I started my first listing of Airfix kits in 1963 and by 1981 it was fully up-to-date. Most of the information came from the catalogues and leaflets of the time as well as other information I had collected over the years. In 2005, I used it in Constant Scale 22, to show the total number of models produced by the original Airfix Company. Over the next few years, I expanded it to include all the models produced by Palitoy and Humbrol as well as all known boxtop artists. It was published in January 2010 as: The Airfix Collectors' Club, Guide Number 1. Following that, I continually updated it, added year of initial release and confirmed most of the artists. I also added sections on Airfix books, catalogues, etc. Recently I have added extensive cross-referencing as some models appear in several places. It is the ideal companion to my recent books:

"60 Years of Airfix Models" (2015) and "40 Years of Airfix Toys" (2019) both published by The Crowood Press Ltd.

Whilst most of the information came from my own records, I must express my thanks to Trevor Snowden and Darrell Burge of Airfix for their help and for recently granting me permission to check and collate the surviving Airfix archive and artwork. Much detail on artists and individual kits has been obtained from this primary source. Also, to Ralph Ehrmann, Peter Allen, Keith Melville and other former Airfix employees who gave me much further information. Many Club members have over the years provided more detail on various kits. Other clubs, notably the Kitmaster Collectors Club and Plastic Warrior have provided much information on their particular areas of interest.

"The Enthusiasts Guide to Airfix Kits" by Pat Lewarne, published in 1987, provided useful information on Palitoy releases and the various books written by Arthur Ward are always a useful source of information. Further detailed information has been gleaned from my regular visits to several of the on-line Airfix Forums, in particular the Airfix Tribute Forum, Airfix Collecting Forum and Unofficial Airfix Modellers' Forum. The extensive Airfix section on eBay often produces models I had not previously seen and has been a very useful source of information.

A Brief History of Airfix

The Airfix Company was founded in 1939, by a Jewish refugee called Nicolas Kove and in 2019 was celebrating its 80th year, now under the ownership of Hornby Hobbies Ltd. The only part of the company to survive intact is the World-famous construction kit division. However, kits did not feature in the company's range until the early 1950s, but they would go on to make "Airfix" the generic name for any kind of construction assembled from parts. Mention plastic kits to anyone, certainly in the U.K., and they will automatically say "Airfix", just as everyone calls a vacuum cleaner a "Hoover"!

Airfix's first real model was an accurate 1:20 scale model of the Ferguson TE20 Tractor. It was commissioned by Harry Ferguson for his sales staff to use as a sales tool and to pass onto customers. Airfix, which had owned the first modern plastic injection moulding machine in the U.K., was asked to mould it. It was tooled as a series of parts which were then assembled by the female staff at the Airfix factory, boxed-up and despatched to Ferguson's, and Airfix was later granted permission by Ferguson to market it to the general public. However, the kit was proving troublesome to Airfix as numerous models were being returned to them because bits had broken off and Airfix had to replace them. So Airfix decided to sell them as a kit of parts to be assembled by the purchaser. So, around 1953 it appeared as a kit in a box and in 1955 was put into the famous plastic bag. It survived until the end of the decade when it disappeared from the range.

The first real Airfix kit was a miniature replica of the "Golden Hind". In 1952, Airfix was approached by John Russon who was the main buyer for the U.K. branch of F.W. Woolworths. Airfix had been a principal supplier to Woolworth's since the mid-1940s, having supplied untold numbers of plastic combs and latterly a very popular toy ice cream tri-cycle. Woolworth's in the U.S.A. was doing good business selling a small range of 'ships in bottles' and Russon asked the management at Airfix if they could manufacture them in the U.K. for Woolworth's. In the end Airfix concluded that it would be cheaper and more profitable in the long run to design and tool its own kit; thus, was born the small "Golden Hind" pattern number 1265, which first appeared, probably, in 1953.

It was presented to Woolworth's in a box with a suggested selling price of 5 shillings (25p). Woolworth's said it was too expensive and told Airfix to think again. Airfix then put the parts into one of the new plastic bags and stapled a simple twice-folded paper header to the top. On the front was a colour picture of the model with a history and cut-out flags on the back. Inside was an 'exploded' diagram of the kit with instructions on how to make it. It was to retail at 2 shillings (10p) and was snapped up by Woolworth's which gave Airfix an initial order for 30,000 units. The moulding machines were soon running flat out to keep up with the demand and Airfix realised it had a winner on its hands so decided to look at further subjects to model.

In 1954, kits of the Santa Maria and H.M.S. Shannon were produced and in 1955, the Cutty Sark, two 1:32 car kits and a promotional model of the new liner S.S. Southern Cross joined the range. However, the big news of 1955 was the release of the first aircraft kit, a replica of the Spitfire to 1:72. It is somewhat mired in controversy as it appears to be an exact copy of the new Aurora 1:48 kit, even including the spurious code numbers of BT-K. Whatever the truth, it sold like 'hot cakes' and was replaced by a new more accurate Spitfire IX in 1960. It was to set a trend for aircraft kits that would result in aircraft dominating the range by the end of the decade. The second aircraft kit the Gloster Gladiator, introduced in 1956, was finally replaced in 2013 by a new tool; not bad for a 57-year-old model!

By 1981, Airfix had released over 800 models ranging from aircraft to dinosaurs and claimed to have, "The Largest Range of Construction Kits in the World"! In January 1981, however, the Airfix Company called in the Receiver largely caused by problems at its Meccano subsidiary and most of the toy divisions were closed for good. The kit division along with Airfix Model Railways (GMR) and, ironically, Meccano and Dinky were purchased by General Mills a U.S. company, and placed under its U.K. subsidiary, Palitoy. Production of Airfix products was transferred to General Mills' Miro-Meccano factory in Calais. It was owned by General Mills under the Palitoy label until 1985 when General Mills closed its U.K. operation when it withdrew from the European toy market and was put up for sale again. It was then purchased by Humbrol, the model paint manufacturer in 1986.

Humbrol was based at Marfleet in Hull but production was transferred to the Heller factory in Trun, France, because Humbrol had recently purchased Heller. In 2006, Humbrol got into difficulties, when the Heller subsidiary, which had been bought out by its management, closed and Humbrol was unable to access its Airfix moulds. Humbrol and Airfix were purchased by the present owner, Hornby Hobbies Ltd, based then in Margate, Kent. Since then there has been a renaissance at Airfix with new tools being produced at a rate not seen since the 1950s-1970s with kits like the magnificent 1:24 Mosquito being modelled, and in 2014 we had an incredibly detailed 1:24 kit of the Hawker Typhoon being moulded. Many 'tired' old kits, like the Defiant, have recently been replaced by new 'state of the art' models and many new subjects added to the range, such as the Whitley and Shackleton.

Recently, Hornby sold the Margate site and moved to a new Headquarters at Sandwich, Kent, with stock being held at Hersden near Canterbury. Most production is carried out in India, but some models, including the Quick Build range are moulded in the U.K. Financial difficulties experienced by Hornby following the move resulted in a culling of the kit range. However, in May 2018, Airfix announced it is to bring back many of the older pre-Hornby models in a new range entitled "Vintage Classics". The models will appear in the new Type 17 box top and will bear their old box illustrations with the year of original release being shown on the box, ensuring that modellers realise that it a 'legacy' kit. The company moved back into its old Margate site in early 2019, alongside the Hornby Visitor Centre which had remained there.

So, the future for Airfix looks assured and the recent 2018 announcements of new tool Hunters, Wellingtons, Phantoms, a 1:24 Hellcat and now, in 2020, a new Vulcan mean we look forward to seeing what other new models the future holds.

How to use the Booklet

This booklet sets out to list the kits, models or sets of soldiers modelled by Airfix since the Golden Hind and including those models announced for 2020. It is divided into three sections with aircraft occupying the first part and largely follows the layout of the original Airfix Catalogues. Models are arranged in Series order and catalogue number. Generally, most models are in chronological release order but it has been the case that in recent years earlier numbers have been re-used. Those models announced by Hornby or re-released by Hornby, are shown in bold with the prefix A as they tend to be the only ones currently available. Three stars  indicate the point reached in each series in 1981, when Airfix went into Receivership and first closed down. Those after the stars were produced after that date except for those mentioned above. Starting in the 1983 catalogue, Palitoy's new moulds and re-issues were prefixed with the number 9, e.g., 9 06005 A10 Thunderbolt and 9 04023 F2H Banshee. The 9 prefix was not used by Humbrol from 1986 onwards. For clarity, most 9 prefixes are not used in this book, but would have applied to most or all of the late 1981-85 models.

A typical entry looks like this:

01023 – 1416 – 103 Auster Antarctic – (See 01069) – 1958 3 – RC 15 – RC

01023 is the computerised catalogue number introduced in the early 1970s and by which it is nowadays referred. 1416 is the original pattern number used on release and 103 is the catalogue number introduced to replace pattern numbers around 1959. Newer kits did not use the early numbers and are shown with only computerised numbers. Auster Antarctic is the name of the kit. The brackets show where a kit has been altered or moved to a different series or number and is a useful cross reference for models of the same kit.

01069 – 01023 Auster AOP6 – (Variant of 01023) – 1979 6 – KM

01023 is now shown as the previous identity of the new kit 01069. The description inside the brackets shows how the kit differs from the earlier model (Variant, New Parts Added, New Decals, etc). The date is the date of first release of the revised model. Where release in the particular year has not been confirmed, the date is shown in brackets. This mainly applies to 1980s and 1990s car kits. Where brackets are used after the catalogue number: 01036(2) – 01036 it indicates the second use of the number by a different kit, mainly used by Hornby in the first few years of its ownership. Where a new model is re-issued by Hornby with different decals and painting, it is shown with a suffix A or B:

A03082A – A03082 North American F-86F Sabre – 2014 16 – AT

Where it is released as a different version, with or without extra parts, it is allocated a new catalogue number:

A03083 Canadair Sabre F.4/N.A. F-86E(M) – (Var. of A03082) – 2011 16 – AT

Airfix kits have been released in 17 different box types with Type 3 (introduced in 1963) being the first to feature full colour paintings. Type 1 and 2 kits are believed to have been painted by Charles Oates but this cannot be confirmed. For an explanation of Box Types visit the Airfix Collectors' Club website at: www.airfixcollectorsclub.co.uk where an illustrated listing of all box types and logo styles can be found. So, for example, 3 – RC refers to the initial release in a Type 3 header or boxtop with the painting executed by Roy Cross (See Artists' Listing at the end of the book). Where the artist is unknown or unconfirmed a ? is used or it is left blank. Where a different artist is used for a later release it is shown thus 6 – KM, a Type 6 boxing by Ken McDonough. Unless a different artist is used for a later release, it is not generally recorded. Many Type 8s were photos of the models. Type 15 or 16 refer to late Humbrol or Hornby re-releases of older kits with the artist used. It is not a listing of every box type used by a model, as some kits were only issued in one or two box types and others were issued in many or all box types. For the 2020 releases planned for later in the year, the expected artist, usually Adam Tooby, is shown with a ? as it has not been confirmed at the time of going to press:

A04021 – 04021 Bristol Beaufort Mk.1 (Hornby – New Mould) – 2020 16 – AT?

Type 16 is the main box type introduced by Hornby. The latest releases now feature a plain white base rather than the multi-colour bases of the earlier ones, which showed details of the Airfix Model Club. The Airfix Model Club was relaunched in late June 2020 and this 6th Edition was printed to coincide with it.

The May 2018 onwards, 'Vintage Classics' kit releases are all in the new Type 17 boxes, which will be used for this series only. The Vintage Classic models are shown as:

A12001V – A12001 Supermarine Spitfire Mk.1a – 2020 – VC 17 – RC

A further 20 or so aircraft, ships, figures and AFVs have so far been announced for 2019. Delays in the release of these classic models meant that Airfix decided to concentrate on getting them out to the market place before re-introducing a lot more older models. The announced Vintage Classics range for 2020, will consist of an extra 3 large-scale aircraft and the famous 1:12 Bentley car.

The Airfix Model Club was re-launched in late June 2020 and the Kit List 6 was included in the Club package.

The Airfix Collectors' Club

Hon. President - Roy Cross RSMA

Now in its 26th Year!

The Airfix Collectors' Club was originally formed in 1994 by a small group of like-minded enthusiasts to document the history of and encourage the collecting of the models and toys made by Airfix Products Ltd and the later companies which owned it.

Several "Club Guides" have been published including 2 Contents and Indexes for Airfix Magazine and the "Complete Airfix Artist and Kit List - 1949-2020" - Now in the 6th Edition.
