urning through steep, thick terrain, the Alder Lake fire has grown to about 173 acres at a rate of 20 to 30 acres per day since it was first reported on Aug. 11, according to officials from the U.S. Forest Service.

On Tuesday night, with the scent of burning wood lingering in the air, officials from four different agencies told a crowd of more than 100 people in the Mineral school gymnasium the latest updates on the Alder Lake fire. Dozens of officials from national, state and local agencies were on hand to explain the situation and tell residents living along Pleasant Valley Road to be prepared should the fire grow to three critical levels. Alder Lake is located about 30 miles southeast of Yelm.

The fire is more than a mile away from the neighborhood, but the two are separated by rugged and steep terrain.

The fire is being managed jointly by the U.S. Forest Service and the Washington Department of Natural Resources, but they are also working with the Lewis County Sheriff's Office and neighboring fire protection districts. It's currently burning across the Pierce and Lewis county line, partially on state land, but mostly in the national forest.

According to officials from the U.S. Forest Service, the fire burned through 173 acres of old-growth forest as of Tuesday night. It was started when lightning struck a steep slope on July 26 and smouldered for about two weeks until Aug. 11 when it was big enough to be seen and reported.

The Mineral Lake Fire Department was the first agency to respond to the fire, but it was too far up into the mountains for them to attack.

The mountainside hit by the fire is a north-facing slope that sits at a 40-60 percent grade. Officials say the blaze is spreading laterally to the east and west then burning to the north and south. Russell Wilstead, assistant fire management officer on the Gifford Pinchot National Forest, said the fire is contained by "only a couple percent," but it is moving slowly.

Yelm Residents Question High Water Rates

PAYING FOR GROWTH: City Says Rates Can't Go Lower by Law

BY STEVEN WYBLE

swyble@yelmonline.com

Some Yelm residents are feeling the heat not just in the weather, over the years in Yelm. In 2007, but in their monthly water bills, and they're asking why the city's water rates are so high.

The city says it is charging the rate it must by law: a rate that pays for the utility's debt, as well as the cost of operating the utility. And the city points out that while water rates are higher in Yelm, some of Yelm's other utilities are cheaper than in surrounding communities.

Yelm resident Megan Zahringer has expressed frustration with the city's water rates.

"My friends who live in Olympia and Lacey and all these other charge that runs areas, their base pay is like $13, $16," Zahringer said.

Yelm's base charge for water in 2015 is $32.52. Adding in the base charges for sewer and storm drain, the total base charge for Yelm utility customers is $89.68.

The cost of water has gone up the water base charge was $11. The sewer base was $41.06 and the storm drain base was $2.50.

In 2014, the water base charge was $30.04, the sewer base was $52.56, and the storm drain base remained $2.50.

For 2015, the water base is $32.52, the sewer base is $54.66 and the storm drain base is $2.50.

The city uses a tiered rate system for water, so the more water a customer uses, the higher the rate they pay per cubic foot.

Stormwater is the water dis-off impervious surfaces such rooftops, as streets paved and parking lots. The rates vary depending on property size Yelm Mayor and impervious Ron Harding surface area.

Sewer rates are determined by base flow. Residential accounts are charged a set sewer fee, whereas commercial accounts include a base flow charge plus additional charges when the base flow exceeds 900 cubic feet.

"My main problem is just our base water," Zahringer said. "I don't understand it. It was before this water bill even came that I've had an issue with the base, because I think last year I called them (the city) because we weren't home for

The primary race for Tenino mayor was determined by a coin toss last week in the Thurston County Courthouse. Wayne Fournier won the coin toss to be listed above Bret Brodersen on the November ballot.

"It's all fun to watch unfold, but it's meaningless in the grand scheme of things. What matters is we get our message out there and winning the election," Fournier said in a later interview.

The race was tied after the Aug. 4 primary closed and remained that way even after the final three votes were counted last week. Those three were votes split between Fournier, Brodersen and John O'Callahan.

Brodersen and Fournier each had 136 votes, while O'Callahan had 78. Overall, the voting turnout was quite low in the Thurston County primary. At 37.8 percent (351 out of 928), Tenino had a substantially higher percentage of voters turn out than the county

jloughlin@yelmonline.com

After decades of allowing the district to use its fields, the Rainier Sportsman's Club and the Rainier School District have chosen to part ways.

In years past, the district has used the club's field for football practice, baseball practice and games, parts of its 17-acre property for hosting cross-country meets and the building for testing all at no cost other than maintaining the club's grounds. It also used the club's well water to irrigate the high school's football field and baseball field for football practice.

There has never been a written contract or agreement between the club and the district, just verbal agreements with a handshake.

The change came about when new board members were elected to head the sportsman's club this past spring. Because RSC needs funds to pay for upkeep and repairs to its building - which was completed in 1968 after five years and 19,167 hours of volunteer labor - the new leadership made the decision to require payment from the school district for continued use of its facilities.

"We decided that we need to start getting some funds to put ter, no fee. I met with the superintendent and I explained to him best at the lowest cost."

building's falling apart, we don't have the funds to put back into it."

RSD Superintendent Tim Garchow said he understands.

"The relationship with the Rainier School District and the sportsman's club has been a great one for a long time. ... The sportsman's club supports Rainier School District and the Rainier School District supports the sportsman's club," Garchow said. "I understand that when an organization has goals, goals cost money and you need to charge.

"Mr. Dolman is doing exactly what I would do. He's doing what he believes and the board believes to be in the best interest of their organization by increasing revenues to meet their goals, and I applaud him, that's great leadership," Garchow continued. "And back into the premises," RSC I'm doing what I hope is viewed President Jack Dolman, of Yelm, as good leadership by being a said. baseball field and its property for cross-country each season, Dolman said. The fee for the fields would be waived if the district mowed the grass.

"From the get-go, when we first met with Tim, and he was very accommodating and sociable, it was explained to him that, 'We're here to help you. We don't want animosity between the two. The school's part of the community, we're part of the community. We'll do whatever we can to help you people out," Dolman said.

RSC board member Dean Conway of Rainier said past bills were as high as $600 to $700 because of the irrigation.

"They've been getting water for 30 years for nothing," RSC Vice President Richard Burnham, of Bucoda, said of the school district. "Our bank account just keeps going down, down, down and the building is, nobody wants to use it for weddings and things anymore because it looks like hell. We pay the light bill, we can't afford to do anything on the building or anything else, so it's time that they step up and pay to use whatever it is they want to use."

Garchow said his understanding was RSC was offering a package deal of $1,000 per month for water for 12 months, regardless of if the district used any water, $300 per month for the fields and $4,000 toward any repairs to the pump or well should they be needed. He said when he asked if the district could rent the fields, but not use the club's water, he was told no.

"If the use of the water and the use of the field were not connected and the sportsman's club are willing to allow us to use the baseball field in exchange for mowing it while still purchasing the water from the city, we'd be more than happy to do that," Garchow said.

Dolman said it is not true that the district had to pay RSC for water or electricity in order to rent the fields.

Conway expected a different response.

"We're trying to make money to survive," he said. "So we're just trying to keep afloat and we thought that, being we're so generous to the school district over the last three or four decades, that they might kinda help us with the $700 light bill they were generating, but Tim the Toolman don't wanna talk that way.'

Conway said he believes Garchow is after RSC's property.

"This outfit here, years ago if it "The bottom line is they've went to the wayside the Women's Fire Auxiliary got the place," he said. "There's no more Women's Auxiliary. So then they changed all that. ... Now if we decide to throw our hands in the air then the school district would get it. It's the same type of thing they had with the building over there (historic schoolhouse). ... Well I think Tim the Toolman just wants this place, myself personally. ... They've not tried to help us; they've tried to deplete our checkbook. They have not been cooperative about anything. I think he's an ass myself."

More Than Just Scraping By

If you are not a fan of dreaded morning breath (and who is?), there is a very simple and effective way to banish it. Along with brushing and flossing, many people are embracing the Ayurvedic self-care ritual known as "tongue scraping." This oral hygiene practice involves using an inexpensive tongue scraper to remove bacteria, food debris, fungi, toxins, and dead cells from the surface of the tongue. As a result of removing this virtual compost layer of unwanted debris from the surface of the tongue, and especially bacteria at the back of the tongue that toothbrushes find difficult to reach, a source of halitosis (bad breath) is eliminated. Moreover, tongue scraping may also improve the way food tastes.

P.S. A white film on the top of the tongue is an indication of the presence of bacteria.

Conway admitted he has never met or spoken to Garchow.

Garchow said he was unaware that the district was in line to obtain the club's property and thought the bylaws left everything to the Woman's Auxiliary of Lacey.

"I am not interested in taking over their fields or taking over their facilities," he said.

Burnham said he doubts the city has enough water pressure for the district to water its fields. Garchow said by watering during offpeak hours, the district has been successfully watering its fields since the beginning of August and does not anticipate any issues going forward as the district has switched to more efficient sprinkler heads.

In the future, Dolman said there is a possibility that the district could use the field again, but in the meantime the club is talking with other groups. At its last meeting, Dolman said two men asked to use RSC's field for youth football next year and the board was in favor of it, so they were asked to come back and talk to the club next year to set up a schedule. Conway said the RSC will not charge the organization to use or irrigate the field, they will just have to keep it mowed.

The unemployment figures out for July shows local unemployment continuing to hold relatively steady for the fifth month in a row.

According to preliminary and not seasonally adjusted figures released by the state Employment Security Department earlier this week, Washington state's unemployment rate last month was 5.4 percent, Thurston County's was 6.0 percent and Pierce County's was 6.4 percent.

Lewis, Grays Harbor, Pend Oreille and Ferry counties had the highest unemployment rates in July 2015, between 8.4 and 9.8 percent, while Douglas, Asotin, Snohomish, Chelan and King had the lowest rates, at or below 5.0 percent. The national seasonally adjusted unemployment held steady from June to July at 5.3 percent.

Since dropping 1.1 percent from February to March, both Thurston and Pierce counties have not seen its unemployment rate change, either up or down, by more than 0.4 percent.

The July Monthly Employment Report from the state ESD estimates Washington gained 5,900 new nonfarm jobs on a seasonally adjusted basis from June 2015 to July 2015 with a gain of 7,000 new private sector jobs and a loss of 1,100 jobs in the public sector.

"Washington's economy continues on a positive track with 5,900 new nonfarm jobs from June to July 2015," state labor economist Paul Turek said. "The number of people in the labor market decreased slightly since last month, but we still have roughly 52,000 more people in the labor market than we did in July 2014 – and the majority of bor force with 113,389 people industries continued to experi- employed and 7,807 people unence growth."

Eight sectors saw growth across the state from June to July while four suffered losses and one remained unchanged. The top three industries with the largest gains, on a seasonally adjusted basis, were: financial activities with 2,600 new jobs; retail trade with 1,700 new jobs; and leisure and hospitality with 1,500 new jobs.

Wholesale trade lost 1,800 jobs, government lost 1,000 jobs and education and health services lost 300 jobs.

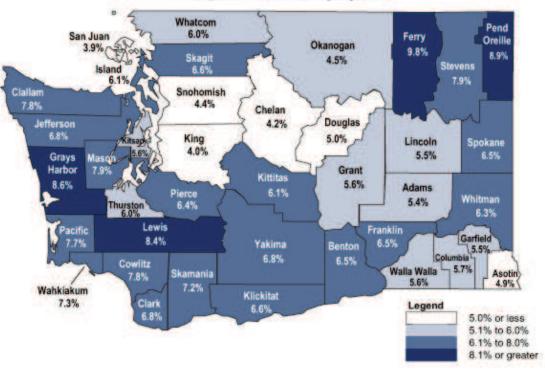

The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates Washington gained 108,600 jobs from July 2014 to July 2015, on a not seasonally adjusted basis, with 101,200 new jobs in the private sector and 7,400 new jobs in the public sector.

From July 2014 to July 2015, 12 major industries saw growth and only one suffered losses. The top five industry sectors with the largest employment gains from July 2014 to July 2015, not seasonally adjusted, were: professional and business services with 24,000 new jobs; construction with 18,600 new jobs; leisure and hospitality with 16,800 new jobs; retail trade with 13,600 new jobs; and education and health services with 12,300 new jobs.

The mining and logging industry lost 100 jobs from July 2014 to July 2015.

According to estimates by the BLS, the preliminary labor force for Thurston County last month was 122,623. Out of those, 115,225 were employed while 7,398 were not. Smoke choked the air in the Nisqually Valley over the weekend and throughout this week, providing a tangible reminder of an historic, devastating fire season that has wreaked havoc across the Pacific Northwest.

While our area has seen a number of fires, including the 173-acre Alder Lake fire just 30 miles southeast of Yelm, it's Eastern Washington that has absorbed the brunt of the blazes burning homes and properties throughout the region.

In Okanogan County, more than 370.000 acres have been scorched, setting an unfortunate state record for a single wildfire. More than 600,000 acres have been burned in all, with a total of 16 fires still active as of Monday afternoon.

The disasters have as usual brought forth scores of charitable donations and offers of assistance. In order to ensure your money provides the most positive impact, consider donating to local charities with low administrative costs and proven records of providing aid following fires. The information was provided by newspaper publisher Scott Wilson, a native of Okanogan County.

MARKET REPORT

• Music to our Ears: A diverse and wonderful group of musicians are rotating every week to fill the air with song, thanks to our music sponsor Today's Dental Center.

• Vendors: The market now has pool of over 40 vendors offering created so many new vegetarian dishes with advice from farmers. My children have tried so many new veggies!"

"Thank you for being kid-friendly and helping my kids navigate the farmers market so they feel comfortable spending money on good food."

Editor,

My husband and I would like to give our heartfelt thanks to Todd and Veronica Ford.

Todd and Veronica spotted smoke and fire while driving home on state Route 702, Wednesday evening, Aug. 19. They came to our house to alert us of the fire. Not only did they and their older children help us to set up our garden hoses, but they stayed with us until everything was under control.

There was a brush fire behind our property that was quickly getting out of control. While waiting for the fire units to respond, my husband watered down the Scotch broom and pine tree that was precariously close to the fire.

The people who had the brush fire did not want the fire department to be called.

I shudder to think what would have happened if these strangers did not come and warn us of this fire.

So thank you for going above and beyond to alert a family of a dangerous situation. Not only did you help strangers but you taught your children a very valuable lesson to do what was morally right. It also helped us to reaffirm that there are still good people in this world who unselfishly help others.

Godspeed.

halfway through the 2015 farmers' market season. The market continues to blossom as evidenced by the following report.

"Thank you for making Sundays special for our whole family." - Parent of a Power of Produce Participant

The success of any farmers market comes down to people: the farmers who grow the food, the vendors with their food and crafts, the musicians who enhance the atmosphere, the growing community who votes with their dollars, and the sponsors who support it.

As the Yelm Farmers Market heads into September, we celebrate everyone who has made this year the most successful yet.

Some highlights:

• Market sales are up 30 percent from this time last year to nearly $90,000 so far. Go, vendors.

• Population Growth: Over 8,000 adults have visited our market at Nisqually Springs Farm since opening day.

everything from gourmet mushrooms and artisanal breads and cheeses to custom-designed jewelry and natural body products, in addition to fresh fruit and vegetables. Every booth has its own fan club, with shoppers returning week after week for their gourmet hot dog, ripe corn, etc.

• So, Like ... We now have 2,200 Facebook followers.

The children's Power of Produce Club has been a runaway success, with 660 members between the ages of 5 and 12 and over 1,500 club visits to date. It is delightful to watch the children collect their $2 tokens each week and head into the market to purchase fruit. vegetables, and plants that grow food. And, of course, every penny they spend goes directly to the farmers. Membership for this season is now closed, but our goal for next year is to sponsor 1,000 children.

We recently did a parent survey to gather feedback about how the program was going. Here are some of the comments we received.

From parents: "Children and parents both learn so much from the vendors. We have

"My favorite part is seeing the joy when my child comes to the market."

Children on why they like participating in the program:

"Pride. I get to give my tomatoes away.'

"They have fresh food and we know where the food comes from."

"Because there's lots of great food that is so tasty and it's so great at the farmers market. I love it!"

That's just a small sample of many comments from parents and children whose lives have been impacted by this program. From all of us, a huge thank you to all of the sponsors and donors who have made it possible.

Speaking of which, if you are a sponsoring business and haven't used your business booth opportunity yet, make sure to book a date. The season will be over before you know it. Experience the market firsthand to see what a difference your contribution is making in our community.

Thank you and see you at the market.

Interim Tenino Police Chief Pending Screening

Tenino About to Lose Another Police Officer

BY JUSTYNA TOMTAS

jtomtas@chronline.com

Tenino Mayor Bret Brodersen announced at the Tuesday regular meeting of the city council an interim chief for the police department has been selected.

Brodersen said Ron Russell Ellis has agreed to come to Tenino and work as the interim police chief until the full-time position can be filled.

According to Brodersen, Ellis has municipal experience with lice positions on the police dethe city of Ruston and has numerous certifications as police chief. He also has done work with tribal entities throughout the state and has done consulting work.

"He is willing to come serve as our interim chief pending the required background and polygraph test that is required for all law enforcement positions," Brodersen told the council.

Brodersen said he will seek the council's support in making an interim appointment pending the results of the required tests so the department could continue to provide services for Tenino citizens while a full-time chief is found. Ellis was not present at the jury duty.

Currently the police department is down to two law enforcement officers, but will soon only have one. Officer Stephen Rowe is serving his last week at the department after accepting a position with the Mason County Sheriff's Office. That will leave Officer Susannah Wilson as the only full-time law enforcement official serving the city.

Brodersen said he had been working with Rowe to explore options for additional staffing to fill lateral officer positions. One offer of employment is currently pending, with more to come in the future.

"We're working on filling popartment so we can continue to have a fully functioning police department," Brodersen said.

The mayor has met with the Thurston County Sheriff's Office to ensure backup coverage is provided for the city as needed.

Lewis County Prosecutor, and Tenino Reserve Officer, Jonathan Meyer was recently appointed as the reserve officer coordinator.

During a department update. Rowe said a new officer administrator had been hired after the position was left empty for several months.

Julie Graham, a resident of Tenino, said she is unsatisfied with the number of advertiseprised the council only found three candidates.

"It feels like it was a pretty rinky dink way to try to get a net cast far and wide enough for such a significant position," she said to the council. "It's disturbing, and I'm also distraught on the number and the quality of whatever sorts of police we have with the departure of Officer Rowe."

Councilor and mayoral candidate Wayne Fournier said in an email that when he first took office as a council member, the police department consisted of four officers, a chief and a police clerk.

With the resignation of Rowe, the most senior officer, only one full-time law enforcement official will be employed by the city.

"The fight to maintain our police department is one I have been fighting since I first took office in 2012, and it came to an unfortunate head last March," Fournier said, citing the firing of former Tenino Police Chief John Hutchings. "We now have little independent capabilities and will undoubtedly need to rely on the Thurston County Sheriff's Department."

Fournier asked Mayor Brodersen in an email to immediately appoint an interim chief to provide leadership to the police department. After learning of Brod-meeting because he was serving ments placed for the police chief ersen's progress, Fournier said he damages he incurred. position. She said she is not sur- is pleased to hear the process is ongoing.

> "I'm glad to hear that we are moving forward with looking at appointing an interim chief. I think that's pertinent and very important," Fournier said.

Hutchings was fired from his position as police chief in March after Brodersen said he worked extra hours outside of his contract. The excess hours resulted in an $86,462 bill from the Department of Retirement Services. Hutchings later filed a $850,000 tort claim against the city for presentation on Sept. 22.

Brodersen said in an earlier interview that the initial review of applications would be completed by Aug. 13. The first round of interviews were scheduled between Aug. 20 and Aug. 31 depending on the availability of the applicants and the panel members. A second round of interviews are scheduled for Sept. 1 through Sept. 11, with an executive session on Sept. 14 to discuss qualifications for employment.

Brodersen plans to present the council with a final candidate

Questions of Volunteer Officers in Uniform Raised at Council Meeting BY NISQUALLY Fournier said.

During Tuesday's Tenino City Council meeting, councilor and mayoral hopeful Wayne Fournier brought comments from citizens and deputies who stated some citizens had been volunteering for the police department without being sworn in.

VALLEY NEWS

"It's been stated that there has been some citizens that were noncommissioned officers, not sworn in on any capacity that have been in police uniforms throughout the summer,"

Tenino Mayor Bret Brodersen said this was the first time the topic had been brought to his attention.

Fournier asked the mayor to update the council at the next meeting. He wanted to know if citizens had been in police uniforms, if they were insured, and if they were issued weapons, or badges, and whether they had access to the police department or the State Patrol computers.

Brodersen said he would look into the situation and provide more information as soon as he is able.

Drive Sober Campaign Runs Through Labor Day

From now through Labor Day, the Washington Traffic Safety Commission is letting the public know that extra officers will be out across the state at times and locations where DUI is a problem as part of the national Drive Sober or Get Pulled Over campaign.

"It is our hope that by publicizing these extra patrols more people will plan ahead if they will be drinking or using marijuana," said Darrin Grondel, WTSC Directer. "Don't risk getting arrested for a DUI, or causing a life-changing tragedy. Designate a sober, drug-free driver."

In Thurston County, the Lacey, Olympia, Yelm, Tumwater and the Thurston County Sheriff's Office, and the Washington State Patrol will be teaming up and participating in the extra patrols, with the support of the Thurston County Target Zero Task Force.

many old logging roads were cleared with heavy equipment to get people and materials closer to the fire.

Firefighters have tried to stop the spread, but the fire has jumped their lines several times. A crew of 90 people and one attack helicopter were on hand Tuesday to fight it, digging firelines trying to stem the spread. Officials from USFS and the DNR said more people and resources will come as they are needed and available.

It hasn't burned up into the canopy level of the trees; rather, it is staying close to the ground, moving through an understory thick and laden with dead material. Many of the trees should survive the fire, but many likely won't because the fire has burned "2 or 3 feet into the soil" and will likely hit the roots of some. He attributed the fire to the dry conditions around the state.

"It's not very often we have one here, especially in recent years," Wilstead said.

Officials also urged the public to stay out of the area for their own safety and to allow fire crews the space they need to combat the blaze. Several roads in the area are also closed. Forest Road 74 from mile point 3.53 and all of the spur roads are closed, as is the 7409.

Lewis County Sheriff Rob Snaza told the crowd his faith in DNR is "120 percent." He said his department will post the information on Facebook and encouraged everyone to use the county's emergency alert system Code Red to stay updated. Should the fire reach a level three, which would be near some Pleasant Valley homes, he couldn't force residents to leave, but would strongly encourage them to do so, especially if they had children.

Phyllis Turvill lives on Pleasant Valley. She said she is more comfortable after hearing how the fire was being fought, but is still nervous.

"Level two is a half-mile from my house," she said.

While she was at the meeting, her husband was at home doing what he could to prepare should they have to evacuate.

"One of my neighbors lived here for 45 years and said there's never been a fire like this," she said.

$48M JAIL:

to the ARC through four days of intensive training, said Lt. Shawn Ball, who helped lead the coordination of the transition to the ARC to step into," he said. "I think they were relatively excited and motivated by that training that they had. Now that they're actually doing it, we're having very positive reactions from the staff. They're happy."

Committees made up of staff members gave input into the design of the jail, he added.

With the move, the sheriff's office has gained about 80 beds, Ball said, and the facility is already overcrowded. But they expect to gain about another 120 beds once the second phase of the project – a "flex" facility – is constructed, though it's unclear when that would happen. The facility would require at least 15 additional corrections staff.

"That would alleviate our maximum incustody (population) and also benefit those who are mentally ill and it would give us more room to work with," Sheriff John Snaza said.

"That's why we call it a 'flex" Ball said. "We don't want to label it as one thing, because we really want to treat our mentally ill separate and not have them further victimized by the general population and we need the flexibility, where gender sometimes requires the flexibility, so it's really a multipurpose combination of maximum, open dormitory, therapeutic kind of housing, is what that design is supposed to be."

The flex facility is expected to be built adjacent to the ARC, but the construction process has been delayed because the landuse regulations, particularly those regarding water runoff, have changed since the ARC was built, Snaza said.

But the facility is sorely needed and would be more cost-effective than using the old jail to house inmates.

"If we have that (the flex facility), we're going to be able to meet the needs better than if we use the old jail, because the old jail isn't designed to work with the mentally ill and isn't as, if you will, flexible. ... It would be more staff intensive to use the other jail. It wouldn't be cost-effective.'

Using the old jail facility is a potential, worst-case-scenario option, Snaza said. But office trains jail staff to expect inmates to doing so would require at least 15 additional behave like a "normal adult," Ball said. corrections deputies.

"We're talking about a facility that has not been updated, so it will require some new updating because we haven't, as a county, put money into our old jail because we have the new jail," Snaza said.

The county would have to put money "They knew what they were going to get into the old jail to make it user-friendly and staff it, and the end result isn't as cost-effective as a new flex unit would be, he said.

> The front end of the old jail is currently used for video court appearances, but is not being used for housing at all.

> "The cost numbers don't even out to why you would invest in something that is not going to benefit us," Snaza said.

> The county commissioners have been reviewing what they're going to do with the old facility, but haven't discussed the matter with the sheriff's office yet, Snaza said.

> A major change is that the new jail will be under a direct supervision model, as opposed to indirect supervision. Snaza said such a model allows the sheriff's office to have more of an impact on its inmates.

"You've got the programs that occur right in the dormitory, so you're not transferring them around all over the place," he said.

The direct supervision model allows the sheriff's office to prevent internal power structures from developing within the jail, Ball said.

"In the old concept of indirect supervision, the deputy would pop in there once an hour for 10, 15 minutes and then when he was gone, there was some other power structure that would develop, because there were no deputies," he said. "In direct supervision, the deputy is actually assigned and lives in there 24 hours a day. There's always a deputy in the room."

Having a uniformed guard present at all times can alleviate anxiety inmates have about being in jail, Ball said. And the guards can provide inmates with information about treatment, jail programs, and the court system that is often more reliable than the advice they would get from fellow inmates, he added.

"Being incarcerated, I really believe it's more of a positive," Snaza said. "If you're going to be in jail, a positive is that you know that you can serve your time and focus on what you're trying to get out of it."

Another focus at the new jail will be inmate behavior management. The sheriff's

"We try to create an environment in which we can allow that normal interaction, so your behavior drives your access, your limitations and your actions," he said. "With behavior management, things like having TVs, that's a huge tool. The public sometimes thinks, 'Oh, those guys have TVs?' But it's a behavioral management tool."

The goal is to keep inmates engaged with resources, Ball said. And Thurston County supports a lot of programming for inmates, such as Alcoholics Anonymous, domestic violence classes, and chemical dependency treatment.

'We really try not to just warehouse defendants. We try to give them opportunities through the general education diplomas, and counseling, and treatments that will help maybe keep them out (of jail)," he said.

As for the physical design of the jail, one consideration was that both inmates and staff are most vulnerable when inmates are being moved. To minimize the need to move inmates around, there are classrooms and medical facilities in every housing space, Ball said.

When it comes to housing inmates, the layout in the new jail is much easier to navigate, Ball said. Each housing area sits along a hallway the length of about one and a half football fields. The old jail was two stories, the units were three tiers high, and walls and hallways were segmented.

"Navigating the facility was quite cumbersome," Ball said. "This place is linear so we literally just have this one kind of straight shot to deal with business and it's easier to navigate. Inmates are allowed to move about in certain classifications, so it's very easy for them to direct themselves toward court or medical."

Snaza said opening the new jail has been a goal of his since before he was elected in 2010.

'One of the campaign promises that I made is that I would do everything that I could to make sure that we worked together with the county commissioners to make sure we got into this facility. And I would like to say, not a lot of people get to keep the promises that they make.

"Obviously, that followed me the whole campaign. The ARC was a huge topic of discussion for myself and my opponent as well as for any commissioner that was running for office. So it was a big deal. ... (Now) it's reality."

"We're on a very strict budget," Zahringer added. "My husband's bills are very strictly budgeted. So when I opened this up, I almost passed out."

Zahringer's July 2015 bill was for $308, which included a water usage charge of $215.12.

"I was like, mind blown, because I was already blown away from the June bill and so we adjusted things to use less water ... and it was way higher. I was like, 'How is this possible?""

Yelm Mayor Ron Harding said our sole provider and I'm a stay- an important point people some-actually covers three separate utilities. So people's high "water" bill is actually a water, sewer and storm water bill.

"Most cities, people would get three separate bills, like phone, cable and power," Harding said. "What we've done in the city is bill it all on one bill."

While the water rate has gone up because of system improvements, Harding said the sewer system will require improvements in the near future as well, and sewer rates will increase. "If you compare sewer bills to neighboring cities, you would find our sewer rate ... is much lower," Harding said. "You've got to compare it all. Is the water rate higher? I've said that. For a small city, we're experiencing kind of that flux communities get in when they're growing, but they don't quite have enough population to spread the costs of those improvements out like some of the other cities do, and at-home mom with my kids, so our times miss is that their monthly bill that equates to a higher rate in our city than some other cities. Lacey spreads it out over 47,000 people. For us to do the same improvement, we're spreading that ... increase out to 8,500 people. Per capita, the rate is higher."

But the higher water rate is evened out by lower rates for other utilities, Harding said. For example, the sewer rates are lower; statewide it's not unusual to have a base sewer rate of $100, he said.

Yelm also has lower property taxes, fees for services, and always tried to scale ours down less than other communities. It's a bit unfair to pick one service out and say on the surface that it's an unfair rate, because what we've done is try to take our system as a whole and make sure that we're comparable to other communities."

Harding said the city's water is a standalone utility, and that the water rates are based on the cost to operate the utility or system.

"In our case we operate a really, really lean system," he said. "The overhead cost is fairly small for our water system, but that's one aspect. The second aspect is debt, and the debt is factored into any capital improvements we've made and that compounds. ... Anytime we add (improvements) that goes to a debt and compounds the rate." During the summer, many factors contribute to high water rates, and it's not necessarily the utility's fault, Harding added. "Generally people start summer off and see this pattern: they start off being diligent about their bill because they understand as they increase usage in the summertime that adds to their bill because that rate is a tiered user rate," he said. "And that's where people ... get into a bit of trouble with their bill. It's more about managing that usage, because people start off good, and seem like they're doing a good job at managing their water usage, and then start to relax a bit, so we've seen every August to September range, people will be less strict about how much water they're using, and let sprinklers on or let kids wash the vehicles or fill the pools up or whatever the circumstances are, whatever adds to that water usage." Another factor that affects the city's water rates is the litigation from the city's water rights case, which was heard by the state Supreme Court earlier this year. The cost of that litigation gets passed on to the ratepayers - and it must, by law, Harding said. Because of the litigation, the city has been under a microscope and been forced to add some additional improvements to the system that haven't been added by other jurisdictions, he added. "If we're awarded our new water rights and we have more of the commodity to sell and then are able to get more users on the system, that will help us equalize those rates," Harding said.

Yelm Family Medicine doctors have delivered hundreds of Yelm area babies and now our family is growing too!

We are happy to announce the pending arrival of Dr. Paul Wardrop and Dr. Cynthia Wilson. Dr. Wardrop will be doing general family medicine and his hobbies including fly fishing and gourmet cooking. Dr. Wilson will be doing general family medicine with obstetrics and her hobbies include hiking, backpacking, outdoor sports and world travel.

Yelm Family Medicine is proud to offer full scope family medicine here in Yelm and surrounding area. We will now have three physicians providing full scope obstetrical and neonatal care. Babies in our practice are delivered at Providence St. Peter Hospital in Olympia.

taxes than surrounding communities, having lowered the property tax rate by 1 percent for the past four years.

"No other city in the state has done that," he said. "The council has looked at other ways to mitigate some of those costs to consumers. We can't do that through the utility rate, because we're bound to charge the rate that pays for the debt and operating the utility. # Bullfighters Brave It All for Rodeo Family

VALLEY LIF

Braiden Johnson coaxes a bull back into the shutes last Saturday evening at the event. Tenino Brothers Protect Bull Riders, Make Sure They Make It Home Safe BY NATALIE JOHNSON

njohnson@chronline.com

Bull riders brave up to eight seconds on the back of one kicking-mad animal, risking life and limb for glory.

But three men, clad in hot pink, stand eyeto-eye with every single thousand-plus-pound bull at bull riding events, including last Saturday night's Twin Cities Bulls and Barrels Challenge in Centralia during the Southwest Washington Fair.

"I love the experience. I love the family," said bullfighter Braiden Johnson. "It's a good feeling that you're protecting people."

The three bullfighters — Cody Messerle, of Prineville, Oregon, and brothers Colt and Braiden Johnson of Tenino - don't mind letting the bull riders hog the spotlight.

"It doesn't bother us," Colt Johnson, 31, said.

As each bull and rider rocketed out of the chute, Messerle and the Johnson brothers stayed close, ready to react when the riders fell. Whether the riders stayed on the bull for the full eight seconds or were bucked off early, one of the bullfighters was always there to quickly pull the rider out of harm's way and

Braiden Johnson, of Tenino, center, and his brother Colt head in to help a bucked rider last Saturday evening at the Bulls and Barrels distract the raging bull.

"We protect the bull riders," Messerle, 25, said. "(We do) whatever it takes to make sure they go home before we do."

Messerle said their main strategy is to "get their attention and run." More than once, bullfighters had to climb the 6-foot-high fences to avoid a particularly angry bull.

"It's a little rougher than a football game," Colt Johnson said. "There's a lot of people who do what we do who have been more than injured trying to protect a cowboy."

That's partly why Colt got involved in bullfighting. He said he watched his brother Braiden at a rodeo and decided he wanted to help.

"Otherwise I would have never gotten into it," Colt said. "He's a little bit better than me. He ends up protecting me. He's the cat, I'm more the ... grizzly bear."

Braiden said he never planned to get involved in rodeos, until he met someone who suggested bullfighting.

"I met a guy in a bar. I used to play football and he said 'try this out," Braiden said. "It's awesome. I love it."

Last year, Braiden Johnson and Messerle were Northwest Professional Rodeo Association finals bullfighters of the year.

The bullfighters know they could be seriously hurt while protecting bull riders.

"Some people get bad luck, some people get good luck," Colt Johnson said. "There's people who've been doing it for 30 years."

Bullfighter Colt Johnson, 31, of Tenino, stands face-to-face in front of a bull as it bucks off a rider during the Bulls and Barrels Challenge last Saturday at the Southwest Washington Fair in Chehalis.

Some bulls were easier for the bullfighters than others. Most calmed down after launching their riders across the arena and went quietly back into the gate. Others gave the bullfighters a run for their money.

Each wore protective padding, colorful scarves, hats, and bright pink shirts to attract the bulls. While fighting bulls all Saturday night, Colt Johnson also wore a white hat.

'My little niece wore this hat once," he said. "It's good luck."

The Johnson brothers used the Bulls and Rowyn, go to raiseforrowyn.org.

Barrels Challenge to help raise awareness for a cause close to their hearts. Their niece, Rowyn Johnson, died in September after being hit by a neighbor's car in a driveway. The nonprofit Raise for Rowyn was created to help families struggling with the loss of a child.

Late in the Challenge, bull rider Cody Ford rode Rowyn's Wild Child, whose horns were painted bright blue in honor of Rowyn's favorite color.

Flowers Bring a Splash of Color to Rainier

Ready, Set, Grow Program Returns for Second Year

BY JENNA LOUGHLIN

jloughlin@yelmonline.com

Visitors to the downtown area of Rainier may have noticed a little more color thanks to the city's Ready, Set, Grow program.

Beginning in the spring, businesses were invited to participate by growing a planter of flowers outside of their store to go along with the flowers the city planted along Binghampton Street. The goal of the program is to beautify the downtown corridor while also bringing some pride to the community and having fun. The added bonus was the hope of attracting more customers.

It was up to each individual business to determine what type of planter and what type of flowers or plants to grow. Participating for the second year in a row were Sugar N Spice Day Care and Main Street Cookie Company. They were joined by Alive and Well Massage Clinic.

At the day care, owner Chris Rearden used the same planter as last year, complete with sign posts listing the miles to various locations, and had dahlias come back, but also added to it.

"We thought how can it be more of a butterfly, bird attraction," she said. "So we hung a hummingbird feeder and a bird feeder."

An unexpected result of attracting birds was them "planting" seeds and having those seeds take root. The birds added sunflower, tomato and corn plants to the display.

"That bird feeder, it started plants of its own," Rearden said. "It was kind of fun to watch what was going to come up."

Joycelyn Zambuto, owner of the cookie shop, hung two containers of flowers from the roof above the sidewalk that contain a variety of plants including three colors of begonias and creeping charlie. She selected her baskets after seeing Laura Noreau's arrangement at Santa Lucia Cafe in Centralia.

lady to do my baskets and so she did," Zambuto said. "She's absolutely amazing."

One of the benefits to the display is that Zambuto can winter the basket and much of it will return next year. After using fuchsias in her display last year that did not survive the hot summer, Zamubto said she is taking the opportunity to learn more about plants and is having a lot more success with Noreau's arrangement.

"I'm just really happy to have flowers. I wish I had more time to just really be a gardener because it's like cooking or baking; the sense of satisfaction that comes with that, it does your heart good to see something grow and flourish," Zambuto said. "This is amazing and they just continue to grow. Until the first frost, I think they're going to be blooming and growing."

"The kids, it gives them a little bit more ownership, 'Look what we did," she said.

Parents and school district employees have complimented Rearden on the day care's planter. She thinks it has brought something special to her business and likes that the program makes the community look better. It would be even more fun if more businesses participated, she noted.

Zambuto said every little bit helps when it comes to beautifying the city.

Three Shrubs That Offer Late Summer Color

IN THE GARDEN

By Marianne Binetti

week in August is time to harvest squash, tomatoes and beans, cut back perennials such as daisies and daylilies that have past their prime and continue to water, and fertilize potted plants and annuals in the garden.

This is also the time to celebrate the shrubs that offer late summer color.

Hardy Hibiscus

Hibiscus is an old fashioned favorite that is enjoying a new popularity due to the improvement in hardiness and the size of the blooms. August is when this heat-tolerant shrub puts on a spectacular show of color just when the rest of the garden may be winding down for the season. Your grandmother probably called this shrub the Rose of Sharon, but nurseries now know it as hibiscus moscheutos or perennial hibiscus. The compact Luna series grows just 3 feet tall with huge blooms that can be 6 inches wide. The Disco series of hardy hibiscus grows even more compact at 2 feet tall and is perfect for patio pots. These shrubby dwarf hibiscus plants will survive our winters in Western Washington.

There is also a tall shrub form of hardy hibiscus or hibiscus mutabilis called the Confederate Rose in the south. This shrub can become a small tree and in my garden it has survived the wind and cold of Enumclaw for more than 20 years, growing 15 feet tall and 8 feet wide. I grow a purple clematis through the branches of this huge hibiscus so the white and red hibiscus blooms can comingle with the violet blooms of the Etoile Violette clematis. The garden gossip about all the hardy hibiscus is how naked this plant can be for six months out of the year. It will be the first of your shrubs to drop leaves in the fall and the last to sprout new foliage in the spring, sometimes waiting until May to show signs of life.

Newspaper for Details

Allowing a vine like clematis to use hibiscus as a lattice helps to clothe these bare branches in early spring.

Smooth Hydrangeas

These are the hydrangeas native to the eastern United States from north to New York and south to Florida. This means they can handle the cold and heat better than the more traditional big leaf hydrangea macrophylla that have blue balls of bloom. The smooth hydrangeas have smaller leaves that are a gray-green color. Some varieties like the creamy white Incrediball and the Annabelle hybrids have gigantic blooms that can be 1 foot wide. The smooth hydrangeas have held up better in hot weather than other hydrangeas, but you need to prune these shrubs in early spring to keep the stems short enough to support the large flowers.

There is also a variety of smooth hydrangea that always flowers in the pink no matter how acid the soil. The Invincibelle Spirit II is an adaptable native shrub with blooms that not only look great at the end of summer and into the autumn season, but also can be snipped for longlasting cut flowers. A Proven Winners award plant, when you buy the Invincibelle Spirit smooth hydrangeas there is $1 from every plant sold donated to the Breast Cancer Research Foundation.

Japanese Maples

These small leaf maples from Japan are called Acer palmatum to describe the palm-shaped leaves with five separate lobes. Many choices in leaf color, growth habit and foliage texture make the Japanese maple one of the most beloved plants to use in Western Washington landscapes. Near the end of August when many plants are looking tired and seedy, the Japanese maples will be starting to color up and put on their annual fall show. This is the month to search out the most attractive varieties and shapes for a new or newly improved landscape. If you plant a Japanese maple near ornamental grasses or sedum autumn joy you'll have a late summer display that will look great into the fall season even if you forget to water.

Yelm Threatens to Leave Thurston County

Secession Threatened Over Road Issue; City Felt Ignored by County Commissioners

HISTORIAN

By Ed Bergh

nation mass meeting" filled with 65 "ireful" Yelmites met Feb. 16, 1921 at the Yelm schoolhouse. There they let loose on the Thurston County Commissioners for their road building policy. To Yelmites it was their "non" road building that frustrated them, hence their anger.

They "Demand Good Roads or Will Secede From Thurston County and Join Pierce County."

"We note again," read the Olympia Daily Recorder, "the Yelm road issue has the qualities of (a) sleeping volcano." The year was 1921. The war was over, the Red Scare and labor turmoil had subsided, and soon Warren Harding would be sworn in as the new president. He promised a return to "normalcy." To Yelmites, however, the road status quo was unacceptable.

Roads were a nightmare. It started with the interaction of rain and rocks. Gray skies and the forests made roads dark places. The road was often a set of parallel lines where wheels, tires, had worn down vegetation. In the rainy season these degraded to water-filled ruts. Besides dirt, gravel and paved were the two other road categories

"There was only one mud hole from Yelm Prairie to Lackamas Prairie," wrote Ross Chilson, "but that one was just six miles long and this was only one instance of pretty much all the roads in that section were much the same."

One angry Yelmite pointed it to commissioners that roads were cratered with "chuck holes and deep ruts. Water comes over the running board of an auto several places on the road." The roads were tough on cars, according to the secessionist leader Frank H. Royse. It was a common experience that "drivers break their auto springs and use profane language." "The Yelm cutoff road now in use is at present in very bad shape. It is covered with deep mud and chuck holes and through about four miles of its length rims through timber where one car has scant room and the tree boughs brush the car roof." The Yelm protesters wanted this to change. Royse concluded: "This community is isolated from its county and state capitol. It is better situated geographically with regard to Tacoma than Olympia. Pierce County wants us and if something is not done we will have to resort to secession." To prevent this Yelm secessionists demanded that roads should be "widened and put in shape for a comparatively small cost."

At issue was the road to Olympia. The folks out in Yelm wanted a more direct route to Olympia and more paved roads. Their solution was what was known as the Lake St. Clair cutoff.

Yelmites Unite

The raucous meeting at the Yelm schoolhouse that February was only one symbol of local dissatisfaction with the county commissioners. Royse, postmaster Dow Hughes, and J.F. Martin were chosen as leaders. They wrote up a petition of demands and began collecting signatures to add emphasis to their complaint.

Without much effort 124 signatures were collected. The petition made several points for the commissioners to consider. From the Yelm perspective there had been a commitment from the county to build according to Yelm desires. The county, however, was no longer planning to do that.

The petition read: "We demand as our right in the premises that the Yelm-St. Clair-Olympia road be immediately opened for travel and improved to the fullest extent that available funds will allow." The county apportioned money to the various road districts, but for Yelm that was an issue also.

Out in Yelm it was assumed that the county spent less on District 7 (Yelm) than it received in taxes.

The language regarding this was quite blunt. "We ask that the honorable board keep their hands off our road district funds." Finally, without satisfaction on this matter, the Yelm insurgents promised to initiate the steps required for secession from Thurston County. A vote on the matter would be taken by the voters in District 7, signatures on a petition to the Legislature asking for a vote on the matter (the Legislature was required to issue a special act approving secession) would be collected, and Pierce County had to approve of the annexation of the Yelm area. These road rebels believed that all of these conditions could be met. For the next two weeks the word "secession" appeared in Olympia headlines in greater frequency than at any time since the Civil War.

had their work cut out for them. Of the commissioners, only S.Y. Bennett was sure to be on Yelm's side. A.M. Rowe was considered a fence sitter. Mike Neylon was not on a fence, described as "the red rag in the bull's face for Yelm as the discussion showed. The Yelm people believe he is the man who is standing chiefly between them and what they want."

A county official boldly declared, "The Yelmites can protest until they are black in the face and they will get nowhere and do no good if they do not unite on one plan and its alternative and go through with these aims. He said they would get no action from the commissioners, nor even a promise so long as they dilly dally. He had been emphatic in declaring he would not give a cent for the St. Clair cutoff project, which the Yelm people desire."

The commissioners also made a financial case that because the budget was so tight, there was no money to meet Yelm's demands. They believed the secession threat was a bluff. The commissioners also played an insulting political card. Elected by the public, the commissioners were elected to handle county affairs and not to "keep their hands off" a road district fund of the "commands of 124 people." The Yelm folks would have none of it.

Making Their Case

The secession story was front page news. Lengthy articles detailed the verbal sparring between the key interests, the commissioners, and the Olympia Chamber of Commerce. Letters to the editor competed with editorials to capture the public's attention and shape opinions. Factual accuracy was another matter. "Radical opinions" and the "misstatements floating about" made consensus harder to accomplish. One sly fellow made fun of the situation opining, "If the Yelm insurrection brings results what is to prevent the Westside (of Olympia) threatening to adjourn to the Black Hills until the Fourth St Bige Eddy admitted to exhaustion over the matter. Yelmites were tired of Olympia's reluctance to treat their needs fairly.

Then less diplomatic presenters spoke to the meeting. Hughes was described as going "hot foot" after commissioner Naylon. The paper summarized Hughes' vitriolic speech this way: "He said he had lived for 24 years in Yelm and had not yet seen any of the community's wishes granted by the commissioners. The St. Clair cutoff is what Yelm should have for an Olympia connection, but the way he felt about it he would like to see secession go through as then he would not be obliged to visit Olympia." Hughes continued, Olympia "promises but you can't depend on what he says." Then he threatened Naylon: "I would like to ... try him a round (box), darn him?" He was applauded.

Another resident threatened the naysaying commissioners with a recall drive. "I don't want to leave Olympia, I sort of like the people there. They are good people and friendly," began one speaker, adding, "But I don't want to go around where the county commissioners are unless I have a club."

Things were not going well.

county take the "fullest opportunity to give Yelm the maximum of road relief consistently in their power. If it becomes evident later that they are not moving toward such relief as speedily as they should." It was the obligation of the county to help ameliorate the discontent. Yelm had to realize it was simply financially impossible to get its roadway dream.

The major players in the road debate decided to do some inperson research and slowly drove the three different proposed routes. More importantly, the Yelm team was able to show how deplorable road conditions were in District 7. Following the tour the commissioners were able to convince Yelmites that a good down payment on the total package was being made. The Recorder concluded: "Putting in a good road over this route will affect the compromise, which will put an end to secession agitation and satisfy the Yelm people that Thurston County is willing to see them get the relief they deserve." It worked. The commissioners moved closer to the Yelm plan and most Yelmites were satisfied with county efforts.

Convincing the Commissioners

A large contingent of Yelmites appeared at the next commissioner meeting. They Bridge is completed."

The pro-Yelm forces pulled out all the stops. They priced the three different plans before the commissioners demonstrating the fiscal wisdom of their proposal. They offered cost savings by using wooden pilings instead of cement at a Northern Pacific Railroad. Somehow they would get the rail line to pick up 60 percent of the cost of that new crossing. The Chamber of Commerce argued that the road made wise policy. There were 2,000 people in the Yelm market and it would be folly to lose them to Pierce County and Tacoma.

The commissioners were unfair, according to one of their critics. The county had no problem finding money for the Fourth Avenue bridge in Olympia, he sniped. In their minds the Yelm protesters viewed themselves as the sentinels of democracy. Publicly debated then voted on, the majority of people in Yelm who attended a certain meeting wanted the commissioners to adopt their St. Clair proposal or they would secede. One Yelmite stated the Yelm committee had contacted Olympia lawyer George Yantis about drafting the legislation needed to allow their transfer of legal loyalties to Pierce County. Two days later, Yantis denied any such role for himself.

The leadoff spokesman for Yelm was James Mosman, who presented the wisdom of their plan. He was joined by the Olympia Chamber of Commerce and together they made an economic argument for the wise allocation of county moneys to meet the desires of Yelm residents. Sam Price was less confrontational. It just made quickly. The editor of the Olympia Daily Record preached calm and understanding. The editorial said it was important to understand that the road issue was complicated. This meant decision-makers were "working in a tremendously important and puzzling capacity." More importantly, "They are slow to stampede under pressure (and) it is a virtue rather than a fault."

It was important to develop a "balanced opinion on the Yelm issue." Calling out the rumormongers the essay continued, "If more people had given such consideration we believe there would have been less talk of secession by Yelm." The issue was not some vindictive conspiracy by the commissioners (read Olympia) to disadvantage Yelm, but a necessity.

It was the economy, the post-war recession. The soldiers were home, industrial orders had evaporated, crop prices were down, and revenues were down. Having balanced opinion meant taking "into consideration the present tight condition, unusually tight condition, of county road funds."

Similarly, "They have a limited amount of money to be spent on a large number of roads badly in need. They could spend several times the amount available to 100 percent road advantage. The fact that they never have enough money to do all that is required makes it imperative that funds be spread over the greatest possible territory. When this is done claims of neglect and discrimination are bound to crop up." The last sentence was a message to Yelm that it was understandable to feel ignored.

The paper suggested the Yelm never seceded.

When your child doesn't want to go to school

On the first day of the new school year William makes it very clear that he wants to stay home. He complains, he cries, he's pale, and he suddenly develops stomach cramps. He goes back to bed and curls up in a little ball. How to react?

If this is their first day of school, children are probably feeling anxious and afraid. You as a parent are probably feeling torn, too: sending your child off to school in this state can feel like abandoning them to strangers. This is an occasion for parents to listen, encourage, and be strong. Unless you are prepared to switch to homeschooling, your children need to understand that going to school is not negotiable. Show them that you understand what they are experiencing without being overprotective or trying to minimize their feelings. Reassure them that they are probably not the only ones who are stressed this morning, that many of their classmates will be feeling the same way.

Children who don't want to go back to school usually have a good reason. Are they worried about failing? Do they feel rejected by a teacher or a friend? Be attentive to what your children tell you and remember that they need your presence, support, and encouragement. Talk about all the advantages of school, point out their past efforts and successes, and then discuss how the situation they are worrying about can be resolved.

Whether your children are in kindergarten, elementary school, or high school don't hesitate to make an appointment with teachers if the problem persists. It is well proven that the involvement of parents is a determining factor in the progress and academic success

A perfect place to do homework

Setting up a special place to do homework is very practical and can be done without spending a fortune. Children with an organized space in which to work have better concentration and learn more easily. It also helps for them to have a sense of ownership in the space they will be using to do their work.

Choose a quiet room that is well-lit. If you decide to use a corner of a bedroom, try to separate the work area from the rest of the room to prevent children from doing their homework on the bed. If space is limited, choose a folding table fixed to the wall, but check to make sure that the surface area is big enough to accommodate text books, exercise books, and laptop. Window blinds or curtains may be needed in order to prevent natural light from reflecting on a computer screen.

Choose a chair carefully: if possible, it should be comfortable and adjustable. Investing a bit extra in an office chair is worthwhile, as it will likely be used for years to come. A moveable, variable intensity reading light is also advisable. Position it on the right of the desk for a left-handed child and to the left for one who is right-handed.

The work area should always be well-organized. Limit any disorder by equipping it with storage boxes, a small bookcase, and a container for writing utensils. A corkboard is also a great idea, and your children will love to decorate it with favorite photos and odds and ends. Ask your children to help you in the choice of these accessories. Last but not least, choose a space where distractions will be limited.

organized space in which to work concentration and learn more easily.

The first day of school is a big step for parents too!

It only seems like yesterday when you were holding your little one in your arms, and now your son or daughter is getting ready to go to school. This is an important step in the lives of children, but it is also a big day for parents. Here are a few tips to help this first day be a happy memory to look back on.

- Reassure your children by telling them all about kindergarten well in advance. Use simple, positive words. Focus on the activities they'll enjoy and the friends they'll make.
- Visit the school with them or at least walk around the schoolyard. If your children will be going to school on foot, walk the route a few times with them. Remind them of all the safety rules and go over the landmarks with them.
- At least one week before the big day, establish a routine similar to the one your children will follow during the school year. Decide on the time they should get up and eat breakfast, get dressed, brush teeth, prepare schoolbags, and leave for the bus or walk. The same goes for the evening routine: choose when bath and bedtime will be
- Two days before the start of school, check their school supplies. Every item should be identified with your children's names.
- The evening before the big day, help your children choose the clothes they'll wear and involve them in the preparation of their lunchboxes.

- · Avoid showing any stress you may be feeling. Calm parents mean calm children. Answer any questions simply, without further explanation, as making a fuss won't help anyone.
- · Last but not least, don't forget to take a picture of them with backpack and lunchbox as they leave for their first big day!

of children.

The involvement of parents is a determining factor in the progress and academic success of children.

Get off to a good start with a healthy breakfast

The necessity of eating a healthy breakfast to start the day off on the right foot can never be repeated often enough. If this is true for adults, you can imagine that it is even truer for children who are still growing. Children need to drink fluids to wash out metabolized wastes from the previous day and build up their energy before going to school.

Children who eat a well-balanced breakfast have better concentration all morning. They are attentive and can assimilate the curriculum more easily because they have eaten the nutritional elements their brains need to function. However, it's not always easy to convince children to eat their breakfasts. They may reluctantly swallow a mouthful of juice and a couple of bites of bread and then say they've had enough.

A few tricks can help parents solve this problem. The night before, set the table with a colorful cloth, funny napkins, a bunch of flowers, or other things that will tempt them to sit down to the table. Set the alarm clock to go off a few minutes earlier so that children can wake up properly before sitting down. It is also important for parents to take the time to breakfast with their children. If you only rush through a cup of coffee without eating anything, your children will learn that habit. On the other hand, if you sit down for breakfast and chat with them, they will be much more motivated to empty their plates.

Try and vary the menu. Serve different types of whole-grain bread or cereals, as well as their favorite fruits, and turn breakfast into the nicest time of the day.

Children who eat a wellbalanced breakfast have better concentration all morning.

Take the bus... seriously!

RAINIER SCHOOL DISTRICT STARTS TUESDAY, SEPT. 1, 2015

Most children these days take the big yellow bus to school and back. Naturally, as parents you want your children to be absolutely safe around and on board these big vehicles. Here are 10 rules that you should remind your children about:

- 1. Be at the bus stop at least five minutes before it is due to arrive. If your children wait alone, tell them they must return home if the school bus doesn't show up.
- 2. Use the sidewalk to get to the stop. If there isn't one, walk on the left side of the road, facing the traffic.
- Step back five paces when the bus arrives and wait until it comes to a complete stop 3 before getting any closer.
- Board the bus calmly, holding onto the handrail.
- 5. Sit down immediately. Keep your schoolbag and your lunchbox on your knees or put them under the seat: never obstruct the centre aisle.
- 6. Stay seated and calm throughout the trip so that the driver can concentrate on driving the bus safely.
- 7. When the bus arrives at school, wait until it has come to a complete halt before standing up. Hold the handrail when getting off the bus and never push other children.
- 8 Walk quickly away from the school bus. Don't run.
- 9 Don't try to retrieve items dropped close to the school bus unless you tell the driver first. Alternatively, wait until the bus has gone before picking them up.
- After school, go straight home from the bus stop.

Travelling on a school bus might be fun but it is not a game. Parents are responsible for teaching their children to behave safely and to take the bus seriously.

It is dangerous to push and shove while waiting in line to get on the bus.

Some routes have changed this year. Please check to see if your child's pick up time or location has changed. Because of space limitations, all stops are not listed. There are some stops between each of the listed times/stop. For complete listing of AM/PM routes, please visit our website at: www.ycs.wednet.edu. New students must register through their school of attendance to obtain transportation services. Please allow up to 5 days for bus registration. Parents of special needs students will be contacted by transportation before the start of the school year for their student's schedule. There will be (1) one hour late start Wednesdays beginning September 16. A reminder to the parents of Kindergarten students: all students must be met at the bus stop unless transportation has a letter on file saying otherwise. If no parent is present, the student(s) will be transported back to their school.

In this April 26, 2015 photo, 1st Lt. Shaye Haver, one of the 20 female soldiers, who is among the 400 students who qualified to start Ranger School, tackles the Darby Queen obstacle course, one of the toughest obstacle courses in U.S. Army training at Fort Benning, Georgia. Haver and Capt. Kristen Griest are the first women to complete the U.S. Army's grueling Ranger School and graduated Friday, Aug. 21. A new Army chief is considering the role women will play in combat.

New Army Chief Ponders Decision of Women in Combat

'It's a Big Deal': Recommendation Should Be Forwarded by October

BY ROBERT BURNS

AP National Security Writer

FORT BENNING, Georgia (AP) — The Army's new chief of staff, Gen. Mark Milley, is taking a calculated approach to arguably the most consequential decision of his early tenure - whether to recommend that any all-male combat a big deal, and I want to make sure I'm thinking it through."

Women have been steadily moving into previously all-male jobs across the military, including as members of the Army's 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment, best known as the helicopter crews that flew Navy SEALs into Osama bin Laden's compound. Women are also now serving on Navy submarines and in some Army artillery jobs.

Officials familiar with the discussions about possibly ending limits on women serving in combat said they believe the Army will allow women to seek infantry and armor jobs. Milley's predecessor as chief of staff, Gen. Ray 75th Ranger Regiment. Although Haver and Griest are now Rangerqualified, no women are eligible for the elite regiment, although officials say it is among special operations units likely to be opened to women eventually.

Griest is a military police officer and has served one tour in Afghanistan. Haver is a pilot of Apache helicopters. Both are graduates of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. Of 19 women who began the Ranger roles remain closed to women.

Central to his thinking, he said in an Associated Press interwhether allowing women to serve in the infantry, armor and other traditionally male-only fields would affect Army "readiness" for war.

"Does it improve it, or does it hurt it?" he is asking as he and leaders of the other military services weigh whether to recommend to Defense Secretary Ash ation ceremony offered Milley a Carter that he keep some positions off-limits to women. Under a January 2013 edict, all remaining all-male positions will be opened to women unless the defense secretary approves exceptions by January 2016. Carter said he expects to see the services' recommendations by October.

Milley, who took over as Army chief on Aug. 14 and has seen women in combat during his numerous tours as a commander in Iraq and Afghanistan, said he is not ready to say which direction he is leaning.

"Right now I would call myself right on the line," he said in the interview while flying to Fort Benning to attend an Army Ranger School graduation that included the first women ever to pass the rigorous Ranger training course. After the ceremony he briefly met privately with the two trailblazers, Capt. Kristen Griest, 26, and 1st Lt. Shaye Haver, 25.

Milley said that in coming weeks he will weigh a wide range of information, including Army assessments of the experience of Israel and other countries with women in combat, as well as studies by the Marine Corps, data collected during Army experiments and judgments reached by his own experience in war.

"Whatever decision is made is going to have some pretty far-

Odierno, has hinted at that conclusion

"In order to best manage your view last week, is the question of talent, you have to pick the best people who can perform to the standards that we have established," Odierno said earlier this month. "If you can meet the standards that we've established, then you should be able to perform in that (position). And I think that's where we're headed."

Undo Negative Comments With Positivity

FINDING REASON

By Pastor Jeff Adams

"You are so kind and gracious to others. I can see how you positively impact people all around you because you go out of your way to build others up. People feel good around you because you purposely try to be a good role model, and you intentionally say uplifting things to people.

Also, you never get angry, you always find the good in hard situations, you never let circumstances get you down, and you never unfairly judge others," one friend said to another. They continued: "But, deep down inside I simply can't stand you because I think you're nothing but a fake."

One negative can undo a bunch of positives. One negative comment can take away the positive impact of several positive ones. One negative person can negate many positive ones. One negative friend, family member, classmate, neighbor, or co-worker can crush another person.

Drs. Marcial Losada and Barbara Fredrickson, experts in their fields of psychology, established the theory of Critical Positivity Ratio by researching the impacts of positive versus negative comments. They concluded it takes between 2.9013 and 11.6346 positive comments or experiences to overcome or combat one negative comment or experience. To use round figures and to simplify, in other words it takes three to 12 positive comments or experiences to undo one negative one. Conversely, it takes one negative comment or experience to undo three to 12 positive ones.

Losada's and Fredrickson's Critical Positivity Ratio was widely cited and also perpetuated further with a term commonly used today, The Butterfly Effect (a relatively new field of study within the scientific world of nonlinear dynamics). Although Losada and Fredrickson and proponents suggest the empirical evidences support their research, American Psychologist published a report in 2014 that retracted its support of the theory, thereby undermining its scientific data.

See what just happened? One negative statement undid all the positive ones. Further research indicates there seems to be coincidental support for the idea that one negative comment or experience does tend to emotionally overwhelm multiple positive ones. So, even though the scientific equations posited by the Critical Positivity Ratio is questionable, the fact remains that one negative comment can undo multiple positive ones. It just happened to you, the reader, as you journeyed through this column.

The Bible consistently teaches we are to love one another, encourage one another, and build one another up (John 13:34-35; Romans 12:10; Corinthians 13:11; Galatians 5:13; Ephesians 4:2; 1 Thessalonians 5:10-12; Hebrews 3:13; 1 Peter 1:22; 1 John 4:12). Jesus regularly set the example as He confronted wrongdoing harshly and dealt with hard and negative things, He always had positive encouragement with paths for hope and for better things.

The reality is we live in an extraordinarily negative world. Most of our news is negative. People we love get sick, injured and die. For many of us life on earth feels like hell more than it does like heaven. While God may grant us tastes of heaven on Earth, we still must endure hard times. If it wasn't this way, we might not long for heaven and do what it takes to get there.

People around us go through hard things just like us. They don't always share it, either.

As we go through the negativities of life, let's choose to have a positive impact on others. Let's start by choosing to be positively impacted by the love and grace of Christ. Then, let's determine to undo negatives by our positives we share with others. One person at a time, let's generate good stuff in our communities, homes, churches and beyond (Matthew 5:13-16).

On Sunday, Aug. 16, 2015, Thomas A. Stancil, age 65, lost his brief vet courageous battle with cancer at home surrounded by his family. Born Dec. 13, 1949 to Eva Violet (Ayers) and Clarence Alfred Stancil, Tom was preceded in death by his mother (1983) and father

(September 2014). Tom grew up in the Rainier community and graduated from Rainier High School in 1968. His most memorable high school moments were on the football field. Soon after graduation, he enlisted in the United States Navy where he served our country for four years. His service included time in the Vietnam War. After 40-plus years, Tom retired as a Journeyman Steam Plant Mechanic from the Centralia Steam Plant (TransAlta) on Sept. 11, 2014. His hope was to spend more time outdoors camping, hunting and fishing. Tom's highest priority in life was his family, which includes his wife of 23 years, Roxie, and children Tamara (Terry), Arin (Amy), Sean, Josh and Abeni. Tom was incredibly proud of each of his children and never missed an opportunity to brag or show off pictures. He spent many hours in the stands at high school football games, yelling his loudest, attempting to pump up the team or on the field, coaching upcoming football athletes. He coached a team or two of baseball and provided individual support when needed. He volunteered many hours alongside Roxie for the Rainier School District in their support of the community youth and Homeless Backpack, supporting county youth in need.

Welcome to Voices —

This is your page. Submit items, from your latest club happenings to a cute picture of your grandchild to an event in your community. It could be a wedding, anniversary, engagement, milestone birthday, birth announcement, a community award, 4-H or FFA activity, a stunning photograph of Mount Rainier and the like.

Too often the staff at the Nisqually Valley News can't get to your event (we only have so many reporters and photographers and there are just too many happenings in our area to cover). Yet we want as much of the local scene in your hometown newspaper as possible.

If you want your item on an upcoming Voices page, email photographs and/or stories to mwagar@ yelmonline.com. Thanks for participating in letting us all share in what is important to you.

Rainier junior Shouridama Beadle, left, and senior Zak Miller prepare Tuesday afternoon for the cross-country season.

Rainier Boys Seek Team State Berth; Runners Must Push Their Bodies to the Limit to Reach Potential

BY TYLER HUEY

thuey@yelmonline.com

To the surprise of some, the Rainier boys' cross-country team made state last year for the first time since 2008. If that happens again, it should almost be expected.

Rainier's top runners — senior Zak Miller and junior Shouridama Beadle - didn't guarantee their five-person team would make state. They are confident that will happen, though. Coach Rob Henry also believes it is possible. third state returner, as the other two graduated.

"There's a lot of new kids here really eager to run so I'm pretty confident that we can do it," Miller said.

last year with our state team," Beadle added. "They look more eager to run because they're younger ... and are just just to have it and learn to love running happy to be here. If we can get them around a winning environment and go into state as a team we'll do really good things.' Henry said it's a realistic goal for the boys since Miller and Beadle were the best runners last year, too, having finished in the top 15 at the District 4 tournament.

not out of the question. That is our goal."

ONE OF the reasons the boys may be in even better shape this fall is due to the mentality change of the team leaders. In the past, both guys weren't shy about their borderline dislike for running, saying they did it to stay in shape and - in Miller's case - because he was just good.

Following a running camp they attended, their mindset has taken a 180-degree turn. Miller said they felt out of place after first arriving to the camp. Everyone seemed to love running except for them. Although change can be hard, it's often for the best.

"But, then when we got there and actually started to talk to the counselors and all of the kids there, we really figured out running's more than just run-Sophomore Dakota DuCharme is the ning," Miller said. "It's really a team sport, something they tried to teach everyone. It's all about having fun, and I think that really changed our minds about how we feel about running.'

Beadle, in part, talked about how "We've had a lot more kids show up they learned in greater detail about for the summer practices than we did stretching, how to warm-up the muscles and proper nutrition

"The camp was a great experience not just as a sport, but as a pastime. ... It's really peaceful," he said. "It calms the mind and blocks everything out. It's just you running and enjoying nature.'

While the boys' team has high hopes, its female counterpart is much younger and has fewer participants. Henry already named 14-year-old freshman Elaina Hansen to No. 1. Hansen, the sister of three-time school record holder

"He helped a lot competition wise and has really started to push me," she said. "He'll run with me, then we'll have almost a race against each other. Obviously he's faster right now, but hopefully one day I'll be faster than him."

The only way to top her older brother is to learn something that takes most runners years to master. And some never fully grasp it, which means their full potential isn't reached. Hansen knows

thuey@yelmonline.com

Following last year's fourth-place finish in the Pacific 2B League and subsequent losses in the District 4 tournament, Rainier's volleyball team is poised for another playoff run.

Dropping down in leagues from the Evergreen 1A helped. The girls now know their opponents, they understand what postseason play feels like, and have six seniors to help lead them to where they want to go.

"Overall we were all pretty happy with it," fifth-year Rainier coach Kristin Robinson said of what was accomplished last season. "I think none of them had really seen postseason play, so that was a new challenge and a little bit shocking."

Even though the 2014 squad lost their final four games of the season, making victories more of a habit is becoming the norm for a program long known for struggling. The girls have already talked about making a return trip to the district tournament. There is a pep in their step, a true confidence that has lacked for who knows how long.

"They've kind of raised their threshold a little bit of what they expect from themselves and expect from the team," Robinson said. "I think they're envisioning that rather than just envisioning enough games to get there. Before it was always focus on league and now it's like OK, we can get through league.

"We know our opponents a little bit better, we can get through that and prepare for the next level, which are some of those teams coming down like La Conner from up north," she continued. "A lot of teams in our district are state contenders. ... Coming into practice she hasn't reached that level yet, because she often finishes a race knowing she could do a lot more.

When runners cross the finish line, Henry said he wants them to be exhausted, "practically mentally dead." Understanding and learning their physical limitations can be a fear factor, an invisible barrier that's difficult to overcome.

"A lot of times you'll take off running and say, 'I don't know if I can finish so I am not going to go as fast, I'll save myself a little bit," Henry said. "You need the confidence to understand that I can push myself, I'm not going to die. I can make that step, that next gear. And that's just growth, confidence and understanding your body."

MILLER AND Beadle know their body well enough how to go

Several members of Rainier's cross-country team glide past the football field. Afterward they further stretched their muscles before going on a run throughout the city.

Hansen is attempting to get there one day, as did Ben, and hopefully each teammate is as well.

"It's great. Being able to pace yourself and being able to go fullbore all the time is huge in training aspects, because then you apply it full out and not leave anything on to an actual meet. ... The competi-

the course. But that takes time. tive nature comes out of you when you do it," Beadle said. "The kids that can't do it at the time, they're scared and don't want to look embarrassed. Then they realize everyone else is doing it and feel more comfortable."

It is kind of scary and hard to push yourself to go that fast, Hansen acknowledged. Deep down she knows she can do it. Now she just has to make it become a reality.

Perhaps that's why the boys' team is so confident it can make consecutive state berths. The best runners are. They know what it takes, and they're ready to lead the younger crop there.

"It gave the program confidence and set the gold standard of how we train and how we feel about running," Beadle said of making state. "It's no more just, 'Oh crap, we've got to run again.' Now it's, 'Yay, we're running because we're going to make state."" this year I've already seen good conditioning and things like that."

Some of the standout seniors to Robinson are AnnMarae Martin, Kera Anderson and Peyton Dungan. Martin, who primarily plays middle hitter, is perhaps Rainier's best player. Robinson said she's definitely Rainier's best server and hitter.

And Martin, like many of the upperclassmen, tries to teach the younger girls the ins and outs of the sport. At one point during Tuesday's practice, she could be seen assisting a freshman.

out our games," Martin said of last season's final four consecutive losses to three opponents. "There's always going to be someone better than you as a team, and the only thing you can do is work together as a team to get as far as you can. If the teams were indeed better - and they were - that's just how it ends. We need to train harder and focus more on playing skills as in like tactics."

She went on to say she thought the team can do "pretty well" this season, but would not elaborate because it's too early. Anderson, a setter, also has lofty goals yet was more forthcoming on what she hopes the team accomplishes.

"I hope that we're able to "It's not that we didn't close make it to districts and actually do something with it," Anderson said. "Since we were the last seed in, we played the best team and they were really good. But I hope we work harder, get a better position and set ourselves up to win."

In her sixth year of Rainier volleyball dating back to middle school, what does she like about this team? For instance, everyone is friends on and off the court and there are no arguments, she said.

"Everybody is willing to correct their mistakes or listen to the constructive criticism that older people or coaches are giving to them," Anderson said. "That's really helpful and I think that will help us go farther."

Team bonding and communication is vital, but being in the Pacific 2B may have been just as important. The reality is Rainier this new league we're playing High is too small to compete with most 1A schools.

"I think it helps the mental-versatility, such as also playing middle linebacker.

On the other hand, the 6-foot-5 Okung is obviously a large human being, but his 310-pound frame is downright trim, athletic for someone his size who runs into other gargantuan people for a living. Both of them may be appear a little smaller than normal for their positions, but their play says otherwise. That's why they're the best linemen on their teams.

"He does everything right every single play and he makes plays on both sides of the ball," Rainier coach Terry Shaw said. "He makes plays on defense and he's always doing his job on offense."

Yelm junior Brandon Thompson is running back around 215 pounds. Rawls is much more compact, but they're both powerful runners who finish carries with brute force. Similar to Seahawks coach Pete Carroll, Rainier coach Terry Shaw loves playing football the way it was meant to be: hard-hitting. "He is more than capable of handling a starter's workload in the NFL, and had Purdue's safeties ready to tap out by the end of that game last season," Seahawks.com says of Rawls.

Tyler Huey / Nisqually Valley News

Junior varsity coach Mikaila

Mortlock, a former high school player and Rainier graduate, hits an overhead shot.

If things go according to plan, Russell's running style will break the opposition's will, and Rawls will make the team.

Christine Michael.

Michael has all the talent in the world, yet the third-year back is in jeopardy of getting cut, in part, because of too many fumbles. Despite the flaws, he is fast, powerful, elusive, and has good feet and vision - as does Thompson.

There was a point last season in which Yelm coach Jason Ronquillo thought Thompson might be named first team All-League out of the 4A Narrows. That didn't happen, but the 5-foot-9 boy's body now looks more like a man, having packed on about 15 pounds of muscle throughout the offseason.

"The sky's the limit for Brandon. When he puts his mind to something he really has the ability to accomplish it," Ronquillo said. "His idea going into the summer was to put some work in the weight room - get stronger, get bigger - and he accomplished that. His top-end speed is pretty elite, so him increasing his body strength and weight and being able to keep that top-end speed, the sky's the limit for sure."

Rainier sophomore lan Russell is running back Thomas Rawls.

A few differences: Russell (I'm guessing) is 6 feet to 6 feet 2 and Rawls is 5 feet 9. Russell will start at fullback for the Mountaineers while Rawls, an undrafted rookie free agent, is trying to make the Seahawks' 53-man roster. Russell is a good, nice kid; Rawls has a troubled past, which includes getting suspended indefinitely from Central Michigan last year after being arrested on three felony warrants.

Some similarities: Russell (I'm guessing) and Rawls weigh

Yelm senior Tim Piland is linebacker Bobby Wagner.

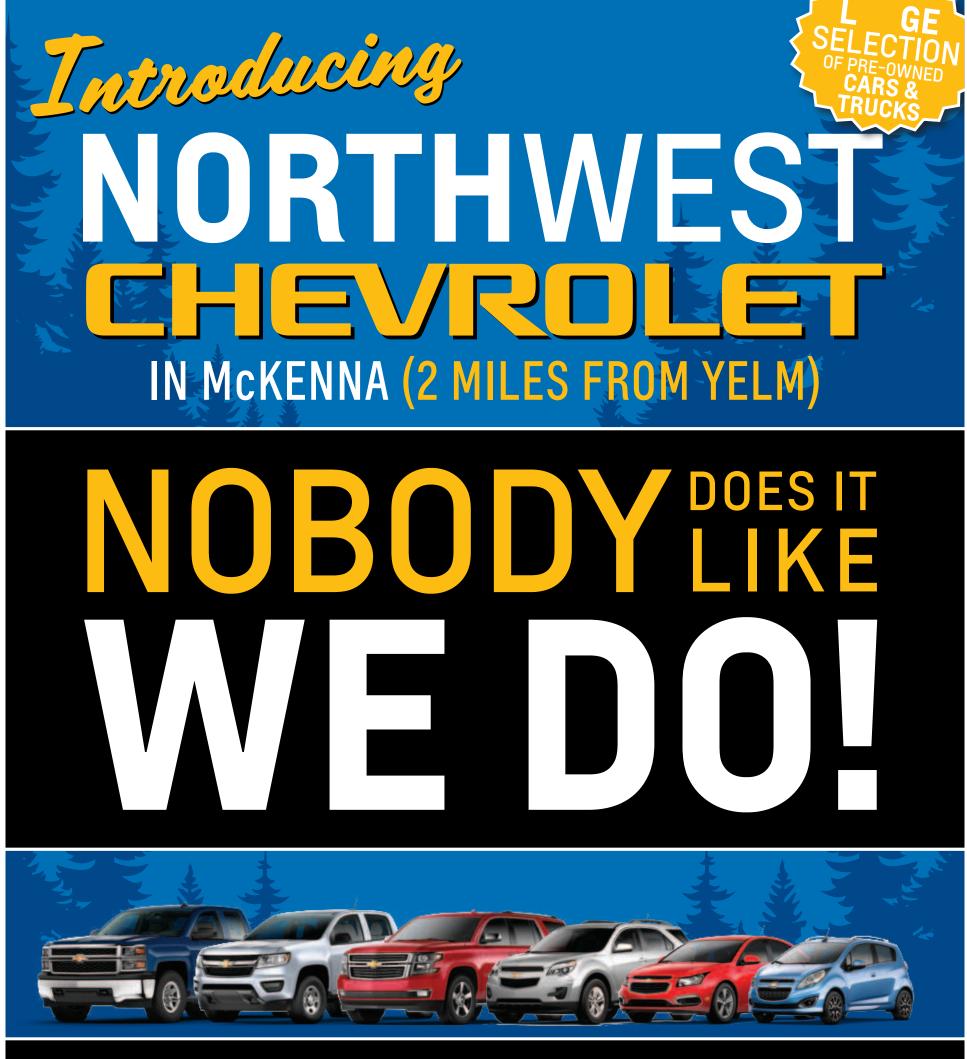

Just like more than 99 percent of the world, Piland will probably never sign a contract that guarantees almost $22 million (Wagner signed a four-year extension on Aug. 1). Yelm's defensive leader will also probably not ever run a 40-yard dash in 4.46 seconds (2012 NFL Pro Day) or record 152 tackles as a senior like Wagner (2007-08 at Colony High School in Ontario, California, according to MaxPreps).

However, they are both 6-foot-tall ballhawks who love the game. Piland is relatively soft-spoken. So is Wagner. Piland is a key to the Tornados, as was Wagner to his alma mater, the Titans. And even if Piland strikes it rich one day, I wouldn't be surprised if he reacted like Wagner, who says nothing is different about his life, according to an Aug. 19 story in The News Tribune.

"Nothing. Just chillin'. ... I can't really say much has changed," Wagner said in the TNT article of signing an extension. "I live a pretty simple life. It's just been chill – and focused on football."

Hiking, mountain biking, camping and cooking are four things Piland listed as hobbies and interests in a section that focuses on seniors for next week's 2015 high school football preview. Piland also enjoys lifting weights and by looking at Wagner, he does, too. He outweighs Piland — a big guy in his own right - by about 40 pounds of muscle.

No wonder why my wife thinks Wagner is hot. Heck, I agree with her.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

PET OF THE WEEK

Oh, how we adore Paris darling, with her rich coat, a tapestry of colors. While seemingly aloof at first, once our brown-eyed girl has gotten to know you, affection reigns. A true lover, she's even been known to touch noses with staff. Also like her namesake, Paris is all a bustle, brimming with energy and curiosity. Lots of hop time outside of her cage is just the ticket to keeping the 8-month old content. Take a walk on the exotic side and meet Paris today. Her reference number is A496853. For more information on Paris or any other pets at the Humane Society for Tacoma and Pierce County, call 253-383-2733 or visit them at 2608 Center St., Tacoma. ### WNPA STATEWIDE CLASSIFIEDS WEEK OF AUGUST 24, 2015

This newspaper participates in a statewide classified ad program sponsored by the Washington Newspaper Publishers Association, a statewide association of weekly newspapers. The program allows classified advertisers to submit ads for publication in participating weeklies throughout the state in compliance with the following rules. You may submit an ad for the statewide program through this newspaper or in person to the WNPA office. The rate is $275 for up to 25 words, plus $10 per word over 25 words. WNPA reserves the right to edit all ad copy submitted and to refuse to accept any ad submitted for the statewide program. WNPA, therefore, does not guarantee that every ad will be run in every newspaper. WNPA will, on request, for a fee of $40, provide information on which newspapers run a particular ad within a 30 day period. Substantive typographical error (wrong address, telephone number, name or price) will result in a "make good", in which a corrected ad will be run the following week. WNPA incurs no other liability for errors in publication.
