ANNUAL SUMMARY

Between 1980 and 1982, the total number of helicopter operators in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and Puerto Rico increased 4.5 percent. During the same period, the number of helicopters operated showed a somewhat smaller increase -- 3.6 percent. These figures indicate increased awareness and receptivity to the use of helicopters for a wide variety of applications, in that the growth occurred during a period dominated by economic recession, during which unit sales of new helicopters decreased, and the rate of failure among small businesses rose dramatically.

The most significant change reported was the increased use for hire of the helicopters previously used exclusively by corporations and executives. This shift is reflected in the 11.5 percent increase among commercial operators, and the 0.2 percent decrease among corporate and executive operators. Included in the commercial category are helicopter flight schools, which increased in number by 3.5 percent. The number of helicopters operated by both commercial and business operators increased by more than five percent. In contrast, the number of civil government operators declined by 1.7 percent, and their helicopters by 5.7 percent, reflecting the widespread fiscal austerity.

Computerization of this directory in 1980 eliminated certain previous duplications of operator and helicopter listings, so that current data are not fully comparable with those of years prior to 1980. Nevertheless, comparisons of the last two tabulations indicate the continued strength and adaptability of this vital sector of the aerospace industry.

September, 1982:

On its round-the-world record flight, the "Spirit of Texas" refuels aboard the S.S. President McKinley somewhere in the North Pacific. Pilots Ross Perot, Jr. and Jay Coburn landed on the 40' by 40' platform in 40 knot winds as 12 foot waves pitched the ship.

A South Carolina Helicopter Hughes 269A lands at the job site

A St. Louis Helicopter Airways Sikorsky S-58 helicopter airlifts a twin engine airplane that crashed into a shopping center to a nearby airport.

Flight Instructor Tim Tucker congratulates Robinson Helicopter Company's Marketing Manager Barbara Krauss on successfully passing her flight test. Barbara is now Whirly-Girl #385.

In training to combat high-rise building fires, a Maryland State Police Bell 204 helicopter lowers "rescuers" onto the roof of the Baltimore Fire Academy Building.

In San Jose, CA., an Aris Helicopter's flight instructor and student do a pre-flight inspection of the main rotor.
