

2024 Yearbook

The APEA is a UK based organisation, drawing membership from all quarters of the petroleum industry, including Regulators from National and Local Government Authorities, Oil Companies, Equipment Manufacturers and Suppliers, Service and Installation Organisations, Training Establishments and many others. It is seen to be unique in representing all sides of the industry and in providing a forum for debate and the generation of technical guidance.

The APEA was founded in 1958. Some 30 petroleum-licensing enthusiasts started the Association in the West Midlands and their objectives still hold true today:

- The advancement of scientific and technical knowledge
- The supply and interchange of information
- Uniformity of standards interpretation and application

Today the organisation has over 1100 members spread across many countries all over the world. In the UK and Europe we encourage organisation of branches. Currently there are eight branches in the UK.

Members receive a quarterly magazine The Bulletin and also this combined desk diary/Yearbook free of charge. The association also publishes technical guidance, runs training courses covering a wide range of subjects, provides technical advice and runs APEA Live, the industry conference, exhibition and awards dinner.

If you would like to know more about the activities of the APEA or membership, please contact the Association Business Manager:

The Association for Petroleum and Explosives Administration

The APEA

The Association's Aims and Objectives

The aims and objectives of the Association for Petroleum & Explosives Administration have remained unchanged since the foundation of the organisation in 1958, principally these are:-

- The advancement of scientific, technical and legal knowledge required in the administration of the Petroleum & Explosives Acts and associated Environment legislation
- To facilitate the interchange of information, ideas and practices on all matters pertaining to Petroleum & Explosives and associated Environment legislation
- To attain, so far as is practicable, uniformity in the administration of this legislation
- To establish the formation of branches in the United Kingdom and other countries
- To co-operate with other bodies having similar objectives to those of the Association, to act as an authoritative body for consulting with government, public bodies and others in matters of public, professional and scientific interest concerning petroleum, explosives and associated environmental law

APEA Branches

APEA Branches have been established across most parts of the UK and Ireland, with a growing number of European and North American members. The Association's branches serve as the forum for members. Contact details for branch secretaries are provided in each copy of the APEA's magazine, The Bulletin and on the APEA website at www.apea.org.uk.

The Bulletin

This is the quarterly magazine, published by the Association and is sent free to all members. The Bulletin includes news, press releases, features of technical and legal interest, covering all aspects of petroleum and explosives and training and branch information. The Bulletin provides a forum for technical, legal, safety and some-times controversial matters.

General Information

The Association comprises Individual Members, Corporate Members, Fellows, Honorary Members, and Retired Members. The APEA is managed by the National Council which consists of Officers of the Association, four people elected from the Membership, and representatives from local branches.

The APEA has grown rapidly and continues to gain strength and recognition in its field of work. The APEA Business Manager is the first point of contact for day to day enquiries and can be contacted at admin@apea.org.uk or on + 44 (0) 345 603 5507. Information is also available on the APEA website at www.apea.org.uk.

The APEA is a company Limited by Guarantee.

APEA Events

APEA Live, the best 24 hours on the trade calendar, a specialist annual event for the petroleum industry, incorporating an Exhibition, Conference and Awards Dinner, all in one fantastic day. This event is usually held in October or November of each year. Detailed information is available at www.apea.org.uk or please contact the APEA Business Manager at admin@apea.org.uk.

In addition to this event your Branch will hold Branch meetings during the year at various locations. This is an opportunity for members to meet fellow branch members and provide the means whereby members can exchange information, knowledge and experience as well as providing a platform for speakers from members of the Association, industry, government departments and elsewhere.

Foreword

Welcome to the 2024 APEA Yearbook/diary. It has been an honour to be Chairman of the APEA for the last two years. Having spent so long in our industry it was great to feel that I was giving something back to the Association that means so much to so many of us. I did realise that there are some huge disadvantages – such as having to stay sober until the awards have been presented at APEA Live but on the plus side I had an opportunity to meet even more of you.

The work of the Association, your National Council, its various Committees and your local Branches rumble on. 2023 has seen one of our regular updates of the Blue Book (in conjunction with the Energy Institute) which has absorbed time and challenged the thinking (in a positive way) for many of us.

As I mentioned last year, post-COVID, Branches have struggled to arrange face-to-face meetings. It has become much harder for people to justify being away from their workplace for such events now everyone is used to online and hybrid meetings. I do feel that a lot is lost by not meeting up, but I am as guilty as everyone else in trying to work out how to fit everything in. I guess one reflection of that has been the success of our online training and I take my hat off to our Training Committee (Chaired by Tom Daily) for having the foresight to start that here running long before COVID.

In light of this challenge APEA Live is not only our flagship event but is now one of the few occasions when we actually get to see one another, to socialise and “chew the fat”. Where would we be without it?! In 2022 we introduced a light sandwich buffet for anyone attending our AGM to make it easier for attendees to fit everything in to the day. At National Council we really would like to know what we could do to make it easier for members to attend. If you think there is anything more we could do, please feed it through via your local Branch Representative and we'll see what can be achieved.

I'm not sure what 2024 will bring to our industry other than (hopefully) more progress with Future Fuels. EV has been a challenge to introduce and I'm sure many of us are agreed that the future is really going to be mix and match – there's no one size fits all solution for the transition away from fossil fuels. I'm sure that HVO and DME will be in the mix but it would also be good to see further moves towards hydrogen for light vehicles alongside CNG and LNG which is gradually developing for heavier vehicles. There has been progress – but very slowly.

It just leaves me to thank the next Chairman for taking over the reins and to encourage as many of you as possible to become involved in the Association at Branch or National Council level.

Doreen Pooley
APEA Chairman

The APEA also publishes the Code of Practice for Ground floor, multi storey and underground car parks. This can be downloaded directly from the APEA website and is available to members at £11.00 and £21.00 to non APEA members.

This Code of Practice is an authoritative guide to all installations of electric vehicle charging equipment. It has been updated in line with recent changes in BS 7671 (IET Wiring Regulations) and reflects some major developments in this area including vehicle to grid, smart integration and inductive charging.

As part of the rapid growth and development of the whole electric vehicle charging infrastructure, filling stations are seen as an obvious place to provide charging facilities. However, it is recognised that difficult safety and logistical issues are linked to such installations.

When the 4th Edition of the Code of Practice for Electric Vehicle Charging Equipment Installation was published, significant technical discussions were still underway about this area to help finalise and clarify the safety issues that needed to be addressed. The work behind these meetings was led by APEA (the Association for Petroleum and Explosives Administration) who represent the major stakeholders in this sector. APEA and the IET are therefore now issuing this joint publication to help provide important guidance in this area.

Properties of Petroleum

Product Description

Gasolines are complex mixtures of volatile hydrocarbons distilling between approximately 30°C and 220°C and consisting of compounds in the C4 to C12 range. They are produced by blending refinery streams to meet the required performance specifications. Many gasolines in Europe also contain blending components of non-petroleum origin, especially oxygenates (mainly ethers and alcohols), and additives may be used to boost certain performance features. Lead alkyls can be used to meet octane requirements, but an increasing proportion of gasolines are now 'unleaded'.

For regulatory purposes, the position of gasoline is complex. There is an entry in EINECS for 'Gasoline', but this describes a substance consisting purely of hydrocarbons. This has the following definition:

EINECS No. 289-220-8, CAS No. 86290-81-5

Gasoline.

A complex combination of hydrocarbons consisting primarily of paraffins, cycloparaffins, aromatic and olefinic hydrocarbons having carbon numbers predominantly greater than C3 and boiling in the range 30°C to 260°C (86°F to 500°F).

Thus, the hydrocarbon component of a gasoline, being in EINECS, can be considered as a substance, even though it is usually produced by blending together several refinery streams. However, the addition of performance additives and oxygenates means that marketed gasolines are preparations and have to be dealt with on a case-by-case basis.

The composition of the hydrocarbon component of a gasoline can vary widely depending on the type and nature of the crude processed, the refinery processes available, the process conditions, the overall balance of demand between gasoline and the other refinery products, and the product specifications. The refinery streams most commonly used are derived from the following sources:

1. crude distillation (naphtha)
2. alkylation, isomerization and solvent refining
3. cracking (hydrogenation, catalytic, thermal and steam)
4. catalytic reforming
5. hydrotreating
6. Oxygenates (MTBE, TAME etc)

EINECS lists a number of different refinery streams from the above sources and these are identified in Appendix 1A-1G of CONCAWE product dossier No 92/103.

The main contents of this section deal primarily with the hydrocarbon content of gasoline as defined by the EINECS entry, although general comments are included concerning the use of additives and oxygenates.

Hydrocarbon Components

The composition of gasoline is variable and depends on the ranges of blending components which may be used.

Current motor gasolines are generally blends of reformate catalytically and/or thermally cracked streams, isomerates and straight run gasoline.

Aviation gasolines are predominantly alkylates (obtained by combining C4 and C5 isoparaffins with C3, C4 and C5 olefins) with the possible addition of more aromatic components including toluene. The normal ranges of hydrocarbon types (determined by ASTM test method D1319) in commercial gasoline are indicated overleaf:

Table 1 Normal ranges for hydrocarbons types in gasoline

Hydrocarbon type		Motor gasoline	Aviation gasoline
Paraffins	(% vol)	30-90	75-100
Cycloparaffins (Naphthenes)	(% vol)	1-35	0-1
Aromatics	(% vol)	5.55	0-25
Olefins	(% vol)	0.20

The paraffin fraction includes n-hexane, generally no more than 5% vol and typically 1-2% vol.

The aromatics fraction contains benzene. From a review of extensive analytical data from 16 countries over the 1986 to 1988 period, CONCAWE estimated an overall average benzene content in motor gasoline of 2.6% vol. Unleaded premium gasoline (95 RON) had a slightly higher average benzene content of about 3.3% vol. The benzene content in aviation gasoline consisting only of alkylate will be close to zero, but may range up to 3% vol when other refinery streams are used.

Oxygenates

Oxygenated compounds, mainly methyl tertiary-butyl ether (MTBE), but also including methanol, ethanol, and tertiary-butyl alcohol (TBA) are often blended with gasoline hydrocarbons to increase octane numbers. Some European gasolines already contain oxygenates and their use is likely to increase.

Properties of Petroleum

The use of oxygenates in gasolines is covered by an EC directive which specifies two sets of maximum levels. The first set gives maximum concentrations which member states must permit. The second provides maximum concentrations (usually higher) which member states may permit under national legislation without the gasoline being considered as a special fuel requiring labelling as oxygenated fuel on service station pumps. In this second set, a maximum oxygen content of 3.7% wt is specified. Limits for individual oxygenates which must also not be exceeded include: methanol 3% vol; ethanol 5% vol; TBA 7% vol; and MTBE 15% OXYGENATES

Additives

Additives used in gaseolines include the following types: anti-knock agents (octane improvers), anti-oxidants, corrosion inhibitors, metal de-activators, combustion chamber scavengers, inlet system detergents, carburettor anti-icing compounds and dyes. In general, low concentrations well below 0.1% wt are used. The specific identity of additives is proprietary information of the individual supplier.

An exception to the proprietary nature of additives is the common use in leaded gasolines over many years of tetra-alkyl lead compounds as octane improvers in conjunction with ethylene halogenides as lead scavengers. Lead levels have been reduced in motor gasolines over recent years and do not now normally exceed 0.15g/l, corresponding to 0.03% wt of tetra-ethyl lead with 0.02% wt of ethylene halgenide. Aviation gasolines usually contain higher levels of lead at 0.56 or 0.85g/l, corresponding to 0.12 and 0.19% wt of tetra-ethyl lead with 0.07 or 0.11% wt of scavenger. It should be noted that there is an EC directive which specifies an upper limit of 0.013g/l lead content for unleaded gasolines.
