Manslaughter charges filed in fatal crash

17-year-old Westland man has been charged in the traffic death of 14-year-old Nicole Mugurian, a Livonia Franklin High School freshman who died March 10 in a flery crash on Ann Arbor Trail near Hines Drive.

Joseph John Gackiewicz, who turned 17 on Feb. 21 was arraigned Thursday by 18th District Judge C. Charles Bokos on felony charges of vehicular manslaughter and driving drunk/causing a death.

He is accused of driving the 1989 Buick Regal in which Mugurian was killed. Westland police said the driver lost control while passing a pickup truck on the

Mayor plans expanded ALS, community policing

BY DURRELL CLEN

Westland Mayor Robert Thomas announced plans Wednesday to expand a community police project and an Advanced Life Support medical rescue program - eight months after voters rejected a tax increase. for the services.

Thomas, in his eighth annual State of the City address, said he believes that Westland residents want the services but simply don't want to pay higher taxes.

Danger alleged

State's high court hears arguments in eye loss case at Westland arena

By Tim Richard Staff Writer

A former semi-pro goalie hopes the Michigan Supreme Court will force Westland to go to trial in his suit over his loss of an eye at the city ice arena.

Lawyers were still arguing about whether Gary Singerman was a "coach" or just observing the college-age players scrimmaging when a puck hit his eye on Aug. 1, 1989. He wore no mask or helmet as he stood on the ice near the goal.

Justices heard oral arguments last week in the second-floor Law Building courtroom in Lansing. The court is expected to rule by year's end — perhaps sooner because of the Sept. 1 scheduled retirement of Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley.

"The rink was always dark, and lack of lighting made it dangerous," said Singerman's attorney, William Dobreff of Warren.

"If the lighting was good, plaintiff (Singerman) would not have needed protective equipment, and where he was standing would not have been dangerous," said Dobr-

Dobreff said rink managers Tami McKinstry and Cindy Blayle were "grossly negligent" in failing to enforce a rule requiring persons on the ice to wear protection. Dobreff denied Singerman was playing goalie, saying his client was 6 to 10 feet from the goal. He described Singerman as a former goaltender for a Pittsburgh farm club.

Dobreff's suit was brought under a section of the Governmental Immunity Act known as the "public buildings exception." Dobress had testimony from maintenance men that five to 20 of the 40 lights over the rink weren't working; that there was no reflective ceiling; and that the battered sideboards made it difficult to see a flying puck.

Dobreff produced memos showing that Westland officials had recognized the need to install new lighting and a reflective ceiling. After the accident, new lighting was Representing Westland was attorney Anne M. McLaughlin of Livonia. She noted Wayne Circuit Judge Susan B. Neilson ruled for the city, saying Singerman's claim was barred by "the open and obvious danger doctrine." A Court of Appeals panel reversed Neilson. McLaughlin's brief said Singerman had coached for the Eastern Michigan University Hockey Club the previous year. The rink was rented by club member Joseph Eller, who

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT

McLaughlin's brief quoted Eller and other players as warning Singerman and calling him "crazy" for venturing on the ice near the goal without safety equipment.

The Westland brief said the city had no obligation to warn or protect Singerman from "an open and obvious danger," but added that assistant manager Blayle was on her way to the rink to warn Singerman when the mishap occurred.

"Plaintiff (Singerman) recognized the danger presented by the alleged lighting problem, and he voluntarily chose to continue to place himself in a position of peril." McLaughlin's brief said.

No one complained of the lighting, she

The city asked the Supreme Court to reverse the Court of Appeals and reinstate Neilson's summary dismissal of Singerman's suit.

"I take time to get involved in their school and activities," said Verkennis, a 22-year resident of Westland and a plant manager for EPI Printing of Livonia, "I love my children because I enjoy doing things with them and take pride in what they're doing."

Verkennis was nominated by his children Daryn, 16, a student at John Glenn High School and Kara, 10, a student at Schweitzer Elementary School, who often enjoy visiting Belle Isle with their parents to feed the deer and wildlife.

"Our dad should be father of the year! because of all the things he does for everyone else." they wrote in nomination. "He has been involved with church for all these years as Sunday school teacher, maintenance and helping with the youth group when needed." He has also been a scout den leader and cub master, is involved with the Ann Arbor Hands-on Museum, has served on the Wayne-Westland School Advisory Board for Coops, and often goes into schools to share his 35 years of printing industry experience with students.

Carol Verkennis, his wife of 21 years, said her husband was patient and always takes the time to talk things out with their children.

Biglow is currently the second. vice president for the Wildwood PTA, where she has been active for seven years. She is married to husband of 18 years, James; the couple has lived in Westland for that same time.

The current PTA president called her friend "dependable, sincere and supportive" and a "positive role model."

Elizabeth Bozyk

Teacher of the Year Students and poors alike describe Bozyk's teaching style as "hands on," which encourages good learning. The oldest of eight children, the John Glenn High School teacher said she always wanted to be a teacher.

"It was kind of an in-born thing," she said. "My goal . . . is to have thom be individual thinkers and learners. I'm always trying to be a better teacher."

Bozyk was nominated for the honor by anatomy/phisiology teacher Thomas Deschaine. He called her "one of the finest teachers to ever teach in the public school system. Her enthustastic in the classroom is highly contagious," he added. "The students have the utmost respect. not only for her teaching but also for the rapport she has with them."

John Glenn principal Neil Thomas said he "can't think of anyone who deserves it more. Kids love her. But most of all, sho's a lovely person."

Honored for his academics. athletic, social skills and other accomplishments, this John Glenn High School senior said he studies late at night, when the rost of his family is asleep. "It's a good time for me to study," he said. "I have total concentration."

In addition to "carrying a very tough" academic load, according to his nominator and teacher Thomas Deschaine, Dashairya is the vice president of his student council, holds down a job and has plays varsity football and tennis.

"Deepak is an outstanding student." Deschaine said in his nomination. "Over the years he has received numerous academic letters and is a member of the National Honor Society. His ability to balance his after-school activities and his academics is amazing.

Dashairya plans to attend the University of Michigan in a premed program, or engineering. He lives at home with his parents and sister.

> Michelle Henn HS Senior of the Year

Chris Bak, an assistant principal at Wayne Memorial High School, nominated all-around student and athlete Michelle Honn because of her overall achievements. "Michelle just stood right out," Bak said. "She's active with student council and sports. She's really contributed."

Honn is a member of the National Honor Society, National German Honor society, Ski Club, Gorman Club, Student Senate, varsity softball and varsity basketball. In her spare time, she enjoys bowling, hiking and camping.

"The advice I would give to another student is just to try your best," Henn said. Henn said she enjoys the competitive aspect of being in school. "It keeps me busy," she added. Henn plans to attend Albion College where she wants to major in chemistry and environmental science. Currently, mathematics and chemistry are her favorite subjects.

Bak said Honn is "certainly an example" of an outstanding student. "She never complains," Bak said. "She just gets the job done."

She lives at home with her parenta, sister and brother.

Police arrested Walker and a Police have said they believe second murder defendant, 20that Rugg may have gone to year-old Anthony Jacob Peay of Detroit, following an investigation of Rugg's death. Peay is serving eight to 15 years in prison after pleading no contest to a reduced charge of voluntary manslaughter on Jan. 15.

Rugg was carrying several bullets that fell out of his pocket at the murder scene, Terry testified. Schmidt also testified that Rugg was legally drunk based on blood-alcohol tests.

The incident started in an area of Inkster commonly referred to as "Little Saigon." Rugg was apparently trying to flee the scene when he was chased toward Henry Ruff Road and slain, police have said.

Trial continues in respite center incident

By DARRELL CLEM STAFF WRITER

A mentally impaired woman who accused a respite center temporary employee of having sex with her reported the incident soon after it allegedly occurred, according to court testimony Wednesday.

The 28-year-old victim appeared nervous and shaken when she reported the Feb. 20, 1996, incident to Brin Vasher, a former direct care worker at the Rose Kennedy Respite Center in Westland, Vasher said.

Soon after being molested, the woman reported that temporary care worker David McGee, 45, had her perform oral sex on him in a break room of the respite center on Marquette, east of Newburgh, Vasher testified.

"She looked a little out of sorts," Vasher testified. She was hesitant to tell me what happened."

Under questioning from Vasher, however, the victim leaned over and whispered details of the molesting, Vasher testified Wednesfirst-degree criminal sexual conduct. . The Library.

That phrase used to conjure up an image of a brick building. somewhat dark and musty inside, with ceiling-high stacks of books and a spinsterish librarian sitting at a high desk telling patrons to "Shhhl"

The focal point, almost always, was the card catalog - rows of cabinets containing dozens of small drawers filled with dogeared cards with strange numbers and codes on them.

No more. Walk into a typical library today and the first thing you are likely to encounter are banks of small computers.

"Where's the card catalog?" you may ask.

Well, there it is. Inside those computers. Along with a whole lot more.

Changing times

Not everyone likes the computer revolution that has replaced library card catalogs and shelves of "Reader's Guides" with online databases. But learn to live with it. Libraries aren't what they used

Like it or not, it's a whole lot faster to select "Search by

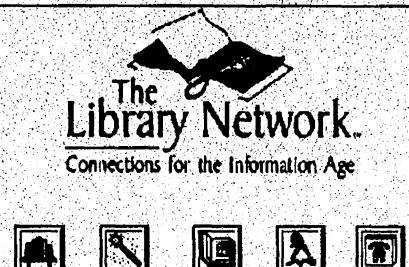

"Return" and let the computer do its stuff than to thumb through dosens of cards in a bottom drawer of one of those wood cabinets while two other patrons search the drawers right over your head. And just try to do a keyword" search without help from a computer.

If you've ever spent hours poring over back issues of the "Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature" looking for articles on peanut farming in the Sudan; you'll appreciate the speed and convenience of an electronic search of "Magazine Index Plus."

Research centers

Yet the electronic card catalog is probably the least revolution. ary aspect of the computerization of modern libraries. Computers, the Internet and services like Metro Net or The Library Network have turned community "circulating libraries" into full-fledged research institutions - all electronically, of course.

That doesn't mean everything is simple and easy to use. For one thing different libraries use different software programs for their catalogs. There's the Portal system, Dynix, Innovative Interfaces, Voyager - just to name

And getting into the card catalog doesn't necessarily get you anywhere else. Most local libraries have separate Internet terminals which you may have to reserve in advance. And then you only get a limited amount of time on them.

Access from home

Some libraries, particularly those with stand-alone systems like Canton, allow patrons with home computers to access the library system from home. In addition to searching the catalog, you can review your patron record, see what books you have checked out, which are overdue and even renew books from home. You can place books on hold or request new items that you'd like the library to purchase.

If your library doesn't have direct dial-in access, or if you would just like to get beyond the card catalog and explore some of the other resources available. you can access Metro Net at http://www.metronet.lib.mi.us or tapes. And CDs. And CD-ROMs. The Library Network at Metro Net offers links to be eight member libraries catalogs and home pages plus links to other resources on the Werk Wide Web. The Library Network offers similar links, including access to the Shared Automation System, the online catalog containing more than 500,000 title of materials held by 55 member libraries in Wayne, Oakland, Washtenaw, St. Clair and Livingston counties.

Online links

Once you are out on the Web, you can go just about anywhere, including the Michigan Electronic Library, MEL is the University of Michigan's online library with links to literally thousands of resources, including a searchable newspaper and periodical index that allows users to access and download full text newspaper and magazine articles. You can also access MEL directly at http://www.mel.lib.mi.us.

Despite the technological gadgets that now occupy the space where the card catalog stood, area librarians agree that libraries will always be basically repositories for books. And periodicals. And videos. And audio And ...

Renegade libraries didn't cry 'WOLF'

BY JACK GLADDEN STAFF WRITER

It was called WOLF, but some area librarians thought it was more of a dog. And that led to the Computer Revolution of 1992.

WOLF - the Wayne Oakland Library Federation - was started in the late 1970s after the Michigan Legislature created a group of public library cooperatives throughout the state. The cooperatives assisted member libraries with such things as buying books and equipment, handling interlibrary loans and a variety of other services. WOLF, serving Wayne and Oakland counties, was the largest of the coops.

The heart of the WOLF system was the computer - a roomsized GEAC mainframe - that, among other things, housed the WOLF catalog, a searchable database containing the holdings of all member libraries. According to one local librarian, the system was quite "user unfriendly," displaying screens of codes that were meaningless to patrons, and it was "down as often as it was up."

Still, the system made it possible for local libraries to replace their card catalogs with computer terminals, from which librarians or patrons trying to locate a book could search the entire WOLF catalog. This was especially beneficial to smaller libraries with limited holdings.

Computer revolution

By the early 1990s, however, computers had changed. Mainframes were being replaced by smaller, more sophisticated desktop systems linked to each other through "networks." Some of the more affluent libraries in WOLF had begun to install "stand-alone" systems and convert their own card catalogs into electronic databases.

These systems made it possible for patrons with home computers to access their local library catalogs from home. And they allowed the libraries and the patrons access to the Internet, which was growing fast, promising to open up a world of information to anyone with a desktop computer and a modem.

In 1992, seven area libraries, which had become increasingly disenchanted with what they considered an antiquated WOLF system, threatened to pull out and start their own cooperative unless WOLF got with the times. They agreed to stay with WOLF for a year while the matter was looked into, but in 1993 the renegade seven - Baldwin/Birmingham, Bloomfield Township, Canton, Farmington, Independence Township, Southfield and Rochester Hills - launched Metro Net, a "virtual" consortium that allowed them to link up to each other's catalogs and to access (and provide access to) the Internet.

Virtual consortium'

Metro Net calls itself a "virtual consortium" because it has no headquarters, no building no staff. Its eight member libraries (West Bloomfield joined the consortium in 1994) maintain the site through their own computer systems. Metro Net, which can be accessed at http://www. metronet.lib.mi.us. offers links not just to its members catalogs but to a plethora of other resources. (See accompanying story.) It also offers Internet accounts to patrons of its mem-

A couple of years after the revolt by the renegade seven, things changed at WOLF. After libraries from Washtenaw, St. Clair and Livingston counties joined the co-op, the name was changed from WOLF to The Library Network.

The name change also symbolized technological changes. In October 1995, the GEAC mainframe was replaced by DRA, a proprietary system running off a couple of Unix boxes. And about a year ago TLN began offering Internet accounts. While TLN libraries without their own stand-alone systems still use the Shared Automation System (the equivalent of the old WOLF catalog), they also have Internet terminals and access to a variety of other resources. TLN can be accessed at http://www.tln.lib. mi.us.

So can those renegade libraries take credit for WOLF (or The Library Network) "getting with the times"?

Kerry Sanders, the deputy director for research and development at TLN, wouldn't use those words. "But the thing I admire about

Friends needed

As the library's collection and circulation grows, so will its need for volunteers. That's where the Friends of the William P. Faust Public Library group comes in.

About 90 people belong to the volunteer group, but more are always welcome, said its president. Elaine Burg of Westland.

The group's purpose is to raise money to enhance the library's collection and services and to promote the library and reading in the community.

"I think the Friends are very important," Wilson said. "Just between November and February. they raised $5,000 for us, and they help out in other ways as well. For example, they help sort through the used books that are donated to the library."

On April 18, 19 and 20, the Friends will hold a used book sale in the library's Friends' Shop and in meeting rooms A and B. Hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday and Saturday and noon to 4 p.m. Sunday. A preview night for Friends members will be held 6:30-8:30

The Friends held a similar book sale and a T-shirt and book bag sale last fall. Together, those two events raised $2,975. Burg said. The group also raised about $2,000 from the sale of T-shirts and book bags at Westland's Winterfest, and from the ongoing sale of used books in the library's Friends' Shop, she said.

The cozy, one-room shop is located next to the library's reception desk and its doors are always open during library hours.

Run by the Friends, the shop sells used books the library has received but cannot use. Friends volunteers come in once a week to stock and straighten the shelves.

Enjoying the store

"What's nice is that the books here are organized by subject," said patron Phil Crookshank, "Most libraries just have their used books on carts by the front desk, and they don't organize them in any way. This is a lot nicer. It makes things easier to find."

Friends volunteers don't have time to sort the books alphabetically, but they do sort them by sub-

"I'm here every week," said Nancy Dzbanski of Garden City, another patron of the shop. "I think it's a beautiful library, and this is a really good place to get used books. I've found some real treasures here, and the money that they make goes back to the library, so it's for a good cause."

The shop sells books on the honor system. Patrons are asked to take their selections out of the store and pay for them at the reception desk.

Children's books are 50 cents each; small and large paperbacks are 25 and 75 cents, respectively; and hardcover books are $1 each.

The group also sells pens, pencils, paper and plastic book bags at the reception desk.

So far, Burg said, the group has made only two small expenditures: one to purchase supplies sold at the reception desk and the other for children's bookmarks which were handed out at the Westland Winterfest.

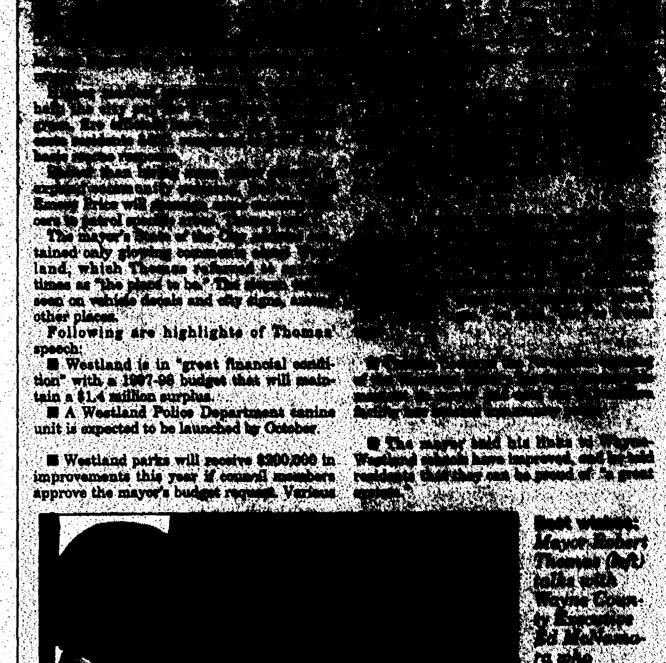

"All of the money that we raise is for the library," Burg said. "We're just waiting for the library's board to tell us what they want. So far they haven't asked us for anything big, just those small items."

Burg said she got involved with the Friends group because "I think everybody should be able to read, and I just thought it would be a helpful thing to do."

Library hours are: Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.

Summer hours (from Memorial Day through Labor Day) are: Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and closed Sunday.

The library is at 6123 Central City Parkway, south of Warren Avenue. For more information about the Friends of the William P. Court under pressure to decide school case

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

The Michigan Supreme Court is under great pressure to decide the school funding case. Durant vs. State, now that Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley has announced she will retire Sept.

Riley, 72, barely able to walk, was led in distress across the lobby and out of the Law Building Thursday afternoon about two hours after the high court heard oral arguments in a case that could cost the state treasury billions.

An hour later, court public information officer David Gruber distributed a news release quoting Riley as saying: "After nearly 20 years of service on Michigan's appellate courts. I write with sadness to advise that, for reasons of health, I am resigning from the Michigan Supreme Court effective at noon, Sept. 1, 1997.

The announcement said she would complete her work on all cases that have been argued and submitted.

That would include the school funding case, known as Durant vs. State, that could cost the treasury anywhere from $492 million to "astronomical numbers," in the words of a state lawyer.

If the court should split on that budget-busting case, as it frequently does. Riley's vote may be needed to form a majority. The Supreme Court tries to decide cases within a year of hearing them.

Although she was a Republican appointee who twice was elected as a Republican nominee, Riley gave no hint during 65 minutes of attorneys' arguments whether she favored the 84 suburban school districts or the position of Gov. John M. Engler.

Riley said last year she has Parkinson's disease but expected to finish her term which lasts until the end of 2000. Her replacement, to be appointed by Engler, would have to run for reelection in 1998.

Courtroom packed

A courtroom packed with reporters, law students and Birmingham Seaholm High School students heard Dennis Pollard, Birmingham attorney for the school districts, square off against Paul Zimmer, assistant state attorney general.

The issue was the state's shortage of payments for several

III The issue was the state's shortage of payments for several services – notably special education (94 percent) and transportation - that began in the late 1970s. services - notably special education (94 percent) and transportation - that began in the late 1970s. If the court holds they're state-mandated programs, the state must pay for them under the 1978 Headlee amendment to the Michigan Constitution.

"Special education is clearly a federal mandate. The state has no true choice," said Zimmer, who led off because the state is appealing the case. "If we didn't comply, there is no doubt the federal government would withhold all federal education funds."

Zimmer acknowledged that state law is broader than federal law, An act of Congress says handicapped students should receive an appropriate education be up to age 21. State law says they should be educated to their "maximum potential" up through age 25.

"At most, we (state) should be required to'be responsible for the cost above the federal mandate," said Zimmer, estimating that at 2 percent.

Voters' intent

Pollard came back swinging. The most compelling argument has been ignored by the attorney general. The issue: What was voters' intent in the Headlee amendment? It was that service required by the state must be funded by the state."

He cited several examples of the state's special ed requirements being higher than the federal government's. Autistic children need a 1:5 teacher-pupil ratio plus a teacher's aide if there are more than five pupils in a classroom.

"There is no federal (rule) counterpart. That, to me, is the end of the argument," said Pollard "The language of the constitution is clear. There is absolutely no basis for the court to rule otherwise."

When voters passed the Headlee amendment in 1978, he said, the state was paying 28.6 percent of special education costs. By 1994-95, the state share slipped to 9 percent.

The gap: $492 million, or about 6 percent of the state's current general fund budget.

'Astronomical'

Justice Patricia Boyle asked Pollard to comment on a brief by legislators arguing that a victory for school districts would encourage high spending in the future by local units.

"Three is no reason to believe you'll have profligate boards of education," Pollard replied.

Chief Justice Conrad Mallett Jr. asked Zimmer his estimate of the cost to the state of a ruling in the schools' behalf.

Based on the 84 original plaintiffs, Zimmer said, the cost would be $490 million (almost identical to Pollard's figure). But many other districts are putting in claims, "If these 84 districts are typical of the state, we're talking about an astronomical figure.

Other estimates have placed the cost at several billions.

"We would have to revise the (special ed) rules to conform to their (federal) regulations," Zim, mer said.

Zimmer's remark is likely to fuel speculation that Engler and lawmaker are considering reducing special ed services to the federal standards. The result would be to hold down costs and perhaps avoid the Headlee amendment rule. Already, parents of special ed students have protested to lawmakers and the State Board of Education.

The case, started by taxpayer Donald Durant in the Warren Fitzgerald school district, has dragged through the courts for 17 years.

There is a possibility Engler may do what he did in 1991 with Oakland County's suit for mental health funds. After that case had gone to the Supreme Court but before the justices ruled, Engler negotiated a settlement with County Executive Daniel T. Murphy. Under it, the state paid only one year's aid, avoiding the back years' money but giving the county a legal and moral victory.

KELLI LEWTON

A healthy you is your responsibility

his month's column is on a very important topic - how food impacts our health both positively and negatively.

In my late 20s I experienced chromic health problems, coupled with large amounts of stress while starting my company. I had been ill for a few years without finding any resolutions for my ailments. It was at this time that I began researching the power of foods and healing.

Good foods, and a healthful lifestyle, were not unfamiliar to me as I had learned early in my culinary training. Some of the best ways to meet the needs of my customers were to cook lighter foods, and keep those foods as close to their natural state as possible. For example, using salsas and relishes rather than heavy sauces, and substituting small portions of olive oil for lard and butter.

The largest pearl of wisdom I gained from my training was to prepare the freshest most seasonal food available in the most natural manner - in other words, keeping foods as close to the vine as possible.

Research

I knew a lot about food yet I had to dive deeper into the topic to cure my health problems. I put

Garlic Is a natura antiblotic, which enhances the immune system. A diet high in whole grains and fresh yeaetables will help ward off major illness and disease.

Healthful cooking methods include water saute, blanching, steaming, poaching, slow roasting and grilling.

In China 85 percent of the everyday diet is based on grains, vegetables, fruit, and fish. The national disease averages for cancer and heart disease is significantly lower than that of the U.S. Cardiovascular disease in the U.S. is now the cause of 48 percent of all deaths.

my cookbooks down for a Power Points period and read many books on how food affects the body and the chemistry aspects of food. I also spent time researching and talking with an excellent nutritional counselor Stefan Brink, director of the Natural. Research and Healing Arts Center in Royal Oak, After Mr. Brink and I studied my particular problems, he urged me to eliminate white sugar, white flour, calleine, processed foods, and to reduce my intake of most.

After my five year personal quest. I can share some of the basics with you. The ultimate truth is like most other truths ... there is not just one. There is no diet that is right for everyone, all of the time. It is crucial that each person take responsibility for his or her own health. The old saying - "You are what You Nat" sums it up in the best way.

Whole foods

In this crazy world, the challenges of balancing family, work, and nutrition are not easy. The modern age of technology with all the wonderful gifts it has brought us, has also increased the number of fast, processed and chemically treated food products. I'm not advocating that you have to be a fanatic and grow all your own foods, but it is time to consider how to minimize your intake of processed and chemically engineered foods. I challenge you to get back to the basics of "whole and natural foods,"

Start by being aware - read books, read food labels, talk to a doctor or nutrition counselor. and most importantly, listen to your hody. Health is not a condition we can attain once and for all; we don't arrive there and stay there. It is a process of constant modification to your besty and condition. The perfect diet for one person may not be for another person.

"More changes can be produced as a result of what we stop doing, especially regarding food, said Mr. Brink, "Food is fuel, if you are burning leaded in a body that requires premium unleaded, how well do you think your body will run?"

Passover family traditions

TO YOUR HEALTH

ALCOHOL AND HILAUTH DON'T MIX

BY PEGGY MARTINELLI-EVERTS REGISTERED DIETITIAN

f you have read or heard that drinking alcohol may actually be good for you, you've probably wondered how much, or how often. It seems like every time we turn on the news, there is some new study showing that a glass of wine, or a bottle of beer can improve your health. Well please, don't start drinking because you think it will make you live longer. There are better ways, proven ways, to improve your health such as exercising, not smoking, and lowering your cholesterol.

It is true that mounting research shows that red grapes may provide significant health benefits including a reduction in blood clots and reduce heart disease. Many recent studies were inspired by the French

IF YOU'RE WATCHING YOUR: WEIGHT YOU COGNIZANT OF YOUR ALCOHOL CONSUMP-TION SINCE ALCOHOL IS VERY HIGH IN CALORIES.

Paradox - the seemingly contradictory finding that the French have a lower rate of heart disease than other Western dations, despite the fact that the French diet is high in fat and cholesterol. Some scientists believe that the generous consumption of red wine among the French at partially accounts for the lower rate of heart disease, since the biologically active flavonoids in the wine reduce blood platelet aggregation. But recent research also shows that grape juice can be just as beneficial as wine.

A study done a few years ago indicated that women over 50 who had risk factors for heart disease, had a lower risk of dying if they drank not more than two drinks a day. It is not clear whether this increased longevity could be the same for men or for women under 50. The study also didn't follow people who had more than two drinks a day, or who are weekend drinkers that consume numerous drinks on Friday and Saturday nights, and abstain the rest of the week. The studies just have not been conclu-

I admit, I like a glass of wine, a beer, or a mixed drink on occasion. When taken in moderation, most of us can enjoy a drink or two now and then, without ill effect. But remember, moderation is important.

If you're watching your weight you must be very cognizant of your alcohol consumption since alcohol is very high in calories. There are seven calories per gram of pure shal compared to four calories per gram of protein or carbohydrates.

When making a decision about whether to drink or not, there are a few things we

M On average, Americans get about 4.5 percent of their calories from alcohol. Alcohol is a known stimulant of stomach acid. That is why people who drink a lot are more prone to ulcers, stomach hemorrhages and inflammation of the stomach. A major secondary symptom of alcoholism in men is anti-social behavior, in women it is depression. Alcohol has a diuretic effect which explains why you have to use the bathroom a lot when you drink. However, you are not excreting all the liquid you're drinking, you excrete body water. This explains why your urine looks very dilute by the end of a long night of drinking, and why you're so thirsty the morning

The percentage of alcohol in a product is half the proof; so 80-proof liquor is actually 40 percent alcohol.

"One drink" is equal to 1 1/2 ounces of 80proof liquor, five to six ounces of wine or: 12 ounces of beer.

Alcohol fragments sleep, making it difficult to feel rested the morning after.

One to two drinks a day may decrease some people's risk for cardiovascular disease (though the increased high density lipoproteins - the "good" fats) however, alcohol also causes increased triglycerides and increased blood pressure.

It is true that some of today's research points to a lower heart attack rate as a result of alcohol's blood thinning properties. That it thing blood is no surprise since chemicals like alcohol are also good pain thinners.

individuals who should sheolutely avoid alcohol include: pregnant women, people with a family history of alcohol abuse, anyone with an illness or on medication that prohibits alcohol consumption, and anyone who will be operating machinery or driving a vehicle.

Alcohol is a cellular toxin. It seeps directly into any cell it comes in contact with.

With each alcoholic episode, some brain cells are destroyed either directly by the action of alcohol or indirectly by the plugging up of small arteries in the brain. Excessive alcohol intake can lead to malnutrition as well as a result of maldigestion and malabsorption.

Animal studies showed rate had a biologic thirst" for alcohol when they were fed diets high in augar and caffeine, low in nutrients and high in environmental Alcoholism, if left unchecked, is chronic, progressive and 100 percent fatal.

I know all this sounds quite scary, given the fact that most of us do imbibe. However, even with all the negative effects alcohol can have on our bodies, and the risk associated with it, most of us can still incorporate it into our diet if we use good judgment. It is a good idea to ask your doctor or dietitian about alcohol, and the amount that is acceptable for you. Please remember, moderation is absolutely essential to avoid permanent negative impact.

Scrumptious, guiltless quiche suitable for your company

BY MURIEL G. WAGNER RECESTREED DIETTIAN

I was listening to a radio recipe: request show last week. One of the callers asked for an easy-to-prepare lunch dish with some glamor for a "ladies" luncheon.

Almost immediately my thoughts, turned to Quiche Lorraine - you know, the egg custard dripping with cheese, cream and bacon, then baked in a flaky pie crust. It's easy to prepare, and tastes delicious to my fat-consitive taste buds, but it's also loaded with cholesterol and saturated fat. Quiche Lorraine is pretty typical of what my food choices, and cooking methods used to be, but a distinct "no no" when I consider my cholesterel and weight goals.

Hungry for quiche, I set about designing a version that was "company" suitable, yet lower in fat.

For the pie crust I substituted hash brown potatoes. Caraway needs provide a finverful accept. Egg whitee, rather than shortening, held the crust together after its baked Substituting potatoes for the flour crust also makes the quiche a Passover possibility for brunch or Vegetables were partially cooked to release some of the water, thus avoiding a watery custard. A whole egg and egg whites are a healthful stand-in for whole eggs in the original recipe. I like the flavor of the whole egg/egg white mixture better than commercial egg substitutes. If you are not familiar with evaporated skim milk, try it in your cooking as a cream replacement. The consistency is quite similar to cream and it adds more body than skim milk.

Cooked shrimp, crab meat, or sliced chicken breast can replace the tuna in my recipe.

TUNA QUICHE WITH POTATO CRUST

Shredded Potato Crust

- 1 peckage (1 pound, 4 ounces) Non-fat Hash Brown Potatoes
- (In the dairy case). 2 cgg whites
- 1 1/2 tablespoons caraway 1 teespoon oil

Squeeze potatoes as dry as possible, Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. In medium bowl, lightly best egg whitee. Stir into potatoes and careway seeds.

Spray 10-izich pie or quiche pan with nonstick spray. Press potato mixture into bottom and sides of pan. Place great into preheated 350 degree F. oven. Bake 30 minutes. Remove and brush lightly with oil. Return crust to oven and bake at 400 degrees F. for 10 to 15 minutes more or until golden and suisp. Cool.

- 1 can (6 cunces) White Albacore Tune, water-packed, sinced, drained and fleked
- 1/2 pours fresh mushrooms, phond
- 1 banch green enlone, finely chopped

1 red or green bell pepper, chopped

1 whole egg

4 egg whites

1 1/2 cups evaporated skim milk 1/8 teaspoon ground nutmed

1 cup non-fat chedder cheese, grated

Hot pepper sauce to taste.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees F. Place mushrooms in a microwave-safe dish. Add onlone and peppers. Microwave on high for 3 minutes. Drain liquid. Place grated cheese, mushrooms, oniona, pepper, and tune into baked potate shell, Combine the eggs, evaporated skim milk and seasonings. Pour the ear mixture over the filling. Place quiche in preheated 425 degree F. oven and immediately reduce the heat to 400 degrees F. Bake for 10 minutes. Reduce the heat to 325 degrees F. and continue balting until custard is set. (about 30 to 40 minutes). Cool for 15 minutes before cutting to allow the custard to become firm. Serves 8. Nutrition values per serving: Calo-

This recipe unites watermelon and papaya. It is sweet, yet refreshing. A batido is a cross between a smoothic and a milk shake, although the main ingredient is fresh fruit.

MELON-PAPAYA BATIDO

- 1 cup diced, seeded watermelon, plus 2 small wedges for garnish
- 1 cup diced ripe papaya 1 tablespoon fat-free sweetened condensed
- 1 tablespoon fresh lime juice
- 1 1/2 cups crushed ice

Blend all ingredients in a food processor or blender. Serves 2.

Jamaica Flower Cooler is a great drink to serve over ice in a tall glass or wine goblet.

See related story on Taste. The small, dried Jamaica "flowers" are not flowers at all, but the deep-red calyxes from a plant that goes by a variety of names. They can be found in health food and courmet markets

JAMAICA "FLOWER"

COOLER 2 cups (2 ounces)

Jamaica flowers

3/4 cup sugar 6 cups water

Bring water to a boil, add the Jamaica flowers and sugar, and stir while the mixture boils for a minute. Pour into a non-corresive bowl and steep 2 hours. Strain through a sieve, pressing on the flowers to extract as much liquid as possible. Taste for strength and sweetness. If it is too pungent, add water; if too tart, add sugar. Cover and refrigerate, stored in a non-corrosive container until time to serve. Serve over ice. Serves 6.

Strawberries are spring's flavorful jewels?

When it comes to berries," strawberries are by far the most plentiful, a fact that will be hard to miss in your grocery store produce section as strawberries. imported from warmer climates, come into their peak this month.

This perennial symbol of spring is not only a good source of dietary fiber, but a cup also contains more vitamin C than any other berry, or even a medium orange! Recently, strawberries have won new accolades for being a great source of elegic acid, a food component that shows great promise as a cancerfighting agent in current scientific research.

Take advantage of strawberry season by buying locally picked berries in June. Look for ripe but not mushy berries with caps that are fresh and green.

Storing strawberries is critical to enjoying their taste and nutrition. Washing will cause them to deteriorate, so rinse them only briefly in cold water just before serving. Be sure to leave the berries intact until you are ready to serve them, as the vitamin C decreases quickly once they are cut. Strawberries also stay fresh longer when stored in a single layer rather than piled on top of one another. For best results. place them in a shallow container covered by a paper towel in the refrigerator and eat them within two to four days.

While it may be tempting to eat strawberries plain, they can be the basis for some truly memorable desserts. Strawberry shortcake is a traditional seasonal treat and a snap to make using a low-fat golden cake, sliced berries and low-fat vanilla yogurt for topping.

For a refreshing ending to a big meal, blend a ripe banana, 1 teaspoon lemon zest and a 1/2 cup plain low-fat yogurt in a blender and serve over fresh, hulled berries.

Don't limit your use of strawberries to desserts and fruit salads. Cored and halved strawberries add color and sweetness to a luncheon spinach salad, Overripe berries make a delicious strawberry quick bread for brunch. You can even quench your thirst with a strawberry cooler, made by blending a cup of ripe, hulled and halved strawberries, a cup of bottled sparkling water, a tablespoon of lime juice, 2 teaspoons of sugar and 3 ice cubes in a blender. Celebrate spring by hosting an afternoon tea. Strawberry Chutnev is a flavorful topping.

Cool shapes for hot looks

Free movie passes should be part of the job when you're in Chris Sieler's line of work.

That's because, as manager of The Sunglass Co. at Westland Shopping Center, he gets asked a lot of riddles regarding movie trivia. "Just last week a customer asked me what

Kevin Costner wore in 'Tin Cup," because he wanted sunglasses just like his," said Sieler, 26, of Westland. "Unfortunately, I couldn't help the gentleman because I never saw that movie."

But he has seen lots of others, and whenever he notices an actor wearing sunglasses in a film or on television, he pays close attention.

"I always try to guess what kind of sunglasses they're wearing, because I know customers will be asking about them," he said.

What will customers be inquiring about next? Sieler predicts it's the sunglasses that basketball star-turned-actor Dennis Rodman wears in his new movie "Double Team" which also stars Jean-Claude Van Damme.

Rodman's character - a deadly, flamboyant weapons dealer who joins forces with a spy (played by Van Damme) to protect the spy's family from a terrorist - wears "Zero" sunglasses by Oakley, Sieler said.

In addition to inquiring about sunglasses they've seen on the big and small screens, customers often ask for sunglasses that have been endorsed by their favorite athletes, Sieler said.

For example, baseball player Cal Ripkin Jr. and Chicago Bulls basketball star Michael Jordan both have Oakley sunglasses named after them; and Scottie Pippen of the Chicago Bulls, baseball player Ken Griffey Jr. and NASCAR driver Dale Earnhardt endorse Gargoyle sun-

Detroit Piston Grant Hill also is getting into the act. Fila Eyes, a joint venture between Fila (the athletic shoe company) and De Rigo Sunglasses, is coming out with sunglasses named after him.

Just her style

These glasses may be named after men, but women enjoy wearing them, too.

"A lot of women buy them for themselves,"

Sieler said. "In fact, most of the sunglasses we offer are unisex." Sports sunglasses aren't just popular because of the celebrity names attached to them, or because they look good, Sieler said. They're popular because they're made with athletes in For example, Gargoyle's F-8 collection, which include Ken Griffey sunglasses, have a flip-up lens. According to Gargoyle, F-8 is baseball shorthand for a fly ball caught by a center

"You can flip the lenses down if it's sunny out, and flip them up if it's kind of hazy, to see the ball better," Sieler said.

Sports sunglasses also are high-impact resistant. Gargoyle claims that its rugged polycarbonate lenses are 50 times stronger than safety glass, and that they can stop a .22 caliber bullet fired from 10 feet away.

That's the one thing I hope no one ever needs: bullet-proof sunglasses! But, as Sieler said, the point is that the glasses won't shatter if a baseball or basketball is knocked into them.

Although sports sunglasses are popular, there really isn't one dominant style this year, Sieler said.

So no matter what look you're going for -Tom Everett Scott in That Thing You Do," Susan Sarandon or Geena Davis in "Thelma & Louise," Woody Harrelson in "Natural Born Killers," Arnold Schwarzenegger in The Terminator," Jackie O or John Lennon - it's OK,

Get protection

But look for sunglasses that block out 100 percent UVA, B, C and IR (infra-red) rays. Also, expect to pay at least $40 for a good pair of regular sunglasses and $65 to $250 for sports sun-

On cheaper aunglasses, the anti-ultraviolet coating tends to wear off quickly and be uneven, because it is usually dipped onto, rather than mixed into the lens material, experts say.

Glamour closets intrigue shoppers

Movie stars have nothing on you! Now your closet can be as opulent as any Garbo, Diedrich or Madonna could imagine

BY NICOLE STAFFORD

Home organization stores bring space savors and order to a closet. but more importantly, style and small luxuries too.

"I think people can relate to the idea of that Hollywood dressing room where everything happens: Where I put on everything that I own to make me feel good. And that's the focus of many walk-in closets today," insisted Dan Treder, owner of Space Alternatives in Farmington Hills.

Consequently, local closet companies are offering more ways to decorate and enhance closets. Custom colors and a variety of building materials - from basic white to pickled oak - are available. Light maple, cherry wood and almond white are also popular shelving finishes, according to Angelika Fight-master, owner of Closet Interiors in Bloomfield Hills.

"Customers always want to be a little color-coordinated," she said of the trend, adding that working women with hectic lives especially appreciate touches of elegance and style in an organized closet.

California Closets at the Somerset Collection North in Troy showcases an island-style storage module in dark cherry wood. The unit, which sells for $1,800, not only gives a large walk-in closet substantial counter space but also 10 to 12 centrally located clothing drawers.

"Closets are a lot bigger now. And people spend a lot more time in them now, so they want to make them as appealing as possible," said Jeff Baumann, California Closets, buyer and manager.

Men's tie and belt hangers in pine-scented cedar, $25 to $30, also reflect a bow to luxury in the closet, according to Baumann, Non-slip hangers, which take up very little space and have a clean-European look, are available for under $8 at the shop.

Velvet or acrylic jewelry drawers and plexiglass dividers for socks and undergarments are niceties that quickly rid drawers of fussy, minute clutter, added Fightmaster. These organizing pieces can be purchased for existing drawers as well as newly purchased ones and sell for $20 - $50 at Closet Interiors.

Pulldown rods are closet treasures that bring ceiling-level space, which is typically difficult to utilize, to an accessible level. These adjustable, stainless rods are spring-loaded, hold 20 to 60 pieces of clothing, and run $150 to $300, available through Space Alternatives.

Traditional valets also are making a comeback, according to Fightmas-

"Valets have always been around, but they're more in demand today," she said. "I think people want more niceties (and time-savers.) The jewelry drawers, the valet stands and the velvet dividers, all help personalize storage."

Lure of outlets is still strong

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO

Revenue in outlet centers has reportedly more than doubled in the past seven years, while the number of such centers in the country has grown from 108 in 1988 to $25 today.

According to Value Retail News, a monthly trade magazine for the industry, outlet centers generated $12 billion in annual sales in 1996.

Michigan's biggest outlet center, Outlets at Birch Run, rivals Belz Outlet World in Orlando, Fla. for the title "Largest Outlet Center in America." Both have 180 stores.

In addition to Birch Run, Michigan has manufacturer's outlet centors in Monroe, Howell, West Branch, Holland and Port Huron, A clearing permit has been issued to the Taubman Co. by the city of Auburn Hills to begin another outlet center, "Great Lakes Crossing," off I-75 at Baldwin Road.

But while bargain hunters arrive at the centers by the thousands, savvy shoppers insist the best deals come from regular sales at their neighborhood department stores.

"I can save more money on sheets and towels when Hudson's has a sale, than I can by driving to an outlet center, insisted Liz Nelson of Bloomfield Hills. Plus, there are people to wait on me and the environment is definitely more elegant." Yet, the outlet centers prosper.

A sales associate at The Polo Store at Tangers Factory Outlet Center in West Branch reports more than 200 shoppers an hour crowd into the small shop each weekend to pick up America's most beloved brand at 20 to 50 percent off retail price.

Today, irregular and damaged merchandise accounts for less than 15 percent of all outlet goods, according to an industry spokesman. And outlet stores should not be confused with "off-price stores" like Marshall's and T.J. Maxx, which are not owned and operated by the manufacture and typically buy overalletments from department stores.

Outlet stores are also different from discount stores like Walmart and Kmart which sell inexpensive merchandise at reduced prices due to the large quantities purchased.

Outlet centers are becoming more nomic factors further fueled the outlet visit is $147.

Sculptor says ethnicity shapes art

Sergio DeGiusti finds inspiration for his sculptures in the tradition of Italian art. Born in Maniago, Italy, Sergio De Giusti of Redford grew up surrounded by the art in his rural village's churches. It was there De Giusti learned first hand about the work of Vittorio Cadel.

Never heard of him? Cadel painted the ceiling in the Church of St. Martino. Its religious themes were one of De Giusti's first experiences with art.

Creative Forces: Redford Township sculptor Sergio

DeGiusti will give a lecture about the influence of ethnicity on the creative process 4 p.m. Saturday, April 19, in the Community Arts Auditorium at Wayne State University.

A at 3317 Old Main in Detroit, De Giusti will give a lecture/slide demonstration on the topic "Ethnicity in Art: Forces Which Shape Creativity," 4 p.m. Saturday, April 19, in WSU's Community Arts

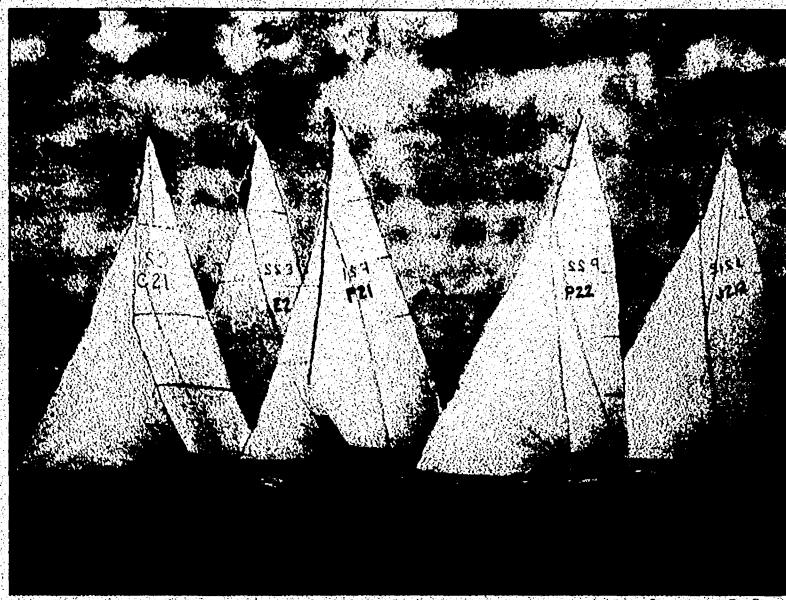

"Ethnicity is a major force, the kind of family you come from," said De Giusti. "It's an interesting phenomenon. We're bound by the subconscious, shaped by environment. Whether religious, family life or nationalistic, all of these factors bring about a certain direction. We retain a strong identification with our own cultures."

It wasn't until De Giusti decided to become an artist and went back to Italy that artists like Donatello, Manzu and Greco influenced him. Mentors like Bloomfield Hills resident Jean Kilgore, his art teacher at Detroit's MacKenzie High School, and Jay Holland, who in the late 1950s taught sculpture at the Detroit Institute of Arts, further inspired De Giusti to seek a career as an artist.

Arts council honors artist who loved the Great Lakes

By Linda Ann Chomin

The beauty of the Great Lakes lives in Erick Carne's paintings.

In honor of the late architect, the Plymouth Community Arts Council will inaugurate their recently renovated exhibition space April 20 during a reception to open a show of Carne's watercolors. The show, featuring more than 30 of his paintings, runs April 20 to May 8.

An architect by trade, Carne designed plans for the project to revamp the former Jehovah's Witnesses Church into an arts center.

The paintings are part of "Shorelines of the Great Lakes," a book being published by Thunder Bay Press nearly one year after Carne's death at the age of 68. Inspired by the magic of the waterways, Carne painted more than 60 watercolors for the book.

Purples, pinks, blues and yellows pervade the landscapes of the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island, Passage Island Lighthouse on Isle Royale in Lake Superior, and the Thunderfest boat races at Belle Isle. Carne captures the light at different times of day by reflecting golden streaks of sky in the waters in the morning, and varying shades of lilac in the evening.

Text explaining the history of the Great Lakes accompanies paintings in the book. From the Straits of Mackinac to Lake Superior's Whitefish Point where the Edmund Fitzgerald sank, Carne records history including the shipping of thousands of tons of iron ore and grain annually through Thunder Bay, the sixth largest port in Ontario. "It's an exciting time with the book finally book began when all of the paintings were dis-

Camping on the shores of the Great Lakes was Erick Carne's favorite pastime. As a young boy, he camped with his Cornish immigrantparents, soaking up the natural wonders of Michigan. In the Depression, the Carnes' outdoors adventures were an alternative to expensive vacations. "Erick loved the Great Lakes," said Carne. "We had a motor home. He loved the lighthouses and always planned trips around them. We'd find a campground preferably near the waters so we could get to the shores." The idea for the book came about in 1993 after Pat gave Erick "South by Southeast," a book written by Walter Cronkite and illustrated by Ray Ellis. The coffee table book depicts the waterways between Chesapeake Bay and of the Great Lakes shortly thereafter. "He was at his happiest painting," said assembled and sent to Thunder Bay Press shortly after Carne's March 1995 exhibition at Schoolcraft College in Livonia. Although corrections were passed back and forth several times between Pat and the publisher, none of Erick's text was changed.

Carne is perhaps best known as an architect. Plymouth's 35th District Courthouse, Plymouth Canton Community Schools' E.J. McClendon Educational Center, the Salvation Army's Eastern Michigan Headquarters, and the City of Wayne City Hall and District Court are among the buildings Carne designed from the architectural business he opened in Plymouth in 1976. But more than architect, Carne was also a storyteller, and enjoyed sketching and painting. His interest in watercolor was sparked by a presentation of architectural design class he took at the University. of Detroit where he earned his degree in 1952.

Carne's exhibit is the first of the Plymouth Community Arts Council's quarterly displays featuring Michigan artists.

"It's a way to honor Erick for the work he had done," said Judy Lewis, exhibition committee co-chair with Lin Ware. "Erick was the original architect for the renovations on the build-the border music including 'The Girl from Ipanema, selections from South Pacific. and a sing-a-long."

The Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band calls Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, their home. The element which makes their music, ranging from classical to rock and roll, incomparable is that oil drums are the instruments used to beat out their island rhythms.

The group was born in the desperate days following World War II when money was so tight the musicians were unable to buy instruments for playing their belove Calypso music, Instead, the Trinidad natives discovered abandoned oil drums could be used to play musical tunes. The original Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band, of "The program's centered around South of which this group is the present day outgrowth, grew into an organization that played at Rockefeller Plaza, Central Park and the Lincoln Center Mail in New York City, the Pan American Union in Washington, D.C., and the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts.

> This is the first time in this area that a symphony orchestra and a steel band have joined together," said Hugh Borde, Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band maestro, "We will have the audience join us in dancing to the Calypso, It will be fun for everyone."

Reed became interested in steel bands after listening to the music during a trip to a Caribbean island a few years ago. After

FINAL DAY

The Livonia Artists Club takes over the atrium of the Livonia Civic Center Library for their 36th annual Art Exhibit and Sale 1-5 p.m. Sunday, April 13. Admission is free.

A variety of mediums will be displayed including painting, collage and monotypes. Artists Al Weber and Eileen Bibby of Livonia, and Evelyn Henry, Redford will demonstrate watercolor painting and pastel techniques.

The Livonia Civic Center Library is at 32777 Five Mile east of Farmington. For information about the show or club call Yvette Goldberg (810) 476-2313 or Marge Masek (313) 464-6772.

GARDEN PHOTOGRAPHY

Learn how to capture your flowers on film this spring during garden photography classes offered by the University of Michigan's Matthaei Botanical Gardens 6:30-9:30 p.m. Thursday, April 17; 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday, April 19, and 6:30-9:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 22.

This class features a double attraction: take a beautiful tour of Matthaei's plants and gardens while learning to photograph your own garden. Framing the shot, using light and shadow to advantage, correcting for lessthan-perfect light or subject matter, and seasonal differences will be discussed for both manual and automatic cameras. Shoot film on Saturday and develop it for review and critique during the final session. Bring camera and slide film to all sessions.

Cost for the course with Steve Nikkila is $60. Members of the Friends of the Botanical Gardens receive 10 percent off the adult education class. Call (313) 998-

NOONTIME CONCERT

The Livonia Arts Commission and the Livonia Civic Center Library invite all who enjoy good music to attend a concert by the Lakeland Trio (violin, clarinet and guitar) 12:15-1 p.m. Thursday, April 17 at the library. Admission is free, and coffee is available. Brown bag lunches are welcome. Call (313) 421-7338.

Art exhibits on the library's second floor are open to the public before and after the concert. For April, Sharon Sims thoughtprovoking sculpture and relief will engage you, Debbie Krompatic's porcelain dolls delight.

SECRET GARDEN

The Plymouth Theatre Guild will present "The Secret Garden" April 18-20, April 25-27 and May 2-3 at the Water Tower Theatre, 41001 West Seven Mile Road in Northville. Friday and Saturday performances begin at 8 p.m., Sundays at 6 p.m.

Tickets are $11 in advance. $12 at the door. For information or group rates call (810) 349-7110.

This enchanting classic of children's literature is now a brilliant musical by a Pulitzer Prizewinning playwright. Orphaned in India, an 11 year old girl returns to Yorkshire to live with an embittered, reclusive uncle and his invalid son. The uncle's estate includes a magic locked garden. Flashbacks, dream sequences, a strolling chorus of ghosts, and some of the most beautiful music ever written for Broadway dramatize the secret garden's compelling tale of regeneration. This Tony award winner is a treasure for children and adults.

COLLEGE CONCERT

A smorgasbord of styles awaits music lovers who attend the annual Schoolcraft College Collage Concert 7:30 p.m. Saturday, April 19 in the community room at Radcliff Center, 1751 Radcliff Street, Garden City.

Admission is free although donations will be accepted at the door.

The concert features all of the college's performing groups: the Community Choir, jazz choirs, the Schoolcraft Wind Ensemble, the MIDI Ensemble, and other chamber groups and soloists, including both students and fac-

The concert's format is designed so that pieces are performed with no applause in between. A 15th century piece of Renaissance music might be followed immediately by cool jazz, with a 19th century romantic song coming next. Because of this continuous presentation, each half lasts approximately 30 minutes.

This year's concert will end with "Hymn of Apollo," a work commissioned by the college and composed by Schoolerast faculty member James Nissen. Based on Percy Bysshe Shelly's poem, "Hymn of Apollo," it features all of the Schoolcraft musical groups and encompasses many musical styles.

PUPPETRY WORKSHOP

If you're a novice puppeteer, librarian, teacher, group leader, religious educator, parent or teen who is interested in knowing more about the lively art of puppetry, the Detroit Puppeteers Guild has a workshop planned for you.

Learn more about making puppets, script writing, chorcography, and performing during "A Day of Puppetry" 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, April 26 at the Livonia Civic Conter Library, 32777 Five Mile Road.

Registration fee for adults is $30, Detroit Puppeteers Guild Members $25, ages 13-18 $20, children $5. The fee includes one ticket to the 2 p.m. performance

"Dave & Sue's Stars on Strings." Additional tickets to the performance by David Hertog's Marionettes are $3.

Preregistration is required for the day-long workshop, Call Debbie Latoras (810) 693-3198 or Jill Landsman (810) 693-4098.

10:45 performance/workshop will be open to registrants only. The PVC Players will present two shows: "The Dragon of Frostytown" and "The Puzzle of One Peaceful Pachyderm," which they perform for elementary school children. These entertaining shows engage the audience in learning about peaceful conflict resolution.

FESTIVAL OF THE ARTS

The Farmington Community Arts Council announces its second annual Festival of the Arts April 27 to May 4 at the William Costick Activities Center, 28600 Eleven Mile east of Middlebelt in Farmington Hills.

Hours are 2.5 p.m. Sunday, April 27; 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday to Saturday, April 28 to May 3, and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, May 4.

Admission is free.

CALL FOR ARTISTS

Experience contemporary art and interact with artists in a restored turn-of-the-century town. Historic downtown Northville is the quaint setting for 75 to 100 artists during the city's 11th Annual Art Market 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 13, until 6 p.m. Sunday, Sept.

Sponsored by the Northville Arts Commission, the Annual Art Market coincides with the city's Annual Victorian Festival. Street entertainers, music, good food, and many townspeople in period dress make this event well worth attending.

Cash prizes are sure to attract many fine and folk artists from the entire Midwest area to the Annual Art Market. Some artists will be selected to demonstrate for the public. Interested artists and visitors can call (810) 349-hearing the Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band at a benefit concert for Oakwood Hospital, the PSO conductor decided to spotlight the group's exciting music at the annual pops concert.

"The Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band has a totally different sound than we've ever had," said Reed, "and what I found interesting is the Trinidad government felt steel drumming was a lost art, so they require kids to take steel drumming in the schools. There's nothing highly sophisticated about steel drumming. It's very primitive and what's amazing is it's done on old oil drums."

In addition to the concert and Caribbean dinner, the Plymouth Symphony League, the fundraising arm of the orchestra, will host silent and live auctions. The live auction, held during intermission, will be led by Fred Hill. Among the items on the block are the PSO baton with the high-

Artistic Expressions

Afternoons spent at Holland's Birmingham studio, instilled a passion for art in De Giusti.

De Giusti's formal education in the 1960s at Wayne State University also influenced him. Jack Bailey, his graduate adviser at the university, told De Giusti not to fall for trends.

"In the 1960s, none of the artists like Jackson Pollock and Frank Stella were doing the figure," said De Giusti. "Now, figurative work is back and not that many artists can do it well. It's important to learn but not copy from the past, not be bound by it but in some ways draw from it.".

Of course, De Giusti is one of the few artists accomplished at using the figure in their work. Over the years, he's created public art including a 20-panel frieze for the State of Michigan Library and Archives Building in Lansing, four bronze panels focusing on the life of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. for Eastern Michigan University, bronze doors for the Church of San Vito in Italy, and reliefs for the Drug Enforcement Administration's Detroit Field Division Headquarters downtown. One of his most recent sculptures, featuring two hands and a book, is currently at the foundry being cast for the Livonia Civic Center Library.

De Giusti is very involved with the arts community donating works to the Italian Consulate in Detroit and curating exhibits, the most recent of which featured the Italian legacy of art in Detroit. De Glusti spent nearly one year researching and gathering the works for "Patrimonio," a retrospective of Italian, Italian-American and American artists influenced by the tradition of Italian art in the Community Arts Gallery at WSU last Octo-

"In curating 'Patrimonio' Sergio made a cultural link with the City of Detroit and the input that Italian and Italian-American artists have had on Detroit," said Mary Jane Smith, WSU Community Arts Gallery interim coordinator. "As a result of that historical overview, we thought it would terrific to put all of the research to use in a lecture by Sergio." An educator as well as a sculptor, De Giusti has taught drawing, art history and relief at Wayne State University, the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association and Center for Creative Studies College of Art and Design in Detroit.

De Giusti's lecture will begin with a look at American iconography followed by the Indian imagery featured in masks and carvings, and the relationship of striations in Utah rocks to the design of an 1850s Navajo blanket. Later, De Giusti will show the influence of Romanian cemetery carvings on Constanin Brancusi, the American landscape's shaping of Novi artist David Barr's sculptures, and how African American artist Tyree Guyton built his art on the materials of the inner city. Frank Stella, Isamu Noguchi (Japanese/American designer of the Hart Plaza Fountain), Charles McGee (African American), and Otto Dix and David Becher (German) were all influenced by their cultural heritage and environment.

One of the most moving parts of the lecture features the drawings of Jewish artist Mauricio Lasansky (born 1914). Created between 1961 and 1966, Lasansky's drawings illustrate the horrors of the Holocaust.

Celia Block from Farmington Hills.

Denomme's wildlife photos captures killer whales off the British of Columbia, giraffes in Africa and polar bears of the Canadian ice caps. "Wolves are big right now, and so are polar bears," he said. "When 'Free Wily was out, we couldn't stock enough orka whales."

In the near future, Denomine plans trips to Alaska to photograph humpback whales, and to Vancouver to observe elk.

Block's experimental collages Denomine from Northville, and and decorative threads will be featured in the exhibit. Several years ago, she began making silk ties, then developed her trademark jackets and vests. Today, Block runs a design business, Silkworks Inc. with a range of hand-painted silk clothing and home decorating pieces.

The upcoming show will also feature demonstrations in jewelry making, iron forging, pottery throwing, paper making and weaving.

For 22 years, Sugarloaf has hosted fairs from Maryland to Michigan. The shows have featured arts and crafts from intricately carved wooden furniture to ceramic bowls to fine leather. Last year, sales at the Novi SugART SHOW

Concert features American Boychoir

Throughout the western world boys choirs uphold centuries-old choral traditions. This Friday at the First Presbyterian Church in Birmingham, the American Boychoir will make their case as one of the world's leading choral groups spreading the influence of American folk songs, spirituals and classics.

They are not only an international performing group with extremely high standards, they've performed at major choral festivals around the world," said Mark Wickens, musical director at the church. The group last appeared at the church three years ago.

Last year, the choir, the Kronos quartet and the New York Philharmonic represented the U.S. in the 1996 Cultural Capitol of Europe Festival in Denmark. They also can be heard regularly on PBS specials, movie soundtracks and commercials. The group recently signed as exclusive artists with Angel Records.

According to Wickens, the American Boychoir is the only chorale group of its kind that isn't affiliated with a church. Meadow Brook plans to exhibit DIA collection

BY FRANK PROVENZANO STAFF WRITER

Although details are currently being negotiated, the Meadow Brook Gallery and the Detroit Institute of Arts expect pieces from the museum's 20th-century collection to appear in a fall exhibit at Oakland University.

"It's the best scenario for our gallery and Oakland County," said Debra Watson, acting curator of the Mendow Brook Gallery. "This brings the DIA to residents in the northern part of the county."

Before pieces from the collection are selected, however, the gallery must come up with funding for an extensive renovation. Birmingham architect Michael Willoughby's plans for a major reconfiguration of lighting, environmental control and new security system are currently being considered. The gallery, located across from the Meadow Brook Theatre, has not been modified since it opened 30 years ago, said Watson.

Apparently, funding to cover the renovation will not be allocated from the gallery's operating budget, but from a broader university building fund. In the next ten days, the gallery and the university's department of art history will discuss plans for collaborative use of the new space, and offer financing plans for the expanded gallery. Watson would not speculate on the cost for the renovation.

Many pieces from the DIA's impressive 20th-century collection became available because of the installation of the "Splendors of Egypt" exhibit, which opens in mid July. To make room for that enormous exhibit, the DIA's permanent 20th century collection was de-installed. Many pieces will be either kept in storage or available for outside exhibits. "Since the collection is coming down, we thought it would be a good time to share many of the master pieces with smaller museums around the state," said MaryAnn Wilkinson, acting curator of 20th-century art. For many years, the DIA had a statewide program to loan pieces to local museums. But in the early 1990s, that program was one of the many eliminated as state funding to the DIA was cut drastically. Recently, the Dennos Center

Museum in Traverse City announced a major show featuring pieces from the DIA collection. The exhibit, on the campus of Northwestern Michigan College, is scheduled for the fall.

Vivid memory sparks Detroit book

By Hoose Gallage Stary Wester

It was a disturbing but memo-rable fifth hirthday for Tem Sugrue in the summer of 1967.

'I grew up in a middle class neighborhood in northwest Detroit," Sugree said. "One of my earliest and most vivid menories was watching National Guard vehicles - Jeeps, tanks, personnel carriers - going down Fenkell, a half mile from my house on my fifth birthday. It was pretty exciting for a 5-year-

In a four year period, Sugrue's neighborhood went from all white to all black and Sugrue's family joined the white exodus to the suburbs, settling into Farmington Township (new Farmington Hills). In 1960 Sugrue graduated from Birmingham Brother

The memory of that fifth birthday has continued to nag at Sugrue's mind. Now an assistant professor of history at the University of Pennsylvania, Sugrue has written a thought-provoking book on Detroit that challenges conventional wisdom and marshals a wealth of information to

"The Origins of the Urban Crisis: Race and Inequality in Postwar Detroit (Princeton University Press, $35, 375 pp) argues that Detroit's problems did not begin with the race riot of 1967 or the administration of Mayor Coleman Young. It began during Detroit's boom years of the late 1940s and 1950s and is the result of a confluence of causes.

*Because of my experience growing up in Detroit I've had a long interest in cities and trying to understand the things I witnessed," Sugrue said during a recent visit home.

"After my long sojourn through work place." "If you were white and got laid tent racial discrimination in the off, there were lots of companies to hire you," Sugrue said. "If you were black, they wouldn't let you set a foot in the door. Whole sections of the city's economy was closed to African Americans."

Black workers were often given the most distasteful and dangerous jobs that white workers could refuse. Also, black workers weren't able to pick up and move with the job, certainly not to the racially divided South that they had left.

The third force was racial segregation in housing, Real estate practices and violent reaction by whites created an explosive housing situation.

The Detroit Real Estate Board actually had a Code of Ethics that prohibited selling a home in a white neighborhood to a black family. Racial steering was considered ethically preferable to "block busting."

Sugrue writes that many real estate agents, especially black agents like James Del Rio, would deliberately move a black family into a white neighborhood to foster racial integration. But other, unscrupulous agents, would move a black family in and then fan the fears of white homeowners to create panic selling. This proved very lucrative to real estate agents and very destructive to the city because it drove out a solid middle class economic base.

"Racial prejudices were aggravated by tactics of real estate agents with devastating conse-Jobs were being automated out quences," Sugrue said.

"Folks like my parents were besieged by real estate brokers who sowed the seeds of fear and made lots of money for it."

Sugrue argues that what happened to Detroit has also happened to other urban centers. He said even places like Chicago, with its vital and exciting downtown and North Michigan Avenue, are beset by the same racial tensions, separations and economic inequality.

"When you look at poverty, unemployment, low paying jobs - they hold true for every Eastern and Midwestern city," he said. "When you get past the downtown, you find striking and depressing similarities between those cities and ours."

Sugrue's book also examines the role of highway development and how freeways in the city were deliberately plowed through the black business district of the ironically named Paradise Valley.

"The big story of what happened is that federal government policy subsidized suburbanization." Sugrue said. "We forget about that, that Livonia and Farmington were made possible by big government."

Sugrue argues that the answer to the urban crisis is job creation and job training. He said Detroit prospered because jobs created upward mobility and stability for the working class and a growing middle class.

He parts company with conservative black writers such as Thomas Sowell who argue that blacks need to take the most responsibility for the condition of America's cities.

"We're all in the same boat and the success and failure of Detroit has consequences for blacks living in the inner city and for whites, working class, middle class and wealthy living in the suburbs," he said.

"It we don't take collective responsibility we'll have to live with the dire consquences of our instance, of the untimely passing of someone beloved who is snatched away forever, leaving a young family stunned with pain and a sorrow that seems beyond expression?

This is what Judith Guest's principal characters wrestle with in this story that echoes to an extent her stunning debut novel of nearly 20 years ago, "Ordinary People." There, a young, suburban family struggles to come to terms with the drowning of a beloved son and brother. Here, a similar family faces the death of a husband and father. (Even some of Guest's characters in "Errands" appear to have seen another life in the earlier books.) Here, as in "Ordinary People," Guest brings compelling resonance and texture to the minutiae of daily life. From futile job interviews, to car trips with bickering kids, to peanut butter sandwiches and lumpy beds in lakeside summer cottages, she weaves it all together and plays it out against a tapestry of coamic proportions. Much of its appeal lies in the fact that, on these pages, we often find ourselves and our own disorderly lives. Michigan readers will identify, especially since the action occurs in or near such familiar hangouts as Metropolitan Beach, Farmer Jack's, Telegraph Road, the Lake Huron shore, Beaumont Hospital; et. al.

Keith Browner is a pleasant, middle-aged man who teaches English at a Detroit-area high school. He has been married to Annie (*so intense, she dazzled him") for 17 years. And they are the parents of Harry, Jimmy and Julie. He is also a Little League coach, a "lover of jazz, bridge, poetry. Snow shoveler, Gardener. Carpenter." As this story begins, he and his family are bound for the small cottage they have rented for six summers now. It lies just a bit north of Bay City.

Keith Browner, we soon learn, is dying of inoperable brain cancer. Presented with this startling fact about such a vividly depicted character, a reader might at Keith Browner and his dying. But it isn't that. "Errands" is the story of his family and their sur-problems in racism.

In the center spotlight is his widow, Annie, former Hopwood recipient, Phi Beta Kappa, capable wife and mother, who abhors disorder and insists on a kind of "manageability" in life, when there simply will be none. Then 13-year-old Harry, who, after his father's death, secludes himself either in repellent behavior or "silence that presses against doors and windows like a suffocating tent." And 9-year-old Julie, articulating what may be what all modern mortals feel at some time: "I wish when people died, it would turn out they were just on some other channel." While Jimmy, between the two, tries to impose peace on his unwieldy surroundings, searching for answers in the magic of words and strange books like "Secrets of the Druids."

Some of Guest's secondary characters shine through. first assume this is a story about Harry's fellow adolescent, Rex Harry must pour boiling water

Beers, his gold earring aglitter, is somehow sinister and subtly pathetic at once. Involved in a troubled romantic subplot. Annie's sister, Jess, lends support, offers up peanut butter kisses and a bit of fun when it's sorely needed. Keith's mother, Nell, is an odd, shadowy reminder of the grieving mother in "Ordinary People."

You might say that the problems in this Job-like story turn out to be a problem. Guest's characters - especially Annie suffer so much that the novel not only loses some of its plausibility but almost seems faintly ludicrous at times. Insult is added to injury after injury and salt heaped into already festering, terrible wounds.

On Top of unemployment, money troubles, feelings of guilt, work problems, sliding grades, truancy, loneliness, physical and mental exhaustion, rejection and a frightening disappearance on a sleet-filled night, a pet is run down on a day that is so cold, on the frozen ground before he can begin to dig the small grave. Add to that the theft of a treasured item. Add to that, more than one harrowing accident. Add to that, Annie comes down with a case of the shingles.

Guest's brisk pacing, graceful prose and deftly drawn characters move the novel ever forward, though, making "Errands" difficult to let go of, despite some over-heavy burdens. The author's knowledge and eloquence in regard to the hearts of today's children is truly singular.

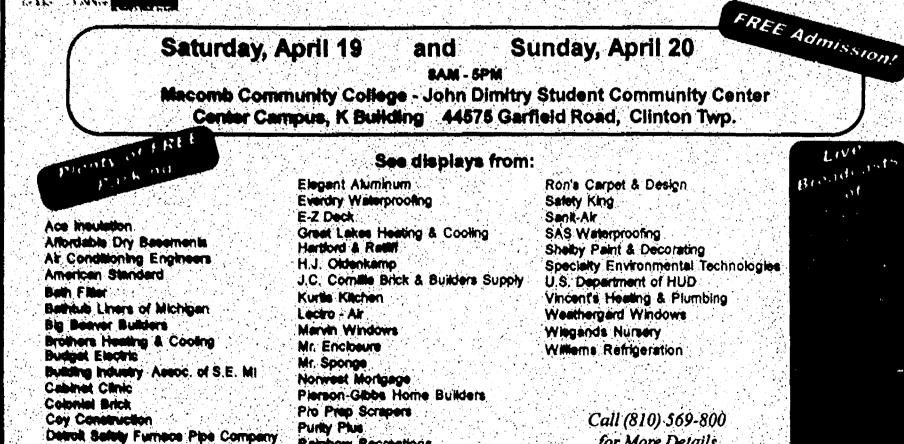

Judith Guest will speak at noon Thursday at the Fox Hills Country Club at a Friends of the Libraries (Plymouth, Canton, Northville and Novi) Author Luncheon sponsored by The Observer and Hometown newspapers. Tickets will not be sold at the door.

Writers retreat conjures up Walden Pond

BY FRANK PROVENZANO STAFF WRITER

During the writing of "You Can't Go Home Again," novelist Thomas Wolfe, who stood 6-feet, 6 inches, used the top of a refrigerator as a writing desk. Not quite like the romantic image of Thoreau swatting mosquitoes during his utopian stint on Walden Pond.

Whether humming along to refrigerator sounds, or sitting in a hut, writers have yet to uncover the Holy Grail of the literary muse. Yet for many aspiring writers, the romance of the writing life persists.

Well, in a twist of fate that could be turned into a first novel, Cranbrook Schools is offering a practical path to the writing life with its first-ever retreat for writers, July 7 to August 8. Procrastinators beware. Finding time to write may no longer be an excuse.

Before the anecdotes start flying about the travails and triumphs of famous authors, however, Cranbrook is billing Thursday's lecture by poet/activist Sonia Sanchez as a precursor to the summer retreat.

Sanchez, who taught the first course on African-American women, will read from a selection of her 13 books as part of their annual Emily Fisher Lecture. Sanchez won the 1995 American Book Award for "Homecoming, Homegirls and Hand Grenades." Currently, she's a professor of English and Women's Studies at Temple University.

Art of storytelling

Set amid the rolling hills of the sprawling Bloomfield Hills campus, the Cranbrook's summer writing retreat offers 32 weeklong workshops taught by an impressive range of poets, fiction and nonfiction writers, and screenwriters. Now that finding an inspiring location has been taken care of, the other side of writing will be addressed – the technique of crafting poetry and storytelling.

Among the workshop teachers are Alan Dugan, winner of a Pulitzer Prize and National Book Award for his collection of poems; Sandra McPherson, a 'Writing is a private experience. People need reassurances that writing can clarify what they're thinking and feeling.'

Tom Murdock

recent National Book Award nominee who gained prominence for appearing in the PBS special, "The Language of Life with Bill Moyers"; and Bill Phillips, whose screenwriting credits include "El Diablo," which won the Ace Award for Best Screenplay.

To add a dramatic sense of destiny to the retreat, Joshua Henkin will teach a midsummer short story workshop. Henkin's first novel, "Swimming Across the Hudson," published by Putnam, was released this week. The story of two adopted brothers coming to terms with their Jewish heritage has been praised by Publishers Weekly and Kirkus. In the next several weeks, reviews are expected in The New York Times Book Review, LA Times and Washington Post.

With the same agent who represents literary legend Kurt Vonnegut and Amy Tan, Henkin may soon gain the attention of a broad public. The success hasn't come easily, he said. "You have to be patient and persevere," said Henkin.

"There's a tendency to be to eager. You should only send out your work when the time is right," he said. "The simple enjoyment of writing should be enough. But you have to remember that effortless writing takes years and years to develop."

Henkin, who is also a writing consultant in Ann Arbor, will sign copies of his latest book at Borders in Birmingham on April 24.

Just write all the time

Cranbrook's program was started by English teachers Georgialee Scott and Tom Murdock, who designed the workshop after a writers retreat he established for the Fine Arts Works Center in Providencetown, Mass.

"If you want to write, then you have to write all the time and be around people who have written successfully," said Murdock.

Cranbrook's inaugural retreat, is one of the increasing number of writing programs in the country. Six years ago, according to Murdock, the only reputable retreat was sponsored by the University of Iowa. Today, there are about 20 workshops, typical, ly organized to coincide with summer breaks.

Based on early responses to the retreat, Murdock expects a range of writers, from scribblers to scribers to "people who have thought about writing and want to do something about it."

For those who attend the retreat, expect to no longer use the line about not having enough time to write. If there's a place in the region that'll inspire the mysterious muse, it's the Cranbrook campus.

"Writing is a private experience," said Murdock. "People need reassurances that writing can clarify what they're thinking and feeling. The pace of our culture keeps us from thoughtfulness and writing."

With the Cranbrook retreat providing the space and time to write, writers only need to figure out what to say and how to say

Eisenhower Dance Ensemble storms beachhead of dance

By Frank Provenzano Staff Walter

It's only appropriate that Laurie Eisenhower is inspired by two of the last untamed American frontiers: the Arizona desert and dance. What rain provides to the barren Southwest basin. Eisenhower's innovative choreography is bringing to the parched regional dance commu-

Two of her latest incantatory lances will premier this Friday when the Eisenhower Dance Ensemble performs its seasonending concert at the Macomb Center for Performing Arts. Aptly entitled, "Premieres," the concert features four new works in a six-piece show that runs from traditional to modern. comedic to dramatic dance.

Of the new dances, Eisenhower's "Catharsis," inspired by Philip Glass' "Heroes Symphony," represents both her avantgarde leanings and the Rochester Hills company's basic outreach philosophy. The dance includes the six-member ensemble and an additional eight dancers from the community.

Yet a week before the curtain goes up, the full assembly of 14 dancers was holding their first of only four rehearsals. It might be enough to drive many choreographers to resort to recharting disco steps. But not the determined Eisenhower.

"I have some anxiety about the piece coming together, but I'm confident because of the (quality of) dancers," she said. "I've had concerts where I've choreographed the day of the show."

That kind of poise might be common to most highly disciplined dancers. But it also reflects the independent attitude forged from growing up amid endless miles of sand and stark natural beauty in Arizona. For Friday's concert, Eisenhower, ho teaches dance at Oakland

University, will also present her comedic dance, "Your Arizona, My Arizona," The piece is based on what she calls the misperceptions of westerners as wild cowboys with a shoot em up mental-

Her satirical ode to Arizona draws on mime and humorous contrasts among dance moves, she said. It's performed as an old-time movie plays on a screen adjacent to the stage. "I want everyone to participate in the dance, so I added a few new touches that involve the audience in more than one way," she

Breaking down what is known in theater as "the fourth wall" the perception that the audience is not part of the staged performance - is one of the ways that Eisenhower has distinguished her choreography.

"Laurie has taught me that there has to be something going on in your heart when you're performing," said Jodi Reneaud, of Troy who is one of the eight community dancers to perform in Eisenhower's "Catharsis."

A former student of Eisenhower's who now dances with the Detroit Dance Collective, Reneaud said Eisenhower has an edge on other choreographers because of her versatility and drive. "Dancers definitely want to know when she's auditioning for the ensemble," said Reneaud.

After working for Pilobolus Dance Theatre and David Parsons in New York, Eisenhower went back to Arizona State where she earned a masters degree in dance. Eleven years ago, she arrived to teach dance on the faculty at Oakland University. Then in 1991, she began blending contemporary dance for a versatile ensemble of former dance students and colleagues.

The challenge, of course, was even bigger than establishing a nonprofit arts organization at a time when public funding was being cut drastically. "Dance is a tough sell everywhere in the country," said Eisenhower. "For some reason, there's an attitudethat ballet, opera and dance aren't 'cool."

For anyone who can appreciate Barry Sanders stepping magically through a defense, Grant Hill going airborne for a slam dunk or Steve Yzerman pirouetting to escape a defender, the sheer athleticism required for modern dancers could be simply summed up in two words - definitely cool.

Dancin' in Motown

"Dancers want to make it work right here in Detroit," said Eisenhower. The reality, however, is that it's nearly impossible to "dance for living" in this area.

To its credit, EDE is the only regional dance company in Michigan that provides regular rehearsal and performance pay for its versatile ensemble, which includes: Gregory Patterson, Anne Bak, Jacquelene Pierce, Darby Wilde, David Genson and Stephanie Pizzo, a founding member and Rochester resident.

Two summers ago, Eisenhower town Pontiac. Teachers at the center cover all types of dance, from ballroom to ballet.

This past year, EDE performed 10 concerts on a touring schedule that took them from metro Detroit to the northern Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and New York. Along the way, they held 20 lecture-presentations for students around the state.

"The NEA is not supporting Creative Artists Grants in Dance," said Eisenhower. "If you're going to get government funding, you have to prove a service to the community."

After the Macomb Center performance, EDE will travel to the Kalamazoo Middle School District for a month of performances and lectures.

In a much-awaited piece in their upcoming Friday concert, EDE will perform a dance by internationally known choreographer Mel Wong, whose work was financed by a grant from the McGregor Fund. Wong is a former dancer with the Merce Cunningham Dance Company and director of the Mel Wong Dance Company in New York.

The company will also perform Eisenhower's new collaboration with Michigan composer Karl Boelter. The piece features dancers creating part of the live music by making different sounds through the downstage. sensor pads.

As the dancers stretch and shake their limbs to ward off nervous tension before Friday's concert, Eisenhower will be going over plans right up to the opening curtain. "The last three years have been spectacular," she said. "As long as we keep performing, we'll continue to grow."

With a name like Eisenhower, it's only natural that she appear very much like a General.

WSU honors three suburban arts advocates

Three suburban residents have been named recipients of Wayne State University's Arts Achievement Awards.

This year's art advocate award goes to Louis Redstone of Southfield, founder and retired chairman of Redstone Tisea Architects. Meanwhile, arts achievement awards will be given to sculptor Sergio DeGuisti of Redford, and musician Joseph LoDuca of Bloomfield Hills.

The awards program is part of WSU's annual "Celebration of the Arts." The award ceremony will be 4 p.m. Thursday, April 17 in Old Main on the WSU campus. There is no charge. For more information, call (313) 577-2150. The event coincides with the Old Main centennial celebration weekend April 17-20, which marks the building's reopening after a $45.8 million renovation.

Redstone immigrated to Detroit from Palestine in the early 1920s. His firm has been honored for integrating art into architecture. Some of his firms significant designs are the International Terminal at Detroit Metro Wayne County Airport, Comerica executive offices in the Renaissance Center, and the River House Apartments along the Detroit River.

A 1993 recipient of the Governor's Civic Leadership Award for his contributions to the arts. Redstone also holds the Gold Medal of the Michigan Society of Architects.

A longtime artist, DeGuisti's sculptures have been exhibited throughout North America and in Europe. His work appeared at the DIA, Smithsonian Institution, Council of Cultural Affairs in Stockholm and the British Museum in London.

On the WSU campus. DeGuisti created a bronze relief for the Law School Building and a large bronze figure of Gen. Anthony Wayne for the Centennial Court. DeGuisti, who was knighted by the Italian government, has taught at WSU, the Center for Creative Studies, the Bloomfield Art Association and the DIA.

Disney World warm, friendly place for families

BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER

The Josephs of Canton wanted "someplace warm, someplace

It took them only a week and a half to arrange what turned out to be a dream vacation to Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla., now celebrating its 25th anniver-

"We're very well organized," said Kathi Joseph.

Rob Joseph, who works for the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, has been off work for a year, and wanted to do something with his family - son, Benjamin, 8, and daughter, Kelsey, 5 - before returning to work.

The Josephs had taken Benjamin to Disney World for two days when he was 5 and decided it was time for a return. They made their decision in late January and the first week in February they flew down to Disney World.

They planned to meet with relatives and did some quick, but thoughtful, investigation.

"We went to a bookstore and got (Stephen) Birnbaum's 'For-book and sat down and read a lot to find out what was kid friendly and what wasn't." Kathi said.

The books were invaluable in helping them decide what to see. when to go to which exhibits and how to negotiate the massive entertainment complex with two children. The books have detailed and easy to follow maps.

Benjamin even created his own list of "must sees" after reading "For Kids by Kids."

On their last visit, the family stayed at a motel in Orlando. This time they stayed "in the World" at the new All-Star Music hotel.

"There is absolutely no comparison," said Kathi. "I would recommend staying inside Disney World if you can. It's especially easier with little kids. You walk right out to the shuttle buses and they drop you right at the main gate of all the attractions. You don't wait for huge lines. We even stayed until the parks closed and even then it was a lot easier."

She said that All-Star Music is one of the less expensive hotels on the property but still provided

Kids by Kids' and his general outstanding accommodations with a very solicitous staff.

The family arrived at 3:30 a.m. and the staff greeted them and found a crib. Disney World had something for everyone in the family. "My son liked Thunder Mountain railroad and Space Mountain. He's a real daredevil. Kathi said.

"Kelsey loved 'Small World. We were tired of hearing that song, but she just loved it."

Rob said a "definite must see" during the 25th anniversary is the special IllumiNations 25 show at Epcot. IllumiNations is a regular part of the World experience, but this year's IllumiNations 25 has been given a special twist for the anniversary. Another anniversary twist - Cinderella's Castle has been redone as a colorful birthday cake.

The Josephs didn't spend a lot of time at Epcot, which they said is geared more to older children and adults. They divided their time between MGM, a real favorite of Rob's, and the Magic Kingdom.

They ate breakfast at the hotel, which they said was reasonably priced.

"We ate at the Crystal Palace, lunch and dinner with Winniethe Pooh," said Kathi. "The characters came around to each table."

The Josephs also enjoyed a dinner at Max's Grill in Disney's new "real world" Celebration City.

"I'd love to live there, a small town USA kind of setting, real clean," Kathi said.

The Josephs also suggest that visitors check out the new Rainforest Cafe which features a "tropical rainforest" and an active volcano, waterfalls, butterflies, playful primates and an occasional rain shower.

Though-Disney World is notorious for its lines, the Josephs only encountered one long line, for the Tower of Terror. That required a 45 minute wait, but most attractions had lines that were less than a half hour long.

This year Walt Disney World has several events and new attractions to mark its anniversary. The Epcot International Flower & Garden Festival will run April 18 to June 1, featuring a "Colobration Garden" with a giant floral "cake."

Sports complex opens in May. This is a 200-acre, state-of-theart sports complex hosting more than 30 different sports.

Later this spring, Test Track will open at Epcot's Future World. This GM sponsored testvehicle attraction sends riders through an array of manueuvers that include banking, hill climbing, braking and accelerating to high speeds.

EMU signs Patriots' Wolfe

All-Observer second baseman Randi Wolfe of Livonia Franklin has signed a NCAA national letter-of-intent to play softball at Eastern Michigan University.

EMU is coached by former Glenn varsity coach Nancy Oestrike.

Wolfe, also an All-Western Lakes pick a year ago, batted .468 and led the Patriots with 61

She had an RBI triple in Franklin's 16-0 win Friday over Dearborn and a three-run triple in an 11-0 victory Wednesday over Plymouth

"Randi is quick and powerful," said Franklin coach Linda Jimenez, whose team is off to a 3-0 start. "She has good speed."

Wolfe was also a standout on the Patriot volleyball team and played basketball.

Collegiate baseball notes

•Junior first baseman Bryan Besco (Westland John Glenn) belted his team-leading 10th homer of the season as the University of Michigan downed non-conference baseball foe Wright State, 11-3, Wednesday at Ray Fisher Stadium.

Bryan also leads the team with doubles (13) and slugging percentage (.711). He is eighth on the team in batting average at .333 (38 for 114) and second in RBI (34).

Twin brother Derek Besco, a junior right fielder, went 2-for-3 with a double and triple against Wright State. He leads the team with a .416 average (47 for 113) and RBI (35). He ranks second in doubles (10) and homers (5). Derek also has 15 multiple hit games in 1997 (25 in

Franklin pitcher Jendrusik sharp

Pitcher Lori Jendrusik appears to be coming of age in her junior season for the Livonia Franklin softball team.

Jendrusik allowed only one hit in last 10 innings as the host Patriots (3-0 overall) blanked Dearborn on Friday, 16-0, and Plymouth Salem on Wednesday, 11-0.

Both games were stopped after five innings because of the 10run mercy rule.

"The difference this year is better control." Franklin coach Linda Jimenez said of her ace. "She's throwing strikes and she's faster. She also uses the changeup well."

Jendrusik gave up one hit and four walks against Dearborn, while striking out six.

Franklin broke the game open in the fourth with 12 runs. The Patriots collected 15 hits as Kelly Young led the way with a double, triple and five RBI.

Other Franklin offensive standouts included Missy Blanton, two hits (a triple) and two RBI; Andrea Kmet, two hits (a double) and one RBI; Jendrusik, two hits (a triple); Melisa Thompson, 2-for-2 with a triple; and Jessica Sabbadin, two hits and two RBI.

In the win over Salem, Jendrusik tossed a no-hitter. She struck out 12 and walked four. She also helped her own cause with a two-run single. Randi Wolfe added a three run triple, while Jackie Ziem had an RBI single.

Shannon Coultas, the Salem starter, took the loss.

•WAYNE 12, JOHN GLENN 3: Wayne Memorial broke a long wintess drought Friday against rival Westland John Glenn (0-3) as pitcher Shelly Woods scattered 10 hits over seven innings to earn the

Wayne pitchers on target in 2 wins

Jeff Temple pitched seven strong innings Friday, lifting Wayne Memorial to a 7-1 nonleague baseball victory over host Willow

Wayne improved to 4-1 overall with the

Meanwhile, it was the Flyers' season open-

Temple, a senior right-hander, carried a no hitter into the sixth before Willow Run shortstop Greg Anglin broke it up with a sin-

Temple finished with a five-hitter. He struck out eight and walked one.

Center fielder Kevin Wetmore throw a runner out a the plate to end the game.

John Clendenning led the Zebras' offensive attack with two hits and three RBI. Clark Boston also knocked in a pair of runs, while Ron King contributed two hits and scored

On Wednesday, junior right-hander Charlie Levenrenz tossed a one-hitter as the Zebras pounded visiting Romulus in a nonleaguer, 13.0.

Leverenz struck out nine and walked three in seven innings. Sean Dick broke up his nohit bid in the fourth.

Offensively, Wayne collected 14 hits led by Leverenz's three singles and four RBI.

Other top Zebra hitters included Temple, three hits and three runs scored; Wetmore, two hits and three RBI; Boston, two hits/three runs/two RBI; and King, two hits.

. CHURCHILL &, GARDEN CITY 2: Junior Corey Cook made his varsity debut a memorable one Friday by throwing a one-hitter, leading host Livonia Churchill (1-

1) to a non-league win over the Cougars. Cook, a right-hander, struck out five and walked only two. He allowed a second-inning hit to Eric Rutkowski.

*Corey did a very good job, he got the ball over the plate," Churchill coach Herb Osterland said.

Junior shortstop Jeff Lyday also had a big afternoon, going 3-for-3 with a double and four RBI. Cook helped his own cause by going 2-for-3 with a double and two

On Wednesday, Dan Drapel scored the winning run on a walk with the bases loaded in the bottom of the seventh, enabling host Walled Lake Central to escape. with a 3-2 win over the Chargers.

The loss was pinned on senior Mark Felker, who. worked the final 23 Innings in relief of starter Nick

Re Mittre, who went the final three innings in relief, was the winning pitcher.

Adam Carter went 2 for 4 with two RBI in a losing.

STEVENSON 10, NORTHYNLE O: Pitchers Jason. Greenwald and Keyln Marvin combined on a two hitter, while Justin Kerr knocked in four runs, propelling Livonia Stevenson to a season-opening victory Wednesday over the visiting Mustangs.

Greenwald, a senior right-hander, worked the first three innings, allowing one hit while fanning six. Marvin, also a senior right-hander, finished up.

Kerr belted a three run homer to spark a five run Spartan first inning. He also added an RBI double in the second. Todd Wilson added two doubles and two RBI, while Mike Allison and Eric Yuhasz each contributed two

• JOHN GLENN 6, CANTON O: Westland John Glenn raised its overall record 2-1 as pitcher Paul Merandi tossed a complete-game two-hitter Wednesday, at Plymouth Canton (1-2). Jason Mortiers, who took the loss, gave up five hits and six walks in five innings.

Pat Noonan and Dave Kwiatkowski collected the Ione hits for Centon.

Merandi gave up Just one walk. *DEARBORN 7, FRANKLIN 8: Livonia Franklin (0-2) fell sport defensively, making six errors Friday as the host Ploneers (1-0) gained non-league victory.

Franklin out-hit Dearborn, 9-8, as Dave Wampier, Ryan Davis, Matt Downs and losing pitcher Nick Anagnostopoulos each collected two hits as the Patriots battled back from a 5-3.

Wampler had three RBI, including a two-run double. Davis scored three runs, Downs had an RBI and scored Anagnostopoulos pitched six innings, allowing six hits and four walks.

On Wednesday, Franklin lost at Plymouth Salem, 9-3. as Ryan Rumberger homered and Alec Ras added two hits and stole four bases.

Franklin starter Dave Wampler, who took the loss, gave up five earned runs in four innings. He struck out

Salem starter Tom DeMetsenare pitched the first four innings to earn the win. Reliever Kurt Berlin heid the Patriots scoreless over the final three innings. Wampler led Franklin with two hits, including an RBI single, Brandon Bell doubled in a run, while John Hees singled in a run, both coming in the fourth. MARRISON 7, CLARENCEVILLE 1: On Thursday, pitching and defense carried host Farmington Hills Har-(Ison (20) to a non-league triumph over Livonia Clarenceville (0-1). Senior Adam Smerecki started and pitched the first three innings, allowing one hit and one walk. He struck out three en route to the win, sophomore Joe Ghannam, a right-hander, struck out six and allowed just one hit on one walk. Harrison had just three hits, a triple by Ghannam and singles by Aaron Lawson and Mike Fisher. Bob Wyss and John Wallace had the only hits for Clarenceville.

Chris Krolozyk was the losing pitcher. NOTRE DAME 3-11, REDFORD CC 0-8: Redford Catholic Central was the victim of a no-hitter Wednesday, losing both ends of a baseball double-header to host Harper Woods Notre Dame.

The sweep left the Shamrocks at 2-2 overall, 0-2 in the Catholic League Central Division.

ND's senior ace Matt Stolyuvich kept the Shamrocks hitless in the first game while walking three and striking out 15.

One of the Shamrocks reached base on an error. All three of the ND runs came in the second liming off CC's starting and tosing pitcher Anthony Tomey. Tomey walked the first four batters he faced to force in one run. Four stolen bases, a sacrifice fly and error led to the other two runs. "Other than that he pitched real well," CC coach

John Salter sald. The trish scored four runs in the bottom of the sixth Inning to erase an 8-7 deficit in the second game. The Shamrocks outhit the Irish, 10-8, but committed six errors to three by ND. Sophomore shortstop Dave Lusky went 2-for-3 with three RBI to lead CC. Both of his hits were doubles. Senior outfielder John DiBella went 2.3 with a sacrifice fly and one RBI. Matt Firlik was 2-4, including a double, and one RBI.

Mike Haller was CC's starting pitcher, lasting four innings before being lifted. He allowed four runs, all unearned.

Tony Nozawski was the losing pitcher in relief. Lusky is hitting over .500 to lead the Shamrocks' offense. "He could be a big-timer, has a lot of skills and confidence." Salter sald.

Lady Crusaders sweep in double-header

Despite their defensive miscues, Madonna University's softball team managed to eke out not one, but two dramatic comefrom-behind wins over Calvin College Wednesday, 5-4 and 7-5 in eight innings, at Ladywood

In the opener, Dawn Shaffer slammed a two-run double in the bottom of the seventh with one out to turn a one-run deficit into a victory. Melissa McGue added two hits and two runs batted in. and both Angie VanDoorn and Shawna Greene had two hits Shanna Price went the distance for Madonna to run her pitching record to 8-1. She surrendered four runs (two earned) on eight hits and two walks,

COLLEGES with two strikeouts. Shauna Koolhaas was the loser for

Calvin. In the second game, the Crusaders were saved by the power hitting of Greene, Price and Vicki Malkowski, each of whom slugged home runs - Malkowski's coming with a runner on in the bottom of the eighth to win the game. Madonna needed all of it after committing six errors, which led to four unearned runs. Combined with the two the Crusaders made in the first game, their total grew to 48 in 22 games this season - an average of more than two a game.

A four-run fourth inning allowed the Saints to take a 5-2 lead. Madonna battled back on Greene's three-run homer in the fifth, tying it at 6-5.

It remained that way through regulation until the bottom of the eighth, when Malkowski slammed her game-winning, two-run home run.

For Shaffer, who had singled prior to Malkowski's home run, the homer was her fourth of the season. Malkowski also had two id you know that our carriers are in business for themselves? We call them Junior Merchants and they are committed to getting the fruits of a lot of people's labor on your doorstep twice each week. And, like business people everywhere, their goal is customer satisfaction. But their job doesn't end there. Other business skills include keeping accurate records and reporting information on time.

There are a lot of famous names in the Newspaper Association of America's Carrier Hall of Fame-three presidents, Hoover, Truman, and Eisenhower. There are spiritual leaders, Norman Vincent Peale and Martin Luther King, Jr, there are astronauts and poets and entertainers. All of them recognizable not only for their talent, but for their values and character.

We think a carrier route is an excellent way to learn responsibility, respect for others, and a sense of what it takes to earn a dollar these days. If you agree and would like to put your son's or daughter's name on our waiting list to become a carrier, give us a call-who knows? Between us, we may be giving the world another president or poet.

RECREATION

NATURE NOTES

The longer daylight periods of spring bring warmer temperatures and begin to warm the soil. Warm soil and an internal clock that runs in many animals are the two clues that are used by hibernating animals to awaken in spring.

Amphibians, like frogs and toads and salamanders, will be down at the local ponds shortly to begin their spring ritual of courtship. Tiger salamanders emerge in large numbers from their wintering sites on the night of the first warm rain in April. Unlike tives and toads, they don't make noise when they reach the breeding ponds. Their courtship is a silont underwater dance. Spring propers and chorus frogs, on the other hand, are youal. Their songs coordinate the efforts of the group and stimulate the individurals to come down to the pond. If they don't come when everyone is there, they will miss a year's Sworth of breeding. Frogs have a short period when they're active in courtship.

I'm amazed these cold blooded animals are able to survive the cold Michigan winters and tegin their courtship activities each spring as they have done for thousands of years.

Ernie Lixey, now 52, has a picture of himself at age 16 posing with his idol on the ski slopes, Cass Zorlikowski.

Lixey will tell you that only he and the picture have aged. The ageless wonder is Zorlikowski, a 76-year-old Livonian who has trouble acting his age even as he enters his third month battling prostate cancer. Zorlikowski has lost most of his hair as he undergoes chemotherapy every three weeks, but not his love of competition.

Only warm weather will keep the three-time national masters champion off the slopes.

"The doctor said 'Do what you normally do. If you're not weak, do it,' "said Zorlikowski, who won the 60-65, 70-74 and 75-79 age groups nationally and was fifth in the world in the over 75 age group.

If Zorlikowski is breathing, he's skiing.

Lixey and Zorlikowski first met 36 years ago at a Detroit News Ski Tournament in the metro area. Lixey, an accomplished skier himself, used to manage the Bavarian Village on Telegraph Road in Redford Township and Zorlikowski was one of his regular customers.

Lixey said Zorlikowski has a "heart of gold." "He's always been my idel," said Liney. "He might be limping a little, bent over, but on skis he's a different human being. He's right there beating guys my age or under. You might catch Tennis was a hobby for Zorlikowski.

"I used to have a tennis partner, but my arm is bad now," he said. "I tried to switch to being lefthanded but that's like trying to walk before you can crawl. I had it separated in hockey."

Zorlikowski didn't have the benefit of chair lifts or even ropes to carry them up the hill. To get to the top, you might as well pack a lunch.

"It was a two hour walk for a 10 minute ride," Zorlikowski recalls. "That's why my legs are still strong at 76."

Zorlikowski became a Junior National Champion and earned a berth on Poland's Olympic Team, but World War II interrupted his goldmedal dream.

Zorlikowski's stint in the war landed him in England. After the war, he played semi-professional hockey for a team from Liverpool.

"I'd ski in the day and play hockey at night," Zorlikowski said.

Zorlikowski met his wife of 47 years, Olwyn, at a dance hall in Liverpool. A few years later they came to the United States and settled in Redford Township.

Exercise tips

If your exercise routine varies with the weather and you tend not to exercise over the winter months, the earlier days of warmer weather in the spring may bring the "usual" muscle soreness, aches and pains when you begin exercising again.

"If you haven't been exercising over the winter months, begin your spring program sensibly," said Jody Tomasic, director, Oakwood Sports Medicine and Physical Therapy Center. "Return to your sport or activity gradually, addressing the following elements to prevent injury or soreness: strength, flexibility, endurance or aerobic capacity and sport-specific training."

•Strength. It is important to have strong muscles to help avoid injury. They must be able to hold or sustain activity when it is demanded of them. If a weakness exists, the weak muscles may be injured because they cannot withstand the demand or different muscles may be used to perform a movement or stabilize a joint.

•Flexibility. A very important, but often ignored, aspect of preparing for exercise is muscle stretching. The result of leaving stretching out of an exercise program can be unnecessary stiffness, sometimes even injuries to joins, cartilage, tendons and muscles.

• Endurance or aerobic capacity. Endurance is important for exercise on two levels: the heart or cardiac and respiratory endurance as well as endurance capacity at the muscle level. An endurance activity also helps you to lose those extra pounds put on over the winter months.

•Sport-specific training. Because exercise often demands a combination of movement, simple calisthenics and aerobic exercise like walking or running may not completely prepare you for a specific sport or activity. In a sport that includes throwing, it would be important to include a gradual throwing program in your preparation. A throwing program includes throwing a short distance with minimal effort.

Those who are exercising should warm up by walking or jogging for approximately five minutes, to break a slight sweat. Exercisers should dress appropriately for the variable spring temperatures.

Prevention of injury and soreness is the best approach and this can be achieved by continuing an exercise program throughout the year.

Sinusitis sufferers

Physicians at Henry Ford Hospital have determined for the first time that surgery wipes out the headache, nasal congestions and nasal drainage associated with chronic sinusitis better than any other long-term treatment.

Over an eight-year period, physicians at Henry Ford Hospital and the University of. Pennsylvania analyzed the effect of endoscopic sinus surgery on more than 70 patients suffering from severe sinus disease. At the end of the study, nearly 100 percent of the participants reported overall symptom improvement.

"This study, which is the first to evaluate the long-term effects of endoscopic surgery for chronic sinusitis, demonstrates that symptoms can be improved with this type of surgery and maintained with appropriate post-operative management," said Dr. Brent Senior, M.D., of Birmingham, an otolaryngologist at Henry Ford Hospital and principal investigator of the study. "It also indicates that patients treated by this surgery are unlikely to require further surgical treatment."

Endoscopic surgery involved inserting small scopes and instruments through the nostrils to open up blocked sinus cavities - the small, airfilled spaces behind and above the nose.

In individuals with sinusitis, these spaces become clogged, making it difficult for the sinuses to drain freely. Trapped fluids then become a breeding ground for bacteria and a persistent infection can result. If this condition lasts longer than three months and doesn't respond to treatment with nasal spray or antibiotics, it is considered chronic sinusitis.

Approximately 30 million Americans suffer at least one bout of sinusitis each year. Nearly onethird of these individuals develop chronic sinusi-

Symptoms of sinusitis include nasal congestion, headache, nasal drainage and sometimes a loss of taste or smell.

"Congestion, headache and post nasal drip improved the most after surgery," Senior said. 'And at the end of the study, 82 percent of participants reported they used less antibiotics than before surgery."

Study results were presented at the Eastern Section of the Triologic Society meeting.

If you've ever wished your teen-ager came with a user's manual, "Healthy Teens: Success in High School and Beyond" by Alice R. McCarthy, Ph.D., offers a resource during the most precarious time of your child's life.

Depression, violence, eating disorders and substance abuse are among the issues discussed in this frank and detailed 114-page resource.

No one knows better about the pitfalls during this precarious time of life than a teen who has experimented with drugs, landed in jail and is in the process of changing.

Brian Goris, a 16-year-old Commerce Township resident, was referred to the Livonia Counseling Center. Since he started taking drugs when he was 13, Goris completed one mental health and four drug rehabilitation programs.

At first, Goris said, he was against going to rehab, because he didn't want to stop using drugs. "But they planted a seed in my head that I could do something different," said Goris, who has used "everything except heroin."

Goris' problem isn't unusual. Drug use is on the rise among teens. In fact, 24 percent of eighthgraders used an illegal drug in the last year, up from 11 percent in 1991, according to "Healthy Teens."

"Most people with a drug problem will deny it," McCarthy writes.

Keeping secrets

It's important to realize that kids often keep secrets about their drug abuse, according to Dale Yagiela, director of the Plymouthbased Growth Works, a dependency treatment and juvenile justice program. Often times, parents will find drug paraphernalia, approach their teen and believe their child's stories about keeping it for a friend, or that it was a one-time experiment, Yagiela said.

Yagiela also stressed that it's a fallacy that parents give their children self-esteem. "You develop it from accomplishments," he said. "Parents can help kids take on challenges, but kids get self-esteem by the things they accomplish by themselves."

While some of the problems teens face seem trivial others are monumental or seem to be to the adolescent. The pressures during this time of life can be overwhelming, especially considering that this year some 10,000 teens will commit suicide and another 400,000 teens will attempt suicide. Suicide is the third leading cause of death among teens 15-19.

Compared to 25 years ago, teen suicide is up 300 percent. In an effort to curtail this trend, April has been designated National Suicide Prevention Month.

"When they're feeling that way already and they start using drugs sometimes that will intensify their. feelings rather than help them escape those feelings," according to Gloria Jean Dykhouse, Hegira clinical services supervisor.

"Some teens only feel that way when they're under the influence and when they are feeling guilty, angry and remorseful."

There's a rise in the types of drugs that Dykhouse hears about from the teens during her sessions at Hegira, a non-profit health care agency offering mental health and substance abuse assistance programs. There's more alcohol, marijuana and heroin use.

"They definitely seem to progress from alcohol and marijuana onto heroin and cocaine," she said. "Not everyone goes that far, but those who are using heroin and cocaine certainly started off using alcohol and marijuana."

Finding drugs is easy, according to the teens Dykhouse sees, and it's important for parents to learn about drugs and the signs of use. Look for personality changes, dropping grades, school absenteeism, behavior problems at home and defiance of rules.

Know their friends

"Take a good look at who their friends are and what their families are involved in," she said. "Anytime a parent finds something, smells something or suspects use they should follow up on that and get the child to a professional to be assessed. Just as you would take a child to a doctor for a fever."

Dykhouse said she's continually struck by the resiliency that young people have to grow in a healthy way when they are supported, given firm limits and follow boundaries. "Healthy Teens" stresses the importance of family interactions and Dykhouse notes that relationships should be based on trust. Parents need to respect and acknowledge who the teen really is and allow areas for the teen to have control. This will help them develop responsibilities and help them learn to take control of their lives.

"Sometimes people say 'My teen is 16 or 18 or in high school and I really don't have to do anything,'

she added. "That's really not true. Just because they're in high school you expect they know everything and maybe there are areas where they don't know what to do. You want to help them develop good judgment."

At 14, Kelly Johnson, a Garden City High School ninth-grader who serves on school task forces, said she believes parents need to talk to their children more.

"A lot of kids will ignore their parents, but it will do some good,"

"Some kids think, Well, one time won't hurt' with drugs or sex. If parents can relate to their kids with their past experiences or something that happened to family members and friends it will have an impact on their kids."

Dieting among her friends is another issue that needs attention says Johnson.

"I know a lot of teen-agers who are on a diet: They think 'I'm too fat.' They don't need to be on a diet, they need to cut down on their fats and exercise. I think the girls are more self-conscious than the guys and they like to look pretty and thin and worry about what they look like."

Focusing on the future is essential for teens, according to Monica Stanke, program coordinator with the Garden City Youth Assistance program. Most teens who get in trouble don't have goals, she said. Youth Assistance receives referrals from police, juvenile courts, families and self-referrals. Most of the teens in the program have had some kind of illegal behavior.

"They don't see how the goals connect to their future," Stanke said. "My program deals with life goals and what is getting in the way of their life goals," she said, adding that teens are asked to write down obstacles that will prevent them from achieving their goals and steps they can take now.

Cheryl Willett, director of curriculum and instruction in Garden City Public Schools, said educators recognize that there are certain assets kids need to live a healthy life and if they don't have these traits they often turn to drug abuse, gangs and violence.

A group of concerned citizens, educators, parents, clergy and students formed Garden City Youth Development Task Force, to help teens strengthen their personaliof the 40 traits, Willett said. These 40 assets are also outlined in "Healthy Teens." They involve external influences of support from other people and include boundaries and constructive ways to use their time; or internal development that includes a commitment to learn, positive values, social competencies and a strong self-identity.

At loose ends

"What we find so much of the time is that major things are missing, especially from those internal assets," Willett said, "Kids in gangs and those who use drugs, when you talk about their future it's not even in their vocabulary. Some of these

Teens and families face so many challenges today, said Dishmon, the father of three. "This book offers some different insights."

McCarthy's book on teens is the latest outcome of efforts that began more than 10 years ago when the Michigan Model for Comprehensive School Health Education was developed in cooperation with professional and voluntary organizations, community and parent groups and private industry working toward disease prevention and health promotion among young people. McCarthy is a nationally recognized author of parent education materials.

Families work to prevent substance abuse

A Family Model

Many families today are working with their teen to prevent drug use, whether the drug is nicotine in cigarettes, marijuana, alcohol, inhalants, or any other kind of drug. The model these families are using is inclusive: No drug use of any kind is acceptable. This model involves the teen in the reasoning and decision-making process and focuses on clear-cut rules and consequences. The line these adults have decided to walk goes beyond simply forbidding drug use with words and threats, to knowing the realities of drug use among teens, the temptations teens face, and a willingness to have a relationship with their teen that makes "no drug use" work for both the families and their teen.

Here are three reasons an adult can use as the basis to prohibit all drug use.

Drugs are dangerous. What is known about drug use among teens points to disaster, whether the result is a lifelong addiction to cigarettes or an early death in an alcohol-related traffic accident. There is absolutely no evidence to show that drug use in teens is not dangerous, and not getting more dangerous. A fight when high or drunk could lead to a shooting; having sex in the same condition could lead to pregnancy or sexually transmitted disease.

■ Drug use is illegal. The chart in "Appendix C" details Michigan laws about drug use. Adults need to know these laws and lean on these laws when setting rules about drug use with their teen. Quoting laws might seem hypocritical to some people, or at least not a very sound argument, but the facts are the facts. At the very least, teens need to know that parents or other adults may be held responsible for their teen's drug or alcohol use, and for the teen's actions while under the influence of drugs. Parents, not teens, are the ones who bear the burden of late night trips to the local jail, dealing with the police, the courts, the schools, and worst of all, the funeral expenses.

Drug use doesn't mix with our family values, school, sports, and the other activities of a teen. This is a tough time to grow up as a teen. Compared to 25 or 30 years ago, today's teen faces increased risks for all manner of life-threatening situations, whether that be suicide, teen pregnancy, contracting HIV, or being involved in a homicide. At the very least, teens need to know that drug use makes doing well in school harder, will affect their emotional life, and make it harder to make and keep quality friends. Teens today need every break they can get to protect their health and potential for success.

Teens Saying No to Drugs

There is more involved in preventing drug use than just setting rules. Your teen needs a strong sense of self-esteem, along with the social skills

"My husband and I always had different shifts so someone would be at home with her, Teeter said, adding that getting involved in school, church and community activities is important for your child's healthy development, too.

McCarthy wrote similar comments in "Healthy Teens": "Too few young people grow up experiencing key ingredients for their healthy development: They do not experience support from adults, build relationships across generations, or hear consistent messages about boundaries and values. Most have too little to do that is positive and constructive."

Bug discovery has a connection to community

One of the more interesting stories in recent weeks was the report about the Worcester Polytechnic Institute students finding a bug in Microsoft Internet Explorer.

Well, I since learned that the story has a Livonia connection. One of the involved WPI students, Brian Morin, is a former Livonia resident. Morin

Middle and Stevenson High. He moved to Nashua, N.H., in 1992

attended Taylor Elementary, Holmes and graduated from Nashua High.

There is a story on CNET.com that quotes Morin. His former classmates. and others who know him, will want to read the story by pointing to http://www.news.com/News/Item/0,4,84 47,00 html. The story was also covered by local TV news, radio, CNN, MS-NBC, and others.

The students have a Web site at www.cybersnot.com.

I ran across a report about the efforts of Brian Morin, Paul Greene and Geoffrey Elliott in discovering the bug in Internet Explorer 3.01. The students found that version 3.01 had a serious bus which allowed Web page writers to use certain link and URL files to run programs on a remote computer without prompting the PC owner. Explorer could then be told to transfer a batch file to a hard-drive and then execute commands that could cause mischief, such as deleting files.

After being told of the bug by the students, Microsoft had a bug-fix available within 24 hours - only to learn a few days later that another bug with security implications had been discovered by other students.

Last-minute help

If you are one of those who will be driving to the mail box at midnight Tuesday to file your income tax return, then you might be looking for some online help during the next two days.

The IRS has a full-service Web page which can be easily reached by pointing browser http://www.irs.ustreas.gov. You will be able to access forms and publications, tax tables, or instructions on how to file.

A search engine should help you find everything you need, including tips on how to file your tax return electronically so you can save gasoline on April 15. The Web page is just part of our continuing effort to provide taxpayers with immediate access to tax information," says Arlene Kay, Michigan district director of the IRS.

Some one million people a day were visiting the site in March. If you really wait until the last minute to visit this site, select the text-only version which will load up faster than the graphics version.

If you don't want to visit the IRS official site, you might be interested in the Coopers & Lybrand's Tax News Network at http://www.taxnews.com. At TNN you'll find pages tax information and analysis, news, Coopers & Lybrand publications, and other helpful taxinformation sites. The information at TNN is timely and in-depth, focusing on matters such as IRS policy goals, new and proposed legislation.

If your young children haven't discovered Barney's Kids Page yet, have them http://www.geocities.com/Heartland/7412//.

There are, according to Liz Thompson, 28,000 Barney Web pages. Most don't pass the muster, however. The Barney's Kids Page is unique because it doesn't poke fun at our favorite purple dinosaur. And it offers many things to do, from downloadable coloring pages to sounds of Barney and Baby Bop. Your kids can also E-mail Barney a message and view lots of big, bright Barney photos.

dad may want to visit the Ray Charles page at http://www.raycharles.com/. Visitors with the RealAudio plug-in

After the kid goes to bed, mom or upon arrival are treated to an introduction from Ray Charles before entering the site. After listening to the greeting you can read a biography or an autobiography (beginning with his early years, 1930-1960), a discography (which includes the History of Chart Hits) and information about both the singer's charities and fan club.

"Comet Hale-Bopp" http://www.halebopp.com is an electronic publication by Russell Sipe, focusing on the Hale-Bopp comet, scheduled to reach peak brightness this month. The site includes the latest comet news, subject-related book reviews, photographs and images.

There recently was a television special on "The Waltons" in which, my hair dresser tells me, John Boy's wife gives birth to twins (a boy and a girl). If you didn't get enough of the Waltons on that Sunday night, point your browser to http://www.the-waltons.com to visit the Web site of the Waltons, the television family that most of America followed from 1972 to 1981. Fans will find pictures, music from the theme song, a complete episode guide and information on the Walton Mountain Museum and Earl Hamner, the show's creator, narrator, and writer of the original book. In fact, the Waltons were in large part can also read the history of the "real" family at this site.

The Harlem Globetrotters are celebrating their 70th anniversary as America's "Ambassadors of Goodwill" on the hardwood. The Globetrotters have entertained in 113 countries and haven't slowed down yet. As recent as 1995, the Globetrotters grabbed a 10-1 victory over Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and his all-stars. Go to http://www.harlem-. globetrotters.com/ and read a complete club history, find out how your children. can attend The Globetrotters Summer. Camp, enjoy Globetrotters' Trivia, and review a complete schedule for appearances this year.

■ I recently read an article on the subways and underground utilities of New York City in National Geographic.; So I was interested in "Stories from the Subways" http://www.toptown.com/centralpark/su bways/. Visitors will find a link a route map of the New York subways and a link to a the Find A Route tool where you can type in your starting point and. your destination and be provided with the best route to take.

70th anniversary

TolTest Inc., a consulting, engineering and testing firm, is celebrating its 70th anniversary in 1997. The firm has offices in Toledo and Dayton, Ohio, Plymouth and Monroe, and Pittsburgh, Pa.

Founded in 1927 as Toledo Testing Laboratory and becoming TolTest Inc. in 1991, the company's portfolio of services has expanded from construction materials testing, groundwater sampling and soil borings, and metallurgical evaluations and product quality analysis, to currently include asbestos testing, hydrogeological assessments, underground storage tank investigations, hazard and risk assessments, remediation services, air quality testing, and regulatory compliance.

TolTest President Michael Boyle said the company started with 13 employees and now has more than 165 employees, four local buildings and offices in several states. "Our company has grown despite the challenges of a very cyclical market and increased government regulations," Boyle said. "At TolTest, we have responded to those outside changes by becoming more client-driven, resulting in a much stronger company ready for the 21st century."

TolTest, which is headquartered in Toledo, has revenue which has grown to $13,000,000 by offering sound technical solutions to a variety of complex problems in the environmental, geotechnical and construction fields.

Indian Lake Village: Luxury rental living

two: More than 150 apartment units, all at least 950 square feet with two bedrooms and two baths, are under construction at Indian Lake Village.

Some folks could be at a station in life where apartment living is a better fit than home ownership.

That doesn't mean renters have to sacrifice new construction, upscale features, great recreational/leisure time amenities and prize location.

Indian Lake Village Apartments, a collaboration between the Fenton Co., Silverman Companies and operating engineers and carpenters union pension funds, offers all of that and more in Orion Township,

An additional 164 two-bedroom/ two-bath units, garden style, townhouse and penthouse, are under construction in the second phase on rolling acreage off Lapeer Road north of Silver Bell Road.

Nearly all 230 units in phase one are leased.

The property is next to the Bald Mountain Recreational Area, yet a short drive to the I-75 corridor.

"This is a pretty spectacular setting for an apartment complex," said Richard T. Fenton,

Probably 75 percent of apartment homes here view natural features. face natural conservancy, forests, said Gilbert "Buzz" Silverman. "There's not another (apartment) community like this in southeastern Michigan."

Several wetlands dot the property. "Normally, apartments get built on flat cornfields," Silverman added. "Look at these buildings on the hill looking into the woods."

"There's hawks, deer, all kinds of wildlife in here," Fenton said at the edge of the property where trails lead into the state park.

A lower density - just under 400 apartment units on 40 acres - was the design strategy used to convey luxury. And you want upscale?

Step into the clubhouse with its billiard room, community room with kitchen and fireplace, library/meeting room with fireplace, fitness center accessible 24 hours per day, locker rooms and sauna.

An outdoor swimming pool, tennis available during warmer-weather months.

All of the units in the second phase will have two bedrooms and two baths. Garden units on the first floor contain about 950 square feet. Rents range from $855 to $875 per month. Townhouse units, 1,300 square feet, situate the main living areas and a half bath on the first floor, the bedrooms upstairs. Rents go from $1,005 to $1,075.

Penthouses, 1,050 to 1,250 square feet, have all living space on one level over townhouses and garden units with rents ranging from $985 to $1,040.

All units regardless of style contain individual washers and dryers, air conditioning, all major appliances including microwave, blinds, balcony or patio and access to one space in a carport.

Some top-floor units have peaked ceilings and fireplaces.

Two models are available for show-

The Dogwood, a townhouse, features a kitchen/nook, living/dining rooms, mechanical room/storage and half bath on the first floor.

The laundry room is upstairs as are both bedrooms. The larger bedroom features a walk-in closet and shower, the smaller a combination tub/shower and wall closet.

The other model, the Evergreen, court and sand volleyball court are can be a garden or penthouse unit.

The bedrooms are on either side of the living room, dining room, kitchen with suach ber and laundry area.

One bedroom has a combination tub/shower and wall closet, the other a shower and walk-in closet.

Water is included in rent. Gas and electric utilities are individually metered. Pets are allowed in selected units. There aren't salewalks.

One-bedreven, one-bath units built in phase one start at $105 per month when available

"These are luxury apartments," Fenton said. "I had anticipated we would see a let of empty nesters. Most folks are single, male executives 30-35 years old, working in the Oakland Technology Center, or in Troy, Birmingham, Lake Orion or Auburn Hills

"We're also setting young couples," Fenton said. Some are DINKS (dual incomes, no kids), and some have kids. We had about 40 kids for an Easter Exg hunt here.

"We're getting some empty-nesters. Maybe they have a place in Florida and want a presence in the area where the grandkids are," he said.

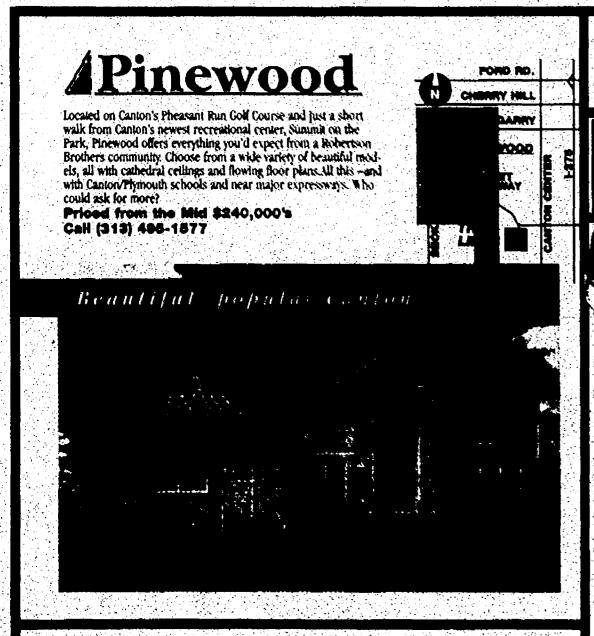

"They love the view," said Audrey Carrington, manager at Indian Lake Village. "They love where we're located. We don't stack buildings on top of each other here. They love the textured walls, the epenness. We have lots of windows, lots of cupboard space."

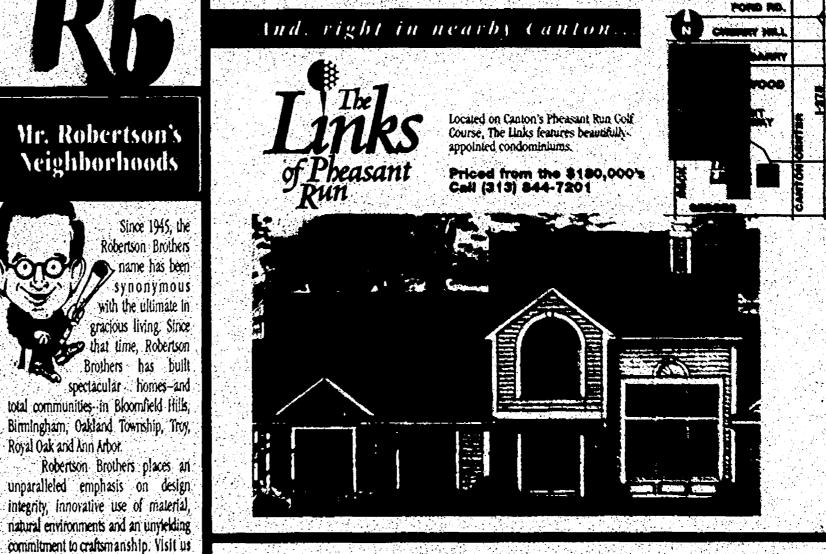

The apartment community is serviced by the Lake Orion schools.

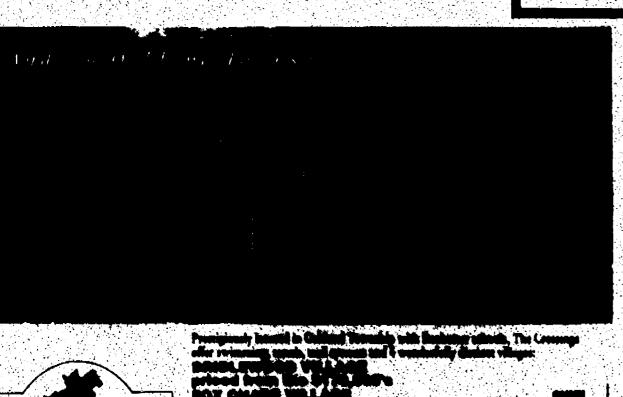

Bryan Nelan is into his second year living in a exceledroom unit at Indian Lake Village.

"One of the biggest things it was new construction, Nolan said." I was surprised a washer and dryer and microwave came with it. I've been real pleased with the amenities and view. The area had close access to (I-175, which was a factor for me."

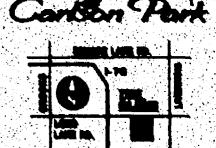

The leasing office at Indian Lake Village Avantments, (310) 391-9040, is open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekends.

Basement water can be stopped

BY POPULAR MECHANICS FOR AP SPECIAL PRATURES

If you have basement water problems that you've been ignoring, there's a good chance you're. losing up to half of your home's living space. And at the cost of housing these days, that's a substantial loss.

While water that collects in a basement may have several sources, almost all such problems can be corrected. And for many, the simplest solution is to install a sump pump,

While a pump doesn't cure the disease, it goes a long way toward handling the symptoms, And, it does the job at a price that most of us can afford.

The truth of the matter is that most basement water problems are not basement problems at all, but exterior drainage problems. So before you consider a sump-pump installation, take a good look (in the rain, if you must) at the drainage around ing a 24-inch-wide swath of conyour home. Make sure that gutters aren't clogged, that downspout extensions move roof runoff at least 4 feet beyond the foundation and that the soil within 3 feet of the foundation slopes away from the house.

Even if these conditions have been met, you may still accumulate water in your basement. The problem may be a utility trench that invisibly channels runoff back to the house, or a seasonally high ground-water table. In these cases, a sump-pump installation is a realistic alternative.

Many new homes have a sump pit already in place, complete with a drainage tile system under the basement floor that's designed to channel water to the pit. If your home doesn't have this feature, and your water problem affects most of the basement, a retrofit system of this type is a good solution. However, it's a big job that involves removcrete and soil from the inside perimeter of the basement, adding gravel, drain tile and pit, and replacing the concrete.

While this isn't an impossible do.it-vourselfer job, it's backbreaking work. Professionals will get $2,500 to $5,000 to do it for you - not necessarily a bad price, though, if you've doubled your living space.

A more manageable approach, in the right circumstances, is to install an isolated sump pit with several feet of gravel around it. To have this system installed may cost between $300 and $500. Or, you can do it yourself for the price of the pump, pipe and fittings, pit liner, gravel and cement.

This abbreviated system is best suited where water infiltrates only one area of the basement, or where the basement floor was poured over a gravel

Many homes built over the past 30 years have several inches of gravel beneath the concrete. floor. The gravel was used to bring a slightly over excavated floor back to grade.

Because water seeks the path of least resistance and will migrate sideways before it moves up, below-floor moisture will move through the layer of gravel to a sump pit before flooding the

Unfortunately, it's difficult to tell if your basement floor floats on a gravel bed. The builder of the home might recall, or a neighbor who has done similar work might know.

In most cases, though, you won't know until you break through the floor. Sometimes, a few holes bored through the floor with a hammer drill will tell you what you need to know.

Spanish exterior, American interior blend

11' x 12'8'

Graceful arches set a tone of relaxed elegance in the Loma Vista, a plan with a contemporary Spanish-style exterior and a fairly traditional American-style interior.

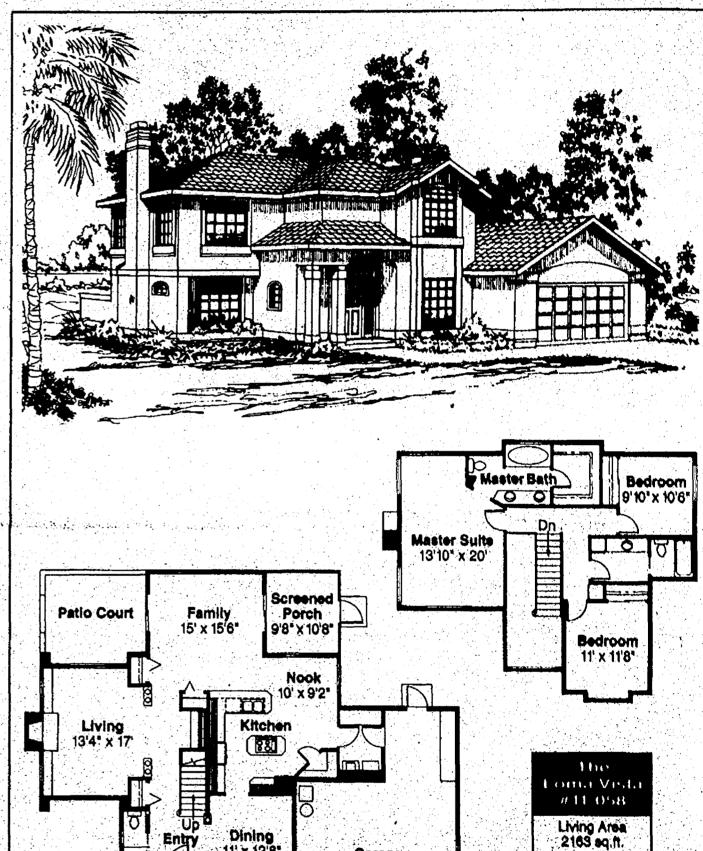

Outside, stucco detailing accents the chimney, the garage, and the columns that support a grand portico. Rounded roof tiles enhance the Spanish flavor. The interior entry is as dramatic as the exterior. Small panes of glass flank and crown the front door, while the ceiling is two stories high. Columns to the left and right support arched openings to the formal dining room and living room. A small powder room hides behind a pocket door.

The entry's lofty ceiling extends down the hall and over the stairway as far as the passageway into the family room. A wet bar is tucked into a hallway alcove. With windows on three sides, the family room is naturally bright. Sliders to the left open onto a patio, while a set on the right leads to a screened porch.

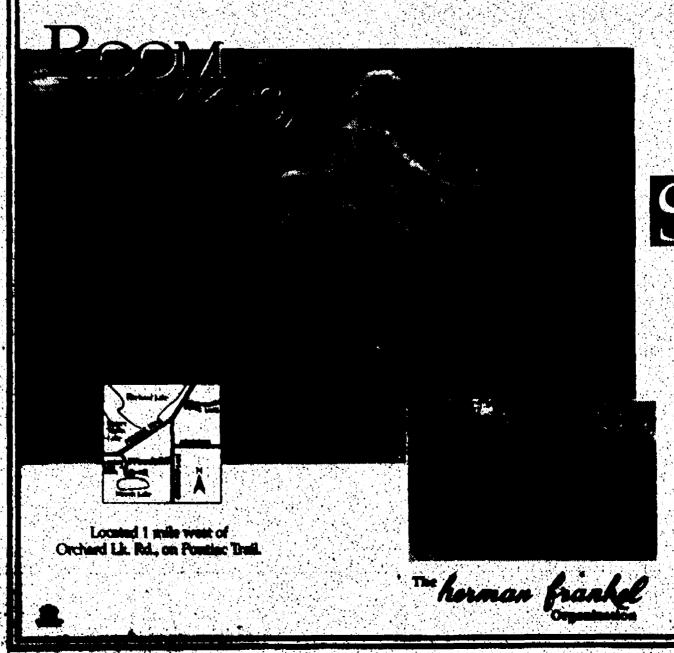

niumal spaces flow from family room to sunny nook to fully equipped kitchen. Popular amenities in the kitchen include a work island with built-in cooktop, a step-in pantry, built-in ovens and dishwasher, and a sink that faces into the family room across an eating bar. A small utility room with a clothesfolding counter is accessible from both kitchen and garage.

All of the bedrooms in the Loma Vista are upstairs. The master suite has a large walk-in closet and private bathroom with spa tub and double vanity.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Loma Vista 11-058 and include a return address when ordering A catalog featuring over 170 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

Bidding is especially difficult have asked me ject from the with its inherit was a great idea, so in addition to discussing a series of ever-changing topics related to lot. architecture and construction we will follow the design and construction of a "custom" home which is on the boards at my reporting on the progress of this project and I will continue to have monthly updates as the project progresses. This month, we are on the verge of construction - waiting both for the frost laws to come off - these are actually weight-limit laws for non-reinforced roads and trying to get contractors to give pricing for their work.

This has been the most frustrating experience of the entire project! Last month I told how I had been retained by the owner of the project to act as both architect as well as construction manager. As such, I have to obtain pricing and in most cases

Some readers trade: I have to nearly beg these have asked me people to meet with me and give to follow a pro- bids.

What kind of quality can I beginning to expect from people who make illustrate the appointments and fail to show entire process up for meetings? I give everyone a bit of slop in making their ent ups and expected dates for bids, but I downs. I thought have gotten to a point where I simply do not have patience. The people who I have worked with in the past are a little better (they know who I am) but not a

I hope this is an unusually busy season because, if not, being a general contractor or construction manager could drive one crazy. I am a little wor-Three months ago I began ried what might happen if a critical construction procedure is delayed by a failed promise to arrive on the construction site. As with every custom construction project, the final costs are very difficult to predict prior to the actual bidding process being tallied up. Each project, location and quantity of work available for construction at a given time affects the price of a project.

Each one of these custom projects will differ in subtle ways this project is sided in redwood and the last was sided in cedar subtle difference but the two materials do not cost the same. The electrical fixtures cost differ-2 or 3 competitive bids for each ent amounts, the foundation systems are different - how can one possibly know the differences without bidding the job out? Last year I worked on a project in Port Huron - $130 per square foot bought quite a nice project but here in Ann Arbor it does not seem to be buying the same amount of architectural construction. Usually in places where the cost of living is lower, the cost of construction can be expected to be lower as well.

The final factor that affects the cost of construction is the relative busyness of those bidding on the job. In an environment where one has more work than one can complete, one can bid high because one does not necessarily want the work to begin with.

If one gets the job, then there is plenty of profit to cover the pain and stress of doing more than one wants. In this environment I could, as a bidder, give outrageous prices and if someone wants me to perform my trade they will pay for me to do so. It is a case of basic supply and demand economics that is understood by both the trades and the buying public. Needless to say, the 1996 and 1997 building seasons have been and will be busy

In addition to getting bids together. I have been editing the finishes as the bids have come in. Remember the cork tile that was to be used throughout the main floor? Well the best installed-price I could find was around $15 per square foot. Well for $8,50 per square foot we can have a beautiful maple floor. When a project is "over-budget," it is hard to hold on to excessively priced materials or details.

Even editing the project does not bring the project back to the original cost predictions of the project. If the goal was to do everything possible to get the project on budget, it might be possible to get the project built on budget. This would mean no redwood for the exterior but rather vinyl siding and vinyl windows. Interior floor finishes would be reduced to cheap carpeting and on and on.

This was never the goal, and I applaud the client's dedication to architecture and the virtues of quality over quantity.

Next month we should have some site activity, and I simply can not wait to see this project rise out of the ground.

Pretty good ideas from H&G Television

Home & Garden Television (HGTV) offers the following suggestions for use in the home and around the yard:

How to keep your edge

To safeguard the edges of saw blades, cut a strip of old garden hose as long as the exposed edge. Slit the hose, wrap it around the blade, and secure it with heavy rubber bands or duct tape.

When storing your gardening tools, place them blade down in a bucket of sand. The sand will protect the tools' edge and keep the blade from rusting between

The long-lived hose

The next time you buy a garden hose, select one with a protective collar, which will prolong its life by keeping it from kinking at the faucet. And make sure the hose has multiple layers of reinforced fabric such as nylon or rayon. That makes the hose paint drips to them, it won't reinforced fabric such as nylon or more flexible.

Kinder, gentler paint remover

Harsh paint removers can dry or damage your skin. So when you get paint on your hands, apply a dab of cooking oil, and rub your hands together vigorously. The paint will peel away without harming your skin.

Seepage pit is for hills

By Popular Mechanics For AP Special Features

Q: I am building a new home and was told that my septic system needs to use a seepage pit rather than a leaching field. Can you explain what a seepage pit is and why it's necessary?

A: A seepage pit is used instead of a leaching field in residential sewage disposal when the lot the house is located on is too steeply sloped to allow building a field. The pit allows effluent to percolate into the ground the way a leaching field does, but it takes up less surface area. Sewage leaving a house settles in a septic tank before it flows into the pit.

The pit's bottom should be filled with 6 to 12 inches of coarse gravel, and the space between the pit liner and the surrounding soil with 3 to 6 inches of coarse gravel. The specific amount of gravel depends on local current in the "hot" and "neutral" lines. Under normal conditions, these two currents are always equal. If the circuit detacts a difference between them as little as 5 mil. liamps, it interrupts the power in as little as 1-40th second. However, childproof covers on an outlet are effective, and it shouldn't be necessary to install a GFCI outlet.

A GFCI receptacle has one advantage over a GFCI installed in a circuit breaker. The GFCI circuit breaker monitors the branch circuit. With it, there is a greater chance of nuisance tripping caused by a buildup of leaking currents due to deteriorated or danaged sections of insulation, multiple splices and moisture accumulation. When a GPCI breaker trips, the entire branch circuit was out. Whereas when a GFCI receptacle trips it de-energizes just itself, or the rest of the branch that follows it, depending on how the electrician has it installed.

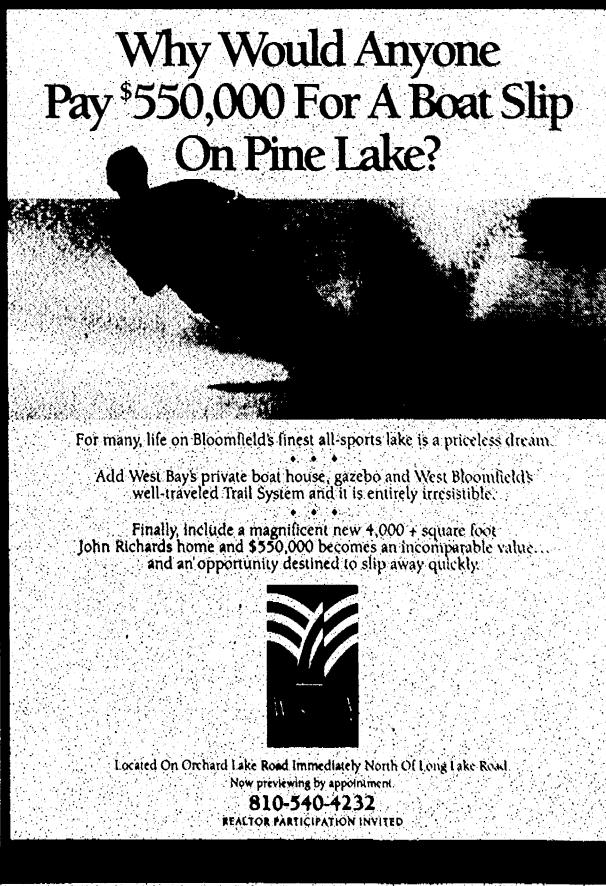

Q: How do you drill in bathroom wall tiles? I would like to put rails in the shower area.

A. One method is to place a finish nail on the tile, and tap it with a hammer to some the glazing. Bore on the scored mark with a masonry bit.

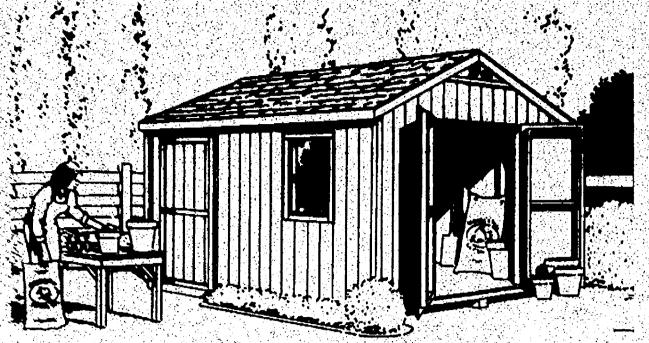

The second method is to simply buy a carbide or diamond-tipped drill to bore the hole. Using these bits eliminates the need to score the glazing. The diamond-tipped drill is more expensive but preferable to the carbidetipped bit.

Both bits are available at hardware stores and industrial suppliers. Use a variablespeed drill when using these bits so that you can drill at a slow speed.

Weather and poisoning

Recent weather conditions have fluctuated as much as 45 degrees, sending people outdoors in shorts one day and back inside the next huddling over their furnaces.

Safety experts urge residents not to let their guard down: Spring snows and freezing temperatures can pose a safety threat both indoors and out. Power outages, cold temperatures, heavy rain and extreme wind all have the potential to trap deadly carbon monoxide inside a home, causing residents to become ill or incapacitated and in some cases. resulting in death.

In the first week of April, a Claverack, N.Y. couple was killed from accidental carbon monoxide poisoning emanating from a gasoline-powered generator used to fuel and heat their home after the recent April Fool's Day blizzard, which left tens of thousands without power in the northeastern United States.

At least eight other people were treated for carbon monoxide poisoning in that area alone. Several other injuries have been reported across the country attributed to carbon monoxide poisoning including the family of a sheriff's officer in San Diego.

"While we're all familiar with the hazards faced by motorists in extreme weather, many people don't realize they may face something equally hazardous in their own home carbon monoxide poisoning," said Tom Greiner, Ph.D., associate professor of engineering at Iowa State University.

Carbon monoxide is the leading cause of accidental poisoning deaths in the U.S., responsible for 1.500 deaths and 10,000 illnesses each year, according to the Journal of the American Medical Association, A byproduct of incomplete combustion. carbon monoxide can be produced by any home appliance that burns fuel. such as a gas or oil dryer, gas or wood burning fireplaces or stoves or unvented space heaters. Car exhaust fumes entering a home from an attached garage can also produce carbon monoxide.

Under normal circumstance, if appliances and venting systems are functioning properly, carbon monoxide will be safely vented out of the home. However, bad weather conditions can affect the operation of home venting systems, causing dangerous carbon monoxide build-up.

Potential weather hazards

There are a number of ways inclement weather can contribute to a potential carbon monoxide problem inside the home. Mud and debris from melting snow can block vents that normally allow carbon monoxide and other exhaust gases to exit the home, trapping carbon monoxide inside. Strong wind or rain can knock chimney caps out of place or cause power outages, disabling home venting systems and causing residents to turn to alternative sources of heat such as kerosene heaters. wood burning stoves or a fire in the fireplace - all of which can produce carbon monoxide," Greiner said.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) also recommends installing a carbon mc detector for protection. "As a housing engineer, I encourage everyone to regularly inspect vents and chimneys during bad weather," Greiner said.

A battery-powered detector will continue to operate in a power outage. Because it does not require an outlet, it can be easily installed anywhere in the home.

Risk of downdrafting

Another danger of extreme weather is cold flues, which take longer to establish a draft and can contribute to a dangerous air pressure condition known as downdrafting. Downdrafting occurs when carbon monoxide and other gases that normally exit the home safely through flues and chimneys are forced back down into the home by air pressure imbalances.

Downdrafting can occur more frequently in cold weather when the home is sealed tightly, preventing adequate fresh air from entering and creating a negative air pressure within the home.

Simultaneous operation of more than one fuel-burning appliance in an enclosed space, such as a gas furnace and water heater in a utility room, can also cause downdrafting if there is not sufficient ventilation.

Dangerous practices

Warming up the car in an attached garage is also a risky move, as carbon monoxide from car exhaust fumes can enter the home through cracks in walls and space around door jambs. Never leave a car running in an attached garage, even if the garage door is mon

Renovated and restored colonial retains charm

$308,900

After many years of meticulous renovation and improvements, including a new front porch, which is a close replica of the original one built on this unique colonial, the present family has decided to relocate. This home was built in 1896 and the current owners have attemped to keep and improve as many of the original characteristics as possible.

Some attributes of this fine home include formal dining rooms with original woodwork. There are wood floor throughout.

Other significant characteristics include four bedrooms, two with builtin window seats, two full baths, family room, second story back porch, side portico and a three car garage with loft and stairway.

Don't miss the opportunity to tour this traditional Plymouth colonial.

For more information, call Mike Schneider at 313-455-8400.

Open today, 1-4 p.m.

Custom-built house has outstanding floor plan

48583 Meadow Drive N. of Ann Arbor Road W. of Beck Road Plymouth Coldwell Banker Schweitzer-Bake $299,900

Ridgewood Hills is considered one of the finest family locations in Plymouth ... winding streets with pride of ownership expressed in fastidiously maintained homes with pleasing exteriors. You'll discover the convenience of sidewalks and the presence of common areas for play or visual interest.

This custom "Curtiss" built, full brick, four bedroom, two and a half bath home is distinguished by its extravagant landscaping and brick paver walks.

This outstanding floor plan offers a formal living room with front and side wall wood windows. The formal dining room offers a spectacular view (from the bay window) of the reat yard. The island kitchen is perfect for entertaining plus a breakfast eating

The spacious family room has a full brick fireplace and vaulted ceiling opening to tiered decking and a fabulous hot tub. The other side of the family room opens to a year round sun room with ceramic flooring vaulted ceiling and two doorwalls leading to the brick walkway and read and side yards.

Other fine amenities of the home include central air conditioning, central vacuum and sump pump.

For more information, call Nancy Petrucelli at 313-201-6300.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"STEPS TO TAKE WHEN BUYING"

Tyou are considering buying your next home, you will want to do so in the most effective manner possible. This will require planning and doing the right thing at the right time. In order to you do the right thing, here are some suggestions:

Get Pre-approved By A Mortgage Lender

Most mortgage lenders have a service referred to as a preapproval. This service allows you to determine how much money you can borrow when buying your next property. It is called a preapproval because it is granted by the lender prior to the time when you locate your next home and submit a signed and accepted Sachase agreement between you and the seller.

Choose A Realtor

get will need reliable advice on both buying and selling. The source is a knowledgeable Realtor in your area. He or she can statest you with up-to-date information and solid suggestions based on actual experience.

Determine The Value Of Your Existing Home

Now that you understand the amount of mortgage money you can below, it is time to find out what your existing home is worth. is proceeds from its sale will become the downpayment on the kt house. This downpayment amount when added to the mount of money you can borrow, determines the upper price hit of the next house. Also, you must learn about the current finand for your house and a reasonable expectation of time aded to sell it.

Dien About The Availability Of Houses To Buy er important part of this puzzle is the availability and cost the kind of home you want to buy, is it afforcible based upon purchasing power? Is it a good financial investment?

Employment agency etiquette

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source

Looking for a new job? Planning to work with an employment agency to find one? Take a moment to consider a few do's and don't's that can make your experience more produc-

For starters, it's important to dress professionally the first time you meet with an agency. In many ways, that first meeting is used to assess how professionally you'll present yourself and represent the agency when you're referred to prospective employers. "When I prescreen people on the telephone, I tell them to dress in professional attire, as if they're going to be sent out to an interview," says Ron Rue, general manager and partner for the Century City California branch office of Ultimate Staffing Services, headquartered in Brea, California.

Ellen Andrews, managing partner of Positions Inc., an employment agency in Washington D.C., points out a very tangible benefit of dressing professionally for that first meeting. "If someone's qualifications meet what a client is looking for and that applicant is dressed appropriately, they can be sent out immediately on an interview," says Andrews.

meeting too. Be sure you've checked the document for errors. If you have a typo on your resume," says Rue, "it shows us you're not detail oriented. It indicates sloppiness, and for the administrative support and clerical jobs we fill, that's a big no-no."

Make sure, as well, that the information your resume is truthful and doesn't misrepresent your experience or educational credentials. Agencies check references and won't be comfortable representing you if they find factual inconsistencies.

They're also likely to test you on any skills you list on the resume. "We sell to our customers that our applicants are fully reference checked and skill-tested, so we test them on. each software package they claim to have expertise in," says Rue. Testing skills enables. agencies to "know what your skill levels are so we can place you appropriately," adds Judy Chudars, managing director of Star Staffing in Washington, D.C. Andrews, Chudars and Rue all say it's important to be cooperative throughout the testing and screening process.

Being open-minded about any opportunities an agency suggests is also a plus. For exam-

Bring a copy of your resume to that first ple, Rue says a lot of positions, in fact, some of they're working with at least once a week the best situations today are "temp-to-hire," where employers try out someone in a position for a period of weeks before deciding to hire them full time. Rue says, "I tell people who are looking for full time jobs to at least consider a temp-to-hire situation."

Equally important is being open to constructive feedback, what Rue calls "suggestive coaching." "People need to realize we know exactly what out clients want," says Rue. "When I make suggestions, like telling someone to lose the long nails and the purple nail polish" as I did with a very skilled candidate the other day, I'm just trying to help them do what's necessary to land a job for which they're qualified."

Following interviews with prospective employers, be sure to contact the agency that sent you. "We ask candidates to follow up with us immediately after an interview," says Andrews. Chudars also asks candidates to call "as soon after an interview as possible." "We want to know if someone wants the job or not," she says.

Until job seekers accept a position, Rue urges them to stay in touch with the agencies

"Let the agency know you're hungry for employment and that you're willing to work with them, says Rue. And let the agency know what you're doing on your own so they don't duplicate your efforts if you're applying to companies directly through their recruits ment ads."

While we're on the topic of duplication, what about working with more than one agency at a time? "That's not a problem" says Rue. Each agency probably has a different client base, and if you're really trying to find work, the more people you have working on your behalf, the better."

Andrews agrees. "We just ask candidates to make us aware of it." she says. Chudars concurs, adding, "To avoid duplication of effort, let an agency know if you've already met or had your resume submitted to a company to which they want to refer you, whether you made the contact directly or through another agency."

WORKING LIFE

When and how to tell the boss you're expecting

By Deborah L. Jacobs, Chronicie Features

Learning you're pregnant may be one of the great joys of life, but don't expect your bosses to share that enthusiasm. The response to your good news can range from polite congratulations to dour resignation. Among other things, they're probably wondering: Can you deliver until you deliver? How long will your maternity leave last? Will you ever return?

Federal law protects workers from being fired just because they re pregnant, and some states guarantee greater rights. But the laws don't apply to everyone, For example, the federal Pregnancy Discrimination Act only covers companies with 15 or more employees. And most laws only apply to staffers, not to the growing number of freelancers or independent contractors. (For answers to specific legal questions, call the 9 to 5 National Association of Working Women hotline at (800) 522-

Often, the best way to avoid problems is with good timing and a little tact. Unless you have a high-risk pregnancy or need more than a few sick days during the first several months, make your announcement during the second trimester. advises Anne Welsberg, a lawyer and coauthor of the book, "Everything a Working Mother needs to Know" (Doubleday, 1994). (Hard to find in bookstores, this comprehensive guide is available for $14.95 from the author at (914) 472-6328.) Any earlier, you're still at risk of a miscarriage, which would force you to sadly retract your news. Any later, you might leave your boss and coworkers scrambling to prepare for your absence.

To avoid leaks to the office grapevine, don't tell coworkers before you tell your supervisor. And, if the company processes medical claims in-nouse, by not to submit them unut after you we talked with the boss, tyersoc

Sticky ethical questions; what do you do if you're job-hunting, or up for a promotion? In the first case, wait until an offers. on the table, and then tell the prospective employer you're expecting. Welsberg says. You have no obligation to say so during an interview, but it's better not to start a new job with a secret. In the second scenario, says Welsberg, "there's a fine line between protecting your interest and making your supervisor feel you're taking advantage."

In any event, it's good politics to show enthusiasm about your job even as you share this highly personal item. Don't say you plan to come back unless you mean it, but do reiterate your commitment to work. Welsberg recommends a script that goes something like this: "I have great news. I'm expecting a baby in June and I'm thrifted. I also want you to know that I'm very committed to my job."

Save discussing details of your maternity feave for later. You may be legally entitled to time off. But requesting it when you break the news gives the impression that all you care about is the leave, Weisberg says. Instead, she suggests you just say, "I'll get back to you to discuss how much time I'll take off and how we can be sure my work gets covered." That way, you send a clear signal that you're concerned about the company's interests, not just your own.

This strategy is especially important for freelancers, who have lewer right-or benefits-than employees, Just like staffers, long-term freelancers should give the company five or six months' notice, says Patricia Cobe, coauthor of the book, "Mompreneurs" (The Berkley (cq) Publishing Group, 1996), a guide for mothers who work at home. Freelancers who work: on short-term projects may get away with less notice, but should be up loose ends at least a month before the baby's due.

To help make a smooth transition, tell the company when you announce your pregnancy how long you plan to take off, says Cobe, a working morn who has done temporary stints at magazines. Cobe also recommends finding someone who can fill in for you during the leave. You can train the pinch hitter while you're still on the job, and during this spell share part

Whether you're a staffer or a freelancer, it's crucial not to leave your bosses or clients in the lurch-especially if you want

WORK AT HOME

Turn to support groups, resources for business

By Alice Bredin, Tribune Media

My husband finally put his foot down about a month ago: no more business questions. I have to admit I had been relying heavily on him lately to help me make some important decisions about a partnership agreement, new client positioning and resolution of a dispute with a large vendor. When he cut me off, he assured me that he likes helping, but hie pressure to be available all the time was overwhelming.

I have an accountant, an attorney and business advisers I can turn to, but my husband is my advisor of choice because in addition to having an MBA, lots of marketing experience and good judgment, he knows what kind of decisions I can live with,

I pushed him to his limit by calling him frequently at work with questions and repeatedly asking him to do tasks such as look over spreadsheets after a long day at the office. Because I work at home, I am probably more isolated than I should be and therefore turn to the person who is

After a break, I believe he will come around and be willing to provide advice again. In the meantime. I have made some changes to my approach to seeking help that will permanently change the way I find business advice.

The first is my partnership. I have been working by myself in a home office for almost a decade. I hire independent contractors to help me with projects but still make all strategic decisions alone.

While I wouldn't trade my lifestyle for anything, I have acknowledged that I am tired of always coming up with the answers. I know the downsides of having partners, but I am willing to put up with them because of the potential to have built-in sounding boards and three times the effort behind my business.

I am also joining an entrepreneurial support group. I was in a group like this when I first started out, and it was great for setting goals, keeping motivated and learning the ropes. Now I have achieved many of my goals and am looking to gather input from business people in a variety of industries. A lot of value can be gained from applying the solutions from one industry to another.

To find a local entrepreneurial support group, look in the listings in your newspaper or call local chapters of national home-based business associations. You can also form your own group by assembling a few peers and asking them to invite people they know.

The Internet also has plenty of resources. The following services answer questions from small and home based business owners and may help you get the quick answer you need.

•AT&T Resources for New Business (http://www.att.com/rnb/). For $99 a year, this site provides information about starting up a homebased or small business, an hour-long consultation with an adviser, a fax-back service that provides articles on small business, a quarterly resource guide about running a business and discounts on products and services.

•Ernst & Young LLP (http://ernie.ey.com/). A flat fee of $6,000 annually provides access to Ernst & Young's network of experts to answer business questions. Answers are posted within 48 hours and clients are informed by e-mail and voice mail that their response is ready.

 American Express Small Business Network (http://www.americanexpress.com/small-business/). This site, which I am affiliated with, is free and has articles about starting up and managing a small business; lists of venture capital firms and other funding resources; a tool that helps you create a business plan; and import/export information. You can also post a question to me and receive an answer within several days.

MAILBAG BRINGS QUESTIONS ON HEALTH INSURANCE, DISTRIBUTORS

Dear Alice:

My home-based business has grown to include staff. How can I find affordable health insurance for them?

Dear Reader:

I can't recommend a provider, but I can suggest some searching tactics.

Contact a trade association, alumni group, chamber of commerce or a small business association, as many of these entities provide breaks on health insurance by buying in pools.

Organizations like the National Association for the Self-Employed, the Small Office/Home Office Association and the Independent Business Alliance established themselves mainly to meet the insurance needs of people like you.

Other Resources:

•The Institute for Health Policy Solutions, (202) 857-0810, can tell you whether a state-sponsored health-insurance purchasing cooperative exists in your state.

•Wilkinson Benefit Consultants, (800) 296-3030, provides a database of health-insurance providers for a fee, but doesn't sell insurance.

I sell high-end gifts that women buy for their brothers, husbands, fathers, etc. I have one distributor now and need to find others that are willing to work with a homebased business.

Dear Reader:

A good place to find distributors is at trade shows. Look in trade magazines for listings of trade shows near you. If you read trade magazines for your industry you will probably also see some distributor ads.

Another option is to go to your reference library and search through some Dun & Bradstreet resources. Resources that are relevant to you include Dun & Bradstreet's Million Dollar Directory, a listing of the largest companies in the United States, including distributors.

You can search through Dun's database using its product called Dun's Direct Access. Dun's Director Access is available in large libraries or can be purchased for $50. The company's CD-ROM called Marketplace, which provides the same service, is also a possibility. Dun & Bradstreet's number is (800) 624-5669.

Dear Alice:

My wife and I would like to set up a home-based business. We figure that a computer business would be ideal. My wife is an excellent typist, and we live near a university. Can you suggest a course of action or put us in touch with a company that contracts out to people who work at home?

Dear Reader:

The right business idea for you will be deter mined by what other skills besides typing you have in your repertoire and what needs exist in your

To generate ideas, read the paper and examine your community with an eye for unfulfilled needs: For example, if there are businesses thriving in your area, ask yourself what ancillary business you could offer using your computer at home.

Plenty of books list business ideas, but I suggest focusing on your skills and local opportunity instead of taking your lead from these lists

Some resources that may help:

Read a book called "Making a Living Without a Job" by Barbara Winter to help generate ideas and determine what you are suited to

· For telecommuting jobs · home-based, salaried positions - look at a publication called Telecommuter's Digest, a monthly newsletter that lists companies that have telecommuting positions available. Some of the listings are for positions that have telecommuting potential only.

AT WORK

Employees are unfamiliar with 401(k) Plans

By Lindsey Novak, Tribune Media

As the workplace becomes more competitive, employees are grasping for any bit of security they can find. Many workers are focusing on employee benefits, including the company 401(k) plan, and, if the mail is any indication, they are generally not happy about the way these plans ar being handled.

One reader worries that a paycheck deduction seven months ago has not made it into his 401(k) account. He asked a company officer, who told him they were working on it. Now he's really concerned.

Another reader, who had been a longtime employee at her company, was fired some time ago. She has used up most of her money and is living at poverty level, but her ex-employer told

$3,500, and she will have to wait until she is 65 years old to

A third reader says his international company, based in New York, won't allow its employees outside corporate headquarters to participate in its 401(k) plan, so more than 100 employees in the Chicago office don't receive that benefit.

Yet another reader says that his company stopped allowing nonmanagement employees-to enroll in the 401(k) plan, even though some of the employees were promised enrollment in the plan as one of the benefits.

Readers' complaints range from dishonesty to unethical practices to mismanagement of 401(k) plans. Michael A.

in more than 25 years, he has seen only a few instances in which a company misappropriated funds.

What's shocking to many employees is how little information they are legally entitled to regarding their plans. When an employee enrolls, he should receive a summary plan description, which includes claims procedures and identifies the plan administrator. (Requests for information should be directed, in writing, to this administrator.)

As participants in the plan, employees are entitled to a statement of accrued benefits, but only by written request and only once a year. Employees are also entitled to a new summary plan description every five years.

her she cannot access the funds. Schwartz, president of Pension. When an employee terminates, a vesting schedule, which varies employer to verbally explain in her pension plan because the Resources, a Chicago-based he should receive a statement of from plan to plan. vested accrued benefits no later than 180 days after the end of the plan year (as described in the summary plan description) in which his job ends. The plan document describes when the funds will be distributed. Some plans distribute them right after termination, while other plans wait one to five years before dis-

If the plan is terminated, participants should not have to forfeit their vested benefits (employee contributions and earnings are always 100 percent vested) and are entitled to roll over their funds into an individual retirement account or another qualified plan. Employees. often think they are entitled to all the funds, but employer contributions are given according to

For example, if you leave your job before retirement age, you may only be entitled to receive 20 percent of the employer contributions and earnings after your third year, 40 percent after your fourth year, 60 percent after your fifth year, 80 percent after your sixth year and 100 percent after your seventh year. In short, if you quit your job before you are vested in the plan, you may not receive any of the funds from employer contributions and

This is the extent of the employer's responsibility to its employees. Any other statements given to employees throughout the year are simply gestures. It's tempting to throw away the summary plan description, leaving it up top your everything; but don't. Plans vary from company to company, so it's important to read it before you enroll.

There are certain tests that plans must pass to be qualified, and discriminating between management and nonmanagement employees could jeopardize it tax-qualified status.

Complaints about a plan should be directed to THE U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, PENSION AND WELFARE BENEFITS ADMINISTRATION: (2023) 219-8776.

Geo Tracker 4-door offer fun-to-drive ride

By Anne Fracassa Avanti NewsFeatures

Sure it's versatile.
And with its 4-wheel drive capabilities, it's fun to drive.

You'll just get beat up in the process.

The ride is so harsh, the vehicle so unforgiving, that by the time I got out after an hour-long jaunt, I was actually sore. At one point, I stopped and got out to see if the 1997 Geo Tracker I was driving had a flat tire or something.

It didn't.

I even drove it to a fellow auto writer's house and asked him if it was me or was the ride harsh. He agreed with me. And so did another colleague.

That said, let's get on with the nitty gritty of this Tracker 4-door outfitted with 4-wheel drive. The Tracker has a full-length frame with ladder-type cross members that resist the twisting forces while off-roading. There's also a cross-truck beam under the instrument panel that adds to its rigidity.

The 4-door model is actually the best choice for anyone who has to transport more than one other person around. There's enough room in the back seat for a tall adult. There's nearly 33 inches of legroom and 44.9 inches of hiproom back there. Even the cargo room (45 cubic feet) in the rear of the Tracker is impressive for what is considered a small sport utility.

The best part of the Tracker is its looks. The front stance is beefy and looks like a force to reckon with. It's quite high off the ground (7.9 inches), but it's not too bad to get into. It didn't feel unstable, either It's solid on the ground.

There are six models in the Tracker lineup: 2-wheel-drive 2-door convertible, 4-wheel-drive 2-door convertible, 2-wheel-drive 4-door hardtop or 4-wheel-drive 4-door hardtop in either the base or uplevel LSi trim.

The LSi trim will give you everything the base level has and more: body-color

Powered by a 1.6-liter 16-valve single overhead cam engine with 95 horsepower, the Tracker comes standard with an easy-to-shift 5-speed manual transmission. Available on the 2-door models is a 3-speed automatic. On the 4-doors, there's an optional 4-speed overdrive automatic with power/economy settings.

bumpers, door handles and exterior mirrors, steel wheels with neat center caps, front and rear floor mats, cloth seats and black body-side moldings and rocker panels.

And keep in mind you're getting a 97.9-inch wheelbase on the 4-door models. That's almost a foot more than the 2-door models. The 4-door is also 15 inches longer than the 2-door model. The 2-door is truly a mini sport ute; the 4-door is not.

Powered by a 1.6-liter 16-valve single overhead cam engine with 95 horsepower, the Tracker comes standard with an easy-to-shift 5-speed manual transmission. Available on the 2-door models is a 3-speed automatic. On the 4-doors, there's an optional 4-speed overdrive automatic with power/economy settings.

Up front with the driver is smartly laid out instrumentation. Everything is there, right in front of you and easy to reach and maneuver. Between the driver and passenger is a handy center console that has dual cupholders and a storage bin that's perfect to put the CDs in.

The rear seats fold down on the 2-door Trackers. On the 4-door models, there's a split-folding rear bench for those longer items you'd want to carry. And for the real energetic people, the Tracker can haul up to 1,500 pounds when equipped correctly. That's just about the weight of a jet ski and trailer.

The safety features are all there - daytime running lights, dual airbags, rear safe ty belt retractors for child seats, steel fuel tank shield plate and child security rear door locks.

The standard equipment list is long: allseason steel belted radials, 4-wheel-drive with front manual locking hube, power front disc brakes, power steering, stainless steel exhaust, dual outside mirrors, full-size lockable spare tire with covers, front and rear tow hooks, intermittent wipers, door storage bins, passenger assist grips, reclining cloth front bucket seats, tachometer and Scotchgard fabric protector.

The Tracker driven had a base price of $15,320. When 4-wheel anti-lock brakes, air conditioning, AM/FM cassette with four speakers, carpeted floor mats, body-side moldings and automatic locking front hubs were added, the price went up to $17,936. A bit steep.

The Tracker is built by CAMI Automotive in Ingersoll, Ontario, Canada. the same place the Suzuki Sidekick is built. CAMI is a joint venture between GM and Suzuki.

Rough ride, but fun to drive. Write Anne Fracassa online at avanti1054@aol.com.
