Where is anger in a chart?

I've been aware of how angry people get here on the forum and at times it seems quite destructive. This is from a newsletter of Rick Hanson (author of Buddha's Brain). He's a neuro-psychologist and I think a good one, in addition he's a really pleasant and positively intentioned person.

I copied it to here, cause I have been, at times, quite uncomfortable with the degree of anger inappropriately (imo) dumped on various forum members in threads, usually in repeat performances, seemingly somewhat unconsciously. I never know how to interact on these occasions in a way that is helpful.

So, I wondered where anger is found in one's natal chart. For those who are completely unaware of how they come across... are there any placements they might check out, such as Mars in a natal chart, to get a clue and start to own their projections perhaps?

Quote:

Beware Anger.
Why?

Anger is tricky.

On the one hand, anger – feeling annoyed, irritated, resentful, fed up, mad, outraged, or enraged – alerts us to real threats, real injuries, and real wrongs that need correcting, and it energizes and fuels us to do something about them. In my family growing up, my parents had a monopoly on anger. So, I suppressed my own, along with a lot of other feelings, and it's been a long journey to reclaim my interior, including anger, and be able to feel it fully and (hopefully) express it skillfully.

Whether in personal relationships or in the halls of power, people in positions of authority or privilege often tell others that they don't deserve to be angry, they shouldn't get so worked up, it's their own fault, etc. when in fact they have every reason and right in the world to be angry. It is certainly important to know in your heart what is actually happening, how bad it is, what the causes are, and what to do – and decide for yourself how much you want to get or stay angry.

On the other hand, anger:

Feels bad past the first rush of it
Stresses the body, over time wearing down health
Narrows attention, losing sight of the big picture
Clouds judgment, driving us to act impulsively, potentially violently
Creates and revves up conflicts with others

Anger often hurts us more than it hurts others. I believe there is a saying from Alcoholics Anonymous: "Resentment is like taking poison . . . and waiting for others to die." This metaphor of a beguiling toxin is also found in a description from early Buddhism: "Anger has a honeyed tip . . . and a poisoned barb."
How?

Recognize anger. Feel it, don't suppress it. Explore it and find whatever is valid in what it is telling you. Also look beneath it, to the hurt or sorrow or outrage on behalf of others. Help yourself open to and include all of yourself. Be skeptical of others who try to talk you out of your reactions out of their own self-interest.

Figure out what you are going to do. Usually not easy, to be sure, but try to slow things down so you can think clearly, find your ground, and Take Heart (another, post of mine).

This said, beware – be watchful, be wary – of how anger can work on your mind and hijack you.

Anger comes with justifications. We feel wronged, mistreated, affronted, provoked: "Of course I'm mad. You made me mad. It's your fault." I remember once banging my shin on a coffee table and getting so mad I kicked the table . . . as if it were to blame. Anger is seductive, drawing us into cases against others, bills of prosecution, mental emails drafted in bed at 2 am (speaking from personal experience!). Anger fools us, making us feel perfectly entitled to lash out and say or do terrible things . . . from which we eventually wake as if from a nightmare with dismay and remorse at our actions. Anger is – literally – tricky.

And anger is a particularly powerful trickster when it plays out inside and between groups. You can see this at all scales, from cliques in high school to office gossip to politics to war. A group will often form around shared grievances, and then defend and proclaim those grievances no matter what the facts are to maintain its cohesion and identity. Whether on the schoolyard in 5th grade or in nations throughout history, authoritarian leaders have exploited our social primate vulnerability to the appeal of grievance in order to acquire and hold on to power, inflating and even inventing grievances while promising to protect the group and avenge it against those who have wronged it.

It is no small thing to find your own way inside such a group with such a leader. Or to find a way to relate to those in such groups with moral clarity and strength of heart – without being clouded or infected by anger yourself.

In my meditative tradition, I've heard it said that anger is like throwing hot coals with bare hands: both people get burned. In relationships, families, organizations, countries, and the world altogether, there has been so much burning already in our shared human history. Too much burning. Too many minds burned up with anger.

Potency, agency, authenticity, fierce compassion, moral confidence, truth spoken to power: none of these is anger or requires anger. Truly, each one of us can come home to the dignity, authority, and courage to stand in the truth and speak from the heart with passion and power, free of the flames of anger.

#1 Mars in the Fire signs of Aries, Leo, Saj

#2 Moon in hot-headed Aries.

I'd much rather deal with these types than the simmering volcanoes, the passive aggressive types. Passive aggressive behavior naturally brings out the anger in others.

Mercury Mars afflictions, Sun Moon Mars afflictions.....Sun in fire signs, Aries in particular can be quite a hothead.

Taurus are known to have the worst tempers in the Zodiac once they've reached their boiling point which takes a long time to build.

Capricorns are the most vindictive earth sign and will calculate their angry revenge.

The sensitive water signs; intellect proud air signs, when the former feel disrespected, and the latter think that their intelligence has been insulted, angry outbursts result.

They take out the frustrations they feel out on the forum where their anger is not going to have any serious repercussions to them.

I have lived with three Aries people and none of them I would describe as hot heads. Never seen any of them really angry. As for me With a Cap stellium and Mars Rex in Can I have internalised my anger and think about getting revenge but never do

I'd look at the lord and grahas (planets) of the 1st (natural ruler/ σ^7), 3rd (skill and effort) and 5th house (emotions, memory, discernment). Aspects between σ^7 and Υ helps too as Jupiter tends to see the bigger picture or provide compassion, positive thoughts and righteousness. So if Mars is aggressive, a trine to Jupiter will cool it down.

If the Mars is in Gemini, how does one anger manifests?

Mars is competitive, aggressive, dynamic, explosive, rules the hemoglobin, etc.

Mercury is speech, volatility, abstract, rules the tongue, mouth, speech, voice, nervous system, etc.

Anger is expressed in media communications, ζ chatters too much, and σ^7 feels the need to explain everything so rashly and defensively. The energy is direct and competitive. Sharp, critical, micromanaging, "long-winded". Anger projects perhaps stems from issues with siblings, lack of courage, elementary education (unresolved bullying memories), unfulfilled short-term goals, lack of hobbies, lack of skill and effort, issues with expressing one's creativity (i.e. singing, dancing), neighbors, issues with policemen or authority figures, violence, bone marrow, physical injuries, etc.

Then you look what house it's in. If it's in the 4th, it makes the person more inclined to have issues of the mother who was always on the go, chattering away on mundane things, eccentric multi-tasking, Has too much anxiety, parents may have divorced because of anger, sibling rivalry.

Then you look at the aspects. I think the Sun and Moon tells why a person is angry too. It's a combination.

Correct again, Erich! I recall only once being so angry, age 16, that I felt like I could tear Maggie apart with my bare hands, I really did. (She was my best friend and had been goofing on me behind my back.) Only once - but this feeling was of such tremendous physical power I never forgot it. Good thing her mother yelled "What's going on up there?" or I don't know what would have happened.

Thank the heavens for Becky's mother, Catsratz, or you might have done some time in juvenile hall.

Do you remember what Becky's Sun sign was ?

Did the Aries that you formerly lived with have Pisces or Taurus placements of Mercury and Venus?

Mars in general.

Everyone has the right to feel angry, but the point is to express it without hurting others or yourself.

That takes practice, but the key is to remember to be assertive, not aggressive!

I've seen 2 fire moon signs in a debate. they were best friends, both had sun&mars in gemini. An Aries moon is nothing compared to an enraged Leo moon. You can feel the rage in the air, they try to control it and not make a scene but they are boiling. Aries moon is explosive yet childlike. I have a good friend who is a leo moon&capri mars, sometimes when we are goofing around I cannot stop laughing and oh boy, don't laugh at a leo moon. He wouldn't say anything but the eyes tell a different story. very proud people. Though I still laugh sometimes, it's funny as hell. 😊 I've never seen a ♌ Moon angry yet.

Leo hates to be made fun of and ridiculed in any way.

Leo's simply have no sense of humor about themselves.

Look at the footage of Leo rising Trump being made fun of by Obama and he is sitting in the audience stewing in his own juices, never laughing once, only grimacing with contained anger.

I've known some Cappy types that bring down the steel door when they want to seek revenge. And you can scream your head off, pound your fists on that door, and that door ain't never going to open up again.

For some unknown reason I pissed off a Cappy with Moon in Scorpio, and she emailed me and said she never wanted to see me again or talk to me again. That was 2 years ago.

My triple Saj pissed off his Cappy friend some time ago, he tried, unsuccessfully for 10 years to re-connect, with no luck whatsoever. Scorpio will never forget and will forgive, but Cappy's take it a step further, no forgetting and no forgiveness whatsoever.

My Cap Moon will testify to that kind of behavior. I also have the steel door and I've used it a number of times over the years. Cappy's think it's completely idiotic to forgive someone for someone that's angered them, and usually, Cappy's have good reason for that.

Well said: Silence can be louder than a scream!

My triple Scorpio with Mars in Aquarius, in the 10 years we were together, would have an explosion about once a year. I would think of all the things he should have been angry with at the time, and he'd sing instead. One time, I swore that a gas main had blown somewhere, the noise was deafening. Well, the simmering volcano finally exploded. He took his grandmother's spindled rocker, lifted it up over his head and slammed it down on the kitchen floor, spindles flying everywhere and then the big smile: Gee that felt good! Yes, it could have been me rather than the rocker!

Mars aspecting Moon especially \square or σ .

I try my hardest to stay away from my triggers. $\text{♃} \sigma \text{♂} \text{♄}$

Sun aspecting Mars especially square. This is just the same as my Moon - Mars.

Mercury aspecting Mars especially quincunx or square. Again I try to be kind, I am verbally on fire though.

Sun aspecting Saturn brings frustration. Sun opposite Saturn, people usually impose limitations on me, I see limits in others where I see ways further from my own perspective, possible Sun conjunct Jupiter adding to this too.

Mars aspecting Saturn is tricky, the square is the mark of a coward for they choose someone who they will deem as weaker than them to let go onto because the pressure is not there. (descriptions and real life experience) I don't have a Saturn aspect to Mars.

Pluto square Mercury is incisive and direct, so much others feel they are being destroyed. I have to be careful with this.

Anger often hurts us more than it hurts others. I believe there is a saying from Alcoholics Anonymous:

"Resentment is like taking poison . . . and waiting for others to die." This metaphor of a beguiling toxin is also found in a description from early Buddhism: "Anger has a honeyed tip . . . and a poisoned barb."

He is correct.

I was told by a forum member a long time ago that many on this forum have mental health disorders, unemployment and financial issues, divorce and relationship issues. Many are disabled, lonely, and on this forum all day long. And not to take it to 'heart'.

I recently was told by a member that I'm "out for revenge" for her, from a member I didn't even know or follow, and that I had continually "personally attacked" her. I of course asked for the thread(s), which she could not provide since they did not exist.

I don't know if it's astrology or forums in general. It seems like I don't see this kind of anger and aggression on other forums. And the Ad Hominem attacks often using one's chart, which this individual did to me also, w/o even knowing my chart... Weird.

Yeah, many seem unaware or at least uncaring, how they come across. And yes, Mars and other placements may be seen, but it won't necessarily show TBI, Narcissism, Medications one is under the influence of, and much more.

All that said, many here are quite passionate about their beliefs on astrology, nothing wrong with that, but it seems many go on the attack to prove them 'right' and another 'wrong'. It seems some feel the need to feel like a Deity.

I think Rob Hand said "the one thing I wish for astrology, is to stop arguing over it"

But I don't think that arguing about astrology is the root cause of all the anger and aggression that is on here.

Some probably do it for sport just like the trolls on any other site, simply enjoying the reactions they get.

In Astrology aggression belongs to Mars, and so does sexuality. This alone talks about the potent dual nature of aggression, on one side there's its disruptive nature, on the other, its powerful quality of regeneration.

Aggression can be good, it denounces something that clashes with our subconscious, and it's good if this energy is brought to our awareness. It can be detrimental when this energy is poorly understood and directed. We might consider these things when we fall into some forum battle: there can be very steamy hot factors going on.

In excuse to the people who act harshly or inconsiderately in here, I can say I've been on their same page when I was at my lowest; the online forums were then a mean to let my unresolved anger come out, and I'm still sorry for lashing on some people, and it's funny because those with whom I've let my energy come out, were the ones I had a good admiration for. As the saying goes, we hate those we love the most.

Our true desires can clash with our ego and its expressions, and it's not just an astrological motive, as said before, many external circumstances can be at play. It would be good to study the nature of our Mars when we feel at our lows, direct its energy in the most appropriate way... but it's obviously easier said than done.

Chiron	22	23	15	23	29	25	25	17	20	17	22	26	264

I didn't include the planetary aspects because no significant pattern was found... actually there are some interesting results but they go against the laws of astrology (for examples there are some trines that are more frequent than expected...)

Quite surprised with the low count on ♀♌ as it's quite vilified by the ♀♁ and ♀♍ generation on this forum. The young members doesn't survive long here.

Likewise, we don't like them either.

Leo Pluto is all about the self, Virgo Pluto, good at giving out but bad at doing it themselves.

♌♌ We are not aggressive just factual.

Truth hurts those who cannot bear it.

♌♌ Don't exist to be honest. Fall of Pluto though.

<https://trustedpsychicmediums.com/scorpio-star-sign/pluto-in-scorpio/>

We should also look into which they have issues with, some Pluto in Scorpio's have Saturn in Aquarius, and in fact don't have the 3 outers in Capricorn.

Mars rules anger, but I think there's more at work on an Internet forum.

1. We don't see people's facial expressions or hear their tone of voice. We miss the cues that normally get us to tone down our martial communications.
2. If astrology means anything, different people respond differently to communications. Sagittarians are reputed to be very blunt, for example. To them, it's straight talk. A sensitive Pisces, however, is likely to experience those blunt words as hurtful. Scorpius/Plutonians may crave more intensity than a reserved, diplomatic Libra is prepared to handle.
3. Some people do not appear to have the verbal tools to disagree with someone's post without attacking them personally. The best advice from Human Resources departments is, criticize the ideas, not the person. Of course, this advice doesn't help much if we think we are our ideas, but a little Aquarian detachment goes a long way.
4. Some people like to debate, and don't see the need to concede an important point. I plead guilty here. Ideally it's a debate about ideas, facts, principles, &c; but for people who find serious debates uncomfortable, notably when they devolve into personal attacks, maybe the best strategy is just to skip over the aggravating posts.

The anger chart has the NN in Libra score highest. Coming from a place of anger SN in Aries.
Great information, thanks for posting it, Roland 303.

Do you remember what Becky's Sun sign was ?

No, but this was 1966. I probably knew Maggie's birthdate at the time. I think it was in the cold-weather months.

This is the first and last time it ever happened, age 16. I felt I could actually tear chunks out of her with my bare hands if I tried, the rage feeling was that strong. And I'm not even a shouter or door-slammer.

An effective way I've found to release anger if it needs to be released, especially with someone like a boss or landlord, is to just think silently while looking into their eyes of what you'd really like to say to them. As our brains operate on electricity, I think the message does go through.

Laser like focus and concentrated force of thought can communicate your message loud and clear. I have successfully done this with another person, but it was in a fun way, not angry.

A line given to me almost 30 years after years of getting angry with a partner fir the way i was being treated. "I AM NEVER ANGRY FOR THE REASON I THINK"

Ihave mars conj saturn in cancer tr sun but aries merc wide sqr cancer moon and mars. When i sorted out the moon issues then the anger changed to clear assertiveness and the ability to determine what was worth feeling angry about or letting go.

I do not think it just astrology forums 😊 take a peek at the depression levels of people on facebook, social media who spend a lot of time on there.

read an article how people born in the last 15 yrs or so, are very socially disconnected, their only outlet is the media. no one hangs out like years ago.

depression and anger can be a mixed bag. astrology forums do not take all the rap. 😊😊 not sure if can actually blame the internet, though. maybe there are limitations now on people getting together. having a great time.
families separated, the list goes on.

interesting chart, thanks

There is no true form of control on the internet so people will display themselves in a full sense. One thing though, the internet is excellent for venting because if you read it back, you will see all of your short comings, that would of course need a mind that wants to improve themselves.

Just study the behavior of people at a get together and what are they doing? They're engaging their phones instead of the people directly in front of them!

I don't understand this behaviour, I don't even take my phone with me and use my computer for things like that, so if I am at home I can do that, but when I am out or working.. it don't exist.

Good for you CV. This rude phone behavior is pervasive and also ruins peoples experiences while watching a movie, because heaven forbid the phone addict might miss a text message!

Some phone addicts have the gall to speak on their phones during the movie, and the illumination from their phones in a darkened theatre is a further distraction.

Aries moon: I anger quickly, but also only get angry for a couple of minutes. I don't even really get angry, just hot-headed, so I react.

My boyfriend has scorpio moon. He does not get angry a lot, but when he does it takes days to make up 😊

Seriously? No. I know a Taurus having Moon conj Jupiter as his yod apex - you can't get more concentrated than that. And add to that his Mars conj Venus in Aries, as also part of his yod.

Yet one gentle word... or maybe a few, but he doesn't stew longer than 24 hours 😊

He does boil. But he takes time out, and it's gone.

Maybe it's his Pluto conj Saturn which cools the moon anger?

Also his Uranus in Gemini - freezes the thoughts!

Sun in Cancer, Moon in Scorpio, Mars conjunct Mercury in Gemini woman I know, the same, but she lacks the long term game and effectiveness, it mostly devolves into emotional games of manipulation as an outsider looking in.

My Moon & Mars in Taurus are dominantly too much for her, i'm not one to break to anything, but she did say she really adores that strength. I do get stuck at times though.

I have stood up for her once, her own family and i'm the one they don't tell people about, they have no reason to, I am no threat, I just take on those who threaten my inner circle.

Both of us Sun in Cancer, of course she sees there is something in me that is very much alike to her, both passionate.

An effective way I've found to release anger if it needs to be released, especially with someone like a boss or landlord, is to just think silently while looking into their eyes of what you'd really like to say to them. As our brains operate on electricity, I think the message does go through.

A direct stare into someone's eyes makes it personal. and if you are full of bile when you do it your pupils will contract and become like pinpoints of hatred, and that is what they will see. Most bosses, indeed most people, get the message from body language rather quickly. Personally I would rather not project that sort of vibe to anyone, and especially not my boss, or landlord or someone with the position to make my life more difficult than it need be. People do not assume that they are in the wrong when someone does that to them, instead they will see you as being volatile, hateful, a loose cannon, and best got rid of. Far better to deal with the issue bothering you in a reasoned, polite way without unnecessarily alienating "your superiors". It maximises your options. and if necessary you can make whatever alternate arrangements you need to and not reveal them until you are ready to depart on your own terms. If you are smart they may even give you a good reference instead of bad mouthing you should anyone seek one from them.

I have noticed that people with Sun and Moon in Scorpio can be extremely intense. Even a casual first time greeting at a party can become a journey into the pit of their opinions under the mistaken belief that an overt display of emotional attitudes makes them somehow more real than those who respect surface pleasantries. Some people also try and use anger as a warning sign, eg Be careful of me because I'm angry! In physical confrontations I tend to see overt displays of anger as a weakness, either they're trying to use it as a shield (they are fearful) to warn others off; or they are out of control, thus vulnerable, if you know what you're doing.

A strong Mars doesn't have to be angry, it can be assertive, brave, confident, initiating, pioneering, energetic, sharp and show leadership. Mars also relates to the head, so its message is to use one's head, first, that is to think and act appropriately, where your least actions will be the most effective. A sensibly used Mars can save a lot of angst. But learning that is a journey in itself.

Re this forum and anger, I was just thinking this morning after reading an angry post by a member who seems to thrive on anger, that perhaps the mods could create a "boxing ring" thread for people to go to and get the gloves off, slug at each other non-astrologically all they like and then come back to calm discussion.

That would be a kind of containment.

I had an interesting experience reading through this thread just now. I could agree and disagree with each and every placement that people have found is indicative of anger. I take this to mean that anger is a healthy part of everything, it is Life Energy, Mars rules the first sign of the Seed and its ability to grow.

How would this work for someone like me with Mercury in Leo 0 degree's on their South Node, square Moon, Mars, Pluto & inconjunct Uranus?

Then again i don't hang around political parts because it's a waste of time arguing with idiot's.

That does not mean those people are idiot's, it's hard to decipher what people "know" without being in such a position. So in other words, no "knowledge" only learn what is fed them.

"knowledge" ruled by Jupiter. Sun conjunct, trine Pluto.

How would this work for someone like me with Mercury in Leo 0 degree's on their South Node, square Moon, Mars, Pluto & inconjunct Uranus?

Then again i don't hang around political parts because it's a waste of time arguing with idiot's.

That does not mean those people are idiot's, it's hard to decipher what people "know" without being in such a position. So in other words, no "knowledge" only learn what is fed them.

Thank you for the videos, I have watched the Part 1 video before, I am listening right now, I will watch part 2 right after which I have not seen before.

I can attest to Facebook and social media destroying people, I am one of the much more sensitive people in life, and I have had to fit into my existence which was very hard. Social media destroys me from the inside when I am not in control (empath) or it can be a powerful tool to help direct others by passive posts which do not ask for attention, but people who watch will see a message I am sharing.

Both these videos were shared on Facebook to my close circle.

There is a lot of contradiction in the 2nd part, where he marks that a narcissist will simplify complexity so that it fits them because instead of feeling they need to learn which would impose a feeling of being inferior, they want to make things simpler so that makes life easier for them to understand whilst they run over all that complexity.

But, he dismisses astrology as nothing but idiocy whilst adding nothing that proves it as such, and from my perspective with 9 years into this "intellectual" thing, because it is quite intellectual regardless of view of it being stupid or not, it takes an awful long time and a skill for it to become "good" at it.

Like anything else, again this is complexity. He himself is arrogant, but he makes a lot of good points.

Quote:

If I ask you to become an expert on astrology a week suddenly fields of knowledge which allowed you to claim verifiably and truthfully that you're an expert within a month or a week came to prominence. If you go to discussion boards of astrology you will find three million people five million people and I'm not exaggerating. If you go to discussion boards of nuclear physics you'd be lucky to find eight hundred people. Go to these boards of astrology why?, because each and every single one of them claims to be an expert. I'm making natal charts I discovered these the conjunction of awareness. I don't know who are experts and you know what when you analyze what they are writing they are experts because astrology requires a week right they are real experts.

I think I understand his point here though he was exaggerating but who knows, unlike astronomy, it doesn't really take long to learn the basics of the planets, houses and signs to gain information and declare yourself an expert. You can't deny that there are months to 4-year certification programs on astrology on the internet. They are everywhere! The question is how can we truly verified an astrologer as a real expert? Especially on these discussion boards.

He continues

Quote:

" If you declare yourself in intellectual then you declare yourself an expert the first thing you have to do is to find a field where you can reliably claim it and others can confirm that you are because they also reliably became experts so you choose idiotic fields like the ones I mentioned and fields that are easy to master and immediately you can become [an intellectual] "

The Political and Mundane section highlights how one is an expert of astrology makes one an automatic qualified expert on politics.

"...I'm an expert astrologer, and because I am an expert, ♃ means truth, so I have expertise on [inserts political party] and this politician is telling the truth because he has ♃ in [insert sign]...etc."

This is one form of malignant egalitarianism.

Overall, the rest of the video was great! 😊

Yes that is dogma and it disregards anyone else in one swoop.

To be an expert means to identify with one's own ability and self promote to show off, expert is not meant to be used in this way, an expert is a crystalized objective view of someone else.

Do you remember what Becky's Sun sign was ?

No, but this was 1966. I probably knew Maggie's birthdate at the time. I think it was in the cold-weather months.

This is the first and last time it ever happened, age 16. I felt I could actually tear chunks out of her with my bare hands if I tried, the rage feeling was that strong. And I'm not even a shouter or door-slammer.

An effective way I've found to release anger if it needs to be released, especially with someone like a boss or landlord, is to just think silently while looking into their eyes of what you'd really like to say to them. As our brains operate on electricity, I think the message does go through.

A direct stare into someone's eyes makes it personal. and if you are full of bile when you do it your pupils will contract and become like pinpoints of hatred, and that is what they will see. Most bosses, indeed most people, get the message from body language rather quickly. Personally I would rather not project that sort of vibe to anyone, and especially not my boss, or landlord or someone with the position to make my life more difficult than it need be. People do not assume that they are in the wrong when someone does that to them, instead they will see you as being volatile, hateful, a loose cannon, and best got rid of.

Far better to deal with the issue bothering you in a reasoned, polite way without unnecessarily alienating "your superiors". It maximises your options. and if necessary you can make whatever alternate arrangements you need to and not reveal them until you are ready to depart on your own terms. If you are smart they may even give you a good reference instead of bad mouthing you should anyone seek one from them.

I have noticed that people with Sun and Moon in Scorpio can be extremely intense. Even a casual first time greeting at a party can become a journey into the pit of their opinions under the mistaken belief that an overt display of emotional attitudes makes them somehow more real than those who respect surface pleasantries. Some people also try and use anger as a warning sign, eg Be careful of me because I'm angry! In physical confrontations I tend to see overt displays of anger as a weakness, either they're trying to use it as a shield (they are fearful) to warn others off; or they are out of control, thus vulnerable, if you know what you're doing.

A strong Mars doesn't have to be angry, it can be assertive, brave, confident, initiating, pioneering, energetic, sharp and show leadership. Mars also relates to the head, so its message is to use one's head, first, that is to think and act appropriately, where your least actions will be the most effective. A sensibly used Mars can save a lot of angst. But learning that is a journey in itself.

You make it sound like this is a routine thing with me. I'm not an angry person unless I have good reason to be and have done it as a last resort only a few times. Sometimes to not do anything at all after you've been stepped on for so long is worse.

They would not have been close enough to me to see "pinpoints" in my eyes.

Thank you Code-Veronica. I just watched two of his clips. When he mentioned "style is a crystallization, a process of personal growth", it reminded me of the 5th house (fluid intelligence, memory) and 9th house (crystallized intelligence, dogma). Crystallized intelligence tends to peak at old age (40's-60's) where they have attained fixed knowledge, past life experiences and mastered skills from academia or education, culture and their environment. Fluid intelligence peak at at young adulthood, where you solve problems using flexibility and creativity. Both should co-exist for personal growth, but in this age of the Internet, people are losing their ability to use fluid intelligence to solve problems whether collectively or personally. We should always seek out new experiences, skills and change.

Bruce Lee stated:

"...Be like water making its way through cracks. Do not be assertive, but adjust to the object, and you shall find a way around or through it. If nothing within you stays rigid, outward things will disclose themselves. Empty your mind, be formless. Shapeless, like water..."

Looking at his chart using sidereal/Jyotish, his Ketu is in the 5th house in ♃ made him very creatively intelligent. When he self-express himself it's ego-less, spiritual and eccentric, my definition of honest. 😊 The lord of Ketu sat in his 6th house so his so-workers truly regarded his as a true Guru, a teacher who wanted to help others overcome their obstacles and enemies. In conjunction with ♃, I can understand why he was serious with the roles he took. He didn't want to just play in violent movies, the context of the film has to have some form of morality and ethic or the consequences of good and evil. Ketu in the 5th made him very detached to his fame and celebrity. He was truly a human, being.

I also find it very interesting that his nakshatra of both ♃ ♃ is Bhrani and the "soul sound" of the degree of his constellation is LEE.

Re Capricorn, my Venus is just on it. Regarding men who have expressed interest and for whatever reason Im not interested, I entirely agree about the steel door. It's down and never coming up again no matter what. I can be vindictive in my head but as yet, I've taken not much action. I have Mars in libra, simply put a lot of people strike me as just not worth the bother so get out of my way. My Scorpio stellium will possibly forgive but never ever forget.

Just thinking about the mars expression in some of the politicians around the globe and found this interesting take from <https://hniizato.com/mars-anger/> I know this thread is about mars but can also show the danger of an unexpressed mars as in DJT currently reading his leo mars in the 12th.

I have a terrible temper on me.

I have an 8th house ♃ ⊙ ♁ ♃ at 25 & 26 degrees (right on Algol)

I have ♃ at 0 ♃ which ☐ my 5th house ♁ ♁ at 6 degrees. I also have ♁ ☽ at 23 degrees

And to top all that off, I have ♃ at 9 degrees ☐ my ♁ ASC and that △ my 5th house ♁

It takes a lot for me to lose my temper but when I blow, I'm up like a rocket. I'm like a tornado. I wipe everyone out, who is in my vicinity. And I will drag everything up from the past 100 years.

I'm usually very balanced and easy going - thanks to my ♁ ASC but when I do lose it, it's not a pretty sight. However, give me time to calm down and I'm back to being rational again!

Kalinokia in reply #42 above you asked me a number of questions.

I find most often I prefer not to comment on particulars of other's posts and stick with the topic. However, the genuine reason I started the thread and asked the question about anger in a chart is that there is a lot of inappropriate anger expressed in these threads... and it is being presented under the guise of astrology. Some, it seems, enjoy goading others to elicit a distressed reaction. Because this is a largely unmoderated astrology forum, where we are assumed to be and behave as civilized adults, these angry people mostly get away with it. In general terms, on the internet, I believe they are referred to as trolls.

Personally I have formed the opinion that there are people who come onto the forum when they are drunk and therefore post inappropriately. Additionally it seems a few members have dementia, some forms of which are worse at night, commonly referred to as Sundowners. We have, unfortunately, I believe, a few Sundowners here, who are typing as they are drinking and dementing. They seem unaware of their own inappropriateness and hostility and I have wondered if they are undiagnosed and therefore genuinely unaware of their own pathology/behaviour.

I hesitate to say this to anyone directly, since we are all strangers here and who knows what others are dealing with in their lives and psyches? Quite a lot of unaddressed issues it seems and not for me to resolve or point out to them.

However, since this is a problem for the forum to deal with as a whole (or ignore) I thought it appropriate to bring up the topic, hopefully for some to look at their own particular astro influences, clearly affecting them very adversely and it seems unconsciously. Which they then dump on the rest of us.

This last month, because of this issue, a few people have messaged me that they are leaving the forum. I find that sad because the perpetrators and angry members stay and continue to unload their unresolved issues on the rest of the forum membership as a whole, which doesn't deserve it.

And in answer to your specific question regarding the mundane forum, I find the inappropriate expressions of anger and hostility (albeit just from a few members) spread all through the forum, not only in the mundane section threads. Just more overtly obvious there.

kokoro, are you willing to post your chart? I ask because you seem like a very sensitive soul, who is genuinely troubled by discussions that other people with tougher skins wouldn't mind having. I'm not here to criticize you or your chart: I am merely curious.

To people who don't mind debating the issues, your OP might seem to have a subtext, which is hoping to control people who strongly hold contrary opinions to yours, by criticizing their inferred emotions rather than analyzing their messages' content.

I am a real news-a-holic. I start my day with coffee and my Washington Post news app, and often watch CNN roundtable discussion panels in the evening. Expressing and debating strong opinions is characteristic of the mainstream media, never mind alternative blogs further on the right and left. Forcefully held opinions by journalists are merely normal in my universe, not indicators of some kind of personality defect.

There might also be a cultural component. There is a kind of in-joke among Jews that if you put two of them together, they will argue three different opinions. I once had a sabbatical at an Israeli university. They gave me an office next to the conference room where my assigned department had its faculty meetings. I was horrified to hear through the thin walls these colleagues regularly shouting at each other. Yet as the meeting broke up, they would be laughing, if not shaking hands. The passionate arguments were just their way.

During my time on this forum, I've come in for all kinds of personal attacks from people who take exception to what I write. In recent memory, one member frequently asserted that I was an animus-driven woman who wanted to be a man and had a penis. I was recently told that I spewed propaganda as a form of "mind rape" [sic]. I've had my chart weaponized against me several times, by members attempting to show exactly why I am such a miserable person. Some have insinuated that I am a disgrace to my former profession.

You know what? I can't take that type of angry post seriously. Thank God, I'm an Aquarian. I can't personalize insults from people who don't know me personally, such as complete strangers on an astrology Internet forum. If the flaming gets too bad, I just ignore these people's posts. I don't read them.

To come full circle, Kokoro, are you a person who would benefit from developing a thicker skin? Intense discussions may not be your preference, nor should they be, but hopefully you accept that it's OK for people to feel passionate about certain topics. And maybe anger is even a justifiable response to some of the serious injustices we see in our world.

During my time on this forum, I've come in for all kinds of personal attacks from people who take exception to what I write. In recent memory, one member frequently asserted that I was an animus-driven woman who wanted to be a man and had a penis

How extraordinary, not the animus bit, it's not unusual for angry people to display their animus (isn't that what anger is?) so I can understand that comment if you were displaying annoyance or anger or aggression, lots of folk show animus on this forum. but asserting you had a penis? Are you sure you aren't exaggerating a comment about behaviour rather than your physicality and taking it too literally? One wonders what could have possibly given someone that idea, or perhaps you felt it was too close to the bone and took it personally, and that stiffened your resolve to continually cross swords? You're obviously still holding on to it. Maybe you should just let go of it, and lighten up. But that would be a typically male response after a row, and you're obviously not a male because you haven't got a penis. Just saying.... 😊

Is it? It could just be expressed as assertive thoughts, or new pioneering or breakthrough ideas, or pertinent to-the-point comments. I don't have that Mars in mutable Gemini so have to observe it in others. Mars in mutable Pisces for example is sometimes expressed as transference of the guilt of their aggression or assertiveness onto others, as if one doesn't want to own their own assertiveness. You only need disagree with or cross someone with Mars in Pisces and see how they respond, they can be surprisingly emotional as if one has opened the flood gates to their withheld angst, but of course it is not their fault is it? Afterall they are not aggressive by nature are they? So why would they get involved in an argument in the first place or react with intensity? And many do.

I think all signs have the potential to display the angry side of Mars. But which signs perpetuate the anger and which ones turn it into humour or dissect it and take the anger apart or utilise the anger constructively?

Mars is just energy directed. Some internalise it where it damages them, or hold onto it and leak it out whenever they get the opportunity in a sort of pay back long after the issue is over. Others prefer to get over it quickly and get on with their life as anger is caustic and burns if held in, and best released promptly or converted into humour or utilised constructively. Hidden anger leaked out anonymously is not a good use of the energy and shows that it is still present as an issue in that person and still erupting when the opportunity arises, and is best expunged like an adolescent's pus-filled pimple, or lanced like a boil lest it continues to poison them and their viewpoint, and smear others.

I have Aries rising and Mars trine my Ascendant and in antiscia from Virgo, so it is instinctive and natural for me to express my Mars physically particularly in exercise, in fact it is difficult for me to suppress it. But I also have my Moon in Libra, and prefer to be polite, and courteous when responding to others, rather than coarse or crude. I can put myself into another's position quite easily, but my diplomacy doesn't extend to turning a blind eye to those who continue to fire shots long after a conflict of opinion has ceased.

Mars square Mercury & Pluto. I get intellectually angry, i can look into people and what they type and rip them up from the inside, i also have excellent street smarts.

All of which no one cares for when just attempting to portray a message, the ego is the problem.

Mars in Gemini are not all "words" Mike Tyson begs to differ as a Mars in Gemini.

He has the signature Moon aspecting Mars in opposition, but Pluto brings devastating survival influences which is square from Virgo Pluto to his Mars.

Yes, it can.
that would be the developed and intelligent mars gemini version.

I forgot about Mike Tyson. he also has pluto/uranus square mars.

That's why it's important to look at the houses and see where ♂ reside. ♀♂ (♃ ruled) is debilitated in the 6th and 8th house. The 6th can make a person exploitative, thievery, diseased, inferior, critical and initiators of social conflicts and injustices (that is a hint on how and why someone starts an argument). ♂ in a dusthana house: most of the time suffer from mental agony, poverty and debt. ♂ in the 6th makes someone's brother a victim of disease or addictions. In the 8th makes a person go through periods of heated psychological crises and mental anguish. There's always a defense of transformation and they may suffer from addictions like alcoholism. Overall, verbal aggression is apparent. Their humor can hurt others. They verbalize victimization. It's their common narrative.

So ♃♂ and ♀♂ are problematic.

These two Mars signs though are not considered in any kind of debility or dignity which astounds me. But because Mars is all about action and selfish wants, it makes more sense because say for instance Libra & Taurus, socially these two may actually be a far stronger Mars, though don't disregard Taurus or Libra as non selfish or unable to express it's self, more so the energy of Mars is rather directed, which brings a natural Mars strength to a Taurus & Libra Mars native instinctually from birth rather than learning it through life.

Something i often think astrology does not relate to. How many revere Mars selfish and bad sides? but relish it's definite capability when worked on and fixed?

They tell us about how gluttonous Taurus can be.. well that fit's Mars selfish wants, to feed, to have it all. They mention Taurus's ridiculous ability to get what they want without any compromise when they set their minds to a goal.

Trait's Virgo & Gemini don't have, erratic is correct.

Dignity & debility never did make much sense to me besides emotional characteristics, most people frown upon martial activity, so what good is saying Mars does well here or there?

Libra & Taurus learned before the rest of them how to be mature, conversly, you may experience the worst of the zodiac in terms of anger once you do fully get them to the level that their will breaks though.

I see you use vedic. Not an issue 😊

I have seen OCD have debilitating effects on people and one was a Moon in Scorpio with Mars in Gemini & Mercury in Gemini, her Mercury was conjunct Mars.

OCD with cleaning, OCD with how perfect things had to be, like walking on egg shells at times.

Took her years to sort it out, now she has COPD from all the cigarettes she smoked, all the beer she got drunk on.

Yet again, Gemini Mars "Not debilitated". Mike Tyson is a worse case scenario of Mars in Gemini if i ever saw one, luckily he had an outlet, but he was a hugely abusive person and took offense to even the lightest of things and threw his weight around.

Bit off Hollifields ear in a boxing match.

Muhammad Ali was a Mars in Taurus.

Bruce Lee was a Mars in Scorpio.

Dignity for Mars is said not to be in Scorpio though which makes a lot more sense and is only ruled by Pluto.

I beg to disagree about your outline of the Mars in Pisces.

My Arien son has Mars in Pisces and always chooses to ignore bad slights rather than contest them. Any aggression directed towards him he chooses to look for good reasons, and to excuse the person.

Even with Mercury conj his sun in Aries, I have yet to hear him use aggressive argumentative words..... unless he has alcohol in his system!

But nevertheless his anger then is not aggressive rather than justification seeking - it acts expressing as Moral code.

The facts are that Pisces hides, in whatever way.

Its the 12th sign ruling the Unconscious.

The christian "forgiveness" and "turn the other cheek" I would say is more of the true way the Unconscious seeks to present rather than being issues of moral code.

Yet when the Unconscious is released through alcohol, that is when it seems to express itself as moral code.

Alcohol also is symbolised by Neptune/Pisces/12th h issues.

Perhaps it's ability to expose Mars's anger or the moral code side of Pisces is its ability to dissolve - or corrupt - Unconscious inhibition. :- "In vino veritas" - in wine lies the truth.?

Totally agree, ♂ is fuel that can be put to very good use if used correctly. Activism such as Civil Rights Movement, Anti-Vietnam protests were ♂ based events as injustices caused people to go out & act. Without a strong ♂, a person will stew & get angry but not productive or act with this angry ♂ energy. In fact, many 'weak' ♂ people often strike at anyone & anything without ever addressing why they are so angry; it's more common with ♂ ♋ who internalize the anger instead of letting it rip! 😞
A hard ♂ ♋ is the deadliest of all if applied incorrectly as they plot, plan & can be extremely destructive! 😞

You will often see a ♂ ♋ or ♀ aspect in the charts of terrorists or mass shooters because they have not learned how to harness the malefic energy into something positive. Something 'triggers' their ♂ & they react in a violent way.

The recent photo of a father/child who drowned crossing from Mexico to USA caused great ♂ anger yet it propelled the Dems & Republicans to work together to sign a huge border bill ($4.6 billion). Neither party got what they wanted totally but the ♂ anger enabled them to pass it quickly before the recess. 😞

Anyone born with hard aspects to ♂ (no matter what sign) needs to learn meditation or deep breathing. Anger is red & violent on the aura when it's used in an egotistical manner.

A strong Mars doesn't have to be angry, it can be assertive, brave, confident, initiating, pioneering, energetic, sharp and show leadership. Mars also relates to the head, so its message is to use one's head, first, that is to think and act appropriately, where your least actions will be the most effective. A sensibly used Mars can save a lot of angst. But learning that is a journey in itself.

Exactly!

I don't know what a aggressive talker is... but it has to do with Mercury.
People who are sharp with words Mercury conjunct Mars...
Many politicians have Merc conjunct Mars... = passion in words (Elisabeth Warren) or just talk a lot....
Lot of energy (Mars) goes in words / thinking /connect info.

Mars in Gemini will use his energy for many things a little bit.
He will be angry a very short time (like in other mutable signs)
Merc in Gemini talks a lot too.
Merc in Gemini is not sarcastic (that is feeling/water) he is more a joker

My grandson of 7 has Mars in Cancer (little dramaqueen in itself) in 7 opposite Pluto on the Asc in a t square with Uranus.
He had from very small on huge anger attacks.
He couldn't stop, he even say that.
Because he is a Sun in Leo (= sport) conjunct Venus (lord 5 = sport) I told my daughter to let him do sports.
He is now swimming - very fast (Mars) - and doing a fight sport... no more tantrums... 😊
He is learning to use his energy (Mars) on a more positive way.

Yeah, OCD is 6th house.

In jyotish mars is debilitated in Cancer (28 degrees) and moolatrikona in Aries (1-12 degrees).

Michael Jackson had ♃♂ and ⚄ Ketu (2nd house), he was physically weak, selfless and had no desire to win or be at top. Less aggressive. His D-9 ♂ was in the 12th in ♎.

Mike has Mars in Taurus and Rahu in (2nd house) so there was a hungry need to gain material things/wealth and his speech was rash and harsh. His D-9 ♂ is in Virgo in the 6th.....see? There are more layers..

BTW, it's easier for me to understand my mars through jyotish. You learn about ♂ in your body chart (langa-D-1) and you soul chart (D-9-navamsha)...and you learn about the nakshatra and padas of your mars to have a better understanding.

So when people here talk about Mars in Pisces. I feel Mars in Aquarius. These types are rarely personally praised for their activism because ♂ in the sign of Aquarius is lost in the collective. ♃ ruled, their anger is slow, detached, observant and disciplined. Very scientific and network savvy.

♋ and ♎ Rasi don't have planetary enemies. Including Mars.

I see you use vedic. Not an issue 😊

I have seen OCD have debilitating effects on people and one was a Moon in Scorpio with Mars in Gemini & Mercury in Gemini, her Mercury was conjunct Mars.

OCD with cleaning, OCD with how perfect things had to be, like walking on egg shells at times.

Took her years to sort it out, now she has COPD from all the cigarettes she smoked, all the beer she got drunk on.

Yet again, Gemini Mars "Not debilitated". Mike Tyson is a worse case scenario of Mars in Gemini if i ever saw one, luckily he had an outlet, but he was a hugely abusive person and took offense to even the lightest of things and threw his weight around. Bit off Hollifields ear in a boxing match.

Muhammad Ali was a Mars in Taurus.
Bruce Lee was a Mars in Scorpio.

Dignity for Mars is said not to be in Scorpio though which makes a lot more sense and is only ruled by Pluto.

Yeah, OCD is 6th house.

In jyotish mars is debilitated in Cancer (28 degrees) and moolatrikona in Aries (1-12 degrees).

Michael Jackson had ♃♂ and ⚄ Ketu (2nd house), he was physically weak, selfless and had no desire to win or be at top. Less aggressive. His D-9 ♂ was in the 12th in ♎.

Mike has Mars in Taurus and Rahu in (2nd house) so there was a hungry need to gain material things/wealth and his speech was rash and harsh. His D-9 ♂ is in Virgo in the 6th.....see? There are more layers..

BTW, it's easier for me to understand my mars through jyotish. You learn about ♂ in your body chart (langa-D-1) and you soul chart (D-9-navamsha)...and you learn about the nakshatra and padas of your mars to have a better understanding.

So when people here talk about Mars in Pisces. I feel Mars in Aquarius. These types are rarely personally praised for their activism because ♂ in the sign of Aquarius is lost in the collective. ♃ ruled, their anger is slow, detached, observant and disciplined. Very scientific and network savvy.

♋ and ♎ Rasi don't have planetary enemies. Including Mars.

My Moon & Mars are conjunct in Aries in Vedic in 10th.

VCode & K - Can you please take your Sidereal Astrology to the other section of the forum as this is the Western astrology section. This is not the Vedic section & it's sort of ruined the whole flow of conversation. 😞

Chandra-Mangala yoga. I think here, you have a strong inner spirit and can conquer your enemies. You may had issues with management though.

I think I remember having one friend in college with tropical ☿ ☐ ♃ and she's very protective of her mother, very engaging with her home life, especially her younger brothers. She loves them dearly. Ruled by ♃ tend to experience psycho- emotional aggression a lot and tends to be passive aggressive when opposed by Saturn (observant, disciplined, hardened). I think what's key is to look at the ♃, experiences of the home to see what is projected on when angry for ☿? But we have to considered houses, aspects, etc.

Also my 3rd grade teacher (can't believe I still remember her birthday), had ☿ and one time she was enraged because none of us neatly put away our crayons and I'll never forget how she threw them all over the floor and the whole classroom went silent. We all cleaned it up. It was my first exposure to adult anger outside of my home. I'll never forget. ☿ (schooling, care-taking, parenting) can be weaponized to have power over others. I don't think she was being abusive. Most teachers these days are underappreciated.

Taylor Swift has ♃♁ in the 10th including ♃ & ♂ and she is certainly angry today after her whole past catalog (6 albums) was sold for 300 million by her previous label/CEO. Social media is crazy right now. Hopefully she redeems herself. Every artist deserves the right to own their music.

Quote from Sereniti on 30.06.2019 at 10:09 [UT+1]:

♂ in ♀ is aggressive with words, sarcastic, ccondescending. They are verbally aggressive.

Is it? It could just be expressed as assertive thoughts, or new pioneering or breakthrough ideas, or pertinent to-the-point comments. I don't have that Mars in mutable Gemini so have to observe it in others. Mars in mutable Pisces for example is sometimes expressed as transference of the guilt of their aggression or assertiveness onto others, as if one doesn't want to own their own assertiveness. You only need disagree with or cross someone with Mars in Pisces and see how they respond, they can be surprisingly emotional as if one has opened the flood gates to their withheld angst, but of course it is not their fault is it? Afterall they are not aggressive by nature are they? So why would they get involved in an argument in the first place or react with intensity? And many do.

I think all signs have the potential to display the angry side of Mars. But which signs perpetuate the anger and which ones turn it into humour or dissect it and take the anger apart or utilise the anger constructively? Mars is just energy directed. Some internalise it where it damages them, or hold onto it and leak it out whenever they get the opportunity in a sort of pay back long after the issue is over. Others prefer to get over it quickly and get on with their life as anger is caustic and burns if held in, and best released promptly or converted into humour or utilised constructively. Hidden anger leaked out anonymously is not a good use of the energy and shows that it is still present as an issue in that person and still erupting when the opportunity arises, and is best expunged like an adolescent's pus-filled pimple, or lanced like a boil lest it continues to poison them and their viewpoint, and smear others.

I beg to disagree about your outline of the Mars in Pisces.

My Arien son has Mars in Pisces and always chooses to ignore bad slights rather than contest them. Any aggression directed towards him he choses to look for good reasons, and to excuse the person.

Even with Mercury conj his sun in Aries, I have yet to hear him use aggressive argumentative words..... unless he has alcohol in his system!

But nevertheless his anger then is not aggressive rather than justification seeking - it acts expressing as Moral code.

The facts are that Pisces hides, in whatever way.

Its the 12th sign ruling the Unconscious.

The christian "forgiveness" and "turn the other cheek" I would say is more of the true way the Unconscious seeks to present rather than being issues of moral code.

Yet when the Unconscious is released through alcohol, that is when it seems to express itself as moral code.

Alcohol also is symbolised by Neptune/Pisces/12th h issues.

Perhaps it's ability to expose Mars's anger or the moral code side of Pisces is its ability to dissolve - or corrupt - Unconscious inhibition. :-
"In vino veritas" - in wine lies the truth.?

Jen J

Well the facts are what is important and while Mars in Pisces may not be the most common placing for Mars with serial killers it is by no means unknown as a quick glance through Astrodienst will show.

Marc Dutroux a Belgian serial kidnapper, rapist, torturer and killer of children had Mars in Pisces; as did Italian serial killer Alfredo Straniero who posed as a buyer of used cars and was captured attempting to kill a 5th victim. Both with AA rated birth times in Astrodienst

Gary Ridgeway the Green River Killer was born February 18, 1949 which also gives him Mars in pisces. (He is not in astrodienst databank that I could find).

John Wayne Gacy the notorious American serial killer had both Sun and Moon in Pisces with Mars in Gemini; while Juana Barraza, the mexican wrestler serial killer of 11 elderly women had Moon in Pisces with Mars in Sagittarius. Both also with AA rated birth times in Astrodienst.

How extraordinary, not the animus bit, it's not unusual for angry people to display their animus (isn't that what anger is?) so I can understand that comment if you were displaying annoyance or anger or aggression, lots of folk show animus on this forum. but asserting you had a penis? Are you sure you aren't exaggerating a comment about behaviour rather than your physicality and taking it too literally? One wonders what could have possibly given someone that idea, or perhaps you felt it was too close to the bone and took it personally, and that stiffened your resolve to continually cross swords? You're obviously still holding on to it. Maybe you should just let go of it, and lighten up. But that would be a typically male response after a row, and you're obviously not a male because you haven't got a penis. Just saying.... 😊

Oh, c'mon, AS. 😊 You've just now illustrated the type of attacking post addressed by the OPer. Either you're being disingenuous, or your memory is even shorter than mine is. 😊 But that's OK.

My point was that I can't take ugly comments personally, because the critic doesn't know me personally. Insults from friends or family members would be hurtful; but normally, we don't know the people behind the posts on an Internet forum. Further, a highly biased, weaponized chart reading of a perfect stranger doesn't substitute for an actual acquaintanceship with the flesh-and-blood human being.

BTW, animus=that guy thing that Jung talked about. Animosity would be anger.

Moving on, I don't see a problem with people feeling passionate on opposite sides of issues. It's OK for people to disagree about political topics, or to differ on the contributions of a highly polarizing celebrity.

The problems come more with how people handle differences of opinion.

Desiree-- I have Mars in Pisces. No mass murders to my account, though.

Just one more thing:

Modern astrologers suggest that people have basically 3 responses to a planet in their horoscope:

1. Exemplify its positive expression.
2. Exemplify its negative expression.
3. Deny and suppress it as unwanted. The planet becomes "not me." Yet all of the planets have to manifest in some fashion. So the disowned planet appears in other people who seemingly manifest the planet's negative expression.

We could imagine someone who really dislikes and perhaps even fears experiencing anger: his own, and other people's. He denies that he gets angry himself, and shuns people who express anger. But the chart will "out" in some fashion, so unsurprisingly, he seems to attract angry people. Or possibly he's perfected his passive-aggressive maneuvers, claiming innocence if accused of aggression.

The cure is to embrace one's unwanted planet, and to allow it healthy manifestations.

Happily today we live in an era when more and more women own their inner Mars, without having to paste it on men, who are thereby expected to fulfill the woman's own Mars functions. This can be an awful drag on men who cannot live up to women's unrealistic expectations of manliness. For example, if her Mars is in Leo, she has leonine expectations for the man in her life. So what happens if his Mars is in Virgo?

Mars also rules athletics, which is a healthy expression of Mars.

I don't know how many of you are watching the current women's World Cup soccer matches, but seeing thousands of men and women cheering on these female athletes is an inspiring sight. These women are unafraid to express their own strength, athleticism, and courage. 😊

This is vice versa for men and their Moon.

Very few brave people would be at their true emotional self as a male with what is expected of us.

I sometimes feel so alone in this world, yet there are some beautiful people out there who appreciate and understand.

As they say, discard what is useless, keep what is useful, done this with people.

Sadly i did this with someone who means a lot to me because she was a blockage to me being myself. More to do with astrology and a want to learn, and study astrotheology.

Ignorant to who i am. "do you not have work to go to?" "Are you bored?"

I can be masculine, even overly so, usually i only attract men when i do that, i don't mean gay people, though i do have a gay friend who tried it on.

I read an interesting article. The Lion & The Cobra.

The MGTOW movement is extreme & perverse to what is extreme & perverse, a very small sub set of humans who are so deluded...

Here is an image for the male side.

<https://chirotic.com/2008/06/27/the-lion-and-the-cobra-and-the-leo-scorpio-square/>

The divine masculine clashing with what is now the Scorpio generation.

All this need for such divide & expression of self is weaponized.

Oh c'mon indeed. stop playing the victim Waybread, Desiree certainly got that bit right, and it's not me weaponizing your chart. You initiated this exchange by putting a sly slant on our previous differences but chose to leave my "name " out as if nobody would know you were referring to me. So who is being disingenuous here? And neither have I done an interpretation of your chart, despite your inuendoes. But I do think you have given a good example of Mars in Pisces in its transference of aggression. A case of transubstantiation (not in the religious sense) but in the sense of attributing your animus to another person. Own it, it's yours, and then you can control it, and perhaps stop it. But it is all rather silly , and just water under the bridge to me, and if you decide not to keep bringing your grudges back to life I'll resist the temptation to play word games around your sly attacks.

As for Mars in Virgo. I like it there. It is good for getting things done, because Mars serves there. I have a reasonably strong and fit body and enjoyment of physical effort as in sport, even now I am in my seventies I still exercise, go for walks and do modest weights. And I love watching the many sports kiwi women excel in, especially rugby sevens and the fifteen-a-side game both of which they are at the top. Soccer, or football, is not a sport I enjoy although I will watch the Matildas (the Australian women's side) from time to time. It is a minor sport in New Zealand where I grew up so for them to win any games on the world stage is a big achievement, but they do, and they do account for themselves very capably in hockey and netball and cricket as well. We even have some excellent female pole vaulters, and until her recent retirement the best female shot putter in the world was a Samoan kiwi. Incidentally I don't know any women with Mars in Leo, but I have a wife with Moon and Pluto rising in Leo and she has her Mars in Virgo like myself, and she is as fiery as me and also a great doer and worker. And like me she also has Libra well represented so is partnership orientated. And both of us enjoy watching our Australian grand daughter excel in interschool cross country races. And we can't wait for our other grand daughter to get here for Christmas from Brazil. Perhaps that answers your question WB and gives you a better picture of what I am really like.

You two sound very happy, happy for you both.

Aries Sun & Moon with Mars in Leo lady i know, rather rude & insensitive at times, but she cares dearly for her daughter and dotes on her.

She is also a one woman army, knows how to just be comfortable in herself.

She does crave attention though at times, she's fun to have as a friend.

Kalinokia in reply #42 above you asked me a number of questions.

I find most often I prefer not to comment on particulars of other's posts and stick with the topic. However, the genuine reason I started the thread and asked the question about anger in a chart is that there is a lot of inappropriate anger expressed in these threads... and it is being presented under the guise of astrology. Some, it seems, enjoy goading others to elicit a distressed reaction. Because this is a largely unmoderated astrology forum, where we are assumed to be and behave as civilized adults, these angry people mostly get away with it. In general terms, on the internet, I believe they are referred to as trolls.

Personally I have formed the opinion that there are people who come onto the forum when they are drunk and therefore post inappropriately. Additionally it seems a few members have dementia, some forms of which are worse at night, commonly referred to as Sundowners. We have, unfortunately, I believe, a few Sundowners here, who are typing as they are drinking and dementing. They seem unaware of their own inappropriateness and hostility and I have wondered if they are undiagnosed and therefore genuinely unaware of their own pathology/behaviour.

I hesitate to say this to anyone directly, since we are all strangers here and who knows what others are dealing with in their lives and psyches? Quite a lot of unaddressed issues it seems and not for me to resolve or point out to them.

However, since this is a problem for the forum to deal with as a whole (or ignore) I thought it appropriate to bring up the topic, hopefully for some to look at their own particular astro influences, clearly affecting them very adversely and it seems unconsciously. Which they then dump on the rest of us.

This last month, because of this issue, a few people have messaged me that they are leaving the forum. I find that sad because the perpetrators and angry members stay and continue to unload their unresolved issues on the rest of the forum membership as a whole, which doesn't deserve it.

And in answer to your specific question regarding the mundane forum, I find the inappropriate expressions of anger and hostility (albeit just from a few members) spread all through the forum, not only in the mundane section threads. Just more overtly obvious there.

OP. I want to thank you for expressing your concerns. This is an issue apart from astrology honestly. Lets hope who ever owns this website and/or forum will consider hiring new moderators to keep track of the flow of this valuable forum. However, I am not sure what their stance on cyber-bullying. Some sites are 100% intolerant of viscous verbal attacks. Some create an option where you can block a member and not see their posts. Astro-Seek.com for example has this and the forum is more peaceful there. People respect each other a lot more. Many young adults feel safe there, able to express what they want.

Sometimes moderators here do a great job closing threads that becomes too hostile, but some threads are for some reason left open and people get hurt and humiliated. And there are members being painted as "trolls" for no justifiable reason. Maybe they don't like a certain member and don't care? Maybe they like drama too? In the end, the moderators are responsible for handing this issue. And shame on them for not addressing this issue.

Not everyone can handle situations as adults. In the real world that's why we have law enforcement ♂ and judges ♀.

The words of the people will never go silent.

I like this song when i think of it 🎵

You two sound very happy, happy for you both.
Aries Sun & Moon with Mars in Leo lady i know, rather rude & insensitive at times, but she cares dearly for her daughter and dotes on her.
She is also a one woman army, knows how to just be comfortable in herself.
She does crave attention though at times, she's fun to have as a friend.

Thanks Code_Veronica we've been together now since 1971, and married in April 1977, so we've certainly sorted out most of our differences. I consider myself fortunate to have a wife who is still functioning in the work force for an airline, and appears to be well liked there. Her sunny rising Leo Moon. Now I only do some casual work while she still brings in a good wage although we're both past normal retirement age - although she's 4 years younger than me. So we've both had turns at being the main provider for the household at various times and in various countries, so most gender roles are not an issue with us. We just have equal ownership of the house and do what we are each capable of doing. And she has the car, I can walk to work in 5 minutes. Of course we still have our personal foibles, my wife likes to "own" the kitchen when she's home, so I leave it clean for her, and she also likes attention being a Leo Moon rising, but we only really compete with each other when we play cards, or chess. She hates being beaten, and I win chess so usually play without a queen, but she is as good at cards (we play cribbage) as me and she keeps a record of all our crib scores by month and year. We play most afternoons when she gets home from her work shift, and it is a great way to maintain our relationship. I also find it is important for us each to have time alone (Her Sun in Scorpio is conjunct her IC) so it helps for me to go to casual work even if only irregularly, as that gives her the house to herself sometimes on her days off especially as I work afternoon/evenings so she has the TV to herself as well. Haha, even the best partnerships don't want to watch the same programs, but we do have a spare TV bedroom (perfect for the grandkids to stayover) where she can watch free-to-air soapies or girlie movies until she falls asleep when I want to watch something with more substance, such as sport, or national geographic or the history channel, or crime programs, or science/space, etc.

....are you willing to post your chart? I ask because you seem like a very sensitive soul, who is genuinely troubled by discussions that other people with tougher skins wouldn't mind having. I'm not here to criticize you or your chart: I am merely curious.
To come full circle, Kokoro, are you a person who would benefit from developing a thicker skin? Intense discussions may not be your preference, nor should they be, but hopefully you accept that it's OK for people to feel passionate about certain topics. And maybe anger is even a justifiable response to some of the serious injustices we see in our world.

It is true that we have only a limited knowledge of one another from what we let on through our online interactions.

Perhaps, why, it's rather incredulous for you to suggest that another member "develop a thicker skin" to accommodate your anger and aggressions, your urge to dominate and control - thinly veiled under the guise of an incessant need for "passionate" debate - when you appear incapable of doing the same offline, dissociating instead into a neptunian fugue in the midst of an argument? On the other hand, neurotic intellectualization (incessant need for debate) is yet another type of dissociation.

There seems to be a pronounced disparity between your online and offline abilities to emotionally regulate that belies your "Aquarian-ness", not to mention a complete lack of sensitivity towards the needs of others and whatever they may be dealing with. Perhaps, also, the uneasy quincunx between your Leo Moon and Pisces Mars can be seen in large measure as contributing to this disparity, making emotional regulation especially difficult for you to achieve?

Quote:

We could imagine someone who really dislikes and perhaps even fears experiencing anger: his own, and other people's. He denies that he gets angry himself, and shuns people who express anger. But the chart will "out" in some fashion, so unsurprisingly, he seems to attract angry people. Or possibly he's perfected his passive-aggressive maneuvers, claiming innocence if accused of aggression.

For more insight you could turn the above around to read:

"We could imagine someone who really dislikes and perhaps even fears experiencing anger: her own, and other people's. She denies that she gets angry herself, and shuns people who express anger. But the chart will "out" in some fashion, so unsurprisingly, she seems to attract angry people. Usually it is under control in low-stress environments, but this past summer under a high-stress argument with my husband, I "split" or dissociated for a couple of hours. When I came to, I had no memory of what transpired--just visual images of broken glass.

My Moon & Mars are conjunct in Aries in Vedic in 10th.

Chandra-Mangala yoga. I think here, you have a strong inner spirit and can conquer your enemies. You may had issues with management though.

I think I remember having one friend in college with tropical ☿♂ ☾☾ and she's very protective of her mother, very engaging with her home life, especially her younger brothers. She loves them dearly. Ruled by ☽ tend to experience psycho- emotional aggression a lot and tends to be passive aggressive when opposed by Saturn (observant, disciplined, hardened). I think what's key is to look at the ☽, experiences of the home to see what is projected on when angry for ☿♂? But we have to considered houses, aspects, etc.

Also my 3rd grade teacher (can't believe I still remember her birthday), had ☿♂ and one time she was enraged because none of us neatly put away our crayons and I'll never forget how she threw them all over the floor and the whole classroom went silent. We all cleaned it up. It was my first exposure to adult anger outside of my home. I'll never forget. ☽ (schooling, care-taking, parenting) can be weaponized to have power over others. I don't think she was being abusive. Most teachers these days are underappreciated.

I don't have that Mars but i understand the Saturn opposition to my Sun & Jupiter. (observant, disciplined, hardened) I am in certain circumstances, it is very hard to get anything passed me and i am very hard to crack, that does not mean i have an aversion to standing up for myself, but the ability to face off and take some before the deserving blow is dealt.

Bruce Lee was about being true to one's self, it was not egotistical, it was living through who you truly are without any cocky thoughts, nothing made up.

You think women running around on a soccer field are courageous? 😏

I've been watching it to support my national team & because I grow up in Europe where soccer is a religion; its part of my psyche.

But brave? No, women & men who play soccer are not brave or courageous. Jesse Owens was brave to participate in the 1936 Olympics while facing numerous racist death threats, both from Germany & his home country. Assange is brave to confront the ♃ ♁ powers that wish to silence him. (Did you look up that 'drone' comment btw? 😏 Hillary said it years before the 2016 election but you're ok with her killing an innocent civilian because she doesn't like what he publishes. I guess you/I have very different views on what courage truly means because you dismiss her vindictive ♀ nature to ♁ kill a man who is not guilty of anything except revealing ♃ facts). 😏

But to you, running after a soccer ball is courageous! 😏

Jesse's chart has the malefic ♃ ♁ ♂ which he channeled into ♃ athletics ♃ ♁ and his strength & accomplishments endure even today. If he had not become an athlete, he might have used that ♃ energy into violent acts. But he choose to use that energy wisely & productively. 😏

At the 1936 Olympics in Berlin, which Adolf Hitler hoped would be a showcase of Aryan supremacy, Owens won four gold medals in track and field events, a feat not equaled since. The sight of the graceful American's soaring victory in the long jump and his Olympic-record wins in the 100-and 200-meter dashes and 400-meter relay put the lie to der Führer's simplistic myths about race."

I never said you don't belong here; I said if you cannot handle dissenting voices, perhaps a personal blog would be better for you.

One of the things that I really like about Astrodienst is that one can learn a lot in this forum because we get to see people interacting. If the charts are known then we get first hand experience of how the planets act out their positions. This is one of the strong points of the forum here. I have learned more from participating in this forum than from any other single source.

This particular thread discusses anger, and where it is in a chart. And we have some examples in the posts. Perfect, if one is actually interested in the subject. Yet not everyone sees it that way. Kalinokia gets angry with those posters who display anger. But for me it is an opportunity to learn and study how different planetary placings in the signs express and deal with anger, either their own anger or anger from others.

It would be more helpful were Kalinokia to post her own chart or birth details so we could relate her opinions and words to her planets, thus enjoying the same opportunities that we offer her to learn from our words and placings. However so far she hasn't although she may have revealed her chart in other threads, but a cursory glance through it would suggest not, or not much. So she offers us all less scope for learning from her input. And she also lacks the manners to treat this thread as a tropical thread, instead imposing her own preference for sidereal astrology in a tropical thread which is a breach of forum etiquette.

Kalinokia is also judgemental of others, she scoffs at "@ Naturals's response to arguments: " A member who suffer with mental illnesses actually enjoying argumentative posts? This is unbelievable."

I find conflict interesting. It is a necessary component of films, plays, stories, you name it. It is also a fantastic aid to learning astrology. But first we all need to be on the same page, and use the same zodiac. And second it would be respectful if Kalinokia backed her desire to contribute an opinion with some disclosure of her own chart so that we all have the opportunity to understand the structures that are at play in her make-up, so we can learn from her. Of course it is not compulsory to post your chart, but it is an indication of one's willingness to participate and also to deal with others views, perhaps even to enable them to learn something useful though observation of her positions and the way she expresses her opinions. With her desire to regulate others and invoke the authorities I would expect to see regulating Capricorn or Saturn emphasized.

Of course it is not compulsory to post your chart, but it is an indication of one's willingness to participate and also to deal with others views, perhaps even to enable them to learn something useful though observation of her positions and the way she expresses her opinions.

I'm a bit of a debator, my problem is completely dominating the conversation, so i stay conscious of my Leo tendencies.

Giving extra thought to others perspectives, but not allowing for abuse of others or myself.

It's difficult & is a life mission for myself with North in Aquarius in 6th.

Thank you for pointing this out, I thought it was truly despicable that K attack another member with emotional problems who actually was the ♃ mature one whilst dealing with personal attack from others in that thread where she was suffering from real deep pain.

Some people cannot seem to handle any form of criticism & view disagreements with others as ♂ angry personal attacks. Is this ♀ projection perhaps?

I totally agree with your excellent posting.

People can disagree & not be ♂ angry at one another. Or they might be. That's life. 😞 We don't all agree, we don't all have to agree, that would be a pretty boring world. We can agree on some things but not others just like the 'real' world.

Although we usually hang out with folks with align with our own views on the world in a public forum, there are many different voices. So be ♂ angry or ♃ hate at people of a certain age is truly childish. As if any one group of people is better than another. 😞

We all have free will in choosing how we act/react no matter what our astrology chart says. It's only the 'fated' things in life that we cannot change such as the families we are born into, our genetic health situations, etc.

♁ energy at this time is self-protective & overly emotional. July is going to be another bumpy ride! 😊

One of the things that I really like about Astrodienst is that one can learn a lot in this forum because we get to see people interacting. If the charts are known then we get first hand experience of how the planets act out their positions. This is one of the strong points of the forum here. I have learned more from participating in this forum than from any other single source.

This particular thread discusses anger, and where it is in a chart. And we have some examples in the posts. Perfect, if one is actually interested in the subject. Yet not everyone sees it that way. Kalinokia gets angry with those posters who display anger. But for me it is an opportunity to learn and study how different planetary placings in the signs express and deal with anger, either their own anger or anger from others.

It would be more helpful were Kalinokia to post her own chart or birth details so we could relate her opinions and words to her planets, thus enjoying the same opportunities that we offer her to learn from our words and placings. However so far she hasn't although she may have revealed her chart in other threads, but a cursory glance through it would suggest not, or not much. So she offers us all less scope for learning from her input. And she also lacks the manners to treat this thread as a tropical thread, instead imposing her own preference for sidereal astrology in a tropical thread which is a breach of forum etiquette.

Kalinokia is also judgemental of others, she scoffs at "@ Naturals's response to arguments: " A member who suffer with mental illnesses actually enjoying argumentative posts? This is unbelievable."

I find conflict interesting. It is a necessary component of films, plays, stories, you name it. It is also a fantastic aid to learning astrology. But first we all need to be on the same page, and use the same zodiac. And second it would be respectful if Kalinokia backed her desire to contribute an opinion with some disclosure of her own chart so that we all have the opportunity to understand the structures that are at play in her make-up, so we can learn from her. Of course it is not compulsory to post your chart, but it is an indication of one's willingness to participate and also to deal with others views, perhaps even to enable them to learn something useful though observation of her positions and the way she expresses her opinions. With her desire to regulate others and invoke the authorities I would expect to see regulating Capricorn or Saturn emphasized.

You talk a tall order but do not walk it, this is what i cannot stand about Cancer Mars.

"I totally agree with your excellent posting. " Bring someone in who you deem as agreeable.

"We all have free will in choosing how we act/react no matter what our astrology chart says." Disregard your shortcomings.

"♁ energy at this time is self-protective & overly emotional. July is going to be another bumpy ride! 😊"
Diverge from the fact your irrationality is Cancerian, not Aries.

The only Aries trait shown is the need to be right and above all.

Manipulation of Cancer Mars at it's finest, amongst others who like your manipulation though? Tough call.

We are using the word despicable now? 😞 I don't really know where to start.

<https://forum.astro.com/cgi/forum.cgi?num=1560620292>

In this thread member neutral (the one from the other thread that is called mentally ill) is attacked brutally in this thread for nothing more than stating a different opinion as OP. That made her leave the forum in the end.

Waybread is of different opinion in the Julian Assange thread. She has to suffer all sorts of abuse as well because of it.

But back to member neutral. She was a victim in the end but behaved like a troll in several threads before. I think one of those threads got closed by admins.

♂ is aggression. It doesn't matter that much in which sign mars is when it comes to act that way. I know someone with ♂ in ♋ who is a bully towards the partner. There is nothing hidden about it. Same goes for someone with ♂ in ♎.

Btw. I think the traditional way of looking at mars in the different signs doesn't make much sense. I have mars in virgo and wouldn't want to have it anywhere else. It's a mars that get things done (earth sign) and tries to do things in the best and most efficient way. Nothing wrong with that.

As stated before, you need to understand the Mars in 12th house, it's especially difficult for Neutral however because Mars is retrograde.

The trolling is perhaps her only way of venting, i said before though that the 12th house is karmic, what comes around goes around, and that goes for people who do unto the native with 12th house placements.

Of course there is a higher side too.

Note to self, getting tired, mind get's cranky when tired. Time to relax.

I wish you all a very good evening including you ZenTen.

Funny... Not in a Ha,ha way, how this thread about How many on this Forum devolve into anger and outright fights, including ad hominem fights that attack a persons chart rather than the subject.

From some I respected. (sigh)

Definitely proves kokoro's point...

yes, I guess this sounds rather comic, Zippy. 😊

but I know your anger points and hope Pluto devours you. sounds pretty nasty to me.

I do not find this talk enlightening nor informing.

I am not pointing to any mars signs nor aspects as people develop them differently and different speeds. I wish for an ♃♂ but alas I do not. My sag moon is straightforward. I do not get the verbal attacks, like snake fangs. poison.

I would not pay you money for a reading. 😊😊😊😊😊 believe that. you sound like a witch. 😊😊😊

Actually there is a lot of interesting discussion going on and folk are revealing their attitudes and feelings, and still most are communicating and debating. I do not find this environment difficult or particularly unpleasant given the subject matter. I suspect there are a lot more observers than participants, but that is ok, not everyone reading an astrology thread wants to get involved in debates where people feel free to express what they think about others expression. I notice also that while people may side with one or another of the participants, everyone has their supporters. And this is to be expected because no one owns their planetary positions alone. To criticise someone's planetary positions is to criticise many different people.

I grew up in a household of four boys, three of us within 5 years of age. I was the second, my older brother a Capricorn, was gay but in those days that was not expressed so was his hidden secret. He ditched his studies for a law degree to go overseas and become an actor when he turned 21, and ended up writing computer programs. He wrote me a lovely letter from London when he came out that year, I still have it. My next younger brother was near enough to my age to want to challenge me as we grew up, he went into documentary and TV production, he is a Cancerian Sun. My youngest brother, a Libran, became a business manager. Three Cardinal signs, and me mutable Sagittarius. I am used to the hustle and bustle of diverse views, likes and dislikes, and battling controlling influences. All four of us remain on friendly terms although we are scattered around the world in different cities. We communicate by skype and visit each other so keep in touch. But that doesn't prevent us having our own private jokes about each other and our peculiarities. And we are not above stirring each other. My older brother is the easiest to tease because he is a capricorn and takes himself seriously at times, and does not like to be contradicted or challenged for the inconsistencies in his opinions. But he has a lovely and wicked sense of humour. Recently he sent me a photo of a smiling derelict who had some vague facial resemblance to me, wearing a tshirt offering blow jobs for a dollar and claimed it was an old family photo of me that he came across. I sent him a pic I found on the internet of a hill billy type with prince charlie ears and short back and sides and a cretinous expression that reminded me of him pouting, and told him it was in mum's bottom drawer of family photos with his name on the back. The point is not to take yourselves too seriously. We are all flawed human beings and none of us are above criticism, so accept it. Let it wash off.

It does not bother me particularly if someone wants to attack "my chart" as I am quite capable of interpreting my own chart to know its typical faults and strengths. And attacks on a chart might teach me something about the way that person thinks, as well as something about myself, because when someone bothers to highlight something about you, they are telling you about what affects them, and often what they are projecting onto you, as well as what they do or don't know about astrology. They are also attacking anyone else who has that planetary combination, so they are creating allies for you.

Enjoy the freedom to express and learn astrology by participation on this fantastic democratic forum. Sure it can be a bit of a bun fight at times, but there are lots of good people here too, and there are no other forums on the internet with the participation of this one. I think it is a gem and would hate to see it over moderated. There are other forums that one can go to if they prefer strong moderating. There are no other forums like Astrodienst where you can really learn about your chart and others by their behaviour, and the myriad of things that happen to people and the issues they deal with, and with many opportunities to compare that to birth data. If it gets too much for you, take a break from it. You don't have to participate it is all voluntary. I think it is a fantastic service. Enjoy. 😊

Oh dear kalinokia you sound like a lurking spider ready to pounce. Is this the true kalinokia being revealed? The one who wants to moderate everybody else? Hmmm I suspect an afflicted Pluto is about to be revealed, I wonder if you are a familiar poster known to most of us, but now hiding behind a new avatar? If you would care to post your chart we would quickly know and learn so much more about your modus operandi, or are you embarrassed to break your cover and reveal your astro identity?

Please don't include Neutral in this thread anymore, it's not fair, she's an ex-member & until she returns or never returns, she cannot defend herself. I apologize Neutral on behalf of everyone, including myself, who caused you any pain. You know I love you & wish only the best for you. 😊

What do you think K's motive was in bringing up a thread (not the one you linked but much farther back than that)? 😊

Only she knows why she has a personal vendetta against Neutral. With me, it's because I dare to disagree with her great pearls of wisdom! 😊

She has been stalking me for months now, trying to figure out my chart & has figured out certain planetary placements that I have discussed (such as ♂ ♁) & ♃ ♁ h 12. I posted openly about how ♃ has been pummeling this planet. And she uses it to frighten/threaten me. 😊😊😊 It's a joke considering I'm living with the aspect. It may kill me, it may not & I don't need some amateur astrologer (who believes she knows both Western/Vedic astrology) to tell me anything about any transit. If she pulled this action against a naive person, she could very well cause them great anxiety & fear. I've dealt with far greater ♃ stalkers & bullies than her & her ♃ hatred & ♂ anger at me makes me giggle.

WB likes to consider herself a ♃ victim on the Assange thread because nobody agrees with her. For someone who is so 'abused', that doesn't stop her numerous, ♂ angry attacks against him or anyone that supports him. The level of hysteria & ♃ hate has reached maximum level & on & on it goes! 😊 She's been playing the same ♃ movie in her head for 40 yrs now; time to put in a new one. 😊

And I still find it hilarious that women running around on a soccer pitch are so 'brave & courageous' to her while a man who risks his actual life to reveal ♃ facts remains incarcerated & may still face a certain death if extradited to the USA. 😊

Peace out. Glad everyone got their ♂ anger out, including myself. 😊

did someone also brought in the 8th house. the intense emotional house. some of the emotions you didn't proces or are willing to see. the frustrations, anxiety, unconscious, shadow. the projection one uses to others to get rid of your own emotional luggage ? the house ruler of that house can be important as well as the planets within.

What I posted in the ♃ Retrograde thread:

Just noticed when I was doing the July thread, both ♃♁ and ♃♂ station retrograde only a day apart

So the ♃ stationing will be influenced by the near exact trine to an also stationing ♃

So possibly looking back on what old hurts in the past needs to be reconciled and healed, maybe in particular ones rooted in anger and defiance (♂), or going back on past fights, arguments, old conflicts, etc, that have still left a wound (♃)

♃ and ♃ both station retrograde soon (8th and 9th)

Plus the newly ingressed ♂♁ will soon trine the now stationing ♃♂ as well

It's ironic that in a thread addressing anger in the horoscope, a couple of old antagonists have launched personal attacks. You two know who you are. You're back on my personal "ignore" list.

Taurus 5, re:your post #87.

Ages ago, I did a lot of the old "est"/Landmark programs. They made the point that "there's nobody else out there." One way to interpret this, is that whatever we dislike in another person is something that we fundamentally dislike within ourselves.

For a long time Pluto has been my disowned planet. Unsurprisingly, during the course of my career, I attracted a few negative Plutonian types: the aggressive bullies who delight in dominating, if not destroying, other people's careers. Then one day I woke up and realized that I am all of the planets in my chart. I need to own my capacity to be ruthless, implacable, and so on. Once I really got my "inner Pluto," the bullies disappeared.

Then again, shouldn't this work both ways? Obviously I'm triggering something in a couple of other people, which suggests that I mirror back some unwanted portion of their psyches. So there's kind of a tango going on.

What I learned from those old "est" programs is that a way out of the dilemma is really to "get" another person. Take time to listen non-judgmentally. Just be with the other person. Unfortunately this is awfully hard to do when interactions on this Forum are basically an exchange of posts, not face-to-face.

Hey, Zen Ten: Re: Mars also ruling athletes, and its relation to women's soccer.

Professional soccer takes more courage than I have, because the athletes trip and fall a lot when running at top speed. They can run into each other, and even knock heads. A soccer ball can travel over 120km/hour, yet a player will block or tip a high ball as a "header." Various penalties in soccer are basically designed to prevent maneuvers that can cause serious injuries, yet these happen anyway. I don't know how many times during a match a goal keeper will deliberately fall on the ball to prevent it from going into the net, or from giving the strikers another chance at a goal.

This is such a far cry from my youth, when there were no intramural sports for girls in my region. Our presumed objective was to be domestic and ladylike. Then you and I probably both remember the sly digs at female athletes as being lesbians, as though it were something shameful. Well, today a number of fantastic soccer players are openly lesbian. And the crowds love them! There's been a sea change, and I think it's fantastic. If these female athletes got paid what they are worth, that would be another improvement.

I hope you catch either the semi-final or final of this year's women's World Cup soccer. Then see if you agree with me about these women's courage.

Thanks, Tara. Apparently expressing a contrarian opinion and sticking to it is a sign of all kinds of mental deficiencies. 😞

Interesting thread in general though (not wishing to get into the bickering though)

But going back to the original question: where is anger in a chart

I think it's unanimous that ♂ is the key, I would also add the ♃ there too, as ♃ governs reactions. Maybe the ♃ filters the ♂ anger energy

I don't like to show anger that much. I have ♂♃, and I find I get emotional (♃) when I'm angry (♂). The tight trine between my ♃♂ to my ♃♂Asc just wants to reign it in, ♃♂ tells me to keep stoic (♃) out of pride (♂), emotional outbursts are simply embarrassing to me 😞 so unfortunately, also ♂♃ trait, I end up bottling it all up. Not healthy I know 😞 especially as my ♂♃ squares ♀ (toxic), it gets stored as grudges 😞 trying to work on that still. Only so many damn Buddhist quotes I can read, anger, poison, etc etc

The irony is that everyone thinks I'm so laid back and mellow and relaxed, surfer dude style! 😞

How about everyone else? Do you release anger quickly and then forgive? Or do you store it all in and let it simmer away?

WB likes to consider herself a ♃ victim on the Assange thread because nobody agrees with her. For someone who is so 'abused', that doesn't stop her numerous, ♂ angry attacks against him or anyone that supports him. The level of hysteria & G hate has reached maximum level & on & on it goes! Tongue She's been playing the same I movie in her head for 40 yrs now; time to put in a new one.

Well I agree with her and probably many more that just follow the thread by reading and can't be bothered to write in this thread anymore because it is dominated to an very unhealthy degree by only in black and white thinking people who treat any mild criticism of Assange as some kind of murder plot. 😞

Today is the solar eclipse and I am not surprised that is shows in the forum as well by bringing the shadow of the different participants out into the light (mine included).

Yes AS, conflicts are normal. To find civilized ways of resolving them is the challenge. 😞

I don't have much anger but when I do it simmers (unfortunately). In my upbringing my mars was suppressed. I am working on healing that.

I don't see the suppression of the ♂ function connected to a specific mars sign but more to childhood circumstances. To grow up with narcissistic parents (or other type of dysfunctional family situations) can do a lot of damage.

There are no other forums like Astrodienst where you can really learn about your chart and others by their behaviour, and the myriad of things that happen to people and the issues they deal with, and with many opportunities to compare that to birth data. If it gets too much for you, take a break from it. You don't have to participate it is all voluntary. I think it is a fantastic service.

I "like" this comment. ... And, would add that that learning about ourselves can be accelerated by reviewing our own comments (and recognising that their message often applies more to ourselves than to others).

Mostly I release my anger and forgive easily. But I am watchful because others may operate at different levels.

I don't know, i had the worst temper you could imagine growing up, 29 this year and i'm far more assertive and want to fix problems and solve issues.

Anger i find is normally a form of resentment, a form of self i don't want to face including the issue with someone else. normally i find most people are related to me because they are not truly that much different to myself.

I would let it build, and then the almighty show down would happen and nothing but death by the end. Death being the complete separation, and unfortunately those who were never meant to get hurt got hurt too.

Why i am able to read some people so well is also because i have these traits, or had, i choose to use them constructively.

Now i just make stuff happen, assertive.

An addiction to what hurt me was also a downfall.
It is not what is, but what will be.

Hold me in the past, i will apply fruition and make the future better. I always have a point to prove, learn to make it work for myself and others.

CV you are an asshole, ok let me show you how much of an asshole i am by making it work.

Listen Waybread, when the Assange thread was reactivated the admin's deleted your initial posts as they were confrontational, accusing another member of being "dead wrong" and offering nothing astrologically:

<https://forum.astro.com/cgi/forum.cgi?pa=nmo&num=1403187099/124#124>

<https://forum.astro.com/cgi/forum.cgi?pa=nmo&num=1403187099/143#143>

Yet, after the admin's warning, you continued on in much the same fashion offering very little astrology and "repeatedly" (by your own admission and use of the word) focused on correcting every single post differing from your pov, regardless of who was specifically addressed, telling yet another member what they had written was "bogus". More than just a couple of members were affected - AS hasn't even been a participant there.

And, still you continued to persist even after the OP politely wrote the following, not wishing to have their thread derailed or shut down by the admin's as you've managed to do with two other recent threads - the Sun/Moon and Jordan Peterson's:

Quote:

Every OP has the right to establish intent and set parameters for threads they initiate, and participating members have every right to respond freely to whomever and however they so choose within that spirit. This becomes near impossible, however, when discussion is monopolized by a single individual peppering everyone with lengthy responses bent on following their own narrative. Like other threads, your posts on Assange's outnumber everyone else's 3-4 to 1. This leaves little space and time for the "est" of listening non-judgmentally and "getting" another.

And, I'm sorry WB, but the sense of owning your plutonian stuff as a "capacity to be ruthless, implacable, and so on" is really kind of out of place and inappropriate, least-wise here, and perhaps even altogether. Pluto means so much more.

Try not to mistake criticisms of behaviour with that of the person.

My brother is a Moon in Aquarius with Aries Mars, he never owns his emotional self which i always found weird, and skilled at distancing from his own issues.

Great sense of humor, intelligent & able, but complete dismissal of his own issues.

Moon in Aquarius is as or worse malefic than Capricorn Moon or Scorpio Moon IMO.

Aquarius is also ruled by Saturn though so they say.

I was reading about Mercury in Aquarius being malefic if conjunct the Moon, i don't know how it works, but in communication that involves himself, he shuts down, communication is zero or very little.

It's also a hellfire and war that will get him to see another persons view.

He is not totally alone, i have been like that too, i have the opposite Mercury & Ascendant. I have a secret though, the quincunx to Uranus is a truth teller, and i have been very ruthless with it, not aided by Scorpio Pluto & Taurus Moon & Mars in square to Mercury.

Regardless of my Mercury being 12th house, i have a capability of destroying people because i know way too much about people, i am far too able to pick things up like a sponge also, and this detail remains locked in my mind in a never ending corridor of information like an art gallery. This is karmic though because i usually destroy what was good for me.

Mind moves too fast and i come across as abrasive also.

Moon & Mars trine to Uranus perhaps help me not be too much like that, at least as i grow.

As another perspective, I understand Prometheus and as The Messenger of Truth to be symbolised by Jupiter - the Promethean Fire of higher knowledge - and the opposite of the Gemini Mercury messenger of local, neighbourhood communication.

Uranus symbolises electronic waves of information (hence its waves icon, which is not waves of water!) It does not communicate those whereas Jupiter would, by also using Uranus waves with which to communicate enlightenment and higher knowledge.

Saturn as co-ruler of Aquarius can be better understood as such by it being known also as Lucifer - latin translated as The Lightbearer. This aspect of Saturn I understand to be the light of Experience as represented coming from the On/Off, 1/0, pulse-wave information (also as synapses in the brain-function) of Uranus which enables the information to become Experience - as is the proverbial "light-bulb moment" - Saturn. 😊

Uranus represents the bolt of electricity : it is thus information/energy conveyed in a flash. Hence the sudden change \hbar experienced \hbar

Adding to that, Quantum also comes under Aquarius, and its waves can further be understood.

That is originally Carl Jung's psychology of Projecting of Archetypes.

https://en.m.wikipedia.org/wiki/Archetypes_and_the_Collective_Unconscious

When we start to understand its Projection, we can take conscious steps to assimilate and incorporate the projection, otherwise it remains projected.

Incorporating means we must stop judging the projection as out there, and thus also to accept it as our "fault" in not being perfect.

What I posted in the ♃ Retrograde thread:
Just noticed when I was doing the July thread, both ♃♁ and ♃♃ station retrograde only a day apart
So the ♃ stationing will be influenced by the near exact trine to an also stationing ♃
So possibly looking back on what old hurts in the past needs to be reconciled and healed, maybe in particular ones rooted in anger and defiance (♃), or going back on past fights, arguments, old conflicts, etc, that have still left a wound (♃)
♃ and ♃ both station retrograde soon (8th and 9th)
Plus the newly ingressed ♂♁ will soon trine the now stationing ♃♃ as well

Thanks. This is a good heads-up and worth diarising.
What's the link to the Mercury Retrograde thread?

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BhE2JFIJnwk>

Thanks for these links Tara, they are excellent. Anger is based on self preservation according to the first link. Yes, I had thought of anger as being caused by fear, fear of harm, fear of humiliation etc. and that is really the same thing as self preservation in that context.

When I consider whether any anger I have is aggressive or assertive, I would have to admit it is at times aggressive because I dispel my anger by playing games with it, having fun with it, at the expense of the person who I am in conflict with. I like to amuse myself by being creative with the word imagery I use. It appeals to my sense of humour, but I realise from the point of view of the other person it is not really designed to make them feel respected, more to hold up a mirror and give them an image of how I see them, or their behaviour. So in terms of getting a resolution that all parties like I can't claim to be virtuous or particularly constructive. Some people may get it, and see themselves as behaving in the way I see them behaving, but that is by no means a foregone conclusion. I do avoid crude language and abuse. I prefer to paint a word picture, and that is also how I like to look at natal charts. To use some sort of imagery that encapsulates the planets' positions.

But of course conflict resolution is not the primary reason I come to the astrology forum. I come to learn astrology, to understand how the planets work, to experience them in action with charts I know; with people who are also interested in astrology and who are willing participants and reveal things about themselves and their planets positions, and sometimes conflict is what allows planets to be seen functioning.

So while I don't set out to upset people, those who draw attention to themselves by their views, or attitudes, or way they present themselves, or simply what they offer to the forum. might all attract my attention at times for what I can learn, rather than for issues I can help resolve.

♃♂ 4th ♃ ♃ and ♃ ♃ 12th. ♂ rules 12th. Knee jerk reactions for me, especially if I perceive a threat, real or not. I do blow up, then calm quickly and rarely bother with grudges, life is too short. When younger I bottled and stored where as now I get the feelings out as once out I can examine them better and work out what was behind the outburst.

My husband has ♂ ♃ ♃ ♃ and loses his rag very easily yet does not own it. He sort of distances himself from the emotional, the anger part. He thinks I am the angry one and he is super calm, very strange, but then ♃ is in the mix with it all.

His mum has ♂ ♃ ♃ 12th to 6th ruled by ♃ and she internalises anger a lot but when it does come out can be rather unpleasant. My mum has ♂ 12th ♃ ♃ 4th with lots of hidden anger around her family. Also a bottle upper person which can really explode in your face.

The Most Difficult Task in Conflict Resolution

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BhE2JFIJnwk>

Thanks for these links Tara, they are excellent. Anger is based on self preservation according to the first link. Yes, I had thought of anger as being caused by fear, fear of harm, fear of humiliation etc. and that is really the same thing as self preservation in that context.

When I consider whether any anger I have is aggressive or assertive, I would have to admit it is at times aggressive because I dispel my anger by playing games with it, having fun with it, at the expense of the person who I am in conflict with. I like to amuse myself by being creative with the word imagery I use. It appeals to my sense of humour, but I realise from the point of view of the other person it is not really designed to make them feel respected, more to hold up a mirror and give them an image of how I see them, or their behaviour. So in terms of getting a resolution that all parties like I can't claim to be virtuous or particularly constructive. Some people may get it, and see themselves as behaving in the way I see them behaving, but that is by no means a foregone conclusion. I do avoid crude language and abuse. I prefer to paint a word picture, and that is also how I like to look at natal charts. To use some sort of imagery that encapsulates the planets' positions.

But of course conflict resolution is not the primary reason I come to the astrology forum. I come to learn astrology, to understand how the planets work, to experience them in action with charts I know; with people who are also interested in astrology and who are willing participants and reveal things about themselves and their planets positions, and sometimes conflict is what allows planets to be seen functioning.

So while I don't set out to upset people, those who draw attention to themselves by their views, or attitudes, or way they present themselves, or simply what they offer to the forum. might all attract my attention at times for what I can learn, rather than for issues I can help resolve.

Self fulfilling prophecy, self denial.

2 area's of conflict. The self deems someone a threat, the person becomes a threat due to projection, evidence is made out of own issue, truth was they reacted naturally to an idiot.

Self denial, someone points to truth, other dislikes this side they are blind to and calls them out and get's aggressive.

Subconscious conflict.

That's an excellent link for Projection Jen. reading so much about ♂♂ types I find it difficult to see the alleged manipulation in that position which i have in my fourth but fortunately mine has always managed to find a creative outlet for it but it got angry in my youth if I felt I was being manipulated and at that time totally unaware of the information around today. I don't post much because of the possibility of being attacked and my kindness misunderstood but these days my ♀♂♂♂♂♂ can state my case with more rational. This as only come from years of self reflection and as AS says this forum can be a tremendous tool for learning about your own issues by 'reacting' to what in others is a hidden part of yourself.

I was/am a caring kind responsible clever and creative child and adult and with ♀ intercepted in my 1st tend to just do what I feel I can and want to do as long as it doesnt harm anyone else plus a ♀♂♂ tends to rebel and ♀♂♂ in 12th needs a lot of quiet time doing my own thing. This was and still is misunderstood by people who are not happy in their own space and who judge and criticise but at my age I know now it is not my problem so I point out the problem to me and most times can laugh about it unless its cruel and I simply walk away but am aware I am quite capable of punching their lights out but that was part of my north of ENgland working class background which can still stand me in good stead if needs be. I mentioned in an earlier post that once we examine what makes us angry we cant then choose to find a positive outlet rather than too much bickering and one upmanship that seems to have increased alotin the past 2 years and I have been on the forum from the beginning wit a sort break away after a severe attack. My life is too valuable to waste time on arguing with someone who just wants to bully insult or put down another because their view point is different. We all have our own fears but as we get older and have gone through trials and hardships we can mostly come through stronger and what we 'thought' was important loses its sting to our ego hence we learn to engage with more kindness and a sense of unity. If an adult wont face problems in tier lives as lessons they can learn from saturn return uranus opp and returns,then if they livelongenough old age can be very difficult for them as they still try to push their river upstream the way they want and they dont have the physical emotional or psychological strength to keep going without causing damage to their body and health.

This is my chart which bears little resemblance to the person I am now after almost 50 years learning to adapt to a culture very different from the one I grew up in where young women were starting to not toe the line expected by their families to a country where women were still chattles, servants and of very little value as a human being until Germaine Greer came along.

Im blessed with a friend who for year has drummed into me that more is achieved with honey than vinegar with communication and finally over the past 2-3years I give myself lots of gold stars when i get a good result from a potentially conflicting situation.

That's an interesting creative way of expressing your anger. Obviously there are numerous ways of doing that. I have a more crude way I am afraid.

One example:

A week ago in my holiday. I arrived late in the hotel after a day spent at airports and feeling quite tired. First night in the hotel there was a noisy couple in one of the neighbouring rooms. The hotel had thin walls and one could hear everything.

I had to get up the next morning rather early and needed some good sleep urgently yet I was woken up again and again by their love making. The last time it happened at 2 am and contrary to ignoring it before, bottling up my Anger and trying to fall asleep again I jumped up half asleep and banged several times with my fist on the wall.

Then I realized that I had hit the wrong wall because that one belonged to different neighbours. I heard them getting awake and wondering what is going on.

I went to the wall on the other side and banged on that several times. In between I shouted loud something angrily in german (my mother tongue) which that italian couple probably didn't understand. It worked. They cooled down in less than a minute and were quiet for the rest of the night. 🙄

My sleep was saved. 😊

Looking back on that I found the whole thing like in a comedy and embarassing at the same time. 😊

Quoting you again dear, i had to share my feelings on that great mind.

In this video you shared, Russel mentions not being able to fit into any political box, i am like this also, it's why i do not stick my head in the political section.

My mind is very political, i am also very much for the under dog in this society, people without a word, i was that person growing up in an abusive family.

There is no political view out there that encompasses my world view, because it wipes out greed, wipes out power, wipes out competition & only bestows what i want & what many other more humble folk would want. Unconditional love, true unity, no separation of humans regardless of any criteria. Simple things that are rewarded for effort would remain, spoilt people do not get given preferenciality in my world.

No world view has this, the world sorely lacks it though.

Why is there drama on TV about small things when the true reality of this world is buried?

Why are we not allowed to unite the world but only unite our own country?

Off topic but this song encompasses my mind a lot. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Fcl-VdnmmE8>
I get a bit creative in my head, this song helps my dramatic Leo side.

Our fault?

It is much more practical to accept we are responsible for our own reactions and our own feelings.. it is us.

If anything, others are holding up a mirror.

Either we see ourselves and what we do not like about ourselves or what we reject.

others do not make us react, or feel.

This is more along the lines of dharma.

If you are looking for where anger would be expressed, look for intolerance.

Is the chart about beauty, luxury, indulgence? Maybe Venus needs an adjustment in temperment attributed to Venus?

Subconscious conflict.

You've got it all worked out there CV, and I expect that is exactly how it works for you and in many instances for lots of us. Projection is an issue and some of us project much more than others. However I do believe there are also plenty of instances where anger is a reasonable emotion. I don't see anger as an emotion that is meted out fairly according to truth. I think that is simplistic. People can be angry at behaviour that is not directed at them personally, or even involves them personally. Crude or coarse or unfair behaviour towards others can trigger anger among those who see it occurring because they might feel for the victim or consider the aggression unnecessary. Or it might just upset them and spoil their enjoyment of something and that can make them angry. Or they may feel helpless to assist some-one being "victimised" or "disrespected" whom they relate to, and that can be very upsetting.

It is also easy to feel irritated if your beliefs or opinions are ignored when you offer them. Yet those who ignore them may just be blind to others and pursuing their own ideas rather than consciously delivering a slight. They may simply be insensitive to others cherished beliefs or consider others to be idiots or use words like that which show a lack of empathy or willingness to accept what another says. What one person thinks is a truth, because that is how they perceive their world, another person sees as a personal judgement that attributes all the blame to them. We don't all form the same judgements.

I see this these sorts of conflicts quite often when I come across an angry response between people on the forum and wonder what triggered it as it isn't always apparent what caused it even when reading back over the exchanges. People make an investment in their opinions and when others don't acknowledge them it can seem deliberate when it may just be insignificant to the somewhat insensitive second poster who then wonders, "why all the emotion?"

What I like about the links Tara posted was the way of assessing one's anger response, whether it is aggressive or assertive. If it is a put down of the other person or likely to make them feel bad or at fault or humiliated it is aggressive and not aimed at reconciling conflict. If however it avoids ego and attributing blame or fault, but instead seeks to resolve the situation then it is assertive rather than aggressive. You may find if you assess your own words that they are aggressive rather than assertive. I assessed my own part in conflicts as being more likely to ridicule the other party than reconcile the differences, so I assessed my part as being more aggressive than assertive. However for myself it reduced my own sense of anger because I enjoyed making a game of it, cat and mouse if you like. But that is not the way to achieve reconciliation as it tends to fuel the other person's sense of frustration or anger.

The key is not in analysing to find fault or attributing a cause or blame to either party, because then ego gets in the way, but in recognising the words one uses to resolve the conflict. The assertive person takes the initiative in this, the aggressive person doesn't know how to.

Thanks, Tara!

Afternoon Sun and Phoebe, I am ignoring (not reading) your flaming posts.

Quote from Taurus Five on 02.07.2019 at 09:32 [UT+1]:Quote from Waybread on 02.07.2019 at 07:48 [UT+1]:Taurus 5, re: your post #87.

Ages ago, I did a lot of the old "est"/Landmark programs. They made the point that "there's nobody else out there." One way to interpret this, is that whatever we dislike in another person is something that we fundamentally dislike within ourselves.

For a long time Pluto has been my disowned planet. Unsurprisingly, during the course of my career, I attracted a few negative Plutonian types: the aggressive bullies who delight in dominating, if not destroying, other people's careers. Then one day I woke up and realized that I am all of the planets in my chart. I need to own my capacity to be ruthless, implacable, and so on. Once I really got my "inner Pluto," the bullies disappeared.

Then again, shouldn't this work both ways? Obviously I'm triggering something in a couple of other people, which suggests that I mirror back some unwanted portion of their psyches. So there's kind of a tango going on.

What I learned from those old "est" programs is that a way out of the dilemma is really to "get" another person. Take time to listen non-judgmentally. Just be with the other person. Unfortunately this is awfully hard to do when interactions on this Forum are basically an exchange of posts, not face-to-face.

So ... might you not yet be really getting your inner Mars?

Of course, it's possible... 🙄 However, normally in my "real" life I don't have trouble in expressing anger. (Of course, many times, a mature adult has to stifle it: we cannot go through life like toddlers with temper tantrums.)

Natally, I have an out-of-sign conjunction with my Aquarian sun and Pisces Mars. Both planets trine my close Uranus-MC conjunction. If you accept astrological "chords" or "keys" I show up pretty strongly as an 11th chord person. In modern astrology I don't consider combustion. Rather a planet conjuncting the sun indicates an energy that the person identifies with. (When I was younger, this would have been "high energy.")

From my perspective, however, this all feels like my willingness to express an opinion, and oftentimes facts, even when they run contrary to a group consensus. And even when they run contrary to the views of strong-minded people who engage in personal attacks. If I still think my views are correct, after reading others' disagreements, I will stand by them. I try to back up my views with logic and facts.

Maybe we can talk, however, about expressing authentic emotions. Anger, in responsible doses, is a natural human emotion, right alongside love, fear, joy, and sadness. I think children, especially girls, are too often taught that it's not OK for them to express anger. They turn into adults who can't handle anger. So now we have a movement of women in the US legitimizing women's right to be angry.

On a lighter note, here's what I think about emotions and contrarians, from the cult classic film Harold and Maude: "If you want to sing out, sing out!"

T - Is it wrong now to give accurate information? 🙄

I won't post on the Assange thread again because it ♂ triggers WB on yet another 4 pages of propaganda & ħ hate & the thread will be shut down.

Anyone can post on that thread. I'm sorry but what WB engages in is not 'mild criticism'. The level of ħ hate & P toxicity is like nothing I've seen on the Mundane thread. She is obsessed with constantly pointing out what a nasty, rapist he is who is a traitor, liar, conman & so forth. These are all her words. It's all so D emotionally based.

I have pointed out at least 6x now that he's a 2 publisher, he doesn't 'steal/hack' the classified docs; that is done by whistleblowers who remain anonymous. Snowden/Manning were arrested because they broke the law; Assange didn't. Yet, those ħ facts are dismissed by her over & over again & back to what an 'evil' man he is who deserves to be arrested & put in solitary confinement. & even killed. All for a man who has committed no crime. 🙄 I told her that I had done the 'research', studied the entire case & gathered the ħ facts. Next, she's telling me the exact same thing; that's she studied the case & 'done the research'. 🙄

But that is clearly not true. And she constantly tries to demean, insult & 'dominate' anyone who disagrees with her. But she's 'conquered' her own P shadow! 😏😏😏 Then turns around & calls herself the victim. Very subtle 4 move. She gathers all her information from the MSM & has yet to read the 98 page criminal report as it completely exonerates him from any sexual misconduct. The whole thing was about a torn condom to begin with & nothing more. Until the US heard about his from the Swedish PM & then it became RAPE! It was all a diabolical plot to get him to Sweden where he could be extradited to the USA & never heard of again. 😏

It doesn't matter what the ħ facts are to WB; she is not interested as she still blames him for Hillary's election loss of 2016. But what did he do?

He published hacked emails from the DNC showing the preference for her over Sanders. What's wrong with that? Was it a lie? No, it was ħ facts & to this day, nobody can say if it cost Hilary ONE vote against her, let alone the entire election. 🙄

I told her that the Comey press conference actually caused a lot of damage yet her ♂ anger is never directed at him; it's always Assange. Assange the rapist, the traitor, the criminal. None of which is true. The ħ/SN energies are all about releasing the past & it's perfect opportunity for her to release that pent up ♂ from 3 years ago!

Perhaps there is some clue between their charts that could point to this P obsession with him that she has? She has 'translated' his chart as her 'proof' that he's the most evil man that ever lived.

Yet her comment about HC wanting to 'drone him' is perfectly acceptable to her because he was 'mean to her & doesn't like her'!

(stamping feet & pouting like a child).

But the comment was made years before the 2016 election, another ħ fact that she chooses to ignore. 😏

Now, her latest diatribes against him are how 'dishonorable' he is & how he 'used' his friends to skip out on bail. OMG, it would be funny if it wasn't so P deadly serious. This is a man's life we are talking about. Sure, it's just one man so who cares anyways.....but we all should care about ħ facts & 2 justice....as the other members on the forum do.

The report contains several testimonies—Ms. Ardin, Ms. Wilen, two Swedish male journalists, Ms. Wilen's ex boyfriend, brother, and several friends and colleagues of the two women. Finally, Mr. Assange himself. It closes with grainy photographs of a broken condom, as well as a condom tip—and the forensic analysis of experts from "Staten's Kriminaltekniska Laboratorium" (The State's Criminal Technological Laboratory)—offering forensic results about the exact conditions along the broken edge of the condom. (Ruled not to have been broken by an "instrument," but to have failed by natural means.)

For the first time in U.S. history, the government is criminally prosecuting a publisher for printing truthful information. Whether Assange is extradited or not, this case casts a dangerous cloud over aggressive national security reporting and means criminalizing journalism is on the table.

<https://theintercept.com/2019/05/29/prosecuting-julian-assange-for-espionage-is-a-coup-attempt-against-the-first-amendment/>

His 'character' is not on trial; if it were, we would all be in prison for our flaws & deficiencies; he is far from being perfect. But that's not why there has been a smear campaign against him & why he's currently in solitary confinement! 🙄

So please agree all you like, post all you like but please ensure it's the ħ truth & not the 4 lies that WB churns out quicker than the dairy farm churns out butter. 🙄

[quote author=~Tara~ link=1561353929/120#126 date=1562052772]

Well I agree with her and probably many more that just follow the thread by reading and can't be bothered to write in this thread anymore because it is dominated to an very unhealthy degree by only in black and white thinking people who treat any mild criticism of Assange as some kind of murder plot. 😏

Thanks, Jen et al. for bringing up projection. I have a number of concerns about other aspects of Jung's thought, but projection was one thing I think he got absolutely right.

Further, who or what becomes the shadow? Herein lies a lot of stuff most people would rather not face about themselves: the weaknesses, the perceived deficiencies, the inner demons. Sometimes when those vulnerable spots get touched (and often unconsciously) they activate a lot of push-back, as the person (often unconsciously) tries to shield them.

A common strategy is "the best defense is a good offense."

Here be dragons.

I don't think some even know what flaming is, or what a true war really is either.
Or they do but they are manipulative with it.
Or they just want to manipulate.

A Pisces cannot grasp someone who holds their own power (Pluto)
Pisces Mars is a great victim hunter, in other words, their own issues become someone else's. It's a bit narcissistic in fact if i look at it.

Light someone up for a reaction, automatically accumulates what they want, for them to be a victim, but you are the victim.
Coupled with her emotional detachment, dangerous weapon.

This stuff is subtle and harder for more "open" and self confident people.

Btw. I added something to my last post.

Pisces operate in a totally different way to Cancer & Scorpio, even though all 3 can access manipulation in a subtle way easily, most of these signs when they mature use manipulation as a tool to see what is real in others and themselves rather than abuse for the self.

Pisces are excellent at gathering servants to act for them, Libra is also good at this but Libra uses social finesse & intellectual spark, not genius or intelligence.

Pisces can get to the middle of someone and are adept at holding the middle of someone and swaying it in their favor.

If you detach and see people objectively and only see into what they mean, where they get their thoughts from and what influences them, you begin to see where people really stand, only thing then is try to help guide them.

I think this may be my exalted Jupiter trine Pluto in my 4th in Scorpio that does this, some crazy knowledge and insights, it's hard to really explain for me in words honestly.

I think all people here are great, words are words, if you wish to take things to a personal level, be prepared for the barbed spike back in your face, it's the law of nature.

Saying something may be closed down will foster the closure of something, remain open.

My Mars is in Taurus, i act nothing like a Mars in Taurus, aspects change Mars and also house.

My energy is direct with Mars, but i need time to think about things (Libra/Aries axis)

My MC ruler is Mars, Taurus Mars conjunct, modified heavily by the MC & 10th house plus a conjunction from my Moon & trine to Uranus & square to a Leo Mercury.

Does not mean the basic stuff of these signs does not come out, if someone shows the traits, they can be spotted.

I still enjoy my comfort after i worked for it.

It should be shocking to anyone who reads her ♀ toxic postings against Assange the vile comments she has made about his character/motives/chart. I can't remember them all, I'm not going to read her hundreds of posts to cut/paste them for you. The derogatory comments are so out of line that it's clear she's motivated by ♂ anger at him because HC lost the election.

She even posted that because he has a lot of water element in his chart ☾ ♃ ♁ ♀ ♁ ♁ that he was incapable of intellectual thought & lived his life through his emotions. OK. What about the rest of his chart? ♂ search for truth, justice?

Here are a couple of quotes by Assange to show what motivates him:

“Capable, generous men do not create victims, they nurture victims.” ...
“You have to start with the truth.

And what's wrong with emotions anyways? Perhaps WB's lack of water element gives her deficiency in empathy, compassion & intuition. 😞

Perhaps her ♂♁ does contain some of the shadow elements? Perhaps she lives too much in her air element?

Not everyone goes running to the admin because they don't like what someone has posted; I prefer to deal with them directly myself & everyone pretty much ignores her as they know it's pointless to ever convince her that she is wrong. Now, she is accusing other member of 'flaming' her. 😞 So I guess anyone who disagrees with WB is either a troll, a flamer or a fool, that's always her reaction. It's always 'them' & she is the perpetual ♃ victim. A person with so many fixed planets (☾ ♃ ♁ ♀ ♁ ♁ ♀) in their chart is not going to change their mind very often, if at all. It usually ends up with the thread getting shut down because ♁ energy never yields, never bends. It's very ironic that you worry about this thread being closed down when WB has no consideration for other threads being shut down. 😞

I hope none of this threads gets shut down as I don't believe in censorship but I believe in the right to disagree/criticize/correct when ♁ facts are missing from the equation.

I won't post on this thread anymore either & WB can post all the vitriolic attacks against me or Assange that she likes; I belong to a letter writing campaign that sends him cards & short notes to cheer him up & give him something to do while he sits in solitary confinement for having committed no crime. That is my little contribution to a man who has contributed a lot to this world. 😊

Might you not yet be really getting your inner Mars?

Of course, it's possible... 😊 However, normally in my "real" life I don't have trouble in expressing anger. (Of course, many times, a mature adult has to stifle it: we cannot go through life like toddlers with temper tantrums.)

Bearing in mind the first paragraph of reply 88, by AS :-

Might your Mars-in-Pisces sometimes "hide itself in the shadow", by giving the appearance of being a victim (as a mechanism for escaping confrontation or/and expressing anger openly/directly?

Quote:

Natally, I have an out-of-sign conjunction with my Aquarian sun and Pisces Mars. Both planets trine my close Uranus-MC conjunction.

That conjunction is actually a (5x5x2) 50th harmonic aspect ... with Sun-Uranus making a 32nd harmonic aspect, and Mars-Uranus making an exact (17x2) 34th harmonic aspect.

As you may already know, David Hamblin concluded (in The Spirit of Numbers) Seventeeness people "are often filled with anger about the way things are, and feel that this anger must find an outlet"; ... fiveness people may "become intolerant of people who do not see the world as they see it" ... and twoness people "are fighting to change the world".

Quote:

If you accept astrological "chords" or "keys" I show up pretty strongly as an 11th chord person. In modern astrology I don't consider combustion. Rather a planet conjuncting the sun indicates an energy that the person identifies with. (When I was younger, this would have been "high energy.")

I do not see that elevenness in the "near enough" natal chart that you have previously posted on this forum. The aspects of the 17th harmonic series look much stronger to me.

Quote:

From my perspective, however, this all feels like my willingness to express an opinion, and oftentimes facts, even when they run contrary to a group consensus. And even when they run contrary to the views of strong-minded people who engage in personal attacks. If I still think my views are correct, after reading others' disagreements, I will stand by them. I try to back up my views with logic and facts.

That description does fit with elevenness - but seventeeness might be driving you to behave that way. And, if so, you might be driven more by your emotions than you currently believe yourself to be.

Quote:

Maybe we can talk, however, about expressing authentic emotions. Anger, in responsible doses, is a natural human emotion, right alongside love, fear, joy, and sadness. I think children, especially girls, are too often taught that it's not OK for them to express anger. They turn into adults who can't handle anger. So now we have a movement of women in the US legitimizing women's right to be angry.

Are you not part of that movement? ... And might your 17th (and 23rd) harmonic aspects be what drove you to become a part of it?

How does your cousin justify his hostile behaviour to his wife and mother? Who does he blame for it? How does he get these two women to stay in an environment where he can torture them, and where other people have witnessed his hostility to them? Do you think that is not manipulation of them?

The Green River killer was a Mars in Pisces and used tricks to make it appear others carried out his murders: "Ridgway occasionally contaminated the dump sites with gum, cigarettes, and written materials belonging to others, and he even transported a few victims' remains across state lines into Oregon to confuse the police."

He was hypocritical apparently leading a religious life yet doing the opposite: He had become religious during his second marriage, proselytizing door-to-door, reading the Bible aloud at work and at home, and insisting that his wife follow the strict teachings of their pastor.^[7] Ridgway would also frequently cry after sermons or reading the Bible.^[4] Despite his beliefs, Ridgway continued to solicit the services of sex workers and wanted his wife to participate in sex in public and inappropriate places, sometimes even in areas where his victims' bodies were later discovered.^[7]

Ridgway himself admitted to having a fixation with sex workers,^[11] with whom he had a love/hate relationship. He frequently complained about their presence in his neighborhood, but he also took advantage of their services regularly.

Ridgway began each murder by picking up a woman, usually a sex worker. He sometimes showed the woman a picture of his son, to trick her into trusting him. After raping her, Ridgway strangled her from behind. Before Ridgway's confession, authorities had attributed 49 murders to the Green River Killer.^[33] Ridgway confessed to murdering at least 71 victims.^[27]

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Gary_Ridgway

PS of course Mars in Pisces is no worse than Mars in any other sign, but it is just that it will have a characteristic way of expressing that martial energy in a Piscean manner. In COSI Ebertin writes Mars in Pisces works silently, the inclination to join secret societies, craving for alcohol, nicotine etc, lack of self control and unreliability in love-relationship, and a struggle for recognition, interest in the occult (borderline societies).

Howard Sasportas in The Inner Planets (co-author Liz Greene) page 258 writes: "Mars in Pisces would be similar (to men with Mars in Cancer) they want to demonstrate how sympathetic they are, that if you team up with them, you'll have a shoulder to cry on and someone to stand by you in difficulties. Conversely, they may play the victim in need of rescuing. Some people find that irresistible."

Sun, Mercury, Venus in Aquarius, Moon in Scorpio, Jupiter in Capricorn, Malefic Saturn in 7th in Virgo & Pluto in Leo in 6th opposing all his 12th house Aquarius placements.

How does emotional detachment work in the 12th house? and this is why i do not fall dumb to the statement all Sun signs are bad in the 12th house since it is a water house.

Aquarius being detached from emotion is going to be far harder in the 12th, living in such a swampy place, intuiting everyone else's emotions through the subconscious and finding they really cannot escape.

Sure an evil person, but i can emphasize a slight amount with how mind numbing that would be for someone who is not emotionally in tune.

Luckily for a water 12th house Sun it's easier for us to understand emotion, direction is just the key.

"This type of offender is so in control of his surroundings that he can adapt to obstacles that occur during the commission of the crime in an outwardly calm manner."

I have the reverse of this, i tend to remain calm when i get given shit, but display this sort of annoyed look. To the point of lashing out, well that happens and i move on, not too dissimilar with what they described.

Adapting is something a 12th house sun at least when learned is capable of doing, instead of taking on too much, learning how to go through each person, who to be around and who not to be, becomes intuitive.

For him a bad person though it seemed he used that as his actual helper and it was weaponized.

It paints a terrible picture and makes people fear the 12th house when all the 12th house is responsible for is giving us this containment, a wall of imagery that is not materialised and it is our job to sort through it and give attention to what needs it.

Some don't deal this way and just isolate themselves. Those who do both are what i would call healthy because it's really draining too.

As a child, Ridgway was tested with an I.Q. of 82, signifying low intelligence, and his academic performance in school was so poor that at one point in high school he had to repeat a single school year twice in order to attain grades decent enough to pass. His classmates at Tyee High School describe him as congenial but largely forgettable. His teenage years were difficult and troubling for him. When he was 16, he stabbed a six year old boy, who survived the attack. According to the victim and Ridgway himself, Ridgway walked away laughing and saying, "I always wondered what it would be like to kill someone." While in high school, Ridgway joined the Navy, after graduation he was sent to Vietnam, where he witnessed combat, while serving on a Navy patrol boat.

You would be wrong to call his expert ways of killing lacking in intelligence, and this is why i never give credit to manipulation.

It took another killer Ted Bundy to actually out him to the police.
Which brings me to another point, most people are not so different to others, people have what bad people have, morality, choice, free will.

To believe a bad person is bad from the beginning, is to believe you are born dead.

I brought this article to Waybread's attention once, but unfortunately she was too insulted to give any consideration to what plagues the vast majority of us, by varying degrees.

Just as there exists a neuroscientific framework for this phenomena referred to as hyper-rationality, there also exists an astrological one to be ferreted out.

In addition to Mars, as relates to anger, I would also look at the Sun, Moon, along with its counterpart, the Black Moon, as starting points relating to this most interesting concept of hyper-rationality, and its potentially devastating effects.

Posts: 3125
Gender: ♀

Quote:

Hyper-rationality is the unquestioning faith in the efficacy of reason.

This is something of an irony, since those who take the hyper-rational approach to reason are violently opposed to "faith" of any sort. They (rightly) condemn "faith" as "irrational," but they then go to the opposite extreme of making reason supreme. In so doing, they inadvertently turn reason into a sort of surrogate God, to whom they must pay homage at all costs. This is rationality carried to the extreme, beyond rational limits, hence the term "hyper-rationality." It is important to remember that one can be under the tyranny of "reason" just as much as one can be under the tyranny of a god (or gods). To make reason absolute is to make reason into a "god," since only God is, by definition, absolute. To fail to acknowledge the limits of reason (as hyper-rationalists do) is to view reason in god-like terms.

Hyper-rationalists cling to their faith in reason as desperately as believers cling to their faith in God. Both are attempting to escape from something by fleeing into the arms of something else. Here, however, the focus is not on what believers are fleeing from (enough has been said about that by others elsewhere), but rather, on what hyper-rationalists are attempting to escape. The fact that they are taking refuge in rationality would suggest that they are fleeing from a recognition of their own irrationality—or rather, the irrational aspects of themselves. (Remember Newton's Third Law of Motion: For every action there is an equal and opposite reaction.) They are (often unconsciously) terrified by the prospect that they might in fact have an irrational side that could take over at any time. They have to repress this irrational side at all costs, since it may well go out of control once it is allowed to express itself. So the hyper-rationalist, in an attempt to convince himself or herself of his own absolute rationality and his or her own sense of being completely in control, makes a great external display of being hyper-rational and committed to reason 100 percent. In doing this, the hyper-rationalist is somewhat like Hamlet's mother, Gertrude, who "protested too much" in Shakespeare's play. The excessive protestations cast doubt on the claims.

Are there any grounds for this analysis of the motives of the hyper-rationalist? As it happens, there are.

How does your cousin justify his hostile behaviour to his wife and mother? Who does he blame for it? Or is he simply so cruel that he does not need to justify it because he enjoys the power it gives him? How does he get these two women to stay in an environment where he can torture them, and where other people have witnessed his hostility to them? Do you think that is not manipulation of them?

His partner is a male and he doesn't justify his behaviour as he feels that he is not doing anything wrong towards them.

I think his partner is codependent and his mother as well. Both are brought up to not rattle the cage. Typical followers as many are. Don't upset the alpha dog.

That would be right, it isn't his fault as he ignores his own behaviour, but you don't agree with him because you can see he is doing something wrong.

I wonder Tara as an impartial observer (and defender of my accuser) if you can tell me what I have said in the 3 posts I wrote that resulted in me being tarred as flaming in the very next post? Or do you think perhaps Waybread was mistaken and didn't understand what I wrote? or perhaps it suited her to create the impression of me joining in an attack on her when I actually wasn't?

Not shure what you are trying to say here. It wouldn't be the fault of a (let's say) murderer (♂) as long he is ignoring his behaviour? To be hostile (♂) towards others is not something that is endorsed by society. Everyone beyond a certain age should have some knowledge about how to behave well.

How extraordinary, not the animus bit, it's not unusual for angry people to display their animus (isn't that what anger is?) so I can understand that comment if you were displaying annoyance or anger or aggression, lots of folk show animus on this forum. but asserting you had a penis? Are you sure you aren't exaggerating a comment about behaviour rather than your physicality and taking it too literally? One wonders what could have possibly given someone that idea, or perhaps you felt it was too close to the bone and took it personally, and that stiffened your resolve to continually cross swords? You're obviously still holding on to it. Maybe you should just let go of it, and lighten up. But that would be a typically male response after a row, and you're obviously not a male because you haven't got a penis. Just saying.... Wink

I am quite shure that WB does not try to irritate anyone on purpose. In all that time I haven't even figured out what annoys her adversaries so much. As someone who writes a lot it's easy to project a lot of stuff onto her. All that discussion (♀) about who started flaming etc. is just the aftermath of something that must have happened before. You expect everyone to see in the same way everyone does?

We are all very similar in the end, but thinking you are the same perspective as someone else?

But being able to talk about a perspective extensively and bring it to an understandable level is not what all people can do.

Moderators have a job, and in a non understanding way will remove what they deem wrong.

Manipulators are skilled, or you would not be here defending one person and understanding why WB removes herself as to look better, it's part of her detachment game you play into.

I think it is completely unfair when several people group together against one person when there isn't a really good reason for it. Anyone who participates in that should experience being a scapegoat at least once in their life for themselves IMO.

Somehow it reminds me of the persecution of the jews in the 3rd Reich (♁). 😞

I experienced being bullied and abused for the first part of my life, my entire childhood & upbringing into early adulthood. This does not make me victimize myself although in the past i did extend it over rationality.

You think people are not going to judge others?

In context of right & wrong, if you wish to not get in the middle and be judged, remain light and from the outside peeking in, reason being, the issue becomes yours and people focus on you instead.

A manipulator knows this, look how me and you are now, others are just watching, i am fully aware however.

As for Mars in Taurus, yes i love sex, massages, food. Stamina yes.

I have a Pluto side to me though which blinds the Taurean side to just not get involved, which is the intensity to go deep into something. Sometimes it's just not worth it. 😊

Nope. Some people evolve over time. Not repeating same mistakes again by looking away when others are bullied (P).

In light of this comment, WB's instigation then straight into defensive victim hood suggests she is the instigator & manipulator.

In different threads she will hold up someone who holds her ideal and shut out everybody else.

The inability to communicate and allow for critical thinking and application of a truer definition for what is being said means she fully resents being held to responsibility & rejects others for the ego which is herself.

No one is being bullied, just being judged.

Judgment is not bullying in the correct form.

I have a few videos for all to watch so we can separate from the subjective discussion we were having and attempt to be back on track.

Anger is not just something that is limited to one thing.

This is for me and the 10th house, the 10th house is my life, it is also where my Pars Fortunate is which is apparently my "pot of gold"

Failure for Success | Lina Piao | TEDxYouth@UISG
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZeOf_tgYruM

So as for WB's mention of women becoming empowered, i respect it and am all for it, but never use something to defame men, "football" is not what all men aspire for or are even interested in. Don't use what someone else is interested in to make a case, make one from yourself instead of feeding the self.

This next lot more pertains to the higher octave of Mars (Pluto)

I was speaking with someone, i find her very interesting and she took interest in knowledge, so i took it upon myself to reveal a richer inner source i never share.

Always use a dim red light at night to remain undetected, red light travels lesser than any other light. But you want to survive? Use no light at all.

Upon the opening of light, the Sun will guide us from our darkness.

It is both logical yet relating to the inner path also, a blend if you like.

spiritual growth along with logical application.

The Armed forces apply such a method, it is only for map reading and if a need for any kind of light should be used, light is kept to a minimum.

If we think of survival and darkness, a lot of us are at our worst in darkness, we must not hide from it, we must only come out of it once we understand it and learn to shake hands with it.

It ensures our survival and that we may never approach such a thing again, bring darkness into awareness to continue in the light.

I have grand visions, exploration of things that are merely so easily escaped by the material world.

The parallels between spirit & material.

I am gifted with intuition, but intuition is not the be all end all, intuition is a gut feeling or vision, experience can and will trump it, experience can manifest such a vision.

I have no idea what my mind will look like when i stop experiencing, if i ever do stop.. life has so much to offer.

In merely a tiny bit of information, so much can be opened and created.

^^^ must feel great knowing how much power you have, not really, it's a responsibility and it's hard to master, understanding that part of which is often fantasy and dream vs concrete intuition, concrete logic & decision making.

Moral choice is not in question, darkness is not objective in spiritual form. Darkness is mostly imposed from experiences.

It can be as little as a fear over spiders, mostly a fear over spiders is passed down from others who react the same way, a learned fear.

Irrationality is a materialism of emotion, it is based on ideas, how we view things and our fight or flight response.

Fear is as emotional as someone crying over losing a loved one, or someone being angry at not being paid for their work.

Emotion is not objective, it is subjective, but at the same time emotion can be logical, it is logically accepted that if you burn someones skin, they are going to have an emotional reaction due to feeling pain.

And yes that is an immediate threat of course.

An internal battle goes unseen which paints a very subjective view point over objective because it is from a place hidden within the mind, unless of course you are excellent at putting words to how you feel (most are not) then we can continue to think emotion is definitely subjective because emotion does not always have any words, it's depth is tremendous.

Going back to that survival part, when it comes down to you vs another who is going to end your life, there is no moral code other than i need to either kill or be killed, or if you have the ability, avoidance.

Most people with a clear mind would rather avoid such a thing, so they become scared, they never face their dark side, the darkness or even dig deep enough to understand others.

I was originally watching a video about our own government in the UK and it moved randomly to the KKK in America then to stories of people with a dark history and then eventually one guy turning his darkness around.

Then i saw the parallel with my own views.

What does this have to do with me? absolutely nothing i don't suffer and never suffered like these people, my problem was violence, anger & just going against all rules, it's no different on a core level to these people besides no separation of humans and seeing a race as inferior.

Was mine as extreme? no not even close, am i better? no, so i have no need to identify with the extremes, i only identify within. The same vulnerability and lack of direction.

Watch these. The same core message is there.

I'm being ironic. Of course it is his fault. I'm just commenting on his attitude like we would in Australia. The way you told it made it so obvious blind Freddy could see he was in the wrong.

Tara Quote:

This is your first post adressng WB in this thread:

WB Quote:

Quote:

During my time on this forum, I've come in for all kinds of personal attacks from people who take exception to what I write. In recent memory, one member frequently asserted that I was an animus-driven woman who wanted to be a man and had a penis

AS Quote:

You're obviously still holding on to it. Maybe you should just let go of it, and lighten up. But that would be a typically male response after a row, and you're obviously not a male because you haven't got a penis. Just saying.... Wink

Tara: Quote:

What would you think if you were Waybread?

If I were Waybread I would not have reopened a previous argument in such a way that it was obvious to anyone who had been on that thread who she was referring to, and deliberately distorted what was said to read that that person believed she had a penis.

WB Quote:

In recent memory, one member frequently asserted that I was an animus-driven woman who wanted to be a man and had a penis

. By doing so she reopened the argument that had a thread closed, and she did it in such a way as to continue the argument in order to gain sympathy when she was a prime mover in maintaining attacks on me.

Her reference to the animus and penis was because I kept drawing attention to her attacks on me by picturing her as the angry person she was, every time she attacked me She obviously still resents that. Ask yourself this Tara, is she the victim now when she reopened an argument that closed a thread? That she did it in a stealthy way (by not naming my avatar) just revealed that she wanted to garner support as if she were the victim, no doubt thinking I would not "own up" to being the anonymous member. Or if I did that I would be seen in a bad light. Clearly her strategy worked with you.

Tara Quote:

I am quite shure that WB does not try to irritate anyone on purpose.

And many others on the forum would have the opposite opinion, thus the "pack:" against her.

Take the banning of Juan Revilla aka Blanco for example, whom she hounded off one thread and trolled on a new thread that he opened to avoid her, she weaponised his chart, and then complained to the moderators when he responded in frustration by working out her chart which she wouldn't reveal at that time.

He got banned when it should have been her but the moderators had not followed her hounding of him which upset him deeply and simply applied her complaint that he outed her chart against her wish. That is one of the problems of a "second language" moderated forum. Subtleties are missed. She claimed she had outside stalkers so feared revealing her birth data. It seems her reputation for discordance follows her. Juan was a great loss to this forum as he was an outstanding astronomer and astrologer and made a software program freely available to anyone who wanted it, and a real gentleman who cared about people. He did not want to argue with her. He just wanted to discuss his methods based on Occam's Razor, that is taking the strongest aspect as a starting point for interpretation, such as a conjunction if such existed. He used that method to work out the meaning of new comets, centaurs, trans Neptunian bodies by looking at charts of famous people who had them partile conjunct their Sun. He was truly an astrological pioneer.

Tara Quote:

In all that time I haven't even figured out what annoys her adversaries so much.

Ha ha. You know so little of what's gone on. You would probably need to be an English first language speaker to appreciate the way she flatters certain people to gain support, and conflates her arguments, she never loses an argument whether right or wrong, and never stops, because she treats these arguments as a gender dominance issue rather than just a difference of opinion, which no doubt irked those in academia who made life unpleasant for her and apparently drove her to seek early retirement if one is to believe her. If you were to glance at her chart (which I haven't interpreted) you would see she is no stranger to conflict.

Anyway Tara I appreciated your posts on aggression and assertiveness. I even discussed them and agreed with them in the posts that Waybread deems to be flaming. They were conciliatory. Apparently you didn't read them either. Oh well.

I love that expression. 😊

Quote:

If I were Waybread I would not have reopened a previous argument in such a way that it was obvious to anyone who had been on that thread who she was referring to, and deliberately distorted what was said to read that that person believed she had a penis.

WB Quote:

In recent memory, one member frequently asserted that I was an animus-driven woman who wanted to be a man and had a penis

Do you think that everyone knows who she is referring to. Most people who frequented the thread will probably have forgotten (♃) that by now unless they themselves wrote it.

Also when one writes something that one stands 100% behind there is no reason and urge to dislike it being mentioned again somewhere else.

I took it as throwing something funny as entre into à thread. Nothing to take dead serious (♁).

Quote:

Take the banning of Juan Revilla aka Blanco for example, whom she hounded off one thread and trolled him on a new thread that he opened to avoid her, she weaponised his chart, and then complained to the moderators when he responded in frustration by working out her chart which she wouldn't reveal at that time. He got banned when it should have been her but the moderators had not followed her hounding of him which upset him deeply and simply applied her complaint that he outed her chart against her wish. That is one of the problems of being in a "second language" moderated forum. Subtleties are missed. ... He used that method to work out the meaning of new comets, centaurs, trans Neptunian bodies by looking at charts of famous people who had them partile conjunct their Sun. He was truly an astrological pioneer .

I read many threads in which he participated and I also downloaded his program (♁). I missed the part about him getting banned though. One can't read all the threads at all times.

Personally I disagreed with almost all his ideas (♃) but that is a different matter.

If I am reading you correct he posted her chart which she did not wanted to get posted and that got him banned (because it is against forum rules). You see it as some act of selfdefense. Can't really comment on it.

Quote:

Tara Quote:

In all that time I haven't even figured out what annoys her adversaries so much.

Ha ha ha. You know so little of what's gone on. You would probably need to be an English first language speaker to appreciate the way she flatters certain people to gain support, and conflates her arguments, she never loses an argument whether right or wrong, and never stops, because she treats these arguments as a gender dominance issue rather than just a difference of opinion, which no doubt irked those in academia who made life unpleasant for her and apparently drove her to seek early retirement if one is to believe her. If you were to glance at her chart (which I haven't interpreted) you would see she is no stranger to conflict.

As a non-english speaker I do miss some nuances of the english language (♃)indeed. That's something that will never be completely resolved. That being said I probably do notice a lot more than you think.

What I am asking is what really annoys you? I am sort of worried that an honest answer you and several others would give is that she is a feminist. 😊

The second answer could be that you see her as too domineering (♁). Personally I distinguish between 2 types of people. Type A is someone who writes a lot of posts, has own opinions and stands up to them which might antagonize others who have different opinions but is a decent person after all (no bully).

Type B is a tyrant (♁) , bully, narcissist who wants to be the Alpha dog (♁). He or she will do everything to be the leader including all sorts of manipulations. I don't see WB as Type B.

Please have a look at Dr. Les Carters other channel where he discribes Type B people very well. I would be happy to discuss with you in this matter.

Quote:

Anyway Tara I appreciated your posts on aggression and assertiveness. I even discussed them and agreed with them on the posts that Waybread deems to be flaming. Apparently you didn't read them either. Oh well

I did read all posts. Thanks for your comments on the videos. I am glad when something is helpful. Obviously most people find it difficult to be only assertive in their reactions and not fall into the traps of reacting aggressive (♁) instead. It's a learning process and with time and real effort progress can be made. I treat it as an ideal to be aimed at but try not to beat me or others up when that aim is missed. Our society is too focused on the wrong ways and teaches so much bad stuff (through a lot of violence in TV (♃) etc.) that it isn't easy to swim against the current.

I had a ♂ experience today. but took up for myself without aggressive behavior. no grudges.

when you have resentment and anger, grudges, you not expressing yourself well.

I do this a lot. Look at the other side and understand. I understood, but his behavior was rude and uncouth. a bad habit for me.☹

Tara Quote:

Do you think that everyone knows who she is referring to. Most people who frequented the thread will probably have forgotten that by now unless they themselves wrote it.

As I said, it is the depiction of herself as the victim that concerns me.

Tara Quote:

I took it as throwing something funny as entre into à thread. Nothing to take dead serious

That's what she wanted you to do. Nobody said she had a penis in a literal sense so that was a fiction, an exaggeration to disarm you by its ridiculousness. So you and other women would see her as the victim of some misogynist, anti feminist male.

Tara Quote:

Also when one writes something that one stands 100% behind there is no reason and urge to dislike it being mentioned again somewhere else.

Except that it was reopening and distorting an issue that got a thread closed by the moderators. She was not a victim then, and she isn't now. But you see her as a victim. That is why I identified myself, to set the record straight, not that I was concerned about being personally recognised. I don't care if you think we were both at fault, but it is a big mistake to perceive her a victim so well meaning people like yourself will jump to her aid. I know where that will lead in future arguments which will invariable occur with her. Let her fight her own battles. Not every argument between the opposite sexes has to be reduced to a feminist issue.

Tara Quote:

What I am asking is what really annoys you? I am sort of worried that an honest answer you and several others would give is that she is a feminist.

Really. You disappoint me. Do I come across as someone who attacks females or has a male must be dominant viewpoint? Or that women can't be bosses as well as men? But I'm not so blind as to think some women can't be just as "plutonic" in their behaviour as some men. Overall however I think women are more subtle, clever or cunning through the use of relationships than "most" men to the extent that they needed to be to balance the fact that men tend to be physically stronger.

Tara: Quote:

The second answer could be that you see her as too domineering (J). Personally I distinguish between 2 types of people. Type A is someone who writes a lot of posts, has own opinions and stands up to them which might antagonize others who have different opinions but is a decent person after all (no bully). Type B is a tyrant (J) , bully, narcissist who wants to be the Alpha dog (J). He or she will do everything to be the leader including all sorts of manipulations. I don't see WB as Type B.

Well I'm certainly not your type "B". Nor do I consider myself to be an Alpha male. I wouldn't be sitting at home indulging in astrology if that were true. I'd have the car, control the budget, dominate the house, allocate the income etc and probably be running a business now, none of which I do, nor desire.

Tara: Quote:

Please have a look at Dr. Les Carters other channel where he discribes Type B people very well. I would be happy to discuss with you in this matter.

WB's chart is really interesting. Ceres in Leo conjunct Pluto, i have this conjunct Mercury & ascendant. First house Neptune square Jupiter, so overblow beliefs, Capricorn not so good with ol Jupiter to begin with, but that don't mean Capricorn is incapable.

Sun, Venus & Mercury in Aquarius, i already know how her communication style is basing on my brother, the only separation is emotional self, her Moon is in opposite of his.

Ending moral, don't start fights you can't end WB.

Crazy how i intuited her placements, i was speaking of these placements and i have never once seen her chart, i just picked up on subtle behavior cues.

Then you came out with a serial killer who i hunted down the chart of which paints nothing on WB by the way, she is a separate person from that monster.

Might your Mars-in-Pisces sometimes "hide itself in the shadow", by giving the appearance of being a victim (as a mechanism for escaping confrontation or/and expressing anger openly/directly?)

Say what? I am not somehow a victim on this forum. Nasty personal attacks say far more about the attacker than they do about me. If I think what I write is correct, I stand by it, regardless.

However, I suspect that many people would feel victimized if they were the target of attacks similar to the ones lobbed at me. You'd almost think these people were trying to hurt my feelings or something. 😞

Quote:

That conjunction is actually a (5x5x2) 50th harmonic aspect ... with Sun-Uranus making a 32nd harmonic aspect, and Mars-Uranus making an exact (17x2) 34th harmonic aspect.

As you may already know, David Hamblin concluded (in The Spirit of Numbers) Seventeeness people "are often filled with anger about the way things are, and feel that this anger must find an outlet"; ... fiveness people may "become intolerant of people who do not see the world as they see it" ... and twoness people "are fighting to change the world"

Actually I really like harmonics, but in astrology I think you have to work with the majors before going on to the minors. Alternatively I note that the midpoint of my sun-Mars is pretty close to an exact trine with my ♃♁ MC.

Despite his pioneering work with the prime numbers, I don't see Hamblin as the best authority on harmonics because of his obvious biases and wide orbs. I much prefer the dynamic approach to harmonics in Harding and Harvey, Working With Astrology; or even David Cochrane's-- because he at least is working with large samples.

I have a copy of Hamblin's book, and looked up the 17H just now. I think you've cherry-picked, as well. To him, the main quality of 17H people is being rebels or revolutionaries who want to change society. Apparently being a humorist qualifies as being angry at society. 😞 If we leave out Romanian dictators and Scientologists, it might be reasonable to see his 17H sample as social critics. Of course, the problem with Hamblin is that all kinds of angry people and social change agents are not particularly motivated by the 17th harmonic.

But at this juncture, Taurus Five, I have to ask, what is your game plan here? Amateur psychologist? Why the focus on me?

Quote:

I do not see that elevenness in the "near enough" natal chart that you have previously posted on this forum. The aspects of the 17th harmonic series look much stronger to me.

I wasn't talking about harmonics! "Chords" or "keys," as I understand them, relate to a kind of conflation, by-the-numbers, of signs, houses, and planets. Normally I separate out signs and houses, but sometimes you do see a person where they seem to connect. Re: the 11th chord, I have ☾♀ ♀ in Aquarius, Uranus conjunct MC and in-aspect with sun, Mars, and Asc; and ☽ & ♀ in the 11th house.

With higher harmonics, I'd be cautious about using my "close enough" chart, because a degree or even a fraction of a degree off can change the harmonic. I modified my chart purposefully as a privacy safeguard, but it does preserve my chart structure pretty well. The 18th and 20th harmonics are probably about as close as I get to harmonic signatures. And they're pretty close to one another, degree-wise.

Quote:

That description does fit with elevenness - but seventeeness might be driving you to behave that way. And, if so, you might be driven more by your emotions than you currently believe yourself to be.

Are you not part of that movement? ... And might your 17th (and 23rd) harmonic aspects be what drove you to become a part of it?

I'm not part of any movement at present. I'm a senior living a quiet rural life in a rather remote part of the Canadian Rockies. I am a feminist, but not an activist.

Does anger bother you, such that you need to pick it apart in someone else?

Taurus Five, it would be really interesting to have a discussion with you about harmonics, but you're apparently deploying them from the perspective that I have a Big Problem that you want to analyse. I don't accept your basic premises; and am, in any case, unwilling to hijack this thread any further.

It's not about me.

You have an air of "i am Queen" pouting.

Perfection that you are not? it seems like a higher regard for one's self over others in light of just judgemental conjecture.

Hey, i am an asshole i will put my hand up and dance on one leg in a fashion. We have to face ourselves sometimes.

This is not an issue with your world view, or being a person who supports females, it's the distortion of what you believe that goes too far into other things which paints this image of a manipulative person.

Can you level with me here?

Do you think people judge you too harshly? do you see yourself as full of scruples?

I have no idea what motivates these people to launch repeated personal attacks. In a thread about anger, maybe they're simply trying to exemplify it. Given how long they've been on my case, however, I'd think they'd recognize that they're not going to change me. Possibly we're witnessing the triumph of hope over experience.

Not going to change you. "Leo Moon, emotional self + detachment from Aquarius stellium"

Hope in this case is weaponized to hurt others, to sway the tide.

Not going to change you is weakness in the face of strength and admittance.

Tara, thanks again.

Code_Veronica-- and to anyone else interested,

I can't help it if other people want to turn this thread into a discussion about me. I didn't ask for it. Be that as it may, what I write here may unleash the entire fire-storm.

I think most of the forum old-timers know that I am a retired academic. I actually don't care to talk about it much, precisely because of the kind of negative push-back it fosters. But neither do I think I need to change myself in order to become acceptable to other people of different backgrounds. To me, that would seem like patronizing people.

I don't say the following out of any sense of hubris, believe me. I'm not anybody's teacher here, and nobody here is my student. People's own life experiences are just as valuable as mine. But I don't know how else to become more understandable.

I may stick out in this forum, but not in the world from which I came. In that world, people are in the analysis business. We evaluate merits and problems. This is typically called criticism: not in the sense of negative fault-finding, but in the sense of appraisal.

People in colleges and universities critique ideas all the time. Faculty members' days are spent on this, in one way or another. We grade student papers and presentations. We write book reviews. We act as juries on manuscripts submitted for publication, fellowship applications, and grant proposals. We conduct oral exams on graduate student theses, called a defense. When we become senior enough, we evaluate more junior colleagues' applications for tenure and promotion. We serve on hiring committees to determine the most qualified candidates. Oftentimes new research is conducted to correct some kind of problem with past research. We give papers at conferences and field questions-- often critical-- from audience members. We analyse developments in our field over the lunch table and in the corridors. This is a partial list.

In short, we do not read ideas uncritically. We ask questions like, is this piece of writing as good as it could be? Is this reasoning sound?

Some disciplines engage in critiques far more than mine did, such as juried architecture student projects, or mock trials in law schools.

I've been happily retired for 11 years now, but this is still how I think. I' am married to a retired professor, and this is how he thinks. So did most of my friends when I was working. We read books that engage with ideas. We watch news analyses on television. I read editorials on my news apps.

Obviously, few people on an astrology Internet forum want or expect, let alone come from, this kind of mentality. But I fail to see why I should become inauthentic merely to become acceptable to anonymous flammers on an Internet forum.

Of course, when I was working I had to stay within boundaries of appropriate decorum. Now that I am retired, I feel that I can say more honestly what I think. This offends some people.

But I have no other ulterior motive than a passion about astrology and some of the other topics we get into on this forum. If someone's idea is sound, it will easily withstand criticism. If someone's idea has flaws, then criticism can be used to strengthen it and make it more valid.

So far as the Julian Assange thread goes, it was apparently intended as a love-in for Australians. I presented a less flattering, American view of Assange, and also many facts, linked court documents, and original charts.

Flaming BTW, is typically a frontal personal attack, but it also takes the form of gaslighting or disingenuous passive-aggressive behavior.

I have my own theories about my most persistent critics, but I'd better stop now.

Afternoon Sun, just two things, as I did scan some of your exchange with Tara.

I've told you this previously, I think twice before.

I did not "hound" Juan off the forum. He was banned by the administrator for seriously breaking a forum rule. He did this, so far as I can make out, to punish me for having the temerity to disagree with him on some astrological point or other. It might have been about him trying to get clients to break down emotionally during his consultations, I forget.

At that time, I did not post my chart and did not want it posted. I finally did post what I call my "close enough" chart, in part because of people trying to post it or guess it. But this was after the episode with Juan.

BTW, while I greatly appreciate Tara's support, I did nothing to solicit it. I don't view the forum as a place to organize little bands of mutual supporters. If I agree with someone or think s/he wrote something praiseworthy, I will say so.

I do wonder if the title of this thread should have been called,

"Where is anger on this forum"

There seems to be a lot more of character assassinations flying around, as well as drudging up the past, regarding previous members being banned, or 'driven off'rather than an actual astrological conversation about anger in a chart. The ones that are, get buried amongst the debating amongst each other.

Maybe it's worth taking a peek at the transits for the forum chart itself, rather intriguing

If you are talking about anger on the forum, you can see ♂ sandwiched between ♁ and ♃, all in ♋, and in the 7H

1H and 7H tends to be about projection (also mentioned in the OP)

♂ = the anger, arguments, conflicts, in a Fixed sign, so it's sustained, people are more inclined to defend their own views without swaying, or giving in, not budging on an opinion

♁ = old wounds - many individual threads generally started are centred on unresolved issues, wounds, and given it's placement in 7H, mostly romantic relationships and heartbreaks. People do seem very open about them. On here it could be about ongoing wounds stemming from previous arguments (♂)

♃ = can be about the projection, after all it is unclear to see the true story, as it's all online. We can't see facial expressions, or hear tone of voice, or observe body language. We don't even know what we look like! Not many people post their own face as their avatar, so we can't put a name to a face. Therefore, what could be a benign or innocent statement can be misconstrued as a deliberate attack - 7H also rules open enemies too

Now onto transits

See the recent Solar Eclipse and ♃ in shadow, plus ♂♁, all bunched up in the 12H, which rules hidden enemies. Or perceived and even imagined enemies. ♁ covers most of the 12H so it makes sense that attacks can get personal, or be taken personally, or can be emotive. As mentioned before, drudging up past arguments, events (members leaving), resurrecting old grievances, using each other's natal placements as a form of attack, again rendering it personal

On a lighter note, the moderators are clearly 1H ♃♁ ... Forum Admin profile even has a lion as their avatar! (I reckon the timing of the forum launch was actually planned, also given it's an Equinox chart too!)

Also wondering how the ♃ transit is affecting the ♃♀ conjunction 😬 nothing springs to mind yet that I've observed on here.

No, I don't look like a traumatised penguin!

Good analysis Penguin, Uranus conj Moon and Venus too can be read in this thread: altered emotional states, troubles with women, a desire for emotional/sexual stirring, breaking free from routine. In tenth house: matters of personal recognition.

But this is no excuse for what's going on.

I hope that the people who engaged in the last 10 pages of boastings and personal attacks realize that their own behavior comes off as childish and disturbing for the people who come here to discuss astrology.

Use your Mars better.

It would be interesting if people know the differences between Mars & Pluto, or is it coloured by self? 😊

Attaching natal chart for easy reference.

1. I am NOT revengful
2. I do NOT have anger fits
3. I do NOT attack people for kick

1.: If I sense malignant, provoking intentions, I cut your nasty tongue in two and then simply sweep you out of my way

2.: I express my own ideas and certainly do not let opponents silence me

3.: I can become vehement if you try and arrogantly drill your own points of view into my brains

If a intellectually- honest issue arises, I express my own point of view, listen to yours, discuss about it and am even ready to accept I am wrong and excuse myself and change my idea on the subject, then forget about it. And that's it.

Those confrontations, if and when in the end I find myself in my own right, will usually, merely make me leave certain persons alone and possibly, behind.

Mars in Water sign, Air house, Air cuspid

Moon in Cap, Earth house, squaring a Sun in Fire sign, although mitigated by being in 4th house=Cancer/Water

Mercury in Earth sign, Fire house, squaring Jup, chart ruler, in Fire sign, Water cuspid, Water house.

I'm not sure what anyone's 'academic' background has to do with an astrology forum. 😊

The academic/scientific world scoffs & laughs at people who study astrology. They often demean people of faith too. What cannot be proven can be derided by them so academia & astrology are contradicting subjects. The best astrologers I know are pretty smart & may or may not have formal education. Their education is in astrology. 😊

So your ♂♃ passive energy tries to attempt to belittle members who 'don't quite get it' because they are not 'intelligent' is both inaccurate & insulting at the same time.

We know you will never change WB. your numerous fixed planets reveal that. But this is about ♂ and how it operates in a chart. I thought ♃ 5 postings was incredibly insightful with no attacking or malignancy involved. He was merely asking you to look at your own ♂♃ energy, particular because it's in aspect with malefic ♄. This is typical of holding ♂ anger internally & not being able to release it in a 'healthy' way.

♂♃ works very much like ♂♄, my own planetary position. I used to hold anger/grudges inside me when I didn't have the tools/knowledge of what to do with it. I would seethe, make myself sick with stomach problems (I thought I had a stomach ulcer at age 20 as I ate Tums morning/noon/night!). Lucky for me, it makes a beautiful aspect to ♃♄ & I was very competitive swimmer.

Also, very creative back then, constantly painting, drawing, writing. Any ♂ in water element is always going to handle things in a more emotional way than those with earth/fire/air. But it's how we 'emote' and how we 'express' our anger & aggression that always needs to be 'checked'. It took me over 20 yrs to forgive someone from my childhood. ♂♄ doesn't forgive easily & never forgets.

And with ♄ in the mix, you must always be on guard that you don't dissolve those ♃ feelings in a passive yet hostile way.

And your comment about the Assange thread is completely erroneous. Just because members don't support your narrative of him, you must 'attack' them in that subtle ♃ way you like to do. Firstly, Australia has not shown any support for Assange, being a strong ally to the US gov't. Secondly, I would refute your claim that the majority of members posting there are Australians. Although how would you know that? I'm certainly not Australian, never even visited as I could never handle such a long flight unless it was a private plane.

And I know 2 astro pals of mine who were banned from the forum because they disagreed with you, one from the Carl Jung thread where your hatred of that man & dismissal of his ideas is only matched by your ♄ hate of Assange now. She was a very good person & I was so sad to see her go, along with the other person from another thread that was closed down. 😊

CV has made some very good comments, really enjoying reading his posts. He has said basically that 'judging' or criticizing a person's chart is not bullying or abuse. Or can we never talk about shadow aspects? Malefic energies? I thought this was a learning forum for astrology, not telling us over & over again that you are the 'smartest person in the room'. 😊

I watched the Netherlands beat Sweden yesterday in a very exciting match & now they face the USA on Sunday. It was very entertaining but I wouldn't call these women 'brave' as WB posts. They are engaging in a ♂ sport that brings them happiness. But you know who is brave?
Firefighters, paramedics, police. All ♂ occupations who put their lives on the line each day to make this a safer place. (the majority anyways, there are bad apples everywhere).

Luis Alvarez, a police detective in NY exemplifies this ♂ courage/energy as he searched for bodies after 9/11 & died from cancer from the toxic site.
RIP Luis, you will be awarded a Medal of Courage on the other side.

Mr. Alvarez, 53, died on Saturday from complications of colorectal cancer, just weeks after he, alongside the comedian and activist Jon Stewart, pleaded with lawmakers at a congressional hearing to replenish the September 11th Victim Compensation Fund.

Really. You disappoint me. Do I come across as someone who attacks females or has a male must be dominant viewpoint? Or that women can't be bosses as well as men?

No, you don't come across like that. I think you are a very emancipated male who treats females equal to males in his personal life. On the other hand I also got the impression (which could be wrong) that you don't feel at ease with the feminist movement maybe because you project something onto it like females are hostile against males.

In reality it is really more about males and females working together to achieve equality of the genders and nothing anti-male.

I also wonder if you get how much destruction the patriarchy has caused to females (and males) and that there is still a lot of inequality even in western societies. Many males seem to take that lightly but as a lot of black people already said: if you haven't been in that situation you won't know what it feels like (the daily discrimination, unequal payment in many jobs etc.).

When someone stands up for feminism it should be supported and not fought against IMO.

Quote:

But I'm not so blind as to think some women can't be just as "plutonic" in their behaviour as some men

I completely agree with you. In my job and elsewhere I came across enough women who were tyrannical (♁, ♀) and ruthless to realize that these types can be as common in males as in females.

Quote:

Well I'm certainly not your type "B". Nor do I consider myself to be an Alpha male. I wouldn't be sitting at home indulging in astrology if that were true. I'd have the car, control the budget, dominate the house, allocate the income etc and probably be running a business now, none of which I do, nor desire.

I never thought of you as an Alpha male (♁) type (see above). Not sure where you got that idea from.

Quote:

Quote:

Tara: Quote:

Please have a look at Dr. Les Carters other channel where he describes Type B people very well. I would be happy to discuss with you in this matter.

Why not look at both our charts and make an astrological decision and picture in your mind how each might work irrespective of our genders.

I neither consider you or Waybread as Type B.

I have looked at many charts in the past to figure out how to spot narcissism (Type B) in a chart. I came to the conclusion that one can't find it by looking at charts.

It has to do with the level of consciousness of an individual and that itself depends on childhood upbringing, past lives (if one believes in reincarnation which I do) and all sorts of other influences. The level of consciousness (♃) can not be seen in a chart.

Even twins (born at almost the same time) can have very different personalities because both are two individual souls with a different history.

Let's take two people with ♂ opposite ♁. One lives his life in a constant struggle with others, stirring fights and tries to win at all cost - making life for everyone around miserable. That could be one expression for that aspect.

The other person has worked out how to blend the two planets together well and acts with a lot of stamina and responsibility in a very mature way. No senseless fights with others.

Some things can't be figured out by looking at charts.

I had a similar thought and looked at the chart yesterday. Transit uranus conjunct ♃♀ of forum - a new beginning concerning emotions and relationships? 😞

I did notice that Transit ♄ squares the MC/IC and I think that is stirring up all sorts of old unresolved issues.

Pluto in disharmonic aspect can also unleash mighty forces that persecute scapegoats. I am convinced that what happened in Nazigermany was the work of pluto (on the planetary level).

Not to be forgotten the solar eclipse 2 days ago. I am not surprised that this brings light on shadow stuff and interactions got heated.

I see my anger has turned stone-cold over the years. Today unexpectedly the landlord came up to tell me that he was selling the place and people would be coming by to look at it. There's been a lot of his lies and weaseling in the past, 7 years here and 2 years at a precious place. When he was done taking I said nothing, went inside and shut the door on him. Because it does not matter any more.

That's your interpretation. I see someone who went to some length in that post (♀) to make shure that others don't feel belittled and I think she did it well. If you feel small when you read her post it could be worthwhile to do some self-analyzes. There is so much stuff that people project (♃) onto others everyday which belongs to them. I think we all do that.

Oh well. I wouldn't say "no malignancy involved". To analyze (♃) someones chart in different threads (♀) always selectively pointing to something negative or find the most negative expression of harmonic aspects of that same persons chart is something I would not call benign. I noticed that when people acted in much more harmless ways to you in that fashion you were calling them stalker (♄) etc. and did not seem much amused about it.

And your comment about the Assange thread is completely erroneous. Just because members don't support your narrative of him, you must 'attack' them in that subtle I way you like to do. Firstly, Australia has not shown any support for Assange, being a strong ally to the US gov't. Secondly, I would refute your claim that the majority of members posting there are Australians. Although how would you know that? I'm certainly not Australian, never even visited as I could never handle such a long flight unless it was a private plane.

I pretty much see it the same way. Of course not everyone participating in the Assange thread is australian but the vast majority is. They seem to see him as a hero (☺) and don't want to hear anything negative about him. No one will blame them for it but it is a open thread where everyone can participate. Some people do see some darker sides (♄) to Assange and want that to be known as well. In a civilized discussion (♀) such criticism should be tolerated without trying to put the other down (♃). Right? 😊

I had a similar thought and looked at the chart yesterday. Transit uranus conjunct ♃♀ of forum - a new beginning concerning emotions and relationships? 😊

I did notice that Transit ♃ squares the MC/IC and I think that is stirring up all sorts of old unresolved issues.

Pluto in disharmonic aspect can also unleash mighty forces that persecute scapegoats.
I am convinced that what happened in Nazigermany was the work of pluto (on the planetary level).

Not to be forgotten the solar eclipse 2 days ago. I am not surprised that this brings light on shadow stuff and interactions got heated.

Good spot! I didn't see the ♃ square the ♃MC in the forum chart!

That would make sense though, dredging up old issues, especially linked to dominance in some form, or what is being perceived as dominance by fellow members

Could also mean that the mods are probably taking a stricter line (♃) with members here, less tolerance for anyone they deem as trolling.

Let's see what happens when the upcoming Lunar Eclipse at 24°♃ also makes the same square to the MC

Interesting thoughts from you and Roland303 on the ♃ conjunct forum ♃♀, will ponder on that one a bit more

Tara Quote:

In reality it is really more about males and females working together to achieve equality of the genders and nothing anti-male.

I also wonder if you get how much destruction the patriarchy has caused to females (and males) and that there is still a lot of inequality even in western societies. Many males seem to take that lightly but as a lot of black people already said: if you haven't been in that situation you won't know what it feels like (the daily discrimination, unequal payment in many jobs etc.).

When someone stands up for feminism it should be supported and not fought against IMO.

It depends what is meant by feminism. How should we accommodate our Mars function in society and does it differ between biological male and female? Tbh Tara I hate the idea of both patriarchy or matriarchy. Both concepts seem to me to be prejudicial, and used to favour one gender over another. It is a bit like the battle between left and right in politics. I think both extremes create problems.

Are gender-blind hierarchies feasible or are there inherent differences between the sexes that will show up even if we had a level playing field at the start? Is it really a good thing to try and feminise boys? We now know even rhesus monkeys as well as baby chimpanzees show gender differences with toys, male baby monkeys prefer toys with wheels while female baby monkeys prefer cuddling dolls.

<https://www.newscientist.com/article/dn13596-male-monkeys-prefer-boys-toys/>

Personally I really dislike the push against our nature by some idealistic social reconstructionists. Wishful thinking is not a good substitute for reality. Whatever system we support must be appropriate to our inherent biological needs or it will result in a neurotic generation. But we do need to find constructive ways to express male Mars energy to reduce the amount of violence against women. Perhaps it has to do with male self worth, validating them rather than feminisation of males which I see as harmful and counter productive.

Equal pay is obviously feasible when jobs are clearly defined and paid by the hour, such as done through union agreements. However if you earn above a union negotiated hourly rate then you are dealing with individually negotiated pay and that is not so much a matter of gender but of your market value and what you or your "headhunter" can negotiate for you.

If you are talking about the top jobs then you are only talking about a relatively few highly talented or skilled people who are prepared to sacrifice for their career. Good luck to them, male or female, it is very tough at the top and very few people can cope with it. I am not qualified to decide what someone should be allowed to earn if they run a country, or a major international company, or invent new technology.

I have no problem with the Bezos of the world being super wealthy if they use their money to further humanity, such as providing a platform for humans to move into space as Bezos is doing. We can't rely on governments and tax funds to do that as efficiently, someone has to provide the infrastructure and it seems we have a generation of entrepreneurs willing to create a better world and open new horizons. I like that Bill Gates pours hundreds of millions of dollars into medical research. That Richard Branson is helping fund more economical ways into space. We need entrepreneurs like that. I wonder where the women entrepreneurs are? I am sure there some but we don't hear enough about them.

It does concern me that we have inequalities that can be defined by race or gender. The issue to me is to understand the reasons and to look at what can be done to ameliorate the problems. Equal pay for equal work is a no brainer when we are able to define a job or hourly rate so gender and race are no factors.

What if a racially defined group of people are marginalised by their lack of income, education, or family background (basic language and behavioural skills not equipping them to cope with a work culture that is beyond their experience and thus alien to them)? Is it essentially much different for them than it is for those of the dominant culture's poor working class who may also lack opportunity and the behaviour, appropriate manners or culture, intelligence or family upbringing to compete equally?

I do know what it is like to go for dozens of interviews and not get work for months. To actually change countries to get work adequate to pay my mortgage and support my family with young kids. In my youth I also spent a year during a recession, where I could only get menial labouring jobs, or sell encyclopedias door to door which was very difficult. But it helped toughen me mentally and prepare me for the vagaries of working in advertising.

Should people be denied the right to use private education and be forced to only use state education so as to create a level playing field? Is it actually possible to create a level playing field? Would private funding be lost to society, or simply spent on overseas education. I am not a believer in social reconstructionism if it seeks to reduce your potential, dictate limits or restrictions on people based on sex; or interfere with people's inherent biology to achieve political ends - that is as bad as Hitler's eugenics.

So you think that member 'K' who came on this forum & immed starting 'checking' out my posts to figure out my chart (from a grudge she holds from months back) & then wrote nasty comments to 'back up' her version of my chart (which she doesn't have) is the same as a member asking a simple question to WB about the possible shadow side of ♀♃? 🙄

From WB chart which she has posted on this forum numerous times.

I ignored 'K' until she tried to have posters banned, including myself, because she doesn't like them. I never once complained about her but I confronted her & she backed off & became an ex-member. I don't think you can equate a vindictive ♁ stalker like that to ♃ 5 discussing astrology. He certainly wasn't rude or bullying. This is an astrology forum & are we now never to talk about the negatives of a planet/aspect & how it might manifest? 🙄

I still don't understand the comment about Australians. Even if the majority are on the Assange thread, so what? Perhaps they have a better understanding since he's from their country? Please tell me who has posted on that thread that has been attacked for having an opposing view? WB? Her ♃ hatred of Assange goes far deeper than astrology. I won't discuss it any further as I don't want the thread closed down but it just might be that there is actually a majority of support for him which WB refuses to acknowledge & tries to belittle his supporters over & over again because only she knows what the ♃ truth is!

Talking about feminists, Naomi Wolf has written about the case & how it diminishes real victims of rape. She supports Assange 100%.

so I guess she's just another deluded 'fan' too! 🙄🙄🙄

Peace out.

I guess you are just numb now from all the abuse he has put you through. I wouldn't pay one more penny in rent if I were you, he's not going to evict you & even if he does, it could take months. The place will be sold by then & they will kick you out so they can jack up the rents. Save all the money from not paying rent to find a nice place to live. 😊

There seems to be a lot more of character assassinations flying around, as well as dredging up the past, regarding previous members being banned, or 'driven off'rather than an actual astrological conversation about anger in a chart. The ones that are, get buried amongst the debating amongst each other.

Also wondering how the ♃ transit is affecting the ♃♀ conjunction 🤔 nothing springs to mind yet that I've observed on here.
.....
Forum chart with transits attached:

As I see it - how Uranus (cold even icy detachment) works on the moon (nurturing) and Venus (relating through charm) - it comes over as criticising since it doesn't resonate with the qualities of the two being transited.

The criticism is detached, but illicit anger in those who don't hear it objectively.

If you are talking about anger on the forum, you can see ♃ sandwiched between ♂ and ♃, all in ♋, and in the 7H

I was thinking about individual internationally scattered members here on the forum, not the Swiss based Astrodienst forum itself. The only commonality here is free membership of a discussion forum for astrology. Individuals are expressing anger, not the forum.

I did think about how I wanted to frame the topic and I asked about anger in a chart...since we all do have a chart and this is the general and psychological section...and since that seemed the only way to have individuals consider their own expression.

"Where is anger on this forum?" is a different topic, not giving any personal responsibility to members here...nor asking them to look at their own charts to consider the patterns and repetitions they enact or act out and the repeated anger plays. Strategies would be personal and repeated in life contexts not only the forum. People repeatedly inappropriately expressing anger here would have a history of that, repeating, and may be aware of it from feedback if they were open to hearing it.

Would anyways be well worth exploring the forum's chart and it's present transits ...maybe worth another thread?

Yes it differs. Males have much more testosterone and that creates differences between the sexes. Testosterone is connected to aggression (♂) and sex drive (♂) for instance as far as I know. I am not an expert in this field.

Quote:

Tbh Tara I hate the idea of both patriarchy or matriarchy. Both concepts seem to me to be prejudicial, and used to favour one gender over another. It is a bit like the battle between left and right in politics. I think both extremes create problems.

Agreed. To favor one gender over the other is wrong. I travelled (♃) a lot in my life and did come across matriarchal societies once in a while (they are very rare). Although on the first look appearing pleasantly different from the norm on the second look they are also bad IMO. Seeing males having disadvantages or mistreated by females gives me as much discomfort as the other way round. I did notice though that the level of equality between the sexes was much higher in matriarchal societies as vice versa.

Quote:

Are gender-blind hierarchies feasible or are there inherent differences between the sexes that will show up even if we had a level playing field at the start? Is it really a good thing to try and feminise boys?

I don't believe in boys getting feminised but children of both sexes should be able to choose freely with which toys they want to play or how to express themselves regardless of their gender.

From what I hear from parents (♁) though is that there is a lot of pressure on kids to conform to the traditional roles (♁) by society. As we know when looking at charts some females have an emphasis of planets in more masculine signs or boys in more feminine signs. Traditionally they will have to go against their nature in order to fit in.

Quote:

But we do need to find constructive ways to express male Mars energy to reduce the amount of violence against women. Perhaps it has to do with male self worth, validating them rather than feminisation of males which I see as harmful and counter productive.

Male violence (♂) against woman has a lot to do with the patriarchy. It's often a way to establish dominance (♁). That needs to get eradicated.

In addition if people get taught healthy ways of expressing their anger instead of bombarding them with wrong ways (huge exposure to violence through TV etc.) the amount of violence (♂) against woman and children (♃) would reduce even further.

Quote:

I have no problem with the Bezos of the world being super wealthy if they use their money to further humanity, such as providing a platform for humans to move into space as Bezos is doing. I like that Bill Gates pours hundreds of millions of dollars into medical research. That Richard Branson is helping fund more economical ways into space.

I do have a problem with the super wealthy because their existence points straight to the gap between rich and poor. A few of them do something good with their money by investing it in solving problems in society although I suspect the main reason of the majority of that few (not all of them) is more due to tax reasons than anything else.

I also have a problem with humanities endeavour into space like the Mars (♂) mission. We have almost destroyed life on our planet and I don't like to have us spreading out into space and doing damage to other planets too. I can already see us in a first step bringing our radioactive and other waste to Mars in order to solve our problems which we can't take care of on our planet and think we can get rid of by outsourcing them. (♃). 😞

Quote:

I wonder where the women entrepreneurs are? I am sure there some but we don't hear enough about them.

Well there aren't many super rich woman. Their number is very small compared to that of super rich males.

Quote:

Should people be denied the right to use private education and be forced to only use state education so as to create a level playing field? Is it actually possible to create a level playing field?

That's socialism (♃) what you are thinking of and has nothing to do with equality between people. We are all individuals (♁) with a different skill set etc. and that should be acknowledged. In a just society people would not be discriminated against in the work force (♁) (or anywhere else) because of gender, color of skin, sexual orientation etc. because these are factors that have nothing to do with how well equipped they are for the work that is offered by an employer for instance (unless the work needs someone with a lot of physical strength which are usually more common in males or other exceptions).

I haven't noticed any exchange between you and K before this thread. Could you give the links? Otherwise I am not able to comment on your claims.

I do not consider any talk about the shadow sides of σ^7 in X in relation with WB as innocent conversation. The intentions behind that should be clear to anyone by now.

When it is done by a whole bunch of people with the aim of hurting a certain individual it can become rather dangerous.

Somehow I get a picture in my mind. In a newspaper in the 30ies in germany there are several authors who discuss the shadow sides of the jews.

That's so innocent. Some years later most of the jews are dead. Oops, how did that happen? (Anyway that's just something playing in my mind atm.).

Criticism here and there is fine but stalking (P) someone through several threads like Taurus 5 and some others have done with always pointing to the negatives of WB is not IMO.

I wonder if I ever seen you treat any criticism of you by someone else lightly. If it did happen I must have missed it.

Deep held grudges with someone should be tried to resolve in private via PM IMO.

Exactly. Now that i take a closer look I even notice that the main attacks (σ^7) were coming from you.

You were calling her angry (σ^7) many times for instance. Must be similar to telling me to Peace out. I am actually feeling rather relaxed and I did not see anger in WB's long rational on the topic posts in the Assange thread.

I hope that you don't have (another) projection going on here with your σ^7 in S .

From transits of mars to my moon I remember getting angry (σ^7) especially on the day of exactitude. My brother has $\text{D}\square\sigma^7$ and is angry very often.

Must be difficult to have mars permanently in the sign of the moon as with σ^7 in S .

Quote:

I did not see WB belittle anyone there. Btw. truth is jupiter and not saturn. I know you stick to that stubbornly but it doesn't become true (J) that way.

Quote:

What does that tell us? One feminist supports Assange. Now we know that Assange is completely innocent.

Where is anger in a chart. I think most of us already agree that it is mars in a sign, also his aspects and the sign aries primarily.

My mars is in M in the 8th house. Mars in virgo (at least with me) is not angered often. If it happens I try to analyze (M) the situation and find the best solution in the most efficient way (M) to resolve it.

The 8th house is about trying to get to the bottom of an issue. In order to resolve problems one needs to get to the core of it instead of only scratching the surface again and again (in civil ways).

I also put a lot of effort into figuring out 8th house topics like death (reincarnation, near death experience etc.), abuse etc.

(F). Roll Eyes

Tara I enjoy having a civil exchange of views with you. While I don't agree with everything you say, I don't feel the need to debate most of it. However this being a Mars thread I think it appropriate to support a constructive pioneering expression of Mars (σ^7) which is a better use of its energies than anger. So I just couldn't let your quoted view pass without comment.

Don't you realise space is full of radiation already? The Sun is a continuous series of giant nuclear explosions pumping out radiation and miniscule compared to some other stars whose radiation permeates the universe. Earth is inhabitable because we have a magnetic field creating a radiation belt that protects us.

Even the giant planet Jupiter pumps out massive amounts of radiation enough to fry unshielded electronics in passing space probes and would make human colonies on its moons highly risky if even possible.

Mars has no magnetic field to block solar radiation. We could hardly make a difference to radiation on the surface which is already severe enough to wipe out unshielded life.

We would also be unlikely to even want to send spent radioactive waste into space for fear of rocket failures that could spread it throughout our atmosphere, and even if we did it would be sent into the Sun rather than onto planets like Mars.

Life on earth as we know it could be wiped out by one large asteroid hitting us, and this has already occurred many times to earth in the past. We need to "master" space to ensure humanities' survival.

The main "pollution" issue we have with sending landers to Mars is that we may make it difficult to tell if any microbes we discover there originated on Mars or came off our Mars landers. So it is more a matter of keeping Mars clean of minute amounts of earth "contamination" until we have had the opportunity to scientifically test if Mars has its own living microbes surviving beneath the surface protected from solar and other space radiation. As a result every Mars lander goes through rigorous cleansing to remove any contamination before it is launched.

The kind of fearful thinking your comment implies is simply erroneous and is based on ignorance. Unlike Elon Musk (another space pioneer), Bezos doesn't even want to colonise Mars, instead he thinks it smarter to build floating "cities" in space using the raw materials from the asteroids which are essentially just chunks of rock: minerals ice and dust, and utilise the massive amounts of free energy permeating our solar system from the Sun. But that requires having some infrastructure in space, starting by using the Moon's surface. We don't need to pollute earth's unique life supporting atmosphere by heavy industry manufacturing here.

Earth is finite and tiny. We need to protect it. Click on this link and watch Jeff Bezos personally present his plans and discuss why we need to go beyond earth, and how he suggests we do it.

Taurus5, I just got a PM from someone saying that you are actually the former EJ.

EJ was banned, so do you want to come clean and honestly admit or deny your most recent incarnations on this forum?

I will say that your effort to weasel out of me a self-condemning confession is exactly the kind of thing that EJ used to do.

Tara, I appreciate your clear-- and persistent-- analyses.

Back to the topic: Is it OK for women to express anger?

<https://www.forbes.com/sites/janicegassam/2018/09/11/are-women-allowed-to-be-angry-in-the-workplace/#17538219118f>

<https://www.psychologytoday.com/us/blog/he-speaks-she-speaks/201805/anger-men-and-women-same-emotion-different-expression>

Men who get angry in the workplace are perceived as having higher status. Angry women are perceived as having lower status.

I think some people, male and female, have problems with what they see as subversion of "natural" and "essential" gendered behaviours. But most of this is due to cultural conditioning, not DNA. The evidence for this is precisely in the diversity of cultures still visible today around the globe; cultures that were far more distinctively different in the past prior to westernization.

Society has long had nasty, vulgar names for women who seem too dominant, or merely unafraid to express their opinions. Many societies implemented massive, punitive sanctions against women's choices about their sexual relations-- and then claimed that males were "naturally" the randier sex. Many societies denied women access to educations and more prestigious well-paying work, and then claimed that women were unqualified, if not incapable.

(Please don't get me started on Jordan Peterson.)

While the traditional men's reactivation to "liberated" women seems the more understandable, there are also calculi for women. "Traditional Teresa" has invested her life in being properly domesticated, visually pleasing, and in gaining men's approval, by way of obtaining her security and status. When Autonomous Anna roles up, her very presence seems to dismiss what Teresa worked so hard for-- and may even have mastered. Anna appears-- however inadvertently-- as an invalidation of how Theresa has run her entire life.

Astrologically, I see the dwarf planet Eris playing a huge role in the recent upsurge of women in athletics, the #MeToo movement, and women in grass-roots politics. (A majority of representatives in the Colorado state legislature are now female.) I don't see Eris as the natural ruler of Libra, ushering in a new era of peace, as some astrologers do, but rather as signifying the woman warrior.

Anger is a normal reaction to many ordinary aspects of life. A close friend is one of the mildest-tempered people one could ever meet-- and a true Christian. Yet she related how recently, she scolded a mother for letting her baby get sunburned, and not putting a hat on the child. This type of anger isn't vicious or destructive. Hopefully it saved a helpless child some future health problems.

(Which doesn't validate squabbling on an Internet forum.)

Quite so. Mr father took the same attitude to sunburn. In the second world war it was a punishable offence for NZ soldiers in the Egyptian desert to get sunburnt. There is no particular gender relevance here, just common sense.

In Sydney it is illegal to leave dog droppings on the footpaths. One is expected to take a bag with you and pick up your dog's droppings. Most people do. Today a woman walking two dogs let one poop in front of our house where we walk and my wife keeps a small street garden. The dog walker thought nobody was watching and started to walk away leaving a large poo. My wife was cleaning the upstairs balcony and I heard her call out to her to pick it up. The woman called back: "No I don't want to." She had a doggy bag but walked off leaving it there. My wife is quite extrovert being a Moon ♂ Pluto rising in Leo and determined having them ♃♃ in ♍, and came down the stairs and said to me. "I'm going to have some fun with that woman."

Then she took off up the footpath after her. She caught up to her at a trendy café where lots of people were sitting at tables on the footpath (inner city) and asked the woman to go back and remove her dog poo. The woman refused so my wife addressed the coffee drinkers and said this woman has left her dog poo outside our gate and refuses to pick it up. The woman was embarrassed and took off while the coffee drinkers laughed and congratulated my wife for telling her off. The woman had two dogs and just up the road the second dog pooped on the footpath right outside an inner city school as the parents were picking up their kids. My wife caught up to the woman and told her again to pick up her dog poo much to the amusement and agreement of the parents and children, who endorsed my wife. This time the woman did remove the second dog poo. (I didn't see it but got the story when my wife returned exhilarated). What made it even funnier was my wife asked the woman to go back and remove the first lot of dog poo. She wouldn't so my wife continued to follow her up the road where she was met by the dog owner outside a large apartment block. The woman was a dog walker doing it for the money, so my wife told the dog owner what had happened then left the dog walker to deal with the owner. My wife arrived home quite exhilarated, having had the best morning.

I don't know if any of you have ever had dog poo walked through your house but it is really awful, especially if it gets onto carpet. But there are lots of dogs in our suburb and I love that my wife is comfortable expressing her feelings publicly in these sorts of situations, and in a way that onlookers get a laugh out of it too. It doesn't pay to mess with my wife 😊

PS I forgot to mention I was going to go after my wife to make sure she didn't get into trouble, and I was so busy trying to see her ahead of me, weaving through walking people, that I stepped into another dog poo and had to go back and hose my shoe. My wife thought that was hilarious!

Waybread,

If at 70, you still haven't come to terms with how things used to be when growing up, feminism hasn't been of much help to you?

Several years younger, I grew up in pretty much the same era, and neither I nor my friends grew up in a world such as you often describe. We were not discouraged from speaking our minds nor receiving first class educations nor pursuing our chosen professions. This tells me that whatever burdens and restrictions you experienced were less societal and more familial and/or personal.

An Erisian moral to the tale I believe is - 'to be careful what you focus your attention on.'

Afternoon Sun,

I've been known to just pick it up in a bag and empty it on the poopetrators doorstep.... Leo Sun, Scorpio Moon here. So good for your wife! The most powerful influence to good in this world is action, not words alone - this I would say is key to Mars. Not a wonder that social media are spilling over with unabated, frustrated anger. But as for real world and workplace environments, an angry loud mouth is an angry loud mouth by any standard - frowned upon and not tolerated - male or female. Good way to find yourself sitting in an anger management class.

Back to the topic: Is it OK for women to express anger?

Not so much. These articles are from the business magazine Forbes and Psychology Today, not from some lefty feminists.
<https://www.forbes.com/sites/janicegassam/2018/09/11/are-women-allowed-to-be-angry-in-the-workplace/#17538219118f>
<https://www.psychologytoday.com/us/blog/he-speaks-she-speaks/201805/anger-men-and-women-same-emotion-different-expression>

Men who get angry in the workplace are perceived as having higher status. Angry women are perceived as having lower status.

Years ago I stumbled into a research that claimed that it was healthier for women to express their anger when it was boiling up, while it was healthier for men to control it and counter-react in a more sober manner.

Unfortunately I've not been able to find that article anymore.

This alone could explain why women were perceived as "hysterical", back in the psych literature, while men never had such a label attached to them.

Ultimately though, it's always good not to let one's anger sink in, as that has repercussions on our health, but surely there are ways and ways in which we can express or counter-act (which is not so different) our anger...

I have been reading a few posts. They all pertain to taking on issues that are not yours.

Mars landings, i won't ever be involved, neither will any of you.

EJ banned, come back, not your problem, do not vindicate out of your own anger.

There is a death & rebirth to everyone, people change, people learn, if you do not give them room in their new clothes, you will take away their very reason to live.

Think before you do, stop taking on other peoples problems, always keep an eye into things, do not become the problem.

You cannot control everything, and this is a major problem, causing greif where there is none.

I can only try to live the best i can, try to fix myself, i cannot fix what i am not responsible for.

I cannot control a tornado that may wipe me out, i can only prepair.

I cannot fix a car crash i may have because of someone else, i can only hope i survive.

For people with Pluto prominent see if you see anything that is characteristic inside of yourself, now try to see yourself, not others.

<https://exemplore.com/astrology/Totems-of-A-Scorpio>

If, as the Egyptians thought, scorpions represent initiation into the sacred mysteries, we can consider the sign's other related creature, the eagle, as a higher expression of Scorpio power. Many ancient astrologers, including Ibn Ezra [Arabic astrologer] , recognised eagle symbolism as valid to this sign, since the biblical prophet Ezekiel described a vision, believed to be drawn from Babylonian astrology and representative of the 'fixed cross of matter':

As for the likeness of their faces, they four had the face of a man [Aquarius], and the face of a lion [Leo], on the right side: and they four had the face of an ox [Taurus] on the left side; they four also had the face of an eagle [Scorpio]. (Ezekiel 1 verse 10).

Saint John's book of the Apocalypse (Revelation 4, v7) also alludes to the vision, of which Fred Gettings, in The Secret Zodiac, writes:

The eagle of St John is the eagle of Scorpio, which sign (alone of all the twelve) has two images, the eagle the symbol of the redeemed and spiritualized Scorpionic nature, the scorpion its fallen, unredeemed and earth-bound nature. [2]

Transcendence from the crawling scorpion to the soaring eagle, still predatory, still conveying the essence of patience and penetration, but capable of flight and height, brings together the theme of destruction and renewal as a story of evolution.

Hmm..

I need to check my Taurus sabians (Moon & Mars)

Mars.

PHASE 32 (TAURUS 2°): AN ELECTRICAL STORM.

KEYNOTE: The cosmic power able to transform all the implications of natural existence.

At this second stage of the five-fold sequence we see a picture which contrasts with the one for the first stage: thus, a celestial display of power versus a clear, lovely-sounding little stream. Back of every natural self-expression stands the tremendous power of the "Soul-field," itself but one of the myriad aspects of the Creative Word that is the origin of this universe. At certain times, this power compels the natural earth-conditioned personality to accept, perhaps in awe, the spiritual potentialities of its "higher" celestial destiny. This experience of power can both illumine and shatter. The next symbol reveals its positive possibilities.

This is a stage of existence in which "revelation" is implied, at least as a potentiality. The consciousness may be deeply disturbed by THE VISITATION, but the substance of the individual being can be fecundated by the experience.

Moon.

PHASE 34 (TAURUS 4°): THE POT OF GOLD AT THE END OF THE RAINBOW.

KEYNOTE: Riches that come from linking the celestial and the earthly nature.

In Genesis, the rainbow is the symbol of the Covenant of God with Noah. In all mythologies it expresses, in one way or another, a linking process — or the bridge used by divine beings to communicate with mortals. What the linking process brings to the individual consciousness is elusive, as the rainbow never ends where you are, yet it is the source of symbolic, universally valid wealth. All wealth, in a very real sense, comes from "commerce"; i.e. from the commingling of minds and from contracts, and thus is based on faith in the validity of a promise.

At this fourth stage of the five-fold process we are given a mode of operation, which reminds us of the symbol for the second stage, "an electrical storm." Man need not be overawed by the celestial display of power, for it leads to a fruitful contact with beings of light. This is a natural kind of COMMUNION, involving a transubstantiation of matter.

Well this is interesting indeed.

Re: Where is anger in a chart?

« Reply #236 - on: 06.07.2019 at 13:18 [UT+1] »

Great posting once again CV but this is an astrology forum & the discussion was ♂ anger in a chart & while we definitely cannot 'change' anyone, astrology can help guide, direct and improve upon one's character if one chooses to listen, be aware of their own shadows' & try to improve. We all need to recognize that we all have flaws & traits in ourselves that are not desirable.

The topic is not about ♂ anger in women or men or on the forum. But how it operates in your own chart. But looks as if it's been derailed, the subject has now been obfuscated, misdirected and used to attack any member who dares suggest that one look at their own ♂ in their chart to see how it operates. 😞

Kalinoka left the forum after her own ♂ ♁ manipulation attempts to ban posters over the age of 35 didn't pan out as she planned.

The rest shows a perfect example of how ♂ ♁ in hard aspect to malefic ♃ operates.

Turn themselves into the ♃ victim & have others come to 'defend' them while swimming away from ♃ reality.

Use subtle, underhanded ♁ moves to release their ♂ anger in an ♃ cruel way by calling other members bullies & other negative or derogatory terms to establish the ♁ fantasy of being pure & innocent as the white snow. 😞

Finally, derailing, having members banned or harangued enough to leave so once again escape from ever having to self-examine their own hidden ♂ anger.

♂ ♃ is considered 'weak' like ♂ ♁ but it is a Cardinal & you always know when a person with ♂ ♃ is angry; they express it. Maybe that's why so many boxers have this placement.

I've known two ♂ ♁ people, one was a friend I've known for over 20 yrs. She certainly knows how to play the 'damsel in distress' because ♂ ♁ energy is soft. She has a very kind heart, very caring & wouldn't hurt a fly. And yet, I have witnessed how this placement caused a poor immigrant women her job. She worked in a fabric store & my friend went & asked her if she would make a dress for her. It was against the store policy to do so but my friend suggested to her that it be done privately & nobody would ever know. The woman agreed & they set upon a price, fabric, etc. When the dress was completed, my friend didn't like it. I thought it was lovely but her perfectionist ♃ ♃ found fault & instead of speaking to the lady herself, went to the manager & complained. The poor immigrant woman was fired from her job! Talk about under-handed ♂ manipulative energy. I was furious at my friend & didn't speak to her for about a year.

A man I used to work for as his personal assistant was ♂ ♁ ♃ (so double delusions & master manipulator)

He traveled a lot with his work as a world renowned artist & slept with every girl in the city. His fiancée at home almost had a breakdown every time he left as she sort of knew what he was doing. But not the full extent. I told him point blank that he shouldn't be treating her this way & that if he didn't love her, he should just leave her & not break her heart over & over again. He always had an excuse to escape his behavior (I was drunk, lonely, they came onto me, etc) but the point is that he never once took responsibility for his own deceptive actions. It was always 'someone else'. Classic ♃ victim/savior theme. He would actually get angry & 'sulk' if anyone called him out on his actions, he lost a good friend who was sick of seeing his fiancée suffer & then he came & whined to me about how badly he had been treated!

Both of these people were kind, caring souls yet each with their ♂ ♁ would not even be able to see how destructive their ♂ energy was & how they manipulated others through indirect ♂ action & aggression. Every planet has a shadow side & we cannot deny it if you understand anything about astrology.

This not about attacking anyone. This is about astrology, looking at ♂ energies honestly in your own charts as per the title of the thread. 😞

Peace out!

Oh well. I wouldn't say "no malignancy involved". To analyze (♃) someones chart in different threads (♀) always selectively pointing to something negative or find the most negative expression of harmonic aspects of that same persons chart is something I would not call benign.

Your above analysis of me/my chart is an excellent example of how to weaponise a chart, Tara. 😊

No it's not because it doesn't refer to your chart at all. Where is your chart or parts of it mentioned at all? 😞

Your analyzes of Waybreads chart is an example of weaponizing (♂) a chart. This is an astrological forum and people post their charts in the trust that others will handle that information (♀) with care and not getting abused for the content.

Criticism here and there is fine but stalking (♂) someone through several threads like Taurus 5 and some others have has done with always pointing to the negatives of WB is not IMO.

Taurus 5 has stalked no-one on this forum - so I am saddened to discover that you (and perhaps others) erroneously believe me to have done so.

To follow a person from one thread to another in order to point out the weaknesses of that person is stalking (♁) to me. Other people might call it something else.

We had a discussion (♀) about it before and it saddens me to see you still stuck at the same place.

Please ask yourself why it is so important for you do go after Waybread? Even if she was a terrible person why would you think it is your mission (♂) to get involved even to the point to getting banned (♁)?
It's such an extreme behaviour and needs to be looked at. You can point at her as much as you want in the end it has also something to do with you.

Trying to get strangers to see their possible issues by confronting (♂) them in the setting of an international forum for astrology is out of place IMO (at least to the extent it is practised by you).

The same often happens in marriages etc. It's always easier to try to change others (but they usually don't) instead of looking at ones own issues.

Please provide examples of Taurus Five "following a person from one thread to another", Tara.

[We have indeed had that discussion - and it saddens me to see you still stuck in the same place. 😊]

Welcome Taurus 5,

If you take a look at the intro to M.E. Jones book on the Sabians you'll find that he actually recommends the degree symbols always be read in pairings since together they represent a polarity - each defined by and deriving its meaning from the other.

Anyway, I like Inside Degrees by Lonsdale too, and use both. I have several points of interest in Scorpio @ 1, 4, 6 and 7° involved with transiting Uranus.

But yours are:

Quote:

TAURUS 5

Tiny porcelain figures of people.

Wandering along the forgotten places, you feel saturated with memories and reflections. Enchanted and left alone to sift through all of it in your own good time. Subtly and pervasively removed from what is going on around, you are adrift in your own inward pictures. What comes of this is highly variable. It can be a fertile cycle to melt into the moon and come out refreshed and rewoven. It can be heavily seductive and habit-forming, in which case you sink into a world apart and are really held there in subtle chains. Or it can be a secret doorway into the faery kingdoms in order to commune with those who animate the elements and the inner worlds. One way or another, it is one of those regions that you can never navigate through unless you belong there. And if you do, you may be lost there or you may be found there, with everything dependent upon your heart force and your depth of resolve to stay, faithfully, with the subtle cues.

An Egyptian queen with a braided beard.

Bearing intact ancient faculties of an unusual kind. Held between polarities. Fusing together darkness and light, masculine and feminine, earthly and heavenly. An enigma or riddle of destiny. You are motivated to bring together what has been rent asunder by an implacable force of blind determination. Exceedingly resistant to distraction and diversion, you're almost maniacally committed to reforging an initiate's vision in contemporary application. Where the past is held with such undiminished force, it remains at work inside forever. To tap this place wisely and well requires consummate skill. Otherwise, it tends to be self-serious, obsessive-compulsive, and in many ways indigestible in its obdurate reassertion of ancient codes, with so little sensitivity to the human factor.

My nature is highly spiritual, and it is only growing.

My chart overall is that of a spiritual person to begin with so seeing Moon & Mars with descriptions on the website you have linked is of no surprise to me.

Wilting flowers form a graceful pattern in a vase.

Supreme resignation. A twilight soul mood. You adapt to the limits imposed by time and situation. Dreaming ceaselessly. Waiting forever. Not very attached, not very involved; fostering illusions, fixed notions, and habitual states. At the mercy of context. Somewhat unable to change. Prone to multiple weaknesses. Self-indulgent. Old-fashioned--remembering when. Ancestors in the blood. You have a fabulous imaginative capacity but very little active life--indwelling the phases of the moon and the recesses of the world. In a suspended soul condition, drifting with the tide. Sweet, naive, and wishful. Solitude and ever-afters. A wondrous soul underneath a pile of old stuff, wanting the best for all.

A man talking in his sleep.

A psychic faculty is dreamt into and sustained, leaving everything wide open for passive absorption. Going so deep in there, an altered state, that you become karmically thrown into the dilemma of translation between the worlds. Being used by astral forces, and learning to adapt. Indwelling a place reserved for those who are not ready to activate. But, oh, the dreams, the vapors. Remembrance. Recapitulation. Return. Longing for connection between the worlds, you may be able to take the underworld route through if disciplined attunement is fostered. Creative powers are dammed up and filtered through into naive wistfulness. You wait, hope, and are drawn back and back until the inner worlds have been heard and respected and the balance can be restored.

Some of my mind is not in reality, it need not be because that is how my mind penetrates other areas, it is what gives others a perspective that is often new instead of the old adage uttered by those who impose limits.

As i stated before though, we must not confuse what is often dream & fantasy with concrete logic & decision making, it is a skill i have been mastering, to make what is actually a mirror in the otherworld become a mirror in the real world, a reflection of the soul and of what i would love to have.

This can be used for others, weighing up if it makes sense or not, a sort of scale used for both physical and outer dimensions.

Oh and i almost forgot. Thank you.

The only reason I don't post my chart here is because I don't think there's one person who could separate their own hidden ♂ anger towards me to properly delineate my chart. There would be no constructive criticism which I would welcome/ it would be an open attack to all those who have a grudge against me. I am highly mutable & easily adaptable & changeable. I am so far removed from who I was at 20 30 40 & even 50 for while the 'inner me' has never changed, I've certainly done plenty of self-examination, review of my own defects (of which there are plenty). As a ♀♁ person, I can be highly emotional especially where I see injustice. I've definitely acted & spoken in ways that shame me now. But I'm constantly evolving, constantly changing. I ask true, sincere people in my life what are my best qualities & what are my worse. I'm not afraid of hearing the ♃ truth. But I'm certainly not interested in being attacked for no reason than the attacker's own ♂ angers & preconceived notions of who I am. There's nothing to be learned from that & as a ♁♃ ♁♁ person, I've endured enough abuse from men & people in power that I am still healing.

So please direct your own ♂ anger towards me to something more productive. Thank you. 😊

p.s. My own ♂ is beautifully placed in my chart, trine ♁ and * ♃! No hidden, passive-aggressive tendencies there.

Thanks for asking. 😊

Interestingly my Sun conjunct Jupiter.

CANCER 23 Sun

A man putting together pieces of broken pottery.

Nothing works any more. The form of things is breaking apart. In your mind's eye, you can remember how it once went, and you can certainly try to put it back together as it was. There is something about doing this that teaches you all kinds of things. And when you are called inside to reconstruct the old world and somehow keep it together one way or another, you must do it. One lesson you will eventually learn is how the mind works and why it is convinced that this task is so very necessary. But meanwhile, there is an elegance, sophistication, a cultured touch and sensibility that provides entry into so many fascinating worlds. Karmic recapitulation. Going back to the same places to do the same things can be quite a story to tell. Every bit of it is ebbing as it happens. All of your constructions in mind and outer form cannot hold on much longer. But the ego-mind is most tenacious and insistent in such destiny verges, hoping to postpone the deluge one more delicious moment.

CANCER 24 Jupiter

A single crumbling Corinthian column.

The inward temple held in tune. Sitting in celestial juices. Beheld by the Gods as a pillar of light. Defiant of time's cycles. Invested with the life-pulse immortal. As serene and effortless as it is constant and true. Making way for what cannot be foreseen. And giving voice to a sensibility that is entirely pregnant with worlds within worlds held intact, and offered up upon the altar of the world stage.

SCORPIO 15 Pluto 4th house trine Sun, Jupiter, Chiron. Square Mercury & Ascendant.

A woman with a gold tooth.

An extraordinary gift, very abusable and utterly redemptive. You invent, conceive, bring into being whatever you hope for and whatever you dread. Usually the dreads come up more first and dominate for a while. In this cycle you scare up the world's most extreme melodramas, each one of them marked "no way out, no way through." If you should outlast your dread demons, and you shall, you will find, in a very different direction, that there are equally powerful hope angels. You hope and wish and yearn for everybody to go free and this wishing has deep, uncanny power. For you have been nourishing for a very long time two counteracting worlds: the one dark and heavy with foreboding; the other swept clean by the magical will to bring the world around right. The one who made the light go out brings the light back in a seasoned, tempered form. And this renewed light is phosphorescent, glowing in the world's darkness, seeing the way clear, knowing it can be done.

kokoro, are you willing to post your chart? I ask because you seem like a very sensitive soul, who is genuinely troubled by discussions that other people with tougher skins wouldn't mind having. I'm not here to criticize you or your chart: I am merely curious.

are you a person who would benefit from developing a thicker skin? Intense discussions may not be your preference, nor should they be, but hopefully you accept that it's OK for people to feel passionate about certain topics. ee in our world.

Posts: 7405

My consideration was drawn to your post by another member, so I need to respond or seem impolite, which I am loath to do. No and no. However, do go ahead and post your chart Waybread. You did suggest that you were not the topic of the thread...actually, you are too modest...you were the impetus to post the topic since I had no healthy or positive way to address your posts in other threads you derailed over the years.

Feeling passionate is not the topic of this thread..."Where is anger in a chart" is the topic, so I prefer not to distract or deflect from the subject.

And no, I personally would not like to develop a thicker skin. Cynicism is not appealing to me and would be a disadvantage in my profession. I would regard it as a very unhealthy adaptation I do not need nor choose to make. The last time you suggested it to me was some years ago during the thread on anthropologist Juan Revilla's approach. I recall you got a bit hot under the collar about his coming from Costa Rica, was it? When I suggested it was not appropriate to target Revilla in this patronizing way, you thought I might need to develop a thicker skin then, too. 😊 No, not an option I preferred or needed either then or now. However thank you for your kindly consideration of my well being. 😊

Regarding your academic status and that of your husband the professor...research shows most people with higher degrees are less confident of their opinions and feel less need to focus on their "authority". You do definitely stand out as the exception to the research in this respect, particularly that of Dunning and Kruger who have explained most of what I find confusing about this forum. There are a number of professional academics on this forum..they mostly feel no need to announce their credentials... however, they are still working and not yet retired. Perhaps that makes a difference?...I don't think Dunning and Kruger looked at retirees did they?

<https://thedecisionlab.com/biases/dunning-kruger-effect/>

I am quite conscious that my chart is of no importance whatsoever except that I posted the topic. I don't have any involvement except as the OP. Observing anger and expressing it are rather different topics and categories.

Waybread Quote:

Some people like to debate, and don't see the need to concede an important point. I plead guilty here. Ideally it's a debate about ideas, facts, principles, &c; but for people who find serious debates uncomfortable, notably when they devolve into personal attacks, maybe the best strategy is just to skip over the aggravating posts.

I did (some years ago) belong to a debating club and did rather well. Won some awards in fact. I can debate with the best.

However, I do see this as an astrology discussion forum. Debates (as I understand them) have rules, structure and teams opposing...two teams, a winning and a losing team. There was no one member standing alone in the debates conducted by clubs to which I belonged. I think the term debate is used way too loosely here on the forum, most particularly by you and others to describe and excuse angry exchanges which are not discussions as we would ordinarily understand that word as meaning pleasant and equitable. A discussion is simply an exchange of ideas.

Healthy respectful discussions have no winners or losers...no one-upmanship...simply information flowing freely and not for any particular winner (nor loser) as there is most particularly in a debate. Which is a formal context as you would know, coming from an academic background as you have self described. The context here is entirely different. I find here, debate is inappropriate. What is invited is discussion... that is what the forum is kindly provided for by Astrodienst.com and Alois. Our time here is paid for by others. This is an astrology discussion forum not a debating forum.

Here we do not operate within any of the guidelines usually followed in a debate...so I would not partake. 😊

As you suggested years ago...I do skip your posts. You were unwilling years ago when you posted here as "Mountain" to interact respectfully (I found) ...and always fell back on "If you don't like it... skip my posts"...so I do. 😊 No disrespect intended, just following your request. Most often the suggestion to not read and your suggestion to "grow a thicker skin" was used then to excuse and cover the expression of hostility, I thought.

Interesting that members insist on drawing my attention to what you post here ...and ask me to respond...hence this post. From now I will again revert to skipping what you write as you requested me as Matrika to do some years ago.

Please do not think me rude.

So you think that member 'K' who came on this forum & immed starting 'checking' out my posts to figure out my chart (from a grudge she holds from months back) & then wrote nasty comments to 'back up' her version of my chart (which she doesn't have) is the same as a member asking a simple question to WB about the possible shadow side of ♂♃? 🙄
From WB chart which she has posted on this forum numerous times.

I ignored 'K' until she tried to have posters banned, including myself, because she doesn't like them. I never once complained about her but I confronted her & she backed off & became an ex-member. I don't think you can equate a vindictive ♃ stalker like that to ♃ 5 discussing astrology. He certainly wasn't rude or bullying. This is an astrology forum & are we now never to talk about the negatives of a planet/aspect & how it might manifest? 🙄

I still don't understand the comment about Australians. Even if the majority are on the Assange thread, so what? Perhaps they have a better understanding since he's from their country? Please tell me who has posted on that thread that has been attacked for having an opposing view? WB? Her ♃ hatred of Assange goes far deeper than astrology. I won't discuss it any further as I don't want the thread closed down but it just might be that there is actually a majority of support for him which WB refuses to acknowledge & tries to belittle his supporters over & over again because only she knows what the ♃ truth is!

Talking about feminists, Naomi Wolf has written about the case & how it diminishes real victims of rape. She supports Assange 100%. so I guess she's just another deluded 'fan' too! 🙄🙄🙄

Peace out.

I thought ♃ 5 postings was incredibly insightful with no attacking or malignancy involved.

Oh well. I wouldn't say "no malignancy involved". To analyze (♃) someones chart in different threads (♃) always selectively pointing to something negative or find the most negative expression of harmonic aspects of that same persons chart is something I would not call benign. I noticed that when people acted in much more harmless ways to you in that fashion you were calling them stalker (♃) etc. and did not seem much amused about it.

I pretty much see it the same way. Of course not everyone participating in the Assange thread is australian but the vast majority is. They seem to see him as a hero (♃) and don't want to hear anything negative about him. No one will blame them for it but it is a open thread where everyone can participate. Some people do see some darker sides (♃) to Assange and want that to be known as well. In a civilized discussion (♃) such criticism should be tolerated without trying to put the other down (♃). Right? 🙄

I just ignore any negativity. As for Assange I heard he had sex with a prostitute without a condom. That seems to constitute some kind of "rape" It is a trumped up charge by who knows who that has an agenda in my opinion and not just because I am "Australian"..

I think it's great that some of this discussion has turned in a friendlier way to doggie doo-doo. (Although frankly, I thought some of the posts were in the excretory category already. 😊)

Kokoro, thanks for responding to me in detail in your post #248. You wrote to me:

Quote:

You did suggest that you were not the topic of the thread...actually, you are too modest...you were the impetus to post the topic since I had no healthy or positive way to address your posts in other threads you derailed over the years.

If you indeed started this thread as a rebuke to me personally, why didn't you say so up front? You were not trying to shield my fragile feelings! I think, in contrast, you were hoping to hold the high ground by appearing polite and non-aggressive yourself. No doubt you are pleased with all of the rebukes I have taken by others. But does your strategy not strike you as covert, rather than "polite"?

Does anger belong to you, or does it belong primarily to people who disagree with some of your deeply held beliefs?

Which is fine, but just something to contemplate. Why didn't you have a "healthy" way to address me directly? Wouldn't that be more truthful than starting a general thread on "anger in the chart" that you actually intended as a very personal reprimand?

I have derailed no threads over the years. I always recommend that people who dislike my posts not read them, or not reinforce them with a reply. If people simply ignored my posts, those threads could have continued more to your liking. Obviously some people did wish to respond to me, so "derailment" to one person may be a good discussion to someone else.

Afternoon Sun went ahead and posted what I call my "close enough" chart (without consulting with me,) a few pages ago. To protect my privacy I have changed some of the details, but this chart is very close to the one given by my birth certificate.

Kokoro, developing a thicker skin has nothing to do with cynicism. We cannot surround ourselves with cynicism in life, if we are ever to truly engage with people who think differently than we do. We can and should stick to our valid beliefs and values while developing strategies to cope with criticisms of them. Put differently, let the water roll off the duck's back.

You and I are not our beliefs. We hold beliefs.

Then, criticism of your beliefs is not your enemy. If your beliefs are well-founded and robust, they will stand up to criticism and shrug it off. If the beliefs are flawed in some way, then listening to the criticism can help to shore up your beliefs and make them stronger and more impervious. In this way, accommodating criticism can be helpful and supportive of what you believe.

The idea that I would be "hot under the collar" about someone's nationality is astonishing. And completely false.

Both you and ZenTen seem to have misunderstood the reason why I explained my academic background. It was not to establish authority-- which nobody here would have accepted, and which only generates push-back. It was to explain my ingrained habit of analyzing what I read. This is called "critical thinking," but it doesn't mean criticism in the sense of intrinsic non-stop negativity or fault-finding. It's more in the literary sense of evaluation or appraisal of what I read. Obviously some appraisals will be positive, and some won't be. You do the same thing when you discuss a movie or a restaurant with a friend.

The Dunning-Kruger effect is interesting, but basically I feel that anyone is welcome to disagree with what I post. I try to be accurate and will often reference what I post through links to articles, or sometimes court documents. Of course, I'm entitled to reply back.

What I find disappointing, however, is when intelligent, well-informed people who differ with me have one arrow in their quiver: launching into a personal attack. (Basically this is a non-sequitur. I. e., it's irrelevant to the propositions put forward. It probably didn't earn points with your old debate judges.)

For example, if I explain why a lot of Americans do not see Julian Assange as the free speech hero, the targeted response isn't to say, "You seem angry," which is off-topic. It is to address what I wrote about Julian Assange.

I entirely agree with what you say about discussion. But I put it to you that you actually mean is a one-sided discussion in which everyone else agrees with you. 😊 What if someone cannot, in good conscience? Is s/he allowed to speak, in your universe, without a rebuke forthcoming?

If my posts bother you so mightily, I think you should skip them. But it's fascinating that you started this thread covertly, to criticize me personally: one might even say under false pretenses, as a thread on "anger in the chart."

By all means, step back now from the results you produced. Are they what you intended?

You gave permission to see your chart by publishing it. You even "doctored" it for publication by making it your "near enough" chart. That is the chart I used.

It is not common practice to contact other people whose charts we read once they are published so why would we expect to be treated any differently than we treat others? Not everyone in the Astrodatatabank is famous or infamous, or known widely. Some are controversial figures or just astrologers like us 😊.

I don't exclude myself either, I also published my own chart as I believe that is the best way I can assist budding astrologers who rely on access to accurate natal data relating to folk they have some contact with or behavioural knowledge.

I made a statement of fact, not a rebuke.

The reason for my "close enough" chart is a concern about privacy and identity theft. As you know, even in an anonymous chart, it's a relatively easy matter to determine the birth date and time with the use of an ephemeris. A clever astrologer, through some calculations involving the MC, can also determine the birth location.

It's fine with me if other people do not share my concerns, but I am entitled to them.

And you have the permission to dictate what we post? You are comedic.

Trust me, I belong here.

And I already know a lot about your chart ZenTen so I know your triggers and your anger points.
So you don't want to mess with me. 😊

Lets pray when Tr. ♃ goes direct, it doesn't devour you.
And work on your ♃ judgement towards others. It's horrendously afflicted.

Oh dear kalinokia you sound like a lurking spider ready to pounce. Is this the true kalinokia being revealed? The one who wants to moderate everybody else? Hmmm I suspect an afflicted Pluto is about to be revealed, I wonder if you are a familiar poster known to most of us, but now hiding behind a new avatar? If you would care to post your chart we would quickly know and learn so much more about your modus operandi, or are you embarrassed to break your cover and reveal your astro identity?

Yes, Afternoon Sun this is "astrorose" and you already know about my chart, my ♃♂♂♂ afflictions and my strong ♃♂♂♂ that is part of a water trine. Do you want to see my chart again?

My anger was misplaced. I want to apologize to ZenTen and everyone that I may have hurt (maribage who one time PM'd me out of concern who probably is disappointed now knowing what I said, at least the intent behind it).

The reason why, is because I still feel hurt by what ZenTen said to me, her intention behind what she did. I feel like of anyone wants to criticize my personal lifestyle and passion please do so with respect, there was no point saying:

"Phew, glad you are leaving".

"Keep on chewing those celery sticks while the world burns!"

"Stick with food recipes and writing a vegan cookbook which nobody will read!

"If you keep posting your marketing links/videos in your 'come to Jesus' moment, you are going to get a reaction. Your way is not everyone's way."

All of that drama because I criticize Chopra. All because I stated an opinion you did NOT respect. Plus you keep trying to control what I say and ridicule my astrological postings.

Anyway, I know your chart and do understand why I trigger you. It's generational. My ♃♂ especially hurts you. My ♂♂ makes a beautiful trine too..but ♂ your ♂♂. There's a lot of factors.

I apologize for hurting everyone in the past too if I did. I grow.

Yes Astrorose I'm pleased you have seen fit to own your avatar and your chart, and I have no need to comment on it, nor am I dwelling on it. We all have our moments that we perhaps prefer not to have, and if our charts were all so easy that we didn't need to experience conflict we would have nothing to learn, and I suspect life would be very boring. It is late here now and I must go to bed, but first I have to send a 40th birthday message to my son who lives in Brazil.

PS I wondered about the pic, family chart patterns are fascinating, an art director I worked with got me to draw up all his immediate family charts on transparent paper so he could overlay them and see all the patterns connecting.

No, AR, you don't have my chart as I've never posted it on the forum. You have snippets of it from stalking my postings & figuring out I have σ^7 here & \hbar there but, once, again, you don't have a clue.

Yeah, funny how about you/WB with the σ^7 \times take my own words & use them as your own. I guess imitation is a great source of flattery indeed!

I told you in that thread to not keep \hbar judging others who want to read Chopra & go to his retreats. You called those people 'delusional' & other derogatory remarks. You kept pushing your vegan agenda & demanding others follow your 'rules of life'.

Just let people be AR. Try to be more open-minded.

I am very pleased to see that you are no longer trying to attack members over the age of 35. Just watch out for that σ^7 \times anger which can remain hidden when not expressed in a healthy way & can be used to play games & act like the innocent ψ victim when they are often the instigators. But your recognition of your σ^7 shadow is commendable as you have shown more \hbar maturity than the member who refuses to ever acknowledge they have any shadow aspects. Your postings help a lot of people so I'm glad you are back.

I will ignore you if you ignore me & that way, we'll get along really well.

Peace out.

And I'll keep talking about my sidereal chart. It's still astrology! It's important to me, it gives me a better understanding of my σ^7 . In my D-9 chart I have $\times \sigma^7$ and D in the 12th! Even though in my D-1 chart it's in $\approx \sigma^7$ in the 6th. It's crazy how I have σ^7 in the same sign in both Western and Eastern...it's destiny.

My σ^7 is like water, it's mutable, it changes, it can be ice cold or hot, it's always flowing, and ruled by ψ it does transcend when it needs too. The problem is that it's astral, my anger. It's not physical, the core of it, and it's expressed (when aspecting my $\text{m} \psi$ in the 6th) so I become aggressive here, competitive and I am like: What took so long?. It's imaginative too, my anger, very dynamic, it's all internal, these emotions and psychologically it's labeled as passive aggression but astrologically, it's simply reduced. \times being a sign of other-worlds, the non-physical, I can't relate to a $\psi \sigma^7$ or other signs. Human anger is repressed and falls in my subconscious. At least I am conscious of this.

I didn't know OP's really intention of this thread was to pretty much out Waybread? It kind of kills everything really. The internet is such a false world.

No offence AR but there are rules on this forum & there is a different section for Vedic/Sidereal astrology. The reason the two are separated is because they are two entirely different schools of astrology.

The title of the thread was ♂ anger in a chart. Perhaps it was a more polite way of OP to address certain member to be more mindful of how ♂ operates in their chart which is a good thing. I think we can all benefit from taking a step back sometimes, taking time out, taking deep breaths, etc. As you know, my ♂ ♁ is very emotional so I always have to be on guard. But my ♂ has no malefics with it. If it was in aspect with ♀ or ♃ I would have to be even more mindful of how I express anger. I guess some members (not you) will never accept that they have faults & that they emote the 'shadow' aspects. Oh, well, as they say "You can lead a horse to water but you can't make it drink".

Once again, peace out. 😊

Yes you did. And even worse. The reason I didn't 'let you be' is because of your ♃ lies, comparing him to hitler & other nonsense. ♃ judging others who read his books. You always want to come across as the 'expert' whether it be astrology (Western/Vedic), 'spiritual' matters, etc. It's called dictatorship & I called you out on it. It was titled 'One's better life' by WB & you can post link.

Oh, well, you are back at it again. 😏

Seems you came 'back' to ♂ attack me so looks as if your ♂ ♃ energy is seething & coming to the surface. Your ♃ obsession with my chart is very revealing. I don't have ♂ ♃ ♃ and you saying it over & over again doesn't make it true. 😏

Carry on. I'll just ignore you as I've really got better things to do with my time than argue with a person who has yet to complete their first ♃ return.

Peace out. 😊

Apparently Buddha once said, "You won't be punished for your anger, you'll be punished by it."

Then again, Buddhists also say "To be born is certain death." which doesn't seem particularly cheerful as a recruiting slogan and I always thought they should get a better PR department....Afternoon Sun would likely do a better job, having worked in the written media 😊

One thing I find interesting is that a survey was conducted of Victoria Cross winners, the UK's highest award for bravery in combat, and the single most common thing that came out as to what spurred the recipients into action was anger. Anger at their comrades being killed and wounded, which made them completely disregard their own safety and take seemingly reckless action which turned the tide of an engagement with the enemy. The recipients also tended to be the oldest child in a family and often with an absent father.

So Mars may represent anger but it can also be the solution, in some circumstances. Perhaps less 'where' and more 'why'?

It seems Mars has very little good in it.

It is a malefic, if a Mars stirs up it can potentially stir up another who may have a Mars that is capable of a stronger outburst.

What comes around goes around, and someone may have a much bigger ego than you and be able to back it up.

It is most definitely something we cannot live without, passion and love are not single to Moon or Venus, especially in a relationship, can include Pluto also.

Astro_rose, it's good to see you back. 🤔🤔

I think it helps all of us to develop a thick skin, or let the water roll off the duck's back, &c.

This thread reminds me of schoolyard jockeying, where one girl gets verbally attacked for being too fat, another girl is criticized for being too tall, another girl is teased for having a funny last name. In high school, another girl is shamed for (alleged) promiscuity, or for simply being the new girl or for being highly introverted. Remember the "mean girls"? This is such a common type that they show up in TV shows about high school life.

Recalling my own childhood, I recognize that some of these ploys were done as a frontal insult. Some of the teasing was done under a flimsy mask of humour ("what's the matter, can't you take a joke?") Some of it is done by ganging up ("We're three against one") as though that justified nastiness. Some of the put-downs were done behind the person's back (covert language, gossip.) And so on.

We've seen all of these ploys on this thread. We've seen very angry people situate themselves as coming from a place of innocence, when their own posts broadcast their hostility. Really, it's a form of social policing to get the "outliers" to stay quietly in their humble, place.

I don't think we're going to change anything so primal, but it helps to recognize it.

Sowelu-- This is a good point: that anger has constructive and sometimes crucial uses. In battle, the old Norse warriors had the figure of the Berserker-- the man who could fight in a wild frenzy, thereby becoming fearless. Unsurprisingly, Mars rules warriors, and their peacetime counterparts, like ice hockey players. Hockey players have an expression, "red ice or yellow ice," and some think of themselves as gladiators.

I think also of a very basic fictional plot line, where the seemingly weak character gets pushed to a state of abject defeat, and then comes back to triumph over his tormentors. (Cf. films The Karate Kid, Rebel Without a Cause, High Noon.)

Interestingly, women's soccer star Meagan Rapinoe was slammed by President Trump for being unpatriotic. The US women's team not only one the World Cup finals, but she got the golden boot and golden globe awards (sort of like MVP.) There's a positive Mars (or perhaps Eris) in action.

That was very interesting about the VC finding Sowelu, and I agree with you about Mars. I think Mars gives us the steel in our character. Without it we would be wishy washy push overs. It is the misuse of Mars that is the problem. The control and use of fire was the first step we took that really separated us from animals. Anyone who's ever watched "Naked and afraid" will know just how important fire is to survival. I would add anger can be a great companion when you're alone and in trouble.

This makes a lot of sense, so my Pluto is much stronger than my Mars placement...

A lot of times when i was angry i wanted to destroy something or people, it was not Mars (assertive) it was completely the end of whatever it was, we are talking a long time ago now.

I think Mars for me at least is VERY passionate, i am a passionate person, it's just not totally obvious always, i simmer under the surface.

Pluto in Scorpio is also not obvious, and with so many Pluto contacts that directly effect my personality in unique ways, this energy cannot help but be felt by others around me.

In certain times people were unsure of me and i had no awareness of anything i did wrong, it was mostly when i hid something that was annoying me, more receptive people were more aware of the brewing volcano underneath me.

Now it's totally different, i put action to my emotions naturally, but my emotions have changed and i have reigned in on the more Moon side of my personality also developing my sun which is locked in the 12th house.

Hi Waybread,

You know that the ancient Celtic warriors, before a battle, used to drink whiskey and consume magic mushrooms. Then they stripped naked, painted themselves blue, armed themselves only with a sword and axe, then usually from the top of a hill, ran screaming downhill towards their opponents.

If that didn't give their opponents pause for thought then I'm not sure what would 😊 There is some fire in there with the whiskey and that it will shed inhibitions about being hurt and provoke aggression, a good idea before violent confrontation. But there is also some Pluto which seemed to remove all fear of death and cause these Celts to feel, in a sense, that they had become death and that is what they were aiming to visit upon their opponents. In other words, their inner dog became bigger and ferocious.....

Those kind of battles long ago must have been very bloody, ugly and just awfully bestial in some ways. If a man was to have any hope of surviving then he would do well to find the most violent part of his psyche and act it out. Awful but understandable and I'm loathe to condemn anyone who found themselves in that position.

I reckon Rapinoe has defo got some Eris going on, I can respect her for it whether I agree or not with what she says.

Hi AS,

Yes, I reckon Mars is partly about motive force. I think if we are to grow and mature we need a healthy dose of Mars to provide the impetus to push through the boundaries of our comfort zones on many levels. Sometimes it takes anger to fuel change right?

Most of the VC recipients were also quite humble men but when their anger was aroused, by not being able to bear seeing their comrades killed and injured, well look out.....

I find it interesting that the use and control of fire also pushed the boundary of darkness which surrounded us at night, a little further from us. It reminds me of something Schopenhauer once said, "Whatever torch we kindle, and whatever space it may illuminate, our horizon will always remain encircled by the depth of night."

Separating from 2 degree's.

Could you give me some instructions in how to use solar arc? not exactly used this method before, still learning some stuff!

Hi CV,

If Pluto for you is in Scorpio then I reckon it can often be one of two ways, either strongly felt by others or deeply unconscious and hidden by yourself without really knowing it. Sounds like more the former for you and I agree when you use the term volcano. I also think Pluto is deeply and powerfully magnetic.

I have Mars in Leo in 9H so am 'hot blooded' and probably 'hot minded', unfortunately opposite Saturn in Aquarius 3H, so I'm also quite grumpy 😞 But Mars is also exactly Trine Moon in Gemini 8H and I'm not entirely sure what to make of that in polite company 😊 Also Square to Mercury in Taurus 7H, so also a temper 😡 I'm doomed.....

Your 12H Sun is a placement I've always felt is pretty tough. Something so expansive as the Sun in the house of confinement. As if planets there become somewhat 'occluded' and have to turn inwards. It also seems like an isolating place for whatever planet tenants the 12th, but one where there is information we may not know how to fully articulate. A place of deep genetic ancestry.

First you create your natal chart on astrodienst. Then you change the date to the relevant year. If your Moon is 2 degrees from your Mars you make the date for when you were two years old because the Solar arc is approximately 1 degree a year. then you scroll down passing the progressions to Natal and solar arc progression.

That should give you your natal chart with the solar arc progressions around the outside. for when you were 2 years old.

At 11 years old my Mars was conjunct Pluto in 9th , both opposite Saturn.
Pluto trine Neptune.

I remember this was the height of my uncontrollable self.. says a lot with Mars conjunct Pluto in a very expressive sign ♁♂.

Prior year i almost died through epileptic reasons, Mars was in ☿♁♄ both ♀ North ♁. Mercury in Cancer retrograde all in 8th house opposite 2nd house ☾♃

Jupiter in 7th house on descendant opposite Pluto with Pluto conjunct Chiron in 1st house...

Saturn conjunct Jupiter, Saturn in 6th square Uranus in 2nd.

It's quite exciting to discover a fresh way to look at your chart and see how different techniques can inform you. It also can reaffirm your confidence that astrology has something useful to offer, when you see how timings coincide with events or key periods. To me it is not simply a matter of astrology being fated, but more that we are attuned to our place in the universe, and that we have a right to be here, and a purpose or meaning to our lives, that our experiences are not simply random but for a reason, a process probably to do with our development as spiritual creatures. At least I like to believe that.

Perhaps Neptune's idyllic state pumped up by Jupiter in Sag?

Humanity's cruelty never ends. And that's not even mentioning all the pollution and natural destruction.

Not sure about the ego battle analogy, "be able to back it up" reminds me of Mark Twain's saying "It's not the size of the dog in the fight, it's the size of the fight in the dog." A fight, or argument, may start due to Mars but once started is most often finished by Pluto 😊 Mars wants to beat an opponent, Pluto wants to destroy them. Best avoided where possible as an ego fight is arguably the temporary (or permanent) failure of healthy character.

I agree with both your above quoted posts.

Maybe this here linked (reply #87 refers) may become a good example of what you say about Mars and about Pluto.

T Mars now transits Leo wherein resides my Asc Scorpio ruler.

It regards a post made on a thread which is neither mine nor my respondent's thread, yet I get belittled there for something I posted on my own thread!

This is the type of Mars ego behaviour that doesn't wash with Pluto which tends to restore health to character, not to fail it (as Neptune would). Pluto behaves like Pluto.

My apology for my last post, i can understand why it was removed. A bit much, plus i may have made you feel guilty, not my intention.

I have no idea to what you refer.

As far as my reply goes I understand it to be only directed at Afternoon Sun's post which I quoted.

As far as guilt goes I think you have misinterpreted my post.

Rather it is totally about anger!

I clearly stated that, and gave links to support my anger.

Sorry but your psyche interpretation of guilt doesn't fit. .

I marched for hours yesterday in protest against some of humanity's cruelty to bulls in Spain. T Mars in Leo (10House) sq T Uranus in Taurus (7House)

It certainly was not guilt that drove me but T Mars in Leo resonating with my natal Pluto - slow, deep, burning anger.

Perhaps I should first ask you : are you replying to my post or to Afternoon Sun's.?

If the latter then you quoted the wrong post. You quoted mine. Hence this reply is directed to you.

I hope you sort it out. But don't ascribe guilt to me. It makes me angry.

Thanks.

Dear Jen J, I don't see why using a technique like Solar Arc progressions need have anything whatsoever to do with the issues you are protesting about. As for having zero right to be on this planet I think you are referring to behavioural patterns most people would reject outright, not the existence of humanity itself. It is one thing to reject the misapplication of energy and its perversion into acts of cruelty and quite another to attribute it to anyone who has no such thoughts in their mind, nor has ever indulged in such behaviour, nor desired to.

You yourself are part of humanity but clearly not willing to condemn goats and bulls and other animals to such a fate. But would you cast all humanity from the tower of your judgement; the unborn foetus, the innocent children, the suffering protesters, and of course those of us with Neptunian idealism or as you see it, pumped up with Jupiter in Sagittarius?

I think humans are capable of inflicting as much pain on other humans as they do on other life forms, think about the gays (not just the goats) that religious extremists (ISIS) have hurled from towers, and the terrible fear they must have felt. At least they weren't burnt alive as at least one captured pilot was.

The people I know (and love) are not like that, most are deeply caring, loving people, who do their best to make the world a better place, and for all their faults are evolving children of the universe and have a right to be here.

Pollution I think is the biggest single issue we all need to tackle, and I would much prefer to treat "human-caused global warming" with all its debateable arguments as pollution, which to me seems to be a much more accurate and less controversial description of the underlying problem.

As for "natural" destruction, that is earthquake and volcanic? Or do you mean human destruction of the natural environment? If we dealt with pollution properly, we would include our treatment of the natural environment in that. It is inevitable that all these sorts of issues and problems will be met by any intelligent life form that goes through the kind of population growth and technology development stages we are at.

I imagine you have Neptune emphasised in your chart, and perhaps Pisces also, as I suspect you are in fact a very sensitive soul, more troubled than aggressive. Can I ask you to post your chart so we can learn from it?

Greetings Afternoon Sun,

I think you may have understood better had you referred to my quote of your original post, that the part I quoted did not refer to any Solar Arc technique. In fact it had the intended meaning - i.e. you stated your opinion about astrology not being fated, and then added your own opinion about how humans are attuned to their place in the universe - which I correctly read and understood and highlighted. I see you have omitted copying it here which suits your argument but misleads that I misconstrued your Solar Arc technique!! In fact your omitting to include your words is diabolical.

So for clarity I am copying it here with the same highlight I gave it.

But would you cast all humanity from the the tower of your judgement; the unborn foetus, the innocent children, the suffering protesters, and of course those of us with Neptunian idealism or as you see it, pumped up with Jupiter in Sagittarius?

Cast all humanity? - from the tower of my judgement?

You clearly have gone overboard with your own judgement!

Superfluous for me to say that but you did me the favour.

I have watched documentaries on criminal behaviour where people who were known and loved even for all their faults, have cold blooded, callously, and side-blindingly dispatched trusting, subjective thinking, and indulging people like you; sad but true. No doubt they considered their actions as doing their best in their right to be here.

To all that I can only repeat "indulging of the indulging". An intelligent life-form has proper breeding cycles dependent upon resources. This can be seen in the animal kingdom. It is absent in humanity, hence all the issues you expanded on, above-quoted.

Quote:

I imagine you have Neptune emphasised in your chart, and perhaps Pisces also, as I suspect you are in fact a very sensitive soul, more troubled than aggressive. Can I ask you to post your chart so we can learn from it?

Afternoon Sun, reading your post and your invitation based on "imagining" and "suspecting" and "judging" my opinion - which I have a right to even though I don't have a right to be on this planet as a human being - as "aggressive" simply because it opposes your opinion of indulging and forbearance, I know my chart couldn't help you in learning anything from it.

However, since you have some interest in Pisces and Neptune, suffice it to say Pisces is my 5th house of creativity, love affairs, having fun - and it has accurately identified as such in my life. As such I don't waste my spirit on subjective nonsense such as feeling "troubled". I use my anger to take things in my own hands, make decisions, and get on with it.

By the way, for the record, I had said that I contested the highlighted quote of your post. Please accept that I respect your right to your opinion, even though I contest it.

well Jen J my post was about how an astrological technique that shows coincidence with events reaffirms our place in the universe, that it is not fate but an affirmation of our right to be here, that we are in sync with what we have to learn and it is shown in our chart (if we have the wisdom to perceive it). That you choose to selectively pluck out a sentence, and detach it from the context of the paragraph it is in to suit your opposed world view, is not my fault nor concern. (eg "please note my use of the word right etc" - wrong Jen J they were my words and my use, not your words and your use).

You express your anger in a way that demands others be subject to it, but it carries no authority with me. It is your anger for you to endure. Perhaps it is your place in this world to be a co-ordinator of anger on issues you choose, and to lash those who do not bow to your selective interpretations or world view of what they themselves say to others. That is for you to worry about, argue about, demand agreement, or promote, whatever. Far be it from me to become a disciple or follower of yours. I refuse to get angry at your bidding so will happily refrain from supporting your causes or point of view.

The one thing that is crystal clear to me is that you are an angry person. I am not. I am a person who is attuned to my life and path despite the shades of good and evil that exist in our world. I believe the paths we tread are not random nor haphazard. Neither my ♃ in ♁ road, nor your ♃ in ♁ roar. (Yes I know that is where transit ♃ is, not your frustrated Mars in ♁ which loves an argument) But your way is not mine. So I will not adopt it and be angry, and look for a word here or there to justify an unprovoked attack, nor to bicker about. That can be your bag. You don't need my help to get what you are looking for. So I'll end this happily with a 😊

I believe in a choice-centered astrology. Meaning that each planet, sign, and house has multiple interpretations that are all consistent with the core meanings. I think the term "free will" is a misnomer, but that a rigid, strict determinism (fatalism) is untenable as well. Our lives exist in between these two poles.

Nevertheless, I sometimes think about astrology as a kind of astral determinism; particularly after noticing that sun-Pluto contacts run in my family tree-- for at least 5 generations. There is an esoteric viewpoint that families choose to incarnate in groups over multiple lifetimes, in order to work out certain agreed-upon issues. If this is the case, then we might expect their issues to show up astrologically.

I was also thinking about scape-goating. It is a horrible thing to experience, but sometimes good comes out of it. For example, as a result of the infamous Dreyfuss affair, in which an innocent Jewish man was framed, Theodore Herzl fastened upon the idea of a homeland for Jews. (With ultimately troubling results for Palestinian Arabs, but an understandably proactive response to anti-semitism in Europe.)

Enter this particular thread on anger in the chart. Viewpoints expressed so far include (but are not limited to) :

Anger is bad, and a good person is not angry.

Anger is bad, so a good person who actually becomes angry has to find a covert mechanism to express it. This might involve psychological projection.

Anger is good under specific circumstances, like heroism in battle.

I'm not angry, you are.

I am angry, but justifiably so (good anger) because you behaved badly.

Collectively these themes seem to operate in the here-and-now. I wonder if a look at a horoscope from a more fatalistic view is useful.

No, I don't mean "weaponizing" a chart: i. e., criticizing someone else as having permanent congenital character flaws because his/her horoscope has particular placements. (Doesn't everyone have some rotten aspects?)

I am thinking more in the sense that if a person seems chronically angry, what if this anger is part of a collective destiny to be worked out? Possibly it was a large part of the family game plan for this incarnation. Ditto for someone who seems angry over specific topics or angry in a particular way.

If the person stifles the anger, or sublimates it, does the destiny get fulfilled? Maybe the evolutionary goal is precisely the freedom to express outrage, after lifetimes of subservience. If the person with, say, sun square Mars conjunct NN has to stuff all that anger in order to be socially acceptable to people, does the destiny get thwarted?

In the ancient Greek tragedy, Prometheus Bound, the protagonist gets chained to a rock for eternity for disobeying Zeus. When the go-between Mercury offers to put in a good word for Prometheus if he will apologize. Prometheus declines. Zeus is unjust, and Prometheus is not going to lie about it merely to obtain a normal life, licking Zeus's boots (or sandals.) In short, the anger of Prometheus is part of his destiny, and live it out he must.

If this thread continues, maybe there are some more serious questions about anger and the planet Mars:

Character flaw or destiny? (The latter especially if the moon's nodes are involved.)

Where or how does Mars fit into a soul's evolutionary strategy?

What is the relationship between anger and courage? Anger and toxic hatred?

« Reply #295 - on: 09.07.2019 at 07:52 [UT+1] »

I did reflect about chronically angry people for the last few days. What I did figured out is rather shocking to me.

There is a bunch of toxic angry people in this world who do attack (♂) others regularly for no good reason. Probably everyone knows someone in their own family or at the work place like that.

Deep down this people might feel very discontent (like many people) with life but what differs is that they let their anger out onto others (overt or covert (♀)). Usually they have an belief system (♂) that sees them as superior to others and that they are basically surrounded by idiots. They will not admit to it but deep down that's what is there. In the end most of them do want to establish a dominance (♀) over others (control) as well. In order to reach their goals they will manipulate (♀) their surroundings.

Because of lack of consciousness, lack of a strong inner ♀ (healthy boundaries) or lack of a moral compass or whatever they do not hesitate to unleash their anger onto others (which is abuse of the other).

What is the effect of it? The people who are on the receiving end of this Anger (♂) will look like the bad ones. If bystanders are not able to see through it (which often does not happen) then if the attacks persist the victim will look like the villain. The constant labelling as a bad person works.

We can see that in small communities and in big collectives a well.

For instance Waybread was labelled as aggressive (♂) by ZenTen again and again in the Assange thread although I did not perceive any aggressiveness in her posts. It was obvious that she had a different opinion than ZenTen and that did not go down well with her.

Later a new thread (♀) (this one here) was opened with the disguised intention of talking about Waybread's anger (♂) issue by someone else who had read all the labelling of ZenTen in regards to Waybread in that other thread.

Then in this new thread other people who disagree with ZenTen also get labelled as aggressive (me and former astro rose). This manipulative strategy is used in order to get bystanders into their brain that this two people are also bad apples. Just spread the labelling long enough and something will stick in the end.

All the time ZenTen looks rather innocent while causing all sorts of destruction (basically being the cause of it) and knowing exactly what she is doing. That's what I call devilish behaviour.

Same thing happens with national or religious groups. Someone starts to pick at a certain group, giving them bad labels and over time more and more others believe it . Someone who seems to be bad needs some sort of correction and life for the victims becomes increasingly difficult. In the end it can lead to the murder of them. Genocides happened that way.

That is ♂ expressed in it's worst form (in a very distorted way).

Otherwise anger is a natural way of our soul telling us that something isn't right and that we Need to take some action. For instance if we are treated in a abusive way and need to stand up for ourselves.

Tara... 😊

I really so much admire your patience, perseverance, diplomacy and your ungoing fight against all this banal bullying, scapegoating and these insults consciously intended to hurt someone.

I am so ashamed this is done in the name of astrology!

Wasn't astrology meant to gain a deeper insight of how and why we OURSELVES react in the way we do?

Is it not the greatest tool to help us to understand conflict in our life and transform that into growth?!

In these threads astrology is raped just to confirm personal opinions and to provoke conflict !

This thread has nothing to do with Mars: it is Pluto!

It already started with a hidden motive.

Mars is too impatient and stupid to hold back his original motifs; he fights openly.

Just look at the non-astro moralistic bs that we get poured over us! That is not Mars!! That is Pluto seeking control... manipulating us to admire the person who knows what is good and bad. As if there is something like a general good or bad.

What is good for one person is not good for another.

Then there is the amount of staggering projection in this thread!

Pluto is much more sensitive to project because his reactions arise from hidden/unconscious emotions/feelings.

In his ungoing need to manipulate and control the outside world, Pluto often loses controle over his own inner world. He is absolutely unable to let go and reflect!

In his defence Pluto will turn and turn, use emo blackmail, the victimrole, whatever, just to proof he is right.

Mars is perfectly capable to admit he is wrong and find all this turning very boring.

Mars will punch you on your nose and Pluto under the belt.

Tara, you call ZenTen by name and I think you are right.

Ignoring her bullying doesn't stop it and doesn't help her.

Thread after thread is ruined by her ungoing search for conflict.

I hesitated to answer her replies to me (and others) because it would be a repeat of: 'what about you?', 'it takes one to know one' etc etc.

I do hope ZenTen will take your remarks seriously and take the time to look at herself.

Tara, next time I will support you sooner because you are a breath of fresh air that was very needed to to break this spiral of negativity! Thank you. 😊

In terms of learning & in terms of understanding, you and nobody else is the center of the universe, you may know very well about a lot and that is excellent, i take my hat off to you.

But in another way, some frivolity of some resentment & passive / Plutonian aggression is good for people to learn about.

Would you not say you are "Pluto" right now? wanting control to support your view, using "Tara" as a scapegoat for your "positivity"

The truth is, no one is any different, once you all detach from the ego, you will see who is really playing power games for control of others.

Pluto can be highly transformative, and can be used for insight, guidance, help & also the deep spirituality aspect is pretty impressive, it takes a person to want something good, and to be decisive with it and to never return.

That is the phase that Pluto grants no return and a total transformation into that thing you so desire.

Pluto on the higher side tells us to let go of desire, so the desire to win... is apparent in many here.

Desire can be put to good use, perhaps your partner, give them that beautiful intensity instead of destroying others or yourself, we don't need to prove anything.

Plutonians understand this way, at least one's who have gone through enough in life, the constant change, the constant flow onwards towards betterment.

Afternoon Sun, pages ago... you added Waybreads and your chart and asked us to look at the combi of the two. I wondered if you found the source of your irritation towards Waybread in these charts yourself?

To stop any new conflict in the future between you two, I think it is better if you first tell your interpretation of the synastry and composite, don't you?

I did also look at the charts and can maybe add my interpatation later (if you are interested).

(Lets do some old-fashioned astrology here) 😊

Haha Desiree, Waybread and I have found some sort of equilibrium at the moment it seems, at least we are not at each other. So I am loathe to change that. It is difficult to analyse a chart where there is conflict without risking opening wounds or alternatively down-playing factors. I am quite willing for someone else to interpret our charts while I think about it and take a look before I decide whether I will and how I would go about it without making it contentious, should I do so.. And I would need Waybread to agree as well in this instance.

I do wonder Desiree, with you being an Aries, if the idea of WB and myself doing each others charts appeals to your competitive tastes 😊 , or perhaps skating on thin ice is not too challenging for you to try?

For many decades I focus my competitive side on civil servants, landlords and politicians. 😊

That is enough and a blessing to the rest of my surroundings. 😊

I do like a good challenge but my question to you had nothing to do with that. It was more an attempt for long lasting peace. I do have a strong Venus too... 😊

One thing i learned with people who express Pluto is that often we are able to perceive others and size them up too easily and rather accurately.

This causes a tremendous stir in another person if we handle them without care, can cause extremes of behavior in others which can bring extremes of behavior out of the Pluto person.

Learning to integrate Pluto is about having tact, being able to express in a way that hit's them, but brings respect to who they are.

Often the person who is successful in getting across the goodness of what they mean without hurting someone will leave someone with something in their mind and it will not go away, they learn to see it, it is then up to them as to what they do. The reason it fails to go away is because the mind subconsciously see's it as truth, it knows.

Often we invoke no reaction this way and seem peculiar and have no response when we do this.

Quote from ~Tara~ on 09.07.2019 at 07:52 [UT+1]:

I did reflect about chronically angry people for the last few days. What I did figured out is rather shocking to me.

There is a bunch of toxic angry people in this world who do attack (♁) others regularly for no good reason. Probably everyone knows someone in their own family or at the work place like that.

Deep down this people might feel very discontent (like many people) with life but what differs is that they let their anger out onto others (overt or covert (♁)). Usually they have an belief system (♁) that sees them as superior to others and that they are basically surrounded by idiots. They will not admit to it but deep down that's what is there. In the end most of them do want to establish a dominance (♁) over others (control) as well. In order to reach their goals they will manipulate (♁) their surroundings.

Because of lack of consciousness, lack of a strong inner ♁ (healthy boundaries) or lack of a moral compass or whatever they do not hesitate to unleash their anger onto others (which is abuse of the other).

What is the effect of it? The people who are on the receiving end of this Anger (♁) will look like the bad ones. If bystanders are not able to see through it (which often does not happen) then if the attacks persist the victim will look like the villain. The constant labelling as a bad person works.

We can see that in small communities and in big collectives a well.

For instance Waybread was labelled as agresive (♁) by ZenTen again and again in the Assange thread although I did not perceive any agresiveness in her posts. It was obvious that she had a different opinion than ZenTen and that did not go down well with her.

Later a new thread (♁) (this one here) was opened with the disguised intention of talking about Waybread's anger (♁) issue by someone else who had read all the labelling of ZenTen in regards to Waybread in that other thread.

Then in this new thread other people who disagree with ZenTen also get labelled as aggressive (me and former astro rose). This manipulative strategy is used in order to get bystanders into their brain that this two people are also bad apples. Just spread the labelling long enough and something will stick in the end.

All the time ZenTen looks rather innocent while causing all sorts of destruction (basically being the cause of it) and knowing exactly what she is doing. That's what I call develish behaviour.

Same thing happens with national or religious groups. Someone starts to pick at a certain group, giving them bad labels and over time more and more others believe it . Someone who seems to be bad needs some sort of correction and life for the victims becomes increasingly difficult. In the end it can lead to the murder of them. Genocides happened that way.

That is ♁ expressed in i's worst form (in a very distorted way).

Otherwise anger is a natural way of our soul telling us that something isn't right and that we Need to take some action. For instance if we are treated in a abusive way and need to stand up for ourselves.

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Aggression>

You know Tara, there are times when it would behoove Waybread to heed her own advice and not read or answer posts she doesn't like, or disagrees with. Had she heeded admin's first warning against non-astrological postings on the Assange thread, many of her subsequent posts would not have been deleted. And, had she listened to the OP's request that we proceed in a manner that would not get the thread shut down, this thread would not exist. So many threads have been shut down by admin's to the extent that they've threatened more than once to shut the entire mundane section down. I do think if there was more astrology and less ideology there would be alot less anger, and lessen the risk of losing the mundane section - there's a very long year and a half to go before 2020.

As for toxic anger, I've seen none more than what's been expressed on the Trump thread. For 2-1/2 long years and 165 pages, this is a thread you've been more than happy to share with Zen Ten. Is the difference that, there, the two of you are in agreement which makes the anger okay?

I agree, it's not all about Mars, and that there are Saturn-Pluto dominance and control issues involved, but the more wrathful aspects of Jupiter-Juno should not be overlooked, nor the tribalism of the Moon, either.

As for the soul, it's been said that anger is our greatest teacher. In fact, our soul can become a bloody battlefield. Another member posted a quote a couple pages ago that reminded me of another from Heraclitus....

"Never will you find the boundaries of the soul, by whatever paths you search; so all-embracing is the soul's being."

What we're all working with here is like a double-edged sword. If we were to grow a thicker skin we'd lose our connection to the outer world.

Okay - it's probably none of my business, but this thread...

Sad.

It's so sad to see that so many excellent forum contributors have been sucked into (and in my humble opinion, wasting their time with) a non-topic.

"Where is anger in a chart?". Seriously? That's Astrology 101, and anyone who has found their way to this forum probably already has a decent enough idea of where anger can be found in a chart.

Instead of fading into obscurity, it has devolved into 16+ pages of both overt and covert poking, prodding, picking, provoking, and plain old grandstanding about "my anger is better than your anger"... throwing some glyphs of ♂ and ♃ in now and then, ostensibly as justification for all of it.

Sigh

And of course, it's just human nature that when someone feels attacked, they feel they must defend... And then uninvolved people take sides, and things go completely off the rails.

I really wish this thread would just die already. I've read enough to see it's creating rifts, tensions, and ill-will where they need not be, and it's drawing the attention of good forum members away from more legitimate topics and threads.

P.S. and yeah... I fully expect that at some point, this post will be attacked as well. Someone will probably find it self-righteous and will demand ask to see my chart or whatever. Pfft. It's Mars and Pluto - duh. Nothing more to know.

Would this be a form of gas-lighting? What if ♂ isn't the problem but rather ♀?

<https://www.psychologytoday.com/us/blog/here-there-and-everywhere/201701/11-warnings-signs-gaslighting>

- 1.They tell blatant lies.
- 2.They deny they ever said something, even though you have proof.
- 3.They use what is near and dear to you as ammunition.
- 4.They wear you down over time.
- 5.Their actions do not match their words.
- 6.They throw in positive reinforcement to confuse you.
- 7.They know confusion weakens people.
- 8.They project.
- 9.They try to align people against you.
- 10.They tell you or others that you are crazy (or aggressive for that matter).
- 11.They tell you everyone else is a liar.

Gaslighting is a abusive psychological tactic. I'll be honest, that "one's better life" thread really made me question myself and my personal choices as a vegan for a while. The constant judgement towards me made me question if I was really a bad person for seeing animals equal to humans. Her words:

Quote:

People's lives comes first in my book, for you they are secondary to the animals & the planet. This is what the Nazis did & what many vegans do. Maybe you don't see the difference between a human baby and a calf but that's the problem then isn't it? You would probably rather see people starve than eat meat because your ideology surpasses reason. I think I need to point this out to you. My higher ♀ purpose is to expose the truth.

I can image bystanders reading this an agreeing to her lies.

I had to keep going back to my posts over, over and over, trying to figure out what happened. What I did wrong. I admit that for someone who have been vegan for 2 years this August, I have a long way to go in learning vs. someone being vegan/vegetarian for 10+ years.

However, the truth is that I didn't instigate that argument at the end of the day.

ZenTen: Don't you EVER tell lies about me nor twist my words when you disagree with my opinions.

My ♀, will call YOU out.

You lie about not having ♂♂...but admit you have ♀♂ and ♀♂

I dare you lie some more.

Quote:

That would be a pity, since your on-line personality is much more endearing than you appear to believe it to be.

I can NOT believe Taurus Five was EJ...the man who bullied me harshly from that Buddhism and Projection thread a year or so ago. What is going on? Well he's not here anymore I guess.

Tara... 😊

I really so much admire your patience, perseverance, diplomacy and your ungoing fight against all this banal bullying, scapegoating and these insults consciously intended to hurt someone.

I am so ashamed this is done in the name of astrology!

Wasn't astrology meant to gain a deeper insight of how and why we OURSELVES react in the way we do?

Is it not the greatest tool to help us to understand conflict in our life and transform that into growth?!

In these threads astrology is raped just to confirm personal opinions and to provoke conflict !

This thread has nothing to do with Mars: it is Pluto!

It already started with a hidden motive.

Mars is too impatient and stupid to hold back his original motifs; he fights openly.

Just look at the non-astro moralistic bs that we get poured over us! That is not Mars!! That is Pluto seeking control...

manipulating us to admire the person who knows what is good and bad. As if there is something like a general good or bad.

What is good for one person is not good for another.

Then there is the amount of staggering projection in this thread!

Pluto is much more sensitive to project because his reactions arise from hidden/unconscious emotions/feelings. In his ungoing need to manipulate and control the outside world, Pluto often loses controle over his own inner world. He is absolutely unable to let go and reflect!

In his defence Pluto will turn and turn, use emo blackmail, the victimrole, whatever, just to proof he is right.

Mars is perfectly capable to admit he is wrong and find all this turning very boring.

Mars will punch you on your nose and Pluto under the belt.

Tara, you call ZenTēn by name and I think you are right.

Ignoring her bullying doesn't stop it and doesn't help her.

Thread after thread is ruined by her ungoing search for conflict.

I hesitated to answer her replies to me (and others) because it would be a repeat of: 'what about you?', 'it takes one to know one' etc etc.

I do hope ZenTēn will take your remarks seriously and take the time to look at herself.

Tara, next time I will support you sooner because you are a breath of fresh air that was very needed to to break this spiral of negativity! Thank you. 😊

In terms of learning & in terms of understanding, you and nobody else is the center of the universe, you may know very well about a lot and that is excellent, i take my hat off to you.

But in another way, some frivolity of some resentment & passive / Plutonian aggression is good for people to learn about.

Would you not say you are "Pluto" right now? wanting control to support your view, using "Tara" as a scapegoat for your "positivity"

The truth is, no one is any different, once you all detach from the ego, you will see who is really playing power games for control of others.

Pluto can be highly transformative, and can be used for insight, guidance, help & also the deep spirituality aspect is pretty impressive, it takes a person to want something good, and to be decisive with it and to never return.

That is the phase that Pluto grants no return and a total transformation into that thing you so desire.

Pluto on the higher side tells us to let go of desire, so the desire to win... is apparent in many here.

Desire can be put to good use, perhaps your partner, give them that beautiful intensity instead of destroying others or yourself, we don't need to prove anything.

Plutonians understand this way, at least one's who have gone through enough in life, the constant change, the constant flow onwards towards betterment.

Pluto is such a raw element of the human being. It's hard for me to "spiritualize it". It's of matter, it's manifestation. I can't imagine it "letting go" of desire. These planets conquer us, our human experiences. The constant ♅ changes are trans-formative, like a dark samsara play. But ♅ is not as liberating; moksha. Maybe if it's in the 12th house natally? My ♃♅ in the 1st, I'm experiencing it in this physical body, my ego, my self-expression.

Tao quote:

Ever desireless one can see the mystery

Ever desiring one can see the manifestations.

These two spring from the same source but differ in name; this appears as darkness.

Darkness within darkness.

The gate to all mystery

Thank you, Desiree. I appreciate your support. 😊

After writing my post on my way to work I suddenly thought: It's when Pluto connects with Mars that natural anger gets toxic (manipulation, abuse etc). It's not a coincidence that the worst expression of Mars (murder) often happens when there is a Pluto transit to Mars. Now I am home and reading your post. Wow. We both had the same thought. You are completely right. Thanks for your great elaboration about Pluto. I will copy it and put it to my files.

Can you believe that this little guy lost his planet status and got demoted a while ago? The people who did that had no idea about what they were doing or maybe they were inspired by him after all. Pluto loves to work in the dark and hides his deeds.

That being said Pluto is needed and important for its positive characteristics and has his good sides like any other planet (transformation, going to the core of a problem in order to get it resolved, research etc.) It's his distortions that can be rather gruesome.

Sounds like many of you got out your explosive ♀♂ anger which was exact today. That's a great way to let off the steam you've been holding inside. 😊

I had a very productive time & earned good cash, very stressful & it's a lot of work but I'm almost done.

See how well astrology works, conjunctions especially are very powerful. 😊

Lovely postings once again CV. You are just operating at a totally different level from the rest of us who are coming from a very strong ego base. You remind us all to stay humble.

Peace out. 😊

p.s. I just saw 3Birds posting before I signed out. Well said but I don't think the thread will die just yet, not until ♂ has moved past ♀ by a degree or two. Being RX, many of the postings appear to be ♂ anger that they have held onto for a long time & now the energy explodes. The pent up ♂ still being released so maybe the thread will die down next week? 😊

I think that probably all of what you mention is connected to Pluto. Confusion would be neptune but it is what the victim (♃) ends up with. Every other point is about what the perpetrator does and that looks like pluto to me.

It's a list of manipulation tactics that are used by such people frequently.

I recommend Dr. Les Carters channel "Surviving narcissism" again.

For instance:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Ttv6bI8GqL4>

How gaslighting narcissists operate

Quote:

Gaslighting is a abusive psychological tactic. I'll be honest, that "one's better life" thread really made me question myself and my personal choices as a vegan for a while. The constant judgement towards me made me question if I was really a bad person for seeing animals equal to humans.

Manipulators make personal attacks in order to weaken the selfconfidence of the targetted person. As less selfconfident the other person is as more easy it is for them to establish their dominance (and that is their prime aim).

Ordinary healthy humans don't want to dominate others and often are easy prey because they are just can't imagine anyone behaving like that because it is not in their own mindset.

Also to add, ♂♃ stationed retrograde today, so it would have been moving at a slower pace the past week. That would have kicked up some issues.

We have also had ☾ exactly conjunct North ♁♁, which was exactly opposite ♃ and South ♁♁ in turn, the ☽♁ made a T-square to both

And for further fun to be added, ♀♁ made a square to ♃♃ too yesterday

All amidst Eclipse season, today was the halfway point between the Solar and upcoming Lunar Eclipse, the First Quarter.

It's not just here I'm seeing flare-ups, same thing IRL too 😊

Not to jinx anything for me, but I haven't really felt the anger, more tired than usual if anything although I am keeping my fingers crossed I don't get any speeding tickets, oops 😊

~Tara~ and Desiree, I appreciate your posts #295 and 296.

I think sometimes it is hard for people to separate out who they are personally, vs. their ideas. The attitude seems to be "If you criticize my ideas, you criticize me personally." Generally the personal assault is not the original intent of the idea-critic, though. For one thing, we do not know each other personally on this forum: we see a nickname, a certain posting style, normally not even a photo or much autobiographical information, so exactly who or what could be the target of a personal attack?

Social media are really prone to personal attacks, unfortunately. Maybe this thread merely partakes of a much bigger trend.

"Ah," someone counters, "But we're far more clever! We read horoscopes! So we're not just trashing words on the screen, we're explaining exactly why someone is such a miserable excuse for a human being!"

Unfortunately, if someone is already mad at another member, the chart merely becomes a more specialized weapon with which to attack him or her.

To me, this is a big misuse of astrology.

I first got hooked on astrology in my early 40s, when learning to read charts. My mother's life was very troubled during its last decades. As I interpreted her chart for the first time, I could see the inner demons with which she struggled; and how some difficult outer planet transits would have driven her into a bad place, from which she couldn't remove herself. I realized that astrology gives us a glimpse into the "wiring" of the soul.

That, I think is its best and highest use, followed by trying to be helpful to people who struggle with real-world practical problems.

This isn't to say that my own record of chart reading is perfectly pious. However, respecting the helpful and even sacred potential of the horoscope is a goal towards which I strive.

Certainly I have a feisty streak in my personality. But this is not all of who I am, and I believe that at times, my feisty streak was beneficial to others. (To mention one example, I was in a male-oriented discipline for many years. I worked on behalf of women in my discipline through my major professional association, something I couldn't have done had I seen my role as being suitably subservient to the prevailing norms.)

One would think from some of the posts on this thread, direct or covert, that my personhood could be reduced to one symbol: Mars in Pisces. 😬 (Nobody seemed to pick up on the Virgo Saturn opposition, which puts the brakes on Mars in a significant way.)

Desiree, I think you are right about Pluto. There is the quick flash of anger (Mars, possibly also Uranus) that quickly burns out vs. the long-smoldering embers of the revenge motive. This might be Mars-Saturn (traditional) or Pluto (modern) or a combination.

I can't stop people from reading my chart here. For a long time I didn't want to post it at all, out of privacy concerns. I'd been near-cyber-stalked twice, and it wasn't pleasant. Then I found people guessing at my chart, and even posting what they thought it was -- ironically with birth locations that were completely wrong. I also reached a point where I felt more comfortable in talking about my chart.

I have modified my chart here slightly out of concerns for privacy and identity theft. It is close to accurate but I wouldn't recommend a reading dependent upon complete accuracy, such as higher harmonics.

Re: Desiree's post #298.

Afternoon Sun has previously read my chart in detail on this forum, and in ways that I found highly disrespectful, as well as missing significant portions of what I am like as a person and how my life actually turned out.

He knows what he thinks about my horoscope and me. And so do I.

I also read Afternoon Sun's chart in detail on a previous thread. He didn't much care for it, either.

On a previous thread, I also did the synastry. There is a difficult reciprocal Mars-Saturn bit, but otherwise some really harmonious contacts. I thought we'd actually get along fine if we ever met.

You know Tara, there are times when it would behoove Waybread to heed her own advice and not read or answer posts she doesn't like, or disagrees with. Had she heeded admin's first warning against non-astrological postings on the Assange thread, many of her subsequent posts would not have been deleted. And, had she listened to the OP's request that we proceed in a manner that would not get the thread shut down, this thread would not exist. So many threads have been shut down by admin's to the extent that they've threatened more than once to shut the entire mundane section down. I do think if there was more astrology and less ideology there would be alot less anger, and lessen the risk of losing the mundane section - there's a very long year and a half to go before 2020.

As for toxic anger, I've seen none more than what's been expressed on the Trump thread. For 2-1/2 long years and 165 pages, this is a thread you've been more than happy to share with Zen Ten. Is the difference that, there, the two of you are in agreement which makes the anger okay?

I agree, it's not all about Mars, and that there are Saturn-Pluto dominance and control issues involved, but the more wrathful aspects of Jupiter-Juno should not be overlooked, nor the tribalism of the Moon, either.

As for the soul, it's been said that anger is our greatest teacher. In fact, our soul can become a bloody battlefield. Another member posted a quote a couple pages ago that reminded me of another from Heraclitus...

"Never will you find the boundaries of the soul, by whatever paths you search; so all-embracing is the soul's being."

What we're all working with here is like a double-edged sword. If we were to grow a thicker skin we'd lose our connection to the outer world.

Phoebe, just to set the record straight.

The moderators deleted a few of my posts on the Assange thread for non-astrological content, not for flaming anybody. One of your posts was deleted, as well.

Unfortunately in a mundane thread, I have a tendency to focus more on the facts of the matter or the analysis of a case, vs. astrology. Most of my recent posts' content related to the legality of the Assange extradition requests, and how his case intersects with the First Amendment.

I do heed my own advice about not reading and responding to posts I don't like. The best example I can think of is, time and again, putting you on my personal "ignore" list, due to your frequent carping at me.

I've been on just a few threads (since I joined in 2007) that the moderators shut down. I am not responsible for what other people post. I am not responsible for the OP's feelings about me, or anger more generally. Only she can be responsible for her own feelings.

I don't participate on the Trump thread. As you know, he is a highly polarizing figure in the US and internationally. It would be hard to imagine a thread about him that did not stimulate anger.

Phoebe, your posts on this and other threads have often been very negative and harsh. I hope you will let your hair down a little, and talk about anger in your own life. What do you see as the astrological basis for the anger that you express in this forum?

Just curious.

Quote from ~Tara~ on 09.07.2019 at 07:52 [UT+1]:

I did reflect about chronically angry people for the last few days. What I did figure out is rather shocking to me.

There is a bunch of toxic angry people in this world who do attack (♁) others regularly for no good reason. Probably everyone knows someone in their own family or at the work place like that.

Deep down this people might feel very discontent (like many people) with life but what differs is that they let their anger out onto others (overt or covert (♃)). Usually they have an belief system (♃) that sees them as superior to others and that they are basically surrounded by idiots. They will not admit to it but deep down that's what is there. In the end most of them do want to establish a dominance (♁) over others (control) as well. In order to reach their goals they will manipulate (♁) their surroundings.

Because of lack of consciousness, lack of a strong inner ♁ (healthy boundaries) or lack of a moral compass or whatever they do not hesitate to unleash their anger onto others (which is abuse of the other).

What is the effect of it? The people who are on the receiving end of this Anger (♁) will look like the bad ones. If bystanders are not able to see through it (which often does not happen) then if the attacks persist the victim will look like the villain. The constant labelling as a bad person works.

We can see that in small communities and in big collectives a well.

For instance Waybread was labelled as aggressive (♁) by ZenTen again and again in the Assange thread although I did not perceive any aggressiveness in her posts. It was obvious that she had a different opinion than ZenTen and that did not go down well with her.

Later a new thread (♃) (this one here) was opened with the disguised intention of talking about Waybread's anger (♁) issue by someone else who had read all the labelling of ZenTen in regards to Waybread in that other thread.

Then in this new thread other people who disagree with ZenTen also get labelled as aggressive (me and former astro rose). This manipulative strategy is used in order to get bystanders into their brain that this two people are also bad apples. Just spread the labelling long enough and something will stick in the end.

All the time ZenTen looks rather innocent while causing all sorts of destruction (basically being the cause of it) and knowing exactly what she is doing. That's what I call devilish behaviour.

Same thing happens with national or religious groups. Someone starts to pick at a certain group, giving them bad labels and over time more and more others believe it . Someone who seems to be bad needs some sort of correction and life for the victims becomes increasingly difficult. In the end it can lead to the murder of them. Genocides happened that way.

That is ♁ expressed in it's worst form (in a very distorted way).

Otherwise anger is a natural way of our soul telling us that something isn't right and that we Need to take some action. For instance if we are treated in a abusive way and need to stand up for ourselves.

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Aggression>

What a brilliant and eloquent post.

I've read Waybread's stuff on here for..well probably over a decade lol. She has never once struck me as being in any way aggressive. Far from it, in fact if anything she is preternaturally calm and collected at all times. An example to us all!

I agree with Greg Young's post. Any post by Waybread that I have read by her has always been very knowledgeable and I fail to see how some others see her responses as combative. I learn quite a bit from her astrologically. I feel that she also does quite a bit of research into the material that she presents. I appreciate her sharing her knowledge. I think it is just time for a kind word.

Waybread and I have found some sort of equilibrium at the moment it seems, at least we are not at each other. So I am loathe to change that. It is difficult to analyse a chart where there is conflict without risking opening wounds or alternatively down-playing factors.

And I thought we had reached some sort of equilibrium. But now with the support of Tara and Desiree and a couple of others WB has decided to rewrite the record and begin her sly attacks again. I'm accused of highly disrespectful detailed analysis of WBs chart. And poor innocent WB is just the victim again.

Well seeing you have helped revive it all Desiree, please show us your interpretation. I am now very interested, and I am not being defensive and I don't need a herbal tea, thank you..

And seeing I have been accused of doing a detailed interpretation and WB has admitted to doing my chart I will look at the dynamics that exist between us, and show how it can be looked at, hopefully impartially and reasonably sympathetically to both parties. It will take me a while to do it so please Desiree post your take on the charts while I look at them.

Greg and Northern Lights, thank you so much.

It reminds me that, back when I did a lot more entire chart readings for people, I would sometimes come across people whose chart suggested a really bad temper. I would this put to them (diplomatically, of course.)

I still recall an older person who said, "When I was younger, I did have a terrible temper, but I learned that I had to control it."

Probably most of us had to learn a lot of diplomatic language in the workplace, although it wasn't an artform I ever perfected. Now that I am retired, I feel more inclined to say what I like. Then there is the Internet Factor, which seems to bring out more anger.

Makes me wonder if Uranus, who rules sudden upsets as well as things electronic and futuristic, is afoot.

Afternoon Sun, I recommend that you re-read what you just posted. It actually has earmarks of most of astro_rose's signs of gaslighting, although I wouldn't put them in the same words.

As my mother used to say to us children, it takes two to start a quarrel. The "equilibrium" you mentioned happened when I simply ignored your disrespectful posts and you took up other conversations. For the record, I solicited none of the supportive posts. However, I appreciate them, and I think that it is appropriate to thank people for them.

Here's what you just wrote about me:

"...but now with the support of... others WB has decided to rewrite the record and begin her sly attacks again."

What you essentially just said is that I am: (a) emboldened by other people, not by what I independently want to say; (b) I lie about existing posts; and (c) and I am deceitful in expressing my opinions.

"...poor innocent WB is just the victim again."

I have never described myself as either "innocent" (of what?) or as a "victim." I am not a victim on this thread, as I recently stated. Possibly others see me that way.

"I have been accused of doing a detailed interpretation...." (mentioned 2x)

So now who is playing the innocent, "accused" of an innocent activity? The problem, AS, as you recall, wasn't your volume of detail. It was in your spiteful interpretation that simply missed big chunks of my personality and life experience. You weaponized my chart to explain exactly why I was such a rotten person on this forum.

Such behaviour is not only offensive, but it violates professional astrologers' ethics codes. See sections A of ISAR's and the NCGR's Code of Ethics:

<https://isarastrology.org/en-ca/about/code-of-ethics-7-2003/>

<https://geocosmic.org/about-ncgr/code-of-ethics/>

If you are unclear about which specific sections of these codes I mean, let me know and I will identify each of them for you.

"WB has admitted to doing my chart...."

"Admitted" is a synonym for a reluctant confession. This was not the basis of my simple statement of fact, that I did post a partial reading of your chart.

Given this deteriorating level of response from you today, and the caliber of your previous unsolicited chart reading of me, I recommend that you not read my chart, Afternoon Sun: unless you can take a more ethical and balanced approach than I saw in the past. This will probably require a more serious and unaccustomed level of introspection on your part, as to your true purpose and commitments, than I have seen in your many posts to date.

I've been aware of how angry people get here on the forum and at times it seems quite destructive.

I was told by a forum member a long time ago that many on this forum have mental health disorders, unemployment and financial issues, divorce and relationship issues. Many are disabled, lonely, and on this forum all day long. And not to take it to 'heart'.

I recently was told by a member that I'm "out for revenge" for her, from a member I didn't even know or follow, and that I had continually "personally attacked" her. I of course asked for the thread(s), which she could not provide since they did not exist.

I don't know if it's astrology or forums in general. It seems like I don't see this kind of anger and aggression on other forums. And the Ad Hominem attacks often using one's chart, which this individual did to me also, w/o even knowing my chart... Weird.

Quote:

So, I wondered where anger is found in one's natal chart. For those who are completely unaware of how they come across... are there any placements they might check out, such as Mars in a natal chart, to get a clue and start to own their projections perhaps?

Yeah, many seem unaware or at least uncaring, how they come across. And yes, Mars and other placements may be seen, but it won't necessarily show TBI, Narcissism, Medications one is under the influence of, and much more.

All that said, many here are quite passionate about their beliefs on astrology, nothing wrong with that, but it seems many go on the attack to prove them 'right' and another 'wrong'. It seems some feel the need to feel like a Deity.

I think Rob Hand said "the one thing I wish for astrology, is to stop arguing over it"

But I don't think that arguing about astrology is the root cause of all the anger and aggression that is on here.

Everyone is experiencing the same transits currently and they are stressful, regardless of where they fall in our personal charts. With Saturn ♄ Pluto ♇ Sun and in addition Mercury Rx♁♂ ☐ Uranus ☹️ along with Jupiter ☐ Neptune...everyone is experiencing a lot of stressors.

Those stressors are not (in reality) other people on this forum or anywhere; they are experienced internally if astrology and birth charts have any relevance whatsoever. Whatever plays out outside, it is an inside job and it is only inside that anything can change.

We no longer see planets as Gods and Goddesses and astrology isn't approached with respect or prayer as possibly it was in the past and still is in Vedic tradition.

On this forum we have no common way of seeing planets. This is the psychological astrology section of the forum and there are members here who express contempt for Jung and Freud and Liz Greene. We have no common language and are using words really loosely without actually paying any attention to what is actually meant, just batting back and forth in a pretty unconscious unreflecting kind of way.

If we respect any astrology framework or use any chart based model in any way whatsoever, it behoves us to pay attention to how we are individually affected currently, personally, quite separately, before we interact on the forum (or anywhere for that matter).

Waybread, there must have been some synchronicity going on! Had a similar conversation with someone yesterday after watching a documentary.

We were discussing whether technology has changed the world for the worse or has it just simply revealed what has always been there.

Because technology has given everyone a voice now, anyone with a phone or tablet can put their two pennies out there which unfortunately includes trolling and flaming, even the most mild mannered people in real life can turn into raging sociopaths online, due to one pivotal thing anonymity.

I saw another documentary where they tested this. A professional singer came into the room and pretended to sing very badly. Control Group A were asked to provide their comments in paper, but with their full names shown . Control Group B were asked to do the same, but their comments were anonymised. You can pretty much guess what happened!

Of course, the anonymised group were the most critical, scathing, and used very personal attacks, ie "she sounds like cats drowning!". The looks on their faces though when the singer came back into the room and read the comments pure horror! 😱

The ones with their full names on the comments were far more encouraging and positive, suggesting that she has a few singing lessons but how she has "great potential".

The groups did take away a valuable lesson though, treat other people well online as you would treat people offline, face to face 😊 there are still human feelings sat behind that screen.

Edit to add: the astrology bit! I wonder if therefore, online trolling can be seen as a 12H issue now? I originally thought 3H for communication, I still do actually. But 12H combined would fit in with the anonymity, what (or who) you can't see, and therefore your hidden enemies

What are you so fearful of Waybread? Which face do we see now? The intimidator revealing herself? Or the victim planning to garner forum support? How many times have you done this to people?

Shall we partake of some afternoon bread?

Here is your Saturn on my Mars (my chart ruler) attempting to suppress my Mars, while at the same time your Mars is opposing mine initiating an attack, but under the guise of innocence - your rising Neptune in Libra that you use to confuse others about your intent. Are you pretending you don't know what you do?

Your Sun opposes my Saturn, I expect you also feel restricted by my Saturn despite your flirty contradictory overtures (that we can get on) of your Venus Mercury on my MC opposed to your Moon on my IC, (logic and emotion at loggerheads), everything conflated and all brought together by your Pluto at the midpoint of one or the other ends of all your oppositions and smack on my Pluto, which, responding to the way you "Saturn my Mars", is saying "get off me!" as loudly and clearly as it can.

If we add your Ceres to the mix, which is at 17 Leo, then there are no less than seven planets, both your lights, both your inner planets, and Mars and Saturn all bundled on or opposite your Pluto or Ceres at their midpoint, with your Moon applying to Pluto.

Your main outlet for your Pluto is that sextile to your rising Neptune in Libra, lying just beneath your Virgo Ascendant, which disguises your intention to others, beneath a helpful, bookish manner. With five planets in air signs you find it easy to communicate and spread your Neptunian persona, it is a grand trine by element, not aspect, but like most grand trines it shows a habitual pattern of escapism, almost effortless for you now. But it is a mixed blessing, for like most grand trines, it is a closed circle, a habit pattern that repeats and doubtless has repeated throughout your life and career.

As you point out, it takes two to start a quarrel. And you've certainly been in many. I don't think it coincidence Waybread, and I can feel through my chart the dynamics of your chart and any astrologer worth their salt will see how Neptune's escapist tendencies will come to the fore in your first house, especially as a part of a grand trine. You could use your chart more constructively than being one half of numerous quarrels, and jumping between the intimidator and the victim. Between Pluto and Neptune.

Why don't you apply your astrological knowledge to your own chart and behaviour? You don't have to get into quarrels if you don't want to. You could even take your own advice and just ignore any posts you don't like.

Quote from Afternoon Sun on 09.07.2019 at 04:04 [UT+1]:

well Jen J my post was about how an astrological technique that shows coincidence with events reaffirms our place in the universe, that it is not fate but an affirmation of our right to be here, that we are in sync with what we have to learn and it is shown in our chart (if we have the wisdom to perceive it). That you choose to selectively pluck out a sentence, and detach it from the context of the paragraph it is in to suit your opposed world view, is not my fault nor concern. (eg "please note my use of the word right etc" - wrong Jen J they were my words and my use, not your words and your use).

Firstly, your whole response is of anger, and hatred shown towards the person rather than of the contesting opinion you were given.

Further, the highlighted is to clarify just how blind anger can cloud your interpreting, which causes you to become childlike in claiming ownership of words!

So for clarity of your understanding my meaning in saying "my USE of the word "right" " - please note the emphasis in capitals to clarify my intention. It certainly had no intention of robbing you of your words in the way you read it as " MY use".

Furthermore the whole context of my post should have made it clear that it was based on your word "right" which I USED to contest it by giving my opinion.

Your problem lies in misinterpreting.

You misinterpreted the whole meaning of my post by misinterpreting my meaning of USING your words "right to be".

That made your whole response from the wrong assumption of my meaning which came from my saying "ZERO right to be" - by your placing judgemental emphasis on the words "to be" rather than on my intended meaning of "right" being ZERO.

You misinterpreted my intended meaning by overlooking the word even in capitals, "ZERO".

ZERO referred to "right", not to "to be". As such it gives a different meaning than the one which you ascribed to it.

As for the rest of your post, it is nothing more than ramblings of a self-defensive ego which don't merit response.

Jen J

Your ramblings :

Quote:

You express your anger in a way that demands others be subject to it, but it carries no authority with me. It is your anger for you to endure. Perhaps it is your place in this world to be a co-ordinator of anger on issues you choose, and to lash those who do not bow to your selective interpretations or world view of what they themselves say to others. That is for you to worry about, argue about, demand agreement, or promote, whatever. Far be it from me to become a disciple or follower of yours. I refuse to get angry at your bidding so will happily refrain from supporting your causes or point of view.

The one thing that is crystal clear to me is that you are an angry person. I am not. I am a person who is attuned to my life and path despite the shades of good and evil that exist in our world. I believe the paths we tread are not random nor haphazard. Neither my ♃ in ♃ road, nor your ♃ in ♃ roar. (Yes I know that is where transit ♃ is, not your frustrated Mars in ♃ which loves an argument) But your way is not mine. So I will not adopt it and be angry, and look for a word here or there to justify an unprovoked attack, nor to bicker about. That can be your bag. You don't need my help to get what you are looking for. So I'll end this happily with a 😊

Quote from Waybread on 10.07.2019 at 05:46 [UT+1]:

Afternoon Sun, I recommend that you re-read what you just posted. It actually has earmarks of most of astro_rose's signs of gaslighting, although I wouldn't put them in the same words.

.....

Here's what you just wrote about me:

"....but now with the support of.... others WB has decided to rewrite the record and begin her sly attacks again."

What you essentially just said is that I am: (a) emboldened by other people, not by what I independently want to say; (b) I lie about existing posts; and (c) and I am deceitful in expressing my opinions.

"...poor innocent WB is just the victim again."

I have never described myself as either "innocent" (of what?) or as a "victim." I am not a victim on this thread, as I recently stated. Possibly others see me that way.

"I have been accused of doing a detailed interpretation...." (mentioned 2x)

So now who is playing the innocent, "accused" of an innocent activity? The problem, AS, as you recall, wasn't your volume of detail. It was in your spiteful interpretation that simply missed big chunks of my personality and life experience. You weaponized my chart to explain exactly why I was such a rotten person on this forum.

Such behaviour is not only offensive, but it violates professional astrologers' ethics codes. See sections A of ISAR's and the NCGR's Code of Ethics:

<https://isarastrology.org/en-ca/about/code-of-ethics-7-2003/>

<https://geocosmic.org/about-ncgr/code-of-ethics/>

If you are unclear about which specific sections of these codes I mean, let me know and I will identify each of them for you.

"WB has admitted to doing my chart...."

"Admitted" is a synonym for a reluctant confession. This was not the basis of my simple statement of fact, that I did post a partial reading of your chart.

Given this deteriorating level of response from you today, and the caliber of your previous unsolicited chart reading of me, I recommend that you not read my chart, Afternoon Sun: unless you can take a more ethical and balanced approach than I saw in the past. This will probably require a more serious and unaccustomed level of introspection on your part, as to your true purpose and commitments, than I have seen in your many posts to date.

By way of offering some insight into my experience of communicating with Afternoon Sun, which I obviously hope may help in your dismissing any further deterioration in your communications with him, is that whatever gets said is misinterpreted and then defended by criticisms based on ego justification. (Virgo Mars can be very critical given Virgo need for boxes).

Therefore communicating becomes irrational given that it also needs thinking outside of boxes.

Perhaps this is due to Mercury retrograde. I have not communicated with Afternoon Sun until this Retrograde so I will concede it.

I want to qualify my offer of my own insight by way enjoying your thinking, and expressing your thoughts - especially your post about how you see anger expressed here on the forum.

It is a pleasure to read your rational thoughts.

My mercury is the apex planet of a yod. Perhaps that also gives clarity for this post. 😊

My response was not a "chop" in your manner of communicating but one obviously of something you are not able to appreciate - explanation.

You have no idea why I am still around because you still misinterpret the emphasis of my original post which conveys my meaning - i.e. RIGHT. I said we have "ZERO right to be on this planet"

I did not say that humans should not live. Its about our "RIGHT", and in my opinion that right is ZERO.

Try to follow the meaning.

You are correct about my Mars in Libra. Thank heaven, I say. At least I can express it by Air and not Fire. I direct my anger against human mentalities, especially those which assume their right on this planet is to DENY other lifeforms on this planet their same RIGHT. That in my reasoning cancels their own right to ZERO!! I hope you understand the rationale.

This is Libra - it needs equal rights and balances.

Mars in Libra : I argue for those equal rights and balances.

And Mars is trine my Libra ruler Venus in Aquarius (together with Jupiter) - also Air.

Well seeing you have helped revive it all Desiree, please show us your interpretation. I am now very interested, and I am not being defensive and I don't need a herbal tea, thank you..

No, I did not revive it at all, AS, it was far from over!! And today's replies prove that. Any little spark and it starts again. If two people stop shouting and attacking each other will not say the conflict is solved. The conflict is only solved when they stop pointing fingers and start looking at themselves... :
What are YOU doing, Afternoon Sun, that is fueling this conflict?

Synastry is not meant to find confirmation of the fault of the other... It is meant to give us an inside in what is happening in the relationship and with this insight we get a great tool to change / bow the content of the two planets in a more positive or workable way.

Quote from Afternoon Sun on 10.07.2019 at 08:40 [UT+1]:

Here is your Saturn on my Mars, my chart ruler, attempting to suppress me,

Here you use the Synastry to find confirmation of the fault of Waybread...

That doesn't help...

Waybread is not consciously entering this forum in the morning with her coffee with the idea to go nicely suppress Afternoon Sun.

So the right way to encounter this is: YOU feel frustrated, suppressed, limited (Saturn) in the way you stand up for yourself (Mars).

You feel irritation and anger (Mars) boiling up by the way you are confronted by dogma, rules, regulations, conservatism and the way 'things are supposed to be done' (Saturn).

Now let's look at what your Mars must feel on the Saturn of Waybread...because Synastry is a two-way street...

Waybread must feel attacked and haunted by your warlord (Mars) her boundaries (Saturn) stepped on, her dogmas, rules, regulations, conservatism (Saturn) all blown out of the sky by your active and aggressive (Mars) reactions.

You have to agree that she must feel very threatened by your Mars.

By looking at it from two sides... and Synastry always has two sides... you block your own blame-game. Then, and only then, you get insight which is the first step in breaking the cycle of conflict.

You skipped the square from Waybread's Saturn to your Mercury that is part of a t-square with both your Mars. I think this is a very important configuration.

Quote from Afternoon Sun on 10.07.2019 at 08:40 [UT+1]:

while at the same time your Mars is opposing mine initiating an attack on me,

And your Mars had the day off ? 😊

Certainly not today because your reply where I quote this from is one big angry rage/attack...

I think herbal tea is not enough anymore but a pause from the forum for a couple weeks looks advisable.

Quote from Waybread on 09.07.2019 at 23:09 [UT+1]:

Phoebe, just to set the record straight.

The moderators deleted a few of my posts on the Assange thread for non-astrological content, not for flaming anybody. One of your posts was deleted, as well.

Unfortunately in a mundane thread, I have a tendency to focus more on the facts of the matter or the analysis of a case, vs. astrology. Most of my recent posts' content related to the legality of the Assange extradition requests, and how his case intersects with the First Amendment.

I do heed my own advice about not reading and responding to posts I don't like. The best example I can think of is, time and again, putting you on my personal "ignore" list, due to your frequent carping at me.

I've been on just a few threads (since I joined in 2007) that the moderators shut down. I am not responsible for what other people post. I am not responsible for the OP's feelings about me, or anger more generally. Only she can be responsible for her own feelings.

I don't participate on the Trump thread. As you know, he is a highly polarizing figure in the US and internationally. It would be hard to imagine a thread about him that did not stimulate anger.

Phoebe, your posts on this and other threads have often been very negative and harsh. I hope you will let your hair down a little, and talk about anger in your own life. What do you see as the astrological basis for the anger that you express in this forum?

Just curious.

Among your posts deleted by admin's on the Assange thread was your initial one addressing Alice Portman, a far more experienced astrologer than either you or I, and for that reason someone I would have preferred to hear more from. Essentially, focusing on ideology rather than astrology, you proceeded in a non-astrological, flaming rant to tell her how wrong she was and asking how could she possibly believe what she had written. She wasn't willing to oblige you with a response, and neither were others, so your attention turned primarily to Zen Ten who was only too willing, and from there you engaged in a back and forth volley of more non-astrological, flaming posts.

Meanwhile, it was really this simple, WB. Still is:

Quote from Phoebe on 09.07.2019 at 12:11 [UT+1]:

Had she heeded admin's first warning against non-astrological postings on the Assange thread, many of her subsequent posts would not have been deleted.

And, had she listened to the OP's request that we proceed in a manner that would not get the thread shut down, this thread would not exist.

I realize we live in a polarized world which is why I choose not to identify too much with either extreme, or to be played by politicians and MSM. I've lived through the politics of enough election cycles to know that cycles of expansion and contraction, progressivism and conservatism - guided by Jupiter and Saturn - are as natural as the ebb and flow of life, and whichever prevails at any given point, it is was it is. It all balances out. I would say, however, the Trump thread was and has been stimulated by anger rather than the thread stimulated anger, though anger can become rather engrained and free-floating. Speaking of Uranus, it is placed in the Sibly 7th of adversarial relationships and open enemies - apparently some Americans, and some in the world at large, aren't too comfortable with its energies. Trump is Uranian through and through. Welcome to the world of trans-saturnia.

Why am I "feisty"? You missed it on pg. 12, #229.

I feel like all of this arguing is unresolved hurt from friends/past members being banned and blaming Waybread for that. Afternoon Sun seems to be the most hurt.

Afternoon Sun Quote:

Waybread and I have found some sort of equilibrium at the moment it seems, at least we are not at each other. So I am loathe to change that. It is difficult to analyse a chart where there is conflict without risking opening wounds or alternatively down-playing factors. I am quite willing for someone else to interpret our charts while I think about it and take a look before I decide whether I will and how I would go about it without making it contentious, should I do so.. And I would need Waybread to agree as well in this instance.

This was Waybread's response, no acknowledgement of my offer to ask her permission, no regard for me. Instead she attacked and tried to score points. She wanted to sabotage any resolution before it happened because she did not want me to be seen as reasonable.

Waybread Quote:

Afternoon Sun has previously read my chart in detail on this forum, and in ways that I found highly disrespectful, as well as missing significant portions of what I am like as a person and how my life actually turned out.

He knows what he thinks about my horoscope and me. And so do I.

I also read Afternoon Sun's chart in detail on a previous thread. He didn't much care for it, either.

On a previous thread, I also did the synastry. There is a difficult reciprocal Mars-Saturn bit, but otherwise some really harmonious contacts. I thought we'd actually get along fine if we ever met.

Had I initiated the negativity I would not have couched her Mars as the initiator. I included my chart and not just hers so you can see the whole picture. It would have been so simple for me to just take her chart and describe the way her pattern operates and it would be so much clearer. Try it and see how that multiple opposition of hers feeds onto her Pluto, and releases onto her rising Neptune, inflated by the ambitious square from Jupiter.. I do accept I have an assertive Mars but I did try to be respectful to Waybread and she rejected it with her post. And now you are doing her bidding too by attacking me and ignoring the sequence of what occurred.. . End of story.

Would that not be confirmation bias?

I have been too busy with other things to be bothered, i come in every now and then and just simply analyze the situation, sometimes i don't post at all.

Too busy looking up what books i need for studying psychology so i can prepare and go back to school and become learned.

I'm thinking about things that are far away from this topic, i just simply like to give my view on some things. I do not see surface level and never have, i see deep motivations of others, i can't help it.

I don't feel one bit hurt or one bit vulnerable around here, i feel great. 😊

I would go into the clique side of what WB has formed, but that would seem like an attack instead of the person who see's her differently in an objective fashion.

Yes you score the bulls eye CV. I saw through her and called her out. She doesn't like anyone, and particularly any male, who has the temerity to stand up to her. It triggers a rage, but I am not responsible for that. Perhaps she doesn't recognise it in herself, or doesn't want to accept it. So she is clever enough to get others to side with her. I just don't like being pushed around and then blamed for her actions. At 71 I have my faults, but I'm too long in the tooth to be easily fooled, and like many older women whom I admire for their candour, I am pretty much past caring what people think so long as I believe in myself.

Politeness & over expression of intellectual worth can cloud judgements of others, especially those who are quick to enamor others with this charisma.

Completely separate from WB, a person who used charisma to hide the most heinous of crimes.

What AS has stated is objective truth, there is not many men if any (i also have not seen her) that she will reply and say kind things to in support of an argument, theory or anything else as such. It seems to be a very feminine approach, as stated a clique can be formed.

In light of this situation, i am not part of any of this, there is no feelings from me behind what i am typing, i don't in actual fact care, however i cannot remove myself due to the topics inherent need for someone to cut to the core of the situation.

Intellectualizing things is great, but not all things that appear to be intellectual are intellectual and without hidden bias & sheep following.

It is also ok to support another person and also even believe in them, but on what basis? based on a general theory of which has no evidence nor proof?

So we look for evidence & proof, this is why i seem a contrary, there is no fight in me, just seeing and saying what is. No inbetween.

On this forum we have no common way of seeing planets. This is the psychological astrology section of the forum and there are members here who express contempt for Jung and Freud and Liz Greene. We have no common language and are using words really loosely without actually paying any attention to what is actually meant, just batting back and forth in a pretty unconscious unreflecting kind of way.

If we respect any astrology framework or use any chart based model in any way whatsoever, it behoves us to pay attention to how we are individually affected currently, personally, quite separately, before we interact on the forum (or anywhere for that matter).

The chart of the moment is a stressed one. Mercury rx is conjunct Mars.They are squaring Uranus!!!!

Exactly.

? Jen J., You are quoting me above...not zippy. 😊 Don't know if zippy wants my words put into his/her mouth.

It is Mercury rx. ♃♂☾☽ and also ☾☽.

Everyone needs to stop for a breath and a walk in the fresh air. Look at the sky, listen to the birds, enjoy a tree or something.

My apologies. Mercury rx yes! And my out-the-park migraine headache.

I have now corrected it.

But that's not true WB. I just went back & counted your postings. 72. 80% which contain no astrology on an astrology forum,

(how many other members do you think would get this 'special status'? 😞)

90% spent on ♂ attacking any member who didn't agree with your narrative of Assange. I was in contact with a member who chose not to post because they knew you would just attack them & they are very sensitive/spiritual. She started a color chart like the one Bush used after 9/11, with red being the 'highest alert'. Your ♂ anger & ♀ hate went right from orange to red almost immed & never let up. As she remarked to me 'The level of ☽ hysteria has reached maximum force'. 😊

When you realized that your ♀ dominate/bully style wasn't working, you pulled out that 'I'm an academic' card, along with being a U.S. citizen & only you are capable to critical thinking & understanding such a case with so many ♀ ideas! 😊 Then when that didn't work, you resorted to insulting the entire Australian race. All along playing the ♂ victim where you need to be 'rescued' by others who rush to your aid to protect you from all those nasty ♂ ♀ attackers.

As stated by others, why didn't you just skip their postings or develop a 'thicker skin' if you want to participate in discussions? As this is your answer to anyone who disagrees with you.

You had postings deleted earlier in the thread & Mods posted a warning to stick to astrology. You chose to ignore them & continued with your ♂ angry, non-astrological postings. Even the mere mention of you looking at how ♂ operates in your chart sets you off & you called ☽ 5 a ♀ stalker, bully & now he's gone of course.

I won't post in the Assange thread again as I told you as your need to react in an ♂ aggressive manner will end up having it shut down & I have too much respect for astrology & the thread to have that happen. And I know that disagreeing with you often gets a person banned. But some ♀ facts are needed here especially with the currently planetary energies where out of control ♂ anger is causing chaos. I thought Penguin's post about ☽ turning RX very important in this thread as wounds have opened up with many & they appear to want to attack others instead of dealing with their own healing. Perhaps those who are in pain due to past ☽ issues will try to stop ♀ projecting onto others & try to heal themselves? 😊

Peace out! 😊

This ♂ ♀ is taking place in h 6 ♂ DC so I'm so glad I have this temporary work project as I'm feeling restless & the adrenaline is pumping through me much more than normal. I'm exhausted by the end of the day & have no energy to even talk. 😊

Maybe others can take long walks? 😊

Quote from Waybread on 09.07.2019 at 23:09 [UT+1]:

Phoebe, just to set the record straight.

The moderators deleted a few of my posts on the Assange thread for non-astrological content, not for flaming anybody. One of your posts was deleted, as well.

Unfortunately in a mundane thread, I have a tendency to focus more on the facts of the matter or the analysis of a case, vs. astrology. Most of my recent posts' content related to the legality of the Assange extradition requests, and how his case intersects with the First Amendment.

I do heed my own advice about not reading and responding to posts I don't like. The best example I can think of is, time and again, putting you on my personal "ignore" list, due to your frequent carping at me.

I've been on just a few threads (since I joined in 2007) that the moderators shut down. I am not responsible for what other people post. I am not responsible for the OP's feelings about me, or anger more generally. Only she can be responsible for her own feelings.

I don't participate on the Trump thread. As you know, he is a highly polarizing figure in the US and internationally. It would be hard to imagine a thread about him that did not stimulate anger.

Phoebe, your posts on this and other threads have often been very negative and harsh. I hope you will let your hair down a little, and talk about anger in your own life. What do you see as the astrological basis for the anger that you express in this forum?

Just curious.

Among your posts deleted by admin's on the Assange thread was your initial one addressing Alice Portman, a far more experienced astrologer than either you or I, and for that reason someone I would have preferred to hear more from. Essentially, focusing on ideology rather than astrology, you proceeded in a non-astrological, flaming rant to tell her how wrong she was and asking how could she possibly believe what she had written. She wasn't willing to oblige you with a response, and neither were others, so your attention turned primarily to Zen Ten who was only too willing, and from there you engaged in a back and forth volley of more non-astrological, flaming posts.

Meanwhile, it was really this simple, WB. Still is:

Quote from Phoebe on 09.07.2019 at 12:11 [UT+1]:

Had she heeded admin's first warning against non-astrological postings on the Assange thread, many of her subsequent posts would not have been deleted.

And, had she listened to the OP's request that we proceed in a manner that would not get the thread shut down, this thread would not exist.

Why am I "feisty"? You missed it on pg. 12, #229.

ZenTen,

Posts: 4355

as former banned member Bluebird (Black Crow, Ringo etc.) who sneaked (♃) into the forum again under a different Name (♃) you take your mouth rather full IMO. I mean admins don't ban (♃) people for no good reason. You were centerstage of a big brawl last time and now you are again involved in another one.

I notice your urge to fight (♂) and heat up discords. Also anyone disagreeing with you has to pay a price for it. Just today someone got accused of spreading lies because he is of a different opinion (♃) as you.

<https://forum.astro.com/cgi/forum.cgi?num=1562333952/21#21>

I can see that happen almost daily in different threads (♃). Have a look at your own ♂ and reflect about your actions.

Waybreads posts in the Assange thread were not aggressive (♂) and some of her deleted posts (♃) (and that of others were deleted too) were not deleted because of aggressive posting. You were accusing her of aggression all the time while your way of reacting to her was rather aggressive (♂) IMO. Claiming WB insulted the entire Australian race is completely invented by you too.

It's a sad state of affairs that what you say can't be believed (♃) anymore until it gets checked. Unfortunately often it turns out to be not true (♃).

I hope you find some peace (♃) in you and learn to accept that other people are individuals with their own views and not everyone who differs from your point of view is a liar (♃ ♃, ♃ ♃) or an aggressive person.

The current ♃ ♂ -conjunction squaring Uranus is certainly playing out in this forum as well but it is only a rather short-term influence. There are underlying issues that seem to be long-term. Without solving them the next brawl is as certain as the Amen in church. 😞

Now hold up, your "sensitive and spiritual" friend can quietly gossip and weaponize Way-bread and other people's charts, not confronting her anger in fear of "attacks" yet if a ♃ ♂ choose not to confront or have issues confronting their anger in fear of ridicule, they are the "evil" passive-aggressive ones who always act like victims? Narcissists really DO flock together in any forum, including astrology ones. Please stop posting cowardly posts from your "friend". I don't think anyone cares honestly.

How about you deal with your ♃ ♂: quit glorifying your suffering yet disregarding others you deem unworthy because they have a different opinion.

"Narcissists really DO flock together in any forum" This is gaslighting.

""sensitive and spiritual" friend can quietly gossip and weaponize Way-bread and other people charts" Which person do you accuse of being this persons friend?

You are not doing a good job by displaying the same symptoms.

This problem for you and like many, you fall into the trap of aggression.

Did you mention you are a Libra Mars & Venus in Aries? those are in mutual reception.

So it's OK for someone to stand by someone who vilifies a ♃♂ (or simply a member's chart) in private out of fear of "attacks", yet...oh..yet...we are the passive aggressive ones if we stay silent? Wait...now, I posted/replied back...I'm "aggressive"?! 😏 My ♃♂ can't win. Pick one. Do you want me to be silent? Do you want me to be angry? Do you want me to use a feminine or masculine approach? What do YOU want from me? Because here you are replying back to me but not the other REAL aggressive posts.

Do you know the definition of a narcissist? You know what, it's interesting, I don't think I need to jump on the term so easily, it's wrong as I am not a professional who can diagnose someone with that term. I wouldn't even do that towards my mom, certainly not anymore, who was finally correctly diagnosed. BUT you? Do you still unprofessionally label your mom or dad a narcissist? Those who have hurt you in the past?, I'm very sure you called them a narcissist a few times? Was there even a thread of one here by you? So by your definition, are you gas-lighting too? By your definition are ALL people gas-lighters when they label the ones who hurt them narcissists? I can easily go back to Astro-Seek and other astrology forums and find threads on these. ARE they gas-lighting Code? See, I get it, it's easy for you to pick battles, it's human nature. Just say you don't like me and GO.

And to the highlighted no. I don't have ♄♂. I do have ♃♀.

You are correct. But you are using someone's personal wounds to feed yourself here which you accuse others of low blows and narcissistic traits.

Interestingly, i do not dislike you or anyone else here, i in fact am way too strong emotionally and i will not say anything differently.

My lack was the lack of self, and being dependant instead of coming into my own, i have issues and battle scars, but i now have a direction in life.

No need to get angry about anything.

I am glad you corrected my information on your Mars placement, thank you.

Do you have anything else you wish to get off your chest? or are you still accusing everyone of being against people? 😊

Well Code_Vernica, what do you need to get off your chest?

For someone who claims to be neutral and an objective observer you are rather involved in siding with one party here.

Calling out narcissism (P) is quite o.k. IMO. I find it strange that former children (D) of narcissists (P) end up having to deal with people who behave that way in this forum again.

I have Mars in Libra.

I swiftly ignore aggression as it pops up because it's the easiest way to blow past it.

I have a younger sister who is an aggressive personality, foul tempered, prone to boasting and uses foul language constantly.

Once she broke a mirror on the bathroom rug, right before I had to jump in the shower before work. I told her to clean it up, but she wouldn't, and then she had told my father that i had broken the mirror! (Did I mention that she's a nutcase?) I caught hell from my dad (who is even more of a nutcase than my sister...). So I did the only thing a logical Libra could do, and I proceeded to ignore my sister. I didn't speak to her for 5 years (and counting). And we lived in the same house.

Posts: 1941

I also have Pluto in Libra, conjunct Mars, and freezing people out is just what i do when dealing with completely unreasonable people. And they do exist...maddening. but it's the only way to remain sane sometimes.

Because she mentions things that she does herself..

And luckily for her she has some experience with other places so knows how to rip up someone from behind, it's called being destructive, feeding on others to fulfill yourself & having no caring bone in your body, and you actually think the smell from many of these people's butts are all candy and roses.

Everyone IS against each other here Code. This thread is so long for a reason.

Also, how am I using people's wound to feed myself here? For example, Neutral, my post was highly misunderstood. To clarify, it worries me that someone with a mental illness finds value in reading argumentative posts from others. It's not healthy at all. That's why I said it's unbelievable. However, I know where she is coming from. Even I look at myself and wonder why I am going back and forth with others, I worry about my own mentality. Yes. Truth of the matter is life circumstances are slow. I am bored some days. I bought a big home recently now I am waiting to work, I care for my sister at home as my job. I study astrology all day online. I play with my cats.

I think with ♀♁, I want to believe I am strong and can handle it. I'm not you though. I am emotional but unlike my twin sister, not strong enough. EJ was the first member that made me suicidal. ZenTen second. My stomach hurts every-time she replies. My body hurts. Why can this forum have an ignore opinion?

Cyber-bullying is no joke for a generation like us, teens and young adults, adults 30+ are killing themselves more than ever because of the internet.

So I WILL call out these abusers/narcissists when necessary.

We've been conditioned to find value in toxic anonymity.

I think about that YouTuber gamer Etika who recently committed suicide because of the internet bullying. His bipolar disorder episodes were ridiculed by the world, even by his own fans. The internet is not the real world, there is no love.

I just found out he had ♃♁ like me. 😞 He was born 7 days after me it makes sense. ♁ ☐ his ♃♁.

There, got that out of my chest. Is it too passive aggressive? Should I be more angry? I rather be honest.

Cyber-bullying is no joke for a generation like us, teens and young adults, adults 30+ are killing themselves more than ever because of the internet.

We've been conditioned to find value in toxic anonymity.

I think about that YouTuber gamer Etika who recently committed suicide because of the internet bullying. His bipolar disorder episodes were ridiculed by the world, even by his own fans. The internet is not the real world, there is no love. No one cares about each other.

I just found out he had XO like me. 😞 He was born 7 days after me it makes sense. O \square his X O .

There, got that out of my chest. Is it too passive aggressive? Should I be more angry?

Your words hurt me in all truth, you have to grow from this sense of pain Astro_Rose.

Yours words do appease me here, and i am thankful.

What you were doing is not respectful, has no tact, is incredibly destructive & ruthless, all Pluto qualities (immature Pluto)

I do not wish to hurt you or anyone else either, i want you all to be happy, but to be happy, you must push through this barrier of pain.

I am sorry that people made you feel so badly, the best option is to not give them your power, they use it against you.

I will not be speaking to you again, not because i dislike you, but to not be hurt again myself.

OMG doh! 😞 Not sure why I completely overlooked it I suppose because I was more interested in what was happening with XO , mind was elsewhere

The recent VO conjunction at 4° exactly square the Forum chart's own VO conjunction at 4°
 VO was prolonging it due to it stationing retrograde at that exact same degree

No wonder the thread continues and continues. Going back on past (Rx) discussions (V) in Fixed signs. Nobody is backing down. O will be crossing the Asc soon as well.

The thread will probably wane, or issues may finally resolve, as V stations direct, or when it leaves the shadow degrees. In the meantime, it will spend the entire retrograde in the 12H (note that this thread actually started just 3 days after it entered shadow)

I'm off to look at some nice trees now 😊

CV, if I may jump in here, this reminds me of Khalil Gibran and though I am not a religious man, i find these words of his quite moving:

*Your pain is the breaking of the shell that encloses your understanding.
Even as the stone of the fruit must break, that its heart may stand in the sun, so must you know pain.
And could you keep your heart in wonder at the daily miracles of your life, your pain would not seem less wondrous than your joy;
And you would accept the seasons of your heart, even as you have always accepted the seasons that pass over your fields.
And you would watch with serenity through the winters of your grief.
Much of your pain is self-chosen.
It is the bitter potion by which the physician within you heals your sick self.
Therefore trust the physician, and drink his remedy in silence and tranquillity:
For his hand, though heavy and hard, is guided by the tender hand of the Unseen,
And the cup he brings, though it burn your lips, has been fashioned of the clay which the Potter has moistened with His own sacred tears.*

Tara - at least be honest in your personal vendetta against me. ♀ energy can be extremely destructive. We used to be astro-pals until we had a falling out. We spoke privately about many members here & other subjects. We don't talk anymore.

I would never use your chart or your private conversations with me against you in some ♂ rage and ♀ vindictive manner such as you have done.

I can ignore all your posts from now on but your little ♀ game of bullying me is over.

Ok, back to finish the project which is taking longer than I thought. I took a 15 minute break & knew that you were going to be ♂ attacking me with ♀ ♀ in my h 8 & wanted to respond & disclose the real reason you are so involved in this thread. 😊

Peace out. 😊

Wow, Penguin, that's VERY interesting about the Forum's chart & the ♀ ♂! So I guess it will continue with all the past ♂ pain being ♀ projected out onto others! I see that AR is dragging Neutral back into her ♂ rage even though she's an ex-member & has no part of this. Astrology really does work. 😊

And I'm sorry CV that you have been attacked for trying to be a peace maker & staying out of the two ♂ opposing sides. I do think you tried to raise the consciousness level of all of us, including me. Our egos didn't listen. 😊

Thanks for your positive energy.

Thank you for your support ZenTen.

It is so heart warming to be noticed for what i was truly doing.

And to the people still hooked on this being something fake, i put ZenTen in her place a long time ago in this thread with her own Cancer Mars, i would never expect anyone to believe me or follow me, i only wish for goodness, it says a lot when i thought i made an enemy, she would bring validity to what i had been saying all along, i did not ignore her other posts where she said i was well written.

But because i wish to not go into the ego i could have, i did not respond in order to not fall into either side, of which some did try to put me into.

I hope people will eventually heal and find a better sense of self.

Love you all.

Astrologically it called our NEPTUNE, ruler of PISCES, and 12TH HOUSE.

Psychologically it is our human flaw - our biblical "original sin" against Nature's norms - our transgression of our Self.

We have Saturn's pain of Reality to bring us our karmic wake up, or drop out.

Libra gives us that choice, if we are Jupiter lucky enough to get a choice.

I love the truth of Kahlil Gibran's writing in The Prophet, and quoted previously, so I will requote it here as it says all of the above but in a lovely way which you might prefer to understand.

Code's ♅♃ ♂ my SN (3 degrees), so I am not aligned with his thinking, reasoning and communication at all. Behind the talk, there is authority and a serious unconscious need for admiration. There is great persuasion but lack of focus on details. He writes from the heart but there is major ego in his beliefs. I'm sure he thinks my SN is condescending and unreceptive of his ideas hence why said what he said towards me. I will not be told how to behave, I won't bow down to it. And because my NN is in ♁ in the 4th, I rather go on the journey of discovering my pain my own way, with less ego. It's hard, I have to really tap into my emotions. I can't intellectualize it. I have to cry. I just expressed it and was still shut down.

"I love you...but btw, you're a destructive ruthless, immature woman..." His ♁♃♃.

Thanks Jen J. Ok, so yes it's the 12th house then. It's ♃. My guidance counselor gave me "The Prophet" as a gift when I was a junior in high school and I love what he said. On Netflix there is a animation adaptation and it's beautiful. The music and visuals. Everything. I'll shall read it again and meanwhile ponder on my ♁♃ in the 12th ♁ ♃♃. I have a choice.

This makes me very uncomfortable now. Many publically shared charts and vindictive gossip are discussed/shared privately? Is there like a private thread on this sort of thing? I can't image what have been said. I wouldn't be surprised if they go to the lengths of cyber-stalking someone's personal life based on the info on the charts (i.e. locations, birthdays, etc.). Perhaps sharing private pictures and ridiculing looks. Who knows. I regret now sharing my chart publically in the past with my birthday data. I'm sure I was talked about. I was warned by the forum rules so it's my fault at the end of the day. Oh well, I learned my lesson.

What are you so fearful of Waybread? Which face do we see now? The intimidator revealing herself? Or the victim planning to garner forum support ? How many times have you done this to people?

Shall we partake of some afternoon bread?

Here is your Saturn on my Mars (my chart ruler) attempting to suppress my Mars, while at the same time your Mars is opposing mine initiating an attack , but under the guise of innocence - your rising Neptune in Libra that you use to confuse others about your intent. Are you pretending you don't know what you do?

Your Sun opposes my Saturn, I expect you also feel restricted by my saturn despite your flirty contradictory overtures (that we can get on) of your Venus Mercury on my MC opposed to your Moon on my IC, (logic and emotion at loggerheads), everything conflated and all brought together by your Pluto at the midpoint of one or the other ends of all your oppositions and smack on my Pluto, which, responding to the way you "Saturn my Mars", is saying "get off me!" as loudly and clearly as it can.

If we add your Ceres to the mix, which is at 17 Leo, then there are no less than seven planets, both your lights, both your inner planets, and Mars and Saturn all bundled on or opposite your Pluto σ Ceres at their midpoint, with your Moon applying to Pluto.

Your main outlet for your Pluto is that sextile to your rising Neptune in Libra, lying just beneath your Virgo Ascendant, which disguises your intention to others, beneath a helpful, bookish manner. With five planets in air signs you find it easy to communicate and spread your Neptunian persona, it is a grand trine by element , not aspect, but like most grand trines it shows a habitual pattern of escapism, almost effortless for you now. But it is a mixed blessing, for like most grand trines, it is a closed circle, a habit pattern that repeats and doubtless has repeated throughout your life and career.

As you point out, it takes two to start a quarrel. And you've certainly been in many. I don't think it coincidence Waybread, and I can feel through my chart the dynamics of your chart and any astrologer worth their salt will see how Neptune's escapist tendencies will come to the fore in your first house , especially as a part of a grand trine. You could use your chart more constructively than being one half of numerous quarrels, and jumping between the intimidator and the victim. Between Pluto and Neptune.

Why don't you apply your astrological knowledge to your own chart and behaviour? You don't have to get into quarrels if you don't want to. You could even take your own advice and just ignore any posts you don't like.

So this post is exactly why you are now back on my personal ignore list.

You haven't absorbed anything I wrote, so there is no basis for continuing a discussion with you, about my horoscope, or anything else.

Just please re-read astro_rose's earlier post on gaslighting.

Penguin Trauma, Jen, Desiree, and Tara: I greatly appreciate your posts 324, 327, 331, and 347. 🙏

Desiree, you wrote to AS:

Quote:

Waybread must feel attacked and haunted by your warlord (Mars) her boundaries (Saturn) stepped on, her dogmas, rules, regulations, conservatism (Saturn) all blown out of the sky by your active and aggressive (Mars) reactions. You have to agree that she must feel very threatened by your Mars.

I actually don't feel threatened by Afternoon Sun. Irritated or annoyed, probably. I don't see how he could realistically threaten me.

Some of the reason is that during my life, I had to stand up to bullies who happened to be in a supervisory relationship with me. Some of them were truly out to destroy my career and to get me to resign through some pretty under-handed methods. I had all the evidence to prove it. In one instance, via a carefully documented human rights complaint (sexual harassment and discrimination) that I submitted to my provincial human rights board. (The supervisors quietly settled, agreeing to every redress I asked for, rather than letting the case go to a tribunal.)

I don't know if this is my NN in Aries in the 8th, or sun opposite Pluto, or just what.

Because my husband and I enjoy camping in the wilder places, we've also been in a couple of situations that were life-threatening. (Getting stranded by a major flash-flood in a desert canyon, paddling the canoe in squalls on windy lakes.) Not to mention an auto accident where we might have been killed.

Compared to these sorts of things, a squabble with an anonymous bloke in Australia just doesn't come close to more important "battles" that actually had a lot riding on them. Frankly I am finding Afternoon Sun's responses to be predictable. If I suggest he really think about something or not go down a certain pathway, it's entirely certain that the opposite is exactly what he'll do-- I suppose to show me who wears the pants on this forum.

Zen Ten-- Unfortunately I've concluded that it is not possible for me to explain anything to you. I've tried repeatedly. So your flaming posts (along with Phoebe's) are on my personal "ignore" list.

Consider this an accomplishment Afternoon Sun, though it's a shame it must come to a thread as extreme as this for Waybread to understand - in this day and age - that "no" means "no". Which is to say, an understanding of the multi-dynamics in play between Mercury-Mars-Saturn-Pluto that requires emotional intelligence.

Since her ignore list has grown considerably, just as her place on the ignore lists of others has, wish her luck as she is forced to seek out others more willing to debate her so she may get her "mental juices flowing" yes we used to be astro-pals. We did talk (☿) about other members. There are some about who I have changed my opinion (☿) a lot in the mean time and have a much more positive impression of now. Honestly I thought a lot of you for a long time until I realised very reluctantly how coldhearted and cruel you treat people who disagree with you in the threads (☿) IMO. It give me pain everytime when I am reading such a response.

ZenTen,

And remember what you said about a Teddybear. That was a big fat lie (♃). I do not appreciate it to be lied to.

I find all of it rather sad and take no pleasure from it at all. 😞 To break with someone who one considered a friend is agonizing.

In two days Tr. mars will have left the square to uranus. I wouldn't be surprised if this thread isn't that busy anymore from then on.

Is anyone still doubting that Solar Eclipses do work? Just look at this thread. Btw. I noticed that they usually already show their effect a few days earlier.

ZenTen, yes I only noticed it yesterday, the ♃♂♂ square ♃♀♃ exact.

I also noted what you mentioned about ♃♂ stationing retrograde and how it may open wounds and cause people to attack others instead of dealing with their own wounds, I found that quite interesting actually (in terms of in general, also outside the forum)

I also mentioned that the ♃ retrograde will be contained entirely in the forums 12H, which as Tara mentioned about the effects of the Solar eclipse, that was also in the 12H too.

In ♃ too so it IS personal. And about the past (♃). ♃ retrograde will go back into ♃ soon too, so maybe a review or looking in hindsight of where and when or what we have taken personally. Narrowing (♃) it down to a main issue (♃) or wound.

Lastly and most pivotal, there are NO planets in Air signs for the entire month!!

Only except the ♃ for a couple of days or so as it travels around the signs - ruling planet of both the Eclipse and soon-to-be ♃♃. Currently now in ♎ though.

No Air signs, no objectivity, it adds to the personal and subjective element of both the ♃SE, ♃♂/♃ Retrograde, and ♃♂ retrograde combined. It would take an extreme effort to see things from a rational point of view, as it's so clouded by current transits and no Air.

(The above is also intended as a general write up - like how I do in the in-depth section - as well as applicable on this thread)

Yes, both Mercury & Mars transit conjunct natal 12th house Mercury in Leo which is conjunct my Leo South Node by 0 degree's.

True to the SN's expression, not working on it gives us a huge problem in life, anything conjunct SN is powerful but karma has it that we have used all the credit we can in a previous life, so for me and as i extended in this thread. Ego is a big issue.

<https://astroarena12.blogspot.com/2016/08/planets-conjunct-south-node.html>

With Chiron in Aries, it could not be any more relevant also.

Thank you for keeping the thread up to date with current transits, it helps to give a larger view of things. 😊

Quote from Penguin Trauma on 11.07.2019 at 08:48 [UT+1]:

ZenTen, yes I only noticed it yesterday, the ♃♁ square ♃♀ exact.

I also noted what you mentioned about ♁ stationing retrograde and how it may open wounds and cause people to attack others instead of dealing with their own wounds, I found that quite interesting actually (in terms of in general, also outside the forum)

I also mentioned that the ♃ retrograde will be contained entirely in the forums 12H, which as Tara mentioned about the effects of the Solar eclipse, that was also in the 12H too.

In ♁ too so it IS personal. And about the past (♁). ♃ retrograde will go back into ♁ soon too, so maybe a review or looking in hindsight of where and when or what we have taken personally. Narrowing (♁) it down to a main issue (♁) or wound.

Lastly and most pivotal, there are NO planets in Air signs for the entire month!!

Only except the ♃ for a couple of days or so as it travels around the signs - ruling planet of both the Eclipse and soon-to-be ♃♁. Currently now in ♋ though.

No Air signs, no objectivity, it adds to the personal and subjective element of both the ♁SE, ♃♁/♁ Retrograde, and ♁ retrograde combined. It would take an extreme effort to see things from a rational point of view, as it's so clouded by current transits and no Air.

(The above is also intended as a general write up - like how I do in the in-depth section - as well as applicable on this thread)

But.... how many threads are active at the moment? And in how many is a fight going on? 😬 Waybread, I think a lot of the misunderstandings or conflicts on the forum are connected with Mercury.

Basically a internetforum is Merc: we make contact, talk, think, write and combine info.

Merc is neutral so the subject - in our case astrology - of our talks are with another planet - in our forum Uranus.

You have Merc in Aquarius. The mental Merc feels very comfortable in this sign. He can live out his need for thinking, analyzing and organizing in a logical and systematic way. You like to exchange all sorts of theories and ideas with others, but you regularly run into illogical and irrational impulses.

You take words literally, like the dictionary intended them.

I, however, have Merc in Pisces. Words or thoughts always have an emotional charge for me. I often do not take a story literally, but respond to the undercurrent, the atmosphere in which something is said etc.

If I write that your boundaries, conservatism, rules and regulations (Saur) must feel threatened I don't mean you are scared AS jumps through your screen to hit you with a black eye. What I mean is that behind irritation, anger etc always lies a feeling of threat. Especially when Saturn is concerned!

If I read you on the forum, I always have to switch a more logic and theoretical modes. Of course I fail all the time but it is a good thing we have each others charts on the forum so we can understand where we are coming from. 😊

On top of that there is always one thread at least where there is bullying, with or without hard aspects to the forum chart, eclipses or whatever.

As long as I read and write on the English section there always were certain people who like to insult, manipulate and bully others.

And we can not blame transits, eclipses or aspects in general! That is bit easy.

Wow, wow, wow, Penguin. What you post makes even more sense why people were so 'triggered' by this thread about ♂ anger. No objectivity with lack of AIR! 😞
Thanks for pointing that out.

It's very much a ♀ RX re-visit of past ♂ wounds/hurts. Instead of approaching this as a time to heal, to look at their own ♂ anger, people ♀ projected their pain onto others because ♂ ♀ ♀ concerns the ☺ ego and people took it upon themselves to validate how 'special' they are whilst attacking others. No self-evaluation of how ♂ anger works in their charts. 😞

I came across a very good article about how ♂ energy works in connection with hard ♀ aspects. Here is a sample.

Unless your natal Mars or Saturn happens to be well placed (in Capricorn, for example), hard aspects between them tend to be experienced in their shadow form, at least in the beginning.

This is why it's important to understand how the shadow aspects of planets operate. To deny this is simply dismissing astrology if one only focuses on the 'good'. We must learn to integrate our shadow aspects otherwise, they are ♀ projected outwards. ♂ ♀ in hard aspect to ♀ is particularly difficult as ♀ remains hidden, unconscious. The native may not even understand that their will or anger, both represented by ♂ is operating below the surface.

In their shadow form, Saturn suppresses Mars, and Mars wounds Saturn. As a result, Mars conjunct, square or opposition Saturn could be experienced as negative expressions of masculine principle. In early life, this tends to manifest as father wounds.

The entire thread was derailed from its original intention so it's good to go back to Astrology 101 & for people to at least study how ♂ anger works in their own charts. Not only will it bring them more peace, it will bring peace to those they interact with on a daily basis, both on the internet & in their own lives. We all have work that we must do ourselves if we are to ever grow emotionally. 😊

What about the meaning of Rx♁♃ nor ♁♃, it's archetypes? Writing down a weathering report of these transits is half the battle. Perhaps a list of sabian/kozminsky symbols would help? I think Penguin did it at the in-depth section and they were insightful. Why not here?

My ♃♃ (11 degrees)

11° Pisces: A dog running amongst some children playing on the seashore.

Denotes one of sagacious mind, very faithful when trust is given, and active in the carrying out of any mission he is entrusted with. There is determination in the character, and the external appearance betrays but little the feelings and emotions. He acts with caution, craft, and confidence, and is generally friendly. It is a symbol of Alertness.

Positive affirmation to my ♃♃: I am caring, I am faithful, I am creative (in my 5th house), I am determined (♃♃*♁). I am strong ♁♁♁♃♃, I love my ♃♃, so it be.

When Rx♁♃ ♂ my ♁ SN in the 10th

11° Leo: A troop of old barbarian soldiers carrying off struggling women.

Denotes one over whom the wild senses strive for mastery, whose philosophy of force crumbles before what is truly real. The time may come when he will be forced to pause, when he will be made to see the uselessness of it all, and how strangely things are mirrored in the world of illusion. He must strive lest he become the slave of his lower self and the inducer of his own dangers. It is a symbol of Indulgence.

Interesting, so an intuitive/energy healer who I saw once a year for 5 years did a body energy work on me one time and her spirit guide told me that it was best to listen to the song IMAGINE by John Lennon to help my "soul" who has been feeling sad about the world. At the time I was confuse because my favorite song at the time was "Pure White" by Joe Hisaishi. But looking at this symbol, I wonder if my philosophies, my religions, my social constructs, will just be useless in time and are indulging illusions after-all? Such man-made philosophies can divide oneself. Why am I forcing myself to cling to them? Imagine highlights what divide and separate us.

The psychic posted this on her website channeled by her guide.

Letting go can be the hardest part, but maybe the best part. Bless you.

I want to see her again for a reading, but my "soul" isn't ready right now.

Hi Desiree,

no I am not surprised. After posting I thought for a moment: Oh dear, now I will run into trouble with Desiree.

The way I see it is that Solar eclipses are New Moons on steroid. Most astrologers will acknowledge that New Moons are important and having the nodes close to them gives them something extra.

Now how Solar Eclipses exactly work and to which extent is something that I haven't figured out yet but I am convinced that there is something to them.

Two examples:

A while back there was a SE right on the sun of Israel opposite the sun of Palestine. Out of nowhere there started a little war there. Yes you probably tell me that they are fighting often etc. But it was really eerie. Before the SE there was nothing going on there for a while and then right at the time of the SE things got really wild.

Another example: the Solar Eclipse of 9th of July 1945

I read that one astrologer called this the cold war Eclipse because it happened after WW2 had just finished. There is a close conjunction between saturn and ☾☽ (around 2°). I got curious and did some research. I read that the hight of the cold war was a period of several days during the cuban missile crisis in october 1962. The end of it was on the 28th of october. I moved the SE forward by secondary progressions. On the 28th of october 62 progr. Saturn was conjunct ☾☽ of the SE chart exact to the minute! Imagine Saturn progressing very slowly over a period of 17 years and then being exact on the worst day of the cold war. 2 days earlier and one day later Saturn isn't exact anymore to the minute. That is too much coincidence for me.

Carl Jung - General Aspects of Dream Psychology
Paragraph 507

Quote:

All the contents of our unconscious are constantly being projected into our surroundings
Just as we tend to assume that the world is as we see it, we naïvely suppose that people are as we imagine them to be. . . .

All the contents of our unconscious are constantly being projected into our surroundings, and it is only by recognizing certain properties of the objects as projections or imagos that we are able to distinguish them from the real properties of the objects. . . .

Cum grano salis, we always see our own unavowed mistakes in our opponent.

Excellent examples of this are to be found in all personal quarrels.

Unless we are possessed of an unusual degree of self-awareness we shall never see through our projections but must always succumb to them, because the mind in its natural state presupposes the existence of such projections.
It is the natural and given thing for unconscious contents to be projected.

I agree that people do project a lot onto others and it is a good thing to know about this phenomenon and to do some selfreflection but this article from Jung seems to imply that there is only projection and the other person can never be seen objectively. I find that too extreme.

For example let's take psychologists and psychiatrists who have to examine patients. They have checklists etc. for certain disorders. If everyone would only project their own stuff onto others all the time by nature these professionals would not be able to do any proper work.

Apart from that there are many more psychological defense mechanism other than projection like identification, repression, rationalization, regression, sublimation etc.

Beautiful song Erich, thank you. We need more John Lennon types in this world.

Wow, CV, So HAPPY for you. Sometimes life can be good. I'm getting some pretty good Divine downloads myself. I finished off a project & brought a binder to present it nicely tomorrow. They promised me a $100 bonus on top of what they are paying me...just because they know I went over what they required of me. I'll now have the money to start looking around for a new place to live but I'll take my time & not sign anything until ♀ is direct! 😊

But my brother seems to be having some kind of emotional meltdown. He was fine when I saw him a little while back but I got numerous texts, messages from him & I only read a couple as I'm busy. He's emailing his boss & telling him what a rotten boss he is & how he favors one person over enough. OMG, he's going to get fired but it's clear he's having some kind of breakdown so they'll likely put him on short term disability. ♂♀ taking place in his h 12 ♂ AC! 😊
He's also born with a hard ♂ ♀ ♃ ♃ and has terrible outbursts of anger but he had it under control until now. 😊

Once again CV, congratulations, you deserve all the good that comes your way. 😊

Anger is 3rd chakra outlet. Everyone has anger when they feel out of touch with themselves, and anger is like poop in that it's not bad per say, but it shouldn't linger in your system overly long either.

The expressions of anger and how much the person is involved with self-esteem and anger-related things, those are what you can see in chart.

Desiree, thanks. 😊 I think an internet forum is very Mercurial, or perhaps Mercury is like the narrow neck of a bottle, through which the bottle's mix of ingredients must pour. But I also increasingly think Uranus is involved, because it rules things electronic and futuristic. Uranus is not a personal planet, it is not warm and fuzzy. It rules sudden upsets.

Possibly I come across as too defensive, which in a way, is a response to a perceived threat. On the other hand, I view the level of threat on this forum to be so minor, even trivial; compared to the real threats that millions of people face. that it is hard to take the attacks so seriously. For example, I don't live in a war zone, with bombs dropping on my house, thank goodness.

I also very much appreciate your style of debate. For example, on a past thread, we expressed different opinions, across multiple posts, on out-of-sign aspects. We didn't attack each other personally, even though we didn't convince one another of our different perspectives. I think this is as it should be.

Just some further reflections on Mars.....

It rules anger, but also athletes, soldiers, surgeons, cutting instruments, and hot spicy foods! Mars is one's assertiveness and natural aggression.

Everyone has Mars in their chart. We can't escape it. There is no point in trying to suppress and deny it. Mars doesn't simply go away in a horoscope just because someone thinks anger is bad and wrong. If not expressed openly, Mars will come out in covert or passive-aggressive ways. It will scapegoat, in classical Jungian style. [Typcially, as: "I'm fine, but you have a problem."]

So anyone here who thinks he or she can virtuously rise above petty, ego-driven anger might wonder why s/he attracts people who seem (or objectively are) angry. It is because Mars must "out" in some fashion. It is all very well to focus on serenity in one's life, but one's natal Mars still needs an outlet.

As human beings, I don't think we are meant to sanitize or denature Mars too far. There is a much bigger cost than squabbling for vacuuming all the Mars out of one's life and spraying it onto somebody else. And that is living a life without courage, without a spirit of adventure, and and without passion.

This is admittedly a very western way of looking at Mars, but if we don't express courage and passion in our lives, we adopt a very vanilla-and-white bread life where courage and passion belong to other people-- just as surely as we blame other people for their perceived negative anger. Maybe then, in our calm lives, courage and passion belong to sports heroes, to social activists, or to wilderness adventurers. This is psychological projection just as much as the Jungian shadow is.

So just a question to anyone here: what do you do to express Mars in a positive way in your life? What was your last adventure? What are you passionate about? What gets your blood stirring? (beyond the bedroom.) Where do you push the envelope of safe respectability?

Because if the main outlet for one's Mars is sniping at a stranger on an internet forum (including via the ironic ploy of condemning someone else for being angry) we are looking at a caged Mars, rattling the bars and screaming to be let out so that it can DO SOMETHING.

Mars is also the courage to express yourself and let your opinion be heard.

You may face ridicule and anger directed your way, but you've stood your ground and spoke your conscience, and let it be known that there are other voices to consider and yours deserves to be heard just as much as anyone else's.

My daughter says that I love to fight windmills, Waybread, like Don Quichotte. 😊
I like to have a 'project' to focus my anger on... 😊

A few years ago an overactive politician in my city, working on his cv to become minister or something, planned a 'fast tram', a sort of train, running through the city center.

I live in one of the most beautiful historical cities of the Netherlands, Leiden, with a very old university you probably have heard of.

Leiden also has the most densely built up city centers of the whole country. There is simply no place for a hiddious tram/train, nobody needed it and it was provably dangerous for byke riding children. And as you know, we are a byke riding nation.

I started writting (Mars square Merc) on the internet and to the local newspaper. All my letters were printed (to my surprise) with arguments why this crazy idea should stop.

(The paper even offered me a free lance job during this proces that I declined)

The politians promised a booming economy for the city and all kinds of posh shops that were planning to settle here. I called the management of these shops and asked them if they had such plans... Nobody did. So I exposed all these lies in the newspaper. It was war! And I loved it!

Because of the overwhelming opposition against the train we did get a referendum and won by a landslide. We will never have a train in the city centre of Leiden.

Last year I organised the neighborhood against the housing corporation who was stealing money from us. We won.

I love to fight for justice and of course I love to win... I am an Sun in Aries from the book.

But a Sun in another sign with Mars in Sagi in 6, like me, would focus his anger very differently. That is why we cannot focus on one planet if we search for anger in the chart.

Every personal planet, like Mars is, has to go through the Sun. And that makes all the difference in the world!

My previous profile picture of my Sicilian ancestor, I found out last night that she had $\text{X}\odot\sigma\sigma^{\uparrow}$! Also, this morning I had an urge to listen to this song this morning I loved when I was 17 years old (this is so unlike me), and found out the singer/dancer has $\text{X}\sigma^{\uparrow}$!

This song gave me so much strength!

I can't wait to watch the new Joker movie and the last Star Wars trilogy this December. I love the character Rey, and OMG...just looked up Daisy Ridley birth chart and she has $\text{X}\sigma^{\uparrow}$!!! Movies matter a lot to me. I learn a lot from them.

I'm passionate about learning different faiths/religions/philosophy thanks to my $\sigma^{\uparrow}\Delta 4$ (9th), when I go to the library (9th house), I always go to the astrology/spiritual sections. I want to tap more into my creativity by connecting African practices and today I'm grabbing herbs and other essentials to do a certain cleansing tonight. I can't really meditate as my $\text{X}\sigma^{\uparrow}$ in my navamsha (D-9) chart is in the 12th so I will be restless so walking works best for me, walking near water.

My last adventure was going to a Jazz festival with my sister. It was fun.

Thanks for the reminder about the importance about the sun, Desiree. Reading your post I though you probably have your sun in the 4th quadrant. Looking at your chart it turns out to be true. With the sun in your 11th house you join or lead groups that want to improve society. Your Jupiter in II in the 12th house wants to educate the public by spreading knowledge and mars in x^7 in the 6th house looks like a rather busy mars to me. Always doing something.

My sun is in the 9th house. What I invest my time in usually ends up having something to do with trying to figure out how the world works (getting the bigger picture).

When Tr. Pluto moved through my 12th house i did a lot for society too but usually I am not very outward orientated.

Good for you Desiree! astro_rose, that music video should get everyone's blood pumping.

The good Mars!

Thanks, Erich.

Thanks for the reminder about the importance about the sun, Desiree. Reading your post I though you probably have your sun in the 4th quadrant. Looking at your chart it turns out to be true. With the sun in your 11th house you join or lead groups that want to improve society.

Good points, Tara. 😊

However, in this thread/group you took the lead, improving the atmosphere extensively! Maybe your lord 11 does something with 'justice'..

Interesting. Lord of my 11th house is Jupiter. 😊

Wow. Some things can be seen very easily in a chart. Mars in x^7 is usually moving around a lot, not being still for long. I observed that about my mother.

I think in the 6th house it wants to do something useful, trying to help, improving something, spending ones time useful etc..

I am not surprised to hear that you are a workaholic.

Mars in general.

Everyone has the right to feel angry, but the point is to express it without hurting others or yourself.

That takes practice, but the key is to remember to be assertive, not aggressive!

I like very much this answer.

Anger is a natural and necessary emotion, it's good to feel anger, it points what makes you feel disrespect and injustice
But the way to express itself is the key.

This is the internet. It's great that there are helpful links on anger but at the end of the day we don't know what's really going on behind someone's computer screen. Anger should certainly be expressed in healthy ways but anonymity is preventing that to happen on discussion forums. To be clear cut, this thread is an example of cyber-bullying and harassment and many posts (including mine) should have NEVER been tolerated. If the moderators deleted flaming posts maybe a message would have been sent clearly on our actions but they did nothing. I'm glad this thread had simmer down, but apart from astrology, it will happen again. The best actions is to know what you can tolerate or not. Everyone has a right to peace. For future references:

What can you do if someone is publicly harassing you (in a discussion group or chat situation)?

In a discussion group:

Keep a log of any harassing activity. (i.e screenshot)

Save all offending communications for evidence, both electronically and in hard copy (print). DO NOT edit them in any way.

Contact the group's administrator and provide evidence of the harassment. If they fail to respond, stop participating in the group (i.e., have your e-mail removed from the group's distribution list).

Ways To Prevent Cyber Harassment

To prevent cyber harassment, you need to identify the person responsible and report them to the online platform and police. Instructing them to stop will not be enough.

Message the person telling them to stop and then report them to the authorities. (know your cyber-harassment laws in your state or country)

Privatize your accounts – make sure every single account is private so only close friends and family can access your information.

Never give out personal information as a status update or in a chat group. Don't even put it in your "about" page on social media.

If someone needs personal information, give them a phone call.

Don't add people to your friends list if you are unsure of who they are.

Beware of fake accounts. Accounts where someone has no friends or maybe just 5 are probably fake and are being used to stalk you.

Don't initiate contact with people who don't know you.

Thank you for posting this, Astro Rose 😊 I'm glad you have shared that, the more awareness raised on this matter, the better. Especially for the next generations to come, who will be born into a now online world.

Cyber-bullying can have a detrimental and even devastating effect as much as offline harassment can. I often used the words 'in real life' - or IRL - to describe the world outside of a screen, but the online world is now just as equally part of real life as the offline world is.

So I agree there needs to be rules set, agreed etiquettes, and responsibility taken online, and exercising simple common sense, in the same way we would do offline.

Thanks, everyone.

Now that the flames have (hopefully) died down, I might mention that they got pretty hot during the recent transits of Mars squaring my natal Aqua Mercury-Venus and conjunct Leo moon, together with transiting Uranus in Taurus squaring the lot of them. ☾ ♃ ♀.

My partner and I are both heavy mutable '65-ishers, all packed into 13 - 22 degrees. I've learned to stay out of each other's way when Mars is Mutable around these degrees... so at least 4 months of the year we don't speak.

I've never had a problem confronting but with ♃♃ ♃♃♃♃♃♃♃♃♃♃ my lesson has been to learn how to confront with civility and whether or not it was going to be constructive. ot good when others are not honest with themselves let alone the other.

Mars in Fire signs. Moon in fire or Air.

I have a mars/venus conjunction in Leo (3rd house) and a Gemini Moon. It is hard for people to believe I am a Libra sun when I am displeased.

Calling people trolls when they are emotionally troubled, closing threads because people "talk to themselves" yet the moderators couldn't close this horrendous thread where people were trashing eachother? Astrology has to be drama filled to keep the traffic going on this forum?

Yeah.

I'm angry.

It's unjust!

I want answers moderators, why couldn't you close THIS thread and the "one's better life" where I was trashed also?

I'll wait for an explanation.

Perhaps we should aim our consciousness higher than ourselves, help those in real need?
As my beautiful lady mentioned, she would love to express her humanitarian side, as would i (North in Aquarius 6th house) & healthy Uranus aspects to Moon & Mars & MC.

Use that Mars energy for a higher purpose.

You forgot this:

<https://amcsupport.org/>

Which my sister has since birth, which why I take care of her everyday. ♃♂.

Not everyone WANT to care for their disabled loved ones. Some abuse them. Some kill them.

So I do help the need. It's close to home. (NN ≈ 4th house)

Also, I recall Jen J. expressing her passion on stopping bullfighting and actually protest against it at her hometown somewhere in Spain.

<https://support.peta.org/page/1962/petition/1?locale=en-US>

So what are you actually doing right now for those in need than listing links?

Your post is filled with egotism and your desire for praise is narcissistic.

For someone like you who wants to "ignore me" for sake of "not getting hurt", stop STALKING my posts.

Moon helps Mars and vice versa with the trine, you will be able to direct emotions just like the sextile or conjunction. The conjunction is the combination without filter and can go either way. The square / opposition have a major time trying to balance emotions.

Mars retrograde, that is interesting, how has that played out for you?
