Gore wins court battle in Fla. recount

■ The state Supreme Court rules that counties may continue manual recounts.

By Ron Fournier
 Associated Press

Al Gore won his fight Thursday to expand manual recounts in Florida as he struggled to trim George W. Bush' 300-vote lead before the Republican secretary of State certifies the Florida vote

Saturday in the marathon White House race. GOP lawyers asked courts to stop the counting and "the disintegration" of America's presidential election system.

The vice president and his team aggressively defended the hand recounts in Democratic-leaning counties, laying the groundwork for Gore's case to continue the vote-counting if he fails to pull ahead of the Texas governor this weekend — a prospect that advisers conceded was likely.

"The choice really is whether the voters are going to decide this election by having every vote count or whether that process is going to be short-circuited without all the votes being examined," Gore said in a radio interview.

The Florida Supreme Court handed Gore a modest victory, authorizing officials in Palm Beach and Broward counties to recount ballots by hand. The effort, which officials said will

Marquette poll: Students voted twice

■ Wisc. may need to fix its system allowing voters to register on Election Day.

By Anne Webbeking
 The Daily Iowan

While Texas Gov. George W. Bush Thursday ended the possible controversy surrounding the close presidential election in Iowa by deciding not to call for a recount, disputes about voting procedures in the Wisconsin election loom.

Vice President Al Gore leads Bush by approximately 5,700 votes in Wisconsin, where new developments have arisen regarding the possibility that some Marquette University students voted more than once.

Rob Bosworth, 18, a freshman at Marquette, told ABC News Monday that he voted four times. He has now admitted that that was a lie, but a poll taken by the Marquette Tribune, the student newspaper, showed that

Is relatively cheap still expensive?

■ One regent worries the state's public universities are too costly though they cost less than others.

By Ryan Foley
 The Daily Iowan

A state regent criticized lawmakers and university officials Thursday for excusing the rising costs of higher education in Iowa by emphasizing how much less expensive public universities in Iowa are compared with similar schools.

Regent Ellengray Kennedy made her remarks Thursday in response to a statement by U

President Mary Sue Coleman during the Board of Regents meeting in the IMU. WHY STUDENTS COLEMAN, LEAVE MAY BE speaking to the board a b o u t improvements in the UI's residence halls, pointed out that room and board at the UI was still the lowest in the Big Ten.

"It's starting to disturb me personally that we keep saying that our costs are the lowest in the Big Ten," Kennedy said. "If you also look at our average income in Iowa, it's low, too."

Kennedy said she was not trying to single out Coleman. Administrators, regents and legislators should work to change attitudes in the next year, she said. Kennedy said she is worried the universities are becoming less accessible, even if their costs are lower than some others.

Gov. Tom Vilsack is using similar arguments to defend the possibility of underfunding the regents universities, which could cause another large increase in tuition and fees next fall, Kennedy said. Last month, regents approved a 9.9 percent increase.

"If we keep using that as reasoning, in five or 10 years that might not be the case," she said of Iowa's public universities' relatively low costs.

Regent Clarkson Kelly said he believes that officials will continue to compare Iowa's costs with those of other schools. School administrators are proud that their schools cost less and point that out to try to soften the blow of cost increases, he said.

"We feel bad about raising costs. You cannot help but use our low costs as an excuse," he said.

Vilsack will make his funding recommendations for the universities in January. The Iowa House and Senate will probably revise his appropriations in the fiscal year 2002 budget next spring.

Last year, the UI received approximately $10 million less than what it requested from the state, which resulted in some building renovations and staff hirings being put on hold. Several legislators said students would be able to afford an increase in tuition because it is cheaper at the state's universities than at most of their counterparts, so they chose to invest more money in kindergarten-through-12th-grade education.

Vietnam gives Clinton midnight welcome

■ Streets where U.S. bombs fell during the war are lined late at night with big crowds.

By Terence Hunt
 Associated Press

HANOI, Vietnam — President Clinton began a historic visit Thursday to Vietnam, stirring painful memories back home of America's longest and most unpopular war and promising a former enemy "to build a different future."

Clinton arrived in the communist capital late at night, the first U.S. president ever in Hanoi, a city once bombed by American warplanes. The welcoming ceremony was put off until morning, but that didn't stop thousands and thousands of Vietnamese from turning out at midnight to catch a glimpse of Clinton's limousine and jam the square in front of his hotel.

Even though the visit received scant advance publicity, the Vietnamese lined the streets, some just looking on and others waving and clapping when the president's motorcade passed.

"This only happens once in a thousand years," said homemaker Tran Thi Lan, 50.

Clinton was to be formally welcomed today by President Tran Duc Luong at an honor guard ceremony in the courtyard of the French-built presidential palace on Ba Dinh Square.

Rick Bowmer/Associated Press

President Clinton waves as he arrives at Noi Bai International Airport in Hanoi, Vietnam, Thursday.

Reaching out to a generation of students born after the war, Clinton will speak at Hanoi National University to describe his vision for a new chapter in U.S.-Vietnamese relations. State-run television, in an unprecedented move, was to broadcast the address live.

More than 50 U.S. corporations sent executives to Vietnam during Clinton's visit in hopes of gaining a foothold in what they believe is a vast untapped market of 78 million people.

As a young man, Clinton "opposed and despised" the Vietnam War, organized protest marches and avoided the military draft. As commander in chief three decades later, Clinton acknowledged that "a lot of people still bear the wounds of war" in both countries.

The war cost 58,000 American lives and tore the nation with suffering and turmoil. The U.S. military buildup began in 1961, growing to 60,000 combat troops within four years and to 543,000 by 1969. U.S. forces in 1973 made a humiliating withdrawal that still haunts the Pentagon. North Vietnam's army captured Saigon in 1975, leading to the unification of the country under communist control.

The losses to the Vietnamese people were staggering: 3 million dead and thousands missing.

"The best thing that we can do to honor the sacrifice and service of those who believed on both sides that what they were doing is right is to find a way to build a different future, and that's what we're trying to do," Clinton said in an inter-

Lawyers gear up for Memmer trial

■ Attorneys on both sides make their final preparations for Feb. 5.

By Kellie Doyle
 The Daily Iowan

Final preparations are under way for the Jonathon Memmer double-homicide trial, which is scheduled for Feb. 5, 2001, as attorneys requested to hold it in the most spacious courtroom possible and during a time where distractions from their other cases would be minimal.

Judge David Remley said Thursday he would mention the request for a large courtroom to the court administration but said he could not guarantee a large room.

Memmer, 25, who attended a status conference Thursday, was charged on Feb. 25 with two counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of Laura Watson-Dalton, 29, and Maria Therese Lehner, 27. The women were found beaten to death after a fire at 427 S. Van Buren St. Apt. 4 in March 1999.

While attorneys in the case agreed they could meet the Feb. 5 trial date during the status conference, the final deposition date of witnesses was changed from Dec. 14 to Jan. 5 after a request by Memmer's attorneys.

"We're moving along very well, but we're not complete," said one of Memmer's attorneys, Edward Leff.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White did not resist the date-change request because he said he did not envision the later date being a disadvantage to the state. In addition

Kicking a 17-year habit in the butt

■ The American Cancer Society's 24th annual Great American Smokeout yields a convert.

By Tracy Nemitz
The Daily Iowan

Melissa Hammer, a nursing assistant at UI Student Health Service, closed the door on one chapter of her life Thursday and began to write what she calls a more hopeful one.

After 17 years of smoking, she made it through an entire day without lighting up a cigarette.

"It was a busy day at work, so I didn't have time to think about it," Hammer said.

Her decision to quit smoking Thursday coincided with the American Cancer Society's 24th annual Great American Smokeout.

"I was so tired of smoking. The Great American Smokeout became the perfect day to quit," Hammer said.

Her decision resulted from several factors, she said. Health, the cost of cigarettes and concern for her family were some of them.

Hammer said she started out feeling jittery and a little worried she would "bite a co-worker's head off."

But co-workers said Hammer handled herself well.

Gayle Nelson, a staff nurse at Student Health, said she noticed Hammer was slightly irritable but saw no major difference in her attitude.

"There has been no real change in her behavior," Nelson said. "She is doing OK."

Although Hammer said she has not had the urge to smoke, she recognized that eventually she will.

"The thought of smoking has been in the back of my mind," she said. "I don't care right now to have one, though."

Hammer, who said she used to smoke about half of a pack of Virginia Slims Lights a day, was accustomed to smoking a few times at work, usually stepping out to have a cigarette on her breaks.

To help her through the day, she relied on the support of her co-workers. Their efforts to keep her from going outside on break and to bring in hard candy made the day easier, Hammer said.

Nelson also said Hammer received extensive oral support from co-workers.

"We are reinforcing that this is really good for her," Nelson said. "She needs to do this for her body."

Now that she has experienced one day of going without a cigarette, Hammer said she plans to give up smoking for good.

But because this is not the first time she has tried to quit, she realizes this is going to be a continuous struggle.

Being the mother of three children, she understands that stress is inevitable, she said.

"One of my daughters is just beginning her teen-age years but acts like she is 21," Hammer said. "It is going to be hard, but I need to be strong and think positive."

Boredom possesses a challenge as well, Hammer said.

"During the times when I have nothing to do, I smoke more than usual," she said. To break the monotony of down time, it became a habit to light a cigarette.

When she does encounter the urge to smoke, Hammer already has a battle plan to defeat it.

"I will exercise, do things with my hands, count to 100—not pick up a cigarette," she said.

Eileen Fisher, a research scientist for the UI's occupational and environmental health department, had a word of advice for those who did not achieve the same success as Hammer.

Fisher, who helped found the local group Clean Air For Everyone, a community-based organization that works to create smoke-free environments in public places, said it often takes several attempts before people can stop smoking for good.

"It may take three or four attempts before a person actually quits," she said. "But each attempt is a learning experience."

Fisher urged people to recognize why their attempt failed and to change that behavior so the next attempt will be more successful.

Fillmer's trial date moved

The trial date for Dominic Jason Fillmer, 28, who faces charges for allegedly confining a 7-year-old child against her will, has been moved to Jan. 2, 2001.

On Thursday, Judge David Remley granted the defendant a continuance request to gather expert reviews of the child's deposition. The next pretrial conference has been scheduled for Dec. 21 at 2 p.m.

Fillmer, 1044 Westside Drive, was charged with false imprisonment in July for incidents that allegedly occurred between May 1997 and November 1999. The victim was allegedly directed to engage in sexual activity with Fillmer, according to court records. The alleged victim said that Fillmer told her that she could not leave until she did so, according to court records.

Fillmer remains in the Johnson County Jail with bond set at $100,000.

Megamall offers discounts to Hawk fans

The Mall of America in Bloomington, Minn., is offering Iowans a "Guest Star" pass this weekend to receive discounts at more than 200 stores in the shopping center.

The promotion is associated with the football game between the Minnesota Golden Gophers and Iowa Hawkeyes Saturday.

To obtain a "Guest Star" sticker, Iowa residents can stop by any of the four guest counters at the mall and present a valid Iowa identification. Stickers can be used from today until Nov. 19.

Iowans can receive discounts of 10 to 50 percent on purchases in clothing stores, bookstores, music/entertainment venues, restaurants, toy stores and more.

Maureen Cahill, a public-relations representative for the Mall of America, said the last time a similar event was organized — for the 1997 Iowa vs. Minnesota game — there was a great turnout.

"A tremendous number of fans always come up for the Minnesota game, and we are organizing this event to show our appreciation for these Iowans," Cahill said.

Board names new alternatives to .com

MARINA DEL REY, Calif. (AP) — An Internet-oversight board gave the Web a new batch of domain names Thursday, choosing .biz, .name and five other suffixes to help ease the .com name crunch.

The decisions by the Internet Corp. for Assigned Names and Numbers capped a half-decade of discussion about how to relieve the crowded field of addresses ending in .com, which has some 20 million registrations worldwide.

The new names are the first major additions since the system of domains, or Internet-address suffixes, was developed in the 1980s. The new suffixes could appear in use by the middle of next year.

The group approved .info for general use, .biz for businesses, .name for individuals, .pro for professionals, .museum for museums, .coop for business cooperatives and .aero for the aviation industry.

"This is only an initial sampling," ICANN chairwoman Esther Dyson said. "The ones that were accepted ... will provide additional utility, but they are probably not the only ones that would qualify."

Official: Dropout surveys useless

■ The UI's attempts to discover why students leave school may be a wasted effort, a UNI official says.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

While the UI is attempting to more closely track the reasons students leave the university, a University of Northern Iowa official said Thursday she is unsure whether the UI's efforts will amount to anything.

The UI is in the process of sending surveys to all the students who were UI freshmen last year but did not come back in order to gather the reasons for their departures, Lola Lopes, the UI associate provost for undergraduate education, told the state of Iowa Board of Regents Thursday. The UI will also conduct a phone survey this spring to see why this year's freshmen students dropped out, she said.

But Renee Romano, the UI vice president for educational and student services, said she has tried those methods several times to gather the reasons for which students have left UNI and has not had much success.

If officials talk to the students before they leave, they often give simple answers, such as that they couldn't afford it, and not the "real reason," Romano said. If administrators wait until after students have left and send a survey to their home, the return rate is usually too poor to draw any valid conclusions, she said.

Regents suggested the closer monitoring at last month's meeting to see what effect, if any, tuition/fees hikes have on retention rates and what universities can do to improve those rates.

Approximately 15 percent of last year's freshmen left the UI, according to the fall report on retention the regents received at their meeting Thursday.

Lopes said the two main reasons students leave the UI are academic and financial difficulties, which officials from UNI and Iowa State University also cited as the primary reasons at their institutions.

Other reasons for leaving seem unclear to the officials, except that they noted the correlation of more personalized attention and higher retention rates. The UI is trying to make education more personal in a number of ways, Lopes said, including expanding the Courses in Common initiative, in which freshmen students take classes with the same group of students.

Regents President Owen Newlin suggested that all three public universities have a standard survey they send to students who have left. His proposal was met with little enthusiasm by the university presidents.

"I'd be a little bit cautious about that," said UI President Mary Sue Coleman. "I'm not convinced that we're going to get the same reasons for the three institutions."

ISU interim President Richard Seagrave agreed with Coleman, saying the university's significant differences would prevent a standard survey from being useful.

"I would be surprised if we could identify the same reasons for all three," he said. "I think it's a problem that you solve one student at a time."

A taste of Hindu India at IMU

More than 800 are expected to attend the Diwali celebration Saturday evening.

By Amanda Gorsche
The Daily Iowan

Authentic Indian cuisine and performers costumed to symbolize Hindu goddesses will take center stage this weekend when an estimated crowd of 800 gathers to celebrate the annual Hindu holiday of Diwali — the Festival of Lights.

Students, faculty and community members will celebrate the event Saturday night as the UI Indian Student Association sponsors a dinner, cultural program and dance in the IMU Main Lounge. The festival commemorates the symbolic triumph of good over evil in the Hindu religion.

Tuhin Diptiman, a UI graduate student and the president of the Indian Student Association, said the Indian community has a strong influence in Iowa City. Approximately 90 members of the group have been actively involved in planning the event for the past five months. Members of both the group and the community come together to help organize the annual festival that has garnered between 850-900 attendees in recent years, he said. "The festival is a symbol of unity," Diptiman said. "It is both fun and a learning experience."

Diwali began as a celebration with roots in Hindu mythology, said UI graduate student and Indian Student Association Vice President Yogesh Karikurve. Diwali is as important to Indians as Christmas is to Christians, he said. The entire country of India celebrates Diwali by displaying lights and candles, setting off firecrackers, and taking sweets and gifts to relatives and friends, Karikurve said.

Reservation issues at the IMU kept the festival from being celebrated at the UI on the actual holiday, Karikurve said. "According to the Hindu calendar, Diwali was Oct. 26," he said. "This weekend, we are celebrating in Iowa."

Many stories are told to explain the inception of the festival, but all focus on the triumph of good over evil. Karikurve said the most popular story is that of King Rama rescuing his kidnapped wife, Sita, from the evil King Ravana.

UI graduate student Vandana Cheerala is scheduled to perform a classical Indian dance at Saturday's festival, she said. Cheerala began training as a classical dancer when she was just 3 years old in India. She will perform a Southern Indian dance called "Kuchipudi."

"The traditional dancing is used as a means of prayer and as a way to be one with the universe," Cheerala said. "It conveys peacefulness and happiness to the audience."

She said her costume is based on that of goddesses in Hindu mythology. The intricate outfit consists of seven different pieces of cloth that were made by special tailors in India. Every piece of jewelry and adornment she wears has a symbolic meaning, she said.

"The temple jewelry worn in my hair is symbolic of the entire universe," she said. "One piece represents the moon, another the sun."

The festival's dinner will consist of a buffet of Indian cuisine catered by a Cedar Rapids restaurant. Dinner will initiate the event at 6 p.m., and tickets are available at the IMU box office for $10.

"If you are open-minded and want to learn about the Indian culture, it will be a lot of fun," Diptiman said.

Military jet collides with small airplane

One person is dead, while the pilot of the F-16 escapes safely.

By Vickie Chachere
Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. — An Air Force F-16 collided with a small plane Thursday and crashed in flames. One person aboard the small plane was killed, while the fighter pilot parachuted to safety and walked to a house to use the phone.

Pieces of the small plane, a Cessna, landed on a golf course. The wreckage of the fighter jet started a fire in the woods a few miles away.

No injuries were reported on the ground.

One person aboard the Cessna was killed, said Henry Sheffield, a district fire chief. The fighter pilot ejected and parachuted to safety on the golf course.

Gerald Rivera was working on a construction site nearby. "We asked the pilot if he was OK and he said, 'Yeah,'" Rivera told the Sarasota Herald Tribune.

The Air Force said the jet was from Moody Air Force Base in Valdosta, Ga., but was on a training mission that originated from Florida's MacDill Air Force Base, about 20 miles from the crash site.

Sheriff Charles Wells said two F-16s were on the training mission but only one was involved in the crash.

Don McIlwain, who lives nearby, said he saw the two military jets and then noticed a smaller plane that looked as if it would cross their path. McIlwain said he remembered thinking, "I hope it's high enough."

"Just as I said that, he went right through it," McIlwain told the Tribune. "The small plane just disintegrated."

Ped Mall rudeness irks merchants

One business owner suggests tearing up the Ped Mall if police presence doesn't increase.

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

Although Iowa City police have more patrols on the Pedestrian Mall than ever before, owners of two local businesses are still unhappy with the behavior of the Ped Mall's users.

John A. Gross, the president of Technographics Inc., Plaza Centre One, said that requests for more police presence and more signs to control unruly juvenile behavior have not been met. Downtown-business owners and the police met in mid-October, for the second time this year, to discuss the betterment of the downtown concourse. Now Gross will take his complaints to the City Council, he said.

Gross said he is tired of harping about the disruptive behavior of some juveniles on the Ped Mall, as he has done for the past 10 years. Offensive behavior, such as the use of foul language, skateboarding on furniture and leaving an excessive amount of trash, is continually causing a disturbance to his customers and in turn to his business, he said.

"They have a right to be there," he said. "But their behavior is out of line."

Gross said that if the problem can't be fixed and downtown Iowa City cannot be made a safe and desirable place to be, he believes it would be better to just add streets and parking lanes, although he added he hopes some changes can be made.

Gross said he believes that more police in the area would deter individuals from this sort of behavior.

"Just the presence of an officer keeps those kids on good behavior," he said.

Iowa City Police Chief R.J.

Winkelhake said there has been an increase in patrol downtown and said he was offended that Gross hadn't contacted the police again.

"We spend a significant amount of hours downtown," he said. "We have as much patrol time as we can with our manpower."

Willa Dickens, the owner of Herten & Stocker Jewelers, 101 S. Dubuque St., said that in the past four to six months, disruptive behavior has been less of a problem than before. Some people assembling on the Ped Mall used to make obscene comments to workers and customers entering and exiting the store, he said.

"They congregate on the sidewalk in front of the business," he said. "That bothers some of our customers, who are not used to walking through groups of people."

Although Dickens said he hasn't been bothered lately, he said he wouldn't have any objections to added police presence in the downtown area.

"I think it would add to the safety of the area," he said.

City Councilor Ross Wilburn said the council is always willing to look into law enforcement but has to consider the balance of patrol in the rest of the city.

"We're willing to look at coverage, but we can't have a cop on every corner," he said. "We need people to step forward and contact the police if there is a problem."

Gross said he also believes the signs regarding skateboarding and bicycling in the downtown area are inaccurate and don't accomplish their purpose. Because the signs have been stenciled on the pavement, others on poles have been taken down.

"Judges throw bicycle violations out of court because of inaccurate signs," said Gross. "And nothing has been done in a year."

Winkelhake said the city is working on the downtown signs.

Amtrak bullet train takes inaugural journey

■ Company officials hope the new service will compete with airline shuttles.

By Laurence Arnold
Associated Press

ABOARD THE ACELA EXPRESS — High-speed rail travel in the United States debuted Thursday with the maiden run of the sleek Acela Express, which hit an Amtrak-record 150 mph during the New York-to-Boston leg of a trip that began in Washington, D.C.

A full load of VIPs nibbled on salmon filet mignon, prosciutto and caviar hors d'oeuvres as they made history aboard the train that Amtrak and high-speed rail advocates hope represents the future of U.S. ground travel.

Today's inaugural run symbolizes the beginning of a new era of American transportation," Transportation Secretary Rodney Slater said at a kickoff ceremony in Washington.

Regular service on the train begins Dec. 11 in the Northeast. Rail enthusiasts hope favorable reviews will boost demand elsewhere in the country for high-speed trains.

Amtrak, which has received $23 billion in federal operating subsidies since its inception in 1971, is under orders from Congress to become financially self-sufficient by 2003. High-speed rail plays prominently in its survival plans.

Amtrak wants its bullet train to compete with airline shuttles popular with Northeast business travelers. Acela Express will cut about a half-hour off the current Metroliner train service between Washington and New York and about 45 minutes from the New York-to-Boston trip.

A one-way coach ticket between Washington and New York will be $143, compared with $122 for the Metroliner. Travel between New York and Boston will cost $120, compared with $57 on conventional Amtrak trains, which will continue to run in the Northeast.

For the 300 passengers invited for the inaugural run from Washington, the day began with breakfast inside a stately restaurant in Union Station that once served as a VIP suite for presidents and other dignitaries preparing to ride the great trains of America's past.

"We gather in the same place this morning to prepare to ride the great train of the future, Acela," said John Robert Smith, the mayor of Meridian, Miss., and member of Amtrak's governing board.

Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson, Amtrak's chairman, christened the train by shattering a bottle of California champagne on Acela's tapered nose.

Passengers remarked about the spacious rest rooms, overhead luggage bins, oversized windows and brightly colored blue-and-purple seats. The cafe car includes bar stools and serves beer on tap.

Bradley Grois/Associated Press

The Acela Express, Amtrak's new high-speed train, passes through Hamilton Station Thursday in Hamilton, N.J.

Washington just before 9 a.m. CST. It arrived at New York's Penn Station 2 hours and 26 minutes later — two minutes ahead of schedule. "We deliver!" Thompson said emphatically to the crowd gathered to welcome the train.

Civil-rights leader Williams dies

■ The 74-year-old was the chief organizer of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s marches and demonstrations.

By Kristen Wyatt
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Hosea Williams, the fiery lieutenant to Martin Luther King Jr. who was at the forefront of the civil-rights struggle for more than three decades, died of cancer Thursday. He was 74.

Williams died at Atlanta's Piedmont Hospital, where he was admitted for an infection Oct. 20. He had been diagnosed with prostate cancer and had a cancerous kidney removed last year.

"We were with him when he was absent with body and were present when the Lord took him," said Williams' daughter, Elisabeth Williams-Omilami. "He was selfless. What he did for this earth will now reveal itself because the fruit of the seeds he sowed will begin to emerge."

The chief organizer of King's marches and demonstrations, Williams helped lead the "Bloody Sunday" march in Selma, Ala., in 1965. He was also at the Memphis, Tenn., motel where King was shot in

He recalled his anger that day during a 1993 interview with the Associated Press: "I was wishing I could pull some molecules out of the air and make me a weapon and just wipe out every white person near because I thought they had shot Dr. King at that time."

He continued: "I said to myself, 'America, racists, economic exploiters, you sure have messed up now ... because there lies the only one among us, the main one, who has tried to keep us calm. Now you've killed him.'"

The shot, he said, ended King's dream because it fragmented his lieutenants.

Williams was born Jan. 5, 1926, in Attapulgus, Ga., the illegitimate son of a blind girl who fled a state training school when she discovered she was pregnant. He was raised by his grandfather, whom he described as a tough man who had killed at least three people, including one on church steps on a Sunday morning.

A drifter who held odd jobs across Florida, Williams wound up in the Army, was badly wounded in Europe and returned to Georgia, where he was beaten bloody while trying to use a whites-only drinking fountain at a bus station in Americus.

During the next five weeks in a military hospital, he recalled, he kept thinking "I'd fought on the wrong side."

Williams later finished high school and Morris Brown College, teaching agricultural chemistry before joining the civil-rights movement. He recalled his children crying in a Savannah drug store when he told them they could not join white children spinning on soda-counter stools because of segregation rules.

He became King's advance man throughout the South during the 1960s.

"I, as field director, would go ahead of the others and mobilize the street people in the black communities," he recalled. "Jesse Jackson would come in later and deal with the middle-class blacks, and Andy Young would negotiate with the white power structure."

Williams helped lead the 1965 march across the Edmund Pettus Bridge in Selma. All-white Alabama state troopers and sheriff's deputies used tear gas, nightsticks and whips to break up the march protesting the denial of voting rights to blacks.

High court blocks Texas execution

■ Several groups have protested the sentence for Johnny Paul Penry, who may be mentally retarded.

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — The U.S. Supreme Court blocked Thursday night's execution of a convicted killer said to be so mentally retarded he spends his days coloring with crayons and still believes in Santa Claus.

The court said it wanted more time to consider a late appeal from Johnny Paul Penry, 44, whose case drew protests from around the world. The court did not say how long the stay of execution would last.

Penry was to become the 38th Texas inmate executed this year — the highest number by any state since the U.S. Supreme Court allowed capital punishment to resume in 1976. It was the third execution scheduled in as many nights in Texas.

Penry was condemned for raping and fatally stabbing and beating 22-year-old East Texas housewife Pamela Moseley Carpenter in 1979. He was on parole at the time for a rape.

His lawyers described him as having an IQ of 50 to 60 and the reasoning capacity of a 7-year-old.

But prosecutors said Penry is ignorant, not retarded. Texas Attorney General John Cornyn said Penry is "a schemer, a planner and can be purposefully deceptive."

The European Union, anti-death-penalty groups and the American Bar Association, along with advocates for the mentally retarded, had lobbied Texas officials to halt the punishment.

The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles on Tuesday denied Penry's request for a 30-day reprieve and commutation to a lesser sentence.

Fourteen Texas state senators sent a letter to Gov. George W. Bush asking him to issue a reprieve. Bush has invoked his authority to temporarily halt an execution only once in his nearly six years in office.

"The governor obviously won't make any comment about any reprieve request until all remaining court appeals have been completed," Bush spokesman Mike Jones said.

Penry has had two competency trials and two murder trials. His second capital-murder trial came after the U.S. Supreme Court threw out his original death sentence in a landmark ruling. The court said it is not cruel and unusual punishment to execute the mentally retarded but that juries must consider retardation when considering the death penalty.

About two dozen states allow the execution of retarded killers, although some are considering laws prohibiting the practice.

Russia to destroy Mir in Feb.

Officials decide to end the space missions after a series of national "disasters."

By Jim Heintz
 Associated Press

MOSCOW — Russia's Cabinet decided Thursday that the space station Mir will end its 15 years of pioneering achievements and white-knuckle mishaps with a fiery plunge into the Pacific Ocean in February. Mir's successes and tribulations mirrored the epochal changes that shook Russia during its time aloft, and ditching it in a remote corner of the sea 900 to 1,200 miles off Australia will extinguish a potent symbol for many Russians. But Mir is deteriorating, foreign investors who bought the station an eleventh-hour reprieve this year haven't met their commitments, and Russia wants to concentrate its revenues on the 16-nation international space station, which received its first crew last month, Russian Space Agency chief Yuri Koptev said. Koptev said it would be unsafe to leave Mir aloft without new, expensive missions to refurbish it.

"This year has already been rich with disasters," he said. "We must not encourage new attacks and speculations aimed against our country." Russia's one-time image of technological prowess was severely tarnished this year by the sinking of the nuclear submarine Kursk and the fire that engulfed Moscow's TV tower, one of the world's tallest structures.

Russia also was embarrassed by the funding problems that caused it to fall years behind in launching a key module of the NASA-led international space station. But its launch this summer, followed by the station's first Russian-American crew arriving in a Russian space capsule, has restored some of Russia's pride.

Yuri Koptev
 Russian Space Agency chief

For years, NASA has been urging Russia to concentrate its funds on the international project. "Our concern has only been that the Russians have adequate resources to support their commitments to the international space station," NASA spokeswoman Debra Rahn said Thursday at the space agency's Washington headquarters.

take about six days, had been stalled on order of Secretary of State Katherine Harris, who was the co-chairwoman of Bush's campaign in Florida.

"Our opponents on the other side are trying to prolong this as much as possible," Bush running mate Dick Cheney told FOX.

The ruling did not say whether any votes found in the recounts can be added to Gore's totals — the heart of a legal clash that has thrust the presidential campaign into limbo. All but one of the seven justices are Democratic appointees; the seventh is a joint appointment of former Gov. Lawton Chiles, a Democrat, and current Gov. Jeb Bush, a brother of the Republican presidential candidate.

Within minutes, Palm Beach election officials decided to start recounting Thursday night. After two full days of counting in 86 of 609 precincts, Gore had gained 21 votes in Broward County on the state's southeast coast.

"The Florida Supreme Court has spoken: The counts can continue," said Gore Chairman William Daley.

Bush supports the secretary of State's weekend deadline and wants a declaration of a Florida winner after the last overseas absentee ballots are due today at midnight.

"Once these votes are counted, we will know the final result of Florida's election and the nation's election," Bush campaign Chairman Don Evans said. "Win or lose, this election will be over."

Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, who thus far has been unable to deliver the state for his brother, agreed: "Saturday morning we'll know who won the state," he said.

other students might have actually voted more than once.

Out of 1,000 students polled, 174 admitted to voting more than once in the election on Nov. 7, said Brian Sharkey, the assistant news editor of the Tribune.

Some students said they voted by absentee ballot in one state and then voted again on Election Day in Milwaukee, and others said they voted more than once in Milwaukee. Sharkey said the latter either voted at more than one of the six different precincts surrounding the Marquette campus or voted more than once at the same precinct. The survey did not require students to give their names, Sharkey said.

In response to the Marquette allegations and other Republican claims of voter fraud in Milwaukee, Wisconsin Attorney General James Doyle said he's seen no evidence to hint at anything other than isolated voting problems.

In Milwaukee, it was possible for students to vote more than once partly because of the chaos that was created when voters were allowed to register on Election Day and because of the large numbers of students who voted, Sharkey said.

"It was crazy," said Marquette sophomore Adam Krueger. "It was really unorganized."

Krueger, who registered to vote through MTV's "Choose or Lose," said that when he went to vote, he waited in one line before precinct officials told him to go to another line. He was then sent back to the original line. Krueger also said that he and a friend from Guam observed that anyone could have given false information and cast a ballot.

"We noticed that (my friend) could easily have voted if she wanted to," he said.

Marquette sophomore Jessica Gebler, who registered and voted on Election Day, said she also noticed how "dysfunctional" the day was. One of her main concerns was that she wasn't asked for her identification once during the process, she said.

"I'm sure it would have been real easy to take advantage of the system," she said. "The first thing I thought when I walked out was how easy it would have been to vote more than once."

Unlike Iowa, where voters must register 10 days before an election, Wisconsin voters can register on Election Day, said Nick Sitzman, an election technician at the Johnson County Auditor's Office.

Iowa can ensure that people aren't registered in more than one county or more than one state, Sitzman said.

Many times, the Auditor's Office finds that people are unintentionally registered in more than one county because they move and forget to cancel their registrations in their old counties. A computer at the auditor's office catches this, allowing Sitzman and his co-workers to figure out which county the person should be registered in, preventing double-voting, he said.

"It's worth it more to have to register in advance than to go through the allegation process afterwards," Sharkey said.

Under Wisconsin law, deliberately voting more than once is punishable by up to 4½ years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

With holiday traffic just around the corner ...

Driven to new options

As Thanksgiving draws near, thousands of students are eager pack up and head home for a vacation. Many will be forced to pile into old cars and drive long hours at 65 mph in dangerous weather conditions on our nation's highways. These highways are outdated, deadly and inefficient. We need a safe and economic alternative to driving for long-distance travel.

Amtrak/Associated Press
Amtrak's newly-debuted Acela — faster than a speeding bullet, and not a moment too soon for long-distance travelers.

America's methods of travel have remained virtually unchanged for decades. People either drive or fly to their destinations. For most Americans, routine air travel is completely out of the question. High ticket prices coupled with unpredictable delays and airport congestion make air travel expensive and unreliable. However, at least flying is fast, unlike driving. Although 65 mph is faster than walking, it is much slower than necessary to make long-distance travel enjoyable. Speed limits must exist, though, because as speeds increase, driver skill must also increase in order to avoid an accident. The sad truth is that most drivers are not skillful enough to handle an automobile traveling much faster than 65 mph. Many people who try never get a chance to learn from their mistakes.

More than 40,000 people die in highway accidents every year in the United States. Thousands more are seriously injured. Most people accept these statistics as a consequence of the modern age we live in, but they are avoidable.

To find a solution, one need only look across the Atlantic Ocean to France. For two decades, France has been running a type of train called the TGV. The TGV usually operates at 186 mph but can get up to almost 250 mph. These high-speed trains connect all major French cities and many other cities in Europe.

There are signs for domestic optimism, though. Thursday,

Amtrak debuted its own "bullet train," capable of traveling at speeds up to 150 mph. Unfortunately, the inaugural service will only connect Boston, New York and Washington — little consolation for Midwestern students left to trek hours and hours by car to make it home for the holidays.

The beginning of the 21st century is quickly approaching. We can cross the virtual world in an instant. Accessing a document 10,000 miles away can be done in a matter of milliseconds. However, physically traveling anywhere in the United States still takes hours, sometimes days. It is time to sell our cars to the junkyard and find a better way, such as a Midwestern bullet train. Do we really want to travel at 65 mph forever?

I know it's only rock & roll, but I like it

When it gets cold and wet here in Iowa, I am tempted to run off to Hollywood.

But unlike most film buffs, I have no desire to star in a movie, for Hollywood symbolizes something else to me. Hollywood is the birthplace of Guns N' Roses, a band that I venture to call a collection of the greatest musical geniuses of all time.

I know I have the potential to become the next Axl Rose. In fact, I like to think that Axl and I have a lot in common. As he spends his winter days wasting $75,000 on all-natural body wraps prescribed for him by a mystic who lives somewhere in Arizona, the door has been left open for another upstart kid from the Midwest. Axl was from Indiana. I could claim to be from Iowa. Axl enjoys wearing all sorts of clothing, including kilts, leather pants, bandannas and catcher's gear. I am known to wear everything from sweaters to shorts. And heck, if some mystic told me to waste a ton of money on a strange seaweed-type thing, I would do it in a heartbeat for the sake of my art.

Some cynics out there might be saying right now,

"You have no experience fronting a metal band," or, "You can't sing, let alone dance, and I really don't want to see you in a leather vest." But I would like to put your worries to rest right now by assuring you that I could be the best thing to happen to rock since Slash's Snake Pit (Slash was the lead guitarist for Guns N' Roses; the Snake Pit is his new band).

What evidence do I have for this claim? None. But that's not really important.

Local music critics will be quick to remind me that there is already a scene here in Iowa City for metal fans. With the success of local acts Scrid, Breakdance and Painal, one could suggest that I would be best served by starting my band right here and then moving to Hollywood. To them, I say, "You damn fools — this is a small town with an abundance of decent metal. By moving to Hollywood, I would simply help to flood an already flooded market with my no-talent, leather-wearing ass." I realize this is a dream. But once, in high school, my guidance counselor told me that if you shoot for the moon, sometimes you hit an eagle. I asked him what happened to the eagle then — was it hurt? — but he told me I missed the point. After watching Office Space a couple hundred times, I now understand the wisdom behind that statement. To me, the moon is this far-off rock that comes out at night. But the eagle in my life is the dream of being a hard-hitting, gut-wrenching, falsetto-singing frontman of a metal band. In other words, my guidance counselor was telling me to make a go at the music industry, and I mistook that for "Go to college." I guess everyone makes mistakes, but when my band makes it big, I will make sure to fire people for such discrepancies. As I walk around in the cold and muck, I think about my band. I know someday we'll be huge. We will go on tour. Make millions of dollars. Sell out to the man. And then retire into quiet oblivion, until VH1 comes knocking for the "Behind the Scenes" look at Stephen Balsley's music career. And all you girls who refused to talk to me in college, I'll make sure that VH1 knows the truth, so don't be planting any false rumors.

Good news ahead for the Fourth Estate

There's plenty of good news coming from the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication. Certainly, as any present or prospective member of the Fourth Estate knows, a good journalist shares both the good and not-so-good news for his/her audience to interpret for itself. Yet, in this instance and this forum, subjectivity wins over objectivity. The school's Professional Advisory Board has had two occasions in a similar number of recent weeks to learn about the progress that's being made toward a new home for the school, further expansion and refinement of its curriculum and a renewed appointment for its director, John Soloski.

John and his colleagues within the school appear consistently encouraged by liberal arts college Dean Linda Maxson and university President Mary Sue Coleman. Together, it's an investment of expertise and enthusiasm that's sure to produce a real success story.

Don't vote! Why would we want progress?

I'd like to say kudos to UI junior Joe Obyrick for his brilliant letter to the editor on voting ("Why you shouldn't vote," Nov. 6). What better way to make a difference than to just do nothing! That's how it happened with American slavery, didn't it? I mean, surely freedom was granted during this time in America's history because of the efforts of apathetics everywhere! And surely the fight against segregation was fought by people who threw their hands into the air, thinking nothing could be done. Then there's the distribution of wealth — in this country, it's so incredibly horrid that I propose we don't get involved in the political process because if we did that, something might actually happen! We'd better not voice our opinion concerning ATF agents in Texas because if we actually got up off the sofa, we may start to see change take place in the Justice Department. Our two-party system is a failure, and because of that, I'm not going to vote for third-party candidates. They might actually affect spending practices on Capitol Hill. And we'd better not vote for presidents who advocate freedom of expression, or they may just nominate Supreme Court justices who will ensure that I have the right to print this letter.

We can't have change. If that happened, there would be nothing to complain about. With nothing to complain about, I'd have nothing to write about. Apathy, what an ideal! These people who "do stuff" just waste our time believing in ideas, trying to make a difference, and getting all of our hopes up. If they'd simply stop trying, then we wouldn't all be so disappointed because, after all, that's what it's all about. So, in light of our new-found philosophy, let's sit back, complain, and watch nothing happen.

CITY & WORLD

UI delays driving-simulator opening

■ Officials say the project will be ready this spring, not December as projected.

By Greg Smith
Associated Press

IOWA CITY — It's been years in the making, but it will be several more months before the National Advanced Driving Simulator gets the green light.

The UI project, which was to have begun in December, should be ready in March or April, said Derek Willard, the associate vice president for research.

Iowa won the much-coveted research project over five other U.S. universities, including the University of Michigan — which is near the Detroit auto manufacturers.

That was in January 1992, when the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration announced it would develop the high-tech project at Iowa's Oakdale campus. At the time, officials said it would cost $32 million and be completed in 1996.

Federal budget battles, however, put the brakes on the project until February 1996, when Iowa and the NHTSA officially signed a $34 million contract.

The simulator was set to open in 1998, but technological glitches and increasing costs have pushed the project back several times.

In the spring of 1999, officials said the simulator would open in the summer of 2000.

That was changed to October, which was pushed back to December after about $750,000 worth of computers were added to help coordinate the simulator's 15 visual projectors.

That cost was paid by the federal government, whose share of the project is about $48 million while the university's contribution has been capped at $12 million.

The additional computer work, however, has now delayed the grand opening from December to the spring of 2001. "We know the mechanical system works fine," Willard said. "It appears to me that what they're working on now is software integration and the audiovisual system end of it."

The 3-ton simulator, housed in a four-story building, is being designed to re-create the look and feel of driving a car, whether it is on a smooth highway, a rough gravel road or even encountering potholes.

The goal is to study how motorists react in dangerous driving conditions and then find ways to improve driver safety.

Federal highway officials estimate 42,000 Americans die in crashes every year, most of them because of driver error.

Willard said it takes time to debug and check out the maze of computers that will process 200 million instructions per second to simulate the sensations of driving — sight, sound and feel.

It's got to be exactly in sync. It cannot be off by even a fraction of a second.

— Derek Willard, associate vice president for research

Clinton opens 'new chapter' with Vietnam

CLINTON

view with the Associated Press.

In a cautious rapprochement, Clinton lifted a trade embargo against Vietnam in 1994 and the next year restored diplomatic relations. He opened the U.S. Embassy in Hanoi in 1996 and in 1998 issued his first waiver of a law that bars trade relations with communist nations that deny citizens the right to emigrate. In July, the United States and Vietnam signed a sweeping trade agreement.

"I think it's a new chapter," Clinton said. "The thing that makes America work over time is our ability to visualize new futures and achieve them."

Even as Washington and Hanoi look to the future, the United States still searches for missing servicemen and pursues rumors of Americans left behind when the last known POWs went home. Clinton said that "so far all the rumors and all the leads have turned up dead ends."

The United States lists 1,992 Americans unaccounted for from the war. The Pentagon has stopped pursuing 646 of the cases, and the rest remain open.

Clinton on Saturday will go to a rice paddy outside Hanoi where experts are trying to recover remains at a site where it is believed Air Force Capt. Lawrence G. Evert, of Cody, Wyo., crashed in an F-105 jet on Nov. 8, 1967.

Clinton is the third U.S. president to visit Vietnam. Lyndon B. Johnson went to Vietnam twice as president and Richard M. Nixon once, in 1969.

Pete Peterson, the former pilot and POW Clinton met in Hanoi as the first postwar U.S.

ambassador in 1997, said Clinton would see a rapidly changing nation.

Peterson said Vietnam has made significant political and economic reforms even though it is one of the world's poorest nations, with a per capita annual income of $372. He said the Vietnamese are enjoying significantly greater individual freedom but human-rights problems persist.

Clinton will not meet with political dissidents during his visit, Peterson said. "Obviously, we want to have as constructive a visit as we possibly can."

"We don't need rose-colored glasses here," Clinton said in the Associated Press interview. "We still have differences with the Vietnamese about the form of government they have... but I think it's time to write a new chapter here."

Clinton was accompanied by his daughter, Chelsea, and mother-in-law, Dorothy Rodham. First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton arrived Thursday from Israel, where she delivered a eulogy at the funeral of Leah Rabin, the widow of former Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Clinton flew here from economic talks in Brunei with Pacific Rim leaders. He met separately with Japanese Prime Minister Yoshiro Mori and Chinese President Jiang Zemin.

Clinton and Jiang made progress toward curtailing Beijing's missile exports and decided tentatively to resume human-rights talks, a senior State Department official said.

tion, he said he would file notice of one or two more witnesses who would not testify about anything that had not previously been discussed but instead on the "substance" of the case, he said.

Memmer's attorneys, Dennis Cohen and Leff, asked the court to urge the state to provide them with any evidence that they had not already examined, including the names of the additional witnesses, so they could prepare for their depositions.

"The state is obliged to provide any evidence we're going to use," White said in recognition of the request, and he agreed to do so within the next 10 days, with the exception of any whose identities were still unknown to him at that time.

The deposition dates of the Memmer case, which are scheduled throughout the months of November and December, have led to more than just concerns about deadlines. They have also caused White, Cohen and Leff to have conflicts with their other cases, they said.

"It's important that this case be given priority," Remley said, but added that he would do his best to assist the three with their schedules in order to expedite the Memmer case.

The desire for as much

"courtroom space as possible for the February trial was also discussed at the conference. White requested that space in the courthouse be reserved for the attorneys and their client to consult with each other during the extensive trial.

"It is with this sort of case by length and nature where the court poses some difficulties," he said. "It's not too early for the court to assume this."

Remley assured the attorneys that an appropriate location would be reserved for Cohen, Leff and Memmer to consult but that it might not be determined until right before the trial, he said.

Going out with style

■ A win for the Hawks will put them at 4-4 in the Big Ten.

By Jeremy Schnitker
 The Daily Iowan

For a person outside the Iowa football team, this game probably doesn't look like it means a whole lot. With a victory, Iowa won't be going to a bowl game. A win Saturday won't bring the Hawkeyes a winning season.

But don't be fooled. The Hawkeyes have a lot to play for Saturday.

For one, revenge. The last time Iowa went up to Minneapolis to take on the Golden Gophers, they got pummeled, 49-7. That trip behind the woodshed ended up being legend Hayden Fry's last game. It was also the last time Iowa has had possession of Floyd of Rosedale.

The current Hawkeyes who were at that game remember it well.

"I remember two years ago when we played at Minnesota," Matt Stockdale said. "Those seniors went out in the worst possible way with coach Fry's last game. I remember sitting in the locker room feeling dejected. Hopefully, we can change the tables."

A win Saturday will mean that Iowa has finished the Big Ten at 4-4. Not too shabby for a team nobody thought would win a game after losing to Western Michigan back in September. Ending the season on a three-game winning streak would not only be big for team morale heading into the offseason, it would also be huge in luring potential recruits to Iowa City.

Coach Kirk Ferentz doesn't need to be reminded of that.

"I steer away from words like critical or must-win, but this game is important," Ferentz said. "Would it be significant to win four? Heck yeah, it would. It's another chance for us to show that we're moving in the right direction. How you finish is always important."

Minnesota coach Glen Mason says that a team is only as good as its last game. If you look at Iowa, the Hawks have been pretty good.

"You look at them against Northwestern, and they were real good," Mason said. "What they did against Northwestern is something no one, I mean no one, has been able to do."

While Iowa may not have a winning season and bowl berth on the line Saturday, Minnesota does. The Gophers are 5-5 and, with a win, will be bowl-eligible for the second year in a row.

Mason said even if his team didn't have anything riding on this game, it would still be big.

"This game is very important to us," Mason said. "One of the things that makes rivalries great, I've always thought, is when they're still great when there's nothing really in the balance."

"There are other things in the balance for us, but even if there weren't, like there isn't anything for Iowa this year, you still expect both teams to come out and play hard."

Bluder era gets under way tonight

■ Women's basketball faces Marquette and Utah this weekend with a new coach and new attitude.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's basketball team is ready to set the tone for the entire year in its season-opening weekend.

The Hawkeyes host Marquette Friday at approximately 8 p.m. and Utah on Nov. 19 at 1 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, starting off a five-game homestand to kick off the 2000-01 season — coach Lisa Bluder's first at Iowa.

"I can't wait. Sometimes when you first walk out of the tunnel, you can hardly believe it's really here and that you're in this position," Bluder said. "I feel like I'm one of the luckiest people alive to be able to coach at the University of Iowa. Once the game gets going, those thoughts leave your mind. As soon as you hit the floor, it's game time."

While Bluder said the Hawkeyes are all ready to put their game uniforms on, she, like most coaches in America, would love more time to continue implementing her zone defenses and motion offense.

Since defeating the Mexican National Team, 86-83, during the Nov. 8 exhibition, Bluder said she and her staff have been busy correcting mistakes from that contest while at the same time teaching new concepts.

"I think we've improved a lot, but I think we still have a ways to go," senior point guard Cara Consuegra said. "We've ironed out a lot of little things on defense and with our offense, so I think you'll see a better team out there."

Iowa is hoping the effects of its work will produce better results as well. Iowa opened up against the Marquette Golden Eagles in 1999 and lost, 69-64, but the defending Conference USA champion comes to Iowa City this year minus seniors Abbie Willenborg, Lisa Oldenburg and Kiesha Oliver. They tallied more than 1,000 career points each, and Willenborg is Marquette's all-time leading scorer and rebounder.

Alford to face familiar foe Nov. 19

■ The Hawkeyes' next opponent ruined Alford's perfect season at Manchester College.

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

After five years of waiting, Steve Alford will finally get his chance to extract his pound of flesh against longtime friendly foe Bo Ryan when Iowa hosts the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee at Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Nov. 19 at 7:05 p.m.

"I told him I've had a chip on my shoulder for over five years," Alford joked Thursday morning. Ryan handed Alford one of his biggest coaching losses during the 1995 Division III championship game when his UW-Platteville team defeated Alford's Manchester College squad. Alford said he has never forgotten the loss, which put an end to Manchester's perfect 31-0 season.

He admits the two coaches have changed styles since then. Ryan has re-tooled his style to fit the players he inherited and has built the program around them, while Alford continues to run a motion offense similar to his

Hawkeyes play host to Michigan teams

■ Hawkeye volleyball players hope for an NCAA bid as they head into two games this weekend.

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

Both the Michigan State and Michigan volleyball teams will be hoping for revenge during their trip to Iowa City this weekend. Their hosts are merely hoping to win.

The Hawkeyes (12-12, 8-8) will host Michigan State at Carver-Hawkeye Arena today at 6 p.m. and Michigan Saturday for a 7 p.m. tilt, both of which could very well decide Iowa's post-season fate.

After winning only four matches a year ago, the Hawkeyes are hoping for an NCAA bid, which would be a perfect ending for a season that saw the team make a drastic turnaround. However, to do that Iowa must win as many matches as possible during its final four

Zach Boyden-Holmes/The Daily Iowan
 Katie Panhorst, right, attempts a hit against Evansville on Sept. 8 contests, something the players are well aware of.

"They realize it's very important if they win," said coach Rita Buck-Crockett. "The last four matches are not going to be easy."

Beginning tonight with the Spartans, Iowa will look for season sweeps of both teams; the Hawks defeated them in five-game thrillers on the road in October.

Michigan State enters tonight's match tied with the Hawkeyes for fifth place in the conference at 8-8, with an overall record of 15-10. The Spartans rank second in the conference in hitting percentage, largely because of big hitters Sarah Gustin and Maren Witzel. Gustin has been averaging 4.24 kills per game, while Witzel ranks second in the Big Ten with a .360 hitting percentage.

Kasper and Betts could get 1,000 yard seasons Saturday

Two individuals on Iowa's team will be playing for more than the team's sake. Running back Ladell Betts and receiver Kevin Kasper are nearing the 1,000-yard mark for their respective positions. With 936 yards rushing, Betts needs only 64 yards to break the 1,000-yard mark for the first time in his career. Kasper needs only 37 yards receiving to go over the 1,000-yard hump. Never before in Iowa football history have two individuals had 1,000 yards rushing and receiving in a season. Only two receivers in Iowa history have had 1,000 yards receiving, and only 10 running backs have gone for that many yards.

"It would be a great accomplishment," Kasper said. "The way our offensive line has been playing, I wouldn't be surprised if Ladell gets the 1,000 yards in the first half."

After predicting Iowa to win over Northwestern last weekend, Kasper refrained from making any bold predictions on the outcome of Saturday's game.

"I'm not gonna do that," Kasper said laughing. "I'm only going to predict that we go out there and play with the best of our ability and, hopefully, win the game."

Hawkeyes are pumped for opener

BLUDER

"This is a setting that if we go in and play well, we are going to win this basketball game," Bluder said. "I want the players coming in with that type of attitude. We have to establish a presence and confidence on the floor that other teams can really sense and feel out there."

One problem Bluder has with Friday night's schedule is that she's not exactly certain when her team will see the floor, she said. The basketball game is slated to begin at 8 p.m., following the Iowa-Michigan State volleyball game, but there is no exact time.

"I like the idea that we may get some volleyball fans that haven't seen women's basketball," Bluder said. "I'm excited that we might bring some people to the volleyball game. I like the concept. I don't like how tight the times are together."

Regardless of the tip-off time, the Hawkeyes are hoping to play well, get a win, and carry that momentum into Nov. 19's game against Utah — also a team that narrowly defeated Iowa last season, 77-73, in Salt Lake City.

The Utes return four starters and 11 letterwinners from last year's team that was 23-8 and went to its ninth-straight NCAA Tournament. Utah is led by senior Amy Ewert, junior Lauren Beckman and coach Elaine Elliot — the school's all-time winningest coach.

Bluder said the Utes are traditionally a strong defensive team with great outside shooting.

Consuegra will embark on her final season with her parents in the crowd for the first time since her sophomore season. She is drawing closer to Iowa's all-time assist record held by Michelle Edwards. The native of Mount Airy, Md., needs 46 assists to overtake Edwards but needs only three this weekend to take sole possession of second place all-time.

"We're pumped. We can't wait to get started," Consuegra said. "We need to start with a win definitely. I think that will set the tone for the season and give us confidence from the beginning."

Fisher embraces challenge at SDSU

■ Steve Fisher didn't win a conference game last in his first year at the school.

By Bernie Wilson
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Steve Fisher didn't need the sunshine and palm trees to remind him that he'd landed at basketball backwater San Diego State.

No, the reality check came in a winless conference record and a 17-game losing streak that ended Fisher's first season as Aztecs coach.

San Diego State was winless on the road and averaged fewer than 3,000 fans in its sparkling 12,414-seat campus arena, which will play host to an NCAA West subregional in March.

That kind of ugliness was foreign to Fisher, who won an NCAA championship at Michigan and, with the "Fab Five" on board, reached two more title games.

So after the Aztecs crashed to their 0-14 Mountain West Conference finish and a 5-23 overall record, Fisher ripped apart the roster and brought in a recruiting class that raised eyebrows.

Among the many new Aztecs is Bill Walton's youngest son, Chris, who spurned his father's alma mater, UCLA, for the hometown Aztecs. That alone said something about Fisher's influence.

Also signing, but not eligible until next season under NCAA transfer rules, were swingman Tony Bland, who started all 32 games at Syracuse last year, and forward Brandon Smith, who spent three seasons at Michigan.

"We are going to have a team that will be competitive," Fisher said, hoping to wipe away memories of nine losses by more than 20 points. "All you have to do is watch us practice one time or watch us in one game to know we've got better talent."

Fisher inherited a 4-22 team and improved it by just one win. The Aztecs are expected to be much better in Fisher's second year, and opponents probably shouldn't circle them on the schedule as an automatic win.

Their schedule includes several beatable teams, starting with Division II UC-San Diego in the opener Saturday night.

Fisher doesn't fault the effort by last year's team. He remembers the Aztecs almost winning the season finale at UNLV, which went on to win the Mountain West tournament. But he didn't come here for moral victories.

"We weren't good enough to compete successfully at the level we were asked to play at," he said.

Fisher likened going winless in league play to what Lou Holtz probably went through when his South Carolina football team went 0-11 last year. Holtz had won a national championship with Notre Dame in 1988.

"You get used to winning, and if you're not careful you can get used to losing, and we don't want to allow that to happen," Fisher said.

That's been the Aztecs' fate for a decade and a half. Their last NCAA tournament appearance was in 1985, and they've had just one winning season since.

Fisher, by comparison, made nine straight postseason appearances at Michigan, starting when he replaced Bill Frieder on the eve of the 1989 tournament and led the Wolverines to the title.

Only a handful of players remain from last year's disaster, including starters Marcelo Correa at center and Myron Epps at forward. Everyone else is off to a fresh start.

"The attitude around here is no one's really trying to think about last year or talk about last year," Walton said. "That was in the past. It doesn't really concern us."

Iowa's key: Stop penetration

MEN'S HOOPS

days at Manchester.

The Panthers feature a "dribble and drive" offense not unlike that of the touring Hungarian team that Iowa defeated, 85-69, Tuesday night. Alford said he hopes Iowa learned from its mistakes against the Hungarians and can use the game as a learning experience for when wins and losses begin to count on Nov. 19.

Highlighting the Panthers' offense will be senior center Chad Angeli. The 6-foot-9, 240-pounder averaged 16.7 points per game during his junior campaign and pulled down a team-high 152 rebounds. Joining Angeli as a scoring threat is sophomore forward Clay Tucker, who averaged 13.6 points last season. The key to an Iowa win will be shutting them down as well as stopping penetration inside, Alford said.

The Hawkeyes must walk a fine line when keying on Angeli as he is "a very crafty kid," Alford said. Angeli shot 78 percent from the free-throw line last season after attempting 265 foul shots.

From his team's standpoint, Alford said Iowa's biggest worry is its lack of preparation. The Hawkeyes have not had the luxury of watching video of UWM, while the Panthers have seen tapes of both Iowa exhibitions. After not viewing video of the Hungarians, the Hawkeyes were slow to adjust to what they were seeing, Alford said.

"They didn't handle it very well," he said of Tuesday night's game. "We have to come with our A-game mentality."

Fans should notice a marked difference between this season's Hawkeyes and last year's squad that finished 14-16. Only Jacob Jaacks played center last year, but Alford said he feels he has three players able to play the post this season. Freshmen Jared Reiner and Sean Sonderleiter as well as junior-college transfer Reggie Evans should bolster Iowa.

The back court is also much stronger, with Dean Oliver guiding the way and Luke Recker returning to Division I ball. Recker is ready to put the hype about his moving from Indiana to Arizona to Iowa behind him and get the season under way. Oliver is adjusting to his new role and new teammates, the coach said.

Oliver, who struggled during both exhibition games, has been given more open looks at the basket because of Recker's presence on the court, a luxury his coach says may be at the root of Oliver's problems thus far.

"I think he's surprised he's getting easier looks," Alford said. "Sometimes those easier looks aren't that easy."

Beyond concerns with his team's performance on the court, Alford also commented on empty seats in Carver during both exhibitions. While both games were announced as sell-outs, several hundred seats were left vacant.

"If we have 15,500 seats, that's how many bodies I want to see there," Alford said, noting the importance of getting his new players adjusted to a big-time atmosphere.

The game on Nov. 19, as with the rest of Iowa's home contests, is sold out, but the possibility of standing-room-only tickets has been raised. No decision has been made as to whether any will be made available.

Hingis moves into Chase semifinals

■ The No. 1 seed beat Nathalie Tauziat.

By Bob Greene
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Surviving a mid-match lapse, top-seeded Martina Hingis moved easily into the semifinals of the Chase Championships on Thursday night with a 6-1, 6-7 (2), 6-2 victory over Nathalie Tauziat.

Ranked No. 1 in the world, Hingis is seeking her first major title since the 1999 Australian Open and her first victory here since winning this season-ending tournament in 1998.

On Saturday, Hingis will face the winner of Thursday night's second match between fourth-seeded Conchita Martinez and Hingis' doubles partner, No. 7 Anna Kournikova.

The second semifinal pairing will be determined Friday night when No. 3 Monica Seles plays Amanda Coetzer, followed by surprising Elena Dementieva against Kim Clijsters.

Dementieva upset defending champion Lindsay Davenport in a first-round match Wednesday night.

Hingis, 20, zipped through the opening set before the 33-year-old Tauziat, one of the oldest players on the WTA Tour, picked up her game and took a 5-3 lead in the second set. Hingis fought back to knot the score and send it to a tiebreak, where Tauziat quickly won the first five points.

After the French player won the tiebreaker to level the match at a set apiece, Hingis rolled out to a 5-0 advantage in the decisive third set.

"She just picked up her game and started reading my game better. She served very well," Hingis said in explaining the second set. "I started pushing the ball instead of taking my chances."

Nef wins World Cup giant slalom

PARK CITY, Utah (AP) — Sonja Nef of Switzerland was nearly flawless, winning the women's World Cup giant slalom Thursday when first-run leader Brigitte Obermoser slowed.

The race was skied on the course where the 2002 Winter Olympics' GS will be held.

Nef had a two-run time of 2 minutes, 40.17 seconds, taking advantage of a wider, faster course on the second run to sweep past Obermoser, the Austrian who held a 1.29-second lead after the first run.

"I really like to race here. It's a very nice place. It's flat and steep," said Nef, who placed 15th at last month's World Cup opener in Soelden, Austria.

Obermoser finished second in 2:40.49, while Anja Paerson of Sweden was third in 2:40.68.

Kristina Koznick of Burnsville, Minn., was the top American, placing 18th in 2:42.65.

Nef was in fourth place after the first run, 1.4 seconds behind Obermoser. But with the gates placed wider to make the course faster and bumpier, Nef blazed to a top second-run time of 1:16.23.

Saints face test without Williams

■ The surprising Saints take on the Raiders without their injured star running back.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Everything was working this season for the New Orleans Saints until Ricky Williams hit the 1,000-yard mark.

So the Saints face the Oakland Raiders Nov. 19 without Williams, who broke his ankle on the play against Carolina on which he reached that milestone. It's also why the Raiders are favored by two points.

Williams' replacement will be rookie Chad Morton, a sixth-round draft choice whose only NFL carries came after Williams was hurt last week. He gained 33 yards on 12 carries, a figure he'll have to top if New Orleans is to win.

The Raiders have the hated long trip off a short week after losing in Denver on Monday night — the Broncos are the only team to have beaten them.

They have their rushing problems, too. Without Tyrone Wheatley, they ran for just 38 yards against the Broncos, the same defense that allowed Corey Dillon a record-breaking 278. Wheatley has (in football parlance) "an ankle," which can be iffy.

So this is likely to be a defensive struggle, even with Oakland ranking 27th in the NFL in yards allowed. The Saints are fourth in the league.

One thing is certain: One of the teams in black will win. SAINTS, 20-19

Kent edges Bonds for NL MVP

■ San Francisco becomes the first team in 10 years to have the top two vote-getters.

By Josh Dubow
Associated Press

NEW YORK — San Francisco's Jeff Kent beat out teammate Barry Bonds to win the National League Most Valuable Player award Thursday, becoming the first second baseman to win the award in 16 years.

Kent received 22 first-place votes, five seconds, four thirds and one fourth for 392 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Bonds, a three-time MVP winner, got six first-place votes and 279 points to give the NL West-champion Giants the first 1-2 finish for a team in the NL MVP since Bonds and Bobby Bonilla did it for Pittsburgh in 1990.

Mets catcher Mike Piazza was the only other player named on all 32 ballots, finishing with three first-place votes and 271 points.

"I'm floored that people across the country recognized the Giants and more specifically recognized me," Kent said. "I was going against tremendous, quality talent in Barry Bonds, Todd Helton, Jim Edmonds and Mike Piazza. I'm losing my breath mentioning guys like that. To win the award by that margin ..."

Kent hit .334 with 33 homers and 125 RBIs this season, solidifying himself as one of the best offensive second basemen in baseball. His 475 RBIs the last four seasons broke Roger Hornsby's 75-year-old record for most at the position over such a span.

Chiefly because of the second baseman's RBI total and knack for clutch hits, manager Dusty Baker said Kent would have gotten his MVP vote, not Bonds, perhaps swaying voters. Bonds also had praise for his teammate.

"He's been doing this ever since he got here," Bonds said in September. "The numbers he puts up for a second baseman are amazing. They're great for any player, but to do it at second base is really something."

Ryne Sandberg of the Cubs in 1984 was the last second baseman to win the MVP in either league. The only other MVP second basemen are Joe Morgan of Cincinnati (1975-76), Nellie Fox of the White Sox (1959), Jackie Robinson of the Dodgers (1949), Joe Gordon of the Yankees (1942), Charlie Gehringer of Detroit (1937) and Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals (1931).

"This puts me more in a category along side of guys like that," Kent said. "It is truly an honor to be mentioned in the same breath as those guys. I never try to compare myself with anybody."

Bonds hit .306 with 49 homers and 106 RBIs. Bonds also scored 129 runs.

OFFENSE

Iowa's offense is coming on, as the Hawkeyes out-gained Northwestern last week, but Minnesota has had two weeks to prepare.

INTANGIBLES

Iowa is the hot team, riding a wave of momentum after winning two in a row. Minnesota is playing for a lot more than a bronze pig though, it is playing for a bowl game, at home.

Who has the edge?

By Mike Kelly

COACHES

Glen Mason rebuilt his program, and Kirk Ferentz is trying to do the same with his. Time will tell on this one, but for now I'll call it a draw.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Minnesota leads the Big Ten in punt returns, Iowa leads the Big Ten in kickoff returns. The difference is Minnesota's veteran kicker Dan Nystrom.

DEFENSE

If Iowa puts together a game plan against Minnesota that comes anywhere close to the one it had against Northwestern, it will do fine, but I'll go with the stats.

The Hawkeyes got on a winning streak, beating Northwestern, 27-17, in the home finale. Norm Parker's defense stifled the powerful Northwestern passing attack, holding the 'Cats to 248 yards.

Women's swimming

This week: The Iowa women's swimming and diving team travels up to Gopher territory to compete in the three-day Minnesota Invitational. The massive co-ed meet will include 13 women's teams and will run today through Nov. 19.

Last week: The Hawkeyes split a double-dual meet on Nov. 11, when they hosted their first home meet of the season. Iowa picked up its first season win over Ohio State, 165-132, but fell behind Purdue, 155-142. Junior Allison Lyle led the way for the Hawkeyes, winning both breaststroke events.

Freshmen debut: In the first home meet of the season, freshman Christie Hooper turned in great performances. Hooper won the 500 freestyle (5:04.75) and was runner-up in the 200 free (1:53.40).

Junior class: After Lyle's double win in the breaststroke events, last year's Big Ten Champion Melissa Loehndorf won the 1,000 free in 10:15.11.

Coach's comment: "We are really looking forward to our first three-day event because it should be a rehearsal for Big Tens," said head coach Garland O'Keefe. "The schedule and format is exactly the same. It should also test our endurance, but based on last weekend, we should see some good times."

Next meet: On Dec. 2, the Hawkeyes will travel to Kansas to compete.

Men's swimming

This week: The Iowa men's swimming and diving team will travel to Minneapolis to compete in the Minnesota Invitational. The 10-team meet will take place today through Nov. 19 and include co-ed competition. The Iowa's women's team will join the men's team in the three-day competition.

Last week: The Hawkeyes hosted their final home meet of the season, losing to Purdue, 171-111. Senior Ales Abersek led the Hawks, winning both the 100- and 200-meter butterfly events. Abersek recorded season-best times: 49.88 seconds in the 100 and 1:49.25 in the 200. Senior Jay Glenn captured a third win this season in the 200-meter freestyle (1:39.84). Both the 1- and 3-meter diving events were won by Iowa sophomore Roberto Gutierrez, who scored season bests in both events.

Coach's comment: "This week will be a big meet for us because it's like a dress rehearsal for the Big Ten Championships," said head coach John Davey. "I think that we are comparable with the other teams competing. I hope that we can go up to Minneapolis and have a good showing as a team. I think we will."

Next meet: In two weeks, the Hawkeyes will travel to Auburn, Ala., for the three-day U.S. Open meet, Nov. 30-Dec. 2.

Rivalry weekend puts fun into football

■ The final weekend of the season can save some coaches' jobs if they manage to beat a rival.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

In the days before the annual Duke-North Carolina game, Tar Heels coach Carl Torbush makes sure an ungainly 200-pound brass bell, complete with a hand crank to ensure it is heard, gets hauled from the locker room to the practice field.

"I hammer that Victory Bell every day," Torbush said, referring to the coveted prize that goes to the winning team. "I want my players to hear what that thing sounds like because unless we're ringing it, it's not going to sound very good."

Torbush may be on the coaching hotseat these days, but he knows what kind of impact a little ol' win over your biggest rival can have. Torbush was on the verge of being fired in 1999, but a season-ending 38-0 win over Duke — the Tar Heels' 10th in a row over the Blue Devils — helped him keep his job.

On Saturday, North Carolina (5-5) plays Duke (0-10) for the 86th time in one of many classic rivalries on the final big weekend of the season. Carolina needs a victory not only to keep the coveted Victory Bell in Chapel Hill, but also to become bowl-eligible.

Bowl bids, conference crowns and national championships are usually secondary, though, when such rivalries as The Game (Yale at Harvard), the Big Game (Stanford at Cal) and the Civil War (Oregon at Oregon State) are contested. Also at stake is the Iron Bowl (Auburn at Alabama), the Old Oaken Bucket (Indiana at Purdue), the Apple Cup (Washington at Washington State) and yet another Victory Bell, which goes to the USC-UCLA winner.

Let us not forget Michigan at Ohio State, which may produce the most pomp and pageantry of any rivalry, or the 136th renewal of Lehigh-Lafayette, also known as the Most Played Rivalry.

Some games, such as No. 4 Florida at No. 3 Florida State, will have a direct bearing on the national title, but first there are braggin' rights on the line. With rivalry games, ranking and records mean nothing, passion and pride everything.

Consider Auburn-Alabama, being played in Tuscaloosa for the first time since 1901. The Tigers are 8-2 and in the thick of the SEC West race; the Crimson Tide are 3-7 and play their final game under coach Mike DuBose against their bitter rival. The way some Auburn players see it, a defeat means a lost season.

"It's the difference between a winning season and a losing season," Auburn linebacker Alex Lincoln said. "I don't think anybody in this building will consider this a successful season if we lose to Alabama."

If No. 5 Oregon (9-1) beats No. 8 Oregon State (9-1), the Ducks win the Pac-10 and will play in the Rose Bowl.

"To lose this game would be heartbreaking," Oregon State linebacker Richard Seigler said. "They'll be able to celebrate the Rose Bowl on our field. We can't let that happen. That would be too much to take."

Such impassioned feelings can lead to equally dramatic — or hilarious — results, both on and off the field. Consider:

• Florida-Florida State, 1996: A No. 2 Florida State beats a No. 1 Florida, 24-21, a game in which Gators quarterback Danny Wuerffel takes a pounding. Florida wins the national title in a Sugar Bowl rematch, beating the Seminoles 52-20.

Pirates reach terms with Jason Kendall

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates will sign three-time All-Star catcher Jason Kendall today to a multiyear contract expected to be worth about $60 million, the Associated Press has learned. Kendall and his brother, Mike, a Pirates scout, booked flights from their Los Angeles home to Pittsburgh on Thursday afternoon. The Pirates will hold a 1 p.m. news conference today at Three Rivers Stadium.

A Pirates club official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Kendall had agreed to terms and would be at the news conference.

The two sides worked into early Thursday morning to iron out the final details of what is expected to be a six-year contract.

horoscopes

Friday, November 17, 2000 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Travel and social activity will be your best bets. Disruptions in your home are likely if you sit around the house doing nothing. Your partner may suggest that you're being lazy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take care of the needs of older family members. You may find it difficult to handle all your responsibilities. Try to convince your mate or close relatives to help smooth out the difficulties.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be a little shy today. Accomplishments will be yours if you are willing to say what you really think. Be careful while in transit. A friend may cause you to worry.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Small-business ventures can be lucrative. Believe in yourself, and stay away from people who don't want to work as hard as you do. Domestic services will make you extra cash.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are a bit down lately. Consider making some changes that will lift your spirits and enhance your appearance, such as a new hairstyle.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone who may be holding a grudge is just waiting to make you look bad. Be careful not to get involved in gossip or leave yourself open to ridicule. Keep your dealings totally above-board.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Involvement in groups will lead to romantic interludes. Be careful that you find out enough information about the individual before revealing your own personal secrets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't say you love someone if you're not sure you do. One-sided relationships are apparent and will result in upset if you aren't completely honest from day one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can put everything you've got into the project you are working on; however, be sure to arrange for time off when you're done. Your dedication will enhance your reputation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You'll experience losses if you aren't cautious when dealing with finances. Someone you care about may be a burden. Help if you can, but not at the risk of getting run-down or sick.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There appear to be limitations on your relationship. You must be extremely honest in dealing with your mate. The way you handle an existing situation now will lead to success later.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Small details will make a big difference when it comes to your work. Praise will be yours. Don't let friends lead you in the wrong direction. Follow your instincts.

The Ledge

By Jesse Ammerman

Valid ways to excuse yourself from work

- Explain that the United Nations is sending you on a humanitarian mission to Jamaica.
- Say that you'll be taking the day off to celebrate Canadian Thanksgiving.
- Call in sounding frantic, and explain that you won't be in unless your boss can pay the ransom to your kidnappers.
- Tell your boss that you're feeling "kinda disgruntled" today.
- Say that your "other" personality, Henry, is calling the shots today.
- Get your roommate to play some drums while you call in. Announce that you're currently "on tour."
- Tell your boss that your gonorrhea is acting up.
- When you arrive at the office, do your best impression of a ringtailed lemur. You will most likely get the rest of the day off!
- Explain that your religion strictly forbids you from working on Friday (as well as Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday).
- Inform your boss that you "just ain't feelin' the groove."
