International Program in Health Policy and Practice

The Fund's International Program in Health Policy and Practice is building an international network of policy-oriented health care researchers. The program also conducts high-level policy forums for international exchange, aimed at fostering creative thinking about health care problems common to the United States and other industrialized countries.

2002 International Symposium

For the past five years, the Fund has hosted an annual international symposium in health care policy on a topic of common concern to the United States and other industrialized nations. This year's symposium, held in Washington, D C , in October 2002, brought together leading policy thinkers to consider the theme "Reconciling Rising Health Care Costs with Getting Value for Money." Participants included health ministers or their designates from Australia, Canada, Italy, Mexico, New Zealand, the United Kingdom, and the United States, other experts from each country, and leading U S policymakers and researchers.

The symposium was also the occasion for previewing the results of the Fund's 2002 International Health Policy Survey. This year's survey elicited the views of sicker adults—respondents who said they were in fair or poor health, had a serious illness, or had recently undergone surgery or been hospitalized—to probe the experiences of those who have the most contact with the health care system and are most vulnerable. Nationally representative samples of 700 or more respondents each in Australia, Canada, New Zealand, the United Kingdom, and the United States were asked about their overall views of the health care system, the quality of patient care, and their experiences with the health care system.

U.S.–U.K. Meeting on Health Care Quality

The Fund and the London-based Nuffield Trust cosponsored "Improving Quality of Health Care in the United States and United Kingdom: Strategies for Change and Action, 2002," the fourth in a series of meetings for senior policymakers and quality experts.

Held at Pennyhill Park in Bagshot, England, the meeting addressed three priority topics for the two countries: patient safety and reducing medical errors, information technology in the health sector, and the impact of reporting on quality performance.

During the conference, Gregg Meyer, M D , of the U S Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality, and Sir Liam Donaldson, M D , chief medical officer of the Department of Health in England, reported on the progress of the U S –U K collaboration developed through earlier meetings and formalized in October 2001. Initially focused on three areas — medical error reporting and patient safety, information technology, and national reporting on quality — the collaboration has since been expanded to include quality monitoring of targeted conditions, the health system workforce, patient decision making and consumer choice, financial and nonfinancial incentives, and collaboratives for health systems improvement.

International Working Group on Quality Indicators

The Commonwealth Fund's International Working Group on Quality Indicators, directed by Gerard F. Anderson of Johns Hopkins University and Robin Osborn, was organized in 1999 to develop a common set of minimum quality indicators for use in cross-national comparisons of health systems. Recognizing that national indicators such as life expectancy and infant mortality are greatly influenced by factors outside a country's health system, the working group seeks to recommend measures that will provide greater insight into how a national health sector performs relative to those of other countries, and how policy and delivery system organization affect quality. An initial list of recommended indicators, including disease-specific measures for cancer, diabetes, cardiovascular disease, organ transplants, mental health, and asthma, will be presented in early 2003. Work on broader measures of system performance, such as responsiveness, will be undertaken as a next step.

Partnership with the Bertelsmann Foundation

The Commonwealth Fund joined the Bertelsmann International Network for Health Policy and Reform, a 15-country collaboration aimed at sharing information on policy reforms, innovations, and best practice. Composed of independent experts from foundations and research institutions in Australia, Austria, Canada, Denmark, Finland,

France, Germany, Japan, Netherlands, New Zealand, Singapore, Spain, Switzerland, the United Kingdom, and the United States, the network will describe, analyze, and report on a “real time basis” on health sector reforms and trends in industrialized nations. Reports will be produced twice each year and disseminated to policymakers and, through the internet, a broader international policy audience. The first meeting was held in Gutersloh, Germany, in September, and the network’s initial report is scheduled for release in June 2003.

Harkness Fellows in Health Care Policy

Aimed at developing promising health care policy researchers and practitioners in the United Kingdom, Australia, and New Zealand, the Harkness fellowships provide a unique opportunity to spend 6–12 months in the United States, conduct a policy-oriented research study, gain firsthand exposure to managed care and other innovative models of health care delivery, enhance methodological skills, and work with leading health policy experts. Selection committees in each country interview candidates and recommend fellows. Nicole Lurie, M.D., senior natural scientist and the Paul O’Neill Alcoa Professor of Health Policy at the RAND Corporation, was appointed in September 2002 as senior fellowships advisor. She succeeds Gerard F. Anderson, who provided valuable service in this capacity in the formative years of the fellowships program.

The fourth class of fellows (2001–02) completed a productive year, ending with a final reporting seminar in Washington, D.C., in June 2002. Their presentations covered trends in pharmaceutical costs and utilization, the impact of the internet on the doctor-patient relationship, public reporting on medical errors and performance, a cross-national comparison of challenges facing academic health centers, the changing role of nurse practitioners, and adolescent health behaviors and services utilization.

The year included several opportunities for fellows to meet with leading U.S. and international policy experts. The September 2001 orientation in New York City, cut short by the September 11th attacks, was reorganized, two months later, fellows, mentors, and other experts reconvened in Boston for an in-depth introduction to the U.S. health care system. In October, fellows attended the Fund’s International Symposium on Health Care Policy. A Washington policy briefing in February gave the fellows exposure to the political process and current health and social policy issues. Joining the Harkness fellows at the briefings were two U S journalists from the Kaiser Media Fellowships in Health

In a recent innovation to the program, the fellows traveled to Ottawa and Montreal for briefings with senior government officials and health care leaders and the opportunity to learn firsthand about the Canadian health care system. Also, for the second year, two Canadian Harkness Associates, selected in collaboration with the Canadian Health Services Research Foundation, are participating throughout the year in the fellowship seminars, adding a valuable Canadian perspective to the program.

Australia-United States Health Policy Fellowship

Announced by Jane Halton, Secretary of the Australian Department for Health and Ageing, at the Fund's October 2002 International Symposium in Health Policy, the Australian government will sponsor a new health policy fellowship that to enable two mid-career U S policy researchers or practitioners to spend up to 10 months in Australia. Fellows will conduct research projects and gain a first-hand understanding of the Australian health policy context and issues relevant to the United States. Administered in conjunction with The Commonwealth Fund and the Harkness Fellowships, this initiative will open further opportunities for cross-national health policy thinking, collaboration, and expansion of the Fund's growing international network of health policy experts.

Research Projects and Other Activities

Building on the success of the first Australia-New Zealand Health Services Research Conference, held in August 1999, the Fund cosponsored a second conference in December 2001. Attended by 300 participants, the meeting was the occasion for launching the Australia-New Zealand Health Services Research Association, dedicated to building the field of health services research in both countries.

Through its President's Discretionary Fund, the Fund supported a range of projects aimed at learning from other countries' innovations. Projects included work by Harkness Canadian Associate Steven Morgan at University of British Columbia, Canada, to assess public benefit programs, including prescription drug coverage, for senior citizens in Canada A grant to Neal Halfon, M D , of University of California, Los Angeles, cofunded an international workshop on early childhood health and development programs for experts from Australia, Canada, the United Kingdom, and the United States A grant to Robert Blum, M D , and Harkness Fellow Simon Denny, both at the University of Minnesota, supported the development of a multimedia software product for conducting computerized surveys of children and adolescents

Communications at The Commonwealth Fund

In carrying out its mission to help people live healthy and productive lives, The Commonwealth Fund has focused on identifying and nurturing ideas, people, and programs in health care that promise a large and beneficial impact on the life chances of Americans. At the same time, the Fund has recognized that its success also depends on its ability to communicate ideas and results to others who can act upon them more broadly to benefit the common good.

As a result, the Fund has paid special attention to the communication function at the foundation and has taken steps in recent years to expand and strengthen its communications program. Today, with a staff of seven and a budget of $2 million, the Fund conducts a thriving publishing operation, works actively with the media to gain greater visibility for the research it sponsors, and maintains a rich array of resources on its web site. Fund-supported research is also frequently published in distinguished peer-reviewed and professional journals, and Fund staff members organize and participate in numerous conferences and undertake speaking engagements in public and professional forums.

Publishing

Publications are at the heart of the Fund's communications strategy. Over the past year, the Fund published 84 new reports and other publications and distributed over 128,000 copies of these reports through mailings to people on the Fund's targeted mailing lists as well as in response to unsolicited requests. Reports, issue briefs, a chartbook, fact sheets, and briefing notes that summarize longer reports are produced, as well as a variety of other general publications such as The Commonwealth Fund Quarterly, the Annual Report, and brochures about the Fund.

In terms of highlights, this year the Fund introduced In the Literature, a series of briefs that summarizes important research published in professional journals by Fund grantees and staff, and also launched an online version of The Commonwealth Fund Quarterly.

Among the publication highlights over the past year, the most notable were the findings from major Fund surveys. The report, Security Matters, contained the findings from the Fund's 2001 Health Insurance Survey and was released in December 2001 along with a set of issue briefs. Another major Fund report, Diverse Communities, Common Concerns, along with related fact sheets, was released on March 6 and presented findings from the Fund's 2001 Health Care Quality Survey. Additional findings from the survey were highlighted in a report, Room for Improvement: Patients Report on the Quality of Their Health Care. The results of another major survey, the 2001 International Health Policy Survey, were reported in an article in the May-June International issue of Health Affairs and in a set of six Fund briefs.

In May the Fund released Quality of Healthcare in the United States: A Chartbook and it was an instant “bestseller” – 60,000 copies were downloaded from the Fund’s web site in the first three weeks alone. This past summer, along with the Kaiser Family Foundation, the Fund released an 8-state survey of seniors and prescription drugs that found that nearly one of four seniors skip doses or fail to get prescriptions filled. The report was covered widely in major newspapers and on NBC Nightly News and ABC World News Tonight.

Also this summer, in the waning hours of the Senate debate and subsequent inaction, a Fund report by Marilyn Moon and Matthew Storeygard of the Urban Institute outlined workable options to the Medicare drug benefit conundrum. The 2002 Workplace Health Insurance Survey, released on Labor Day weekend, found that because of cost only one of four workers would be likely to keep their health insurance through COBRA if they became unemployed. The results were widely covered in the media.

Media Relations

Reaching out to the media to get out the word about Fund sponsored research is another important part of our communications efforts. Fund reports continue to be regularly mentioned in the local, national, and health care trade press. The Fund recorded over 750 mentions in the media last year, about a 15 percent increase over the previous year. Fund research was covered in major media outlets such as The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Wall Street Journal, USA Today, National Public Radio, CNN, NBC Nightly News, and ABC Nightly News.

Getting the Word Out: Panels, Conferences, and Forums

With access to the considerable expertise of its grantees and program staff, the Fund can play an important role in informing policymakers, industry leaders, and health care researchers. Fund staff and grantees attend and speak at numerous professional conferences, seminars, and briefings, organized by the Fund and other groups.

Now in its fourth year, one of the Fund’s most important communications activities is the Commonwealth Fund/Harvard University Bipartisan Congressional Retreat. The latest retreat, held in January 2002, provided an opportunity for an off-the-record exchange of information and ideas among key members of the Senate and House of Representatives, as well as national experts in health care policy. The retreat drew 21 members of the 108th Congress, who discussed topics ranging from a Medicare prescription drug benefit to the global AIDS epidemic and bioterrorism.

More than 100 key Congressional staff members attended a retreat sponsored by the Fund, the Alliance for Health Reform, and the Catholic Health Association. This year's retreat was held in Baltimore, Maryland, in January 2002 and focused on upcoming health policy issues for the year and federal budget projections. The retreat enabled senior leaders from the Bush Administration and House and Senate staffs across an array of committees to debate different approaches and meet together in frank discussion. Panels discussed health care in a time of tight budgets, the recession and the uninsured, bioterrorism, and Medicare concerns.

On behalf of the Fund, the Alliance for Health Reform held ten briefings and roundtable discussions in Washington, D C , over the past year, focusing on central health policy issues before the Congress. These included Medicare, health insurance, tax credits, academic health centers, and prescription drug benefits. The lunch briefings, averaging more than 250 attendees, are a resource for Congressional staff and journalists seeking the latest information on key health issues.

Reaching Audiences through Television and the Internet

The Fund continued over the past year to attempt to reach larger audiences through television. With support from a communications President's Discretionary Fund (PDF) grant, the PBS interview show The Open Mind aired another set of five programs on the state of American health care. Among the program's guests were Samuel O. Thier, M D , former president and CEO of Partners HealthCare System and chairman of the Fund's board of directors, David Blumenthal, M D , director of the Fund's Task Force on Academic Health Centers, and Christine Cassel, M D , geriatrician and dean of the School of Medicine at the University of Oregon Health and Science University. Another PDF grant to the PBS series To the Contrary—an award winning half-hour weekly public affairs show with an audience of one million—featured a Fund-supported outreach effort at a federal Women, Infants and Children (WIC) program center in Brooklyn. The program aired in June 2002.

Digital technology enables the Fund to share its research with a much larger audience than would be possible through print-based dissemination alone. The Fund's e-mail alert system grew steadily over the last year, bringing immediate notification about new Fund reports to over 8,000 recipients. The growth of the e-mail alert system also contributed to increased traffic on the Fund's website. More than 150,000 visitors came to the Fund's site over the past year, up 10 percent from the previous year. Because visitors to the site tend to be "repeat customers," this translates to approximately 600,000 user sessions during the year. More than 400,000 reports were viewed or downloaded in fiscal year 2001-02, underscoring a remarkable transformation: today, substantially more people learn about Fund research through the internet than they do through traditional print formats.

HEALTH POLICY, RESEARCH & EVALUATION:

The Health Policy, Research & Evaluation department leads the Fund's internal research and writing projects across all departments, as well as oversees, develops, and manages the work of the Fund's Task Force on the Future of Health Insurance. Across the Fund, the Health Policy, Research & Evaluation department also has overall responsibility for ensuring high quality grant projects and is responsible for the Fund's very substantial survey research activities.

In the past year, the Health Policy, Research & Evaluation department has worked on the 2002 International Survey, the Physician survey, the Health Care Quality and Access Survey, the 2002 Workplace Survey, and the 2001 Health Insurance Survey. They have issued over a dozen reports, articles, issue briefs, and fact sheets. Staff have spoken at meetings and conferences based on these surveys on at least ten occasions.

Task Force on the Future of Health Insurance

The Commonwealth Fund Task Force on the Future of Health Insurance is an independent, nonpartisan forum for exploring strategies to expand and improve health insurance coverage for the under-65 population, with an emphasis on efforts that would meet the needs of American workers and their families. Drawing its members from business, labor, government, and policy research, the task force works to improve the stability, quality, and affordability of health insurance, develop policy options and assess promising models for insurance coverage, and keep the debate on coverage for the nation's uninsured and underinsured high on the national agenda. The task force is directed by Cathy Schoen of The Commonwealth Fund and chaired by James J. Mongan, M.D., president of Massachusetts General Hospital.

A summary of some of the key work performed by the Taskforce follows.

In a year when the prospects for significant health care reform seemed slim, the task force kept the pressure on policymakers with information about the most vulnerable in our society. In December 2001, the Fund released findings from the Commonwealth Fund 2001 Health Insurance Survey at a special briefing for Congressional staff in Washington.

Between January 2001 and January 2002, more than 2 million workers lost their jobs, as unemployment rates climbed from 4.2 percent to 5.6 percent. A report by Jeanne Lambrew of George Washington University, How a Slowing U.S. Economy Threatens Employer-Based Health Insurance, warned that the number of uninsured workers could rise sharply absent prompt action to provide premium assistance for the unemployed.

To assess the impact of the changed economy—including the return of double-digit increases in health insurance premiums—the task force followed up the 2001 survey with a survey in January 2002. One-third of adults reported cuts in benefits or higher cost sharing for medical bills, one-fourth faced significantly higher premiums, and two-fifths were paying more in premiums or cost sharing. The follow-up survey also revealed that only 23 percent of adults said they would take up their COBRA option if they lost their jobs, although the rate jumped to 59 percent if premium assistance were available.

Signs that employers and states are cutting back on the scope of benefits, along with changes in the individual insurance market, have raised concerns that a growing number of people are “underinsured.” In Family Out-of-Pocket Spending for Health Services, A

Continuing Source of Financial Insecurity, Mark Merlis argues that even in 1996, at the height of coverage expansions and more comprehensive HMO benefits, 16 percent of American families spent more than 5 percent of their incomes on out-of-pocket expenses for medical bills, and 7 percent spent more than 10 percent

To address concerns about coverage and premium affordability, the Bush Administration and some Congressional leaders have proposed new federal tax credits to help low-income workers buy coverage in the individual insurance market. Task force studies indicate, however, that tax credits that rely on the individual insurance market would mainly benefit young, healthy men. Low-income women and older adults would be less likely to gain from tax credits, since insurance carriers typically charge young women higher premiums than men (whether or not they offer maternity benefits) and premiums rise dramatically with age. In the report Are Tax Credits Alone the Solution? Jon Gabel and colleagues at the Health Research and Educational Trust (HRET) suggest that low-income women of all ages and older men would require substantial tax credits to make coverage affordable.

A report, coauthored by Sherry Glied of Columbia University, Cathi Callahan and James Mays of the Actuarial Research Corporation, and Jennifer Edwards of The Commonwealth Fund, detailed which benefits would need to be trimmed to produce a “bare bones” policy with substantially reduced premiums. To reduce premiums by 30 percent, policies would leave low-income adults exposed to high deductibles or without key benefits such as prescription drugs. A typical “bare bones” package would not provide adequate financial protection or access to care for low-income adults, who make up the majority of the uninsured. Their findings, along with an analysis of what would constitute an adequate and attractive benefits package, were featured at a roundtable discussion with senior Congressional staff on tax credits as an expansion strategy, sponsored by the Alliance for Health Care Reform.

Two articles in Consumer Reports by Fund grantee Trudy Lieberman brought the issue of the adequacy of insurance to a broader public audience and addressed consumer concerns about the eroding quality of health coverage. A June 2002 article, The Unraveling of Health Insurance, showed how medical savings accounts and similar strategies are designed to cut costs for insurers and employers by shifting costs to consumers through copayments and deductibles. Lieberman found widespread evidence of decline in the quality of insurance and warned consumers that new approaches could undermine the risk pooling on which group coverage depends. An August 2002 companion article, The Perils of Buying Your Own Policy, ranked 63 individual and family policies around the country and painted a troubling picture of the difficulty consumers face when seeking coverage on their own.

Other task force work continues to find that Hispanics are the group most likely to be excluded from health insurance. Hispanics account for one in four uninsured Americans overall, one-third of Hispanics lack coverage, more than twice the rate of the rest of the population. A Commonwealth Fund report, Diverse Communities, Common Concerns, based on the Fund's 2001 Health Care Quality Survey, drew the connection between lack of health insurance and the problems many Hispanics face in getting access to primary and preventive care and in their relationships with physicians. During the year, task force and Fund staff presented findings about disparities affecting Hispanics and other minorities at numerous professional meetings. Also, with Fund support, the National Hispanic Medical Association sponsored regional meetings in Los Angeles and Atlanta to focus the attention of legislators on the need for action.

The future of employer-based health insurance, through which two in three Americans under age 65 receive coverage, is also a continuing priority for the task force, especially in light of new economic pressures. Sharon Silow-Carroll and Lisa Duchon produced a Fund field report summarizing what is known about a new type of benefits strategy that makes employees more responsible for selecting components of their plans, yet also places them at greater financial risk. Collectively known as "defined contribution" approaches or "consumer driven" models, these efforts could result in more fragmented coverage. Ongoing work under the direction of Tom Rice, of UCLA, and Jon Gabel, is gauging how widely the new benefit designs have been adopted by employers and the influence on group coverage. Initial findings suggest that "defined contribution" has not become a national trend, and that benefits consultants recognize that the model risks splitting healthier workers from sicker ones, a shift that could ultimately raise total employer premiums and expose sicker workers to substantial financial risk. With Fund support, the Employee Benefits Research Institute convened a meeting to discuss the findings among insurers offering consumer-driven models, employers, and researchers.

Retiree health benefits are also at risk. Employer surveys conducted in 2000 and 2001 by HRET on behalf of the Fund and the Kaiser Family Foundation found that the downward trend in retiree health benefits is likely to continue. The proportion of large firms offering retiree benefits fell to just 34 percent in 2001, down from 66 percent in 1988. Even those offering benefits are likely to reserve coverage for long-term employees. Half of firms providing retiree health benefits said they had increased retirees' share of premiums in the past two years, and nearly three-quarters said they were likely to increase premium shares or reduce prescription benefits in the near future.

During the 1990s, many employers sought to form purchasing coalitions to increase their leverage over premiums and quality of care. Although these groups could in theory be expanded to include small firms and the self employed, research by Jack Meyer of the Economic and Social Research Institute (ESRI) shows that large employers and groups have not reached out to smaller businesses. In Business Initiatives to Expand Health Coverage for Workers in Small Firms, Meyer concludes that voluntary efforts by employer groups are unlikely to solve small businesses' insurance access problems.

Nearly 30 states operate some type of high-risk pool for people left out of private markets because of high health risks. In Insuring the Uninsurable: An Overview of State High Risk Health Insurance Pools, Lori Achman and Deborah Chollet of Mathematica Policy Research outline the various state arrangements and calculate that high-risk pools currently reach a small share of the market, collectively covering only 105,000 individuals.

The task force also continues to formulate the details of a "2020 Vision for Health Care," as originally proposed in paper coauthored last year by Fund officers Karen Davis, Cathy Schoen, and Steve Schoenbaum. Working with leading health policy researchers and thinkers in the field, the task force is exploring ways to achieve universal health coverage by the year 2020.

Moving these and other ideas into action will require involvement beyond the policy community. At a kick-off event in February, the Association of Academic Health Centers announced plans for a public awareness campaign, "Why Not Everyone? It's Time for Action on the Uninsured." With Fund support, the campaign will involve academic health center and university leaders in mobilizing public support for high-quality health coverage for all Americans.
