly be held to have been decided per incuriam, must in our judgment, consistently with the stare decisis rule which is an essential part of our law, be of the rarest occurrence.” Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 149 (4th ed. 1991).

PERINDE EST AC SI SCRIPTUM NON ESSET

perinde est ac si scriptum non esset (p<<schwa>>r-in-dee est ak sIskrip-t<< schwa>>m non es-et). [Latin] Scots law. It is the same as if it had not been written. • A deed that failed to convey the grantor's meaning adequately could not be supplemented by extrinsic evidence and would be void for uncertainty.

PER INFORTUNIUM

per infortunium (p<<schwa>>r in-for-t[y]oo-nee-<<schwa>>m), adj. or adv.[Latin] By misadventure. • At common law, when one person killed another per infortunium, a conviction and royal pardon were necessary even when there was no fault. See homicide per infortunium under HOMICIDE.

“It may seem strange to modern minds that for centuries it was a rule of our law that a man who killed another either by misadventure (per infortunium) or in reasonable self-defence (against an attack not itself felonious), although he did not commit a felony, must yet be held guilty of unlawful homicide and require the King's pardon if he were to escape punishment, and even if granted pardon would still be liable to suffer forfeiture of his property; and that he was exposed to claims for compensation from the family of the deceased." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 113 (16th ed. 1952).

PER INSIDIAS ET INDUSTRIAM per insidias et industriam (p<<schwa>>r in-sid-ee-<<schwa>>s et in-d<<schwa>>s-tree-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. By stratagem and on purpose; intentionally.

perishable-food-disparagement act. See AGRICULTURAL-DISPARAGEMENT LAW.

PERJURY

perjury (p<<schwa>>r-j<<schwa>>r-ee), n. The act or an instance of a person's deliberately making material false or misleading statements while under oath. — Also termed false swearing; false oath; (archaically) forswearing. [Cases: Perjury 1. C.J.S. Perjury §§ 2–3, 5–8, 21.] — perjure (p<<schwa>>r-j<<schwa>>r), vb. — perjured (p<<schwa>>r-j<<schwa>>rd), perjurious (p<<schwa>>r-juur-ee-<<schwa>>s), adj. — perjurer (p<<schwa>>r-j<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>r), n.

PERJURY-TRAP DOCTRINE perjury-trap doctrine. The principle that a perjury indictment against a person must be dismissed if the prosecution secures it by calling that person as a grand-jury witness in an effort to obtain evidence for a perjury charge, esp. when the person's testimony does not relate to issues material to the ongoing grand-jury investigation. [Cases: Perjury 10, 15. C.J.S. Perjury §§ 11, 21, 25–33.]

PER LEGEM TERRAE

per legem terrae (p<<schwa>>r lee-j<<schwa>>m ter-ee). [Law Latin] By the law of the land; by due process of law.

PERLMAN<TT> DOCTRINE

Perlman doctrine. The principle that a discovery order directed at a disinterested third party is immediately appealable on the theory that the third party will not risk contempt by refusing to comply. • The doctrine originated in Perlman v. United States, 247 U.S. 7, 13, 38 S.Ct. 417, 420 (1918). The Court reasoned that the third party's ability to protect his or her rights would be thwarted if the party could not appeal immediately.

PERMANENCY HEARING

permanency hearing. See HEARING.

PERMANENCY PLAN

permanency plan. A proposed written strategy for the eventual permanent placement of a child who has been removed from his or her parents. • A permanency plan, ideally, provides either for the child's safe return to one or both parents or for the child's adoption. If neither of these alternatives is possible, then the plan will provide for long-term foster care, relative care, or guardianship. Under the Adoption and Safe Families Act, long-term foster care is the choice of last resort. — Also termed permanent plan.

PERMANENCY-PLANNING HEARING permanency-planning hearing. See permanency hearing under HEARING.

permissive joinder. See JOINDER.

PERMISSIVE PRESUMPTION

permissive presumption. See PRESUMPTION.

PERMISSIVE STATUTE

permissive statute. See STATUTE.

PERMISSIVE SUBJECT OF BARGAINING permissive subject of bargaining. Labor law. An employment or collective-bargaining issue, other than a basic employment issue, that is not required to be the subject of collective bargaining but that cannot be implemented by management without union approval. • For example, altering the scope of the bargaining unit does not affect a term or condition of employment, so it is a permissive, instead of mandatory, subject of bargaining. Disagreement on a permissive subject of bargaining cannot be used as the basis for an impasse in negotiating a collective-bargaining agreement, unlike a mandatory subject of bargaining. — Often shortened to permissive subject. Cf. MANDATORY SUBJECT OF BARGAINING . [Cases: Labor Relations 178. C.J.S. Labor Relations § 155.]

PERMISSIVE TENANT

permissive tenant. See tenant at sufferance under TENANT.

PERMISSIVE USE

PER MODUM SIMPLICIS QUERELAE

per modum simplicis querelae (p<<schwa>>r moh-d<<schwa>>m sim-pli-sis kw<<schwa>>-ree-lee). [Law Latin] Scots law. By way of simple complaint. • Some actions could be brought by a complaint unaccompanied by formal summons.

PERMUTATIO

permutatio (p<<schwa>>r-myoo-tay-shee-oh), n.[Latin “exchange”] Roman law. An agreement for barter or exchange. • The agreement became binding as soon as one party had transferred ownership of his thing to the other. Pl. permutationes (p<<schwa>>r-myoo-tay-shee-oh-nee).

PERMUTATION

permutation.Civil law. Barter; exchange.

PER MY ET PER TOUT per my et per tout (p<<schwa>>r mee ay p<<schwa>>r too[t]). [Law French] By the half and by the whole. • This phrase described the estate held by joint tenants: by the half for purposes of survivorship, by the whole for purposes of alienation. Cf. PER TOUT ET NON PER MY. [Cases: Joint Tenancy 1.C.J.S. Estates § 19; Joint Tenancy §§ 2, 4, 7–9.]

PERNANCY

pernancy (p<<schwa>>r-n<<schwa>>n-see).Hist. A taking or reception, as of the profits of an estate.

PERNOR OF PROFITS

pernor of profits (p<<schwa>>r-n<<schwa>>r or -nor).Hist. A person who receives the profits of property; one who has the pernancy of the profits.

 PERPETUITIES, RULE AGAINST

perpetuities, rule against. See RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES.

PERPETUITY

perpetuity (p<<schwa>>r-p<<schwa>>-t[y]oo-<<schwa>>-tee). 1. The state of continuing forever. 2. Hist. An unbarrable entail. 3. Hist. An inalienable interest. 4. An interest that does not take effect or vest within the period prescribed by law. • In reference to the rule against perpetuities, only sense 4 is now current. See RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES. [Cases: Perpetuities 4. C.J.S. Perpetuities §§ 2, 12.]

“A perpetuity is a thing odious in law, and destructive of the Commonwealth; it would put a stop to commerce and prevent the circulation of the riches of the Kingdom, and therefore is not to be countenanced in equity. If in equity you could come nearer to a perpetuity than the rules of Common Law would admit, all men being desirous to continue their estates in their families, would settle their estates by way of trust; which might indeed make well for the jurisdiction of the court, but would be destructive of the commonwealth.” (1683) 1 Vern. 163 (per Lord North) (as quoted in George W. Keeton, English Law: The Judicial Contribution 118 (1974)).

PERPETUITY OF THE KING

perpetuity of the king or queen. A fiction of English law that for political purposes the king or queen is immortal; that is, a monarch dies, but the office is never vacant.

PER PROCURATIONEM

per procuracionem (p<<schwa>>r prok-y<<schwa>>-ray-shee-oh-n<<schwa>>m). [Latin] By proxy. — Abbr. per pro.; p. proc.; p. pro.; p.p. — Also termed per procuracionem.

PERP WALK

perp walk. Slang. The act of making a suspect in custody walk before an audience, esp. members of the media. • Perp is short for perpetrator.

PER QUAE SERVITIA

per quae servitia (p<<schwa>>r kwee s<<schwa>>r-vish-ee-<<schwa>>). [Latin “by which services”] Hist. A real action by which the grantee of a landed estate could compel the tenants of the grantor to attorn to him. • This action was abolished in the 19th century.

PERQUISITE

perquisite (p<<schwa>>r-kwi-zit). A privilege or benefit given in addition to one's salary or regular wages. — Often shortened to perk. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 99. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 275–277, 279–287, 310–312, 314–320.]

PERQUISITOR

perquisitor (p<<schwa>>r-kwiz-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r). [Latin “a seeker out”] Hist. A purchaser; esp., one who first acquires an estate by sale or gift.

PER QUOD

per quod (p<<schwa>>r kwod), adv. & adj.[Latin “whereby”] Requiring reference to additional facts; (of libel or slander) actionable only on allegation and proof of special damages. See actionable per quod under ACTIONABLE; libel per quod under LIBEL; slander per quod under SLANDER. [Cases: Libel and Slander 1, 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5–6, 10, 47, 198.]

PER QUOD CONSORTIUM AMISIT per quod consortium amisit (p<<schwa>>r kwod k<<schwa>>n-sor-shee-<<schwa>>m <<schwa>>-mI-zit). [Law Latin] Hist. Whereby he lost the company (of his wife). • This phrase was used in a trespass declaration to describe the loss suffered by a husband whose wife had been beaten or otherwise abused. [Cases: Husband and Wife 209(3).]

PER QUOD SERVITIUM AMISIT per quod servitium amisit (p<<schwa>>r kwod s<<schwa>>r-vish-ee-<<schwa>>m <<schwa>>-mI-zit). [Law Latin] Hist. Whereby he lost the services (of his servant). • This phrase was used in a trespass declaration to describe the loss suffered by a master whose servant had been injured by another. [Cases: Master and Servant 336; Monopolies 12(1.10). C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 256, 259; Monopolies §§ 47–52, 72, 78, 80–82, 105.]

PER RESCRIPTUM PRINCIPIS per rescriptum principis (p<<schwa>>r ri-skrip-t<<schwa>>m prin-si-pis). [Latin] Roman law. By the prince's rescript; by an imperial written reply to a petition.

PER SALTUM

per saltum (p<<schwa>>r sal-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. By a leap; without an intermediate step.

PER SE

per se (p<<schwa>>r say), adv. & adj.[Latin] 1. Of, in, or by itself; standing alone, without reference to additional facts. See actionable per se under ACTIONABLE; libel per se under LIBEL; slander per se under SLANDER. 2. As a matter of law.

PERSECUTIO

persecutio (p<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-kyoo-shee-oh), n.[Latin] Roman law. A lawsuit or civil claim under cognitio extraordinaria. Pl. persecutiones (p<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-kyoo-shee-oh-nee-z). See COGNITIO EXTRAORDINARIA.

PERSECUTION

persecution, n. Violent, cruel, and oppressive treatment directed toward a person or group of persons because of their race, religion, sexual orientation, politics, or other beliefs. See hate crime under CRIME. — persecute,vb.

PER SE DEADLY WEAPON

per se deadly weapon.See deadly weapon per se under WEAPON.

PERSEQUI

persequi (p<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-kwI), vb.[Latin] Roman law. To claim through a judicial proceeding.

PER SE RULE

per se rule.Antitrust. The judicial principle that a trade practice violates the Sherman Act simply if the practice is a restraint of trade, regardless of whether it actually harms anyone. See SHERMAN ANTITRUST ACT. Cf. RULE OF REASON .

PER SE VIOLATION

per se violation.Antitrust. A trade practice (such as price-fixing) that is considered inherently anticompetitive and injurious to the public without any need to determine whether it has actually injured market competition.

PERSISTENT PRICE DISCRIMINATION persistent price discrimination.See PRICE DISCRIMINATION.

PERSON

person. 1. A human being. — Also termed natural person.

absent person.Louisiana law. A person who has no representative in the state and whose whereabouts are not known and cannot be ascertained by diligent effort. La. Civ. Code art. 47.

adult disabled person.A child over the age of 18 for whom a parent continues to have a duty of support.

associated person.See ASSOCIATED PERSON.

disabled person.A person who has a mental or physical impairment. See DISABILITY.

disappeared person.See DISAPPEARED PERSON.

interested person.A person having a property right in or claim against a thing, such as a trust or decedent's estate. • The meaning may expand to include an entity, such as a business that is a creditor of a decedent. — Abbr. IP.

person in loco parentis (in loh-koh p<<schwa>>-ren-tis). A person who acts in place of a parent, either temporarily (as a schoolteacher does) or indefinitely (as a stepparent does); a person who has assumed the obligations of a parent without formally adopting the child. See IN LOCO PARENTIS. [Cases: Parent and Child 15. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 345–350, 357–358.]

person in need of supervision.See child in need of supervision under CHILD. — Abbr. PINS.

person of incidence. The person against whom a right is enforceable; a person who owes a legal duty. • The meaning may expand to include an entity, such as an insurance company.

person of inherence (in-heer-*<<schwa>>*nts). The person in whom a legal right is vested; the owner of a right. • The meaning may expand to include an entity.

person of interest. A person who is the subject of a police investigation but who has not been identified by investigators as being suspected of committing the crime itself.

person not deceased. A person who is either living or not yet born.

person of opposite sex sharing living quarters. See POSSLQ.

person with ordinary skill in the art. See PERSON WITH ORDINARY SKILL IN THE ART.

private person. 1. A person who does not hold public office or serve in the military. 2. Civil law. An entity such as a corporation or partnership that is governed by private law.

protected person. 1. A person for whom a conservator has been appointed or other protective order has been made. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 9.5, 17; Mental Health 104. C.J.S. Insane Persons § 111.] 2. Int'l law. A person who is protected by a rule of international law; esp., one who is in the hands of an occupying force during a conflict. • Protected persons are entitled to a standard of treatment (including a prohibition on coercion and corporal punishment) by the Geneva Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (1949). 3. English law. An inhabitant of a protectorate of the United Kingdom. • Though not a British subject, such a person is given diplomatic protection by the Crown.

2. The living body of a human being <contraband found on the smuggler's person>. 3. An entity (such as a corporation) that is recognized by law as having the rights and duties of a human being. • In this sense, the term includes partnerships and other associations, whether incorporated or unincorporated. "So far as legal theory is concerned, a person is any being whom the law regards as capable of rights and duties. Any being that is so capable is a person, whether a human being or not, and no being that is not so capable is a person, even though he be a man. Persons are the substances of which rights and duties are the attributes. It is only in this respect that persons possess juridical significance, and this is the exclusive point of view from which personality receives legal recognition." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 318 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

artificial person. An entity, such as a corporation, created by law and given certain legal rights and duties of a human being; a being, real or imaginary, who for the purpose of legal reasoning is treated more or less as a human being. • An entity is a person for purposes of the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses but is not a citizen for purposes of the Privileges and Immunities Clauses in Article IV, § 2, and in the Fourteenth Amendment. — Also termed fictitious person; juristic person; juridical person; legal person; moral person. Cf. LEGAL ENTITY. [Cases: Corporations 1.1(2). C.J.S. Corporations § 2.] control person. See CONTROL PERSON.

fictitious person. See artificial person.

private person. Civil law. See private person (2) under PERSON(1).

PERSONA

persona (p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] Roman law. A person; an individual human being.

persona designata (p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>> dez-ig-nay-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] A person considered as an individual (esp. in a legal action) rather than as a member of a class.

persona dignior (p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>> dig-nee-or). [Latin] Hist. The more worthy or respectable person; the more fitting person.

persona ficta (p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>> fik-t<<schwa>>). [Latin "false mask"] Hist. A fictional person, such as a corporation.

"But units other than individual men can be thought of as capable of acts, or of rights and liabilities: such are Corporations and even Hereditates Iacentes. Accordingly the way is clear to apply the name of person to these also. The mediaeval lawyers did so, but as they regarded Corporations as endowed with personality by a sort of creative act of the State, and received from the Roman lawyers the conception of the hereditas iacens as representing the persona of the deceased rather than as itself being a person, they called these things Personae Fictae, an expression not used by the Romans." W.W. Buckland, Elementary Principles of the Roman Private Law 16 (1912).

persona grata. See PERSONA GRATA.

persona illustris (p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>> i-l<<schwa>>s-tris). [Latin] Hist. A person of distinction.

persona miserabilis (p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>> miz-<<schwa>>-rab-<<schwa>>-lis). [Latin "a pitiable person"] Roman law. An unfortunate person, esp. because of age, illness, or status. • A persona miserabilis received certain privileges in litigation.

persona moralis (p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>> m<<schwa>>-ray-lis). [Latin] A collective entity that, by law or custom, is recognized as an artificial person (e.g., a church or corporation). See artificial person under PERSON(2).

persona nasciturus (p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>> nas-<<schwa>>-t[y]oor-<<schwa>>s or

-t[y]⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩r-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩s). [fr. Latin nascor “to be born”] Roman law. An unborn child. — Sometimes shortened to nasciturus.

persona non grata. See PERSONA NON GRATA.

persona praedilecta (p⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩r-soh-n⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩ pree-d⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-lek-t⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩). [Law Latin] Scots law. A preferred person.

“This phrase signifies one person who, among others appointed with him as colleagues in some office, enjoys the confidence and esteem of the person appointing, more than those appointed with him. Thus a testator not unfrequently appoints among his trustees one who shall be a sine qua non — that is, one whose concurrence and consent shall be indispensable to every act of administration under the trust. Such a trustee falls within the description of a persona praedilecta.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 456 (4th ed. 1894).

persona standi in iudicio. See PERSONA STANDI IN JUDICIO.

PERSONABLE

personable, adj. Having the status of a legal person (and thus the right to plead in court, enter into contracts, etc.) .

PERSON AGGRIEVED

PERSONALIS ACTIO

personalis actio (p<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-nay-lis ak-shee-oh). [Latin] Hist. A personal action; an action in personam.

PERSONALITER

personaliter (p<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-nay-l<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r), adv. [Latin] Personally; in person.

PERSONALITY

personality. 1. The legal status of one regarded by the law as a person; the legal conception by which the law regards a human being or an artificial entity as a person. — Also termed legal personality.

“Legal personality ... refers to the particular device by which the law creates or recognizes units to which it ascribes certain powers and capacities.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 393 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

2. Parliamentary law. (usu. pl.) An improper reference to a member by name or in his or her personal capacity. “No person in speaking, is to mention a member then present by his name; but to describe him by his seat in the house, or who spoke last, or on the other side of the question, nor to digress from the matter to fall upon the person, by speaking, reviling, nipping, or unmannerly words against a particular member. The consequences of a measure may be reprobated in strong terms; but to arraign the motives of those who propose or advocate it, is a personality, and against order.” Thomas Jefferson, A Manual of Parliamentary Practice 36–37 (1801) (citations omitted).

PERSONALITY THEORY

personality theory. Intellectual property. A rationalization of intellectual-property laws, esp. copyright, drawing on the philosophy of G.W.F. Hegel, holding that personal expression is a form of self-actualization that gives the creator inalienable moral rights in the creations. • As a way of analyzing intellectual-property rights, personality theory takes the point of view of the individual inventor, author, or artist rather than that of society as a whole. Cf. LOCKEAN LABOR THEORY; UTILITARIANISM.

PERSONAL JUDGMENT

personal judgment. See JUDGMENT.

PERSONAL JURISDICTION

personal jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

PERSONAL JUSTICE

personal justice. See JUSTICE(1).

PERSONAL KNOWLEDGE

personal knowledge. See KNOWLEDGE.

PERSONAL LAW

personal law. The law that governs a person's family matters, usu. regardless of where the person goes. • In common-law systems, personal law refers to the law of the person's domicile. In civil-law systems, it refers to the law of the individual's nationality (and so is sometimes called lex patriae). Cf. TERRITORIAL LAW.

“The idea of the personal law is based on the conception of man as a social being, so that those transactions of his daily life which affect him most closely in a personal sense, such as marriage, divorce, legitimacy, many kinds of capacity, and succession, may be governed universally by that system of law deemed most suitable and adequate for the purpose [A]lthough the law of the domicile is the chief criterion adopted by English courts for the personal law, it lies within the power of any man of full age and capacity to establish his domicile in any country he chooses, and thereby automatically to make the law of that country his personal law.” R.H. Graveson, Conflict of Laws 188 (7th ed. 1974).

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY AND WORK OPPORTUNITY RECONCILIATION ACT

Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act. A 1996 federal law that overhauled the welfare system, as well as requiring states to provide a means for collecting child support by (1) imposing liens on a child-support obligor's assets, and (2) facilitating income-withholding. • The Act did away with Aid to Families with Dependent Children in favor of Temporary Assistance to Needy Families. It also limited the length of time that persons could receive welfare and tied states' receipt of federal child-support funds to their implementing enhanced paternity-establishment services. — Abbr. PRWORA. — Also termed Welfare Reform Act. See AID TO FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN ; TEMPORARY ASSISTANCE TO NEEDY FAMILIES.

PERSONAL RIGHT

personal right. See RIGHT.

PERSONAL SECURITY

personal security. See SECURITY.

PERSONAL SERVICE

personal service. 1. Actual delivery of the notice or process to the person to whom it is directed. — Also termed actual service. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 413; Process 48, 64. C.J.S. Process §§ 26, 33, 42–44, 49.] 2. An act done personally by an individual. • In this sense, a personal service is an economic service involving either the intellectual or manual personal effort of an individual, as opposed to the salable product of the person's skill.

PERSONAL SERVITUDE

personal servitude. See SERVITUDE(2).

PERSONA NON GRATA

persona non grata (p<<schwa>>r-sohn-<<schwa>> non grah-d<<schwa>>), n. [Latin] An unwanted person; esp., a diplomat who is not acceptable to a host country. Pl. personae non gratae. Cf. PERSONA GRATA.

PERSONA PRAEDILECTA

persona praedilecta. See PERSONA.

PERSONA PROPOSITA

persona proposita. See PROPOSITUS.

PERSONA STANDI IN JUDICIO

persona standi in judicio (p<<schwa>>r-soh-n<<schwa>> stan-dI in joo-dish-ee-oh). [Law Latin] 1. Capacity of standing in judgment; the right to appear in court. 2. One with personal standing to vindicate a legal right.

“What persona standi is, may be more easily learned by considering the loss of it by civil death or outlawry But there are others besides outlaws who have no persona standi. A pupil cannot pursue or defend; that must be done by his tutor in his name. And companies, as such, have not a persona standi.... Persona standi applies to the status of the person, as qualified to pursue or defend in actions generally; title to pursue applies to particular actions, and requires, in addition to a persona standi, that the party have a proper legal interest in the particular action pursued or defended." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 800 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

PERSONATION

personation. See IMPERSONATION.

PERSON-ENDANGERING STATE OF MIND

person-endangering state of mind. An intent to kill, inflict great bodily injury, act in wanton disregard of an unreasonable risk, or perpetrate a dangerous felony. — Also termed man-endangering state of mind.

person of inherence. See PERSON(1).

PERSON OF INTEREST

person of interest. See PERSON(1).

PERSON OF OPPOSITE SEX SHARING LIVING QUARTERS

PERSON WITH ORDINARY SKILL IN THE ART

person with ordinary skill in the art. Patents. A fictional construct of the patent laws, denoting someone who has reasonably developed abilities in the field of the invention at issue. • The patent application must be clear and complete enough to teach a person skilled in the art how to make and use the invention without undue experimentation. [Cases: Patents 16(3).]

“The term ‘person skilled in the art ...’ has been interpreted to mean a person having ordinary or fair information in that particular line, not necessarily a person of high scientific attainments. The skill or knowledge to be imputed to such a person will vary with the complexity of the art to which the invention relates.” Archie R. McCrady, Patent Office Practice 61 (2d ed. 1946).

PER STIRPES

per stirpes (p<<schwa>>r st<<schwa>>r-pee-z), adv. & adj.[Latin “by roots or stocks”] Proportionately divided between beneficiaries according to their deceased ancestor's share. — Also termed in stirpes; per stirpem. Cf. PER CAPITA . [Cases: Descent and Distribution 43; Wills 530.C.J.S. Descent and Distribution §§ 27–28; Wills §§ 1015–1016.]

per tout et non per my (p<<schwa>>r too[t] ay non p<<schwa>>r mee). [Law French] By the whole and not by the half. • This phrase described the estate given to a husband and wife — both are seised of the entire estate. Cf. PER MY ET PER TOUT .

PERTURBATOR

perturbator (p<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>r-bay-t<<schwa>>r). [Law Latin] Hist. A person, esp. a man, who disturbs the peace. [Cases: Breach of the Peace 1. C.J.S. Breach of the Peace §§ 2–5.]

PERTURBATRIX

perturbatrix (p<<schwa>>r-t<<schwa>>r-bay-triks), n.[Law Latin] Hist. A woman who disturbs the peace.

PER UNIVERSITATEM

per universitatem (p<<schwa>>r yoo-n<<schwa>>-v<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-tay-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Civil law. By an aggregate or whole; as an entirety. • This term describes the acquisition of an entire estate, esp. of an entire inheritance by universal succession.

PER VENDITIONIS, DONATIONIS, CESSIONIS, VEL COMMUTATIONIS TITULUM per venditionis, donationis, cessionis, vel commutationis titulum (p<<schwa>>r ven-dish-ee-oh-nis, doh-nay-shee-oh-nis, sesh-ee-oh-nis, vel kom-y<<schwa>>-tay-shee-oh-nis tich-[y]<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. By the title of sale, donation, cession, or barter.

“Per venditionis, donationis, cessionis, vel commutationis titulum These terms were used in the older forms of conveyancing, to distinguish lands so acquired from lands acquired either by inheritance or feudal grant. They signify what is now known by the name of a singular title.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 452 (4th ed. 1894.).

PER VERBA DE FUTURO

PETITE POLICY

Petite policy. The Department of Justice rule forbidding a federal prosecution after a previous state or federal prosecution based on the same acts unless (1) the prosecution has been approved by the Assistant Attorney General, (2) there is a substantial federal interest supporting the prosecution, (3) the previous prosecution failed to vindicate the federal interest, and (4) there is sufficient evidence to sustain a conviction. United States Attorneys' Manual § 9-2.031 (Sept. 1997); Petite v. United States, 361 U.S. 529, 80 S.Ct. 450 (1960). [Cases: Criminal Law 29.C.J.S. Criminal Law § 14; Larceny §§ 53-54.]

“(‘Petite Policy’) The purpose of this policy is to vindicate substantial federal interests through appropriate federal prosecutions, to protect persons charged with criminal conduct from the burdens associated with multiple prosecutions and punishments for substantially the same act(s) or transaction(s), to promote efficient utilization of Department resources, and to promote coordination and cooperation between federal and state prosecutors.” United States Attorneys' Manual § 9-2.031 (Sept. 1997).

“In response to the Court's continuing sensitivity to the fairness implications of the multiple prosecution power, the Justice Department adopted the policy of refusing to bring a federal prosecution following a state prosecution except when necessary to advance compelling interests of federal law enforcement. The Petite policy was designed to limit the exercise of the power to bring successive prosecutions for the same offense to situations comporting with the rationale for the existence of that power. Although not constitutionally mandated, this Executive policy serves to protect interests which, but for the ‘dual sovereignty’ principle inherent in our federal system, would be embraced by the Double Jeopardy Clause. In light of the parallel purposes of the Government's Petite policy and the fundamental constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy, the federal courts should be receptive, not circumspect, when the Government seeks leave to implement that policy.” Rinaldi v. United States, 434 U.S. 22, 28-29, 98 S.Ct. 81, 85 (1977)(citation omitted).

PIEPOWDER COURT

piepowder court (pI-pow-d<<schwa>>r). Hist. In medieval England, a court having jurisdiction over a fair or market and presided over by the organizer's steward. • The name is a corruption of two French words (pied and poudre) meaning “dusty feet.” — Also termed court of piepowder. — Also spelled piepoudre; piedpoudre; pipowder; py-powder.

PIERCING THE CORPORATE VEIL

piercing the corporate veil. The judicial act of imposing personal liability on otherwise immune corporate officers, directors, and shareholders for the corporation's wrongful acts. — Also termed disregarding the corporate entity; veil-piercing. See CORPORATE VEIL. [Cases: Corporations 1.4(1). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 9, 13.]

“[C]ourts sometimes apply common law principles to ‘pierce the corporate veil’ and hold shareholders personally liable for corporate debts or obligations. Unfortunately, despite the enormous volume of litigation in this area, the case law fails to articulate any sensible rationale or policy that explains when corporate existence should be disregarded. Indeed, courts are remarkably prone to rely on labels or characterizations of relationships (such as ‘alter ego,’ ‘instrumentality,’ or ‘sham’) and the decisions offer little in the way of predictability or rational explanation of why enumerated factors should be decisive.” Barry R. Furrow et al., Health Law § 5-4, at 182 (2d ed. 2000).

PIERRINGER RELEASE

Pierringer release. A release agreement in which the plaintiff releases a codefendant but reserves the right to proceed against the other defendants. • Under this release, the plaintiff agrees to reduce the claim against the remaining defendants by the amount of consideration paid for the release. The term derives from Pierringer v. Hoyer, 124 N.W.2d 106 (Wis. 1963), in which the court ruled that a trial court could give immediate effect to a release as long as the plaintiff would satisfy any portion of a judgment against a nonsettling party in excess of that party's proportionate share of damages. So the trial court could enter judgment only for the nonsettlor's proportionate share of damages.

PIGEON DROP

pigeon drop. See JAMAICAN SWITCH.

finger pillory. Hist. Eccles. law. A miniature stock used to confine the fingers of a person who misbehaved during church services.

PILOT

pilot. 1. A person in control of an airplane. 2. Maritime law. A person in control of a vessel.

compulsory pilot. A ship pilot entitled by law to guide a ship for a particular purpose, such as piloting the ship into harbor. • The compulsory nature of the appointment relieves the vessel's owner of personal liability if the pilot causes a collision. Cf. voluntary pilot. [Cases: Pilots 7. C.J.S. Pilots of Vessels § 8.]

“The compulsory pilot presents a special problem. Statutes that impose a fine or imprisonment for the failure to take a pilot obviously create compulsory pilotage. Some statutes, however, allow the ship to refuse the pilot provided she pays his fee or half of it (‘half-pilotage’). The Supreme Court has indicated that it does not regard the tendering of this alternative as amounting to compulsion. It makes a difference, because it is pretty well settled that if the pilotage is ‘compulsory’ the respondeat superior nexus is broken, and the shipowner cannot be held personally liable for the fault of the pilot resulting in collision. The ship's liability in rem, however, is unaffected by the fact that the pilotage is compulsory. This is one of the more striking consequences of the endowment of the ship with a juristic personality independent of that of her owner.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 7-16, at 520–21 (2d ed. 1975).

voluntary pilot. A ship pilot who controls a ship with the permission of the vessel's owner. • The vessel's owner is personally liable for damage resulting from a collision caused by a voluntary pilot. Cf. compulsory pilot. [Cases: Pilots 7. C.J.S. Pilots of Vessels § 8.]

“If a vessel is in the hands of a harbor pilot at the time of the collision, the question arises whether the fault of the pilot is imputed to the vessel owner or operator. American law draws an unwarranted distinction between the 'voluntary pilot,' who is taken on voluntarily, and the 'compulsory pilot,' who is mandated by a statute or local regulation. The voluntary pilot is considered to be the same as any crew member, and his fault is fully attributable to the vessel owner. A compulsory pilot's fault, however, cannot be imputed to the shipowner personally; the doctrine of respondeat superior does not apply. At most, the vessel is liable in rem since the compulsory pilot's negligence is attributable to the ship. The distinction makes little sense in that it throws the loss upon potentially innocent parties and ignores the fact that the vessel owner commonly carries insurance against this liability. In any collision case, therefore, care should be taken to assert a maritime lien and to sue the vessel in rem if a compulsory pilot may be involved." Thomas J. Schoenbaum, Admiralty and Maritime Law § 1-31, at 450-51 (1987).

pilotage (pī-l<<schwa>>-tij). 1. The navigating of vessels; the business of navigating vessels. [Cases: Pilots 14. C.J.S. Pilots of Vessels § 9.] 2. Compensation that a pilot receives for navigating a vessel, esp. into and out of harbor or through a channel or passage. [Cases: Pilots 9.C.J.S. Pilots of Vessels §§ 12, 15.]

compulsory pilotage. A requirement, imposed by law in some jurisdictions, that vessels approaching or leaving a harbor must take on a licensed pilot to guide the vessel into or out of the harbor. [Cases: Pilots 7. C.J.S. Pilots of Vessels § 8.]

half-pilotage. Compensation equaling half the value of services that a pilot has offered to perform. • Shipowners can avoid compulsory pilotage in some jurisdictions by payment of half-pilotage. [Cases: Pilots 11. C.J.S. Pilots of Vessels § 14.]

pimp, n. A person who solicits customers for a prostitute, usu. in return for a share of the prostitute's earnings. See PANDERING(1). Cf. BAWD. [Cases: Prostitution 1. C.J.S. Prostitution and Related Offenses §§ 2-4, 8-13, 17, 21-24.] — pimp, vb. — pimping, n.

air piracy.The crime of using force or threat to seize control of an aircraft; the hijacking of an aircraft, esp. one in flight. — Also termed aircraft piracy. [Cases: Aviation 16. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace §§ 284–285, 287.]

3. The unauthorized and illegal reproduction or distribution of materials protected by copyright, patent, or trademark law. See INFRINGEMENT. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 53; Patents 226; Trade Regulation 332. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 10, 41, 61, 73; Patents §§ 400, 404, 406–407; Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 72.] — pirate,vb. — piratical (pI-rat-<<schwa>>-k<< schwa>>l), adj. — pirate,n.“[T]he test of piracy [is] not whether the identical language, the same words, are used, but whether the substance of the production is unlawfully appropriated.” Eaton S. Drone, A Treatise on the Law of Property in Intellectual Productions 97 (1879).

“[I]n some countries the problem is what might be called the ‘cycle of piracy’ — legitimate copyright owners refuse to sell in the country because of the piracy problem, which means that the only way the public can obtain the goods it wants is to turn to piracy. This in turn only strengthens the resolve of copyright owners not to do business in the country.” Intellectual Property in the New Technological Age 514 (Robert P. Merges et al. eds., 1997).

video piracy.The illegal copying and sale or rental of copyrighted motion pictures.

PIRATE RECORDING

pirate recording.Copyright. PLAGIARISM

plagiarism. The deliberate and knowing presentation of another person's original ideas or creative expressions as one's own. • Generally, plagiarism is immoral but not illegal. If the expression's creator gives unrestricted permission for its use and the user claims the expression as original, the user commits plagiarism but does not violate copyright laws. If the original expression is copied without permission, the plagiarist may violate copyright laws, even if credit goes to the creator. And if the plagiarism results in material gain, it may be deemed a passing-off activity that violates the Lanham Act. Cf. INFRINGEMENT. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 53(1).] — plagiarize (play-j<<schwa>>-rIz), vb. — plagiarist (play-j<<schwa>>-rist), n.

“Plagiarism, which many people commonly think has to do with copyright, is not in fact a legal doctrine. True plagiarism is an ethical, not a legal, offense and is enforceable by academic authorities, not courts. Plagiarism occurs when someone — a hurried student, a neglectful professor, an unscrupulous writer — falsely claims someone else's words, whether copyrighted or not, as his own. Of course, if the plagiarized work is protected by copyright, the unauthorized reproduction is also a copyright infringement.” Paul Goldstein, Copyright's Highway 12 (1994).

“That the supporting evidence for the accusation of plagiarism may on occasion be elusive, insufficient, or uncertain, is not the same as thinking that the definition of plagiarism is uncertain. The gray areas may remain resistant to adjudication without being resistant to definition. It may be perfectly clear what constitutes plagiarism (‘using the work of another with an intent to deceive’) without its being clear that what faces us is truly a case of this.” Christopher Ricks, “Plagiarism,” in 97 Proceedings of the British Academy 149, 151 (1998).

PLAGIARIUS

plagiarius (play-jee-air-ee-<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin] Roman law. A kidnapper.

PLAGIUM

plagium (play-jee-<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin] Roman law. The act of kidnapping, esp. a slave or child, which included harboring another's slave. — Also termed crimen plagii.

PLAIDEUR

plaideur (play- or ple-d<<schwa>>r), n.[Law French “pleader”] Archaic. An attorney at law; an advocate.

PLAIDOYER

plaidoyer (ple-dwah-yay), n.[French] Hist. An advocate's plea.

PLAIN BOND

plain bond. See DEBENTURE(3).

PLAIN ERROR

plain error. See ERROR(2).

PLAIN-FEEL DOCTRINE

plain-feel doctrine. Criminal procedure. The principle that a police officer, while conducting a legal pat-down search, may seize any contraband that the officer can immediately and clearly identify, by touch but not by manipulation, as being illegal or incriminating. — Also termed plain-touch doctrine. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 47.1. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 66–67, 71–72.]

PLAIN-LANGUAGE LAW

plain-language law. Legislation requiring nontechnical, readily comprehensible language in consumer contracts such as residential leases or insurance policies. • Many of these laws have genuinely simplified the needlessly obscure language in which consumer contracts have traditionally been couched. [Cases: Consumer Protection 6; Insurance 1773. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 29–31, 33–39, 60–65; Insurance § 300.]

PLAIN-LANGUAGE MOVEMENT

plain-language movement. 1. The loosely organized campaign to encourage legal writers and business writers to write clearly and concisely — without legalese — while preserving accuracy and precision. 2. The body of persons involved in this campaign.

PLAIN MEANING

plain meaning. See MEANING.

PLAIN-MEANING RULE

plain-meaning rule. 1. The rule that if a writing, or a provision in a writing, appears to be unambiguous on its face, its meaning must be determined from the writing itself without resort to any extrinsic evidence. • Though often applied, this rule is often condemned as simplistic because the meaning of words varies with the verbal context and the surrounding circumstances, not to mention the linguistic ability of the users and readers (including judges). See PAROL EVIDENCE RULE. Cf. GOLDEN RULE; MISCHIEF RULE; EQUITY-OF-THE STATUTE RULE E. [Cases: Contracts 143, 152; Statutes 188.C.J.S. Contracts §§ 302, 307, 318–322, 327, 331; Statutes §§ 321, 324–326, 330, 334.]

“On its positive side, the plain meaning rule states a tautology: Words should be read as saying what they say. The rule tells us to respect meaning but it does so without disclosing what the specific meaning is. At best, it reaffirms the preeminence of the statute over materials extrinsic to it. In its negative aspect, on the other hand, the rule has sometimes been used to read ineptly expressed language out of its proper context, in violation of established principles of meaning and communication. To this extent it is an impediment to interpretation.” Reed Dickerson, The Interpretation and Application of Statutes 229 (1975).

2. ORDINARY-MEANING RULE.

PLAIN-SIGHT RULE

plain-sight rule. See PLAIN-VIEW DOCTRINE.

PLAINT

plaint. 1. Archaic. A complaint, esp. one filed in a replevin action. See COMPLAINT(1). 2. Civil law. A complaint or petition, esp. one intended to set aside an allegedly invalid testament.

PLAINTIFF

plaintiff. The party who brings a civil suit in a court of law. — Abbr. pltf. Cf. DEFENDANT.

use plaintiff. See USE PLAINTIFF.

PLAINTIFF IN ERROR

plaintiff in error. Archaic. 1. APPELLANT. 2. PETITIONER.

PLAINTIFF'S-VIEWPOINT RULE

plaintiff's-viewpoint rule. The principle that courts should measure the amount in controversy in a case by analyzing only the amount of damages claimed by the plaintiff. [Cases: Courts 167; Federal Courts 339.]

PLAIN-TOUCH DOCTRINE

plain-touch doctrine. See PLAIN-FEEL DOCTRINE.

PLAIN-VANILLA SWAP

plain-vanilla swap. See INTEREST-RATE SWAP.

PLAIN-VIEW DOCTRINE

plain-view doctrine. Criminal procedure. The rule permitting a police officer's warrantless seizure and use as evidence of an item seen in plain view from a lawful position or during a legal search when the officer has probable cause to believe that the item is evidence of a crime. — Also termed clear-view doctrine; plain-sight rule. Cf. OPEN-FIELDS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Controlled Substances 106, 115, 131; Searches and Seizures 47. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 66–67, 71–72.]

PLAM

PLAM. See price-level-adjusted mortgage under MORTGAGE.

PLAN

plan, n. 1. BANKRUPTCY PLAN. 2. EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

PLANNED OBSOLESCENCE planned obsolescence. See OBSOLESCENCE.

PLANNED-UNIT DEVELOPMENT planned-unit development. A land area zoned for a single-community subdivision with flexible restrictions on residential, commercial, and public uses. — Abbr. PUD. Cf. RESIDENTIAL CLUSTER. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 245. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 101.]

“A PUD is primarily an alternative to traditional zoning since it provides a mixing of uses. The location and identification of the permitted uses are provided on the PUD map or plat, which closely resembles a subdivision plat. Development approval is generally granted for the PUD at one time rather than on a lot by lot basis and in that way closely tracks the subdivision approval process.” Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer & Thomas E. Roberts, Land Use Planning and Development Regulation Law § 7.15, at 288 (2003).

PLANNING BOARD

planning board. A local government body responsible for approving or rejecting proposed building projects. • In most jurisdictions, the planning board's decisions are subject to the review of the city council. — Also termed planning commission. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 351.]

C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 97, 177, 181–183, 185.]

plan of rehabilitation. See BANKRUPTCY PLAN.

PLAN OF REORGANIZATION

plan of reorganization. See BANKRUPTCY PLAN.

PLAN-OF-THE-CONVENTION DOCTRINE plan-of-the-convention doctrine. The principle that each U.S. state, by ratifying the U.S. Constitution, has consented to the possibility of being sued by each of the other states, and has no immunity from such a suit under the 11th Amendment. [Cases: Federal Courts 273.]

PLANT PATENT

plant patent. See PATENT(3).

PLANT PATENT ACT

Plant Patent Act. Patents. The 1930 federal law that extended patent protection for developing “any distinct and new” varieties of asexually reproducing plants. • Before passage of the Act, plant patents were rejected because the subject matter was considered naturally occurring and therefore unpatentable. 35 USCA §§ 161–164. — Abbr. PPA.

PLANT-PATENT CLAIM

plant-patent claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

PLANT VARIETY PROTECTION ACT

Plant Variety Protection Act. Patents. The 1970 federal law that extended patent-like protection for developing new and distinct varieties of seed-producing plants. • A Certificate of Plant Variety Protection gives the holder exclusive rights to sell, reproduce, and develop further hybrids from a plant. 7 USCA §§ 2321–2582. — Abbr. PVPA. [Cases: Patents 14. C.J.S. Patents § 22.]

PLAT

plat. 1. A small piece of land; PLOT(1). 2. A map describing a piece of land and its features, such as boundaries, lots, roads, and easements. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 245. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 101.]

PLATFORM

platform. A statement of principles and policies adopted by a political party as the basis of the party's appeal for public support. [Cases: Elections 121(1). C.J.S. Elections §§ 84–85, 87–88.]

PLATFORM COMMITTEE

platform committee. See COMMITTEE.

PLAT MAP

plat map. A document that gives the legal descriptions of pieces of real property by lot, street, and block number. • A plat map is usu. drawn after the property has been described by some other means, such as a government survey. Once a plat map is prepared, property descriptions are defined by referring to the appropriate map.

PLEA

plea, n. 1. An accused person's formal response of "guilty," "not guilty," or "no contest" to a criminal charge. — Also termed criminal plea. [Cases: Criminal Law 267–275. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 365–378, 384–408, 410–418.]

Alford plea. See ALFORD PLEA.

blind plea. A guilty plea made without the promise of a concession from either the judge or the prosecutor. Cf. negotiated plea.

conditional plea. A plea of guilty or nolo contendere entered with the court's approval and the government's consent, the defendant reserving the right to appeal any adverse determinations on one or more pretrial motions. • If an appeal is successful, the plea is withdrawn and a new one entered. Fed. R. Crim. P. 11(a)(2).

guilty plea. An accused person's formal admission in court of having committed the charged offense. • A guilty plea is usu. part of a plea bargain. It must be made voluntarily, and only after the accused has been informed of and understands his or her rights. A guilty plea ordinarily has the same effect as a guilty verdict and conviction after a trial on the merits. [Cases: Criminal Law 272–274. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 365–374, 384–397, 400–407, 410.]

insanity plea. See INSANITY DEFENSE.

negotiated plea. The plea agreed to by a criminal defendant and the prosecutor in a plea bargain. See PLEA BARGAIN. Cf. blind plea. [Cases: Criminal Law 273.1(2). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 365–374.]

no-contest plea. See NO CONTEST.

nolo plea. A plea by which the defendant does not contest or admit guilt. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 11(b); NOLO CONTENDERE.

not-guilty plea. An accused person's formal denial in court of having committed the charged offense. • The prosecution must then prove all elements of the charged offense beyond a reasonable doubt if the defendant is to be convicted. [Cases: Criminal Law 299. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 378.]

provident plea. Military law. A plea that is entered knowingly, intelligently, and consciously, and is legally and factually consistent and accurate.

2. At common law, the defendant's responsive pleading in a civil action. Cf. DECLARATION(7). [Cases: Pleading 76–100, 101–111. C.J.S. Abatement and Revival §§ 2–3, 5, 9, 11–12, 16; Pleading §§ 159–162, 164, 166, 168–182, 202, 764, 769.] 3. A factual allegation offered in a case; a pleading. See DEMURRER.

affirmative plea. See pure plea.

anomalous plea. An equitable plea consisting in both affirmative and negative matter. • That is, it is partly confession and avoidance and partly traverse. The plea is appropriate when the plaintiff, in the bill, has anticipated the plea, and the defendant then traverses the anticipatory matters. — Also termed plea not pure. Cf. pure plea.

common plea. 1. A common-law plea in a civil action as opposed to a criminal prosecution. — Also termed common cause; common suit. 2. Hist. A plea made by a commoner.

“By ‘common pleas’ Magna Carta meant no more than ordinary pleas between commoners.” Alan Harding, A Social History of English Law 51 (1966).

dilatory plea (dil-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A plea that does not challenge the merits of a case but that seeks to delay or defeat the action on procedural grounds. [Cases: Pleading 101–111.49. C.J.S. Abatement and Revival §§ 2–3, 5, 9, 11–12, 16; Pleading §§ 179–182.]

“Dilatory pleas are those which do not answer the general right of the plaintiff, either by denial or in confession and avoidance, but assert matter tending to defeat the particular action by resisting the plaintiff’s present right of recovery. They may be divided into two main classes: (1) Pleas to the jurisdiction and venue. (2) Pleas in abatement. A minor class, sometimes recognized, is pleas in suspension of the action.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 220, at 382 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

double plea. A plea consisting in two or more distinct grounds of complaint or defense for the same issue. Cf. alternative pleading under PLEADING(2); DUPLICITY(2).

general plea. See general denial under DENIAL.

issuable plea. A plea on the merits presenting a complaint to the court. Cf. issuable defense under DEFENSE(1). jurisdictional plea. A plea asserting that the court lacks jurisdiction either over the defendant or over the subject matter of the case. — Also termed plea to the jurisdiction. [Cases: Pleading 104. C.J.S. Pleading § 179.]

negative plea. A plea that traverses some material fact or facts stated in the bill. — Also termed plea to the action.

nonissuable plea. A plea on which a court ruling will not decide the case on the merits, such as a plea in abatement.

peremptory plea. A plea that responds to the merits of the plaintiff’s claim.

plea in abatement. A plea that objects to the place, time, or method of asserting the plaintiff’s claim but does not dispute the claim’s merits. • A defendant who successfully asserts a plea in abatement leaves the claim open for continuation in the current action or reassertion in a later action if the defect is cured. — Also termed abater. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 740; Pleading 106. C.J.S. Pleading § 180.]

plea in bar. See PLEA IN BAR.

plea in confession and avoidance. See CONFESSION AND AVOIDANCE.

plea in discharge. A plea alleging that the defendant has previously satisfied and discharged the plaintiff's claim.

plea in equity. A special defense relying on one or more reasons why the suit should be dismissed, delayed, or barred. • The various kinds are (1) pleas to the jurisdiction, (2) pleas to the person, (3) pleas to the form of the bill, and (4) pleas in bar of the bill. Pleas in equity generally fall into two classes: pure pleas and anomalous pleas.

plea in estoppel. Common-law pleading. A plea that neither confesses nor avoids but rather pleads a previous inconsistent act, allegation, or denial on the part of the adverse party to preclude that party from maintaining an action or defense.

plea in reconvention. Civil law. A plea that sets up a new matter, not as a defense, but as a cross-complaint, setoff, or counterclaim. [Cases: Pleading 143. C.J.S. Pleading § 200.]

plea in suspension. A plea that shows some ground for not proceeding in the suit at the present time and prays that the proceedings be stayed until that ground is removed, such as a party's being a minor or the plaintiff's being an alien enemy. [Cases: Pleading 105.]

plea not pure. See anomalous plea.

plea of confession and avoidance. See CONFESSION AND AVOIDANCE.

plea of privilege. A plea that raises an objection to the venue of an action. See CHANGE OF VENUE. [Cases: Venue 58. C.J.S. Venue §§ 224, 227, 231.]

plea of release. A plea that admits the claim but sets forth a written discharge executed by a party authorized to release the claim. See RELEASE(2).

plea puis darrein continuance (pwis dar-ayn k<<schwa>>n-tin-yoo-<<schwa>>nts). [Law French “plea since the last continuance”] A plea that alleges new defensive matter that has arisen during a continuance of the case and that did not exist at the time of the defendant's last pleading. [Cases: Pleading 272.]

plea to further maintenance to the action. Hist. A defensive plea asserting that events occurring after the commencement of the action necessitate its dismissal. • The plea is obsolete because of the pleading requirements in federal and state rules of civil procedure.

plea to the action. See negative plea.

plea to the declaration. A plea in abatement that objects to the declaration and applies immediately to it. — Also termed plea to the count.

plea to the jurisdiction. See jurisdictional plea.

plea to the person of the defendant. A plea in abatement alleging that the defendant has a legal disability to be sued.

plea to the person of the plaintiff. A plea in abatement alleging that the plaintiff has a legal disability to sue.

plea to the writ. A plea in abatement that objects to the writ (summons) and applies (1) to the form of the writ for a matter either apparent on the writ's face or outside the writ, or (2) to the way in which the writ was executed or acted on.

pure plea. An equitable plea that affirmatively alleges new matters that are outside the bill. • If proved, the effect is to end the controversy by dismissing, delaying, or barring the suit. A pure plea must track the allegations of the bill, not evade it or mistake its purpose. Originally, this was the only plea known in equity. — Also termed affirmative plea. Cf. anomalous plea.

rolled-up plea. Defamation. A defendant's plea claiming that the statements complained of are factual and that, to the extent that they consist of comment, they are fair comment on a matter of public interest. See FAIR COMMENT. [Cases: Libel and Slander 48(1), 93, 94. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 91–92, 96, 98, 102–104, 150–151.]

special plea. A plea alleging one or more new facts rather than merely disputing the legal grounds of the action or charge. • All pleas other than general issues are special pleas. See general issue under ISSUE(1).

PLEA BARGAIN

plea bargain, n. A negotiated agreement between a prosecutor and a criminal defendant whereby the defendant pleads guilty to a lesser offense or to one of multiple charges in exchange for some concession by the prosecutor, usu. a more lenient sentence or a dismissal of the other charges. — Also termed plea agreement; negotiated plea; sentence bargain. [Cases: Criminal Law 273.1(2). C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 365–374.] — plea-bargain, vb. — plea-bargaining, n.

charge bargain. A plea bargain in which a prosecutor agrees to drop some of the counts or reduce the charge to a less serious offense in exchange for a plea of either guilty or no contest from the defendant.

sentence bargain. A plea bargain in which a prosecutor agrees to recommend a lighter sentence in exchange for a plea of either guilty or no contest from the defendant.

PLEAD

plead, vb. 1. To make a specific plea, esp. in response to a criminal charge < he pleaded not guilty>. [Cases: Criminal Law 267. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 375.] 2. To assert or allege in a pleading <fraud claims must be pleaded with particularity>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 621; Pleading 1. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 2–3, 6–7, 593.] 3. To file or deliver a pleading <the plaintiff hasn't pleaded yet>.

PLEADER

pleader. 1. A party who asserts a particular pleading. 2. A person who pleads in court on behalf of another. 3.Hist. At common law, a person who (though not an attorney) specialized in preparing pleadings for others. — Also termed special pleader. 4.Hist. NARRATOR.

PLEADING

pleading.n.1. A formal document in which a party to a legal proceeding (esp. a civil lawsuit) sets forth or responds to allegations, claims, denials, or defenses. • In federal civil procedure, the main pleadings are the plaintiff's complaint and the defendant's answer. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 621; Pleading 1. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 2–3, 6–7, 593.]

accusatory pleading.An indictment, information, or complaint by which the government begins a criminal prosecution.

amended pleading.A pleading that replaces an earlier pleading and that contains matters omitted from or not known at the time of the earlier pleading. Cf. supplemental pleading. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 821–852.1; Pleading 229–271. C.J.S. Architects § 42; Pleading §§ 323–455.]

“An amendment is the correction of an error or the supplying of an omission in the process or pleadings. An amended pleading differs from a supplemental pleading in that the true function of the latter is to spread upon the record matter material to the issue which has arisen subsequent to the filing of a pleading, while matter of amendment purely is matter that might well have been pleaded at the time the pleading sought to be amended was filed, but which through error or inadvertence was omitted or misstated. It has been declared that the allowance of amendments is incidental to the exercise of all judicial power and is indispensable to the ends of justice.” Eugene A. Jones, Manual of Equity Pleading and Practice 68 (1916).

anomalous pleading.A pleading that is partly affirmative and partly negative in its allegations.

argumentative pleading.A pleading that states allegations rather than facts, and thus forces the court to infer or hunt for supporting facts. • Conclusory statements in court papers are a form of argumentative pleading. — Also termed inferential pleading.

articulated pleading.A pleading that states each allegation in a separately numbered paragraph. [Cases: Pleading 52. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 148–151.]

defective pleading.A pleading that fails to meet minimum standards of sufficiency or accuracy in form or substance.

hypothetical pleading.A pleading asserting that if a certain fact is true, then a certain result must follow. • Hypothetical pleadings are generally improper.

inferential pleading.See argumentative pleading.

pleading to the merits.A responsive pleading that addresses the plaintiff's cause of action, in whole or in part.

responsive pleading. A pleading that replies to an opponent's earlier pleading. See ANSWER. [Cases: Pleading 76. C.J.S. Pleading § 159.]

sham pleading. An obviously frivolous or absurd pleading that is made only for purposes of vexation or delay. — Also termed sham plea; false plea; (archaically) deceitful plea. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1139; Pleading 359, 362(3). C.J.S. Pleading §§ 652–655, 680.]

shotgun pleading. A pleading that encompasses a wide range of contentions, usu. supported by vague factual allegations.

supplemental pleading. A pleading that either corrects a defect in an earlier pleading or addresses facts arising since the earlier pleading was filed. • Unlike an amended pleading, a supplemental pleading merely adds to the earlier pleading and does not replace it. Cf. amended pleading. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 861–871; Pleading 273. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 456–460.]

2. A system of defining and narrowing the issues in a lawsuit whereby the parties file formal documents alleging their respective positions.

alternative pleading. A form of pleading whereby the pleader alleges two or more independent claims or defenses that are not necessarily consistent with each other, such as alleging both intentional infliction of emotional distress and negligent infliction of emotional distress based on the same conduct. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(e)(2). — Also termed pleading in the alternative. Cf. DUPLICITY(2); double plea under PLEA(3). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 675; Pleading 50, 52. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 147–151.]

artful pleading. A plaintiff's disguised phrasing of a federal claim as solely a state-law claim in order to prevent a defendant from removing the case from state court to federal court. [Cases: Removal of Cases 25(1). C.J.S. Removal of Causes §§ 30, 34–37, 44, 65.]

code pleading. A procedural system requiring that the pleader allege merely the facts of the case giving rise to the claim, not the legal conclusions necessary to sustain the claim. — Also termed fact pleading. Cf. issue pleading. [Cases: Pleading 8, 48. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 16, 116–124, 132–133.]

common-law pleading. The system of pleading historically used in the three common-law courts of England (the King's Bench, the Common Pleas, and the Exchequer) up to 1873.

equity pleading. The system of pleading used in courts of equity. • In most jurisdictions, rules unique to equity practice have been largely supplanted by rules of court, esp. where law courts and equity courts have merged. [Cases: Equity 128–335.]

fact pleading. See code pleading.

issue pleading. The common-law method of pleading, the main purpose of which was to frame an issue. Cf. code pleading. [Cases: Pleading 1, 16, 48. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 2–3, 6–7, 9, 116–124, 132–133, 162, 164, 593.]

notice pleading. A procedural system requiring that the pleader give only a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief, and not a complete detailing of all the facts. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 673; Pleading 16, 48. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 9, 116–124, 132–133, 162, 164.]

pleading in the alternative. See alternative pleading.

special pleading. See SPECIAL PLEADING.

3. The legal rules regulating the statement of the plaintiff's claims and the defendant's defenses <today, pleading is a much simpler subject than it was in former years>.

PLEADING THE BABY ACT

pleading the baby act. See BABY ACT, PLEADING THE.

PLEAD (ONE'S) BELLY

plead (one's) belly. Hist. Slang. (Of a female defendant) to claim pregnancy as a defense, usu. to postpone or avoid a court's sentence of capital punishment or transportation. • A female defendant who pleaded that she was pregnant was treated with suspicion. The judge would appoint a jury of matrons (often consisting of 12 married mothers) to examine the claimant (under the writ de ventre inspiciendo). If the woman was declared to be “quick with child” (in an advanced state of pregnancy rather than “barely with child” or only newly or just possibly pregnant), she enjoyed a reprieve from execution or transportation until after the child's birth (or miscarriage). Because juries of matrons often declared barren defendants to be pregnant, a court would keep track of a reprieved woman to see if the delay was justified or if she should be made to suffer the sentence (“called down”) at the next session. Although the plea and the special jury are no longer in use, the prohibition against executing a pregnant woman persists in modern law. 18 USCA § 3596(b).

PLEAD OVER

plead over, vb. 1. To fail to notice a defective allegation in an opponent's pleading. [Cases: Pleading 406(3), 409(3). C.J.S. Pleading §§ 829–831.] 2. Hist. To plead the general issue after a defendant has had a dilatory plea overruled. See AIDER BY PLEADING OVER.

PLEA IN BAR

plea in bar. A plea that seeks to defeat the plaintiff's or prosecutor's action completely and permanently.

general plea in bar. A criminal defendant's plea of not guilty by which the defendant denies every fact and circumstance necessary to be convicted of the crime charged. [Cases: Criminal Law 299. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 378.]

special plea in bar. A plea that, rather than addressing the merits and denying the facts alleged, sets up some extrinsic fact showing why a criminal defendant cannot be tried for the offense charged. • Examples include the plea of autrefois acquit and the plea of pardon. [Cases: Criminal Law 286. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 380, 453.]

plebeian (pli-bee-<<schwa>>n), n. Roman law. A member of the Roman plebs; an ordinary citizen, not a member of the upper class (patricians).

PLEBISCITE

plebiscite (pleb-*<<schwa>>-s*It or pleb-<<schwa>>-sit), n.1. A binding or nonbinding referendum on a proposed law, constitutional amendment, or significant public issue. 2. Int'l law. A direct vote of a country's electorate to decide a question of public importance, such as union with another country or a proposed change to the constitution. — plebiscitary (pl<<schwa>>-bi-s<<schwa>>-ter-ee), adj.

PLEBISCITUM

plebiscitum (pleb-<<schwa>>-sI-t<<schwa>>m), n.[Latin] Roman law. An enactment passed at the request of a tribune by the assembly of the common people (the concilium plebis). Pl. plebiscita. See CONCILIUM PLEBIS.

PLEBS

plebs (plebz), n.[Latin] Roman law. The common people in ancient Rome; the general body of citizens, excluding the patricians. Pl. plebes (plee-beez).

PLEDGE

pledge, n. 1. A formal promise or undertaking. 2. The act of providing something as security for a debt or obligation. [Cases: Pledges 1.C.J.S. Pledges §§ 2–4, 6–10.] 3. A bailment or other deposit of personal property to a creditor as security for a debt or obligation; PAWN (2). See contract to pledge under CONTRACT. Cf. LIEN(1); PIGNUS(1). 4. The item of personal property so deposited; PAWN(1). 5. The thing so provided. — Formerly also termed safe-pledge. 6. A security interest in personal property represented by an indispensable instrument, the interest being created by a bailment or other deposit of personal property for the purpose of securing the payment of a debt or the performance of some other duty. 7. Hist. A person who acts as a surety for the prosecution of a lawsuit. • In early practice, pledges were listed at the end of the declaration. Over time the listing of pledges became a formality, and fictitious names (such as “John Doe” or “Richard Roe”) were allowed. — pledge, vb. — pledgeable, adj.

“A pledge is something more than a mere lien and something less than a mortgage.” Leonard A. Jones, A Treatise on the Law of Collateral Securities and Pledges § 2, at 4 (Edward M. White rev., 3d ed. 1912).

“A pledge is a bailment of personal property to secure an obligation of the bailor. If the purpose of the transaction is to transfer property for security only, then the courts will hold the transaction a pledge, even though in form it may be a sale or other out-and-out transfer.” Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 128, at 622 (2d ed. 1936).

“The pledge is as old as recorded history and is still in use, as the presence of pawnbrokers attests. In this transaction the debtor borrows money by physically transferring to a secured party the possession of the property to be used as security, and the property will be returned if the debt is repaid. Since the debtor does not retain the use of pledged goods, this security device has obvious disadvantages from the debtor's point of view.” Ray D. Henson, Secured Transactions § 3-1, at 17 (3d ed. 1983).

PLEDGED ACCOUNT

pledged account. See ACCOUNT.

PLEDGEE

PLUS PETERE TEMPORE

plus petere tempore (pl<<schwa>>s p<<schwa>>-tair-ay tem-p<<schwa>>-ree). [Latin “to overclaim in point of time”] Roman law. To claim before payment was due.

PLUS PETITIO

plus petitio (pl<<schwa>>s p<<schwa>>-tish-ee-oh). [Latin “overclaim” or “claiming too much”] Roman law. A claim for more than is due; esp., the mistake of claiming more in one's pleadings than is due. • This was fatal to the action under classical law. Under cognitio extraordinaria, however, a claimant could continue the action, but could be liable for treble damages to any person injured by the overstated claim. — Also spelled (erroneously) pluspetitio. — Also termed pluris petitio.

“A plaintiff may overclaim ... in substance (re) when he claims a bigger amount than is due to him; in time (tempore) when he claims before the payment is due; in place (loco), when he claims at a place (in a city) other than that where the payment had to be performed ... or in cause (causa) when he claims a certain thing although the debtor had the right to choose between two or more things.... After the abolition of the formula-regime the pluspetitio lost its actuality. Imperial legislation modified the severe provisions against overclaims.... In Justinian's law the plaintiff lost the case only if he maliciously persisted during the whole trial in his overclaim.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 633 (1953).

PLUS QUAM TOLERABILE

plus quam tolerabile (pl<<schwa>>s kwam tol-<<schwa>>-rab-<<schwa>>-lee). [Latin] Hist. More than can be endured. • The phrase appeared in reference to damage to crops from unavoidable causes (vis major).

POENAE SECUNDARUM NUPTIARUM

poenae secundarum nuptiarum (pee-nee sek-<<schwa>>n-dair-<<schwa>>m n<<schwa>>p-shee-air-<<schwa>>m). [Latin “penalties of second marriages”] Roman law. Disabilities that, for the protection of children of a first marriage, are imposed on a parent who remarries.

“If either parent re-married, the interests of the children of the first marriage were protected (in the later Roman Empire) by a number of legal rules the effect of which was to confer certain benefits on the children and to impose certain disabilities — the so-called poenae secundarum nuptiarum — on the parens binubus. The most important of these rules was that which declared that all the property which the parens binubus had acquired gratuitously from his or her deceased spouse, whether by way of gift, dos, donatio propter nuptias, or testamentary disposition — the so-called lucra nuptialia — should become ipso jure the property of the children of the first marriage at the moment of the conclusion of the second marriage, and that only a usufruct should be reserved for the parens binubus.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 477 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

POISON PILL

poison pill.A corporation's defense against an unwanted takeover bid whereby shareholders are granted the right to acquire equity or debt securities at a favorable price to increase the bidder's acquisition costs. — Often shortened to pill. See TAKEOVER DEFENSE. Cf. PORCUPINE PROVISION. [Cases: Corporations 310(1). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 475, 477–484, 487–489.]

“Another recent tactic is the ‘poison pill’ which is a conditional stock right that is triggered by a hostile takeover and makes the takeover prohibitively expensive. The poison pill is a variation of the scorched earth defense” Thomas Lee Hazen, The Law of Securities Regulation § 11.20, at 575 (2d ed. 1990).

POLAROID<TT> TEST

Polaroid test.Trademarks. A judicial test for trademark infringement, analyzing eight factors: (1) strength of the mark, (2) similarity between the marks, (3) proximity of the products' markets, (4) effects on market expansion (ability to “bridge the gap”), (5) actual confusion, (6) the defendant's good or bad faith, (7) quality of the products, and (8) sophistication of the buyer. Polaroid Corp. v. Polarad Electronics Corp., 287 F.2d 492, 495 (2d Cir. 1961). [Cases: Trade Regulation 334.1. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 87–89.]

Bigamy §§ 2–6, 8.] 2. Hist. The fact or practice of having more than one spouse during one's lifetime, though never simultaneously. • Until the third century, polygamy included remarriage after a spouse's death because a valid marriage bond was considered indissoluble. — Also termed successive polygamy; serial polygamy; sequential marriage. Cf. BIGAMY; MONOGAMY. — polygamous, adj. — polygamist, n.

“Polygamy (many marriages) is employed at times as a synonym of bigamy and at other times to indicate the simultaneous marriage of two or more spouses.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 458 (3d ed. 1982).

“[T]his one-marriage-at-a-time rule behind which the legal systems of the West have seemingly thrown so much weight is not what a sociologist would call a general prohibition of polygamy. Polygamy can be simultaneous (if more than one spouse is simultaneously present) or successive (if spouses are married one after the other). Only simultaneous polygamy is prohibited by the laws with which we are here concerned. These statutes reserve the use of the word polygamy for that kind which is not very common among us. They do not affect the serial form, which is so very popular in the United States and Western Europe that ... the law is fast changing to adapt to it." Mary Ann Glendon, The Transformation of Family Law 52 (1989).

POLYGARCHY

polygarchy. See POLYARCHY.

POLYGRAPH

polygraph, n. A device used to evaluate truthfulness by measuring and recording involuntary physiological changes in the human body during interrogation. • Polygraph results are inadmissible as evidence in most states but are commonly used by the police as an investigative tool. — Also termed lie detector. PONTIFF pontiff. 1. Roman law. A member of the council of priests in ancient Rome. — Also termed pontifex.

“The specialists who interpreted the Twelve Tables and the unwritten part of the law were called pontiffs. At first they dealt with both sacred law (how to appease the gods) and secular law (how to secure peace among men). Some of them later confined themselves to secular law. As an example of how they interpreted the law, the Twelve Tables said that if a father sells his son three times (into bondage, to pay off debts) the son is to be free from his father's power. The Twelve Tables said nothing about a daughter. The pontiffs held that if a father sold his daughter once, she was free.” Tony Honoré, About Law 13 (1995).

pedis possessio (pee-dis orped-is p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh). [Latin] A foothold; an actual possession of real property, implying either actual occupancy or enclosure or use. See PEDIS POSSESSIO DOCTRINE. — Also termed substantial possession; possessio pedis.

possessio bona fide (p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh boh-n<<schwa>> fl-dee). [Latin] Possession in good faith. Cf. possessio mala fide.

possessio bonorum (p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh b<<schwa>>-nor-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman law. Possession of goods.

possessio civilis (p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh s<<schwa>>-vI-lis). [Latin] Roman law. Legal possession; that is, possession accompanied by an intent to hold it as one's own. — Also termed possession in law. See possessory interdict under INTERDICT(1); USUCAPIO; possession in law under POSSESSION. Cf. possessio naturalis.

possessio corporis. See corporeal possession under POSSESSION.

possessio fictitia. See constructive possession under POSSESSION.

possessio fratris (p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh fray-tris orfra-tris). [Latin] Hist. The possession or seisin of a brother; that is, a possession of an estate by a brother that would entitle his full sister to succeed him as heir, to the exclusion of a half-brother.

possessio juris. See incorporeal possession under POSSESSION.

possessio mala fide (p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh mal-<<schwa>> fl-dee). [Latin] Possession in bad faith, as by a thief. Cf. possessio bona fide.

possessio naturalis (p<<schwa>>-zes[h]-ee-oh nach-<<schwa>>-ray-lis). [Latin “natural possession”] Roman law. The simple holding of a thing, often under a contract, with no intent of keeping it permanently. • This type of possession exists when the possessor's holding of the object is limited by a recognition of another person's outstanding right. The holder may be a usufructuary, a bailee, or a servant. — Also termed naturalis possessio; nuda detentio; detentio; possession in fact. See natural possession under POSSESSION. Cf. possessio civilis.

possessio pedis. See pedis possessio.

POSSESSION

possession. 1. The fact of having or holding property in one's power; the exercise of dominion over property. [Cases: Property 10. C.J.S. Property §§ 27–31, 33.] 2. The right under which one may exercise control over something to the exclusion of all others; the continuing exercise of a claim to the exclusive use of a material object. 3. Civil law. The detention or use of a physical thing with the intent to hold it as one's own. La. Civ. Code art. 3421(1). 4. (usu. pl.) Something that a person owns or controls; PROPERTY(2). Cf. OWNERSHIP; TITLE(1). 5. A territorial dominion of a state or nation.

“[A]s the name of Possession is ... one of the most important in our books, so it is one of the most ambiguous. Its legal senses (for they are several) overlap the popular sense, and even the popular sense includes the assumption of matters of fact which are not always easy to verify. In common speech a man is said to possess or to be in possession of anything of which he has the apparent control, or from the use of which he has the apparent power of excluding others.... [A]ny of the usual outward marks of ownership may suffice, in the absence of manifest power in some one else, to denote as having possession the person to whom they attach. Law takes this popular conception as a provisional groundwork, and builds up on it the notion of possession in a technical sense, as a definite legal relation to something capable of having an owner, which relation is distinct and separable both from real and from apparent ownership, though often concurrent with one or both of them.” Frederick Pollock & Robert Samuel Wright, An Essay on Possession in the Common Law 1–2 (1888).

“In the whole range of legal theory there is no conception more difficult than that of possession. The Roman lawyers brought their usual acumen to the analysis of it, and since their day the problem has formed the subject of a voluminous literature, while it still continues to tax the ingenuity of jurists. Nor is the question one of mere curiosity or scientific interest, for its practical importance is not less than its difficulty. The legal consequences which flow from the acquisition and loss of possession are many and serious. Possession, for example, is evidence of ownership; the possessor of a thing is presumed to be the owner of it, and may put all other claimants to proof of their title.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 285 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

actual possession. Physical occupancy or control over property. Cf. constructive possession. [Cases: Property 10. C.J.S. Property §§ 27–31, 33.]

adverse possession. See ADVERSE POSSESSION.

bona fide possession. Possession of property by a person who in good faith does not know that the property's ownership is disputed. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 220. C.J.S. Vendor and Purchaser §§ 482–485, 517.]

civil possession. 1. Civil law. Possession existing by virtue of a person's intent to own property even though the person no longer occupies or has physical control of it. 2. Louisiana law. The continuation of possession through the possessor's presumed intent to continue holding the thing as his or her own, after the possessor ceases to possess the thing corporeally. La. Civ. Code arts. 3431–3432. • Civil possession may be evidenced by such things as paying taxes on the property and granting rights of interest in it. [Cases: Property 10. C.J.S. Property §§ 27–31, 33.]

constructive possession. 1. Control or dominion over a property without actual possession or custody of it. — Also termed effective possession. [Cases: Property 10. C.J.S. Property §§ 27–31, 33.] 2. Civil law. Possession by operation of law of an entirety by virtue of corporeal possession of a part. • When a possessor holds title to a property and physically possesses part of it, the law will deem the possessor to hold constructive possession of the rest of the property described in the title. La. Civ. Code art. 3426. — Also termed possessio fictitia. Cf. actual possession.

corporeal possession. Possession of a material object, such as a farm or a coin. — Also termed natural possession; possessio corporis; (Ger.) Sachenbesitz. [Cases: Property 10. C.J.S. Property §§ 27–31, 33.]

criminal possession. The unlawful possession of certain prohibited articles, such as illegal drugs or drug paraphernalia, firearms, or stolen property.

derivative possession. Lawful possession by one (such as a tenant) who does not hold title.

direct possession. See immediate possession.

double possession. The doctrine that, in a bailment, both the bailor and the bailee have possession of the item that has been bailed. • This doctrine does not apply in most Anglo-American jurisdictions.

“It has been suggested that the essence of bailment is that the bailee secures possession and therefore that the bailor loses possession. This elementary proposition is sometimes obscured by the fact that some dicta treat the possession of the bailee as the possession of the bailor. The theoretical justification for this is the doctrine of ‘double possession’ — a principal may have possession through the possession of an agent. This view is in accord with some foreign systems, but it does not suit the basic principles of English law which treats possession as exclusive.” G.W. Paton, Bailment in the Common Law 6 (1952).

effective possession. See constructive possession.

exclusive possession. The exercise of exclusive dominion over property, including the use and benefit of the property.

hostile possession. Possession asserted against the claims of all others, esp. the record owner. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. [Cases: Adverse Possession 58–85. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 59–143, 145–148, 206–209, 263–264, 266–267, 269–274, 276–280, 282–288, 290, 292–293, 295–296, 298, 329–330, 333–338.]

immediate possession. Possession that is acquired or retained directly or personally. — Also termed direct possession.

immemorial possession. Possession that began so long ago that no one still living witnessed its beginning.

incorporeal possession. Possession of something other than a material object, such as an easement over a neighbor's land, or the access of light to the windows of a house. — Also termed possessio juris; quasi-possession.

“It is a question much debated whether incorporeal possession is in reality true possession at all. Some are of opinion that all genuine possession is corporeal, and that the other is related to it by way of analogy merely. They maintain that there is no single generic conception which includes possessio corporis and possessio juris as its two specific forms. The Roman lawyers speak with hesitation and even inconsistency on the point. They sometimes include both forms under the title of possessio, while at other times they are careful to qualify incorporeal possession as quasi possessio — something which is not true possession, but is analogous to it. The question is one of no little difficulty, but the opinion here accepted is that the two forms do in truth belong to a single genus. The true idea of possession is wider than that of corporeal possession, just as the true idea of ownership is wider than that of corporeal ownership.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 288–89 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

indirect possession. See mediate possession.

insular possession. An island territory of the United States, such as Puerto Rico. [Cases: Territories 7. C.J.S. Territories §§ 2, 5, 7, 9–10.]

joint possession. Possession shared by two or more persons.

mediate possession (mee-dee-it). Possession of a thing through someone else, such as an agent. • In every instance of mediate possession, there is a direct possessor (such as an agent) as well as a mediate possessor (the principal). — Also termed indirect possession.

“If I go myself to purchase a book, I acquire direct possession of it; but if I send my servant to buy it for me, I acquire mediate possession of it through him, until he has brought it to me, when my possession becomes immediate.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 300 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

naked possession. The mere possession of something, esp. real estate, without any apparent right or colorable title to it. [Cases: Property 10. C.J.S. Property §§ 27–31, 33.]

natural possession. Civil law. The exercise of physical detention or control over a thing, as by occupying a building or cultivating farmland. • Natural possession may be had without title, and may give rise to a claim of unlawful possession or a claim of ownership by acquisitive prescription. The term “natural possession” has been replaced by the term “corporeal possession” in the Louisiana Civil Code, by virtue of a 1982 revision. La. Civ. Code Ann. art. 3425. See corporeal possession; PRESCRIPTION(2). Cf. possessio naturalis under POSSESSIO. [Cases: Property 10. C.J.S. Property §§ 27–31, 33.]

notorious possession. Possession or control that is evident to others; possession of property that, because it is generally known by people in the area where the property is located, gives rise to a presumption that the actual owner has notice of it. • Notorious possession is one element of adverse possession. — Also termed open possession; open and notorious possession. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. [Cases: Adverse Possession 28–33. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 48–53, 263–264, 266–269, 274, 276, 278–281, 293–294.]

open and notorious possession. See notorious possession.

open possession. See notorious possession.

peaceable possession. Possession (as of real property) not disturbed by another's hostile or legal attempts to recover possession; esp., wrongful possession that the rightful possessor has appeared to tolerate. Cf. scrambling possession (1). Cf. ADVERSE POSSESSION.

pedal possession. Actual possession, as by living on the land or by improving it. • This term usu. appears in adverse-possession contexts.

possession animo domini. Civil law. Possession with the intent to own a thing, movable or immovable; possession as an owner. See La. Civ. Code art. 3427.

possession by relation of law. A person's legally recognized possession of land despite the person's not having actual possession after being improperly or unlawfully dispossessed by another.

possession in fact. Actual possession that may or may not be recognized by law. • For example, an employee's possession of an employer's property is for some purposes not legally considered possession, the term detention or custody being used instead. — Also termed possessio naturalis.

possession in law. 1. Possession that is recognized by the law either because it is a specific type of possession in fact or because the law for some special reason attributes the advantages and results of possession to someone who does not in fact possess. 2. See constructive possession. — Also termed possessio civilis.

“There is no conception which will include all that amounts to possession in law, and will include nothing else, and it is impossible to frame any definition from which the concrete law of possession can be logically deduced.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 287 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

possession of a right. The continuing exercise and enjoyment of a right. • This type of possession is often unrelated to an ownership interest in property. For example, a criminal defendant possesses the right to demand a trial by jury. — Also termed possessio juris; (Ger.) Rechtsbesitz.

precarious possession. Civil law. Detention of property by someone other than the owner or possessor on behalf of or with permission of the owner or possessor. • A lessee has precarious possession of the leased property.

“[Article 3437 of the Louisiana Civil Code defines precarious possession as] ‘exercise of possession over a thing with the permission of or on behalf of the owner or possessor.’ The definition indicates the difference between possession in the proper sense of the word and precarious possession, that is, detention. A possessor is one who possesses as owner, whereas a precarious possessor or detainer is one who exercises factual authority over a thing with the permission of or on behalf of another person.” A.N. Yiannopoulos, Civil Law Property § 319, at quasi-possession. See incorporeal possession.

scrambling possession. 1. A wrongful possession that the rightful possessor has not appeared to tolerate. Cf. peaceable possession. 2. Possession that is uncertain because it is in dispute. • With scrambling possession, the dispute is over who actually has possession — not over whether a party's possession is lawful.

substantial possession. See pedis possessio under POSSESSIO.

POSSESSION UNITY

possession unity. See unity of possession under UNITY.

POSSESSIO PEDIS

possessio pedis. See pedis possessio under POSSESSIO.

POSSESSOR

possessor. One who has possession of real or personal property; esp., a person who is in occupancy of land with the intent to control it or has been but no longer is in that position, but no one else has gained occupancy or has a right to gain it. — possessorial (pos-<<schwa>>-sor-ee-<<schwa>>l), adj.

legal possessor. One with the legal right to possess property, such as a buyer under a conditional sales contract, as contrasted with the legal owner who holds legal title. See legal owner under OWNER.

possessor bona fide (boh-n<<schwa>> fl-dee). A possessor who believes that no other person has a better right to the possession.

possessor mala fide (mal-<<schwa>> fl-dee). A possessor who knows that someone else has a better right to the possession.

POSSESSORIUM

possessorium (pos-<<schwa>>-sor-ee-<<schwa>>m). See possessory action under ACTION(4).

POSSESSORY

possessory (p<<schwa>>-zes-<<schwa>>-ree), adj. Of, relating to, or having possession.

POSSESSORY ACTION

possessory action. See ACTION(4).

POSSESSORY CLAIM

possessory claim. Title to public land held by a claimant who has filed a declaratory statement but has not paid for the land. [Cases: Public Lands 31. C.J.S. Public Lands § 41.]

POSSESSORY CONSERVATOR

possessory conservator. See noncustodial parent under PARENT.

POSSESSORY ESTATE

possessory estate. See ESTATE(1).

POSSESSORY GARAGEMAN'S LIEN

possessory garageman's lien. See LIEN.

POSSESSORY INTERDICT

possessory interdict. See INTERDICT(1).

POSSESSORY INTEREST

possessory interest. 1. The present right to control property, including the right to exclude others, by a person who is not necessarily the owner. [Cases: Property 10. C.J.S. Property §§ 27–31, 33.] 2. A present or future right to the exclusive use and possession of property.

“We shall use the term ‘possessory interest’ to include both present and future interests, and to exclude such interests as easements and profits. The reader should note that the Restatement of Property uses the term ‘possessory’ to refer only to interests that entitle the owner to present possession. See Restatement, Property § 7, 9, 153 (1936).” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 19–20 n.1 (2d ed. 1984).

POSSESSORY LIEN

possessory lien. See LIEN.

POSSESSORY WARRANT

possessory warrant. See WARRANT(1).

POSSIBILITAS

possibilitas (pos-⟨schwa⟩-bil-⟨schwa⟩-tas). [Latin] Possibility; a possibility.

POSSIBILITY

possibility. 1. An event that may or may not happen. 2. A contingent interest in real or personal property.

bare possibility. See naked possibility.

naked possibility. A mere chance or expectation that a person will acquire future property. • A conveyance of a naked possibility is usu. void for lack of subject matter, as in a deed conveying all rights to a future estate not yet in existence. — Also termed bare possibility; naked expectancy. [Cases: Assignments 8. C.J.S. Assignments §§ 17–18.]

possibility coupled with an interest. An expectation recognized in law as an estate or interest, as occurs in an executory devise or in a shifting or springing use. • This type of possibility may be sold or assigned. [Cases: Assignments 9. C.J.S. Assignments § 16.]

possibility on a possibility. See remote possibility.

remote possibility. A limitation dependent on two or more facts or events that are contingent and uncertain; a double possibility. — Also termed possibility on a possibility. [Cases: Wills 7. C.J.S. Wills §§ 58, 63–64, 68.]

POSSIBILITY OF REVERTER

possibility of reverter. A reversionary interest that is subject to a condition precedent; specif., a future interest retained by a grantor after conveying a fee simple determinable, so that the grantee's estate terminates automatically and reverts to the grantor if the terminating event ever occurs. • In this type of interest, the grantor transfers an estate whose maximum potential duration equals that of the grantor's own estate and attaches a special limitation that operates in the grantor's favor. — Often shortened to reverter. See fee simple determinable under FEE SIMPLE. Cf. REMAINDER(1); REVERSION.

“Most treatise-writers define the possibility of reverter as the interest a transferor keeps when he transfers a fee simple determinable or a fee simple conditional. See, e.g., 1 American Law of Property § 4.12; Simes & Smith § 281. Although this definition is all right as far as it goes, it fails to provide for interests less than the fee simple that are granted on special limitation.... Although we call the possibility of reverter an ‘estate,’ the courts of an earlier era would probably have called it a ‘possibility of becoming an estate.’ ” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 58 n.5 (2d ed. 1984).

POSSIBILITY ON A POSSIBILITY possibility on a possibility. See remote possibility under POSSIBILITY.

possidere (pos-<<schwa>>-dee-ree). [Latin fr. potis “having power” + sedere “to sit”] Hist. To possess (a thing), esp. as a person with an interest protected by law (e.g., an owner or mortgagee) rather than a mere custodian.

“A distinction was made in the civil law, and adopted by Bracton, between possidere, (to possess,) and esse in possessione, (to be in possession.) Thus, a guardian, holding in demesne though not in fee, was said to be in possession, though he did not possess. The same language was applied to a bailiff, ... a domestic, ... a fermor or lessee, ... and a tenant at will from day to day, and from year to year.” 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 314 (2d ed. 1867).

POSSLQ

POSSLQ (pahs-<<schwa>>-l-kyoo). abbr. A person of opposite sex sharing living quarters. • Although this term (which is used by the Census Bureau) is intended to include only a person's roommate of the opposite sex to whom the person is not married, the phrase literally includes those who are married. This overbreadth has occasionally been criticized. See CUPOS.

“In the 1980 census, the United States Census Bureau — recognizing a societal change with numerous persons living together without being ‘officially’ married — counted not only persons who were ‘Single’ and ‘Married,’ but also ‘Persons of the Opposite Sex Sharing Living Quarters.’ The acronym is POSSLQ — and, of course, is pronounced possle-kew. It has been suggested that, although the source was stunningly unlikely, it was the Very Word that society has been looking for to describe these relationships: POSSLQ. Precise, businesslike, nonjudgmental. And, in its own way, sort of poetic, too.” Fischer v. Dallas Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 106 F.R.D. 465, 469 n.5 (N.D. Tex. 1985).

post,vb.1. To publicize or announce by affixing a notice in a public place < foreclosure notice was posted at the county courthouse>.2. To transfer (accounting entries) from an original record to a ledger <post debits and credits>.3. To place in the mail <post a letter>. [Cases: Postal Service 19. C.J.S. Postal Service and Offenses Against Postal Laws § 20.] 4. To make a payment or deposit; to put up <post bail>.

POSTAL CURRENCY

postal currency. See CURRENCY.

POSTAL RATE COMMISSION

Postal Rate Commission. An independent federal agency that recommends changes in postage rates, fees, and mail classifications to the governors of the United States Postal Service. • It was created by the Postal Reorganization Act. 39 USCA §§ 3601–3604. — Abbr. PRC.

POST-ANSWER DEFAULT JUDGMENT

post-answer default judgment. See DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

POST AUDIT

POST CONTRACTUM DEBITUM

post contractum debitum (pohst k<<schwa>>n-trak-t<<schwa>>m deb-i-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Hist. After debt has been contracted.

POSTCONVICTION-RELIEF PROCEEDING

postconviction-relief proceeding. A state or federal procedure for a prisoner to request a court to vacate or correct a conviction or sentence. — Also termed postconviction-remedy proceeding; PCR action; postconviction proceeding. [Cases: Criminal Law 1400–1669.]

POSTDATE

postdate, vb. To put a date on (an instrument, such as a check) that is later than the actual date. Cf. ANTEDATE; BACKDATE. [Cases: Bills and Notes 8. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 14.]

POSTDATED CHECK

postdated check. See CHECK.

POST DIEM

post diem (pohst dī-*<<schwa>>*m). [Latin] After the day. • A plea of payment post diem is made after the day when the money becomes due.

POST DISSEISINA

post disseisina. See DE POST DISSEISINA.

POSTEA

postea (poh-stee-<<schwa>>), n. [Latin “afterwards”] Hist. A formal statement, endorsed on the trial record, giving an account of the proceedings at trial; a record of what occurred at nisi prius after the issue had been joined.

“With the verdict of the jury [in the 15th–18th centuries] ... the proceedings at nisi prius closed, and the case was sent back to the court at Westminster from which it issued for judgment, after a statement of the holding of the trial and of the verdict had been added to the record. This statement, from the fact that it began with the Latin word ‘postea,’ or ‘afterwards,’ was known as the ‘postea’ and was in fact drafted by the party in whose favour the verdict had gone, whence the phrase ‘postea to the plaintiff’ or ‘the defendant,’ which is found in the old reports.” Geoffrey Radcliffe & Geoffrey Cross, The English Legal System 185 (G.J. Hand & D.J. Bentley eds., 6th ed. 1977).

POSTED WATER

posted water. See WATER.

POSTERIORES

posteriores (pah-steer-ee-or-eez), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. Descendants in a direct line beyond the sixth degree.

POSTERIORITY

posteriority (pah-steer-ee-or-<<schwa>>-tee). The condition or state of being subsequent. • This word was formerly used to describe the relationships existing between a tenant and the two or more lords the tenant held of; the tenant held the older tenancy "by priority" and the more recent one "by posteriority."

POSTERITY

posterity, n. 1. Future generations collectively. 2. All the descendants of a person to the furthest generation.

POST-EXPIRATION-SALES THEORY

post-expiration-sales theory. Patents. A theory of lost-profits remedy by which compensation is sought for sales lost after a patent expired, on the basis that infringement gave the competitor a head start on entering the market. — Also termed accelerated-reentry theory. [Cases: Patents 318(3). C.J.S. Patents §§ 564, 566.]

POST FACTO

post facto (pohst fak-toh). [Latin] After the fact. See EX POST FACTO.

POST-FACTUM

post-factum (pohst-fak-t<<schwa>>m). [Latin] An after-act; an act done afterwards. — Also spelled postfactum.

POST-FINE

post-fine. See KING'S SILVER.

POSTGLOSSATORS

postglossators (pohst-glah-say-t<<schwa>>rz), n. pl. (often cap.) A group of mainly Italian juriconsults who were active during the 14th and 15th centuries writing commentaries and treatises that related Roman law to feudal and Germanic law, canon law, and other contemporary bodies of law. • The postglossators constituted the second wave of Roman-law study after its revival in the 11th century, the first being that of the glossators. — Also termed commentators. See GLOSSATORS.

POST HOC

post hoc (pohst hok). [Latin fr. post hoc, ergo propter hoc "after this, therefore because of this"] 1. adv. After this; consequently. 2. adj. Of or relating to the fallacy of assuming causality from temporal sequence; confusing sequence with consequence.

POSTHUMOUS

posthumous (pos-ch<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>s), adj. Occurring or existing after death; esp., (of a child) born after the father's death.

POSTHUMOUS ADOPTION

posthumous adoption. See ADOPTION.

POSTHUMOUS CHILD

posthumous child. See CHILD.

POSTHUMOUS WORK

posthumous work. See WORK(2).

POSTING

posting. 1. Accounting. The act of transferring an original entry to a ledger. 2. The act of mailing a letter. 3. A method of substituted service of process by displaying the process in a prominent place (such as the courthouse door) when other forms of service have failed. See SERVICE(1). [Cases: Process 81. C.J.S. Process § 55.] 4. A publication method, as by displaying municipal ordinances in designated localities. [Cases: Municipal Corporations 110. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 277–280, 282–284.] 5. The act of providing legal notice, as by affixing notices of judicial sales at or on the courthouse door. 6. The procedure for processing a check, including one or more of the following steps: (1) verifying any signature, (2) ascertaining that sufficient funds are available, (3) affixing a “paid” or other stamp, (4) entering a charge or entry to a customer's account, and (5) correcting or reversing an entry or erroneous action concerning the check. [Cases: Banks and Banking 137; Judicial Sales 11. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 328, 330; Judicial Sales §§ 9–10.]
