"BRASEA" NEWS

Please note : - the Auction at Bexley will now be next door to the Masonic Hall, in the Bexley School of Arts Hall

this is a smaller venue and so we do not know just how we will fit in but we will have to give it a run and see in March, as the Old Hall is no longer available and our gear is in the School of Arts – anyway, we hope you will do your best to assist as best you can.

For those who received the Christmas Email Bulletin, you will know that David Thorsby from NSW, won the 2015 "BRASEA" Members award and Jane Adam will again donate a lovely plaque, with two birds painted on it, for him plus his other prizes – Congratulations again

We also announced at Christmas, that we have lost young Sophie Hollingsworth, our Junior President, to her school work .. We have not as yet finalized a replacement – only three Junior members applied and at this stage another Queenslander has the lead running – we will announce the winner shortly and get back on track with that program – all a bit rushed over the holidays.

I know we have mentioned this before BUT members are constantly forgetting – our main phone number is 02 9747 6642 - we have an extensive message service on this number. So please do not ring the mobile, with a plan to leave a message, try the main number first..

2016 "BRASEA" rings are now available at 40 cents each + post ... good size

2016 "Bush Budgie" rings are also in stock now at the same price, they are 3.5mm
2016 "BRASEA" Calendars are now sold out

For those of you selling at this Auction – please try and put millet sprays in the cages which will help with the final clean up – if you feel you must have some seed, please only put a small amount – and then please stay back and help clean up, do not leave it to a few "Oldies"

Remember, if you are behind with your membership re-newal, please bring it up to date urgently, as the snail mailing lists have to be trimmed in line with the steep postage increases and you may find no Bulletin arrives – sorry, but we have to be more mindful of finances to save pennies ... if you are happy to receive things by email, please switch your membership and it drops to $15 per year for email only membership - $10 for Seniors – Juniors FREE ..

Accommodation near BEXLEY - several people have asked once again for help about accommodation near the Auction Hall – there are a number of locations, although none right on top of the venue, down Forest Road a bit – you can go back to the Airport, as we are only about 6 minutes from the Airport, where there is the Formule 1 Sydney Air Port, Phone 8339 1840, and another Motel at St Peters about the same distance Phone 9519 0685, Airport International Motor Inn at Arncliffe 1800 249 710, the Bexley North Hotel Phone 9150 4226 in the other direction and there is also The Rockdale Inn and Rockdale Motel – both only a few minutes away

Coming Auction Dates please note in your diaries now

2016 - March 20th, May 29th, Oct 16th Sydney - July 17th Brisbane

2017 - March 19th, May 28th, Oct 15th Sydney - July 16th Brisbane

Breeding budgies for fun and colour

Keith Hunt (Fred Wright)

Not everyone would want to breed budgerigars for the show bench - and why should they? We all enter the hobby because we are attracted to the colours, the active and character of the budgies themselves together with the fact they are not especially expensive and they are free-breeders.

It's unfortunate that all clubs and societies seem to have this built-in will to encourage all budgie breeders to show what they have bred so as to compete with their fellow breeders. It's my understanding that most new keepers and breeders of budgies ant to breed, they love watching them be active in a flight or aviary and they are fascinated by the colours. Let's help these breeders to enjoy their budgies even more.

Breeding for Fun

Budgies are easy to breed. They nest in a wooden or cardboard box and its all based around a 200mm x 125mm concave placed at the bottom. There is an entrance hole - usually at the side, as high as possible so the chicks don't fall out too early. The diameter of the hole is about 50mm.

Small, fine feathered budgies are prolific in their breeding. They seem to like a bit of activity around them and breed better is there are a number of pairs in the same vicinity. Once the birds are put together, eggs can be expected within 10 - 14 days. The hen will lay on alternate days until she has about 6 or 7 eggs. The incubation period is 18 days so and if all goes well, chicks will start to hatch.

The hen will do all the rearing with a bit of help from the cock. It always helps to add some form of softfood or sometimes called eggfood a couple of times a day for the hen to feed her chicks. Simply it's a high-protein egg mix which will help the chicks to grow. After a bit more than two weeks the colour of the babies will become obvious, at 30 days the chicks will come from the nest fully feathered and either huddle in the corner of the cage for a few days or perch. The next few days will be a time when the cock and hen teach the babies to find the food and within a week, they will be feeding themselves and be fully independent.

All first time breeders are fascinated by the colours that start to appear in the nestboxes. It's one of the main joys of breeding budgies. It never matters what colours are paired together - forget the genetics for now - just breed with birds of the colours you like and are able to purchase.

Colony v cage breeding

There are two ways of breeding budgies - in a colony which is an aviary with more nestboxes than you have hens - all placed at the same height. Same height as the birds will "fight" for the highest box. There might well be a bit of agro while the birds find their own mates but this can be overcome by placing each pair separately in a cage for a week before they are released into the aviary. This is called "bonding" and tends to overcome any squabbling about selecting partners.

The alternative is to cage breed in separate cages for each pair, however, this is far less entertaining than being able to watch the birds fly about, chasing each other and bouncing through a nestbox hole - and disappearing. Five or even six pairs, with eight nestboxes is a perfect start for any new budgie-keeper.

Feeding

Offer a simple budgie mix. It's usually half canary seed and half millet. The birds need grit, a piece of cuttlefish - may be an iodine/mineral block and regular fresh water, not forgetting that softfood occasionally before the breeding so the hens get used to it and a couple of times a day when there are chicks to be reared.

Breeding for Pets

If breeding goes well it's difficult to keep everything we breed. Set yourself up to sell some of the babies as pets. There is a constant demand for pets and work on the theory that every bird sold is a bag of seed. There is no doubt that cocks make the best pets if they are taken early. That works well as you will need hens to breed with the following year. Keep the baby birds yourself if you like the colours and sell the rest - remembering to keep back plenty of young hens for the following year.

Selling them

Selling pets is not as difficult as you might think. Advertise in a local newsagent or on a noticeboard somewhere locally. It's easier these days to advertise on the internet and there are various selling websites. It might be for less money but its quick and efficient, but pet shops always want baby budgies to sell. If you have babies in the nest, ring a couple of the local shops and try to set something up - but it's more financially rewarding to sell privately. Don't forget to get a few small boxes to allow buyers to carry the bird away, as they don't always bring a cage.

Just sit back and enjoy

We breed budgies for pleasure - and if we sell a few as pets - it's a bonus. Sitting in a garden watching a colony of breeding budgies can bring so much joy. We live in a world where there are great pressures - family, work and economic. Breed a few budgies for fun - enjoy them, and forget clubs with all their internal politics and don't even consider shows. They are for "the others"

Balance in the Exhibition Budgerigar

'If they disagree with many of the things I say they are free to say so; I do not ask for approval; I merely state views based on my own experiences in the past, I make neither excuses nor please for approval; this book is utterly personal, honest and I hope instructive.'

These words are taken from the book 'Exhibition Budgerigars' by Dr M.D.S. Armour, a Cage Bird publication I suspect from the 1950's.

I could not have chosen better words for this or any previous or future articles / presentations that I have written/produced or might write/produce on this wonderful hobby that we are fortunate enough to have embraced.

During this article, a further quote will be 'borrowed' from this recently 'gifted to me' book to reinforce some of my beliefs.

Some recent (and not so recent) judging appointments and discussions and aviary visits post these appointments has prompted me to reach out to the fancy to revisit the intent of breeding the Exhibition Budgerigar within Australia (or parts thereof).

There were too many birds on the bench and in the aviaries to ignore this subject, it was as if the breeders were encouraged by past performances to bench this style of bird, I do not believe this for one second, I suggest that they were not discouraged and therein lays the issue, if the latter were to be true.

The intent is not to insult, but to encourage fanciers and judges alike to view The Australian National Standard pictorial, read and embrace the pages that encompass TYPE. It is worth looking at pages 19, 20 and 22 as amended December 2010.

BIG IS BEAUTIFUL seems to be the catch cry for some. Please, please reassess and do not forget the beauty of the bird and its need for balance.

We (the judge) in effect influence the direction the fancy takes thus we need to be serious and responsible. Wrong decisions relay wrong messages and potential confusion. An exhibitor wins one week and the next is given the message that their bird is not a show bird nor should it be bred with. Wow, what a kick in the guts. Worse still, what if the exhibitor is content with the win of the previous week is full of glory and nurtures this style/shape of bird. I will take the kick in the guts any day. I did in my infancy in the fancy, I trooped off to a show in Ballarat with this super group of youngsters (I thought) and got hammered. Reg Pullen, the wonderful man he was, suggested in a nice way the birds were so wrong that I would need to commence again. I could have sulked but did not, it inspired me to review and redirect. I saw this as great feedback and a great experience.

My second quote from the aforementioned book covers a number of areas that I intended to discuss and is worded so perfectly that I include it as part of the article to best explain, in part my dilemma with the 'change' that is sadly creeping onto the show bench.

'By Type we mean symmetry, this proportion between each part and the whole, this balance; without this balanced symmetry no budgerigar is truly an exhibition budgerigar; no matter how wonderful the colour, how big the whole bird, how big the spots; without perfection of outline and beautiful modelling, no budgerigar can be altogether desirable; this is THE MAJOR SHOW POINT, and no budgerigar which carries perfection of shape is a bad budgerigar. It may have other failings, but it is over 50 per cent perfect if it is the possessor of flawless symmetry. This has nothing to do with size and here is criticism right at the beginning, constructive criticism, however. The Scale of Points, so far as I can ascertain at the time of writing, still couples size and shape, even putting "size" before "shape", as if it were more important. This is wrong! There is no correlation or interdependence between size and shape. A budgerigar may be perfect in type without being big, and, indeed, I have seen so many big budgerigars which failed in shapeliness that I even consider that size much beyond normal detracts from the beauty of a budgerigar.'

Remember this was all written back in the 1950's or thereabouts.

What has changed?

What does the Australian written word reflect – check page 23 of The Standard as amended December 2010 for that information

I was heavily involved with the drawing / art work of the Australian Standard and the intent all the way through was to keep that beautiful balance – sure the Pictorial could have differed and further modifications made, but it appears to have set a trend for the WBO and the UK as parts of the bird now appear to have been adopted by them, thanks to Roy Aplin that wonderful wildlife artist and Budgerigar Fancier from the United Kingdom for his final imprint on same.

There are magnificently balanced budgerigars around today, world-wide, thus symmetry can be retained with increased size. It is what I am seeing and feeling if you like that is happening in parts of Australia in not so recent times and continues that gives me fear about the direction we are going. If I cop criticism that does not concern me, the initial quote I will stand by.

I judged birds that, as I was informed later, were winners at previous shows, I mean best of Status and or Show and Section winners that should not have ever been placed. Harsh words but true. The fortunate part was that the exhibitors as one were able to see what I was referring to as I asked them to view these sometimes big headed but ugly shaped birds or sometimes fine with lumpy necks or widened pelvic areas that caused hips and therefore wings to elevate. They were able to see where their direction had deviated. I did not do this to humiliate the fanciers', I did not do it for any other reason but to show that we need to revisit our direction. I hope that the message was taken in the spirit it was intended. Do not get me wrong, there were birds at these shows that were wonderful and in particular the last show the winner was world class.

Other issues that are presenting on the bench are long flights, long secondaries, missing flights, hinged tails, lumps in necks, lack of width between the eyes to name some.

If we do not correct we accept and that will potentially diminish the hobby further because we were too blasé. The wrong birds will have infiltrated too deeply for correction and I do not want to be party to that. We need to make a stand and retain the beauty that we should all so seriously desire.

Maybe we need to replicate the mindset of Dr Armour?
