tolling statute. A law that interrupts the running of a statute of limitations in certain situations, as when the defendant cannot be served with process in the forum jurisdiction. [Cases: Limitation of Actions 43–138. C.J.S. Contracts § 582; Employer–Employee Relationship § 87; Limitations of Actions §§ 21, 81–195, 197–251, 303; Physicians, Surgeons, and Other Health-Care Providers § 108; RICO (Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations) § 16.]

tolt (toht). Hist. A writ for removing a case pending in a court baron to a county court. — Also termed writ of tolt. See COURT BARON; county court under COURT.

“Where the disputed interest in the land was not a fee held of the king in chief but a fee held of a ‘mesne lord’ the writ was directed to him bidding him do full right between the parties in the matter of the land in question under pain of the case being removed from his court to the sheriff’s court if he failed to do justice. This removal was effected (if necessary) by the process known as

'tolt' under which a sheriff on a complaint to him in his county court of a failure of the lord to do justice ordered his bailiff to attend the lord's court and take away the plaint into the county court." Geoffrey Radcliffe & Geoffrey Cross, The English Legal System 38 (G.J. Hand & D.J. Bentley eds., 6th ed. 1977).

tombstone.Securities. An advertisement (esp. in a newspaper) for a public securities offering, describing the security and identifying the sellers. • The term gets its name from the ad's traditional black border and plain print. — Also termed tombstone advertisement; tombstone ad. Cf. PROSPECTUS.

TON

ton. A measure of weight fixed at either 2,000 pounds avoirdupois or 20 hundredweights, each hundredweight being 112 pounds avoirdupois. [Cases: Weights and Measures 3. C.J.S. Weights and Measures § 3.]

long ton.Twenty long hundredweight (2,240 pounds), or 1.016 metric tons.

short ton.Twenty short hundredweight (2,000 pounds), or 0.907 metric tons.

TON MILE

ton mile.In transportation, a measure equal to the transportation of one ton of freight one mile.

tonnage (t<<schwa>>n-ij).1. The capacity of a vessel for carrying freight or other loads, calculated in tons. — Also termed net tonnage. [Cases: Shipping 7. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 18–20.] 2. The total shipping tonnage of a country or port. 3. See tonnage duty under DUTY(4).

TONNAGE DUTY

tonnage duty.See DUTY(4).

TONNAGE-RENT

tonnage-rent. A rent reserved by a mining lease or similar transaction, consisting of a royalty on every ton of minerals extracted from the mine. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 70. C.J.S. Mines and Minerals §§ 218, 223–224.]

TONNAGE TAX

tonsure.Hist. The shaving of a person's (usu. a cleric's) head. • Serjeants-at-law supposedly wore coifs to conceal their shaved heads.

tontine (ton-teen or ton-teen), n.1. A financial arrangement in which a group of participants share in the arrangement's advantages until all but one has died or defaulted, at which time the whole goes to that survivor. [Cases: Insurance 2441.] 2. A financial arrangement in which an entire sum goes to the contributing participants still alive and not in default at the end of a specified period.

TONTINE POLICY

tontine policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

TOP-HAT PENSION PLAN

top-hat pension plan. See PENSION PLAN.

TOP LEASE

top lease. See LEASE.

TOP MANAGEMENT

top management. See MANAGEMENT.

TOPOGRAPHICAL SURVEY

topographical survey. See SURVEY.

TORPEDO DOCTRINE

torpedo doctrine. See ATTRACTIVE-NUISANCE DOCTRINE.

TORRENS SYSTEM

Torrens system (tor-<<schwa>>nz ortahr-<<schwa>>nz). A system for establishing title to real estate in which a claimant first acquires an abstract of title and then applies to a court for the issuance of a title certificate, which serves as conclusive evidence of ownership. • This system — named after Sir Robert Torrens, a 19th-century reformer of Australian land laws — has been adopted in the United States by several counties with large metropolitan areas. — Also termed Torrens title system. See CAVEAT(3). [Cases: Records 9. C.J.S. Registers of Deeds §§ 2–71.]

tort (tort). 1. A civil wrong, other than breach of contract, for which a remedy may be obtained, usu. in the form of damages; a breach of a duty that the law imposes on persons who stand in a particular relation to one another. [Cases: Torts 1. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2–7.] 2. (pl.) The branch of law dealing with such wrongs.

“To ask concerning any occurrence ‘Is this a crime or is it a tort?’ is — to borrow Sir James Stephen's apt illustration — no wiser than it would be to ask concerning a man ‘Is he a father or a son?’ For he may well be both.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 543 (16th ed. 1952).

“We may ... define a tort as a civil wrong for which the remedy is a common-law action for unliquidated damages, and which is not exclusively the breach of a contract or the breach of a trust or other merely equitable obligation.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 13 (17th ed. 1977).

“It might be possible to define a tort by enumerating the things that it is not. It is not crime, it is not breach of contract, it is not necessarily concerned with property rights or problems of government, but is the occupant of a large residuary field remaining if these are taken out of the law. But this again is illusory, and the conception of a sort of legal garbage-can to hold what can be put nowhere else is of no help. In the first place, tort is a field which pervades the entire law, and is so interlocked at every point with property, contract and other accepted classifications that, as the student of law soon discovers, the categories are quite arbitrary. In the second, there is a central theme, or basis or idea, running through the cases of what are called torts, which, although difficult to put into words, does distinguish them in greater or less degree from other types of cases.” W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 1, at 2–3 (5th ed. 1984).

constitutional tort. A violation of one's constitutional rights by a government officer, redressable by a civil action filed directly against the officer. • A constitutional tort committed under color of state law (such as a civil-rights violation) is actionable under 42 USCA § 1983. — Sometimes (informally) shortened to contort. [Cases: Civil Rights 1304. C.J.S. Civil Rights §§ 74–87.]

dignitary tort (dig-n<<schwa>>-tair-ee). A tort involving injury to one's reputation or honor. • In the few jurisdictions in which courts use the phrase dignitary tort (such as Maine), defamation is commonly cited as an example. — Also (erroneously) termed dignatory tort. [Cases: Libel and Slander 1; Torts 8.5(1). C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood §§ 2, 5–6, 10, 47; Right of Privacy and Publicity §§ 2, 8–9, 17, 20, 34, 39, 42.]

government tort. A tort committed by the government through an employee, agent, or instrumentality under its control. • The tort may or may not be actionable, depending on whether the government is entitled to sovereign immunity. A tort action against the U.S. government is regulated by the Federal Tort Claims Act, while a state action is governed by the state's tort claims act. See FEDERAL TORT CLAIMS ACT; sovereign immunity under IMMUNITY(1). [Cases: Municipal Corporations 723. C.J.S. Municipal Corporations §§ 661–663.]

intentional tort. A tort committed by someone acting with general or specific intent. • Examples include battery, false imprisonment, and trespass to land. — Also termed willful tort. Cf. NEGLIGENCE. [Cases: Torts 4. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2, 23.]

marital tort. A tort by one spouse against the other. • Since most jurisdictions have abolished interspousal tort immunity, courts have had to decide which tort claims to recognize between married persons. Among those that some, but not all, courts have chosen to recognize are assault and battery, including claims for infliction of sexually transmitted disease, and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress. — Also termed domestic tort. Cf. husband–wife immunity under IMMUNITY.

maritime tort. Any tort within the admiralty jurisdiction. [Cases: Admiralty 17. C.J.S.

Admiralty §§ 62–63.]

mass tort.A civil wrong that injures many people. • Examples include toxic emissions from a factory, the crash of a commercial airliner, and contamination from an industrial-waste-disposal site. Cf. toxic tort.

negligent tort.A tort committed by failure to observe the standard of care required by law under the circumstances. See NEGLIGENCE.

personal tort.A tort involving or consisting in an injury to one's person, reputation, or feelings, as distinguished from an injury or damage to real or personal property. [Cases: Torts 7. C.J.S. Torts § 90.]

prenatal tort. 1. A tort committed against a fetus. • If born alive, a child can sue for injuries resulting from tortious conduct predating the child's birth. [Cases: Death 15; Infants 72(2). C.J.S. Death §§ 34, 36, 68; Infants §§ 218–219.] 2. Loosely, any of several torts relating to reproduction, such as those giving rise to wrongful-birth actions, wrongful-life actions, and wrongful-pregnancy actions. [Cases: Health 686, 687.]

prima facie tort (prĭ-m<<schwa>> fay-shee-ee or -shee or -sh<<schwa>>). An unjustified, intentional infliction of harm on another person, resulting in damages, by one or more acts that would otherwise be lawful. • Some jurisdictions have established this tort to provide a remedy for malicious deeds — esp. in business and trade contexts — that are not actionable under traditional tort law. [Cases: Torts 1. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2–7.]

public tort.A minor breach of the law (such as a parking violation) that, although it carries a criminal punishment, is considered a civil offense rather than a criminal one because it is merely a prohibited act (malum prohibitum) and not inherently reprehensible conduct (malum in se). — Also termed civil offense. Cf. civil wrong under WRONG; public delict under DELICT. [Cases: Criminal Law 26, 27. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 9–12, 44–45, 1110.]

quasi-tort. A wrong for which a nonperpetrator is held responsible; a tort for which one who did not directly commit it can nonetheless be found liable, as when a master is held liable for a tort committed by a servant. — Also spelled quasi tort. See vicarious liability under LIABILITY; RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR.[Cases: Action 14; Master and Servant 300; Negligence 483. C.J.S. Actions § 64; Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 181–184, 188–193, 203; Negligence §§ 152–153.]

toxic tort.A civil wrong arising from exposure to a toxic substance, such as asbestos, radiation, or hazardous waste. • A toxic tort can be remedied by a civil lawsuit (usu. a class action) or by administrative action. Cf. mass tort. [Cases: Negligence 306; Products Liability 43. C.J.S. Products Liability § 51.]

willful tort.See intentional tort.

tortfeasor (tort-fee-z<<schwa>>r). One who commits a tort; a wrongdoer.

concurrent tortfeasors. Two or more tortfeasors whose simultaneous actions cause injury to a third party. • Such tortfeasors are jointly and severally liable. [Cases: Negligence 421, 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 154–156, 198; Torts §§ 39–44.]

consecutive tortfeasors. Two or more tortfeasors whose actions, while occurring at different times, combine to cause a single injury to a third party. • Such tortfeasors are jointly and severally liable.

joint tortfeasors. Two or more tortfeasors who contributed to the claimant's injury and who may be joined as defendants in the same lawsuit. See joint and several liability under LIABILITY. [Cases: Negligence 484; Torts 22. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 154–156; Torts §§ 39–44.]

successive tortfeasors. Two or more tortfeasors whose negligence occurs at different times and causes different injuries to the same third party. [Cases: Damages 34.]

tortious (tor-sh<<schwa>>s), adj. 1. Constituting a tort; wrongful <tortious conduct>. [Cases: Torts 1. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2–7.] 2. In the nature of a tort <tortious cause of action>.

TORTIOUS ACT

tortious act. See ACT(2).

TORTIOUS BATTERY

tortious battery. See BATTERY(2).

TORTIOUS CONDUCT

tortious conduct. See CONDUCT.

TORTIOUS INTERFERENCE WITH CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS

tortious interference with contractual relations. A third party's intentional inducement of a contracting party to break a contract, causing damage to the relationship between the contracting parties. — Also termed unlawful interference with contractual relations; interference with a contractual relationship; interference with contract; inducement of breach of contract; procurement of breach of contract. [Cases: Master and Servant 341; Torts 12. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 264–267; Torts §§ 54, 59–65.]

TORTIOUS INTERFERENCE WITH PROSPECTIVE ADVANTAGE

tortious interference with prospective advantage. An intentional, damaging intrusion on another's potential business relationship, such as the opportunity of obtaining customers or employment. — Also termed interference with a business relationship. [Cases: Torts 10(1). C.J.S. Torts §§ 45–54.]

TORTIOUS LIABILITY

tortious liability. See LIABILITY.

tort reform. A movement to reduce the amount of tort litigation, usu. involving legislation that restricts tort remedies or that caps damages awards (esp. for punitive damages). • Advocates of tort reform argue that it lowers insurance and healthcare costs and prevents windfalls, while opponents contend that it denies plaintiffs the recovery they deserve for their injuries.

torture, n. The infliction of intense pain to the body or mind to punish, to extract a confession or information, or to obtain sadistic pleasure. — torture, vb.

“By torture I mean the infliction of physically founded suffering or the threat immediately to inflict it, where such infliction or threat is intended to elicit, or such infliction is incidental to means adopted to elicit, matter of intelligence or forensic proof and the motive is one of military, civil, or ecclesiastical interest.” James Heath, Torture and English Law 3 (1982).

total incorporation. See INCORPORATION.

TOTALITY-OF-THE-CIRCUMSTANCES TEST

totality-of-the-circumstances test.Criminal procedure. A standard for determining whether hearsay (such as an informant's tip) is sufficiently reliable to establish probable cause for an arrest or search warrant. • Under this test — which replaced Aguilar–Spinelli's two-pronged approach — the reliability of the hearsay is weighed by focusing on the entire situation as described in the probable-cause affidavit, and not on any one specific factor. Illinois v. Gates, 462 U.S. 213, 103 S.Ct. 2317 (1983). Cf. AGUILAR–SPINELLI TEST. [Cases: Arrest 63.4(7); Searches and Seizures 115.1. C.J.S. Arrest § 28.]

total loss.See LOSS.

TOTAL-OFFSET RULE

total-offset rule.Torts. A theory of damages holding that the eroding effect of inflation offsets the accrual of interest on an award and makes it unnecessary to discount future damages to their present value.

TOUCH AND STAY

touch and stay. Marine insurance. An insurer's giving to the insured the right to stop and remain at certain designated points in the course of the voyage. • A vessel that has the power to touch and stay at a place must confine itself strictly to the terms of the permission given, and any deviation during a stay — for example, by shipping or landing goods — will discharge the underwriters, unless the vessel has permission to trade as well as to touch and stay. [Cases: Insurance 3059. C.J.S. Insurance § 768.]

TOUT COURT

tout court (too koor), adv. [French “simply, without qualification”] Very briefly; without explanation.

TOUT ENSEMBLE

tout ensemble (toot oni-soin-bl<<schwa>>), n. [French “all together”] The overall visual effect of a design; general effect. • The phrase denotes a way of comparing two designs, by looking at the total impact rather than comparing individual design elements. That is the technique used in determining whether a design infringes someone's trade-dress rights, or whether a design-patent application shows a novel and nonobvious change from existing designs. Although the phrase is adverbial in French, it is typically used as a noun in English. See ANTIDISSECTION RULE.

TOUTING

touting, n. The solicitation of business by highly recommending a security or product, esp. when the recommendation's basis is largely puffery.

trademark, n. 1. A word, phrase, logo, or other graphic symbol used by a manufacturer or seller to distinguish its product or products from those of others. • The main purpose of a trademark is to designate the source of goods or services. In effect, the trademark is the commercial substitute for one's signature. To receive federal protection, a trademark must be (1) distinctive rather than merely descriptive or generic; (2) affixed to a product that is actually sold in the marketplace; and (3) registered with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. In its broadest sense, the term trademark includes a servicemark. Unregistered trademarks are protected under common-law only, and distinguished with the mark “TM.” — Often shortened to mark. Cf. SERVICEMARK. [Cases: Trade Regulation 1, 3. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 2, 4, 14–15, 19–23.] 2. The body of law dealing with how businesses distinctively identify their products. — Abbr. TM. See LANHAM ACT. Cf. SERVICEMARK; registered trademark.

Mishawaka Rubber & Woolen Mfg. Co. v. S.S. Kresge Co., 316 U.S. 203, 205, 62 S.Ct. 1022, 1024 (1942)(Frankfurter, J.).

abandoned trademark. A mark whose owner has discontinued using it and has no intent to resume using it in the ordinary course of trade, or has allowed it to become a generic term or otherwise to lose its distinctive significance. • Under § 45 of the Lanham Act, nonuse of a mark for three consecutive years is prima facie evidence of abandonment. The owner of an abandoned mark has no trademark rights to exclude others from using it. — Also termed abandoned mark.

arbitrary trademark. A trademark containing common words that do not describe or suggest any characteristic of the product to which the trademark is assigned. • Because arbitrary marks are neither descriptive nor suggestive of the goods or services in connection with which they are used, they are inherently distinctive, require no proof of secondary meaning, and are entitled to strong legal protection. A name that would be generic if used with one product may be arbitrary if used with another. For example, “Bicycle” may be registered to identify playing cards, but it could not be protected as a mark to identify bicycles. — Also termed arbitrary mark; arbitrary name. [Cases: Trade Regulation 24. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 47.]

certification trademark. A word, symbol, or device used on goods or services to certify the place of origin, material, mode of manufacture, quality, or other characteristic. See 15 USCA § 1127. — Also termed certification mark. Cf. collective trademark.

coined trademark. See fanciful trademark.

collective trademark. A trademark or servicemark used by an association, union, or other group either to identify the group's products or services or to signify membership in the group. • Collective marks — such as “Realtor” and “American Peanut Farmers” — can be federally registered under the Lanham Act. — Also termed collective mark. Cf. certification trademark.

Community trademark. A trademark registered with the European Union Trademark Office and recognized in all EU countries. — Also termed Community mark.

composite trademark (k<<schwa>>m-poz-it). A trademark or servicemark made up of several words that form a distinctive whole, even if the individual words are ordinary. • Advertising slogans are often protectable as composite marks. A trademark registrant can establish ownership in the whole mark, but must disclaim ownership in any unregistrable parts. — Also termed composite mark; hybrid mark; hybrid trademark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 45. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 62.]

counterfeit trademark. A spurious mark that is identical to, or substantially indistinguishable from, a registered trademark. 15 USCA § 11. — Also termed counterfeit mark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 312. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 151.]

descriptive trademark. A trademark that is a meaningful word in common usage or that merely describes or suggests a product. • This type of trademark is entitled to protection only if it has acquired distinctiveness over time. — Also termed descriptive mark; weak mark; weak trademark. See SECONDARY MEANING.

“The bar against descriptive marks simply reflects the requirement of distinctiveness. 15 U.S.C.A. § 1052(e)(1). It often is said that a mark should not be analyzed in a piecemeal fashion. Instead, the mark as a whole must be tested for descriptiveness or secondary meaning. A mark that merely describes a product cannot possibly distinguish one producer from another. As an obvious example, ‘apple’ would be a descriptive name for that fruit, and, as a mark, would serve only to confuse the consumer, for it would tell nothing about the different origins of a selection of apples produced by different producers. Moreover, to allow an owner to pre-empt the term ‘apple’ would afford the owner a monopoly of something that is necessary to describe the goods for sale.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property: Patents, Trademarks, and Copyright in a Nutshell 163 (2d ed. 1990).

disparaging trademark. A trademark that tends to bring a person or class of people into contempt or disrepute. • Section 2(a) of the Lanham Act prohibits the registration of disparaging marks. 15 USCA § 1052(a). — Also termed disparaging mark. See prohibited and reserved trademark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 282. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 190.]

distinctive trademark. A very strong trademark, one that consumers immediately and consistently associate with specific goods and services. • A distinctive trademark is usu. fanciful, arbitrary, or suggestive, but a descriptive trademark or common name can become distinctive if it becomes so well known as to acquire a secondary meaning. — Also termed distinctive mark.

evocative trademark. See suggestive trademark.

famous trademark. A trademark that not only is distinctive but also has been used and heavily advertised or widely accepted in the channels of trade over a long time, and is so well known that consumers immediately associate it with one specific product or service. • Only famous marks are protected from dilution. Eight nonexclusive statutory factors are often used in determining whether a particular mark is famous. See 15 USCA § 1125(c)(1)(A)–(H). — Also termed famous mark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 366. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 79.]

fanciful trademark. A trademark consisting of a made-up or coined word; a distinctive trademark or tradename having no independent meaning. • This type of mark is considered inherently distinctive and thus protected at common law, and is eligible for trademark registration from the time of its first use. — Also termed fanciful mark; fanciful term; coined trademark; coined mark; coined term. [Cases: Trade Regulation 24. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 47.]

“Arbitrary or fanciful marks convey nothing about the nature of the product except through knowledge of the market. For instance, Kodak conveys nothing about photographic equipment except to those knowledgeable about that trade.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 168 (2d ed. 1990).

geographically descriptive trademark.A trademark that uses a geographic name to indicate where the goods are grown or manufactured. • This type of mark is protected at common law, and can be registered only on proof that it has acquired distinctiveness over time. — Also termed geographically descriptive mark. See SECONDARY MEANING. [Cases: Trade Regulation 32. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 55.]

house trademark.A trademark that identifies a company, a division of a company, or a company's product line as the source of a product or service. • A house mark and a product mark often appear together on a label. — Also termed house mark. Cf. product trademark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 27. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 51.]

product trademark.A trademark that identifies a single good or service, rather than the producing company, a division of a company, or a product line. • A product mark and a house mark often appear together on a label. — Also termed product mark. Cf. house trademark.

prohibited and reserved trademark.A mark that is not protected under the Lanham Act because it either falls into an expressly excluded category or else is similar to a mark or marks granted by statute to others. 15 USCA § 1052. — Also termed prohibited and reserved mark.

pure trademark.See technical trademark.

registered trademark.A trademark that has been filed and recorded with the Patent and Trademark Office. • A federally registered trademark is usu. marked by the symbol “®” or a phrase such as “Registered U.S. Patent & Trademark Office” so that the trademark owner can collect treble damages or the defendant's profits for an infringement. If the symbol is not used, the owner can collect these damages or profits only by proving that the defendant actually knew that the mark was registered. — Also termed registered mark. Cf. SERVICEMARK. [Cases: Trade Regulation 151. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 147, 153.]

strong trademark.An inherently distinctive trademark that is used — usu. by the owner only — in a fictitious, arbitrary, and fanciful manner, and is therefore given greater protection than a weak mark under the trademark laws. — Also termed strong mark.

suggestive trademark.A trademark that suggests rather than describes the particular characteristics of a product, thus requiring a consumer to use imagination to draw a conclusion about the nature of the product. • A suggestive trademark is entitled to protection without proof of secondary meaning. — Also termed evocative trademark; suggestive mark; suggestive name. See technical trademark. A mark that satisfies all the elements of a common-law trademark. • The essential elements of a technical trademark are as follows: (1) its use to designate a commercial source would not interfere with anyone else's right to use the mark; (2) it must primarily identify the source, rather than the product's category or grade of quality; (3) it must be attached to the product, label, or collateral materials rather than merely used in advertising; and (4) its use must not undermine some public policy, as by being scandalous or deceptive. — Also termed pure trademark; pure mark; technical mark; true trademark.

true trademark. See technical trademark.

weak trademark. See descriptive trademark.

TRADEMARK ACT OF 1946

Trademark Act of 1946. See LANHAM ACT.

TRADEMARK APPLICATION

trademark application. A mark owner's written request, filed with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, for federal registration of a mark, accompanied by a sample of the mark to be protected and the filing fee. • The application may describe either an existing mark that is in use or a proposed mark. — Also termed servicemark application. [Cases: Trade Regulation 212. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 176–177.]

combined application. An application to register a mark to be used in more than one class of goods or services. • A combined application is given a single serial number, but it is examined as if it were a set of distinct single applications. A separate filing fee must be paid for each class. — Also termed multiple-class application. [Cases: Trade Regulation 212. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 176–177.]

intent-to-use application. An application filed with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to protect a trademark or servicemark that is not currently in commercial use but whose owner has a bona fide intent to use the mark commercially in the foreseeable future. • Trademark rights have traditionally been restricted to marks actually used in trade, but a 1988 amendment to the Lanham Act permitted applications to be filed before actual use begins if the mark otherwise qualifies for the Principal Register. 15 USCA § 1051(b). See PRINCIPAL REGISTER. [Cases: Trade Regulation 212. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 176–177.]

multiple-class application. See combined application.

TRADEMARK-APPLICATION AMENDMENT

trademark-application amendment. A proposed modification to a registered trademark or to an application for trademark registration.

amendment of registration. Trademarks. Amendment of an existing trademark registration to make minor changes in the design of a mark to reflect how the mark is actually used. • The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office permits an amendment of registration only if it does not materially alter the character of the mark. The PTO amends a registration by attaching to the printed registration a printed certificate showing the amendment. — Also termed amendment of mark in registration. [Cases: Trade Regulation 252. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 199.]

amendment to allege use.Trademarks. A supplement to a trademark applicant's intent-to-use application filed to inform the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that a trademark is actually in use in interstate commerce. • The form is titled “Allegation of Use for Intent to Use Application.” — Also termed statement of use; allegation of use. — Abbr. AAU. See DECLARATION OF USE.

amendment to different register.Trademarks. An amendment to an application for registration on the Principal Register, requesting that the mark instead be placed on the supplemental register.

TRADEMARK CLASS

trademark class.Any one of 42 international trademark-protection categories, each comprising similar goods or services. • There are 34 goods classes and 8 services classes. A trademark is protected in each class that is relevant to the product's or service's business area.

TRADEMARK OFFICE

Trademark Office.See UNITED STATES PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE.

TRADEMARK-REGISTRATION NOTICE

trademark-registration notice. A notice that a mark is protected by registration with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, shown by placing a symbol next to the mark. • In the U.S., the R-within-a-circle symbol (®) is common but the legend “Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.” is acceptable. Only federally registered marks may use this notice.

TRADEMARK TRIAL AND APPEALS BOARD

Trademark Trial and Appeals Board. An administrative body that hears and decides disputes involving trademark ownership, conflicts between marks, and registrability of marks. — Abbr. TTAB.

TRADE MEANING

trade meaning. See SECONDARY MEANING.

tradename. 1. A name, style, or symbol used to distinguish a company, partnership, or business (as opposed to a product or service); the name under which a business operates. • A tradename is a means of identifying a business — or its products or services — to establish goodwill. It symbolizes the business's reputation. [Cases: Trade Regulation 1, 3, 7. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 2, 4, 14–15, 19–25.] 2. A trademark that was not originally susceptible to exclusive appropriation but has acquired a secondary meaning. — Also termed brand name; commercial name.

TRADE OR BUSINESS

trade or business. Tax. Any business or professional activity conducted by a taxpayer with the objective of earning a profit. • If the taxpayer can show that the primary purpose and intention is to make a profit, the taxpayer may deduct certain expenses as trade-or-business expenses under the Internal Revenue Code. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3314.1–3318. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 150–153, 163, 184, 270.]

trade practice. A customary way of doing business; esp., a method of using specifications for size, thickness, shape, or quality adopted within a given industry.

TRADE PRICE

trader. 1. A merchant; a retailer; one who buys goods to sell them at a profit. 2. One who sells goods substantially in the form in which they are bought; one who has not converted them into another form of property by skill and labor. 3. One who, as a member of a stock exchange, buys and sells securities on the exchange floor either for brokers or on his or her own account. 4. One who buys and sells commodities and commodity futures for others or for his or her own account in anticipation of a speculative profit.

TRADER'S SETTLEMENT

trader's settlement. See SETTLEMENT(1).

TRADES COUNCIL

trades council. See TRADE COUNCIL.

trade secret. 1. A formula, process, device, or other business information that is kept confidential to maintain an advantage over competitors; information — including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process — that (1) derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known or readily ascertainable by others who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use, and (2) is the subject of reasonable efforts, under the circumstances, to maintain its secrecy. • This definition states the majority view, which is found in the Uniform Trade Secrets Act. [Cases: Torts 10(5). C.J.S. Torts §§ 55–57.] 2. Information that (1) is not generally known or ascertainable, (2) provides a competitive advantage, (3) has been developed at the plaintiff's expense and is used continuously in the plaintiff's business, and (4) is the subject of the plaintiff's intent to keep it confidential. • This definition states the minority view, which is found in the Restatement of Torts § 757 cmt. b (1939). [Cases: Torts 10(5). C.J.S. Torts §§ 55–57.]

“So long as the owner of a secret keeps it a secret he has a monopoly. While equity affords protection to trade secrets against betrayal by those under contract or in confidential relations with the owners of the secret, there is no difference between contracts as to trade secrets and contracts as to any other personal property, as far as restraint of trade is concerned.” Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 406 (1929).

“The concept of protecting trade secrets is related to the principles of trademark and patent law. The scope of trade secret protection, however, goes well beyond that of patent law. Unlike patent law, protection under trade secret law is not tied to the information's novelty; rather, the essence of a trade secret is its relative secrecy. Additionally, unlike patent law, trade secret law draws less from property principles, and more from the equitable principles surrounding confidential relationships.” Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law § 8.18, at 516 (1994).

“The difficulty with defining ‘trade secrets’ in the abstract is that there are so many ways to go about it. In large part, this is a reflection of the fact that the law of trade secrets, unlike the law of patents or copyright, is a creature of the common law rather than of statute. In trying to impose a moral solution on cases of apparent breach of confidence, judges have juggled competing policy interests while trying to draw a line of protection that would lead to the result that they believed was right.... In other words, the development of trade secret law has been a bit chaotic” James Pooley, Trade Secrets § 1.01, at 1–1 to 1–3 (1998).

trade slander. See SLANDER.

tradesman (traydz-m<<schwa>>n), n.1. One who buys and sells things for profit; esp., a shopkeeper. 2. A shopkeeper's employee. 3. A mechanic or artisan whose livelihood depends on manual labor; one who is skilled in a trade. — Also termed tradesperson.

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY

trading with the enemy. The federal offense of carrying on commerce with a nation or with a subject or ally of a nation with which the United States is at war. [Cases: War and National Emergency 514.]

traditio (tr<<schwa>>-dish-ee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. The simple delivery of a piece of property by one person to another with the intention of transferring ownership. • This was the simplest form of transfer, and ultimately it was applied to land as well as movables. Constructive delivery was developed. — Also termed traditio rei. See BREVI MANU; CONSTITUTUM POSSESSORIUM. Pl. traditiones (tr<<schwa>>-dish-ee-oh-nee-z).

TRADITIO BREVI MANU

traditio brevi manu (tr<<schwa>>-dish-ee-oh bree-vIman-yoo). [Latin] Roman law. The surrender of the mediate possession of a thing to the person who is already in immediate possession of it. • This is a type of constructive delivery in which a delivery to the mediate possessor and redelivery to the immediate possessor are unnecessary. See BREVI MANU. For the other two types of constructive delivery, see ATTORNMENT; CONSTITUTUM POSSESSORIUM.

“The first [type of constructive delivery] is that which the Roman lawyers termed traditio brevi manu, but which has no recognised name in the language of English law.... If, for example, I lend a book to someone, and afterwards, while he still retains it, I agree with him to sell it to him, or to make him a present of it, I can effectually deliver it to him in fulfilment of this sale or gift, by telling him that he may keep it. It is not necessary for him to go through the form of handing it back to me and receiving it a second time from my hands.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 306 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

TRADITIO LONGA MANU

traditio longa manu (tr<<schwa>>-dish-ee-oh long-g<<schwa>> man-yoo). [Latin] Roman law. See CONSTITUTUM POSSESSORIUM.

tradition. 1. Past customs and usages that influence or govern present acts or practices. [Cases: Customs and Usages 10. C.J.S. Customs and Usages §§ 15–19, 26–41.] 2. The delivery of an item or an estate.

trailer clause. An employee's promise to assign to the employer the rights to all inventions developed while employed and for a specified time afterward. • For the covenant to be enforceable, the time restriction must be reasonable. — Also termed holdover clause.

traitor, n. 1. A person who commits treason against his or her country. [Cases: Treason 10. C.J.S. Treason §§ 10–11.] 2. One who betrays a person, a cause, or an obligation. — traitorous, adj.

TRAMP

tramp, n. 1. A person who roams about from place to place, begging or living without labor or visible means of support; a vagrant. 2. TRAMP STEAMER.

TRAMP CORPORATION

tramp corporation. See CORPORATION.

tramp steamer. A ship that is not scheduled to sail between prearranged ports of call but that stops at those ports for which it has cargo. • A tramp steamer typically carries bulk cargoes such as oil, grain, coal, steel, iron ore, or lumber, and is contracted with a charterparty rather than a bill of lading. — Often shortened to tramp.

tranche (tranh), n. [French “slice”] Securities. 1. A bond issue derived from a pooling of similar debt obligations. • A tranche usu. differs from other issues by maturity date or rate of return. 2. A block of bonds designated for sale in a foreign country. — Also spelled tranch; trench. See COLLATERALIZED MORTGAGE OBLIGATION .

transact, vb. 1. To carry on or conduct (negotiations, business, etc.) to a conclusion <transact business>. 2. Civil law. To settle (a dispute) by mutual concession. See TRANSACTION(4). 3. To carry on or conduct negotiations or business <refuses to transact with the enemy>.

TRANSACTIO

transactio (tran-sak-shee-oh), n. [Latin “compromise”] Roman law. The renunciation of a contested claim or defense in litigation in consideration of a quid pro quo. Pl. transactiones (tran-sak-shee-oh-nee-z).

transaction, n. 1. The act or an instance of conducting business or other dealings; esp., the formation, performance, or discharge of a contract. 2. Something performed or carried out; a business agreement or exchange. 3. Any activity involving two or more persons. 4. Civil law. An agreement that is intended by the parties to prevent or end a dispute and in which they make reciprocal concessions. La. Civ. Code art. 3071. — transactional,adj.

arm's-length transaction. 1. A transaction between two unrelated and unaffiliated parties. 2. A transaction between two parties, however closely related they may be, conducted as if the parties were strangers, so that no conflict of interest arises.

closed transaction. Tax. A transaction in which an amount realized on a sale or exchange can be established for the purpose of stating a gain or loss. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3393.]

colorable transaction. A sham transaction having the appearance of authenticity; a pretended transaction <the court set aside the colorable transaction>.

TRANSACTIONAL AUDIT

transactional audit. See AUDIT.

TRANSACTIONAL IMMUNITY

transactional immunity. See IMMUNITY(3).

TRANSACTIONAL LAWYER

TRANSACTIONAL TAKEOVER DEFENSE

transactional takeover defense. See TAKEOVER DEFENSE.

TRANSACTION CAUSATION

transaction causation. See CAUSATION.

TRANSACTION COST

transaction cost. See COST(1).

TRANSACTION-OR-OCCURRENCE TEST transaction-or-occurrence test. A test used to determine whether, under Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), a particular claim is a compulsory counterclaim. • Four different tests have been suggested: (1) Are the legal and factual issues raised by the claim and counterclaim largely the same? (2) Would res judicata bar a later suit on the counterclaim in the absence of the compulsory-counterclaim rule? (3) Will substantially the same evidence support or refute both the plaintiff's claim and the counterclaim? (4) Are the claim and counterclaim logically related? See compulsory counterclaim under COUNTERCLAIM. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 776; Set-off and Counterclaim 60. C.J.S. Set-off and Counterclaim §§ 102–103.]

TRANSACTION SLIP

transaction slip. See CONFIRMATION SLIP.

transcarceration. The movement of prisoners or institutionalized mentally ill persons from facility to facility, rather than from a prison or an institution back to the community, as when a prisoner is transferred to a halfway house or to a drug-treatment facility.

transcribe,vb. To make a written or typed copy of (spoken material, esp. testimony).

TRANSCRIPT

transcript,n. A handwritten, printed, or typed copy of testimony given orally; esp., the official record of proceedings in a trial or hearing, as taken down by a court reporter. — Also termed report of proceedings; reporter's record. [Cases: Appeal and Error 593–611; Criminal Law 1104; Federal Courts 694. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 440, 447, 506–517.]

TRANSCRIPTION

transcription. 1. The act or process of transcribing. 2. Something transcribed; a transcript.

TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS

transcript of proceedings.A compilation of all documents relating to a bond issue, typically including the notices, affidavits of notices, a bond resolution (or bond ordinance), official statement, trust indenture and loan agreements, and minutes of meetings of all authorizing bodies.

TRANSEUNT CUM UNIVERSITATE

transeunt cum universitate (tran-see-*<<schwa>>nt k<<schwa>>m yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>*-tay-tee). [Latin] Hist. They are transferred with the whole estate.

colorable transfer.A sham transfer having the appearance of authenticity; a pretended transfer. See ILLUSORY-TRANSFER DOCTRINE. [Cases: Sales 197–218.5; Vendor and Purchaser 145–159. C.J.S. Sales §§ 214–218, 221, 223–229; Vendor and Purchaser §§ 378–393, 395–396.]

constructive transfer.A delivery of an item — esp. a controlled substance — by someone other than the owner but at the owner's direction. [Cases: Controlled Substances 32, 82.]

incomplete transfer.Tax. A decedent's inter vivos transfer that is not completed for federal estate-tax purposes because the decedent retains significant powers over the property's possession or enjoyment. • Because the transfer is incomplete, some or all of the property's value will be included in the transferor's gross estate. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2036–2038. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4159(3). C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 515.]

inter vivos transfer (in-t<<schwa>>r vI-vohs orvee-vohs). A transfer of property made during the transferor's lifetime.

testamentary transfer.A transfer made in a will. • The transfer may be of something less than absolute ownership. Cf. testamentary gift under GIFT.

transfer in contemplation of death.See gift causa mortis under GIFT.

transfer in fraud of creditors.A conveyance of property made in an attempt to prevent the transferor's creditors from making a claim to it. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances 1.]

transfer,vb.1. To convey or remove from one place or one person to another; to pass or hand over from one to another, esp. to change over the possession or control of. 2. To sell or give.

TRANSFERABLE

transferee. One to whom a property interest is conveyed.

TRANSFEEEE LIABILITY

transferee liability.Tax. The liability of a transferee to pay taxes owed by the transferor. • This liability is limited to the value of the asset transferred. The Internal Revenue Service can, for example, force a donee to pay the gift tax when the donor who made the transfer cannot pay it.

IRC (26 USCA) §§ 6901–6905. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4817; Taxation 1011. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 724; Taxation § 1701.]

transference.Scots law. The act of substituting a representative for a deceased litigant in a pending action. • This is similar to the common law's substitution of parties.

TRANSFER HEARING

transfer hearing.See HEARING.

TRANSFER OF A CASE

transfer of a case.The removal of a case from the jurisdiction of one court or judge to another by lawful authority. — Also termed transfer of a cause. See REMOVAL(2). [Cases: Removal of Cases 16. C.J.S. Removal of Causes § 2.]

TRANSFER OF VENUE

transfer of venue.See CHANGE OF VENUE.

TRANSFEROR

transferor. One who conveys an interest in property.

transfer payment.(usu. pl.) A governmental payment to a person who has neither provided goods or services nor invested money in exchange for the payment. • Examples include unemployment compensation and welfare payments. [Cases: United States 82(1). C.J.S. United States §§ 155, 158.]

transfer price.See PRICE.

TRANSFERRED INTENT

transferred intent.See INTENT(1).

TRANSFERRED-INTENT DOCTRINE transferred-intent doctrine.The rule that if one person intends to harm a second person but instead unintentionally harms a third, the first person's criminal or tortious intent toward the second applies to the third as well. • Thus, the offender may be prosecuted for an intent crime or sued by the third person for an intentional tort. See INTENT. [Cases: Assault and Battery 3, 49; Torts 4. C.J.S. Assault and Battery §§ 5, 9, 15, 67, 71; Torts §§ 2, 23.]

transferred malice.See MALICE.

transfer statute. A provision that allows or mandates the trial of a juvenile as an adult in a criminal court for a criminal act. • Every state has some form of transfer statute. The Supreme Court has held that a juvenile cannot be transferred to criminal court under a discretionary statute “without ceremony — without hearing, without effective assistance of counsel, without a statement of reasons.” Kent v. United States, 383 U.S. 541, 554, 86 S.Ct. 1045, 1053–54 (1966).

automatic-transfer statute. A law requiring the transfer from delinquency court to criminal court for certain statutorily enumerated offenses if certain statutory requirements are met.

discretionary-transfer statute. A law that allows, but does not mandate, the transfer from delinquency court to criminal court for certain statutorily enumerated offenses if certain statutory requirements are met. • The prosecutor has discretion to request the transfer, and the judge has discretion to order the transfer.

reverse transfer statute. A provision that allows a criminal court to return certain cases to juvenile court.

TRANSFERS TO MINORS ACT

Transfers to Minors Act. See UNIFORM TRANSFERS TO MINORS ACT.

TRANSFER TAX

transfer tax. See TAX.

TRANSFER WARRANT

transfer warrant. See WARRANT(2).

transformative use. Copyright. The use of copyrighted material in a manner, or for a purpose, that differs from the original use in such a way that the expression, meaning, or message is essentially new. • The term was coined by Judge Pierre N. Leval in a 1990 law-review article entitled Toward a Fair Use Standard, 103 Harv. L. Rev. 1105, 1111 (1990). The concept was first applied by the U.S. Supreme Court in Campbell v. Acuff–Rose Music, Inc., 510 U.S. 569, 114 S.Ct. 1164 (1994). The Court held that the transformative use in that case was a fair, noninfringing use of the plaintiff's copyright. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 53.2. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 45–46, 48–50.]

transgenic (tranz-jen-ik), adj. Patents. Of, relating to, or describing a living organism that has been genetically altered by introducing recombinant DNA from another organism.

The right of a vessel or airplane to exercise freedom of navigation and overflight solely for the purpose of continuous and expeditious transit between one part of the high seas or an exclusive economic zone and another part of the high seas or an exclusive economic zone. — Also termed right of transit passage. Cf. INNOCENT PASSAGE.

TRANSIT TERRA CUM ONERE

transit terra cum onere (tran-sit [or tran-zit] ter-<<schwa>> k<<schwa>>m on-<<schwa>>r-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. The land passes with its burdens.

TRANSLATION

translation, n. 1. The transformation of language from one form to another; esp., the systematic rendering of the language of a book, document, or speech into another language.

“Generally speaking, a translation need not consist of transferring from one language into another; it may apply to the expression of the same thoughts in other words of the same language.” Rasmussen v. Baker, 50 P. 819, 826 (Wyo. 1897).

2. Archaic. The transfer of property. 3. Eccles. law. The removal of a bishop from one diocese to another.

translative (trans- or tranz-lay-tiv), adj. Making or causing a transfer or conveyance.

TRANSLATIVE FACT

translative fact. See FACT.

TRANSMISSION

transmission.Civil law. The passing of an inheritance to an heir.

TRANSMIT

transmit,vb.1. To send or transfer (a thing) from one person or place to another. 2. To communicate.

TRANSMITTAL LETTER

transmittal letter.A nonsubstantive letter that establishes a record of delivery, such as a letter to a court clerk advising that a particular pleading is enclosed for filing. • Lawyers have traditionally opened transmittal letters with the phrase “Enclosed please find,” even though that phrasing has been widely condemned in business-writing handbooks since the late 19th century. A transmittal letter may properly begin with a range of openers as informal as “Here is” to the more formal “Enclosed is.” — Also termed cover letter.

transmutation. A change in the nature of something; esp., in family law, the transformation of separate property into marital property, or of marital property into separate property.

TRANSNATIONAL ADOPTION

transnational adoption.See international adoption under ADOPTION.

TRANSNATIONAL CORPORATION

transnational corporation.See multinational corporation under CORPORATION.

TRANSNATIONAL LAW

transnational law. 1. The amalgam of common principles of domestic and international law dealing esp. with problems arising from agreements made between sovereign states and foreign private parties. 2. The problems to which such principles apply. Cf. INTERNATIONAL LAW.

transparency. Openness; clarity; lack of guile and attempts to hide damaging information. • The word is used of financial disclosures, organizational policies and practices, lawmaking, and other activities where organizations interaction with the public.

TRANSPORT

transport,vb. To carry or convey (a thing) from one place to another.

TRANSPORTATION

transportation,n.1. The movement of goods or persons from one place to another by a carrier. 2.Criminal law. A type of punishment that sends the criminal out of the country to another place (usu. a penal colony) for a specified period. Cf. DEPORTATION.

TRANSPORTATION SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

Transportation Security Administration. The federal agency charged with promoting safety and security of air, water, rail, and highway transportation. • The agency was created in the Department of Transportation after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, and was transferred to the Department of Homeland Security in 2002.

TRANSRACIAL ADOPTION

transracial adoption. See ADOPTION.

transsexual. A person born with the physical characteristics of one sex but who has undergone, or is preparing to undergo, sex-change surgery. See SEX REASSIGNMENT .

TRANSSHIPMENT

transshipment. Maritime law. The act of taking cargo out of one ship and loading it on another. • Transshipment may also involve transfer of cargo to another mode of transportation, such as rail or truck. [Cases: Shipping 112. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 266–267.] — transship, vb.

TRANSVESTITIVE FACT

transvestitive fact. See FACT.

trap, n. 1. A device for capturing living creatures, such as a pitfall, snare, or machine that shuts suddenly.

mantrap. A booby-trap; esp., a device to catch a trespasser or burglar. • A mantrap is not illegal if it is designed merely to sound an alarm and not cause bodily harm. Illegal mantraps include manufactured devices such as spring guns, and dangerous hidden conditions (manufactured or natural) that can injure a person, such as pitfalls. — Also spelled man-trap.

2. Any device or contrivance by which one may be caught unawares; stratagem; snare.
3. Torts. An ultrahazardous hidden peril of which the property owner or occupier, but not a licensee, has knowledge. • A trap can exist even if it was not designed or intended to catch or entrap anything. [Cases: Negligence 1040(3). C.J.S. Negligence §§ 440–451, 487–491, 527, 537–538, 542–554, 560, 562–563, 569–570, 572.]

TRAVAUX PRÉPARATOIRES

travaux préparatoires (tra-voh pray-par-<<schwa>>-twah[r]z). [French “preparatory works”] Materials used in preparing the ultimate form of an agreement or statute, and esp. of an international treaty; the draft or legislative history of a treaty. See LEGISLATIVE HISTORY.

TRAVEL-ACCIDENT INSURANCE

travel-accident insurance. See INSURANCE.

TRAVEL ACT

Travel Act. A federal law, enacted in 1961, that prohibits conduct intended to promote, direct, or manage illegal business activities in interstate commerce. • This statute was enacted to create federal jurisdiction over many criminal activities traditionally handled by state and local governments to help those jurisdictions cope with increasingly complex interstate criminal activity. 18 USCA § 1952. [Cases: Commerce 82.10. C.J.S. Commerce §§ 133–134, 136–141.]

traveled place. A place where the public has, in some manner, acquired the legal right to travel.

TRAVELER

traveler, n. A person who passes from place to place, for any reason.

TRAVELER'S CHECK

traveler's check. See CHECK.

TRAVELER'S LETTER OF CREDIT

traveler's letter of credit. See LETTER OF CREDIT.

TRAVEL EXPENSE

travel expense. See EXPENSE.

traverse (trav-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩rs), n. Common-law pleading. A formal denial of a factual allegation made in the opposing party's pleading <Smith filed a traverse to Allen's complaint, asserting that he did not knowingly provide false information>. See DENIAL. [Cases: Pleading 112–129. C.J.S. Pleading §§ 183–196.] — traverse (trav-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩rs or tr⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-v⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩rs), vb.

“It is said that the technical term traverse, from transverto, to turn over, is applied to an issue taken upon an indictment for a misdemeanor, and means nothing more than turning over or putting off the trial to a following session or assize; and that thus it is that the officer of the court asks the party whether he is ready to try then, or will traverse to the next session; though some have referred its meaning originally to the denying or taking issue upon an indictment, without reference to the delay of trial, and which seems more correct.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 486 (2d ed. 1826).

common traverse. A traverse consisting of a tender of issue — that is, a denial accompanied by a formal offer for decision of the point denied — with a denial that expressly contradicts the terms of the allegation traversed. — Also termed specific traverse. [Cases: Pleading 117. C.J.S. Pleading § 184.]

“The common or specific traverse is an express denial of a particular allegation in the opposing pleading in the terms of the allegation, accompanied by a tender of issue or formal offer of the point denied for trial.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 168, at 303 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

cumulative traverse. A traverse that analyzes a proposition into its constituent parts and traverses them cumulatively. • It amounts to the same thing as traversing the one entire proposition, since the several parts traversed must all make up one entire proposition or point.

general traverse. A denial of all the facts in an opponent's pleading.

special traverse. A denial of one material fact in an opponent's pleading; a traverse that explains or qualifies the denial. • The essential parts of a special traverse are an inducement, a denial, and a verification. [Cases: Pleading 118.]

specific traverse. See common traverse.

TRAVERSE JURY

traverse jury. See petit jury under JURY.

traverser, n. One who traverses or denies a pleading.

TRAVERSE THE REQUIREMENT

traverse the requirement, vb. Patents. To (1) respond in detail to a patent examiner's decision that the patent application claims more than one invention and (2) ask that the restriction requirement be reconsidered. • The response must specifically explain why restriction should not be required, not merely assert that the requirement is wrong. Failure to traverse a requirement forfeits any rights to appeal the decision.

TREACHERY

treachery, n. A deliberate and willful betrayal of trust and confidence.

treason, n. The offense of attempting to overthrow the government of the state to which one owes allegiance, either by making war against the state or by materially supporting its enemies. — Also termed high treason; alta proditio. Cf. SEDITION. [Cases: Treason 1. C.J.S. Treason §§ 2–3, 5.] — treasonable, treasonous, adj.

still more grossness and aggravation. But this horrible denunciation was very seldom executed in its more terrible niceties.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 702 (2d ed. 1826).

“[S]everal important characteristics marked off high treason from all other crimes. For one thing, it earned a peculiarly ghastly punishment. For another, it was ‘unclergyable,’ while every felony was ‘clergyable’ unless some statute had otherwise ordained. Thirdly, while the felon's land escheated to his lord, the traitor's land was forfeited to the king. This last distinction influenced the development of the law.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 500 (2d ed. 1899).

“Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them Aid and Comfort. No Person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the Testimony of two Witnesses to the same overt Act, or on Confession in open Court.” U.S. Const. art. III, § 3.

constructive treason. 1. Speech that manifests a desire or intent to make war against the state or materially support an enemy, even though the speech is unaccompanied by acts that further the desire or intent. • There is no crime of constructive treason in U.S. law because treason requires an affirmative act, and intent alone cannot substitute for an act. Cf. SEDITION. 2.Hist. Speech that is critical of the government. • This sense arose during the reign of Henry VIII of England. Critical speech remained a capital crime until the early 18th century.

petty treason.Archaic. Murder of one's employer or husband. • Until 1828, this act was considered treason under English law. — Also spelled petit treason.

“The frequent reference to high treason is a carry-over from an ancient division of the offense that has long since disappeared. In the feudal stage of history the relation of lord to vassal was quite similar to the relation of king to subject. The relation of husband to wife came to be regarded in the same category, as also did the relation of master to servant, and that of prelate to clergyman. And just as it was high treason to kill the king, so a malicious homicide was petit treason if it involved a killing of (originally, lord by vassal, and later) husband by wife, master by mistress or servant, or prelate by clergyman. When the special brutality provided by the common law for the punishment of petit treason disappeared, this crime became merged with murder and only one crime of treason remained.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 498–99 (3d ed. 1982).

TREASONABLE MISDEMEANOR

reasonable misdemeanor.English law. An act that is likely to endanger or alarm the monarch, or disturb the public peace in the presence of the monarch. Cf. TREASON FELONY.

TREASON FELONY

treason felony.English law. An act that shows an intention of committing treason, unaccompanied by any further act to carry out that intention. • This offense usu. results in life imprisonment rather than the death penalty. Cf. TREASONABLE MISDEMEANOR.

TREAS. REG.

Treas. Reg.abbr.TREASURY REGULATION.

TREASURER

treasurer. An organization's chief financial officer. • The treasurer's duties typically include prudently depositing (or, if authorized, investing) and safeguarding the organization's funds and otherwise managing its finances; monitoring compliance with any applicable law relating to such finances and filing any required report; disbursing money as authorized; and reporting to the organization on the state of the treasury. — Also termed finance officer; financial secretary; quartermaster. [Cases: Corporations 301. C.J.S. Corporations § 470.]

TREASURER, LORD HIGH

Treasurer, Lord High.See LORD HIGH TREASURER.

TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES

Treasurer of the United States.The officer in the U.S. Department of the Treasury responsible for overseeing the operations of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the U.S. Mint.

treasure trove.[Law French “treasure found”] Valuables (usu. gold or silver) found hidden in the ground or other private place, the owner of which is unknown. • At common law in the United States, the finder of a treasure trove can usu. claim good title against all except the true owner. But until 1996, all treasure trove found in the United Kingdom belonged to the Crown.

“Treasure hid in the earth, not upon the earth, nor in the sea, and coin though not hidden, being found is the king's; we call it treasure trove.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 177 (1759).

“Treasure trove consists essentially of articles of gold and silver, intentionally hidden for safety in the earth or in some secret place, the owner being unknown, although it is probable that the category might include articles made from the required metals buried in the ground for other purposes, for example in connection with an ancient sepulture. In the United States, the state has never claimed title to lost property by virtue of its character as treasure trove, and it has been stated that the law relating thereto is merged with that of lost goods generally, although there is authority for the proposition that while treasure trove in the United States belongs to the finder, found goods not of that character go to the owner of the locus in quo.” Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 13, at 27–28 (2d ed. 1955).

treasury. 1. A place or building in which stores of wealth are kept; esp., a place where public revenues are deposited and kept and from which money is disbursed to defray government expenses. [Cases: United States 81.C.J.S. United States § 154.] 2. (cap.) DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY.

TREASURY, FIRST LORD

Treasury, First Lord. See FIRST LORD OF THE TREASURY.

TREASURY BENCH

Treasury Bench. In the British House of Commons, the first row of seats on the right hand of the speaker. • The Treasury Bench is occupied by the First Lord of the Treasury or principal minister of the Crown.

TREASURY BILL

Treasury bill. A short-term debt security issued by the federal government, with a maturity of 13, 26, or 52 weeks. • These bills — auctioned weekly or quarterly — pay interest in the form of the difference between their discounted purchase price and their par value at maturity. — Abbr. T-bill. [Cases: United States 89. C.J.S. United States §§ 165–166.]

TREASURY BOND

Treasury bond. A long-term debt security issued by the federal government, with a maturity of 10 to 30 years. • These bonds are considered risk-free, but they usu. pay relatively little interest. — Abbr. T-bond. [Cases: United States 91. C.J.S. United States §§ 164, 167.]

TREASURY CERTIFICATE

treasury certificate. An obligation of the federal government maturing in one year and on which interest is paid on a coupon basis. [Cases: United States 90. C.J.S. United States §§ 162, 167.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

Treasury Department. See DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY.

TREASURY NOTE

Treasury note. An intermediate-term debt security issued by the federal government, with a maturity of two to ten years. • These notes are considered risk-free, but they usu. pay relatively little interest. — Abbr. T-note. [Cases: United States 90. C.J.S. United States §§ 162, 167.]

TREASURY REGULATION

Treasury Regulation. A regulation promulgated by the U.S. Treasury Department to explain or interpret a section of the Internal Revenue Code. • Treasury Regulations are binding on all taxpayers. — Abbr. Treas. Reg. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3038–3042, 3045, 3048.]

Treasurys. Debt obligations of the federal government backed by the full faith and credit of the government. See TREASURY BILL; TREASURY BOND; TREASURY CERTIFICATE ; TREASURY NOTE. [Cases: United States 89–91. C.J.S. United States §§ 162, 164–167.]

treasury security. See treasury stock under STOCK.

TREASURY SHARE

treasury share. See treasury stock under STOCK.

TREASURY STOCK

treasury stock. See STOCK.

TREASURY WARRANT

treasury warrant. See WARRANT(2).

TREATING-PHYSICIAN RULE

treating-physician rule. The principle that a treating physician's diagnoses and findings about the degree of a social-security claimant's impairment are binding on an administrative-law judge in the absence of substantial contrary evidence. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 143.65. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare § 71.]

treaty. 1. An agreement formally signed, ratified, or adhered to between two nations or sovereigns; an international agreement concluded between two or more states in written form and governed by international law. — Also termed accord; convention; covenant; declaration; pact. Cf. EXECUTIVE AGREEMENT. [Cases: Treaties 1. C.J.S. Treaties § 2.]

“[T]he legal terminology used by the United States to describe international agreements is markedly different from that employed elsewhere. Under the U.S. Constitution, the term ‘treaty’ has a particular meaning — an agreement made by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate.” David J. Bederman, International Law Frameworks 158 (2001).

commercial treaty. A bilateral or multilateral treaty concerning trade or other mercantile activities. • Such a treaty may be general in nature, as by supplying the framework of long-term commercial relations. Or it may be specific, as by detailing the conditions of particular branches of trade or other commercial transactions. Sometimes a treaty of this kind deals with an individual project, such as a guaranty agreement. [Cases: Treaties 8. C.J.S. Treaties § 6.]

defensive treaty. A treaty in which each party agrees to come to the other's aid if one is attacked by another nation. See treaty of alliance.

“Defensive treaties, as generally understood, are made to secure the parties to them against aggression from other states. They may, also, aim at the maintenance of internal quiet, or of neutrality amid the conflicts of neighboring powers. To attempt to gain any of these objects is not necessarily contrary to the law of nations or to natural justice. Mutual aid, indeed, against the disturbers of internal quiet, may secure an absolute government against popular revolutions in favor of liberty, but if a confederation or alliance may secure to its members the enjoyment of free institutions, there is no reason, as far as international law is concerned, why institutions of an opposite kind may not support themselves in the same way.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 107, at 171 (5th ed. 1878).

dispositive treaty (dis-poz-<<schwa>>-tiv). A treaty by which a country takes over territory by impressing a special character on it, creating something analogous to a servitude or easement in private law.

guarantee treaty.An agreement between countries directly or indirectly establishing a unilateral or reciprocal guarantee. — Also spelled guaranty treaty. — Also termed treaty of guarantee; quasi-guarantee treaty; pseudo-guarantee treaty.

“In many instances where the term ‘guarantee’ is used in international treaties, the contracting parties merely intend to underline their willingness to comply with the obligation they have entered into. Obligations of this kind do not fall within the concept of guarantee in the proper sense of the term. In this particular respect, the expression ‘pseudo-guarantees’ or ‘quasi-guarantee treaties’ is used.” George Ress, “Guarantee Treaties,” in 2 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 634 (1995).

mixed treaty.A treaty with characteristics of different types of treaties, esp. contrasting types (e.g., permanent and transitory, or personal and real).

nonaggression treaty.See NONAGGRESSION PACT.

nonproliferation treaty.A treaty forbidding the transfer of nuclear weapons from a country with a nuclear arsenal to one that does not have nuclear-weapons capability. • The first such treaty was concluded in 1968, and now more than 100 nations have agreed to its terms. — Also termed nuclear-nonproliferation treaty.

offensive treaty.A treaty in which the parties agree to declare war jointly on another nation and join forces to wage the war. See treaty of alliance.

peace treaty.A treaty signed by heads of state to end a war. — Also termed treaty of peace. [Cases: War and National Emergency 33. C.J.S. War and National Defense § 50.]

“A peace differs not from a truce essentially in the length of its contemplated duration, for there may be very long armistices and a state of peace continuing only a definite number of years. The ancients often concluded treaties of peace which were to expire after a certain time” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 158, at 268 (5th ed. 1878).

permanent treaty.A treaty that contemplates ongoing performance (as with a treaty of neutrality).

personal treaty.Hist. A treaty relating exclusively to the contracting sovereign as a person. • Examples of personal treaties are family alliances and treaties guaranteeing the throne to a particular sovereign and his or her family. With the advent of constitutional government in Europe, personal treaties have lost their importance.

pseudo-guarantee treaty.See guarantee treaty.

quasi-guarantee treaty.See guarantee treaty.

real treaty.A treaty relating solely to the subject matter of the compact, independently of the persons of the contracting sovereigns. • Real treaties continue to bind the state even when the heads of government change.

transitory treaty.A treaty carried into effect once and for all, so that it is complete when the act has been performed (as with a treaty of cession).

treaty of alliance.A treaty establishing mutual and reciprocal support obligations. • A treaty of alliance may be for support in defense, aggression, or both. See defensive treaty; offensive treaty.

“A treaty of alliance can bind the parties to no injustice, nor justify either of them in being accessory to an act of bad faith on the part of another. Hence a defensive, still more an offensive alliance, can only contemplate, if lawful, the warding off of intended injustice.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 107, at 172 (5th ed. 1878).

treaty of guarantee.See guarantee treaty.

treaty of neutrality.A treaty in which the parties agree not to engage in any aggressive action against one another, whether individually or jointly with others, and not to interfere with the other party's affairs. • There is no commitment to aid another party in the event of war — only to refrain from becoming involved.

“Treaties of neutrality are reciprocal engagements to have no part in the conflicts between other powers — to remain at peace in an apprehended or an actual war. They are suggested by, and prevent the evils of that interference of nations in each other's affairs, for the preservation of the balance of power or the safety of the parties interfering, which is so common in modern history.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 107, at 172 (5th ed. 1878).

treaty of peace.See peace treaty.

2. A contract or agreement between insurers providing for treaty reinsurance. See treaty reinsurance under REINSURANCE. [Cases: Insurance 3593.] 3. A negotiated contract or agreement between private persons.

private treaty.An agreement to convey property negotiated by the buyer and seller or their agents. • This term is esp. common in the U.K.

TREATY CLAUSE

Treaty Clause.The constitutional provision giving the President the power to make treaties, with the advice and consent of the Senate. U.S. Const. art. II, § 2. [Cases: Treaties 2. C.J.S. Treaties § 3.]

TREATY-CREATED LAW

treaty-created law.See CONVENTIONAL LAW.

TREATY-MADE LAW

treaty-made law.See CONVENTIONAL LAW.

TREATY OF REINSURANCE

treaty of reinsurance. See REINSURANCE TREATY.

TREATY POWER

treaty power. The President's constitutional authority to make treaties, with the advice and consent of the Senate. See TREATY CLAUSE. [Cases: Treaties 2. C.J.S. Treaties § 3.]

treaty reinsurance. See REINSURANCE.

TREBLE DAMAGES

treble damages. See DAMAGES.

trebucket (tree-b<<schwa>>k-it). See CASTIGATORY.

trend. A price pattern in the stock market generally or in a particular stock.

major trend. A long-term trend of the stock market; a general increase or decrease of stock prices over an extended period. — Also termed fundamental trend.

market trend. The direction of stock-market prices over a several-month period.

trespass (tres-p<<schwa>>s ortres-pas), n. 1. An unlawful act committed against the person or property of another; esp., wrongful entry on another's real property. [Cases: Trespass 1–15. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 2, 4–16, 28–29, 74, 164.] 2. At common law, a legal action for injuries resulting from an unlawful act of this kind. 3. Archaic. MISDEMEANOR. — trespass, vb. — trespassory (tres-p<<schwa>>-sor-ee), adj.

“The familiar legend on notice-boards, ‘Trespassers will be prosecuted,’ implies that it is a crime, but this may usually be dismissed as ‘a wooden lie.’ Yet in time past the idea was correct, for trespass of any sort was punishable by fine and imprisonment as well as redressible by an action for damages, and actually it was not until 1694 that the punitive element disappeared although it had faded into obsolescence long before that date. But nowadays trespass is never criminal except under special statutes which make it punishable” P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 90, at 307 (5th ed. 1950).

“The term trespass has been used by lawyers and laymen in three senses of varying degrees of generality. (1) In its widest and original signification it includes any wrongful act — any infringement or transgression of the rule of right. This use is common in the Authorized Version of the Bible, and was presumably familiar when that version was first published. But it never obtained recognition in the technical language of the law, and is now archaic even in popular speech. (2) In a second and narrower signification — its true legal sense — the term means any legal wrong for which the appropriate remedy was a writ of trespass — viz. any direct and forcible injury to person, land, or chattels. (3) The third and narrowest meaning of the term is that in which, in accordance with popular speech, it is limited to one particular kind of trespass in the second sense — viz. the tort of trespass to land (trespass quare clausum fregit).” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 4 (17th ed. 1977).

cattle-trespass.Hist. Trespass by one's cattle or other animals on another's land, as a result of which the other might either distrain them damage feasant or sue for trespass in the local courts. • At first (from the early 13th century) this type of trespass applied only to intentional trespass by the keeper of the cattle, but in 1353 it was extended to beasts that had merely escaped. This type of trespass gave rise to strict liability.

“It has long been settled that liability for cattle-trespass is independent of negligence, and it is that which constitutes its strictness. And, in spite of some confusion in time past, it is quite distinct from the scienter type of liability. In Lee v. Riley [(1865), 18 C.B. (N.S.) 722] the defendant's mare strayed through a gap in his fence, which it was his duty to repair, to the plaintiff's land and there quarrelled with and kicked the plaintiff's horse. The defendant was held liable for cattle-trespass. A great deal of argument was expended at the trial on whether the defendant had notice of the ferocious disposition of his mare, but Erle, C.J., pointed out that, however relevant that might have been in a scienter action, it was beside the mark in one for cattle-trespass.” P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 148, at 518 (5th ed. 1950).

constructive trespass.See trespass to chattels.

continuing trespass.A trespass in the nature of a permanent invasion on another's rights, such as a sign that overhangs another's property. [Cases: Trespass 51. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 143, 152.]

criminal trespass. 1. A trespass on property that is clearly marked against trespass by signs or fences. [Cases: Trespass 81. C.J.S. Trespass § 183.] 2. A trespass in which the trespasser remains on the property after being ordered off by a person authorized to do so.

innocent trespass.A trespass committed either unintentionally or in good faith. [Cases: Trespass 2. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 6, 164.]

joint trespass.A trespass that two or more persons have united in committing, or that some have actually committed while others commanded, encouraged, or directed it. [Cases: Trespass 31. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 3, 34.]

permanent trespass.A trespass consisting of a series of acts, done on consecutive days, that are of the same nature and that are renewed or continued from day to day, so that the acts in the aggregate form one indivisible harm.

trespass ab initio (ab i-nish-ee-oh). An entry on land that, though begun innocently or with a privilege, is deemed a trespass from the beginning because of conduct that abuses the privilege. [Cases: Trespass 13. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 14, 16.]

trespass by relation. A trespass committed when the plaintiff had a right to immediate possession of land but had not yet exercised that right. • When the plaintiff takes possession, a legal fiction treats the plaintiff as having had possession ever since the accrual of the right of entry. This is known as trespass by relation because the plaintiff's possession relates back to the time when the plaintiff first acquired a right to possession.

trespass de bonis asportatis (dee boh-nis as-p<<schwa>>r-tay-tis). [Latin “trespass for carrying goods away”] 1. A wrongful taking of chattels. • This type of trespassory taking was also an element of common-law larceny. 2. At common law, an action to recover damages for the wrongful taking of chattels. — Abbr. trespass d.b.a. — Often shortened to trespass de bonis. — Also termed trespass to personal property. [Cases: Trespass 6. C.J.S. Trespass § 9.]

trespass on the case. At common law, an action to recover damages that are not the immediate result of a wrongful act but rather a later consequence. • This action was the precursor to a variety of modern-day tort claims, including negligence, nuisance, and business torts. — Often shortened to case. — Also termed action on the case; breve de transgressione super casum. [Cases: Trespass 1, 16, 17. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 2, 4–5, 62–64, 70–74.]

“The most important of the writs framed under the authority of the statute of Westminster 2 is that of ‘trespass on the case,’ to meet cases analogous to trespass in delict, but lacking the element of direct or immediate force or violence. This writ gave a form of action in which the court was enabled to render judgment of damages in cases of fraud, deceit, negligence, want of skill, defamation oral or written, and all other injurious acts or omissions resulting in harm to person or property, but wanting the vi et armis, the element of direct force and violence, to constitute trespass.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 7 (2d ed. 1899).

“Common law recognizes a distinction between the actions of trespass vi et armis (or simply trespass) and trespass on the case. This distinction has been expressed by stating that a tort committed by the direct application of force is remediable by an action for trespass, while a tort accomplished indirectly is a matter for trespass on the case. Other authority makes the distinction on the basis of the defendant's intent, stating that trespass involves a willful and deliberate act while trespass on the case contemplates an act or omission resulting from negligence.” 1 Am. Jur. 2d Actions § 23, at 738 (1994).

trespass quare clausum fregit (kwair-ee-klaw-z<<schwa>>m-free-jit). [Latin “why he broke the close”] 1. A person's unlawful entry on another's land that is visibly enclosed. • This tort consists of doing any of the following without lawful justification: (1) entering upon land in the possession of another, (2) remaining on the land, or (3) placing or projecting any object upon it. 2. At common law, an action to recover damages resulting from another's unlawful entry on one's land that is visibly enclosed. — Abbr. trespass q.c.f. — Also termed trespass to real property; trespass to land; quare clausum querentis fregit. See trespass vi et armis. [Cases: Trespass 10, 16,

17. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 13–15, 62–64, 70–74.]

“Every unwarrantable entry on another's soil the law entitles a trespass by breaking his close; the words of the writ of trespass commanding the defendant to shew cause, quare clausum querentis fregit. For every man's land is in the eye of the law enclosed and set apart from his neighbour's: and that either by a visible and material fence, as one field is divided from another by a hedge; or, by an ideal invisible boundary, existing only in the contemplation of law, as when one man's land adjoins to another's in the same field. And every such entry or breach of a man's close carries necessarily along with it some damage or other: for, if no other special loss can be assigned, yet still the words of the writ itself specify one general damage, viz. the treading down and bruising his herbage.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 209–10 (1768).

trespass to chattels. The act of committing, without lawful justification, any act of direct physical interference with a chattel possessed by another. • The act must amount to a direct forcible injury. — Also termed trespass to goods; constructive trespass. [Cases: Trespass 5. C.J.S. Trespass § 9.]

“Trespass to goods is a wrongful interference with the possession of them. It may take innumerable forms, such as scratching the panel of a coach, removing a tire from a car, injuring or destroying goods, or in the case of animals, beating or killing them, or infecting them with disease. All that is necessary is that the harm done should be direct” P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 99, at 345 (5th ed. 1950).

trespass to goods. See trespass to chattels.

trespass to land. See trespass quare clausum fregit (2).

trespass to personal property. See trespass de bonis asportatis.

trespass to real property. See trespass quare clausum fregit (2).

trespass to try title. 1. In some states, an action for the recovery of property unlawfully withheld from an owner who has the immediate right to possession. 2. A procedure under which a claim to title may be adjudicated.

trespass vi et armis (vi et ahr-mis). [Latin “with force and arms”] 1. At common law, an action for damages resulting from an intentional injury to person or property, esp. if by violent means; trespass to the plaintiff's person, as in illegal assault, battery, wounding, or imprisonment, when not under color of legal process, or when the battery, wounding, or imprisonment was in the first instance lawful, but unnecessary violence was used or the imprisonment continued after the process had ceased to be lawful. • This action also lay for injury to relative rights, such as menacing tenants or servants, beating and wounding a spouse, criminal conversation with or seducing a wife, or debauching a daughter or servant. 2. See trespass quare clausum fregit. • In this sense, the “force” is implied by the “breaking” of the close (that is, an enclosed area), even if no real force is used. [Cases: Trespass 17. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 70–74.]

trespasser. One who commits a trespass; one who intentionally and without consent or privilege enters another's property. • In tort law, a landholder owes no duty to unforeseeable trespassers. Cf. INVITEE; LICENSEE(2). [Cases: Trespass 9. C.J.S. Trespass § 12.]

“The word ‘trespasser’ has an ugly sound, but it covers the wicked and the innocent. The burglar and the arrogant squatter are trespassers, but so are all sorts of comparatively innocent and respectable persons such as a walker in the countryside who unhindered strolls across an open field. Perhaps much of the trouble in this area has arisen from ‘the simplistic stereotype’ of the definition. The courts are therefore beginning to recognise that the duty of the occupier may vary according to the nature of the trespasser.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 278 (17th ed. 1977).

innocent trespasser. One who enters another's land unlawfully, but either inadvertently or believing in a right to do so. [Cases: Trespass 2, 23. C.J.S. Trespass §§ 6, 36–37, 39–45, 164.]

trespass for mesne profits. Hist. An action — supplementing an action for ejectment — brought against a tenant in possession to recover the profits wrongfully received during the tenant's occupation. [Cases: Ejectment 124. C.J.S. Ejectment §§ 139–140.]

tret (tret), n. An allowance or abatement of a certain weight or quantity that a seller makes to a buyer because of water or dust that may be mixed with a commodity. Cf. TARE.

triable, adj. Subject or liable to judicial examination and trial .

TRIABLE EITHER WAY

triable either way. English law. (Of an offense) prosecutable either in the Crown Court or in a magistrates' court.

“The criminal courts in England and Wales are the magistrates' courts and the Crown Court. Those offences considered least serious are summary offences, triable only in the magistrates' courts. Those offences considered most serious are triable only on indictment, in the Crown Court. A large number of offences, such as theft and most burglaries, are ‘triable either way,’ in a magistrates' court or the Crown Court. For these offences the defendant can elect to be tried at the Crown Court, where there is a judge and jury. If the defendant does not wish a Crown Court trial, the magistrates may decide (having heard representations from the prosecutor) that the case is so serious that it should be committed to the Crown Court for trial.” Andrew Ashworth, Principles of Criminal Law 16 (1991).

trial. A formal judicial examination of evidence and determination of legal claims in an adversary proceeding. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1951; Trial 18. C.J.S. Trial §§ 91–92.]

abortive trial. See MISTRIAL.

bench trial. A trial before a judge without a jury. • The judge decides questions of fact as well as questions of law. — Also termed trial to the bench; nonjury trial; court trial; trial before the court (abbr. TBC); judge trial. [Cases: Criminal Law 247–260.13; Federal Civil Procedure 2251; Trial 367–387. C.J.S. Trial §§ 1018–1072.]

bifurcated trial. A trial that is divided into two stages, such as for guilt and punishment or for liability and damages. — Also termed two-stage trial. Cf. SEVERANCE(2). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1954; Sentencing and Punishment 334; Trial 3. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1497, 1499, 1531–1532, 1542; Trial §§ 17–27.]

closed trial. A trial that is not open to the public, usu. because of some overriding concern such as a need to protect a child's anonymity or for security.

court trial. See bench trial.

joint trial. A trial involving two or more parties; esp., a criminal trial of two or more persons for the same or similar offenses. [Cases: Criminal Law 622. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 562–564.]

judge trial. See bench trial.

jury trial. A trial in which the factual issues are determined by a jury, not by the judge. — Also termed trial by jury.

mock trial. See MOCK TRIAL.

new trial. A postjudgment retrial or reexamination of some or all of the issues determined in an earlier judgment. • The trial court may order a new trial by motion of a party or on the court's own initiative. Also, when an appellate court reverses the trial court's judgment, it may remand the case to the trial court for a new trial on some or all of the issues on which the reversal is based. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 59; Fed. R. Crim. P. 33. See MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL; REMAND. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2311; New Trial 0.5.]

nonbinding minitrial. See summary jury trial.

nonbinding summary jury trial. See summary jury trial.

nonjury trial. See bench trial.

perfect trial. A trial free from all error.

political trial. A trial (esp. a criminal prosecution) in which either the prosecution or the defendant (or both) uses the proceedings as a platform to espouse a particular political belief; a trial of a person for a political crime. See SHOW TRIAL.

public trial. A trial that anyone may attend or observe.

separate trial. 1. Criminal procedure. The individual trial of each of several persons jointly accused of a crime. Fed. R. Crim. P. 14. [Cases: Criminal Law 622.1–622.5. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 565–577.] 2.Civil procedure. Within a single action, a distinct trial of a separate claim or issue — or of a group of claims or issues — ordered by the trial judge, usu. to conserve resources or avoid prejudice. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b). Cf. SEVERANCE(2). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1953–1965; Trial 3. C.J.S. Trial §§ 17–27.]

short-cause trial.See short cause under CAUSE(3).

show trial.See SHOW TRIAL.

speedy trial.See SPEEDY TRIAL.

state trial.A trial for a political offense.

summary jury trial.A settlement technique in which the parties argue before a mock jury, which then reaches a nonbinding verdict that will assist the parties in evaluating their positions. — Also termed nonbinding summary jury trial; nonbinding minitrial. Cf. MOCK TRIAL. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2252.]

trial at bar.Hist. A trial before all the judges of the court in which the proceedings take place. — Also termed trial at the bar.

trial at nisi prius (nI-sIprI-*<<schwa>>*s).Hist. A trial before the justices of assize and nisi prius in the county where the facts are alleged to have occurred, and from which county the jurors have been summoned.

trial before the court.See bench trial.

trial by battle.See TRIAL BY COMBAT.

trial by certificate.Hist. A trial in which the issue is decided on evidence in the form of witnesses' certificates of what they individually know.

trial by combat.See TRIAL BY COMBAT.

trial by duel.See TRIAL BY COMBAT.

trial by inspection.Hist. A trial in which the judge decided the dispute by individual observation and investigation, without the benefit of a jury.

trial by jury.See jury trial.

trial by ordeal.See ORDEAL.

trial by record.Hist. A trial in which, a record having been pleaded by one party and denied by the other, the record is inspected in order to decide the dispute, no other evidence being admissible. See NUL TIEL RECORD.

trial by the country.See trial per pais.

trial by the record.A trial in which one party insists that a record exists to support its claim and the opposing party denies the existence of such a record. • If the record can be produced, the court will consider it in reaching a verdict — otherwise, it will rule for the opponent.

trial de novo (dee or di noh-voh). A new trial on the entire case — that is, on both questions of fact and issues of law — conducted as if there had been no trial in the first instance. [Cases: Appeal and Error 892; Criminal Law 260, 1139; Federal Courts 776. C.J.S. Appeal and Error § 756.]

trial in absentia. A trial held without the accused being present. • In the United States, a trial may be held in absentia only if the accused has either voluntarily left after the trial has started else has so disrupted the proceedings that the judge orders the accused's removal as a last resort.

trial on the merits. A trial on the substantive issues of a case, as opposed to a motion hearing or interlocutory matter.

trial per pais (p<<schwa>>r payorpays). [Law French “trial by the country”] Trial by jury. — Also termed trial by the country. Cf. CONCLUSION TO THE COUNTRY; GOING TO THE COUNTRY; PATRIA(3).

trial to the bench. See bench trial.

trifurcated trial. A trial that is divided into three stages, such as for liability, general damages, and special damages. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1961; Trial 3(5.1).]

two-stage trial. See bifurcated trial.

TRIAL BRIEF

trial brief. See BRIEF.

TRIAL BY COMBAT

trial by combat. Hist. A trial that is decided by personal battle between the disputants, common in Europe and England during the Middle Ages; specif., a trial in which the person accused fought with the accuser, the idea being that God would give victory to the person in the right. • This method was introduced into England by the Normans after 1066, but it was a widely detested innovation and was little used. It became obsolete several centuries before being formally abolished in 1818, having been replaced in practice by the grand assize and indictment. — Also termed trial by battle; trial by wager of battle; trial by duel; judicial combat; duel; duellum; wager of battle; ornest; vadiatio duelli; wehading. See JUDICIUM DEI.

TRIAL BY DUEL

TRIAL BY CORSNAED

TRIBAL COURT

Tribal Court.Under the Indian Child Welfare Act, a court with child-custody jurisdiction that is (1) a Court of Indian Offenses, (2) a court established and operated under the code or custom of a tribe, or (3) any other tribal administrative body that is vested with authority over child-custody proceedings. • The Tribal Court is composed of tribal members, is usu. situated on the reservation, and varies in its characteristics from tribe to tribe. It is not part of any state's judicial system, instead operating more or less as a judicial system of a foreign nation. See INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT .

TRIBAL LAND

tribal land. A part of an Indian reservation that is not allotted to or occupied by individual Indians but is held as the common land of the tribe. Cf. INDIAN LAND. [Cases: Indians 9. C.J.S. Indians § 67.]

tribunal (trI-byoo-n<<schwa>>l). 1. A court or other adjudicatory body. 2. The seat, bench, or place where a judge sits.

TRIBUTARY

tributary (trib-y<<schwa>>-ter-ee), n. A stream flowing directly or indirectly into a river.

TRIBUTE

tribute (trib-yoot), n. 1. An acknowledgment of gratitude or respect. 2. A contribution that a sovereign raises from its subjects to defray the expenses of state. 3. Money paid by an inferior sovereign or state to a superior one to secure the latter's friendship and protection.

tributum (tri-byoo-t<<schwa>>m), n. [Latin] Roman law. Originally, a war tax; later, a regular tax on land or persons in the Roman provinces.

trigamy (trig-<<schwa>>-mee), n. The act of marrying a person while legally married to someone else and bigamously married to yet another. [Cases: Bigamy 1. C.J.S. Bigamy §§ 2–6, 8.]

“Trigamy, literally three marriages, is often used for a special situation. ‘Trigamy,’ in the sense of the special problem of the third wife, stems from the premise that invalidity of the alleged prior marriage is a good defense to a charge of bigamy. Thus in a bigamy prosecution a so-called common-law marriage can be relied upon to establish either the first or second marriage, if it is recognized in the jurisdiction as giving rise to the marital status, but cannot be relied upon where it is not so recognized. A logical result is that a charge of bigamy may be defeated by showing that the alleged prior marriage, relied upon to support the charge, was itself void because of an even earlier marriage existing at the time — as was held about 1648 in Lady Madison's Case. For example, D marries A, and afterward while A is alive marries B, and still later when A is dead but B alive, marries C. The marriage to C is not bigamy because the marriage to B was bigamous and void.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 458 (3d ed. 1982).

TRIGGERING CONDITION

triggering condition. See CONDITION(2).

TRINITY SITTINGS

Trinity sittings. English law. A term of court beginning on May 22 of each year and ending on June 12. • This was known until 1875 as Trinity term. Cf. EASTER SITTINGS; HILARY SITTINGS; MICHAELMAS SITTINGS.

TRIPLE ORDEAL

triple ordeal. See ORDEAL.

triple trigger. Insurance. A theory of coverage providing that all insurers on a risk from the day a claimant is first exposed to an injury-producing product (such as asbestos) — beyond the last exposure — to the date of diagnosis or death, whichever occurs first, must cover the loss. — Also termed continuous trigger. Cf. ACTUAL-INJURY TRIGGER; EXPOSURE THEORY; MANIFESTATION THEORY. [Cases: Insurance 2265. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 429–430.]

triple witching session. See SESSION (3).

triplicatio (trip-li-kay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A defendant's response to a plaintiff's replicatio. Pl. triplicaciones (trip-li-kay-shee-oh-nee-z). See REPLICATIO. Cf. QUADRUPPLICATIO.

TRIPS

TRIPs.abbr. Patents. The Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights, a treaty that harmonized and strengthened the intellectual-property laws of its signatories by linking the obligation to protect the intellectual-property rights of other members' citizens with a mechanism for settling international trade disputes. • TRIPs was negotiated at the 1994 Uruguay Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). More than 130 nations are parties to the agreement. In the field of patents, TRIPs standardized patentable subject matter to include medicines, required testing for nonobviousness and utility, protected patentees from infringing imports, and all but eliminated compulsory licenses. In response to the agreement, Congress (1) changed patent terms to 20 years from the date of application, rather than 17 years from the date of issue; (2) allowed foreign filers to prove priority by inventive efforts that preceded filing; (3) widened the definition of infringement to cover offering for sale and importing; and (4) permitted provisional applications, with brief descriptions and no claims, to establish priority. 33 I.L.M. 1197. — Also written TRIPS. — Also termed TRIPs Agreement.

“Articles 1–8 of TRIPs include the basic principles of national treatment and most-favoured-nation treatment. That is, each Member must give to the nationals of other Members treatment no less favourable than that given to its own nationals, and must give to the nationals of all Members the same privileges as are given to the nationals of any Member. Thus, subject to certain exemptions, bilateral agreements between Members should no longer be permitted.” Philip W. Grubb, Patents for Chemicals, Pharmaceuticals and Biotechnology 31 (3d ed. 1999).

tristis successio (tris-tis s<<schwa>>k-ses[h]-ee-oh). See hereditas luctuosa under HEREDITAS.

triverbial days (trI-v<<schwa>>r-bee-<<schwa>>l). See dies fasti under DIES.

trivial,adj. Trifling; inconsiderable; of small worth or importance.

TRO (tee-ahr-oh).abbr.TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER.

trover (troh-v<<schwa>>r). A common-law action for the recovery of damages for the conversion of personal property, the damages generally being measured by the value of the property. — Also termed trover and conversion. Cf. DETINUE; REPLEVIN. [Cases: Trover and

Conversion 1, 43. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–3, 5–7, 120–121.]

“Trover may be maintained for all kinds of personal property, including legal documents, but not where articles are severed from land by an adverse possessor, at least until recovery of possession of the land. It lies for the misappropriation of specific money, but not for breach of an obligation to pay where there is no duty to return specific money.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 43, at 99 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

truancy (troo-<<schwa>>n-see), n. The act or state of shirking responsibility; esp., willful and unjustified failure to attend school by one who is required to attend. [Cases: Schools 161. C.J.S. Schools and School Districts §§ 740–743.] — truant, adj. & n.

TRUANCY OFFICER

truancy officer. An official responsible for enforcing laws mandating school attendance for minors of specified ages (usu. 16 and under). — Also termed truant officer; attendance officer. [Cases: Schools 161. C.J.S. Schools and School Districts §§ 740–743.]

truce. Int'l law. A suspension or temporary cessation of hostilities by agreement between belligerent powers. — Also termed armistice; ceasefire; suspension of arms. [Cases: War and National Emergency 33. C.J.S. War and National Defense § 50.] — trucional, adj.

general truce. A truce that suspends hostilities in all places.

partial truce. See special truce.

special truce. A truce referring only to operations before a specific fortress or in a district, or between certain detachments of armies. — Also termed partial truce.

truck. Hist. Scots law. The payment of wages in scrip or goods. • Truck systems, once common where workers had to live in isolated areas and depended on company stores for food and clothing, were abolished in the 19th century.

“Truck was payment not in money but in goods or tickets which could be exchanged for goods.... The principle that contractors could buy in bulk and retail to the workmen, deducting the cost from their wages, was sound but was open to abuse; in fact truck became a means of robbery. Railway contractors frequently made more profit from truck than from the contract.... Truck shops, frequently called tommy shops or tally shops, might be run by the contractor or let by him to an associate or a shopkeeper for a rent or on the basis that part of the shop profits would go back to the contractor. The goods were frequently inferior and sold at excessive prices.” David M. Walker, 6 A Legal History of Scotland 820 (2001).

TRUE ADMISSION

true admission. See implied admission under ADMISSION(1).

TRUE AND CORRECT

true and correct. Authentic; accurate; unaltered <we have forwarded a true and correct copy of the expert's report>. — Also termed true and exact.

TRUE BILL

true bill, n. A grand jury's notation that a criminal charge should go before a petty jury for trial <the grand jury returned a true bill, and the state prepared to prosecute>. — Also termed billa vera. Cf. NO BILL. [Cases: Grand Jury 42.]

true-bill, vb. To make or deliver a true bill on <the grand jury true-billed the indictment>.

TRUE COPY

true copy. See COPY.

TRUE DEFENSE

true defense. See DEFENSE(1).

TRUE LEGAL IMPOSSIBILITY

true legal impossibility. See legal impossibility (1) under IMPOSSIBILITY.

TRUE MARK

true mark. See technical trademark under TRADEMARK.

TRUE RESIDUE

true residue. See CLEAR RESIDUE.

TRUE TRADEMARK

true trademark. See technical trademark under TRADEMARK.

TRUE VALUE

true value. See fair market value under VALUE(2).

TRUE-VALUE RULE

true-value rule. The rule requiring that one who subscribes for and receives corporate stock must pay par value for it, in either money or its equivalent, so that a corporation's real assets square with its books. • If true value is less than par value, the stock is deemed unpaid for to the full extent of the difference, and the affected shareholder is liable to creditors for the difference, notwithstanding the directors' good faith. [Cases: Corporations 232.]

true verdict. See VERDICT.

trust, n. 1. The right, enforceable solely in equity, to the beneficial enjoyment of property to which another person holds the legal title; a property interest held by one person (the trustee) at the request of another (the settlor) for the benefit of a third party (the beneficiary). • For a trust to be valid, it must involve specific property, reflect the settlor's intent, and be created for a lawful purpose. The two primary types of trusts are private trusts and charitable trusts (see below). [Cases: Trusts 1. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18.] 2. A fiduciary relationship regarding property and charging the person with title to the property with equitable duties to deal with it for another's benefit; the confidence placed in a trustee, together with the trustee's obligations toward the property and the beneficiary. • A trust arises as a result of a manifestation of an intention to create it. See FIDUCIARY RELATIONSHIP. 3. The property so held; CORPUS(1).

“One must distinguish, ... [in] countries where English is spoken, between a wide and a narrow sense of the word ‘trust.’ In the wide sense a trust exists when property is to be held or administered by one person on behalf of another or for some purpose other than his own benefit... In the narrow or strict sense a trust exists when the creator of the trust ... hands over or is bound to hand over the control of an asset which, or the proceeds of which, is to be administered by another (the trustee or administrator) in his capacity as such for the benefit of some person (beneficiary) other than the trustee or for some impersonal object. A trust in this sense is a species of the genus ‘trust’ in the wide sense.” Tony Honoré, The South African Law of Trusts §§ 1–2, at 1–3 (3d ed. 1985).

“Some courts and legal writers have defined a trust as a certain kind of right that the beneficiary has against the trustee, or a certain kind of interest that the beneficiary has against the trustee, or a certain kind of interest that the beneficiary has in the trust property, thus looking at it from the point of view of the beneficiary. While it is true that the beneficiary has the right or interest described, the trust is something more than the right or interest of the beneficiary. The trust is the whole juridical device: the legal relationship between the parties with respect to the property that is its subject matter, including not merely the duties that the trustee owes to the beneficiary and to the rest of the world, but also the rights, privileges, powers, and immunities that the beneficiary has against the trustee and against the rest of the world. It would seem proper, therefore, to define the trust either as a relationship having certain characteristics stated in the definition or perhaps as a juridical device or legal institution involving such a relationship.” 1 Austin W. Scott & William F. Fratcher, The Law of Trusts § 2.4, at 42 (4th ed. 1987).

A-B trust. See bypass trust.

accumulation trust. A trust in which the trustee must accumulate income and gains from sales of trust assets for ultimate disposition with the principal when the trust terminates. • Many states restrict the time over which accumulations may be made or the amount that may be accumulated. [Cases: Trusts 280. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 544–550.]

active trust.A trust in which the trustee has some affirmative duty of management or administration besides the obligation to transfer the property to the beneficiary. — Also termed express active trust; special trust; operative trust. Cf. passive trust. [Cases: Trusts 135. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 13, 242.]

alimony trust.A trust in which the payor spouse transfers to the trustee property from which the payee spouse, as beneficiary, will be supported after a divorce or separation.

annuity trust.A trust from which the trustee must pay a sum certain annually to one or more beneficiaries for their respective lives or for a term of years, and must then either transfer the remainder to or for the use of a qualified charity or retain the remainder for such a use. • The sum certain must not be less than 5% of the initial fair market value of the property transferred to the trust by the donor. A qualified annuity trust must comply with the requirements of IRC (26 USCA) § 664. [Cases: Trusts 281. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 532.]

asset-protection trust.See self-settled trust.

bank-account trust.See Totten trust.

blended trust.A trust in which the beneficiaries are a group, with no member of the group having a separable individual interest. • Courts rarely recognize these trusts.

blind trust.A trust in which the settlor places investments under the control of an independent trustee, usu. to avoid a conflict of interest.

bond trust.A trust whose principal consists of bonds that yield interest income.

business trust.A form of business organization, similar to a corporation, in which investors receive transferable certificates of beneficial interest (instead of stock shares). — Also termed Massachusetts trust; common-law trust. [Cases: Joint–Stock Companies and Business Trusts 1, 8. C.J.S. Business Trusts §§ 2–8, 10–12, 17–18, 37; Joint Stock Companies §§ 2–4, 6, 11.]

bypass trust.A trust into which just enough of a decedent's estate passes, so that the estate can take advantage of the unified credit against federal estate taxes. 26 USCA § 2010. — Also termed credit-shelter trust; A–B trust; marital life-estate trust. See unified estate-and-gift tax credit under TAX CREDIT.

charitable lead trust.An irrevocable trust that is made in favor of a charity and that allows the charity to receive income from the trust property for a specified period, after which the property reverts to the settlor's estate.

charitable-remainder annuity trust. A charitable-remainder trust in which the beneficiaries receive for a specified period a fixed payment of 5% or more of the fair market value of the original principal, after which the remaining principal passes to charity. — Abbr. CRAT. — Also termed charitable-remainder-trust retirement fund. [Cases: Charities 6; Trusts 281. C.J.S. Charities § 4; Trover and Conversion § 532.]

charitable-remainder trust. A trust that consists of assets that are designated for a charitable purpose and that are paid over to the trust after the expiration of a life estate or intermediate estate. — Abbr. CRT. — Also termed split-interest trust. [Cases: Charities 4. C.J.S. Charities §§ 3–4.]

charitable-remainder-trust retirement fund. See charitable-remainder annuity trust.

charitable trust. A trust created to benefit a specific charity, specific charities, or the general public rather than a private individual or entity. • Charitable trusts are often eligible for favorable tax treatment. — Also termed public trust; charitable use. See charitable deduction under DEDUCTION; CY PRES. Cf. private trust. [Cases: Charities 1; Internal Revenue 4048; Taxation 241.1(2), 876(1), 1022. C.J.S. Charities §§ 2–3; Taxation §§ 279, 329–333, 1713, 1876.]

Claflin trust. See indestructible trust.

Clifford trust. An irrevocable trust, set up for at least ten years and a day, whereby income from the trust property is paid to the beneficiary but the property itself reverts back to the settlor when the trust expires. • These trusts were often used by parents — with their children as beneficiaries — to shelter investment income, but the Tax Reform Act of 1986 eliminated the tax advantage by imposing the kiddie tax and by taxing the income of settlors with a reversionary interest that exceeds 5% of the trust's value. This term gets its name from Helvering v. Clifford, 309 U.S. 331, 60 S.Ct. 554 (1940). — Also termed short-term trust. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3362. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 178, 180.]

common-law trust. See business trust.

community trust. See COMMUNITY TRUST.

complete voluntary trust. See executed trust.

complex trust. 1. A trust having elaborate provisions. 2. See discretionary trust.

constructive trust. An equitable remedy that a court imposes against one who has obtained property by wrongdoing. • A constructive trust, imposed to prevent unjust enrichment, creates no fiduciary relationship. Despite its name, it is not a trust at all. Cf. resulting trust. — Also termed implied trust; involuntary trust; trust de son tort; trust ex delicto; trust ex maleficio; remedial trust; trust in invitum. See trustee de son tort under TRUSTEE. Cf. resulting trust. [Cases: Trusts 91–111. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 10, 12, 174–201.]

“A constructive trust is the formula through which the conscience of equity finds expression. When property has been acquired in such circumstances that the holder of the legal title may not in good conscience retain the beneficial interest, equity converts him into a trustee.” Beatty v.

Guggenheim Exploration Co., 122 N.E. 378, 380 (N.Y. 1919)(Cardozo, J.).

“It is sometimes said that when there are sufficient grounds for imposing a constructive trust, the court ‘constructs a trust.’ The expression is, of course, absurd. The word ‘constructive’ is derived from the verb ‘construe,’ not from the verb ‘construct.’ ... The court construes the circumstances in the sense that it explains or interprets them; it does not construct them.” 5 Austin W. Scott & William F. Fratcher, The Law of Trusts § 462.4 (4th ed. 1987).

contingent trust. An express trust depending for its operation on a future event.

credit-shelter trust. See bypass trust.

Crummey trust. A trust in which the trustee has the power to distribute or accumulate income and to give the beneficiary the right to withdraw the amount of the annual exclusion (or a smaller sum) within a reasonable time after the transfer. • This type of trust can have multiple beneficiaries and is often used when the beneficiaries are minors. Gifts to a Crummey trust qualify for the annual exclusion regardless of the age of the beneficiaries. The trust assets are not required to be distributed to the beneficiaries at age 21. The validity of this type of trust was established in Crummey v. Commissioner, 397 F.2d 82 (9th Cir. 1968). — Also termed discretionary trust. See CRUMMEY POWER; annual exclusion under EXCLUSION. Cf. 2503(c) trust.

custodial trust. A revocable trust for which a custodial trustee is named to manage the assets for an incapacitated or disabled beneficiary. • The beneficiary does not have to be disabled or incapacitated at the time the trust is created. An adult beneficiary who is not disabled or incapacitated may terminate the trust at any time before his or her disability, incapacity, or death.

declared trust. See express trust.

defective trust. A trust that is treated, for income-tax purposes, as if it were the same entity as the grantor, but for estate-tax purposes is treated as an entity separate from the grantor. • Typically a trust is an independent entity that is taxed separately from the settlor. Because trust income is taxed at higher rates than individual income, the settlor may intentionally create a defect in the trust terms so that the trust's income will be taxable to the grantor. This is achieved by violating the grantor-trust rules of IRC §§ 671–677 in a way that does not affect the completeness of the gift under IRC §§ 2035–2042. A violation renders the trust “defective” because the settlor must recognize the income even if the settlor does not actually receive it. The attribution of tax liability and payment of taxes on trust income do not give the grantor an ownership in the trust, which remains separate from the settlor's estate and is not subject to estate taxes.

destructible trust. A trust that can be destroyed by the happening of an event or by operation of law.

directory trust. 1. A trust that is not completely and finally settled by the instrument creating it, but only defined in its general purpose and to be carried into detail according to later specific directions. 2. See fixed trust.

direct trust. See express trust.

discretionary trust. 1. A trust in which the settlor has delegated nearly complete or limited discretion to the trustee to decide when and how much income or property is distributed to a beneficiary. • This is perhaps the most common type of trust used in estate planning. [Cases: Trusts 150, 177. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 269, 347–348, 350–360.] 2. See Crummey trust. Cf. mandatory trust; CRUMMEY POWER.

donative trust. A trust that establishes a gift of a beneficial interest in property for a beneficiary. • Most trusts are donative trusts. — Also termed gratuitous trust. [Cases: Trusts 35(1). C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 55.]

dry trust. 1. A trust that merely vests legal title in a trustee and does not require that trustee to do anything. 2. See passive trust.

dynasty trust. A generation-skipping trust funded with the amount that is permanently exempt from generation-skipping tax and designed to last more than two generations. • In 2000, a settlor could contribute $1 million to a dynasty trust. Almost half the states allow dynasty trusts, despite their potential for lasting more than 100 years. — Also termed GST supertrust.

educational trust. 1. A trust to found, endow, or support a school. 2. A trust to support someone's education.

equipment trust. See EQUIPMENT TRUST.

estate trust. A trust that is established to qualify a deceased spouse's property for the marital deduction. • The trustee may be given discretion to distribute principal or income to the donor's spouse if the donor also provides that, at the surviving spouse's death, any accumulated income and remaining principal must be distributed to the surviving spouse's estate. See marital deduction under DEDUCTION.

ex delicto trust (d<<schwa>>-lik-toh). A trust that is created for an illegal purpose, esp. to prevent the settlor's creditors from collecting their claims out of the trust property.

executed trust. A trust in which the estates and interests in the subject matter of the trust are completely limited and defined by the instrument creating the trust and require no further instruments to complete them. — Also termed complete voluntary trust. [Cases: Trusts 114. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 215.]

executory trust (eg-zek-y<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A trust in which the instrument creating the trust is intended to be provisional only, and further conveyances are contemplated by the trust instrument before the terms of the trust can be carried out. — Also termed imperfect trust. [Cases: Trusts 114. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 215.]

express active trust. See active trust.

express private passive trust. A trust in which land is conveyed to or held by one person in trust for another, without any power being expressly or impliedly given to the trustee to take actual possession of the land or exercise any ownership rights over it, except at the beneficiary's direction. [Cases: Trusts 136. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 13, 243.]

express trust. A trust created with the settlor's express intent, usu. declared in writing; an ordinary trust as opposed to a resulting trust or a constructive trust. — Also termed direct trust; declared trust. [Cases: Trusts 1–61.5. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 73, 85; Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–127, 143.]

family-pot trust. A trust in which all the assets are kept in a single fund for the trustee to use for multiple beneficiaries (usu. children). • Family-pot trusts are typically testamentary and used to administer a donor's property until the donor's minor children have completed their education.

family trust. A trust created to benefit persons who are related to one another by blood, affinity, or law.

fixed trust. A trust in which the trustee may not exercise any discretion over the trust's management or distributions. — Also termed directory trust; nondiscretionary trust.

foreign-situs trust (sI-t<<schwa>>s). A trust created under foreign law. • This type of trust usu. has no significant income-tax benefits and is subject to greater reporting requirements than a domestic trust. Because creditors cannot easily reach the foreign trust's assets, it is frequently used as a means of asset-protection. — Also termed foreign trust; offshore trust.

general trust. See passive trust.

generation-skipping trust. A trust that is established to transfer (usu. principal) assets to a skip person (a beneficiary more than one generation removed from the settlor). • The transfer is often accomplished by giving some control or benefits (such as trust income) of the assets to a nonskip person, often a member of the generation between the settlor and skip person. This type of trust is subject to a generation-skipping transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2601 et seq. See DEEMED TRANSFEROR; GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER; generation-skipping transfer tax under TAX; SKIP PERSON. Cf. dynasty trust. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4224.]

governmental trust. 1. A type of charitable trust established to provide a community with facilities ordinarily supplied by the government, esp. by a municipality, and to promote purposes that are sufficiently beneficial to the community to justify permitting the property to be perpetually devoted to those purposes. • Examples of such facilities include public buildings, bridges, streets, parks, schools, and hospitals. 2. A type of charitable trust established for general governmental or municipal purposes, such as defraying the expenses of a governmental entity or paying the public debt. Restatement (Second) of Trusts §§ 373, 374 (1959).

grantor-retained annuity trust. An irrevocable trust into which the grantor transfers property in exchange for the right to receive fixed payments at least annually, based on original fair market value of the property transferred. — Abbr. GRAT.

grantor-retained income trust. A trust in which a gift's value can be reduced by the grantor's retaining an income interest, for a specified time, in the gifted property. — Sometimes shortened to retained income trust. — Abbr. GRIT.

grantor-retained unitrust. An irrevocable trust into which the grantor transfers property in exchange for the right to receive annual payments, the amount of which fluctuates based on the increase or decrease in the value of the property transferred. — Abbr. GRUT. Cf. grantor-retained annuity trust.

grantor trust. A trust in which the settlor retains control over the trust property or its income to such an extent that the settlor is taxed on the trust's income. • The types of controls that result in such tax treatment are set out in IRC (26 USCA) §§ 671–677. An example is the revocable trust.

gratuitous trust. See donative trust.

GST supertrust. See dynasty trust.

honorary trust. A noncharitable trust that is of doubtful validity because it lacks a beneficiary capable of enforcing the trust. • Examples include trusts for the care and support of specific animals, or for the care of certain graves. The modern trend is to recognize the validity of such trusts, if the trustee is willing to accept the responsibility. If the trustee fails to carry out the duties, however, a resulting trust arises in favor of the settlor's residuary legatees or next of kin. [Cases: Trusts 1. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18.]

Illinois land trust. See land trust.

illusory trust. An arrangement that looks like a trust but, because of powers retained in the settlor, has no real substance and is not a completed trust. [Cases: Trusts 1. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18.]

imperfect trust. See executory trust.

implied trust. 1. See constructive trust. 2. See resulting trust.

indestructible trust. A trust that, because of the settlor's wishes, cannot be prematurely terminated by the beneficiary. — Also termed Claflin trust.

insurance trust. A trust whose principal consists of insurance policies or their proceeds.

inter vivos trust (in-t<<schwa>>r vI-vohs orvee-vohs). A trust that is created and takes effect during the settlor's lifetime. — Also termed living trust. Cf. testamentary trust. [Cases: Trusts 1, 58–61. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18, 96–127.]

investment trust. See investment company under COMPANY.

involuntary trust. See constructive trust.

irrevocable trust (i-rev-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). A trust that cannot be terminated by the settlor once it is created. • In most states, a trust will be deemed irrevocable unless the settlor specifies otherwise. [Cases: Trusts 59. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 103–116.]

land trust. A land-ownership arrangement by which a trustee holds both legal and equitable title to land while the beneficiary retains the power to direct the trustee, manage the property, and draw income from the trust. — Also termed Illinois land trust; naked land trust. [Cases: Trusts 140(1). C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 254, 256.]

life-insurance trust.A trust consisting of one or more life-insurance policies payable to the trust when the insured dies. [Cases: Trusts 37. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 60.]

limited trust.A trust created for a limited period. Cf. perpetual trust.

liquidating trust.A trust designed to be liquidated as soon as possible. • An example is a trust into which a decedent's business is placed to safeguard the business until it can be sold.

living trust.See inter vivos trust.

mandatory trust.A trust in which the trustee must distribute all the income generated by the trust property to one or more designated beneficiaries. — Also termed simple trust. Cf. discretionary trust.

marital-deduction trust.A testamentary trust created to take full advantage of the marital deduction; esp., a trust entitling a spouse to lifetime income from the trust and sufficient control over the trust to include the trust property in the spouse's estate at death. See marital deduction under DEDUCTION. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4169. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 535.]

marital life-estate trust.See bypass trust.

Massachusetts trust.See business trust.

Medicaid-qualifying trust.A trust that is deemed to have been created in an effort to reduce someone's assets so that the person may qualify for Medicaid, and that will be included as an asset for purposes of determining the person's eligibility. • Someone who wants to apply and qualify for Medicaid, but who has too many assets to qualify, will sometimes set up a trust — or have a spouse or custodian set up a trust — using the applicant's own assets, under which the applicant may be the beneficiary of all or part of the payments from the trust, which are distributed by a trustee with discretion to make trust payments to the applicant. Such a trust may be presumed to have been established for the purpose of attempting to qualify for Medicaid, and may be counted as an asset of the applicant, resulting in a denial of benefits and the imposition of a penalty period during which the applicant cannot reapply. Nonetheless, Medicaid rules allow three types of trusts that do not impair Medicaid eligibility, since the trust assets are not considered the beneficiary's property: Miller trust, pooled trust, and under-65 trust. [Cases: Health 471(6).]

Miller trust.An irrevocable trust funded with the income of an incompetent beneficiary who seeks to qualify for Medicaid in a state with an income cap. • Funding is strictly limited to the beneficiary's income (from any source). The assets in the trust are not included in the beneficiary's estate for Medicaid purposes if the trust assets will be used to reimburse the state after the beneficiary's death. Trust distributions are kept below the income cap in order to preserve the beneficiary's Medicaid eligibility. This type of trust was first judicially sanctioned in Miller v. Ibarra, 746 F.Supp. 19 (D. Colo. 1990). — Also termed Miller's trust; qualified income trust.

ministerial trust.See passive trust.

minor's trust.See 2503(c) trust.

mixed trust.A trust established to benefit both private individuals and charities.

naked land trust. See land trust.

naked trust. See passive trust.

nominal trust. See passive trust.

nominee trust. 1. A trust in which the beneficiaries have the power to direct the trustee's actions regarding the trust property. 2. An arrangement for holding title to real property under which one or more persons or corporations, under a written declaration of trust, declare that they will hold any property that they acquire as trustees for the benefit of one or more undisclosed beneficiaries. — Also termed (in sense 2) realty trust. [Cases: Trusts 133–140. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 13, 242–243, 245–251, 254–257.]

nondiscretionary trust. See fixed trust.

offshore trust. See foreign-situs trust.

onerous trust. A trust that places exceptionally heavy and time-consuming duties of responsibility and care on the trustee, often without providing for compensation. • Because of the burden and inequity of requiring the trust to be administered voluntarily, courts often grant a trustee a reasonable sum for the tasks performed.

oral trust. 1. A trust created by the settlor's spoken statements as opposed to a written agreement. • Trusts of real property must usu. be in writing (because of the statute of frauds), but trusts of personal property can usu. be created orally. — Also termed parol trust. [Cases: Trusts 17. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 28.] 2. A trust created by operation of law, such as a resulting trust or a constructive trust.

parol trust. See oral trust (1).

passive trust. A trust in which the trustee has no duty other than to transfer the property to the beneficiary. — Also termed dry trust; general trust; nominal trust; simple trust; naked trust; ministerial trust; technical trust. See bare trustee under TRUSTEE. Cf. active trust. [Cases: Trusts 136. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 13, 243.]

pension trust. An employer-funded pension plan; esp., a pension plan in which the employer transfers to trustees amounts sufficient to cover the benefits payable to the employees. [Cases: Pensions 28. C.J.S. Pensions and Retirement Plans and Benefits §§ 11–15.]

personal-residence trust. An irrevocable trust to which the settlor transfers ownership of his or her personal residence while retaining the right to live there for a specified term of years. • The trust cannot hold any assets other than the residence and proceeds resulting from damage to or destruction of the residence. Cf. qualified personal-residence trust.

personal trust. See private trust.

pet trust. A trust, usu. honorary, that is established for the care and maintenance of a particular animal or group of animals. • Pet trusts are generally invalid because animals are incapable of compelling a trustee to act, and animals have no standing in law. Effectively, the trust has no beneficiary. But some states (e.g., Colorado) statutorily recognize these trusts as valid. And pet trusts are covered in the Uniform Trust Code (§ 111(d)).

pooled trust. An irrevocable, discretionary trust that (1) is established and managed by a nonprofit association, (2) is funded with the assets of disabled persons, and (3) maintains a separate trust account for each beneficiary, but (4) pools the trust assets for investment purposes. • If the trust provides for distribution of a deceased beneficiary's interest to the state in reimbursement of Medicaid expenditures, a pooled-trust beneficiary may be eligible for Medicaid benefits. The assets contributed to the trust for the individual's benefit are not treated as the beneficiary's property. — Also termed pooled-assets trust.

pourover trust. An inter vivos trust that receives property (usu. the residual estate) from a will upon the testator's death. Cf. pourover will under WILL.

power-of-appointment trust. A trust in which property is left in trust for the surviving spouse. • The trustee must distribute income to the spouse for life, and the power of appointment is given to the spouse or to his or her estate. A power-of-appointment trust is commonly used to qualify property for the marital deduction. See marital deduction under DEDUCTION.

precatory trust (prek-<<schwa>>-tor-ee). A trust that the law will recognize to carry out the wishes of the testator or grantor even though the statement in question is in the nature of an entreaty or recommendation rather than a positive command. [Cases: Trusts 29. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 43.]

presumptive trust. See resulting trust.

private trust. A trust created for the financial benefit of one or more designated beneficiaries rather than for the public benefit; an ordinary trust as opposed to a charitable trust. • Three elements must be present for a private trust: (1) the demonstrated intent of the settlor, (2) trust property (as res), and (3) a certain beneficiary capable of enforcing the trust. — Also termed personal trust. Cf. charitable trust. [Cases: Trusts 1. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 1–9, 14–18.]

protective trust. A trust that is designed to protect the trust property to ensure the continued support of the beneficiary. [Cases: Trusts 152. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 270–272.]

“In a broad sense, a spendthrift, support, or other similarly protective trust is one created to provide a fund for the maintenance of the beneficiary and at the same time to secure it against the beneficiary's improvidence or incapacity.” 76 Am. Jur. 2d Trusts § 121 (1992).

public trust. See charitable trust.

purchase-money resulting trust. A resulting trust that arises when one person buys property but directs the seller to transfer the property and its title to another. • Although a purchase-money resulting trust is properly understood as a court-imposed equitable remedy rather than as a true trust, the buyer is occasionally referred to as the “beneficiary” and the titleholder as the “trustee.”

— Abbr. PMRT. [Cases: Trusts 72–83. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 128, 138, 140, 147–164.]

QTIP trust (kyoo-tip). A trust that is established to qualify for the marital deduction. • Under this trust, the assets are referred to as qualified-terminable-interest property, or QTIP. See qualified-terminable-interest property under PROPERTY. Cf. qualified domestic trust. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4169(4). C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 536–537.]

qualified domestic trust. A trust for a noncitizen spouse qualifying for the marital deduction. 26 USCA § 2056(d). — Abbr. QDOT. See marital deduction under DEDUCTION. Cf. QTIP trust.

qualified income trust. See Miller trust.

qualified personal-residence trust. An irrevocable trust that is funded with cash and the personal residence of the grantor, who retains the right to dwell in the residence for a specified term of years. • The trust can receive and hold additional cash to pay for trust expenses, mortgage installments, and improvements to the residence. — Abbr. QPRT. Cf. personal-residence trust.

real-estate investment trust. See REAL-ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST.

real-estate mortgage trust. See REAL-ESTATE MORTGAGE TRUST.

realty trust. See nominal trust (2).

reciprocal trust. A trust arrangement between two parties in which one party is beneficiary of a trust established by the other party, and vice versa. • Such trusts are common between husband and wife.

remedial trust. See constructive trust.

resulting trust. A remedy imposed by equity when property is transferred under circumstances suggesting that the transferor did not intend for the transferee to have the beneficial interest in the property. — Also termed implied trust; presumptive trust. Cf. constructive trust. [Cases: Trusts 62–90. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 10–11, 128–142, 144–173.]

retained income trust. See grantor-retained income trust.

revocable trust (rev-<<schwa>>-k<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l). A trust in which the settlor reserves the right to terminate the trust and recover the trust property and any undistributed income. [Cases: Trusts 59. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 103–116.]

savings-account trust. See Totten trust.

savings-bank trust. See Totten trust.

secret trust. An instrument, usu. a will, that appears to give an absolute gift to another although the donee has orally agreed with the grantor that he or she is to use the property for the benefit of some third party. • Courts admit evidence of the promise to prevent unjust enrichment and enforce it by imposing the remedy of a constructive trust upon the reneging “trustee.” Cf. semi-secret trust. [Cases: Trusts 35(3).]

self-settled trust. A trust in which the settlor is also the person who is to receive the benefits from the trust, usu. set up in an attempt to protect the trust assets from creditors. • In most states, such a trust will not protect trust assets from the settlor's creditors. Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 156 (1959). — Also termed asset-protection trust.

semi-secret trust. An instrument that indicates who is to serve as a trustee but fails to identify either the beneficiary or the terms of the trust, or both. • Traditionally, this trust was deemed to fail for want of an ascertainable beneficiary. But the modern view is to provide the same relief as that given for a secret trust: to receive evidence of the donor's intent, including the intended beneficiary, and impose a constructive trust in his or her favor. Cf. secret trust.

shifting trust. An express trust providing that, upon a specified contingency, it may operate in favor of an additional or substituted beneficiary.

short-term trust. See Clifford trust.

simple trust. 1. See mandatory trust. 2. See passive trust.

special-needs trust. See supplemental-needs trust.

special trust. See active trust.

spendthrift trust. 1. A trust that prohibits the beneficiary's interest from being assigned and also prevents a creditor from attaching that interest; a trust by the terms of which a valid restraint is imposed on the voluntary or involuntary transfer of the beneficiary's interest. [Cases: Trusts 12, 141, 152. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 23, 263, 270–272.] 2. A similar trust in which the restraint on alienation results from a statute rather than from the settlor's words in the trust instrument.

“Origin of the term ‘spendthrift trust.’ The phrase ‘spendthrift trust’ seems to have been first used, as might be expected, in Pennsylvania. The earliest instance in which a use of the phrase has been found was in 1875, when it appeared in the syllabus of a case, though the court did not use it in its opinion. Four years later, in Overman's Appeal [88 Pa. 276 (1879)], the phrase is found in the auditor's report (in italics), while the opinion of the court in the same case refers to the trust in question as ‘a trust for a spendthrift as it is termed’ [id. at 278]. That the phrase had not become familiar by 1882 is indicated by Thackara v. Mintzer [100 Pa. 151 (1882)], where the head note refers to a ‘spendthrift son trust,’ but the court does not use that or any similar phrase. And in 1883, in the first edition of his Restraints on Alienation, [John Chipman] Gray used the phrase only rarely, and then spoke rather apologetically of ‘spendthrift trusts so called.’ In the second edition of this book, published twelve years later, the use of the phrase is frequent.” Erwin N. Griswold, Spendthrift Trusts § 33, at 32 (2d ed. 1947).

split-interest trust. See charitable remainder trust.

spray trust. See sprinkle trust.

sprinkle trust. A trust in which the trustee has discretion to decide how much will be given to each beneficiary. — Also termed spray trust. See SPRINKLE POWER.

standby trust. A trust created to manage a person's assets while he or she is out of the country or disabled.

supplemental-needs trust. A trust established to provide supplemental income for a disabled beneficiary who is receiving or may be eligible to receive government benefits. • This type of irrevocable trust is often used by parents of disabled children to ensure the beneficiary's eligibility for government benefits by expressly prohibiting distributions that may be used for the beneficiary's food, shelter, or clothing.

support trust. A discretionary trust in which the settlor authorizes the trustee to pay to the beneficiary as much income or principal as the trustee believes is needed for support, esp. for "comfortable support" or "support in accordance with the beneficiary's standard of living." • The beneficiary's interest cannot be voluntarily transferred, but creditors who provide necessaries can usu. reach it; general creditors cannot. [Cases: Trusts 127. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 218.]

technical trust. See passive trust.

tentative trust. See Totten trust.

testamentary trust (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>-ree or -tree). A trust that is created by a will and takes effect when the settlor (testator) dies. — Also termed trust under will. Cf. inter vivos trust. [Cases: Wills 669–694. C.J.S. Wills §§ 1425–1484, 1486–1550, 1552.]

Totten trust. A revocable trust created by one's deposit of money, typically in a savings account, in the depositor's name as trustee for another. • A Totten trust is an early form of "pay on death" account, since it creates no interest in the beneficiary unless the account remained at the depositor's death. Its name derives from the earliest decision in which the court approved the concept, even though the formalities of will execution were not satisfied: In re Totten, 71 N.E. 748 (N.Y. 1904). A Totten trust is commonly used to indicate a successor to the account without having to create a will, and thus it is a will substitute. — Also termed tentative trust; bank-account trust; savings-account trust; savings-bank trust; trustee bank account. [Cases: Trusts 34(1). C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 56–58.]

"A deposit by one person of his own money, in his own name as trustee for another, standing alone, does not establish an irrevocable trust during the lifetime of the depositor. It is a tentative trust merely, revocable at will, until the depositor dies or completes the gift in his lifetime by some unequivocal act or declaration, such as delivery of the pass book or notice to the beneficiary. In case the depositor dies before the beneficiary without revocation, or some decisive act or declaration of disaffirmance, the presumption arises that an absolute trust was created as to the balance on hand at the death of the depositor." In re Totten, 179 N.Y. 112, 125–26 (1904) (Vann, J.).

trust de son tort (d<<schwa>> sawn [or son] tor[t]). See constructive trust.

trust ex delicto. See constructive trust.

trust ex maleficio. See constructive trust.

trust for support. A trust that, by its terms, provides that the trustee must pay or apply only as much of the income and principal as is necessary for the education and support of the beneficiary.

trust in invitum. See constructive trust.

trust under will. See testamentary trust.

under-65 trust. A discretionary trust established for the sole benefit of a Medicaid recipient who is under the age of 65. • This type of trust may be established by anyone except the beneficiary, who must be less than 65 years old at the time of creation. The assets in trust will not be included in the beneficiary's estate for purposes of determining Medicaid eligibility. The beneficiary may receive distributions from the trust during life, but any balance remaining in the trust must be used to reimburse the state for the beneficiary's Medicaid expenditures.

unit-investment trust. 1. A trust in which funds are pooled and invested in income-producing securities. • Units of the trust are sold to investors, who maintain an interest in the trust in proportion to their investment. 2. An investment company that gives a shareholder an undivided interest in a fixed pool of securities held by the trustee. • This type of company can be organized in several ways (as by trust indenture, contract of custodianship or agency, or similar instrument), but is most commonly organized with a trust indenture. Such a company does not have a board of directors and issues only redeemable securities, each of which represents an undivided interest in a unit of specified securities. 15 USCA § 80a-4. See investment company under COMPANY.

unitrust. A trust from which a fixed percentage of the fair market value of the trust's assets, valued annually, is paid each year to the beneficiary. [Cases: Trusts 276. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 539–541.]

voluntary trust. 1. A trust that is not founded on consideration. • One having legal title to property may create a voluntary trust by (1) declaring that the property is to be held in trust for another, and (2) transferring the legal title to a third person who acts as trustee. [Cases: Trusts 13. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 25.] 2. An obligation arising out of a personal confidence reposed in, and voluntarily accepted by, one for the benefit of another.

voting trust. A trust used to hold shares of voting stock in a closely held corporation, usually transferred from a parent to a child, and empowering the trustee to exercise the right to vote. • The trust acts as custodian of the shares but is not a stockholder. Cf. VOTING GROUP. [Cases: Corporations 198.1(1). C.J.S. Corporations § 380.]

“At common law there was great suspicion of voting trusts. One commentator described a voting trust as ‘little more than a vehicle for corporate kidnapping.’ This attitude has largely disappeared. State statutes now uniformly recognize the validity of voting trusts and they have received a more hospitable judicial reception.” Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 199 (3d ed. 1991).

wasting trust. A trust in which the trust property is gradually depleted by periodic payments to the beneficiary. [Cases: Trusts 61(5). C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 127.]

trust distribution. See DISTRIBUTION.

trustee (tr<<schwa>>s-tee), n. 1. One who, having legal title to property, holds it in trust for the benefit of another and owes a fiduciary duty to that beneficiary. • Generally, a trustee's duties are to convert to cash all debts and securities that are not qualified legal investments, to reinvest the cash in proper securities, to protect and preserve the trust property, and to ensure that it is employed solely for the beneficiary, in accordance with the directions contained in the trust instrument. [Cases: Trusts 133, 171. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 245–246, 318–320.]

bare trustee. A trustee of a passive trust. • A bare trustee has no duty other than to transfer the property to the beneficiary. See passive trust under TRUST.

corporate trustee. A corporation that is empowered by its charter to act as a trustee, such as a bank or trust company.

indenture trustee. A trustee named in a trust indenture and charged with holding legal title to the trust property; a trustee under an indenture.

joint trustee. See COTRUSTEE.

judicial trustee. A trustee appointed by a court to execute a trust.

quasi-trustee. One who benefits from a breach of a trust to a great enough degree to become liable as a trustee.

successor trustee. A trustee who succeeds an earlier trustee, usu. as provided in the trust agreement. [Cases: Trusts 169, 243. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 288–294, 298–299, 341.]

testamentary trustee (tes-t<<schwa>>-men-t<<schwa>>-ree or -tree). A trustee appointed by or acting under a will; one appointed to carry out a trust created by a will. [Cases: Wills 681. C.J.S. Wills § 1454.]

township trustee. One of a board of officers to whom, in some states, a township's affairs are entrusted. [Cases: Towns 28. C.J.S. Towns §§ 95–114.]

trustee ad litem (ad II-tem or -t<<schwa>>m). A trustee appointed by the court.

trustee de son tort (d<<schwa>> sawn [or son] tor[t]). A person who, without legal authority, administers a living person's property to the detriment of the property owner. See constructive trust under TRUST. [Cases: Trusts 170. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 317.]

trustee ex maleficio (eks mal-<<schwa>>-fish-ee-oh). A person who is guilty of wrongful or fraudulent conduct and is held by equity to the duty of a trustee, in relation to the subject matter, to prevent him or her from profiting from the wrongdoing.

2. Bankruptcy. A person appointed by the U.S. Trustee or elected by creditors or appointed by a judge to administer the bankruptcy estate during a bankruptcy case. • The trustee's duties include (1) collecting and reducing to cash the assets of the estate, (2) operating the debtor's business with court approval if appropriate to preserve the value of business assets, (3) examining the debtor at a meeting of creditors, (4) filing inventories and making periodic reports to the court on the financial condition of the estate, (5) investigating the debtor's financial affairs, (6) examining proofs of claims and objecting to improper claims, (7) furnishing information relating to the bankruptcy to interested parties, and (8) opposing discharge through bankruptcy, if advisable. A trustee is appointed or elected in every Chapter 7 case, and is appointed in every Chapter 12 and Chapter 13 case under the Bankruptcy Code. A trustee is not appointed or elected in a Chapter 11 case unless the court finds that a trustee is needed and appoints one. In most Chapter 11 cases, the bankruptcy estate is administered by the debtor in possession, rather than by a trustee. The role of a bankruptcy trustee varies depending on the type of bankruptcy case. 11 USCA §§ 701–703, 1104,

1202. — Also termed (in sense 2) bankruptcy trustee; trustee in bankruptcy. See UNITED STATES TRUSTEE. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3001–3011. C.J.S. Bankruptcy §§ 194–198.]

interim trustee. A bankruptcy trustee appointed to perform all the functions and duties of a trustee until the regular trustee is selected and qualified. • Before the meeting of creditors, the interim trustee often preliminarily investigates the debtor's assets and financial affairs. [Cases: Bankruptcy 3002. C.J.S. Bankruptcy § 195.]

3. DIRECTOR(2). 4. Parliamentary law. An officer who audits an organization's finances.

trustee, vb. 1. To serve as trustee. 2. To place (a person or property) in the hands of one or more trustees. 3. To appoint (a person) as trustee, often of a bankrupt's estate in order to restrain a creditor from collecting moneys due. 4. To attach (the effects of a debtor) in the hands of a third person.

common trust fund. A trust fund set up within a trust department to combine the assets of numerous small trusts to achieve greater investment diversification. • Common trust funds are regulated by state law.

TRUST-FUND DOCTRINE

trust-fund doctrine. The principle that the assets of an insolvent company, including paid and unpaid subscriptions to the capital stock, are held as a trust fund to which the company's creditors may look for payment of their claims. • The creditors may follow the property constituting this fund, and may use it to reduce the debts, unless it has passed into the hands of a bona fide purchaser without notice. — Also termed trust-fund theory. [Cases: Corporations 544(2). C.J.S. Corporations § 743.]

TRUST INDENTURE

trust indenture. See INDENTURE.

TRUST INDENTURE ACT

Trust Indenture Act. A federal law, enacted in 1939, designed to protect investors of certain types of bonds by requiring that (1) the SEC approve the trust indenture, (2) the indenture include certain protective clauses and exclude certain exculpatory clauses, and (3) the trustees be independent of the issuing company. 15 USCA §§ 77aaa et seq. [Cases: Securities Regulation 29.10–29.14. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 101–102.]

tutela (t[y]oo-tee-l<<schwa>>), n.[Latin "tutelage"] Roman law. A type of guardianship either for those not having reached puberty (tutela impuberum) or for women (tutela mulierum). • The guardian was called the tutor, the ward the pupillus. Guardians for women no longer existed in Justinian's time. Cf. CURA.

tutelage (t[y]oo-t<<schwa>>-lij), n.1. The act of protecting or guiding; guardianship. 2.Int'l law. The state of being under the care and management of an international organization such as the League of Nations or United Nations. • This term applies, for example, to the status of a people who do not yet benefit from a fully operational government of their own — such as people displaced by war and living in a territory that will in the future be given its autonomy.

tutor,n.1. One who teaches; esp., a private instructor. Pl. tutors. 2.Roman & civil law. A guardian of a minor; a person appointed to have the care of the minor's person and estate. • The guardian of a minor past the age of puberty is called a curator and has duties somewhat different from those of a tutor. Pl. tutores.[Cases: Guardian and Ward 10, 17.]

TWELFTH AMENDMENT

Twelfth Amendment.The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1804, that altered the electoral-college system by separating the balloting for presidential and vice-presidential candidates. [Cases: United States 25. C.J.S. United States § 46.]

TWELVE-DAY RULE

twelve-day rule.Criminal procedure. A rule in some jurisdictions requiring that a person charged with a felony be given a preliminary examination no later than 12 days after the arraignment on the original warrant. [Cases: Criminal Law 264. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 362–363.]

TWELVE-MONTH LIQUIDATION

twelve-month liquidation.See LIQUIDATION.

TWELVE TABLES

Twelve Tables.Roman law. The earliest surviving legislation enacted by the Romans, written on 12 tablets in the 5th century B.C. • The Tables set out many rights and duties of Roman citizens, including debtors' rights, family law, wills, torts, civil procedure, and some public law. They substituted a written body of laws, easily accessible and binding on all citizens of Rome, for an unwritten usage accessible to only a few. The law of the Twelve Tables was also known as the Lex Duodecim Tabularum.

“The Twelve Tables continued to be recognized for many centuries as the fundamental law of the Romans; they did not formally lose this character until it was taken from them by the legislation of Justinian.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 74–75 (1881).

TWENTIETH AMENDMENT

Twentieth Amendment.The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1933, that changed the date of the presidential and vice-presidential inaugurations from March 4 to January 20, and the date for congressional convention from March 4 to January 3, thereby eliminating the short session of Congress, during which a number of members sat who had not been reelected to office. — Also termed lame-duck amendment. [Cases: United States 26. C.J.S. United States §§ 45–47.]

TWENTY-FIFTH AMENDMENT

Twenty-fifth Amendment.The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1967, that established rules of succession for the presidency and vice presidency in the event of death, resignation, or incapacity. [Cases: United States 26.C.J.S. United States §§ 45–47.]

TWENTY-FIRST AMENDMENT

Twenty-first Amendment.The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1933, that repealed the 18th Amendment (which established national Prohibition) and returned the power to regulate alcohol to the states. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors 17. C.J.S. Intoxicating Liquors § 35.]

2503(c) trust.See TRUST.

TWENTY-FOURTH AMENDMENT

Twenty-fourth Amendment.The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1964, that prohibits the federal and state governments from restricting the right to vote in a federal election because of one's failure to pay a poll tax or other tax. [Cases: Elections 83. C.J.S. Elections § 29.]

TWENTY-SECOND AMENDMENT

Twenty-second Amendment.The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1951, that prohibits a person from being elected President more than twice (or, if the person succeeded to the office with more than half the predecessor's term remaining, more than once). [Cases: United States 26. C.J.S. United States §§ 45–47.]

TWENTY-SEVENTH AMENDMENT

Twenty-seventh Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1992, that prevents a pay raise for senators and representatives from taking effect until a new Congress convenes. • This amendment was proposed as part of the original Bill of Rights in 1789, but it took 203 years for the required three-fourths of the states to ratify it. — Also termed Madison Amendment. [Cases: United States 39(6). C.J.S. United States §§ 24, 61.]

TWENTY-SIXTH AMENDMENT

Twenty-sixth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1971, that sets the minimum voting age at 18 for all state and federal elections. [Cases: Elections 18. C.J.S. Elections § 13.]

TWENTY-THIRD AMENDMENT

Twenty-third Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1961, that allows District of Columbia residents to vote in presidential elections.

TWIST

twist, n. Slang. An informant who provides testimony in exchange for leniency in sentencing, rather than for money. See INFORMANT.

twisting, n. An insurance agent's or company's misrepresenting or misstating facts, or giving an incomplete comparison of policies, to induce an insured to give up a policy in one company and buy another company's policy. [Cases: Insurance 1563, 1618. C.J.S. Insurance § 91.]

TWO-CONTROLLED-STUDIES STANDARD

two-controlled-studies standard. The requirement by the Federal Trade Commission that before the maker of an over-the-counter painkiller can advertise that it is better or has fewer side effects than another brand, the maker must verify the claim in two scientifically controlled studies.

TWO-DISMISSAL RULE

two-dismissal rule. The rule that a notice of voluntary dismissal operates as an adjudication on the merits — not merely as a dismissal without prejudice — when filed by a plaintiff who has already dismissed the same claim in another court. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1714; Pretrial Procedure 519. C.J.S. Dismissal and Nonsuit § 13.]

TWO-ISSUE RULE

two-issue rule. The rule that if multiple issues were submitted to a trial jury and at least one of them is error-free, the appellate court should presume that the jury based its verdict on the proper issue — not on an erroneous one — and should therefore affirm the judgment. [Cases: Appeal and Error 1136. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 714, 770, 826.]

TWO-PARTY PAYMENT

two-party payment.See PAYMENT.

TWO-ROUND VOTING

TWO-TIER OFFER

two-tier offer.A two-step technique by which a bidder tries to acquire a target corporation, the first step involving a cash tender offer and the second usu. a merger in which the target company's remaining shareholders receive securities from the bidder (these securities ordinarily being less favorable than the cash given in the first step).

TWO-WITNESS RULE

two-witness rule. 1. The rule that, to support a perjury conviction, two independent witnesses (or one witness along with corroborating evidence) must establish that the alleged perjurer gave false testimony. [Cases: Perjury 34. C.J.S. Perjury § 43.] 2. The rule, as stated in the U.S. Constitution, that no person may be convicted of treason without two witnesses to the same overt act — or unless the accused confesses in open court. U.S. Const. art. IV, § 2, cl. 2. [Cases: Treason 13.C.J.S. Treason §§ 14–15.]

tying,adj. Antitrust. Of or relating to an arrangement whereby a seller sells a product to a buyer only if the buyer purchases another product from the seller <tying agreement>. [Cases: Monopolies 17.5(2). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 100, 102.]

tying arrangement.Antitrust. 1. A seller's agreement to sell one product or service only if the buyer also buys a different product or service. • The product or service that the buyer wants to buy is known as the tying product or tying service; the different product or service that the seller insists on selling is known as the tied product or tied service. Tying arrangements may be illegal under the Sherman or Clayton Act if their effect is too anticompetitive. [Cases: Monopolies 17.5(2). C.J.S. Monopolies §§ 100, 102.]

“The courts have developed an easily articulated text for so-called per se illegal tying arrangements, although the test varies from one circuit court to another.... In operation, the tests are similar, and the three-part test combines elements that are separated in the tests of other circuits. For purpose of analysis we use this five-part test: (1) There must be separate tying and tied products; (2) there must be ‘evidence of actual coercion by the seller that in fact forced the buyer to accept the tied product ...’; (3) the seller must possess ‘sufficient economic power in the tying product market to coerce purchaser acceptance of the tied product ...’; (4) there must be ‘anticompetitive effects in the tied market ...’; and (5) there must be ‘involvement of a “not insubstantial” amount of interstate commerce in the tied product market’ ” Herbert Hovenkamp, Federal Antitrust Policy 392 (2d ed. 1999) (quoting Yentsch v. Texaco, Inc., 630 F.2d 46, 56, 57 (2d Cir. 1980)).

2. A seller's refusal to sell one product or service unless the buyer also buys a different product or service. — Also termed tying agreement; tie-in; tie-in arrangement. Cf. RECIPROCAL DEALING.

TYING PRODUCT

of procedural abuses during contract formation or because of overreaching contractual terms, esp. terms that are unreasonably favorable to one party while precluding meaningful choice for the other party. • Because unconscionability depends on circumstances at the time the contract is formed, a later rise in market price is irrelevant. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

“Traditionally, a bargain was said to be unconscionable in an action at law if it was ‘such as no man in his senses and not under delusion would make on the one hand, and as no honest and fair man would accept on the other;’ damages were then limited to those to which the aggrieved party was ‘equitably’ entitled. Even though a contract was fully enforceable in an action for damages, equitable remedies such as specific performance were refused where ‘the sum total of its provisions drives too hard a bargain for a court of conscience to assist.’ Modern procedural reforms have blurred the distinction between remedies at law and in equity. For contracts for the sale of goods, Uniform Commercial Code § 2-302 states the rule of this Section without distinction between law and equity. Comment 1 to that section adds, ‘The principle is one of the prevention of oppression and unfair surprise ... and not of disturbance of allocation of risks because of superior bargaining power.’ ” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 208 cmt. b (1979) (citations omitted).

“Nowhere among the [Uniform Commercial] Code's many definitions is there one of unconscionability. That the term is incapable of precise definition is a source of both strength and weakness.” E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 4.28, at 310 (3d ed. 1999).

procedural unconscionability.Unconscionability resulting from improprieties in contract formation (such as oral misrepresentations or disparities in bargaining position) rather than from the terms of the contract itself. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

“Most cases of unconscionability involve a combination of procedural and substantive unconscionability, as it is generally agreed that if more of one is present, then less of the other is required.” E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 4.28, at 312 (3d ed. 1999).

substantive unconscionability.Unconscionability resulting from actual contract terms that are unduly harsh, commercially unreasonable, and grossly unfair given the existing circumstances. [Cases: Contracts 1. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

unconscionable (<<schwa>>n-kon-sh<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l), adj.1. (Of a person) having no conscience; unscrupulous <an unconscionable used-car salesman>.2. (Of an act or transaction) showing no regard for conscience; affronting the sense of justice, decency, or reasonableness <the contract is void as unconscionable>. Cf. CONSCIONABLE. [Cases: Contracts 1.C.J.S. Contracts §§ 2–3, 9, 12.]

unconstitutional-conditions doctrine. Constitutional law. 1. The rule that the government cannot condition a person's receipt of a governmental benefit on the waiver of a constitutionally protected right (esp. a right under the First Amendment). • For example, a television station that receives public funds cannot be forced to refrain from endorsing political candidates. [Cases: Constitutional Law 82(1). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 445, 447–454, 460, 471.] 2. The rule that the government cannot force a defendant to choose between two constitutionally protected rights. [Cases: Criminal Law 36.6.] — Also termed doctrine of unconstitutional conditions.

(Of a work) ineligible for copyright protection either because the work lacks originality or because it is an idea, concept, process, or other abstraction that is not included in one of the eight covered classifications of copyrightable works. 17 USCA §§ 101–106. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 4. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 9–10, 16.]

uncore prist (<<schwa>>n[g]-kor prist). [Law French “still ready”] Hist. A plea by which a party alleges readiness to pay or perform what is justly demanded.

“Yet sometimes, after tender and refusal of a debt, if the creditor harasses his debtor with an action, it then becomes necessary for the defendant to acknowledge the debt, and plead the tender; adding, that ... he is still ready, uncore prist, to discharge it” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 303 (1768).

UNCORRECTABILITY DEFENSE

uncorrectability defense. Patents. An affirmative defense in an infringement suit, established by showing (1) that a coinventor's name was omitted from a patent, and (2) that the patent cannot be corrected because the named coinventor acted with deceptive intent. [Cases: Patents 283(1). C.J.S. Patents §§ 436–439.]

underwriter. 1.INSURER. 2. One who buys stock from the issuer with an intent to resell it to the public; a person or entity, esp. an investment banker, who guarantees the sale of newly issued securities by purchasing all or part of the shares for resale to the public. [Cases: Securities Regulation 11.18, 60.31. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 69, 71, 199.]

“The term ‘underwriter’ derives its meaning from former British insurance practices. When insuring their cargo shippers would seek out investors to insure their property. The insurers would add their signatures and would write their names under those of the shipper; hence the term ‘underwriters.’ Both in terms of the insurance industry and the securities markets, the concept of underwriting has expanded significantly since its inception.” Thomas Lee Hazen, The Law of Securities Regulation § 2.1, at 57 (2d ed. 1994).

chartered life underwriter.An underwriter who has satisfied the requirements set forth by The American College (formerly The American College of Life Underwriters) to be designated a life insurance underwriter. — Abbr. CLU.

insurance underwriter. 1.INSURER. — Also termed writer. 2. An insurance-company employee who is responsible for determining whether to issue a policy and the amount to charge for the coverage provided. [Cases: Insurance 1515.]

UNDUE-BURDEN TEST

undue-burden test. Constitutional law. The Supreme Court test stating that a law regulating abortion will be struck down if it places a substantial obstacle in the path of a woman's right to obtain an abortion. • This test replaced the “trimester analysis,” set forth in Roe v. Wade, in which the state's ability to restrict abortion increased after each trimester of pregnancy. Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pa. v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 112 S.Ct. 2791 (1992). [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control 0.5, 1.30. C.J.S. Abortion and Birth Control; Family Planning § 9.]

UNDUE EXPERIMENTATION

undue experimentation. Patents. An unreasonable amount of research and testing that would be required for a person skilled in the appropriate art to make and work an invention from the specification in the patent application. • If undue experimentation would be required, the application fails the embodiment requirement of 35 USCA § 112. See WANDS TEST. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

UNDUE HARDSHIP

undue hardship. See HARDSHIP.

UNDUE INFLUENCE

undue influence. 1. The improper use of power or trust in a way that deprives a person of free will and substitutes another's objective. • Consent to a contract, transaction, or relationship or to conduct is voidable if the consent is obtained through undue influence. — Also termed implied coercion; moral coercion. [Cases: Contracts 96. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 4, 136, 139–140, 187, 189–194.]

“Undue influence is unfair persuasion of a party who is under the domination of the person exercising the persuasion or who by virtue of the relation between them is justified in assuming that the person will not act in a manner inconsistent with his welfare.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 177(1) (1979).

“When at the turn of the twentieth century, the common law doctrine of duress was expanded to provide relief for coercion irrespective of the means of coercion, much of the work of undue influence became unnecessary. The doctrine has a much more specialized role today, although often enough the precedents decided when the more general doctrine prevailed are cited and quoted to the general confusion of the profession. Today the gist of the doctrine is unfair persuasion rather than coercion. Euphoria rather than fear is often, but certainly not always, the state of mind of the party unduly influenced.” John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 9-9, at 351–52 (3d ed. 1987).

2. Wills & estates. Coercion that destroys a testator's free will and substitutes another's objectives in its place. • When a beneficiary actively procures the execution of a will, a presumption of undue influence may be raised, based on the confidential relationship between the influencer and the person influenced. — Also termed improper influence; (formerly, in both senses) suggestion. See COERCION; DURESS. [Cases: Wills 154. C.J.S. Wills § 345.]

unfair competition. 1. Dishonest or fraudulent rivalry in trade and commerce; esp., the practice of endeavoring to pass off one's own goods or products in the market for those of another by means of imitating or counterfeiting the name, brand, size, shape, or other distinctive characteristic of the article or its packaging. [Cases: Trade Regulation 403. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition § 98.] 2. The body of law encompassing various business and privacy torts, all generally based on deceitful trade practices, including passing off, false advertising, commercial disparagement, and misappropriation.

“The legal doctrine of unfair competition is a development of the fundamental idea that dealings based on deceit are legally wrong.” Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 6 (1929).

UNFAIR HEARING

unfair hearing.See HEARING.

UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICE unfair labor practice. Any conduct prohibited by state or federal law governing the relations among employers, employees, and labor organizations. • Examples of unfair labor practices by an employer include (1) interfering with protected employee rights, such as the right to self-organization, (2) discriminating against employees for union-related activities, (3) retaliating against employees who have invoked their rights, and (4) refusing to engage in collective bargaining. Examples of unfair labor practices by a labor organization include causing an employer to discriminate against an employee, engaging in an illegal strike or boycott, causing an employer to pay for work not to be performed (i.e., featherbedding), and refusing to engage in collective bargaining. 29 USCA §§ 151–169. [Cases: Labor Relations 361–396. C.J.S. Labor Relations §§ 153–154, 159–160, 318, 328–401, 521.]

UNFAIR PERSUASION

unfair persuasion. Contracts. A type of undue influence in which a stronger party achieves a result by means that seriously impair the weaker party's free and competent exercise of judgment. • Unfair persuasion is a lesser form of undue influence than duress and misrepresentation. The two primary factors to be considered are the unavailability of independent advice and the susceptibility of the person persuaded. See UNDUE INFLUENCE(1). [Cases: Contracts 96. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 4, 136, 139–140, 187, 189–194.]

UNFAIR SURPRISE

unfair surprise. A situation in which a party, having had no notice of some action or proffered evidence, is unprepared to answer or refute it.

UNFAIR TRADE

unfair trade. An inequitable business practice; esp., the act or an instance of a competitor's repeating of words in a way that conveys a misrepresentation that materially injures the person who first used the words, by appropriating credit of some kind earned by the first user. [Cases: Trade Regulation 862.1.]

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES AND CONSUMER PROTECTION LAW

Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Law. A model statute patterned on the Federal Trade Commission Act and proposed by the FTC in 1967 for adoption by the states; a state law providing consumer-protection remedies, including private causes of action, for deceptive trade practices and false advertising. • The Act gives the state attorney general power to regulate unfair and deceptive trade practices. It also gives consumers a right to sue offenders directly. — Also termed Little FTC Act. — Abbr. UTPCPL.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

unfit, adj. 1. Unsuitable; not adapted or qualified for a particular use or service <the buyer returned the unfit goods to the seller and asked for a refund>. [Cases: Contracts 312(5); Sales 284(1). C.J.S. Contracts § 562; Sales §§ 251, 253, 257.] 2. Family law. Morally unqualified; incompetent <the judge found the mother unfit and so found that awarding custody of the child to the father was in the child's best interests>. [Cases: Child Custody 32; Infants 154.1–159. C.J.S. Infants §§ 31, 36–40, 43–44, 51–52, 55, 62.]

UNFITNESS OF A PARENT

unfitness of a parent. Family law. A parent's failure to exhibit a reasonable concern for, interest in, or responsibility for a child's welfare. • Regardless of the specific ground for an allegation of unfitness, a court considers the parent's actions and the circumstances surrounding the conduct in deciding whether unfitness has been demonstrated.

UNFORESEEN

unforeseen, adj. Not foreseen; not expected <unforeseen circumstances>.

UNFRIENDLY SUITOR

uniform, adj. Characterized by a lack of variation; identical or consistent.

UNIFORM ADOPTION ACT

Uniform Adoption Act. A 1994 model statute aimed at achieving uniformity in adoption laws.

- The current version of the UAA was promulgated in 1994 by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. State adoption of the Uniform Adoption Act has been largely unsuccessful. Earlier versions, in 1953 and 1971, were amended many times but were enacted in only a few states. — Abbr. UAA.

UNIFORM ANATOMICAL GIFT ACT

Uniform Anatomical Gift Act. A 1968 model statute that created protocols that govern the giving and receiving of anatomical gifts.

- Under the Act, a person may donate all or part of one's own body for purposes of transplantation, therapy, research, or education. The original Act has been adopted in some form in all 50 states. It was revised in 1987, and the revised version has been adopted in some form in at least 22 states. — Abbr. UAGA.

UNIFORM CHILD CUSTODY JURISDICTION ACT

Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. A 1968 model statute that sets out a standard (based on the child's residence in and connections with the state) by which a state court determines whether it has jurisdiction over a particular child-custody matter or whether it must recognize a custody decree issued by another state's court. • The Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act was replaced in 1997 by the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act. — Abbr. UCCJA. See HOME STATE. Cf. PARENTAL KIDNAPPING PREVENTION ACT ; UNIFORM CHILD CUSTODY JURISDICTION AND ENFORCEMENT ACT. [Cases: Child Custody 730–753.]

UNIFORM CHILD CUSTODY JURISDICTION AND ENFORCEMENT ACT

Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act. A 1997 model statute that provides uniform methods of expedited interstate custody and visitation orders. • This Act was promulgated as a successor to the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. The UCCJEA brings the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act into conformity with the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act and the Violence Against Women Act. The Act revises child-custody jurisdiction, giving clearer standards for original jurisdiction and a standard for continuing jurisdiction. The Act also provides a remedial process for enforcing interstate child custody and visitation. — Abbr. UCCJEA. Cf. UNIFORM CHILD CUSTODY JURISDICTION ACT.

UNIFORM CODE OF MILITARY JUSTICE

Uniform Code of Military Justice. 1. CODE OF MILITARY JUSTICE. 2. A model code promulgated by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws to govern state military forces when not in federal service. 11 U.L.A. 335 et seq. (1974). — Abbr. UCMJ. [Cases: Military Justice 502. C.J.S. Military Justice § 3.]

UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE

Uniform Commercial Code. A uniform law that governs commercial transactions, including sales of goods, secured transactions, and negotiable instruments. • The Code has been adopted in some form by every state. — Abbr. UCC. [Cases: Bills and Notes 2; Sales 3.1; Secured Transactions 3. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 4; Sales §§ 3–4; Secured Transactions §§ 2, 6.]

UNIFORM COMPUTER INFORMATION TRANSACTIONS ACT

Uniform Computer Information Transactions Act. A model law that regulates software licensing and computer-information transactions. • The Act draws on contract law and the Uniform Commercial Code to create a regulatory scheme for licensing, rather than sales or lease, transactions. Among other things, UCITA applies to contracts for the licensing or purchase of software, contracts for software development, and contracts for access to databases through the Internet. It does not cover goods or services contracts within the scope of the UCC. — Abbr. UCITA.

UNIFORM CONSUMER CREDIT CODE

Uniform Consumer Credit Code. A uniform law designed to simplify and modernize the consumer credit and usury laws, to improve consumer understanding of the terms of credit transactions, to protect consumers against unfair practices, and the like. • This Code has been adopted by only a few states. — Abbr. UCCC; U3C. — Also termed Consumer Credit Code. See CONSUMER CREDIT PROTECTION ACT . [Cases: Consumer Credit 1. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit § 274.]

UNIFORM CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT

Uniform Controlled Substances Act.A uniform act, adopted by many states and the federal government, governing the sale, use, and distribution of drugs.21 USCA §§ 801 et seq. [Cases: Controlled Substances 4, 20.]

UNIFORM CRIME REPORTS

Uniform Crime Reports.A series of annual criminological studies (each entitled Crime in the United States) prepared by the FBI. • The reports include data on eight index offenses, statistics on arrests, and information on offenders, crime rates, and the like. — Abbr. UCR.

UNIFORM CUSTOMS AND PRACTICE FOR COMMERCIAL DOCUMENTARY CREDITS

Uniform Customs and Practice for Commercial Documentary Credits.A publication of the International Chamber of Commerce that codifies widespread customs of bankers and merchants relating to the mechanics and operation of letters of credit. • Courts look to this publication to supplement and help interpret primary sources of credit law, such as UCC Article 5. — Abbr. UCP. [Cases: Banks and Banking 191. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 341–366, 368–370, 372–376.]

UNIFORM DECEPTIVE TRADE PRACTICES ACT

Uniform Deceptive Trade Practices Act.A 1964 model state statute that codified many common-law intellectual-property torts, such as trademark infringement, passing off, trade disparagement, and false advertising, and that provided additional consumer protection against other forms of commercial deception. • The Act provides a laundry list of prohibited practices, all involving misrepresentation. — Abbr. UDTPA. See BABY FTC ACT. [Cases: Consumer Protection 6. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 29–31, 33–39, 60–65.]

UNIFORM DETERMINATION OF DEATH ACT

Uniform Determination of Death Act.A 1978 model statute that provides a comprehensive basis for determining death. • This is a technical act that merely defines death clinically and does not deal with suicide, assisted suicide, or the right to die. The Act was revised in 1980. It has been adopted in almost all states.

UNIFORM DISPOSITION OF COMMUNITY PROPERTY AT DEATH ACT

Uniform Disposition of Community Property at Death Act.A 1971 model statute designed for non-community-property states to preserve the rights of each spouse in property that was community property before the spouses moved to non-community-property states, unless they have severed or altered their community-property rights.

UNIFORM DIVISION OF INCOME FOR TAX PURPOSES ACT

Uniform Division of Income for Tax Purposes Act. A uniform law, adopted by some states, that provides criteria to assist in assigning the total taxable income of a multistate corporation among the various states. — Abbr. UDITPA. [Cases: Taxation 1005. C.J.S. Taxation § 1719.]

UNIFORM DIVORCE RECOGNITION ACT

Uniform Divorce Recognition Act. A 1947 model code adopted by some states regarding full-faith-and-credit issues that arise in divorces. — Abbr. UDRA. [Cases: Divorce 351. C.J.S. Divorce §§ 769, 772.]

UNIFORM DURABLE POWER OF ATTORNEY ACT

Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act. A 1979 model statute that provides a simple way for a person to deal with his or her property by providing a power of attorney that will survive after the incompetence of the principal. • The Act was revised in 1987 and has been adopted in almost every state.

UNIFORMED SERVICES FORMER SPOUSES' PROTECTION ACT

Uniformed Services Former Spouses' Protection Act. A federal statute that governs the disposition of military pension benefits to former spouses of persons in the armed services. 10 USCA §§ 1401 et seq. • The Act permits state courts to treat military-retirement pay as marital property and to order payment of up to 50% of the retirement pay directly to the former spouse if the spouses were married for at least ten years while the employee served in the military. — Abbr. USFSPA.

UNIFORM ELECTRONIC TRANSACTIONS ACT

Uniform Electronic Transactions Act. A 1999 model law designed to support electronic commerce by providing means for legally recognizing and retaining electronic records, establishing how parties can bind themselves in an electronic transaction, and providing for the use of electronic records by governmental agencies. • UETA covers electronic records and digital signatures but applies only if all parties agree to do business electronically. — Abbr. UETA.

UNIFORM ENFORCEMENT OF FOREIGN JUDGMENTS ACT

Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act. A uniform state law giving the holder of a foreign judgment the right to levy and execute as if it were a domestic judgment. [Cases: Judgment 814–830. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 965–1033.]

UNIFORM FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES ACT

Uniform Fraudulent Conveyances Act. A model act adopted in 1918 to deal with issues arising from fraudulent conveyances by insolvent persons. • This act differentiated between conduct that was presumed fraudulent and conduct that required an actual intent to commit fraud. — Abbr. UFCA. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances 2.]

UNIFORM FRAUDULENT TRANSFER ACT

Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act.A model act designed to bring uniformity among the states regarding the definition of, and penalties for, fraudulent transfers. • This act was adopted in 1984 to replace the Uniform Fraudulent Conveyances Act. — Abbr. UFTA. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances 2.]

UNIFORM GIFTS TO MINORS ACT

Uniform Gifts to Minors Act. — Abbr. UGMA. See UNIFORM TRANSFERS TO MINORS ACT.

UNIFORM HEALTH-CARE DECISION ACT

Uniform Health-Care Decision Act.A 1993 model statute that facilitates and encourages the making of advance directives. — Abbr. UHCDA. See ADVANCE DIRECTIVE ; LIVING WILL.

UNIFORM INTERSTATE FAMILY SUPPORT ACT

Uniform Interstate Family Support Act.A 1992 model statute establishing a one-order system by which an alimony or child-support decree issued by one state can be enforced against a former spouse who resides in another state. • This statute has been adopted in every state and is the basis of jurisdiction in child-support suits. The purpose of the Act is to make the pursuit of interstate child support and paternity more effective, consistent, and efficient by requiring all states to consistently recognize and enforce support orders issued in other states. Before its enactment, there was considerable disparity among the states in the way they handled interstate child-support proceedings, since each state had differing versions of the earlier uniform law, the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. The Act was revised in 1996. — Abbr. UIFSA.

UNIFORM INTERSTATE JUVENILE COMPACT

Uniform Interstate Juvenile Compact.An agreement that regulates the treatment of juveniles who are not under proper supervision or control, or who have run away or escaped, and who are likely to endanger their own or others' health, morals, or welfare. • The Compact is relied on by the state to transport juvenile runaways back to their home states. It has now been universally adopted in the United States, but not always in its entirety. — Abbr. UIJC.

UNIFORMITY CLAUSE

Uniformity Clause.The clause of the U.S. Constitution requiring the uniform collection of federal taxes. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 1. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3022.]

UNIFORM JUVENILE COURT ACT

Uniform Juvenile Court Act.A 1968 model statute designed to (1) provide for the care, protection, and moral, mental, and physical development of the children who come under its provisions, (2) provide juvenile delinquents with treatment, training, and rehabilitation rather than criminal punishment, (3) attempt to keep families together unless separation of parents and children is necessary for the children's welfare or is in the public interest, (4) provide a judicial procedure for a fair hearing and protection of juvenile delinquents' constitutional and other legal rights, and (5) provide simple interstate procedures to carry out cooperative measures among the juvenile courts of different states. — Abbr. UJCA.

UNIFORM LAW

uniform law. An unofficial law proposed as legislation for all the states to adopt exactly as written, the purpose being to promote greater consistency among the states. • All the uniform laws are promulgated by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. For a complete collection, see Uniform Laws Annotated. See uniform statute under STATUTE. [Cases: Statutes 226. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 358–361.]

UNIFORM LAW COMMISSIONERS

Uniform Law Commissioners. See NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF COMMISSIONERS ON UNIFORM STATE LAWS .

UNIFORM LIMITED PARTNERSHIP ACT

Uniform Limited Partnership Act. A model law promulgated in 1916 for adoption by state legislatures to govern the relationship between the partners of a limited partnership. • At one time it was adopted in all states except Louisiana. The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws promulgated the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act (RULPA) in 1976, and made substantial amendments to it in 1985. The amended RULPA has been adopted by most states. — Abbr. ULPA.

UNIFORM MANDATORY DISPOSITION OF DETAINERS ACT

Uniform Mandatory Disposition of Detainers Act. A 1958 model statute requiring a state to timely dispose of any untried charges against a prisoner in that state, on the prisoner's written request. • The Act has been adopted by several states. See INTERSTATE AGREEMENT ON DETAINERS ACT.

UNIFORM MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE ACT

Uniform Marriage and Divorce Act. A 1970 model statute that defines marriage and divorce. • Extensively amended in 1973, the Act was an attempt by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws to make marriage and divorce laws more uniform. The Act's greatest significance is that it introduced, as the sole ground for divorce, irreconcilable differences. Although the UMDA has been enacted in part in only a handful of states, it has had an enormous impact on marriage and divorce laws in all states. — Abbr. UMDA. — Also termed Model Marriage and Divorce Act. See IRRECONCILABLE DIFFERENCES .

UNIFORM PARENTAGE ACT

Uniform Parentage Act. A 1973 model statute that provides a means for determining parenthood for the general welfare of the child and for assigning child support. • The Act abolishes distinctions between legitimate and illegitimate status for children. Instead, it directs courts to determine rights and responsibilities based on the existence of a parent–child relationship. The Act has been adopted in all states.

UNIFORM PARTNERSHIP ACT

Uniform Partnership Act. A 1914 model statute intended to bring uniformity to state laws governing general and limited partnerships. • The Act was adopted by almost all the states, but has been superseded in several of them by the Revised Uniform Partnership Act (1994). — Abbr. UPA. [Cases: Partnership 351. C.J.S. Partnership § 404.]

UNIFORM PREMARITAL AGREEMENTS ACT

Uniform Premarital Agreements Act. A 1983 model statute that governs the drafting of prenuptial contracts and provides a more certain framework for drafting complete and enforceable agreements. • Under the UPAA, a premarital agreement must be in writing and signed by the parties. It becomes effective only upon marriage. The agreement may govern the parties' assets, support, and obligations during the marriage, at death, and upon divorce. The UPAA has been adopted in some form in about one-third of the states. — Abbr. UPAA.

UNIFORM PRINCIPAL AND INCOME ACT

Uniform Principal and Income Act. A uniform code adopted by some states governing allocation of principal and income in trusts and estates. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 502; Trusts 272. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators § 847; Trover and Conversion § 551.]

UNIFORM PROBATE CODE

Uniform Probate Code. A 1969 model statute that modernizes the rules and doctrines governing intestate succession, probate, and the administration of estates. • It has been extensively amended many times since 1969 and has been enacted in a majority of states. — Abbr. UPC.

UNIFORM PRUDENT INVESTOR ACT

Uniform Prudent Investor Act. A 1994 model statute that sets a standard for the acts of a trustee, adopts a prudent-investor standard, and prefers a modern portfolio approach to investing. • Under the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, the trustee is given significant power to delegate the selection of investments. The prudent-investor standard replaces the prudent-person standard of investing. The portfolio approach provides that no investment will be viewed in isolation; rather, it will be viewed as part of the entire portfolio. Under this theory, even though an investor loses trust assets on an investment, if there is an overall positive return, the investor will not be liable to the beneficiaries. — Abbr. UPIA. See PRUDENT-INVESTOR RULE.

UNIFORM PUTATIVE AND UNKNOWN FATHERS ACT

Uniform Putative and Unknown Fathers Act. A 1988 model statute aimed at codifying Supreme Court decisions on the rights of an unwed father in relation to his child. • The Act deals primarily with an unwed father's right to notice of a termination and adoption proceeding, to adjudication of paternity, to visitation, and to custody. — Abbr. UPUFA. — Also termed Model Putative Fathers Act; Putative Fathers Act.

UNIFORM RECIPROCAL ENFORCEMENT OF SUPPORT ACT

Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. A 1950 model statute (now superseded) that sought to unify the way in which interstate support matters were processed and the way in which one jurisdiction's orders were given full faith and credit in another jurisdiction. • This Act, which was amended in 1958 and 1960, was replaced in 1997 with the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act. — Abbr. URESA. See UNIFORM INTERSTATE FAMILY SUPPORT ACT. [Cases: Child Support 500–510. C.J.S. Parent and Child §§ 175, 204–206, 246–255.]

UNIFORM SIMULTANEOUS DEATH ACT

Uniform Simultaneous Death Act. A 1940 model statute creating a rule that a person must survive a decedent by at least 120 hours in order to avoid disputes caused by simultaneous deaths (as in a common disaster) or by quickly successive deaths of persons between whom property or death benefits pass on the death of one survived by the other. • In the absence of the 120-hour period of survival, each person is presumed to have survived the other for purposes of distributing their respective estates. The Act was revised in 1993 and has been adopted in some form by almost every state. See COMMORIENTES. [Cases: Death 5–6. C.J.S. Death §§ 6–7, 15–16.]

UNIFORM STATUS OF CHILDREN OF ASSISTED CONCEPTION ACT

Uniform Status of Children of Assisted Conception Act. A 1988 model statute aimed at ensuring certainty of legal parentage when assisted conception has been used. • The adopting state has the option of regulating or prohibiting contracts with surrogate mothers.

UNIFORM STATUTE

uniform statute. See STATUTE.

UNIFORM TRADE SECRETS ACT

Uniform Trade Secrets Act. A 1979 model statute, now enacted by most states, defining trade secret differently from the common law by being at once broader (because there is no continuous-use requirement) and narrower (because information “readily ascertainable by proper means” cannot qualify). • The Act has three elements: (1) the information must qualify as a trade secret; (2) it must be misappropriated, either through wrongful means or by breaching a duty of confidentiality; and (3) the owner must have taken reasonable precautions to keep the information secret. — Also termed Uniform Trade Secrets Protection Act. — Abbr. UTSA.

UNIFORM TRANSFERS TO MINORS ACT

Uniform Transfers to Minors Act. A 1983 model statute providing for the transfer of property to a minor and permitting a custodian who acts in a fiduciary capacity to manage investments and apply the income from the property to the minor's support. • The Act has been adopted in most states. It was revised in 1986. — Abbr. UTMA. — Also termed Transfers to Minors Act. — Formerly also termed Uniform Gifts to Minors Act; Gifts to Minors Act. [Cases: Infants 28. C.J.S. Infants §§ 135, 143.]

No. 7868. • Administered by the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization, the Convention does not apply between nations that are also signatories of the Berne Convention. The United States signed the treaty in 1955. — Abbr. UCC. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 34. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 21, 92.]

UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS

Universal Declaration of Human Rights. An international bill of rights proclaimed by the United Nations in December 1948, being that body's first general enumeration of human rights and fundamental freedoms. • The preamble states that “recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world.” The Declaration contains a lengthy list of rights and fundamental freedoms. For the full text of the Declaration, see Appendix D. [Cases: International Law 10.45(1).]

UNIVERSAL-INHERITANCE RULE

universal-inheritance rule. Wills & estates. A doctrine holding that an intestate estate escheats to the state only if the decedent leaves no surviving relatives, no matter how distant. • Through the first half of the 20th century, this rule was broadly followed in American jurisdictions. The Uniform Probate Code abandons the universal-inheritance rule and provides that if no member of the third or a nearer parentela survives the decedent, the intestate estate escheats to the state. — Also termed rule of universal inheritance. See PARENTELA. Cf. laughing heir under HEIR; GRADUAL METHOD.

UNIVERSALIST MOVEMENT

universalist movement. Copyright. A 19th-century campaign in Europe to recognize a worldwide copyright law based on an author's moral rights.

“The universalist movement evolved both in and out of France, starting with an international Congress of Authors and Artists in Brussels in 1858, attended by delegates of literary societies and universities, as well as by authors, artists, journalists, librarians, and lawyers. The movement gained momentum at an 1878 international literary congress in Paris presided over by Victor Hugo.” Paul Goldstein, International Copyright: Principles, Law, and Practice 19 (2001).

universality. 1. Equality of applicability. 2. Copyright. A nation's policy or practice of protecting an artist's rights in his or her their creation irrespective of the creator's nationality or where the work was created. • Universality, the most generous approach to international intellectual-property rights, is generally favored in countries that treat copyright as a moral right. Cf. RECIPROCITY(3); NATIONAL TREATMENT.

UNIVERSITAS FACTI

universitas facti (yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-tas fak-ti). [Law Latin] A plurality of corporeal things of the same kind regarded as a whole, such as a herd of cattle.

UNIVERSITAS JURIS

universitas juris (yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-tas joor-is). [Latin] Roman & civil law. The whole of a person's rights and liabilities; the totality of a person's legal relations.

“A universitas juris is a collection of rights and duties united by the single circumstance of their having belonged at one time to some one person.” Henry S. Maine, Ancient Law 148 (17th ed. 1901).

UNIVERSITAS PERSONARUM

universitas personarum (yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-tas p<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-nay-r<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A group of people that are legally considered an entity, such as a college or corporation. Pl. universitates personarum.

UNIVERSITAS RERUM

universitas rerum (yoo-ni-v<<schwa>>r-s<<schwa>>-tas reer-<<schwa>>m). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A whole collection of things; a variety of individual things that are together regarded by the law as a whole. See JUS RERUM.

“In the time of Justinian the universitas rerum, or universitas iuris (both expressions are used) is a somewhat abstract conception: it means the sum or whole of a man's legal position so far as it concerns the ius rerum. The conception is important in law only on the occasions, of which death is by far the most important, on which the universitas passes from one to another... The expression universitas rerum is also used in another sense, to denote any collection of objects considered as a whole." W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 172 (2d ed. 1953).

unwritten law.Law that, although never enacted in the form of a statute or ordinance, has the sanction of custom. • The term traditionally includes caselaw. — Also termed jus non scriptum; jus ex non scripto; lex non scripta; jus moribus constitutum.

“In the common law it is not too much to say that the judges are always ready to look behind the words of a precedent to what the previous court was trying to say, or to what it would have said if it could have foreseen the nature of the cases that were later to arise, or if its perception of the relevant factors in the case before it had been more acute. There is, then, a real sense in which the written words of the reported decisions are merely the gateway to something lying behind them that may be called, without any excess of poetic license, ‘unwritten law.’ ” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 145 (1968).

usage. 1. A well-known, customary, and uniform practice, usu. in a specific profession or business. See CUSTOM(1). Cf. CONVENTION(6). [Cases: Customs and Usages 1–22. C.J.S. Customs and Usages §§ 1–48.]

“A ‘usage’ is merely a customary or habitual practice; a ‘convention’ is a practice that is established by general tacit consent. ‘Usage’ denotes something that people are accustomed to do; ‘convention’ indicates that they are accustomed to do it because of a general agreement that it is the proper thing to do.” Herbert W. Horwill, The Usages of the American Constitution 22 (1925).

“Although rules of law are often founded on usage, usage is not in itself a legal rule but merely habit or practice in fact. A particular usage may be more or less widespread. It may prevail throughout an area, and the area may be small or large — a city, a state or a larger region. A usage may prevail among all people in the area, or only in a special trade or other group. Usages change over time, and persons in close association often develop temporary usages peculiar to themselves.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 219 cmt. a (1979).

custom and usage.See CUSTOM AND USAGE.

general usage.A usage that prevails throughout a country or particular trade or profession; a usage that is not restricted to a local area. [Cases: Customs and Usages 1. C.J.S. Customs and Usages § 1.]

immemorial usage.A usage that has existed for a very long time; long-standing custom. See TIME IMMEMORIAL. [Cases: Customs and Usages 1. C.J.S. Customs and Usages § 1.]

local usage.A practice or method regularly observed in a particular place, sometimes considered by a court in interpreting a document. UCC § 1-205(2). See CUSTOM AND USAGE. [Cases: Customs and Usages 9. C.J.S. Customs and Usages § 15.]

trade usage.A practice or method of dealing having such regularity of observance in a region, vocation, or trade that it justifies an expectation that it will be observed in a given transaction; a customary practice or set of practices relied on by persons conversant in, or connected with, a trade or business. • While a course of performance or a course of dealing can be established by the parties' testimony, a trade usage is usu. established by expert testimony. — Also termed usage of trade; course of trade. Cf. COURSE OF DEALING; COURSE OF PERFORMANCE. [Cases: Customs and Usages 1. C.J.S. Customs and Usages § 1.]

“The existence and scope of a usage of trade are to be determined as questions of fact. If a usage is embodied in a written trade code or similar writing the interpretation of the writing is to be determined by the court as a question of law. Unless otherwise agreed, a usage of trade in the vocation or trade in which the parties are engaged or a usage of trade of which they know or have reason to know gives meaning to or supplements or qualifies their agreement.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 222 (1979).

use (yoos), n.1. The application or employment of something; esp., a long-continued possession and employment of a thing for the purpose for which it is adapted, as distinguished from a possession and employment that is merely temporary or occasional <the neighbors complained to the city about the owner's use of the building as a dance club>.

accessory use.Zoning. A use that is dependent on or pertains to a main use. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 301–308. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 148–153.]

beneficial use.Property. The right to use property and all that makes that property desirable or habitable, such as light, air, and access, even if someone else owns the legal title to the property.

collateral use.Intellectual property. The legal use of a trademark by someone other than the trademark owner, whereby the other party must clearly identify itself, the use of the trademark, and the absence of affiliation with the trademark owner.

conditional use.Zoning. A use of property subject to special controls and conditions. • A conditional use is one that is suitable to a zoning district, but not necessarily to every location within that district. — Also termed special exception. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 382. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 195–197.]

conforming use.Zoning. The use of a structure or of the land in conformity with the uses permitted under the zoning classifications of a particular area, such as the building of a single-family dwelling in a residential zone. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 271. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 122.]

double use.Patents. An application of a known principle or process to a new use without leading to a new result or product. [Cases: Patents 27. C.J.S. Patents § 82.]

exclusive use. 1.Trademarks. The right to use a specific mark without exception, and to prevent another from using a confusingly similar mark. [Cases: Trade Regulation 61, 331. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 28, 36, 71, 119.] 2.Property. The right of an adverse user to a property, exercised independently of any similar rights held by others; one of the elements of a prescriptive easement. See USER. [Cases: Adverse Possession 36–37; Easements 8(4). C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 27, 55, 57; Easements §§ 38, 44.]

experimental use. Patents. 1. The use or sale of an invention by the inventor for experimental purposes. 2. A defense to liability for patent infringement when the infringement took place only to satisfy curiosity or to complete an experiment, rather than for profit. [Cases: Patents 260. C.J.S. Patents § 406.]

highest and best use. Real estate. In valuing property, the use that will generate the most profit. • This standard is used esp. to determine the fair market value of property subject to eminent domain. — Often shortened to best use. — Also termed most suitable use. [Cases: Taxation 348(3).]

incidental use. Zoning. Land use that is dependent on or affiliated with the land's primary use. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 301–308. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 148–153.]

most suitable use. See highest and best use.

nonconforming use. Zoning. Land use that is impermissible under current zoning restrictions but that is allowed because the use existed lawfully before the restrictions took effect. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 321–338. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 154–176.]

pious use. The designation and actual use of property for recognized religious or charitable purposes. Cf. superstitious use.

popular use. A person's imperfect right to enjoy public land. • A popular use is not legally enforceable. It is dependent on the government's will to allow access to the land.

public use. 1. Property. The public's beneficial right to use property or facilities subject to condemnation. See CONDEMNATION(2). [Cases: Eminent Domain 12–42. C.J.S. Eminent Domain §§ 27, 29–55.] 2. Patents. Any use of or offer to use a completed or operative invention in a nonsecret, natural, and intended manner. • A patent is invalid if the invention was in public use more than one year before the patent's application date. [Cases: Patents 75. C.J.S. Patents §§ 107–109.]

“The term ‘public use’ is misleading, for any use from which the public is not excluded, even though none comes, is held to be public. Similarly, an actual public use of a machine, even though the invention feature be effectively concealed from inspection, is held to be public. It makes no difference whether the patent or other publication is that of the inventor or someone else.” Roger Sherman Hoar, Patent Tactics and the Law 48 (3d ed. 1950) (citing Gillman v. Stern, 114 F.2d 28, 31 (2d Cir. 1940)).

reasonable use. Use of one's property for an appropriate purpose that does not unreasonably interfere with another's use of property. See REASONABLE-USE THEORY.

regular use. Insurance. A use that is usual, normal, or customary, as opposed to an occasional, special, or incidental use. • This term often appears in automobile-insurance policies in the definition of a nonowned automobile — that is, an automobile not owned by or furnished for the regular use of the insured. Nonowned automobiles are excluded from coverage under most liability policies. [Cases: Insurance 2657. C.J.S. Insurance § 1040.]

superstitious use. A designation or use of property for religious purposes not legally recognized or tolerated (such as gifts either favoring an unrecognized religion or supporting the saying of prayers for the dead). Cf. pious use.

2. A habitual or common practice <drug use>. 3. A purpose or end served <the tool had several uses>. 4. A benefit or profit; esp., the right to take profits from land owned and possessed by another; the equitable ownership of land to which another person holds the legal title <cestui que use>. See CESTUI QUE USE. — use (yooz), vb.

contingent use. A use that would be a contingent remainder if it had not been limited by way of use. • An example is a transfer “to A, to the use of B for life, with the remainder to the use of C's heirs.” — Also termed future use.

entire use. A use of property that is solely for the benefit of a married woman. • When used in the habendum of a trust deed for the benefit of a married woman, this phrase operates to keep her husband from taking anything under the deed. — Also termed entire benefit; sole use; sole and separate use.

executed use. Hist. A use that results from the combining of the equitable title and legal title of an estate, done to comply with the Statute of Uses' mandate that the holder of an estate be vested with legal title to ensure the holder's liability for feudal dues. See STATUTE OF USES.

executory use. See springing use.

future use. See contingent use.

official use. Hist. A use imposing a duty on a person holding legal title to an estate on behalf of another, such as a requirement that a feoffee to uses sell the estate and apportion the proceeds among several beneficiaries. • The Statute of Uses eliminated this type of use.

permissive use. Hist. A passive use resorted to before passage of the Statute of Uses in 1535 to avoid an oppressive feudal law (such as mortmain) by naming one person as the legal owner of property while allowing another to possess the property and enjoy the benefits arising from it.

present use. Hist. A use that has an immediate existence and that is subject to the Statute of Uses.

resulting use. A use created by implication and remaining with the grantor when the conveyance lacks consideration.

secondary use. See shifting use.

shifting use. A use arising from the occurrence of a certain event that terminates the preceding use. • In the following example, C has a shifting use that arises when D makes the specified payment: “to A for the use of B, but then to C when D pays $1,000 to E.” This is a type of conditional limitation. — Also termed secondary use. See conditional limitation under LIMITATION. [Cases: Trusts 131; Wills 625. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 241; Wills §§ 1314–1317, 1319.]

sole and separate use. See entire use.

springing use. A use that arises on the occurrence of a future event. • In the following example, B has a springing use that vests when B marries: “to A for the use of B when B marries.” — Also termed executory use. [Cases: Trusts 131; Wills 625. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion § 241; Wills §§ 1314–1317, 1319.]

useful, adj. Patents. (Of an invention) having a practical application. [Cases: Patents 46. C.J.S. Patents § 59.]

“[M]ere curiosities of invention, which do not have any intelligent purpose, are not useful in a patentable sense.” Roger Sherman Hoar, Patent Tactics and the Law 37 (3d ed. 1950).

“When applied to a machine, ‘useful’ means that the machine will accomplish its purpose practically when applied in industry. The word is given a practical and not a speculative meaning.” 60 Am. Jur. 2d Patents § 131 (1987).

USEFUL-ARTICLE DOCTRINE

useful-article doctrine. See APPLIED-ART DOCTRINE.

USEFUL LIFE

useful life. The estimated length of time that depreciable property will generate income. • Useful life is used to calculate depreciation and amortization deductions. — Also termed depreciable life. See DEPRECIATION METHOD .

USE IMMUNITY

use immunity. See IMMUNITY(3).

USE IN COMMERCE

use in commerce. Trademarks. Actual use of a trademark in the sale of goods or services. • Use of a trademark in commerce is a prerequisite to trademark registration. This type of use fixes the trademark in a way that associates it with marketed goods or services, as contrasted with a token use intended to reserve some right to use the mark in the future. For goods, a mark is used in commerce if it is displayed on or with goods offered for sale, or placed on documents related to the goods. For services, a mark is used in commerce if it appears in advertising or on documents related to the services. In addition, the goods must be used or the services rendered in more than one state. Use of a trademark in interstate commerce is a prerequisite to federal trademark registration. [Cases: Trade Regulation 65, 153. C.J.S. Trade-Marks, Trade-Names, and Unfair Competition §§ 32–33.]

useless-gesture exception. Criminal procedure. An exception to the knock-and-announce rule by which police are excused from having to announce their purpose before entering the premises to execute a warrant when it is evident from the circumstances that the authority and purpose of the police are known to those inside. See KNOCK-AND-ANNOUNCE RULE. [Cases: Searches and Seizures 54, 143.1. C.J.S. Searches and Seizures §§ 64–65, 195–201.]

use plaintiff. Common-law pleading. A plaintiff for whom an action is brought in another's name. • For example, when the use plaintiff was an assignee (“A”) of a chose in action and had to sue in someone else's name, the assignor (“B”) would appear first on the petition's title: “B for the Use of A against C.” — Also termed usee. [Cases: Parties 4. C.J.S. Parties §§ 7, 17–20.]

user (yoov-<<schwa>>r). 1. The exercise or employment of a right or property < the neighbor argued that an easement arose by his continuous user over the last 15 years>. Cf. NONUSER.

user de action (yoo-z<<schwa>>r dak-sh<<schwa>>n). [Law French] The pursuing or bringing of an action.

usuary (yoo-zhoo-er-ee), n. Civil law. A person who has the use (usus) of a thing to satisfy personal and family needs; a beneficiary. — Also termed (in Roman law) usuarius.

usucapio (yoo-z<<schwa>>-kay-pee-oh), n. Roman & civil law. The acquisition of ownership by long possession begun in good faith; esp., the acquisition of ownership by prescription. • In classical law, the periods required were one year for movables and two for land. Under Justinian, the period was three years for movables and a minimum of ten years for land. See PRESCRIPTION (5). — Also termed usus (yoo-zoos); usucaption (yoo-z<<schwa>>-kap-sh<<schwa>>n); usucapion (yoo-z<<schwa>>-kay-pee-on or -<<schwa>>n). [Cases: Adverse Possession 1. C.J.S. Adverse Possession §§ 2–5.] — usucapt,vb.

“There is no principle in all law which the moderns, in spite of its beneficial character, have been so loath to adopt and to carry to its legitimate consequences as that which was known to the Romans as Usucapion, and which has descended to modern jurisprudence under the name of Prescription.” Henry S. Maine, Ancient Law 236 (17th ed. 1901).

usufruct (yoo-z<<schwa>>-fr<<schwa>>kt), n.[fr. Latin usufructus] Roman & civil law. A right to use and enjoy the fruits of another's property for a period without damaging or diminishing it, although the property might naturally deteriorate over time. • In Roman law, the usufruct was considered a personal servitude, giving a real right. In modern civil law, the owner of the usufruct is similar to a life tenant, and the owner of the thing burdened is the naked owner. La. Civ. Code art. 535. Cf. HABITATION(3). — Also termed perfect usufruct; usufructus; (in Scots law) liferent. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.]

legal usufruct. A usufruct established by operation of law, such as the right of a surviving spouse to property owned by the deceased spouse. La. Civ. Code art. 890. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy 1, 29; Executors and Administrators 176; Wills 11. C.J.S. Dower §§ 2, 5–6, 41, 136–138; Executors and Administrators § 353; Wills §§ 76–87, 381.]

quasi-usufruct. 1. A right to consume things that cannot be used without being expended or consumed, such as money or food. • Unlike a perfect usufruct, a quasi-usufruct actually involves alteration and diminution of the property used. — Also termed imperfect usufruct. 2. Louisiana law. A usufruct over consumable things, such as money or harvested crops. La. Civ. Code art. 538. • The usufructuary has the right to consume or alienate the consumables and, at the end of the usufruct, to deliver to the naked owner either the value that the things had when the usufruct began or things of the same quantity and quality. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 176. C.J.S. Executors and Administrators § 353.]

“The Roman jurists, therefore, would not acknowledge a usufruct of money; though, in their desire to carry out the wishes of testators, they came at length to recognize a quasi-usufruct. For testators, being seldom learned in the law, would often set forth as legacies in their wills the usufruct of a designated sum In such a case the person named as legatee was allowed to receive the amount ... on giving security that when he died the same amount should be paid out of his own estate to the heres, the heir of the testator. The relation here, though bearing some resemblance to the usufruct, was really quite different; the person who received the money became absolute owner of it; the heir had no ownership, nothing but the assurance of receiving an equal amount at some future time.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 193 (1881).

usufructuary (yoo-z<<schwa>>-fr<<schwa>>k-choo-er-ee), adj. Roman & civil law. Of or relating to a usufruct; of the nature of a usufruct.

usufructuary, n. Roman & civil law. One having the right to a usufruct; specif., a person who has the right to the benefits of another's property; a life-renter. [Cases: Estates in Property 1. C.J.S. Estates §§ 2–5, 8, 15–21, 116–128, 137, 243.]

usura (yoo-s[y]oor-<<schwa>> or yoo-z[y]oor-<<schwa>>). [Latin] Civil law. 1. Money paid for the use of money; interest. 2. USURY. Pl. usurae (yoo-s[y]oor-ee).

USURAE CENTESIMAE

usurae centesimae (yoo-s[y]oor-ee [or yoo-z[y]oor-ee] sen-tes-<<schwa>>-mee). [Latin] Interest at the rate of 12% per year (1% per month), normally the highest rate allowed by law. • The Romans calculated interest rates by dividing the principal sum into one hundred parts, with one part being payable monthly as interest.

USURA MANIFESTA

usura manifesta (yoo-s[y]oor-<<schwa>> [or yoo-z[y]oor-<<schwa>>] man-<<schwa>>-fes-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Manifest or open usury.

USURA MARITIMA

usura maritima (yoo-s[y]oor-<<schwa>> [or yoo-z[y]oor-<<schwa>>] m<<schwa>>-rit-<<schwa>>-m<<schwa>>). [Latin] Interest taken on a bottomry or respondentia bond, proportioned to the risk and so not restricted by a usury law.

USURARIUS

usurarius (yoo-s[y]<<schwa>>-rair-ee-<<schwa>>s or yoo-z[y]<<schwa>>-). [Law Latin] Hist. A usurer.

USURA VELATA

usura velata (yoo-s[y]oor-<<schwa>> [or yoo-z[y]oor-<<schwa>>] v<<schwa>>-lay-t<<schwa>>). [Latin] Veiled or concealed usury. • A creditor was guilty of usura velata when the creditor added usurious interest to the principal sum as if it were part of the original loan. Cf. UBI ABERAT ANIMUS FOENERANDI.

usurious (yoo-z[y]oor-ee-<<schwa>>s or yoo-zhoo-ree-<<schwa>>s), adj. 1. Practicing usury . 2. Characterized by usury . [Cases: Usury 1, 10–42. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 2, 4, 100, 119–141, 143–144, 146, 152–155, 157.]

usurpatio (yoo-s<<schwa>>r-pay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. The interruption of usucapio by loss of possession or a lawsuit by the real owner. Pl. usurpationes (yoo-s<<schwa>>r-pay-shee-oh-nee-z).

USURPATION

usurpation (yoo-s<<schwa>>r-pay-sh<<schwa>>n or yoo-z<<schwa>>r-pay-sh<<schwa>>n), n. The unlawful seizure and assumption of another's position, office, or authority. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 86. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees § 114.] — usurp (yoo-s<<schwa>>rpor yoo-z<<schwa>>rp), vb.

usurpation of advowson (ad-vow-z<<schwa>>n). Hist. An injury consisting in the absolute ouster or dispossession of the patron from the advowson. • This happens when a stranger, without the right to do so, presents a clerk who is installed in office. See ADVOWSON.

usury (yoo-zh<<schwa>>-ree), n. 1. Historically, the lending of money with interest. 2. Today, the charging of an illegal rate of interest. 3. An illegally high rate of interest. — Also termed illegal interest; unlawful interest. [Cases: Banks and Banking 181; Building and Loan Associations 33; Usury 1. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 470, 680–681; Building and Loan Associations, Savings and Loan Associations, and Credit Unions §§ 87–88, 91–97, 115; Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 2, 4, 100.] — usurer (yoo-zh<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>r), n.

USURY LAW

usury law. A law that prohibits moneylenders from charging illegally high interest rates. [Cases: Usury 1. C.J.S. Interest and Usury; Consumer Credit §§ 2, 4, 100.]

usus (yoo-s<<schwa>>s or yoo-z<<schwa>>s), n. [Latin “use”] Roman law. 1. The right to use another's property, without the right to the produce (fructus) of the thing. • Usus was a personal servitude; it gave the holder a right in rem. Cf. USUFRUCT.

“It is essentially a fraction of a usufruct, usus without the fructus. In strictness, there was no right to any fruits but this was somewhat relaxed in practice. The usuary of a house might consume the fruits of the gardens in his household, but he might not sell them, as a usufructuary might.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 165 (2d ed. 1953).

2. The factual possession required for usucapio. 3. Lapse of time by which a wife was brought into the husband's family and under his marital power. See MANUS(1). Cf. COEMPTIO; CONFARREATIO. “Usus is the acquisition of [power over] a wife by possession and bears the same relation to coemptio as usucapion to a mancipation. A Roman citizen who bought some object of property and got possession of it, but not ownership, because he neglected to go through the mancipation prescribed by jus civile, might nevertheless become owner by usucapion, i.e. lapse of time; thus if the object was a movable, continuous possession for one year made him dominus. In like manner, if a man lived with a woman whom he treated as his wife, but whom he had not married by coemptio (or confarreatio), and the cohabitation lasted without interruption for a year, then at the end of that period the man acquired [power over] the woman as his wife, she passed to him in manum....” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 100 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

usus bellici (yoo-s<<schwa>>s [or -z<<schwa>>s] bel-<<schwa>>-sI). [Latin] Int'l law. Warlike objects or uses. • This phrase refers to items that, though not inherently of a military nature, are considered contraband because they are used by a belligerent to support its war effort.

UTILITARIAN-DETERRENCE THEORY

utilitarian-deterrence theory.The legal theory that a person should be punished only if it is for the good of society — that is, only if the punishment would further the prevention of future harmful conduct. See hedonistic utilitarianism under UTILITARIANISM. Cf. RETRIBUTIVISM.

utilitarianism. The philosophical and economic doctrine that the best social policy is that which does the most good for the greatest number of people; esp., an ethical theory that judges the rightness or wrongness of actions according to the pleasure they create or the pain they inflict and recommending whatever action creates the greatest good for the greatest number. • This is one type of consequentialism. As a way of analyzing intellectual-property rights, utilitarianism takes the point of view of society rather than the individual inventor, author, or artist, and justifies the rights as an incentive for social and technological progress. See CONSEQUENTIALISM. Cf. LOCKEAN LABOR THEORY; PERSONALITY THEORY. — utilitarian,adj. & n.

hedonistic utilitarianism.The theory that the validity of a law should be measured by determining the extent to which it would promote the greatest happiness to the greatest number of citizens. • This theory is found most prominently in the work of Jeremy Bentham, whose “Benthamite utilitarianism” greatly influenced legal reform in 19th-century Britain. Hedonistic utilitarianism generally maintains that pleasure is intrinsically good and pain intrinsically bad. Therefore, inflicting pain, as by punishing a criminal, is justified only if it results in a net increase of pleasure by deterring future harmful behavior. — Also termed Benthamism. See utilitarian-deterrence theory; BENTHAMITE. Cf. RETRIBUTIVISM.

UTILITER ET EQUIVALENTER

utiliter et equivalenter (yoo-til-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>r et i-kwiv-<<schwa>>-len-t<<schwa>>r). [Law Latin] Hist. Duly and with equal effect.

UTILITER IMPENSUM

utility. 1. The quality of serving some function that benefits society; meritoriousness. 2. Patents. Capacity to perform a function or attain a result claimed for protection as intellectual property. • In patent law, utility is one of the three basic requirements of patentability, the others being nonobviousness and novelty. In the calculation of damages for patent infringement, utility is the benefit or advantage of the patented product or process over the products or processes, if any, that had been used to produce similar results in the past. [Cases: Patents 47. C.J.S. Patents §§ 60–62.]

“[T]he utility requirement does not mandate that the invention be superior to existing products and processes in order to qualify for a patent. The utility standard reflects the judgment that society is better served by access to a library of issued patents describing as many inventions as possible, even if many of them do not achieve better results than public domain technology. This liberal view of utility allows subsequent inventors access to a greater variety of previous technologies, some of which may yet be judged the superior solution when employed within a different context.” Roger E. Schechter & John R. Thomas, Intellectual Property § 15.1, at 316 (2003).

3. A business enterprise that performs essential public service and that is subject to governmental regulation.

public utility. 1. A company that provides necessary services to the public, such as telephone lines and service, electricity, and water. • Most utilities operate as monopolies but are subject to governmental regulation. [Cases: Public Utilities 101. C.J.S. Public Utilities § 2.] 2. A person, corporation, or other association that carries on an enterprise for the accommodation of the public, the members of which are entitled as a matter of right to use its facilities.

UTILITY FUND

utility fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

UTILITY MODEL

utility model. Patents. A system of patent registration giving patent-like rights in some countries, usu. for a shorter term than a patent but with little or no search required. • Utility-model patents are not available in the U.S. or Great Britain, but are offered in Japan and many European countries, including Germany and France. Their provisions vary greatly. They are available for machines only, and not for chemicals. — Also termed petty patent; second-tier patent; small invention; (in German) Gebrauchsmuster.

UTILITY PATENT

vacancy,n.1. The state or fact of a lack of occupancy in an office, post, or piece of property. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees 55. C.J.S. Officers and Public Employees §§ 100–102.] 2. The time during which an office, post, or piece of property is not occupied. 3. An unoccupied office, post, or piece of property; an empty place. • Although the term sometimes refers to an office or post that is temporarily filled, the more usual reference is to an office or post that is unfilled even temporarily. An officer's misconduct does not create a vacancy even if a suspension occurs; a vacancy, properly speaking, does not occur until the officer is officially removed.

vacancy clause.Insurance. A special indorsement allowing premises to be unoccupied beyond the period stipu-lated in the original insurance policy, so that the insurance remains in effect during policy extensions, often for a reduced amount. [Cases: Insurance 2133, 3049(5). C.J.S. Insurance §§ 419, 663–665, 908.]

vacant,adj.1. Empty; unoccupied . • Courts have sometimes distinguished vacant from unoc-cupied, holding that vacant means completely empty while unoccupied means not routinely characterized by the presence of human beings. 2. Absolutely free, unclaimed, and unoccupied <vacant land>.3. (Of an estate) abandoned; having no heir or claimant. — The term implies either abandonment or nonoccupancy for any purpose.

vadimonium (vad-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩-moh-nee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m), n. Roman law. 1. A guarantee (originally backed by sureties) that a litigant would appear in court. 2. A solemn promise to this effect. — Also termed vadimony.

vadium (vay-dee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m), n. [Law Latin “pledge, bail, security”] Hist. 1. Security by a pledge of property.

vadium mortuum (vay-dee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m mor-choo-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m). [Law Latin “dead pledge”] A mortgage. • This was considered a “dead pledge” because an estate was given as security by the borrower, who granted to the lender the estate in fee, on the condition that if the money were not repaid at the specified time, the pledged estate would continue as the lender's — it would be gone from, or “dead” to, the borrower (mortgagor). — Also termed mortuum vadium. See MORTGAGE. [Cases: Mortgages 1. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 2–6.]

vadium vivum (vay-dee-⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m vI-v⟨⟨schwa⟩⟩m). [Law Latin “live pledge”] A living pledge, which exists when an estate is granted until a debt is paid out of its proceeds. • The pledge was so called because neither the money nor the lands were lost; it was a “living pledge” because the profits of the land were constantly paying off the debt. — Also termed vivum vadium; vif-gage.

2. Wages; salary.

vadium ponere (vay-dee-*<<schwa>>m poh-n<<schwa>>*-ree), vb. Hist. To take bail for the appearance of a person in court.

vagabond (vag-<<schwa>>-bond), n. Archaic. A homeless wanderer without means of honest livelihood; VAGRANT. • This term became archaic over the course of the 20th century, as vagrants won the right not to be forcibly removed from cities in such cases as Papachristou v. City of Jacksonville, 405 U.S. 156, 92 S.Ct. 839 (1972). In the 1980s and 1990s, vagabonds came to be known as street people and homeless people, or the homeless. — Also termed vagabundus (vag-<<schwa>>-b*<<schwa>>n-d<<schwa>>*s).

“[A]ll idle persons or vagabonds [are] ... divided into three classes, idle and disorderly persons, rogues and va-gabonds, and incorrigible rogues; — all these are offenders against the good order, and blemishes in the gov-ernment, of any kingdom. They are therefore all punished ... rogues and vagabonds with whipping and impri-sonment not exceeding six months” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 170 (1769).

vagabondage (vag-<<schwa>>-bon-dij).1. The condition of a vagabond. 2. Vagabonds as a class. — Also termed (in sense 1) vagabondism; (in senses 1 & 2) vagabondry.

VAGABUNDUS

vagabundus (vag-<<schwa>>-b*<<schwa>>n-d<<schwa>>*s). [Law Latin] See VAGABOND.

vagrancy (vay-gr*<<schwa>>*n-see), n.1. The state or condition of wandering from place to place without a home, job, or means of support. • Vagrancy is generally considered a course of conduct or a manner of living rather than a single act. But under some statutes, a single act has been held sufficient to constitute vagrancy. One court held, for example, that the act of prowling about and creeping up on parked cars and their occupants at night, under circumstances suggesting an intent to commit a crime, constitutes vagrancy. See Smith v. Drew, 26 P.2d 1040 (Wash. 1933). Many state laws prohibiting vagrancy have been declared unconstitutionally vague. — Also termed vagrantism. [Cases: Vagrancy 1. C.J.S. Vagrancy §§ 2–12, 22–27, 31–32, 35–37.] 2. An instance of such wandering. Cf. LOITERING.

“Vagrancy is a status resulting from misconduct and in the form of a socially harmful condition or mode of life which has been defined and made punishable by law. Until recently it was a misdemeanor, or group of misde-meanors, in most states.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 494 (3d ed. 1982).

vagrant,adj.1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a vagrant; inclined to vagrancy. 2. Nomadically homeless. [Cases: Vagrancy 1. C.J.S. Vagrancy §§ 2–12, 22–27, 31–32, 35–37.]

vagrant,n.1. At common law, anyone belonging to the several classes of idle or disorderly persons, rogues, and vagabonds. 2. One who, not having a settled habitation, strolls from place to place; a homeless, idle wanderer. • The term often refers to one who spends time in idleness, lacking any property and without any visible means of support. Under some statutes, a vagrant is an offender against or menace to the public peace, usu. liable to become a public burden. [Cases: Vagrancy 1. C.J.S. Vagrancy §§ 2–12, 22–27, 31–32, 35–37.]

vague,adj.1. Imprecise; not sharply outlined; indistinct; uncertain.

unconstitutionally vague. 1. (Of a penal legislative provision) so unclear and indefinite as not to give a person of ordinary intelligence the opportunity to know what is prohibited. [Cases: Statutes 47.] 2. (Of a statute) im-permissibly delegating basic policy matters to administrators and judges to such a degree as to lead to arbitrary and discriminatory application. [Cases: Statutes 47.]

2. (Of language) describing a distribution around a central norm, as opposed to a neatly bounded class; broadly indefinite. 3. Characterized by haziness of thought.

VAGUE-AND-INDEFINITE REJECTION

vague-and-indefinite rejection.See REJECTION.

vagueness. 1. Uncertain breadth of meaning <the phrase “within a reasonable time” is plagued by vagueness — what is reasonable?>. • Though common in writings generally, vagueness raises due-process concerns if legislation does not provide fair notice of what is required or prohibited, because enforcement may be arbitrary. 2. Loosely, ambiguity. See AMBIGUITY.

VAGUENESS DOCTRINE

vagueness doctrine.Constitutional law. The doctrine — based on the Due Process Clause — requiring that a criminal statute state explicitly and definitely what acts are prohibited, so as to provide fair warning and preclude arbitrary enforcement. — Also termed void-for-vagueness doctrine. See void for vagueness under VOID. Cf. OVERBREADTH DOCTRINE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 258(2).]

valeat quantum (vay-lee-at [or -<<schwa>>t] kwon-t<<schwa>>m). [Law Latin] Hist. For as much as it is worth.

VALENS AGERE

valens agere (vay-lenz aj-<<schwa>>r-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. Able to act.

“A person is said to be valens agere when, from age and position, he is able to protect his rights against the invasion of them by others: against such a person not protecting his rights prescription runs, while prescription does not run against one who is non valens agere.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 621 (4th ed. 1894).

valentia (v<<schwa>>-len-shee-<<schwa>>), n.[Law Latin from Latin valere “to be of value”] Hist. Value; worth. • In old indictments for larceny, this term often appeared to express the value of the things taken.

VALENTIA AGENDI

valentia agendi (v<<schwa>>-len-shee-<<schwa>> <<schwa>>-jen-dI). [Law Latin] Hist. The power of acting. See VALENS AGERE.

VALOR MARITAGII

valor maritagii (val-<<schwa>>r mar-<<schwa>>-tay-jee-I). [Latin] Hist. The value of a marriage. • Under ancient tenures, this was the amount that a female ward forfeited to a guardian when the guardian had offered her a marriage without disparagement (inequality), and she refused. In feudal law, the guardian in chivalry had the right of tendering to a minor ward a suitable match. If the ward refused the match she had to compensate the guardian for the value of the marriage (valor maritagii). — Also termed (in the accusative) valorem maritagii; (Scots law) avail of marriage.

“If an infant ward of a guardian in chivalry refused a match tendered by the guardian, he or she forfeited the value of the marriage (valorem maritagii) to the guardian; that is, so much as a jury would assess, or any one would bona fide give to the guardian for such an alliance.” 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 572–73 (2d ed. 1867).

VALUABLE

valuable, adj. Worth a good price; having financial or market value.

valuable papers. Documents that, upon a person's death, are important in carrying out the decedent's wishes and in managing the estate's affairs. • Examples include a will, title documents, stock certificates, powers of attorney, letters to be opened on one's death, and the like. Some statutes require that, to be effective, a holographic will devising realty be found among the decedent's valuable papers.

valuation, n. 1. The process of determining the value of a thing or entity. 2. The estimated worth of a thing or entity. — value, valuate, vb.

assessed valuation. The value that a taxing authority gives to property and to which the tax rate is applied. [Cases: Taxation 348, 348.1. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 510–511, 515–516, 518–523.]

special-use valuation. An executor's option of valuating real property in an estate, esp. farmland, at its current use rather than for its highest potential value. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4183; Taxation 895. C.J.S. Internal Revenue § 519; Taxation §§ 1900–1909, 1918–1931, 1941–1944, 1948.]

valuation date. See ALTERNATE VALUATION DATE.

VALUATION LIST

valuation list. Hist. An inventory of all the ratable hereditaments in a parish, each item in the inventory recording the name of the occupier, the owner, the property, the extent of the property, the gross estimated rental, and the ratable value. • The list was traditionally prepared by the overseers of each parish.

VALUE

value, n. 1. The significance, desirability, or utility of something.

social value. The significance, desirability, or utility of something to the general public.

2. The monetary worth or price of something; the amount of goods, services, or money that something will command in an exchange.

actual cash value. Insurance. 1. Replacement cost minus normal depreciation. [Cases: Insurance 2181. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1085, 1105.] 2. See fair market value.

actual market value. See fair market value.

actual value. See fair market value.

agreed value. A property's value that is fixed by agreement of the parties with the property. • An example is a list of property values contained in an insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance 2171. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 1108–1109, 1204.]

annual value. 1. The net yearly income derivable from a given piece of property. 2. One year's rental value of property, less costs and expenses.

book value. See BOOK VALUE.

cash surrender value. Insurance. The amount of money payable when an insurance policy having cash value, such as a whole-life policy, is redeemed before maturity or death. — Abbr. CSV. — Also termed surrender value. [Cases: Insurance 1957, 2037. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 518–519, 742–745, 749–754.]

cash value. See full cash value.

clear annual value. The net annual value of property, after payment of taxes, interest on mortgages, and other charges.

clear market value. See fair market value.

clear value. Tax. For purposes of an inheritance tax, whatever remains of an estate after all claims against it have been paid. [Cases: Taxation 895(1). C.J.S. Taxation §§ 1900–1901, 1904–1905, 1909, 1943–1944.]

commuted value (k<<schwa>>-myoo-tid). 1. In the assessment of damages, the present value of a future interest in property. 2. The value of future payments when discounted to present value.

exchange value. The amount of money for which the subject matter could be exchanged or procured if there is a ready market continually resorted to by traders — or, in the absence of such a market, the amount that could be obtained in the usual course of finding a purchaser or hirer of similar property or services.

fair market value. The price that a seller is willing to accept and a buyer is willing to pay on the open market and in an arm's-length transaction; the point at which supply and demand intersect. — Abbr. FMV. — Also termed actual value; actual cash value; actual market value; cash value; clear market value; fair and reasonable value; fair cash market value; fair cash value; fair market price; fair value; full value; just value; market value; salable value; true value. [Cases: Taxation 348(3).]

fair value. See fair market value.

full cash value. Market value for property tax purposes; estimated value derived by standard appraisal methods. — Also termed cash value. [Cases: Taxation 348(3).]

full value. See fair market value.

future value. The value, at some future time, of a present sum or a series of monetary payments, calculated at a specific interest rate.

going-concern value. The value of a commercial enterprise's assets or of the enterprise itself as an active business with future earning power, as opposed to the liquidation value of the business or of its assets. • Going-concern value includes, for example, goodwill. — Also termed going value. Cf. GOODWILL.

highest proved value. In a trover action, the greatest value (as proved by the plaintiff) that the converted property reached from the time of the conversion until trial. • It is the most that a plaintiff is entitled to recover. [Cases: Trover and Conversion 44. C.J.S. Trover and Conversion §§ 120–121, 124.]

insurable value. See INSURABLE VALUE.

intrinsic value. The inherent value of a thing, without any special features that might alter its market value. • The intrinsic value of a silver coin, for example, is simply the value of the silver within it.

just value. See fair market value.

liquidation value. 1. The value of a business or of an asset when it is sold in liquidation, as opposed to being sold in the ordinary course of business. 2. See liquidation price under PRICE.

market value. See fair market value.

most-suitable-use value. See optimal-use value.

net value. 1. Insurance. The excess of policyholder payments over the yearly cost of insurance; the part of an insured's annual premium that, according to actuarial tables, the insurer must set apart to meet the insurer's obligations to the insured. — Also termed reserve. [Cases: Insurance 2037. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 518–519, 742–745, 749–754.] 2. The fair market value of shares of stock. [Cases: Corporations 182.4(5), 584. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 348, 799–801.]

new value. 1. A value (such as money) that is newly given. 2. The value obtained by taking a security, such as collateral, for any debt other than a preexisting one.

optimal-use value. Tax. The highest and best use of a thing from an economic standpoint. • If a farm would be worth more as a shopping center than as a farm, the shopping-center value will control even if the transferee (that is, a donee or heir) continues to use the property as a farm. — Also termed most-suitable-use value. [Cases: Taxation 348(3).]

par value. See PAR VALUE.

policy value. See POLICY VALUE.

present value.See PRESENT VALUE.

residual value.See salvage value.

salable value.See fair market value.

salvage value.The value of an asset after it has become useless to the owner; the amount expected to be obtained when a fixed asset is disposed of at the end of its useful life. • Salvage value is used, under some depreciation methods, to determine the allowable tax deduction for depreciation. And under the UCC, when a buyer of goods breaches or repudiates the contract of sale, the seller may, under certain circumstances, either complete the manufacture of any incomplete goods or cease the manufacture and sell the partial product for scrap or salvage value. UCC § 2-704(2). — Also termed residual value; scrap value. See DEPRECIATION. [Cases: Sales 384(6).]

scrap value.See salvage value.

settlement value.The value of a claim if the claimant settles immediately as opposed to pursuing it further through litigation.

surrender value.See cash surrender value.

true value.See fair market value.

use value.A value established by the utility of an object instead of its sale or exchange value.

value received.See VALUE RECEIVED.

3. Sufficient contractual consideration. — value,vb. — valuation,n.“Value also includes paying or securing a preexisting debt, and in this regard value is broader than common-law consideration. Thus, a debtor receives value in satisfying an antecedent claim (as by paying an overdue account or an outstanding loan or by transferring property to vindicate a preexisting interest in it) or in providing collateral for a previously unsecured creditor. It makes no difference that the debtor got nothing new, in terms of property added to her estate, at the time of the transfer.” David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 6-49, at 374 (1993).

VALUE-ADDED CARD

vassallo et quibus dederit (vas-<<schwa>>-loh et kwib-<<schwa>>s dee-d<<schwa>>r-it). [Law Latin] Hist. To the vassal and to whomsoever he shall have given it. • The phrase was included in feudal grants.

“If the original grant had been destined to the vassal, ‘and his heirs and assignees whomsoever,’ this only bound the superior to receive the proper heirs of the vassal and not his assignee; but if the destination bore ... [vassal] ‘et quibus dederit,’ this was construed as a consent on the part of the superior to alienation, and under which he was bound to receive as vassal his vassal's disponee. This distinction ... was practically abolished by the Act 20 Geo. II. c. 50, which introduced a mode by which either an heir or disponee could force an entry from the superior.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 622 (4th ed. 1894).

vassallo faciendo superiori quod de jure facere oportet (vas-⟨schwa⟩-loh fay-shee-en-doh s[y]oo-peer-ee-or-I kwod dee joor-ee fay-s⟨schwa⟩-ree ⟨schwa⟩-por-tet). [Law Latin] Hist. Upon the vassal performing that to the superior which, according to law, he ought to perform.

VENIRE FACIAS

venire facias (v*<<schwa>>-nI-ree [or -neer-ee or -nIror -neer] fay-shee-<<schwa>>s). A writ directing a sheriff to assemble a jury. — Often shortened to venire. — Also termed venire facias juratores (juur-<<schwa>>*-tor-eez). [Cases: Jury 67. C.J.S. Juries § 319.]

venire facias ad respondendum (ad ree-spon-den-d*<<schwa>>*m). A writ requiring a sheriff to summon a person against whom an indictment for a misdemeanor has been issued. • A warrant is now more commonly used.

venire facias de novo (dee or di noh-voh). A writ for summoning a jury panel anew because of some impropriety or irregularity in the original jury's return or verdict so that no judgment can be given on it. • The result of a new venire is a new trial. In substance, the writ is a motion for new trial, but when the party objects to the verdict because of an error in the course of the proceeding (and not on the merits), the form of motion was traditionally for a venire facias de novo. — Often shortened to venire de novo.

venire facias tot matronas (tot m*<<schwa>>-troh-n<<schwa>>*s). A writ requiring a sheriff to summon a jury of matrons to execute a writ de ventre inspiciendo. See DE VENTRE INSPICIENDO.

VENTURE CAPITAL

venture capital.See CAPITAL.

VENTURER

venturer, n. 1. One who risks something in a business enterprise. 2. One who participates in a joint venture. See JOINT VENTURE.

venue (ven-yoo). [Law French “coming”] Procedure. 1. The proper or a possible place for a lawsuit to proceed, usu. because the place has some connection either with the events that gave rise to the lawsuit or with the plaintiff or defendant. [Cases: Federal Courts 71; Venue 1.5. C.J.S. Venue §§ 2–5.] 2. The county or other territory over which a trial court has jurisdiction. Cf. JURISDICTION(1), (2). 3. Loosely, the place where a conference or meeting is being held. 4. In a pleading, the statement establishing the place for trial. [Cases: Federal Courts 94.] 5. In an affidavit, the designation of the place where it was made.

“Venue must be carefully distinguished from jurisdiction. Jurisdiction deals with the power of a court to hear and dispose of a given case; in the federal system, it involves questions of a constitutional dimension concerning the basic division of judicial power among the states and between state and federal courts. Venue is of a distinctly lower level of importance; it is simply a statutory device designed to facilitate and balance the objectives of optimum convenience for parties and witnesses and efficient allocation of judicial resources.” Jack H. Friedenthal et al., Civil Procedure § 2.1, at 10 (2d ed. 1993).

“The distinction must be clearly understood between jurisdiction, which is the power to adjudicate, and venue, which relates to the place where judicial authority may be exercised and is intended for the convenience of the litigants. It is possible for jurisdiction to exist though venue in a particular district is improper, and it is possible for a suit to be brought in the appropriate venue though it must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. The most important difference between venue and jurisdiction is that a party may consent to be sued in a district that otherwise would be an improper venue, and it waives its objection to venue if it fails to assert it promptly. This is in striking contrast to subject-matter jurisdiction, which cannot be conferred by the parties, if it has not been granted by Congress, whether by consent, waiver, or estoppel.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 42, at 257 (5th ed. 1994).

VENUE, CHANGE OF

venue, change of. See CHANGE OF VENUE.

VENUE FACTS

venue facts. Facts that need to be established in a hearing to determine whether venue is proper in a given court. [Cases: Federal Courts 96; Venue 68. C.J.S. Venue §§ 270–275.]

verbatim (v<<schwa>>r-bay-t<<schwa>>m), adj. & adv. [fr. Latin verbum “word”] Word for word. • Courts have repeatedly held that, in the context of the requirement that a trial record must be “verbatim,” absolute word-for-word accuracy is not necessary — and insubstantial omissions do not make a transcript “nonverbatim.” [Cases: Military Justice 1354, 1356.]

VERBATIM AC LITTERATIM

verbatim ac litteratim (v<<schwa>>r-bay-tim ak lit-<<schwa>>-ray-tim), adv. (v<<schwa>>r-bay-tim ak li-t<<schwa>>-ray-tim). [Latin] Word for word and letter for letter. — Also spelled verbatim ac literatim; verbatim et literatim. — Also termed verbatim et litteratim.

verbruikleening (ver-bruuk-layn-ing), n. Roman-Dutch law. A loan for use; COMMODATUM.

verderer (v<<schwa>>r-d<<schwa>>r-<<schwa>>r), n. [fr. French verdier “caretaker of green things”] Hist. A judicial officer who, being in charge of the king's forest, is sworn to preserve the vert (foliage) and venison, to keep the assizes, and to view, receive, and enroll attachments and presentments on matters involving trespass. — Also spelled verderor.

“In all the forests there were a varying number of officers (usually four) elected in the county court, and styled Verderers. Manwood says that they should be ‘gentlemen of good account, ability, and living, and well learned in the laws of the forest.’ Their chief duty was to attend the forest courts; they served gratuitously; and they were immediately responsible to the crown. Possibly they were regarded as a check upon the Warden, as the coroner was upon the sheriff.” 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 96 (7th ed. 1956).

verdict. 1. A jury's finding or decision on the factual issues of a case. [Cases: Criminal Law 870–894; Federal Civil Procedure 2191; Trial 318. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1395–1414, 1500–1501, 1512, 1532, 1543; Trial §§ 818–819, 821, 846–847.] 2. Loosely, in a nonjury trial, a judge's resolution of the issues of a case. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2251; Trial 387. C.J.S. Trial §§ 1067–1069, 1071–1072.]

chance verdict. A now-illegal verdict, arrived at by hazard or lot. — Also termed gambling verdict; verdict by lot. [Cases: Criminal Law 798(2), 866; Federal Civil Procedure 1974.1. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1372, 1381.]

compromise verdict. A verdict reached when jurors, to avoid a deadlock, concede some issues so that other issues will be resolved as they want. [Cases: Criminal Law 866; Federal Civil Procedure 1974.1; Trial 315. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1372, 1381; Trial §§ 800–802, 822.]

defective verdict. A verdict on which a judgment cannot be based because of irregularities or legal inadequacies.

directed verdict. A ruling by a trial judge taking a case from the jury because the evidence will permit only one reasonable verdict. — Also termed instructed verdict. [Cases: Criminal Law 753; Federal Civil Procedure 2117; Trial 167. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1276; Trial §§ 432–433, 437–438.]

excessive verdict. A verdict that results from the jury's passion or prejudice and thereby shocks the court's conscience. [Cases: Damages 128; Federal Civil Procedure 2345; New Trial 77(2). C.J.S. Damages §§ 384, 387–394; New Trial §§ 101, 103.]

false verdict. Archaic. A verdict so contrary to the evidence and so unjust that the judge may set it aside. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2338.]

gambling verdict. See chance verdict.

general verdict. A verdict by which the jury finds in favor of one party or the other, as opposed to resolving specific fact questions. Cf. special verdict. [Cases: Criminal Law 881; Federal Civil Procedure 2191; Trial 318. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1402; Trial §§ 818–819, 821, 846–847.]

general verdict subject to a special case. Archaic. A court's verdict rendered without regard to the jury's general verdict, given when a party does not want to put the legal question on the record but merely wants the court to decide on the basis of a written statement of all the facts in the case, prepared for the opinion of the court by counsel on either side, according to the principles of a special verdict, whereupon the court decides the special case submitted and gives judgment accordingly.

general verdict with interrogatories. A general verdict accompanied by answers to written interrogatories on one or more issues of fact that bear on the verdict. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2211; Trial 348. C.J.S. Trial §§ 825, 930, 932.]

guilty verdict. A jury's finding that a defendant is guilty of the offense charged.

instructed verdict. See directed verdict.

joint verdict. A verdict covering two or more parties to a lawsuit.

legally inconsistent verdict. A verdict in which the same element is found to exist and not to exist, as when a defendant is acquitted of one offense and convicted of another, even though the offenses arise from the same set of facts and an element of the second offense requires proof that the first offense has been committed. — Also termed legal inconsistency. [Cases: Criminal Law 878(4); Federal Civil Procedure 2237; Trial 358. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1407; Trial §§ 992–994.]

majority verdict. A verdict agreed to by all but one or two jury members. • In some jurisdictions, a civil verdict supported by 10 of 12 jurors is acceptable.

open verdict. A verdict of a coroner's jury finding that the subject “came to his death by means to the jury unknown” or “came to his death at the hands of a person or persons to the jury unknown.” • This verdict leaves open either the question whether any crime was committed or the identity of the criminal.

partial verdict. A verdict by which a jury finds a criminal defendant innocent of some charges and guilty of other charges.

perverse verdict. A jury verdict so contrary to the evidence that it justifies the granting of a new trial. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2338; New Trial 68.1. C.J.S. New Trial §§ 89, 95, 98.]

privy verdict (priv-ee). Hist. A verdict given after the judge has left or adjourned the court, and the jury, having agreed, obtains leave to give its verdict privately to the judge out of court so that the jurors can be delivered from their confinement. • Such a verdict was of no force unless afterwards affirmed in open court. This practice has been superseded by that of rendering a sealed verdict. See sealed verdict.

public verdict. A verdict delivered by the jury in open court.

quotient verdict. An improper damage verdict that a jury arrives at by totaling what each juror would award and dividing by the number of jurors. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1974.1; Trial 315. C.J.S. Trial §§ 800–802, 822.]

repugnant verdict. A verdict that contradicts itself in that the defendant is convicted and acquitted of different crimes having identical elements. • Sometimes the inconsistency occurs in a single verdict (repugnant verdict), and sometimes it occurs in two separate verdicts (repugnant verdicts). Both terms are used mainly in New York. [Cases: Criminal Law 878(4). C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1407.]

responsive verdict. Civil law. A verdict that properly answers the indictment with specific findings prescribed by statute, the possible findings being guilty, not guilty, and guilty of a lesser included offense.

sealed verdict. A written verdict put into a sealed envelope when the jurors have agreed on their decision but court is not in session or the jury is continuing to deliberate other counts. • Upon delivering a sealed verdict, the jurors may separate. When court convenes again, this verdict is officially returned with the same effect as if the jury had returned it in open court before separating. [Cases: Trial 324. C.J.S. Trial §§ 826–828.]

special verdict. A verdict in which the jury makes findings only on factual issues submitted to them by the judge, who then decides the legal effect of the verdict. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 49. Cf. general verdict. [Cases: Criminal Law 870; Federal Civil Procedure 2231; Trial 347. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1403; Trial §§ 820, 929, 931.]

split verdict. 1. A verdict in which one party prevails on some claims, while the other party prevails on others. 2. Criminal law. A verdict finding a defendant guilty on one charge but not guilty on another. [Cases: Criminal Law 878. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1406.] 3. Criminal law. A verdict of guilty for one defendant and of not guilty for a codefendant. [Cases: Criminal Law 877. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1405.]

true verdict. A verdict that is reached voluntarily — even if one or more jurors freely compromise their views — and not as a result of an arbitrary rule or order, whether imposed by the jurors themselves, the court, or a court officer. [Cases: Trial 314–315. C.J.S. Trial §§ 800–802, 815, 822.]

verdict by lot. See chance verdict.

verdict contrary to law. A verdict that the law does not authorize a jury to render because the conclusion drawn is not justified by the evidence. — Also termed wrong verdict. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2338; New Trial 66. C.J.S. New Trial § 85.]

verdict subject to opinion of court. A verdict that is subject to the court's determination of a legal issue reserved to the court upon the trial, so that judgment is ultimately entered depending on the court's ruling on a point of law. [Cases: Judgment 199(4). C.J.S. Judgments § 62.]

wrong verdict. See verdict contrary to law.

veredicto. See NON OBSTANTE VEREDICTO.

VEREDICTUM

veredictum (ver-<<schwa>>-dik-t<<schwa>>m), n. Hist. A verdict; a declaration of the truth of a matter in issue, submitted to a jury for trial.

verge (v<<schwa>>rj), n. Hist. 1. The area within 12 miles of the place where the king held his court and within which the king's peace was enforced. • This area was commonly referred to as being in the verge. The verge got its name from the staff (called a “verge”) that the marshal bore. 2. The compass of the royal court, within which the lord steward and marshal of the king's household had special jurisdiction. — Also termed Court of Verge. 3. The neighborhood of Whitehall, the section of London in which British government offices have traditionally been located. 4. An uncertain quantity of land from 15 to 30 acres. 5. A stick or rod by which a person, after holding the stick and swearing fealty, is admitted as a tenant to a copyhold estate. — Also spelled virge. For tenant by the verge, see COPYHOLDER.

VERGENS AD INOPIAM

vergens ad inopiam (v<<schwa>>r-jenz ad in-oh-pee-<<schwa>>m), adj.[Latin “verging on poverty”] Civil law. Tending to become insolvent.

“When a debtor is clearly vergens ad inopiam, a creditor may legally resort to certain measures, for the purpose of protecting his interests, which would not otherwise be competent to him. Thus if the debtor be bound under a bill, the creditor may, in consideration of his debtor's circumstances, obtain a precept of arrestment on the bill before it becomes due, on which he may arrest any funds due to his debtor. As this proceeding is only allowed, however, as a protective measure ... he cannot ... render the arrested funds available to himself until the bill falls due The fact of the debtor's being vergens ad inopiam will be inferred from different circumstances in different cases, and the proof of that fact will also, necessarily, be varied.” John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 627 (4th ed. 1894).

verger,n. One who carries a verge (a rod) as an emblem of office; esp., an attendant on a bishop or justice.

VESA. abbr. VIDEO ELECTRONICS STANDARDS ASSOCIATION.

vessel. A ship, brig, sloop, or other craft used — or capable of being used — to navigate on water. • To qualify as a vessel under the Jones Act, the structure's purpose must to some reasonable degree be to transport passengers, cargo, or equipment from place to place across navigable waters. [Cases: Shipping 1. C.J.S. Shipping § 4.]

“Despite the important role a ‘vessel’ plays in maritime law, there is no settled definition of the term. Congress has defined a vessel as including ‘every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water.’ 1 U.S.C.A. § 3. The Supreme Court has defined vessels as ‘all navigable structures intended for transportation.’ Cope v. Vallette Dry-Dock Co., 119 U.S. 625 (1887).” Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 14 (3d ed. 1996).

“The term vessel is defined in 1 U.S.C. § 3 as follows: ‘The word “vessel” includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water.’ This definition has not been very influential in admiralty and maritime cases. Litigants contending for vessel status often invoke its remarkable breadth. Those opposing vessel status typically respond, ‘But the present context indicates otherwise.’ When courts mention the definition favorably, it usually seems to be a makeweight argument.” David W. Robertson, Steven F. Friedell & Michael F. Sturley, Admiralty and Maritime Law in the United States 59 (2001).

foreign vessel. A vessel owned by residents of, or sailing under the flag of, a foreign nation. [Cases: Shipping 2. C.J.S. Shipping § 1.]

Jones Act vessel. A vessel whose crew members can qualify as seamen under the Jones Act; esp., a craft designed or used for transporting cargo or people on navigable waters, or that was being used for navigation at the time of a worker's injury. See JONES ACT. [Cases: Shipping 1. C.J.S. Shipping § 4.]

public vessel. A vessel owned and used by a nation or government for its public service, whether in its navy, its revenue service, or otherwise. See PUBLIC VESSELS ACT. [Cases: United States 125(11). C.J.S. United States §§ 236–239.]

seagoing vessel. A vessel that — considering its design, function, purpose, and capabilities — is normally expected both to carry passengers for hire and to engage in substantial operations beyond the boundary line (set by the Coast Guard) dividing inland waters from the high seas. • Typically excluded from the definition are pleasure yachts, tugs and towboats, fishing boats, and other vessels that do not carry passengers for hire. [Cases: Shipping 9, 204. C.J.S. Shipping §§ 6–7, 473, 482–483.]

seaworthy vessel. A vessel that can withstand the ordinary stress of the wind, waves, and other weather that seagoing vessels might ordinarily be expected to encounter. • In some legal contexts, the question whether a vessel is seaworthy includes the question whether it is fit to carry an intended cargo properly. See SEAWORTHY. [Cases: Seamen 9; Shipping 42, 121, 207.]

“[U]nfortunately, the word ‘vested’ is used in two senses. Firstly, an interest may be vested in possession, when there is a right to present enjoyment, e.g. when I own and occupy Blackacre. But an interest may be vested, even where it does not carry a right to immediate possession, if it does confer a fixed right of taking possession in the future.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 305 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

“A future interest is vested if it meets two requirements: first, that there be no condition precedent to the interest's becoming a present estate other than the natural expiration of those estates that are prior to it in possession; and second, that it be theoretically possible to identify who would get the right to possession if the interest should become a present estate at any time.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 66–67 (2d ed. 1984).

vested in interest.Consummated in a way that will result in future possession and use. • Reversions, vested remainders, and any other future use or executory devise that does not depend on an uncertain period or event are all said to be vested in interest. VI ET ARMIS vi et armis (vI et ahr-mis). [Latin] Hist. By or with force and arms. See trespass vi et armis under TRESPASS.

“The words ‘with force and arms,’ anciently ‘vi et armis,’ were, by the common law, necessary in indictments for offences which amount to an actual disturbance of the peace, or consist, in any way, of acts of violence; but it seems to be the better opinion, that they were never necessary where the offence consisted of a cheat, or non-feazance, or a mere consequential injury.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 240 (2d ed. 1826).

“vi et armis... was a necessary part of the allegation, in medieval pleading, that a trespass had been committed with force and therefore was a matter for the King's Court because it involved a breach of the peace. In England, the term survived as a formal requirement of pleading until 1852.” Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 916 (2d ed. 1995).

view,n.1. The common-law right of prospect — that is, an outlook from the windows of one's house. 2. An urban servitude that prohibits the obstruction of the outlook from a person's house. [Cases: Adjoining Landowners 10; Easements 11, 19, 45. C.J.S. Adjoining Landowners §§ 68–69, 71, 74; Easements §§ 51–52, 85–87, 151.] 3. A jury's trip to inspect a place or thing relevant to the case it is considering; the act or proceeding by which a tribunal goes to observe an object that cannot be produced in court because it is immovable or inconvenient to remove. • The appropriate procedures are typically regulated by state statute. At common law, and today in many civil cases, the trial judge's presence is not required. The common practice has been for the jury to be escorted by “showers” who are commissioned for this purpose. Parties and counsel are generally permitted to attend, although this is a matter typically within the trial judge's discretion.

See SHOWER. Cf. VIEW OF AN INQUEST . [Cases: Criminal Law 651; Federal Civil Procedure 1968; Trial 28. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 1156; Trial §§ 117–119.] 4. In a real action, a defendant's observation of the thing at issue to ascertain its identity and other circumstances surrounding it. Cf. DEMAND OF VIEW .

villein (vil-<<schwa>>n). Hist. A person entirely subject to a lord or attached to a manor, but free in relation to all others; a serf. • At the time of the Domesday Inquest (shortly after the Norman Conquest), about 40% of households were marked as belonging to villeins: they were the most numerous element in the English population. Cf. FREEMAN.

villein in gross. A villein who was annexed to the person of the lord, and transferable by deed from one owner to another.

villein regardant (ri-gahr-d<<schwa>>nt). A villein annexed to the manor of land.

villeinage (vil-<<schwa>>-nij).Hist. 1. The holding of property through servitude to a feudal lord; a servile type of tenure in which a tenant was obliged to render base services to a lord. Cf. KNIGHT SERVICE; SOCAGE. 2. A villein's status, condition, or service. — Also spelled villenage; villainage; villanage. — Also termed villein tenure.

“The typical tenant in villeinage does not know in the evening what he will have to do in the morning.... [T]here is a large element of real uncertainty; the lord's will counts for much; when they go to bed on Sunday night they do not know what Monday's work will be; it may be threshing, ditching, carrying; they cannot tell. This seems the point that is seized by law and that general opinion of which law is the exponent: any considerable uncertainty as to the amount or kind of the agricultural services makes the tenure unfree. The tenure is unfree, not because the tenant ‘holds at the will of the lord,’ in the sense of being removable at a moment's notice, but because his services, though in many respects minutely defined by custom, cannot be altogether defined without frequent reference to the lord's will.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 371 (2d ed. 1898).

“At the lower level the services were not always defined. The duties of the peasant were chiefly agricultural. If they were unfixed, so that the lord might in theory demand all manner of work, the tenure was ‘unfree’ and was called villeinage.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 260 (3d ed. 1990).

privileged villeinage. Villeinage in which the services to be performed were certain, though of a base and servile nature.

pure villeinage. Villeinage in which the services were not certain, but the tenant was obliged to do whatever he was commanded whenever the command came.

VILLEIN IN GROSS

villein in gross. See VILLEIN.

VILLEIN REGARDANT

villein regardant. See VILLEIN.

villein service.Hist. A base service that a villein performed, such as working on the lord's land on certain days of the week (usu. two to four). • These services were not considered suitable to a man of free and honorable rank. — Also termed villein servitium. See WEEK-WORK.

VIS

vis (vis). [Latin “power”] 1. Any force, violence, or disturbance relating to a person or property.

“Vis, as a legal term, was understood to denote the organizing and arming of tumultuous bodies of men for the purpose of obstructing the constituted authorities in the performance of their duty, and thus interrupting the ordinary administration of the laws. No such offence was recognised by the Criminal Code until the last century of the republic, when violent riots by hired mobs became so frequent, that M. Plautius Silvanus, Tribune of the Plebs, B.C. 89, [secured the passing of] the lex Plautia de Vi, in terms of which, those convicted of such practices were banished.” William Ramsay, A Manual of Roman Antiquities 347 (Rodolfo Lanciani ed., 15th ed. 1894).

An order establishing the visiting times for a child and a person with a significant relationship to the child. • Such an order may allow for visitation between (1) a grandparent and a grandchild, (2) a child and another relative, (3) a child and a stepparent, or (4) occasionally, a child and the child's psychological parent. — Also termed access order.

visitation right. 1. Family law. A noncustodial parent's or grandparent's court-ordered privilege of spending time with a child or grandchild who is living with another person, usu. the custodial parent. • The noncustodial parent with visitation rights may sometimes be a parent from whose custody the child has been removed because of abuse or neglect. [Cases: Child Custody 175–231, 282.] 2. Int'l law. A belligerent nation's right to search a neutral vessel to find out whether it is carrying contraband or is otherwise engaged in nonneutral service. • If the searched vessel is doing either of these things, the searchers may seize the contraband and carry out an appropriate punishment. — Also termed (in both senses) right of visitation.

visitatorial (viz-<<schwa>>-t<<schwa>>-tor-ee-<<schwa>>l), adj. Of or relating to on-site inspection or supervision. — Also termed visitorial.

VISUAL ARTISTS RIGHTS ACT

Visual Artists Rights Act.Copyright. A 1990 federal law that gives a visual artist nontransferable moral rights of integrity and attribution in original and limited-edition creations. • Passed in order to meet Berne Convention standards, the Act protects the original artist — not the owner of the copyright — by granting some rights to prevent the work from being changed or destroyed, and by guaranteeing that the artist may claim authorship of the original work but may deny authorship if the work is modified. 17 USCA §§ 106A, 113. — Abbr. VARA. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 6. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 16.]

visus (vI-s<<schwa>>s orvI-z<<schwa>>s), n.[Latin] Hist. An inspection of a place, person, or thing. See VIEW(3), (4).

vital statistics.Public records — usu. relating to matters such as births, marriages, deaths, diseases, and the like — that are statutorily mandated to be kept by a city, state, or other governmental division or subdivision. • On the admissibility of vital statistics, see Fed. R. Evid. 803(9). [Cases: Health 395.]

vital term.See fundamental term under TERM(2).

vitiate (vish-ee-ayt), vb.1. To impair; to cause to have no force or effect < the new statute vitiates any common-law argument that the plaintiffs might have>.2. To make void or voidable; to invalidate either completely or in part <fraud vitiates a contract>.3. To corrupt morally <Mr. Lawrence complains that his children were vitiated by their governess>. — vitiation,n. — vitiator,n.

vitiligate (vit-<<schwa>>-lit-<<schwa>>-gayt), vb.[fr. Latin vitiligare "to quarrel disgracefully"] Archaic. To litigate merely from quarrelsome motives; to carry on a lawsuit in an unduly contentious, wrangling way. — vitiligation, n. — vitiligious (vit-<<schwa>>-li-tij-<<schwa>>s), adj.

VITIOUS INTROMISSION

vitious intromission. See INTROMISSION.

VITIUM CLERICI

vitium clerici (vish-ee-<<schwa>>m kler-<<schwa>>-sI). [Latin] See clerical error under ERROR.

vitium reale (vish-ee-<<schwa>>m ree-ay-lee). [Latin “true error”] Hist. & Scots law. A defect in a title that renders the movable property nontransferable; specif., an inherent vice in the title of anyone who holds a stolen thing, even if acquired honestly, so that the true owner can reclaim it. Cf. LABES REALIS QUAE REI INHAERET.

“A person who comes into possession of moveable property without any title to retain custody thereof is obliged to restore it to the person truly entitled to the possession thereof... [P]roperty so acquired is affected by an inherent vitium reale which prevents the thief or fraudulent person from conferring a good title on anyone, even a taker from him in good faith, who has given value and taken without notice of the thief's defective title; such a person must return the property to the true owner, or pay compensation therefor.... An exception to the rule of vitium reale exists in the cases of money, bank-notes and negotiable instruments” 2 David M. Walker, Principles of Scottish Private Law: Law of Obligations 505–06 (1988).

vitium scriptoris (vish-ee-<<schwa>>m skrip-tor-is), n. [Latin “the mistake of a scribe”] Hist. A clerical error in writing.

Voconian law (v<<schwa>>-koh-nee-in). See LEX VOCONIA.

VOICE EXEMPLAR

voice exemplar. A sample of a person's voice used for the purpose of comparing it with a recorded voice to determine whether the speaker is the same person. • Although voiceprint identification was formerly inadmissible, the trend in recent years has been toward admissibility. See Fed. R. Evid. 901. [Cases: Criminal Law 339.6; Evidence 150. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 800–801; Evidence §§ 216–226.]

voiceprint. A distinctive pattern of curved lines and whorls made by a machine that measures human vocal sounds for the purpose of identifying an individual speaker. • Like fingerprints, voiceprints are thought to be unique to each person. [Cases: Criminal Law 339.6; Evidence 150. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 800–801; Evidence §§ 216–226.]

voice vote. See VOTE(4).

void, adj. 1. Of no legal effect; null. • The distinction between void and voidable is often of great practical importance. Whenever technical accuracy is required, void can be properly applied only to those provisions that are of no effect whatsoever — those that are an absolute nullity. — void, avoid, vb. — voidness, n.

facially void. (Of an instrument) patently void upon an inspection of the contents. — Also termed void on its face.

void ab initio (ab i-nish-ee-oh). Null from the beginning, as from the first moment when a contract is entered into. • A contract is void ab initio if it seriously offends law or public policy, in contrast to a contract that is merely voidable at the election of one party to the contract. [Cases: Contracts 98, 136. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 137, 139–140, 145, 153–155, 157, 171, 173–174, 185, 188, 280–281, 286, 296.]

void for vagueness. 1. (Of a deed or other instrument affecting property) having such an insufficient property description as to be unenforceable. [Cases: Deeds 37. C.J.S. Deeds § 53.] 2. (Of a penal statute) establishing a requirement or punishment without specifying what is required or what conduct is punishable, and therefore void because violative of due process. — Also termed void for indefiniteness. See VAGUENESS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 258(2); Criminal Law 13.1(1). C.J.S. Criminal Law § 26.]

2.VOIDABLE. • Although sense 1 above is the strict meaning of void, the word is often used and construed as bearing the more liberal meaning of “voidable.”

voidable,adj. Valid until annulled; esp., (of a contract) capable of being affirmed or rejected at the option of one of the parties. • This term describes a valid act that may be voided rather than an invalid act that may be ratified. — Also termed avoidable. [Cases: Contracts 98, 136.C.J.S. Contracts §§ 137, 139–140, 145, 153–155, 157, 171, 173–174, 185, 188, 280–281, 286, 296.] — voidability,n.

“Most of the disputed questions in the law of infancy turn upon the legal meaning of the word ‘voidable’ as applied to an infant's acts. The natural meaning of the word imports a valid act which may be avoided, rather than an invalid act which may be confirmed, and the weight of authority as well as reason points in the same direction. Certainly, so far as executed transfers of property are concerned the authority of the decisions clearly supports this view.” 1 Samuel Williston, The Law Governing Sales of Goods § 12, at 28 (3d ed. 1948).

“The promise of an infant surety is voidable as distinguished from void. The infant may expressly disaffirm or assert the defense of infancy when sued at any time before the expiration of a reasonable time after majority.” Laurence P. Simpson, Handbook on the Law of Suretyship 82 (1950).

volenti non fit injuria (voh-len-tī non fit in-joor-ee-<<schwa>>). [Law Latin “to a willing person it is not wrong,” i.e., a person is not wronged by that to which he or she consents] The principle that a person who knowingly and voluntarily risks danger cannot recover for any resulting injury. • This is the type of affirmative defense that must be pleaded under Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c). — Often shortened to volenti. See ASSUMPTION OF THE RISK. [Cases: Negligence 550. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 360–361.]

“[T]he maxim ‘Volenti non fit injuria’ ... is certainly of respectable antiquity. The idea underlying it has been traced as far back as Aristotle, and it was also recognised in the works of the classical Roman jurists, and in the Canon Law. In English law, Bracton in his De Legibus Angliae (ca. A.D. 1250–1258) uses the maxim, though not with the technicality that attached to it later, and in a Year Book case of 1305 it appears worded exactly as it is now. So far as actual citation of the maxim goes, most of the modern cases use it in connexion with harm to the person rather than to property.” P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 13, at 24 (5th ed. 1950).

volition (v<<schwa>>-lish-<<schwa>>n or voh-), n.1. The ability to make a choice or determine something. 2. The act of making a choice or determining something. 3. The choice or determination that someone makes. — volitional, adj.

VOTE

vote, n. 1. The expression of one's preference or opinion in a meeting or election by ballot, show of hands, or other type of communication <the Republican candidate received more votes than the Democratic candidate>.

absentee vote. See absentee voting under VOTING.

bullet vote. A vote cast for fewer nominees than are being elected. • A bullet vote slightly enhances the ballot's effect on the outcome. — Also termed bullet ballot.

casting vote. A deciding vote cast by the chair of a deliberative assembly when the votes are tied. • The U.S. Constitution gives the Vice President the casting vote in the Senate. U.S. Const. art. I, § 3.

“One is, that to secure at all times the possibility of a definite resolution of the body, it is necessary that the President should have only a casting vote. And to take the senator of any State from his seat as senator, to place him in that of President of the Senate, would be to exchange, in regard to the State from which he came, a constant for a contingent vote.” The Federalist No. 68 (Alexander Hamilton).

effective vote.A vote that counts toward a winning candidate, to the extent needed to win. • A vote that goes to a winning candidate is “effective” to the extent needed to win, and “excess” beyond that point. For example, if a candidate needs 100 votes and gets 150, then 50 votes are excess votes and each vote is two-thirds effective and one-third excess. Cf. excess vote; wasted vote.

excess vote.A vote that counts toward a winning candidate, beyond the extent needed to win. Cf. effective vote.

exhausted vote.A preferential vote on which all the ranked candidates have already been elected or eliminated. — Also termed exhausted ballot.

illegal vote.A vote that does not count because it was cast by someone not entitled to vote or for an ineligible choice, or in a form or manner that does not comply with the applicable rules. See spoiled ballot under BALLOT(2).

legal vote.A vote cast in the proper form and manner for an eligible choice by someone entitled to vote.

paired vote.An abstention resulting from a pairing. See PAIR.

preferential vote.A vote that ranks the choices in order of preference. • A preferential vote may be transferable or weighted. — Also termed preferential ballot. Cf. single transferable vote; weighted vote.

single transferable vote.A preferential vote that will migrate or “transfer” away from a candidate whom it will no longer help. • Under transferable voting, a candidate wins if his or her first-choice votes reach the number needed to win, or the “threshold.” If no candidate reaches the threshold, the least-preferred candidate is dropped and his or her votes transfer to the next-preferred candidate on each ballot. If a candidate reaches the threshold with an excess, that excess still transfers — after being discounted by the non-excess fraction needed to reach the threshold — among the surviving candidates. Each transfer preserves each vote as long as at least one candidate that the voter ranked survives. The redistribution continues until enough candidates reach the threshold or the number of surviving candidates equals the number of representatives still to be elected. See DROOP QUOTA. — Also termed STV; transferable vote; choice voting.

transferable vote.See single transferable vote.

unintelligible vote.An otherwise legal vote cast in a form from which the tellers cannot ascertain the voter's intent. • On a secret ballot, no voter may properly claim an unintelligible vote for the purpose of explaining it since the vote may have been cast by another voter who cannot contradict the claimant without sacrificing his or her right to secrecy.

vote of no confidence.See NO-CONFIDENCE VOTE.

wasted vote. A vote that does not count toward any winning candidate. Cf. effective vote; excess vote.

weighted vote. A nontransferable preferential vote whose strength is allocated among the ranked preferences either by the voter or according to a series of fixed weights.

2. The total number of votes cast in an election <the incumbent received 60% of the vote>. [Cases: Elections 1. C.J.S. Elections §§ 1(1, 10), 2.] 3. The majority or supermajority needed for a certain question .

majority vote. See MAJORITY(2).

plurality vote. See PLURALITY.

tie vote. An equally divided vote. • A tie vote is not a deadlock unless the assembly is obliged to act — for example, when electing an officer to an office that will otherwise be vacant. Cf. DEADLOCK.

unanimous vote. A vote in which every voter concurs. See UNANIMOUS(2).

winner-take-all vote. An election in which the majority (or sometimes the plurality) elects all the representatives. Cf. UNIT RULE(2); PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION; proportional voting under VOTING.

4. The act of voting, usu. by a deliberative assembly <the Senate postponed the vote on the gun-control bill>. [Cases: States 35. C.J.S. States § 52.] — vote, vb.

counted vote. Parliamentary law. A vote taken in a way that individually counts each voter. • Examples of a counted vote are a show of hands, a standing vote, a roll-call vote, and a written ballot. See DIVISION(1).

division vote. See DIVISION(1).

lobby vote. A counted vote taken by each voter passing through a lobby between tellers. — Also termed teller vote.

rising vote. 1. See standing vote. 2. A vote of appreciation demonstrated by the members standing, sometimes silently but usu. with applause. — Also termed rising vote of thanks.

roll-call vote. A counted vote by roll call, in which the secretary calls each member's name, in answer to which the member casts aloud his or her vote. • The U.S. Constitution provides that “the Yeas and Nays of the Members of either House on any question shall, at the Desire of one fifth of those Present, be entered on the Journal.” U.S. Const. art. I, § 5, cl. 3. — Also termed vote by yeas and nays; yeas and nays. See roll call under CALL(1).

serpentine vote. A standing vote in which the voters count off and sit down, with the count progressing up one row and down the next until each member on the side of the question being counted has voted.

standing vote. A counted vote taken by each voter standing up when his or her side of the question is counted. — Also termed rising vote; standing division.

teller vote. See lobby vote.

voice vote. A vote taken by the voters collectively answering aloud, usu. with “aye” or “nay,” when their side of the question is called. — Also termed viva voce vote.

viva voce vote. See voice vote.

vote by show of hands. A vote taken by the voters raising their hands when their side of the question is counted. — Often shortened to show of hands.

vote by yeas and nays. See roll-call vote.

VOTE DILUTION

vote dilution. See DILUTION(3).

VOTE IMMEDIATELY

vote immediately. See CLOSE DEBATE.

VOTE OF NO CONFIDENCE

voter. 1. A person who engages in the act of voting. 2. A person who has the qualifications necessary for voting. — Also termed (in sense 2) legal voter; qualified voter. [Cases: Elections 59–87. C.J.S. Elections §§ 15–19, 26, 28–29, 32.]

registered voter. A person who is qualified to vote and whose name is recorded in the voting district where he or she resides. [Cases: Elections 95–119. C.J.S. Elections §§ 7(3), 36–38, 40(1), 41, 46–47, 51–52.]

voting. The casting of votes for the purpose of deciding an issue.

absentee voting. 1. Participation in an election by a qualified voter who is unable to appear at the polls on election day. 2. The practice of allowing voters to participate in this way. — Also termed (in sense 1) absentee ballot; absentee vote. See absentee ballot under BALLOT(2). [Cases: Elections 126(6), 216.1. C.J.S. Elections §§ 114, 118(1).]

choice voting. See single transferable vote under VOTE(1).

class voting. A method of shareholder voting in which different classes of shares vote separately on fundamental corporate changes that affect the rights and privileges of that class. — Also termed voting by class; voting by voting group. [Cases: Corporations 197. C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 375–378.]

cumulative voting. A system in which each voter may cast more than one vote for the same candidate. • Cumulative voting helps a minority elect at least one representative. It is common in shareholder elections. [Cases: Corporations 200, 283(2). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 384, 439–442.]

first-past-the-post voting. See plurality voting.

Hare–Ware voting. See instant-runoff voting.

instant-runoff voting. A system of preferential voting that mimics a runoff election by using each voter's ranked preferences instead of a second round of voting. See runoff election under ELECTION(3). — Abbr. IRV. — Also termed Hare–Ware voting; West Australian plan.

limited voting. A system in which each voter must cast fewer votes than the number of representatives being elected.

low-total voting. A system of weighted preferential voting that adds up the ranked preferences — “1” for a first choice, “2” for a second choice, and so forth — so that the most-preferred candidate wins by having the lowest total. See preferential voting; weighted vote under VOTE(1).

majority voting. A system in which each voter may cast one vote per representative being elected, and a simple majority is required for election. [Cases: Corporations 283(2). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 439–442.]

noncumulative voting. A corporate voting system in which a shareholder is limited in board elections to voting no more than the number of shares that he or she owns for a single candidate. • The result is that a majority shareholder will elect the entire board of directors. — Also termed straight voting. [Cases: Corporations 283(2). C.J.S. Corporations §§ 373, 439–442.]

plurality voting. Election by plurality. See PLURALITY. — Also termed first-past-the-post voting.

preferential voting. A system in which each voter ranks the choices in order of preference. • A preferential vote may be transferable or weighted. — Also termed rank-order voting. See single transferable vote under VOTE(1); weighted vote under VOTE(1).

proportional voting. A system of transferable preferential voting in a multi-representative election. See preferential vote under VOTE(1); single transferable vote under VOTE(1). — Also termed proportional representation.

rank-order voting. See preferential voting.

straight voting. See noncumulative voting.

two-round voting. A system in which the voting occurs in two rounds, with the first round determining the candidate's eligibility for the second round. • The second round may be a runoff between the top two candidates from the first round, an election by plurality among candidates who won their political parties' nominations in the first round, or an election by plurality among the candidates from the first round who reached a certain threshold. See runoff election under ELECTION(3).

waif, n. 1. An abandoned article whose owner is unknown, esp. something stolen and thrown away by the thief in flight, usu. through fear of apprehension. • At common law, if a waif, whether stolen or merely abandoned, was seized before the owner reclaimed it, the title vested in the Crown. The owner was thus punished for leaving the property or for failing to pursue the thief and attempting to recover the property. Today, however, the general rule is that a waif passes to the state in trust for the true owner, who may regain it by proving ownership.

“Waifs, bona waviata, are goods stolen, and waived or thrown away by the thief in his flight, for fear of being apprehended. These are given to the king by the law, as a punishment upon the owner, for not himself pursuing the felon, and taking away his goods from him. And therefore if the party robbed do his diligence immediately to follow and apprehend the thief (which is called making fresh suit) or do convict him afterwards, or procure evi-dence to convict him, he shall have his goods again.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 286–87 (1765).

2. Hist. A homeless person, esp. a woman or child; a social outcast. See WAIVERY. “[In the thirteenth century] a woman, though she cannot be outlawed, can be ‘waived,’ declared a ‘waif,’ and ‘waiver’ seems to have all the effects of outlawry.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 482 (2d ed. 1898).

wainable (way-n*<<schwa>>-b<<schwa>>l*), adj. Archaic. (Of land) plowable; tillable.

wainage (way-nij), n. Hist. 1. The plow, team, and other implements used by a person (esp. a villein) to cultivate the soil; instruments of husbandry. 2. Cultivated land or the profits from it. — Also termed wainagium; waynagium (way-nay-jee-<<schwa>>m); (in sense 2) gainage.

wainbote. See BOTE(1).

WAIT-AND-SEE PRINCIPLE

wait-and-see principle. A modification to the rule against perpetuities, under which a court may determine the validity of a contingent future interest based on whether it actually vests within the perpetuities period, rather than on whether it possibly could have vested outside the period. —

Also termed second-look doctrine. [Cases: Per-petuities 4. C.J.S. Perpetuities §§ 2, 12.]

waiting clerk.Hist. An officer who waits in attendance on the court of chancery. • The office of the waiting clerk was abolished in 1842 by the Court of Chancery Act. St. 5 & 6 Vict. ch. 103.

WAITING PERIOD

waiting period.A period that must expire before some legal right or remedy can be enjoyed or enforced. • For example, many states have waiting periods for the issuance of marriage licenses or the purchase of handguns.

WAIVE

waive (wayv), n. Archaic. A woman who has by her conduct deprived herself of the protection of the law; a female outlaw. • The term “outlaw” usu. referred only to a male. See OUTLAW(1), (2).

waive,vb.1. To abandon, renounce, or surrender (a claim, privilege, right, etc.); to give up (a right or claim) voluntarily. • Ordinarily, to waive a right one must do it knowingly — with knowledge of the relevant facts. [Cases: Estoppel 52.10. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 67–68, 70–72, 75–76, 79, 159–160.] 2. To refrain from insisting on (a strict rule, formality, etc.); to forgo. 3.Hist. To declare someone a waif. See WAIF(2).

WAIVER

waiver (way-v<<schwa>>r), n.1. The voluntary relinquishment or abandonment — express or implied — of a legal right or advantage; FORFEITURE <waiver of notice>. • The party alleged to have waived a right must have had both knowledge of the existing right and the intention of forgoing it. Cf. ESTOPPEL. [Cases: Estoppel 52.10. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 67–68, 70–72, 75–76, 79, 159–160.]

“The term waiver is one of those words of indefinite connotation in which our legal literature abounds; like a cloak, it covers a multitude of sins.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 419 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“ ‘Waiver’ is often inexactly defined as ‘the voluntary relinquishment of a known right.’ When the waiver is reinforced by reliance, enforcement is often said to rest on ‘estoppel.’ ... Since the more common definition of estoppel is limited to reliance on a misrepresentation of an existing fact, reliance on a waiver or promise as to the future is sometimes said to create a ‘promissory estoppel.’ The common definition of waiver may lead to the incorrect inference that the promisor must know his legal rights and must intend the legal effect of the promise. But ... it is sufficient if he has reason to know the essential facts.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 84 cmt. b (1979).

“Waiver is often asserted as the justification for a decision when it is not appropriate to the circumstances.” Robert E. Keeton & Alan I. Widiss, Insurance Law § 6.8, at 719 (1998).

“Although it has often been said that a waiver is ‘the intentional relinquishment of a known right,' this is a mis-leading definition. What is involved is not the relinquishment of a right and the termination of the reciprocal duty but the excuse of the nonoccurrence of or a delay in the occurrence of a condition of a duty." E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 8.5, at 561 (3d ed. 1999).

express waiver.A voluntary and intentional waiver. [Cases: Estoppel 52.10(2). C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 74–75, 84, 87.]

implied waiver.A waiver evidenced by a party's decisive, unequivocal conduct reasonably inferring the intent to waive. [Cases: Estoppel 52.10(3). C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 69, 71, 76, 79.]

“An implied waiver may arise where a person has pursued such a course of conduct as to evidence an intention to waive a right, or where his conduct is inconsistent with any other intention than to waive it. Waiver may be inferred from conduct or acts putting one off his guard and leading him to believe that a right has been waived. Mere silence, however, is no waiver unless there is an obligation to speak.” 28 Am. Jur. 2d Estoppel and Waiver § 160, at 845–46 (1966).

prospective waiver.A waiver of something that has not yet occurred, such as a contractual waiver of future claims for discrimination upon settlement of a lawsuit.

subject-matter waiver.A waiver that may result when a party voluntarily discloses a communication or privileged material about a particular topic to a third party. • A party's voluntary disclosure may lead a court to find an implied waiver that extends to all other communications relating to the same subject matter.

waiver of notice.Parliamentary law. The waiver that occurs when a defective notice for a meeting is issued but every member attends and participates without objecting to the defect.

2. The instrument by which a person relinquishes or abandons a legal right or advantage <the plaintiff must sign a waiver when the funds are delivered>.

jury waiver.A form signed by a criminal defendant who relinquishes the right to have the trial conducted before a jury.

lien waiver.A written and signed waiver of a subcontractor's mechanic's lien rights, usu. submitted to enable the owner or general contractor to receive a draw on a construction loan. [Cases: Mechanics' Liens 208. C.J.S. Mechanics' Liens §§ 252–253.]

WAIVER BY ELECTION OF REMEDIES

waiver by election of remedies.A defense arising when a plaintiff has sought two inconsistent remedies and by a decisive act chooses one of them, thereby waiving the other. [Cases: Election of Remedies 1. C.J.S. Election of Remedies §§ 2–3.]

WAIVER HEARING

waiver hearing.See transfer hearing under HEARING.

WAIVER OF CLAIMS AND DEFENSES

waiver of claims and defenses. 1. The intentional relinquishment by a maker, drawer, or other obligor under a contract of the right to assert against the assignee any claims or defenses the obligor has against the assignor. [Cases: Assignments 103; Bills and Notes 314; Secured Transactions 185. C.J.S. Assignments § 100; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 166–168; Secured Transactions § 139.] 2. The contractual clause providing for such a waiver.

WAIVER OF COUNSEL

waiver of counsel. A criminal defendant's intentional relinquishment of the right to legal representation. • To be valid, a waiver of counsel must be made voluntarily, knowingly, and intelligently.

WAIVER OF DEFENSES

waiver of defenses. Real estate. A document by which a mortgagor acknowledges that the mortgage is good and valid for the full amount of the mortgage note. • This document ensures that the mortgagor has no defenses to the mortgage. — Also termed estoppel certificate; no-setoff certificate; declaration of no defenses. [Cases: Mortgages 415. C.J.S. Mortgages §§ 512–513, 531–534, 700.]

WAIVER OF EXEMPTION

waiver of exemption. 1. A debtor's voluntary relinquishment of the right to an exemption from a creditor's levy or sale of any part of the debtor's personal property by judicial process. [Cases: Exemptions 89–99; Homestead 169–176.] 2. The contractual clause expressly providing for such a waiver. [Cases: Exemptions 92; Homestead 170.]

WAIVER OF IMMUNITY

waiver of immunity. The act of giving up the right against self-incrimination and proceeding to testify. See IMMUNITY(3). [Cases: Witnesses 305. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 552–554.]

waiver of notice. See WAIVER(1).

WAIVER-OF-PREMIUM CLAUSE

waiver-of-premium clause. Insurance. A provision for a waiver of premium payments after the insured has been disabled for a specified length of time, such as six months. [Cases: Insurance 2035. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 452–453, 556, 732–733, 773, 817, 832–833.]

WAIVER OF PROTEST

waiver of protest. A relinquishment by a party to a negotiable instrument of the formality of protest in case of dishonor. See PROTEST(2). [Cases: Bills and Notes 422. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 213–215, 219–228, 230.]

WAIVER OF SERVICE

waiver of service. A defendant's voluntary submission to the jurisdiction made by signing an acknowledgment of receipt of the petition and stating that he or she waives all further service.

WAIVER OF TORT

waiver of tort. The election to sue in quasi-contract to recover the defendant's unjust benefit, instead of suing in tort to recover damages. See implied-in-law contract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Action 28. C.J.S. Actions §§ 90, 108–123.]

“A person upon whom a tort has been committed and who brings an action for the benefits received by the tortfeasor is sometimes said to ‘waive the tort.’” Restatement of Restitution § 525 (1937).

“ ‘Waiver of tort’ is a misnomer. A party only waives a tort in the sense that he elects to sue in quasi-contract to recover the defendant's unjust benefit rather than to sue in tort to recover damages; he has a choice of alternative remedies. But the tort is not extinguished. Indeed it is said that it is a sine qua non of both remedies that he should establish that a tort has been committed.” Lord Goff of Chieveley & Gareth Jones, The Law of Restitution 605 (3d ed. 1986).

waivery. Hist. The act of putting a woman outside the protection of the law. • At common law, a woman could not be “outlawed” because she was not considered “in law” — that is, she could not undertake legal proceedings on her own. By Bracton's day, the effect of outlawing a woman was achieved by “waiving” her — the act being called waivery.

wakening. Scots law. The revival of an action in which no steps had taken for at least a year and a day.

walk, vb. Slang. 1. To be acquitted <though charged with three thefts, Robinson walked each time>. 2. To escape any type of real punishment <despite the seriousness of the crime, Selvidge paid only $750: he walked>.

WALKER

walker, n. Hist. A forester who inspects an assigned area of land.

WALKER PROCESS CLAIM

Walker Process claim. Patents. A counterclaim in an infringement suit, seeking a declaratory judgment that the patent is invalid because its owner defrauded the Patent Office. • The claim is based on antitrust law, alleging that the patentee wrongfully tried to monopolize a market. Walker Process Equip., Inc. v. Food Mach. & Chem., 382 U.S. 172, 86 S.Ct. 347 (1965). — Also termed Walker Process defense.

walkout. 1. STRIKE(1). 2. The act of leaving a work assignment, meeting, or other event as a show of protest. [Cases: Labor Relations 290.C.J.S. Labor Relations §§ 273–274, 277–278.]

wall. An erection of stone, brick, or other material raised to varying heights, esp. inside or surrounding a building, for privacy, security, or enclosure.

ancient wall. A party wall that has stood for at least 20 years, thus giving each party an easement right to refuse to allow the other party to remove or substantially change the wall.

party wall. A wall that divides two adjoining, separately owned properties and that is shared by the two property owners as tenants in common. — Also termed common wall. [Cases: Party Walls 1–10. C.J.S. Party Walls §§ 1–59.]

“There appears to be no precise legal definition of the term ‘party wall.’ Four possible meanings are as follows: (a) Tenancy in common: the two adjoining owners are tenants in common of the wall. (b) Divided: the wall is divided longitudinally into two strips, one belonging to each of the neighbouring owners. (c) Divided with easements: the wall is divided as in (b), but each half is subject to an easement of support in favour of the owner of the other half. (d) Ownership subject to easement: the wall belongs entirely to one of the adjoining owners, but is subject to an easement or right in the other to have it maintained as a dividing wall.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 303–04 (6th ed. 1993).

wallia (wahl-ee-<<schwa>>), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A wall (such as a mound or bank) erected in marshy areas for protection against the sea; a seawall.

A statute, originally enacted in 1926, giving federal courts the power to subpoena and compel the return, testimony, and (if requested) production of documents or other items of U.S. citizens or residents who are abroad. • The subpoena is available for criminal proceedings, including grand-jury proceedings. 28 USCA § 1783.

WALSH–HEALEY ACT

Walsh–Healey Act. A federal law, enacted in 1936, stipulating that government contractors must: (1) pay their workers no less than the prevailing minimum wage; (2) observe the eight-hour day and 40-hour workweek (with time-and-a-half for work exceeding those hours); (3) employ no convict labor and no females under 18 or males under 16 years of age; and (4) maintain sanitary working conditions. 41 USCA §§ 35 et seq. — Also termed Public Contracts Act.

wampum (wom-p*<<schwa>>*m), n. Hist. Indian money consisting of shells, beads, or animal pelts. • In 1637, it became the first medium of exchange for the New England colonies by order of the General Court of Massachusetts, because England had not provided the colonies with a standard of exchange. The Court ordered that “wampampee should passe at 6 a penny for any sum under 12d.” Wampum was used as the medium of exchange, esp. for small transactions, until 1652, when the General Court ordered the first metallic currency.

WANDS<TT> TEST

Wands test.Patents. A judicial test of “undue experimentation” for determining whether a patent application's specification teaches one skilled in the art how to make and work the claimed invention. In re Wands, 858 F.2d 731 (Fed. Cir. 1988). • The test takes account of eight factors: (1) how much experimentation would be needed, (2) how much guidance is given, (3) whether there is a working example, (4) the nature of the invention, (5) the state of the prior art, (6) the level of skill of those in the art, (7) how predictable or unpredictable the art is, and (8) the breadth of the claims. The factors (often called Wands factors) are illustrative rather than mandatory. See UNDUE EXPERIMENTATION. [Cases: Patents 99. C.J.S. Patents § 139.]

wanlass (wahn-l<<schwa>>s).Hist. An ancient form of tenure requiring the tenant to drive deer to a stand so that the lord can take a shot. — Also spelled wanlace.

wantage (wahnt-ij), n. A deficiency of something; specif., a vessel's deficiency of not being full, due to leakage.

WANTED PERSON

wanted person.A person sought by the police because the person has escaped from custody or an arrest warrant has been issued for the person's arrest.

WANT OF AMICABLE DEMAND

want of amicable demand.Louisiana law. A defensive pleading by a defendant who seeks to avoid, delay, or defeat the plaintiff's petition. • A defendant may (1) refuse to participate in the suit (a declinatory exception), (2) seek to delay the litigation in the suit (a dilatory exception), or (3) seek to dismiss or defeat the suit (a peremptory exception). See declinatory exception, dilatory exception, peremptory exception under EXCEPTION(1).

WANT OF CONSIDERATION

want of consideration.The lack of consideration for a contract. See CONSIDERATION(1). Cf. FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION. [Cases: Contracts 54(1), 84; Sales 21. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 87, 134; Sales § 27.]

WANT OF JURISDICTION

want of jurisdiction.A court's lack of power to act in a particular way or to give certain kinds of relief. • A court may have no power to act at all, may lack authority over a person or the subject matter of a lawsuit, or may have no power to act until the prerequisites for its jurisdiction have been satisfied. — Also termed lack of jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION. [Cases: Courts 39, 40; Federal Courts 30. C.J.S. Courts §§ 3, 87–92.]

WANT OF PROSECUTION

want of prosecution. Failure of a litigant to pursue the case <dismissal for want of prosecution>. — Abbr. w.o.p.; w.p. — Also termed lack of prosecution; no progress. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1758; Pretrial Procedure 581. C.J.S. Dismissal and Nonsuit §§ 51, 67, 69, 73.]

WANT OF REPAIR

want of repair. A defective condition, such as a condition on a highway making it unsafe for ordinary travel. [Cases: Automobiles 252; Municipal Corporations 757(1). C.J.S. Motor Vehicles §§ 431–433, 435, 440–441, 466, 486; Municipal Corporations § 699.]

wanton (wahn-t<<schwa>>n), adj. Unreasonably or maliciously risking harm while being utterly indifferent to the consequences. • In criminal law, wanton usu. connotes malice (in the criminal-law sense), while reckless does not. Cf. RECKLESS; WILLFUL. [Cases: Criminal Law 23; Negligence 275. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 38; Negligence §§ 98–103, 106–113, 913–914.]

“Wanton differs from reckless both as to the actual state of mind and as to the degree of culpability. One who is acting recklessly is fully aware of the unreasonable risk he is creating, but may be trying and hoping to avoid any harm. One acting wantonly may be creating no greater risk of harm, but he is not trying to avoid it and is indifferent to whether harm results or not. Wanton conduct has properly been characterized as ‘vicious’ and rates extreme in the degree of culpability. The two are not mutually exclusive. Wanton conduct is reckless plus, so to speak.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 879–80 (3d ed. 1982).

WANTON AND RECKLESS MISCONDUCT

wanton and reckless misconduct. See wanton misconduct under MISCONDUCT.

WANTON MISCONDUCT

wanton misconduct. See MISCONDUCT.

WANTON NEGLIGENCE

wanton negligence. See gross negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

WANTONNESS

wantonness, n. Conduct indicating that the actor is aware of the risks but indifferent to the results. • Wantonness usu. suggests a greater degree of culpability than recklessness, and it often connotes malice in criminal-law contexts. Cf. RECKLESSNESS. [Cases: Damages 91(1); Negligence 275; Sentencing and Punishment 1438. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1593–1594, 1596; Damages §§ 202–203; Negligence §§ 98–103, 106–113.] — wanton, adj.

fugitive warrant. A warrant that authorizes law-enforcement officers to take into custody a person who has fled from one state to another to avoid prosecution or punishment.

general warrant. 1. Hist. A warrant issued by the English Secretary of State for the arrest of the author, printer, or publisher of a seditious libel, without naming the persons to be arrested. • General warrants were banned by Par-liament in 1766.

“A practice had obtained in the secretaries office ever since the restoration, grounded on some clauses in the acts for regulating the press, of issuing general warrants to take up (without naming any person in particular) the authors, printers and publishers of such obscene or seditious libels, as were particularly specified in the warrant. When those acts expired in 1694, the same practice was inadvertently continued, in every reign and under every administration, except the four last years of queen Anne, down to the year 1763: when such a warrant being issued to apprehend the authors, printers and publishers of a certain seditious libel, its validity was disputed; and the warrant was adjudged by the whole court of king's bench to be void, in the case of Money v. Leach. Trin. 5 Geo. III. B.R. After which the issuing of such general warrants was declared illegal by a vote of the house of commons.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 288 n.i (1769).

2. A warrant that gives a law-enforcement officer broad authority to search and seize unspecified places or persons; a search or arrest warrant that lacks a sufficiently particularized description of the person or thing to be seized or the place to be searched. • General warrants are unconstitutional because they fail to meet the Fourth Amendment's specificity requirements.

“But though there are precedents of general warrants to search all suspected places for stolen goods, these are not at common law legal, because it would be extremely dangerous to leave it to the discretion of a common officer to arrest what person, or search what houses he thinks fit. And in the great case of Money v. Leach, it was declared by Lord Mansfield, that a warrant to search for, and secure the person and papers of the author, printer and publisher of a libel, is not only illegal in itself, but is so improper on the face of it, that it will afford no justification to an officer acting under its sanction. And by two resolutions of the House of Commons such general warrants were declared to be invalid.” 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 66 (2d ed. 1826).

John Doe warrant. A warrant for the arrest of a person whose name is unknown. • A John Doe warrant may be issued, for example, for a person known by sight but not by name. This type of warrant is permitted in a few states, but not in federal practice.

justice's warrant. See peace warrant.

landlord's warrant. A type of distress warrant from a landlord to seize the tenant's goods, to sell them at public sale, and to compel the tenant to pay rent or observe some other lease stipulation. See DISTRAIN; DISTRESS.

WARRANT OF ATTORNEY

warrant of attorney. 1.POWER OF ATTORNEY(1).2.Archaic. Written authority given by a client to a lawyer to appear in court and to confess judgment in favor of a specified party. • It usu. instructed the attorney not to bring any action, seek a writ of error, or file a bill in equity that might delay the judgment. The warrant was typically given as security for an obligation on which judgment was authorized. Cf. CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT; COGNOVIT. [Cases: Judgment 43. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 157, 164–166.]

“A warrant of attorney was not required to be under seal, though it generally was so. In order to guard against any imposition in procuring debtors to execute warrants of attorney or cognovits in ignorance of the effect of such instruments, it is provided that a warrant of attorney to confess judgment in any personal action, or cognovit actionem, given by any person, shall not be of any force, unless there is present some attorney of one of the superior courts on behalf of such person, expressly named by him and attending at his request, to inform him of the nature and effect of such warrant or cognovit, before the same is executed” Joshua Williams, Principles of the Law of Personal Property 125 (11th ed. 1881).

warrant officer. 1. OFFICER(2). 2. SERGEANT-AT-ARMS(4).

warrantor (wor-*<<schwa>>n-tor or -t<<schwa>>*r orwahr-). A person who gives a written warranty or becomes obligated under an implied warranty. See 15 USCA § 2301(5).

WARRANT RECALL

warrant recall, n. A procedure for removing from government computers information about canceled warrants in order to avoid repeated or mistaken arrests.

WARRANT TO SUE AND DEFEND

warrant to sue and defend. Hist. 1. Written authority given by a client to a lawyer to authorize commencement or defense of a lawsuit. 2. A special warrant from the Crown authorizing a party to appoint an attorney to sue or defend on the party's behalf.

WARRANT UPON INDICTMENT OR INFORMATION

warrant upon indictment or information. See WARRANT(1).

warranty (wor-*<<schwa>>*n-tee orwahr-), n. 1. Property. A covenant by which the grantor in a deed promises to secure to the grantee the estate conveyed in the deed, and pledges to compensate the grantee with other land if the grantee is evicted by someone having better title. • The covenant is binding on the grantor's heirs. See COVENANT(4). Cf. quitclaim deed under DEED. [Cases: Covenants 45, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 22, 29.]

collateral warranty. A warranty that is made by a stranger to the title, and that consequently runs only to the covenantee and not with the land. [Cases: Covenants 45, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 22, 29.]

general warranty. A warranty against the claims of all persons. [Cases: Covenants 47, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 23, 29.]

lineal warranty. Hist. A warranty existing when an heir derives title to land from the warrantor; a warranty from the same ancestor as the one from whom the land derived.

special warranty. A warranty against any person's claim made by, through, or under the grantor or the grantor's heirs. [Cases: Covenants 48, 67. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 24, 29.]

2. Contracts. An express or implied promise that something in furtherance of the contract is guaranteed by one of the contracting parties; esp., a seller's promise that the thing being sold is as represented or promised. • A warranty differs from a representation in four principal ways: (1) a warranty is an essential part of a contract, while a representation is usu. only a collateral inducement, (2) an express warranty is usu. written on the face of the contract, while a representation may be written or oral, (3) a warranty is conclusively presumed to be material, while the burden is on the party claiming breach to show that a representation is material, and (4) a warranty must be strictly complied with, while substantial truth is the only requirement for a representation. Cf. CONDITION(2), (3); GUARANTEE(1). [Cases: Contracts 205.5; Sales 246–288.5. C.J.S. Contracts § 341; Sales §§ 236–280, 282–284, 286, 288–289.] “[T]wo points must be borne in mind. In the first place, the words ‘condition’ and ‘warranty’ are not invariably kept as distinct as accuracy of definition demands; and in insurance law especially ‘warranty’ is very commonly used in the sense ascribed to ‘condition’ In the second place, the injured party, if he chooses to waive his right to repudiate the contract on breach of a condition, may still bring an action for such damages as he has sustained.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 223 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

as-is warranty. A warranty that goods are sold with all existing faults. See AS IS. [Cases: Sales 267. C.J.S. Sales §§ 238, 263–270.]

construction warranty. A warranty from the seller or building contractor of a new home that the home is free of structural, electrical, plumbing, and other defects and is fit for its intended purpose. [Cases: Contracts 205.35(2). C.J.S. Contracts § 359.]

deceptive warranty. A warranty containing false or fraudulent representations or promises. [Cases: Consumer Protection 6. C.J.S. Credit Reporting Agencies; Consumer Protection §§ 29–31, 33–39, 60–65.]

express warranty. A warranty created by the overt words or actions of the seller. • Under the UCC, an express warranty is created by any of the following: (1) an affirmation of fact or promise made by the seller to the buyer relating to the goods that becomes the basis of the bargain; (2) a description of the goods that becomes part of the basis of the bargain; or (3) a sample or model made part of the basis of the bargain. UCC § 2-313. [Cases: Contracts 205.10; Sales 259. C.J.S. Contracts § 359; Sales § 242.]

extended warranty. An additional warranty often sold with the purchase of consumer goods (such as appliances and motor vehicles) to cover repair costs not otherwise covered by a manufacturer's standard warranty, by extending either the standard-warranty coverage period or the range of defects covered. — Also termed extended service warranty; extended service contract. [Cases: Sales 279. C.J.S. Sales §§ 249, 256, 258, 261, 283.]

full warranty. A warranty that fully covers labor and materials for repairs. • Under federal law, the warrantor must remedy the consumer product within a reasonable time and without charge after notice of a defect or malfunction. 15 USCA § 2304. See MAGNUSON–MOSS

implied warranty. An obligation imposed by the law when there has been no representation or promise; esp., a warranty arising by operation of law because of the circumstances of a sale, rather than by the seller's express promise. [Cases: Contracts 205.15; Sales 262.5. C.J.S. Contracts § 359; Sales § 252.]

implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose. A warranty — implied by law if the seller has reason to know of the buyer's special purposes for the property — that the property is suitable for those purposes. — Sometimes shortened to warranty of fitness. [Cases: Contracts 205.15(3); Sales 273(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 347, 359; Sales §§ 258–260.]

“Those unfamiliar with the differences between the warranty of merchantability (fitness for the ordinary purposes for which such goods are used) and the warranty of fitness for a particular purpose often confuse the two; one can find many opinions in which the judges used the terms ‘merchantability’ and ‘fitness for a particular purpose’ interchangeably. Such confusion under the Code is inexcusable.” 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 9-10, at 527 (4th ed. 1995).

implied warranty of habitability. In a residential lease, a warranty from the landlord to the tenant that the leased property is fit to live in and that it will remain so during the term of the lease. — Also termed covenant of habitability. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 125(1).]

implied warranty of merchantability. A warranty that the property is fit for the ordinary purposes for which it is used. • Under the UCC, an implied warranty of merchantability arises whenever a merchant sells goods unless the agreement expressly provides otherwise. UCC § 2-314. — Sometimes shortened to warranty of merchantability. [Cases: Contracts 205.15(3); Sales 272. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 347, 359; Sales §§ 254–256.]

“The implied warranty of merchantability attaches when the seller is a merchant with respect to the goods involved in the exchange. Accordingly, the product must meet certain standards; it must pass without objection in the trade under the contract description and it must be fit for the ordinary purposes for which such goods are used. The concepts of marketability, operability, and repairability have emerged as varying criteria for merchantable goods.” 1 Julian B. McDonnell & Elizabeth J. Coleman, Commercial and Consumer Warranties ¶ 1.02[1], at 1-7 (1991).

limited warranty. A warranty that does not fully cover labor and materials for repairs. • Under federal law, a limited warranty must be clearly labeled as such on the face of the warranty. See MAGNUSON–MOSS WARRANTY ACT. Cf. full warranty. [Cases: Sales 279. C.J.S. Sales §§ 249, 256, 258, 261, 283.]

personal warranty. A warranty arising from an obligation to pay all or part of the debt of another.

presentment warranty. An implied promise concerning the title and credibility of an instrument, made to a payor or acceptor upon presentment of the instrument for payment or acceptance. UCC § 3-417. [Cases: Banks and Banking 149, 174; Bills and Notes 296, 326. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 416, 419, 421–434, 437–438; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 162–165.]

transfer warranty. 1. An implied promise concerning the title and credibility of an instrument, made by a transferor to a transferee and, if the transfer is by indorsement, to remote transferees. UCC §§ 3-417, 4-207. [Cases: Banks and Banking 149, 174; Bills and Notes 296, 326. C.J.S. Banks and Banking §§ 416, 419, 421–434, 437–438; Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 162–165.] 2. A warranty made by a transferee of a document of title upon a transfer of the document for value to the immediate transferee. UCC § 7-507. [Cases: Carriers 58. C.J.S. Carriers §§ 400, 402.]

warranty ab initio (ab i-nish-ee-oh). An independent subsidiary promise whose breach does not discharge the contract, but gives to the injured party a right of action for the damage sustained as a result of the breach. Cf. warranty ex post facto. [Cases: Contracts 318; Sales 282. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 334, 450–455, 541–544; Sales §§ 237, 239, 251, 278–280.]

warranty against infringement. A merchant's warranty that the goods being sold or licensed do not violate any patent, copyright, trademark, or other intellectual-property claim. • The warranty does not arise if the buyer provides the seller with the specifications for the goods purchased. Under § 2-312(3) of the Uniform Commercial Code, the warranty against infringement is a part of the warranty of title unless it is explicitly disclaimed.

warranty ex post facto (eks pohst fak-toh). A broken condition for which the injured party could void the contract, but decides instead to continue the contract, with a right of action for the broken condition (which amounts to a breached warranty). See CONDITION(2). Cf. warranty ab initio. [Cases: Contracts 318; Sales 282. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 334, 450–455, 541–544; Sales §§ 237, 239, 251, 278–280.]

warranty of actual title. See warranty of title.

warranty of assignment. An assignor's implied warranty that he or she (1) has the rights assigned, (2) will do nothing to interfere with those rights, and (3) knows of nothing that impairs the value of the assignment. [Cases: Assignments 97. C.J.S. Assignments § 90.]

warranty of authorship. Copyright. An author's contractual warranty that the work is an original work by that author. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 49. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 27, 30, 33–34, 93.]

warranty of fitness. See implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose.

warranty of merchantability. See implied warranty of merchantability.

warranty of title. A warranty that the seller or assignor of property has title to that property, that the transfer is rightful, and that there are no liens or other encumbrances beyond those that the buyer or assignee is aware of at the time of contracting. • This warranty arises automatically whenever anyone sells goods. — Also termed war-ranty of actual title. [Cases: Covenants 38–48,

62–67; Sales 263. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 14–24, 29, 46–47; Sales §§ 261, 272.]

written warranty.A warranty made in writing; specif., any written affirmation or promise by a supplier of a consumer product to a buyer (for purposes other than resale), forming the basis of the bargain and providing that the material or workmanship is free of defects or will be repaired or replaced free of charge if the product fails to meet the required specifications. 15 USCA § 2301. [Cases: Sales 260. C.J.S. Sales §§ 247–248, 265.]

Y2K warranty.See Y2KWARRANTY.

3.Insurance. A pledge or stipulation by the insured that the facts relating to the person insured, the thing insured, or the risk insured are as stated. [Cases: Insurance 2967, 3036. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 537, 539, 541–545, 566, 569, 587, 591–593, 596, 628–629, 634, 639, 702, 706, 708, 720, 761–763, 771, 775.]

affirmative warranty.A warranty — express or implied — that facts are as stated at the beginning of the policy period. • An affirmative warranty is usu. a condition precedent to the policy taking effect. [Cases: Insurance 2967. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 539, 541–545, 566, 587, 591–593, 596, 628, 702, 706, 708, 761–763, 775.]

executory warranty.A warranty that arises when an insured undertakes to perform some executory stipulation, such as a promise that certain acts will be done or that certain facts will continue to exist. [Cases: Insurance 3036. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 537, 542–545, 569, 629, 634, 639, 706, 720, 761–762, 771.]

promissory warranty.A warranty that facts will continue to be as stated throughout the policy period, such that a failure of the warranty provides the insurer with a defense to a claim under the policy. — Also termed continuing warranty. [Cases: Insurance 3036. C.J.S. Insurance §§ 537, 542–545, 569, 629, 634, 639, 706, 720, 761–762, 771.]

warranty clause. 1. A contractual clause containing a warranty. 2.Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease by which the lessor guarantees that title is without defect and agrees to defend it. • If the warranty is breached, the lessor may be held liable to the lessee to the extent that the lessor has received payments under the lease. Presence of a warranty in an oil-and-gas lease may also cause after-acquired interests to pass from the lessor to the lessee by application of estoppel by deed.

WARRANTY DEED

warranty deed.See DEED.

warren (wor-<<schwa>>n orwahr-<<schwa>>n).1. A place for the preservation of certain wildlife (such as pheasants, partridges, or rabbits).2. A privilege to keep wildlife or game in a warren. 3. The area to which the privilege extends.

free warren. A warren privilege giving the grantee the sole right to kill the wildlife to the extent of the grantee's warren area. — Also termed libera warrena.

“Free warren is a ... franchise, erected for preservation or custody ... of beasts and fowls of warren; which being ferae naturae, every one had a right to kill as he could; but upon the introduction of the forest laws ... these animals being looked upon as royal game and the sole property of our savage monarchs, this franchise of free warren was invented to protect them; by giving the grantee a sole and exclusive power of killing such game ... on condition of his preventing other persons. A man therefore that has the franchise of warren is in reality no more than a royal gamekeeper; but no man, not even a lord of a manor, could by common law justify sporting on another's soil, or even on his own, unless he had the liberty of free warren.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 38–39 (1766).

WAR-RISK INSURANCE

war-risk insurance. See INSURANCE.

WARSAW CONVENTION

Warsaw Convention. Int'l law. A treaty (to which the United States is a party) negotiated in Warsaw, Poland, in 1929, consisting of uniform rules governing claims made for personal injuries arising out of international air travel. Cf. MONTREAL AGREEMENT. [Cases: Carriers 307; Treaties 8.C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace §§ 265, 267; Carriers § 573; Treaties § 6.]

“Under the [Warsaw] Convention ... air carriers are absolutely liable up to a preset monetary ceiling for any accident in which a passenger suffers bodily injury or death, as long as the accident took place on board the aircraft or in the process of any of the operations of embarking or disembarking. The Convention limits the liability of the carrier for each passenger to the sum of 125,000 francs, unless the carrier and passenger by special contract agree to a higher limit of liability, or unless it can be established that the carrier has been guilty of ‘willful misconduct.’ The Convention contains a two-year time limitation for bringing suit, and also absolves the carrier from liability upon a showing of due care on its part.” 8A Am. Jur. 2d Aviation § 149, at 160–61 (1997).

warship. Int'l law. A ship commissioned by a nation's military, operating with a military command and crew and displaying the nation's flag or other external marks indicating its country of origin. • Under international maritime laws, warships are not subject to many of the safety and environmental regulations that apply to shipping vessels and passenger ships.

warth. See WARDPENNY.

WARWIT

warwit. See WARDWIT.

war zone. Int'l law. A designated area, on land or at sea, within which the rights of neutral countries are not respected by belligerent countries. [Cases: War and National Emergency 32. C.J.S. War and National Defense § 49.]

wash, n. 1. A situation in which two effects offset each other. • For example, if an event produces gross income and also a deduction in the same amount so that taxable income is unchanged, the event creates a wash. 2. The shallow part of a river or the arm of a sea; the sand, rocks, and gravel washed down by a mountain stream and deposited on level land near the mouth of a canyon.

WASH SALE

wash sale. See SALE.

WASH TRANSACTION

wash transaction. See wash sale under SALE.

waste, n. 1. Permanent harm to real property committed by a tenant (for life or for years) to the prejudice of the heir, the reversioner, or the remainderman. • In the law of mortgages, any of the following acts by the mortgagor may constitute waste: (1) physical damage, whether intentional or negligent, (2) failure to maintain and repair, except for repair of casualty damage or damage caused by third-party acts, (3) failure to pay property taxes or governmental assessments secured by a lien having priority over the mortgage, so that the payments become delinquent, (4) the material failure to comply with mortgage covenants concerning physical care, maintenance, construction, demolition, or casualty insurance, or (5) keeping the rents to which the mortgagee has the right of possession. — Also termed devastation; vastum. [Cases: Waste 1. C.J.S. Waste §§ 1–4, 6–9.]

“The old action of waste was a mixed action, being founded in part on the statute of Gloucester (A.D. 1278), which provided that ‘he which shall be attainted of waste shall lose the thing wasted, and moreover shall recompense thrice as much as the waste shall be taxed at.’ The action was to recover the land in which waste had been done and the treble damages. The statute of Gloucester was imported into this country, but many variant statutes now regulate the subject.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 13 (2d ed. 1899).

active waste. See commissive waste.

affirmative waste. See commissive waste.

ameliorating waste (<<schwa>>-meel-y<<schwa>>-ray-ting). A lessee's unauthorized change to the physical character of a lessor's property — technically constituting waste, but in fact resulting in improvement of the property. • Generally, equity will not enjoin such waste. — Also termed ameliorative waste.

commissive waste (k<<schwa>>-mis-iv). Waste caused by the affirmative acts of the tenant. — Also termed active waste; affirmative waste; voluntary waste. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 55(2). C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 261.]

double waste.Hist. The destruction occurring when a tenant having a duty to repair allows a house to deteriorate, and then unlawfully cuts down timber to repair it.

economic waste.See ECONOMIC WASTE.

equitable waste.Waste that abuses a privilege of nonimpeachability at common law, for which equity will restrain the commission of willful, destructive, malicious, or extravagant waste; esp., waste caused by a life tenant who, although ordinarily not responsible for permissive waste, flagrantly damages or destroys the property. [Cases: Waste 4. C.J.S. Waste § 6.]

“A life tenant with the benefit of an express exemption from liability for voluntary waste will nevertheless be restrained in equity from committing acts of flagrant destruction to the premises; hence the (seemingly paradoxical) term, ‘equitable waste’. A life tenant who has engaged in, or who threatens to engage in, reprehensible acts of voluntary waste will not be permitted unconscientiously to shield behind his legal right to commit waste to the detriment of those next entitled to enjoyment of the property, for this would be to abuse the legal right.” Peter Butt, Land Law 114–15 (2d ed. 1988).

permissive waste.A tenant's failure to make normal repairs to property so as to protect it from substantial deterioration. [Cases: Waste 3. C.J.S. Waste § 8.]

voluntary waste.Waste resulting from some positive act of destruction. See commissive waste. [Cases: Waste 1. C.J.S. Waste §§ 1–4, 6–9.]

“Voluntary waste. This involves some positive act of injury to the property, diminishing its value for the person next in succession; it is a deliberate and active change to the property. Examples are altering the character of premises by demolishing internal walls and fittings or opening and working a mine on the land (but not working a mine already opened, for the pre-existence of the mine shows an intention on the part of the grantor that the profits from the mine are to be enjoyed by the life tenant). A life tenant is liable for voluntary waste, unless the instrument conferring the interest expressly exempts liability for voluntary waste.” Peter Butt, Land Law 114 (2d ed. 1988).

2. Refuse or superfluous material, esp. that remaining after a manufacturing or chemical process <toxic waste>.

hazardous waste.Waste that — because of its quantity, concentration, or physical, chemical, or infectious characteristics — may cause or significantly contribute to an increase in mortality or otherwise harm human health or the environment. 42 USCA § 6903(5). — Also termed hazardous substance. [Cases: Environmental Law 427.]

toxic waste.Hazardous, poisonous substances, such as dichlorodiphenyltrichloroethane

(DDT). • Most states regulate the handling and disposing of toxic waste, and several federal statutes (such as the Comprehensive Environmental Response Compensation and Liability Act of 1980 (CERCLA), 42 USCA §§ 9601–9657) regulate the use, transportation, and disposal of toxic waste. [Cases: Environmental Law 427.]

waste book. A merchant's book for making rough entries of transactions before posting them into a journal. — Also termed blotter.

WASTED VOTE

wasted vote. See VOTE(1).

WASTEWATER

wastewater. See WATER.

WASTING ASSET

wasting asset. See ASSET.

WASTING PROPERTY

wasting property. See PROPERTY.

WASTING TRUST

wasting trust. See TRUST.

WASTOR

wastor, n. Hist. A type of thief, classified in a statute of Edward III with marauding vagabonds and burglars who entered premises by lifting door latches. 5 Edw. 3, ch. 14.

WATCH

watch, n. Maritime law. 1. A division of a ship's crew <port or starboard watch>. [Cases: Collision 77, 81, 99. C.J.S. Collision §§ 129–137, 143–147.] 2. The division of the day into time periods of service by officers and the crew <four-hour watch>.

watch, vb. Hist. To stand guard during the night.

WATCH AND WARD

watch and ward, n. Hist. A feudal duty that some tenants had to keep guard through continuous vigilance. • The phrase denotes keeping guard by night (watch) and by day (ward). — Also termed watching and warding.

WATER

water. 1. The transparent liquid that is a chemical compound of hydrogen and oxygen (H₂O). 2. A body of this liquid, as in a stream, river, lake, or ocean.

backwater. Water in a stream that, because of a dam or obstruction, cannot flow forward and sometimes flows back. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 53, 159–175. C.J.S. Waters §§ 20, 25–27, 33–47, 59–60, 297–307, 311–318, 321–327.]

coast water. Tidewater navigable by an ocean vessel; all water opening directly or indirectly into the ocean and navigable by a vessel coming in from the ocean. — Also termed coastal water.

developed water. Water brought to the surface and made available for use by the party claiming the water rights.

diffused surface water. Water, such as rainfall runoff, that collects and flows on the ground but does not form a watercourse. • Surface water is usu. subject to different regulations from water flowing in a watercourse. — Often shortened to surface water. See COMMON-ENEMY DOCTRINE; WATERCOURSE. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 115. C.J.S. Waters § 254.]

excess water. Water that is flowing in a stream in addition to what may be termed adjudicated waters; any water not needed for the reasonable beneficial uses of those having priority rights. — Also termed surplus water.

floodwater. Water that escapes from a watercourse in large volumes and flows over adjoining property in no regular channel.

foreign water. Water belonging to another nation or subject to another jurisdiction.

groundwater. Water found in layers of permeable rock or soil.

inland waters. See INTERNAL WATERS.

internal waters. See INTERNAL WATERS.

navigable water. See NAVIGABLE WATER.

navigable water of the United States. See NAVIGABLE WATER.

percolating water. Water that oozes or seeps through the soil without a defined channel (such as rainwater or other water that has lost its status as part of a stream). • Percolating water usu. constitutes part of the land on which it is found. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 101. C.J.S. Waters §§ 193, 195–197, 201–204.]

posted water. (usu. pl.) A body of water that is reserved for the exclusive use of the person who owns the land surrounding it. • The owner secures the exclusive use by posting a notice prohibiting others from using the water.

private water. Nonnavigable water owned and controlled by one or more individuals and not subject to public use. • If a body of water is small and of little or no practical value for general public use, it is considered private.

public water. Water adapted for purposes of navigation or public access.

subterranean water. Water that lies or flows beneath the earth's surface and that is not artificially confined. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 99. C.J.S. Waters §§ 190–192.]

surface water. Water lying on the surface of the earth but not forming part of a watercourse or lake. • Surface water most commonly derives from rain, springs, or melting snow.

surplus water. 1. Water running off irrigated ground; water not consumed by the irrigation process. 2. See excess water.

territorial waters. The waters under a state's or nation's jurisdiction, including both inland waters and surrounding sea (traditionally within three miles of the coastline). — Also termed marine belt; maritime belt.

tidewater. See TIDEWATER.

wastewater. 1. Water that escapes from the canals, ditches, or other receptacles of the lawful claimant; water that is not used by the appropriator and is permitted to run off the appropriator's property. 2. Water that is left over, esp. after a chemical or manufacturing process.

WATER BAYLEY

water bayley (bay-lee). Hist. An officer (mentioned in the colony laws of New Plymouth in A.D. 1671) who primarily collects dues for fish taken out of the colony's waters.

watercourse. A body of water, usu. of natural origin, flowing in a reasonably definite channel with bed and banks. • The term includes not just rivers and creeks, but also springs, lakes, and marshes in which such flowing streams originate or through which they flow. — Also termed waterway. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 38. C.J.S. Waters §§ 3–8, 91.]

“Once water joins a watercourse it becomes subject to state control; in appropriation states it becomes available for appropriation to private uses according to state law [A] watercourse could be defined to include not only rivers and lakes, but every tiny brook flowing into them, all the gullies through which water flows to the brooks, the snowpack and rainfall that feed them, and the evaporating or transpiring water in the process of forming clouds. But we need not require scientists to trace water to such remote sources because it would be beyond the ability of governments to regulate these sources. Legal definitions are intended to define a point beyond which a state does not regulate water use. Usually that point is when water is not in a ‘natural stream’.” David H. Getches, Water Law in a Nutshell 106–07 (3d ed. 1997).

ancient watercourse. A watercourse in a channel that has existed from time immemorial.

artificial watercourse. A man-made watercourse, usu. to be used only temporarily. • If the watercourse is of a permanent character and has been maintained for a sufficient length of time, it may be considered a natural watercourse to which riparian rights can attach. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 168. C.J.S. Waters §§ 297–304.]

“An artificial waterway or stream may, under some circumstances, have the characteristics and incidents of a natural watercourse. In determining the question, three things seem generally to be taken into consideration by the courts: (1) whether the way or stream is temporary or permanent; (2) the circumstances under which it was created; and (3) the mode in which it has

natural watercourse. A watercourse with its origin in the forces of nature. • A natural watercourse does not include surface water, which often flows intermittently and in an indefinite channel. In addition, a natural stream is distinguished from an artificial ditch or canal, which is typically not the subject of riparian rights. See RIPARIAN RIGHT; WATER. WATERGAVEL watergavel, n. Hist. A fee paid for a benefit (such as fishing) obtained from a body of water.

watermark. 1. A mark indicating the highest or lowest point to which water rises or falls.

high-water mark. 1. The shoreline of a sea reached by the water at high tide. • The high-water mark is usu. computed as a mean or average high tide and not as the extreme height of the water. 2. In a freshwater lake created by a dam in an unnavigable stream, the highest point on the shore to which the dam can raise the water in ordinary circumstances. 3. In a river not subject to tides, the line that the river impresses on the soil by covering it long enough to deprive it of agricultural value. — Also termed high-water line.

low-water mark. 1. The shoreline of a sea marking the edge of the water at the lowest point of the ordinary ebb tide. 2. In a river, the point to which the water recedes at its lowest stage.

2. The transparent design or symbol seen when paper is held up to the light, usu. to indicate the genuineness of the document or the document's manufacturer.

WEAR

wear,n.[fr. Saxon were “a taking”] Hist. A dam made of stakes interlaced by twigs of willows that are placed across a river to more easily accommodate the netting of fish. — Also termed weir.

WEAR AND TEAR

wear and tear.Deterioration caused by ordinary use; the depreciation of property resulting from its reasonable use <the tenant is not liable for normal wear and tear to the leased premises>. — Also termed fair wear and tear; natural wear and tear. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 55. C.J.S. Landlord and Tenant § 260.]

“ ‘Fair wear’ is the deterioration caused by the reasonable use of the premises; ‘fair tear’ is the deterioration caused by the ordinary operation of natural forces. A tenant's repairing covenant commonly exempts the tenant from the obligation to repair damage characterisable as ‘fair wear and tear’ (sometimes called ‘reasonable wear and tear’). In the absence of such an exempting provision, a covenant to repair requires the repairing of damage characterisable as fair wear and tear. Where a covenant to repair exempts the tenant from liability for 'fair wear and tear', he is not responsible for deterioration or dilapidation caused by 'the reasonable use of the house by the tenant and the ordinary operation of natural forces.' ” Peter Butt, Land Law 256 (2d ed. 1988).

WEBB-POMERENE ACT

Webb-Pomerene Act. A federal law, originally enacted in 1918, that provides a qualified exemption for an export business against the prohibitions of the antitrust laws. 15 USCA §§ 61 et seq.

“The Webb-Pomerene Act was passed to aid and encourage our manufacturers and producers to extend our foreign trade. Congress believed that American firms needed the power to form joint export associations in order to compete with foreign cartels, but while Congress was willing to create an exemption from the antitrust laws to serve this narrow purpose, the exemption created by the Webb-Pomerene Act was carefully hedged in to avoid substantial injury to domestic interests. Organization under the Webb-Pomerene Act does not give an export association the right to agree with foreign competitors to fix prices ... or establish exclusive markets” 54 Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies and Restraints of Trade § 262, at 298 (1996).

WHARTON'S RULE

Wharton's rule ([h]wor-t<<schwa>>n). Criminal law. The doctrine that an agreement by two or more persons to commit a particular crime cannot be prosecuted as a conspiracy if the crime could not be committed except by the actual number of participants involved. • But if an additional person participates so as to enlarge the scope of the agreement, all the actors may be charged with conspiracy. The doctrine takes its name from the influential criminal-law author Francis Wharton (1820–1889). — Also termed Wharton rule; concert-of-action rule. [Cases: Conspiracy 28(1). C.J.S. Conspiracy §§ 209, 213–214.]

WHITE MODEL

White model.Labor law. A method for determining whether a union member's state-law claim against the employer is preempted by federal law, by focusing on whether state law permits the claim to be waived by a private contract. • In Lingle v. Norge Division of Magic Chef, Inc., 486 U.S. 399, 108 S.Ct. 1877 (1988), the Supreme Court held that a union member's state-law retaliatory-discharge claim was not preempted by the Labor-Management Relations Act because the claim could be resolved without interpreting the collective-bargaining agreement. There are at least two models for applying the Lingle test: the White model, which focuses on whether the claim is negotiable or nonnegotiable (that is, whether state law allows the claim to be waived by a private contract) and the Marcus model, which focuses on the independence of the claim in relation to the collective-bargaining agreement. Under the White model, all negotiable claims (those waivable by private contract) are necessarily preempted because their resolution will require an interpretation of the collective-bargaining agreement. A nonnegotiable claims (one that state law does not permit to be waived by private contract) will be preempted only if its resolution requires an interpretation of the collective-bargaining agreement. The White model is named for the author of the law-review article in which it was proposed. Rebecca Homer White, Section 301's Preemption of State Law Claims: A Model for Analysis, 41 Ala. L. Rev. 377 (1990). See LINGLE TEST. Cf. MARCUS MODEL.

will, n. 1. Wish; desire; choice <employment at will>. 2. A document by which a person directs his or her estate to be distributed upon death <there was no mention of his estranged brother in the will>. — Also termed testament; will and testament; (archaically) testamentary instrument. [Cases: Wills 1–202. C.J.S. Conflict of Laws §§ 72, 89; Indians § 117; Wills §§ 1–51, 53–87, 93–95, 97–99, 103–104, 106–444, 796–797, 1621, 2026–2062.] — will, vb.

“The word ‘will’ has two distinct meanings. The first, and strict, meaning is metaphysical, and denotes the sum of what the testator wishes, or ‘wills,’ to happen on his death. The second, and more common, meaning is physical, and denotes the document or documents in which that intention is expressed.” Anthony R. Mellows, The Law of Succession 6 (3d ed. 1977).

ambulatory will. A will that can be altered during the testator's lifetime. [Cases: Wills 78. C.J.S. Wills § 167.]

antenuptial will. See prenuptial will.

attested will. A will that has been signed by a witness.

bogus will. An unauthentic will, esp. one involving fraud or unauthorized changes.

closed will. See mystic will.

conditional will. A will that depends on the occurrence of an uncertain event for the will to take effect. • Most jurisdictions hold a conditional will valid even though the testator's death does not result from or on the occasion of the condition mentioned in the will. The courts generally hold that the condition is the inducement for making the will rather than a condition precedent to its operation. See Eaton v. Brown, 193 U.S. 411, 24 S.Ct. 487 (1904); In re Will of Cohen, 491 A.2d 1292 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1985). Cf. contingent will. [Cases: Wills 80. C.J.S. Wills §§ 197–198.]

conjoint will. See joint will.

contingent will. A will that takes effect only if a specified event occurs. Cf. conditional will. [Cases: Wills 80. C.J.S. Wills §§ 197–198.]

counter will. See mutual will.

double will. See mutual will.

duplicate will. A will executed in duplicate originals by a testator who retains one copy and gives the second copy to another person. • The rules applicable to wills apply to both wills, and upon application for probate, both copies must be tendered into the registry of the probate court. [Cases: Wills 175. C.J.S. Wills §§ 395, 412.]

holographic will (hol-<<schwa>>-graf-ik). A will that is handwritten by the testator. • Such a will is typically unattested. Holographic wills are rooted in the civil-law tradition, having originated in Roman law and having been authorized under the Napoleonic Code. French and Spanish settlers introduced holographic wills in America, primarily in the South and West. Today they are recognized in about half the states. — Also termed olographic will. See HOLOGRAPH. [Cases: Wills 130–135. C.J.S. Wills §§ 317–327, 339, 341.]

inofficious will. See inofficious testament under TESTAMENT.

international will. A will that is executed according to formalities provided in an international treaty or convention, and that will be valid although it may be written in a foreign language by a testator domiciled in another country. [Cases: Wills 238–246. C.J.S. Wills §§ 515–523.]

invalid will. A will that fails to make an effective disposition of property.

joint and mutual will. A will executed by two or more people — to dispose of property they own separately, in common, or jointly — requiring the surviving testator to dispose of the property in accordance with the terms of the will, and showing that the devises are made in consideration of one another. • The word “joint” indicates the form of the will. The word “mutual” describes the substantive provisions. — Also termed joint and reciprocal will. [Cases: Wills 56–68, 100. C.J.S. Wills §§ 133–165, 2026–2038, 2047–2062.]

joint and reciprocal will. See joint and mutual will.

joint will.A single will executed by two or more testators, usu. disposing of their common property by transferring their separate titles to one devisee. — Also termed conjoint will. [Cases: Wills 56–68, 100. C.J.S. Wills §§ 133–165, 2026–2038, 2047–2062.]

last will.The most recent will of a deceased; the instrument ultimately fixing the disposition of real and personal property at the testator's death. — Also termed last will and testament.

“A will is the disposition of real and personal property to take effect after the death of the testator. When the will operates upon personal property, it is sometimes called a testament, and when upon real estate, a devise; but the more general and the more popular denomination of the instrument, embracing equally real and personal estate, is that of last will and testament.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *501 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

last will and testament.See last will.

living will.See LIVING WILL.

lost will.An executed will that cannot be found at the testator's death. • Its contents can be proved by parol evidence in many jurisdictions. The common-law presumption — still the view of the overwhelming majority of American jurisdictions — is that there is a presumption of revocation if a lost will is proved to have been in the possession of the testator and has been lost. [Cases: Wills 234, 293(4), 302(8). C.J.S. Wills §§ 511–512, 602, 632–633.]

mancipatory will (man-sip-i-tor-ee).Roman law. In early and classical law, a formal will sealed by seven witnesses and submitted to the praetor. See TESTAMENTUM.

mariner's will.See soldier's will.

mutual will.(usu. pl.) One of two separate wills in which two persons, usu. a husband and wife, establish identical or similar testamentary provisions disposing of their estates in favor of each other. • It is also possible (though rare) for the testators to execute a single mutual will, as opposed to separate ones. And it is possible (though, again, rare) for more than two parties to execute mutual wills. — Also termed reciprocal will; counter will; double will; mutual testament. [Cases: Wills 56–68. C.J.S. Wills §§ 133–165, 2026–2038, 2047–2062.]

nonintervention will.A will that authorizes an independent executor. See independent executor under EX-ECUTOR.

notarial will.A will executed by a testator in the presence of two witnesses and a notary public.

nuncupative will (n<<schwa>>ng-ky<<schwa>>-pay-tiv or n<<schwa>>ng-kyoo-p<< schwa>>-tiv). An oral will made in contemplation of imminent death, esp. from a recent injury. • Nuncupative wills are invalid in most states. Even in states allowing them, the amount that may be conveyed is usu. limited by statute. Traditionally, only personal property may be conveyed. — Also termed oral will; unwritten will; verbal will. [Cases: Wills 136–150. C.J.S. Wills §§ 328–338, 340.]

“Nuncupative (i.e., oral) wills are by statute in almost all States required to be proved by two (sometimes three) witnesses, who were present and heard the testamentary words.” John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 299 (1935).

olographic will. See holographic will.

oral will. A will made by the spoken declaration of the testator and usu. dependent on oral testimony for proof. Cf. nuncupative will. [Cases: Wills 136–150. C.J.S. Wills §§ 328–338, 340.]

parliamentary will. Slang. The legislation that governs the distribution of an intestate's property. • The term arose because the legislature effectively makes an intestate's will by passing statutes regulating descent and distribution. The terms of the parliamentary will are gathered from the statutes in effect when the intestate died.

postnuptial will (pohst-n<<schwa>>p-sh<<schwa>>l). A will executed after marriage.

pourover will (por-oh-v<<schwa>>r). A will giving money or property to an existing trust. Cf. pourover trust under TRUST.

prenuptial will (pree-n<<schwa>>p-sh<<schwa>>l). A will executed before marriage. • At common law, marriage automatically revoked a spouse's will, but modern statutes usu. provide that marriage does not revoke a will (although divorce does). But if this marriage was not contemplated by the will and there is nothing otherwise on its face to indicate that the testator intentionally left nothing to any future spouse, the pretermitted spouse may be entitled to a special forced share of the estate. Unif. Probate Code § 2-508. — Also termed antenuptial will. [Cases: Wills 60. C.J.S. Wills § 142.]

reciprocal will. See mutual will.

sealed will. See mystic will.

seaman's will. See soldier's will.

secret will. See mystic will.

self-proved will. A will proved by a self-proving affidavit. See self-proving affidavit under AFFIDAVIT. [Cases: Wills 113. C.J.S. Wills §§ 253–255.]

soldier's will. A soldier's informal oral or written will that is usu. valid despite its noncompliance with normal statutory formalities, as long as the soldier was in actual service at the time the will was made. — Also termed seaman's will; mariner's will; military testament; soldier's and sailor's will.

undutiful will.Civil law. See unnatural will.

unnatural will.A will that distributes the testator's estate to strangers rather than to the testator's relatives, without apparent reason. — Also termed (in civil law) undutiful will. [Cases: Wills 82. C.J.S. Wills § 173.]

unofficial will.See inofficial testament under TESTAMENT.

unsolemn will.Civil law. A will in which an executor is not named.

unwritten will.See nuncupative will.

verbal will.See nuncupative will.

WILL AND TESTAMENT

will and testament.See WILL.

WILL CONTEST

will contest.Wills & estates. The litigation of a will's validity, usu. based on allegations that the testator lacked capacity or was under undue influence. [Cases: Wills 203–434. C.J.S. Wills §§ 52, 445–605, 607–818, 2026–2038, 2057–2062.]

willful,adj. Voluntary and intentional, but not necessarily malicious. — Sometimes spelled wilful. Cf. WANTON. — willfulness,n.

“The word ‘wilful’ or ‘wilfully’ when used in the definition of a crime, it has been said time and again, means only intentionally or purposely as distinguished from accidentally or negligently and does not require any actual impropriety; while on the other hand it has been stated with equal repetition and insistence that the requirement added by such a word is not satisfied unless there is a bad purpose or evil intent.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 875–76 (3d ed. 1982).

“Almost all of the cases under [Bankruptcy Code § 523(a)(6)] deal with the definition of the two words ‘willful’ and ‘malicious.’ Initially one might think that willful and malicious mean the same thing. If they did, Congress should have used one word and not both. Most courts feel compelled to find some different meaning for each of them.” David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 7-30, at 531 (1993).

willfulness. 1. The fact or quality of acting purposely or by design; deliberateness; intention. • Willfulness does not necessarily imply malice, but it involves more than just knowledge. 2. The voluntary, intentional violation or disregard of a known legal duty. — Also termed legal willfulness. [Cases: Negligence 275. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 98–103, 106–113.]

willful tort. See intentional tort under TORT.

WILLFUL WRONG

willful wrong. See intentional wrong under WRONG.

WILLIAMS ACT

Williams Act. A federal statute, enacted in 1968, that amended the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 by requiring investors who own more than 5% of a company's stock to furnish certain information to the SEC and to comply with certain requirements when making a tender offer. [Cases: Securities Regulation 52.10–52.50. C.J.S. Securities Regulation §§ 121–141.]

WILLS ACT

Wills Act. 1. STATUTE OF WILLS(1). 2. An 1837 English statute that allowed people to dispose of every type of property interest by will and that had an elaborate set of requirements for valid execution. • Some states today continue to adhere to these stringent requirements. Cf. Unif. Probate Code § 2-502. — Also termed (in sense 2) Lord Langdale's Act.

WILL SUBSTITUTE

will substitute. A document or instrument that allows a person, upon death, to dispose of an estate in the same or similar manner as a will but without the formalities and expense of a probate proceeding. • The most common will substitutes are trusts, life-insurance plans, and retirement-benefits contracts. The creation of will substitutes has been one of the most important developments in the area of decedents' estates in the past 50 years. Cf. nonprobate asset under ASSET. [Cases: Wills 86.]

WINCHESTER, STATUTE OF

Winchester, Statute of. Hist. A statute passed in the 13th year of the reign of Edward I, requiring every man to provide himself with armor to keep the peace, recognizing and regulating the offices of high and petty constables, organizing the police, and enforcing the old Saxon police laws. • It was repealed in 1827 by the Criminal Statutes (England) Repeal Act. St. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, ch. 27.

witan (wit-<<schwa>>n). [Anglo-Saxon “wise men”] Hist. The members of the king's council who sat to assist the king in administrative and judicial matters. • Among the members were ealdormen, bishops, abbots, high officers, and occasionally the king's friends and relatives.

witchcraft. The practices of a witch, esp. in black magic; sorcery. • Under the Witchcraft Act of 1541 (33 Hen. 8, ch. 8) and the Witchcraft Act of 1603 (1 Jac. ch. 12), witchcraft was a felony punishable by death without benefit of clergy. These acts were repealed in 1736, and the last execution in England for witchcraft occurred in 1716. In the United States, the most conspicuous (and nearly the last) persecution for witchcraft occurred in Salem, Massachusetts, where 20 people were hanged for this offense in 1692.

wite (wIt). Hist. A penal fine exacted by the Crown or other authority for a serious crime, such as murder. — Also spelled wyte.

witenagemot (wit-<<schwa>>-n<<schwa>>-g<<schwa>>-moht). [Anglo-Saxon “a meeting of the wise”] Hist. A national assembly of noblemen, high ecclesiastics, and other great thanes of England who advised and aided the king in the general administration of the government. • Its composition depended on the will of the king. It passed out of existence with the Norman Conquest (1066). Although it was a precursor to the British Parliament, today's body is not a continuation of the witenagemot. — Also spelled wittenagemot; witanagemote.

“[T]he ancient Anglo-Saxon general assembly of the notables [was] called the Witenagemot.... At first the power of the Anglo-Saxon Witenagemot appears to have been considerable, and in fact so much so that the kings were dependent on appointment to that office by the Witan in the early period before the royal succession became hereditary. With the tenth century centralization of power in the Alfredian line of kings, it appears that the power of the Witan began to decline.” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 262 (2d ed. 1952).

stipulation, one who indorses an instrument indicates that he or she has no further liability to any subsequent holder for payment. — Also termed sans recours. [Cases: Bills and Notes 293. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit § 160.]

without reserve. Of or relating to an auction at which an item will be sold for the highest bid price. [Cases: Auctions and Auctioneers 7. C.J.S. Auctions and Auctioneers §§ 2, 8–17.]

WITHOUT THIS, THAT

without this, that. See ABSQUE HOC.

WITH POWER

with power. See committee with power under COMMITTEE(1).

WITH PREJUDICE

with prejudice, adv. With loss of all rights; in a way that finally disposes of a party's claim and bars any future action on that claim <dismissed with prejudice>. See dismissal with prejudice under DISMISSAL(1).

WITH RECOURSE

with recourse, adv. (In an indorsement) with liability to subsequent holders. • With this stipulation, one who indorses an instrument indicates that he or she remains liable to the holder for payment. [Cases: Bills and Notes 280, 286. C.J.S. Bills and Notes; Letters of Credit §§ 160, 162.]

with reserve. Of or relating to an auction at which an item will not be sold unless the highest bid exceeds a minimum price. [Cases: Auctions and Auctioneers 7. C.J.S. Auctions and Auctioneers §§ 2, 8–17.]

WITH STRONG HAND

with strong hand. With force. • In common-law pleading, this term implies a degree of criminal force, esp. as used in forcible-entry statutes.

witness, n. 1. One who sees, knows, or vouches for something . 2. One who gives testimony under oath or affirmation (1) in person, (2) by oral or written deposition, or (3) by affidavit <the witness to the signature signed the affidavit>. • A witness must be legally competent to testify. [Cases: Witnesses 224. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 390–392.] — witness, vb.

“The term ‘witness,’ in its strict legal sense, means one who gives evidence in a cause before a court; and in its general sense includes all persons from whose lips testimony is extracted to be used in any judicial proceeding, and so includes deponents and affiants as well as persons delivering oral testimony before a court or jury.” 97 C.J.S. Witnesses § 1, at 350 (1957).

“Every witness is an editor: he tells you not everything he saw and heard, for that would be impossible, but what he saw and heard and found significant, and what he finds significant depends on his preconceptions.” Patrick Devlin, The Criminal Prosecution in England 66 (1960).

accomplice witness. A witness who is an accomplice in the crime that the defendant is charged with. • A codefendant cannot be convicted solely on the testimony of an accomplice witness. [Cases: Criminal Law 507. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 998.]

alibi witness. A witness who testifies that the defendant was in a location other than the scene of the crime at the relevant time; a witness who supports the defendant's alibi.

attesting witness. One who vouches for the authenticity of another's signature by signing an instrument that the other has signed <proof of the will requires two attesting witnesses>. — Also termed subscribing witness. [Cases: Evidence 374; Wills 113. C.J.S. Evidence § 829; Wills §§ 253–255.]

character witness. A witness who testifies about another person's character traits or community reputation. See character evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Witnesses 37(4), 274. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 97, 461–462.]

competent witness. A witness who is legally qualified to testify. • A lay witness who has personal knowledge of the subject matter of the testimony is competent to testify. Fed. R. Evid. 601–602. [Cases: Witnesses 35–79. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 87–201, 203.]

corroborating witness. A witness who confirms or supports someone else's testimony. [Cases: Witnesses 410. C.J.S. Witnesses § 776.]

court witness. A witness called or re-called to testify by the judge. • The witness called to testify by the court usu. has expertise in the subject matter of the trial and is considered necessary to resolve a conflict in the testimony. The court's discretion to call its own witnesses exists in both civil and criminal cases.

credible witness. A witness whose testimony is believable.

disinterested witness. A witness who has no private interest in the matter at issue. [Cases: Witnesses 91. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 211–212.]

expert witness. A witness qualified by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education to provide a scientific, technical, or other specialized opinion about the evidence or a fact issue. Fed. R. Evid. 702–706. — Also termed skilled witness. See EXPERT; DAUBERT TEST. [Cases: Criminal Law 478–480; Evidence 535–546. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 1070–1071; Evidence §§ 521, 523–527, 599–600, 612–617, 619–625, 628–630, 632, 634–638, 644, 649–653, 656–660, 666–668, 670–671, 673–678, 680–682, 685–686, 688.]

going witness. Archaic. A witness who is about to leave a court's jurisdiction, but not the country. • An example is the witness who leaves one state to go to another.

grand-jury witness. A witness who is called to testify before a grand jury. [Cases: Grand Jury 36.]

hostile witness. A witness who is biased against the examining party, who is unwilling to testify, or who is identified with an adverse party. • A hostile witness may be asked leading questions on direct examination. Fed. R. Evid. 611(c). — Also termed adverse witness. See adverse party under PARTY(2). [Cases: Witnesses 244. C.J.S. Witnesses § 422.]

interested witness. A witness who has a direct and private interest in the matter at issue. • Most jurisdictions provide that a person witnessing a will may not be a devisee under the will. The Uniform Probate Code, however, has abrogated this rule. [Cases: Witnesses 91. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 211–212.]

lay witness. A witness who does not testify as an expert and who is therefore restricted to giving an opinion or making an inference that (1) is based on firsthand knowledge, and (2) is helpful in clarifying the testimony or in determining facts. Fed. R. Evid. 701. [Cases: Evidence 470–503. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 509–523, 527–596, 610–612, 619, 628, 633, 636, 649–652, 654, 656, 659, 661–663, 665–667, 669–675, 677, 688–690, 698, 708–712, 744–745; Executions § 435.]

material witness. A witness who can testify about matters having some logical connection with the consequential facts, esp. if few others, if any, know about those matters. [Cases: Witnesses 4.]

percipient witness. A witness who has perceived the things about which he or she testifies. See EYEWITNESS; EARWITNESS.

prosecuting witness. A person who files the complaint that triggers a criminal prosecution and whose testimony the prosecution usu. relies on to secure a conviction. [Cases: Criminal Law 210. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 326.]

qualified witness. A witness who, by explaining the manner in which a company's business records are made and kept, is able to lay the foundation for the admission of business records under an exception to the hearsay rule. Fed. R. Evid. 803(6). [Cases: Evidence 373. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 824–825, 917–919, 932–933.]

rebuttal witness. A witness who contradicts or attempts to contradict evidence previously presented.

res gestae witness. A witness who, having been at the scene of an incident, can give a firsthand account of what happened. See RES GESTAE. [Cases: Criminal Law 363; Evidence 120. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 867–870; Evidence § 349.]

skilled witness. See expert witness.

subscribing witness. One who witnesses the signatures on an instrument and signs at the end of the instrument to that effect. See attesting witness. [Cases: Evidence 373; Wills 123. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 824–825, 917–919, 932–933; Wills §§ 303–305.]

supernumerary witness. An unrequired witness, such as a third witness to a will where only two are required.

swift witness. See zealous witness.

target witness. 1. The person who has the knowledge that an investigating body seeks. [Cases: Grand Jury 37.] 2. A witness who is called before a grand jury and against whom the government is also seeking an indictment.

turncoat witness. A witness whose testimony was expected to be favorable but who becomes (usu. during the trial) a hostile witness.

ultroneous witness. Scots law. A witness who comes forward without being summoned to appear in court.

zealous witness (zel-*<<schwa>>*s). A witness who shows partiality toward the litigant that called him or her to testify and who seems eager to help that side in the lawsuit. — Also termed swift witness.

WITNESS BOX

witness box. See WITNESS STAND.

WITNESS CLAUSE

witness clause. See TESTIMONIUM CLAUSE.

witnesseth, vb. Shows; records. • This term, usu. set in all capitals, commonly separates the preliminaries in a contract, up through the recitals, from the contractual terms themselves. Modern drafters increasingly avoid it as an antiquarian relic. Traditionally, the subject of this verb was This Agreement: the sentence, boiled down, was This Agreement witnesseth [i.e., shows or records] that, whereas [the parties have agreed to contract with one another], the parties therefore agree as follows.... Many modern contracts erroneously retain the Witnesseth even though a new verb appears in the preamble: This Agreement is between [one party and the other party]. After the preamble is a period, followed by an all-capped WITNESSETH. It is an example of a form retained long after its utility, and most lawyers do not know what it means or even what purpose it once served.

WITNESS FEE

witness fee. See FEE(1).

WITNESSING PART

witnessing part. See ATTESTATION CLAUSE.

WITNESS JURAT

witness jurat. See JURAT.

WITNESS-PROTECTION PROGRAM

witness-protection program. A federal or state program in which a person who testifies against a criminal is assigned a new identity and relocated to another part of the country to avoid retaliation by anyone convicted as a result of that testimony. • The Federal Witness Protection Program was established by the Organized Crime Control Act of 1970 and is administered by the marshals of the U.S. Justice Department.

WITNESS STAND

witness stand. The space in a courtroom, usu. a boxed area, occupied by a witness while testifying. — Often shortened to stand. — Also termed witness box. [Cases: Witnesses 228. C.J.S. Witnesses §§ 396–398, 404–405.]

witness-tampering. The act or an instance of obstructing justice by intimidating, influencing, or harassing a witness before or after the witness testifies. • Several state and federal laws, including the Victim and Witness Protection Act of 1982 (18 USCA § 1512), provide criminal penalties for tampering with witnesses or other persons in the context of a pending investigation or official proceeding. See OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE. [Cases: Obstructing Justice 5. C.J.S. Obstructing Justice or Governmental Administration §§ 30–38.]

wittenagemot. See WITENAGEMOT.

witword (wit-w<<schwa>>rd). Hist. 1. A legally allowed claim; esp., the right to vindicate ownership or possession by one's affirmation under oath. 2. A will or testament.

WL

WL. abbr. WESTLAW.

WMD

WMD. See weapon of mass destruction under WEAPON.

wobbler. Slang. A crime that can be charged as either a felony or a misdemeanor. [Cases: Criminal Law 27. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 9–12.]

wolf's head. Hist. An outlaw, who was often referred to as carrying a wolf's head (caput lupinum) and to be no more than a wild beast or wolf who could be slain and whose head could be carried to the king. — Also termed woolferthod. See OUTLAW.

“Outlawry is the last weapon of ancient law, but one that it must often use. As has been well said, it is the sentence of death pronounced by a community which has no police constables or professional hangmen. To pursue the outlaw and knock him on the head as though he were a wild beast is the right and duty of every law-abiding man. 'Let him bear the wolf's head': this phrase is in use even in the thirteenth century." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 476 (2d ed. 1898).

WOMEN'S BUREAU

Women's Bureau. A unit in the U.S. Department of Labor responsible for formulating policies and standards to promote the welfare of wage-earning women.

WOMEN'S SHELTER

women's shelter. See SHELTER.

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT

Women's Suffrage Amendment. See NINETEENTH AMENDMENT.

WOOD-CORN

wood-corn, n. Hist. A quantity of oats or grain paid by customary tenants to a lord for the privilege of picking up dead or broken wood.

WOOD-GELD

wood-geld (wuud-geld). Hist. 1. Money paid for the privilege of taking wood from a forest. 2. Immunity from paying money for this privilege. — Also termed pudzeld.

WOOD-LEAVE

wood-leave. Hist. A license or right to cut down, remove, and use standing timber.

WOOD-MOTE

wood-mote (wuud-moht). See COURT OF ATTACHMENTS.

WOOD-PLEA COURT

Wood-Plea Court. Hist. A court held twice a year in Clun Forest, in Shropshire, to determine matters of wood and agistments.

WOODSHEDDING

woodshedding. See HORSESHEDDING.

WOODWARD

woodward (wuud-word), n. Hist. A forest officer who patrols and protects the forest. [Cases: Woods and Forests 7. C.J.S. Woods and Forests §§ 9–11, 14–15.]

woolferthfod. See WOLF'S HEAD.

W.O.P.

w.o.p.abbr.WANT OF PROSECUTION.

WORD OF ART

word of art. See TERM OF ART.

WORDS ACTIONABLE IN THEMSELVES

words actionable in themselves.Language that is libelous or slanderous per se. See slander per se under SLANDER; libel per se under LIBEL. [Cases: Libel and Slander 33. C.J.S. Libel and Slander; Injurious Falsehood § 198.]

WORDS OF LIMITATION

words of limitation.Language in a conveying instrument — often nonliteral language — describing the extent or quality of an estate. • For example, under long-standing principles of property law, the phrase “to A and her heirs” creates a fee simple in A but gives nothing to A's heirs. See LIMITATION(4). [Cases: Deeds 120–136; Wills 591, 597(4).C.J.S. Deeds §§ 36, 231–236, 245–268, 270–278; Wills § 1193.]

“ ‘Words of limitation’ is the phrase used to describe the words which limit (i.e., delimit or mark out) the estate to be taken. Thus in a conveyance today ‘to A in fee simple,’ the words ‘in fee simple’ are words of limitation, for they show what estate A is to have.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 29 (6th ed. 1993).

WORDS OF NEGOTIABILITY

words of negotiability.See NEGOTIABLE WORDS.

WORDS OF PROCREATION words of procreation (proh-kree-ay-sh<<schwa>>n). Language in a deed essential to create an estate tail, such as an estate “to A and the heirs of his body.” [Cases: Deeds 127. C.J.S. Deeds § 247.]

WORDS OF PURCHASE

words of purchase.Language in a deed or will designating the persons who are to receive the grant. • For example, the phrasing “to A for life with a remainder to her heirs” creates a life estate in A and a remainder in A's heirs. See PURCHASE(2). [Cases: Deeds 105, 120–136; Wills 597(4). C.J.S. Deeds §§ 36, 198–200, 202–206, 231–236, 245–268, 270–278.]

WORDS OF SEVERANCE

words of severance.In a grant of lands, words showing that the tenants were each to take a distinct share in the property as opposed to undivided portions. • Typical words of severance are share and share alike, to be divided among, equally, and between.

work,n.1. Physical and mental exertion to attain an end, esp. as controlled by and for the benefit of an employer; labor.

additional work. 1. Work that results from a change or alteration in plans concerning the work required, usu. under a construction contract; added work necessary to meet the performance goals under a contract. [Cases: Contracts 232(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 393–398.] 2. See extra work.

extra work.In construction law, work not required under the contract; something done or furnished in addition to the contract's requirements; work entirely outside and independent of the contract and not contemplated by it. • A contractor is usu. entitled to charge for extra work consisting of labor and materials not contemplated by or subsumed within the original contract, at least to the extent that the property owner agrees to a change order. Materials and labor not contemplated by the contract, but that are required by later changes in the plans and specifications, are considered to be extra work. — Also termed additional work. [Cases: Contracts 232(1). C.J.S. Contracts §§ 393–398.]

heavy work.Work that involves frequent lifting and carrying of large items. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker's physical limitations, heavy work involves lifting no more than 100 pounds, with frequent lifting or carrying of objects weighing up to 50 pounds. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.70–143.80. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 69, 72.]

inherently dangerous work.Work that can be carried out only by the exercise of special skill and care and that involves a grave risk of serious harm if done unskillfully or carelessly.

light work.Work that involves some limited lifting and moving. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker's physical limitations, light work includes walking, standing, sitting while pushing or pulling arm or leg controls, and lifting no more than 20 pounds, with frequent lifting or carrying of objects that weigh up to 10 pounds. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.85. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 72.]

medium work.Work that involves some frequent lifting and moving. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker's physical limitations, medium work includes lifting up to 50 pounds, with frequent lifting or carrying of objects weighing up to 25 pounds. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.70–143.80. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 69, 72.]

sedentary work.Work that involves light lifting and only occasional walking or standing. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker's physical limitations, sedentary work involves lifting of no more than ten pounds, occasionally carrying small items such as docket files and small tools, and occasional standing or walking. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.85. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 72.]

semi-skilled work.Work that may require some alertness and close attention, such as inspecting items or machinery for irregularities, or guarding property or people against loss or injury. 20 CFR § 404.1568(b). — Also written semiskilled work. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.70–143.85. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 69, 72.]

skilled work. Work requiring the worker to use judgment, deal with the public, analyze facts and figures, or work with abstract ideas at a high level of complexity. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.70–143.85. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 69, 72.]

unskilled work. Work requiring little or no judgment, and involving simple tasks that can be learned quickly on the job. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 140.40, 143.70–143.85. C.J.S. Social Security and Public Welfare §§ 55, 69, 72.]

very heavy work. Work that involves frequent lifting of very large objects and frequent carrying of large objects. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker's physical limitations, very heavy work involves lifting 100 pounds or more, and frequent lifting or carrying of objects weighing 50 pounds or more. 20 CFR § 404.1567(e).

work of necessity. Work reasonably essential to the public's economic, social, or moral welfare as determined by the community standards at a particular time, and (formerly) excepted from the operation of blue laws. See BLUE LAW. [Cases: Sunday 7. C.J.S. Sunday §§ 17–19, 32–33.]

2. Copyright. An original expression, in fixed or tangible form (such as paper, audiotape, or computer disk), that may be entitled to common-law or statutory copyright protection. • A work may take many different forms, including art, sculpture, literature, music, crafts, software, and photography. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 3. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 9.]

anonymous work. A work that, on copies or phonorecords, does not identify any natural person as the author. 17 USCA § 101.

architectural work. The copyrightable design of a building, as fixed in tangible media such as plans, drawings, and the building itself. 17 USCA § 102. • Only the overall design is protected, not each design element. This category of works was added to U.S. law by the Berne Convention Implementation Act of 1988. It is one of eight categories eligible for copyright protection. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 6. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 16.]

artistic work. Any visual representation, such as a painting, drawing, map, photograph, sculpture, engraving, or architectural plan.

audiovisual work. A work consisting of related images that are presented in a series, usu. with the aid of a machine, and accompanied by sound. • An example of an audiovisual work is a lecture illustrated with a filmstrip, or a movie with a soundtrack. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 10.1. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 15.]

collective work. 1. A publication (such as a periodical issue, anthology, or encyclopedia) in which several contributions, constituting separate and independent works in themselves, are assembled into a copyrightable whole. 2. A selection and arrangement of brief portions of different movies, television shows, or radio shows into a single copyrightable work. • If the selecting and arranging involves any originality, the person who selects and arranges the clips may claim a copyright even if copyright cannot be claimed in the individual component parts. Cf. COMPILATION(1).

“If a work is not joint and not derivative but nevertheless consists of works of authorship created by more than one person, it is a compilation of some sort except for the possibility that it is a work for hire.... If the component parts have an independent identity, that is, they are works of authorship, then the compilation is a collective work, a type of compilation.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 374 (2d ed. 1990).

composite work (k<<schwa>>m-poz-it). An original publication that relates to a variety of subjects and that includes discrete selections from many authors. • Although the distinguishable parts are separately protectable, the owner of the composite work — not the individual authors — owns the renewal term, if any. 17 USCA § 304(a).

creative work. See work of authorship.

derivative work. A copyrightable creation that is based on a preexisting product; a translation, musical arrangement, fictionalization, motion-picture version, abridgment, or any other recast or adapted form of an original work. • Only the holder of the copyright on the original form can produce or permit someone else to produce a derivative work. 17 USCA § 101. — Sometimes shortened to derivative. Cf. COMPILATION(1). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 12(3).]

“[W]hile a compilation consists merely of the selection and arrangement of pre-existing material without any internal changes in such material, a derivative work involves recasting or transformation, i.e., changes in the pre-existing material, whether or not it is juxtaposed in an arrangement with other pre-existing materials. A catalog constitutes a compilation, and a translation of a pre-existing work constitutes a derivative work.” 1 Melville B. Nimmer & David Nimmer, Nimmer on Copyright § 3.02, at 3–5 (Supp. 1997).

dramatic work. Any form of nonliterary work created for performance and viewing. • The term includes plays, scripts, films, choreographic works, and similar creations. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 7. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 13.]

joint work. A work created or developed by two or more people whose contributions blend inseparably or interdependently into the whole work. • The cocreators have equal legal rights to register and enjoy the copyright, but this does not affect any other contractually unequal ownership arrangements. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41(3).]

literary work. A nonaudiovisual work that is expressed in verbal, numerical, or other symbols, such as words or musical notation, and embodied in some type of physical object. • Literary works are one of eight general categories that are eligible for copyright protection. 17 USCA § 101. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 5. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 11.]

audiovisual works, expressed in words, numbers, or other verbal or numerical symbols or indicia, regardless of the nature of the material objects, such as books, periodicals, manuscripts, phonorecords, film, tapes, disks, or cards in which they are embodied. The term 'literary work' does not connote any criterion of literary merit or qualitative value and includes catalogs and directories; similar factual, reference or instructional works; compilations of data; computer data bases, and computer programs." 18 Am. Jur. 2d Copyright and Literary Property § 25, at 360 (1985).

pictorial, graphic, and sculptural work. Two- or three-dimensional works of graphic, fine, or applied art that are eligible for copyright protection. • This is one of eight general classifications covered by copyright law. Examples are globes, architectural drawings, photographs, and models. 17 USCA § 101. — Abbr. PGS. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 6. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 16.]

posthumous work. The product of an author who died before publication. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 33. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 31–32, 34, 94.]

pseudonymous work. A work done by an author who uses a fictitious name.

work for hire. A copyrightable work produced either by an employee within the scope of employment or by an independent contractor under a written agreement; esp., a work specially ordered or commissioned for use as (1) a contribution to a collective work, (2) a translation, (3) a supplementary work, (4) a part of a movie or other audiovisual work, (5) a compilation, (6) an instructional text, (7) a test, (8) answer material for a test, or (9) an atlas. • If the work is produced by an independent contractor, the parties must agree expressly in writing that the work will be a work for hire. The employer or commissioning party owns the copyright. — Also termed work made for hire. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41(2).]

work of authorship. The product of creative expression, such as literature, music, art, and graphic designs. • Copyright protects a work of authorship if it meets three criteria. First, the work must be original, not a copy. Second, the work must be presented in a fixed medium, such as a computer disk, a canvas, or paper. Finally, some creativity must have been involved in the work's creation, although the amount of creativity required depends on the particular work. — Also termed creative work. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 4. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property §§ 9–10, 16.]

work of the United States government. A work created by a U.S. government officer or employee in the course of performing official duties. • By statute, federal-government works may not be copyrighted. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 10.3. C.J.S. Copyrights and Intellectual Property § 18.]

work, vb. 1. To exert effort; to perform, either physically or mentally <lawyers work long hours during trial>. 2. To function properly; to produce a desired effect <the strategy worked>. 3. Patents. To develop and use (a patented invention, esp. to make it commercially available) <the patentee failed to work the patent>. • Failure to work a patent in a specified amount of time is grounds for a compulsory license in some countries. [Cases: Patents 191.]

C.J.S. Patents §§ 217, 314, 339.]

“A patentee has the exclusive right to make, use, or sell the invention. 35 U.S.C.A. § 154. The right includes the right to refrain from making, using, or selling the invention. In many foreign countries, the inventor is obliged to ‘work’ the patent and if he does not do so, he can be required to grant a compulsory license to others who wish to exploit the invention. But an American patentee is under no such duty, although there are antitrust implications involved in the failure to work a patent.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 128–29 (2d ed. 1990).

WORK AND LABOR

work and labor.Hist. A common count in an action of assumpsit for the work and labor performed and materials furnished by the plaintiff. See ASSUMPSIT. [Cases: Assumpsit, Action of 5. C.J.S. Assumpsit, Action of §§ 3, 6, 8.]

worker. 1. One who labors to attain an end; esp., a person employed to do work for another. 2. A person who offers to perform services for compensation in the employ of another, whether or not the person is so employed at a given time.

WORKER ADJUSTMENT AND RETRAINING NOTIFICATION ACT

Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act.A federal law that requires an employer to provide notice of a plant closing or mass layoff, 60 days before the closing or layoff, to the employees, the state-dislocated-workers unit, and the chief elected official of the unit of local government where the plant closing or layoff is to occur. 29 USCA §§ 2101–2109. — Abbr. WARN. [Cases: Labor Relations 7.1.]

workers' compensation.A system of providing benefits to an employee for injuries occurring in the scope of employment. • Most workers'-compensation statutes both hold the employer strictly liable and bar the employee from suing the employer in tort. — Abbr. WC. — Also termed workmen's compensation; employers' liability. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 11.C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 11–19.]

“Workers' compensation laws were designed to provide employees with expansive protection against the consequences of employment-related injuries. Injured workers no longer had to establish negligence attributable to their employer in order to obtain legal redress. They merely had to demonstrate that their conditions arose out of and during the course of their employment.” Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law § 7.3, at 406 (1994).

WORKERS'-COMPENSATION ACT

workers'-compensation act.A statute by which employers are made responsible for bodily harm to their workers arising out of and in the course of their employment, regardless of the fault of either the employee or the employer.

WORKERS'-COMPENSATION BOARD

workers'-compensation board. An agency that reviews cases arising under workers'-compensation statutes and administers the related rules and regulations. — Also termed workers'-compensation commission. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 1076–1096.10. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 700–729.]

“Workers' compensation boards ... are tribunals ... of limited and special jurisdiction and have only such authority and power as have been conferred upon them by express grant, or by implication as necessary and incidental to the full exercise of their authority. The functions of such agencies may include the settlement of disputes with respect to the right to and the amount of compensation, the supervision of voluntary settlements or agreements, the collection and administration of compensation funds, and the supervision and regulation of matters pertaining to compensation insurance.” 82 Am. Jur. 2d Workers' Compensation § 56, at 65 (1992).

WORKPLACE

workplace. A person's place of employment or work setting in general. See SAFE WORKPLACE .

work product. Tangible material or its intangible equivalent — in unwritten or oral form — that was either prepared by or for a lawyer or prepared for litigation, either planned or in progress. • Work product is generally exempt from discovery or other compelled disclosure. The term is also used to describe the products of a party's investigation or communications concerning the subject matter of a lawsuit if made (1) to assist in the prosecution or defense of a pending suit, or (2) in reasonable anticipation of litigation. Fed. R. Evid. 26. — Also termed attorney work product. [Cases: Criminal Law 627.5(6); Federal Civil Procedure 1600(3); Pretrial Procedure 35. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 449–450; Discovery § 29.]

core work product. See opinion work product.

fact work product. Tangible work product that includes facts but not an attorney's mental impressions. • Fact work product is subject to a qualified privilege. It is not discoverable unless the party seeking discovery can show a substantial need for the materials. See Fed. R. Evid. 26(b)(3). — Also termed ordinary work product.

opinion work product. Work product, tangible or intangible, that includes or reflects an attorney's thoughts, such as impressions, theories, and conclusions. • Opinion work product is almost wholly immune from discovery. Fed. R. Evid. 26(b)(3). — Also termed core work product.

ordinary work product. See fact work product.

WORK-PRODUCT RULE

work-product rule. The rule providing for qualified immunity of an attorney's work product from discovery or other compelled disclosure. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3). • The exemption was primarily established to protect an attorney's litigation strategy. Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 67 S.Ct. 385 (1947). — Also termed work-product immunity; work-product privilege; work-product exemption; attorney-work-product privilege. [Cases: Criminal Law 627.5(6); Federal Civil Procedure 1600(3); Pretrial Procedure 35. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 449–450; Discovery § 29.]

“Although the work-product rule has often been spoken of as creating a ‘privilege,’ it is a qualified one that does not grant full immunity from discovery. To the extent the term ‘privilege’ causes confusion between the work-product rule and the absolute privilege for confidential communications between attorney and client, it is important to keep in mind this distinction.... Rule 26(b)(3) provides that work-product material is subject to discovery ‘only upon a showing that the party seeking discovery has substantial need of the materials in the preparation of the party's case and that the party is unable without undue hardship to obtain the substantial equivalent of the materials by other means.’ ” 8 Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2025, at 371, 373–74 (2d ed. 1994).

WORK-RELEASE PROGRAM

work-release program. A correctional program allowing a prison inmate — primarily one being readied for discharge — to hold a job outside prison. — Also termed work-furlough program. See HALFWAY HOUSE. [Cases: Convicts 7(2). C.J.S. Convicts §§ 16–18.]

4.WORT.

WORTHIER-TITLE DOCTRINE

worthier-title doctrine. 1.Hist. The common-law doctrine that if a beneficiary of a will would receive an identical interest as an heir under the laws of intestacy, the person takes the interest as an heir rather than as a beneficiary. • The doctrine has been abolished in most states. [Cases: Wills 713. C.J.S. Wills § 1639.] 2.Property. The doctrine that favors a grantor's intent by construing a grant as a reversion in the grantor instead of as a remainder in the grantor's heirs. — Also termed doctrine of worthier title. See REMAINDER; REVERSION.

WORTHIEST OF BLOOD

worthiest of blood,n. Hist. Of or relating to males, because of the preference given them in the laws of descent. See PRIMOGENITURE.

“Thus sons shall be admitted before daughters; or, as our male lawgivers have somewhat uncomplaisantly expressed it, the worthiest blood shall be preferred. As if John Stiles hath two sons, Matthew and Gilbert, and two daughters, Margaret and Charlotte, and dies; first Matthew, and (in case of his death without issue) then Gilbert shall be admitted to the succession in preference to both the daughters.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 213 (1766).

writ (rit). A court's written order, in the name of a state or other competent legal authority, commanding the addressee to do or refrain from doing some specified act. [Cases: Injunction 202.]

“[W]rits have a long history. We can trace their formal origin to the Anglo-Saxon formulae by which the king used to communicate his pleasure to persons and courts. The Anglo-Norman writs, which we meet with after the Conquest, are substantially the Anglo-Saxon writs turned into Latin. But what is new is the much greater use made of them, owing to the increase of royal power which came with the Conquest.” W.S. Holdsworth, Sources and Literature of English Law 20 (1925).

alias writ. An additional writ issued after another writ of the same kind in the same case. • It derives its name from a Latin phrase that formerly appeared in alias writs: sicut alias praecipimus, meaning “as we at another time commanded.” Cf. alias execution under EXECUTION. [Cases: Process 45. C.J.S. Process §§ 24, 49.]

alternative writ. A common-law writ commanding the person against whom it is issued either to do a specific thing or to show cause why the court should not order it to be done. [Cases: Mandamus 158. C.J.S. Mandamus § 343.]

close writ. Hist. 1. A royal writ sealed because the contents were not deemed appropriate for public inspection. Cf. patent writ; CLAUSE ROLLS. 2. A writ directed to a sheriff instead of to a lord.

concurrent writ. A duplicate of an original writ (esp. a summons), issued either at the same time as the original writ or at any time while the original writ is valid.

counterpart writ. A copy of an original writ, to be sent to a court in another county where the defendant is located.

extraordinary writ. A writ issued by a court exercising unusual or discretionary power. • Examples are certiorari, habeas corpus, mandamus, and prohibition. — Also termed prerogative writ. [Cases: Courts 207.]

ground writ. Hist. A writ issued in a county having venue of an action in order to allow a writ of capias ad satisfaciendum or of fieri facias to be executed in a county where the defendant or the defendant's property was found. • These two writs could not be executed in a county other than the county having venue of the action until a ground writ and then a testatum writ were first issued. This requirement was abolished in 1852. Cf. TESTATUM.

judicial writ. 1. A writ issuing from the court to which the original writ was returnable; a writ issued under the private seal of the court and not under the great seal of England. Cf. original writ. 2. Any writ issued by a court.

junior writ. A writ issued at a later time than a similar writ, such as a later writ issued by a different party or a later writ on a different claim against the same defendant.

optional writ. At common law, an original writ issued when the plaintiff seeks specific damages, such as payment of a liquidated debt. • The writ commands the defendant either to do a specified thing or to show why the thing has not been done.

original writ. A writ commencing an action and directing the defendant to appear and answer. • In the United States, this writ has been largely superseded by the summons. At common law, this type of writ was a mandatory letter issuing from the court of chancery under the great seal, and in the king's name, directed to the sheriff of the county where the injury was alleged to have occurred, containing a summary statement of the cause of complaint, and requiring the sheriff in most cases to command the defendant to satisfy the claim or else appear in court to account for not satisfying it. — Sometimes shortened to original. See SUMMONS. [Cases: Process 8. C.J.S. Process § 12.]

patent writ (pay-t<<schwa>>nt). Hist. An open writ; one not closed or sealed up. Cf. close writ.

peremptory writ (p<<schwa>>r-emp-t<<schwa>>-ree). At common law, an original writ issued when the plaintiff seeks only general damages, as in an action for trespass. • The writ, which is issued only after the plaintiff gives security for costs, directs the sheriff to have the defendant appear in court. [Cases: Mandamus 179. C.J.S. Mandamus § 376.]

pluries writ. See PLURIES.

prerogative writ. See extraordinary writ.

testatum writ (tes-tay-t<<schwa>>m). See TESTATUM.

vicontiel writ (vI-kon-tee-<<schwa>>l). Hist. A writ triable in the county court. • In the 13th–14th centuries, civil litigation could originate in the county court either by oral plaint or by a writ from the Chancery ordering the sheriff to do justice in a case. The writ that began such a proceeding was called vicontiel because it was addressed to the sheriff. See VICONTIEL(2).

“Vicontiel writs were of two sorts, the one founded on Torts, the other on Contracts. The vicontiel writs adapted for torts, were those of trespass, replegiari facias, nuisance, and others of the like nature; and those of matters of contract were called writs of justices, which was a command to the sheriff to do justice between the parties” 1 George Crompton, Practice Common-Placed: Rules and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas vii–viii (3d ed. 1787).

writ of covenant.Hist. A writ for one claiming damages as a result of a breach of a promise under seal or other covenant. — Also termed breve de conventionne (breev orbree-vee dee k<<schwa>>n-ven-shee-oh-nee).

“The writ of covenant (breve de conventionne) is not mentioned by Glanvill; but it appears within a short time after the publication of his book and already in the early years of Henry III. It can be had ‘as of course,’ at all events when the tenement that is in question is of small value. Before Henry’s death it has become a popular writ The great majority of actions of covenant are brought merely in order that they may be compromised. We doubt whether any principle was involved in the choice; but may infer that the procedure instituted by this writ was cheap and expeditious for those who wished to get to their final concord.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 216–17 (2d ed. 1899).

“The writ of error is the most common of all the forms of remedial process available to an unsuccessful party after a final determination of the merits of the action, and is in common use in this country at the present time, where the common-law modes of procedure are followed. Its object ... is to obtain a reversal of the judgment, either by reason of some error in fact affecting the validity and regularity of the legal decision itself, or on account of some mistake or error in law, apparent upon the face of the record, from which the judgment appears to have been given for the wrong party.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 337, at 538 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

writ of error coram nobis. See CORAM NOBIS.

WRITTEN TESTIMONY

written testimony.See TESTIMONY.

WRITTEN WARRANTY

written warranty.See WARRANTY(2).

WRONG

wrong,n. Breach of one's legal duty; violation of another's legal right. [Cases: Torts 1. C.J.S. Torts §§ 2–7.] — wrong,vb.

“A wrong may be described, in the largest sense, as anything done or omitted contrary to legal duty, considered in so far as it gives rise to liability.” Frederick Pollock, A First Book of Jurisprudence 68 (1896).

“A wrong is simply a wrong act — an act contrary to the rule of right and justice. A synonym of it is injury, in its true and primary sense of injuria (that which is contrary to jus)” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 227 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

civil wrong.A violation of noncriminal law, such as a tort, a breach of contract or trust, a breach of statutory duty, or a defect in performing a public duty; the breach of a legal duty treated as the subject matter of a civil proceeding. Cf. CRIME.

continuing wrong.An ongoing wrong that is capable of being corrected by specific enforcement. • An example is the nonpayment of a debt.

intentional wrong. A wrong in which the mens rea amounts to intention, purpose, or design. — Also termed willful wrong.

legal wrong. An act that is a violation of the law; an act authoritatively prohibited by a rule of law.

moral wrong. An act that is contrary to the rule of natural justice. — Also termed natural wrong.

personal wrong. An invasion of a personal right.

positive wrong. A wrongful act willfully committed.

private wrong. An offense committed against a private person and dealt with at the instance of the person injured.

public wrong. An offense committed against the state or the community at large, and dealt with in a proceeding to which the state is itself a party. • Not all public wrongs are crimes. For example, a person that breaches a contract with the government commits a public wrong, but the offense is a civil one, not a criminal one.

real wrong. An injury to the freehold.

transitory wrong. A wrong that, once committed, belongs to the irrevocable past. • An example is defamation.

willful wrong. See intentional wrong.

wrong of negligence. A wrong in which the mens rea is a form of mere carelessness, as opposed to wrongful intent.

wrong of strict liability. A wrong in which a mens rea is not required because neither wrongful intent nor culpable negligence is a necessary condition of responsibility.

wrongdoer, n. One who violates the law <both criminals and tortfeasors are wrongdoers>. — wrongdoing, n.

WRONGFUL

wrongful, adj. 1. Characterized by unfairness or injustice <wrongful military invasion>. 2. Contrary to law; unlawful <wrongful termination>. 3. (Of a person) not entitled to the position occupied <wrongful possessor>. — wrongfully, adv.

WRONGFUL ACT

wrongful act. See WRONGFUL CONDUCT.

WRONGFUL ADOPTION

wrongful adoption. 1. An adoption in which the adoption agency fails to provide adoptive parents with full or accurate information regarding the child's physical or psychological background. • The adoptive parents normally do not seek to nullify the adoption. Rather, they seek damages, usu. for medical care and for emotional distress. 2. An adoptive parent's legal claim against an adoption agency for not fully or accurately disclosing the child's physical or psychological background. Cf. ABROGATION OF ADOPTION.

WRONGFUL-BIRTH ACTION

wrongful-birth action.A lawsuit brought by parents against a doctor for failing to advise them prospectively about the risks of their having a child with birth defects. [Cases: Health 687.]

WRONGFUL CONDUCT

wrongful conduct.See CONDUCT.

WRONGFUL-DEATH ACTION

wrongful-death action.A lawsuit brought on behalf of a decedent's survivors for their damages resulting from a tortious injury that caused the decedent's death. — Also termed death action; death case. Cf. SURVIVAL ACTION. [Cases: Death 7–12. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace § 273; Death §§ 17–31, 102.]

WRONGFUL-DEATH STATUTE

wrongful-death statute.A statute authorizing a decedent's personal representative to bring a wrongful-death action for the benefit of certain beneficiaries. — Formerly also termed death-damage statute. [Cases: Death 11. C.J.S. Death § 20.]

WRONGFUL DISCHARGE

wrongful discharge.See DISCHARGE(7).

WRONGFUL-DISCHARGE ACTION

wrongful-discharge action.A lawsuit brought by an ex-employee against the former employer, alleging that the termination of employment violated a contract or was illegal. — Also termed wrongful-termination action. [Cases: Master and Servant 30. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship §§ 35, 38–40, 42–43, 56, 60.]

WRONGFUL DISHONOR

wrongful dishonor,n. A refusal to accept or pay (a negotiable instrument) when it is properly presented and is payable. Cf. DISHONOR.

WRONGFUL-EVICTION ACTION

wrongful-eviction action.A lawsuit brought by a former tenant or possessor of real property against one who has put the plaintiff out of possession, alleging that the eviction was illegal.

WRONGFUL GARNISHMENT

wrongful garnishment. See GARNISHMENT.

WRONGFUL LEVY

wrongful levy. See LEVY.

WRONGFUL-LIFE ACTION

wrongful-life action. A lawsuit brought by or on behalf of a child with birth defects, alleging that but for the doctor-defendant's negligent advice, the parents would not have conceived the child or, if they had, would have aborted the fetus to avoid the pain and suffering resulting from the child's congenital defects. • Most jurisdictions reject these claims. [Cases: Health 687.]

WRONGFUL-PREGNANCY ACTION

wrongful-pregnancy action. A lawsuit brought by a parent for damages resulting from a pregnancy following a failed sterilization. — Also termed wrongful-conception action. [Cases: Health 686.]

WRONGFUL PROCESS

wrongful process. See ABUSE OF PROCESS.

WRONGFUL-TERMINATION ACTION

wrongful-termination action. See WRONGFUL-DISCHARGE ACTION.

WRONG OF NEGLIGENCE

wrong of negligence. See WRONG.

WRONG OF STRICT LIABILITY

Y2K WARRANTY

Y2K warranty. abbr. Year 2000 warranty; a warranty that software, hardware, or a product having computer hardware or software components will function properly on and after January 1, 2000. • These warranties were common in the late 1990s. [Cases: Sales 284(1). C.J.S. Sales §§

251, 253, 257.]

Year 2000 warranty. See Y2K WARRANTY.

YEAR, DAY, AND WASTE

year, day, and waste. Hist. A right of the Crown to the profits and waste for a year and a day of the land of persons convicted of petty treason or felony (unless the lord made redemption), after which the Crown had to restore the property to the lord of the fee. The right was abrogated by the Corruption of Blood Act of 1814. — Also termed (in Law French) ann, jour, et wast; (in Law Latin) annus, dies, et vastum.

YICK WO<TT> DOCTRINE

Yick Wo doctrine (yik woh). The principle that a law or ordinance giving a person or entity absolute discretion to grant or deny permission to carry on a lawful business violates the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886).

YOUR WITNESS

your witness. See TAKE THE WITNESS.

ZEALOUS WITNESS

zealous witness. See WITNESS.

X.

X.abbr.1.EX DIVIDEND. 2.EX RIGHTS. 3.EX DISTRIBUTION. 4.EX WARRANTS.

X. 1. A mark serving as the signature of a person who is physically handicapped or illiterate. • The signer's name usu. appears near the mark, and if the mark is to be notarized as a signature, two signing witnesses are ordinarily required in addition to the notary public. [Cases: Signatures 5.C.J.S. Signatures §§ 5, 8–11.] 2. A symbol equivalent to “by” when used in giving dimensions, as in 3 x 5 inches. 3. A mark placed on a document (such as an application) to indicate a selection, such as “yes” or “no”; esp., a mark on a ballot to indicate a vote.

XD.abbr.EX DIVIDEND.

XDIS.abbr.EX DISTRIBUTION.

xenodochium (zen-⟨schwa⟩-d⟨schwa⟩-ki-⟨schwa⟩m or -dok-ee-⟨schwa⟩m), n.[fr. Greek xenos “a guest” + dochein “to receive”] Roman law. 1. An inn. 2. A hospital. • This was a charitable institution to which donations and legacies might validly be given. — Also termed xenodochion; xenodocheum; xenodochy.

X-PATENT

X-patent.Patents. An early U.S. patent, granted before the numbering system set up in the Patent Act of 1836 and so named because an X was added to the numbers of existing patents to avoid duplicate numbers.

XQ. See cross-question under QUESTION(1).

XR

XR.abbr.EXRIGHTS.

XW

XW.abbr.EXWARRANTS.

xylon (zI-lon), n.[fr. Greek xulon “wood”] Archaic. A Greek punishment apparatus similar to stocks.

XYY-CHROMOSOME DEFENSE

XYY-chromosome defense. Criminal law. A defense, usu. asserted as the basis for an insanity plea, whereby a male defendant argues that his criminal behavior is due to the genetic abnormality of having an extra Y chromosome, which causes him to have uncontrollable aggressive impulses.

- Most courts have rejected this defense because its scientific foundations are uncertain. — Also termed XYY defense. See INSANITY DEFENSE.

“As one commentator has suggested ... ‘an attorney defending an XYY individual will be required to call upon both a geneticist and a psychiatrist to give expert testimony. The geneticist's role would be to testify with respect to the individual's genetic structure, any distinguishing characteristics which are relevant to an insanity defense, and the result of family studies designated to determine the influence of genetics and environment on the development of this individual. The psychiatrist's testimony would focus upon the defendant's mental capacity or condition.’ But in the absence of sound medical support for an XYY defense, courts are understandably unsympathetic to defense efforts to obtain such expert testimony.” Wayne R. LaFare & Austin W. Scott Jr., Criminal Law § 4.8, at 380 (2d ed. 1986) (quoting Note, 57 Geo. L.J. 892, 902–03 (1969)).

XYY SYNDROME

XYY syndrome. The abnormal presence of an extra Y chromosome in a male, theoretically resulting in increased aggressiveness and antisocial behavior often resulting in criminal conduct.

Y.Y2K WARRANTY

Y2K warranty.abbr.Year 2000 warranty; a warranty that software, hardware, or a product having computer hardware or software components will function properly on and after January 1, 2000. • These warranties were common in the late 1990s. [Cases: Sales 284(1). C.J.S. Sales §§ 251, 253, 257.]

yank-cheating,n. The illegal practice of inserting paper money into a vending machine, then pulling the money out again after the machine has recognized it, thereby retaining the cash and unlawfully obtaining merchandise.

YARDLAND

yardland,n. Hist. A variable quantity of land, often 20 acres. — Also termed virga terrae (v<<schwa>>r-g<<schwa>> ter-ee).

YARDSTICK THEORY

yardstick theory.Antitrust. A method of determining damages for lost profits (and sometimes overcharges) whereby a corporate plaintiff identifies a company similar to the plaintiff but without the impact of the antitrust violation. Cf. BEFORE-AND-AFTER THEORY; MARKET-SHARE THEORY.

“To the extent that either the markets or firms being compared are dissimilar, the yardstick theory will not produce a trustworthy estimate of what the plaintiff would have earned but for the defendant's conduct. The method therefore works best in markets that are both local and relatively homogeneous.” Herbert Hovenkamp, Economics and Federal Antitrust Law § 16.7, at 454 (1985).

YEA

yea,n. Parliamentary law. An affirmative vote.

YEA AND NAY

yea and nay (yay / nay). Yes and no. • In old records, this was a mere assertion and denial without the necessity of an oath.

year. 1. Twelve calendar months beginning January 1 and ending December 31. — Also termed calendar year. 2. A consecutive 365-day period beginning at any point; a span of twelve months. [Cases: Time 4. C.J.S. Time § 5.]

fiscal year.An accounting period of 12 consecutive months <the company's fiscal year is half-year. In legal computation, a period of 182 days.

October 1 to September 30>. • A fiscal year is often different from the calendar year, esp. for tax purposes. — Also termed fiscal period.

natural year.Hist. The period of 365 days and about 6 hours, or the time it takes the earth to orbit the sun.

tax year.The period used for computing federal or state income-tax liability, usu. either the calendar year or a fiscal year of 12 months ending on the last day of a month other than December. — Also termed taxable year. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3075–3093; Taxation 1038, 1078. C.J.S. Internal Revenue §§ 21, 41–43, 45, 51–55, 78, 334, 670; Taxation §§ 1738–1755, 1759.]

Year 2000 warranty.See Y2K WARRANTY.

year and a day.The common-law time limit fixed for various purposes, such as claiming rights, exemptions, or property (such as rights to wreckage or estrays) or for prosecuting certain acts — so called because a year was formerly counted to include the first and last day, meaning that a year from January 1 was December 31, so a year and a day would then mean a full year from January 1 through January 1. — Also termed year and day; (formerly in Scots law) zeir and day. See YEAR-AND-A-DAY RULE; YEAR, DAY, AND WASTE.

YEAR-AND-A-DAY RULE

year-and-a-day rule.Criminal law. The common-law principle that an act causing death is not homicide if the death occurs more than a year and a day after the act was committed. • In Latin, the phrase year and a day was commonly rendered annus et dies. [Cases: Homicide 510.]

“It has long been the rule that no one can be convicted of the murder or manslaughter of another person who does not die within a year and a day of the blow received or other cause of death. ‘Day’ was here added merely to indicate that the 365th day after that of the injury must be included. Such an indication was rendered necessary by an old rule (now obsolete) that, in criminal law, in reckoning a period ‘from’ the doing of any act, the period was (in favour of prisoners) to be taken as beginning on the very day when this act was done.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 105 (16th ed. 1952).

“The phrase ‘year and a day,’ in this test [for proving causation of a person's death], means no more than a year. The accepted method of computing time today is by excluding the first day and including the last. Thus a year from January first is the first day of the following January. In ancient times, however, there was a tendency to include both the first day and the last day so that a year from January first was thought of as the thirty-first of the following December, and ‘the day was added that there might be a whole year.’ The use of this peculiar phrase to mean just a year in the homicide cases has found expression in some of the statutes. Other enactments have wisely dropped this ancient jingle.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 778 (3d ed.

“Several centuries ago, when doctors knew very little about medicine, the judges created an absolute rule of law: one cannot be guilty of murder if the victim lives for a year and a day after the blow. The difficulty in proving that the blow caused the death after so long an interval was obviously the basis of the rule. Now that doctors know infinitely more, it seems strange that the year-and-a-day rule should survive to the present, but it has done so in most of the American states, either by judicial decision or by statute.” Wayne R. LaFave & Austin W. Scott Jr., Criminal Law § 3.12, at 299 (2d ed. 1986).

“The year and a day rule is widely viewed as an outdated relic of the common law.” Rogers v. Tennessee, 532 U.S. 451, 462, 121 S.Ct. 1693, 1701 (2001)(O'Connor, J.).

year and day. See YEAR AND A DAY.

YEAR BOOKS

Year Books. Hist. Books of cases anonymously and fairly regularly reported covering primarily the period from the reign of Edward I to the time of Henry VIII. • The title “Year Books” derives from their being grouped under the regnal years of the sovereigns in whose reigns the reported cases were cited. The reports were probably originally prepared by law teachers and students and later by professional reporters or scribes. — Also written Year-Books; year-books; yearbooks. — Also termed terms. Cf. ABBREVIATIO PLACITORUM.

“[F]rom 1300 there is a continuous stream of reports of arguments in the common Pleas. The reports were written in Anglo-French, the language of courtly speech. Their authorship is unknown, and they are referred to by the generic name ‘year-books’ If we have to account for their beginning, the most likely explanation is that they arose from a case-method of instruction in the law school which served the apprentices of the Bench before the emergence of the inns of court For the same reason, the contemporary value of the earliest reports lay not in their historical authenticity as precedents but in the ideas and suggestions which they contained Once the age of experiment was over, the reports settled into a more uniform and at times apparently single series The year-books did not end at any fixed date. What has usually been taken as their end is the result of two concurrent factors: the advent of printing, and the practice of identifying reports by the name of the author.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 205–07 (3d ed. 1990).

year, day, and waste. Hist. A right of the Crown to the profits and waste for a year and a day of the land of persons convicted of petty treason or felony (unless the lord made redemption), after which the Crown had to restore the property to the lord of the fee. The right was abrogated by the Corruption of Blood Act of 1814. — Also termed (in Law French) ann, jour, et wast; (in Law Latin) annus, dies, et vastum.

Yick Wo doctrine (yik woh). The principle that a law or ordinance giving a person or entity absolute discretion to grant or deny permission to carry on a lawful business violates the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886).

YIELD

yield,n. Profit expressed as a percentage of the investment. — Also termed yield on investment; return. See RATE OF RETURN.

coupon yield.The annual interest paid on a security (esp. a bond) divided by the security's par value. — Also termed nominal yield.

current yield.The annual interest paid on a security (esp. a bond) divided by the security's current market price.

discount yield.The yield on a security sold at a discount.

earnings yield.The earnings per share of a security divided by its market price. • The higher the ratio, the better the investment yield. — Also termed earnings-price ratio. Cf. PRICE-EARNINGS RATIO.

net yield.The profit or loss on an investment after deducting all appropriate costs and loss reserves.

nominal yield.See coupon yield.

yield,vb.1. To give up, relinquish, or surrender (a right, etc.) <yield the floor>.2.Parliamentary law. (Of a motion) to give way to a higher-ranking motion. Cf. PRECEDENCE(3).

3.Hist. To perform a service owed by a tenant to a lord <yield and pay>.

ZERO-BRACKET AMOUNT

zero-bracket amount.A tax deduction formerly available to all individual taxpayers, regardless of whether they itemized their deductions. • In 1944 this was replaced by the standard deduction. — Abbr. ZBA. See standard deduction under DEDUCTION.

ZERO-COUPON BOND

zero-coupon bond.See BOND(3).

ZERO-COUPON SECURITY

zero-coupon security.See SECURITY.

ZERO-RATE MORTGAGE

zero-rate mortgage.See MORTGAGE.

ZERO-TOLERANCE POLICY

zero-tolerance policy.An established plan or method of action stating that certain acts will not be permitted or condoned. • School districts often have a zero-tolerance policy regarding the use of drugs and alcohol on school premises or at school-sponsored functions. In 1995 Congress enacted a nationwide zero-tolerance statute to combat underage drinking.

zetetic (zi-tet-ik), adj. Hist. Proceeding by inquiry; investigative. — Also spelled zetetick.

ZIFT.abbr.ZYGOTE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER.

zipper clause.Contracts. A contractual provision that operates both as an integration clause and as a no-oral-modification clause. See INTEGRATION CLAUSE ; NO-ORAL-MODIFICATION CLAUSE.

“[A] ‘zipper clause’ ... so called because the combination of the integration clause and the no-oral-modification clause is intended to foreclose claims of any representations outside the written contract” Pace v. Honolulu Disposal Serv., 227 F.3d 1150, 1159 (9th Cir. 2000).

ZONE

zone. 1. An area that is different or is distinguished from surrounding areas < zone of danger>.2. An area in a city or town that, through zoning regulations, is under particular restrictions as to building size, land use, and the like <the capitol is at the center of the height-restriction zone>. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 31. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 40, 42.]

holding zone.Temporary, low-density zoning used until a community determines how the area should be rezoned.

ZONE-OF-DANGER RULE

zone-of-danger rule.Torts. The doctrine allowing the recovery of damages for negligent infliction of emotional distress if the plaintiff was both located in the dangerous area created by the defendant's negligence and frightened by the risk of harm. [Cases: Damages 49.10. C.J.S. Damages § 95; Torts §§ 67, 76–79, 82–83.]

ZONE OF EMPLOYMENT

zone of employment.Workers' compensation. The physical place of employment within which an employee, if injured there, can receive compensation. Cf. COURSE OF EMPLOYMENT; SCOPE OF EMPLOYMENT. [Cases: Workers' Compensation 604–618, 710–755. C.J.S. Workmen's Compensation §§ 365–373, 376–387, 425–432, 435–447.]

ZONE OF INTERESTS

zone of interests.The class or type of interests or concerns that a statute or constitutional guarantee is intended to regulate or protect. • To have standing to challenge a ruling (esp. of an administrative agency), the plaintiff must show that the specific injury suffered comes within the zone of interests protected by the statute on which the ruling was based. [Cases: Action 13; Administrative Law and Procedure 666; Federal Civil Procedure 103.2. C.J.S. Actions §§ 57–63.]

ZONE OF PRIVACY

zone of privacy.Constitutional law. A range of fundamental privacy rights that are implied in the express guarantees of the Bill of Rights. See PENUMBRA; RIGHT OF PRIVACY. [Cases:

Constitutional Law 82(7). C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 584, 630–648; Right to Die § 2.]

zone search. See SEARCH.

zoning, n. The legislative division of a region, esp. a municipality, into separate districts with different regulations within the districts for land use, building size, and the like. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 1, 4. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 2–3, 5–7, 10, 17–18, 85.] — zone, vb.

aesthetic zoning. Zoning designed to preserve the aesthetic features or values of an area. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 36. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 45.]

bonus zoning. See incentive zoning.

cluster zoning. Zoning that favors planned-unit development by allowing a modification in lot size and frontage requirements under the condition that other land in the development be set aside for parks, schools, or other public needs. — Also termed density zoning. See PLANNED-UNIT DEVELOPMENT. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 85, 245. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 46, 101.]

conditional zoning. Zoning in which a governmental body (without definitively committing itself) grants a zoning change subject to conditions that are usu. not imposed on similarly zoned property. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 382, 382.1. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 195–197.]

“Conditions imposed are designed to protect adjacent land from the loss of use value which might occur if the newly authorized use was permitted without restraint of any kind. Thus, conditional zoning seeks to minimize the potentially deleterious effect of a zone change on neighboring properties through reasonably conceived conditions which harmonize the landowner's need for rezoning with the public interest.” 83 Am. Jur. 2d Zoning and Planning § 218, at 193 (1992).

contextual zoning. An approach to zoning that considers appropriate use of a lot based on the scale and types of nearby buildings. • Contextual zoning has been used, for example, to prevent the destruction of older, smaller residences to make room for larger houses disparagingly called “monster homes” or “McMansions” in established neighborhoods.

contract zoning. 1. Zoning according to an agreement, by which the landowner agrees to certain restrictions or conditions in exchange for more favorable zoning treatment. • This type of contract zoning is usu. considered an illegal restraint of the government's police power, because by private agreement, the government has committed itself to a particular type of zoning. 2. Rezoning of property to a less restrictive classification subject to the landowner's agreement to observe specified limitations on the use and physical development of the property that are not imposed on other property in the zone. • This device is esp. used when property is located in a more restrictive zone that borders on a less restrictive zone. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 160. C.J.S. Zoning and cumulative zoning.A method of zoning in which any use permitted in a higher-use, less intensive zone is per-missible in a lower-use, more intensive zone. • For example, under this method, a house could be built in an industrial zone but a factory could not be built in a residential zone.

density zoning.See cluster zoning.

Euclidean zoning (yoo-klid-ee-<<schwa>>n). Zoning by specific and uniform geographical division. • This type of zoning takes its name from the Supreme Court case that approved it: Village of Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co., 272 U.S. 365, 47 S.Ct. 114 (1926). — Also termed use zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 1, 31. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 2, 5–7, 17–18, 40, 42.]

“Operating from the premise that everything has its place, zoning is the comprehensive division of a city into different use zones. Use zoning is also known as Euclidean zoning, taking the name from the leading case of Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co., which upheld its validity.... In the typical zoning ordinance each zone has three varieties of uses: permitted, accessory and conditional. Ordinances may also specifically prohibit some uses.” Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer & Thomas E. Roberts, Land Use Planning and Development Regulation Law § 4.2, at 69 (2003).

exclusionary zoning.Zoning that excludes a specific class type of business from a district. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 1. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 2, 5–7, 17–18.]

floating zoning.Zoning that creates exceptional-use districts, as needed, within ordinary zoned districts.

incentive zoning.A relaxation in zoning restrictions (such as density limits) that offer an incentive to a developer to provide certain public benefits (such as building low-income housing units). — Also termed bonus zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 382.1. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 197.]

interim zoning.Temporary emergency zoning pending revisions to existing ordinances or the development of a final zoning plan. — Also termed stopgap zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 22. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 16.]

inverse zoning.Zoning that attempts to disperse particular types of property use rather than concentrate them.

partial zoning.Zoning that affects only a portion of a municipality's territory, and that is usu. invalid because it contradicts the comprehensive zoning plan. — Also termed piecemeal zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 35. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning § 44.]

private zoning.The use of restrictive covenants in private agreements to restrict the use and occupancy of real property. • Private zoning often covers such things as lot size, building lines, architectural specifications, and property uses. [Cases: Covenants 1. C.J.S. Covenants §§ 2–3.]

reverse spot zoning.Zoning of a large area of land without regard for the zoning of a small piece of land within that area. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 35, 162. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 44, 74.]

“When parcels around a given property are rezoned to allow for higher uses leaving an island of less intensive use, reverse spot zoning is the result.” Donald G. Hagman & Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer, Urban Planning and Land Development Control Law § 5.4, at 136 (2d ed. 1986).

spot zoning. Zoning of a particular piece of land without regard for the zoning of the larger area surrounding the land. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 35, 162. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 44, 74.]

“To the popular mind, spot zoning means the improper permission to use an ‘island’ of land for a more intensive use than permitted on adjacent properties. The popular definition needs several qualifications The set of facts usually involves an ‘island’ of more intensive use than surrounding property Usually the ‘island’ is small Furthermore, the term is not properly applied to development permission that comes about by variance or special exception. Rather, the term refers to a legislative act, such as a rezoning, or to a situation in which the ‘island’ is created by the original ordinance.” Donald G. Hagman & Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer, Urban Planning and Land Development Control Law § 5.4, at 136 (2d ed. 1986).

stopgap zoning. See interim zoning.

use zoning. See Euclidean zoning.

zoning map. The map that is created by a zoning ordinance and shows the various zoning districts. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 30. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 2, 5, 12, 39.]

ZONING ORDINANCE

zoning ordinance. A city ordinance that regulates the use to which land within various parts of the city may be put. • It allocates uses to the various districts of a municipality, as by allocating residences to certain parts and businesses to other parts. A comprehensive zoning ordinance usually regulates the height of buildings and the proportion of the lot area that must be kept free from buildings. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 4, 21. C.J.S. Zoning and Land Planning §§ 3, 5–7, 10, 18–19, 37, 85.]

ZONING VARIANCE

zoning variance. See VARIANCE(2).

zygnomic (zig-noh-mik), adj. Of, relating to, or involving an act whose evolution directly abridges the freedom of a person who bears a duty in the enjoyment of a legal advantage. • This rather abstract term was coined by the philosopher Albert Kocourek in his book Jural Relations (1927). Cf. MESONOMIC.

zygocephalum (zI-g<<schwa>>-sef-<<schwa>>-l<<schwa>>m), n.[Greek fr. zygo- “yoke, pair” + kephalos “head”] Hist. A measure of land, esp. the amount that can be plowed in one day.

zygostates (zI-goh-stay-teez), n.[Greek] Roman law. An officer who resolved controversies over weight; a public weigher.

zygote. A two-celled organism formed by the joining of egg and sperm. Cf. EMBRYO; FETUS.

ZYGOTE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER

zygote intrafallopian transfer. A procedure in which mature eggs are fertilized in a test tube or petri dish and then injected into a woman's fallopian tubes. — Abbr. ZIFT. — Also termed zygote intrafallopian-tube transfer. Cf. ARTIFICIAL INSEMINATION; GAMETE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER; IN VITRO FERTILIZATION .

Appendix A. Table Of Legal Abbreviations

L. Kurt Adamson

This table is a working table of abbreviations, i.e., abbreviations cited in American cases, books, articles, and texts, and not restricted to standard abbreviations found in legal citation manuals. The scope of abbreviations includes the names of common federal and state primary sources, legal periodicals, treatises, and organizations, as well as selected words or phrases commonly found in American publications from the 19th century forward. There are also selected abbreviations for English, Canadian, Australian, and international sources.

The table has unique features in its two-part format. The main table lists fuller publication titles than may be found in other abbreviation tables. The second part lists the full names of individual authors referred to in the main abbreviation table. These fuller titles and author names may help in finding publications through a library catalog.

Not every variation for a publication's abbreviation is listed. But the table can be used to interpret abbreviations not listed. First, the same publication or organization may be abbreviated with or without periods, such as ("UPA" or "U.P.A." This table lists only one version. Second, standardized citations and abbreviations were not adopted until the 20th century. For example, Willard Phillips's Treatise on the Law of Evidence is cited in various sources as:

Phillips on Evidence

Phillips, Evidence

Phillips, Ev.

Phil. Ev.

So the reader may use this table's information to interpret other variations of a publication's abbreviation. Many 19th-century treatises were published in numerous editions. Other parts of the citation are therefore essential to identify which edition of a work is being cited. Furthermore, the format "author on _____" (such as Phillips on Evidence) was a common citation practice throughout the 19th and early 20th centuries, even though it was only a common shorthand for the work or perhaps the title that appeared on its spine, but not the formal title of the work as found on its title page. Thus, this table provides at least the beginning portion of treatises titles.

The table is arranged in alphabetical order as if each abbreviation were one word without punctuation or spacing. Organizations are commonly cited without periods in their abbreviations. If an author's name is abbreviated, the full last name precedes the listed title. An author's initials are also included if more than one author with the same last name appears in the table. Finally, the ampersand (&) is treated, for purposes of order, as the word "and" in the abbreviation.

This table is not intended to be comprehensive. Other abbreviations may be found in the following sources: Mary M. Prince, Bieber's Dictionary of Legal Abbreviations: A Reference Guide for Attorneys, Legal Secretaries, Paralegals and Law Students (5th ed. 2001), Donald Raistrick, Index to Legal Citations and Abbreviations (2d ed. 1993), Charles C. Soule, The Lawyer's Reference Manual (1884), or John G. Marvin, Legal Bibliography, or A Thesaurus of American, English, Irish and Scotch Law Books (1847). For non-English language abbreviations, see Bieber and Raistrick, above, but also Igor I. Kavass & Mary M. Prince, A World Dictionary of Legal Abbreviations (1991-) or Arturo L. Torres & Francisco Avalos, Latin American Legal Abbreviations: A Comprehensive Spanish/Portuguese Dictionary with English Translations (1989).

Appendix B. Legal Maxims

In the first edition of this dictionary, published in 1891, Henry Campbell Black remarked that the book contained “a complete collection of legal maxims,” adding: “These have not been grouped in one body, but distributed in their proper alphabetical order through the book. This is believed to be the more convenient arrangement” (p. iv). Although it might indeed have been more convenient for readers who knew the maxims they wanted to look up — as 19th-century readers might have been apt to — spreading Latin sentences throughout the book is decidedly inconvenient for most dictionary users today. We have therefore collected them for ease of reference. A bibliography of works cited appears on page _____.

Of course, many scholars have long been intolerant of those who use maxims to decide cases. As James Fitzjames Stephen, one of the great 19th-century legal scholars, incisively put it before Black's work appeared: It seems to me that legal maxims in general are little more than pert headings of chapters. They are rather minims than maxims, for they give not a particularly great but a particularly small amount of information. As often as not, the exceptions and disqualifications to them are more important than the so-called rules. FN1

Other scholars have been equally derisive. FN2

But there is an element of fun in legal maxims: they sometimes express surprising insights — and these from ancient writers. Though they will not clinch arguments, they will delight many readers who have a historical bent.

— B.A.G.

Ab abusu ad usum non valet consequentia. A conclusion about the use of a thing from its abuse is invalid.

Ab assuetis non fit injuria. No injury is done by things long acquiesced in.

Abbreviationum ille numerus et sensus accipiendus est ut concessio non sit inanis. Such number and sense is to be given to abbreviations that the grant may not be void.

Absentem accipere debemus eum qui non est eo loco in quo petitur.We must consider a person absent who is not in that place in which he is sought.

Absentia ejus qui reipublicae causa abest neque ei neque alii damnosa esse debet.The absence of a person who is abroad in service to the state ought to be prejudicial neither to that person nor to another. Dig. 50.17.140.

Absoluta sententia expositore non indiget.A simple proposition needs no expositor.

Abundans cautela non nocet.Abundant caution does no harm.

Accessorium non ducit, sed sequitur, suum principale.An accessory does not lead, but follows, its principal.

Accessorium non trahit principale.The accessory does not carry the principal with it.

Accessorius sequitur naturam sui principalis.An accessory follows the nature of his principal.

Accipere quid ut justitiam facias non est tam accipere quam extorquere.To accept anything as a reward for doing justice is rather extorting than accepting.

Accusare nemo debet se, nisi coram Deo.No one is obliged to accuse himself, except before God.

Accusator post rationabile tempus non est audiendus, nisi se bene de omissione excusaverit.A person who makes an accusation after a reasonable time has passed is not to be heard unless the person makes a satisfactory excuse for the omission.

A communi observantia non est recedendum.Common observance (or usage) is not to be departed from.

A communi observantia non est recedendum et minime mutandae sunt quae certam interpretationem habent.Common observance is not to be departed from, and things that have certain meaning are to be changed as little as possible.

Acta exteriora indicant interiora secreta.Outward acts indicate the thoughts hidden within.

Acta in uno judicio non probant in alio nisi inter easdem personas.Things done in one action cannot be taken as evidence in another, unless it is between the same parties.

Actio non datur non damnificato.An action is not given to one who is not injured.

Actio non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea.An act does not make a person guilty unless the mind is guilty. • Properly, Actus non reum (q.v.). Cases: [Criminal Law  20. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 31–33, 35–39; Negligence § 913.]

Actionum genera maxime sunt servanda.The kinds of actions are especially to be preserved.

Actio personalis moritur cum persona.A personal action dies with the person. Cases: [Abatement and Revival  52. C.J.S. Abatement and Revival §§ 130–142, 146, 148, 151–154; Right of Privacy and Publicity § 42.]

Actio quaelibet it sua via.Every action proceeds in its own course.

Actore non probante, reus absolvitur.If the plaintiff does not prove his case, the defendant is acquitted.

Actori incumbit onus probandi.The burden of proof rests on the plaintiff.

Actor qui contra regulam quid adduxit non est audiendus.A pleader ought not to be heard who advances a proposition contrary to the rule (of law).

Actor sequitur forum rei.The plaintiff follows the forum of the defendant.

Actus curiae neminem gravabit.An act of the court will prejudice no one.

Actus Dei nemini facit injuriam.An act of God does wrong to no one. • That is, no one is responsible in damages for inevitable accidents.

Actus Dei nemini nocet.An act of God does wrong to no one.

Actus inceptus cujus perfectio pendet ex voluntate partium revocari potest; si autem pendet ex voluntate tertiae personae, vel ex contingenti, revocari non potest.An act already begun whose completion depends on the will of the parties may be recalled; but if it depends on consent of a third person or on a contingency, it cannot be recalled.

Actus judicarius coram non iudice irritus habetur; de ministeriali autem a quocunque provenit ratum esto.A judicial act before one not a judge (or without jurisdiction) is void; as to a ministerial act, from whomsoever it proceeds, let it be valid.

*Actus legis nemini est damnosus.*An act of the law prejudices no one.

*Actus legis nemini facit injuriam.*An act of the law does no one wrong.

*Actus legitimi non recipiunt modum.*Acts required by law admit of no qualification.

*Actus me invito factus non est meus actus.*An act done (by me) against my will is not my act.

*Actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea.*An act does not make a person guilty unless the mind is guilty; an act does not make the doer criminal unless his mind is criminal. • Coke gives the maxim in a slightly different form: Actus non reum facit nisi mens sit rea. 3 Co. Inst. 54; 107.

*Actus repugnans non potest in esse produci.*A repugnant act cannot be brought into being (that is, cannot be made effectual).

*Actus servi, in iis quibus opera ejus communiter adhibita est, actus domini habetur.*The act of a servant in those things in which he is usually employed is considered the act of his master.

*Additio probat minoritatem.*An addition proves inferiority. • That is, if it be said that a person has a fee tail, it is less than if the person has the fee.

*Ad ea quae frequentius accidunt jura adaptantur.*The laws are adapted to those cases that occur more frequently.

*A digniori fieri debet denominatio et resolutio.*The denomination and explanation ought to be derived from the more worthy.

*Adjuvari quippe nos, non decipi, beneficio oportet.*Surely we ought to be helped by a benefit, not be entrapped by it.

*Ad officium justiciariorum spectat unicuique coram eis placitanti justitiam exhibere.*It is the duty of justices to administer justice to everyone pleading before them.

*Ad proximum antecedens fiat relatio, nisi impediatur sententia.*A relative is to be referred to the nearest antecedent, unless prevented by the sense.

*Ad quaestiones facti non respondent iudices; ad quaestiones legis non respondent juratores.*Judges do not answer questions of fact; jurors do not answer questions of law.

Ad quaestiones legis iudices, et non juratores, respondent.Judges, and not jurors, answer questions of law.

Ad recte docendum oportet primum inquirere nomina, quia rerum cognitio a nominibus rerum dependet.In order rightly to comprehend a thing, it is necessary first to inquire into the names, for a right knowledge of things depends on their names.

Ad reges enim potestas omnium pertinet; ad singulos, proprietas.Kings have (political) power over all things, while individuals own them.

Adversus extraneos vitiosa possessio prodesse solet.Possession though faulty is usually sufficient against outsiders. • Prior possession is a good title of ownership against all who cannot show a better.

Ad vim majorem vel ad casus fortuitos non tenetur quis, nisi sua culpa intervenerit.No one is held to answer for the effects of superior force or accidents, unless his own fault has contributed.

Aedificare in tuo proprio solo non licet quod alteri noceat.It is not lawful to build on one's own land what may be injurious to another.

Aedificatum solo solo cedit.What is built on the land goes with the land.

Aedificia solo cedunt.Buildings go with the land.

Aequior est dispositio legis quam hominis.The law's disposition is more impartial than man's.

Aequitas agit in personam.Equity acts on the person.

Aequitas est correctio legis generaliter latae qua parte deficit.Equity is the correction of some part of the law where by reason of its generality it is defective.

Aequitas est perfecta quaedam ratio quae jus scriptum interpretatur et emendat; nulla scriptura comprehensa, sed sola ratione consistens.Equity is a sort of perfect reason that interprets and amends written law; comprehended in no written text, but consisting of reason alone.

Aequitas est quasi equalitas.Equity is as it were equality.

*Aequitas ignorantiae opitulatur, oscitantiae non item.*Equity assists ignorance but not complacency (or carelessness).

*Aequitas non facit jus, sed juri auxiliatur.*Equity does not create a right, but aids the right.

*Aequitas nunquam contravenit leges.*Equity never contravenes the laws.

*Aequitas sequitur legem.*Equity follows the law. Cases: [Equity  62.C.J.S. Equity § 118.]

*Aequitas supervacua odit.*Equity abhors superfluous things.

*Aequum et bonum est lex legum.*What is equitable and good is the law of laws.

*Aestimatio praeteriti delicti ex postremo facto nunquam crescit.*The assessment of a past offense never increases from a subsequent fact.

*Affectio tua nomen imponit operi tuo.*Your motive gives a name to your act.

*Affectus punitur licet non sequatur effectus.*The intention is punished even if the object is not achieved.

*Affinis dicitur, cum duae cognationes, inter se divisae, per nuptias copulantur, et altera ad alterius fines accidit.*Persons are said to be bound by affinity when two families, divided from one another, are united by marriage, and each approaches the borders of the other.

*Affinis mei affinis non est mihi affinis.*A person connected by marriage to someone connected by marriage to me is no connection of mine.

*Affirmanti, non neganti, incumbit probatio.*The proof is incumbent on the one who affirms, not on the one who denies.

*Affirmantis est probare.*The person who affirms must prove.

*Agentes et consentientes pari poena plectentur.*Acting and consenting parties will be liable to the same punishment.

*A jure suo cadunt.*They fall from their right. • That is, they lose their right.

*A justitia (quasi a quodam fonte) omnia jura emanant.*From justice (as from a fountain) all rights flow.

*Aliena negotia exacto officio geruntur.*The business of another is conducted with scrupulous attention.

*Alienatio licet prohibeatur, consensu tamen omnium in quorum favorem prohibita est potest fieri; et quilibet potest renunciare juri pro se introducto.*Even if alienation is prohibited, it may yet take place by the consent of all in whose favor it is prohibited; it is in the power of anyone to renounce a right introduced for his own benefit.

*Alienatio rei praefertur juri accrescendi.*Alienation of property is favored over the right to accumulate.

*A l'impossible nul n'est tenu.*No one is bound to do what is impossible.

*Aliquid conceditur ne injuria remaneat impunita quod alias non concederetur.*Something is conceded that otherwise would not be conceded, so that a wrong not remain unpunished.

*Aliquis non debet esse judex in propria causa, quia non potest esse judex et pars.*A person ought not to be judge in his own cause, because he cannot act both as judge and party.

*Aliud est celare, aliud tacere.*To conceal is one thing, to be silent another.

*Aliud est distinctio, aliud separatio.*Distinction is one thing, separation another.

*Aliud est possidere, aliud esse in possessione.*It is one thing to possess, another to be in possession.

*Aliud est vendere, aliud vendenti consentire.*To sell is one thing, to give consent to the seller another.

*Allegans contraria non est audiendus.*A person making contradictory allegations is not to be heard.

*Allegans suam turpitudinem non est audiendus.*A person alleging his own wrong is not to be heard.
Cases: [Contracts  138. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 280, 286.]

*Allegari non debuit quod probatum non relevat.*What is not relevant if proved ought not to have been alleged.

*Allegatio contra factum non est admittenda.*An allegation contrary to the deed (or fact) is not admissible.

Alterius circumventio alii non praebet actionem.A deception practiced on one person does not give a cause of action to another.

Alternativa petitio non est audienda.An alternative petition is not to be heard.

Ambigua responsio contra proferentem est accipienda.An ambiguous answer is to be taken against the party who offers it.

Ambiguis casibus semper praesumitur pro rege.In doubtful cases the presumption is always in favor of the king.

Ambiguitas contra stipulatorem est.A dubious expression is construed against the party using it. Cases: [Contracts  155, C.J.S. Contracts § 337.]

Ambiguitas verborum latens verificatione suppletur; nam quod ex facto oritur ambiguum verificatione facti tollitur.A latent ambiguity in wording is resolved by evidence; for whatever ambiguity arises from an extrinsic fact is resolved by extrinsic evidence.

Ambiguitas verborum patens nulla verificatione excluditur.A patent ambiguity is not removed by extrinsic evidence (or is never helped by averment).

Ambiguum placitum interpretari debet contra proferentem.An ambiguous plea ought to be interpreted against the party pleading it.

Ambulatoria est voluntas defuncti usque ad vitae supremum exitum.The will of a decedent is ambulatory (that is, can be altered) until the last moment of life.

Ancupia verborum sunt iudice indigna.Quibbling over words is unworthy of a judge.

Angliae jura in omni casu libertati dant favorem.The laws of England are favorable in every case to liberty.

Animus ad se omne jus ducit.The mind brings every right unto itself. • Often explained: It is to the intention that all law applies. Cases: [Deeds  93, C.J.S. Deeds § 174.]

Animus hominis est anima scripti.The intention of the person is the soul of the instrument.

Annulus trecentesimo sexagesimo-quinto die dicitur, incipiente plane non exacto die, quia annum *civiliter non ad momenta temporum sed ad dies numeramur.*We call a child a year old on the 365th day, when the day is clearly begun but not ended, because we calculate the civil year not by moments, but by days.

*Annua nec debitum judex non separat ipse.*Even the judge apportions neither annuities nor debt.

*Annus est mora motus quo suum planeta pervolvat circum.*A year is the duration of the motion by which a planet revolves through its orbit.

*Annus inceptus pro completo habetur.*A year begun is held as completed. • This maxim is said to be of limited application.

*A non posse ad non esse sequitur argumentum necessarie negative, licet non affirmative.*From impossibility to nonexistence the inference follows necessarily in the negative, though not in the affirmative.

*Apices juris non sunt jura.*Legal niceties are not law.

*A piratis aut latronibus capti liberi permanent.*Those captured by pirates or robbers remain free.

*A piratis et latronibus capta dominium non mutant.*Things captured by pirates or robbers do not change their ownership.

*Applicatio est vita regulae.*The application is the life of a rule.

*Aqua cedit solo.*The water goes with the ground. • A grant of the land includes the water on it.

*Aqua currit et debet currere ut currere solebat.*Water runs and ought to run as it is wont to run. Cases: [Waters and Water Courses  51. C.J.S. Waters §§ 12, 18–19.]

*Arbitramentum aequum tribuit cuique suum.*A just arbitration renders to each his own.

*Arbitrium est iudicium.*An award is a judgment.

*Arbor dum crescit; lignum dum crescere nequit.*It is a tree while it is growing; wood when it cannot grow.

A rescriptis valet argumentum.An argument from rescripts (i.e., original writs in the register) is valid.

Argumentum ab auctoritate est fortissimum in lege.An argument drawn from authority is the strongest in law.

Argumentum ab impossibili plurimum valet in lege.An argument deduced from an impossibility has the greatest validity in law.

Argumentum ab inconvenienti plurimum valet in lege.An argument drawn from what is unsuitable (or improper) has the greatest validity in law. Co. Litt. 66a.

Argumentum a communiter accidentibus in jure frequens est.An argument from things commonly happening is frequent in law.

Argumentum a divisione est fortissimum in jure.An argument based on a subdivision of the subject is most powerful in law.

Argumentum a majori ad minus negative non valet; valet e converso.An argument from the greater to the lesser is of no force in the negative; conversely (in the affirmative) it is valid.

Argumentum a simili valet in lege.An argument by analogy (from a similar case) has force in law.

Arma in armatos sumere jura sinunt.The laws permit taking up arms against the armed.

Assignatus utitur jure auctoris.An assignee is clothed with the rights of the principal.

A summo remedio ad inferiorem actionem non habetur regressus neque auxilium.From the highest remedy to an inferior action there is no recourse or assistance.

Auctoritates philosophorum, medicorum et poetarum sunt in causis allegandae et tenendae.The authoritative opinions of philosophers, physicians, and poets are to be adduced and regarded in causes.

Audi alteram partem.Hear the other side. • No one should be condemned unheard.

A verbis legis non est recedendum.From the words of the law there is to be no departure.

Baratriam committit qui propter pecuniam justitiam baractat.A person is guilty of barratry who sells justice for money.

Bastardus non potest habere haereditatem nisi de corpore suo legitime procreatum.A bastard cannot have an heir unless it be one lawfully begotten of his own body.

Bastardus nullius est filius, aut filius populi.A bastard is nobody's son, or the son of the people.

Bello pacta cedunt reipublicae.In war contracts give way to the state.

Benedicta est expositio quando res redimitur a destructione.Blessed is the exposition when a thing is saved from destruction.

Beneficium invito non datur.A privilege or benefit is not granted against a person's will.

Beneficium non datum nisi propter officium.A remuneration is not given, unless on account of a duty performed.

Beneficium non datur nisi officii causa.A benefice is not granted except on account or in consideration of duty.

Beneficium principis debet esse mansurum.The benefaction of a prince ought to be lasting.

Benigne faciendae sunt interpretationes chartarum, ut res magis valeat quam pereat; et quaelibet concessio fortissime contra donatorem interpretanda est.Deeds should be subject to liberal interpretation, so that the matter may take effect rather than fail; and every grant is to be taken most strongly against the grantor.

Benigne faciendae sunt interpretationes propter simplicitatem laicorum, ut res magis valeat quam pereat; et verba intentioni, non e contra, debent inservire.Constructions (of written instruments) are to be made liberally, for the simplicity of laymen, in order that the matter may have effect rather than fail (or become void); and words must be subject to the intention, not the intention to the words.

Benignior sententia in verbis generalibus seu dubiis est preferenda.The more favorable construction is to be preferred in general or doubtful expressions.

Benignius leges interpretandae sunt quo voluntas earum conservetur.Laws are to be more liberally interpreted so that their intent may be preserved.

Bigamus seu trigamus, etc., est qui diversis temporibus et successive duas seu tres uxores habuit.A bigamus or trigamus, etc., is one who has had two or more wives in succession, each at a different time. 3 Co. Inst. 88.

Bis dat qui cito dat.He pays twice who pays promptly.

Bis idem exigi bona fides non patitur, et in satisfactionibus non permittitur amplius fieri quam semel factum est.Good faith does not allow the same thing to be exacted twice; and in satisfying claims, it is not permitted that more should be done after satisfaction has once been rendered.

Bonae fidei non congruit de apicibus juris disputare.It is incompatible with good faith to insist on the extreme subtleties of the law.

Bonae fidei possessor in id tantum quod ad se pervenerit tenetur.A possessor in good faith is liable only for that which he himself has obtained (literally, what has come to him). 2 Co. Inst. 285.

Bona fide possessor facit fructus consumptos suos.A possessor in good faith is entitled to the fruits (or produce) that he consumes.

Bona fides exigit ut quod convenit fiat.Good faith demands that what is agreed on shall be done.

Bona fides non patitur ut bis idem exigatur.Good faith does not allow payment to be exacted twice for the same thing.

Boni judicis est ampliare jurisdictionem (or justitiam). It is the role of a good judge to enlarge (or use liberally) his jurisdiction (or remedial authority). Cases: [Courts  200.5.]

Boni judicis est ampliare justitiam.It is the role of a good judge to enlarge or extend justice.

Boni judicis est causas litium dirimere.It is the role of a good judge to remove causes of litigation.

Boni judicis est iudicium sine dilatione mandare executioni.It is the role of a good judge to render judgment for execution without delay.

Boni judicis est lites dirimere, ne lis ex lite oriatur.It is the role of a good judge to dispose of litigations so that one suit should not grow from another. 5 Coke 31a.

Bonum defendentis ex integra causa; malum ex quolibet defectu.A good outcome for the defendant comes from a sound case; a bad outcome from some defect.

Bonum necessarium extra terminos necessitatis non est bonum.A thing good from necessity is not good beyond the limits of the necessity.

Bonus judex secundum aequum et bonum judicat, et aequitatem stricto juri praefert.A good judge decides according to fairness and the good and prefers equity to strict law.

Breve ita dicitur, quia rem de qua agitur, et intentionem petentis, paucis verbis breviter enarrat.A writ is called a “breve” because it briefly states, in few words, the matter in dispute, and the object of the party seeking relief.

Breve judiciale debet sequi suum originale, et accessorium suum principale.A judicial writ ought to follow its original, and an accessory its principal.

Breve judiciale non cadit pro defectu formae.A judicial writ does not fail for a defect of form.

Brevia, tam originalia quam judicialia, patiuntur anglica nomina.Writs, original as well as judicial, bear English names.

Cancellarii angliae dignitas est, ut secundus a rege in regno habetur.The dignity of the chancellor of England is (such) that he is considered second in the realm from the sovereign.

Carcer ad homines custodiendos, non ad puniendos, dari debet.Imprisonment should be imposed for keeping people in confinement, not for punishing them (further). Co. Litt. 260a.

Carcer non supplicii causa sed custodiae constitutus.A prison is established not for the sake of punishment, but for detention under guard.

Casus fortuitus non est sperandus, et nemo tenetur divinare.A chance event is not to be expected, and no one is bound to foresee it. Cases: [Carriers  119. C.J.S. Aeronautics and Aerospace § 239; Carriers § 430.]

Casus fortuitus non est supponendus.A chance event is not to be presumed.

Casus omissus et oblivioni datus dispositioni communis juris relinquitur.A case omitted and forgotten (not provided for in statute) is left to the disposal of the common law.

Casus omissus pro omisso habendus est.A case omitted is to be held as (intentionally) omitted.

Catalla juste possessa amitti non possunt.Chattels rightly possessed cannot be lost.

Catalla reputantur inter minima in lege.Chattels are considered in law among things of least consequence.

Causa causae est causa causati.The cause of a cause is the cause of the effect.

Causa causantis causa est causati.The cause of the thing causing is the cause of the effect.

Causa ecclesiae publicis aequiparatur; et summa est ratio quae pro religione facit.The cause of the church is equal to public causes; and paramount is the reason that acts in favor of religion.

Causae dotis, vitae, libertatis, fisci sunt inter favorabilia in lege.Causes of dower, life, liberty, revenue are among the things favored in law.

Causae ecclesiae publicis causis aequiparantur.The causes of the church are equal to public causes.

Causa et origo est materia negotii.The cause and origin of a matter are the substance of it. • “The law regards the original act”: as in the case of a man who attempts suicide in madness, but dies after regaining sanity; such is not suicide. 1 Coke 99.

Causa patet.The reason is obvious.

Causa proxima non remota spectatur.The immediate and not the remote cause is considered. Cases: [Damages  17; Insurance  2103, 2165.C.J.S. Damages § 25; Insurance §§ 910–912.]

Causa vaga et incerta non est causa rationabilis.A vague and uncertain cause is not a reasonable cause.

Caveat emptor.Let the buyer beware. Cases: [Sales  41; Vendor and Purchaser  37. C.J.S. Sales § 52; Vendor and Purchaser § 49.]

Caveat emptor qui ignorare non debuit quod jus alienum emit.Let the buyer beware; for he ought not act in ignorance when he buys what another has right to. Cases: [Sales  43, 269. C.J.S. Sales §§ 50, 59, 271.]

Caveat venditor.Let the seller beware.

Caveat viator.Let the traveler beware.

Cavendum est a fragmentis.Beware of fragments.

Certa debet esse intentio et narratio et certum fundamentum et certa res quae deducitur in iudicium.The design and narration ought to be certain, the foundation certain, and the matter certain that is brought into court to be tried.

Certum est quod certum reddi potest.That is certain which can be rendered certain. Cases: [Contracts 9; Deeds 38. C.J.S. Contracts § 42; Deeds §§ 53–56, 59, 61.]

Cessante causa, cessat effectus.The cause ceasing, the effect ceases.

Cessante ratione legis cessat et ipsa lex.When the reason of the law ceases, the law itself also ceases.

Cessante statu primitivo, cessat derivativus.When the original estate comes to an end, the derivative estate is also at an end.

Consensus est voluntas plurium ad quos res pertinet, simul juncta.Consent is the conjoint will of several people to whom the thing belongs.

Consensus facit legem.Consent makes law. • A contract constitutes law between the parties agreeing to be bound by it.

Consensus, non concubitus, facit matrimonium. Consent, not coition (or sharing a bed), constitutes marriage.

Consensus, non concubitus, facit nuptias vel matrimonium, et consentire non possunt ante annos nubiles. Consent, and not coition (or sharing a bed), constitutes nuptials or marriage, and persons cannot consent before marriageable years.

Consensus tollit errorem. Consent removes an error. • A person cannot object to something he has consented to. Cases: [New Trial ↪ 10. C.J.S. New Trial § 12.]

Consensus voluntas multorum ad quos res pertinet simul juncta. Consent is the united will of several interested in one subject matter.

Consentientes et agentes pari poena plectentur. Those consenting and those perpetrating will receive the same punishment.

Consentire matrimonio non possunt infra (ante) annos nubiles. Persons cannot consent to marriage before marriageable years.

Consequentiae non est consequentia. The consequence of a consequence does not exist.

Consilia multorum quaeruntur (requiruntur) in magnis. The advice of many is sought in great affairs.

Consortio malorum me quoque malum facit. The company of wicked men makes me also wicked.

Constitutiones tempore posteriores potiores sunt his quae ipsas praecesserunt. Later laws prevail over those that preceded them.

Constitutum esse eam domum unicuique nostrum debere existimari, ubi quisque sedes et tabulas haberet, suarumque rerum constitutionem fecisset. It is a settled principle that what ought to be considered the home of each of us is where he has his dwelling, keeps his records, and has established his business.

Constructio legis non facit injuriam. The construction of the law does not work an injury.

Consuetudo contra rationem introducta potius usurpatio quam consuetudo appellari debet. A custom introduced against reason ought rather to be called a usurpation than a custom.

Consuetudo debet esse certa. Custom ought to be fixed.

Consuetudo debet esse certa, nam incerta pro nulla (nullius) habetur. Custom ought to be fixed, for if variable it is held as null (or of no account).

Consuetudo debet esse certa, nam incerta pro nullis habentur. A custom should be certain, for uncertain things are held as nothing. • This maxim is sometimes written Consuetudo debet esse certa, nam incerta pro nulla (nullius) habetur (meaning “custom should be certain, for if uncertain it is held as nothing”).

Consuetudo est altera lex. Custom is another law.

Consuetudo est optimus interpretis legum. Custom is the best expounder of the law.

Consuetudo et communis assuetudo vincit legem non scriptam, si sit specialis; et interpretatur legem scriptam, si lex sit generalis. Custom and common usage overcome the unwritten law if it is special; and interpret the written law if the law is general.

Consuetudo ex certa causa rationabili usitata privat communem legem. Custom observed by reason of a certain and reasonable cause supersedes the common law.

Consuetudo, licet sit magnae auctoritatis, nunquam tamen praejudicat manifestae veritati. A custom, even if it is of great authority, is never prejudicial to plain truth.

Consuetudo loci observanda est. The custom of the place is to be observed.

Consuetudo manerii et loci observanda est. The custom of a manor and place is to be observed.

Consuetudo neque injuria oriri neque tolli protest. A custom can neither arise nor be abolished by a wrong.

Consuetudo non habitur (trahitur) in consequentiam. Custom is not held as (or drawn into) a precedent.

Consuetudo praescripta et legitima vincit legem. A prescriptive and lawful custom overrides the law.

Consuetudo regni Angliae est lex Angliae. The custom of the kingdom of England is the law of England.

Consuetudo semel reprobata non potest amplius induci.A custom once disallowed cannot again be introduced.

Consuetudo tollit communem legem.Custom takes away the common law.

Consuetudo vincit communem legem.Custom overrules common law.

Consuetudo volentes ducit, lex nolentes trahit.Custom leads the willing; law drags the unwilling.

Contemporanea expositio est optima et fortissima in lege.A contemporaneous exposition is the best and most powerful in the law. • A statute is best explained by following the construction put on it by judges who lived at the time it was made, or soon after. Cases: [Constitutional Law  19; Deeds  111. C.J.S. Constitutional Law § 33; Deeds §§ 207–218, 221–222, 231.]

Contestatio litis eget terminos contradictorios.An issue requires terms of contradiction. • (That is, there can be no issue without an affirmative on one side and a negative on the other).

Contractus est quasi actus contra actum.A contract is, as it were, act against act.

Contractus ex turpi causa vel contra bonos mores nullus est.A contract founded on a wrongful consideration or against good morals is null.

Contractus legem ex conventionem accipiunt.Contracts receive legal validity from the agreement of the parties.

Contra legem facit qui id facit quod lex prohibet; in fraudem vero qui, salvis verbis legis, sententiam ejus circumvenit.A person acts contrary to the law who does what the law prohibits; a person acts in fraud of the law who, without violating the wording, circumvents the intention. Dig. 1.3.29.

Contra negantem principia non est disputandum.There is no disputing against one who denies first principles.

Contra non valentem agere nulla currit praescriptio.No prescription runs against a person unable to act (or bring an action). Cases: [Limitation of Actions  43, 70, 95. C.J.S. Employer–Employee Relationship § 87; Limitations of Actions §§ 81–84, 87, 105, 131, 138, 142, 164–165, 167–168, 170–173, 175–176, 183, 198–205; Physicians, Surgeons, and Other Health-Care Providers § 108; RICO \(Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations\) § 16.]

Crescente malitia crescere debet et poena.With increase of malice, punishment ought also to increase.

Crimen falsi dicitur, cum quis illicitus, cui non fuerit ad hoes data auctoritas, de sigillo regis raptio vel invento brevia cartasse consignaverit.It is called "crimen falsi" when anyone to whom power has not been given for such purposes has illicitly signed writs or grants with the king's seal, either stolen or found.

Crimen laesae majestatis omnia alia crimina excedit quoad poenam.The crime of treason exceeds all other crimes in its punishment.

Crimen omnia ex se nata vitiat.Crime taints everything that springs from it.

Crimen trahit personam.The crime brings with it the person. • That is, the commission of a crime gives the courts of the place where it is committed jurisdiction over the person of the offender.

Crimina morte extinguuntur.Crimes are extinguished by death.

Cuicumque aliquis quid concedit concedere videtur et id sine quo res ipsa esse non potuit.One who grants something to another grants also that without which the thing granted could not exist. • This maxim is also sometimes written Cuicumque aliquid conceditur, conceditur etiam et id sine quo res ipsa non esse potuit (meaning “To whomever anything is granted, that also is granted without which the thing itself could not exist”).

Cui jurisdictio data est, ea quoque concessa esse videntur sine quibus jurisdictio explicari non potest.To whom jurisdiction is given, those things also are considered to be granted without which the jurisdiction cannot be exercised. • That is, the grant of jurisdiction implies the grant of all powers necessary to its exercise.

Cui jus est donandi eidem et vendendi et concedendi jus est.A person who has a right to give has also a right to sell and to grant.

Cuilibet in arte sua perito est credendum.Credence should be given to a person skilled in his art (that is, when speaking of matters connected with that art).

Cuilibet licet juri pro se introducto renunciare.Anyone may waive or renounce the benefit of a principle or rule of law that exists only for his protection.

Cui licet quod majus non debet quod minus est non licere.A person who has authority to do the more important act ought not to be debarred from doing what is of less importance.

Cui pater est populus non habet ille patrem.That person to whom the people is father has not a father.

Cuique in sua arte credendum est.Everyone is to be believed in his own area of expertise. Cases: [Evidence  508. C.J.S. Evidence §§ 599–600, 609–610, 624–625, 627, 634, 652, 677, 680, 682–684, 687–688, 729.]

Cujus est commodum, ejus debet esse incommodum.The person who has the advantage should also have the disadvantage.

Cujus est commodum, ejus est onus.The person who has the benefit has also the burden.

Cujus est dare, ejus est disponere.The person who has a right to give has the right of disposition. • That is, the bestower of a gift has a right to regulate its disposal.

Cujus est divisio, alterius est electio.When one of two parties has the division (of an estate), the other has the choice (of the shares). • In partition between coparceners, where the division is made by the eldest, the rule in English law is that she shall choose her share last.

Cujus est dominium, ejus est periculum.The risk lies on the owner.

Cujus est instituere, ejus est abrogare.Whoever can institute can also abrogate.

Cujus est solum, ejus est usque ad coelum.The person who owns the soil owns up to the sky. • One who owns the surface of the ground owns, or has an exclusive right to, everything that is on or above it to an indefinite height. Cases: [Property  7. C.J.S. Property §§ 24–31, 34.]

Cujus est solum, ejus est usque ad coelum et ad inferos.Whoever owns the soil owns everything up to the sky and down to the depths. Cases: [Property  7; Waters and Water Courses  101. C.J.S. Property §§ 24–31, 34; Waters §§ 193, 195–197, 201–204.]

Cujus juris (i.e., jurisdictionis) est principale, ejusdem juris erit accessorium.An accessory matter is subject to the same jurisdiction as its principal.

Cujus per errorem dati repetitio est, ejus consulto dati donatio est.A thing given by mistake can be recovered; if given purposely, it is a gift. Dig. 50.17.53.

Cujusque rei potissima pars est principium.The principal part of everything is the beginning.

In testamentis plenius testatoris intentionem scrutamur.In wills we diligently examine the testator's intention.

In testamentis plenius voluntates testantium interpretantur.In wills the intentions of the testators are more fully (or liberally) construed.

Intestatus decedit qui aut omnino testamentum non fecit aut non jure fecit, aut id quod fecerat ruptum irritumve factum est, aut nemo ex eo haeres exstitit.A person dies intestate who either has made no will at all or has not made it legally, or when the will that he had made has been annulled or become ineffectual, or when there is no living heir.

In toto et pars continetur.In the whole the part also is included.

In traditionibus scriptorum (chartarum) non quod dictum est, sed quod gestum (factum) est, inspicitur.In the delivery of writings (deeds), not what is said but what is done is to be considered.

Inutilis labor et sine fructu non est effectus legis.Useless and fruitless labor is not the effect of law.

Inveniens libellum famosum et non corrumpens punitur.A person who discovers a libel and does not destroy it is punished.

In veram quantitatem fidejussor teneatur, nisi pro certa quantitate accessit.Let the surety be held for the true amount unless he agreed for a certain amount.

In verbis non verba sed res et ratio quaerenda est.In wording, it is not the words but the substance and the meaning that is to be sought.

Invito beneficium non datur.No benefit is given to one unwilling. • No one is obliged to accept a benefit against his consent. Dig. 50.17.69.

In vocibus videndum non a quo sed ad quid sumatur.In discourse it is not the point from which but the end to which it is drawn that should be regarded.

Ipsae leges cupiunt ut jure regantur.The laws themselves desire that they should be governed by right.

Ira furor brevis est.Anger is a short insanity.

Ita lex scripta est.So the law is written.

Ita semper fiat ratio ut valeat dispositio.Let the relation be so made that the disposition may stand.

Iter est jus eundi, ambulandi hominis; non etiam jumentum agendi vel vehiculum.A way is a right of going or walking for a human being, and does not include the right of driving a beast of burden or a carriage.

Judex aequitatem semper spectare debet.A judge ought always to regard equity.

Judex ante oculos aequitatem semper habere debet.A judge ought always to have equity before his eyes.

Judex bonus nihil ex arbitrio suo faciat nec propositione domesticae voluntatis, sed juxta leges et jura pronunciet.A good judge should do nothing from his own preference or from the prompting of his private desire; but he should pronounce according to law and justice.

Judex damnatur cum nocens absolvitur.The judge is condemned when the guilty party is acquitted.

Judex debet judicare secundum allegata et probata.The judge ought to give judgment according to the allegations and the proofs.

Judex est lex loquens.The judge is the speaking law.

Judex habere debet duos sales, salem sapientiae, ne sit insipidus, et salem conscientiae, ne sit diabolus.A judge should have two salts: the salt of wisdom, lest he be foolish; and the salt of conscience, lest he be devilish.

Judex non potest esse testis in propria causa.A judge cannot be a witness in his own cause.

Judex non potest injuriam sibi datum punire.A judge cannot punish a wrong done to himself.

Judex non reddit plus quam quod petens ipse requirit.The judge does not give more than the plaintiff himself demands.

Judicandum est legibus non exemplis.Judgment must be given by the laws, not by examples.

Judices non tenentur exprimere causam sententiae suae.Judges are not bound to explain the reason of their judgments.

Judicia in curia regis non adnihilentur, sed stent in robore suo quousque per errorem aut attinctam adnullentur.Let judgments in the king's court not be invalidated but remain in force until annulled by error or attain. 2 Inst. 360.

Judicia in deliberationibus crebro maturescunt, in accelerato processu nunquam.Judgments often ripen in the course of deliberation, never in hurried proceeding. 2 Inst. 210.

Judicia posteriora sunt in lege fortiora.The later decisions are stronger in law.

Judicia sunt tanquam juris dicta, et pro veritate accipiuntur.Judgments are, as it were, the dicta (or sayings) of the law, and are received as truth.

Judiciis posterioribus fides est adhibenda.Trust should be put in the later decisions.

Judici officium suum excedenti non paretur.A judge who exceeds his office (or jurisdiction) is not obeyed.

Judici satis poena est quod Deum habet ultorem.It is punishment enough for a judge that he has God to take vengeance on him.

Judicis est in pronuntiando sequi regulam, exceptione non probata.It is the proper role of a judge in rendering his decision to follow the rule, when the exception has not been proved.

Judicis est judicare secundum allegata et probata.It is the proper role of a judge to decide according to the allegations and proofs.

Judicis est jus dicere, non dare.It is the proper role of a judge to state the right, not to endow it. • Generally interpreted, it is the duty of the judge to administer justice and not to make law.

Judicis officium est opus diei in die suo perficere.It is the duty of a judge to finish the work of each day within that day.

Judicis officium est ut res ita tempora rerum quaerere; quaesito tempore tutus eris.It is the duty of a judge to inquire into the timing of events as much as the matters themselves; by inquiring into the time, you will be safe.

Judicium a non suo iudice datum nullius est momenti.A judgment given by a person who is not its proper judge (not in the proper jurisdiction) is of no consequence. 10 Coke 76.

Judicium est quasi juris dictum.Judgment is, as it were, a pronouncement of the right (or a saying of the law).

Judicium non debet esse illusorium, suum effectum habere debet.A judgment ought not to be illusory (or deceptive); it ought to have its proper effect. 2 Co. Inst. 341.

Judicium redditur in invitum, in praesumptione legis.In presumption of law, a judgment is given against one's will.

Judicium semper pro veritate accipitur.A judgment is always taken for truth.

Juncta juvant.Things joined together are helpful.

Jura ecclesiastica limitata sunt infra limites separatos.Ecclesiastical laws are limited within separate bounds.

Jura eodem modo destituuntur quo constituuntur.Laws are abrogated or repealed by the same means by which they are made.

Juramentum est indivisibile, et non est admittendum in parte verum et in parte falsum.An oath is indivisible; it is not to be accepted as partly true and partly false.

Jura naturae sunt immutabilia.The laws of nature are unchangeable.

Jura publica anteferenda privatis.Public rights are to be preferred to private.

Jura publica ex privato promiscue decidi non debent.Public rights ought not to be determined in confusion, from private considerations. • In Coke's example, the validity of a sheriff's warrant is not affected by a dispute among the parties. Co. Litt. 181b.

Jurare est Deum in testem vocare, et est actus divini cultus.To swear is to call God to witness, and is an act of religion.

Jura regis specialia non conceduntur per generalia verba.The special rights of the king are not granted by general words.

Jura sanguinis nullo jure civili dirimi possunt.The rights of blood (or kinship) cannot be destroyed by any civil law.

Jurato creditur in judicio.In judgment credit is given to the swearer.

Juratores debent esse vicini, sufficientes et minus suspecti.Jurors ought to be neighbors, of sufficient means and free from suspicion (literally, less suspected).

Juratores sunt judices facti.The jurors are the judges of fact.

Juratus creditur in judicio.In judgment a person who has sworn an oath is believed.

Jure naturae aequum est neminem cum alterius detrimento et injuria fieri locupletioorem.By the law of nature, it is just that no one should be enriched to the detriment and injury of another. Cases: [Implied and Constructive Contracts  30. C.J.S. Implied and Constructive Contracts § 24.]

Juri non est consonum quod aliquis accessorius in curia regis vincatur antequam aliquis de facto fuerit attinctus.It is not consonant to justice that any accessory should be convicted in the king's court before anyone has been attainted of the fact (i.e., under sentence of attainder for committing the act). • The accessory should not be convicted before the principal is proved guilty. 2 Co. Inst. 183.

Jurisdictio est potestas de publico introducta, cum necessitate juris dicendi.Jurisdiction is a power introduced for the public good, on account of the necessity of dispensing justice.

Juris effectus in executione consistit.The effect of law (or of a right) consists in the execution.

Juris ignorantia est cum jus nostrum ignoramus.It is ignorance of law when we do not know our own right.

Juris praecepta sunt haec, honeste vivere, alterum non laedere, suum cuique tribuere. These are the precepts of the law: to live honorably, not to injure another, to render to each person his due. Just. Inst. 1.1.

Jurisprudentia est divinarum atque humanarum rerum notitia, justi atque injusti scientia. Jurisprudence is the knowledge of things divine and human, the science of the just and the unjust. Just. Inst. 1.1.1.

Jurisprudentia legis communis Angliae est scientia socialis et copiosa. The jurisprudence of the common law of England is a social science comprehensive in scope.

Juris quidem ignorantiam cuique nocere, facti verum ignorantiam non nocere. Ignorance of law is prejudicial to everyone, but ignorance of fact is not.

Jus accrescendi inter mercatores locum non habet, pro beneficio commercii. For the good of commerce, the right of survivorship has no place among merchants. Cases: [Partnership  76. C.J.S. Partnership §§ 86–87.]

Jus accrescendi inter mercatores, pro beneficio commercii locum non habet. For the benefit of commerce, there is no right of accrual among merchants.

Jus accrescendi praefertur oneribus. The right of survivorship is preferred to incumbrances.

Jus accrescendi praefertur ultimae voluntati. The right of survivorship is preferred to a last will.

Jus civile est quod sibi populus constituit. The civil law is what a people has established for itself.

Jus constitui oportet in his quae ut plurimum accidunt, non quae ex inopinato. Law ought to be made with a view to the cases that happen most frequently, and not to those that are unexpected.

Jus descendit, et non terra. A right descends, and not the land.

Jus dicere (et) non jus dare. To state the right (and) not to endow it. • Generally interpreted, to declare the law (and) not to make it. Cases: [Constitutional Law  70.1. C.J.S. Constitutional Law §§ 191–201, 441.]

Jus est ars boni et aequi. Law is the science of what is good and just.

Jus est norma recti; et quicquid est contra normam recti est injuria. The law is the rule of right; and whatever is contrary to the rule of right is an injury.

Jus et fraus nunquam cohabitant.Right and fraud never abide together.

Jus ex injuria non oritur.A right does not arise from a wrong.

Jus in re inhaerit ossibus usufructuarii.A right in the thing cleaves to the person (literally, the bones) of the usufructuary.

Jusjurandi forma verbis differt, re convenit; hunc enim sensum habere debet, ut Deus invocetur.The form of taking an oath differs in language, but agrees in meaning; for it ought to have this sense, that God is invoked.

Jusjurandum inter alios factum nec nocere nec prodesse debet.An oath made between third parties ought neither to hurt nor to profit.

Jus naturale est quod apud homines eandem habet potentiam.Natural right is that which has the same force among (all) mankind.

Jus non habenti tute non paretur.It is safe not to obey a person who has no right.

Jus publicum et privatum est quod ex naturalibus praeceptis, aut gentium, aut civilibus est collectum et quod in jure scripto jus appellatur, id in lege Angliae rectum esse dicitur.Public and private law is that which is collected from the precepts of nature, of peoples in general, or of particular states; and what in written law is called “jus” by the law of England is said to be “right.”

Jus publicum privatorum pactis mutari non potest.A public right cannot be changed by agreements of private parties.

Jus quo universitates utuntur est idem quod habent privati.The right that corporations exercise is the same as the right that individuals possess.

Jus respicit aequitatem.Law regards equity.

Jus superveniens auctori accrescit successori.An additional or enhanced right for the possessor accrues to the successor.

Justitia debet esse libera, quia nihil iniquius venali justitia; plena, quia justitia non debet claudicare; et celer, quia dilatio est quaedam negatio.Justice ought not to be bought, for nothing is more hateful than venal justice; full, for justice ought not to be defective; and quick, for delay is a certain denial.

Justitia est constans et perpetua voluntas jus suum cuique tribuendi.Justice is a steady and unceasing disposition to render to every person his due.

Justitia est duplex: severe puniens et vere praeveniens.Justice is double: punishing with severity, and truly preventing.

Justitia est virtus excellens et Altissimo complacens.Justice is an excellent virtue and pleasing to the Most High.

Justitia firmatur solium.By justice the throne is strengthened.

Justitia nemini neganda est.Justice is to be denied to no one.

Justitia non est neganda, non differenda.Justice is not to be denied or delayed.

Justitia non novit patrem nec matrem, solum veritatem spectat justitia.Justice knows neither father nor mother; justice looks to truth alone.

Justum non est aliquem antenatum mortuum facere bastardum, qui pro tota vita sua pro legitimo habetur.It is not just to make a bastard after his death an elder child who all his life has been accounted legitimate.

Jus vendit quod usus approbavit.The law dispenses what use has approved.

La conscience est la plus changeante des régles.Conscience is the most changing of rules.

La ley favour la vie d'un home.The law favors a man's life.

La ley favour l'inheritance d'un home.The law favors a man's inheritance.

La ley voit plus tost suffer un mischiefe que un inconvenience.The law will sooner suffer a mischief than an inconvenience.

Lata culpa dolo aequiparatur.Gross negligence is equivalent to fraud.

*Le contrat fait la loi.*The contract makes the law.

*Legatos violare contra jus gentium est.*It is contrary to the law of nations to do violence to ambassadors.

*Legatum morte testatoris tantum confirmatur, sicut donatio inter vivos traditione sola.*A legacy is confirmed by the death of the testator, in the same manner as a gift from a living person is by delivery alone.

*Legatus regis vice fungitur a quo destinatur et honorandus est sicut ille cujus vicem gerit.*An ambassador fills the place of the king by whom he is appointed, and is to be honored in the same way as the person whose place he fills.

*Legem enim contractus dat.*The contract gives the law.

*Legem terrae amittentes perpetuam infamiae notam inde merito incurrunt.*Those who lose the law of the land thereby justly incur an eternal stigma of infamy.

*Leges Angliae sunt tripartitae: jus commune, consuetudines, ac decreta comitorum.*The laws of England are threefold: common law, customs, and decrees of parliament.

*Leges et constitutiones futuris certum est dare formam negotiis non ad facta praeterita revocari; nisi nominatim et de praeterito tempore et adhuc pendentibus negotiis cautum sit.*Laws and statutes are regarded as regulating future negotiations, not past transactions; unless they are expressly made to apply to both past and pending matters.

*Leges figendi et refigendi consuetudo est periculosissima.*The practice of adding and annulling laws is a most dangerous one. 4 Coke pref.

*Leges fixit pretio atque refixit.*He shaped and reshaped laws for a price; he promulgated and annulled laws at a price. • The reference is to a judge who took bribes.

*Leges humanae nascuntur, vivunt, et moriuntur.*Laws that humans have made are born, live, and die.

*Leges naturae perfectissimae sunt et immutabiles; humani vero juris conditio semper in infinitum decurrit, et nihil est in eo quod perpetuo stare possit.*The laws of nature are most perfect and immutable; but the condition of human law is an unending succession, and there is nothing in it that can stand forever.

*Leges non verbis sed rebus sunt impositae.*Laws are imposed on affairs, not words.

Leges posteriores priores contrarias abrogant. Subsequent laws repeal prior conflicting ones. Cases: [Statutes  159, 162. C.J.S. Statutes §§ 287, 294.]

Leges suum ligent latorem. Laws should bind their own author.

Leges vigilantibus, non dormientibus subveniunt. The laws aid those who keep watch, not those who sleep (that is, the vigilant, not the negligent). Cases: [Action  63; Equity  64. C.J.S. Actions § 239; Equity § 115.]

Legibus sumptis desinentibus, lege naturae utendum est. Where man-made laws fail, the law of nature must be used.

Legis constructio non facit injuriam. The construction of law does not do wrong.

Legis interpretatio legis vim obtinet. The interpretation of law obtains the force of law. Cases: [Courts  108. C.J.S. Courts § 175.]

Legislatorum est viva vox, rebus et non verbis legem imponere. The voice of legislators is a living voice, to impose laws on (actual) affairs and not on (mere) words.

Legis minister non tenetur, in executione officii sui, fugere aut retrocedere. The minister of the law is not bound, in the execution of his office, either to flee or to retreat.

Legitime imperanti parere necesse est. One who commands lawfully must be obeyed.

Legitimus haeres et filius est quem nuptiae demonstrant. A lawful son and heir is he whom the marriage declares to be lawful.

Le ley de Dieu et ley de terre sont tout un, et l'un et l'autre preferre et favour le common et publique bien del terre. The law of God and the law of the land are all one; and both promote and favor the common and public good of the land.

Le ley est le plus haut enheritance que le roy ad, car par le ley, il mesme et tous ses sujets sont rules, et si le ley ne fuit, nul roy ne nul enheritance serra. The law is the highest inheritance that the king possesses; for by the law both he and all his subjects are ruled; and if there were no law, there would be neither king nor inheritance.

Le salut du peuple est la suprême loi. The safety of the people is the highest law.

*Les fictions naissent de la loi, et non la loi des fictions.*Fictions arise from the law, and not law from fictions.

*Les lois ne se chargent de punir que les actions exterieures.*Laws undertake to punish only outward actions.

*Lex aequitate gaudet.*Law delights in equity.

*Lex aequitate gaudet; appetit perfectum; est norma recti.*The law delights in equity: it covets perfection; it is a rule of right.

*Lex aliquando sequitur aequitatem.*The law sometimes follows equity.

*Lex Angliae est lex misericordiae.*The law of England is a law of mercy.

*Lex Angliae lex terrae est.*The law of England is the law of the land.

*Lex Angliae non patitur absurdum.*The law of England does not allow an absurdity.

*Lex Angliae nunquam matris sed semper patris conditionem imitari partum judicat.*The law of England rules that the offspring always follows the condition of the father, never that of the mother.

*Lex Angliae nunquam sine parlamento mutari potest.*The law of England can never be changed without (act of) parliament. • This maxim is sometimes written Lex Angliae sine Parlamento mutari non potest (also translatable as “the law of England cannot be changed but by Parliament”).

*Lex beneficialis rei consimili remedium praestat.*A beneficial law affords a remedy in a similar case.

*Lex citius tolerare vult privatum damnum quam publicum malum.*The law would sooner endure a private loss than a public evil.

*Lex contra id quod praesumit probationem non recipit.*The law accepts no proof against that which it presumes.

*Lex deficere non potest in justitia exhibenda.*The law cannot fail in dispensing justice.

Lex nil facit frustra, nil jubet frustra.The law does nothing in vain and commands nothing in vain.

Lex non a rege est violanda.The law is not to be violated by the king.

Lex non cogit ad impossibilia.The law does not compel to impossible ends.

Lex non curat de minimis.The law is not concerned with matters of least consequence. Cases: [Appeal and Error  1171; Equity  34. C.J.S. Appeal and Error §§ 919–920, 923.]

Lex non debet deficere conquerentibus in justitia exhibenda.The law ought not to fail in dispensing justice to those with a grievance.

Lex non deficit in justitia exhibenda.The law does not fail in showing justice.

Lex non exacte definit, sed arbitrio boni viri permittit.The law does not define exactly, but trusts in the judgment of a good man.

Lex non favet votis delicatorum.The law does not favor the wishes of the fastidious.

Lex non intendit aliquid impossibile.The law does not intend anything impossible.

Lex non novit patrem, nec matrem; solam veritatem.The law knows neither father nor mother; only the truth.

Lex non oritur ex injuria.The law does not arise from an unlawful act.

Lex non patitur fractiones et divisiones statuum.The law does not tolerate fractions and divisions of estates. 1 Coke 87a.

Lex non praecipit inutilia, quia inutilis labor stultus.The law does not command useless things, because useless labor is foolish. Cases: [Mandamus  16. C.J.S. Mandamus §§ 12–13, 15, 59.]

Lex non requirit verificari quod apparet curiae.The law does not require that to be proved which is apparent to the court.

Lex plus laudatur quando ratione probatur.The law is more praised when it is consonant with reason.

Lex posterior derogat priori.A later statute repeals an earlier one.

Lex prospicit, non respicit.The law looks forward, not backward.

Lex punit mendaciam.The law punishes falsehood.

Lex rejicit superflua, pugnantia, incongrua.The law rejects superfluous, contradictory, and incongruous things.

Lex reprobat moram.The law disapproves of delay.

Lex respicit aequitatem.Law regards equity.

Lex scripta si cesset, id custodiri oportet quod moribus et consuetudine inductum est; et, si qua in re hoc defecerit, tunc id quod proximum et consequens ei est; et, si id non appareat, tunc jus quo urbs Romana utitur servari oportet.If the written law is silent, that which is drawn from manners and custom ought to be observed; and, if that is in any manner defective, then what is next and consistent with it; and, if that does not appear, then the law that Rome uses should be followed.

Lex semper dabit remedium.The law will always give a remedy.

Lex semper intendit quod convenit rationi.The law always intends what is agreeable to reason.

Lex spectat naturae ordinem.The law regards the order of nature.

Lex succurrit ignoranti.The law assists the ignorant.

Lex succurrit minoribus.The law assists minors.

Lex uno ore omnes alloquitur.The law speaks to all with one mouth.

Lex vigilantibus, non dormientibus, subvenit.Law aids the watchful, not the sleeping.

Liberata pecunia non liberat offerentem.The return of money does not free the party presenting it (from liability).

Libertas est naturalis facultas ejus quod cuique facere libet, nisi quod de jure aut vi prohibetur.Liberty is the natural power of doing whatever one pleases, except what is prevented by law or force.

Libertas est res inestimabilis.Liberty is an inestimable thing.

Libertas inaestimabilis res est.Liberty is a priceless good.

Magna culpa dolus est. Great fault (or gross negligence) is equivalent to fraud.

Magna negligentia culpa est; magna culpa dolus est. Great negligence is fault; great fault is fraud.

Maihemium est homicidium inchoatum. Mayhem is incipient homicide.

Maihemium est inter crimina majora minimum, et inter minora maximum. Mayhem is the least of great crimes, and the greatest among small.

Maihemium est membri mutilatio, et dici poterit, ubi aliquis in aliqua parte sui corporis effectus sit inutilis ad pugnandum. Mayhem is the mutilation of a limb, and can be said (to occur) when a person is injured in any part of his body so as to be useless in a fight.

Major continet in se minus. The greater includes the less.

Majore poena affectus quam legibus statuta est non est infamis. A criminal afflicted with a greater punishment than is provided by law is not infamous. 4 Co. Inst. 66.

Major haereditas venit unicuique nostrum a jure et legibus quam a parentibus. A greater inheritance comes to every one of us from right and the laws than comes from parents.

Majori summae minor inest. The lesser is included in the greater sum.

Major numerus in se continet minorem. The greater number contains in itself the less.

Majus continet minus. The greater contains the less.

Majus dignum trahit ad se minus dignum. The more worthy draws to itself the less worthy.

Majus est delictum seipsum occidere quam alium. It is a greater crime to kill one's self than another.

Mala grammatica non vitiat chartam; sed in expositione instrumentorum mala grammatica quoad fieri possit evitanda est.Bad grammar does not vitiate a deed; but in the construction of instruments, bad grammar, as far as possible, is to be avoided.

Maledicta expositio quae corrumpit textum.It is a cursed construction that corrupts the text.

Maleficia non debent remanere impunita, et impunitas continuum affectum tribuit delinquendi.Evil deeds ought not to remain unpunished, and impunity affords continual incitement to wrongdoing. 4 Coke 45.

Maleficia propositis distinguuntur.Misdeeds are distinguished from proposals; crimes are distinguished by the intention (with which they are committed).

Malitia est acida, est mali animi affectus.Malice is sour; it is the quality of a bad mind.

Malitia supplet aetatem.Malice makes up for age.

Malitiis hominum est obviandum.The malicious designs of men must be thwarted. • Also found as Malum hominum est obviandum.

Malum non habet efficientem sed deficientem causam.Evil has not an efficient but a deficient cause.

Malum non praesumitur.Evil is not presumed.

Malum quo communius eo pejus.The more common the evil, the worse.

Malus usus est abolendus.An evil custom ought to be abolished; a bad usage should be abolished.

Malus usus est abolendus, quia in consuetudinibus, non diuturnitas temporis, sed soliditas rationis est consideranda.An evil custom is to be abolished, because, in customs, not length of time, but solidity of reason, is to be considered.

Mandata licita strictam recipiunt interpretationem, sed illicita lata et extensam.Lawful commands receive a strict interpretation, but unlawful ones receive a wide and an expansive interpretation.

Mandatarius terminos sibi positos transgredi non potest.A mandatary cannot exceed the bounds of his authority.

Mandatum nisi gratuitum nullum est.Unless a mandate is gratuitous (without payment), it is not a mandate.

Manifesta probatione non indigent.Obvious facts are not in need of proof.

Maris et faeminae conjunctio est de jure naturae.The union of male and female is founded on the law of nature.

Matrimonia debent esse libera.Marriages ought to be free.

Matrimonium subsequens legitimos facit quoad sacerdotium non quoad successionem propter consuetudinem regni quae se habet in contrarium.Subsequent marriage legitimates as regards priesthood but not as regards succession because of the custom of the kingdom, which is to the contrary.

Matrimonium subsequens tollit peccatum praecedens.A subsequent marriage removes preceding fault.

Matter en ley ne serra mise en bouche del jurors.Matter of law shall not be put into the mouths of jurors.

Maturiora sunt vota mulierum quam virorum.The wishes of women are of quicker maturity than those of men. • That is, women arrive earlier at eligibility for marriage. 6 Coke 71.

Maxime ita dicta quia maxima est ejus dignitas et certissima auctoritas, atque quod maxime omnibus probetur.A maxim is so called because its dignity is chiefest and its authority is the most certain, and because it is most approved by all.

Maxime paci sunt contraria vis et injuria.The greatest enemies to peace are force and wrong.

Maximus erroris populus magister.The people are the greatest master of error.

Meliores conditionem suam facere potest minor, deteriores nequaquam.A minor can improve or make his condition better, but in no way worse. • This maxim is sometimes written Meliores conditionem facere potest minor, deteriores nequaquam (also translatable as “a minor can make his condition better, but by no means worse”).

Melior est causa possidentis.The cause of the possessor is preferable.

Melior est conditio defendentis.The condition of the defendant is the better.

Melior est conditio possidentis et rei quam actoris. Better is the condition of the possessor, and that of the defendant (is better) than that of the plaintiff.

Melior est conditio possidentis, ubi neuter jus habet. Better is the condition of the possessor where neither of the two has the right.

Melior est justitia vere praeveniens quam severe puniens. Justice that truly prevents a crime is better than that which severely punishes it.

Melius est in tempore occurrere quam post causam vulneratum remedium quaerere. It is better to oppose in time than to seek a remedy after a wrong has been inflicted. • Coke introduces this maxim with the phrase ne per negligentiam damnum incurrat: “lest he incur damage through negligence.” 2 Co. Inst. 299.

Melius est jus deficiens quam jus incertum. Law that is deficient is better than law that is uncertain.

Melius est omnia mala pati quam malo consentire. It is better to suffer every wrong than to consent to wrong.

Melius est petere fontem quam sectari rivulos. It is better to go to the fountainhead than to follow the streams.

Melius est recurrere quam male currere. It is better to run back than to run wrong (or badly). • It is better to retrace one's steps than to proceed improperly.

Mens testatoris in testamentis spectanda est. In wills, the intention of the testator is to be regarded.

Mentiri est contra mentem ire. To lie is to go against the mind.

Mercis appellatio ad res mobiles tantum pertinet. The term “merchandise” belongs to movable things only.

Mercis appellatione homines non contineri. Under the name of merchandise human beings are not included.

Merito beneficium legis amittit qui legem ipsam subvertere intendit. A person deservedly loses the protection of the law who attempts to overturn the law itself.

Merito retribuatur Rex legi quod lex attribuat ei.The king rightly repays the law what (i.e., the power that) the law ascribes to him; let the king repay to the law what the law attributes to him.

Merx est quidquid vendi potest.Merchandise is whatever can be sold.

Meum est promittere, non dimittere.It is mine to promise, not to discharge.

Minatur innocentibus qui parcat nocentibus.A person threatens the innocent who spares the guilty.

Minima poena corporalis est major qualibet pecuniaria.The smallest bodily punishment is greater than any pecuniary one.

Minime mutanda sunt quae certam habuerunt interpretationem.Things that have had a fixed interpretation are to be altered as little as possible.

Minimum est nihilo proximum.The least is next to nothing.

Minor ante tempus agere non potest in casu proprietatis, nec etiam convenire.A minor before majority cannot act in a case of property, not even to agree.

Minor ante tempus agere non potest in casu proprietatis, nec etiam convenire; differetur usque aetatem; sed non cadit breve.A minor before majority cannot act in a case of property, not even to agree; it will be deferred until majority; but a writ does not fail.

Minor jurare non potest.A minor cannot take an oath.

Minor minorem custodire non debet; alios enim praesumitur male regere qui seipsum regere nescit.A minor ought not be guardian of a minor, for he is presumed to govern others ill who does not know how to govern himself.

Minor non tenetur respondere durante minori aetati, nisi in causa dotis, propter favorem.A minor is not bound to answer during his minority, except as a matter of favor in a cause of dower.

Minor qui infra aetatem 12 annorum fuerit utlagari non potest nec extra legem poni, quia ante talem aetatem, non est sub lege aliqua nec in decenna.A minor who is under 12 years of age cannot be outlawed nor placed beyond the law, because before that age he is not under any law nor in a decennary.

Minor septemdecim annis non admittitur fore executores.A person under 17 years of age is not admitted to be an executor.

Minus solvit qui tardius solvit; nam et tempore minus solvitur.A person pays too little who pays too late; for, from the delay, the payment is less.

Misera est servitus ubi jus est vagum aut incertum.It is a miserable slavery where the law is vague or uncertain.

Mitius imperanti melius paretur.The more mildly one commands, the better is he obeyed.

Mobilia non habent situm.Movables have no fixed site or locality.

Mobilia personam sequuntur, immobilia situm.Movable things follow the person; immovable ones, their locality.

Mobilia sequuntur personam.Movables follow the person. Cases: [Taxation 98. C.J.S. Taxation §§ 153–157, 160, 283.]

Modica circumstantia facti jus mutat.A small circumstance attending an act alters the right.

Modus de non decimando non valet.A prescription not to pay tithes is void.

Modus et conventio vincunt legem.Customary form and the agreement of the parties overcome the law. • This is one of the first principles relative to the law of contract. 2 Coke 73.

Modus legem dat donationi.Custom (or form) gives law to a gift.

Moneta est justum medium et mensura rerum commutabilium, nam per medium monetae fit omnium rerum conveniens et justa aestimatio.Money is the just medium and measure of all exchangeable things, for by the medium of money a suitable and just estimation of all things is made.

Monetandi jus comprehenditur in regalibus quae nunquam a regio sceptro abdicantur.The right of coining is included among those rights of royalty that are never relinquished by the kingly scepter.

Monumenta quae nos recorda vocamus sunt veritatis et vetustatis vestigia.The monuments that we call records are the vestiges of truth and antiquity.

Mora debitoris non debet esse creditori damnosa.Delay by a debtor ought not to be injurious to a creditor.

Mora reprobatur in lege.Delay is disapproved of in law.

Mors dicitur ultimum supplicium.Death is called the extreme penalty.

Mors omnia solvit.Death dissolves all things.

Mortis momentum est ultimum vitae momentum.The moment of death is the last moment of life.

Mortuus exitus non est exitus.A dead issue is not issue. • That is, a child born dead is no child.

Mos retinendus est fidelissimae vetustatis.A custom of the truest antiquity is to be retained.

Mulcta damnum famae non irrogat.A fine does not impose a loss of reputation.

Multa conceduntur per obliquum quae non conceduntur de directo.Many things are conceded indirectly that are not allowed directly.

Multa fidem promissa levant.Many promises lessen confidence.

Multa ignoramus quae nobis non laterent si veterum lectio nobis fuit familiaris.We are ignorant of many things that would not be hidden from us if the reading of old authors were familiar to us.

Multa in jure communi contra rationem disputandi pro communi utilitate introducta sunt.Many things have been introduced into the common law, with a view to the public good, that are contrary to logical reasoning. Co. Litt. 70b.

Multa multo exercitatione facilius quam regulis percipies.You will perceive many things much more easily by practice than by rules.

Multa non vetat lex quae tamen tacite damnavit.The law does not forbid many things that yet it has silently condemned.

Multa transeunt cum universitate quae non per se transeunt.Many things pass with the whole that would not pass separately.

Multi multa, nemo omnia novit. Many men know many things; no one knows everything.

Multiplex et indistinctum parit confusionem; et quaestiones quo simpliciores, eo lucidiores. Multiplicity and indistinctness produce confusion: the simpler questions are, the more lucid they are.

Multiplicata transgressione crescat poenae inflictio. The infliction of punishment should increase with the repetition of the offense. • Coke continues, Ex frequenti delicto augetur poena (q.v.). 2 Co. Inst. 479.

Multitudinem decem faciunt. Ten make a multitude.

Multitudo errantium non parit errori patrocinium. The multitude of those who err does not produce indulgence for error.

Multitudo imperitorum perdit curiam. A multitude of ignorant practitioners destroys a court.

Multo utilius est pauca idonea effundere, quam multis inutilibus homines gravari. It is much more useful to pour forth a few suitable things than to burden mankind with many useless things.

Nasciturus pro jam nato habetur quamdiu agitur de ejus commodo. One about to be born is held as already born as long as the issue is to his benefit; a child conceived is treated as born to the extent that it is to his or her benefit.

Natura appetit perfectum, ita et lex. Nature aspires to perfection, and so does the law.

Naturae vis maxima; natura bis maxima. The force of nature is greatest; (and, as some say,) nature is doubly greatest. 2 Co. Inst. 564.

Natura fide jussionis sit strictissimi juris et non durat vel extendatur de re ad rem, de persona ad personam, de tempore ad tempus. The nature of the contract of suretyship is strictissimi juris, and does not endure or should not be extended from thing to thing, from person to person, or from time to time.

Naturale est quilibet dissolvi eo modo quo ligatur. It is natural for a thing to be dissolved in the same way in which it is bound.

Natura non facit saltum, ita nec lex. Nature makes no leap, and neither does the law.

Natura non facit vacuum, nec lex supervacuum. Nature makes no vacuum, and the law nothing purposeless.

*Nec curia deficeret in justitia exhibenda.*Nor should the court be deficient in showing justice.

*Necessarium est quod non potest aliter se habere.*That is necessary which cannot be otherwise.

*Necessitas est lex temporis et loci.*Necessity is the law of time and place.

*Necessitas excusat aut extenuat delictum in capitalibus, quod non operatur idem in civilibus.*Necessity excuses or extenuates delinquency in capital cases, but does not have the same effect in civil cases.

*Necessitas facit licitum quod alias non est licitum.*Necessity makes lawful what otherwise is unlawful.
Cases: [Criminal Law  38. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 49–53.]

*Necessitas inducit privilegium quoad jura privata.*Necessity creates a privilege with regard to private rights.

*Necessitas non habet legem.*Necessity has no law.

*Necessitas publica major est quam privata.*Public necessity is greater than private necessity.

*Necessitas quod cogit defendit.*Necessity defends what it compels.

*Necessitas sub lege non continetur, quia quod alias non est licitum necessitas facit licitum.*Necessity is not restrained by law, since what otherwise is not lawful necessity makes lawful.

*Necessitas vincit legem.*Necessity overcomes the law.

*Necessitas vincit legem; legum vincula irridet.*Necessity overcomes the law; it laughs at the fetters of laws.

*Nec super eum ibimus, nec super eum mittemus, nisi per legale iudicium parium suorum.*Nor shall we go upon him, nor send upon him, except by the lawful judgment of his peers; we will not go against him or send against him except by the lawful judgment of his peers. • This language appears in Magna Carta, ch. 39.

*Nec tempus nec locus occurrit regi.*Neither time nor place thwarts the king.

*Nec veniam effuso sanguine casus habet.*Where blood has been spilled, the case is unpardonable.

*Nec veniam, laeso numine, casus habet.*Where the Divinity has been insulted, the case is unpardonable.

*Negatio conclusionis est error in lege.*The denial of a conclusion is error in law.

*Negatio destruit negationem, et ambae faciunt affirmationem.*A negative destroys a negative, and both make an affirmative.

*Negatio duplex est affirmatio.*A double negative is an affirmative.

*Negligentia semper habet infortuniam comitem.*Negligence always has misfortune for a companion.

*Neminem laedit qui jure suo utitur.*A person who exercises his own rights injures no one.

*Neminem oportet esse sapientiozem legibus.*No one ought to be wiser than the laws.

*Nemo admittendus est inhabilitare seipsum.*No one is allowed to incapacitate himself.

*Nemo agit in seipsum.*No one acts against himself.

*Nemo alienae rei, sine satisfactione, defensor idoneus intelligitur.*No one is considered a competent defender of another's property, without security.

*Nemo alieno nomine lege agere potest.*No one can sue at law in the name of another.

*Nemo aliquam partem recte intelligere potest, antequam totum iterum atque iterum perlegerit.*No one can properly understand any part of a thing until he has read through the whole again and again.

*Nemo allegans suam turpitudinem audiendus est.*No one testifying to his own wrong is to be heard as a witness. Cases: [Estoppel  59. C.J.S. Estoppel §§ 89, 121.]

*Nemo auditur propriam turpitudinem allegans.*No one is heard when alleging his own wickedness; no one can be heard whose claim is based on his own disgraceful behavior.

*Nemo bis punitur pro eodem delicto.*No one is punished twice for the same offense.

*Nemo cogitationis poenam patitur.*No one suffers punishment for his thoughts.

*Nemo cogitur rem suam vendere, etiam justo pretio.*No one is bound to sell his property, even for a just price.

*Nemo commodum capere potest de injuria sua propria.*No one can derive benefit from his own wrong.

*Nemo contra factum suum (proprium) venire potest.*No one can contradict his own deed. 2 Co. Inst. 66.

*Nemo damnum facit, nisi qui id fecit quod facere jus non habet.*No one does damage except the person who did what he has no right to do.

*Nemo dare potest quod non habet.*No one can give that which he does not have.

*Nemo dat qui non habet.*No one gives who does not possess.

*Nemo dat quod non habet.*No one gives what he does not have; no one transfers (a right) that he does not possess. • According to this maxim, no one gives a better title to property than he himself possesses. A variation of this maxim is Nemo dat qui non habet (no one gives who does not have).

*Nemo debet bis puniri pro uno delicto.*No one ought to be punished twice for the same offense.

*Nemo debet bis vexari pro eadem causa.*No one should be twice troubled for the same cause. Cases: [Judgment  540. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 697–700, 702–703.]

*Nemo debet bis vexari pro una et eadem causa.*No one ought to be twice troubled for one and the same cause. Cases: [Judgment  540. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 697–700, 702–703.]

*Nemo debet bis vexari, si constet curiae quod sit pro una et eadem causa.*No one ought to be twice troubled, if it appears to the court that it is for one and the same cause of action.

*Nemo debet esse iudex in propria causa.*No one should be judge in his own cause. Cases: [Judges  42. C.J.S. Judges §§ 119–121, 123–125.]

*Nemo debet immiscere se rei alienae ad se nihil pertinenti.*No one should interfere in another's business that does not at all concern him.

*Nemo debet in communione invitus teneri.*No one should be retained in a partnership against his will.

*Nemo debet locupletari aliena jactura.*No one ought to be enriched at another's expense.

*Nemo debet locupletari ex alterius incommodo.*No one ought to be enriched out of another's disadvantage.

*Nemo debet rem suam sine factu aut defectu suo amittere.*No one should lose his property without his own act or negligence.

*Nemo de domo sua extrahi potest.*No one can be dragged (taken by force) from his own house. Dig. 50.17.103.

*Nemo duobus utatur officiis.*No one should exercise two offices.

*Nemo ejusdem tenementi simul potest esse haeres et dominus.*No one can be both heir and owner of the same land at the same time.

*Nemo enim aliquam partem recte intelligere possit antequam totum iterum atque iterum perlegerit.*No one may be able rightly to understand one part before he has again and again read through the whole.

*Nemo est haeres viventis.*No one is an heir of someone living. Cases: [Descent and Distribution  68; Wills  506\(6\). C.J.S. Descent and Distribution § 68; Wills § 953.]

*Nemo est supra leges.*No one is above the laws.

*Nemo ex alterius facto praegravari debet.*No one ought to be burdened in consequence of another's act.

*Nemo ex consilio obligatur.*No one is bound for the advice he gives.

*Nemo ex dolo suo proprio relevetur aut auxilium capiat.*Let no one be relieved or gain advantage by his own fraud.

*Nemo ex proprio dolo consequitur actionem.*No one acquires a right of action from his own wrong (or deception). Cases: [Action  4. C.J.S. Actions §§ 29–30.]

own wrong.

Nemo inauditus condemnari debet, si non sit contumax.No one ought to be condemned unheard, unless for contempt. • This maxim is sometimes written Nemo inauditus nec insummonitus condemnari debet, si non sit contumax (meaning “no one should be condemned unheard and unsummoned, unless for contempt”).

Nemo in communione potest invitus detineri.No one can be held (to act) in common against his will; no one can be forced to remain in common ownership against his will. • This maxim states the premise that a coowner can always insist on the division of the property owned.

Nemo in propria causa testis esse debet.No one can be a witness in his own cause.

Nemo jus sibi dicere potest.No one can give judgment for himself.

Nemo militans Deo implicetur secularibus negotiis.No one warring for God should be troubled by secular business.

Nemo nascitur artifex.No one is born an expert. • Wisdom in the law is acquired only through diligent study. Co. Litt. 97b.

Nemo patriam in qua natus est exuere, nec ligeantiae debitum ejurare possit.No one can cast off his native land or refuse the obligation of allegiance to it.

Nemo plus commodi haeredi suo relinquit quam ipse habuit.No one leaves a greater asset to his heir than he had himself.

Nemo plus juris ad alienum transferre potest quam ipse habet.No one can transfer to another a greater right than he himself might have. Dig. 50.17.54. Cases: [Sales  226. C.J.S. Sales §§ 219, 231.]

Nemo potest esse simul actor et judex.No one can be at the same time suitor and judge.

Nemo potest esse tenens et dominus.No one can be at the same time tenant and landlord (of the same tenement).

Nemo potest exuere patriam.No one can cast off his own country.

Nemo potest facere per alium quod per se non potest.No one can do through another what he cannot do by himself.

Nemo potest facere per obliquum quod non potest facere per directum.No one can do indirectly what he cannot do directly.

Nemo potest mutare consilium suum in alterius injuriam.No one can change his purpose to the injury of another.

Nemo potest nisi quod de jure potest.No one is able to do a thing unless he can do it lawfully.

Nemo potest plus juris ad alium transferre quam ipse habet.No one can transfer to another a greater right than he himself (actually) has. Co. Litt. 309. Cases: [Sales  226. C.J.S. Sales §§ 219, 231.]

Nemo potest praecise cogi ad factum.No one can be compelled to perform a specific act. • The effect of this maxim is that an order of specific performance is not available.

Nemo potest sibi debere.No one can owe to himself.

Nemo praesens nisi intelligat.One is not present unless he understands.

Nemo praesumitur alienam posteritatem suae praetulisse.No one is presumed to have preferred another's posterity to his own.

Nemo praesumitur donare.No one is presumed to make a gift.

Nemo praesumitur esse immemor suae aeternae salutatis, et maxime in articulo mortis.No one is presumed to be forgetful of his eternal welfare, and especially at the point of death.

Nemo praesumitur ludere in extremis.No one is presumed to trifle at the point of death.

Nemo praesumitur malus.No one is presumed to be bad.

*Nemo prohibetur plures negotiationes sive artes exercere.*No one is prohibited from exercising several kinds of business or arts.

*Nemo prohibetur pluribus defensionibus uti.*No one is forbidden to employ several defenses.

*Nemo prudens punit ut praeterita revocentur, sed ut futura praeveniantur.*No one who is wise gives punishment so that past deeds may be revoked, but so that future deeds may be prevented.

*Nemo punitur pro alieno delicto.*No one is punished for the crime or wrong of another.

*Nemo punitur sine injuria, facto, seu defalta.*No one is punished unless for some wrong, act, or default.

*Nemo qui condemnare potest absolvere non potest.*No one who can condemn is unable to acquit.

*Nemo sibi esse judex vel suis jus dicere debet.*No one ought to be his own judge or to administer justice in cases where his relations are concerned.

*Nemo sine actione experitur, et hoc non sine breve sive libello conventionali.*No one goes to trial without an action, and no one can bring an action without a writ or bill.

*Nemo tenetur ad impossibile.*No one is bound to an impossibility.

*Nemo tenetur armare adversarium contra se.*No one is bound to arm his adversary against himself.

*Nemo tenetur divinare.*No one is bound to foretell the future.

*Nemo tenetur edere instrumenta contra se.*No one is bound to produce writings against himself.

*Nemo tenetur informare qui nescit sed quisquis scire quod informat.*No one who is ignorant of a thing is bound to give information of it, but everyone is bound to know what he gives information of.

*Nemo tenetur jurare in suam turpitudinem.*No one is bound to swear to his own criminality.

*Nemo tenetur prodere seipsum.*No one is bound to betray himself. • In other words, no one can be compelled to incriminate himself.

Nemo tenetur seipsum accusare.No one is bound to accuse himself. • This is a formulation of the privilege against self-incrimination. In good Latin, se ipsum appears as two words; but in law the phrase is usually combined to one (seipsum). Cases: [Criminal Law 🔑 393; Witnesses 🔑 297. C.J.S. Criminal Law § 645; Witnesses § 522.]

Nemo tenetur seipsum infortuniis et periculis exponere.No one is bound to expose himself to misfortune and dangers.

Nemo tenetur seipsum prodere.No one is bound to betray himself.

Nemo unquam judicet in se.Let no one ever be a judge in his own cause.

Nemo unquam vir magnus fuit sine aliquo divino afflatu.No one was ever a great man without some divine inspiration.

Nemo videtur fraudare eos qui sciunt et consentiunt.No one is considered as deceiving those who know and consent.

Neque leges neque senatus consulta ita scribi possunt ut omnes casus qui quandoque inciderint comprehendantur; sed sufficit ea quae plerumque accidunt contineri.Neither laws nor acts of senate can be so written as to include all cases that have happened at any time; it is sufficient that those things that usually occur are encompassed. Dig. 1.3.10. pr.

Ne quid in loco publico vel itinere fiat.Let nothing be done (put or erected) in a public place or way. • The title of an interdict in the Roman law.

Nigrum nunquam excedere debet rubrum.The black should never go beyond the red. • That is, the text of a statute should never be read in a sense more comprehensive than the rubric, or title.

Nihil aliud potest rex quam quod de jure potest.The king can do nothing but what he can do legally; the king can do nothing except by law.

Nihil consensui tam contrarium est quam vis atque metus.Nothing is so opposite to consent as force and fear.

Nihil dat qui non habet.A person gives nothing who has nothing.

Nihil de re accrescit ei qui nihil in re quando jus accresceret habet.Nothing from a property accrues to a person who had no interest in the property when the right accrued. Co. Litt. 188.

Nihil dictum quod non dictum prius. Nothing is said that was not said before.

Nihil est enim liberale quod non idem justum. For there is nothing generous that is not at the same time just.

Nihil est magis rationi consentaneum quam eodem modo quodque dissolvere quo conflatum est. Nothing is more consonant to reason than that everything should be dissolved in the same way as it was made.

Nihil facit error nominis cum de corpore constat. An error in the name is nothing when there is certainty as to the person.

Nihil habet forum ex scena. The court has nothing to do with what is not before it.

Nihil infra regnum subditos magis conservat in tranquillitate et concordia quam debita legum administratio. Nothing better preserves the subjects of the realm in tranquillity and concord than a due administration of the laws. 2 Co. Inst. 158.

Nihil iniquius quam aequitatem nimis intendere. Nothing is more unjust than to extend equity too far.

Nihil in lege intolerabilius est (quam) eandem rem diverso jure censi. Nothing in law is more intolerable than that the same case should be subject (in different courts) to different views of the law.

Nihil magis justum est quam quod necessarium est. Nothing is more just than what is necessary.

Nihil nequam est praesumendum. Nothing wicked is to be presumed.

Nihil perfectum est dum aliquid restat agendum. Nothing is perfect while something remains to be done.

Nihil peti potest ante id tempus quo per rerum naturam persolvi possit. Nothing can be demanded before the time when, in the nature of things, it can be paid.

Nihil possumus contra veritatem. We have no power against truth.

Nihil praescribitur nisi quod possidetur. There is no prescription for what is not possessed.

Nihil quod est contra rationem est licitum. Nothing that is against reason is lawful.

Nihil quod est inconveniens est licitum. Nothing that is improper is lawful. Co. Litt. 66a.

Nihil quod est licitum est inconveniens. Nothing that is lawful is improper.

Nihil simul inventum est et perfectum. Nothing is invented and perfected at the same moment.

Nihil tam conveniens est naturali aequitati quam unumquodque dissolvi eo ligamine quo ligatum est. Nothing is so consonant with natural equity as that each thing should be dissolved by the same means as it was bound.

Nihil tam conveniens est naturali aequitati quam voluntatem domini volentis rem suam in alium transferre ratam haberi. Nothing is more consistent with natural equity than to confirm the will of an owner who desires to transfer his property to another.

Nihil tam naturale est quam eo genere quidque dissolvere quo colligatum est. Nothing is so natural as that an obligation should be dissolved by the same principle by which it was contracted.

Nihil tam naturale est quam eo genere quidque dissolvere quo colligatum est; ideo verborum obligatio verbis tollitur; nudi consensus obligatio contrario consensu dissolvitur. Nothing is so natural as to dissolve anything in the way in which it was bound together; therefore the obligation of words is taken away by words; the obligation of mere consent is dissolved by the contrary consent.

Nihil tam proprium imperio quam legibus vivere. Nothing is so becoming to authority as to live according to the law.

Nil agit exemplum litem quod lite resolvit. A precedent accomplishes nothing if it settles one dispute by raising another.

Nil facit error nominis cum de corpore vel persona constat. An error in the name is immaterial when the body or person is certain.

Nil sine prudenti fecit ratione vetustas. Antiquity did nothing without a good reason.

Nil temere novandum. Nothing should be rashly changed.

Nimia certitudo certitudinem ipsam destruit. Too great certainty destroys certainty itself.

Nimia subtilitas in jure reprobatur. Too much subtlety in law is condemned.

Nimia subtilitas in jure reprobatur, et talis certitudo certitudinem confundit. Too great subtlety is disapproved of in law, and such certainty confounds certainty.

Nimum altercando veritas amittitur. By too much quarreling truth is lost.

Nobiles magis plectuntur pecunia, plebes vero in corpore. The higher classes are more punished in money, but the lower in person.

Nobiles sunt qui arma gentilitia antecessorum suorum proferre possunt. The gentry are those who are able to produce the heraldic arms of their own ancestors.

Nobiliores et benigniores praesumptiones in dubiis sunt praeferendae. When in doubt, the more generous and kind presumptions are to be preferred.

Nobilitas est duplex, superior et inferior. There are two sorts of nobility, the higher and the lower.

Nomen est quasi rei notamen. A name is, as it were, the distinctive sign (or signifier) of a thing.

Nomen non sufficit si res non sit de jure aut de facto. A name does not suffice if the thing does not exist by law or by fact.

Nomina si nescis, perit cognitio rerum. If you do not know the names of things, the knowledge of things themselves perishes.

Nomina si nescis, perit cognitio rerum; et nomina si perdas, certe distinctio rerum perditur. If you do not know the names of things, the knowledge of things themselves perishes; and, if you lose the names, the distinction of the things is certainly lost.

Nomina sunt mutabilia, res autem immobiles. Names are mutable, but things immutable.

Nomina sunt notae rerum. Names are the marks of things.

Nomina sunt symbola rerum. Names are the symbols of things.

Non accipi debent verba in demonstrationem falsam, quae competunt in limitationem veram. Words ought not to be accepted to import a false description when they are consistent with a true definition.

Non alio modo puniatur aliquis, quam secundum quod se habet condemnatio.A person may not be punished otherwise than according to what the sentence enjoins.

Non aliter a significatione verborum recedi oportet quam cum manifestum est aliud sensisse testatorem.We must depart from the (ordinary) significance of words only when it is evident that the testator had a different understanding. Dig. 32.69. pr.

Non auditur perire volens.One who wishes to perish is not heard.

Non bis in idem (or imperative, ne bis in idem). Not twice for the same thing. • That is, a person shall not be twice tried for the same crime. This maxim of the civil law expresses the same principle as the familiar rule against “double jeopardy.” Cases: [Double Jeopardy  183.1.]

Non concedantur citationes priusquam exprimat super qua re fieri decet citatio.Summonses should not be granted before it is expressed on what ground a summons should be issued.

Non consentit qui errat.A person who errs does not consent.

Non dat qui non habet.A person who does not have does not give.

Non debeo melioris conditionis esse quam auctor meus a quo jus in me transit.I ought not to be in better condition than the person to whose rights I succeed.

Non deberet alii nocere quod inter alios actum esset.A person ought not to be injured by what has taken place between other parties.

Non debet actori licere quod reo non permittitur.What is not permitted to the defendant ought not to be allowed to the plaintiff.

Non debet adduci exceptio ejus rei cujus petitur dissolutio.An exception (or plea) should not be made on the very matter of which a determination is sought (in the case at hand).

Non debet alii nocere quod inter alios actum est.A person ought not to be prejudiced by what has been done between others.

Non debet alteri per alterum iniqua conditio inferri.An unfair condition ought not to be brought on one person by the act of another.

Non debet cui plus licet quod minus est non licere.A person who is permitted to do the greater thing ought not to be forbidden to do the lesser.

Non debet dici tendere in praejudicium ecclesiasticae libertatis quod pro rege et republica necessarium videtur.What seems necessary for the king and the state ought not to be said to tend to the prejudice of spiritual liberty.

Non decet homines dedere causa non cognita.It is unbecoming to surrender people when no cause has been shown.

Non decipitur qui scit se decipi.A person is not deceived who knows himself to be deceived.

Non definitur in jure quid sit conatus.What an attempt is, is not defined in law.

Non differunt quae concordant re, tametsi non in verbis iisdem.Those things that agree in substance, even if not in the same words, do not differ.

Non dubitatur, etsi specialiter venditor evictionem non promiserit, re evicta, ex empto competere actionem.It is certain that even if the vendor has not given a special guarantee, an action ex empto lies against him, if the purchaser is evicted.

Non efficit affectus nisi sequatur effectus.The intention amounts to nothing unless some effect follows.

Non erit alia lex Romae, alia Athaenis; alia nunc, alia posthac; sed et omnes gentes, et omni tempore, una lex, et sempiterna, et immortalis continebit.There will not be one law at Rome, another at Athens; one law now, another hereafter; but one eternal and immortal law shall bind together all nations throughout all time.

Non est arctius vinculum inter homines quam jusjurandum.There is no closer (or firmer) link among men than an oath.

Non est certandum de regulis juris. There is no disputing rules of law.

Non est consonum rationi quod cognitio accessorii in curia christianitatis impediatur, ubi cognitio causae principalis ad forum ecclesiasticum noscitur pertinere.It is unreasonable that the cognizance of an accessory matter should be impeded in an ecclesiastical court, when the cognizance of the principal cause is admitted to appertain to an ecclesiastical court.

Non est disputandum contra principia negantem. There is no disputing against a person who denies first principles.

Non est justum aliquem antenatum post mortem facere bastardum qui toto tempore vitae suae pro legitimo habebatur. It is not just to make an elderborn a bastard after his death, who during his lifetime was accounted legitimate.

Non est novum ut priores leges ad posteriores trahantur. It is not an innovation to adapt earlier laws to later ones. Dig. 1.3.26.

Non est recedendum a communi observantia. There should be no departure from a common observance.

Non est regula quin fallat. There is no rule that may not deceive (or disappoint).

Non est reus nisi mens sit rea. A person is not guilty unless his mind is guilty. Cases: [Criminal Law  20. C.J.S. Criminal Law §§ 31–33, 35–39; Negligence § 913.]

Non est singulis concedendum quod per magistratum publice possit fieri, ne occasio sit majoris tumultus faciendi. That is not to be conceded to private persons which can be publicly done by the magistrate, lest it be the occasion of greater tumult.

Non exemplis sed legibus judicandum est. Not by examples but by the laws must judgment be made.

Non ex opinionibus singulorum, sed ex communi usu, nomina exaudiri debent. Names of things ought to be understood according to common usage, not according to the opinions of individuals. Cases: [Wills  456. C.J.S. Wills § 842.]

Non facias malum ut inde veniat bonum. You are not to do evil that good may come of it.

Non impedit clausula derogatoria quo minus ab eadem potestate res dissolvantur a qua constituuntur. A derogatory clause does not prevent things from being dissolved by the same power by which they were originally made.

Non in legendo sed in intelligendo leges consistunt. The laws consist not in reading but in understanding.

Non in tabulis est jus. It is not in books that the law is to be found.

Non jus ex regula, sed regula ex jure.The law does not arise from the rule (or maxim), but the rule from the law.

Non jus, sed seisinam facit stipitem.Not right, but seisin, makes a stock (from which the inheritance must descend).

Non licet quod dispendio licet.That which is permitted only at a loss is not permitted.

Non nasci et natum mori paria sunt.Not to be born and to be born dead are equivalent.

Non obligat lex nisi promulgata.A law is not binding unless it has been promulgated.

Non observata forma, infertur adnullatio actus.When the form has not been observed, an annulment of the act is inferred.

Non officit affectus nisi sequatur effectus. Sed in atrocioribus delictis punitur affectus, licet non sequatur effectus.The intention is not an offense unless an effect follow. But in the most atrocious crimes the intention is punished, although no effect follow.

Non officit conatus nisi sequatur effectus.An attempt does not harm unless a consequence follows.

Non omne damnum inducit injuriam.Not every loss produces an injury (i.e., gives a right to action).

Non omne quod licet honestum est.Not everything that is lawful is honorable; not everything that is allowable is morally right.

Non omnium quae a majoribus nostris constituta sunt ratio reddi potest.Reason cannot always be given for the institutions of our ancestors.

Non pertinet ad judicem secularem cognoscere de iis quae sunt mere spiritualia annexa.It belongs not to the secular judge to take cognizance of things that are merely spiritual.

Non possessori incumbit necessitas probandi possessiones ad se pertinere.It is not incumbent on the possessor of property to prove that his possessions belong to him.

Non potest adduci exceptio ejusdem rei cujus petitur dissolutio.An exception cannot be brought on the same matter whose determination is at issue (in the action at hand).

Non potest probari quod probatum non relevat. That cannot be proved which, when proved, is irrelevant.

Non potest quis sine brevi agere. No one can sue without a writ.

Non potest rex gratiam facere cum injuria et damno aliorum. The king cannot confer a favor that occasions injury and loss to others.

Non potest rex subditum renitentem onerare impositionibus. The king cannot load a subject with impositions against his consent.

Non potest videri desisse habere qui nunquam habuit. A person cannot be considered as having ceased to have a thing who never had it.

Non praestat impedimentum quod de jure non sortitur effectum. A thing that has no effect in law is not an impediment.

Non quod dictum est, sed quod factum est, inspicitur. Not what has been said but what has been done is regarded. Cases: [Wills  108. C.J.S. Wills §§ 217–221, 225.]

Non quod voluit testator, sed quod dixit in testamento inspicitur. Not what the testator wanted, but what he said in the will, is regarded.

Non refert an quis assensum suum praefert verbis an rebus ipsis et factis. It is immaterial whether a person gives assent by words or by acts themselves and deeds.

Non refert quid ex aequipollentibus fiat. It does not matter which of two equivalents happens.

Non refert quid notum sit judici, si notum non sit in forma judicii. It matters not what is known to the judge if it is not known to him judicially.

Non refert verbis an factis fit revocatio. It does not matter whether a revocation is made by words or by acts.

Non respondebit minor, nisi in causa dotis, et hoc pro favore doti. A minor shall not answer except in a case of dower, and here in favor of dower.

Non solent quae abundant vitiare scripturas. Superfluous expressions do not usually vitiate writings.

Non solum quid licet sed quid est conveniens considerandum, quia nihil quod inconveniens est licitum.Not only what is permitted but what is proper is to be considered, because nothing improper is lawful.

Non sunt longa ubi nihil est quod demere possis.There is no prolixity where there is nothing that you can omit.

Non temere credere est nervus sapientiae.Not to believe rashly is the sinew of wisdom.

Non valebit felonis generatio nec ad haereditatem paternam vel maternam; si autem ante feloniam generationem fecerit, talis generatio succedit in haereditate patris vel matris a quo non fuerit felonia perpetrata.The offspring of a felon cannot succeed to either a maternal or paternal inheritance; but if the felon had offspring before the felony, the offspring may succeed to the inheritance of the father or mother by whom no felony was committed.

Non valet confirmatio, nisi ille, qui confirmat, sit in possessione rei vel juris unde fieri debet confirmatio; et eodem modo, nisi ille cui confirmatio fit sit in possessione.Confirmation is not valid unless the person who confirms is in possession either of the thing or of the right of which confirmation is to be made, and, in like manner, unless that person to whom confirmation is made is in possession.

Non valet donatio nisi subsequatur traditio.A gift is not valid unless delivery (or transference) follows.

Non valet exceptio ejusdem rei cujus petitur dissolutio.An exception based on the very matter of which the determination is sought is not valid.

Non valet impedimentum quod de jure non sortitur effectum.An impediment that does not derive its effect from the law has no force.

Non verbis sed ipsis rebus leges imponimus.Not on words, but on affairs themselves do we impose laws.

Non videntur qui errant consentire.They who err are not considered as consenting. Cases: [Contracts  93. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 136, 147–148.]

Non videntur rem amittere quibus propria non fuit.They are not considered as losing a thing if it was not their own.

Non videtur consensum retinuisse si quis ex praescripto minantis aliquod immutavit.If a person has changed anything at the demand of a party threatening, he is not considered to have maintained his consent.

Non videtur perfecte cujusque id esse quod ex casu auferri potest.A thing is not considered completely to belong to anyone if it can be taken from him by chance (or occasion).

Non videtur quisquam id capere quod ei necesse est alii restituere.A person is not considered to acquire property in a thing that he must restore to another. Dig. 50.17.51.

Non videtur vim facere qui jure suo utitur et ordinaria actione experitur.A person is not judged to use force who exercises his own right and proceeds by ordinary action.

Noscitur a sociis.It is known from its associates. Cases: [Contracts  152; Statutes  193. C.J.S. Contracts §§ 307, 318–322, 327, 331; Statutes § 332.]

Noscitur ex socio qui non cognoscitur ex se.A person who is not known for himself is known from his associate. Cases: [Statutes  193. C.J.S. Statutes § 332.]

Notitia dicitur a noscendo; et notitia non debet claudicare.Notice is named from knowledge; and notice ought not to limp (that is, be imperfect).

Nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet, non praeteritis.A new enactment ought to impose form on what is to come, not on what is past. • A new regulation should not apply retroactively but from its enactment. 2 Co. Inst. 292.

Novatio non praesumitur.A novation is not presumed.

Novitas non tam utilitate prodest quam novitate perturbat.Novelty does not as much benefit by its utility as it disturbs by its novelty.

Novum judicium non dat novum jus, sed declarat antiquum.A new judgment does not make a new right, but declares the old.

Novum judicium non dat novum jus, sed declarat antiquum; quia judicium est juris dictum, et per judicium jus est noviter revelatum quod diu fuit velatum.A new judgment does not make a new right, but declares the old; because adjudication is the declaration of a right, and by adjudication the right is newly revealed which has long been hidden. 10 Coke 42.

Noxa caput sequitur.The liability follows the head or person. • Liability to make good an injury caused by a slave attaches to the master. Dig. 2.14.7.4.

Nuda pactio obligationem non parit.A naked agreement (i.e., without consideration) does not create an obligation. Dig. 2.14.7.4.

Nuda ratio et nuda pactio non ligant aliquem debitorem.Bare reason and naked agreement do not bind any debtor.

Nudum pactum est ubi nulla subest causa praeter conventionem; sed ubi subest causa, fit obligatio, et parit actionem.Naked agreement (nudum pactum) is where there is no consideration besides the agreement; but when there is a consideration, an obligation is created and it gives a right of action.

Nudum pactum ex quo non oritur actio.Naked agreement (nudum pactum) is that from which no action arises. Cases: [Contracts  75. C.J.S. Contracts § 120.]

Nul charter, nul vente, ne nul done vault perpetualment, si le donor n'est seise al temps de contracts de deux droits, sc. del droit de possession et del droit de properite.No grant, no sale, no gift, is valid forever unless the donor, at the time of the contract, is seised of two rights, namely, the right of possession and the right of property.

Nulla curia quae recordum non habet potest imponere finem neque aliquem mandare carceri; quia ista spectant tantummodo ad curias de recordo.No court that does not have a record can impose a fine or commit any person to prison; because those powers look only to courts of record.

Nulla emptio sine pretio esse potest.There can be no sale without a price.

Nulla impossibilia aut inhonesta sunt praesumenda; vera autem et honesta et possibilia.No impossible or dishonorable things are to be presumed; but things true, honorable, and possible.

Nulla pactione effici potest ne dolus praestetur.No agreement is sufficient to effect that there be no liability for fraud. Dig. 2.14.27.3.

Nulla virtus, nulla scientia locum suum et dignitatem conservare potest sine modestia.Without moderation, no virtue, no knowledge can preserve its place and dignity.

Nulle règle sans faute.There is no rule without fault.

Nulle terre sans seigneur.There is no land without a lord.

Nulli enim res sua servit jure servitutis.No one can have a servitude over his own property.

*Nullius hominis auctoritas apud nos valere debet, ut meliora non sequeremur si quis attulerit.*The authority of no person ought to have (such) power among us that we should not follow better (opinions) if anyone presents them.

Senatores sunt partes corporis regis.Senators are part of the body of the king.

Sensus verborum est anima legis.The meaning of words is the spirit of the law.

Sensus verborum est duplex, mitis et asper, et verba semper accipienda sunt in mitiore sensu.The meaning of words is twofold, mild and harsh; and words are always to be received in their milder sense.

Sensus verborum ex causa dicendi accipiendus est, et sermones semper accipiendi sunt secundum subjectam materiam.The sense of words is to be taken from the occasion of speaking them, and discourses are always to be interpreted according to the subject matter.

*Sententia a non iudice lata nemini debet nocere.*A judgment pronounced by one who is not a judge should harm no one.

*Sententia contra matrimonium nunquam transit in rem iudicatam.*A sentence against marriage never becomes a final judgment (i.e., res iudicata).

*Sententia facit jus, et legis interpretatio legis vim obtinet.*The judgment creates the right, and the interpretation of the law obtains the force of law.

*Sententia facit jus, et res iudicata pro veritate accipitur.*The judgment creates the right, and what is adjudicated is taken for truth.

*Sententia interlocutoria revocari potest, definitiva non potest.*An interlocutory judgment may be revoked, but not a final one.

*Sententia non fertur de rebus non liquidis.*Judgment is not given on matters that are not clear.

*Sequi debet potentia justitiam, non praecedere.*Power should follow justice, not precede it.

*Sermo index animi.*Speech is an index of the mind.

*Servanda est consuetudo loci ubi causa agitur.*The custom of the place where the action is brought is to be observed.

*Servitia personalia sequuntur personam.*Personal services follow the person (of the lord). • Such “personal services” were those “annexed to the person of the Mesne, as homage, fealty, etc.” 2 Co. Inst. 374.

Si aes pro auro veneat non valet. If bronze is sold for gold (the contract) is invalid.

*Si a jure discedas, vagus eris et erunt omnia omnibus incerta.*If you depart from the law, you will wander (without a guide), and everything will be in a state of uncertainty to everyone.

*Si alicujus rei societas sit et finis negotio impositus est, finitur societas.*If there is a partnership in any matter, and the business is ended, the partnership ceases.

*Si aliquid ex solemnibus deficiat, cum aequitas poscit subveniendum est.*If anything is lacking from formal requirements, when equity requires, it will be supplied.

Si assuetis mederi possis, nova non sunt tentanda.If you can be relieved by accustomed remedies, new ones should not be tried.

Sic enim debere quem meliorem agrum suum facere, ne vicini deteriorem faciat.Everyone ought so to improve his land as not to injure his neighbor's.

Sic interpretandum est ut verba accipiantur cum effectu.Such an interpretation is to be made that the words may be taken with effect.

Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas.Use your property so as not to damage another's; so use your own as not to injure another's property. Cases: [Negligence  1010; Nuisance  3; Torts  1. C.J.S. Negligence §§ 399, 567, 571; Nuisances §§ 10-14, 18, 20-21, 25-26, 28, 31-33, 37-38, 40-43, 47-48, 50-51, 55, 57, 59-60, 62; Torts §§ 2-7.]

Sicut natura nil facit per saltum, ita nec lex.Just as nature does nothing with a leap, so neither does the law.

Si duo in testamento pugnancia reperientur, ultimum est ratum.If two conflicting provisions are found in a will, the latter is decisive.

Sigillum est cera impressa, quia cera sine impressione non est sigillum.A seal is a piece of wax impressed, because wax without an impression is not a seal.

Si judicas, cognosce.If you judge, understand.

Silentium in senatu est vitium.Silence in the senate is a fault.

Silent leges inter arma.Laws are silent amid arms.

Si meliores sunt quos ducit amor, plures sunt quos corrigit timor.If the better are those whom love leads, the greater number are those whom fear corrects.

Similitudo legalis est casuum diversorum inter se collatorum similis ratio; quod in uno similium valet, valebit in altero.Legal similarity is a similar reason that governs various cases when compared with each other, for what avails in one similar case will avail in the other.

Simonia est voluntas sive desiderium emendi vel vendendi spiritualia vel spiritualibus adhaerentia. Contractus ex turpi causa est et contra bonos mores. Simony is the will or desire of buying or selling spiritualities, or things pertaining to them. It is a contract founded on a bad cause, and against morality.

Simplex commendatio non obligat. A simple recommendation does not bind. Cases: [Sales  261\(5\).]

Simplex et pura donatio dici poterit ubi nulla est adjecta conditio nec modus. A gift is said to be pure and simple when no condition or qualification has been annexed.

Simplicitas est legibus amica, et nimia subtilitas in jure reprobatur. Simplicity is a friend to the laws, and too much subtlety in law is condemned.

Sine possessione usucapio procedere non potest. Without possession, prescription (Roman usucapio) cannot proceed.

Singuli in solidum tenentur. Each individual is bound for the whole.

Si non appareat quid actum est, erit consequens ut id sequamur quod in regione in qua actum est frequentatur. If it is not clear what was done (or agreed on), the consequence will be that we follow what is commonly done in the place where the agreement was made. Dig. 50.17.34.

Si nulla sit conjectura quae ducat alio, verba intelligenda sunt ex proprietate, non grammatica sed populari ex usu. If there is no inference that leads to a different result, words are to be understood according to their proper meaning, not in a grammatical but in a popular and ordinary sense.

Si plures conditiones ascriptae fuerunt donationi conjunctim, omnibus est parendum; et ad veritatem copulative requiritur quod utraque pars sit vera, si divisim, quilibet vel alteri eorum satis est obtemperare; et in disjunctivis, sufficit alteram partem esse veram. If several conditions are conjunctively written in a gift, the whole of them must be complied with; and with respect to their truth, it is necessary that every part be true, taken jointly: if the conditions are separate, it is sufficient to comply with either one or the other of them; and being disjunctive, that one or the other be true.

Si plures sint fidejussores, quotquot erunt numero, singuli in solidum tenentur. If there are more sureties than one, however many they will be in number, they are individually liable for the whole.

Si quidem in nomine, cognomine, praenomine, agnomine legatarii testator erraverit, cum de persona constat, nihilominus valet legatum. If the testator has erred in the name, cognomen, praenomen, or title of the legatee, when there is certainty about the person, the legacy is nonetheless valid.

Si quid universitati debetur, singulis non debetur, nec quod debet universitas singuli debent. If anything is due to a corporation, it is not due to the individual members of it, nor do the members individually owe what the corporation owes.

Si quis cum totum petiisset partem petat, exceptio rei judicatae vocet.If anyone sues for a part when he should have sued for the whole, the judgment should constitute res judicata (against another suit). Cases: [Judgment ↪ 592. C.J.S. Judgments §§ 761–762, 765.]

Si quis custos fraudem pupillo fecerit, a tutela removendus est.If a guardian commits fraud against his ward, he is to be removed from the guardianship.

Si quis praegnantem uxorem reliquit, non videtur sine liberis decessisse.If anyone dies leaving his wife pregnant, he is not considered as having died childless.

Si quis unum percusserit cum alium percutere vellet, in feloniam tenetur.If a person kills one when he meant to kill another, he is held guilty of felony.

Si suggestio non sit vera, literae patentes vacuae sunt.If the suggestion is not true, the letters patent are void.

Sive tota res evincatur, sive pars, habet regressum emptor in venditorem.If the property is taken from the purchaser by eviction, whether whole or in part, he has an action against the vendor. Dig. 21.2.1.

Socii mei socius meus socius non est.The partner of my partner is not my partner.

Socii plures sunt quasi unum corpus, in eo quod unum jus habent, et oportet quod corpus sit integrum et quod in nulla parte sit defectus.Several partners are as one body, since they have one right, and it is necessary that the body be perfect, and that there be defect in no part.

Ubi non est condendi auctoritas, ibi non est parendi necessitas. Where there is no authority to establish (a rule), there is no necessity to obey.

Ubi non est directa lex, standum est arbitrio judicis, vel procedendum ad similia. Where there is not direct law, one must rely on the judgment of the judge or refer to similar cases.

Ubi non est lex, ibi non est transgressio quoad mundum. Where there is not law, there is not transgression, as far as this world is concerned.

Ubi non est manifesta injustitia, judices habentur pro bonis viris, et judicatum pro veritate. Where there is no manifest injustice, the judges are to be regarded as honest men, and their judgment as truth.

Ubi non est principalis, non potest esse accessorius. Where there is no principal, there can be no accessory.

Ubi nulla est conjectura quae ducat alio, verba intelligenda sunt ex proprietate non grammatica sed populari ex usu. Where there is no inference that would lead in another direction, the words are to be understood according to their proper meaning, not strictly according to grammar but according to popular usage.

Ubi nullum matrimonium, ibi nulla dos. Where there is no marriage, there is no dower.

Ubi onus ibi emolumentum. Where the burden is, there is the profit or advantage.

Ubi periculum, ibi et lucrum collocatur. Where the risk is, there also the profit accrues.

Ubi pugnantia inter se in testamento juberentur, neutrum ratum est. When two directions conflicting with each other were given in a will, neither is held valid.

Ubi quid generaliter conceditur, inest haec exceptio, si non aliquid sit contra jus fasque. Where a thing is granted in general terms, this exception is implied: if there is not anything contrary to law and right.

Ubi quis delinquit ibi punietur. Where anyone commits an offense, there will he be punished.

Ubi remedium, ibi ius. Where there is a remedy, there is a right.

Ubi verba conjuncta non sunt, sufficit alterutrum esse factum. Where words are not conjoined, it is enough that one or another (of the things enumerated) has been done.

Ultima voluntas testatoris est perimplenda secundum veram intentionem suam. The last will of a testator is to be fulfilled according to his true intention.

Ultimum supplicium esse mortem solam interpretamur. We consider death alone to be the extreme punishment.

Ultra posse non potest esse et vice versa. What is beyond possibility cannot exist, and the reverse (what cannot exist is not possible).

Una persona vix potest supplere vices duarum. One person can scarcely supply the place of two.

Unaquaeque gleba servit. Every lump of earth (on the land) is subject to the servitude.

Uniuscujusque contractus initium spectandum est et causa. The beginning and cause of each and every contract must be considered.

Unius omnino testis responsio non audiatur. Let the evidence of one witness not be heard at all.

Universalis sunt notiora singularibus. Things universal are better known than things particular.

Universitas vel corporatio non dicitur aliquid facere nisi id sit collegialiter deliberatum, etiamsi major pars id faciat. A university or corporation is not said to take any action unless the action was resolved by it as a body, even if a greater part of the body should act.

Un ne doit prise avantage de son tort demesne. One should not take advantage from his own wrong.

Uno absurdo dato, infinita sequuntur. When one absurdity has been allowed, an infinity follows.

Unumquodque dissolvitur eodem ligamine quo ligatur. Everything is dissolved by the same binding by which it is bound together.

Unumquodque eodem modo dissolvitur quo colligatur. Any obligation is discharged in the same manner as it is constituted.

Unumquodque eodem modo quo colligatum est dissolvitur. In the same manner in which anything was bound, it is loosened.

Unumquodque est id quod est principalis in ipso. That which is the principal part of a thing is the thing itself.

Unumquodque ligamen dissolvitur eodem ligamine qui et ligatur. Every obligation is dissolved in the same manner in which it is contracted.

Unumquodque principiorum est sibimet ipsi fides; et perspicua vera non sunt probanda. Each and every one of the general principles is its own pledge of trust, and plain truths need not be proved.

Unusquisque debet esse gnarus conditionis ejus cum quo contrahit. Everyone ought to be cognizant of the condition of the person with whom he makes contract.

Usucapio constituta est ut aliquis litium finis esset. Prescription (Roman usucapio) was instituted that there might be some end to lawsuits. Dig. 41.10.5.
