critically about ways to improve social conditions in ways that address human need—wherever it is found—and to advance humankind. Each day, our educators employ differentiated and inquiry-based instruction to engage the critical thinking of each student. We engage the whole child—mind, heart and body—and accompany each one on a personal journey that will last a lifetime.

The outcome of our work at Sacred Heart is the story of each of our alumnae. The lives of Sacred Heart alumnae are our testament. In their lives, we see the efficacy of our spirituality, the value of our goals and the effectiveness of our educational process. Do we see that these girls do, in fact, change the world? Yes, we do! Do we see evidence that their faith moves them to action? Yes, we do! Do we see that their critical consciousness moves them to innovate, improve and advance society? Yes, we do!

Today, St. Madeleine Sophie's "special sauce" has been "tried and true" in over 49 countries of the world, and it has passed the litmus test of interculturality and evidence-based practice in 150 schools worldwide. The capacity to innovate, to refresh and to "make new" is a hallmark of our story, a trademark of our 149-year-old presence in New Orleans .

We hope that you enjoy this issue of The Bridge, which illuminates only a few of the many ways in which we continue to innovate at Sacred Heart. I hope that you experience, through the wonderful articles of our magazine, the fire of inspiration, the passion of hope and the continued excitement of innovation on the Avenue!

INNOVATION is deeply rooted in the educational praxis of the Academy of the Sacred Heart as a value, as a process and as an outcome.

As a value, we spot with ease an appreciation for innovation in the deep convictions of our foundress St. Madeleine Sophie Barat. Her inquiry into the deplorable conditions of French society in her day created in her a restlessness for something "other," an alternative to an unacceptable status quo, and to imagine a new pathway for women and their children: the pathway of education. An innovator par excellence, her passionate faith and critical intellect drove her to invention and origination—the beginning of a religious order devoted to education.

At Sacred Heart, the process of innovation begins in the heart—the heart of the educator and the heart of the student. It begins with an open heart—one that is moved by care and compassion, by suffering and by love.

Touched by the sentiments of Jesus' heart, Sacred Heart's special educational process engages each student to think

For the past two years, several faculty members have represented Sacred Heart at workshops, conferences and education think-tanks focused on the implementation of Design Thinking in education. While its principles have been employed in design firms for decades, its potential impact in education with regard to 21st century learning has recently risen to the forefront of educational research.

What is Design Thinking?

It's all about the process. Design Thinking is not a replacement for the innovative teaching that has been the foundation of Sacred Heart education for years. It is, in essence, a new layer. Developed by David Kelley of the Stanford University Hasso Plattner Institute of Design and IDEO Corporation, the Design Thinking process acts as a bridge between knowledge and invention. It provides students with a tool, a system with which they can manage their thinking. Using this process, students learn to operate inside complexity, to find their way to simplicity and innovation as they address real-world issues.

a bridge between knowledge and invention

The Design Thinking Process

Empathy

It begins with empathy. Students research, conduct interviews, design surveys and observe. "Do we have a deep understanding of the needs of the user?"

Definition

Empathy is followed by definition. Students synthesize their findings and begin to define their focus. "How might we... focus on this particular need or address the user's needs as a whole?"

Ideation

In the ideation stage, students exercise divergent thinking and build on the ideas of others, adding as many ideas as possible to Post-It notes and courageously pushing the boundaries of predictable thinking. It is about quantity over quality, courage over perfection. During this process, unpredictable yet possible solutions begin to rise to the surface. "What if we..."

Prototype and Test

Perhaps most applicable to the 21st century learning skillset is the prototype stage. Students design and build low-tech solutions and then participate in feedback sessions embedded in growth-mindset language. As students present their ideas to colleagues, they are encouraged to enhance their solution-centered designs. The learned technique of both giving and receiving feedback creates an environment in which students are empowered to fail forward—to re-think, re-adjust and re-imagine. Students test their final solutions by sharing them with the learning community and possibly the intended user.

"I like..." "I wish there was a way to..." "What if..."

unpredictable yet possible solutions start to emerge

How We Apply Design Thinking

A look within... Armed with this new system, the faculty and administration turned their attention to the Sacred Heart curriculum and community. With a deep understanding of the needs of our students and our school, they asked:

How might we...? Use the Design Thinking process to ignite collaboration and innovation in our school community.

What if we...? Create design spaces where teachers and students across disciplines and divisions can incubate ideas using the Design Thinking process.

Teach students the Design Thinking process to help them create impactful solutions to complex global and environmental challenges.

Design collaborative, cross-curricular opportunities for students to experiment with solutions to real-world problems—to innovate for a purpose.

Use our collective imagination to promote active thinking and making.

Create systems and spaces for individual mentoring opportunities that support student-initiated projects and ideas.

Build makerspaces where teachers and students can test assumptions and build prototypes used to validate ideas—a place to test, share, question and build STEAM related inventions.

Design safe-spaces where feedback and re-design are embedded into the curriculum.

"We are then the discoverers of our own lives. Our world is new every day. Either we are sailing towards new shores, daring mariners in search of the unknown and day by day the horizon dips lower and our stars rise higher, or we are explorers by land, and new wonders reveal themselves on each day's march." -Mother Janet Erskine Stuart, former Superior General of the Society of the Sacred Heart

STEERING Our strategic course

BY SR. MELANIE A. GUSTE, RSCJ, PH.D. '70
HEADMISTRESS

At the beginning of the school year, our school community set our course toward new shores. With our theme framed by the words of Mother Stuart, "Our world is new every day," we became explorers and mariners in search of the unknown. Under the guidance of the stars, we opened our hearts, minds and spirits to new wonders revealing themselves each day. Now, in the beginning of this new year, our school sails onto new shores announcing the completion of our school's long-range plan for its future, "Inspiring Faith-filled Women of Courage and Confidence."

BACKGROUND

Recognizing its primary role as strategic leadership, the Board of Trustees launched a comprehensive strategic planning process in 2015-2016. It convened a top-level Strategic Planning Committee consisting of board members, administrators, alumnae and community leaders representing key sectors of society to widen the scope of its explorations. At the helm, the committee worked under the steadfast leadership of board member Patrick Hammet, who navigated us through many meetings to gather data and assess and analyze all aspects of our school's current reality and the implications for its future. After reviewing input from multiple data sources and key constituency groups, both internally and externally, the board approved the plan as our prior strategic plan sunsets.

VISION AND GOALS

Our strategic vision is elegantly captured in three goals:

- Goal One: Enhance Academic Rigor and Innovation
- Goal Two: Leverage, Expand and Create Global and Local Connections
- Goal Three: Embed Strategic Sustainability Throughout Our School

Underlying these goals are ambitious strategies which set the direction for transformational growth at Sacred Heart. These strategies include developing state-of-the-art learning spaces for our students; deepening the integration of STREAM (science, technology, religion, engineering, arts and math) across the curriculum and in co-curricular programs; creating a distinct, multidisciplinary "learning commons" to leverage the global footprint of the 150 Sacred Heart schools and their other educational programs; and cultivating strategic partnerships with key sectors in our community that inspire leadership, service, discovery and diversity engagement. This issue of The Bridge magazine focuses its articles on several of these key strategies, particularly along the theme of innovation and excellence in learning.

Daring mariners, our Board of Trustees has charted an adventuresome, yet steady, course for the future of Sacred Heart. Like good plans, it is a nimble one, flexible in its design and clear in its direction. It will galvanize our efforts and allow us to steer rather than drift aimlessly. It will anchor our decisions around the use of resources.

Placing our school and its plans in the service of our educational mission to "make known the love of the Heart of Jesus," we move forward with courage and confidence, inspired by God's promise in the words of Jeremiah, the prophet: "For I know the plans I have for you, declares the Lord, plans to prosper you and not to harm you, plans to give you hope and a future." (Jeremiah 29:11)

A BIG CUP OF BUSINESS SAVVY

By Destiny Stafford '17

This school year, seven seniors at Sacred Heart are lucky enough to participate in an interactive and educational course about financial concepts and entrepreneurship. The course is titled "Financial Literacy," and it is taught by PJ's Coffee on Magazine owner Aubry Miller. While the majority of class participants do not anticipate majoring in business, we are learning that regardless of our career path, "everyone is in business."

We began by taking two online prerequisite courses over the summer sponsored by Iberia Bank. In our first online course on personal financial literacy, we learned about a variety of finance concepts. We learned about the differences between debit and credit cards and how paying or not paying these debts influences your personal credit score. The course demonstrated the importance of a good credit score, especially when buying a house, purchasing a car or even getting a job. Now is the time to start establishing good credit. The course also taught us about savings, specifically how simple financial habits can help us achieve a savings goal. We learned about the inputs to decisions about buying versus renting, insurance, taxes, investments and even the inner workings of the U.S. banking system and the Federal Reserve.

In our second online course on entrepreneurship, we were led on an entrepreneurial expedition, involving starting our own food truck business. This interactive learning experience taught us about the many factors that are involved when starting a business, walking us through the key variables to consider. We established a business plan that involved the name and location of our business, the population we would be targeting, an evaluation of our competitors, as well as an income statement. We also chose a starting team of employees who would help the business to grow as well as any additional services that made our business unique. Another aspect to this entrepreneurial experience involved choosing our own role in the venture, whether it was the manager or maybe even the cook. We also thought about an effective promotional strategy for how we would get the word out about our business.

In the classroom at Sacred Heart, we are learning everything from writing a lease to business financials.

Throughout the year, we are also given the opportunity to work each morning at the small franchise of the popular PJ's chain that opened on Sacred Heart's campus last year. We began the semester by learning about the basic running of a PJ's franchise, from the recipes to the day-to-day work that comes with managing a business. We were taught how to successfully keep track of money through balancing the cash box after each shift, how to best organize items within a business for better efficiency, and how important it is to keep track of inventory. Working shifts throughout the school year gives us real life experience when dealing with products as well as customers. We have become knowledgeable on licenses, permits and leases. In addition to Mrs. Miller's instruction, we have benefited from the guidance of guest speakers who are helping us build our business plans, which will include all of the details of every legal document and financial concept needed to start a business. This course has allowed us to be able to plan more accordingly for our futures by putting into perspective the importance of budgeting money and the best ways to do so.

Sacred Heart is breaking boundaries and creating new opportunities for applied learning that will ease the transition to the job market and make our graduates more appealing to future employers. My fellow seniors and I now have a solid foundation in both personal and business finances, which can often be a stumbling block to young entrepreneurs. Sacred Heart is helping its students become not only college-ready but also ready for the tough job market that awaits them. These types of applied learning courses stand out to future employers.

Advancing Technology

Sacred Heart's new Tech Café opened for business this fall for prekindergarten through fourth grade students with a totally redesigned space that mimics a real coffee shop. Students played a key role in helping design the space, which was planned by Allison Looper of Blich/Knevel Designs. "It's a space for them," says teacher Lynette Moody. "It's all about them having a comfortable environment to get those creative juices flowing." The new Tech Café features kid-sized modular sofas, ottomans, an industrial style laptop bar and stools, four group work tables with colorful chairs, a bright red coffee table and movable bobble stools. Carpeted with a computer code style design, the space also includes a large projection screen, a green screen for movie making, a huge flat screen TV monitor and an entire wall which works as a whiteboard and can be written on during class.

Bread is the hallmark image of food. Upon Google searching “food,” the first image that pops up depicts a varied assortment of doughnuts, cookies and hamburgers. Upon Google searching the food pyramid, bread is the base, the touchstone foundation of humanity’s universal diet. Discovered by hunter gatherers some 30,000 years ago and formally domesticated as wheat and barley approximately 10,000 years ago, it is a culinary staple that has permeated cultures and sustained people throughout the test of time. Bread is the quintessential depiction of nourishment, even in its scarcest quantities.

Sorry boys, but bread was my first love. A romance for the ages: love is patient, love is kind, love is one croissant at a time. Though we have received my parents’ blessing, dichotomous is our relationship, my dear bread; one day, thou art my Prince Charming of my delectable desires, another day my Prince Kryptonite of my doomed diet. Bread has always served as the rising catalyst of unification amongst those who mean the most to me.

In school, I learn about the world; in the summer, the world is mine to live in. During the school year, class to class, assignment to assignment, I justify eating bread as the panacea to the subtle grumblings from my stomach. During the summer, city to city, conference to conference, eating bread, to me, is representative of a dualistic affirmation of sorts, a nod to the culture I am experiencing. This past summer, I participated in the inaugural Faces of the Heart, an international Sacred Heart youth program in France where students from Sacred Heart schools around the world gather to deepen their knowledge of Sacred Heart heritage and engage in various cultural and service activities.

“This summer will surely have a distinct je ne sais quoi,” I said to my dad prior to my departure, unpretentiously testing out the vernacular of my intended destination. Grocery shopping for a family dinner, I additionally quipped, “When I’m in France, I’ll get real baguettes and real croissants.”

Upon arriving in the Charles de Gaulle airport after a long day of travel, Sacred Heart students and teachers, hailing from places among the likes of San Francisco, Italy, Chicago, Columbia, Houston, Germany, Miami, Japan, Detroit, France, New Jersey, Mexico, and I from New Orleans, sat down to eat baguette sandwiches. Thus was the commencement of Faces of the Heart, as we were all united and “full” in our commitment to build a community, much like those in our respective homes, as a Christian value.

At Faces of the Heart, our days were long, but our nights were even longer. I found myself staying up past midnight conversing with my new-found friends about how we couldn’t wait for what another tomorrow could bring, especially the overflowing baskets of the illustrious carbohydrate that would be available for our joyous consumption in a few hours. Bread was always there for us. When visiting a safe haven for Middle Eastern refugees in Nantes, there was bread on the table. Another day, we traveled to a market where none of the food was pre-packaged; thus, out there in the open for humans, bugs, bacteria and the like but nonetheless out there as an open and willing source of nourishment to those who inhabit this great world. Walking through the streets of Paris, I found myself wooed by the quaint boulangeries effaced with crown molding, the intricacy of the basket weaving encasing the bread and the entrancingly calligraphic font of the small signs that read “Croissant: 5 Euro.” In Joigny, we lodged at St. Madeleine Sophie Barat’s house. The second night of our stay, my roommates and I were snacking on miniature gaufres, when reports of the terror attack in Nice flooded our phones. Having spent the afternoon on a wheat field and vineyard overlooking Sophie’s village earlier that day, we went into Sophie’s old bedroom across the hall to pray for the rest of the night, silently echoing the sentiments of Miguel de Cervantes, “all sorrows are less with bread.”

The etymology of the word “baguette,” a titular nomenclature that the French did not ascribe to their signature loaf until the 1920s, stems from the Latin baculum, meaning, staff or stick, indicative of power. As people of faith, we willfully open ourselves to receive God’s powerful guidance. We come together to break bread in honor of Jesus Christ, for he truly is our “one bread, one body, one Lord of all.” In the Our Father, we ask God to “give us this day, our daily bread.” We rely on God with a humble dependence as God is the baker and producer of our days. This day and each and every day is our daily bread, in which God unwaveringly gives Himself unto us. Each day is another slice of life, an opportunity for us to dwell amongst the rest of His blessed Creation.

Sacred Heart, a name ubiquitously emblazoned on our shirts and on our buildings is truly a dynamic name to behold. The epitome of a Sacred Heart education is the symbiotic coalescence of the mind and the heart. A child of the Sacred Heart is as wholesome as whole wheat. Our hearts humanize our minds, and our minds thereafter are cognizant of the pure sacredness of our hearts.

Our Sacred Hearts dwell within the benevolent Sacred Heart of Jesus, who is our Bread of Life. Each day He strengthens us, enabling us to take on the journeys we have set before ourselves. This holy bread instilled in St. Madeleine Sophie Barat the steadfast wisdom to found the Society of the Sacred Heart. This bread sustained St. Rose Philippine Duchesne throughout the course of her journey to the New World as she established the first Sacred Heart school in America. This bread ignited the flames of her ethereal spirit, making her Quahkahkanumad, the “Woman who Prays Always.” This bread rejuvenated the artistic imagination within Pauline Perdrau, allowing her to paint Mater Admirabilis.

God provides bread as an extension of Himself to nourish us physically and spiritually.

Marcel Proust, storied French novelist once said, “Mystery is not about traveling to new places but about looking with new eyes.” In a foreign place, I was comforted and enlightened by a common food. In France, God bestowed upon me fourteen days as my daily bread to serve as a modern-day face of Sacred Heart schools worldwide, a blessing in which I wholeheartedly partook, as part of the everlasting fulfillment of the partakings of those before me, “for the sake of one child.”

A Well-Rounded Foundation. A Strategy for Success.

Rebecca McAlear '94, who currently works at Anthropologie as Director of Creative Operations, firmly believes that everything happens for a reason and that she is exactly where she is meant to be. Her career path has been one of many twists and turns led by her faith, strength, hard work and perseverance—all things instilled in her through her Sacred Heart experience.

Rebecca fell in love with the advertising world while working on the Popeyes Chicken & Biscuits account as an intern at Peter Mayer Advertising in New Orleans. From there, she moved to Washington, D.C., where she secured her first paying job at a small Virginia based agency as an Account Executive, working on TV, radio and print ad campaigns. She spent the next five years there. “Those years served as my professional foundation for everything I’ve done since,” says Rebecca. “It’s where I learned how to handle clients with a mix of persistence and professionalism, and that agency is where I was taught the right mix of mediums to create a successful ad campaign.”

Rebecca’s next move was to widen her experience. She spent the next few years at a boutique branding agency where she kept a more diverse client portfolio and gained experience in brand development. Ultimately though, Rebecca yearned to work for a top five agency on a global scale, so after spending nine years in D.C., she decided to take a big leap and move to New York. Rebecca’s confidence, faith and perseverance kept her going as she logged hours of searching on her computer and attended countless networking events. “I heard the word ‘no’—a LOT,” she recounts. “I was told I didn’t have the ‘big agency’ experience I was looking to get. It took a lot more effort for me to push past the ‘no’s’ and figure out how to get a ‘yes.’”

Rebecca’s “yes” came from prestigious Ogilvy and Mather, one of the top five ad agencies in the world. Her next two years there “felt like four,” but her hard work paid off. She gained the big agency experience she needed and was poised to steer her career in the next direction she chose, and what she chose was to transition to the client side and landed a position at Ralph Lauren as Senior Director of Global Advertising for the Polo brand.

In this role, Rebecca spent a lot of her time collaborating and connecting as she drove the advertising process from conception to completion. She worked with the marketing team on objectives and campaign tactics each season and enabled them to be executed and supported from a business standpoint, meeting the strategy and budget. This included everything from a photo shoot, to creative, to copy, to production.

Rebecca recently learned of a new opportunity through a former colleague, this time at Anthropologie as Director of Creative Operations. She moved from New York to Philadelphia in September and wasted no time settling in. In her new role, Rebecca drives the brand’s mission through all integrated creative and brand activities. This means developing a yearly brand strategy and creative tactics to increase brand awareness and ultimately sales, as well as overseeing the development and execution of print, digital and social media campaigns. “I’m very lucky to be part of a team that is really committed to moving the brand forward,” Rebecca says. “I like being the business mind in a creative setting. My job is to keep the brand on track and ensure everything is cohesive, by putting myself in the customer’s shoes. I make sure everything is on time, on budget and meets the strategy.” Her role is vital in that she not only ensures the execution of plans, but she must satisfy senior management, marketing and merchandising as well. “A good account and operations manager assesses the needs of a business, not the wants,” she adds. “It’s a constant struggle to balance the two.”

Maintaining balance is something Rebecca does not only at work but in all aspects of her life as well. “You don’t want one thing to be your whole identity,” she stresses. “The idea of being well rounded is driven home in high school, and it holds true through adulthood. You want to be multifaceted. Being a good person is a job in itself.”

Rebecca strongly believes in the importance of giving back when and where she can, something that was instilled in her through her Sacred Heart education. She recalls wonderful experiences both as a peer support leader and as a volunteer at Magnolia School, where she completed her service hours. While she was in New York, she proudly served as a mentor through the Catholic Big Sisters Big Brothers program to a 16-year-old girl from the Bronx named Maci. “The most ironic part about our relationship is that she has given back to me more than I have given back to her,” Rebecca shares.

“Wear Sacred Heart on your sleeve...It is truly a special bond, only we get to experience, and for this we are blessed.”

“She is so smart, she has kept me grounded, and she has given me better advice than most adults.” Rebecca also serves as a professional mentor in any way she can. She makes time to meet with students from her alma mater Villanova University when they reach out to her for career networking, and she goes out of her way to respond to correspondence she receives via LinkedIn. “So many people have helped me throughout my career that I love to help other people,” she says.

Rebecca maintains close ties to her Sacred Heart roots. She immediately found a connection during her first weeks as a student at Villanova when she befriended a student who had attended Bloomfield Hills in Michigan. She regularly attended events in New York at Convent of the Sacred Heart (91st Street). When she moved to Philadelphia, she immediately discovered that she works alongside two Sacred Heart sisters, one from Stone Ridge and one from Bryn Mawr.

This past spring, Rebecca returned home to the Rosary to address the Class of 2016 at their Baccalaureate Mass. “Wear Sacred Heart on your sleeve,” she told the graduating seniors. “You will be surrounded by your Sacred Heart sisters when you least expect it. It is a connection that not many have. Embrace it, be proud of it, use it, and do not take it for granted... It is truly a special bond, only we get to experience, and for this we are blessed.”

Upon reflecting on her career path, Rebecca says, “Sacred Heart taught us that we are strong, independent women who can do anything. I still believe that and live that. I can do anything; it’s just a matter of how I get there.”

Kay Manthey '97

By Marion D. Ramsey

1997 Working for a Greater Purpose

Kay Manthey '97 lives in the Netherlands, holds a senior finance position with Royal Dutch Shell, volunteers in Shell's mentor program and is a loyal and generous donor to Sacred Heart. She cites her education at Sacred Heart as the foundation for how she balances a demanding career with making time for service and a personal life.

Kay started with Shell as a summer intern while she was a student at Louisiana State University. After graduating with a degree in finance, she began working at Shell's New Orleans office as a finance analyst, volunteering in civic organizations and serving on Sacred Heart's Alumnae Board as treasurer. While holding her New Orleans heritage at the forefront, she has not looked back. After Hurricane Katrina, she moved to Houston, then Denver, back to Houston and is now residing in the Netherlands and working at Shell's headquarters in The Hague. She sees herself as being part of a company that is working to meet the future energy demands of the planet in a sustainable way. Her past fifteen years have been both challenging and exciting, with each move being more complex and demanding. When asked what drives her, she replies, "Each position has given me an opportunity to contribute in a larger way, to make a deeper impact through the teams I lead and to keep growing personally."

In her current position, Kay oversees the Risk Management and Control Framework at Shell that supports its global governance standards and how the company manages and mitigates risks. "While we frequently think of innovation coming from the science or engineering sectors, we need innovation and collaboration in every discipline," Kay says. "Risks change constantly. We need to be thinking about what's coming next. Is it a new technology, a nimble competitor, a new regulation, a shift in global economy? Our governance structures and corporate policies must evolve to stay relevant and competitive. Even though I am a finance professional, I work with and learn from a wide range of professionals, including lawyers, engineers, economists, field operators, auditors and IT experts."

Kay's volunteering started at Sacred Heart and continued through college. Today, she serves as a mentor for a young Dutch company called Chordify, which has developed a system to convert any piece of music into a chord scheme that helps people learn to play music. "The mentoring relationship is mutually beneficial, enriching and fun!" Kay explains. "I act as a sounding board and mentor for the company. In turn, the founders broaden my perspective and ask questions that can challenge conventional wisdom or status quo." Kay sees this as an opportunity to pay it forward for the value that her mentors and coaches have provided over the years.

Thinking back on her time at Sacred Heart, Kay sees value in not only the rigorous academics, but the community service, leadership opportunities, diverse extracurricular activities and the mission of Sacred Heart education communicated through the Goals and Criteria. She credits the Rosary and her family for helping to make her who she is today. The Sacred Heart environment made her feel comfortable trying new and challenging things, and she wants to help give this type of education to more young women so that they can follow their dreams.

"When you think about St. Madeleine Sophie Barat and St. Philippine Duchesne and their mission to educate women in the 1800s, they were so ahead of their time," Kay reflects. She is grateful for the foresight that these pioneering founders had and the courage it took for them to pursue a radical idea—access to education for all, particularly women.

Kay sees a unique value and perspective that women bring to the workplace and the world stage. High quality education is needed to prime young women for leadership roles and provide them with the skills to take them on. "Women are needed in these roles in not just our companies and board rooms, but also in governments and throughout our communities," she says. "Sacred Heart provided that environment for me, and that is why I donate to annual giving. I am grateful for the education that my parents, the school and its educators gave me. I see it as contributing early in the cycle of fostering women's education."

Whether in her professional role or through her other leadership roles, Kay has consistently taken on new challenges that stretch her capabilities. She believes in the importance and bravery in taking a risk. "I have learned the most when I have pushed beyond my comfort zone either personally or professionally," she says. "Sometimes it has been difficult, and I have felt very challenged. That's why you need a strong support system." Kay's support system is comprised of professional mentors and colleagues, the foundation of a strong education, family, friends and her faith.

For Kay, her Sacred Heart education gave her the tools, drive and constant support early on that equipped her for success academically, professionally and in her community. The environment also taught her that if you have a gift, you have to use it and then also give back. Kay sees her contributions as helping future graduates who will be equipped to bring the balance and perspective needed across societies. "This girl changes the world, right? I want to help those girls change the world."

Kay has had many opportunities to travel while living overseas. She visited the Sacred Heart school in Vienna, Austria, with her mother Liz and Sr. Hanni Woitsch, RSCJ.

"I am grateful for the education that my parents, the school and its educators gave me. I see my donations as contributing early in the cycle of fostering women's education."

Margaret Johnson '00

By Hannagan Johnson '04

Creating a Vital Digital Platform for Millennial Moms

While a sixth grade student in Mrs. Mattesky's grammar class, Margaret Johnson '00 experienced what was something of a seminal moment for her eventual career in journalism. "Mrs. Mattesky reserved a section of the white board for displaying exemplary pieces of student writing," Margaret recalls. Those of us who have had the privilege to be students of Mrs. Mattesky may recollect how we were frequently assigned the ambitious task of producing a piece of writing that mirrored the style of the authors we were reading. Margaret remembers presenting her essay, attempting to emulate the style of Irene Hunt's Up a Road Slowly, with great anxiety because she so desperately wanted her writing to be selected for display. Margaret laughs as she fondly recalls Mrs. Mattesky reading her essay, staring at her for a moment and stating in her loving but uniquely matter-of-fact way, "Margaret, one day you are going to be up on that board. Today is not that day."

Though she may have been disappointed at that moment, Margaret considers the unconditional standards of excellence that Mrs. Mattesky and the rest of our extraordinary educators held us to throughout our years at Sacred Heart to be hugely influential in her career, which has a lot to do with recognizing and elevating great writing by women. After serving as a women's editor for two years at the Huffington Post and then as the managing editor of Bustle, the now-ubiquitous site for young women, Margaret launched Bustle's sister site Romper, a website whose aim is to appeal to millennials with kids by covering the latest news and trends in a way that celebrates the reality of motherhood rather than the various fictions we've developed around it. As Margaret describes Romper, "It's general interest, but its goal is to appeal to a broad spectrum of young women with kids. That means thinking as inclusively as possible. Attention to diversity is paramount."

This generation of young families looks very different from any previous, not just racially but also in terms of composition: there are more single-parent families, more racially mixed families, more families with two mothers or two fathers. Margaret says that Romper's goal is to reach and represent all of those different permutations of young family, all of those different ways of building a life. It's the type of site that, prior to Romper's inception, didn't really exist. As Margaret shared with the New Yorker around the time of Romper's launch in November of 2015, "The media talks about millennials as if they are kids, and actually, they are having kids."

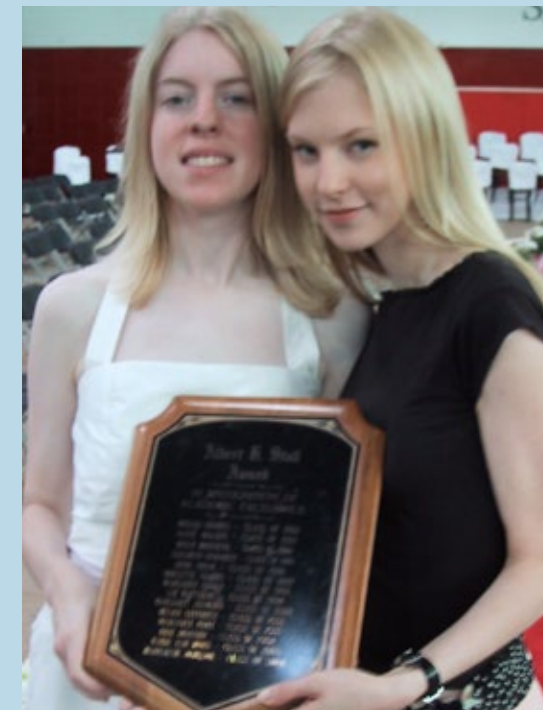

Inherent to its digital nature, the volume and pace of Romper is massive. In her role as managing editor, Margaret oversees the site's editing team, who in turn supervise the hundreds of articles that the website produces on a weekly basis. Margaret describes her typical day in the office as staying on top of the news—the site offers 24/7 news and entertainment coverage because "women with kids are interested in more than their kids"—as well as editing and strategizing with her team to ensure the site's continued forward outlook and broad appeal to an extensive readership of mothers. And though it demands always having an eye on both media trends and parenting issues, Margaret's role, at its core, ultimately revolves around the art of writing.

As far back as I can remember, Margaret has had a deep love of writing, a passion that was first nurtured and developed at Sacred Heart, then Princeton University, and finally at NYU's Cultural Reporting and Criticism master's program. "I always felt just as prepared a writer as anyone else while at Princeton and in my master's program," Margaret shares. "Sacred Heart put me on the same footing as graduates from Exeter, Harvard-Westlake, Thomas Jefferson in D.C. and any other top high school anywhere in the country."

Her current position demands constant innovation as well as a deep commitment to the idea that women's stories matter, and Margaret attributes both to the influence of our Sacred Heart teachers. "Our educators were willing to take risks and constantly demonstrated such a genuine passion for what we were learning," she recalls. "It was through that passion that I came to understand the power and beauty of language, especially, and the way narrative helps us access the extraordinary in our otherwise ordinary lives."

And there is yet another significant way in which our Sacred Heart experience continues to influence Margaret's daily life. Working in such a fast-paced field as digital journalism can perhaps explain a recurring nightmare Margaret has anytime a major deadline approaches. "I'm not kidding, this is the nightmare: I'm walking through the front gates, it's September 25th, and I suddenly realize I haven't picked my oratory piece." No matter where life takes us, our Sacred Heart education never leaves us.

"Our educators were willing to take risks and constantly demonstrated such a genuine passion for what we were learning. It was through that passion that I came to understand the power and beauty of language, especially, and the way narrative helps us access the extraordinary in our otherwise ordinary lives."

Lucy Boyd '07

By Lisette Bayle '83

2017 Learning and Writing About Issues that Matter

Lucy Boyd '07 has always enjoyed writing and always respected and appreciated good journalism. She majored in English at the University of Virginia and taught seventh grade English for three years in Newark, NJ, after graduating from college. She attended the Harvard Kennedy School of Government where she was offered a research position at the Shorenstein Center for Media and Politics with Jackie Calmes from the New York Times. She loved this experience so much that she interviewed and was chosen for another research position her second year, this time with renowned CBS correspondent Bob Schieffer. Impressed with her skills and work ethic, Schieffer asked Lucy to join him on the presidential campaign trail, an incredible opportunity for her to travel and get to think and write about issues she was interested in along the way.

As a Political Analyst and Associate Producer for Bob Schieffer for the 2016 presidential campaign, Lucy researched and wrote memos on specific policy issues, wrote scripts for Schieffer's on-air appearances, helped prepare Schieffer for special events like the Republican and Democratic conventions and other related duties. Throughout this time, Lucy produced and wrote Schieffer's "About the News" podcast in which Schieffer interviews major players in journalism on the changing landscape of journalism in politics—a task she continues even after the election. Lucy also covered some political events herself and wrote pieces for CBS News online.

Lucy says her favorite thing about the job was that she had a lot of freedom to take initiative to produce, research and write on issues of interest to her. For instance,

“At Sacred Heart, smart women are the norm. High expectations for women are the norm. So I went to college with that mindset, and that helped me do well there.”

as a former public school teacher, she is very interested in education reform, so she researched and interviewed people about Hillary Clinton's education platform. She wanted to know how representative the speakers at each convention were, so she did the research, wrote the piece, and pitched it to CBS News.com where it was published. Having learned data analysis skills in graduate school using statistics programs like STATA, she asked to analyze voter data for the CBS News election's team.

Of her many accomplishments in life thus far, Lucy is most proud of her years of teaching at an inner-city school in Newark, her master's thesis on education policy in Massachusetts and the op-eds she has published on education reform. While she was teaching, her students scored in the 90th percentile in reading and writing as compared to their district neighbors who scored in the 30th percentile. Her master's thesis is being used by the Massachusetts Department of Education to improve low performing schools serving low income and minority students. Her op-ed pieces have been cited in other articles by activist groups and members of local governments involved in education reform.

Lucy says that Sacred Heart played a pivotal role in her upbringing. “Not only did I receive an exceptional education, but I was surrounded by smart women and provided with leadership opportunities I don't think I would have gotten elsewhere,” she says. “At Sacred Heart, smart women are the norm. High expectations for women are the norm. So I went to college with that mindset, and that helped me do well there.” Lucy also credits Sacred Heart's English Department, specifically Mr. Sam Brandao and Mr. Michael Deschamp, with helping develop her love of and skill for writing. “They taught me to craft arguments, weave evidence together, use rhetorical devices and use words and syntax purposefully. This has had a profound impact not only on my writing but on my critical thinking skills as well,” she adds.

The best advice Lucy has to offer at this point in her career is this: “Do whatever you are doing in that moment really, really well because once you do, it opens your eyes to bigger things you never understood before.” Lucy did well at UVA, which led to her to acceptance into Teach for America. She worked very hard to get her students on a seventh grade reading level (some of whom came to her on a first grade reading level). This opened her eyes to the oppressive failure of our public school system especially for children of color, which led her to get a master's degree in Public Policy from Harvard so that she could understand the issue better. At Harvard, she took more classes than she needed, built relationships with professors, wrote extensively and took on additional research positions. This helped her see the impact of journalism on policy and lament the lack of good journalists talking about education reform and nuanced policy issues, so she joined the Shorenstein Center. That is where she met Bob Schieffer, which led her to CBS and a new platform to write and produce stories that matter to her.

Since the election, Lucy has accepted a job at CBS that combines her interests of journalism, education and policy analysis. She is working on one of the production teams for 60 Minutes, where she has the opportunity to pitch her own stories and produce pieces that are investigative in nature. The long-form, research-based and thoughtful approach of 60 Minutes stories is what attracted her to this opportunity. “I truly believe we need more people thinking and discussing education reform and social policies as it directly relates to inequality. A show like 60 Minutes is an ideal place to start some of those conversations,” she says. Currently, Lucy is working on a piece about violence and policing in Chicago, one on fake news and media literacy, and two on charter schools. She is most excited though about the two education stories, as that is a topic closest to her heart.

LET'S HEAR IT FOR OUR CARDINALS

The 2015-2016 athletic year was a memorable one, highlighted by three team state runner-up titles, five individual state champion titles, five individual state runner-up titles and numerous third place finishes in state. The Cardinals also swept district championships in seven sports and earned two team regional titles.

CROSS COUNTRY

The cross country team displayed a “never quit” attitude as they logged hundreds of miles and achieved numerous personal records throughout the season. At the district championship meet, Sacred Heart runners swept the top fourteen spots, with Mary Nusloch '19 and Madeline Kling '19 finishing first and second respectively. In the Northshore metro meet, the athletes looked stronger than ever—seven of the thirteen runners achieved personal records, and four ran season best times. Their strong performances earned them the runner-up title in the meet, second to top-ranked Mandeville High.

The state championship meet proved to be a test of physical and mental toughness, with extremely muddy course conditions as well as intense heat. Despite two of the seven Sacred Heart runners going down to an injury and heat exhaustion, the team was able to push through and bring home the state runner-up trophy. Mary Nusloch '19 and Madeline Kling '19 once again came out on top as the individual state champion and runner-up. It was the third consecutive year that a Sacred Heart runner earned the individual state title.

SWIMMING

The swim team started off the season strong with 17 individual times fast enough to qualify for the state championships. Meet after meet, they continued to improve and swim personal best times. In the postseason, the Cardinals earned the district championship, with captain Laura Bruce '16 winning gold medals in the 100m butterfly and 100m backstroke. The 200m medley relay team and 200m freestyle relay team took home gold medals as well. Ten swimmers competed in the metro meet, and Laura Bruce earned the metro champion title in the 100m butterfly.

Thirteen Cardinal swimmers competed in the state championship meet, and they did not disappoint. Numerous athletes swam personal best times. Laura Bruce was the state champion in both the 200m freestyle and 100m butterfly. She also earned a bronze medal, along with teammates Helen Charbonnet '18, Karson Dumas '21 and Gabriella Mehaffie '19, in the 200m freestyle relay. In the end, the Cardinals were barely edged out in the team competition, and they finished in third place.

VOLLEYBALL

The volleyball team set their goals high from the start with a Wizard of Oz inspired theme, “Follow the Yellow Brick Road to State.” Their road was filled with hard work, dedication and many notable moments, from defeating De La Salle during the inaugural Sacred Heart Hall of Fame Induction to honoring the seniors on Give ASH Day and defeating Newman to clinch the district title. They finished the regular season as undefeated district champions without dropping a single set.

The team took on a strong John Curtis team in the quarterfinal round of the state playoffs. The entire Middle and Upper Schools filled the Pontchartrain Center, creating a sea of red and white and an electrifying atmosphere that helped the Cardinals capture the victory and advance to the semifinals. The Cardinals faced the top seed Pope John Paul II. They gave everything they could and battled to the end, finishing the season in third place in the state.

BASKETBALL

The basketball team started off an historic season at the fifth annual Round Cardinal Tournament. As the tournament host, they came out on top, defeating Riverdale, Lusher and sister school Sacred Heart Grand Coteau. Over the Christmas holidays, they traveled to Houston to face another sister school Duchesne Houston and enjoyed connecting with their Sacred Heart sisters.

The team finished the regular season as undefeated district champions and qualified for the state playoffs for the first time in over a decade. After an encouraging send-off from the school community, the Cardinals headed to Baton Rouge to face the defending state champion University High in the first round. They knew it would be a tough match-up, but they refused to be intimidated and battled to the end. Avery Hardie '16 sunk her first three-point shot of her career in the final minutes of what would be her last game of her high school career. It was a great way to end a memorable season.

The undefeated district champion soccer team had a solid season that brought them to the state championship match. The road to the finals wasn't easy. In both the quarterfinal and semifinal matches, the Cardinals went down 0-1 and made exciting comebacks to defeat Ursuline and E.D. White. Upon winning the semifinals, Cardinals fans stormed the field to celebrate the state championship berth.

Game day for the state championship was declared "Spirit Day" at Sacred Heart. The team, ranked second, departed for the stadium with energy, smiles and a "ready to take care of business" attitude, as they faced top-ranked Vanderbilt Catholic. It was a hard-fought match, but the Cardinals ultimately fell short and were awarded the state runner-up trophy. "It was a great season," said Coach Tooraj Badie. "I'm so proud of this group. They worked so hard to get here. Everybody chipped in and helped each other. I told them before the game, 'Win or lose, it's been an honor and a privilege.'"

GOLF

Sacred Heart golfers exceeded their own expectations last spring, making school history on more than one occasion. In the postseason, Cassidy Lambert '21 earned the individual metro champion title. She represented the Cardinals at the regional tournament along with teammates Marcelle Holmes '18 and Katherine Verlander '16. At regionals, the team not only reached their goal of qualifying for the state tournament for the first time in Sacred Heart history, but they also came out on top and were crowned regional champions.

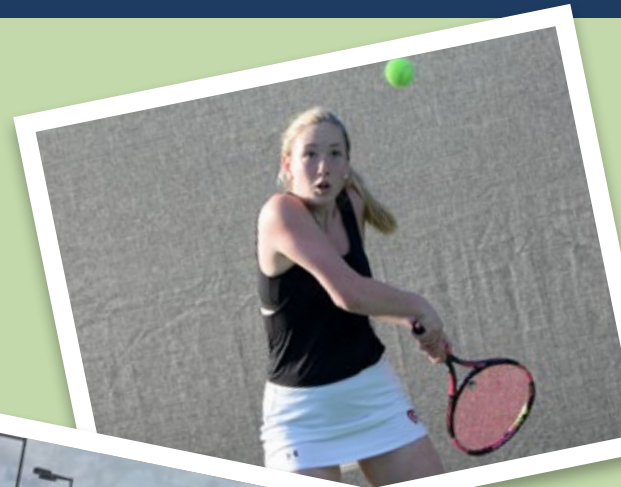

Holmes and Lambert entered the state championships wide-eyed "just hoping to learn from the experience." But the duo shot the rounds of their lives. They came home with the state runner-up trophy, putting Sacred Heart on the golf map.

TENNIS

The tennis team brought home their eighth straight regional title this spring, with Katie Burvant '19 and Sara Jenkins '17 earning the doubles regional championship. They also qualified the maximum number of entries for the state tournament for the first time in a few years.

The Cardinals faced some tough draws in the early rounds of the state tournament, but they remained focused and determined. Singles player Ashton Rabalais '17 and doubles team Carley Bohn '17 and Madi Bonura '18 held their own against top-ranked regional players in the round of 32. Kyle Maher '17 and Caroline Viator '17 played two intense three-set, two-hour plus matches in the scorching heat, barely missing out on a quarterfinal appearance. Asia Jackson '18 dominated her opening match but was defeated by a regional champion in a tough match. Burvant and Jenkins sailed through their first two matches and won a close battle in the quarterfinals. They fought hard against the eventual state champions in their next match, ending the tournament as state semifinalists.

TRACK & FIELD

Thirty-four athletes comprised of a mix of newcomers and veterans competed for the Cardinals in track & field. In the postseason, the team dominated the district championship meet, earning the team championship, 14 event championships and 13 event runner-up titles. In a very competitive regional championship meet, they earned the team runner-up title, with two event championships and three runner-up titles. Claire Moreau '18 was named Regional Outstanding Field MVP.

Four athletes qualified for the state championships. Ellie Silvia '16 won her fourth consecutive high jump state championship with a jump of 5'6", a height that tied her outdoor personal record. She set another PR in the javelin to capture her second consecutive state runner-up title. Claire Moreau '18 was the first athlete in school history to compete in four events at state—high jump, 100m hurdles, javelin and discus. She earned runner-up in the high jump and set a PR to claim third place in the 100m hurdles. Mary Nusloch '19 finished the 3200m race as state runner-up. Olivia Pitt '20 shaved an impressive seven seconds off of her personal best time to set a new PR in the 1600m to capture third place.

Additionally, six Cardinals athletes competed in the indoor track & field state championships. Ellie Silvia '16 took home her third indoor high jump state championship in four years, and Claire Moreau '18 set a personal record to earn the high jump runner-up title.

ALUMNAE WEEKEND | OCTOBER 14-15, 2016

Alumnae from near and far came home for a weekend of non-stop fun to reconnect with their classmates. On Friday, the Class of 1966 joined Headmistress Sr. Melanie Guste, RSCJ '70 for their 50-year reunion luncheon in the parlor, where Preschool and Lower School students recited the "Child of the Sacred Heart Prayer" and sang "Coeur de Jésus." That evening, alumnae of all ages gathered for the biggest alumnae party of the year, the Courtyard Soirée, to enjoy music, food and fun around the fountain. The next morning, the 2016 Alumnae Award recipients were honored during the Legacy Brunch, which was catered by Ralph Brennan. The weekend concluded in the afternoon with Family Mass in the chapel, and of course, goûter.

Academy of the Sacred Heart

ANNUAL REPORT 2015-2016

“Our world is new every day.
either we are sailing towards new shores, daring...”

MESSAGE FROM THE HEADMISTRESS & BOARD CHAIR

Dear Sacred Heart Community,

Our last fiscal year found us on a path moving forward to shape our future and of continuing to write the magnificent tale that is Sacred Heart. This year, our journey continues toward new horizons. As explorers and mariners, we continue our educational mission framed by the Goals and Criteria of faith, academics, service, community and personal growth.

This Annual Report documents your commitment to Sacred Heart students. It reflects by each name and contribution your faith in them to go forward “in search of the unknown” and to write a tale of “triumph, healing, courage, beauty, wisdom power, dignity and love.”

(Mother Janet Erskine Stuart)

In partnership with our parents, friends, faculty and staff, the Academy of the Sacred Heart graduates young women of faith, intellect and confidence who will go out and make a difference in the world today because they are grounded by a strong Sacred Heart foundation. The generosity of our Sacred Heart family enables us to continue that tradition into the future.

The funds raised through Annual Giving benefit our girls directly and assist us in providing the Sacred Heart experience of education and faith formation. Your gifts have also enabled us to:

- Recruit and retain the highest quality faculty and staff.
- Integrate best practices in education through professional development, Readers and Writers Workshops in the Preschool and Lower School and differentiated learning.
- Equip our learning spaces with technological resources.
- Keep us cool during the sultry days in New Orleans with new air conditioning units for both campuses.
- Build out new classroom space at the Mater Campus to make room for our new one-year-old students.
- Paint and provide needed maintenance to Cadiz side of the Rosary.

We thank our Parents’ Annual Giving Chairs, Evelyn and Vince Liberto, for their leadership and their incredible team of volunteers for their hard work and support. Finally, we thank you—our trustees, faculty, staff, parents, grandparents, alumnae and friends—for your continued generosity and commitment to Sacred Heart.

Sincerely,

Sr. Melanore Abustoso

Annual Giving

Annual Giving plays a vital and exciting role in furthering the mission of Sacred Heart education for our students. Each year YOUR Annual Giving gift provides critical unrestricted funds that afford Sacred Heart the opportunity to do more for our girls. Whether it is making enhancements to our arts and music program, developing ACT/SAT test prep classes or increasing security on campus, your contribution to Annual Giving makes a real impact and an immediate difference.

Thank you for your generosity and for your partnership in our mission of educating tomorrow's leaders—we really couldn't do it without you!
