Another Way was one of 11 domestic violence centers in Florida to receive portions of the $10 million available to the state's 42 domestic violence centers for capital projects. The local agency was awarded $1.2 million from a competitive grant through the Department of Children and

Donna Fagan, Another Way executive director, said the funds will be used to renovate the Lake

"Between our shelters and our outreach programs, we serve about 1,200 people annually," she said. "The grant is specifically for Lake City and all the funds are coming to Columbia County. The grant funds are going to allow us to remodel the shelter."

Under the grant requirements, Another Way has until January to start the construction and the construction must be completed by June 2015. Fagan said construction is expected to begin in about six months.

Another Way operates 35-bed shelter facilities in Lake City and Chiefland and has provided services for 24 years. The first Another Way shelter in Lake City opened in 1996.

The facility in Lake City also houses its administrative offices.

Explosions rock propane plant

TAVARES — A series of explosions rocked a central Florida propane gas plant, igniting a 200foot high fireball, and sent the sound of "boom after boom after boom" through the neighborhood around it. Eight people were injured, with at least four in critical condition.

John Herrell of the Lake County Sheriff's Office said early Tuesday that no one died despite massive blasts that ripped through the Blue Rhino propane plant property late Monday night. Officials initially scrambled to find more than a dozen employees after the explosions.

Neighboring houses were evacuated, but no damage to them was reported.

'Management is comfortable saying all of those they knew were there tonight have been accounted for," he said.

Tavares Fire Chief Richard Keith said possible causes of the explosion may be either equipment malfunction or human error. Sabotage was not suspected.

The federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration launched an investigation, as did the Florida State Fire Marshal's office.

One person injured in the explosion was listed in critical condition at University of Florida Health Shands Hospital and three others were listed in critical condition at Orlando Regional Medical Center. Herrell said some others drove themselves to area hospitals.

Schools chief defends role in Ind. grade change

By GARY FINEOUT

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE State Education Commissioner Tony Bennett is moving quickly to defend his actions in his former job in Indiana and reassure legislative Florida leaders and other top state officials that he did nothing wrong there.

Bennett reached out to them after The Associated Press reported his education team in Indiana overhauled the school grading system to improve the marks of a charter school run by a prominent Republican donor.

Indiana's top education official now says her department is examining all grades awarded to schools under the state's accountability system to ensure that no school has a mark it doesn't deserve.

The revelation comes during a time of vigorous debate over whether Florida's grading system is valid in the wake of a string of changes the last two years.

Although some critics have called on Bennett to resign, so far his bosses say they remain confident in him. The State Board of Education hired Bennett after he lost his re-election bid as Indiana schools superintendent.

'If true, it is troubling," said Sally Bradshaw, a board member. "But Florida has had to adjust our own school grading system to ensure that the grading formula is applied uniformly and my sense is that that may be what happened in Indiana in this

John Colon, another board member, said he has "complete faith" in Bennett especially as the state begins its transition to new common core standards.

Bennett said he talked about his actions in Indiana with Gov. Rick Scott's staff and that he had received "pretty strong support" from them. Scott said at an event in Orlando that he not seen the stories about Bennett and would not comment about them.

Melissa Sellers, a spokeswoman for Scott, later praised Bennett and said he is "clearly committed to making Florida's education system the best in the nation."

While in Indiana, Bennett championed an A to F grading system. It mirrored in some ways the system former Gov. Jeb Bush developed in Florida.

But emails obtained by The Associated Press show Bennett and his staff scrambled last fall to ensure influential donor Christel DeHaan's school received an "A," despite poor test scores in algebra that initially earned it a "C."

HOSPITALS: Shands part of big corporate merger

It is not clear what the hospitals will

The announcement was made Tuesday morning.

Rhonda Sherrod, Shands at Lake Shore CEO, said all questions regarding the merger were being handled by the HMA home office.

In May 2010, Shands Health Care and HMA formed a partnership to jointly own and govern Shands' three community hospitals — Shands at Lake Shore, Shands Live Oak and Shands Starke.

HMA began managing the facilities on July 1, 2010, and Shands at Lake Shore Hospital had its name changed to Shands at Lake Shore Regional Medical Center as part of the new partnership. Sherrod was tapped to serve as the single, senior administrator to run all three facilities.

HMA paid $21.4 million for 60 percent interest in the three hospitals.

HMA, a Naples-based company, had a reputation for partnering with nonurban hospitals for the past three Community Health Systems is based in Franklin, Tenn., and has large concentrations of hospitals in Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Texas.

Shands at Lake Shore is in the midst of a multimillion-dollar project to completely renovate the fourth floor of the Sherrod, who would only speak about current projects at the hospital, said the merger will not impact the renovation work.

"We're doing a complete renovation of our fourth floor, which is our obstetrics unit," she said. "It's scheduled to be completed by late November, and we're about midway through the project and nothing will impact it. We'll have a beautiful new birthing center for mothers to come deliver babies with all newly renovated rooms, newborn nursery and the entire floor from top to bottom is being renovated."

Jack Berry, Lake Shore Hospital Authority executive director, said the merger will not impact the indigent care services the hospital authority board provides to the community.

"The only thing the merger will impact is there will be more services available in the community because of the extensive portfolio that CHS has," he said. "It's just a growing situation. In the long run, I think this will serve the community better."

Berry said right now he does not expect any funding changes for hospital authority programs because of the merger.

"I don't think the merger is going to affect the taxpayers in any way,

Although the merger is not yet complete, Berry said the local hospital authority board will have some say as to what happens to the hospital.

"They'll have to come back before our board in order to get approval for the lease. That will be an action that will be dealt with with our board," he said. "In our current lease, if the majority interest in the ownership changes, they have to seek approval through our board."

For more than 10 years, Shands Healthcare had a lease agreement with the Lake Shore Hospital Authority through which Shands leased the Lake Shore Hospital facility from the hospital authority board.

In 2010, a new lease was drawn up, in which HMA was listed as a partner and tenant operating the hospital.

Berry said he does not anticipate the merger to be completed in the immediate future.

"I don't expect this to close before the first quarter of next year," he said. "I don't think anything is going to change locally in that time.'

"The funding is going to allow us to convert this entire building to shelter (space), which will increase the number of beds by 20, giving us 55 beds in Lake City," Fagan said.

The shelter has some bedroom/bathroom combinations, while other bedrooms share a bathroom. The facility also has a commons area were people cook as well as areas where children can play.

The state grant is the second Another Way has received from the state for capital projects.

"We received state funding to build this facility to start with and that was eight years ago," Fagan In the past three years, $400,000 in the bank account at the end of the year. ... We've got to find it, somewhere."

While School Superintendent Terry Huddleston said district personnel are getting down to the bare bones, the board suggested looking at other opportunities for savings. Schools now have to approach things differently and with fewer people in order to improve the fund balance, Huddleston added.

The finance department found $100,000 in savings Tuesday when they realized a software upgrade could be paid for with a federal grant, said finance director Bonnie Penner. The alternative source of funds meant the district could place those savings into the cash fund balance.

"To get to $1 million, there's still some heavy lifting that needs to be done," Penner said. "When we started this budget process, we were $2.8 million in the red. The first step was to break even, and now we're looking to enhance the fund balance to strengthen our financial position."

The board met in a nearly empty auditorium, but board member Keith Hudson said he expected a low turnout. The audience was on par with normal budget public hearings.

In the past, the board pulled from the reserve to combat overspending, Hudson said. The prior budgets had extra revenue to allow the board to draw from savings, but now those savings are dwindling.

"All of us together, we're working to try to pull this thing back up," he

Board member Stephanie Finnell said even though the goal may seem difficult to reach, she believed the district needed to work toward saving the $1 million.

"It is a work in progress," she said. "Without hindering our children which is the most important thing we've got to focus on that goal."

The board approved a tentative budget $69,690,260. Last year's budget was $64,390,580.

The district will not get to use the additional $5.3 million as it pleases. The money is earmarked for charter schools and state-mandated teacher In addition to adopting the tentative budget, which will be finalized in September, the board also approved millage rates for the current fiscal Millage rates controlled by the district remained the same as last year, with discretionary operating millage levied at 0.748 and capital outlay set at 1.5. Capital outlay funds will go toward the purchase of new school buses, debt payment and maintenance costs.

The required local effort set by the state legislature declined this year to 4.947 mills. Last year, the required local effort was set at 5.164 mills.

"For the last several years, the state has been requiring the districts to levy higher and higher taxes, but this year it went down. Maybe they're righting that," Penner said.

A great community partner

Editor's note: An editorial that appeared in Wednesday's edition contained several factual errors. The corrected version follows.

'hite Springs Agricultural Chemicals, Ltd. PCS. PotashCorp-White Springs. The phosphate company north of us in Hamilton County is known by several names.

Another name we think fits the company: Great Community Partner.

PotashCorp-White Springs is part of a global corporation engaged in providing plant nutrients to help feed a hungry world.

PotashCorp-White Springs continues to set the stadard for supporting the communities it serves, evaluating the needs in these communities and meeting them by giving back. The industry also has shown itself as a safe workplace for its diligent employees. In addition, PotashCorp leads the way with reclamation projects, restoring natural lands once the phosphate is harvested.

More than 700 full-time workers are employed at PotashCorp-White Springs. A little more than one-third of them live in Columbia County. Several hundred additional contractors find work at the mining operation. Other businesses and industrial partners sell products to the company and thrive with the phosphate business.

Each year for the past several years, PotashCorp-White Springs has given back hundreds of thousands of dollars to nonprofit groups and worthwhile community projects. Company officials are quick to support worthwhile causes.

PotashCorp-White Springs may be based in White Springs, but they have shown us they care about Columbia County and have their finger on the pulse of projects needing assistance in Lake City. The company is a good friend to Lake City and Columbia County, but also to their entire service area, and we salute their corporate philanthropy.

PotashCorp continues to thrive and share the proceeds of its hard work to improve the quality of non-profit efforts and educational goals in Columbia County. For their continued focus on making a positive contribution. we say "thank you."

Ronald Reagan history serves as good model

'f you don't learn from history, you're doomed to repeat it, a philosopher once said, but here's an addendum: You may also want to learn from it - as in reading "Sagebrush Rebel: Reagan's Battle With Environmental Extremists and Why It Matters Today" - because you do want to repeat it.

There you find out how President Ronald Reagan gave us policies serving the environment and the economy at the same time. Excuse me, President Barack Obama, but please visit this book.

It's by William Perry Pendley, who served in the Interior Department under Reagan and talked about the book recently at the Western Conservative Summit in Denver. He knows his subject inside and out, just as Reagan seemed to know environmental issues inside and out.

Reagan, he explains in this engaging, educational work, had done research and writing on the environment for years as a radio commentator. As governor of California, he had learned more about the operations of Interior than any president ever. He had guidance from think-tank wizards and a heaping helping of common sense, to boot.

The result of all of this was extraordinary environmental protections - restoring national parks, protecting endangered species, extending wilderness lands, safeguarding us against hazardous wastes - and something else.

This president increased energy production, refuting the 1977 prediction of his predecessor, President Jimmy Carter. He had said we were running out of natural gas and oil, meaning we therefore had to endure sacrificial pain.

On radio that year, Reagan said this just wasn't true. Later, after winning the presidency himself, he proved it wasn't by overcoming the best-laid plans of radical environmentalists and translating his analysis into programs that led to increased exploration, discovery and production of oil and natural gas. He boosted coal production, too, and through all of this fed a robust economic recovery he was otherwise helping to manage, reversing the economic spiral of the Carter years. Reagan believed in American ingenuity. He trusted free markets and they performed as expected, and now - thanks partly to what he helped get going - we are nearing an energy boom. Sadly, someone is getting in the way: Obama, who is presiding over the weakest economic recovery since World War II and holds hands with the radical environmentalists Reagan fought.

Obama gave a speech on the economy the other day, asking, among other things, for more spending on infrastructure, which would not be necessary if he had stuck to his original plan to afford us infrastructure heaven in the 2009 stimulus. In fact, the projects chosen were not always the most important and money was diverted for such other stimulus objectives as spending $349,243 per home for broadband Internet access in one area where federal help wasn't much needed.

Talk about scandals.

The truth is that more seriously addressing waste would provide enough funds to fix highways and bridges most in need along with normal funds properly spent and nonfederal efforts being pursued. Meanwhile, how about approving the privately financed Keystone XL pipeline that could provide thousands of jobs, lots of oil from Canada and billions to the economy? Science says do it, radical environmentalists are opposed and Obama is so far heeding them more than science and this particular infrastructure need.

But hasn't Obama, like Reagan, helped direct increased production of oil and natural gas? He brags as if he has, but he hasn't. It's happening, but mainly on private lands. Whereas Reagan opened up federal lands, Obama is playing hard to get. During his years in office, it's reported that energy production is down on them, even though they harbor resources vital in boosting the economy and adding more desperately needed jobs.

The issue, as a couple of additional sources recently agreed, is that it's easy for radical environmental groups to get in the way of permits when dealing with an administration that is largely in philosophical cahoots with them. One consequence is to limit an energy boom that would soon be bursting out all over if Obama would just do the nation a little favor. Repeat some Reagan history.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks for supporting spray field project

To the Editor:

This is in reference to the headline "Spray field project backed," July 19, Lake City Reporter.

The Ichetucknee Alliance is a grassroots organization dedicated to the restoration and preservation of Ichetucknee Springs and River. We are pleased to commend the Columbia County Commission for approving the expenditure of $100,000 toward a plan to convert the city's wastewater spray field to a wetland treatment system.

This proposed facility will be a major step in reducing nitrate that is impacting our aquifer and the Ichetucknee. Furthermore, we commend the city for pledging $200,000 and the Suwannee River Water Management District for pledging $400,000 for this important project. We trust that the Department of Environmental Protection will provide the remaining funding from the 2013 Springs Protection appropriation.

Ensuring that this project is sustained to completion will demonstrate that our community cares about our springs. We applaud the city, the county and the water management district for standing tall for the Ichetucknee, "the people's spring."

Selenium deficiency can lead to many diseases

Dear Pharmacist:

I have Hashimoto's thvroid disease, and my husband has Grave's. We are a perfect match because he makes too much and I make too little. Advice?

- B.L., Dallas, Texas

Answer:

You're little thyroid is a small gland with a big function. Located at the base of your throat, your thyroid produces hormones that control your metabolism (as in fat-burning ability) and regulates the rhythm of your heart and your body temperature. That explains why you eat like a bird and gain weight, while your husband eats like a a horse and stays thin. People like that either have a healthy thyroid and good metabolism, or they have intestinal parasites!

Well, anyway, the point is, one glitch in your thyroid and dangerous consequences can ensue, ranging from encephalopathy to heartbeat irregularities. Most people think hypothyroidism is strictly about fatigue, cold sensitivity and weight gain but news flash, it causes misery head to toe.

The opposite of hypothyroidism is hyperthyroidism, where excessive thyroid hormone is produced causing weight loss, rapid heartbeat, and heat intolerance (and 100 more symptoms). Hyperthyroidism

DEAR PHARMACIST

is often referred to as

Graves' disease, an autoimmune condition where the body attacks it's own thyroid gland. A goiter in the neck can occur. Whether you have hypoor hyperthyroidism, selenium is one trace mineral that may help. There are others that I've written about in the past (see my article archives).

Selenium has been shown in clinical trials to either slow the progression of or reduce symptoms of thyroid conditions, meaning any imbalance (hyper or hypo). Selenium is directly tied to the health of your thyroid gland. So, discuss this mineral with your doctor.

Your precious stash of selenium may be mugged by ... wait for it ... your medication. Surprised? Well, unfortunately it's true, your medicine might be crashing your thyroid over time, and this is covered in the selenium chapter in my book, "Drug Muggers."

Here are some common muggers of selenium:

- Acid reducing medications

— Antidepressants

— Corticosteroids

- Hormone-replacement therapy
- Birth control pills — Breast cancer drugs
- Sulfonamides

If you take any of those, selenium supplementation may be critical for you. And just FYI, it's not just medicine, certain medical conditions and beverages affect selenium status. Recently, scientists discovered a certain gene is associated with thyroid cancer. This gene usually stops tumor growth, and when lifestyle factors turn it off in your body, thyroid tumors are more apt to

If you'd like more details about thyroid disease, this cancer gene, how to switch it back on or anything else, sign up for my "health tips" newsletter at my website, in the banner, upper right hand corner.

One more thing, selenium-rich foods include walnuts, tuna (not too much. Mercury.), shrimp, eggs, cheese, turkey, beef and oatmeal. I like Brazil nuts because eating four per day gives you about 200 micrograms of selenium.

Insurance officials: Rates likely to rise in Fla. under ACA

By KELLI KENNEDY Associated Press

MIAMI — Florida's insurance officials said Tuesday that health insurance rates will rise 5 to 20 percent for small businesses and 30 to 40 percent in the individual market through the state's new exchange under the federal health law.

Some of the state's largest individual health insurers, including Florida Blue and Cigna, will be among 11 plans competing through the exchange in the individual market and five insurers will offer plans in the small group market. Florida insurers have until today to approve plans in the exchange.

Under the Affordable Care Act, coverage sold on the individual market has to undergo a significant upgrade. As of Jan. 1, insurers can no longer turn away people with pre-existing medical conditions, and they will be limited in what they can charge to older policy holders. Consumers' financial exposure will be capped. Insurers are also required to offer a certain set of benefits under the plans, so while prices may increase, consumers will be getting an upgraded product.

But residents making less than $48,000 a year will receive a voucher from the federal government to help offset premium costs. The less a person makes, the more the government will pay.

In general, premiums in the individual market will be higher on average, but after the tax credits, most people will end up paying less, said Larry Levitt of Kaiser Family Foundation, who commented on the exchanges in general and was not speaking specifically to Florida's rates.

Several other states have already released rates, but the Republican-led Florida Legislature, which has been reluctant to implement the new health law, decided to let the federal government run the state's online marketplace. The feds aren't expected to release the rates until September.

The new marketplaces, which are open for enrollment Oct. 1, will have the feel of an online travel site where individuals, families and small businesses can compare different private insurance plans. Individuals will be required to either have health insurance from their employer or purchase it and will pay a roughly $100 penalty next year if they don't. Anyone making below the poverty line, $11,490 for an individual or $23,550 for a family of four, won't be eligible to buy insurance through the online marketplace.

"Everyone is so focused on price that they're giving the consumer a false sense that it's only the price that's important to them," said Ray Smithberger, general manager in charge of Cigna Individual and Family Plans. For example, they want potential customers to understand that even though a premium may be low, there could be a $5,000 deductible before the plan kicks in.

Cigna will offer two to four plans at the bronze, silver and gold levels to residents in the Orlando, Tampa and South Florida areas that will include a variety of deductibles. The insurer will not offer platinum or catastrophic plans.

Changing roles

Ronsonet goes from Tiger to Indian in new role as coach

By BRANDON FINLEY bfinley@lakecityreporter.com

It's not every day that a player graduates high school and is elevated to a head coaching position.

But that's exactly what happened for Kelbie Ronsonet as her volleyball background and work ethic helped her land the head coaching job of Fort White High's volleyball team.

Ronsonet was a Columbia High player just last season, but doesn't expect her age to be any problem with leading the Lady Indians.

"I've had a job since I was 15 years old," Ronsonet said. "I always thought that I was mature for my age. I was actually a manager at Maurices before this. It's kind of funny, because last year the girls joked that I should coach. When I heard it was open, I thought that it would be really cool to be able to share my knowledge. I wanted to give them a chance to have a good season. I thought I would wing it and give it a

Winging it paid off and Ronsonet will have a chance to lead the Lady Indians beginning on Aug. 22 when Fort White plays host to Union County and Lafayette high schools.

But what led the freshly graduated former Tiger to believe that she was ready?

"I heard about the job through a couple of parents," Ronsonet said. "They're friends with my dad, and I thought I'd apply. When they wanted to see me for a interview, I was like, they're serious? I know a lot about the game and played for a travel team that came in third in the country in nationals. I've learned from all kinds of different coaches. I made the decision not to go to college for vollevball due to a couple of ankle injuries. I thought what a great way to still be in the sport without reaching further injury."

Ronsonet may have given up college as far as sports go, but she still plans on completing her education. "I'm (Florida Gateway College) and have six more Ronsonet said she hasn't decided yet, after receiving the job, if she would try to stay closer to stay with the program.

"I thought about it, but it's a little early to tell." she said. "I've had the Florida State plan for years and I talked to them about if I did decide to head out, I'd be glad to help out. None of my plans are set in stone."

In the meantime, she wants to build the program from the ground up.

"The way I see it is that it starts with middle school, because it's all one program," Ronsonet said. 'When they move up, it's her age will factor in?

classes before my AA. I all in one system. They would like to transfer to have to work together. I want elevate the program as whole.'

But she by no means thinks its going to be a long process.

"This season I am hoping to have a successful year and a winning season," Ronsonet said. "We can get this program back on track. I want to set a foundation if I do leave next year."

Helping her out will be a class of returning players.

"I have three seniors coming back and a bunch of juniors," Ronsonet said. "Most of the varsity is returning, which is a good thing. I have a couple of good prospects. I don't have a lot of height, but I do have a lot of heart. They all play for each other."

It's difficult, because they don't believe me or were really shocked. When it comes to the girls, they know I know what I'm talking about. It's not like I played 20 years ago. I know how school is. I've been there. I know how homecoming is. I've played with or against most of the girls in the past. They treat me as a coach and I haven't had

DEAR ABBY

Young couple's intimacy is risky without birth control

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend, "Allison," and I have been in a relationship for two years. We met in our sophomore year of high school and have been dating ever since. We have an incredible relationship.

We were virgins when we started dating, but decided we would lose our virginity to each other. We have always used birth control pills and condoms to ensure we wouldn't be having any children.

Earlier this month we had a pregnancy scare. Allison had failed to tell me she stopped taking her birth control pills three months ago. My trust was broken, but most of all I was scared she might be pregnant. It turned out she wasn't, but because of the incident I have been skeptical about making love to her. She says this frustrates her, but I have told her the reason I won't is because she refuses to take the pill.

Abby, we are way too young to have a child and are totally unprepared. I'd still like to be intimate with Allison, but I'm afraid. What should I do? -BETRAYED IN BANGOR, MAINE

The next thing you should do is find out why Allison would stop taking her birth control pills without telling you. If there was a medical reason, there are other methods she could have used in their place. (If you are planning to attend college, she may have been thinking a baby would "anchor" you to her.)

And last, recognize that if you resume having sex with her - which I emphatically DON'T recommend - that you won't be able to trust her as far as birth control is concerned, and you will be the one totally responsible for preventing a pregnancy. The saying, "Fool me relatively new craze of trashing the wedding dress. I think it's a deplorable waste. I'm sorry I kept mine and watched it yellow over the years, but I haven't heard a reasonable argument for destroying the gown.

Some women say if they have a daughter, she wouldn't want a dated dress. But if the dress is currently in style, I'm sure some less fortunate girl would love to have it. Rather than trash it, I say why not donate the dress or sell it and send the money to a woman's charity? - SENSIBLE IN THE SUNSHINE STATE

DEAR SENSIBLE: The only rational reason I can think of for "trashing' a wedding dress would be if the marriage was a disaster and the bride was doing it as a way of venting her anger. I can't speak for all young women, but I am willing to bet that many would be thrilled to wear the gown their mother wore. And for those who aren't interested or can't fit into it, your idea of recycling is compassionate, generous and sensible.
