Hesselius, Gustavus

Delaware chief "Lapowinsu" or Lappawinze (Getting Provisions), ca 1737

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Hesselius, Gustavus

Notes: OPPS NEG.805 B

An old glass negative of this subject (now deteriorated and gone) was on file in the Bureau of American Ethnology for many years (under Negative Number 805-b) and a print was evidently requested from the Historical Society of Pennsylvania ca. 1947-1952 for reference only. Whether the Historical Society of Pennsylvania is aware that their photograph was copied here is uncertain. In any case, requests for photographs of this painting should be referred to the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

Original painting by Gustavus Hesselius, ca. 1737, is in Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

One of the signers of the "Walking Purchase."

Date of original, ca. 1737.

Painted ca. 1735 "...more than two years before the Walk"-- W. J. Buck, Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography, VII, 1883. Quoted by Hodge in notes to Hodge, ed. of McKenney and Hall.

Illingworth, William H. ?

General Custer and slain elk

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Illingworth, William H. ?

Notes: OPPS NEG.43252

Extract from a letter written by General Custer to his wife: "Stockade" on the Yellowstone, September 6, 1873. I think I told you in my letter of eighty pages about my chasing elk four miles and killing three. Since then I have had the good fortune to kill a fine large buck elk taller than "Dandy" weighing cleaned eight hundred pounds, and with the handsomest pair of antlers I ever saw, and such a beautiful coat. I killed him only a mile and a half from camp, sent for a wagon, and carried him entire back with us, when the officers and men, and even those belonging to the scientific party, flocked to the grassy plot in front of my tent to see him. The photographer who accompanied the scientists hitched up his photograph-wagon and drove over to take a picture of what they called the "King of the Forest." All the officers and the photographer insisted that not only the game but the hunter should appear in the picture. So I sat down, dressed as I was in my buckskins, resting one hand on an antler, and you may judge of the immense size of the elk when I tell you that as I sat there my head only reached to about half the height of the antlers. The picture is to form one of the series now being collected on the expedition under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institute.

Photograph answering the description given by General Custer in letter to his wife, September 6, 1873. He states that the picture was to "form one of the series now being collected on the expedition under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institute." Although the files of BAE, SI and NM contain no record of the SI's having collected or received any photos pertaining to Custer's Yellowstone expedition, the BAE files contain a series of stereo prints attributed to the Wheeler expedition (in the field 1873 and other years of same decade) among which this photo was.

Cherokee man, George Lowrey
1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: King, Charles Bird ?
Stanley, John Mix, 1814-1872
Notes: OPPS NEG.44654

It seems likely that this is George Lowrey (a Cherokee, see Bureau of American Ethnology Bulletin 30 and Mooney, 19th AR-BAE), but it was probably painted by J.M. Stanley, not Catlin. See Stanley, J.M., Portraits of North American Indians, Smithsonian Institution (Pub. No. 53), Washington, December, 1852, page 15, where he lists "Keeth-la or Dog. (Painted 1844.) Commonly called Major George Lowrey...He is painted in the attitude of explaining the wampum..." On page 18, in describing his painting of the International Indian Council at Tahlequah, 1843, Stanley refers to Lowrey's explanation of the wampum at that council, and quotes his speech. --MCB, 8-57; called to my attention by W.C. Sturtevant.

Thought by USNM to be from painting by C.B. King. The owner of the original painting was unknown to the Museum in 1939.

1 Photograph (5x6 in)

Creator: Kleinschmidt, Jacob
Artist: Verelst, Willem
Notes: OPPS NEG.1129 B 1

The following information is condensed from the handbook of American Indians, Bureau of American Ethnology, Bulletin 30, (which see): Tomochichi (spelled also Tomochachi, Temochichi, Thamachaychee, etc.) was a Creek chief who established himself at the town of Yamacraw (present Savannah, Georgia) shortly after 1721. On the foundation of the Georgia colony by Oglethorpe in 1733, Tomochichi assumed a friendly attitude toward the newcomers and was instrumental in bringing about a treaty of alliance between that colony and the Lower Creeks in that year. In 1734, with his wife, nephew, and several others, he accompanied Oglethorpe to England, where his portrait was painted. He continued to be helpful to the colonists after his return, until his death, which occurred in his own town of Yamacraw, October 5, 1739, he being then perhaps 75 years of age. He was given a public funeral at Savannah.

See also J. R. Swanton, Bureau of American Ethnology Bulletin 137, page 210. Swanton believes that the Yamacraw may have been part of the Yamasee. See also in Alice G. B. Lockwood, "Gardens of Colony and State," 1934, page 267. Caption: "Portrait of Tomo-Chi-Chi at 91 [sic], with the nephew who was his adapted son, Toanakowhi. Painted by Verelst in London during their stay there with Oglethorpe, whose successful establishment of the Georgia Colony was largely due to Tomo-Chi-Chi's friendship and loyalty."

Legend of the picture: "Tomo Chachi Mico / oder Konig Von Yamacran [Yamacrau] und Toanahowi Seines / Bruders des Mico oder Koniges Von Etichitas [Etchitas] Sohn. / nach dem Londischen Original in Augspurg nachgestochen von / Joh. Jacob Kleinschmidt."

Since Eastman drew this sketch from an original by Kern and not from life, he probably did it after February 27, 1850 when "he was instructed to prepare illustrations for Schoolcraft's great work" (cf. David I. Bushnell, Jr., "Seth Eastman: The Master Painter of the North American Indian", SMC Volume 87, Number 3, Wash., 1932, page 1).

McFatrige, Arthur E.

Dakota winter count by unidentified Indian artist
 1 Photograph (8x10 in)
 Photographer: McFatrige, Arthur E.
 Notes: OPPS NEG.57487
 The artist was High Hawk, according to passage from article by McFatrige's granddaughter (Dorothy McFatrige McBride, "Hoosier Schoolmaster among the Sioux," Montana, 22:4, 78-97): "High Hawk's most treasured possession was a history of his people and their home country which he recorded in hieroglyphics on an Indian-tanned calfskin. The story it told spanned many years and times: from hunting forays to the coming of the whites, from harmony with nature to sickness with smallpox, from the old free way to reservation confinement. The history was considered extremely valuable and High Hawk would not, under any circumstances, allow it out of his keeping.
 Date: not recorded; original was collected between 1895-1902.
 "Print from original glass plate negative made by Arthur E. McFatrige, who was a teacher at He Dog's Camp Day School on the Rosebud Reservation from 1898 to 1906," typed on back of print lent by Denver Art Museum.
 "I had known the chief for several years before he allowed me to photograph the calfskin record and himself and his family. For this occasion High Hawk and his wife dressed themselves in their finest ceremonial garments." (page 88) (J.C. Rhodes, 1/4/71)
 Black and white copy negative
 This count is published with an interpretation by David Finster in Museum News (University of South Dakota), Volume 29, Numbers 3-4, 1968. It is there stated that the count was collected between 1895-1902 by Dr Leonidas Marvin Hardin (1868-1937); it belongs to his daughter, Mrs Robert Niblick of Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and is on loan to the W. H. Over Museum, Vermillion, South Dakota. It is drawn on unbleached muslin with wax crayons.

Esh-ta-hum-heah or Sleepy Eyes

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: McKenney, Thomas L. &amp; Hall, James

Notes: OPPS NEG.3495 A

Grabs, Mrs Elsie 39772 Orchard St. Cherry Valley, Calif. Rec'd. July 24, 1961. July 26, 1961. According to Thomas Donaldson ("The George Catlin Indian Gallery in the U. S. National Museum...", the Indian portraits collected in the beginning of the 19th century by the Indian Office (the predecessor of the Bureau of Indian Affairs), were transferred to the Smithsonian Institution until, on January 24, 1865, "the principal part of the contents of the rooms in the upper story and towers of the Smithsonian Institution were destroyed by fire. Mr King's collection of Indian portraits, the property of the government, were totally destroyed." (Donaldson, page 796.) The portraits of both Eesh-tah-hum-leah and Waa-na-taa are listed among the other paintings "arranged on the east and south-east walls of the Picture Gallery" of the Smithsonian in William J. Rhee's "Catalogue of Indian Paintings belonging to the Government Collection," from An Account of the Smithsonian Institution..., Washington, 1859, pages 55-58 (reprinted in McKenney and Hall, The Indian Tribes of North America, ed. by Frederick Webb Hodge, Edinburgh, 1833, Volume 1, pages xlvi-liii.) Presumably, these two portraits hung in the gallery from 1849 until January, 1865.

Although King's original oil paintings of Eesh-ta-hum-leah and Waa-na-ta were lost in the fire, lithographs had been made from the portraits and published by McKenney and Hall. Color reproductions of them may be seen in Volume 1, the 1933 edition of McKenney and Hall cited above. Copies of the original folio edition of McKenney and Hall exist in several libraries in the United States, including the Library of the Bureau of American Ethnology. If you wish, we can have an 8" x 10" black and white negative made of each of these portraits, from the original lithographs. The negatives will remain in the files of the Smithsonian. If you wish to have this copying done, it will be necessary to allow at least six weeks for the completion of the work.

Notes: OPPS NEG.56260

The photographer was at the Crow Agency only during the years 1897-1910; he took no Indian photographs after leaving the Crow Agency-- information from John Fields (1967), grandson of the photographer.

John Fields doesn't think his grandfather, Miller, was in Montana in 1877, possibly the typed information on the print (as stated in subject) was an error, and should have been 1897 (information to MCB 1967).

The later date of 1897 is most probable because of the light colored 1880s type campaign hats, trapdoor carbines, issue blouses and trousers.-- Information from James Nottage, June 1973; see Guides to Photo Collections, "Military Uniforms" (PJR)

Government employees and campers at Green's Ranch on Soap Creek, Summer, 1903. The reason for the gathering of government people was the division of the Crow tribal herd among individual Crows. Others were there for fun. 1- Judge Michael Brown (father in law of S.G. Reynolds) 2- Charles M. Bair 3- H.V. (Bill) Bailey (see Abbot's History of Montana - 1st edition) Then running old Babcock store at Crow. 4- Marguerite Bair (in early teens) now Mrs David Hand - Martinsdale. 5-Eliza (?) employed by Reynoldses, wife of "Frenchy"- formerly of Fort Custer. 6- Anna (?) Rankin - anyway the eldest of Col. Rankin's 3 girls who used to summer at Crow. 7- Carrie Brown Reynolds (Mrs S.G.R.) Then 32 years old. 8- Tom , head cook of the expedition. 9- Carl Rankin, son of Col. R. and ass't. to his father, Col. John R., allotting agent. 10- Carl Leider, 1/2 Crow, foreman of I. D. roundup. 11- S. G. Reynolds (in his old red sweater). Agent of the Crows. 12- Billy Cowy, Cowby, (phonetic spelling - could have been Coue'). He had a finger missing but played the accordion very well.

13- Alec Green ? (Greene ?) Came to reservation as ass't. engineer on the Big Horn Ditch. Married a Crow girl, Laura Pretty Lodge Pole. Said to have been a grad. of U. of Dublin, Ireland. Branded his cattle with Greek letter. Later left the West and Laura.

14- Scolds the Bear, Crow policeman 15- Clarence Brown, son of Judge B. Greatly interested in Alice Rankin that summer. 16- "Realie" (phonetic) Campbell. Federal Marshall. Lived at Crow Agency. 17-Charles Wilson (Smoky), Policeman and general functionary. Pioneer. Born in slavery. Expert horseman. Adopted by Crows. 18- Rosalind Reynolds- 1 year old - on lap of Smoky, whom she loved. (Question: "Whose girl are you, dear ? Ans: "Mama's and Smoky's.") 19- Mary Blair (Mrs C.M.B.) 20- Mrs Michael Brown 21- Lillian Brown Bailey (Mrs Bill B.) 22- Fenton Campbell - 8 years old - son of "Realy" 23- Michael Brown Reynolds, son of S.G.R. - 6 years. 24-Alberta Bair in jockey cap and "rompers" (pants) - 8 years old. 25- Carolyn Reynolds, 4 going on 5 yrs old 26- Alice Brown, d. of Judge B. - later Mrs Wihee Mains of Billings (member of Park Board). 27- Alice Rankin 28- (See Middle) Gretchen Rankin - youngest R. girl. 29. Bess Rankin - bride of Carl. Third from right is Ties His Knees [Crow] or Shot in the Nose [Crow]. Identified by Barney Old Coyote, visit March 24, 1969. Notes "remembered by Carolyn Reynolds Riebeth...and Michael B. Reynolds 10-4-1971. With help of S. G. Reynolds.

Gaapiatan or Feathered Lance at dinner, Kiowa Reservation, Oklahoma [Terr.], 1891

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Mooney, James, 1861-1921
 Notes: OPPS NEG.56403

For reference only. Until further clearance is received from the Joslyn Art Museum, all requests for prints should be directed to them.
11/1969 JCS

Number "cc 57" penciled on back of original print. Gaapiatan also known as Haitsiki. Identified from negative 1441-a which is same, but 56403 is a better negative.

Probable identification of people in photograph of Haitseke and his family, taken by James Mooney in about 1895. This reconstruction is based upon information obtained from Bert Geikoumah and his granddaughter, Trina Hunter. See Tape T-186. Indian Oral History Project, American Indian Institute, University of Oklahoma. 1. Little Boy on horseback. po.bohon. or Frank Pobohone. Son of Bert's mother's sister, 'egyiagyahon. 2-3. Bert's cousins, 'ais'emah and 'wdlpaide. Daughters of Bert's mother's sisters. 2. Little girl on buffalo robe, looking down. Probably 'wdlpaide. Her name means "standing on the air." Probably daughter of Number 4. 3. Little girl on buffalo robe looking at camera. Probably 'ais'emah and is probably daughter of Number 14. 4. Woman with cradleboard. Bert's mother's sister, probably dwm'aiyi.demah. Her name means "touching the earth." She is sitting next to her husband, Yellowhair, or 'wdlgu'ko. 5. Baby on cradleboard. Unidentified, but probably child of Number 4. 6. Girl (blurred) between Number 4 and Number 7. Unidentified. May be daughter of Number 4. 7. Man holding fan, staff and gourd. Owen Yellowhair or 'wdlgu'ko. His Kiowa name means "yellow hair." Husband of Number 4, so would be Haitseke's son-in-law. 8. Little boy holding blanket over his mouth. Bert Geikoumah (7 or 8 years old). His Kiowa name is 'e.de'oi giagomhaiboi and means something like "aim at him close but can't kill him." Bert says he was born in 1881. 9. Woman holding baby. Bert's mother, daughter of Haitseke. Her name is te'w. or te'w.kyagw. Her name means something like "he strike at them, or whip them." 10. Baby in woman's arms. Girl baby, now dead. May be baby of Number 9, Bert's mother, and thus would be Bert's sister. Or may be daughter of Number 4--Bert at one time said his mother was holding her sister's baby.

11. Woman with short hair. A neighbor from across the creek. Not related. Bert first said her name was 'wnkyiagai which means "back trail." Later he said her name was to'yai and that she was Charlie Apekaun's mother or relation. 12. Old man standing up holding lance. Haitseke. His name is the Kiowa form of the Comanche word, "haits", meaning "friend." Bert said he had several other names. One of them was gw'w.piatw. meaning something like "he pierces them with a spear." 13. Little boy looking up at Haitseke. do.gyi'ai.ko. Name means "coming to hole." Son of Number 4 and Number 7. May be the same, also, as Sam Yellowhair. 14. Woman sitting by tree, rather to forefront. Bert's mother's sister 'egyiagyahon. Mother of 'ais'emah and po.bohon. (Number 3 and Number 1.) 15. Old woman sitting next to tree trunk, in shadow. piata' or piatap or bintap (Bert's pronunciation of the name varied.) Her name means "dry mole." Mother of Bert's mother and ais'emah's mother. Thus would be wife of Haitseke. 16. Little girl under tree, sitting close to number 15. Unidentified. May be another daughter of Number 14.

As of 8/8/1988 Collection is at Nebraska State Historical Society - P.F.

Date and photographer supplied from Explorations of the SI., 1913, page 18.

"288,093 Mask 69 O.M." written in ink on back of original print filed in Hrdlicka files under "Eskimo Youngsters."

Identified as "Konningoktikuk (?)" or Konigonok ? - has two names in pencil on back of original print.

Moore

"Mr Perry A. Keahtigh (son in law of Mr Enoch Smoky), Kiowa intonation informant"
1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Moore
Notes: OPPS NEG.49390

Painting signed by Moore. The captions for this and Negative 49391 were typed on a single page found with the paintings. The two portraits were not individually identified on this page, but Negative Number 43390 has been assumed to be Perry Keahtigh, the son in law, since he appeared younger in the portrait. It has also been assumed that the two portraits were done at about the same time and by the same artist because of similarities of style and coloring.

Also with the paintings was found a letter to J. P. Harrington from Albert Beeler of the Waverly Press, dated March 19, 1945, referring to a single-page illustration to be inserted in the International Journal of American Linguistics. Presumably these portraits had been intended for that purpose, but were never published.

"Mr Enoch Smoky, Kiowa intonation informant"
1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Moore
Notes: OPPS NEG.49391

This painting was not signed by the artist, but the colors used and the brushwork are very similar to that in S.I. Negative 49390 which is signed by Moore. The captions for this and Negative 49390 were typed on a single page found with the paintings. The two portraits were not individually identified on this page, but Negative Number 43391 has been assumed to be Enoch Smoky, the father in law, since he appeared older in the portrait. It has also been assumed that the two portraits were done at about the same time and by the same artist because of similarities of style and coloring.

In "Three Kiowa texts," International Journal of American Linguistics, 12:237-42, page 237 Enoch Smoky is cited as a Kiowa informant.

Also with the paintings was found a letter to J. P.Harrington from Albert Beeler of the Waverly Press, dated March 19, 1945, referring to a single-page illustration to be inserted in the International Journal of American Linguistics. Hollow Horn Bear or Mato he hlogeca, ca 1913
 1 Photograph (8x10 in)
 Creator: Morrison, Mr
 Notes: OPPS NEG.56317
 According to Robert Anderson (1968) the photographer lived in Washington, D.C. and then moved to Ohio. The photographer's daughter is Mr Anderson's niece.
 Cf. with B.A.E. Negative 3163-b of Hollow Horn Bear by Gill, 1913. Hollow Horn Bear is wearing same clothes and looks of comparable age, therefore this photo probably taken about same time. Hollow Horn Bear died March, 1913.

 Yankton, Dakota Territory.

Caption from S. J. Morrow photograph collection, BAE Cat. Number 4468, Volume 1, Number 89. Date ("1876") on reverse is probably a recent guess-date; probable date of view 1870. Hurt & Lass (1956, page 68, figure 36), give title as "Sisseton women at Fort Totten."
 Since the Sisseton Agency was at Fort Wadsworth rather than Fort Totten, their title may not be correct. -- Information from G. H. Smith.

 "He [Waki-ta-mo-ne] was a man of gigantic height, and, as I could see, though he sat crouched together, of fine and powerful form; his hair was cut rather short, and by great pains bestowed on it, made to stand straight upright, except the plaited scalp lock at the top of his head, which hung low down his back. His face was decorated with black stripes; ...His name was Wa-ki-ta-mo-nee, or the Fat Soldier; he was one of the most distinguished warriors of the Ottoes, and the numerous scalps that adorned his shield gave testimony to his valient deeds, and to his quality of dreaded warrior he added to, as I was informed, that of a great medicine man-- that is, physician and conjuror." [story related by "the German Naturalist" which is how Mollhausen referred to himself--see Alex Von Humboldt preface, page XXIII; this particular episode quoted above was cited from his trip in the autumn and winter of 1851-52.] page 149 of Mollhausen's Diary (see source for citation).

Neagle, John

Ongpatonga (Big Elk). Chief of the Omahas

1 Photograph (3 1/2x4 3/4 in)

Creator: Neagle, John

Notes: OPPS NEG.50059

To: Mrs Margaret Blaker. From: John C. Ewers. December 11, 1962.
Subject: Portrait of Big Elk used in frontispiece in Morton's Crania Americana. I think that Big Elk may have been a member of the 1821 delegation of Indians from the Central Plains to Washington. John Neagle painted portraits of some, but probably not all of them, in Philadelphia. I believe you have on file photos of some of these, the originals of which are now in the Pennsylvania Historical Society. King's portraits of a number of these Indians are much better known than these. I know of no King portrait of Big Elk. It is difficult to judge an artist's original style from a lithograph produced from the original by another artist. But, the style certainly doesn't resemble King's work to me. I would assume that because Morton and Neagle were both Philadelphians, the artist is correctly attributed in the caption on the lithograph. Thank you very much for the print. I should like to have it. In my opinion it is a better rendering of an Indian face than King was accustomed to produce. This may be another reason to believe the artist was John Neagle.

Nephew, John

Oglala Dakota man, Red Cloud and Col. Charles P. Jordan, May 1889
1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Nephew, John

Notes: OPPS NEG.3243 B 2

February 23, 1943. Dear Miss Tucker: Possibly you will recall my visit to your office about three years ago and subsequent correspondence in regard to the identity of the white man who appears in the photograph with Chief Red Cloud of the Oglala Sioux (No. 3243 b). At that time I told you I felt reasonably certain that this man was Col. Charles Jordan, chief clerk at the Rosebud agency in the late 70s, later a trader on the Rosebud reservation, who married a niece of Red Cloud. Recently I have come across evidence which identifies him conclusively. In a collection of old-time photographs lent me by the widow of Gen. George H. Harries, a member of the Sioux Commission of 1891, was one of which the enclosed print is a copy. It was taken by a photographer named Nephew, 493 Pennsylvania avenue, and on the bottom of the picture, in General Harries' handwriting, is the notation that this is a picture of Red Cloud and C. P. Jordan and that it was taken in May, 1889. A comparison of this print with your No. 3243-b will show that the similarity in pose, costume, etc. definitely establishes the identity of Colonel Jordan in your picture and indicates that both were taken at approximately the same time -- May, 1889. Possibly this isn't tremendously important but I thought you might be interested in knowing that Red Cloud's companion in that picture is C. P. Jordan and not General Custer, as you told me some one had suggested it might be. Sincerely, Elmo Scott Watson.

Col. Charles Jordan was chief clerk at the Red Cloud Agency in the late 70's; he was later a trader on the Rosebud Reservation; and he married a niece of Red Cloud. -- Information from letter of Elmo Scott Watson, February 23, 1943.

Notman, William

Hunkpapa Dakota man, Sitting Bull with Buffalo Bill as they appeared in the Wild West Show

1 Photograph (6 1/2x8 1/2 in)

Creator: Notman, William

Notes: OPPS NEG.3195 F 4

"He was against the progress of the white man on the old frontier. He was not a chief, but a Sioux medicine man of some power. He was born in 1834 at Grand River, South Dakota. He was a disturber, always ready to be interviewed. A few newspaper writers made his name famous. The Custer fight was over when he came onto the battlefield. He was shot by Indian Policeman Bullhead, December 15, 1890. His son Crowfoot was killed with him. His father named him Sitting Bull. With all his faults, he had some good qualities." -- Notations on photograph of Chief Gall in the Burdick Collection of Barry photographs. (February 1937).

Note on file print by Miss Tucker: "Elmo Scott Watson (4/8/49) furnished the following information. Taken in Montreal, Canada, in 1885. Photographer: William Notman. Note: Although D. F. Barry copyrighted and sold this photograph as his own, the evidence is conclusive that the picture was taken by Notman."

Eskimo Seal Hunters returning to the village from the "ice pack", 1927-1928

1 Photograph (3 1/2x5 in)

Creator: Nupok, Florence

Notes: OPPS NEG.3106 D 1

Series of sketches drawn from life by Florence Nupok, a full blood St Lawrence Island Eskimo woman. 93 sketches (numbers are listed on each drawing).

It shows the manner of transporting their game -- one carries the seal on his back, the other using the whalebone taboggan. Note how the hunting harpoons are always carried behind the hunter's back.

This series of sketches was made by Florence Nupok, a full blooded St Lawrence Island married Eskimo woman, aged about 19, during the winter of 1927-8 at her camp at N. East Cape. I purchased the sketches because they were drawn from life and because they show so nicely the usual every day life of the St Lawrence Island Eskimo. The sketches are worth the money expended for them and I doubt that an other set is in existence made by a native on the spot as these were. It is almost impossible for a white person to do any sketching in the houses or homes of these natives as they will not stand for it under any condition, unless one is fortunate enough to be taken into their tribe. I shall of course try to obtain photographs where ever possible. I shall ask Nupok again to continue this work for me, and I think she will. I trust that the idea meets with your approval. In a few years all St Lawrence Island Eskimos will live in frame houses -- five were built last year -- four this year (1928) and the old customs will go the long trail and be forgotten. Modern kitchen ranges, stoves, coal oil heaters, and so on are replacing the famous and serviceable seal oil lamps, enamel pans, dishes, the old driftwood bowls and platters; aluminum tea kettles are replacing the good old Russian "Samovars", etc. Clothing is about the only thing that they cling to and for a very good reason, which is that the white man's clothing is not yet good enough to keep out the terrible winter's cold and for that reason, I too, adopt the native clothes, the only kind which is good enough to keep one warm. I shall list the sketches by numbers and will give the remarks...

Made during the winter (1927-1928) at her camp at North East Cape.

Florence Nupok is now Florence Malewotkuk, according to Dorothy Ray, 1968.

Black and white copy negative

A number of these drawings were used as decorative motifs and were published without captions in O. W. Geist, and F. G. Rainey, "Archaeological Excavations at Kukulik, St Lawrence Island, Alaska," Miscellaneous Publications of the University of Alaska, Volume II, Washington, GPO, 1936, 391 pages.

The skin is not removed, the skin with the meat is carried to the walrus-skin boat, the "Umiak" and so, transported home. Note the harpoon and the weapon proper has just been cut out from the carcass. As a rule, after the walrus has been harpooned the man will hold the skin rope with the weapon attached and in the animal body anchored until his partner or partners can shoot and so kill the walrus. Lances were used instead not so long ago and are still in use today in Siberia.

Men are hardly ever present in an "Agra" during day time. They only eat, sleep or dance there. It is the woman's place as a rule. This is the way they live in their winter rooms at a temperature of about 80-85 degrees which is of course too warm for any clothing. Note how the women wear the beads -- armlets, anklets and bracelets, all on the nude body.

All that remains of the really original outfit is the skin boots -- but when winter comes along with its icy blasts, nearly blowing one away, they must fall back on the old reliable skin clothes. Note the near absence of tatoos marks on the girls' faces!

This series of sketches was made by Florence Nupok, a full blooded St Lawrence Island married Eskimo woman, aged about 19, during the winter of 1927-8 at her camp at N. East Cape. I purchased the sketches because they were drawn from life and because they show so nicely the usual every day life of the St Lawrence Island Eskimo. The sketches are worth the money expended for them and I doubt that an other set is in existence made by a native on the spot as these were. It is almost impossible for a white person to do any sketching in the houses or homes of these natives as they will not stand for it under any condition, unless one is fortunate enough to be taken into their tribe. I shall of course try to obtain photographs where ever possible. I shall ask Nupok again to continue this work for me, and I think she will. I trust that the idea meets with your approval. In a few years all St Lawrence Island Eskimos will live in frame houses -- five were built last year -- four this year (1928) and the old customs will go the long trail and be forgotten. Modern kitchen ranges, stoves, coal oil heaters, and so on are replacing the famous and serviceable seal oil lamps, enamel pans, dishes, the old driftwood bowls and platters; aluminum tea kettles are replacing the good old Russian "Samovars", etc. Clothing is about the only thing that they cling to and for a very good reason, which is that the white man's clothing is not yet good enough to keep out the terrible winter's cold and for that reason, I too, adopt the native clothes, the only kind which is good enough to keep one warm. I shall list the sketches by numbers and will give the remarks...

Made during the winter (1927-1928) at her camp at North East Cape.

Florence Nupok is now Florence Malewotkuk, according to Dorothy Ray, 1968.

After the seal is killed, a loop is made around the hose with the skin rope in order to drag the animal. This is done when no whalebone toboggan is available or when the seal is too large to be carried. Ice hummocks in the foreground are the pressure ridge found near the shore.

This may be done in the agra, or living quarters, but is usually done in the outer room of the home. Occasionally, as in the drawing, it may be done outdoors. If the seal happens to be the first killed for a long time or if meat is scarce in the community, meat and blubber are divided among the inhabitants of the village. It is carried to each family in such a bucket as that held on the arm of the seated woman. Generally, dogs are ever ready to lick up the blood which is absorbed in the snow.

Two boat sledges on halves of ivory tusks are tied under the boat for easy conveyance. Men are usually hitched to ropes to pull the boat. Equipment such as paddles, harpoons, lances, rifles, sealskin floats or pokes, and other hunting weapons are carried in the bottom of the boat. The boats are light and can be easily hauled from the water and secured on top of ice floes whenever there is danger of their being crushed by incoming floes from the ice pack.

Much of the meat is cut into strips and hung to dry. This work is generally done by the women although sometimes men and boys may help. The heavy slabs of meat to which blubber and skin are still attached are hauled from the beach to the boat rack or meat cache on long wooden sledges shod with whalebone or, as in recent years, with steel runners. Little if any of the walrus is lost. Even the intestines and stomach are brought in and used.

Eskimo woman splitting a walrus skin, 1927-1928

1 Photograph (3 1/2x5 in)

Creator: Nupok, Florence

Notes: OPPS NEG.3106 D 20

Series of sketches drawn from life by Florence Nupok, a full blood St Lawrence Island Eskimo woman. 93 sketches (numbers are listed on each drawing).

After being stretched on an enormous driftwood frame, the skin, which is nearly an inch thick, is split. The split portion is left attached at one end of the skin. It is then removed from the splitting frame of driftwood and re-stretched on a second frame which is narrow and twice as long to provide for the length of the split skin spread out and joined in the middle where it has been left unsplit. It is left on this frame for several weeks to dry. The dried skin is used to cover oomiaks as well as to cover the Siberian type of house. The splitting process requires such skill that only a few women of the Island are able to do this.

Eskimos fishing through shore ice, 1927-1928

1 Photograph (3 1/2x5 in)

Creator: Nupok, Florence

Notes: OPPS NEG.3106 D 21

Series of sketches drawn from life by Florence Nupok, a full blood St Lawrence Island Eskimo woman. 93 sketches (numbers are listed on each drawing).

A hole is chopped through the ice with a harpoon ice pick of ivory although steel ice picks are now sometimes used. Through these holes tomcod, sculpin, and codfish are secured. The pile of ice shown in the background is the pressure ridge. The fishing is usually done in small bays covered with smooth ice which forms undisturbed between pressure ridges and the shore. Often very narrow whale-bone lines are used, for ice forming on such smooth lines drops off easily, whereas the fibers of cotton and similar lines (except silk) tend to hold the ice, making the lines unmanageable when a fish is caught.

This series of sketches was made by Florence Nupok, a full blooded St Lawrence Island married Eskimo woman, aged about 19, during the winter of 1927-8 at her camp at N. East Cape. This is a favorite diversion, especially in the spring, among the young men. It is frequently enjoyed by the older men as well who delight in trying to impress the youths with their skill. On this stretched walrus line various feats are done some of which nearly rival exercises done by whites on the horizontal bar or trapeze.

It is no longer used since a new camp has been established at a more favorable location. In this camp Geist spent many days while exploring the east and northeast sections of St Lawrence Island. As the families increased in size, additions were made to the house, the center portion representing the original house. Firewood was cut from driftwood picked up from the beach nearby.

Tattoo marks on arms and hands drawn from life, 1927-1928

1 Photograph (3 1/2x5 in)

Creator: Nupok, Florence

Notes: OPPS NEG.3106 D 24

Series of sketches drawn from life by Florence Nupok, a full blood St Lawrence Island Eskimo woman. 93 sketches (numbers are listed on each drawing).

Some of the St Lawrence Island Eskimo women and girls have beautifully executed tattoo marks. These are made free hand although sometimes an outline is traced before the tattooing takes place. The pigment is made from the soot of seal oil lamps which is taken from the bottom of tea kettles or similar containers used to boil meat and other food over the open flame. The soot is mixed with urine, often that of an old woman, and is applied with steel needles. Two methods of tattooing are practiced. One method is to draw a string of sinew or other thread through the eye of the needle. The thread is then soaked thoroughly in the liquid pigment and drawn through the skin as the needle is inserted and pushed just under the skin for a distance of about a thirty-second of an inch when the point is again pierced through the skin. A small space is left without tattooing before the process is again repeated. The other method is to prick the skin with the needle which is dipped in the pigment each time.

This series of sketches was made by Florence Nupok, a full blooded St Lawrence Island married Eskimo woman, aged about 19, during the winter of 1927-8 at her camp at N. East Cape. I purchased the sketches because they were drawn from life and because they show so nicely the usual every day life of the St Lawrence Island Eskimo. The sketches are worth the money expended for them and I doubt that an other set is in existence made by a native on the spot as these were. It is almost impossible for a white person to do any sketching in the houses or homes of these natives as they will not stand for it under any condition, unless one is fortunate enough to be taken into their tribe. I shall of course try to obtain photographs where ever possible. I shall ask Nupok again to continue this work for me, and I think she will. I trust that the idea meets with your approval. In a few years all St Lawrence Island Eskimos will live in frame houses -- five were built last year -- four this year (1928) and the old customs will go the long trail and be forgotten. Modern kitchen ranges, stoves, coal oil heaters, and so on are replacing the famous and serviceable seal oil lamps, enamel pans, dishes, the old driftwood bowls and platters; aluminum tea kettles are replacing the good old Russian "Samovars", etc. Clothing is about the only thing that they cling to and for a very good reason, which is that the white man's clothing is not yet good enough to keep out the terrible winter's cold and for that reason, I too, adopt the native clothes, the only kind which is good enough to keep one warm. I shall list the sketches by numbers and will give the remarks...

Made during the winter (1927-1928) at her camp at North East Cape.

Florence Nupok is now Florence Malewotkuk, according to Dorothy Ray, 1968.

Was born in Siberia but came to St Lawrence Island with her parents during the last ten years. She shows body decorated with beads strung on this harness-like bands of sealskin. She also shows arm bands. Bands similar to these are also worn on the legs and ankles. The "bangs" she wears is the result of superstition. Evidently some member of the family has been ill or has died. The "bangs" are used to disguise the girl so that she may look more like a boy. Boys are occasionally known to grow long hair to be disguised as a girl in order to deceive the evil spirits.

The first and third wear breech cloths made of blue denim or other durable material. Red piping puts color into the breech cloth of the first girl. The third is fashioned in plain style. The center figure shows a breech cloth fashioned like trunks, probably of the same material as the others but trimmed with fur around the bottom. Such trunks are fashioned by certain women at Southwest Cape from soft tanned sealskin with the hair left on the outside. All girls show the "belly-string" as well as arm bands and body harness from which dangle beaded pendants.

Beads are obtained from traders and are highly prized by the younger women in particular although older women are sometimes very fond of them also. Some of the old women possess strings of rare and

Two girls with hair beads and strings of large beads strung around the body from each shoulder crossing in front and in back, 1927-1928

Series of sketches drawn from life by Florence Nupok, a full blood St Lawrence Island Eskimo woman. 93 sketches (numbers are listed on each drawing).

The arm bands with bead pendants are of seal leather tanned soft and dyed red to add color. The circle and dot design of tattooing can be seen on both girls.

This series of sketches was made by Florence Nupok, a full blooded St Lawrence Island married Eskimo woman, aged about 19, during the winter of 1927-8 at her camp at N. East Cape. I purchased the sketches because they were drawn from life and because they show so nicely the usual every day life of the St Lawrence Island Eskimo. The sketches are worth the money expended for them and I doubt that an other set is in existence made by a native on the spot as these were. It is almost impossible for a white person to do any sketching in the houses or homes of these natives as they will not stand for it under any condition, unless one is fortunate enough to be taken into their tribe. I shall of course try to obtain photographs where ever possible. I shall ask Nupok again to continue this work for me, and I think she will. I trust that the idea meets with your approval. In a few years all St Lawrence Island Eskimos will live in frame houses -- five were built last year -- four this year (1928) and the old customs will go the long trail and be forgotten. Modern kitchen ranges, stoves, coal oil heaters, and so on are replacing the famous and serviceable seal oil lamps, enamel pans, dishes, the old driftwood bowls and platters; aluminum tea kettles are replacing the good old Russian "Samovars", etc. Clothing is about the only thing that they cling to and for a very good reason, which is that the white man's clothing is not yet good enough to keep out the terrible winter's cold and for that reason, I too, adopt the native clothes, the only kind which is good enough to keep one warm. I shall list the sketches by numbers and will give the remarks...

Series of sketches drawn from life by Florence Nupok, a full blood St Lawrence Island Eskimo woman. 93 sketches (numbers are listed on each drawing).

Could be a girl for in some cases where there has been a sickness or death in the family, a girl's hair may be trimmed to imitate a male child.

This series of sketches was made by Florence Nupok, a full blooded St Lawrence Island married Eskimo woman, aged about 19, during the winter of 1927-8 at her camp at N. East Cape. I purchased the sketches because they were drawn from life and because they show so nicely the usual every day life of the St Lawrence Island Eskimo. The sketches are worth the money expended for them and I doubt that an other set is in existence made by a native on the spot as these were. It is almost impossible for a white person to do any sketching in the houses or homes of these natives as they will not stand for it under any condition, unless one is fortunate enough to be taken into their tribe. I shall of course try to obtain photographs where ever possible. I shall ask Nupok again to continue this work for me, and I think she will. I trust that the idea meets with your approval. In a few years all St Lawrence Island Eskimos will live in frame houses -- five were built last year -- four this year (1928) and the old customs will go the long trail and be forgotten. Modern kitchen ranges, stoves, coal oil heaters, and so on are replacing the famous and serviceable seal oil lamps, enamel pans, dishes, the old driftwood bowls and platters; aluminum tea kettles are replacing the good old Russian "Samovars", etc. Clothing is about the only thing that they cling to and for a very good reason, which is that the white man's clothing is not yet good enough to keep out the terrible winter's cold and for that reason, I too, adopt the native clothes, the only kind which is good enough to keep one warm. I shall list the sketches by numbers and will give the remarks...

Florence Nupok is now Florence Malewotkuk, according to Dorothy Ray, 1968.

The garment, fashioned in the same manner as an union suit, is made from dark reindeer fawnskin, with white fawnskin insets on the sleeves. The fur around neck and sleeves is usually of dog fur. The boots are sealskin with mukluk skin bottoms and white sealskin uppers with drawstrings. These boots are fastened just below the knee. Two thongs are also used below the ankle to draw the boots tight. A pair of heavy fur socks are worn, the upper ends extending well above the boot draw strings. The extended part is tucked under the fur garment just before the drawstrings are pulled.

Series of sketches drawn from life by Florence Nupok, a full blood St Lawrence Island Eskimo woman. 93 sketches (numbers are listed on each drawing).

As a rule, Siberian winter garments are made from reindeer skin and made without hoods. The red pants and parkas of the men are fashioned from heavy reindeer skins with the hair worn inside, the outside being dyed brick red with a pigment made from red burned clay mixed with seal oil and a little water. One man shows a tobacco pouch worn on a leather belt, while one of the boys carries a knife sheath. The parkas of the other two boys are held together to keep out the cold and draught from below by leather thongs to the ends of which are fastened colored beads. The woman shows an armband and a bracelet as well as a rawhide necklace to which various charms are fastened. The men wear ear pendants and one wears a pendant around the neck. The haircuts, leaving only the lower fringe, is typically Siberian and is used by the older men of St Lawrence Island this day. Practically all the people now occupying the Island originally came from Siberia. However, some of their habits have become so modified that one may easily see the difference between the Islanders and their kinsmen. This is largely due to contact with whites such as teachers and missionaries on the Island.

The upper part of the woman's boots are fashioned from white leather decorated with patches of dark leather. Usually such boots are well fashioned, the women taking great pride and interest in their clothes. She also wears a pendant with charms around her neck. The man wears a pendant with various charms. There is great variety in the fashioning of boots and other garments of these people according to the taste and skill of the makers. The fringe on the sleeve of the woman's parka and the bottom of the parkas of the man and boy are of dog fur. The man and boy wear pendants, the boy wearing two pendants suspended from a rawhide string fastened in the hair above the ears. He also shows a topnotch or crest of hair on his head. The man wears a series of charms fastened to his neck string. Hunting knife, tobacco pouch and pendants dangle from his belt.

Two Island dancers showing loin cloths which are no more than a mere draping, gloves and mittens, 1927-1928

No Eskimo dancer may dance without gloves or mittens. In case he should prefer he may hold them in his hands. This is a long established custom, perhaps dating back hundreds of years. It has not been possible to ascertain why this is necessary for it seems the natives on St Lawrence Island do not themselves know. Should a white man attempt to dance without gloves or mittens he is immediately stopped until someone throws him a pair of mittens which he may wear or carry. This rule is strictly observed not only on St Lawrence Island but on King Island, Diomed Island, and other places in Alaska as well.

Eskimo drummers and singers and one man dancing, 1927-1928

All wear the Siberian haircut. The loin cloth of the dancer is merely a discarded white man's undershirt originally obtained from a trader, with the sleeves tied around the waist, the tail brought up between the legs to the back where it is rolled tight. It happens quite frequently that these get freed during the dance and have to be continually put back and fastened. The drummers are wearing sealskin pants.

This series of sketches was made by Florence Nupok, a full blooded St Lawrence Island married Eskimo woman, aged about 19, during the winter of 1927-8 at her camp at N. East Cape. I purchased the sketches because they were drawn from life and because they show so nicely the usual every day life of the St Lawrence Island Eskimo. The sketches are worth the money expended for them and I doubt that an other set is in existence made by a native on the spot as these were. It is almost impossible for a white person to do any sketching in the houses or homes of these natives as they will not stand for it under any condition, unless one is fortunate enough to be taken into their tribe. I shall of course try to obtain photographs where ever possible. I shall ask Nupok again to continue this work for me, and I think she will. I trust that the idea meets with your approval. In a few years all St Lawrence Island Eskimos will live in frame houses -- five were built last year -- four this year (1928) and the old customs will go the long trail and be forgotten. Modern kitchen ranges, stoves, coal oil heaters, and so on are replacing the famous and serviceable seal oil lamps, enamel pans, dishes, the old driftwood bowls and platters; aluminum tea kettles are replacing the good old Russian "Samovars", etc. Clothing is about the only thing that they cling to and for a very good reason, which is that the white man's clothing is not yet good enough to keep out the terrible winter's cold and for that reason, I too, adopt the native clothes, the only kind which is good enough to keep one warm. I shall list the sketches by numbers and will give the remarks...

Made during the winter (1927-1928) at her camp at North East Cape.

Florence Nupok is now Florence Malewotkuk, according to Dorothy Ray, 1968.

However, a young father belonging to a family still believing in the old customs, is not permitted to have his hair cut or trimmed during the pregnancy of his wife. Neither is he allowed to tie his bootstrings which must be left loose otherwise the baby in the mother's womb would choke to death.

The two women, one at each end of the long meat platter, are cutting meat for the male members of the family and the children. Each man will reach into the platter and withdraw such food as may be served. If dry meat happens to be cut, fresh seal blubber and meat are eaten together. For the small children and old people with badly worn teeth, the morsels are cut very small. The frame for drying clothes may be seen suspended from the ceiling, the drum is hanging from the wall, the suspension lines terminating in a large hook to hold a kettle or other food pot over the seal oil lamp are shown. The walrus stomach dangling from the drying frame may contain various articles, in this case probably sinew raw, stripped, or braided ready for use, needle cases, and patches of reindeer and seal skins for mending skin clothes. At any rate this bag belongs to one of the women of the house. Very likely the two families live under the same roof in the same single room.

Seal oil lamp is lit, showing not only the lamp proper but the overflow bowl directly below and the whale vertebrae on which the bowl rests. Mother and daughter wear body ornaments. The woman wears a breech cloth but the little girl and boy are completely nude. The man in this case does not wear a loin cloth but covers portions of his body with some old rags. In the intimate family life this is done frequently. The lamps are always tended by the women of the household.

A birthmark, the growth on his upper lip about the size of half a large walnut was removed several years ago by a surgeon on a revenue cutter, leaving practically no scar. He and his family came from Siberia a few years ago. He has two wives both from Siberia, one of whom is probably half white. She was formerly married to a Russian and her daughter is fair skinned, she being only one-fourth Eskimo. This girl is now married to a full blood and has had two children.

This illustrates the usual manner in which youngsters are carried on mother's shoulders. In different sections of Alaska the method of carrying children varies. This is the Siberian and St Lawrence Island method. The child's garments are made of reindeer fawnskin with the hair inside. The large fur collar around the neck is of dog fur. The cap is separate from the other clothes and is made of fur seal, land otter, or similar rich fur. During the early life of the baby this cap usually contains a portion of the dried umbilical cord cut and put aside for this purpose by the attending midwife, who may be any one of the of the old women of experience about the village. This is kept under the cap until the suture on the top of the head is healed over when this charm, which is sewed into a small package of sealskin, is worn by the mother on her neck string. Frequently barren women on the Island borrow these charms from the women who have successfully borne children in the hope that they too may bring children into the family.

It is almost impossible for a white person to do any sketching in the houses or homes of these natives as they will not stand for it under any condition, unless one is fortunate enough to be taken into their tribe. I shall of course try to obtain photographs where ever possible. I shall ask Nupok again to continue this work for me, and I think she will. I trust that the idea meets with your approval. In a few years all St Lawrence Island Eskimos will live in frame houses -- five were built last year -- four this year (1928) and the old customs will go the long trail and be forgotten. Modern kitchen ranges, stoves, coal oil heaters, and so on are replacing the famous and serviceable seal oil lamps, enamel pans, dishes, the old driftwood bowls and platters; aluminum tea kettles are replacing the good old Russian "Samovars", etc. Clothing is about the only thing that they cling to and for a very good reason, which is that the white man's clothing is not yet good enough to keep out the terrible winter's cold and for that reason, I too, adopt the native clothes, the only kind which is good enough to keep one warm. I shall list the sketches by numbers and will give the remarks...

Made during the winter (1927-1928) at her camp at North East Cape.

Florence Nupok is now Florence Malewotkuk, according to Dorothy Ray, 1968.

"Womkan" of Gambell with a parka made of the breasts of murre, 1927-1928
 1 Photograph (3 1/2x5 in)

 Notes: OPPS NEG.3106 D 71

Series of sketches drawn from life by Florence Nupok, a full blood St Lawrence Island Eskimo woman. 93 sketches (numbers are listed on each drawing).

Lower fringe of parka is of white dog fur while the hood is trimmed with black dog fur. The pants are reindeer skin with the hair worn inside, while the low boots are fashioned from deer legs and have mukluk soles.

This series of sketches was made by Florence Nupok, a full blooded St Lawrence Island married Eskimo woman, aged about 19, during the winter of 1927-8 at her camp at N. East Cape. I purchased the sketches because they were drawn from life and because they show so nicely the usual every day life of the St Lawrence Island Eskimo. The sketches are worth the money expended for them and I doubt that an other set is in existence made by a native on the spot as these were. It is almost impossible for a white person to do any sketching in the houses or homes of these natives as they will not stand for it under any condition, unless one is fortunate enough to be taken into their tribe. Shows garment as worn by young child, 1927-1928

1 Photograph (3 1/2x5 in)

Creator: Nupok, Florence

Notes: OPPS NEG.3106 D 72

Series of sketches drawn from life by Florence Nupok, a full blood St Lawrence Island Eskimo woman. 93 sketches (numbers are listed on each drawing).

The entire garment is made of one piece, union suit fashion, into which the child is slipped through the opening at the neck. Mittens and socks for very small children are sewn to the garment. For necessary bodily functions, such as urinating, the cover which is tied between the legs with strings reaching around the body and fastened at the back may be easily removed by the mother and later replaced. To provide color the strings are dyed red. The cap is made from fur seal skin while the trimming is very likely made from the skin of otter brought to the Island by traders.

This series of sketches was made by Florence Nupok, a full blooded St Lawrence Island married Eskimo woman, aged about 19, during the winter of 1927-8 at her camp at N. East Cape. Nearly all the trimmings around parka hoods, sleeves, and bottoms as well as around the necks of the women's parkas are made from selected dog fur. The use of wolverine, wolf, or other similar imported fur for trimming is practically taboo for superstitious reasons. Some such trimming may be used occasionally for decorative purposes, but must as a rule be discarded and changed for dog fur as soon as hunting on the ice or whaling begins.

The clothes of the woman on the left have been previously described. The woman to the right wears a snow shirt in addition to a fur parka underneath. The snowshirt is trimmed with bundles of baby seal fur dyed dark brown by boiling it for a long time in a pigment made of urine and alder bark. The alder bark until a few years ago had always been secured from Siberia by barter.

In the background is a simple boat rack on which the oomiak or woman's boat is lashed. The snowshirts are made of seal intestine. The intestines are cleaned and undergo a process or preparation to be finally inflated and left strung outside to freeze dry. This freezing process takes considerable time, sometimes many days according to temperature, and when completed renders the intestine not only pliable and nearly white but seemingly thicker. For men these garments are always sewed on the outside with sinew or thread, while women's garments of this type are sewed on the inside. Usually only men's garments are fashioned by sewing the various strips horizontally, the strips being placed vertically in the women's garments. The woman's snowshirt, which in this case may be a ceremonial snowshirt, is decorated with dyed baby hair seal fur fastened in bundles to form tassels. The insets of red are small strips of dyed white sealskin while the decorations on the man's shirt are the orange patches found with the crests of the crested auklet removed from the birds when they are caught in the early summer. The pants are heavy reindeer skin dyed red.

The man's lower pants are of sealskin hair worn inside. His low boots are sealskin dyed red. The thongs to tie the boots of all three are made of white sealskin which is also used for the white sections of the women's boots. The undergarment is removed from one shoulder of the girl and the sleeve dangles below the parka and snowshirt. This can frequently be observed.

Eskimo girl showing individual design of white leather top boots, 1927-1928
1 Photograph (3 1/2x5 in)

Creator: Nupok, Florence

Notes: OPPS NEG.3106 D 82

Series of sketches drawn from life by Florence Nupok, a full blood St Lawrence Island Eskimo woman. 93 sketches (numbers are listed on each drawing).

The lowerportion is practically water proof sealskin with the hair removed while the upper part is made of white leather. The drawstring with which the uppers are fastened to the fur garment are here seen tied in bows. The decorations are baby seal hair shaped into tassels, the ends of which are in turn ornamented with brightly colored beads. The parka trimming is dog fur.

This series of sketches was made by Florence Nupok, a full blooded St Lawrence Island married Eskimo woman, aged about 19, during the winter of 1927-8 at her camp at N. East Cape. I purchased the sketches because they were drawn from life and because they show so nicely the usual every day life of the St Lawrence Island Eskimo.

The sketches are worth the money expended for them and I doubt that an other set is in existence made by a native on the spot as these were. It is almost impossible for a white person to do any sketching in the houses or homes of these natives as they will not stand for it under any condition, unless one is fortunate enough to be taken into their tribe. I shall of course try to obtain photographs where ever possible. I shall ask Nupok again to continue this work for me, and I think she will. I trust that the idea meets with your approval. In a few years all St Lawrence Island Eskimos will live in frame houses -- five were built last year -- four this year (1928) and the old customs will go the long trail and be forgotten. Modern kitchen ranges, stoves, coal oil heaters, and so on are replacing the famous and serviceable seal oil lamps, enamel pans, dishes, the old driftwood bowls and platters; aluminum tea kettles are replacing the good old Russian "Samovars", etc. Clothing is about the only thing that they cling to and for a very good reason, which is that the white man's clothing is not yet good enough to keep out the terrible winter's cold and for that reason, I too, adopt the native clothes, the only kind which is good enough to keep one warm. I shall list the sketches by numbers and will give the remarks... are preferred for such garments. The fringes on the sleeves are probably white dog fur. Raincoats made of seal intestines for both men and women are always fringed with white baby sealskin strips.

The woman's snowshirt is made of bright colored calico or similar material. The girl wears a dress under the snowshirt. However, from the fur collar around the neck we know that under the snowshirt she is wearing a reindeer fawnskin parka. When in the home the dresses made from store goods are not removed as were former clothes since it would take too long. Since it is customary to sit and lie on the floor many of the clothes are not always as clean as they might be. Only when members of the family retire in the evening or expect to be in the agra for a long time do they remove all their clothing. Usually the breech cloth is worn by school girls under bloomers which are similar to the kind used by modern white women but which are made from colorful material such as mattress ticking. These are worn showing below the dresses.

It is almost impossible for a white person to do any sketching in the houses or homes of these natives as they will not stand for it under any condition, unless one is fortunate enough to be taken into their tribe. I shall of course try to obtain photographs where ever possible. I shall ask Nupok again to continue this work for me, and I think she will. I trust that the idea meets with your approval. In a few years all St Lawrence Island Eskimos will live in frame houses -- five were built last year -- four this year (1928) and the old customs will go the long trail and be forgotten. Modern kitchen ranges, stoves, coal oil heaters, and so on are replacing the famous and serviceable seal oil lamps, enamel pans, dishes, the old driftwood bowls and platters; aluminum tea kettles are replacing the good old Russian "Samovars", etc. Clothing is about the only thing that they cling to and for a very good reason, which is that the white man's clothing is not yet good enough to keep out the terrible winter's cold and for that reason, I too, adopt the native clothes, the only kind which is good enough to keep one warm. I shall list the sketches by numbers and will give the remarks...

Florence Nupok is now Florence Malewotkuk, according to Dorothy Ray, 1968.

Originally, snowshirts were primarily used to protect fur and feather parkas from blowing snow which would get under hair and feathers and after melting would cause them to come loose or "slip"; they were secondarily used for decorative purposes. The snowshirt is now worn at all times for the latter purpose. Women, particularly the younger ones, today would not feel "dressed up" without such a gaudy colored garment.

A number of these drawings were used as decorative motifs and were published without captions in O. W. Geist, and F. G. Rainey, "Archaeological Excavations at Kukulik, St Lawrence Island, Alaska," Miscellaneous Publications of the University of Alaska, Volume II, Washington, GPO, 1936, 391 pages.

Parsons, F.

Cherokee man, Cunne Shote, 1762

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Parsons, F.

Notes: OPPS NEG.997

Original in England or in Gilcrease Foundation, Tulsa, Oklahoma. See Life Magazine, March 8, 1954, pages 72-9. Includes color plate.

The Stalking Turkey (Cunne Shote), the Pouting Pigeon, and Ostenaco (Austenaco, Ustenacah, Judd's Friend, Judge Friend, Mankiller), all Cherokees, the latter a chief who lived in the Overhill town of Tamali (Monroe County, Tennessee) accompanied Henry Timberlake of Hanover County, Virginia to England in 1762. Ostenaco was commonly known as Outacity (Ottassite, Otacite) which was probably a title. [Source: Forman, Carolyn. Indians Abroad. University of Oklahoma Press, 1943. page 65 ff.

Mrs Foreman gives the following in a footnote, pages 70-71: "Among the works of Parsons listed in A Biographical Dictionary of Painters and Engravers is 'Portrait of a group of Indian chiefs who visited England in 1763. Engraved by Mc-Ardell.' In Chaloner Smith's British Mezzotint Portraits, 584, is a description of the portrait by Parsons: 'H.L. directed and facing slightly to left, looking to front, feathers in scalplock, medals on neck, gorget with G.R. III, band over hunting shirt on right arm, knife in hand, robe over left shoulder, trees in background.' The legend read: 'F. Parsons pinxt. Js McArdell fecit. Cunne Shote, the Indian Chief, a great Warrior of the Cherokee Nation. Sold at the Golden Head, in Queen's Square, Ormond Street, Pr. 2s 6d.'"

A color slide of this painting is also available; see slide files in Room 61-A. JCR 1/1972

A picture of Cunne Shote (actually Ku na gadoga), "Emperor" of the Overhill Cherokees in the present Tennessee, portrait 1762. His name in the language of the Ani Yunwiya ("Cherokee"): Ku na gadoga (Turkey is Standing), loosely translated "The Standing Turkey," and variously Anglicized (by the English, not the Cherokees) as Conocotocko, etc. Another color reproduction: initial issue (Winter 1976) of the Journal of Cherokee Studies. I've seen him called Conocotocko in the South Carolina Gazette, would have to consult my notes for exact date. The spelling Ku na gadoga and translation come from Duane King, Editor, Journal of Cherokee Studies. Information from Wes White, May 5th, 1981.

Print of same subject seen by N. Feder in Osage Tribal Museum carried caption, "Wedding on horse." Woman wears coat with epaulettes, evidently a "wedding coat;" cf. Negative Number 54993.

Besides gold bullion type epaulettes, the coat has sergeant's chevrons on the shoulders and at cuffs. This coat or one similar to it is on display at the Denver Art Museum. --Information from James Nottage, June 1973; see Guides to Photo Collection, "Military Uniform." (pjr)

Petruccio, Vincenzo

Delaware Doll Dance, ca 1929 or 1930

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Petruccio, Vincenzo

View of the dance grounds and preparations. Left to right: Freddie Washington, Jane Falleaf Washington, Dora Curleyhead Gibson.

F. W. says this was taken at the last Doll Dance in 1929. But Frank G. Speck wrote of the Doll Dance (Oklahoma Delaware Ceremonies, Feasts and Dances, MAPS 7, 1937 page 62): "Dr V. M. Petruccio observed the rite in the summer of 1930...It is understood that the three images in the Nation at the present time may be accorded the honor of the feast ceremony all at the same time..." In another picture taken at the same occasion (NAA Negative 55658) the three dolls are clearly visible in front of the tent behind the two women; in the present picture the middle doll is hard to see because it is directly in line with the tent post. The left tent and the two middle ones were those of members of the Falleaf family. The rightmost tent was the Washington's. J. F. W. was D. C. G.'s SiDa; D. C. G. was the mother of Lula Mae Gibson Gilliland, who furnished the print from which Negative 55658 was made; J. F. W. was the mother of F. W. The leftmost doll is male; the middle and rightmost dolls are female. The female dolls were the inheritance of Elizabeth Falleaf Beaver's (FaSi of Jane Washington); the male doll was said to have been found packed with them in a trunk after a journey and to be of unknown origin. (Most of the above information from Freddie Washington, 1967 and 1968. - Ives Goddard)

In 1867 the Delaware moved from Kansas to the Cherokee Reservation, Indian Territory. Those involved in the move became known as the Delaware (registered) or the Delaware (Cherokee). The others became known as the Delaware (absentee). "Registered" and "absentee" are not aboriginal terms.

Reed, Roland W.

Blackfoot woman, Daisy Norris, 1915
1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Reed, Roland W.
Notes: OPPS NEG.4700

Subject identified 5/66 by Nora Spanish and Mae Williamson, South Piegans of Browning, Montana and transmitted by Claude Schaeffer, Museum of the Plains Indian (cf. also negative 420-a). A Piegan Indian wearing a Dakota style dress. (J.C. Ewers, April 1966).

Negatives 4700 through 4712 were made by R.W. Reed on an excursion sponsored by the Great Northern Railroad for the purpose of making photographs to be used in their advertising. Thus, though much of the equipment and dress of the Indians is traditional these photographs do not accurately portray the Blackfoot life style. The setting of the trip, Glacier National Park was, no doubt, selected for its scenic attraction, but in reality the Blackfoot never camped or hunted in the mountains, and when traveling went through them as quickly as possible. For, according to their tradition the mountains were the homes of the spirits. Information from J.C. Ewers, 9/70 JCS.

Blackfoot man, Lazy Boy, ca 1905

1 Photograph (4x5 in)

Creator: Reed, Roland W.

Notes: OPPS NEG.48074

Date not recorded; ca. 1905 in judgement of Indian informants on Blackfoot Reservation, Browning, Montana, 1966.

Identified by Mae Williamson, and others on the Blackfoot Reservation, Browning, Montana, as "Lazy Boy, South Piegan Indian and informant of John Ewers in the early 1940's. He carries a part of the regalia of the Dove Society. The date is estimated as around 1905." -- Letter of Claude Schaeffer, Museum of the Plains Indian, Browning, 6/10/66.

Print from which this negative was made was marked, "Lazy Bear Hunter, Blackfeet Chief, Oklahoma," evidently an error. Comment by J.C. Ewers, 6/7/61: The headdress is not tribally distinctive.* The belt and quiver look to me more like Assiniboine or Crow than Blackfoot. Nevertheless, this man might be a Blackfoot Indian, although I don't recognize the individual and the apparent name 'Lazy Bear Hunter.' It wasn't unusual at this period for a man to own and wear 'Indian costume' from several tribes including fine pieces given him by visitors from other tribes as well as ones made by his own.**Same headdress apparently being worn by two other individuals in Negatives 4701, 4702, apparently made at same place.--MCB, 1966.

Riegert, Wilbur A.

Sans Arc Dakota woman, Mrs Martha Bad Warrior with group of relatives and friends, Green Grass, South Dakota, 1936

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Riegert, Wilbur A.

Notes: OPPS NEG.55936

The photograph was taken by Wilbur A. Riegert at Green Grass, South Dakota, on Cheyenne River Reservation. Mrs. Bad Warrior was the keeper of the sacred Buffalo Calf Pipe Bundle, the only tribal bundle of the Lakotas. In order to end the long drought that afflicted the plains, she sat all day in the hot sun, holding a pipe on her lap, praying for rain. Mrs. Bad Warrior died October 25, 1936. [Source: Raymond J. DeMallie, Jr., 20 June 2007]

Date: August 1936.

Written on back of print: "Property of Wilbur A. Riegert, Wounded Knee, S. Dakota. "[Martha Bad Warrior] Died October 25 - 1936. Given to Lucy Looking Horse on 10-29-64 by W. A. Riegert, Everett

C. Jordan, Mrs A. M. Clark." [Lucy Looking Horse, daughter of Martha Bad Warrior, died in April, 1966. At the giveaway after her death, this picture was given to Mrs Belva Jack.]

Profile portrait of Yellow Corn, wife of Chief Sheheke or Shahaka

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Saint-Mémin, Charles Balthazar Julien Fevret de, 1770-1852

Notes: OPPS NEG.3924 B

Identified as Yellow Corn, wife of Mandan Chief Sheheke, by Ellen G. Miles in Saint-Memin and the Neoclassical Profile Portrait in America (1994). Although she is identified as an Indian girl of the lowas of the Missouri in the inscription, the watercolor referenced below was inscribed "Mandan Queen."

Credit to be given to the New York Historical Society if published. See correspondence Smithsonian Institution Files, 6/4/24.

She has long dark hair, and is fully dressed. Her ears are not mutilated except for piercing for small silver earring. Inscribed by St Memin "Femme Indienne des lowas des Missouri." (Lower left hand corner - indistinct).

Original owned by the New York Historical Society.

There is also a watercolor of this subject, by St Memin, once owned by Luke Vincent Lockwood. The portrait is the same. See New York Historical Society Quarterly Bulletin, April 1928 - Figure 11, and "The St Memin Indian Portraits," by Luke Vincent Lockwood, Member American Antiquarian Society. (Figure 10). The watercolor is now at the Thomas Gilcrease Institute of American History and Art.

Identified as Mandan Chief Shahaka by Ellen G. Miles in Saint-Memin and the Neoclassical Profile Portrait in America (1994). Although he is identified as an Indian of the lowas of the Missouri in the inscription, the watercolor referenced below is inscribed "Mandan King."

Credit to be given to the New York Historical Society if published. See correspondence Smithsonian Institution Files, 6/4/24.

He wears his hair banded and long behind, his ear is mutilated and the earring is a silver wheel. Inscribed in St Memin's handwriting "Indien des lowas des Missouri."

Original owned by the New York Historical Society.

A watercolor of this subject, also by St Memin, was once owned by Luke Vincent Lockwood. The portrait is the same with the exception of the dress, the watercolor showing only a portion of a buffalo skin over one shoulder. See New York Historical Society Quarterly Bulletin, April 1928 - Figure 9, and "The St Memin Indian Portraits," by Luke Vincent Lockwood, Member American Antiquarian Society. (Figure 8). The watercolor is now at the Thomas Gilcrease Institute of American History and Art.

Painting of Pocahontas, ca 1890

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Shindler, Antonio(n) Zeno

Notes: OPPS NEG.29760

The original of this painting which has subsequently become the property of the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C., was then in England; therefore the artist copied this from some other source, such as an engraved reproduction or otherwise, because it varies in many respects from the original, which would not have been the case if the artist had been working from the original or from an accurate copy of it. At the time this painting was entered in the Museum (1921), Dr Walter Hough said it was made from "an old painting or engraving in the possession of the Rolfe family in England."

Pocahontas - Biographical sketch. Born in 1595, and died on board ship at Gravesend, England, in March, 1617. The daughter of Powhatan, chief of a group of Virginian tribes. Her real name was Matoaka (Matowaka), a word found also in the misspelled form of Matoka and Matoaks. The sole Algonquian root from which the name can be derived is metaw, 'to play,' 'to amuse one's self,' whence Metawake, 'she amuses herself playing with (something).' It was undoubtedly due to her innate fondness for playthings, play, and frolicsome amusement that the name was given her by her parents, as well as the expression "Pokahantes" used by her father when speaking of her. By reason of the alleged romance of her life, Pocahontas is one of the most famous of American women. She is said to have saved Captain John Smith from a cruel and ignominious death at the hands of Powhatan's people, whose prisoner he was at the time. She is also credited with enabling many other Englishmen to escape the wrath and vengeance of her tribespeople.

The truth about some of her alleged exploits can never be known; some writers have even doubted the episode with Captain Smith. After the departure of Captain Smith for England in 1609, faith was not kept with the Indians as promised, and Pocahontas, by the aid of a treacherous chief, was decoyed on board the ship of Captain Argall in the Potomac, carried to Jamestown (1612), and afterwards taken to Werawocomoco, Powhatan's chief place of residence where a sort of peace was effected and the ransom of Pocahontas was agreed upon. While among the Englishmen, however, Pocahontas had become acquainted with John Rolfe, "an honest gentleman, and of good behavior." These two fell in love, an event which turned out to the satisfaction of everybody, and in April, 1613, they were married, Pocahontas having previously been converted to Christianity and baptised under the name of "the Lady Rebecca."

This alliance was of great advantage to the colonists, for Powhatan kept peace with them until his death. In 1616 Mr and Mrs Rolfe, with her brother-in-law Uttamatomac and several other Indians, accompanied Sir Thomas Dale to England, where, owing to the previous misunderstanding of those times concerning the character and government of the American tribes, Mrs Rolfe was received as a "princess." In March 1617, while on board ship at Gravesend ready to start for America with her husband, she fell ill of smallpox, and died about the 22nd year of her life. In July 1907, a skeleton, believed to be the remains of Pocahontas, was unearthed within the site of Gravesend Parish Church. She left one son, Thomas Rolfe, who was educated by his uncle, Henry Rolfe, in England.

Date: About 1890 while he was staff artist for the Museum.

"The Indian 'Little Mountain' shown in drawing Number 9 was the most celebrated of all the Kiowas of this period. His Indian name was T[D?]ohasen, which means 'high promontory', from which probably his English name of Little Mountain was derived by a loose translation. He died about the year 1868, and he was buried on Elk Creek. He took a prominent part in the Medicine Lodge Treaty. Little Mountain was the last important Kiowa chief and the last head chief the tribe ever had. He was very powerful and influential man, having had the entire tribe under his control and allegiance. Following his death, the tribe split into factions with a number of claimants to the chieftainship, each of whom had his own particular adherents, but there was no real unity among the Kiowa in a political sense." -- Information from General H. ## Portrait of Blackfoot man, James White Calf, 1936

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Smithsonian Institution. Bureau of American Ethnology

Notes: NAA INV.9212800

OPPS NEG.423 C 1

A biographical sketch of James White Calf submitted in January, 1949 by Mr Ewers: "James White Calf, full blood Piegan, older brother of Two Guns White Calf, and son of White Calf, the last principal chief of the south Piegan. The elder White Calf died in Washington, D.C. in 1903. "James White Calf went on horse stealing raids in his youth and counted coup. He was still living on the Blackfoot reservation, Montana in 1947. According to the Blackfoot reservation census of December 31, 1939, he was then 76 years of age. "In the 1940's James White Calf owned the yellow buffalo lodge, one of the oldest and probably the handsomest of the Blackfoot painted tipis."

Note from Mr John C. Ewers 4-27-53. These photos are definitely representations of James White Calf, son of White Calf, last recognized chief of the Blackfoot (Piegan) in Montana. According to the Blackfeet Reservation Census of 1908, James was then 44 years of age. That census records his father's name - White Calf; his mother's - Black Snake. I do not know whether or not he was the grandson of Big Snake, although it is probable, since my Indian informants stated that his father married 2 of Big Snake's daughters. However, one informant claimed James was the son of White Calf by still another wife. James White Calf was still living in 1951 on the Blackfeet Reservation. I saw him that summer. He was then one of the last surviving Piegan men who had taken part in intertribal warfare (ie. horse raids). His brother was Two Guns White Calf, now dead, a very picturesque Indian. You have photos of him also.

These photographs were originally identified as follows: "Sh-ko'-i-na-max'ha - Last Gun Chief. Known to the Whites as White Calf. Grandson of the famous chief Big Snake."These photographs were identified by J.C. Ewers (4-27-53) as being "definitely representations of James White Calf."

Trueman, Robert H.

Blackfoot Sun Dance scene, valley of the Bow River, Blackfoot Reserve, 1895-1899

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Trueman, Robert H.

Notes: OPPS NEG.55861

"This is a view of the Blackfoot Sun Dance taken in the valley of the Bow River on the Blackfoot Reserve. It was taken by Robert H. Trueman between 1895 and 1899. Trueman was in partnership with Norman Caple from 1889 to 1894 and went into business for himself under the name of R.H. Trueman and Co. in 1895. After 1900 he restricted his activities to British Columbia so by a process of elimination we have a very precise date. Although I cannot be absolutely sure, I presume this is the hide-cutting ritual taking place before the raising of the center pole. Beneath one of the canvas bowers the Holy Woman is probably watching the proceedings. In the center background you can see the framework of the Sun Dance lodge without the center pole." -- Information received from Hugh A. "Their Idol Kiwasa" [or K'ewas], 1585

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: White, John
Engraver: De Bry, Theodor
Notes: OPPS NEG.2860 LL

Engraving by De Bry, presumably after a drawing by John White, 1585 in North Carolina. Negative copy probably from Heriot, 1893 edition.

The original White drawing from which this was taken does not appear to be in the British Museum collection; at least it is not in the Praetorius copies of the British Museum collection owned by the Natural Museum. And note the following statement in Virginia History Magazine, Volume 35, 1927, "John White, English Artist," by D.I. Bushnell: "Twenty-three of the White drawings were reproduced by De Bry...Eighteen of the original drawings included in the above list [of those engraved by De Bry] are now in the British Museum..."

This would mean that there are a few (5) original drawings by White of which we do not know the whereabouts and for which we have only the De Bry engraving. These apparently included the drawings covered by our negatives BAE 2860 LL, BAE 867 (use of earthen pot in boiling), SI 44479 C ("The Manner of Making their boats.") and SI 44479 B (The marckes of sundrye of the chief mene of Virginia.") See complete list of negatives of John White drawings and engravings based on them in Bureau of American Ethnology Archives office file.

Engraving by Theodore De Bry, after a watercolor made by John White, ca. 1585, on the coast of present North Carolina (at that time called "Virginia"). Engraving copied from the 1893 edition of Hariot Narrative of the First English Plantation of Virginia, London. White's original watercolor is not known to be in existence.

Winter and Pond

The last traditional "doing" held at Klinkwan before evacuation of the village for Hydaburg, Alaska, ca 1900

1 Photograph (5 1/2x10 in)

Creator: Winter & Pond

Notes: OPPS NEG.72508

"Potlatch dancers, Klinquon, Alaska. Copyright by Winter & Pond" printed across bottom of original print. "Winter & Pond, Juneau" imprinted on face of mount. "The last traditional 'doing' held at Klinkwan [sic] before evacuation of the village for Hydaburg (1910 or 1911). Photo taken in front of Kad nes (Dogfish house) on the point. L.

to r.: Robert Edenshaw, Matthew Collison, [unidentified man], Edwin Scott (heir to Kad nes), Hugh Cogo, [unidentified man], Mike George, Ben Duncan, and [unidentified man]" supplied by Mrs Sanderson (see letter of 7/24/71 in files.)

Mrs Sanderson believes this was taken in 1910 or 1911, but this is probably an error since Ben Duncan is a boy here and a young man in negative Number 72519 (dated 1912 by Mrs Sanderson).

"No. 461. Chilkat Dancers. WPCo Juneau" written across bottom of original negative. Identified as Robert Edenshaw (left), Edwin Scott (heir to Kad nes or Dogfish House, in front of which they are standing) (3rd from l., standing), Matthew Collison (kneeling with fish), Hugh Cogo (2nd from r., standing), Mike George (right) and Ben Duncan (boy with mask.)

Tribe and subject supplied by Mrs Sanderson. She also stated that the date this was taken was 1910 or 1911, but this seems to be an error since Ben Duncan is a boy here and is shown as a man in negative Number 72519 (dated 1912 by Mrs Sanderson).

In 1867 the Delaware moved from Kansas to the Cherokee Reservation, Indian Territory. Those involved in the move became known as the Delaware (registered) or the Delaware (Cherokee). The others became known as the Delaware (absentee). "Registered" and "absentee" are not aboriginal terms.

Compare the articulation of the logs of the southwest corner (center, foreground) with the same corner in Negative 56926. The date 1934 was written in pencil on the original prints in the series, but Frank Siebert says that when he visited the Big House in the summer of 1935 the roof had collapsed but the walls were still standing. I have heard him describe this more than once, most recently May, 1970.

Wittick, Ben, 1845-1903

Mescalero Apaches at Santa Fe possibly fifty years ago, ca 1880

1 Photograph (8x10 in)

Creator: Wittick, Ben, 1845-1903

Notes: OPPS NEG.44767 B

Date probably earlier than Mrs Ball's estimate. Wittick died 1903. Ca. 1880 ?

"Group of Mescalero Apaches taken at Santa Fe about forty [sic] years ago. Shows Mescalero costume, beads, water jugs, tepees, etc. White man is Major Llewelyn, Agent, of whose administration the less said the better. The same applied to all Mescalero agents with the exception of that of James A. Carrol who was there from 1902 to 1913. He was the first and only one to realize that Indians are human beings."--E. Ball.

Two prints on mounts in BAE "Original Prints" series (Numbers 18-a and 18-b) show same group on same occasion-one seated, one standing pose. No photographer's mark on front; two stamps on back of each mount: "Henry Brown, El Paso, Texas; "From John S. Koerski, The Live Newsmen, El Pasco, Texas." Caption in pencil on Number 18-a, by =?: "No. 73:/Apache/ San Carlos "Reservation Arizona/ 2 views." On 18 b; No. 72. Above prints copied. See Negatives 44820 H, 44820 J.

 1 Photograph (8x10 in)

 Whitney
 Notes: OPPS NEG.484
 These two small prints are mounted on similar cards, that of one bearing the name of C. A. Zimmerman, photographer. Both are attributed to Zimmerman, who, in 1869, purchased the studio of Whitney, which had been established some years. The negatives may have been made by Whitney, and although the prints are catalogued as Ojibway (Chippewa) habitations, nevertheless, the elm-bark wigwam resembles more closely the Siouan type, with an arbor over the entrance, and the photograph may have been made in a Sioux village. The dwellings are quite similar to the Winnebago structure shown in Plate 36-a (Bulletin 77).
