The Origin of the Clubman Handlebar

After World War II motorcycle racing in England resumed. The economy was in ruins and money was naturally tight. Many would be racers joined a motorcycle racing club and used their daily means of transport to race. As always some were better off financially and could spend more money to enhance performance. "Clip-on" handlebars were fitted to the fork tubes to enable a crouching position to obtain less wind resistance. This was an extra expense many could not afford. Some clubs then brought in a rule that only the original handlebar clamp mounts could be used. It didn't take long for someone to figure out making a handlebar that fitted the original mounts that "dropped" them to allow a crouching position. They were also known as "drop bars". Thus the term "clubman" handlebar.
