THE CONTROL AND SALE OF LIQUOR IN CANADA

Historical Champy

The first legislative restriction regarding intoxicating liquors in what is now the Dominion of Canada was with reference to their sale to the Indians. In New France an "arret" of 1663 declared that "since the foundation of the colony the sale of liquor had always been prohibited on account of the fury of these people when in a state of intoxication" and imposed further penalties on those continuing the traffic. In the English colonies, too, laws were enacted providing for the imposition of heavy fines or imprisonment for selling or giving liquor to the Indians. Restrictions, more or less stringent, were imposed, too, on the sale of liquor to the white population. The usual method of regulation was the issue by the local authorities of licenses to manufacture or sell alcoholic beverages with more or less strict conditions imposed, the non-observance of which resulted in cancellation of the licence.

In the middle of the nineteenth century a considerable agitation for the total prohibition of the traffic in liquor developed both in the United States and in the British North American provinces. This found expression in various enactments designed to lessen the evils of intemperance. In 1853 the municipal councils of Upper Canada were authorized to pass by-laws to regulate licences and to limit their number or to prevent absolutely the sale of liquor by retail within the municipality. These provisions were modified from time to time and in 1866 the various Acts were revised and consolidated. In 1855 the municipal councils of Lower Canada had conferred upon them powers of regulation of the traffic in liquor and prohibition of its sale. In 1866 the county councils were authorized to pass such by-laws for the whole county; if they failed to do so by a stipulated time the local councils might then act. In 1860 and 1866 amendments were passed extending the powers of the local councils. In 1855 New Brunswick passed a law prohibiting "the importation, manufacture and traffic in intoxicating liquors". Provision was made for the annual appointment in each parish of an agent to import, buy and sell liquors for medicinel, mechanical, chemical or sacramental purposes. The provisions for the enforcement of this Act were so defective, howsvor, that much friction and irritation resulted and it was repealed the following year. In 1864 the Dunkin Act, passed by the Legislature of the United Province of Canada, provided that any municipal council could prohibit the retail sale of intoxicating liquors in townships and smaller localities if the majority of the electors within the municipality declared in favour of the law.

The distribution of legislative powers, as set forth in sections 91-95 of the British North America Act of 1867, left some doubt as to the respective jurisdictions of the Dominion and provincial Governments in regard to the liquor question. Control over the importation of liquor was generally conceded to belong to the Dominion. As to regulation of the sale of liquor, it was claimed that the provinces had jurisdiction because to them had been assigned "shop, saloon, tavern, auctioneer and other licences in order to the raising of a revenue for provincial local and municipal purposes" (92-9); "municipal institutions in the province" (92-8); "property and civil rights in the province" (92-13); and "generally all matters of a merely local or private nature in the province" (92-16). On the other hand, it was claimed that the licences were given to the provinces merely for the purpose of raising a revenue and that, apart from this, they should belong to the Dominion as part of "the regulation of trade and commerce"(92-2); or as coming within the scope of "criminal law" (91-27) or of customs and excise, since, it was argued, the right to import and manufacture liquor implied the right to sell. The Dominion had the right, also, "to make laws for the peace, order and good government of Canada in relation to all matters not coming within the classes of subjects assigned exclusively to the legislatures of the provinces.

The uncertainty as to the rights of the Dominion and provincial Governments in regard to the liquor question caused much confusion for several years after Confederation. In Ontario, when the Licence Law was separated from the Municipal Act and passed as a separate statute in 1869, the provisions as to prohibition by municipalities were not embodied in it nor were they inserted in the Municipal Act when it was revised in 1873. In Quebec, the Municipal Code of 1870 retained the provisions of the old law authorizing municipal councils to pass prohibitory by-laws. In 1869 the Nova Scotia Legislature passed a law providing that no licence for the sale of intoxicating liquor should be granted unless the application was accompanied by a petition from two-thirds of the rate-payers of the polling district in which the tavern was to be established. The constitutionality of this law was upheld by the courts. On the other hand, a New Brunswick statute of 1871, providing that no licence should be granted in a municipality where the majority of the rate-payers petitioned against it, was declared ultra vires, chiefly on the ground that it was a regulation of trade and commerce which belonged exclusively to the Dominion.

In 1876 the Ontario Legislature passed a new licence law known as the Crooks Act which took from the municipal councils the power of granting licences and pleced it in the hands of three commissioners, appointed by the Government, in each city or electoral district. The Act also imposed further restrictions in respect of tavern licences, hours of closing, etc. In response to appeals made from time to time for prohibitory legislation that would be applicable to the whole of Canada, the Dominion Government in 1878 passed the Canada Temperance Act, more commonly known as the Scott Act, which provided that, on a petition from one-fourth of the electors in any county or city, an election was to be held and, if a majority of the votes polled favoured the Act, a proclamation would be issued bringing it into force after the date of expiration of the licences then in force. From the date of the adoption of the Act the sale of intoxicating liquors, except as expressly stated in the Act, was prohibited. Provision was made for sales for medicinal, sacramental and mechanical purposes by druggists and other licensed vendors. Distillers, brewers and wholesalers might sell in quantities of 10 gallons and upwards (8 gallons and upwards in the case of wine and beer) at one time to druggists and other licensed persons, or to such persons as they had good reason to believe would carry it forthwith beyond the limits of the county or city or of any adjoining county or city where the Act was in force. Penalties of $50 for a first offence, $100 for a second offence and two months' imprisonment for a third and every subsequent offence were imposed. The Act might be repealed on a similar petition to the above followed by a favourable vote. Decisions either for or against the Act, as decided by the majority vote, were to remain in force for three years. It was further provided that the Dunkin Act should not be brought into force in any new locality and that the bringing into force of the Scott Act should have the effect of superseding any by-law passed under the former.

The constitutionality of the Canada Temperance Act was soon disputed. It was, however, sustained by the Privy Council in 1882 (Russell v. The Queen) for the reason that it did not fall within any of the powers assigned to the provinces and was valid as "maintaining the peace, order and good government of Canada". From this decision the inference was drawn that the Dominion had supreme authority over liquor licences and that the rights of the povinces were confined to raising a revenue therefrom. In the session of 1883 the Dominion Parliament passed the Dominion Licence Act, popularly known as the McCarthy Act, establishing a Dominion system of hotel, shop, vessel and wholesale licences. This Act, made applicable to all parts of Canada where the Scott Act was not in force, followed largely the lines of the Crooks Act and was, in many respects, more stringent than the licence laws of several of the provinces.

In 1883 the Privy Council, in a test case from Ontario (Hodge v. the Queen) upheld the provincial legislation and regulations on the grounds that they properly came under the head of municipal institutions, the enforcement of provincial laws and matters of a local or private nature, that they did not interfere with the regulation of trade and commerce and did not conflict with the Canada Temperance Act. While this decision validated the provincial law it was questioned whether it voided the Dominion Licence Act. Most of the provinces athered to their own licence laws and in some two sets of licences were issued.

The question of the constitutionality of the Dominion law was finally carried to the Privy Council which decided that both the McCarthy Act and an amending Act of 1864 were ultra vires of the Dominion Parliament. The net results of the decisions in the above cases and also the Brewers and Malsters case in 1897 may be briefly stated as follows: The licensing of shops and taverns is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the provinces; the Canada Temperance Act which provides for local option in counties or districts of the provinces is within the jurisdiction of the Dominion and the licensing of brewers and distillers, although duly licensed by the Dominion, is also within the competence of provincial legislation.

The question of the prohibition or regulation of the liquor traffic has figured largely in Canadian politics. It has cut right across existing party divisions and has embarrassed the leaders on both sides. To follow in detail the historical record of each province in dealing with the liquor problem would require more space than the scope of this bulletin permits. It is possible merely to indicate a few of the salient features.

The Scott Act was adopted in a large portion of the Maritime Provinces shortly after its enactment and proved generally acceptable. The other provinces made, on the whole, little use of the Act preferring to develop local option through provincial legislation. During the years 1884 and 1885 the Scott Act was adopted in many counties throughout Ontario. Difficulties soon arose, due mostly to controversy as to whether the Dominion or provincial officers were bound to enforce the Act. This was settled in 1887 by legislation which provided that the officers and machinery of the Licence Act should be available for the enforcement of the Scott Act. Dissatisfaction had grown so strong, however, that the latter was repealed in 1888 and 1889 in county after county by decisive majorities. An agitation was begun for the re-enectment of the prohibitory clauses of the Municipal Act which had been omitted when the municipal and licence laws were separated (see Page 1). In 1890 local option provisions were introduced in the Ontario Liquor Licence Act. A municipal council might pass a by-law that no licences to sell liquor might be issued in the municipality. Approval of the by-law by a three-fifths majority of the electors was necessary and it might not be repealed for three years and then only on a three-fifths majority of the electors approving. Quebec always retained the clauses of the Municipal Code authorizing local councils to pass prohibitory by-laws and refuse licences. The tendency in all provinces was, in general, towards restrictive legislation and more stringent municipalities throughout Canada adopted local option under provincial statutes.

The agitation for wider prohibition had never abated. Resolutions in favour of a Dominion prohibitory law were, from time to time, introduced in the Dominion Parliament. During the session of 1884 a resolution declaring "that the right and most effectual legislative remedy for the evils of intemperance is to be found in the enactment and enforcement of a law prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes" was adopted by a vote of 122 to 40. However, an amendment declaring that the public sentiment of Canada was then ripe for such legislation was defeated by a vote of 107 to 55. In 1887 a resolution in favour of immediate prohibition was defeated by a vote of 112 to 70 and in 1869 by 99 to 59. A Royal Commission was appointed in 1892 to inquire into the working of the liquor traffic and prohibitory legislation. It took evidence and conducted inquiries throughout Canada and in several of the United States. Four of the Cummissioners reported adversely to Prohibition while a fifth presented a minority report strongly in its favour.

Manitoba was the first Canadian province to submit the question of prohibition to a plebiscite. During 1892 a Bill was introduced in the Manitoba Legislature "to enable the electors of Manitoba to vote upon the advisability of introducing a law totally prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage into or in the province of Manitoba". The result of the vote in an electoral list of 46,669 was For, 18,637; Against, 7,115. In 1893 the New Brunswick Legislature adopted a resolution in favour of Dominion wide prohibition "of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage". In Ontario, in the municipal elections of 1894, a vote was taken on the question of "the prohibition by competent authority of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage in the province". This vote resulted in a majority for prohibition of 81,769, the total vote polled being 303,209 of a voters' list of 549,202. Similar resolutions were adopted in other provinces and votes on the question taken at different times during the next few years.

A Dominion wide plebiscite taken in 1898 showed a majority of 13,886 in favour of a Dominion prohibitory law. The number of votes polled, however, was only 44 per cent of the number of names on the voters' list. The decision of the Government, as summarized by Sir Wilfred Laurier, was that "the expression of public opinion as recorded at the polls in favour of prohibition did not represent such a proportion of the electorate as would justify the introduction of a prohibitory measure". The results of the provincial plebiscites, likewise, were not considered decisive enough to warrant the enactment of provincial prohibition laws. It was not until after the outbreak of the Great War, in fact, that there was any real departure from the local option system as developed under the Scott Act and the provincial Licence Acts.

During the years 1916 and 1917, as a war policy, legislation prohibiting the sale of elcoholic liquors, except for medicinal and scientific purposes, was passed in all the provinces except Quebec where similar legislation was passed in 1919. The prohibition extended to the sale of beer and wine except in Quebec. Native wine could be sold, however, in Ontario.

In aid of provincial legislation prohibiting or restricting the sale of intoxicating liquors, the Dominion Government in 1916 passed a law making it an offence to send intoxicating liquors into any province to be dealt in contrary to the law of that province. In 1919 this Act was changed to read that "on the request of the Legislative Assembly of a province a vote would be taken on the question that the importation and thebringing of intoxicating liquors into such province be forbidden". If the majority of those voting was found to be in favour of such prohibition, the Governor in Council was to declare it in force.

After the war the provinces continued under prohibition for varying periods. Plebiscites were taken from time to time to ascertain the will of the electorate as to thether the policy of prohibition, adopted as an emergency measure, should be continued. During 1921 Quebec and British Columbia discarded the existing prohibition laws and adopted the policy of liquor sale under government control. The same course was followed by Manitoba in 1923, Alberta in 1924, Saskatchewan in 1925, Ontario and New Brunswick in 1927 and Nova Scotie in 1930. Thus Prince Edward Island is the only province still adhering to a policy of prohibition.

In 1928 the Dominion Government passed "the Importation of Intoxicating Liquors Act" (18-19 George V. c. 31) prohibiting the importation into any province of intoxicating liquor unless consigned to His Majesty, the Executive Government or government agency vested with the right of selling intoxicating liquor. The provisions of the Act do not apply to the transportation of intoxicating liquor through a province by a common carrier by water or railway if in unbroken mackages, the importation by licensed distillers or brewers for blending purposes only; transfer between distilleries; the importation of intoxicating liquor for sacramental or medicinal purposes or for manufacturing or commercial purposes other than for the manufacture or use thereof as a beverage.

The provincial Liquor Control Acts have been framed to conform to conditions peculiar to the localities where they are in force and no two are exactly alike. The salient feature of all is the establishment of a provincial monopoly of the retail sale of alcoholic beverages with the practical elimination of private profit therefrom. Partial exception is made in the retail sale of malt liquor, by brevers or others, which certain provinces permit while reserving regulative rights and taxing such sales heavily. One province permits local wine growers to sell at retail under certain restrictions. In all the provinces, however, spirits may be bought only at government liquor stores. The provincial monopoly extends only to the retail sale of alcoholic beverages, the manufacture of such being still in private hands but under the supervision of the Liquor Boards or Commissions. The original Liquor Control Acts have been modified from time to time as deemed advisable. Brief summaries of the legislation under these Acts are given below:

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Under the Prohibition Act, liquor is dispensed by Sovernment vendors to holders of prescriptions given by practising physicians for modicinal use only.

From 1918 to 1935 the enforcement of the Prohibition Act was in the hands of a Commission appointed by the Government, but in 1935 the incoming Government abolished the Commission and placed the enforcement of the Act on the same footing as all other law enforcement in the Province by transferring it to the Department of the Attorney-General.

The remaining net profits are paid into the Consolidated Revenue Fund at the direction of the Provincial Treasurer and appropriated to the public service of the province. Prior to the passing of this new Act in 1928, it was specified that the net profits after providing for the reserve fund should be disposed of as follows: fifty per cent to the Consolidated Revenue Fund and fifty per cent to the municipalities in the province.

SALES BY LIQUOR CONTROL BOARDS

Data on gross sales, other revenue, and net profits of the Provincial Liquor Boards are tabulated in Table 1. In connection with the figures on gross sales it is essential to note that for Quebec, Manitoba, and Alberta (prior to April 1, 1936), and for Ontario (after July 24, 1934), the sales of beer made directly by the brewers to the licensees are not included. Data on such sales are given in the footnotes to the table.

It should be noted that the values as given do not represent the sales values to the final consumers as in most provinces the sale of beer by the glass is permissible. Of course, all the liquor sold in any province is not consumed within the province. The tourist traffic is a very important factor in this connection.

All the revenue resulting from the Liquor Control Acts is not paid to the Liquor Boards. In certain provinces, permit fees are paid directly to the Government and do not pass through the Board. Table 1 further indicates the total accruing to the Governments through the control of liquor sales.

The reports of the Boards do not in all cases show the quantities of liquors sold and in comparing values for a series of years or between provinces it should be borne in mind that price variations may be an important factor. Information as to quantities of liquors sold, insofar as available, is given in the footnotes to Table 1.

PRODUCTION AND STOCKS

Production figures as solvits and alt ligures, as given in Table 3, are taken from the reports of the Department of National Revenue to mich the distillers, browers and liquor warehouses are required to make regular reports. Data on the output of wine, Table 4, are taken from the Industrial Census reports. As the bulk of the spirits and part of the malt liquor goes into warehouses it has been considered necessary to show warehouse statistics in detail; these data, Tables 5, 6 and 7, also have been taken from the reports of the Department of National Revenue. The output of epirits has increased greatly during the past few years, but the gain has been accompanied by large increases in stocks in warehouses; on March 31, 1939, there were over 28 million proof gallons of spirits in warehouses.

Imports and Exports

Data on imports and exports as shown in Tables 8 to 10 have been taken from the Bureau's reports on the Trade of Canada. It will be noted that the figures on exports of spirits do not agree with the warehouse exports given in Table 6; the latter cover only exports in bond.

Of course, no effort has been made to estimate smuggling or illegal traffic in liquor; and it is not possible to estimate the quantities carried across the border by tourists leaving the country.

/ The excise duty which was included in the value of distilled spirits, chiefly whickey, imported into Canada from countries entitled to the British Preferential Tariff since the fiscal year 1920-21 is excluded as from April 1, 1935. Imports in the fiscal years 1935-6 particularly from the United Kingdom, are consequently lower than would otherwise be the case.

APPARENT CONSUMPTION

It is not possible to obtain accurate figures on Canadian consumption of liquor. Except in Nova Scotia, Quebec, Ontario and Alberta, the Liquor Boards do not publish figures to shw sales on a gallonage basis and even were such data on quantity sales available for all provinces, they would not necessarily represent Canadian consumption. For example, Canada's great tourist traffic must be considered for it is likely that the quantities consumed by individual tourists, when taken in total, reach a considerable amount. Further, there is no definite information regarding the illegal traffic of liquor, though inquiry has revealed that such illicit business has reached fairly large proportions.

In Tables 11, 12 and 13 an attempt has been made to indicate separately the apparent consumption in Canada of spirits, halt liquors and wines. Obviously, these computations are subject to error for the reasons mentioned above, and also because no consideration has been given to increases or decreases in the quantities held in stock by the Boards or by licensees. For example, owing to exceptionally favourable conditions abrond the Liquor Boards may, in certain years, buy heavily to replenish stocks or create reserves; such purchases would unduly weight the apparent consumption figure for these years. The figures in these tables have been arrived at as follows:

Spirits. - Practically the total production of spirits is placed in bonded warehouses from where it is released for various purposes as indicated in Table 6 on Warehouse Transactions. The quantities shown as "Entered for Consumption" are released from warehouse, duty paid, presumably for consumption for beverage purposes in Canada. However, part of these may be exported. Under the heading "Exported in bond " in Table 6 there are given data to show the quantities shipped in bond (free of excise duty) to foreign countries. In Table 9, total exports are shown. It is assumed that the difference is made up from exports ut of the quantities "Entered for Consumption". Accordingly the supply of spirits available in Canada for home consumption or for export must be the sum of the quantities shown under (a) Entered for Consumption; (b) Imports and (c) Exports in bond, and if the total domestic exports and re-exports of imported goods are deducted from this total the remainder indicates the apparent consumption in Canada.

Prior to 1922, the quantities included under the heading "Entered for Consumption", as shown in the reports of the Department of National Revenue, included non-potable as well as potable spirits. It is not possible to make the separation for earlier years and as data for such would not be comparable with those for 1922 and later years, only the latter have been shown in Table 11.

Malt Liquors. - Only a small part of the output of malt liquors is placed in warehouses. The available supply is, therefore, made up of (a) Production; (b) Changes in Warehouse stock; and (c) Imports, and by deducting the domestic exports and re-exports of imported goods from this total supply, it is possible to obtain a figure to show the apparent consumption in Canada.

Vines. - The apparent consumption of native wine is obtained by dividing the rates of excise tax into the total tax collections. This is believed to furnish a better measure of consumption than the method formerly used, (i.e., subtracting exports from production), since part of each year's production is not consumed in that year but placed in storage for maturing. The apparent consumption of imported wines is arrived at by deducting from the imports into Canada the re-exports of foreign supplies.

STATISTICS OF CRIME

Certain statistics of crime are reproduced herewith in view of their association in the popular mind with the consumption of liquor and in order that this aspect may be studied. Table 14 shows, for the years 1900-37, convictions for indictable offences which include serious breaches of the law and also convictions for non-indictable offences which include illegal acts of a minor nature which are dealt with by police agistrates and justices of the peace. Table 15 shows convictions for indictable offences, by age groups, during the years 1921-37. Table 16 shows the population of Canada by similar groups according to the 1931 census theorem and as estimated for succeeding years.

In any study of criminality the composition of the population in respect of age and sex distribution is extremely important. Crime is much more frequent among males than females and most frequent among young men below the age of 39 or 40. Consequently when a population contains an abnormally large proportion of young men a higher crime rate is to be expected. Other things being equal, the normal expectation is for a larger proportion of criminals among immigrants because a migrating population ordinarily contains a disproportionately large number of males in the prime of life. Immigration may thus tend to raise the crime rate in a country merely because of the age and sex distribution favourable to crime. Thus the heavy immigration of 1900-14 brought in an abnormally high proportion of these arrivals and the sudden stoppage of immigration at the beginning of the war and also the emigration of these arrivals and the departure of Canadians for Overseas Service made heavy innoads upon the male population at these ages.

In a study the results of which appeared in previous issues of this Bulletin an index of population was constructed in which each unit of males 20-39 years was given a weight of 3 and the remainder a weight of 1 since the criminal statistics for the years 1900 up to about 1929 show that there were roughly three major convictions per unit of males 20-39 for every one per unit of the remainder of the population. It was found that this index varied remarkably closely with an index of convictions for indictable offences, indicating that the trend of crime as shown by the annual statistics of major convictions was a reflection of increases and decreases in the population, especially of the sex and at the ages most closely connected with crime.

In recent years a significant change has taken place in the age distribution of criminals. Gradually the weight shifted towards the earlier ages so that the 3 to 1 weight for ages 20-39 no longer applied. The heavy increase in convictions among males in the 16-20 year age group during the years 1929-31, as shown in Table 15, suggests that the financial deback of 1929 and the lack of employment and other circumstances arising therefrom were prime causes in the disproportionate growth of serious crime among young men.

It is apparent, therefore, that the trend of crime over a period of years, such as is shown in Table 14, may reflect changes in the composition of the population, and does not in or by itself and without internal analysis of the figures throw light on the causes of crime in general. The reader is, therefore, cautioned against superficial comparisons of statistics and hasty generalizations as to the relation between crime and liquor consumption without taking into consideration differences in the age and sex distribution of the population and other factors extraneous to changes in drinking habits which may affect the crime rate.

Crimes definitely associated with the liquor traffic, such as illicit stills, driving while drunk, etc., are shown separately in Table 14. Even such convictions form an unreliable ground for judgment as to the comparative amount of drunkenness under different systems of regulation. Differences in the severity of law enforcement at different times may, apart from any changes in the drinking habits of the average Canadian, affect the statistics of such convictions. The great increase in the number of automobiles in recent years and the growth of tourism, bringing large additions to the Canadian population at certain seasons, have necessitated stricter enforcement of traffic laws. In fact adequate statistical proof of any direct relation between increases in specific crimes and liquor control or even liquor consumption is lacking.

MORTALITY STATISTICS

Table 17 shows statistics of deaths attributed to alcoholism for Canada and provinces over a period of year: and likewise deaths due to cirrhosis of the liver. The latter, while of alcoholic origin in many instances, my be due to causes in no way connected with alcoholism, hence a separate classification of deaths from cirrhosis, definitely specified alcoholic, is shown.

As with crime, the relation between alcohol consumption and disease and death is very complex and it is difficult to obtain conclusive evidence thereon. It is a common procedure to take deaths from alcoholism as a percentage of total deaths and to base on this an index of increase or decrease in deaths from alcoholism from year to year. This, however, may lead to wrong conclusions. For example, a decrease in the total number of deaths (owing perhaps to decreasing infant mortality) would increase the proportion of deaths attributed to alcoholism and, conversely, an increase in the total number of deaths (due to epidemics, war, etc.) would decrease the proportion of alcoholic deaths without proving either an increase in the amount of alcoholism as a cause of death le doubtful, especially when such is contributory only and other causes may be assigned. These are but a few of the difficulties confronting the student who seeks to obtain statistical evidence of the relation between alcoholism and disease and mortality and to compare this under different systems of sale and control of liquor.

In fact the compilation of deaths attributed to alcoholism is useful to the vital statistician and may even properly be used for comparisons in time and place and between geographical units if proper care is taken to allow for the influence of different bases of assignment, differences in the age and sex constitution of the population and such other factors extraneous to changes in drinking habits as may effect the rate. Most certainly comparisons of crude rates when isolated from other information are extremely questionable.
