Strip mail vacancies soaring

Neighbors share memories, good times

There are new businesses sprouting up throughout the city, mainly in the Westland Center area, but the city administration reports that the vacancy rate in strip malls has soared to 19 percent.

BY LEONARD POGER EDITOR

Despite a strong economy and major recent retail developments, the city of Westland reported that its strip retail center vacancy rate has nearly doubled in less than three years, according to the city administration.

The vacancy rate, according to an Aug. 5 report to the city council, was 19 percent, compared to 10.4 percent in October 1993.

The survey of retail strip malls' vacancies doesn't include single-use buildings or Westland Center, said Scott Velduis, the city's economic growth director.

If the vacant large buildings are included, the rate would be substantially higher. While there is new construction throughout the north end of the city and some vacant building being reused by new tenants, there are several single-use buildings standing empty with large "for lease" signs in front of them in the Westland Center area.

Those are the former Forest City/Handy Andy home improvement/hardware business, on Central City Parkway west of Wayne Road, which closed this summer; the Source Club, on Newburgh and Warren Road, which shut its doors three years ago, within a year of its opening; and Phar-Mor, on Central City Parkway south of Warren Road, next to the Value City complex, which was shuttered shortly before it was scheduled to open several years ago.

SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS

High-visibility vacancies in strip malls are the former Marshall's specialty store at Westland Crossings, on Warren Road at Wayne Road, and the former Crowley's business in Wildwood Plaza, on Ford and Wildwood.

Veldhuis, in an interview Tuesday, said that there were some 400,000 square feet of new develop-

If you have been moving around a lot, you should know about this tax tip. Let's say that in the fast 2 years you have moved twice, selling two homes and buying a third.

You originally bought House A for $100.000, but then you sold it for $250,000 and bought House B for $275.000. That's $150,000 of taxable gain on house A that gets "rolled over" into House B. But what if you sold House B for $300,000 and bought House C for $325.000, both within 2 years of selling House A?

You have bought and sold two homes within a 24-month period. The tax law states that you must roll the taxable gains from the first house sold into the last house purchased in the 24-month period. In other words, the $150,000 taxable gain from House A does not rollover into House B, but "jumps" into House C. This means you only owe on the taxable gain from B to C - the $25,000, not the $150,000 gain from House A. (This example does not take into account selling costs).

ments in recent months since a survey of strip malls vacancies was done by a private consulting firm last year.

Those include one building housing Dick's Sporting Goods and MedMax, on Central City Parkway just east of Nankin Boulevard, the Red Robin Restaurant, on Warren Road and Central City Parkway, and the under-construction Circuit City electronics retail business, on Central City Parkway east of Nankin Boulevard.

All those are in the city's "downtown" section, which is dominated by Westland Center, at which a major, two-story Sears store is scheduled to have construction begin next month and be completed by the following November.

Some three miles away, Arbor Town Square is under construction on the southeast corner of Ann Arbor Trail and Middlebelt. Following site plan approval by the city council, the property owner/developer demolished the former Cooper School on the site and begin work on the retail strip center. Identified as tenants so far are Sears Hardware and Arbor Drugs, which will relocate from its current site across the street.

But the vacancy rate in strip malls continues to worry city officials.

A good example is the northeast corner of Warren Road and Middlebelt, which was the site of Danny's Supermarket, a drugstore, a hardware business and smaller businesses. While some small businesses remain, there are more vacancies than occupancies.

Meanwhile, the vacancy rate has been going up and down in recent years before soaring in the past 15 months.

Veldhuis, in his memo to the city council several weeks ago, said that the square footage vacancy rates of strip malls were 10.4 percent nearly six years ago; increased to 11.1 percent in 1991; 11.9 percent in 1992 before dropping to 10.4 percent in 1993; going back up to 12.4 percent in the spring of 1995; and the current 19 percent.

He said the survey doesn't include single use, free-standing buildings, medical suites, office buildings or the mall.

Veldhuis said that the city continues to receive contacts from potential users for the business vacancies.

"Many come in to talk to us and they go out and try to get financing," he said.

"We've done some marketing and advertising in the past,' referring to packets of community information and demographics .being sent to interested people.

"We have also had contacts with brokers," he said, who receive a commission when a deal is completed.

On the Phar-Mor building, "there is an occasional contact" but no real progress to report.

There have been no contacts on the vacant Forest City/Handy Andy building, he said.

When a broker calls about strip malls, the city provides them with information on leasing costs, available sites and other related information, Veldhuis said.

Decision time Retired teacher plans an appeal

BY MARIE CHESTNEY STAFF WRITER

Mary Authier, a retired Livonia Public Schools' teacher, wants to appeal a recent court years. It's a burden decision that, if it stands, will force her to pay the $175,000 bill for the stem-cell bone marrow transplant she had in 1993 in Henry Ford Hospital.

After a one-day hearing, Wayne County Circuit Judge Kaye Tertzag recently dismissed the Livonia Education Association's bid to overturn an arbitrator's ruling that went against Authier.

Through a lawsuit filed by the LEA, Authier sought to get the case back into arbitration so that it could be argued once again.

Authier, who lives in Dearborn Heights, said Tuesday she will ask the MEA to appeal Tertzag's ruling. An appeal would come from the MEA, not the LEA, said LEA president Karen Zyczynski.

"What am I going to do with a $175,000 bill?" Authier asked Wednesday, "This gives me another chance, another opportunity to find a way to take care of the bill."

The deadline for filing an appeal to the MEA is today. Even as the appeal deadline inched ever closer, Authier has wavered back and forth in her decision whether to go ahead with it.

"My strength is giving out," said Authier, who taught at Kennedy Elementary for 25

W. Grove Sandrock, MEA director of legal services, told Authier that, for the MEA to appeal, a precedent must have been set that would be harmful to a large number of teachers.

Authier is appealing the MEA's decision to the national teachers' union, which Sandrock told her she had the right to do. The appeal will be filed through the law firm of Hoekenga and Farrell of Southfield.

Authier's dispute with the district and its insurance carrier. Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Michigan, goes back to 1993.

Authier had been diagnosed with multiple myeloma, bone marrow cancer, in January 1992. To save her life, she opted for a stem-cell bone marrow transplant in November 1993.

Blue Cross considers this transplant experimental and

The grievance ended in arbitration.

In August 1995, an arbitrator ruled in the district's favor, saying that the "untimely" filing of the grievance went beyond the 15 days mandated by contract. Tertzag's ruling backed this view.

"The judge accepted the board's brief and supported the school district's position," said John Rennels, assistant superintendent for personnel. "The district is not required to pay any money. We believe we would have prevailed, even if we had argued the case on its merits. Timeliness was the issue focused on by the arbitrator."

In his decision, Tertzag said he must accept an arbitrator's finding. He cannot overturn it just because he disagrees with it, he said.

Additionally, Tertzag said, the court must accept an arbitrator's interpretation of the collective bargaining agreement, even if the arbitrator misread or misapplied it.

However, in this case, the arbitrator's ruling was a "reasonable interpretation" of the contract, the judge ruled.

LEA attorney Daniel Hoekenga said it's up to Henry Ford Hospital as to whether they will send a bill while the appeal to the MEA is in process.

"Henry Ford Hospital has been remarkably patient and caring,"

Area Dems make the most of convention contacts

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

CHICAGO - Keeping tabs on western Wayne County delegates at the Democratic National Convention:

"He has a lot of dealings with my boss," said Mike Duggan, deputy Wayne County executive and a Livonia resident.

"He (Pena) worked with us on the whole road issue with Gov. Engler," said Duggan, referring to the three-month fight in which the Republican governor tried to scoop up counties' and cities' shares of federal aid for state road projects.

"He was a key figure in making sure Wayne County got its road share. And he was a key in the $150 million expansion at Metro Airport."

Pena and Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros were the two Clinton cabinet stars at a Chrysler Corp.-UAW brunch Sunday honoring Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer _ a bash on the Navy Pier that drew even some General Motors executives.

But a trio of Detroit News reporters had to stand outside. "They weren't invited," said a Chrysler-UAW spokesman from Farmington Hills _ a former Detroit News reporter who refused to cross the picket line a convention, you want to see all 13 months ago.

A Free Press reporter explained that Chrysler had invited all the media, but the UAW insisted on uninviting the two Detroit papers, where several unions struck July 13, 1995.

Several snapshots were in reception lines, but there was a working conversation with Reich because his department has much to do with the School-to-Work Act Advisory Committee.

"I'm the only Michigan person and only county person appointed to it," Beard said. Her name was put up by an aide to former U.S. Rep. William D. Ford. Other members include a former Miss America, John F. Kennedy Jr., CEOs of big companies; students and parents.

The panel will advise the administration on the impletop Democratic officials on the issues, county and national.

"Tonight there's the Michigan delegation party at the Shedd Aquarium. Tomorrow morning there's the delegation breakfast (followed by a caucus).

"There's a luncheon for the National Association of County Officials. There's a reception from 2 to 4 called 'Women Win' at the Sheraton. That costs $125. This is costing me a lot.

"They're starting a foundationfor Ron Brown (Commerce secretary killed in an April plane crash). That's going to cost me another $100. I can't pay that out of the officer's expense fund because we don't have that any more," said Beard, whose last national convention was the 1980 Carter-Kennedy brouhaha in New York City.

For emphasis, Donna Clark, a 13th Congressional District delegate from Van Buren Township, added: "People don't realize how much it's going to cost."

Clark is a teacher's aide and member of the National Education Association, which has 400 delegates, the largest single bloc at the convention.

Local delegates praise speakers

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

CHICAGO - Michigan delegates said it was a toss-up between actor Christopher Reeve and the Bradys as to who gave the most memorable speech in the early days of the Democratic National Convention.

"Christopher Reeve _ he appealed to our sense of humanity," said delegate Terry Ahwal, a Livonia resident and executive assistant to Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara.

"He asked us to help others less fortunate. It was not only what he said but his being there," she said of the former Superman who was paralyzed in a fall from a horse.

"And Sarah Brady's message _ the guns, the Brady bill, banning assault weapons," Ahwal added. Jim Brady was Republican President Ronald Reagan's press secretary when he and Reagan were shot in 1983; Brady suffered brain damage.

Democrats invited the Bradys to speak because the so-called "Brady Bill" on gun control was signed by President Clinton.

"The most moving had to be Reeve," said MEA local 1 president Lu Battaglieri, delegate from Rochester Hills, "but the Bradys were most on topic and had first-hand experience (with gun wounds). It's a reminder we're all vulnerable."

"Sarah Brady, because it's hard to argue with experience," said retiring state Rep. Maxine Berman of Southfield.

"The police officer," said Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano, who listened hardest to Chicago patrolman Mike Robbins. "It's courageous to be shot 11 times and come back and talk about it."

"The actor, Edward James Olmos," said delegate Kay. Beard, a Wayne County commissioner from Westland, "because he talked about children. It was powerful."

"Bonior was pretty good," said Paul Policchio, executive vice president of the Service Employees International Union, representing Wayne sheriff's deputies and nursing home workers, among others.

House minority floor leader David Bonior of Macomb County linked the Republican convention to the 57th anniversary of The Wizard of Oz movie, quipping: "Buchanan doesn't have a brain, Gingrich doesn't have a heart, and Dole is on his way back to Kansas.'

"Christopher Reeve was most moving," said attorney Dick McKnight, Westland resident and chair of the 11th Congressional District, "because he said we're all family, and we all have value.'

"The Bradys and Reeve," said Mildred Jeffrey, grand dame of Michigan Democrats, the labor movement and Wayne State

"Hillary," said former state Sen. Lana Pollack of Ann Arbor. "It's not women's issues. It's women who are driving the issues of compassion. Women have much higher expectations from government than men. Women never accepted the notion that government is the problem. They have a different tight at the United Center, attitude."

Pollack said first lady Hillary Clinton was a major hit before standing-room-only crowds. "Women's support of Hillary shows they're confronting the lies head-on _ the gutter politics against that woman for four years."

"I'm busy taking Jessye Norman's picture," Rom said, delaying an interview. The Metropolitan Opera star was born in Georgia, attended the University of Michigan and visited the Michigan delegation on the floor.

"I have Hillary. Tipper (Gore, the vice president's wife). Sen. Barbara Boxer. Diane Feinstein. Barbara Mikulski. Donna Shalala. And that's just in the first hour and a half," said Rom, who attended women's forums and a group called Emily's list (Early Money Is Like Yeast _ it raises

"It disturbs me that Republicans claim family values for themselves when our president and incumbent Sen. Carl Levin stayed married to their spouses."

Security is super-extremely where delegates meet. It takes about four times as long to get through the gate as at the GOP convention in San Diego. In prime time Monday, it took 75 minutes to enter the gate.

One reason appeared to be that metal detectors were set high to detect the smallest objects. Quipped Michigan chair Mark Brewer: "A fellow ahead of me had on so many buttons that he had to take his shirt off."

Another, so the story went, is that a hacker broke into the Democratic National Committee's computer and copied the code for credentials. Delegates, guests and media were told not to encase their credentials in plastic so that security guards could use scanners on every ticket.

Party veteran attends first convention

BY, TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

CHICAGO - For 20 years, Bob Ficano has been politicking for Schoolcraft College trustee, for stale representative, for County Clerk Jim Killeen, for himself as sheriff.

But this is the first time the Livonia Democrat has gone to a national convention. In fact; his being sheriff for 13 years has been an impediment until 1996.

"The Democratic primary was so close to the national convention that to take off a week and a half _ it didn't make much sense." Ficano said. This year the primary was Aug. 6 and the convention began Aug. 25. "It's the first time I've had a chance to run (for a convention slot)."

Actually, Ficano is an alternate. County Executive Ed

Image improving Our schools attract students or several years, the Wayne-Westland school district has been experiencing a difficult time in the community relations field

12A(W)

At first, residents were upset with having to pay one of the highest property tax rates in the state, a problem that has been eliminated with the state's voter approval of the Proposal A school reform proposal in 1994.

But parents were still upset about lowerthan-expected academic test scores, the loss of busing and the pay-to-play policy for athletes and students taking part in extracurricular groups, such as band and orchestra. While busing and the free extracurricular programs were later restored, many families moved out of the district because of what they saw as a declining educational program.

But compared to several neighboring school districts. Wayne-Westland looks pretty good.

The proof is that 108 non-residents have applied to enroll in the district under the state's new "schools of choice" program.

Under the new program, local districts must have acted by June to either "opt in" or "opt out" of the schools of choice program, that is, agree to enroll non-resident students or to shut the door.

If the doors are open, then students may apply for openings in other districts in the same county, if there is space available.

The Wayne-Westland administration announced last week that 108 non-residents have applied and have been accepted for the new school year.

Most of them came from Inkster, Romulus and Detroit with a smattering from nearby Garden City, Livonia and Plymouth-Canton.

While the district may have its problems, there are enough parents and students who feel that the quality of education and the school environment offered by Wayne-Westland are superior than those in their home districts.

In addition to the boosting of the Wayne-Westland's reputation in getting so many nonresidents, the district will gain a financial advantage.

With the new 108 students and a loss of four students who enrolled in neighboring districts under the schools of choice program, Wayne-Westland will receive about $291,000 to partially offset the state aid loss from the declining enrollment.

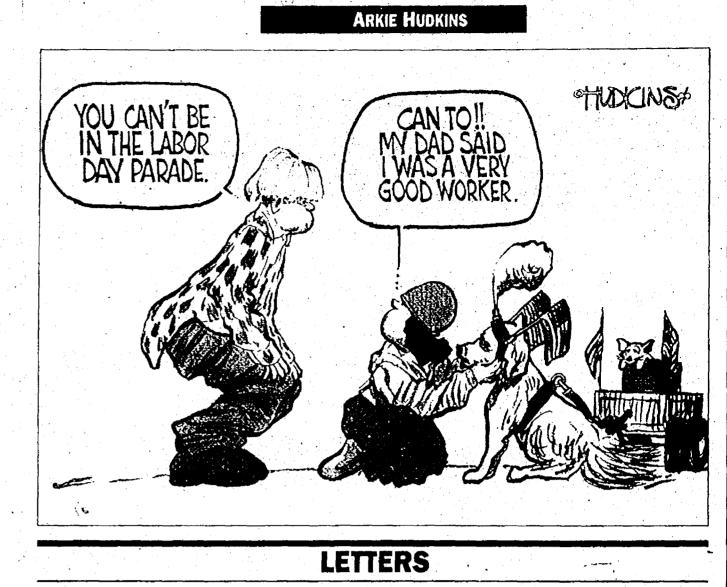

When the smoke clears, the district will gain valuable bragging rights in its fight to stem the enrollment decline caused by families looking elsewhere for better schools.

Hopefully, the district will use the schools of choice news to attract other non-resident families who want an improved quality of education for their sons or daughters.

Not tricked

s a senior citizen, I take issue with the Comments made in the Observer which accuse me and other seniors of being tricked by AMC theaters.

Anytime you manage to take care of yourself and your family for more than 50 years it means you must be doing something right.

It also means that it's a pretty rare day, indeed, when someone can pull the wool over your eyes and make you believe in things that they want you to believe in.

Personally, I'd like to thank the folks at AMC for showing an interest in what we, as hand and not support circuses which use animal acts and exploit them to the extent of death. These elephants are crying out for help. Please find it within your hearts to help these beautiful, exotic animals.

They are almost extinct in Africa.

A big thank you

O ur family would like to express a big thank you to all the Observer & Eccentric employ-ees who organized the Carrier Appreciation Picnic held at Kensington Metropark yesterday. Our family had a fantastic time! It's not often that a company would go to that extent to thank young people.Not only did the Observer & Eccentric staff arrive very early to reserve and set up the area, but they managed to keep several hundred kids organized with games and prizes throughout the day. The food and fun was never ending. I hope this will be an annual event since it brought carriers from so many cities together for a great time and gave all of us a chance to meet many people from the Observer & Eccentric we generally just talk to on the phone.

The days of the giant labor union parades and stirring speeches about workers' rights are long past. The day's meaning is lost on most Americans, even those who have benefited from the labor movement.

Recent years have been hard on unions. President Ronald Reagan's decertification of the air traffic controllers sent a chill throughout organized labor and emboldened many employers to take a strike with the intention of busting unions. The irony of this is that Reagan was once a union leader as president of the Screen Actors Guild.

In 1945, organized labor accounted for 35.4 percent of the American workforce. As recently as 1980, unions set a high for actual membership with 19,843,000 members, about 21.9 percent of the 1980 workforce. Last year, union members accounted for only 14.9 percent of the workforce and numbered 16,360,000.

As union membership has declined over the last 16 years; so has the real value of wages. But as reported by the U.S. Department of Labor, union wages are considerably higher than non-union wages. In 1995, the median weekly earnings for union members were $602 compared to a median of $447 for non-union workers. The department notes that other factors besides the lack of collective bargaining account for this discrepancy, but unions do provide a leverage that non-union workers don't have.

It is often said that unions have created their own problems: Many unions were infiltrated by or made deals with organized crime Many unions pushed for excessive wage and benefit increases when companies weren't prosperous enough to afford them. Many union leaders became as fat and happy as the management they golfed with. Many unions

All of these things are at least partially true...

But organized labor from the days of the conservative Samuel Gompers and the radical Eugene Debs has had the positive effect of lifting most Americans into the middle class and giving each generation the hope that they will prosper better than the generation before. Unions argued that if the creators of wealth were given their fair share, the economy would grow faster and stronger. It was an argument that even Henry Ford could understand when he instituted the $5 a day minimum so his workers could have the opportunity to buy the product they made.

Unions have been in the forefront on such major innovations as social security, health care benefits, shorter working hours, restrictions on child labor, safer working conditions, food and drug inspections, student loans and minimum wage laws. Some unions, notably the United Auto Workers, also took a lead in the civil rights struggle and in fighting to improve the economic status of blacks and women.

Many of those who complain about unions have benefited from the union movement. The wages they receive were won on the picket line, whether directly or because union wages set a new standard that drove up wages in non-union shops. The benefits we now receive as a matter of course from companies and the government were the fruits of long and often bloody battles.

This Labor Day we should take a moment to remember why we have the day off and why we can afford the steak on the grill and the back yard in the suburbs.

"Solidarity Forever" has lost its thunder, but we should never forget the legacy it has left.

senior citizens, had to say about their project.

They showed us respect for our ideas, listened to our concerns, and asked many questions about what we thought would make Livonia a great city.

» All of us who came to the city council meeting on Aug. 12 did so because we wanted to. Don't insult our intelligence by saying we were duped into going to the meeting.

As senior citizens, we go to movies too. And unlike many theaters, AMC provides us with senior discounts as well as nice service.

We look forward to the new movie theater and we are sure it will be bright spot for Livonia in the future.

Elephant abuse

am writing to let the public be aware of the abuse which elephants go through in a circus. When people take their kids, they see all the glamor, but they do not realize the malicious mishandling which goes on behind closed curtains. When elephants are being trained, the heartless, money-hungry trainers use bull hooks to force them to perform. These hooks are gouged deep into their skin on their bodies and face, causing them to bleed. This process is used until they learn their tricks. The elephants are left with scars on a day-to-day basis.

Once they begin traveling, they keep them chained up between 18-20 hours a day, 11 months out of the year, thus preventing them from moving.

Dozens of elephants and other circus animals die due to the abuse. There are laws to prohibit these violent acts, but the government is not willing to enforce them.

Now, it is up to the public to lend a helping Politics or pork?

A typical yet sad example of how today's political process of elections is conducted can be found in the results of the latest Wayne County parks millage proposal.

It seems more than ironic that the greatest financial donors to the Friends of the parks campaign were organizations that received some of the greatest contracts from the Wayne County Commissio

For one example, DeAngelis Landscaping in Woodhaven received $6.4 million and $72,000 contracts from the commission.

Their "donation" to the Friends of the Parks was $3,000. Is it any wonder that citizens are getting disgusted and frustrated?

Are we talking politics or porkitics? Anthony Brehler

POINTS OF VIEW

They 'choose' to dream the impossible dream

n the dream world of certain politicians, education is a huge market. Parents want freedom to choose the best schools for their kids. Poor kids, in particular, need this kind of market choice because rich families can pack up and move or send the kids to private schools.

In this dream world, "schools of choice" will wipe out bad schools, the way the car market eliminated DeSoto and LaSalle.

The dream world is inhabited by Gov. John Engler, Sen. Bill Schuette, R-Midland, and a few luminaries on the State Board of Education. Their ideology tells them free markets work, so they believe free markets work.

The facts are far different.

Back in the 1980s when Metropolitan Fund and the late Chuck Muer were pushing school choice, Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich was brought into town to explain his state's system. Perpich revealed that only 1 to 4 percent of parents ever wanted school choice. He thought choice was a good idea, but mathematically not particularly important.

For years, Michigan has had a choice system called property transfers. It is used by families who live on the edge of school district A but would rather be in district B.

These cases go before an administrative law judge in Lansing and then to the State Board of Education. Most transfers involve rural residents; Eaton, Clinton and Livingston counties generate many cases. This company has newspapers in those counties. So when cases arise, I read the judge's report and often the transcripts from cover to cover.

The politicians who live in a dream world don't. If Tim Kelly, Engler's emissary to the State Board, reads them, he fails to tell the boss about it. In reality, here is why parents exercise choice by seeking property transfers from district A to B:

■ Dad and mom work in town B. If Junior gets sick, it's less disruptive to pick him up from B school than to backtrack 20 miles to A school.

Dad and mom shop and bank in town B.

■ Dad and mom go to church in town B, they grew up in town B, and their social contacts are there.

The grandparents, aunts and relatives all live in town B and are available to take in the kids if the parents have to work overtime.

Dad died, mom remarried and moved, but the kids want to stay in the school where their friends go. The oldest boy is taking swimming lessons, and the other district doesn't have a pool.

The family lives in district A, but district B's schools are eight miles closer, and the kids wouldn't have to waste so much time on the bus if the property were in district B.

The family really wanted to be in district B, and the Realtor told them the house was in B, but they didn't find out until months later the house was really in A.

Very, very rarely does a parent testify that the school program is better in district B. And when mom says so, she usually is referring to a particular teacher who can handle her kid's problem.

That is the real world. Nothing about market forces and competition and all that hogwash.

This is not to suggest parents have poor reasons for requesting "choice" through property transfers. Their reasons are excellent and practical. The administrative law judge and the State Board members who read the transcripts most often grant the transfer.

The point is that the requests have nothing to do with the dream world of market forces.

Survey after survey has revealed that the overwhelming bulk of parents are most interested in having their kids attend the neighborhood school.

If there's a problem with the neighborhood school, they demand the elected school board – not mythical market forces – fix it.

Tim Richard reports on the local implications of state and regional events.

Their secessionist theories are misguided and faulty

BY MEL KAPLANI GUEST COLUMNIST

ike human mosquitoes swarming to suck the lifeblood out of our economy, Wayne County secessionists are misleading their sympathizers in a misguided effort to create four county governments where only one has gone before.

One of those individuals, Jeff Schroder of Northville, actually believes he can end affirmative action, a court-ordered remedy for racial prejudice, by seceding from Wayne County, Another, self-described "patriot" Leonard Mannausa of Brownstown, claims more government means more responsive government. A third, Greg Theokas of Grosse Pointe Park, thinks more government would bring more efficient government. All of the solution is replacing non-responsive inefficient elected county representatives with someone better-suited and more able to perform the task. Otherwise, given three new counties, we'd have four times as many problems as we have now.

On background, Wayne County has been in existence with its present boundaries since 1827. The old Wayne County Board of Supervisors was formed in 1851 and had grown to 135 members by 1966 when the Supreme Court ruled that one-person, one-vote representation must be established. That led to creation of a 27-member county board of commissioners with both legislative and executive powers.

In 1981, voters approved a new county charter with an elected county executive, reducing the number of commissioners from 27 to 15, retain-commission in 1984 and the drain commissioner in 1986.

Today, Wayne County operates a sheriff department and jail; circuit, probate and juvenile courts; departments of education, health, social services, environment, economic development, libraries, parks, roads and public services, elections and treasury; and one of the largest airports in the country; just to name a few.

All those services require personnel, buildings and equipment which would be senselessly duplicated at great expense if we divided one county into two or more. Only the naive would believe such a division could cost less than taxpayers now provide for those same services, none of which could become more responsive if we fine-tuned the charter we have instead of starting over from scratch. We need smaller, more efficient government, no new bureaucracies needing more taxes.

One of the ways we can improve is by enacting term limitations for all elected county officials. As a result, they would remain closer to the people they serve instead of becoming imperialists bent on self-promotion.

We should adopt zero-based budgeting, examining every department every year to see how much they spent and what taxpayers received in return for their money, comparing that with the cost of privatizing services to save money and reduce the power of special interests.

We need to streamline and depoliticize the county commission, reducing it from 15 to nine members elected at-large instead of from districts, as non-partisan citizens instead of career politicians. Once elected, commissioners should either work full time or receive parttime pay and reduced staffing for the part-time work they now do.

Finally, primary elections for county officials should be held in September instead of August to improve voter participation. August primaries are nothing more than private political conventions held at public expense, serving only to limit choice and reduce the influence of the majority who foot the bill.

Enacting such changes by charter revision would save millions of dollars in salary and benefits, reduce spending and achieve more representative, responsive county government. Following the lead of secessionists with ulterior motives centered around racial division will only create more of the same problems they now decry.

them are sadly mistaken if not beguiling.

If the real problem is inefficient, non-responsive county government, ing an elected prosecuting attorney, clerk, sheriff, treasurer, drain commissioner and register of deeds.

graduated from high school way back in 1956. Our class was small, only 58, and over the years seven have died and another eight have just kind of disappeared.

But our 40th class reunion last weekend was well-attended; we had 25 middle-aged classmates Saturday night at dinner, including one who came all the way from Singapore.

The event gave me the chance to test a theory that's occurred to me as I've moved through the years: As people get older, they become more and more like themselves. When kids graduate from high school, for example, who they are can be glimpsed, but when they reach middle age the experiences of the years seem to amplify and sharpen the original tendencies of character.

It's true. Dave, the red-haired scrappy ball player in school, had grown a beard and won a wife, but he was even more scrappy and talking up a blue streak. Mike, the tall, gangling brain of the class was still tall and gangling, but now just a bit stooped and focused as a successful professor at the University of North Carolina. Wendy, a glamour girl when we graduated, wore lovely sophisticated clothes that showed off her still-beautiful figure and sunny personality.

My reunion also came a poignant time. My son, Nathan, starts his own high school career next week when he enters ninth grade. As I listened to my classmates reminisce, I was struck at what a different world Nathan will be entering than the one I had known 40 years earlier.

Different and far more dangerous.

Of course, there are still cars driven too fast by teen-agers who still think they are immortal. But even those of us who were sexually active in high school — only a tiny minority ever went beyond petting — never thought about AIDS.

And as for substance abuse, the worst I ever heard about in my class was when some kids bought a bottle of blueberry brandy on our senior trip to New York: Nathan faces an entire pharmacopoeia of addictive and threatening drugs and a youth culture that is starting to reglamorize getting hooked.

Forty years ago, the tolerable bounds of mischief seem laughably mild today. The event recalled with greatest shame over the weekend was electing the ugliest girl in the class to be homecoming queen. Our homeroom teacher, bombs out of egg shells and threw them on the walls of a rival school.

Today, it seems unsurprising for kids to slash the tire on an entire fleet of school buses or to try to burn down a school building. If an important part of a culture is defined by the limits to shame, we're living in an entirely different world than the one of my youth.

Maybe I lived in a protected world 40 years ago — I grew up in Ann Arbor — but there was very little sense of the racial and ethnic divisions that so slash and crosshatch our society today. Sure, there were Jewish and Asian and African-American kids in our school, but it wasn't until I went off to college that I was faced with the stereotypes that Jewish people were pushy and Asians were brains and African-Americans couldn't be trusted.

Last week, Nathan, with the casual, stereotyped wisdom of a 14-year-old in today's world, told Kathy and me that someone was a "nice, pushy Jewish lady." Forty years ago, I never would have known or noticed.

And, of course, 40 years ago we had none of the pop culture that so efficiently infests our, society today through broad band technology. We had radio and fuzzy black and white television when I graduated; Nathan has VCRs, CD-ROM computer games, MTV, Walkman and Discman and endless TV.

Thinking about the world that my son will be facing next week, I feel a slight chill of worry. Maybe I'm getting old and the days of my youth look innocent and happy when bathed in the bright gauzy moonlight of 40 years. But I'm going to be praying for my son and his safety a lot over the next few years.

Is a Michigan MBA that important?

Should we tell the world how important our MBA program is by changing the University logo? We probably couldn't get away with it, but many graduates (and even more potential employers) think that a Master's Degree in Business Administration from the University of Michigan is among the strongest in the field. Good news for you.

The School of Management now offers two graduate degree programs at the Dearborn campus. There is a dual-degree program leading to both the Master of Business Administration and Master of Science in Engineering—Industrial and Systems Engineering. Then there is the MBA program which is designed as a crossover vehicle for those whose undergraduate degrees are in areas other than business administration.

Of course, with the Dearborn campus, things are even more convenient for many students. Not easier, just more convenient. After all, this is the University of Michigan. Go Blue!

From Uof M-Dearborn. Two great choices for one great future!

Ross: Dems stake out middle ground

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

CHICAGO - Democrats are turning middle class and to the middle-of-the-road even as Republicans veer to the hard right, says platform builder Doug Ross.

"The national Democratic Party put 25 super-delegates on the platform committee to make sure the president's views would be strongly represented," said Ross, the West Bloomfield resident who was assistant secretary of Labor in Bill Clinton's administration until last fall.

"All along we tried to make sure the party connects with the great American middle class and those who aspire to the middle class.

"Democrats drifted away from the great middle class," said Ross, pointing to these differences between the 1984-88 platforms and the 1996 platform on which Clinton is seeking reelection:

calls for reducing government even more and cutting taxes.

The '80s called for every imaginable program versus giving people the tools to solve their own problems.

The '80s stressed the rights of criminals. This one stresses the rights of victims.

"On education, we call for charter schools, public school choice and performance standards to keep good teachers and remove bad ones. The earlier platforms called for more money for the educational status quo.

"What most Michiganians want is government that is supportive of economic growth, a public spending. This platform ernment, and social and cultural tolerance.

"There has been a tendency by the left to use government to manage the economy, and for the right to use government to manage social life. But there's no reason economic growth and tolerance cannot be compatible."

Isn't that Libertarian talk? "Libertarians are strong on markets and tolerance," said Ross, "but they have no sense of community to create a safety net. It (Libertarian ideology) doesn't reflect that we're interdependent."

Ross has come a long way since the 1970s, when he led the Michigan Consumers Lobby effort to remove the sales tax on food and drugs. He served a term in the Michigan Senate and worked in both the Commerce and Labor departments in Gov. James Blanchard's terms (1983-90)

As rumored, he's pondering a run for governor in 1998.

"I'm connected to a think tank called the Progressive Foundation. And I'm teaching in the school of public policy at the University of Michigan.

"Over the next two months, my priorities are 1) the president's reelection, 2) Sen. Carl Levin's reelection and 3) the state House of Representatives. "I'm seriously thinking about it (governor). I'll make some decisions soon after the election," Ross said.

Union leader: Labor won't desert Clinton

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

CHICAGO — "I don't think labor could be happier," said Paul Policchio, Novi resident, Democratic delegate and executive vice president of the Service Employees International Union.

"The whole platform focuses on working people, the bread-andbutter issues. That's the heart and soul of labor. Jobs. Education. Health care. Streamlining government.

"The Democratic Party (of the '80s) went on a path that diverged from the center. But now (Republican nominee Bob) Dole will be hard-pressed to peel off working class votes as Reagan did. Inflation is so low that Many Michiganians don't spend the day with the state delegation, as Republicans do. Democrats identify with interest groups like labor, women, educators, ethnic groups, education and so on.

"We have our own union caucus at the Hyatt. Now we're linking to individual unions. We heard (Labor Secretary Robert) Reich the other day on issues relating to working people."

Policchio serves the Midwest branch of one of the least known unions of both public and private employees. Say "union" and most people picture the older industrial unions like auto, steel, mine and rubber workers. "We're diverse. KAREN MEIER

Van snafu no problem

Hi, everybody! It's good to be back. And I must say, it was good to be away, too. I had some great fun with my family these past three weeks. We were hoarding fun because those rainy, cold, gray days and school schedules, and breakfast and dinner without the sun are just around the corner.

So we had picnics. We went to a circus. To the zoo. To a lake. We stayed home to pitch a tent in the yard and make S'mores on the grill. We read books on the front porch. We watched a very dumb movie in the family room and ate popcorn. And rode a Ferris wheel. And oldest son Tony and I played four-handed piano songs while crickets outside in the yard sang cricket songs. And we did a bunch of other stuff too.

Now, as my mother would say, "You got it out of your system." But I didn't really. Call me greedy, but I'll never get time with my family "out of my system." What I will do is come back to reality. And I'll come back refreshed and reenergized. Kind of like a battery.

As a matter of fact, just like a battery. Just like the battery in our van that got all drained recently, and that I (and I'm so proud to say this) recharged myself without blowing anyone or anything up.

Training for the big ride: On Sept. 2, Nick O'Shea (left) and the Rev. Sylvester Taube will leave from St. John's Family and Life Center in Plymouth Township on a 1,600-mile bike trip to Texas.

> The Retrouvaille program saved Nick | Dearborn Heights, saving the | trate on just that and realize

This happened just the other day. Husband Ron was out of town on business for a few days so I guess you could say I was in "charge."

I suppose a dead battery shouldn't have presented much of a problem, or challenge, or scare, but I once witnessed a car battery explosion during a jump start. The explosion happened to someone very close to me, both in proximity and heart. It was horrible. The noise, the blast, the smell. It was very humbling and scary. And that was 12 years ago. But the memory has given me a rather enormous respect for automotive batteries.

Anyway, when I went outside on this recent night to check on the van windows to be sure they were up before going to bed, my heart sank. The dome light was on inside the van. And it'd been eight hours since anyone had been in there.

I went back inside my husbandless house to get the keys. I whispered incantations, "Please start, oh trusty old van. Please start. I don't know much about getting you to start if you refuse me. So please, just start."

I climbed in behind the steering wheel. I put the key in. And turned it. Vrump. Click. Silence.

All righty then. I'll figure this out. Carmen has to be at gymnastics practice in Westland at 8 a.m. Baby Steven has school up at Five Mile and Haggerty at 9:30 a.m. The vegetable market is six miles from my driveway and dinner tomorrow without vegetables wouldn't be responsible. I'll figure this out. I'll get this van to start. I will.

Tony suggested the battery trickle charger electric gizmo that sits among many other gizmos in the "Don't Touch This Stuff If You Don't Know What You're Doing" place. I gulped.

"Should we?" I asked him.

"Well, yeah. I guess. That's what it's for," he offered.

I shrugged.

So at 11 p.m. we did it. We stepped into the Zone and fetched the Gizmo. We'd gone this far, we might as well see it through now.

There were directions in the Gizmo box. Unfortunately, they'd been written by a presumptuous expert who presumed a little too much. Like the gizmo user knowing what an engine block looks like. Is it a block? Does the engine sit on a block? Is the engine shaped like a block? Am I a blockhead? The instructions also presumed I know a carburetor on sight. These things are not obvious, they are not labeled under the hood, or in the owner's manual. I looked. And fuel line? There are tons of lines and tubes and hoses, none of them labeled. And if I'm messing with electricity and battery acid and positive charges and negative charges I'm going to need labels. I was getting late now. My eyes were itchy and blurry. My mind was refusing to process information sensibly. I turned away from the useless vehicle, picked the gizmo up that could save its life, put it safely away, and resigned. For the night. I'd face this in the early morning. After resting. It would all make sense in the morning.

Guess what? It didn't. But in the light of day I remembered, I wasn't a blockhead. I could do this. And sure enough, after one false start (I put the negative clip on a painted part of the frame), I got the trickle gizmo battery charger to perform its three-hour magic. Not in time for me to get Carmen to gymnastics, my friend Nancy got her, but in time for Steven's school and in time for dinner vegetables,

The O'Sheas, who've been married 39 years, and Taube are asking people to donate one penny a mile. Although Catholic in origin and orientation, the weekend experience followed by six meetings is open to married couples regardless of religious background. Funds from the bike trip will go toward scholarships for those unable to afford the $75 registration fee and $350 cost due at the end of the weekend.

"No one's ever turned away because of money. Sometimes couples are proud. They're embarrassed. That's why we're trying to establish a scholarship fund," Virginia O'Shea said.

The trio has already raised $5,000 from Chrysler-UAW Local 412, the Knights of Columbus Council, and St. Columban in Birmingham. The use of the van was donated by Sherry Crepeau of effort hundreds of dollars.

Retrouvaille is a worldwide program. After attending the national conference in Texas, the O'Sheas and Taube will travel to Ireland, Nick's birthplace, to train others in helping troubled marriages the Retrouvaille way.

Founded in Quebec in 1977, the program was presented to Frenchspeaking couples as the "Look Again." Translated into English by a Retrouvaille community in Toronto, the program began spreading throughout Canada and the United States in 1982. By this time. it became even more effective after the Toronto community strengthened the content and developed post-weekend meetings. In 1991, the name was changed to Retrouvaille, a French word meaning rediscovery.

Locally, couples participate in programs held six times a year at hotels. Each couple has their own room, They're not asked to share their stories. Instead, peers share theirs. The 2 1/2-day program is presented by a team of married couples and a priest. Each couple is assigned a number to maintain their anonymity.

"We're not preaching to them. We're telling them our story. What we do is teach them how to share feelings and listen to one another. Because this is a protected environment, they're able to concen-there's something worth salvaging," said Nick O'Shea, a Chrysler retiree.

"The only thing they have to share is with their spouse," Taube said. "For me, it's extremely rewarding when you see the transformation. I'm convinced couples choose the right people to marry. I'm just as convinced too many get divorced so easy. Love takes commitment and work."

A follow-up study done two years after completing the program shows more than 80 percent of couples remain together or have reunited after divorce.

Mike and Sue Williams of Waterford went through the Retrouvaille program in October of 1995. Married for four years, they were having communication problems.

"Retrouvaille gave us the tools to focus on feelings instead of thoughts and opinions, and the ability of communicating those to our spouse. What we learned there continues to help the healing and growth of our marriage everyday," said Sue Williams, 48.

Mike Williams said in addition to that, "We learned love is a decision. Every morning now we tell each other, I made a decision to love you today."

Zonta Club fashion show full of flair

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO STAFF WRITER

Kathleen Diggs describes the Zonta Club of Northwest Wayne County Area's fashion show on Wednesday, Sept. 18, as a working woman-friendly event.

"We've had other fashion shows since the club started in 1979, but this is the second year we've done it in this manner, for the working woman," said Diggs, a Plymouth resident and Zonta Club treasurer.

"They can come on their way home, have dessert and mingle with some other interesting people, view some fashions, do some shopping and head home."

Held at the Parisian store at Laurel Park in Livonia, "Fashion Flair II" begins at 6:30 p.m. with doors opening at 6:15 p.m. Tickets are $20, and include desserts from Confectionately Yours, and flavored coffees.

Moderation Management helps problem drinkers people beginning to abuse alcohol, called Moderation Management (MM), has started a new chapter in the Detroit area.

Labeled as a revolutionary and needed early recovery option by a growing number of experts in the alcohol abuse field, Moderation Management is the brainchild of Audrey Kishline of Ann Arbor.

She started MM two years ago with a handful of people. Thereare now 60 chapters in 38 states, with the latest chapter starting in Farmington Hills.

A homemaker, mother of two young children and problem drinker, she sought help from a treatment center 10 years ago when she began to drink at harmful levels on a daily basis. As a woman with already low

A national support network for ing that she was misdiagnosed as an alcoholic, and that moderation programs were common in other countries, she chose to moderate her own drinking. Frustrated that there were no self-help groups available for people who want ongoing support to reduce their drinking and want to find moderation and balance in all areas of their lives, she founded her own group.

> MM's key concept is that many beginning problem drinkers can reduce alcohol consumption and avoid developing alcoholism and other health problems. That flies in the face of traditional therapies for alcohol-related problems which treat all alcohol abusers as alcoholics regardless of the level of problems experienced and are based on total abstinence from alcohol.

Kishline argues that there is a sumption.

Unlike Canada or the United Kingdom, there are very few professional programs in the United States designed specifically for the early problem drinker. One such program, DrinkWise, is available at the University of Michigan Medical Center at Ann Arbor and at several Oakwood Hospital and clinic locations. The Ann Arbor location reports that 70 percent of its participants have dropped their consumption from 21 drinks to less than seven drinks per week.

Professionals on MM's advisory board cite studies showing that moderation or a reduced drinking goal is a reasonable and maintainable recovery goal for many people who address a drinking problem at a very early stage. They believe that problem drinkers should be given the choice and support to attain either moderation or abstinence, Kishline said.

"There is agreement that total abstinence is the only choice for those who have reached severe stages of alcohol dependency,' Kishline said. "Problem drinkers who are not successful with moderation in MM are encouraged to go on to an abstinence-based program."

People who come to MM meetings are provided with information about alcohol and moderate drinking limits, behavior modification techniques, support from other members, and are encouraged to take small steps toward other positive lifestyle changes, such as diet, exercise and reducing stress.

One of the most important strengths of the program, according to Kishline, is that 30 percent of MM members go on to abstinence-based programs such as AA, Women for Sobriety, or SMART Recovery. She has received supportive letters and calls from members of AA with long-term sobriety who believe that those who have come to AA by way of MM are more serious about the necessity of remaining sober, although many people in the treatment industry appear to be outraged by MM precepts, Kishline said.

The Farmington MM group meets 7-8 p.m. every Thursday in the Marge Brown Room of the Universalist Unitarian Church, 25301 Halsted, between Grand River and 11 Mile Road. For more information, call Moderation Management at (313) 677-6007.

Chargers ready to play

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

If Livonia Churchill's football fortunes are going to change, a veteran offensive line could provide the kick-start.

"We'll be an I-formation team with some tweaking from what we've done in the past," Churchill fifth-year coach Steve Naumcheff said. "We expect to score when we get inside the red zone (20-yard line).

"We have to control the ball, and to do that we've got to get first some first downs to get us going. We're not a flash and dash type of team. Out of the box we have to push their big guys out to get some yardage."

Churchill's football woes during the 1990s are well documented. The Chargers are 1-53 during the decade, including backto-back winless seasons. They have lost 19 straight dating back to 1993 (against Farmington). What separates this Churchill team from others?

"I'd say the quiet persistence that our veterans are offering the program/' Naumcheff said. "From our vets to our seniors, they've done it throughout the year. We're really a bunch of no names with no returning all-leaguers. But they're confident as a team and we'll do our maximum, which is all you can ask for."

The offensive line returns captain Nic Wight, a 6-foot-1, 190-pound senior who moves from center to tackle.

The other returnees include senior tackle Bob Fowler (6-1, 230) and senior guard and cocaptain Joe Ramlawi (5-7, 205). Junior Brett Wells (6-2, 210) will start at the other guard.

The center slot is up for grabs between two sophomores Brian Demos (6-0, 170) and Jon Schwartz (5-10, 170), along with senior Eric Weir (6-1, 225).

"The offensive line is our strong suit as far as experience,' Naumcheff said. "And because of our veterans on the offensive line, that's where we've got to hang our hat and control the ball, along with doing a good job on special teams."

Calling the Charger signals will be senior co-captain Nathan Jerome (6-1, 160), a starter since the fifth game of his sophomore season.

"He has the versatility to throw and run," Naumcheff said. "He's a competitor and his knowledge of the game continues to grow. He's been through a lot of tough experiences. He has a lot of game experience and has shown a lot of resilience."

With all-purpose leader Todd Wilson having transferred last January to nearby Stevenson, the Chargers will depend on senior David Murphy (5-11, 175), who has been plagued by injuries the past two seasons, to fill the void at running back.

Sophomore Ryan Kearney (6-0, 150), the Western Lakes Activities Association 110-meter hurdles champ as a freshman, will be the wingback.

Another sophomore, Carey Tulik (6-0, 185), along with senior Vinnie Ascione (6-0, 180) will contest for the fullback job, according to Naumcheff.

The wide receiver spot will be shared by senior returnee Matt McCormick (6-1, 175), junior Dave Derigiotis (5-9, 180) and junior Pat Gruska (6-2, 180).

Both Brian Scudds (5-10, 210) and Nick McGowan (5-9, 150), a pair of seniors, return at tight end.

Defensively, the Chargers will play a 5-2.

Most notable losses to graduation were linebackers George Shanlikian, a first-team All-Observer pick, and Jason Kopchak. Both are members of the Wayne State University team.

"That position is wide open," Naumcheff said. "Demos, Scudds and (senior) Brandon Henderson (5-9, 190) are in the forefront. And junior Nick Lamb (5-10,. 190) is also vying."

The defensive front-three will include Ascione, senior Nate

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Working OT

Fordson's late rally sinks Spartans, 54-47

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

Livonia Stevenson's opener was spoiled Tuesday as Dearborn Fordson's Lady Tractors roared back-for a 54-47 girls basketball overtime win.

The host Spartans led most of the way until Fordson, last year's Mega-Red Division cochampions, put on a late spurt behind the play of sisters Zeinab and Nazek Mroueh.

The 5-foot-10 Zeinab, a bruising three-year starter at center, finished with a game-high 26 points and 18 rebounds. She also made a clutch basket inside with only seven seconds remaining in regulation to knot the count at 41-all.

Then Nazek, who was quiet most of the night, came alive during four-minute extra session by scoring eight of her 10 points, including a long triple with 1:56 left to give the Lady Tractors a five-point cushion.

"I kept telling our girls during the timeouts that we need to get over this hump," Fordson coach Guy Del Guidice said. "We played catch-up the whole game. "When we went to our fullcourt man-to-man pressure it turned it around for us and maybe it made them play faster than they like. For the first game we showed a lot of character."

Stevenson, which led by as many as eight points during the third quarter, shot a miserable eight of 40 from the field over the final 20 minutes.

"Part of it was poor shot selection and we weren't crashing the boards like we had earlier in the game," said Stevenson coach Wayne Henry. "We just got soft on the boards. And they (Fordson) were able to get put-backs and free throws."

The Spartans, however, led 40-37 on a basket by Carolyn Courtright with 1:26 to play, but Jessica Smith countered with a give-and-go hoop off a set-play coming out of a timeout with 1:04 to go.

Stevenson's Melissa Backus split a pair of free throws with just under 33 seconds remaining to give her team a two-point advantage.

Fordson then threw the ball away 13 seconds later, but regained possession after the trail official ruled the ball had been deflected.

Mrouch then sent the game into OT with her clutch hoop.

"Zeinab had just two points last year against this team (Stevenson) and wanted to prove something," Del Guidice said. "She hurt her shoulder early diving for a loose ball and most girls would have come out, but not Zeinab.'

Stevenson, with virtually a brand new starting lineup, had a more balanced scoring attack.

Backus, Lindsay Wilhelm and Gina Palmeri each tallied nine, while Jackie McClowry chipped in with eight. Courtright added six.

"Even though we had the lead, we weren't doing anything dominating enough for the other team to roll over and play dead," Henry said. "They were still very much in the game."

The Spartans also could have put it away at the free throw line, but shot only 13 of 29 (44.8) percent). But Fordson was just as inept from the stripe, canning just 11 of 27 (40.7 percent).

"Basically we have five new starters on the floor," Henry said. "I was pleased with the way they played most of the game and I think the people in the stands were surprised with the way they played.

"We did some good things offensively, but when you experience the pressure without the a lot of varsity experience, theywere forced to make some bad decisions.

"We just have to be patient because of the inexperience factor."

Mroueh scored all 10 of Fordson's points in the opening quarter, but only had a total of 12 during the next three periods. She added four in OT.

"Part of it was fronting her early-on," Henry said. "Palmeri had some deflections, but then they made better lob passes and the weak-side help was not there. The girls guarding her understood who they had to stop. but not the rest of the team."

Lake Erie paradise for area walleye anglers share of tasty "eaters." But if you're after a little more size in your catch consider taking a one-hour drive up highway 401 in Canada and take a fishing trip into the central basin of Lake Erie.

"It's a fisherman's paradise.

It's a dream come true. I've never seen anything like it." raved Rochester resident Harold Leider, founder of the Fishing Buddys fishing club, after returning from a recent fishing trip out of Erieau, Ontario. "There are so many fish out there and they're all big. Our boat had six people in it and we caught 28 fish. The biggest was just over nine-pounds and the smallest was around three. It's really unbelievable."

Redford's Bob "Hangman" Mitchel has been fishing the central basin for years. He runs a summer series of fishing derbies headquartered out of the Slip-In Lounge in Erieau. He concurs wholeheartedly with Lieder's assessment of the walleye fishing in that area of Lake Erie.

"It's a great fishery out there and its really not that far from home," explained Mitchel. "They have an unlimited food source and it's not over-fished. It's nothing to catch a limit, the question is how big will the fish be."

A firsthand look

Mitchel has been telling meabout the great fishing in Erieau for a year now but it always seemed like a long trip. After Leider's story and an invitation from Mitchel, I decided to check it out.

Erieau is located just 67 miles northeast of the Ambassador Bridge on the northern shore of Lake Erie. The trip takes just over an hour from the bridge.

Upon arriving in Erieau on Sunday afternoon and purchasing a Canadian fishing license ($8 American for a daily) we immediately noticed that a brisk wind was quickly gaining velocity. An hour later, the waves had rolled themselves into to fourand five-footers and our afternoon outing was canceled. We were able to check the catches of some of the boats returning to dock from a morning outing, however, and the creels were very impressive. 🕚

The boat we were supposed to take out in the afternoon had a crew of five for the morning trip and returned to the dock with 19 walleye and one steelhead. The biggest fish was just over eight pounds. Five others were better than six pounds each and another seven fish were over four pounds each. The rest were between three and four pounds and just one was less then three pounds, or what we call an "eater" here in the states.

Burt Cummings, owner of Custom Tackle, and John Menhart, owner of The Fishin' Hole in Taylor, braved the wind and wayes in the morning and managed to bring five walleye to the dock: a six-pounder, two fourpounders and two "eaters." "This is the first time all summer we haven't caught a limit," admitted Menhart.

Unique techniques

Because of limited access, the central basin of Lake Erie isn't fished as hard as the western basin, which is easily accesible from ports in Michigan, Ohio and Ontario. Access is limited to a few marinas in Ontario and a trip to the "hot spots" would be upwards of 50 miles from Ohio.

The secret, according to Mitchel, is to fish deep. Most of the larger fish are caught 40- to 60-feet down:

"It's a unique style for walleye fishing," explained Mitchel. "It's deep-water, power trolling. You're trolling two-and-a-half to five-miles per hour and using downriggers, Dipsy Divers and planer boards in front of spoons and deep-running plugs. The technique seems more suitable for salmon fishing, but produces huge walleye."

*C5

The final derby of the season will be held in Érieau on Sept. 14.15. The entry fee is $12 per angler, per day. The derby pays five places for weight each day as well as daily jackpots for the biggest walleye, steelhead and sheephead. Launching facilities and overnight slips are available in Erieau. Call Mitchel daily at (313) 287-4020 to register for the derby or for more information on Erieau walleye fishing.

Mitchel is also available for seminars and guided fishing trips.

Anglers and hunters are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI. 48009. Fax information to (810) 644-1314 or call Bill Parker evenings at (810) 901-2573.

Hospitals team up to offer free immunizations

Proper immunizations can prevent serious childhood disease. That's why area hospitals, the county health department and other sponsors are joining together to make Saturday, Sept. 7 a special day.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITEF

As part of the statewide campaign to "Immunize Your Little Michigander," the Michigan Department of Community Health, Wayne County Health Department, local hospitals, McDonald's, Meijer, Blue Cross Blue Shield and other sponsors are joining together to. offer free immunizations on "Super Saturday."

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 7, the following locations will accept walk-ins: Oakwood Healthcare Center, 2345 Merriman in Westland; Mission Health Center, 37595 W. Seven Mile, Livonia; and Westside OB/GYN, 5800 N. Lilley Road, Canton. Pre-registration is not required. Parents should bring their child's immunization record. "Super Saturday" is targeting ages birth to 2 but children of any age will be immunized. For more information, call 1-800-26-BIRTH. "The purpose is to increase the number of children vaccinated from age 0-2 because the state came in dead-last last year nationally. The reason is, it's so hard to reach children because they're not in school," said Jan Arsanault, Wayne County Health Department immunization coordinator.

"Proper immunization can prevent serious childhood diseases which can be life-threatening and fatal to children. Although vaccines are available we still see cases of measles, mumps and rubella. We live in a small world these days. People are coming in from other countries with childhood diseases. We have to maintain the level of vaccinations."

According to Arsanault by age 2 children need four DPT, three Hepatitis B, three oral polio, four HIB and one measles, mumps and rubella. Measles may not seem dangerous but it can cause serious complications such as pneumonia, and brain inflammations leading to convulsions, hearing loss and mental retardation.

During Donald Lawrenchuk's 14 years as medical director of the Wayne County Health Department, one of the saddest and most preventable deaths he documented was that of a little girl who had not been immunized against measles. The child's father had signed a personal waiver during the 1989-91 outbreak which nationwide caused more than 130 deaths, half of whom were young children. Two of every 1,000 children who catch measles dies from it. Add to the high numbers of children unvaccinated because of waivers, the fact that vaccines on average are only 95 percent effective and you begin to see the danger.

Parents are encouraged to call, come and get their children up to date. Under age 2, only 64 percent of Michigan children are vaccinated, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

"The national average is 75 percent," said St. Mary Hospital's wellness program coordinator Marianne Simancek, a registered nurse.

St. Mary Hospital is making immunizations available at the Canton OB/GYN office.

Besides the Westland location on "Super Saturday," Oakwood Healthcare System and Garden City Hospital will also offer free immunizations to the first 100 children attending its "Safety in the Park" program from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Nankin Mills, 33175 Ann Arbor Trail and Edward Hines Drive, Westland. Although bicycle and inline skating safety is the thrust of the day, immunizations as well as blood pressure screening will also be available.

The safety event is cosponsored by Wayne County Parks, D&D Bicycle, AAA Michigan and Dearborn Heights Rotary.

"We're participating in Super Saturday because we don't find these kids until they enter kindergarten. Accessibility and awareness are some of the reasons children aren't being immunized," said Suzanne Truskowski, Oakwood Healthcare System's Keep Kids Safe team lead-

McDonald's will provide orange drink and cookies for children after vaccination at the health clinics. According to spokeswoman Michelle Fournier, McDonald's has been a strong supporter of immunizations. Bag stuffers and trayliners listing immunization sites and schedules will be utilized in more than 200 of their southeast Michigan locations now through Sept. 7.

The Michigan Ronald McDonald House Charities will underwrite the production of materials to help parents identify which immunizations are required and at what ages children should receive them. Health department volunteers will distribute the materials in McDonald restaurants on "Super Saturday."

"McDonald's cares about families and we want to do all we can to encourage parents to immunize their children on time in order to help them stay healthy," said Brian O'Mara, senior regional marketing manager for McDonald's Corp.

"Immunization education is part of our long-standing commitment to kids and follows the tradition of the Ronald McDonald House and Ronald McDonald House Charities.

Medical chief outlines HIV/AIDS policy

Virtual reality evolving

I don't really O&E know what to ONLINE make of Virtual Reality. Somehow it just doesn't seem real. Or is it too real? Or to close to being real? But I do need to increase my understanding of Virtual Reality applications. One of my teen

friends enjoys Virtual Reality games and is willing to spend up to $5 a pop for the experience at Cedar Point.

EMORY

DANIELS

I've read somewhere about the more serious applications being studied. The futurists see a world where laser surgery might be performed on a wounded troop in the field by a surgeon at Walter Reed Hospital with Virtual Reality and a couple other technologies.

So I was interested when I got a call from Virtual Reality Institute. EDS, the world's largest systems integrator, and Prosolvia, the world's largest private Virtual Reality training supplier, joined to form the Virtual Reality Institute.

Prosolvia, based in Sweden with offices in Troy and Salt Lake City, specializes in software development and consulting for virtual reality applications.

In 1995, EDS brought together 40 companies, universities, and government organizations to create the Detroit Virtual Reality Center, the first commercial virtual reality center in the world. Since its opening in April 1995, more than 5,000 visitors have been through the center. You can visit the VRI's web site at http://www.vrinstitute.com.

VRI will provide training and development services to demonstrate the value of Virtual Reali-, and optimize products and proty technology when applied to a customer's projects. The institute will teach students to use the new tools and processes VR offers for such uses as marketing and sales, assembly, styling and design, product development, simulators, environment, medioperators. cal applications, and entertain-

VRI in August began offering training and consulting services in virtual reality. Prosolvia provides the curriculum, experienced instructors, its expert research and development staff, and consulting expertise while EDS provides its vast marketing network, technical resources, facilities and administrative support.

"Interactive visual simulation and VR are technologies that have been rapidly evolving toward becoming efficient product development and process reengineering tools," said Mats Johansson, president of Prosolvia. "However, many companies have been restrained in their use of these dynamic technical tools because of a scarcity of trained personnel. The center will focus on creating an environment in which students can use new tools and processes applied to several types of projects."

Matt Vickers, a business manager for EDS Detroit Virtual Reality Center, said: "Students at the VRI" will have the opportunity to work on real-world problems with instructors who have created VR solutions for other customers.

"In addition, companies will have the opportunity to submit VR problems for students of the institute to work on."

Virtual Reality can be used. said Vickers, for modeling complex systems. By using virtual reality, users can configure, test cial cesses such as parts assembly lines, facilities or process flows. Simulation training, once used almost exclusively for flight simulators, can now be used for training of assembly workers, surgeons and nuclear console Johansson said VRI is now working on a driver's training simulator for persons with neurological disorders. It will end up at a major hospital in the area when completed.

Holding back Virtual Reality from greater use in the commercial world is acceptance in the marketplace and the lack of trained personnel, said Vickers. There is more news to come from the institute, sooner than later.

investor and a winner.

Financial publications and the airwaves are filled with advertisements for various mutual funds, all of which seem to be number one in some category or in some time frame. Several publications hold annual investment competitions, in which individuals can create their own portfolios on paper. To win, the contestant must have the highest returns.

In general, it would seem that investors are being subtly programmed to believe that they are not successful unless they get the best return available. There is also the understanding that no one mutual fund or investment advisor can be num-the engineering department, as his engineers are consumed with moving their 401(k) money daily to catch the best performers. However, most investment counselors realize that constantly "changing horses" usually leads to poor performance.

Switching generates risk

When investors bounce in and out of funds, additional risk is created over and above the inherent risk of the investment. Here are three classic investor mistakes:

• Buying high: Investors tend to pour money into funds clear uptrend after a has been going for awhile, usually after the best gains have been achieved.

• Selling low: Investors often bail out of long-term investduring a perments temporary market ceived decline.

• Investment through the "rear view mirror": Investors often buy mutual funds that performed best during the past few years. Inevitably, in the next few years, different funds do

Marathon. There are thousands of runners, but there are only 15 or so who are really running to win. All of the rest are running to achieve some very personal goal - a personal best time or the simple joy of finishing.

While some are natural runners, others are physically handicapped, overweight, or very young or very old. Many are even pushing child carriers. Each has a specific personal goal in mind. If a runner achieves his or her personal goal, do they not win? Are they not successful?

Successful investors

Psychologists call reaching one's personal goal self-actualization. We believe it is more important for an investor to be self-actualizing than it is for the investor to get the best return. That sounds pretty self-serving coming from a conservative investment counselor, until one considers the "Ying and Yang" relationship between return and risk.

It is a fact of life that these characteristics are joined at the hip. High risk means high loss of absolute dollars. It can change one's life. Suddenly, seeking higher percentage-point returns on an investment portfolio may not be as important as avoiding high risk and a debilitating loss of capital.

Balance risk with return

Why should an investor take any more risk than necessary to achieve his or her specific personal objective? Is it to get there faster?

Ultimately, the level of returns. an investor seeks will determine how fast the investor must go. However, there are greater risks to going faster. The marathon runner understands those risks -- muscle cramps, injury, dehydration, exhaustion, heart attack -- all of which can cause a runner to fail in the attempt to reach their goal. The faster an investor tries to go, the more likely a debilitating loss will occur.

But trust in the fact the few who escape disaster will be published, held up as the truly successful investors.

ber one forever, so investors are encouraged to switch around.

This is evident in the discount brokerage advertisements. through which companies offer the ability to "switch funds for no charge," while promoting the hundreds of different mutual funds they carry. It is deviously evident in the 401(k) packages that allow the investor to choose from dozens of funds and facilitate daily fund-switching using a Touch-Tone phone.

Many investors fall prey to these undercurrents and readily switch their funds or their investment advisers. One automotive executive recently complained to us that his firm has lost significant productivity in better. Many investors then switch funds into the "next" last year's winner. So why is everyone trying so hard to win?

We live in a very competitive society that equates success with winning. Our tremendous preoccupation with sports at all levels reveals this. It is no longer popular to be a fan of the home team unless they are winning. Sports fans and commentators seem to enjoy bashing professional athletes, coaches and owners for not doing what it takes to win.

Now, put those same public sports antagonists in the private world of their own chosen activity and the standard changes.

return. Low risk means low return. The same forces that drive investors to seek the best return are driving them to take the greatest risk.

Each investor assumes risk. The amount of risk the investor is comfortable with should be a part of his or her guiding precepts and overall investment objective.

Successful investors measure financial objectives in absolute dollars, not relative percentages. In order to pay for the children's education, buy that retirement home, or achieve and maintain a comfortable lifestyle, investors must have absolute dollars. Percentage points do not pay the bills. An investment loss is a financial goals? Are you comfortable with that risk? If you can answer these questions positively, you are a successful investor. If you are unsure, perhaps you should talk to a financial advisor, because there is no reason why any rational investor cannot be successful -- unless you believe that you have to get the best return to be successful.

But Montreux is outstanding, not only because it draws international talent, but because of its educational component.

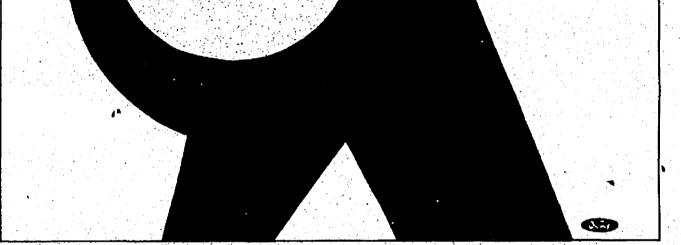

One of the four stages — Hudson's Bop Shop, will feature middle school, high school, and college groups. At the Pepsi Jam Academy Stage, a tented venue, student and amateur musicians can participate in free clinics and jam sessions.

"We wanted to make these educating events as easy to attend as possible," said festival director Jim Dulzo. "So they are free and located right in the middle of all the action. Anybody interested in learning to play jazz can attend. Just show up, and if you have a horn or guitar, bring it. We'll have a piano, bass and drums onsite.'

Seven top Michigan jazz artists — Ed Gooch, Jack Pierson, Phil Lasley, Donald Walden, Chris Collins, Andrew Speight and Teddy Harris -- will each offer a 75-minute clinic on jazz improvisations. These clinics sponsored by the Southeast Michigan Jazz Association, take place 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. Friday, Aug. 30 to Monday, Sept. 2. There is no 5 p.m. clinic on Monday.

- The nightly student jam sessions were "the surprise new hit of last year's festival," said Dulzo. "A lot of students and amateurs showed up and had a fine time jamming with an excellent trio from Wayne State University. The jam sessions take place 6:30-8:30 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 30 to Sept. 1, and 5:15-7:15 p.m. Monday, Sept. 2.

Jazz is passed on generation to generation by professional musicians. Geri Allen-Roney featured in Robert Altman's "Kansas City," said Marcus Belgrave "was like a musical father. I've learned so much from him." Roney, who

As a youngster, Brad Felt of Bloomfield Hills, who, with the exception of last year, has played his tuba at every Montreux Jazz Festival since its inception, was inspired by musicians who visited his school.

"Some of my favorite gigs this year were in local high schools and junior highs," said Felt who presented concerts with well known local saxophonist Steven Wood. "After the concert we had an open forum and invited the students to play with us."

This year, for the first time, Felt will be performing with his own Quartet - drummer Danny Spencer of San Francisco, formerly Detroit, who has played with Joe Henderson, Bobby Hutcherson and other top musicians, Paul Keller on bass, and Jacob Sacks, piano. "It's important for me to show tuba can lead a small group and be the only horn," said Felt who sees bright spots on the jazz horizon. He and 89 other musicians performed at the successful Second Annual Michigan Jazz Festival at Botsford Inn in Farmington Hills on July 21. A week later, jazz fans flocked to Birmingham for the fourth annual Jazzfest. "It's nice to see other things popping up," said Felt. "Montreux helps give jazz more impetus. Jazz is for everybody, but it's not part of pop culture. It's not presented with the hugeness and dollars behind it that pop music is."

Focus: HOPE's Community Arts Department with jazz pianist/musicologist Harold McKinney is presenting a program for children ages 4-12. McKinney's program 2:45-3:45 p.m. each festival day, combines the NewBop prose of jazz history with improvisation to explain how certain jazz rhythms and phrases can trace their origins to African tribal drum rhythms and early African American music.

Counter-culture illustrator makes 'Fiction Burn'

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN . SPECIAL WRITER

When Glen Barr was growing up in Livonia, he never dreamed one day he'd make a living as an illustrator designing for such diverse mediums as advertising and animated videos. Many of the original artworks created for these commercial venues; and a series of recent paintings, are featured in his one-man show at C Pop Gallery in Royal Oak.

Barr's counterculture-themed "Fiction Burn" takes viewer from a seedy smokefilled strip club on Michigan Avenue to two cars racing a locomotive in "Beat the Devil."

ideas were inspired by friends, and their cars, others by dreams. To begin one of the acrylics-on-Masonite, he simply transcends the present, "feels like a director and sets up a scene."

An admirer of the Old Masters, the Ferndale resident uses a palette similar to Dutch painters. Sepia dominates a portrait of a nude female standing erect on the edge of a wooden chair in "The Girl." Barr miniaturizes the figure to produce a looming, surreal sensation. In the background, her shadow crouches, appearing to be tortured by some sort of inner demons.

Barr works in layers, varnishing each one as it's completed. Then he sets the piece aside for a couple of days to allow time to decide "where to take it from there" because he's "constantly growing" as an artist. All of the frames Barr creates from found objects. Unfinished wood slats surrounding "The Girl" give the piece a raw, cutting-edge look.

The urban landscape is a sight most suburbanites never "see" as they breeze through these areas on their way to somewhere else. Steele makes us stop and look. A quarter century retrospective of these large-scale paintings never seen before continue on exhibit through Sept. 8 at the Scarab Club, 217 Farnsworth across from the Detroit Institute of Arts.

"I started taking painting seriously in junior high because it was a real challenge," said Steele, a 48-year resident of Garden City. "I get my ideas from life itself when I'm thinking hard on a subject. I hope the viewer will feel a little kinship toward it. There should be a reminder of what it was like, that there's a social conscious."

Born in Ironwood, Steele began observing and recording what he saw on brown sheets of papers purchased for two pen?" nies from a butcher shop. His father's death at the age of eight changed his perceptions of life forever when Steel's mother. moved her three children to the urban landscape of Detroit. It forlorn as he rests his arm and was here he pursued his art at head on a telephone post. An Cass Technical High School and Meinzinger Art School. He paid his tuition by sweeping floors the foreground are the only semand washing windows.

Steele applied for entrance to Cranbrook while working on the paint assembly line at Ford Motor Company. For the next two years he studied on a full scholarship with Zolton Sepeshy. After serving in the Air Force, he returned to his mother's home in Wayne to paint in an old wooden garage in 1940. Steele married his wife Helen in 1947. They raised five children together. The family's Sunday afternoon rides were a cruise down Michigan Avenue to view the remains of Skid Row on their way to the Detroit Institute of Arts.

An admirer of "the strong paintings by German Expressionists," Steele says, many years ago he was inspired by Pieter Bruegel, Rembrandt, Goya and other Old Masters. Using a dark palette with splashes of color he draws us in to a world where much of the day and night is spent on the streets, stoops and porches as time drags on. From 1954 to 1980, not much changes in the dreary scenes. The viewer can almost feel the intense heat.

Steele competed extensively in juried shows in the 1950s and 60s winning many awards. The rise of pop art in the 60s forced him to withdraw from the painting scene but he did not stop painting.

One day in 1962, he was out driving and stumbled upon a radiator shop at the corner of Ford Road and Venoy in Westland. Steele was so inspired he hurried home to retrieve his tools.

"The Manager" focuses on a dumpy, trash-strewn business long since torn down. The greasy, tattooed manager looks much to see in these works. Steele places dozens of images in each scene but always give the viewer a place to rest. In this case, a dog sits nearby.

"We've had a good response to the show. Most of the people seem to like looking at the nostalgia," said Scarab Club board member Greg Stephens.

A cast of characters reveal their lot in life in "Hell's Kitchen." The 1974 New York City street scene emerged from a time when Steele found himself in an area where "nice people" don't go because it isn't safe." A clown with a sock puppet on one side of the painting seems to mirror a hippie decorated with peace signs on the other side as a clarinetist blows his horn.

"It was quite an experience. It was at the end of the hippie movement. My wife and I were going to Greenwich Village and took the wrong bus," he said.

Steele retired as a clay modeler in the styling department at Ford in 1980. That year he painted the latest work in the show, a self portrait. The haunting canvas features Steele as a puppeteer manipulating four male figures.

Jack Keijo Steele was finally "discovered" in 1993 when former Cranbrook professor Michael Hall and his partner David Lusenhop as co-owners of Fulcrum Fine Art Gallery in Cincinnati curated an exhibit of his paintings for a 1994 show at Cranbrook. Long overdue, the exhibit focusing on the period from the Great Depression through the 1950s, established Steele as one of the Urban Realists of this era.

Gin Blossom's Wilson enjoys 'good life' on tour

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO STAFF WRITER

As lead singer of the successful roots rock band Gin Blossoms, Robin Wilson is loving the good life.

"You can quote me on this, I think the greatest thing about being the headliner on tour is having runners available to you," Wilson said.

"He took me to Meijer. I had to get some stuff like batteries, a plastic bin to recycle aluminum. I had a really fulfilling day so far."

Wilson, who was born in Detroit, was spending the day in East Lansing preparing to begin the next leg of his tour that night at the Michigan Festival. The Tempe, Az., based band had just returned from a month-long break, unprecedented for the band.

"It was a whole darn month. It's always the weirdest thing to have time off then you get on the bus again and you realize, 'Oh yeah. This is our reality. The back of the bus in an 8 by 8 space is the reality in which we live.''

The Gin Blossoms, who return to Michigan Sunday, Sept. 1, to open for Neil Young and Crazy Horse at Pine Knob, are touring in support of "Congratulations I'm Sorry," its second full-length album for A&M Records.

The 13-song album carries on the band's reputation for soulbaring lyrics and hook-laden melodies. Even the recording process wasn't much different than the Gin Blossoms' debut release "New Miserable Experience" (A&M).

Trees

same room in Memphis, Tenn., at Ardent Studios with (producer) John Hampton. ... John is our buddy and we just wanted to make a record in Memphis. where there's a rich tradition of recording and rock 'n' roll," said Wilson, whose band also includes. guitarist/songwriter/singer Jesse Valenzuela, guitarist Scott Johnson, bassist Bill Leen, and drummer Phil Rhodes.

Kicking off with "Day Job," a rollicking salute to their musical career ("I'm never going back to college/For just one good day job"), "Congratulations I'm Sorry" showcases the Gin Blossoms' penchant for ballads ("Not Only Numb," "As Long As It Matter,"), jangly pop rock ("Whitewash," "Competition Smile") and pedal steel guitar, country/western-influence songs ("Memphis Time").

Bass player Leen coined the name of the album.

"I guess it's just supposed to symbolize that there's a lot of ups and downs we personally have been through. There's been a lot of good and bad over the course of the last four years of whatever," Wilson explained.

The lowest point of the band's career was when founding member Doug Hopkins committed suicide in December 1993. Hopkins was fired by the band because of his alcohol problems during the recording of "Experience," a collection of songs mostly written by the troubled Hopkins. Afterward, Hopkins became increasingly bitter over his former bandmates' success

"We recorded it in the very and committed suicide. He had penned the two biggest hits from the record - "Hey Jealousy" and "Found Out About You.".

Hopkins' downfall is alluded to in the song "Follow You Down," where a quivery-voiced Wilson tells the story of a friend who wants to jump off a bridge. In response, he sings, "Anywhere you go, I'll follow you down. I'll follow you down, but not that far."

Ironically, "Follow You Down" was the first hit single from "Congratulations I'm Sorry." One thing that he's not sorry or guilty about is the band's ability to write successful pop songs.

"We've had a string of them and we're quite happy with that. We don't think that's the most important thing, though. ... The bulk of our awards come from being involved in a creative process. We're perfectly happy to have hit records. We've always been pleased with the commercial success.

"We have different goals with the creative and commercial aspects of our career. Our goal on the creative side was to make a record that we liked and was strong enough to play it for a year on the road. Commercially, my personal goals for the record is to see it sell half as many as 'New Miserable Experience.' With 'Follow You Down' we're on line to do that."

Wilson was born in Detroit 31 years ago. After living in a series of suburbs that he can't remember except for Dearborn, Wilson and his family moved to Arizona at the age of 5.

"It's a funny story. We went to Arizona because my dad had a lot of allergies. When we moved there, Phoenix had really clean, dry air. Now the air pollution in Phoenix is so bad my dad can't live there anymore. My dad's thinking about moving back here," said Wilson whose aunts, uncles and cousins still live in the area.

Wilson, who is engaged to be married in late September, remains in Tempe, Az. "That's all I dream about when I'm here on tour - Canyon Lake and getting back. The canyons and the plant life and the animal life is very exotic and beautiful. It's truly my favorite place on planet (810) 377-0100. earth.'

For those who tropical isle.

You'd think Hollywood would have had enough of H.G. Wells' once controversial science fiction yarn, which celebrates its centennial this year. Charles Laughton did it best in 1933 (in "Island of Lost Souls") while Burt Lancaster, in 1977, tried to keep his dignity among hammy costars and cheesy makeup effects.

Dignity no longer concerns Brando, who enters in thick pancake makeup, carted around on a Cleopatra-style throne by his "children," a hideous population of man-beasts. He's doted on by a deformed midget (a truly amazing piece of work) who wears matching outfits and, in one scene, even pours ice into his master's tall ice bucket hat.

Money Ease. Interest. Brando chooses his roles pretty much in that order, like Laurence Olivier did in his later years. Even swathed in huge robes, bee-keepers' hat covering his pasty face, you can still see the workings of America's greatest living actor.

You also can't help but be reminded of "Apocalypse Now," where Brando's Colonel Kurtz set himself up as the ultimate power in the Vietnamese jungle. A mellower version of Dennis Hopper's drugged-out photographer, Val Kilmer plays a fellow researcher who serves as Moreau's zookeeper.

Kilmer, used to showy performances, tries in vain to hold his own. Talking to one of Moreau's creations, a dog boy, he pulls out a squeak toy and dismisses him with a condescending "fetch." In his most extreme example of Brando-envy, he stuffs his shirt and mimics the actor's muffled lines after the doc is inevitably killed by his own creations.

David Thewlis, so powerful in Mike Leigh's "Naked," plays the hapless English diplomat who ends up Moreau's guest on the island and through whose eyes we see much of the weirdness. He's also the only one who appears to take this movie seriously.

The creatures themselves are a fun bit of special effects, a Bmovie cross between "Planet of the Apes" and "Cats," but on an A-movie budget. We see men crossed with leopards, hyenas, dogs and cats, the latter represented by Moreau's beautiful daughter (Fairuza Balk), whom Thewlis grows infatuated with.

Most amazing is how many talented people landed on this Sci-fi thriller: Fairuza Balk (Aissa) and David Thewlis (Edward Douglas) star in "The Island of Dr. Moreau." a remake based on H.G. Wells' classic story.

"Island," including director John Frankenheimer, reportedly brought in when Kilmer and Brando ran Richard Stanley (still credited as screenwriter) off the set. Veteran cinematographer William Fraker brings atmosphere to the jungle locales. My vote for goofiest movie of the year, "The Island of Dr.

Now Hollywood has brought Jane Austen's novel to the screen as the real thing, a beautifully filmed and exceptionally acted tale of a woman who fancies herself a matchmaker but falls short when it comes to her own romance, Gwyneth Paltrow stars.

Visits to Mackinac Island always bring out the story-teller in me. There's the natural beauty, local color, and rich historical background that make this former center of the fur trade

Two Michigan authors who father must leave the island Book captures Holyland beauty

BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER

David Roberts was a distinguished 19th century British landscape artist who rose from poverty to a place of prominence in English art circles.

His reputation was solidified by a book of lithographs based on his drawings of scenes from the Holy Lands done during a trip in 1838-39.

Now Stewart, Tabori & Chang, a New York publisher that specializes in large format art books, has released an eye-popping recreation of the original color plates with historical and artistic commentary, selections from Roberts' journals and present-day photographs of the scenes captured by Roberts. The book, "Yesterday and Today, The Holy Land," has a suggested retail price of $60.

In addition to being a chronicle of Roberts' work, here arranged following the order of creation for the first time, the book is also, a celebration of the lithographic art. Belgian lithographer Louis Haghe created the plates from Roberts' drawings.

The commentary by Fabio Bourbon is informative and the book's design by Patrizia Balocco Lovisetti is outstanding. The only flaw in this presentation is careless editing in this English language version, translated by Antony Shugaar. As a newspaper reporter I am tolerant of occasional typos, a bane of newspapers usually caused by impending deadlines. But an art book of this quality and prepared with this attention to detail in its art reproduction should also be impeccably edited.

That's a small quibble, because the book's value is in Roberts' art precise, alive to local culture. informed by a love for the play of because he refuses to compromise his patriotism by swearing allegiance to the British crown. His plan is to join General Hull's American forces at Fort Wayne in Detroit.

That means Mary and the older Angelique and Jacques will be left alone to work the farm and look out for one another. They're up to the challenge, their father insists, since he'll only be gone for six months.

Though saddened by his impending departure, Mary is proud when her father expresses faith in her courage and fortitude and places a gold coin in her hand, saying, "Spend it only when there is great need."

But months stretch into years. The Americans are not prepared to fight the well equipped British and their Indian allies. Winters on the island present numerous hardships. Food is scarce, and Angelique and Jacques become restless. At the brink of adulthood, they want more out of life than the daily drudgery of farm labor and household chores. A handsome British soldier at the fort and the lure of adventure among fur traders direct their attention elsewhere.

Yet Mary's spunk and fierce loyalty to her father and country are unswerving. Even the loss of her best friend Gavin, an Indian orphan raised by white settlers, fails to dampen her spirits or dim her vision for a brighter future.

An award-winning writer, Gloria Whelan brings to life the customs and concerns of Michigan residents living in the early 19th century. Her book is sure to fascinate and inspire middle-school readers and beyond.

• Rochester pharmacist Robert A. Lytle spent his boyhood summers in the Les Cheneaux Islands of eastern upper Michigan. His fond memories of swimming, sailing, and fishing are recorded in two fictional works entitled "Mackinac Passage: A Summer Adventure" (1995) and its sequel "Mackinac Passage: The Boathouse Mystery" (1996, $11.95), both published by Thunder Bay Press.

When "Boathouse Mystery" begins, 15-year-old Pete Jenkins and his friends are pleased that their efforts have culminated in the arrest of local counterfeiters. But a close call with disaster has made Pete a bit more cautious. Now it's time to enjoy what summers at Les Cheneaux have to offer: boating, water-skiing, and parties with the privileged but "neat" kids from Cincinnati.

No one seems too concerned about a rash of petty thefts from luxurious boathouses anchored along the channels and bays of Lake Huron. Or that the body of Fats FitzRoberts — one of the counterfeiters and a merciless killer — has never been found. With few clues, even the police are inclined to disregard the pilfering of minor items such as food and blankets. But when Dr. Scruton, polio specialist at Sault Sainte Marie Hospital, is mugged while carrying the substantial proceeds of a charity basketball game, the teens spring into action once again.

Little do Pete and his friends. know that more than robbery is at stake. They soon find themselves in a predicament that requires quick thinking, team work, and conquering their fear of the frigid waters of Muscallonge Bay.

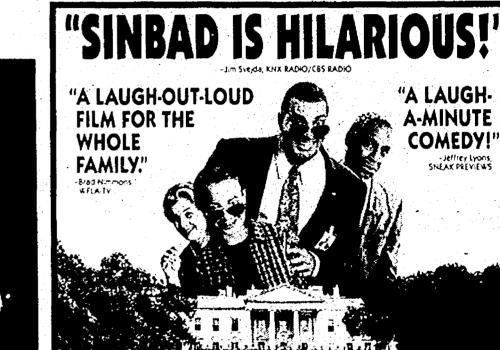

Young readers (10-14) will enjoy this book of friendship and adventure.

Action, humor, and suspense - plus some Michigan geography — make "Mackinac Passage: A Boathouse Mystery" as well as its predecessor a good choice for summer reading.

Both books can be purchased at Halfway Down the Stairs Children's Book Shop on 114 E. Fourth St. in Rochester.

Anyone interested in history, art or the Bible will find this book stunning. Roberts attention to the most minute details of architecture, landscape, costume and human form make these pictures especially vivid. They are rightly regarded as among the best documentary recreations of the Holy Lands during that peri-od. The large 10 1/4" by 14" format and the beautiful coloration make the book a treasure. In addition to the Roberts' drawings, the book also contains maps and covers from the original edition.

light and dark and reverent about the Biblical sites but never maudlin or sentimental, and equally respectful toward Islamic holy places. Though it is Roberts' landscapes that are most famous, his interior architectural renderings and his portraiture are also impressive.

The publishers are promoting the book as a form of time travel and the contrasts and comparisons with the photos (most excellently done by Antonio Attini) do create a fascinating trip to the Holy Lands then and now.

DINING Cafe Oliverio moves, loyal customers follow

Artie Oliverio has again packed up his kitchen and taken it on the road.

This time, Cafe Oliverio has found a new home in Farmington Hills, bringing a group of loyal regulars and a New York-style Italian cuisine to an airy, casual ambience.

The move from Koyal Oak to 11 Mile and Middlebelt brings chef Oliverio closer his area restaurant origins - Long Lake Road in West Bloomfield Township in the early 1980s. It also, he said, puts Cafe Oliverio closer to 90 percent of its regular patrons. "They claim this is much better, closer for them," Oliverio said.

But as always, said Oliverio and new business partner Tom Timmons, Cafe Oliverio's menu boasts fresh ingredients and made-from-scratch dishes that can be specially prepared.

"There's a lot of things we do here you can't get anywhere else," said Timmons, who formerly owned Peacock's Cafe & Grill on the same site and now handles the business side of things at Cafe Oliverio. "Everything is finished, sauteed, cooked to order."

· Oliverio, a Brooklyn native with 25 years in the restaurant business, prides himself on light sauces made of imported tomatoes, stuffed pastas from his New York factory, seafood brought in -----

There are a dozen appetizers on the dinner menu, from the soup of the day to a tortelloni for two filled with cheese and pumpkin in a cream and wine sauce.

The restaurant also offers a dozen pasta dishes, another dozen entrees, seafood, New York strip steak served three different ways, beer and wine (a liquor license is in the works), desserts and coffee and a small menu for children. Several meatless dishes are available.

Oliverio also runs a wholesale food business that serves other area Italian restaurants. Sauces by the quart are available at the cafe.

Oliverio and Timmons say the restaurant, remodeled since its days as Peacock's, has a less-formal feel to it than when it was on Woodward. There, they said, a fancier atmosphere, along with a bar and a piano, gave it an unintended posh feeling.

Diners "felt like maybe it was for special occasions, which it wasn't intended to be," Timmons said.

The move has also reduced overhead and allowed price cuts of up to $4 on entrees, Oliverio Chicken Francese. said.

River Crossing Townhome Condominium, an apartment conversion, offers buyers a unit of 1,300 square feet with two or three bedrooms, 2-1/2 baths and partially finished basement from $67,490 to $90,000.

About a third of the 97 units off Lahser between Nine and 10 Mile roads in Southfield are still available.

Units are clustered three to seven per building. Exterior materials are brick and aluminum siding. No unit is stacked on another. All have private entrances.

Existing oven, dishwasher, refrigerator, cabinetry, furnace and central air conditioning are included in the base price.

"We put them in proper condition," said Douglas Bock, a partner in the conversion. "When we sell, everything is functional."

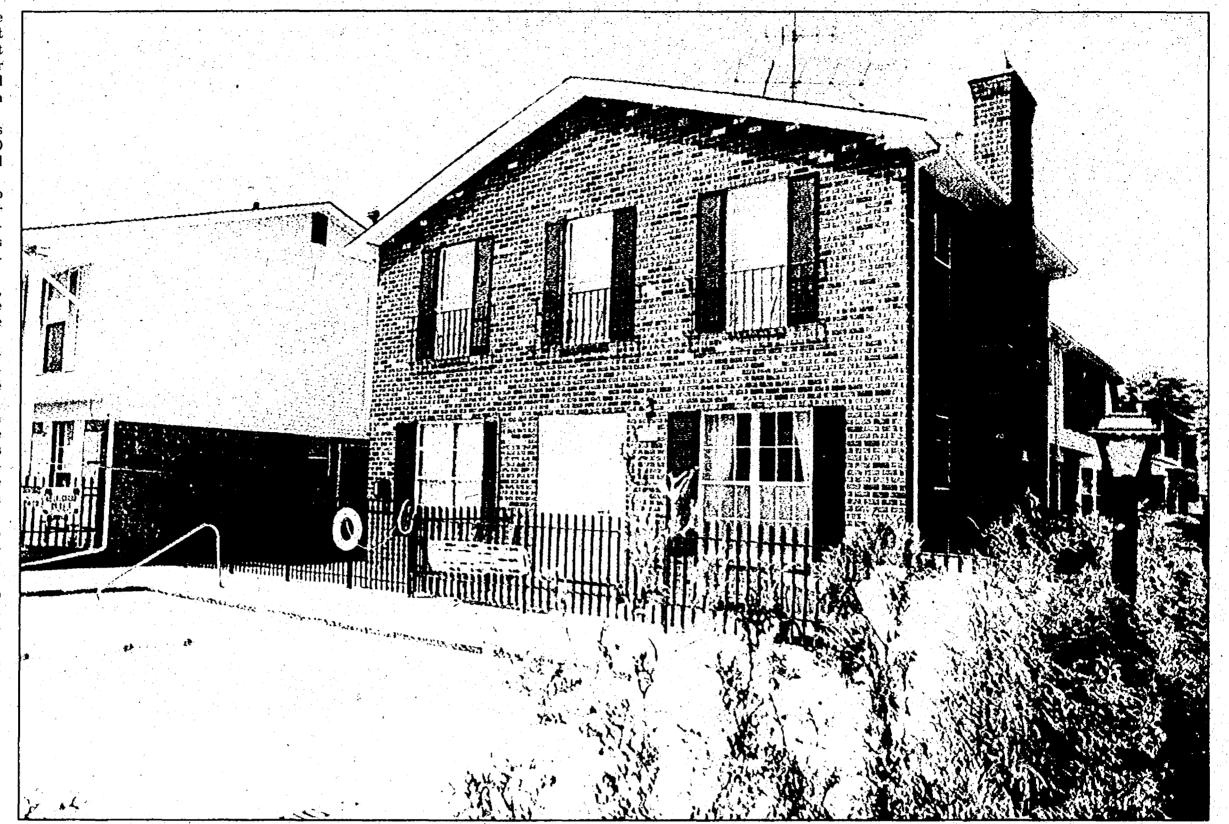

A one-year protection plan on the furnace is included in the purchase price. New front doors and porch lights also are included at base price. Units will be painted and carpeted at no extra cost.

New appliances, cabinets, counter tops, plumbing and light fixtures are available at a premium.

"We saw an opportunity to offer product not being offered, a large square foot unit, for less than paying rent in a location where people wanted to be," said Michael E. Berger, a partner in the venture.

"We thought the location is excellent," said Walter Cohen, another partner. "Road patterns are excellent, plus employment in Southfield, itself.

"Southfield is a terrific place to live," Cohen added. "They have a fantastic library, schools. I think they won parks and recreation awards the last 11 years."

River Crossing previously was Hidden River Apartments. It was built in 1975. Rents recently ranged from $750 to $800, Berger said.

"The whole concept here is offering ownership below rent," Berger said. "That's the beauty of River Crossing. You can own with substantial improvements being done."

"The last owners kind of let it run down a tad," Cohen said. "We've done a lot of work."

The model has a living room, dining room, kitchen/nook and half bath on the first floor, three bedrooms upstairs. The master has a shower and two closets. A second bath with combination tub and shower is upstairs.

Simple bathroom renovation

Nearly any homeremodeling poll, when asked which room is of paramount importance, homeowners replay with unwavering, single-mindedness: the bathroom. Like any other room in the house, the bathroom requires a facelift now and then. Yet, upscaling the look of your bathroom does not necessarily mean a major renovation. Prices vary depending on location within the project, kind of windows (bay versus regular), kind of porch, whether it's an end unit (premium) and what new/upgraded features buyers select from the menu. The farther you buy back towards the woods and a branch of the Rouge River on the property, the more expensive your unit.

You're in the center of a metro area," Cohen said while showing off the wetlands. "Look how quiet it is. How old would you say that oak is – 150 years?" Buyers at River Crossing get included the maintenance/association fee, currently $124 per month.

Ownership amenities: A pool, clubhouse, carport and access to a nature area are provided owners at River Crossing Townhome Condominium.

A mix of empty-nesters downsizing, young marrieds and singles looking for an investment are buying. There aren't a lot of young children in the complex.

River Crossing is within the Southfield school district boundaries.

The property tax rate is currently $56.61 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $70,000 condo there would pay about $1,980 the first year.

Jacqui E. Jones, the sales rep, rented in Hidden River before buying after the conversion.

"The biggest thing people are ful scenery. impressed with is the size, space," she said. "They're impressed with the number of baths. The basement is a separate area where you can get away."

Connie Reddix moved to a three-bedroom unit at River Crossing from an apartment.

"I like the vicinity," she said. "When I looked at the model, I fell in love with it. I like the way the kitchen is laid out with a breakfast nook. I like when you first come in, there's a little vestibule, then the living room and dining room.

"It's quiet. I have a patio door off Lahser and a little hill (berm)," she said. "I have beauti"I have to give the sales rep and mortgage people credit," Reddix said. "They were wonderful. I had no problems at all."

"I was looking for something spacious that met my economic needs," said Rikki Marcilis, who also bought a three-bedroom unit at River Crossing.

"I wanted a private entry. I wanted a more home-like structure," she added. "I love the basement. I enjoy the quietness, room, space."

Prudential sells homes by price range

Prudential Great Lakes Realty, headquartered in Clarkston, has launched a program it believes will redefine the listing process to benefit both home buyers and sellers.

The new approach, valuerange marketing, replaces the fixed asking price with a predetermined price range.

"For buyers, it expands the pool of homes available to view," said Jennifer Zardus, marketing director. "Under sellers ... it eliminates under- and over-pricing. It attracts more buyers and invites more offers.'

Here's how it works. When a seller lists a home with a fixed asking price. that price tends to be higher than true market value. Sellers list under the assumption there will be negotiations that will bring the price of the house down, so they may inflate the initial listing price.

This hurts the seller because it limits exposure of the house and immediately excludes a number of qualified buyers from a potential transaction. Most buyers automatically rule out houses above their price range without even looking.

For instance, if a house is listed at $135,000, buyers looking in the $125,000 market won't bother. With value-range marketing, the same house would list at $120,000 to $140,000. broadening the market and pool of potential buyers significantly.

Also, value-range marketing prevents sellers from having to reduce the listing price, which can be damaging to the image of the property and discourage potential buyers.

A price reduction is included in the value-range marketing as the lowest acceptable bid, so it's not

$45,000-$55,000 and going up to $9 million-$12 million. When a value-range marketing listing agreement is signed by a seller, the property is marketed through newspaper advertising with a special VRM logo. A VRM rider is displayed on the yard sign. The property is entered into the multiple listing system under the appropriate pricing parameters.

The added visual elements provided by the company make it easier for the public to automatically target VRM listings.

"VRM is technically not a new concept; it's simply repackaged," said Daniel E. Stiehl, co-owner of Prudential Great Lakes Realty. "The VRM negotiation process is a viable way for the buyer and seller to have greater control than traditionally-negotiated transactions," Stiehl said.

"VRM increases buyer choices. They see a greater number of homes, especially homes that never would have been a consideration because of the price.

"Plus, buyers can compare similar homes on the market and thus make a more educated offer when negotiating for their desired home," Stiehl said.

Prudential Real Estate Affiliates adapted the con-program in the U.S.

VRM listings sell three to five times faster than the market average, and 30 percent of its listings now are VRM, the California broker reported.

Sixty-five percent of sellers who listed with VRM sold for more than they expected, and just one sold at the bottom of the price range, the Colorado broker indicated.

About 15 percent of Prudential Great Lakes Realty listings were VRM 30 days after the program was implemented here. Zardus said. Sellers can list either VRM or the traditional way.

Realtors throughout the metro area have been given a copy of Prudential's VRM wheel to match numbers on for-sale signs with the price range.

Sellers who have a firm price they want to get and aren't willing to negotiate would do best listing traditional rather than VRM, Zardus suggested.

"Buying and selling homes in the future will be much more competitive than it is now," said Jerome M. Baranski, co-owner of Prudential Great Lakes Realty.

"With fewer real estate agents doing a greater amount of business and smaller companies being folded into larger companies, the need for advanced technology and alternative ways of conducting business are essential in being successful.

"We feel the VRM concept is a step forward in offering pricing alternatives to the growing number of educated buyers and sellers," Baranski said.

Interest rates:

Here are some recent interest rates that may be helpful to you in tracking the direction of rates for home mortgages. These are just a guide. Be sure to call a lender to get current rate quotes.

In Freddie Mac's Primary Mortgage Market Survey, the 30year fixed rate for the North Central area for the week ended Aug. 23, 1996, moved slightly upward to 8.00 percent (U.S. average 7.93 percent). A week ago, the average for the U.S. was 7.88 percent, and one year ago it was also 7.88 percent. Current 15-year fixed-rate mortgages average 7.50 percent. Adjustable-rate mortgages were recorded at 6.10 percent, edging down from last week's average of 6.25 percent for our area of the country.

GARDEN SPOT

Nikon's Most Popular Outfits! to enjoy the garden In these last few weeks of summer, take time to sit in a quiet place and enjoy some new gardening books along with a cup of tea or coffee.

"Seeds," Peter Loewer ($25, Macmillan), begins with what a seed is and does. In simple layman's terms, Loewer's explanations are easily understood and fascinating. This book is a must, especially for future botanists.

Take some time

We also learn how to plant them for optimal results, origins of plants and diverse information such as that one of the earliest records of germination of seeds (stored for 15 years) was recorded in 1846. We meet seedsmen from many parts of the country and learn the history of their seed houses and their role in seed production and distribution. Many nurseries and exchange companies are described in detail.

MARTY

Loewer has included several reviews of books especially geared for seed collectors. He has also profiled several collectors and relates unusual and sometimes harrowing experiences in their quest.

Women's works

"Between the Apple-blossom and the Water," edited by Pamela Norris (Little Brown, $17.95), is a collection of word vignettes of woman and gardens. Each narrative is taken from novels, poems or gardening books by women, published between 1860 and 1935 at a time when women were beginning to venture out of the house to pursue hobbies other than embroidery, etc.

Authors include Vita Sackville West, Edith Wharton, Louisa May Alcott and Katherine Mansfeld. A suitable painting by artists such as George Samuel Elgood, Sidney Shelton and Hugh Norris accompanies each piece. In "The New Northern Gardener" (Firefly, $24.95), Jennifer Bennett has expanded her important book, "The Harrowsmith Northern Gardener," written several years ago. A new chapter on flowers with a list of more than 100 hardy ones (and personal notes) will enable gardeners in our zone to realize success with a large number of these plants. The herb section includes mail-order and zone information, and the how-to diagrams enhance the directions Bennett so carefully gives. If you are trying vegetables for the first time, here is good advice with descriptions of many and growing information. The author details the process from beginning to end for information from gardening directly in the ground to containers Check out the harvest and storing chapter, too.

Floral portraits

"Hydrangeas," Toni Lawson-Hall and Brian Rothera (Timber Press, $34.95) is an excellent book with all the details of these versatile shrubs.

The first half deals with all the "tech nical" aspects from garden sites, propa gation, cultural needs, where the genus originated and an interesting chapter about bloom color and soil require ments. We learn that color changes were first recorded in the late 18th cent tury and since then botanists have tried many experi ments to learn what works. Their results ar here.

The second half con tains the portraits giv ing all pertinent infor mation of this large genus. The color pho tographs are excellent I especially like the drawings of the leaves illustrating the shapes and veining, and indi vidual flowers showing their forms.

Dorling Kindersley has added four new titles to the Eyewitness Garden Handbooks. They are "Garden Trees ($17.95), "Shrubs & Climbers" ($19.95) managing editor Francis Ritter, "Peren nials" ($19.95) and "Roses" ($17.95) managing editor Helen Parker. Each book is divided into two sections and follows the same format.

The color plant portraits illustrate hundreds of plants and includes desir able information such as habit, light requirements, cultivation and size. If a generic group iş large, additional infor mation is given, for instance dahlias chrysanthemums and hostas. A quick flip through the pages further shows that the plants are grouped into specif ic categories for seasonal interest of type (i.e. roses). The second section deals with growing techniques and plant care.

"Taylor's Guide to Orchids," Judy White (Houghton Mifflin, $19.95), 1 suitable for experienced or novice grow ers. All cultural information and pho tographs of more than 300 varieties of orchids is included, and White has done a superb job.

State fair party is blue ribbon winner

MOSSOK JOHNSTON

Page G5

As a child and teenager, I loved going to the Michigan State Fair. When I was little, animals and kiddie rides were my passion. As I grew older, I'm sure mý folks thought it was an ideal place for me and my friends to meet boys. Not so; well, usually not so; my interest was usually centered around food!

I guess some things never change. My mouth still waters when I think about carnival treats, things like tartcrisp apples glistening with caramel topped with roasted chopped nuts; cotton candy; batter-dipped, golden fried corn dogs; triple scoops of creamy icecream in a sugar cone; plump hot dogs topped with sauerkraut, onions and mustard; huge crispy, golden, too-hotto-handle, french fries served in a paper cylinder splashed with vinegar (that was my Mom's favorite), and salt water taffy that stuck to your teeth, so much so, that you could taste it for nearly half a day.

I still enjoy those glorious foods, even cotton candy; they're my inspiration for a state fair theme party to celebrate the end of summer.

It's a great idea for a neighborhood get-together or weekend event for family and friends. You could even host blue ribbon contests for pie making, jams, and cakes. Have everyone bring his "best try" for each category and award blue ribbons. Take this idea one step, further and make it a fund-raiser for your favorite local charity, church, synagogue or school.

Cover picnic tables with red-andwhite checkered cloths and matching napkins, decorate, with streamers, balloons, and metallic ribbon. Rent "State Fair" (1962) starring Pat Boone, Ann Margaret, Bobby Darin, Tom Ewell and Alice Faye, and plug in your VCR so everyone can watch. Serve corn dogs, french fries, and other carnival fare, or create a menu of blue-ribbon-winning recipes.

preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Butter two 8-inch round layer-cake pans, dust them with flour, invert and tap lightly to shake out excess, and then set aside.

Sift together the flour, baking soda, salt, and cocoa and set aside.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, cream the butter. Add the vanilla and then the sugar and beat well. Beat in the eggs one at a time, scraping the bowl with a rubber spatula and beating well after each addition.

On low speed add the sifted dry ingredients in three additions, alternating with the milk in two additions. Scrape the bowl with the spatula and beat only until smooth after each addition.

Divide the batter between the prepared pans and spread smoothly.

Bake for 35-40 minutes until the layers just begin to come away from the sides of the pans.

Cool the layers in the pans for 5 to 6 minutes. Then, with a small, sharp knife, cut around the sides to release. Cover each layer with a rack, invert, remove the pan, cover with another rack and invert again, leaving the right side up to finish cooling.

Prepare a flat cake plate or serving board by placing four strips of wax paper around the outer edges of the plate. Place one cooled cake layer upside down on the plate, checking to see that the papers touch the cake all around.

The doctor shares a personal story

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

In 1979 I bought my existing business from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carmack, who had owned it for many years before and wanted to retire.

The Observer/THURSDAY, AUGUST 29, 1996

Today, Mr. Carmack, who is in his mid-80s, is in failing health; yet he maintains that sharp mental attitude that made him so successful. He lives with his daughter, Judy, and every few weeks I pick up some Kentucky Fried Chicken and we spend a few hours of conversation, which I so dearly love.

He is a man I have greatly admired for his business philosophy of helping others. I have used his principles for the past 17 years in business with the same belief that he has. What goes around comes around and when you do good for others, it comes back to you.

That wasn't the case in March 1995 when the Detroit News ran a frontpage story with my picture, announcing to the world how the Appliance Doctor was taking Carmack Appliance into bankruptcy court and filing under Chapter 11. The embarrassment of it all was a very depressing period in my life. I blamed others when I should have blamed the one sole person responsible: myself.

Today, after 14 months of having the court watch everything over my shoulder, my company has been removed from Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Court. It has taken a lot of hard work and an attitude of knowing what the business can and cannot do. The court wasn't mean to me, but rather very cooperative in teaching me how to get out of this serious bind.

I have also felt a certain amount of pride at the end of all this. It is rare for a company in Chapter 11 to get out of the predicament it is in. All in all, it has been a very big lesson in the life of a guy who has always worried about others and didn't pay attention to what was going on around himself. Lesson learned.

Page G6

Eighteen months ago I began doing my appliance show on WJR radio, which has proven to help others and achieve success. Much has happened during this period, and I'm sure you'll read about it soon in the columns of other writers. There has been so much written lately about this radio station that I stand so proud of that I feel I must defend their decisions of late.

Those who write the negative are those who don't work for WJR, and – without knowing the full scope of what's going on – show their ignorance to those of us who are in the know.

Many business experts inform corporations that they can't do things the way they used to; they have to change or they will stand still and fail. My bankruptcy might never have occurred if I would have followed the advice of experts. I'm sure you will see more changes at WJR, and they will be positive ones that incorporate good business sense and a continuing attitude of caring for their radio audience.

In closing this personal side story let me thank this newspaper for allowing me to write this weekly column and all the people along the way who have helped me. I want to thank all of you who read this column and listen to the radio show. I could never have achieved this limited amount of fame without the support of you. It is hard to explain how much I care for others without making it sound like a con job so I will just carry on doing what I do and try to make all of you proud of me. I can't do it without you.

Joe Gagnon; the Appliance Doctor, will answer your questions about maintaining and repairing large appliances. Gagnon is president of Carmack Appliances in Garden City and does a weekly radio program on WJR-AM. He is author of "First Aid from the Appliance Doctor," available at area bookstores.

remove it from the ice water and stir/beat briskly with a rubber or wooden spatula until it becomes smooth and thick enough to spread – or about like a very heavy mayonnaise. It should take only a few seconds or maybe a minute or so of stirring/beating. If the icing remains too soft, return it to the ice water briefly, then remove and stir/beat again.

When the icing is thick enough, quickly spread it about 1/3 inch thick over the cake on the plate. Cover with the second layer, placing it right side up (both flat sides meet in the middle), pour the remaining icing over the cake, and with a long, narrow metal spatula spread it over the top and sides of the cake. If you wish, form large swirls on the top, using the spatula to indent the icing from the outer rim toward the center in a rather abstract daisy shape.

Remove the wax paper strips by pulling each one toward a narrow end.

Flower power: Careful composition allowed Monte Nagler to produce this interesting and impact-filled picture of a building detail in Avebury, England.

Details offer big opportunities

When we see an interesting building, we often photograph the entire structure, thinking this is the best way to capture it on film.

Yet buildings provide many opportunities for the photographer to create exciting and, in many ways, unusual images of scenes that are always present that the majority of people pass by without seeing. Even buildings that overall may be quite dull may offer terrific photographic potential.

When we see an your building detail. Use a tripod to get teresting building, your camera steady and fine tune the e often photograph composition.

Time of day can play an important part in photographing details. When the sun is low or at an acute angle to the subject, textures are enhanced and shadows will play an important role in the final result.

In the English village of Avebury, where the homes and cottages are resplendent with building details, the scene shown here really caught my attention. The white iceberg roses winding up the wall combined with the flower barrel and window made the perfect composition. Overcast lighting highlighted the textures, and what you see here is a nicely executed shot of a building detail. Moving in close and photographing building details will reward you with many outstanding pictures indeed. Try to "say something" with your photos and attempt to have them reflect the essence of the buildings or structures you are photographing.

What I'm referring to is photographing building details.

An ornate door handle, an unusual window arrangement, the graphic quality of a fire escape, a pattern of bricks or a section of peeling paint – all can provide excellent picture potential.

Churches, in particular, contain many photographic opportunities. Details of statues, columns, stained glass and stonework all would work well and could form the basis of a photographic essay.

hose Art-Harrison people are wizards by design. That's the Art-Harrison Interior Design Studio, where they work wonders transforming or enhancing old pieces and creating others. Their handcrafted items are made specifically for the customer's space and needs.

"We're designers, we're not just decorators," said Arturo Sanchez, who is a partner in the Birmingham business with Barry Harrison.

A retrospective of Art-Harrison designs is displayed throughout Neiman-Marcus at the Somerset Collection, Big Beaver Road and Coolidge in Troy, through the first look," Murray said. "We made (the client) so happy."

Fun in style

The designers convey a sense of fun as well as of style. Old cedar chests or bureaus become functional flights of fancy, painted with scenes that include family members or family history. A child's desk features flat "flowerpots" that fit into grooves to stand as adjustable bookends, and a drawer that swings out in an arc to the side rather than straight ahead. "We strive to make things different, that have never been seen,"

Sanchez said. Among the pieces on display at from France. The designers used it as the top of a vanity table. The legs of the table were covered with suede, secured with tiny nickel tacks arranged in a curve to conceal the seam. The pastel tones of the marble matched the soft colors of the dressing room (converted from a spare room) where the table was placed.

For another client who collected lace, the designers fashioned an unusual display piece. The furnishing is like a ladder that hangs on a wall. Longer items can be draped in the back, while shorter ones can be arranged on shelves with copper backing, tilted for view.

In other projects, a kitchen was

"We like to use all different (types) of material," Harrison said.

The designers are particular about every detail. They painstakingly knotted material by hand to form a basket-weave look on some tuffets.

"We make sure everything's right," Harrison said.

"We both work on every project." They will present clients with gifts, such as a furnishing or accessory made of odds and ends from the project.

Art-Harrison also consists of Roberta Murray and Shane Inman, an intern from Michigan State University. The designers have tackled a wide variety of projects, for clients including a small family on a budget and a large law firm.

"It doesn't take any skill to throw gold at a project," Sanchez said. Rather, it takes thought to work within budget constraints, he said. One project stayed within a $300 range.

We did a real simple cottage-type

Neiman-Marcus are zebra hide stools with bronze hardware and nickel head trim. The stools are flat so they can be used as tables as well as for seating. The hides belonged to the client.

Also featured at the store is an ottoman called "Little Miss Muffet Meets Judy Jetson," with hand painted fabric and silver-leafed, futuristiclooking legs; benches and tables with curved legs and hand brushed finish; and sconces with hand painted wood and shades made of coleus leaves from the front walk of the designers' office.

One customer had a marble piece given a personal touch, with family members selecting different pieces of Pewabic tile to be arranged on the wall; and the designers devised a way to hang a large tapestry. Instead of laying flat against the wall, the tapestry curves – it has a forest scene, and the effect is like being in a forest.

These wizards work their magic with a number of tools and equipment.

The business partners balance the avant-garde and the conservative. Sanchez studied industrial design at Center for Creative Studies and interior design at Wayne State University, Harrison, a member of the Kentucky Department of the Arts, studied fine arts at Eastern Kentucky University and at Morehead. The two have paintings at the Ashley-Chris Gallery in Grosse Pointe.

Their future plans include developing a line of china and stemware; but they will continue delighting clients in residences and businesses. "Half of our customers (become) our best friends," Sanchez said.

Choose wallpaper that's easy to install

(AP) - If you can survive scanning endless pages of wallpaper books and find a pattern that suits your decor, color scheme and budget, hanging the wallpaper will come easy.

For your first job, choose a wallpaper that is easy to install, such as an inexpensive (less than $20 a roll) pretrimmed vinyl paper. Vinyl wallcoverings come paper-backed and fabricbacked, and both go up nicely. These papers don't stretch out of shape, even if you reposition them several times on the wall. Fabric-backed papers are more expensive and well suited for bathrooms or kitchens, where humidity can be a problem. Fabric-backed vinyls can be scrubbed and easily stripped off walls at a later date.

You can choose between prepasted wallpaper and those requiring adhesive. Prepasted paper only needs to be dunked or soaked in warm water to activate the paste impregnated in its back. Other wallcoverings are hung on the wall with an adhesive applied with a roller. If you use one of these papers, ask your wallpaper dealer for an appropriate adhesive.

Look for paper with a pattern repeat or drop of 10 inches or less. Pattern drop or repeat refers to a pattern's length (a repeat or drop of 10 inches is a pattern that repeats itself every 10 inches). The larger the drop, the more paper is wasted getting the pattern to align between the pieces.

You'll find the pattern repeat on the back of each pattern in your wallpaper sample books and on the roll's wrapping. By choosing a pattern with a small repeat for your first project, you can avoid excessive waste.

Build success into your first attempt by choosing a simple bedroom. Don't try a bathroom, kitchen or two-story hallway at first.

First, look in the back of the wallpaper book for a notice that tells you the area of each roll. Most rolls of American wallpaper contain about 36 square feet of material. Allowing for waste due to the pattern drop and trimming, the roll covers about 30 square feet. A roll of European (metric) wallpaper contains about 28 square feet and covers about 23 square feet of wall (these are based) on wallpaper with a drop under 18 inches).

To calculate how much paper you need, first find the wall area. Add the length of each wall, and multiply this total by the ceiling height. Multiply the height of each door and each window by its width. Add the door and window areas and subtract this from the wall area. This gives you the surface area to be papered. Add about 20 percent to the total papered area to allow for the few bad cuts (inevitable on your first job).

Divide this number by the area that your wallpaper roll covers, and that's the number of wallpaper rolls that you need. Make sure the paper is from the same lot or batch. The batch number is stamped on each roll, and all the rolls should have the same number. If you run short and have to order extra paper later, you might get a roll from a different batch run. The color or repeat pattern might not match exactly, even if you order the same pattern from the same store.

Clean the walls thoroughly and repair holes, cracks or dents. Wash or paint the room's woodwork and trim. Unless the woodwork is natural or its paint is in good shape, it will probably look dingy next to the new paper. It's easier to paint it now than after the paper is in place.

The right windows save energy cos

Q. My husband and I plan to build a new home next year when we retire. Can energy efficient construction techniques make that much of a difference in comfort and energy costs down the road? We plan to stay in the house for many years.

A. Energy costs do affect a homeowner's monthly budgets, so it makes sense to take some time to formulate an energy-efficient plan for new home construction or even just a room addition to an existing house.

An obvious way to improve energy efficiency would be to replace your furnace with a 90-percent-plus-efficiency unit. Basement walls can be insulated to four feet below grade on the exterior or interior, and house wraps and better insulation are good options. Even caulk around windows, doors and at sills will reduce air infiltration into the home.

The selection and quality of windows and doors is often overlooked as more homeowners are becoming involved in the design and construction decisions for their new houses and remodeling projects. This is due to the bewildering array of choices available in this product category.

The subject warrants more research

4. CUSTOM ORDER

than others because windows and doors account for approximately 40 percent of the energy losses-in your home. Additionally, window and door designs are limited only by your imagination and play a dramatic role in the look of the new house or room addition. When selection windows and doors, the following three factors should be considered:

- glass options
- type of framework
- air infiltration

Consumers no longer choose just one type of glass (glazing) for the openings in their entire house. For instance, windows on the sunny southern or western sides of a house should have solar-protective glass to help limit heat gain and ultraviolet fading problems. Windows on the north and east sides may need glass with high insulating properties to protect from blustery cold winter winds.

Other windows may face heavy street traffic or active play areas, so glass with noise-insulating properties may be needed. This type of designing will make you more comfortable, lower future energy costs and allow designs with large windows to be used without sacrificing efficiencies

Framework incorporates the construction, insulation, exterior cladding, hardware, weather-stripping and thermal breaks of the windows or doors. Look for a manufacturer that offers topquality manufacturing, freedom of design and trouble-free performance year after year and backs his promises with a good written warranty on components and glass.

Obviously, you should buy your windows from a company with an established reputation so it will be able to service your warranty.

Comparing different windows in terms of air infiltration can be a simple and accurate process since the National Fenestration Rating Council has established standard testing and labeling for manufacturers. All windows should come with an easy-to-read label.

The lower the "U" value, the better the energy performance.

Modern construction techniques make the home a thermal envelope. Homeowners make openings in their thermal envelope to allow natural light to filter in, ventilate in a controlled way and meet their personal design objectives.

The choice regarding windows and doors is an important one and well worth the extra time and investment up front. These decisions can help save you money in energy costs down the road.

Symposium shows how to place trees

BY MARTY FIGLEY SPECIAL WRITER

Many people are aware of the benefit of using trees in our landscapes, and it is important to make the right selection when we plant one on our property.

By learning the requirements of the tree we are considering, whether it is a native or a new cultivar, we can better assure our success.

With this in mind, our Ohio neighbors in Columbus will conduct a oneday tree symposium that should be of great interest to many. Ohio State University's Chadwick Arboretum and the American Horticultural Society will host the second annual Great American Garden Lecture Series 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 15, at the OSU Fawcett Center, 2400 Olentangy River Road. "Trees are Terrific: Putting Them in Their Place" will focus on selection, design, maintenance and survival of trees in urban landscapes.

A $60 registration fee includes a box lunch if pre-registered. Members of the American Horticultural Society can register for $45. For information, call the Chadwick Arboretum at (614) 2924678 or (614) 688-3479, or the AHS at (703) 768-5700.

"Participants will discover the diversity and beauty of new and native trees that are used to create contemplative wooded retreats in a small-scale garden," said Janet Oberliesen, program coordinator and development officer at the OSU Chadwick Arboretum. "The speakers will absolutely capture your imagination and give you a new appreciation of trees!"

Topics and speakers are: "Designing Their Space," landscape architect Warren Byrd Jr. of the University of Virginia; "Rediscovering Our Native Trees," plantsman Jim Wilson of "Victory Garden"; "Engineering Our Future Trees," Frank Santamour of the U.S. National Arboretum; "Maintaining Healthy Trees," horticulturist Nina Bassuk of Cornell University; and "I Look at Trees from Both Sides Now," associate professor Jim Chatfield of OSU Extension A tour of the OSU Tree Research Program is included.

Proceeds from this symposium will benefit the educational programming of the OSU Chadwick Arboretum and the AHS.

Limb-ering up: Many things need to be considered when choosing the correct tree for a garden.

Quick, easy decorating ideas beautify home

Are you plagued by unsightly rings on your coffee table? Distressed by the scratches on your favorite rocker or the burn on the antique dining table that has been in your family for generations? Perhaps you're looking to redecorate an old room, but just don't think you have the time. Never fear – help is on the way, and her name is Leslie Linsley.

One of the most trusted craft experts in America, Linsley has published more than 45 craft books and writes two syndicated columns on home decorating for First magazine. Her latest book, "Leslie Linsley's 15-minute Decorating Ideas" (St. Martin's Griffin), is simple enough for the novice, yet imaginative enough to appeal to the expert. The topics covered include:

Quick and easy changeovers for every season

- Holiday decorating
- Quick fix-ups

Readers can learn everything from selecting the right paint to setting the table for a seashore dinner. This book is a must for anyone looking to add a little beauty to a home. Here is an example of the helpful hints you will find: QUICK FURNITURE FIXES

• Scratches – To quickly conceal minor scratches on cherry, maple or mahogany, use Mercurochrome or iodine. Use liquid shoe polish in a color to match walnut or oak.

If there's a deep scratch, touch it up with stain. Then fill the cavity with polyurethane. Let dry, and sand lightly with extra-fine sandpaper. Go over the area, and the entire surface if needed, with paste wax.

• Gouges – Plastic wood can be used to fill deep gouges. If the gouges are shallow, they can easily be sanded and restained.

• White marks - Water rings don't have to be permanent. It's easy to remove them with a mixture of toothpaste and baking soda. If the white ring was caused by heat, rub with a cloth and mayonnaise. Wipe, let dry, then rub with furniture oil.

• Burns - Use a cotton swab dipped in nail polish remover to rub the darkened area. Take care not to touch the surrounding surface. Mix equal parts of nail polish remover and clear nail polish, and dab with the brush over the scarred area.

With area rugs, what's old is new

BY BARBARA MAYER AP SPECIAL FEATURES

The wall-to-wall carpeting is threadbare and stained in high-traffic places, but it's still good around the edges.

Or the hardwood floors, just redone, are worth showing off.

Either case calls for an area rug, or rugs. Area rugs _ especially those that reck of old money _ are more stylish today than carpeting.

To some extent, this is merely a turning of the wheel of floor fashion. But it coincides with an abundance of affordable reproduction rugs _ Orientals, Aubussons, needlepoints and more _ and consumer desire for ``conversation rugs" that reflect personal interests.

"The reproductions in some cases are so well done that they can fool even the keenest eye," says Bebe Winkler, an interior designer in New York.

The ample supply also coincides with the increasing scarcity _ and rising prices _ of antique rugs, and with a growing interest in antiques in general, according to David Amini, president of Beauvais Carpets Inc., a to-the-trade importer in New York.

With so many appealing designs, there's a temptation to use more than one in a room. Winkler put two Arts and Crafts style rugs in her living room _ a 9-by-12 and a 6-by-9 that share general design and color themes.

Rather than reproductions, Winkler prefers antique Orientals which have faded to a fine patina, but budgets rarely permit such extravagances. Amini says a 10-by-14 antique Aubusson might sell for $50,000, an excellent copy for about $14,000. Good copies of needlepoints and early 20th-century Arts and Crafts rugs are in the $3,000 to $5,000 range.

Even more affordable are area rugs found in carpet departments, specialty stores and mail-order catalogs. Rugs that buck tradition and are alive with color and pattern beckon the buyer.

"Consumers seem to be looking for rugs that reflect their personal interests, whether it be fruits and vegetables, birds, golfing, flowers, dogs or anything else." says Pam O'Toole, carpet fashion coordinator for Shaw Industries of Dalton, Ga.

Several new patterns were shown recently in New York by the Carpet and Rug Institute. From Milliken & Co., LaGrange, Ga., comes a field of quirky birdhouses with a border of birds. Joy Carpets Inc., of Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., introduced a rug featuring brightly-colored balls with letters and numbers. There's no rule on whether you should shop for furniture or floor coverings first, but those in the know generally start with furniture. A furniture plan helps determine rug size, andupholstery swatches can be carried along while rug shopping to helpin pattern and color selection. Make sure the fabric swatches are of good size. Little can be learned from a 2-inch square, Winkler says.

"People will find that stripes and small pattern fabrics will work with almost any patterned carpet, but large multicolor floral prints will present more problems," Winkler says.

If you're doing more than one room, she says, don't worry about using the same period or similar colors. A different type of area rug in every room is not only acceptable, it is more interesting.

To make the most of your money, choose rugs smaller than 12-by-18 feet because reproductions generally are made in smaller sizes. Therefore, large sizes are disproportionately expensive because they are either custom or antique.

Room-size rugs typically leave a 12to 16-inch border of wood floor showing. But smaller sizes can be used if you cluster furniture around an area rdg, rather than on it. Winkler usually allows about 4 inches of bare floor in front of the sofa. A rubber pad under the rug and a coffee table or ottoman on the rug can anchor it.

Rugs with a center medallion are rather unpopular today because they can throw off the design balance of a room, Amini says.

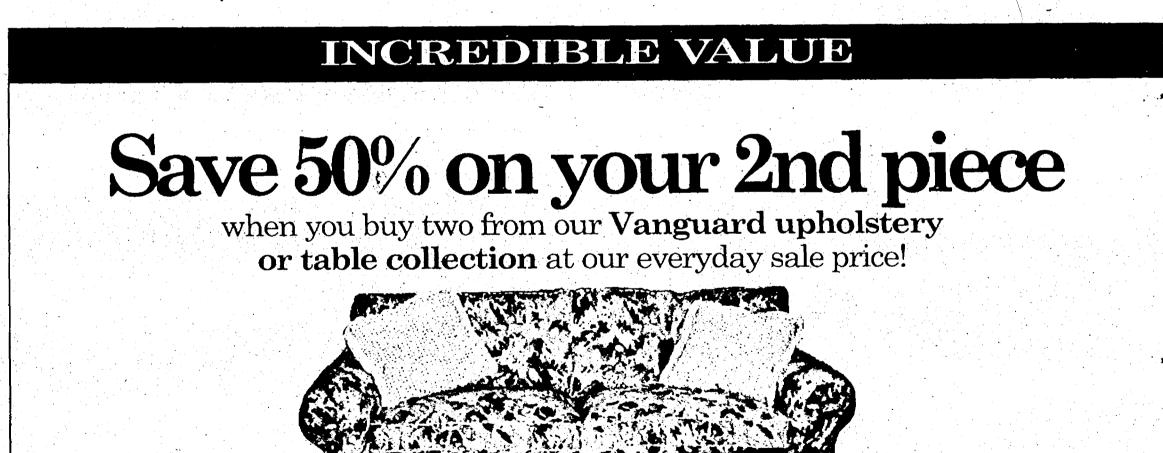

But Winkler says that shouldn't color your choice, particularly in antiques.

ighten up your life with a sunroom

(NAPS)-Studies show that as Americans are spending more time at home, they are investing more in home amenities to help them better enjoy free time. Sunrooms are one such amenity. Ranked as the top feature in new homes by more than one-third of consumers in a survey by Professional Builder & Remodeler, sunrooms have become the room of choice for many families.

The natural light, open airy feeling, and view of the outdoors create a unique and refreshing environment in the home that appeals to those looking for a retreat. In fact, relaxation is the number one reason homeowners add glass enclosures, according to a survey by Patio Enclosures, Inc., the nation's largest sunroom manufacturer.

When considering a glass enclosure, consumers should consider three types of rooms: three-season rooms, yearround insulated rooms and solariums.

Three-Season Enclosures

Three-season rooms are glass enclosed, with large windows or sliding doors and screens on all sides, and a solid roof which may contain glass panels. This type of room is the most popular due to its moderate cost and versatility. Three-season rooms are not designed to be heated, and are typically closed off from the rest of the house in the winter.

Year-Round Enclosures A year-round insulated enclosure looks similar to a three-season room, but it is built with insulated glass so it can be heated and cooled for use in every season.

📕 Solariums 🖟

Solariums are made with glass on all sides with a curved or straight-eave glass roof for a complete feeling of outdoors. Because they are made entirely with insulated glass, they can also be used throughout the year. Solariums are the most expensive sunroom option, and they are considered the most stylish.

Common to all sunroom types is a good return on investment. The National Association of Remodelers reports glass enclosures provide a 70-percent return nationwide.

And to maximize energy savings, Patio Enclosures, Inc. recommends separating your sunroom from the rest of the house with a door.

Shade challenges gardeners

BY J ROBERT NUSS FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) - Shady gardens and landscapes often present the greatest challenges to the home gardener. With a better understanding of the types of shade you have, the nature of the site, and the plants you choose, it is possible to create an attractive landscape in all settings.

Before you begin to plan and plant. you need to know the types of shade you have and their limitations so you can select plants that will grow under those specific conditions. .

Full shade under trees with heavy foliage presents the biggest challenge. Such areas get almost no direct sunlight during the growing season, allow for little air circulation, and rarely have enough ground moisture to support additional plants. These conditions can be improved by pruning trees high for more light and air, but be selective and don't destroy the shape of the trees. There will still be competition with tree roots for moisture.

To enhance the interest of full shade areas, apply a mulch around trees and define the edges between the mulch and the lawn where the shade pattern is the heaviest. Large mulched beds under trees serve to unify a planting and provide a growing area for surface ground covers like English ivy (Hedera helix). This is one ground cover that seems to tolerate the low light and moisture levels often found under dense tree canopies.

Open shade is found in areas open to the sky but shaded by high walls, buildings, rows of shrubs, or trees. Some deciduous flowering shrubs do nicely in these areas, but most will have fewer flowers than they would in sun or lighter shade. Select light-colored flower varieties for best results. Coralberry (Symphoricarpos species), warty barberry (Berberis verruculosa), Japanese holly (Ilex crenata), and Oregon hollygrape (Mahonia Aquifolium) will all do well in open shade.

Half-shaded areas get some direct sunlight in the morning or afternoon. Many broadleaf evergreens, such as Japanese andromeda (Pieris japonica), drooping leucothoe (Leucothoe fontanesiana), many varieties of rhododendron, and mountain laurel (Kalmia latifolia), do well in open shade as long as the site is protected from winter wins.

Areas with light shade get a broken flow of sunlight throughout the day from light filtering through the leaves of trees on adjacent properties. Nearly all species of viburnums and most deciduous flowering and evergreen shrubs perform well in light shade. Some plants to consider here would be arrowwood viburnum (Viburnum dentatum), mapleleaf viburnum (Viburnum acerifolium), witchhazel (Hamamelis species), or chokeberry (Aronia specie).

Firms learn how to handle disaster

BY ARLENE FUNKE SPECIAL WRITER

Hundreds of people are working in their eight-story, mostly glass Troy office building when emergency sirens begin shrieking.

Outside, a blackened sky and high winds present the possibility of a tornado coming.

Confused and panicky people jam elevators, rushing to the downstairs lobby. There, crowds of people are jammed up against doors and windows, oblivious to the danger of injury by shattered glass.

"In an emergency, would you know what to do?" asks Jane Bulting, a Bloomfield Hills emergency preparedness consultant.

"As a property manager, you are responsible," said Buiting, 45, who formed Disasters by Design, Inc., a consulting service, four years ago.

Buiting experienced that Troy inci-

"In case of a fire, most people die in the first five minutes," emergency preparedness consultant Jane Buiting said. "Most people haven't gone through a fire drill since they were in school."

Some factors Builting takes into consideration when preparing an individualized response plan include:

H Layout of building and location of exits.

Possible storage of hazardous materials in building.

Location of emergency shelters.

Whether someone has been designated responsible for calling 911.

"Without a plan, it's difficult to respond effectively," said Amos. "Drills reinforce our preparedness (and) give us an opportunity to work with other response agencies."

Gary Skog, Bloomfield Hills, affiliated with Harley Ellington Design in Southfield, is treasurer.

Fortunately, the storm didn't spawn a tornado, and no one was hurt, but "the potential was there," she said. Managers of office buildings, apartments and other structures where people work, live or spend time have "minimal" knowledge of what to do in an emergency, according to Buiting.

"Most employees are told nothing, and assume everything is okay," Buiting said. "That's a mistake."

People don't like to think about how they would respond to an emergency, said Pete Baldwin, deputy fire chief in Farmington Hills.

"The biggest problem we have in emergency management is convincing people they need it," said Baldwin, 43. Buiting is a former property manager with 16 years' experience. She formed her company after hearing how colleagues in other cities suffered after hurricanes and earthquakes.

Buiting works with companies, property-management organizations, units of government and police and fire teams on ways to protect people and buildings.

Her specialty is organizing mock disasters. Most are sponsored by professional property-management organizations as training for its members. "Seeing is believing," Buiting said. "It's prevention. The emphasis is on saving lives."

Managers of office, commercial and residential buildings recognize safety needs, said Robert Gerholz, president of a 130- member local chapter of the Institute of Real Estate Management (IREM). Members of this organization earn, through education and training, the designation certified property manager.

"I think the whole idea is good one, either in-house or with a mock disaster," said Gerholz, 40. "There is always plexity of the job, ranging from a few hundred dollars for a simple response plan, to thousands of dollars for a mock disaster. Her most costly project was $15,000.

"Most property owners do care about safety." Buiting said. "They're not sure of their expertise."

When Buiting organizes mock disasters, she creates a script, Special effects, such as loud noises, fake smoke and theatrical "blood" for dramatic effect. Rescue workers, emergency officials and Red Cross personnel must respond quickly to evacuate people and treat "victims."

Emergencies cause panic, said Ed Amos, American Red Cross director of emergency response for Southeast Michigan , who took part in the mock disaster at the Clarion.

fighters from Farmington Hills and surrounding communities rushed to the scene.

Ladders and special equipment were used to evacuate students who posed as victims, some of whom stood at windows screaming.

The "victims," who "originally thought it was a joke" got caught up in the drama, Buiting said.

"It was a good drill," Buiting said. "There are so many problems with disaster. If you don't know what to do, at least you can learn what not to do." Each drill includes a critique to see how rescue attempts could be improved.

"I'd like to think that things would run that smoothly in a real incident, but I'm not sure it would," said Baldwin. George Bonk, executive director of Building Owners and Managers Association of Metropolitan Detroit (BOMA) is hoping to schedule a mock disaster for the 260 members of his organization.

"I think this would be a fantastic learning experience for everyone, not just my members," said Bonk, 61. "I have a plan, but we just can't pull it off."

Planning a successful mock disaster requires six to nine months of planning, finding a suitable location, and obtaining cooperation with governmental units and rescue organizations, according to Buiting.

Bonk believes fears about possible adverse publicity, and fears about the bombings in New York, Oklahoma City and Atlanta are blocking his efforts.

"It's a legitimate concern," Bonk said. "Just look at what is happening."

ally. Starts rose in the Northeast and the Midwest but fell in the South and West.

The Commerce Department said construction of new homes and apartments totaled 1.46 million units at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, down from a revised 1.47 million in June. The June estimate originally was 1.48 million.

It was the smallest number of starts since last March, when builders laid foundations at a 1.44 million rate. It also was the third straight decline, the first time that has happened since January-March 1995.

The downward trend was consistent with the recent performance of most other sectors of the economy. It also gave the latest suggestion the Federal Reserve will not feel compelled to raise short-term interest rates next week to head off inflation pressure. Despite generally rising mortgage rates and the recent slowing, starts during the first seven months of 1996 still were 12.4 percent above those of a corresponding period a year earlier. Starts for all of 1995 totaled 1.35 million.

But as the most interest-sensitive sector of the economy, housing was bound eventually to respond to higher rates.

The National Association of Home Builders' Housing Market Index fell 3 points to 57 in August, suggesting further slowing to come. It was the third consecutive decline in the index, based on surveys of association members.

"What we're seeing now is the negative impact of higher rates on demand for new homes," said association president Randy Smith of Walnut Creek, Calif. "Builders are definitely experiencing fewer sales and less traffic."

Still, new home sales remained above a 700,000 annual rate for a fifth straight month in June, the first such five-month string since the November 1986-April 1987 period.

Analysts contend that job and income growth and upbeat consumer confidence often offset the effects of higher mortgage rates.

Applications for building permits, often a gauge of future activity, rose 2.6 percent to a 1.45 million rate. It was the first advance in three months.

Single-family starts - 80 percent of new home construction plunged 5.7 percent in July, to a 1.13 million rate.
