The Red Atlas

How the Soviet Union Secretly Mapped the World

John Davies and Alexander J. Kent

“During the Cold War, the Soviet military undertook a secret mapping program that’s only recently come to light in the West. Military cartographers created hundreds of thousands of maps and filled them with detailed notes on the terrain and infrastructure of every place on Earth. It was one of the greatest mapping endeavors the world has ever seen. . . . Much of what’s known about this secret Soviet military project is outlined in The Red Atlas.”—National Geographic

The Elements

A Visual History of Their Discovery

Philip Ball

“In this fascinating visual history of the elements, Ball spans over 3,000 years of scientific discovery from the classical era of Plato to the present day. Each element and story behind their discovery has been told in detail with the use of engaging images including scientific firsts in photography, as well as interesting artifacts and some beautiful historical drawings. More than this, the book is virtually a history of scientific discovery itself.”—BBC Science Focus

Writing in a Dark Time

Teju Cole

“In this erudite collection of observations written over the past three years, art historian Cole meditates on art, identity, politics, and literature to decipher ‘the fractured moment in our history.’ . . . Offering a window into his articulate worldview, Cole brings into sharp relief the very humanity he seeks.”

D-Day Through French Eyes

Normandy 1944

Mary Louise Roberts

“Mary Louise Roberts uses the diaries and memoirs of French civilians to narrate a history of the French at D-Day that has for too long been occluded by the mythology of the allied landing. The switch of point of view from American to French is an exercise in empathy that renews history at the core. What a gripping and artful book.”

Rommel

The End of a Legend

Ralf Georg Reuth

“The legend of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel—the Desert Fox—is three-fold: he was a simple soldier who did his duty and knew nothing of Nazism; he was a commander of superlative talent who ran rings around the British in North Africa in 1941-42; he was a leader in resistance to Hitler and gave his life to the cause after the failure of the July 1944 plot. In this lucid, exemplary volume, Reuth shows that all three of these assumptions are false . . . and reveals the truth in a brilliant book.”—Independent

Taking Leave, Taking Liberties

American Troops on the World War II Home Front

Aaron Hiltner

“An important and powerful contribution to the literature on the World War II home front. Hiltner recovers the long-forgotten history of American liberty ports and reveals that U.S. civil-military relations were far more violent and chaotic than most Americans may want to believe.”—Aaron O’Connell, University of Texas at Austin

The Makers of the Modern World (complete series)

Complete 32-volume set

Edited by Alan Sharp

A 32-volume boxed set, The Makers of the Modern World is a monumental look at all the signatories of the Versailles treaty.

“Makers of the Modern World is to be welcomed because it is designed to provide concise biographies, around 200 pages long, of major politicians and intellectuals from all over the world. All of them are also put into the larger context of the age and the often momentous decisions that they were involved in.”—V.R. The Huns Have Got my Gramophone!

Advertisements from the Great War

Amanda Jane Doran and Andrew McCarthy

This book collects some of the most original advertisements created between 1914 and 1918. The advertisements reveal how advertisers sought to create new markets for products that took into account social change throughout the course of World War I.

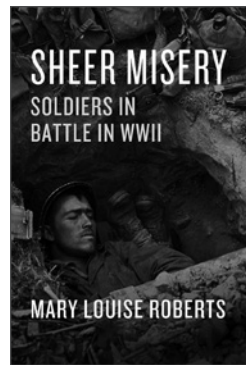

“Cigarettes, gramophones, even guard dogs. There was nothing that the Great War didn’t provide a good excuse to buy.”—Atlantic

Sheer Misery

Soldiers in Battle in WWII

Mary Louise Roberts

“Roberts writes not about commanders and their strategies but about ordinary soldiers and their sufferings. With a rare blend of warm empathy and cool detachment, she portrays war fighting not as a romantic tale of guts, glory, and fame, but a wretched trial of tedium, pain, and fear. Gritty, intimate, and compelling, this book makes a major contribution to our understanding of the true character of warfare.”—David M. Kennedy, Pulitzer Prize-winning author of Freedom From Fear

Paths of Fire

The Gun and the World It Made

Andrew Nahum

“This is a brilliant book about guns which isn’t about guns. Instead, it’s about progress, intellectual and industrial, seen from a wholly original and convincing new perspective. Full of surprises, unexpected connections, and portraits of remarkable figures from our recent history, I can recommend it without reservation.”—Andrew Marr, journalist, broadcaster, and author

Unseen Glass Plate Photographs of the Western Front

Edited by Carl De Keyzer and David Van Reybrouck

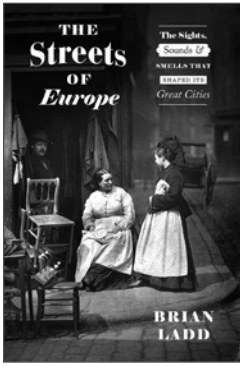

“The book is a collection of previously unseen and restored WWI photographs of lesser-seen photo subjects, such as training, African colonial troops and postmortem portraits of Belgian soldiers.”
—Chicago Tribune

“In this beautiful book, the reader is invited to dive into the First World War. . . . It is not only the mud, the corpses, and the craters in these images. It is a whole daily life parallel to the fighting that is revealed.”—L’Echo

Flashpoint Trieste

The First Battle of the Cold War

Christian Jennings

This is the inside story of how Trieste found itself poised on a knife edge at the end of World War II. Situated near the boundaries of Italy, Austria, and Yugoslavia, this pivotal port city was caught in May 1945 between advancing Allied, Russian, and Yugoslav armies. Told through the stories of twelve men and women from seven different countries, Flashpoint Trieste chronicles, on a human scale, the beginning of the Cold War.

Drink Map of Oxford

Introduced by Stuart Ackland

At first sight, this intriguing map appears to offer a guide to the pubs of Victorian Oxford, designed in a similar way to tourist maps today. But an explanation on the reverse shows this wasn't the original intention. Published in 1883 by the Temperance Movement, the map was designed to show how the poorer areas of Oxford were heavily populated with drinking establishments and the text explains the detrimental effect of alcohol on local inhabitants. Today, it offers a fascinating insight into the drinking habits of the former citizens of this world-renowned city.

Vivat Rex!

An Exhibition Commemorating the 500th Anniversary of the Accession of Henry VIII

Arthur L. Schwarz

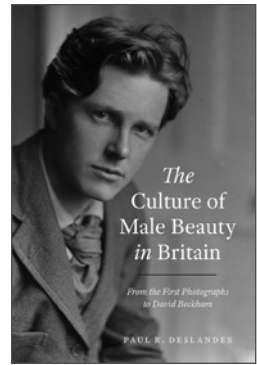

The complicated personality and dramatic reign of England's King Henry VIII—visionary, tyrant, monarch, bully, defender of the faith, destroyer of monasteries, lover and libertine—have been immortalized (and fictionalized) in literature, on stage, and in film. Through books, manuscripts, handwritten letters, and prints, Vivat Rex! brings the real Henry and the machinations of his court and times to life.

Gregory Nobles

“Using only scraps of historical evidence, Nobles thoroughly succeeds in tracing the life of an individual African American—Betsey Stockton—and simultaneously illuminating the end of slavery in the North. Nobles is a gifted writer, an excellent historian, and an imaginative researcher, and his well-timed book is a pleasure to read.”

Who Freed the Slaves?

The Fight over the Thirteenth Amendment

Leonard L. Richards

“This study of the political drive toward the complete abolition of slavery is most welcome. Richards has rescued from obscurity James Ashley, who managed the course of the Thirteenth Amendment through the House of Representatives. The reader will come away with greater appreciation for the courage and skill of those antislavery leaders who never gave up.” —James M. McPherson, author of Battle Cry of Freedom

Wives Not Slaves

Patriarchy and Modernity in the Age of Revolutions

Kirsten Sword

“A beautifully written, strongly argued narrative that will transform how readers think about the evolution of women’s rights in the colonial US.” —Choice

“Sword reconstructs the stories of wives who fled their husbands between the mid-seventeenth and early nineteenth century US, comparing their plight with that of other runaway dependents. She explores the links between local justice, the emerging press, and transatlantic political debates about marriage, slavery, and imperial power.” —Law & Social Inquiry

The Beat Cop

Chicago's Chief O'Neill and the Creation of Irish Music

Michael O'Malley

"What O'Malley accomplishes in The Beat Cop is a highly readable, lush, adventurous examination of Chief O'Neill as a whole person, not just as the collector for the Irish musicians' Bible. The stories of O'Neill's adventures are entertaining and enjoyable, and O'Malley's writing is welcoming to both informed insiders and newcomers."—Sean Williams, coauthor of Bright Star of the West: Joe Heaney, Irish Song Man

Slaughterhouse

Chicago's Union Stock Yard and the World It Made

Dominic A. Pacyga

"An illuminating history of this Chicago industry long vital to the city and the nation."

—Wall Street Journal

"In Pacyga's capable hands, the arc of the stockyards mirrors Chicago's—a model of the Industrial Revolution that fell on hard times in the late twentieth century and is now reinventing itself. His writing is as streamlined and efficient as the disassembly lines that inspired the book."—Chicago Tribune

Never a City So Real

A Walk in Chicago

Alex Kotlowitz

The book is a tour of the people of Chicago: Kotlowitz introduces us to the owner of a West Side soul food restaurant who believes in second chances, a steelworker turned history teacher, the "Diego Rivera of the projects," and the lawyers and defendants who populate Chicago's Criminal Courts Building. These empathic, intimate stories chronicle the city's soul and its lifeblood.

"Kotlowitz uses his immense skill for capturing the stories of those who are often overlooked to paint a compelling portrait of one of America's iconic capitals."

The Encyclopedia of Chicago

Edited by James R. Grossman, Ann Durkin Keating, and Janice L. Reiff

"The most spectacular reference available on any US city."

—Library Journal

"The motto of any worthy encyclopedia ought to be that byword of Sgt. Joe Friday, 'Just the facts, ma'am,' and in as lucid a manner as you can deliver them. This The Encyclopedia of Chicago does indeed deliver, and consummately well. It also delivers excellent maps and carefully chosen, unobtrusively placed photographs. . . . I hope this doesn't get around, but Chicago is just now one of the best cities in the world, lively and beautiful and happily youthful in spirit."

Running the Numbers

Race, Police, and the History of Urban Gambling

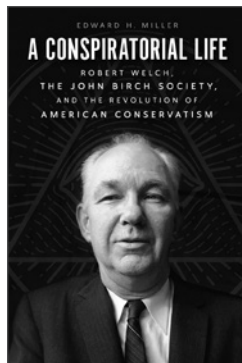

Matthew Vaz

"In Running the Numbers, Vaz explains how games of chance, once considered a personal vice, became an acceptable source of jobs, school funding, and broad public virtue. Smartly argued and rigorously evidenced, the book not only places the informal gambling economy of black neighborhoods at the center urban life, but it also offers a vivid analogue—really a prologue—for our current debates over marijuana legalization and the ongoing racism of drug enforcement."—N.D.B. A Conspiratorial Life

Robert Welch, the John Birch Society, and the Revolution of American Conservatism

Edward H. Miller

“Traces the origins and history of the John Birch Society and, in the process, provides historical perspective on the far-right populism of the Trump era. . . . On the whole, as Miller’s book makes clear, Republican politicians of the early 1960s were more eager to court the John Birch Society than to distance themselves from it.”

“[An] eye-opening examination of the different hierarchies and ideologies employed by prison gangs around the world. . . . A revealing study with broad implications for policymakers and law enforcement.”—Kirkus

“Who wields power ‘inside?’

Roth’s chilling and fascinating comparative history of prison gangs demonstrates how far prisons across the world can be considered micro-states, with gangs the crude and exploitative authorities that emerge to run them through violence, fear—and a rough-and-ready sense of order.”—Mark Galeotti, author of The Vory: Russia’s Super-Mafia

Shoddy

From Devil's Dust to the Renaissance of Rags

Hanna Rose Shell

"In a brilliantly quixotic, scholarly rich, fabulously illustrated trek, Shell guides readers through the history of the reprocessing of used clothing and textiles, reflecting on human ornament, fears of contagion (think of the associations of 'shoddy' versus 'virgin' wool), and the evolution of a vast industry."

The Most Powerful Idea in the World

A Story of Steam, Industry, and Invention

William Rosen

"The Most Powerful Idea in the World is a sneaky history—ostensibly about the origins of the steam engine, though actually about much more. . . . Rosen is a natural and playful storyteller, and his digressions both inform the narrative and lend it an eccentric and engaging rhythm."

Phantom Islands

In Search of Mythical Lands

Dirk Liesemer

"An entertaining exploration of thirty islands that are no longer on the map. Liesemer recounts these tall tales with great clarity, and teases out the truth with charm and rigor."—Malachy Tallack, author of The Un-Discovered Islands

"In this elegantly produced, quietly quirky book, Liesemer presents brief histories of 30 islands that have appeared on maps and inspired explorations: Atlantis, Breasil, Saint Brendan's Island, Rupes Nigra, Thule. Digging Up the Dead

A History of Notable American Reburials

Michael Kammen

"Who is buried in Grant's Tomb? The answer to this old joke—and the story behind it—can be found in this well-written, in-depth account of high profile Americans whose remains were reburied for a number of surprising reasons. . . . While situating the ritual of reburial within the American psyche, Kammen effectively captures the eternal dual fascination with greatness and with the dead, and the power of their conjunction in the burial of heroes."

The Legendary Detective

The Private Eye in Fact and Fiction

John Walton

"A masterly analysis of private detective work within the context of popular culture, revealing their interweaving and mutual influence. Mass-market literature made detective work look glamorous, which in turn provided a model and an incentive for memoirists. Detectives wrote field and case reports that they and the home office polished and no doubt embellished to impress clients whose expectations were influenced by popular culture; fact and fiction blurred. Walton's analysis is brilliant."

America's Philosopher

John Locke in American Intellectual Life

Claire Rydell Arcenas

"A wonderfully wide ranging and insightful history of John Locke's changing reputation in America, moving from the early eighteenth century to the present with terrific scholarly command and authority. Locke's invention, more than a century after the fact, as the key political theorist of the American Revolution is only the most striking of its findings. Geschlecht III

Sex, Race, Nation, Humanity

Jacques Derrida

"With meticulous care, Derrida interrogates Heidegger's thinking on questions of language, nationalism, the homeland and the foreign, and sexual difference, all the while sensitive to the particularities of Heidegger's German, and the challenges of rendering it into a French philosophical idiom. A masterclass in reading."—Samir Haddad, author of Derrida and the Inheritance of Democracy

Dispatches from Dystopia

Histories of Places Not Yet Forgotten

Kate Brown

"Brown's book masterfully straddles the line between personal travelogue and academic research. Her essays jump from a war-torn region of Central Asia to a forgotten hotel basement in Seattle, and Brown argues that history is much better served by historians who put themselves in the places they research and the essays they write."

Juvenescence

A Cultural History of Our Age

Robert Pogue Harrison

Juvenescence ranges brilliantly across cultures and history, tracing the ways that the spirits of youth and age have inflected each other from antiquity to the present.

The Marvelous Clouds

Toward a Philosophy of Elemental Media

John Durham Peters

"The book is, on one level, an ambitious re-writing—a re-synthesis, even—of concepts of media and culture. On another, it is a rich and entertaining compendium of arcaea, covering everything from shipwrighting to planetary motion, from bone evolution to calendrical design. Ultimately, it is nothing less than an attempt at a history of Being, from an unusually brisk, cheerful and pragmatic Heideggerian."

The Arc of Love

How Our Romantic Lives Change over Time

Aaron Ben-Ze'ev

"When roughly half of married couples get divorced, and many others engage in extramarital affairs, the very idea of sustaining a long-term monogamous relationship raises skepticism among many people who view this as not only unrealistic but even undesirable. Thus, the timing of this book is excellent. . . . This book improves and becomes more enjoyable to read as one progresses through the different facets of romantic love, and ends with a solid defense of both the possibility and (perhaps more importantly) desirability of attaining profound romantic love that lasts."—Philosophia

After the Beautiful

Hegel and the Philosophy of Pictorial Modernism

Robert B. Pippin

"Pippin uses the work of Manet and Cezanne (the grandfather and father of modernism) to embark on a kind of philosophical time travel with Hegel. Pippin persuasively argues that Hegel's thought remains relevant for helping one understand the achievements of modernist painting as philosophical achievements. . . . The theoretical and historical sweep of Pippin's study is impressive and delightfully illuminating. . . . Highly recommended."

Jan Hendrix

Jan Hendrix: Paradise Lost collects works produced by Hendrix over two decades, in a variety of media, in which the ecologically-minded artist both responds to the landscape of Australia’s Botany Bay and celebrates the legacy of botanist Sir Joseph Banks. Hendrix’s beautiful and thought-provoking works blend silkscreen, sculpture, and the moving image, serving as a tribute to the richness of the natural environment as well as a stark response to the ecological ravages of global colonialism.

Little Black Dress

From Mourning to Night

Shannon Meyer

“The Little Black Dress is illustrated with full page photographs . . . ranging from the black crepe of a Victorian widow’s mourning to maternity and cocktail dresses and the ne plus ultra: a sleeveless froufrou of transparent black lace and tulle. It’s a wedding gown guaranteed to give the bride’s mother a heart attack. . . . Entertaining reading.”—Wall Street Journal

The Suit

Form, Function and Style

Christopher Breward

“Expertly shows how the adoption of the suit was a manifestation of societal change as the great European wars of the 17th and 18th centuries morphed into the Industrial Revolution and thereon into the modern democratic world. Indeed, it would be hard to name another facet of our modern culture that has so effortlessly and variously expressed the cross-purposes of, say, Baudelaire, Le Corbusier, and Mao Zedong.”—Wall Street Journal

Gloves

An Intimate History

Anne Green

This beautifully illustrated history of gloves draws on examples from across the world to explore their cultural significance. From hand-knitted mittens to exquisitely embroidered confections, Anne Green discusses gloves both as material objects with their own fascinating history and as fictional creations in folktales, literature, films, etiquette manuals, paintings, and advertisements.

“Absolutely fascinating: a timely foray into the strange world of gloves in all their symbolic and functional glory.”

Cairo to Constantinople

Francis Bedford’s Photographs of the Middle East

Sophie Gordon

“Less than two months after Prince Albert died, plunging his widow, Victoria, into a half century of mourning, she bade farewell to her eldest son and heir, Edward, as he set off on a four-month tour of the Middle East. Though Edward’s adventures are long forgotten, the visit’s true lasting legacy is [this] rare collection of more than 180 pictures, which captured an area rarely previously photographed.

Through the Lens of Janet Stone

Portraits, 1953-1979

Ian Archie Beck

The wife of the distinguished engraver Reynolds Stone established a kind of literary salon where their wide circle of friends could visit, work, and flourish. Her photographs of these occasions feature informal portraits of the leading cultural figures of the day, including composers, actors, novelists, poets, and philosophers. These portraits offer beguiling insight into a special set of circumstances: an idyllic place and time and a group of people drawn together by two contrasting but complimentary personalities, the shy genius of Reynolds met by the outgoing style and glamour of Janet.

How to be a Good Parent

Compiled by Jacqueline Mitchell

This text brings together bits from the best of advice books of the 1920s and '30s, taking readers through all the challenges involved in raising a child. Among the topics discussed are good—and bad—behavior, how to dress one's dear son or darling daughter, mealtime, and the dreaded morning and bedtime routines. By turns humorously old-fashioned and timeless, this book is a charmingly illustrated guide to what any parent can tell you is the world's most difficult job.

The Cabinet of Linguistic Curiosities

A Yearbook of Forgotten Words

Paul Anthony Jones

Open The Cabinet of Linguistic Curiosities and you'll find both a word and a day to remember, every day of the year. Each day has its own dedicated entry, on which a curious or notable event—and an equally curious or notable word—are explored. On the day on which flirting was banned in New York City, for instance, you'll discover why to “sheep's-eye” someone once meant to look at them amorously. The English language is vast enough to supply us with a word for every occasion—and this linguistic “wunderkammer” is here to prove precisely that.

That's the Ticket for Soup!

Victorian Views on Vocabulary as Told in the Pages of Punch

David Crystal

This original and amusing collection reveals how many present-day feelings about words can be traced to the satire of a century ago.

Crystal turns to the pages of the English satirical magazine Punch, between its first issue in 1841 and the death of Queen Victoria in 1901. Then, as now, people had strong feelings about the flood of new words entering English, and Crystal extracts the articles and cartoons that poked fun at the jargon of the day.

A Band with Built-In Hate

The Who from Pop Art to Punk

Peter Stanfield

"Eloquently framing their success as the only successful 1960s UK pop/rock group that didn't want to be either the Beatles or the Rolling Stones, Stanfield locates the Who (and crucially their peak years, during which they were, he writes 'not copyists but innovators') at a boundary-breaking intersection of pop and art-rock."—Irish Times

The Botany of Gin

Chris Thorogood and Simon Hiscock

An account of how gin has been developed and produced, including London’s “gin craze” in the eighteenth century and its popular modern resurgence. Garnished with sumptuous illustrations of the plants that tell the story of this complex drink, this enticing book delves into the botany of gin from root to branch. As this book’s extraordinary range of featured ingredients shows, gin is a quintessentially botanical beverage with a rich history like no other.

Herbs A to Z

The St. Louis Herb Society

Herbs are among the hardest-working and most versatile plants around, but many children—and even adults—don’t know much about these natural wonders. This book is a visual introduction to herbs for young readers. It takes them through nearly sixty well-known (and some less-well-known) herbs, explaining the facts and stories that surround them. Each herb is illustrated and paired with a picture of its pollinators.

Platypus Matters

The Extraordinary Story of Australian Mammals

Jack Ashby

"Ashby makes the case that Australia's wildlife is not a collection of oddities and species that can kill you, as it is most often, even well meaningly, portrayed. He explores how this traditional narrative about Australia's native animals arose, how it is incorrect, and why it matters. Some of the species met along the way, including echidnas, wombats, Tasmanian devils, and scaly tailed possums, leave lovely impressions that will be lasting portrayals. Both serious and fun, Platypus Matters is compelling reading."

Whales, Dolphins, and Porpoises

A Natural History and Species Guide

Edited by Annalisa Berta

"I take the good old-fashioned ground that the whale is a fish," Ishmael says confidently in Melville's Moby-Dick. Old-fashioned indeed—whales are mammals, not fish. Thankfully, our scientific understanding of whales has come a long way since 1851, and much of that knowledge is collected in Whales, Dolphins, and Porpoises, a sperm whale-sized compendium of all things cetacean."—Wired

Red Leviathan

The Secret History of Soviet Whaling

Ryan Tucker Jones

"Jones explores the hitherto untold story of Soviet whaling, which, over the course of the twentieth century, resulted in the slaughter of more than half a million of the planet's largest animals. Red Leviathan is a moral story that is neither accusatory nor forgiving, but which reveals how Soviet hopes that communism would forge a better relationship with the natural world were thoroughly disappointed."

Bankrupt in America

A History of Debtors, Their Creditors, and the Law in the Twentieth Century

Mary Eschelbach Hansen and Bradley A. Hansen

"Bankrupt in America is a tour de force analysis of bankruptcy legislation and its impact over the twentieth century. It shows the interplay among state and federal legislation, economic conditions, social stigma, and the role of certain individuals in accounting for changes over time and across states. The authors offer an institutional and cliometric account that deftly draws on economics, history, law and political science. It will become the resource for many scholars, and I hope legislators."—Lee J. Alston, Indiana University

Down and Out in the New Economy

How People Find (or Don't Find) Work Today

Ilana Gershon

"Gershon vividly illuminates how workers have become 'brands' or 'businesses' in the new economy. Sounds liberating, but beware. As Gershon shows with numerous examples, the gain of the 'personal brand' may entail the loss of the person. And the gain of the 'personal business' may entail the loss of loyalty, security, and connection. This is a cautionary tale for all job seekers and the people who hire them."—Barry Schwartz, author of Why We Work

Accounting for Capitalism

The World the Clerk Made
Michael Zakim

"In this exhilarating study, Zakim introduces us to a most unlikely set of heroes: business clerks. Dedicating their lives to the paper machine, this vanguard made the market, as the market made them. They forged an eerily modern world in which life under the aegis of capital became an unremarkable and deeply consequential pillar of our civilization. This book establishes Zakim as one of our most perceptive interpreters of capitalism."

August

Christa Wolf

Christa Wolf was arguably the best-known and most influential writer in the former East Germany, having grown up during the Nazi regime. August is Wolf's last piece of fiction, written in taut, affectionate prose, it offers a new entry into her work and, incidentally, her first and only male protagonist. More than a literary artifact, this new novel is a perfectly constructed story of a quiet life well lived. For both August and Christa Wolf, the past never dies.

Gramsci's Fall

Nora Bossong

A novel at once about social justice, romance, and Gramsci. Forty-six-year-old Anton Stöver's marriage is broken. His affairs are a thing of the past, and his career at the university has reached a dead end. One day he is offered the chance to go to Rome to conduct research on Antonio Gramsci, at one time the leading figure of Italian communism. With a subtle sense of the absurd, Nora Bossong explores the conflicts between having intense feelings for another and fighting for great ideals.

The Divine Song

Abdourahman A. Waberi

The Divine Song takes us from the shores of Africa to Sammy's ancestors' arrival in the Americas in the hold of the slave ships. African tales, religious practices, segregation, the civil rights movement, addiction, and jail—Sammy's life comes to encompass the whole of the African American experience. At a time when social and racial divisions have yet again come into sharp relief, this lyrical novel by one of African literature's rising stars is necessary reading for anyone who celebrates the resilience of art.

Followed by 'To the Icebergs'

J.M.G. Le Clezio

"Characters remain the prey of their own sensations . . . but the effect is more haunting for being so softly spoken. And when Le Clezio chooses to employ his talent for dissociation, he does so to truly unearthly effect . . . This is Nobel-quality writing, an international author with a mature style telling a story to the peak of his capacity. The English language needs more of it."—Telegraph

A Naked Singularity

A Novel

Sergio De La Pava

"One of the 10 best fiction books of 2012. . . . A propulsive, mind-bending experience. . . . The novel's chaotic sprawl, black humor and madcap digressions make it a thrilling rejoinder to the tidy story arcs portrayed on television and in most crime fiction. . . . The Safe House

A Novel

Christophe Boltanski

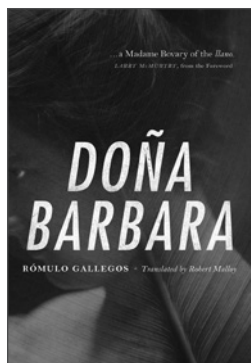

The Safe House was a literary sensation when published in France in 2015 and won the Prix de Prix, France's most prestigious book prize. With hints of Oulipian playfulness and an atmosphere of dark humor, this is an unforgettable portrait of a self-imprisoned family.

"Complex and meticulously plotted; this mystery house full of odd characters will make the reader consider storytelling as the building of a physical and mental space."—Kirkus

Doña Barbara

Rómulo Gallegos

Rómulo Gallegos is best known for being Venezuela's first democratically elected president. But in his native land he is equally famous as a writer responsible for one of Venezuela's literary treasures, the novel Doña Barbara. Published in 1929 and all but forgotten by Anglophone readers, Doña Barbara is one of the first examples of magical realism.

Hallelujah Station and Other Stories

M. Randal O'Wain

"Played out across a range of Southern urban settings from Memphis to Asheville, the stories feature a cast of modern misfits encompassing diverse voices. . . . Queer, Black, adolescent, and disabled characters shine with discomfiting rigor, demanding purpose if not freedom from their circumstances. . . . From start to finish, the characters of Hallelujah Station and Other Stories grapple with overwhelming circumstances, refusing to let go. Like Jacob with the Angel, some emerge from their struggles victorious, some wandering, and, all of them, changed."

Porcelain

Poem on the Downfall of My City

Durs Grünbein

"Porcelain addresses Dresden's thorny history through the leitmotif of porcelain. The 50 poems that make up the cycle probe deeply the history of Dresden, adopting then discarding allusive threads to explore the ruin of the city. . . . Here, porcelain represents the fragility of past glory; it also offers Grünbein a model for the presence of the past, and for his collection itself. In light of this multivalent symbol, the poems can be read as shards of language, splinters of speech; each evokes a whole that it will never reconstruct."

The Stray Shopping Carts of Eastern North America

A Guide to Field Identification
Julian Montague

“A field guide to shopping carts is really a field guide to shopping: Montague’s poignant classifications reveal the often bleak, sometimes beautiful landscapes in which we acquire and dispose of goods. By the end of the book, the carts come to embody urban brokenness in a deeply human way.”

Inventing Photography

William Henry Fox Talbot in the Bodleian Library

Geoffrey Batchen

“Batchen, a history professor at the University of Oxford, surveys the career of Henry Fox Talbot in this illuminating, richly illustrated offering. . . . Batchen draws on a fascinating mix of work from the inventor’s career—Talbot’s renderings of lace, which in his day were regarded as trompe l’oeil wizardry, still seem arrestingly true to life—and brings Talbot’s artistic evolution to life in energetic prose. This foray into the origins of photography delights.”—Publisher’s Weekly Distributed for Bodleian Library Publishing

Animated Advertising

200 Years of Premiums, Promos, and Pop-ups, from the Collection of Ellen G. K. Rubin

Ellen G. K. Rubin

Animated Advertising demonstrates how animated and dimensional paper devices have been used throughout US history to promote products, art, entertainment, and ideas. Displaying the creativity of advertisers in food, fashion, tobacco, pharmaceuticals, travel, music, politics, and more, this text is a lively look at an underexplored niche in the history of American marketing, graphic design, and paper engineering.

The Cult of Creativity

A Surprisingly Recent History

Samuel W. Franklin

"In Franklin's account, creativity, the concept, popped up after the Second World War in two contexts. One was the field of psychology. Since the nineteenth century, when experimental psychology (meaning studies done with research subjects and typically in laboratory settings, rather than from an armchair) had its start, psychologists have been much given to measuring mental attributes. . . . The pages Franklin devotes to the contemporary creativity landscape are the freshest and most fun in the book."

Flowers, Guns, and Money

Joel Roberts Poinsett and the Paradoxes of American Patriotism
Lindsay Schakenbach Regele

Joel Roberts Poinsett's (1779–1851) brand of self-interested patriotism illuminates the paradoxes of the antebellum United States. He was a South Carolina investor and enslaver, and a secret agent in South America who fought surreptitiously in Chile's War for Independence. A fascinating historical account of a largely forgotten statesman, who pioneered a form of patriotism that left an indelible mark on the early United States.

Bird Day

A Story of 24 Hours and 24 Avian Lives

Mark E. Hauber

“As much a meditation as a book, Hauber and Angell’s Bird Day gives us a bird to think about at each hour of the day and night. They take us around the world, visiting birds including the brown-headed cowbird (5 a.m.), the ocellated antbird (noon), Cook’s petrel in New Zealand (10 p.m.), and twenty-one others. Bird Day is an excellent pairing of text and art, one I will return to again and again as the hours go by.”—Joan E. A Splendour of Succulents & Cacti

Caroline Ball

Succulents, especially cacti, are both the focus of serious ecological studies and the darlings of designers and style influencers. Their endearing qualities have recently given them the status of trendy "plant pets," but this "succulentomania" is not new. A stunning gift book of eighteenth-century illustrations of succulents and cacti.

Audubon at Sea

The Coastal and Transatlantic Adventures of John James Audubon

Edited by Christoph Irmischer and Richard J. King

"In a new selection of John James Audubon's ocean-going writings, we sense his obsessive quest to draw every bird he saw, even though he disliked being on the water. Everywhere we feel the pressure of his obsessive quest to record and draw every bird he could, and his journals in particular expose all the moody complexity of a man Irmischer describes as 'passionate, outrageous, salty, vain, and brutal, despondent, vulnerable, sentimental, self-ironical, and tender.'"—Jenny Uglow, New York Review of Books

Phenomena

Doppelmayr's Celestial Atlas

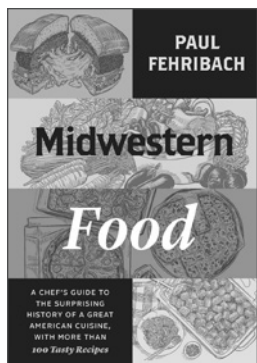

Giles Sparrow

"It seems something of a disservice to a work of this seriousness to say how beautiful it is, but that is what will first strike the reader. . . . This is a book ultimately as accessible to the non-scientist as it is to the specialist. Doppelmayr's mathematical notations of the motions of the planets, the charts of loops, parabolas and ellipses might at first seem a baffling panorama of unknowing. With Sparrow's help, however, they give up a story of increasing fascination."—Spectator

Midwestern Food

A Chef's Guide to the Surprising History of a Great American Cuisine, with More Than 100 Tasty Recipes

Paul Fehribach

"What the great Edna Lewis did for Southern cooking, Fehribach has surely done here for his beloved Midwest. Not only does he introduce you to forgotten dishes like Persimmon Pudding and the Horseshoe, but he also leads you by the hand, helping you recreate the dishes originally created by the German, Scandinavian, Jewish, and Polish settlers who planted roots here and made the region their home. I've eaten hot dish and Delta tamales and chili dozens of times, but now I want to go make them in my own kitchen."—Steve Dolinsky, Food Reporter, NBC 5 Chicago and 13-time James Beard Award-winner

Taming the Tongue in the Heyday of English Grammar (1711-1851)

Bryan A. Garner

Heated arguments can break out over many things: slander, insults to a person's honor—and, during one period in English history, grammar. In his new book detailing the controversies and fraught histories that accompanied efforts to regularize English grammar, Garner shows that the grammarians of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries were a surprisingly contentious and opinionated lot.

Giorgio Agamben

In Pinocchio, Giorgio Agamben turns his keen philosopher's eye to the famous nineteenth-century novel by Carlo Collodi. From Agamben's virtuosic interpretation of this classic story, we learn that we can harbor the mystery of existence only if we are not aware of it, only if we manage to cohabit with an area of non-knowledge, immortal and very near. Richly illustrated with images from three early editions of Collodi's novel, this new volume will delight enthusiasts of both literature and philosophy.
