Re: Complaint HW Trading B.V. / Microsoft
Our ref: 55100843/3190564.1

Dear Sir, Madam,

The Dutch private company with limited liability HW TRADING B.V. (hereinafter referred to as "HW"), having its registered seat at the Nieuwe Vaart 38 I in Bussum, has asked me to represent its interests.

1. Introduction

- 1.1. According to Article 7 (2) of Regulation (EC) 1/2003 natural and legal persons who can show a legitimate interest, are entitled to lodge a complaint by which they request the Commission to find that there is an infringement of the Articles 81 and / or 82 EC and to require the undertakings and associations of undertakings concerned to bring such infringement to an end in conformity with Article 7 sub 1 of Regulation (EC) 1/2003.
- 1.2. HW is of the opinion that Microsoft Corporation and its subsidiary Microsoft B.V. (jointly referred to as "Microsoft") commit infringements of the Articles 81 and 82 EC. More specifically:
 - a. Microsoft charges excessive prices in the EU Member States, which is contrary to Article 82 EC;
 - b. Microsoft is able to maintain its excessive prices by aggressively enforcing its intellectual property rights and relying on the rule of exhaustion. In the given circumstances, this also constitutes an infringement of Article 82 EC;
 - c. Microsoft prohibits its recognised distributors to supply certain Microsoft products separately from other Microsoft products, which is contrary to Article 81 and Article 82 EC (see Annex A for a further explanation of that anti-competitive tying strategy).

- 1.3. After a short introduction about the concerned parties and an explanation on the legitimate interest of HW (§ 2), Microsoft's abuse(s) of dominance will be discussed (§ 3).¹ HW will also pay attention to the Community interest of this matter (§ 4).

2. Concerned parties and legitimate interest

- 2.1. HW trades in hard- and software, inter alia in the software of Microsoft, such as Microsoft Office XP.

See Annex 1: extract of the Chamber of Commerce

- 2.2. Microsoft Corporation is an American producer of computer software, having its seat in Redmond (Washington). The company – that is not unknown by the Commission² – is primarily known for its operating systems MS-DOS, Windows and business software such as Microsoft Office (also see www.microsoft.com).
- 2.3. HW has a legitimate interest to complain, since HW is active on the same market for the supply of software and because the abusive behaviour of Microsoft (can) damage(s) its interests directly.

3. Infringement of Article 82 EC

- 3.1. Relevant market(s) and dominant position
 - 3.1.1. Microsoft undoubtedly has a dominant position on the relevant market for productivity software, which market might have to be divided in the submarkets of text processing (Microsoft Word), spreadsheets (Microsoft Excel), operating systems (Windows XP) and presentation programmes (Microsoft Power Point). This market position is characterised by extremely high market shares.
 - 3.1.2. Recent research of the ICT consultant International Data Corp shows that the dominant position of Microsoft on the market for productivity software (Microsoft Word, PowerPoint and Excel) remains very strong with a market share of 95%. That percentage is based on turnover; linked to the number of sold products, that percentage is probably even higher. Especially in a business environment, almost everyone with a computer uses the Office software of Microsoft.³

Also see the article 'Rivals Set Their Sights on Microsoft Office: Can They Topple the Giant?' of 22 August 2007 in Knowledge@Wharton (published on <http://knowledge.wharton.upenn.edu>):

² See the cases COMP/37.792, COMP/37.924, COMP/37.925, COMP/39.530 and COMP/39.294.

³ Also see inter alia www.techweb.com: "Microsoft Office is the leading application suite on the market."

"All of these rivals emerge at a time when Microsoft's dominance in productivity software -- Microsoft Word, PowerPoint and Excel -- remains strong, with market share based on revenue of at least 95%, according to research firm International Data Corp. For the fiscal year ending June 30, Microsoft reported net income of $14 billion on revenues of $51.1 billion. Microsoft's business division, which includes Office, reported annual revenues of $16.4 billion. Meanwhile, Microsoft is benefiting from a new product cycle as customers upgrade to Office 2007.

"Office, even more than Windows, is Microsoft's cash cow," says Wharton legal studies and business ethics professor Kevin Werbach. "With the rate of new Windows editions slowing, Office upgrades are likely to be an even more significant revenue generator for Microsoft in the years ahead. Office is the platform that truly injects Microsoft into almost all computer users' lives. Have you ever tried to show up at a conference with a non-PowerPoint presentation, or send a document to colleagues in a format other than Word?" (underling added)

- 3.1.3. Microsoft's very strong position enables it to behave independently from its competitors and its distributors, and also from the customers that buy its products. That is partly thanks to its strong portfolio of intellectual property rights, which it repeatedly and rigorously invokes as a justification for its abusive behaviour (see § 3.3 and the Annexes 3, 5, 6 and 7). Besides, it is very difficult for potential competitors to access the market, because many consumers, who have already got used to Microsoft Office, will be very reluctant to switch to other software. Also see the Article 'Rivals Set Their Sights on Microsoft Office: Can They Topple the Giant?' of 22 August 2007 in Knowledge@Wharton:

"According to Hrebiniak, Microsoft's biggest asset in the productivity software war is inertia. "Why wouldn't you stick with Microsoft in light of its new products?" he asks. "Customers would rather stick to what is known even if alternatives are simple to use. It's a habit." It would take vastly improved software from a rival to encourage customers to switch. "You won't see Microsoft rolling over any time soon."

- 3.1.4. Moreover, the structure of the Microsoft concern, that is characterised by strong vertical integration, and its price setting strategy (see § 3.2 and § 3.3) point to a dominant position (ECJ 14 February 1978, case 27/76, United Brands / Commission, ECR 1978, p. 207).
- 3.1.5. Having regard to these factors, it can be concluded that Microsoft is in a position that enables it to prevent effective competition on the relevant software market(s) affording it the power to behave to an appreciable extent independently of its competitors, customers and ultimately of its consumers.

3.2. Excessive prices and unjustified price discrimination

3.2.1. Article 82 EC mentions as an abuse "a. directly or indirectly imposing unfair purchase or selling prices or other unfair trading conditions". In EU Member States, Microsoft charges prices that are sometimes almost five times as high as the prices it charges in third countries for exactly the same products.

a. Price differences between the EU and the Middle East

3.2.2. The most extreme price differences can be seen in countries, such as Egypt. Every Egyptian with a telephone connection can purchase Microsoft Office XP for approximately $ 25,- (see the invoice that has been attached as Annex 9). Within the European Union, exactly the same product costs circa $ 125,- (+ € 15,- for the distributor) excl. VAT.

See the invoice of the recognised Dutch distributor Bell Micro (Annex 10).

3.2.3. That the products Microsoft sells in Egypt are referred to as "Student Media Software", does not mean that the products concern special software. The products are identical: the new Office 2007 software is called "Office Home and Student 2007", which shows that the "student edition" of Office is not a different edition than the normal edition.

3.2.4. Besides, Microsoft states that it wants to help students to obtain cheaper software, but it does not only sell its cheap software to students. Every Egyptian who has a land line can buy "Student Media Software" (Annex 13). Microsoft sets no further requirements. It therefore has to be concluded that the price Microsoft charges in Egypt for exactly the same product is approximately five times (!) as low as in the Netherlands and in other European countries. That substantial price difference cannot be ascribed to different transportation or production costs. On the contrary, the products that are brought on the market in Egypt usually come from Europe (Ireland, see Annex 14), which means one would rather expect higher than lower prices due to transportation costs.

b. Price differences between the EU and the United States

3.2.5. The price differences between the European Union and the United States are very substantial as well. HW has made a very clear and accurate comparison between the prices of all kinds of different Microsoft products (Annex 11), which shows that the differences on average range between 30% and 50%.

3.2.6. HW also refers to the attached 2004 price lists of the recognised Dutch distributor Bell Micro in the Netherlands on the one hand (Annex 11a) and the US company Worldwide Trading on the other hand (Annex 11b). The batch numbers on the lists match, which makes it easy to compare the prices with each other. The price lists show that inter alia:

- a. the standard edition of Office 2003 costs € 377,- at Bell Microproduct, whereas the price of exactly the same product in the United States was $ 235,- (taking into account the dollar exchange rate at that time, that corresponds to a price difference of 38%). At the time, the same product was sold in Egypt for only $ 35,-;
 - b. Windows Small Business Server 2003 upgrade UK costs € 370,- in the United States, whereas the price for exactly the same product at Bell Microproduct in the Netherlands was € 543,-. That corresponds to a price difference of 32%.
- 3.2.7. A comparison between the price lists of the recognised distributors Ingram Micro (US) and Bell Micro (NL) shows the same disparity (Annex 11d). The most substantial price differences can be observed for full product packages. Those products are often almost twice as expensive as in the United States. See H. Hagedoorn, 'Is Microsoft Crazy – ripping the Dutch' (Annex 12). Hagedoorn points to the fact that Microsoft also charges excessive prices for Windows Vista. One of the visitors of the website confirms that the German prices are comparable with the (high) Dutch prices.
- 3.2.8. There have been substantial price differences between third countries and the EU Member States for years, but the price differences have recently become exorbitant. The current European price level can be derived from the price list of Bell Micro of 2008 that has been attached as Annex 11e.

c. Price differences between the EU and Asia

- 3.2.9. The price differences are even more substantial if the European prices are compared with the prices in Asia. There (the distributors of) Microsoft charge(s) $ 330,- for the Small Business Server 2003 (see the price list of the Singapore company Corporate Innovations (S) Pte Ltd. (COINS), Annex 11c) as opposed to € 543,- in the Netherlands. The price list shows that other Asian prices are also substantially lower than in the European Union.
- 3.2.10. Although companies are in principle free to set their own prices, substantial price differences between third countries and the Member States of the European Union can point to the setting of excessive prices. Also see CFI 16 December 1999, case T-198/98, Micro Leader versus the Commission, ECR 1999, p. II-3989, § 54:
- "(...), the factual evidence put forward by the applicant constitutes, at the very least, an indication that, for equivalent transactions, Microsoft applied lower prices on the Canadian market than on the Community market and that the Community prices were excessive." (underlining added)*
- 3.2.11. This situation evidently also arises in the present case. It follows from the case law of the European Court of Justice that an undertaking with a dominant position abuses that position if it charges too high prices that are not related to the economic value of the performed duty (ECJ 11 November 1986, case 226/84, British Leyland, ECR 1986, p. 3263).

- A clear example is that Microsoft charges $ 250,- for a separate disk kit that only costs a few dollars to produce (Annex 8). In Annex A it is explained that this is also part of Microsoft's strategy to make it impossible for the final customer to ever sell on its expensive Office 2007 package.
- Another example is the sudden announcement by Microsoft in 2007 that it was "forced" to raise the prices for OEM Windows Vista Home Premium and OEM Windows Vista Ultimate Edition Products with approximately € 12,- (Annex 15). That substantial price increase cannot have been caused by a related cost rise.

3.2.12. The excessive level of the price can (inter alia) be established by comparing the selling price of the product with the cost price and by thus demonstrating the margin of profit (ECJ 14 February 1978, case 27/76, United Brands / Commission, ECR 1978, p. 207). Although HW does not have any data about cost price and profit margin at its disposal, the enormous price differences between third countries and the Member States of the EU – in connection with the vast profits that Microsoft earns with its products⁴ – demonstrates that Microsoft charges excessive prices within the EU.

3.3. Abusive enforcement of intellectual property rights in order to maintain excessive prices

3.3.1. Microsoft is able to maintain its excessive prices by aggressively enforcing its portfolio of intellectual property rights and relying on the rule of exhaustion where possible. In the given circumstances, this also constitutes an infringement of Article 82 EC.

3.3.2. Microsoft often invokes or threatens to invoke its intellectual property rights in situations where it is not allowed to do so:

- Microsoft rigorously (instructs customs authorities to) take(s) measures on the basis of the Anti-Piracy Regulation⁵ to act against – in its eyes: undesirable, but lawful – parallel imports and deliberately ignores the fact that the Anti-Piracy Regulation can only be relied upon in case of counterfeit and piracy and not in case of the parallel import of original goods (Annex 16). Microsoft even goes that far in its actions against the lawful parallel import(s) of its goods that one of its employees, Mr Lensing, acts as if he is in service of the parallel importing company, just to be able to seize branded goods that have been brought on the market within the EEA by or with the consent of Microsoft (Annex 17). It follows from previous Commission decisions and the case law of the European Court of First Instance that this constitutes an infringement of Art 82 EC since the action of Microsoft cannot be considered as (i) an attempt to establish the rights of Microsoft concerned and can therefore only serve to harass the opposite party and (ii) it is conceived in the framework of a plan whose goal is to eliminate competition.⁶

- Microsoft relies on exhaustion rules (such as the first sale doctrine that has been developed in US case law) where possible and profits from the fact that the burden of proof is often on the parallel importer. After the L'Anza decision in 1998 (Quality King Distributors, Inc. v. L'anza Research International, Inc., 1998 WL 96265 (US Cal.)), Microsoft cannot only act against the importation into the United States of goods under copyright that have not first been sold by Microsoft somewhere in the world, but also against the importation of goods that have been produced outside the United States. That makes it possible for Microsoft to escape the limits of the first sale doctrine (section 109 of the US Copyright Act) and charge higher prices by merely outsourcing the manufacturing to an overseas location. This abusive strategy offers Microsoft the possibility to charge high prices, free from competition from the same copies being sold much cheaper overseas.
- That Microsoft uses its legal and financial power in a disproportionate manner also follows from the case against a 21-year-old student. Microsoft claimed that the student had violated trademark and copyright laws by selling two unopened pieces of software on eBay for $ 203,50, only because Microsoft did not take the software back within its own 30-day return policy. An army of lawyers alleged that the sale cost caused hundreds of thousands of dollars of "irreparable damage" to Microsoft (see Annex 18: D. Grollmus, 'Kill Bill, Microsoft's army of lawyers was no match for a kid from Kent State').
- Microsoft also instructs its recognised distributors that they are not allowed to supply separate disk kits, which means that consumers with a valid licence cannot use that licence anymore if they, for example, buy a new computer (see Annex A for a further explanation). Although Microsoft's tying practice is not in line with the European legislation and case law (Annex 3), Microsoft still has not brought an end to that behaviour. Microsoft also keeps on providing its customers with wrong information by suggesting that its licences are PC-bounded (see Annex 4). It threatens lawful acting software companies with law suits, aiming at eliminating competition (Annex 5). In Germany, several attempts to eliminate the company UsedSoft have failed (Annexes 6 and 7).

- It is certainly not the first time that Microsoft does not respect judgments. In its marketing material, Microsoft states that private system builders are not entitled to (cheaper) OEM software (Annex 19). This statement is square to a Dutch judgment between Microsoft and a retailer in which it was established that a private party who assembles its own system should also be considered a system builder who is entitled to purchase OEM software (Annex 20).

3.3.3. It is only because of its extremely rigorous (and often unjustified) enforcement of intellectual property rights that Microsoft can maintain its excessive prices within the European Union.

4. Community interest

4.1. HW requests the Commission to order Microsoft to put an end to the infringements:

- a. The infringements of Article 82 EC can be put to an end by obliging Microsoft:
 - to adapt its prices in the European Union in such a manner that there is a reasonable relation between the prices and the costs incurred by Microsoft;
 - to refrain from an abusive enforcement of its intellectual property rights (with the mere objective of maintaining excessive prices);
 - to supply its products separately from other Microsoft products and to refrain from tying abuses.
- b. The infringement of Article 81 EC (see Annex A) can be put to an end by prohibiting Microsoft to impose unjustified supply restrictions on its recognised distributors and to allow its distributors to supply its customers with Microsoft products (disk kits) without compelling them to buy other (Microsoft) products as well.

4.2. There is a clear Community dimension in this case, because Microsoft commits the same infringements in more – if not all – Member States of the European Union. Besides, there are compelling reasons to take action against these infringements:

- i. the facts are clear and supported by evidence, which means that the Commission will be able to establish the infringement with restricted investigation measures;

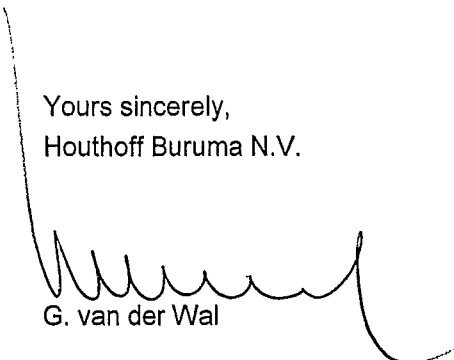

- ii. the infringements are serious (as to dimension and duration), especially if one takes into account that Microsoft commits infringements of competition law on a regular basis;⁷
- iii. the infringements are not only to the detriment of competitors of Microsoft for whom it is extremely difficult to operate on the relevant market, but also for European consumers who have less freedom to choose and are confronted with unfair high prices for Microsoft products.

5. Conclusion

- 5.1. Microsoft undoubtedly has a dominant position on the relevant market(s) for productivity software. Almost 100% of the business customers use Microsoft Office software (Microsoft Word, Microsoft Power Point, Microsoft Excel). The dominant position of Microsoft is strengthened by the barriers to entry on the software market (a lot of technological knowledge is required), the financial strength of Microsoft, its technological means, its worldwide growth and the far reaching vertical integration.
- 5.2. Microsoft infringes Article 81 EC by prohibiting its recognised distributors to sell separate disk kits, which results in consumers not being able to use and to sell on their purchased – valid – licences. That vertical agreement between Microsoft and its recognised distributors restricts the (intra-brand) competition. After all, it results in customers being obliged to purchase disk kits with new licences, although the licences they obtained before are still valid (but of no use without a disk kit).
- 5.3. Furthermore, Microsoft abuses Article 82 EC by:
 - charging excessive prices to customers in the European Union (Article 82 (a) EC);
 - maintaining its excessive prices by aggressively enforcing its intellectual property rights and relying on the rule of exhaustion. In the given circumstances, this also constitutes an infringement of Article 82 EC;
 - refusing traders and consumers access to products (disk kits) with the objective to shield off its own products (Microsoft user licences) from (intra-brand) competition (Article 82 (b) EC).
- 5.4. It will be clear that there is more than enough reason to subject the supply and price policy of Microsoft to a further investigation. HW is of course ready to cooperate with the Commission and willing to offer a further explanation in a meeting with the Commission.

⁷ See inter alia CFI 17 September 2007, case T-201/04, Microsoft / Commission, ECR 2005, p. II-1491.

Yours sincerely,
Houthoff Buruma N.V.

ANNEX A – MICROSOFT'S TYING ABUSES AND ILLEGAL SUPPLY RESTRICTIONS

1. Introduction

- 1.1. The main part of the complaint is about the excessive prices Microsoft charges for its products within the European Union. That is not the only competitive behaviour by Microsoft. In this Annex, it will be explained that Microsoft also infringes competition law by not allowing (its recognised distributors) the sale of individual disk kits.

2. Microsoft's tying abuses and illegal supply restrictions

- Article 81 EC

- 2.1. Microsoft imposes illegal supply restrictions on its distributors. It prohibits its distributors to supply separate Office disk kits to its customers. That makes it impossible for end users with a legitimate licence to install Microsoft software on their computer. The user right of a licensee can only be effectuated by installing the necessary software with the help of an Office disk kit that is relatively cheap, but cannot be bought separately from a new Microsoft licence package.
- 2.2. HW has attached email correspondence between the Dutch company Stocks Trading B.V. and (the official distributors¹ of) Microsoft (Annex 2), which shows that Stocks Trading ordered 700 disk kits (300 Office Pro 2003 UK disk kits; 300 Office standard 2003 UK disk kits and 100 Windows 2003 server UK disk kits) from Microsoft for one of its customers. Microsoft prohibited its recognised suppliers to deliver the ordered disk kits. See the email of 9 June 2005 from Nico van Veen of Microsoft Ltd to Microsoft's recognised distributors:

"If one of you should receive an order of such immense quantity of Media Kits or should you receive an order from the company "Stocks Trading", please contact me about this and do NOT deliver." (underlining added)

- 2.3. The reason for this refusal is obvious: Microsoft wants to keep the utility of its licences as limited as possible by distributing a small amount of disk kits. A purchased licence becomes useless, when Microsoft refuses to, and prohibits its distributors, to deliver the disk kits required for the installation of its software. However, this is contrary to the in the European Economic Area (EEA) applied exhaustion rule (in the sense of Article 4 Directive 91/250 of the Council on the legal protection of computer programmes of 14 May 1991²): according to this rule the exclusive right of distribution ends after the legitimate sale of a copy by the author himself or with his permission within the EEA. After the first sale in the EEA, the legitimate copy of a certain programme can be sold on in the EEA without interference by the copyright holder. Everyone to whom Microsoft has sold a user licence, consequently acquires the right to transfer this licence to another person if the seller does not longer need it for personal use (for example, because he has bought a new computer on which new standard software has already been installed).

- 2.4. In this respect, HW also refers to the attached judgment of the District Court of Hamburg of 29 June 2006 (Annex 3), which shows that it is permissible to sell Office licences separately from a so called "mastercopy", because the first sale of a copy of a programme in the Community by a person or with his consent puts an end to the right to control the distribution of that copy in the Community.³

Cf. inter alia ECJ 16 July 1998, Silhouette International Schmied, case C-355, ECR 1998, p. I-4799 and ECJ 1 July 1999, Sebago and Maison Dubois, case C-173/98, ECR 1999, p. I-4103.

Despite this clear case-law, Microsoft keeps on informing its customers incorrectly. It still suggests that its licence is PC-bounded (see Annex 4, in which Microsoft informs its business relations that an OEM-licence exists of three components and is PC-bounded). It even threatens software companies with law suits, hoping they will give up their lawful activities sooner or later (Annex 5). In Germany, several attempts of Microsoft to eliminate the company UsedSoft have failed (Annexes 6 en 7).

- 2.5. Microsoft often offers volume licences with a limited number of disk kits to diminish the possibility that its customers can still use their (expensive) licences for further use or sell them on. Microsoft has also suddenly increased the price of the disk kits to an excessive level (a price increase from $ 5,- to $ 250,-) to make it unattractive to buy the disk kits separately from other Microsoft products (Annex 8). This pricing strategy fits Microsoft's overall strategy to make it impossible for the end user to ever sell its Office 2007 kit on to someone else. As a consequence, valid licences become completely useless.
- 2.6. The behaviour of Microsoft undoubtedly has anti-competitive effects, since it causes an elimination of (intra-brand) competition. Customers who already dispose of a usable licence can after all be obliged to buy a new software kit (with new licence and disk kit), while they in fact only require a – relatively inexpensive – disk kit.

³ See also European Court of First Instance 16 December 1999, case T-198/98, Micro Leader Business / Commission, ECR 1999, p. II-3989, r.o. 29.

- 2.7. The prohibition Microsoft imposes on its OEM-distributors can be qualified as a 'hardcore'-restriction in the sense of Article 4 sub b) Regulation 2790/1999⁴, which cannot be exempted on the basis of Article 81 sub 3 of the EC Treaty (Microsoft cannot rely on Regulation 2790/1999, because its market share exceeds the 30% (also see § 3.1 of the complaint). There are no precedents for an exemption of a 'hardcore'-restriction on the basis of Article 81 sub 3 EG.
- 2.8. A parallel can also be drawn with the 'hard-core'-restriction in Article 4 sub e) of Regulation 2790/1999 which prohibits a restriction that limits the supplier to selling the components as spare parts to end-users or to repairers or other service providers not entrusted by the buyer with the repair or servicing of its goods. End users who only need a relatively inexpensive disk kit to continue using their licence or to sell it on, cannot purchase that separate disk kit from (a recognised distributor of) Microsoft, but are forced to purchase a whole new Office package. That is undoubtedly anti-competitive.

- Article 82 EC

- 2.9. Microsoft's refusal to supply customers with – for the customer necessary - disk kits is abusive, because it denies traders⁵ the access to products with as an object to shield its own products from (intra-brand) competition.
- 2.10. There is no objective justification for the refusal to supply and the tying of the sale of software licences and disk kits. In the complaint letter (§ 3.3), it has already been explained that the interest of Microsoft to enforce its intellectual property rights does not constitute an objective justification. As soon as Microsoft has provided a licence within the EEA, the licensee has the right to use that licence and to sell it on to a third party, because the copyright of Microsoft has exhausted. It is therefore contrary to Article 82 EC to refuse to supply a separate disk kit (without a new licence) with the sole objective of making an existing valid licence useless.
- 2.11. The refusal to supply Media License Kits (MLK) (Annex 2) also constitutes an abuse of dominance. Although companies are, in principle, free to decide with whom they trade, the refusal to supply by a dominant undertaking can constitute an abuse in the sense of Article 82 EC. Since Microsoft refuses to supply existing customers, such as ⁴ Regulation 2790/1999 of the Commission of 22 December 1999 on the application of Article 81(3) of the Treaty to categories of vertical agreements and concerted practices (OJ EC, L 336/21).

Stocks Trading, Microsoft has to show that there is an objective justification for that refusal.⁶

3. Conclusion

- 3.1. Apart from charging excessive prices, Microsoft also infringes on competition law by tying products and refusing to supply existing customers. HW is of course willing to provide more information about these abuses.

Goedemorgen,

Ik heb jullie hulp nodig.

Bij Tech Data is een aanvraag van een bedrijf "Stocks Trading" binnengekomen voor 700 diskkits. Deze bestaat uit iets van 350 diskkits Office standard, 300 diskkits Office Pro en 100 diskkits Windows Server 2003.

Het bedrijf "Stocks Trading" is een trader die handelt in 'oude COA's (wat niet mag zoals we weten) en bij ons nadrukkelijk op het vizier staat aangaande compliancy.

Het aantal diskkits wat men nu probeert te bestellen is buiten proportioneel en wordt door Tech Data daarom NIET uitgeleverd.

Mocht bij één van jullie een aanvraag binnen komen voor een dergelijk groot aantal Media Kits of mocht er een aanvraag binnenkomen van het bedrijf "Stocks Trading", dan verzoek ik jullie hierover contact te hebben met mij en deze NIET uit te leveren.

Ik dank jullie voor de medewerking.

Met vriendelijke groet,
Nico van Veen

Geachte Ernesto,

Wij zijn voor een klant (een bedrijf zoals het kruidvat) op zoek naar een aantal diskkits, omdat zij voortdurend problemen hebben met de software. Daar zij bij hun aanschaf van hun open license maar 1 diskkit hebben besteld. Willen zij nu voor enkele computer waarvoor geen diskkit aanwezig is. Deze alsnog bestellen.

Op dit moment zijn ongeveer de helft van de locaties geïnventariseerd en willen zij de volgende aantallen bestellen:

300x Office Pro 2003 UK disk-kit

300x Office standard 2003 UK disk-kit

100x Windows 2003 server UK disk-kit

Urteil des Landgerichts Hamburg, Zivilkammer 15 vom 29.06.2006

Aktenzeichen: 315 O 343/06

In der Sache K. GmbH gegen u. GmbH

erkennt das Landgericht Hamburg, Zivilkammer 15 auf die mündliche Verhandlung vom 14.06.2005, durch
den Vorsitzenden Richter am Landgericht Schneider den Richter am Landgericht Brauer den Richter am Landgericht Schramm

für Recht:

- I. Die einstweilige Verfügung der Kammer vom 4. Mai 2006 wird unter Zurückweisung des auf ihren Erlass gerichteten Antrages aufgehoben.
- II. Die Antragstellerin trägt die Kosten des Verfahrens.
- III. Das Urteil ist vorläufig vollstreckbar. Der Antragstellerin wird nachgelassen, die Vollstreckung durch die Antragsgegnerin durch Sicherheitsleistung in Höhe von 110 % des von dieser aufgrund des Urteils vollstreckbaren Betrages abzuwenden, wenn die Antragsgegnerin nicht vor der Vollstreckung Sicherheit in Höhe von 110 % des jeweils zu vollstreckenden Betrages leistet.

Tatbestand:

Im Zentrum des vorliegenden Rechtsstreits steht die Frage, ob der Handel mit „gebrauchten“, ursprünglich von der Microsoft Ireland Operations Limited (im Folgenden „Microsoft“) im Rahmen von Volumenlizenzverträgen wie etwa sog. Microsoft Select-Verträgen vergebenen, Softwarenutzungsrechten wirksam möglich ist.

Die Parteien sind Wettbewerber auf dem Gebiet des Vertriebes von Lizenzen für Microsoft-Software. Die Antragstellerin ist Microsoft-Fachhandelspartnerin und vertreibt in dieser Funktion bundesweit Microsoftprogramme mit Originalherstellerlizenz. Die Antragsgegnerin ist auf den Handel mit „gebrauchter“ – u. a. Microsoft- – Software spezialisiert und handelt zu diesem Zwecke mit Lizenzrechten.

Mit eMail vom 7. März 2006 bot die Antragsgegnerin der Antragstellerin Microsoft-Programme zu günstigen Preisen an (vgl. Anlage Ast 1). Die Günstigkeit dieser Preise beruht darauf, dass die Antragsgegnerin „gebrauchte“ Softwarelizenzen vertreibt.

Microsoft pflegt in Erfüllung von Volumenlizenzverträgen – wie etwa Microsoft Select-Verträgen – mit Großkunden, die Lizenzen für mehrere Anwender benötigen, nicht, eine der Anzahl der Anwender entsprechende Menge von Datenträgern, auf welchen die jeweils lizenzierte Software jeweils gespeichert ist, an den Kunden zu übergeben, sondern diesem eine sog. Masterkopie zu überlassen, einen Datenträger, mithilfe dessen der Kunde die lizenzierte Software auf den Rechnern der prospektiven Anwender einrichten kann.

Das Geschäftsmodell der Antragsgegnerin baut hierauf auf und gestaltet sich wie folgt:

Die Antragsgegnerin erwirbt von einem Microsoft-Volumenlizenzvertragspartner eine Menge an Softwarelizenzen, für welche der Microsoft-Kunde keine Verwendung mehr hat. Letzterer versichert, die Microsoft-Software auf einer Anzahl von Rechnern, auf welchen er sie in Ausübung der veräußerten Lizenzrechte zunächst aufgespielt hatte, die der Anzahl der an die Antragsgegnerin veräußerten Lizenzen entspricht, gelöscht zu haben. Die Antragsgegnerin veräußert diese – „gebrauchten“ – Lizenzen an Dritte weiter. Sind diese selbst bereits Microsoft-

Volumenlizenzvertragspartner, besteht also ein lizenzvertragliches Verhältnis zwischen diesen und Microsoft – etwa über einen Microsoft Select-Vertrag –, die nunmehr Lizenzen für weitere Anwender benötigen, nutzen sie ihre ihnen von Microsoft überlassene Masterkopie, um in Ausübung der von der Antragsgegnerin als Mittlerin erworbenen zusätzlichen Lizenzen die Microsoft-Software auf die Rechner, auf welchen diese genutzt werden soll, aufzuspielen. Eine Zustimmung von Microsoft zu den bezeichneten Erwerbsvorgängen wird zu keinem Zeitpunkt eingeholt.

Ein Blankoexemplar eines Microsoft Select-Vertrages liegt der Kammer als Anlage Ast 2 bzw. Anlage SCH 4, ein Blankoexemplar eines Microsoft Business-Vertrages liegt der Kammer als Anlage SCH 3 vor. Auf die benannten Anlagen wird wegen der Einzelheiten der Vertragsgestaltung verwiesen.

Mit Anwaltsschreiben der Prozessbevollmächtigten der Antragstellerin vom 13. April 2006 ließ diese die Antragsgegnerin wegen des An- und Weiterverkaufs „gebrauchter“ Softwarelizenzen abmahnen (vgl. Anlage Ast 5). Die Antragsgegnerin gab gegenüber der Antragstellerin keine strafbewehrte Unterlassungsverpflichtungserklärung ab (vgl. Anlage Ast 3).

Mit Beschluss vom 4. Mai 2006 hat die Kammer der Antragsgegnerin auf Antrag der Antragstellerin im Wege der einstweiligen Verfügung bei Meldung der gesetzlich vorgesehenen Ordnungsmittel verboten, im geschäftlichen Verkehr den Verkauf von Microsoft-Softwarelizenzen zu bewerben, die zuvor im Rahmen von Volumenlizenzverträgen wie z. B. Select-Verträgen abgegeben wurden.

Hiergegen richtet sich die Antragsgegnerin mit ihrem Widerspruch.

Die Antragstellerin ist unter Berufung auf das – nicht rechtskräftige – Urteil des Landgerichts München I vom 19. Januar 2006 (Az.: 7 O 23237/06; vgl. Anlagen Ast 6 und SCH 5) der Auffassung, das Geschäftsmodell der Antragsgegnerin sei urheberrechtlich unzulässig und die dessen Zulässigkeit suggerierende Bewerbung mithin als irreführend unlauter. Durch die Vergabe von Softwarenutzungsrechten durch Microsoft an deren Ersterwerber, sei es online, sei es via eine Masterkopie, auf der schuldrechtlichen Grundlage eines Volumenlizenzvertrages erschöpfe sich das Verbreitungsrecht von Microsoft in Bezug auf diese Softwarenutzungsrechte nicht. § 69c Nr. 3 Satz 2 UrhG finde weder direkt noch analog Anwendung. Im Übrigen verstoße das Geschäftsmodell der Antragsgegnerin gegen Ziff. 9 des Microsoft Select-Vertrages.

Die Antragstellerin beantragt, die einstweilige Verfügung der Kammer vom 4. Mai 2006 zu bestätigen.

Die Antragsgegnerin beantragt:

- I. Die einstweilige Verfügung des Landgerichts Hamburg vom 4. Mai 2006, Az.: 315 O 343/06, wird aufgehoben.
- II. Der Antrag der Antragstellerin auf Erlass einer einstweiligen Verfügung vom 2. Mai 2006 wird zurückgewiesen.

Die Antragsgegnerin ist der Auffassung, ihr oben dargestelltes Geschäftsmodell begegne weder urheberrechtlichen noch lauterkeitsrechtlichen Bedenken, so dass auch die Werbung hierfür zulässig sei. Die Verbreitungsrechte an den von ihr, der Antragsgegnerin, gehandelten Lizenzen, die Microsoft dem jeweiligen Ersterwerber auf der Grundlage eines Volumenlizenzvertrages einräumt, seien durch deren erstmalig-ges Inverkehrbringen – sei es online, sei es via eine Masterkopie – analog § 69c Nr. 3 Satz 2 UrhG erschöpft. Soweit Microsoft durch Lizenzübertragungsbeschränkungen (vgl. etwa Ziff. 9 des Vertrages gemäß Anlage Ast 2) dem Ersterwerber von Softwarelizenzen deren Weiterveräußerung formularmäßig untersage, verstoße eine solche Regelung wegen der Unzulässigkeit einer vertraglichen Abbedingung des urheberrechtlichen Erschöpfungsgrundsatzes gegen § 307 Abs. 1 Satz 1 und Abs. 2 Nr. 1 BGB.

Wegen der weiteren Einzelheiten des Sach- und Streitstandes wird auf die Schriftsätze der Parteien nebst Anlagen sowie das Protokoll der mündlichen Verhandlung (Widerspruchsverhandlung) vom 14. Juni 2006 verwiesen.

Entscheidungsgründe:

Die einstweilige Verfügung der Kammer vom 4. Mai 2006 ist unter Berücksichtigung des Widerspruchsvorbringens der Antragsgegnerin aufzuheben (§§ 925 Abs. 1 und 2, 936 ZPO). Sie hat sich als zu Unrecht ergangen erwiesen.

Der Antragstellerin steht der von ihr geltend gemachte Unterlassungsanspruch weder aus § 8 Abs. 1 und 3 Nr. 1 UWG in Verbindung mit den §§ 3, 5 Abs. 1 und 2 Satz 1 Nr. 3 UWG noch unter einem anderen rechtlichen Gesichtspunkt zu.

I.

Die Antragsgegnerin wirbt nicht irreführend.

Der Verkauf bzw. die Veräußerung einzelner Microsoft-Softwarelizenzen, die zuvor im Rahmen von Volumenlizenzverträgen wie z. B. Select-Verträgen abgegeben worden waren, ist auch ohne Zustimmung von Microsoft wirksam möglich. Eine Werbung, die dies kommuniziert, ist mithin nicht irreführend.

1.

Unstreitig stehen Microsoft an den hier in Rede stehenden Computerprogrammen, welche gemäß den §§ 2 Abs. 1 Nr. 1, 69a Abs. 1 und 3 UrhG als individuelle geistige Werkschöpfungen der an ihrer Entwicklung und Erstellung beteiligten Personen Urheberrechtsschutz genießen, die ausschließlichen Nutzungsrechte zu.

Durch die Veräußerung einzelner Werkstücke („Lizenzen“) von von ihr zuvor von Microsoft-Kunden erworbenen Computerprogrammen an ihre, der Antragsgegnerin, Kunden greift die Antragsgegnerin indes nicht in das Microsoft als der Inhaberin der ausschließlichen Nutzungsrechte zustehende Verbreitungsrecht (§§ 69c Nr. 3 Satz 1, 17 Abs. 1 UrhG) ein. Das Verbreitungsrecht von Microsoft an den von der Antragsgegnerin gehandelten Vervielfältigungsstücken der hier in Rede stehenden Software hat sich durch deren Inverkehrbringen mit Zustimmung von Microsoft analog § 69c Nr. 3 Satz 2 UrhG erschöpft.

Die Kammer kann die Rechtsnatur der Verträge betreffend die Einräumung von Nutzungsrechten an Software, die zwischen Microsoft und seinen Kunden zustande kommen, nur anhand der ihr vorgelegten Microsoft-Verträge „Select“ und „Business“ beurteilen.

Hiernach handelt es sich bei der hier in Rede stehenden Vertragsgestaltung um Kaufverträge bzw. jedenfalls kaufvertragsähnliche Verträge (vgl. dazu BGHZ 102, S. 135 ff. (S. 141); Hoeren in Möhring/Nicolini, Urheberrechtsgesetz, 2. Auflage 2000, § 69c Rn. 14; Grützmaçher in Wandtke/Bullinger, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 2006, § 69c Rn. 38), wobei Vertragsgegenstand jeweils eine Anzahl von Nutzungsrechten ist, die Microsoft seinen Vertragspartnern im Grundsatz als zeitlich unbeschränkte Lizenzen veräußert.

Microsoft vereinbart mit seinen Kunden zudem eine Art „Eigentumsvorbehalt“ hinsichtlich übertragener Nutzungsrechte dergestalt, dass jedes übertragene Nutzungsrecht bis zu seiner vollständigen Bezahlung zeitlich beschränkt ist. Ziff. 5 („Lizenzgewährung – was Ihre Beitrittsunternehmen nutzen dürfen“) des Microsoft Select-Vertrages lautet unter der Rubrik „Einfache Lizenz“ etwa wie folgt:

„Das Recht eines Beitrittsunternehmens unter diesem Vertrag, Kopien eines Produkts zu nutzen, für das es nur eine Lizenz bestellt hat, ist zeitlich beschränkt, bis das Beitrittsunternehmen diese Lizenz vollständig bezahlt hat. Anschließend wird das Beitrittsunternehmen eine zeitlich unbeschränkte Lizenz zur Nutzung der Anzahl der bestellten Kopien in der bestellten Version haben.“

Für die rechtliche Einordnung der hier in Rede stehenden Vertragsgestaltung als jedenfalls kaufvertragsähnliche Verträge spricht des Weiteren die Formulierung in Ziff. 2 („Das Select-Lizenzprogramm“) des Microsoft Select-Vertrages, in welcher unter lit. c davon die Rede ist, „Select-Handelspartner [seien] bevollmächtigt, unsere Produktlizenzen zu verkaufen“ (Unterstreichung durch die Kammer).

Anhaltspunkte für eine anderweitige rechtliche Einordnung der hier in Rede stehenden Verträge betreffend die Einräumung von Nutzungsrechten an Software hat auch die Antragstellerin nicht nachvollziehbar vorgetragen.

Durch die in Erfüllung des jeweiligen Volumenlizenzvertrages – wie etwa eines Microsoft Select-Vertrages – erfolgte Einräumung von Nutzungsrechten an Software hat sich das Verbreitungsrecht von Microsoft in Bezug auf jedes einzelne eingeräumte Nutzungsrecht, welches jeweils als ein eigenständig zu beurteilendes Vervielfältigungsstück der Software zu behandeln ist, erschöpft.

Zum – auch in § 69c Nr. 3 Satz 2 UrhG normierten – urheberrechtlichen Erschöpfungsgrundsatz hat der Bundesgerichtshof in seinem Urteil vom 4. Mai 2000 (Az.: I ZR 256/97 – Parfumflakon; GRUR 2001, S. 51 ff.) u. a. das Folgende ausgeführt (a. a. O., S. 53):

„Die gesetzliche Regelung in § 17 II UrhG ist jedoch Ausdruck des allgemeinen Grundsatzes, dass das Urheberrecht ebenso wie andere Schutzrechte gegenüber dem Interesse an der Verkehrsfähigkeit der mit Zustimmung des Berechtigten in Verkehr gesetzten Waren zurücktreten muss (vgl. BGH, GRUR 1986, 736 [737f.] = NJW-RR 1986, 1183 = LM § 17 UrhG Nr. 8 - Schallplattenvermietung). Innerhalb eines einheitlichen Wirtschaftsraums soll das mit Zustimmung des Berechtigten in Verkehr gesetzte Werkstück ungeachtet des urheberrechtlichen Schutzes frei zirkulieren dürfen. Dem Berechtigten ist es unbenommen, die Erstverbreitung des Werkstücks zu untersagen oder von einer angemessenen, auch diese Nutzung seines Werks berücksichtigenden Vergütung abhängig zu machen. Hat er diese Zustimmung aber erst einmal erteilt, soll es ihm verwehrt sein, mit Hilfe des Urheberrechts die weiteren Absatzwege dieser Ware zu kontrollieren.“

aa.

In Bezug auf das Tatbestandsmerkmal „Vervielfältigungsstück eines Computerprogramms“ in § 69c Nr. 3 Satz 2 UrhG ist eine analoge Anwendung dieser Vorschrift auf den hier zu beurteilenden Fall einer Übertragung mehrerer Nutzungsrechte vermittels Übergabe nur einer Masterkopie, mithilfe derer die fragliche Software mehreren Anwendern zur Verfügung gestellt werden kann, veranlasst (vgl. hierzu Grützma-cher in Wandtke/Bullinger, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 2006, § 69c Rn. 31; ders. in ZUM 2006, S. 302 ff.; Hoeren in Möhring/Nicolini, Urheberrechtsgesetz, 2. Auflage 2000, § 69c Rn. 16; Sosnitzka in K&R 2006, S. 206 ff.).

Nach dem Wortlaut des § 69c Nr. 3 Satz 2 UrhG ist Voraussetzung einer Erschöpfung das Inverkehrbringen eines Vervielfältigungsstückes, was eine Verkörperung des jeweiligen Vervielfältigungsstückes der Software – etwa auf einer CD-ROM, einer Diskette oder einem anderen Datenträger – voraussetzt. Vervielfältigung ist grundsätzlich jede körperliche Festlegung, die geeignet ist, ein Werk auf irgendeine Weise den menschlichen Sinnen unmittelbar oder mittelbar zugänglich zu machen (vgl. Marquardt in Wandtke/Bullinger, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 2006, § 6 Rn. 25 und Heerma in Wandtke/Bullinger, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 2006, § 16 Rn. 2).

Das Verwertungsinteresse in Bezug auf Software unterscheidet sich indes nicht danach, ob die einzelnen Nutzungsrechte in Erfüllung des jeweiligen Volumenlizenzvertrages körperlich oder unkörperlich – wie hier im Wege der Überlassung einer Masterkopie – übertragen werden. Das Ergebnis ist das gleiche: Im einen wie im anderen Fall ist die Software letztlich auf einer Anzahl von Rechnern (zeitlich unbeschränkt) nutzbar, die der Anzahl der übertragenen Nutzungsrechte entspricht. Es ist auch nicht ersichtlich, aus welchem Grunde das urheberrechtliche Verbreitungsrecht in Bezug auf Softwarenutzungsrechte in der Zwangsvollstreckung, dort im Rahmen einer Drittwiderspruchsklage im Sinne von § 771 Abs. 1 ZPO, danach unterschiedlich behandelt werden sollte, ob der Rechtsinhaber das jeweilige Nutzungsrecht durch die Überlassung einzelner – verkörperter – Vervielfältigungsstücke (etwa einzelner CD-ROMs), Online oder im Wege der Überlassung einer – mehrfach nutzbaren – Masterkopie eingeräumt hat. Es kann nicht in der Hand des Rechtsinhabers liegen, durch die Wahl einer bestimmten Art der Einräumung (zeitlich) unbeschränkter Nutzungsrechte in Erfüllung eines jedenfalls kaufvertragsähnlichen Vertrages zulasten der Gläubiger seines Kunden die Vollstreckung in von letzterem erworbene Software, die einen erheblichen Vermögenswert darstellen kann, zu verhindern.

Es besteht auch eine planwidrige Regelungslücke (vgl. Grützmacher in Wandtke/Bullinger, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 2006, § 69c Rn. 31 und Heerma in Wandtke/Bullinger, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 2006, § 17 Rn. 16). In Erwägungsgrund Nr. 29 der Richtlinie 2001/29/EG vom 22. Mai 2001, zu deren Umsetzung § 69c Nr. 3 UrhG zuletzt durch das Gesetz zur Regelung des Urheberrechts in der Informationsgesellschaft (BGBl. I 2003, S. 1774) geändert worden ist, heißt es zwar u. a. wie folgt:

„Die Frage der Erschöpfung stellt sich weder bei Dienstleistungen allgemein noch bei Online-Diensten im Besonderen.“

Zum einen erfasst diese Formulierung indes nicht den Fall der einmaligen, in Erfüllung eines Volumenlizenzvertrages erfolgenden, Online-Übertragung von Software, die fortan ohne eine (Online-)Verbindung zum Rechtsinhaber von dem Ersterwerber auf seinem Rechner genutzt werden kann, und zum anderen ist hier die Rechteübertragung vermittelt Übergabe einer Masterkopie überhaupt nicht angesprochen. Art. 3 Abs. 3 der Richtlinie 2001/29/EG ist hier nicht einschlägig. Wenn aber die unkörperliche Übertragung die Übergabe eines physischen Werkstücks ersetzt, dann muss auch hinsichtlich des so – unkörperlich – hergestellten Werkstücks Erschöpfung eintreten. Andernfalls wäre das unkörperlich hergestellte Werkstück nicht verkehrsfähig.

Das Vergütungsinteresse von Microsoft – welches etwa wegen einer degressiven Gebührenstruktur durch die Möglichkeit der Weiterveräußerung einzelner Lizenzen gestört werden könnte – ist insoweit nicht zu berücksichtigen. Für die Frage des Eintrittes einer urheberrechtlichen Erschöpfung des Verbreitungsrechts in Bezug auf Vervielfältigungsstücke von Software ist es vielmehr gänzlich irrelevant (vgl. hierzu auch BGH CR 2000, S. 651 ff. (S. 653-654) und die Anmerkung von Witte in CR 2000, S. 654 f. (S. 655)).

Es liegt auch eine „Veräußerung“ im Sinne von § 69c Nr. 3 Satz 2 UrhG vor.

Zum einen handelt es sich bei der Einräumung der einzelnen Softwarenutzungsrechte um ein Handeln in Erfüllung eines jedenfalls kaufvertragsähnlichen Vertrages, vgl. § 433 Abs. 1 Satz 1 BGB.

Zum anderen ist entscheidend, dass sich der Berechtigte der Verfügungsmöglichkeit über die Werkstücke endgültig begibt (vgl. Loewenheim in Schricker, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 1999, § 69c Rn. 34).

Wie bereits ausgeführt, werden die im Rahmen von Microsoft Select-Verträgen versprochenen Nutzungsrechte letztlich – abgesehen von dem bereits erörterten „Eigentumsvorbehalt“ – zeitlich unbeschränkt eingeräumt. Der Lizenznehmer hat die ihm überlassene Software nach Vertragsende weder an Microsoft zurückzugeben noch zu vernichten (vgl. hierzu Ziff. 10 lit. c des Microsoft Select-Vertrages und Loewenheim in Schricker, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 1999, § 69c Rn. 34).

Dem Eintritt der Erschöpfungswirkung stehen Regelungen in dem Microsoft Select-Vertrag nicht entgegen.

Zwar regelt Ziff. 9 des Vertrages im Einzelnen, inwieweit eine Lizenzübertragung zulässig sei, wobei eine Übertragung von Lizenzen insbesondere von einer schriftlichen Zustimmung von Microsoft abhängig gemacht wird. Der letzte Satz von Ziff. 9 lit. a lautet sodann wie folgt:

Letzterer vertraglicher Regelung steht indes die Tatsache entgegen, dass es sich bei der Erschöpfung um zwingendes Recht handelt, das nicht vertraglich abbedungen werden kann (vgl. HansOLG Bremen WRP 1997, S. 573 ff. (S. 575); OLG Düsseldorf MMR 1998, S. 417; Grützmaker in Wandtke/Bullinger, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 2006, § 69c Rn. 38; Loewenheim in Schricker, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 1999, § 69c Rn. 32; Sosnítza in K&R 2006, S. 206 ff. (S. 210); Marly in Softwareüberlassungsverträge, 4. Auflage 2004, S. 461 (Rn. 1069); Schuppert/Greissinger in CR 2005, S. 81 ff. (S. 83 unter Ziff. IV 1)).

Ziff. 9 des Microsoft Select-Vertrages kommt demnach keinesfalls eine dingliche Wirkung zu, die zur Folge hätte, dass der Ersterwerber nur ein in Bezug auf die Möglichkeit der Weiterveräußerung beschränktes Recht an der ihm überlassenen Software erlangen würde und nur in diesem Umfang eine Erschöpfung eintreten könnte (vgl. hierzu BGH CR 2000, S. 651 ff. (S. 652 und 653) und Schuppert/Greissinger in CR 2005, S. 81 ff. (S. 85-87)).

Aber auch eine schuldrechtliche Wirkung von Ziff. 9 des Microsoft Select-Vertrages ist fraglich, kann hier im Ergebnis jedoch unentschieden bleiben. Die Klauseln in Ziff. 9 des Microsoft Select-Vertrages sind allgemeine Geschäftsbedingungen im Sinne von § 305 Abs. 1 Satz 1 BGB, handelt es sich bei diesen doch um von Microsoft vorformulierte Vertragsbedingungen, die Microsoft seinem jeweiligen Vertragspartner bei Vertragsschluss stellt. Ziff. 9 des Microsoft Select-Vertrages dürfte sowohl als überraschende Klausel gemäß den §§ 305 Abs. 1, 306 Abs. 1 BGB als auch als Abweichung vom – u. a. durch § 69c Nr. 3 Satz 2 UrhG geprägten – urheberrechtlichen Leitbild und den wesentlichen Rechten und Pflichten eines kaufvertraglich ausgestalteten Softwareüberlassungsvertrages gemäß den §§ 307 Abs. 1 Satz 1 und Abs. 2 Nr. 1, 306 Abs. 1 BGB nicht Vertragsbestandteil geworden bzw. unwirksam sein (vgl. HansOLG Bremen WRP 1997, S. 573 ff. (S. 576); Grützmaker in Wandtke/Bullinger, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 2006, § 69c Rn. 38; Sosnítza in K&R 2006, S. 206 ff. (S. 210); Marly in Softwareüberlassungsverträge, 4. Auflage 2004, S. 461 (Rn. 1069)).

Soweit zur bestimmungsgemäßen Benutzung der Software noch Handlungen im Sinne von § 69c Nr. 1 UrhG – sei es durch den Ersterwerber, soweit der Zweiterwerber keine eigene Masterkopie in Bezug auf die in Rede stehende Software hat, oder durch den Zweiterwerber – erforderlich sind, vermittelt § 69d Abs. 1 UrhG letzteren hierfür eine gesetzliche „implied licence“ (vgl. Grützmacher in Wandtke/Bullinger, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 2006, § 69d Rn. 3 und 4). Eine Zustimmung des Rechtsinhabers ist insoweit demnach nicht erforderlich. Nach Eintritt der Erschöpfung analog § 69c Nr. 3 Satz 2 UrhG sind sowohl Erst- als auch Zweiterwerber zur Verwendung der Software Berechtigte im Sinne von § 69d Abs. 1 a. E. UrhG. Berechtigt ist auch ein Erwerber, dessen Erwerb gegen ein (lediglich) schuldrechtlich wirkendes Weitergabeverbot verstößt (vgl. Grützmacher in Wandtke/Bullinger, Urheberrecht, 2. Auflage 2006, § 69d Rn. 27). In Bezug auf den Ersterwerber stehen dem auch keine „besonderen vertraglichen Bestimmungen“ aus dem Microsoft Select-Vertrag entgegen. Hat der Zweiterwerber keine eigene Masterkopie in Bezug auf die in Rede stehende Software, können ihm – dinglich wirksam – von dem Ersterwerber zuvor gemäß Ziff. 8 lit. a des Microsoft Select-Vertrages hergestellte Datenträger überlassen werden.

II.

Der von der Antragstellerin geltend gemachte Unterlassungsanspruch folgt auch nicht aus § 3 UWG unter dem Gesichtspunkt des Ausnutzens fremden Vertragsbruchs.

Zum einen ist das Vorliegen eines Vertragsbruchs fraglich, da erhebliche Zweifel an der Wirksamkeit von Ziff. 9 des Microsoft Select-Vertrages bestehen.

Zum anderen wirken vertragliche Rechte und Pflichten nur relativ und nicht absolut. Die bloße Verletzung vertraglicher Pflichten hat im Grundsatz keine wettbewerbsrechtlichen Konsequenzen. Das Ausnutzen fremden Vertragsbruchs ist grundsätzlich zulässig, sofern es nicht auf der Initiative des Ausnutzenden beruht – sog. Verleiten zum Vertragsbruch, wofür hier nichts dargetan ist – oder, sofern nicht besondere Umstände bei der Missachtung der vertraglichen Regelung hinzukommen (vgl. HansOLG, Beschluss vom 31. März 2006 zum Az. 3 U 253/05, S. 4-5). Auch das Vorliegen solcher besonderer Umstände ist hier nicht ersichtlich (vgl. hierzu auch BGH CR 2000, S. 651 ff. (S. 654))

Mit der Vergabe mehrerer Lizenzen mittels Übergabe einer Masterkopie erschöpft sich das Verbreitungsrecht an diesen Lizenzen analog § 69c Nr. 3 Satz 2 UrhG. Erwerb und Weiterveräußerung solcher Lizenzen sind dinglich wirksam.

III.

Die Kostenentscheidung beruht auf § 91 ZPO.

Die Entscheidung über die vorläufige Vollstreckbarkeit beruht auf den §§ 708 Nr. 6, 711 Sätze 1 und 2 ZPO.

Wat is precies een OEM-licentie?

Geachte mevrouw/heer,

Van onze klanten krijgen we regelmatig de vraag waar een licentie nu eigenlijk uit bestaat. Om eventuele onduidelijkheden over licenties weg te nemen, willen we u graag via deze korte brief informeren.

Een OEM-licentie is onlosmakelijk verbonden met het gebruik van een PC. Daarom is én blijft een OEM-licentie PC-gebonden. Een OEM-licentie bestaat uit 3 componenten: de originele CD-rom, een daarbij behorende sticker en een softwarecertificaat. Het softwarecertificaat is een bewijs dat de verstrekte licentie origineel is, maar het certificaat apart is geen geldige licentie! De verkoop van deze losse componenten is in strijd met de licentie bepalingen.

Voor uitgebreide informatie over OEM-licenties en andere licentievormen verwijs ik u graag naar www.microsoft.nl/licenties/ of neem contact op met één van onze geautoriseerde distributeurs:

Microsoft woest over verkoop tweedehands software

AMSTERDAM - Het Duitse bedrijfje Usedsoft heeft zich de toom van softwarereus Microsoft op de hals gehaald door handel te drijven in gebruikte software.

Het is de softwarereus in het verkeerde keelgat geschoten dat het Duitse bedrijfje dat zo ongeveer vanuit een garagebox in München opereert op grote schaal gebruikte softwarelicenties aan de man brengt. Het gaat om software die ooit door grote bedrijven of gemeenten als volumelicentie met daarbij behorende forse kortingen is aangeschaft en nu door Usedsoft los of in kleinere partijen wordt verkocht.

Microsoft heeft in een haastig bijeen geroepen persconferentie in München laten weten dat men van mening is dat één en ander een enorme inbreuk is op de verkoopvoorwaarden waaronder de software destijds werd geleverd, zo viel in de Duitse krant Handelsblatt te lezen.

Natuurlijk is er al langer sprake van het verkopen van gebruikte software via bijvoorbeeld kanalen zoals marktplaats en speurders, maar dan gaat het nimmer om grote hoeveelheden. Maar in de zaak rond Usedsoft gaat het om grote organisaties zoals de stad München (die op Linux overging), en supermarktcconcern Edeka (in Nederland bekend als grootinkoper op groentenvellingen) en mobiele-telefonie aanbieder O2 die hun 'oude' niet meer in gebruik zijnde bedrijfslicenties voor software aan Usedsoft hebben verkocht. Software die vervolgens door Usedsoft weer op de tweedehandsmarkt, aan bijvoorbeeld het midden- en kleinbedrijf, maar ook aan particulieren wordt verkocht.

Usedsoft-oprichter ingenieur Peter Schneider ziet het anders: "deze nieuwe campagne van Microsoft tegen de handel in gebruikte software is een nieuwe poging van deze monopolist om de markt geheel voor zichzelf te houden, en mensen die zich op dezelfde markt begeven te criminaliseren."

Microsoft zegt dat kopers van dergelijke software door hen worden beschouwd als zouden zij illegale kopieën van de Microsoft software gebruiken. Volgens analisten haalt Microsoft dit zware geschut uit de kast omdat men vreest dat er met de komst van het nieuwe besturingssysteem Vista nu veel gebruikte XP-licenties tegen hele aantrekkelijke prijzen op de markt zullen komen, en dat zou nu juist ten koste kunnen gaan van de verkopen van Vista.

Zowel Microsoft als Usedsoft beweren beide het recht aan hun zijde te hebben. Usedsoft-chef Peter Schneider zegt: "Microsoft blaft wel heel hard, maar het bedrijf heeft voorlopig nog niet gebeten, en dat zegt wel genoeg..."

Microsoft verwacht overigens niet dat er voor 2010 een duidelijke uitspraak van het hoogste Duitse gerechtshof zal liggen die klaarheid brengt in deze zaak. Hierbij is het overigens wel frappant dat niet Microsoft, maar uitgerekend concurrent Oracle, de zaak tegen Usedsoft tot voor de hoogste rechter heeft gebracht.

Usedsoft jubelt über klares Urteil

Handel mit gebrauchten Microsoft-Volumenzlizenzen ist legal

15.05.2008 | Redakteur: Harry Jacob

Endlich hat Usedsoft ein Urteil erstritten, das die Zulässigkeit des Handels mit gebrauchten Microsoft-Lizenzen eindeutig bejaht.

Das Landgericht München I hat den Handel mit »gebrauchten« Microsoft-Lizenzen grundsätzlich für rechtmäßig erklärt. Der Hersteller könne nicht gegen die Aufspaltung von Volumenzlizenzen einschreiten, bei denen dem Ersterwerber eine Masterkopie überlassen wurde. Auch die Übertragung mittels notarieller Bestätigungen, die Usedsoft im vorliegenden Fall gewählt hatte, sei nicht zu beanstanden.

Wenn es um den Handel mit gebrauchter Software geht, beschleicht viele ein müßiges Gefühl. Ist es legal? Macht man sich strafbar? Könnte man Geld verlieren, weil der Hersteller erfolgreich dagegen klagt? So denken viele potenzielle Kunden und lassen lieber die Finger davon. Schuld daran sind vor allem die Software-Hersteller, allen voran Microsoft und Oracle, die immer wieder betonen, dass es ihrer Genehmigung bedürfe, Software-Lizenzen, insbesondere aus Volumenverträgen, zu übertragen – und diese Genehmigung nur in den wenigsten Fällen zu erhalten sei.

Die HHS Usedsoft GmbH hat trotzdem sein Geschäft auf den Handel mit gebrauchten Lizenzen aufgebaut, hatte bereits zahlreiche juristische Scharmützel zu bestehen, und kann nun ein Urteil vorweisen, das endlich bestätigt, dass die eigenen Geschäfte legal sind.

Seltsamer Kunde

Der Fall begann kurios: eine Firma hatte Gebrauchtsoftware im Wert von über 38.000 Euro bestellt und per Rechnung geliefert bekommen. Die Lizenzen wurden weiterverkauft, aber Usedsoft bekam kein Geld und klagte deshalb.

Der Firma seien Bedenken über die Rechtmäßigkeit gekommen, führte der Anwalt der Beklagten aus. Deshalb habe man sich an Microsoft gewandt. In einer ersten Stellungnahme behauptete die Firma, von Microsoft die Auskunft bekommen zu haben, dass alle Volumenzlizenzen die Übertragung nicht gestatten würden. Später trug die beklagte Firma vor, es gebe unterschiedliche Lizenzbestimmungen, die nur teilweise der Übertragung auf Dritte entgegenstünden. Zudem bemängelte die Firma, keine Original-Datenträger bekommen zu haben.

Usedsoft jubelt über klares Urteil

Handel mit gebrauchten Microsoft-Volumenlizenzen ist legal

15.05.2008 | Redakteur: Harry Jacob

Kein Wunder, dass Usedsoft bei dieser Faktenlage Recht bekam. Der Weiterverkauf sei eine Bestätigung gewesen, dass die Beklagte die Lieferung akzeptiert habe, deshalb müsse sie die Ware auch bezahlen, urteilten die Münchener Richter (Az. 30 O 8684/07 vom 28. 11. 2007).

Doch damit nicht genug. In der Urteilsbegründung, die erst seit April 2008 in schriftlicher Form vorliegt, stellte das Landgericht München I in aller Form klar, dass die Übertragung der Lizenzen auch rechtmäßig gewesen war. Diese Frage war trotz der zahlreichen Verfahren vorher noch nicht geklärt worden. Für Usedsoft ist damit endgültig sichergestellt, dass der Handel mit Gebrauchtssoftware legal ist. Das Urteil ist inzwischen rechtskräftig.

Kein Vergleich mit »Oracle-Urteil«

In dem Urteil vom Landgericht Hamburg, auf das die Münchner Kammer ausdrücklich Bezug nahm (Az. 315 O 343/06 vom 29. 6. 2006, bestätigt vom OLG Hamburg am 7. 2. 2007, Az. 5 U 140/06) wurde zwar eine analoge Argumentation in der Begründung zu finden, doch ging es in der Sache nur um die Frage, ob die Werbung von Usedsoft wettbewerbswidrig gewesen sei, aber nicht darum, ob das Geschäftsmodell an und für sich legal sei.

Das haben nun die Münchener Richter bejaht, zumindest unter den Bedingungen des vorliegenden Falles. Die Situation stellte sich wie folgt dar:

- ▶ Der Erstkunde hatte die Software-Lizenzen von Microsoft im Rahmen eines Volumenlizenzvertrags erworben
- ▶ Bestandteil des Vertrages mit Microsoft war die Überlassung einer Masterkopie der Software

Damit, so stellte das Gericht klar, ist der Fall deutlich vom »Oracle-Urteil« zu unterscheiden (Landgericht München, Az. 7 O 7061/06 vom 15. 3. 2007). Dort war die Software lediglich per Download zur Verfügung gestellt worden. Den Kunden seien »nicht abtretbare Nutzungsrechte mit dinglich wirkender Beschränkung der Nutzungsbefugnis« eingeräumt worden, eine Weiterveräußerung hätte zu einer »Vervielfältigung des Werkes« geführt, da der Ersterwerber eine Kopie auf seinen Servern behalten hätte.

Usedsoft jubelt über klares Urteil

Handel mit gebrauchten Microsoft-Volumenlizenzen ist legal

15.05.2008 | Redakteur: Harry Jacob

Microsoft ist außen vor

Im vorliegenden Fall dagegen habe Microsoft mit der Weitergabe der Masterkopie sein Verbreitungsrecht erschöpft, urteilte das Landgericht München mit Verweis auf Paragraph 69 c Nr. 3 Satz 2 Urheberrechtsgesetz. Sprich: Der Softwarekonzern kann nicht weiter mitreden, was mit der Software passiert, solange sich die Zahl der Lizenzen nicht erhöht. Im Amtsdeutsch: »die eingeräumten Nutzungsrechte nicht vervielfältigt werden«, wobei jedes einzelne Nutzungsrecht als »eigenständig zu beurteilendes Vervielfältigungsstück« zu behandeln sei.

So habe der Ersterwerber die Lizenzen des Volumenvertrages aufsplitten dürfen und auch rechtmäßig Kopien des originalen Datenträgers, der sogenannten »Masterkopie« angefertigt können, da diese für den Verkauf benötigt wurden.

Das Gericht sah es auch als hinlänglich nachgewiesen an, dass die Zahl der Lizenzen bei diesem Geschäft nicht vermehrt worden war. Usedsoft hatte alle Schritte durch notarielle Bestätigungen dokumentiert und dem Käufer gegenüber nachgewiesen:

- ▶ die ursprüngliche Inhaberschaft des Erstkäufers
- ▶ die Löschung der zu veräußernden Lizenzen beim Verkäufer
- ▶ deren Übertragung an Usedsoft inklusive der zugehörigen Lizenznummer
- ▶ und die Entrichtung des Kaufpreises

Das Gericht verallgemeinerte sogar: »Es ist weder vorgetragen noch ersichtlich, dass das Geschäftsmodell der Klägerin [Usedsoft] zu einer Zunahme der Vervielfältigungsstücke des Werkes führt.«

Das Gericht vermerkte zudem ausdrücklich, dass die Beklagte nach eigenem Bekunden mit Microsoft Kontakt aufgenommen hatte und der Softwarekonzern somit über den Fall in Kenntnis gesetzt war, aber keine Verletzung des Urheberrechts geltend gemacht hatte.

Neuer Schwung

Für Usedsoft ist damit ein wichtiger Meilenstein erreicht, der die Kundenansprache auf ein neues Fundament stellt. Die hatte Microsoft gerade in einem Fall erfolgreich gestoppt. Zwar wird Usedsoft gegen die Verfügung Widerspruch einlegen, doch werden sich künftige Vertriebsaktionen auf das neue Urteil beziehen.

Für Usedsoft von entscheidender Bedeutung ist die Tatsache, dass das Urteil auf das Urheberrecht abstellt, und zudem am Gerichtsstand München erreicht wurde, wo sowohl Microsoft als auch Oracle angesiedelt sind.

So gestärkt sieht sich der Händler von Gebrauchtsoftware gut gerüstet für weitere Erfolge. So hatte kürzlich das Land NRW eine Ausschreibung aufgrund der Beschwerde von Usedsoft zurückgezogen, teilte das Unternehmen mit. Die Ausschreibung mit einem Volumen von 10 Millionen Euro habe auf einen Rahmenvertrag mit Microsoft abgestellt und deshalb nur Microsoft-Vertragshändler angesprochen. Bei einer Neuausschreibung wolle man sich beteiligen. Da kommt die Bestätigung, dass das Geschäftsmodell legal ist, gerade recht.

PRESS INFO: MICROSOFT IS AGAIN DEFEATED BY USED SOFT

Microsoft's attempt to criminalize the trade with 'used' software has failed again. The Munich Chief Department of Public Prosecution dismissed a complaint against the dismissal of the criminal proceedings against usedSoft without any restrictions which had been lodged by the software monopolist. Thus, Microsoft's repeatedly uttered reproach that the trade with used software through the company-usedSoft would be the same as dissemination of pirate copies has now been finally disproven. After such dismissal of Microsoft's complaint, Microsoft obviously admitted its defeat as it waived its right to any further appeal. The dismissal of the criminal proceedings has therefore become final and absolute.

IT-BUSINESS: IT-BUSINESS: THE TRADE WITH USED MICROSOFT VOLUME LICENCES IS LAWFUL

The Regional Court of Munich declared the trade with "used" Microsoft licences to be lawful in principle, reports the prestigious trade journal IT-Business. The splitting-up of volume licences is lawful in cases when a master copy was surrendered to the first-time buyer. Until now, software developers have continuously made "used" software customers feel uncertain about the legal situation. According to IT-Business, the companies Microsoft and Oracle are to be blamed for it in the first instance. They used to emphasize again and again that their approval was required when transferring software licences, particularly when transferring software licences originating from volume contracts. Yet, the Regional Court of Munich judged that the developer's right of distribution would be exhausted after transmission of a master copy. IT-Business emphasises that Microsoft would no longer have a say as to what is going to happen to its software after the first-time sale, unless such licences are copied illegally.

CHANNELPARTNER: USEDSoft IS ALLOWED TO TRADE WITH MICROSOFT SOFTWARE

By means of a judgment which has already become final and absolute, the Regional Court of Munich decided that individual software licences originating from Microsoft volume licence contracts can be resold "second-hand". IT-Medium Channelpartner reports that this means in concrete terms that in cases when Microsoft sells several rights of use contained in one volume package which includes for example only one master CD, the right of distribution is still exhausted regarding each individual licence. As a consequence, each of them can be resold individually and not only in form of the original package. With this judgment, the court rejected Microsoft's legal viewpoint that the buyer of a volume licence does not acquire individual licences, but only a right of reproduction.

BGH (Federal Court of Justice): SOFTWARE CAN BE RESOLD

The legal owner of an object may resell it, independently of any prior owner. This clear statement is applicable to software as well as to any other possession.

Developers

Meanwhile, also the software developers gradually acknowledge the explicit legal position. Yet, this has not always been the case, as for many years they tried to restrain the resale of software licences through interpretations of the copyrights.

BGH Decisión (Federal Court of Justice)

Since July 6th, 2000, however, it has been made clear that with the initial sale of the licences, software developers also cede the right of resale. That day, in a decision against Microsoft, the Federal Court of Justice pronounced that the developers' copyright "expires" the very moment the software "is brought into transit", i.e. sold, for the first time.

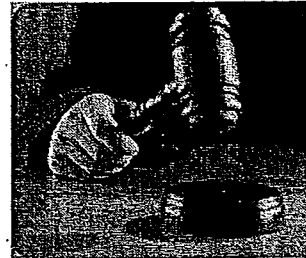

Judgment rendered by the Regional Court of Munich (file number 30 O 8684/07)

Individual software licences originating from Microsoft volume licence contracts are allowed to be resold "second hand". This decision was rendered by the Regional Court of Munich I within the scope of a lawsuit regarding purchase price payment, also including the reasons for the judgment in writing, dated April 4, 2008. This judgment has become final and absolute. By means of this judgment, the court rejected Microsoft's legal viewpoint that the buyer of any volume licences does not acquire individual licences, but only a right of reproduction. In this regard, the Regional Court of Munich explicitly refers to the judgment rendered by the Regional Court of Hamburg which had already decided in June 2006 that the resale of individual Microsoft licences originating from any volume licence contracts would be admissible (file number 315 O 343/06). The Regional Court of Munich shared such legal opinion.

The core statements provided in the reasons for the judgment are as follows:

- The court decided "that the sale respectively the vending of individual Microsoft software licences which had been sold within the scope of volume licence contracts is basically possible in an effective way even without Microsoft's consent." That means in concrete terms: If Microsoft sells several rights of use contained in one volume package which includes for example only one master CD, the right of distribution is still exhausted regarding each individual licence. As a consequence, each of them may be resold individually, and not only in form of the original package.
- In the past Microsoft repeatedly referred to the litigation between Oracle and usedSoft which is pending before court. Pleading that this judgment would also be decisive for Microsoft licences. By means of this "Oracle judgment", the Regional Court of Munich had decided that Oracle software transmitted online must not be resold, whereby this judgment has not yet become final and absolute. In this context, the Regional Court of Munich explicitly stated that these cases could not be compared with one another: "In the present case it is undisputed that - unlike the case which was decided by the Regional Court of Munich I - there was no software sold which was downloaded via internet. It is rather true that the plaintiff sold Microsoft software to the defendant which had been made available by the company Microsoft as volume licence including a master copy."
- Moreover, the court emphasised in the reasons for the judgment that Microsoft had obviously been aware of such licence assignment in the present case leading to such judgment, but forbore from filing an action for copyright violation. Thus, on page 9 of the judgment it reads as follows: "Based on the defendant's pleadings (...) it also turned out that the company Microsoft neither asserted any claims towards the defendant nor towards the final customer of the defendant for having violated Microsoft's copyright, although the defendant got in contact with the company Microsoft according to the defendant's own pleadings."

The judgment is based on an action against an IT company which was brought before court by the company usedSoft, the leading European used software trader. The company being sued had bought used Microsoft licences from the company usedSoft, but refused to pay after delivery. The company used its concerns regarding legal security as an excuse not to pay, as the bought software originated from split-up volume licences. The Regional Court of Munich decided that the company being sued must completely pay the agreed purchase price.

Decision of the Hamburg Regional Court (File reference 315 O 343/06)

In a verdict pronounced on June 29, 2006, the Hamburg Regional Court has confirmed that the resale of "used" software is fully legitimate. According to this, the exhaustion rule, based on which the copyright of a software producer expires the very moment the merchandise is brought into transit for the first time, can also be applied explicitly to single licences out of volume contracts - independently from any contractual restrictions.

In the following you find the core statements of the court opinion:

- "The resale/alienation of single Microsoft software licences ceded priorly within volume licence contracts such as Select contracts, is effective also without the consent of Microsoft."
- As to the reasoning of the plaintiff, according to which the splitting of volume licences is illegal due to the favourable terms granted in this kind of transaction, the verdict states as follows: "Microsoft's remuneration interest is not to be considered - in fact, (it is) entirely irrelevant regarding the occurrence of a copyright exhaustion."
- In the Judges' view it does not make a difference by which distribution way the initial buyer has received the software: "If the non-physical transfer substitutes the delivery of a physical workpiece, the exhaustion has to occur as well concerning the immaterially produced workpiece."

In addition, the judges point out that clauses within the licence contracts restraining the resale of software are ineffective, stating that the exhaustion rule is "a compulsory law that may not be contractually waived."

Article by Prof. Dr. Friedrich Ruffler in ÖBl, March 2008

Prof. Dr. Friedrich Ruffler, Professor of Company Law working for the Institute for Law of the Alpen-Adria-University of Klagenfurt, established in an article on basic principles that the resale of software would be lawful in Austria as well. This would not only apply to cases in which software was acquired online, but also to cases in which individual licences were split up from volume licences and resold. This article was published in March 2008 in Österreichische Blätter für gewerblichen Rechtsschutz und Urheberrecht (Austrian papers for legal protection of business and copyright law) under www.manz.at/oeb1 leading Austrian trade magazine for copyright law.

Result of the analysis:

- The exhaustion rule applies not only to the sale of software recorded on data carriers, but also to software transferred online. It is exclusively decisive that a permanent transfer of right of use and enjoyment against payment of a remuneration took place - meaning a software purchase. This is clearly based on Article 4 lit c of the European software-RL. Under Austrian law immaterial things, such as for example online-transferred software, may be subject of a contract of purchase as well.
- The exhaustion rule also applies to cases when individual licences are sold out of a volume licence, as the initial sale leads to an exhaustion regarding each individual licence. This is based on the analogical application of off- and online distribution: If a software developer sells 50 disks, the right of distribution regarding all these pieces is clearly exhausted, so that only a part of them can be resold. This state of facts is also applicable to volume licences. It does not play any role whether the initial buyer was granted any discount when buying them.
- The exhaustion effects of section 16 paragraph 3 of the copyright law are imperative. That means that they cannot be repealed by contractual stipulations. Any commitment under the law of obligations of the initial buyer of software provided in any General Terms and Conditions of Trade or in any pre-printed forms of contracts are invalid. It violates section 879 paragraph 3 of the ABGB, as it constitutes a grossly disadvantaging incidental provision.
- By selling the software, the initial buyer is losing his entitlement as user, while the second hand buyer becomes the party entitled. In case that the second hand user needs to effect acts of reproduction in order to install the software, such acts are covered by section 40 d paragraph 2 of the copyright law.

Expertise by Prof. Dr. Thomas Hoeren as of 12-04-2007

In its disputed "Oracle" judgement (reference number 7 O 7061/06), the Munich Regional Court has decided against the trade with oracle licenses assigned online. The leading German copyright expert Prof. Dr. Thomas Hoeren has scrutinised the court opinion, reasoning in his expertise as follows:

- The exhaustion rule of German copyright can analogously be applied to software assigned online. The precondition for this analogy is given on the one hand due to the similar focus of interests: just as in the resale of a physical reproduction piece, in the online assignment the rights owner/bailee has the possibility to charge a fair compensation in return for the license. Besides, we can act here on the assumption of a plan adversity of the legal loophole, i.e. when formulating the exhaustion principle, the legislator apparently was not aware of the problem coming along with the online license assignment. Especially Article 3 Paragraph 3 and Recital 29 of the German Copyright Principle alleged by the Munich Regional Court do not conflict with the latter.

- The copyright exhaustion rule is also applicable to the reproduction right of the originator. In practice, an obverse decision would lead to the impracticable and rather senseless result that in a resale the data carrier of the first materialisation – which normally is the entire hard disk – would have to be copied. Yet, such a regulation would inhibit the software tradability in an unreasonable manner.
- According to the Munich Regional Court, applying the exhaustion rule conflicts with the fact that otherwise integrative usage rights would be splitted. However, multiple licenses de facto only represent a major number of software assignments and not an unsplittable standardised right. Selling licenses in packages is simply a question of practicability. A prevention of the independent sale of multiple licenses would lead in the first place to a hedge in the pricing policy of many software enterprises. Yet, protecting their profit interest to the extent the Munich Regional Court stipulates cannot be in accordance with the purpose of copyright.
- A software producer must not restrain contractually the resale of the merchandise by the initial purchaser. A resale prohibition contradicts with the fact that the copyright exhaustion rule is a compulsory law that cannot be contracted out. Moreover it is inconsistent with the basic principle of a sales agreement if the initial purchaser is contractually enjoined to deal with his property the way he wants.

Expertise of Prof. Dr. Thomas Hoeren from 17-02-2006

In his expertise, the leading German copyright law expert, Prof. Dr. Thomas Hoeren, treats the issue whether software acquired by download may be resold like software that has reached the customer through packaged media.

Quintessence

- The distribution manner of software has no effect on the purchaser's rights. The first purchaser can therefore also resell programs acquired via download, and for which he has no physically packaged media, without the vendor's permission.
- The purchaser has an installed version of the program on his computer, not just through the purchase of packaged media, but also through the purchase of downloaded software. Therefore, both methods of distribution lead to the same result.
- The "Exhaustion Rule" in copyright law is effective not just for the distribution of packaged media, but also for other methods of delivery, such as download.
- The customer who purchased his software by download retains the same rights as a purchaser of packaged software: He can also resell the purchased programs at any time without the vendor's permission.

Supplemental expertise of Prof. Dr. Thomas Hoeren from 06-02-2006

In order to distribute programs originally obtained by download, it is necessary to copy the program, since no CD or other media exists. In his expertise, Prof. Dr. Thomas Hoeren investigates the question of whether the second owner has the right to do so. On top of that, the copyright expert checks whether the vendors can forbid the resale of downloaded software in their General Terms of Use.

Quintessence

- The second owner also has the right to download the software from the vendor's server and install it. A limitation on the resale of software purchased by download is not valid.
- With the acquisition of a licence, the buyer has the right to use the program. This means that he may make any copies – without the need of getting permission from the vendor – necessary for the use of the program.
- Just like the first owner, he therefore has the right to download and install the program in question.
- Any clause in the vendor's General Terms forbidding resale is just as invalid as a limitation on the usage rights of the downloaded computer programs. This would place the customer at an incommensurate disadvantage. Such General Terms are therefore invalid.

Expertise of Andreas Meisterernst from 28-01-2003

In one of his expertises, the Munich attorney at law Andreas Meisterernst has treated the issue whether the trade with used software is legally questionable.

Quintessence: The decisions of experts in the BGH judgement and in all other legal regulations are clear:

- The buyer or seller of used software is legally on the safe side.
- Even when the developer's terms and conditions contain a clause forbidding resale, this is invalid for the end users and consumers.
- With used software, the buyer purchases many of the developer's guarantees (support and maintenance) at the same time – exactly the same services given to the original customer, who bought the software directly from the developer or vendor.
- When software is resold, the developers remain the owners and can take action against third parties who modify their software. They cannot, however, limit or regulate who the software may be resold to or the price for the transaction.

- At the time of resale an unbroken licence chain back to the developer must be proven to exist, and also that the software is no longer used at its original place of usage. – This responsibility is provided by usedSoft as the middle man.

Beste Samir & Gunnar,

MCE coupons: Staan sinds een paar weken al niet meer online op de OEM website.

Office 2007 OEM: De OEM verkoop van de nieuwe versie van Office zal gaan plaatsvinden via Medialess License Kits (MLK's). Die mogen tot maximaal 90 dagen na aanschaf van de PC door de eindgebruiker worden aangeschaft bij de reseller/retailer (tegen de OEM prijs + marge kanaal; hetzelfde als nu dus); er ontstaat kortom een veel langere periode om Office OEM te verkopen, nl van direct bij de PC t/m 90 dagen na aanschaf PC.

Echter: Voorwaarde om de MLK te laten werken is dat er de Office Ready image op de verkochte PC staat; hoe kan immers een MLK werken zonder bits en bytes? Deze Office Ready image is te verkrijgen door het installeren van de OPK master kit voor Office – of natuurlijk omdat de A-merk pc (HP, Toshiba, Acer etc.) deze Office Ready image al bevat. Deze OPK Master Kit bevat dus geen Office licentie maar is slechts een middel om Office Ready op de PC te installeren. De Office Ready Image bevat ondermeer een 60 dagen Trial versie van Office Professional.

De OPK Master Kit zal de eerste 4 maanden tegen kostprijs + shipping & handling door de distributeur kunnen worden geleverd. Een System Builder heeft er per taal in principe maar 1 nodig:

- System Builder orders OPK Master Kit from Distributor, or, beginning April 1, 2007, System Builder can order OPK Master Kit online via MOSB (= www.microsoft.com/oem)
- A System Builder should purchase only one OPK Master Kit for each language / per location they will install

Four Month Promotion Period/Pricing for OPK Master Kit

- During the four month promotion period, the OPK Master Kit will be offered at $0 royalty + COGS + Shipping & Handling
- After the four month promotion period, OPK Master Kit will be offered at $250 USD royalty + COGS + Shipping & Handling
 - o Via MOSB, first three copies of OPK Master Kit per System Builder will be sold at COGS + Shipping & Handling; additional copies will be $250 USD royalty + COGS + Shipping & Handling

De OEM business van CTI verandert mi niet; met dien verstande dat het in ons aller belang is dat de resellers ervoor zorgen dat op al hun pc's een Office Ready image staat. Anders zal het leveren van een Office MLK weinig zinvol zijn.

Groet,

Erik Dams

Importance: High

Bedankt voor je tip dat MCE + coupon NL schaars is/wordt maar die coupons kun je gewoon downloaden als je oem partner bent. www.microsoft.nl/oem of zoiets, je moet je wel even inschrijven als systembuilder want eindgebruikers kunnen daar uiteraard niet in.

Voor de rest maak ik me meer zorgen om het hoe op de markt brengen van die nieuwe office 2007 oem. Het schijnt dat sub-distri's zoals wij alleen maar max. 3 masterkits kunnen bestellen zoals een normale reseller en dat wij dus wel die andere kits kunnen verkopen maar als een reseller compleet wilt zijn moeten we hem naar de distributeur verwijzen als onze max 3 kits op zijn. Zoals je begrijpt is dit voor ons onwerkbaar en volgens mij is dit ook tegen alle mededinging wetgeving in. (art. 82 en 83)

Graag hoor ik van jullie en het liefst MS zelf of dit het geval is voor partijen als ons die veel hebben "geinvesteerd" om nu alles weg te zien lopen naar de distri's, wij wilden namelijk dit jaar onze omzet bij jullie minimaal gaan verdubbelen door marktaandeel "te kopen" (lees met verlies levering en investeren), dit gaat natuurlijk niet gebeuren als deze door situatie geschets door Hugo Leyten van MS werkelijkheid wordt. Graag verneem ik het officiële standpunt van MS en ook jullie hier in, het kan toch niet zo zijn dat wij na al onze aanpassingen, afspraken en compliance geen OEM meer kunnen verkopen ??

Met vriendelijke groet,

Samir

Is Microsoft Crazy - ripping the Dutch ?

Posted by Hilbert Hagedoorn on December 2, 2006 - 5:47 PM

Microsoft Netherlands has just released some more information in the final prices of Windows Vista. Now you all know that Europe and specifically the Netherlands is a very expensive place to live in with our complex EU rules and local taxes. Things have really gotten out of hand. While I expected Microsoft's Vista to be a tad more expensive compared to the rest of the world I honestly to God never expected the shame you are about to witness.

The prices for some reason are excessively high, although MS suggested the prices MIGHT not be finalized just yet to cover their hairy asses. Now if you want to understand why piracy is such a big thing in Europe .. then here's your reason and a good reason to see it continued, get a grasp of something as you will get scared:

Vista Ultimate will cost 549 EUR; which is 730.80 USD ... In comparison the US version is selling for 303.24 USD.

Vista Basic will cost 279 EUR which is 371.38 USD .. that version in the US will cost 151 USD. Let me place the Dutch pricing model in a little table for you to get a better overview:

Version	Upgrade NL	Retail N	Retail NL USD	Retails VS
Vista Ultimate	369 EUR	549 EUR	730.80 USD	303.24 USD
Vista Business	279 EUR	409 EUR	544.47 USD	227.24 USD
Vista Home Premium	219 EUR	329 EUR	437.97 USD	181.64 USD
Vista Home Basic	129 EUR	279 EUR	371.38 USD	151.24 USD

Let me just end by saying .. Microsoft .. are you nuts ?

Not only microsoft is ripping us of our money but even retailers and other greedy ghouls in shop. Just too bad they don't sell a lot soft for reasonable price, but they will sell a very little amount for a very high price, too bad US prices aren't same here.

I can only imagine that the prices will be comparable in Sweden. The reasons for this though, at least in Sweden, is our high taxes. Labour is expensive and sales tax is high which adds to the cost of which Microsoft has no control over.

I hope they release a student license before I graduate, the Win XP Pro student license is darn cheap, at least here in Sweden (free in some cases).

The NL-Prices in the news are in a strange way similar to the RETAIL(!)-Prices in Germany ;)

Little explanation to the following: geizhals.at/deutschland is a pricecomparer, comparing many onlineshops in germany and austria. So you see prices below the price recommendation of Microsoft.

The Retail-Version:
<http://geizhals.at/deutschland/a216051.html>
Vista Home Basic: starts at 201 EUR

The DSP/SB (Systembuilder, OEM -> the versions, which every casual person buys)
<http://geizhals.at/deutschland/a227877.html>
Vista Home Basic: starts at 79 EUR

Vista Home Premium DSP/SB starts at 100 EUR

I dont know how expensive Windows XP in NL is, but as you can see the prices of Vista Home Basic and Home Premium are compareable to the prices of Windows XP Home and Windows XP Professional/Media Center Edition

Giving you a further example:
Vista Ultimate Retail starts at 460 EUR
Vista Ultimate DSP/SB starts at 170 EUR

In my opinion there is no reason for panic or headlines like "is Microsoft ripping the Dutch"

Lead Partner: Egypt Contact lead partner

Description of lead partner

Egypt's government laid down an ambitious strategy to face current challenges and strive towards future horizons. One of the programmes for continuing development is building an Information Society. The Ministry of Communications and Information Technology (MCIT) is committed to the idea that attaining this goal will stem from partnership between government and both the public and private sectors

Category / Project type

Building Block 2: Infrastructure and Readiness

- funding of universal service / access

Project title

PC for Every Home

Project description

Making the Internet affordable requires provision of affordable access devices. To increase PC use and attain the goal of one PC per three families, the Egyptian government is working in partnership with the private sector on an initiative to provide the hardware needed to get more people online.

The aim of the PC for Every Home initiative is to provide end-users with computers at prices and terms that are manageable for the average user by allowing fixed-line phone subscribers to buy a PC on a credit plan linked to their phone subscription. All PCs are sold with a pre-installed Microsoft Windows XP Operating system, and locally-developed value added software is also available.

By March 2005, 66,000 PCs had already been sold through this initiative.

Value

Not specified

Expected outcome

The target is to sell 100,000 PCs annually to lower market segments, and to open the market to Egyptian and foreign investors. By the end of 2007, fourteen million users are expected to be benefiting from four million PCs.

Egypt's PC for Every Home initiative provides skills, resources, and jobs never before available.

Bringing technology within reach for millions.

At Microsoft, our mission is to help people and businesses reach their full potential. Each day, our partners play an integral role in achieving that mission. In Egypt, partnerships are helping to provide technology to people throughout the country.

The poverty level in Egypt means that only a small percentage of people can afford a computer, and few people, if any, have any credit history. So the Egyptian government, Microsoft, and several partners developed a plan to put technology within reach of this vast population.

In 2002, the PC for Every Home initiative was launched. The initiative works to provide affordable and relevant technology solutions to people throughout Egypt. To date, Egyptians have purchased more than 300,000 computers, enabling them to gain new, marketable skills and compete for valuable jobs.

Innovative solutions improve thousands of lives.

The Egyptian government, Microsoft, Banque Misr, Intel, Telecom Egypt, and others are driving affordable technology solutions by offering creative credit programs throughout the entire country.

With the PC for Every Home initiative, Egyptians with little or no credit history can pay for their computers in small monthly installments. It's a partnership that's making a big impact.

Ashraf Mashhour, an engineer for the Ministry of Communications and Information Technology, says that the initiative has fostered financial predictability to the IT industry in Egypt and has been responsible for creating more than 5,000 new jobs.

Part of the reason for the job growth has been the inclusion of the Microsoft® Office system into every computer purchased through the initiative. Because of the program, more than 1 million Egyptians have been introduced to the Microsoft Office system, opening up prospects for them to find new, better-paying jobs. And by boosting IT skills and literacy, the Egyptian government hopes to see a corresponding increase in economic productivity and competitiveness.

"What is most important to me is that the company continues to grow, and that it helps the people around me to produce something new and great for themselves, too."

Ahmed Ezzat, who lives in the Al Aguza region of Egypt, now runs a successful Internet-based export business. With the help of the PC for Every Home initiative, Ahmed not only began a new business, he started something that benefits his entire community.

Ahmed's Web site sells Egyptian handicrafts from the Khan al-Khalili region. He sells to customers from many different parts of the world, including Canada, New Zealand, Australia, and Europe. But he makes the biggest impact in his own community.

"Since I began exporting, I am able to benefit my family, all of the workshops around me, and all of the importers," Ahmed says. "The entire community benefits from my business."

"Until recently, my business has just been me," says Ahmed. "But because it is growing, I recently hired my sister's daughter to work with me, and I will need to hire someone else very soon. What is most important to me is that the company continues to grow, that it has a good reputation, and that it helps the people around me to produce something new and great for themselves, too."

Ahmed's business is just one example of the powerful influence of technology and Egypt's PC for Every Home initiative.

Innovative partnerships make it happen

The success of the initiative depends on a network of partners working together throughout every step of the process. Egyptian consumers first learn about the initiative through newspaper ads, exhibitions, and other advertisements. They call a special phone number to learn more about the program, and to find a participating financial institution where they can apply for a loan.

Once qualified, the applicant pays a relatively small up-front fee and is given a special one-time-use credit card to purchase a computer through any of the 23 approved computer builders. The buyer chooses the hardware and the software solutions. The software options include Microsoft software, as well as software locally developed by Egyptians. The buyer can take up to 40 months to pay off the loan.

As a result, Egyptians can own a computer for as few as US$15 a month, allowing them to connect to information, skills, and resources that were previously unavailable. This means thousands of people can enjoy innovative ways of learning and growing, new job opportunities, and more ways to make their dreams a reality.

Onze ref: 55100843/753328.1

Geachte heer Sannes,

Ik verwijst naar onze eerdere contacten en overleg over de wijze waarop de Douane omgaat met informatieverstrekking aan merkhouders en de toepassing van het Voorschrift douanetaak inbreuk op intellectuele eigendomsrechten 2004.

Wij waren het eens dat de Douane geen taak of verantwoordelijkheid heeft in die gevallen waarin het niet gaat om namaakproducten.

Voorts waren wij het eens dat de Douane geen informatie over herkomst, bestemming en locatie van merkgoederen mag geven, zolang de merkhouder (nog) niet uitdrukkelijk en gemotiveerd heeft gesteld redenen te hebben om te twijfelen aan de echtheid van de betreffende merkproducten die onderwerp zijn van een vermoeden van namaak.

U heeft bij onze eerdere contacten bevestigd dat merkhouders die in strijd met de waarheid willens en wetens stellen dat er sprake is van (een vermoeden van) namaak met het oogmerk om informatie van de douane te verkrijgen, teneinde vervolgens op basis daarvan op te treden tegen, al dan niet merkinbreukmakende parallelhandel in originele producten, in het vervolg door de douane met de nodige distantie en voorzichtigheid zullen worden benaderd en geïnformeerd.

Ik ben derhalve hoogst onaangenaam verrast door het volgende geval.

Op 24 november 2005 berichtte de Douane Noord (de heer T. Bos) aan de advocaat van Microsoft (merkhouder) dat een partij van mogelijk merkinbreukmakende CD's (Microsoft Windows XP) was aangetroffen (bijlage 1).

Op verzoek van Microsoft verstrekte de Douane Noord (de heer T. Bos) op 25 november 2005 gedetailleerde informatie over de geadresseerde van deze partij goederen, alsmede de aan-gevende afzender (bijlage 2).

Ik weet niet op welke grønd Microsoft deze informatie heeft gevraagd, maar op dat moment en ook later stond vast dat het hier niet om namaak ging maar om parallelhandel. Dat is inmiddels ook door Microsoft erkend. Het beslag dat Microsoft met gebruikmaking van de door de Douane verstrekte informatie heeft gelegd werd later opgegeven. Deze informatie is evenwel ook gebruikt om onder CTI beslag te leggen op de gehele voorraad Microsoft producten (niet zijnde namaak-producten).

Deze zaak is een vervelende illustratie van de gang van zaken waarop ik eerder heb gedoeld (verstrekken van informatie aan de merkhouder zonder dat van namaak sprake is). Ook hier is civielrechtelijk beslag gelegd op grond van inbreuk op de communautaire uitputtingsregel (art. 13 A lid 9 BMW) met gebruikmaking van de door de Douane verstrekte informatie die niet verstrekt had mogen worden.

Ik ben u erkentelijk indien u deze gang van zaken in dit dossier wilt onderzoeken en de ambtenaren van de Douane wilt wijzen op de juiste toepassing van het Voorschrift 2004. Ik vind in deze zaak aanleiding u te verzoeken om Microsoft op de "zwarte lijst" te plaatsen van merkhouders die op oneigenlijke wijze aan de Douane informatie ontlokken, en daarna de passende consequenties te verbinden.

Met vriendelijke groet,

G. van der Wal

Kill Bill

Microsoft's army of lawyers was no match for a kid from Kent State.

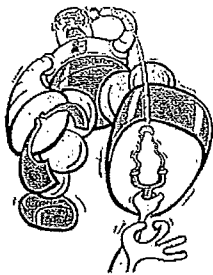

By Denise Grollmus

Published: March 30, 2005

David Zamos doesn't look as if he could single-handedly humiliate the world's largest software maker.

The well-built 21-year-old sips a jumbo cup of Starbucks coffee in the University of Akron's student union. He's looking dapper in pin-striped slacks, a navy pea coat, and a necklace of wooden beads that hugs his wide neck.

Animated image

Thanks to massive doses of caffeine, Zamos (whose name rhymes with "famous") anxiously taps his Camper lace-ups against the table. A laptop sits to his right, a fat black binder to his left.

The only thing setting him apart from the other late-night crammers is that his notebook isn't filled with study guides. It's overflowing with documents from the federal lawsuit Microsoft brought against him on December 21.

Ben Smallridge

For the past four months, Zamos has been fighting four high-powered attorneys. They claimed he violated trademark and copyright laws by selling two unopened pieces of software on eBay for $203.50.

Cleveland lawyers Robert Chudakoff and Edward Simms, along with San Francisco lawyers Roy Bartlett and Cameron Alston, allege that the sale cost Microsoft hundreds of thousands of dollars in "irreparable damage." They demanded that Zamos hand over his eBay profits ($143.50) and cover the company's court costs and legal fees.

Denise Grollmus

Microsoft threatened to take David Zamos's 2002 Ford Escort to recover $143.50 in eBay profits.

The honchos at Bill Gates' empire probably thought it would be an easy, open-and-shut case, just like the 1,045 similar suits they have filed.

"They're crazy," Zamos says of the blizzard of suits. "I think they just pump these things out. And if you look at how many go to a decision, it's none. People just don't show up or bother to defend themselves."

Bill Gates' software empire accused Zamos of unfair competition.

Economically speaking, it was a lopsided fight. Last year, Zamos earned approximately $3,500. Microsoft: $38 billion.

During the whole debacle, Zamos says, he actually talked to a company lawyer only once. Robert Chudakoff, who has specialized in intellectual-property law for 25 years, apparently believed he had the kid on the ropes.

"I asked him what he wanted from me," says Zamos. "He said I needed to pay restitution. I said I had nothing to pay with, and he said, 'You have a car.' Yeah, like they're gonna take my 2002 Ford Escort. I looked it up anyway, and they can't take your car unless it's collateral."

Though Chudakoff and the other Microsoft lawyers declined comment, it appears that ganging up on a college student will prove embarrassing to them and to the software titan they represent.

It wasn't any particular genius or advanced legal skills that made Zamos different from the other defendants. It wasn't even that he was right. He simply did his homework -- and outplayed the lawyers at their own game.

"Like I said, man, I totally looked up everything," he says.

Goliath, meet David.

Last semester, the Kent State biochemistry major enrolled as a guest student at the University of Akron in order to pick up a microbiology course seldom offered at Kent. "I didn't want to be stuck in school for six years because I had to wait around to take one class," he says.

While at Akron, he decided to upgrade his computer, so he bought the discounted educational editions of Microsoft Windows and Office XP Pro for $60 at the school's computer store.

When he took the software home, he realized that he'd have to reformat his hard drive to install it. Rather than lose years of term papers and mp3s, he decided to stick with his old operating system and return the unopened packages.

But back at the store, the cashier told Zamos that the university had an agreement with Microsoft whereby it wouldn't accept returns on the company's software.

By forcing Zamos to keep the software, Microsoft left him with no option but to sell it on his own.

Denise Grollmus
After Zamos went to the press, Microsoft changed its tune.

An Akron U. spokesman offered no comment, stating only that the school's policy is to accept returns of all unopened software within 10 days of purchase.

"It was probably just some stupid mess-up," says Zamos. "The store is run by a bunch of 18-year-olds anyway." He can't remember whether he missed the 10-day window.

One attorney even suggested that he sue the University of Akron. "I'm not going to do that," he says, rolling his eyes. "It wasn't their fault. I don't even think it was Microsoft's fault. It was these lawyers."

Zamos decided to request a return directly from Microsoft, which has its own 30-day return policy.

He sent his letter by certified mail, so he knows when it arrived. But Microsoft conveniently waited 34 days to respond. He was denied.

With two pieces of useless software on his hands, Zamos turned to his eBay account under the username "bestprices_fastestshipping." He uses the online auction site mostly to sell used textbooks and school supplies.

First he auctioned off the Office XP Pro for $112.50 on September 27. But when he went to sell the Windows software, his second auction was taken down by a "Microsoft investigator," who accused him of infringing on the company's copyright, according to the lawsuit.

"I thought it was bullshit when they pulled my auction," he says. "I had no idea what I did wrong."

Rather than simply concede, Zamos researched Microsoft's resale policy, which is posted on eBay.

The policy states that "qualified end users," meaning anyone associated with an educational institution, may resell and purchase software through eBay.

Zamos began communicating with Microsoft's San Francisco lawyer, Cameron Alston, about the matter. Alston sent him a letter defending Microsoft's right to shut down his auction, citing several court cases where large businesses pirated Microsoft software and sold it.

Zamos wrote back to ask what these incidents had to do with a student reselling two unopened pieces of software on eBay.

A month later, Alston still hadn't responded to his questions. So Zamos simply sent a counterclaim to eBay, which allowed him to repost his sale.

He even updated his auction's web page by posting Microsoft's resale policy verbatim. "I just cut and pasted exactly what their resale policy said and put it on my platform," he says.

Zamos finally sold the Windows program for $91. He'd made a profit of $143.50 from both sales.

According to the lawsuit, the investigator who shut down his auction had e-mailed Zamos on September 30, asking whether his software bore a warning that Microsoft believed precluded Zamos from reselling it. Lawyers say Zamos acknowledged that both packages contained the warnings.

Still, Zamos felt justified. The software had never been opened, and Microsoft had made a return impossible. He'd researched the company's resale policy and understood himself to be a "qualified end user." But he couldn't be fully aware of the licensing agreement, since it only appears when the software is loaded.

Microsoft came out firing.

A few months after the final auction, Zamos's father, David Sr., received a cryptic FedEx letter from Alston. "I had no idea what was going on," says David Sr. "I didn't even know she was an attorney, aside from her language. The letterhead didn't say anything about a law firm. For all I knew, they could have been an assemblage of trash collectors. So I wrote them back, but they blew me off."

It wasn't until the day after Christmas that Zamos realized he'd actually been sued.

He found his case on LexisNexis. "They were so shady about the whole thing," he says.

Zamos has run afoul of the law before, though he scarcely could be described as a hardened criminal.

During last fall's election campaign, he was driving home on Route 303 at around 11 p.m. when he spotted a giant Bush-Cheney sign in the front yard of the home of Summit County Republican Party Chairman Alex Arshinkoff.

The 4-by-8 foot sign had become the center of a comical fight in Hudson. The city claimed that it violated zoning laws. Arshinkoff refused to take it down, ironically seeking help from the ACLU, which he'd publicly bashed. Ultimately, the sign cost him $2,900 in fines.

Inspired more by the absurdity of the situation than by the politics, Zamos thought a prank was in order.

A can of spray paint in hand, he sneaked across Arshinkoff's lawn, only to be intercepted by a security guard, whom Arshinkoff had hired to protect his sign.

Zamos jumped into his car and sped away, but he was caught by police.

He was slapped with a $100 fine -- and a touch of embarrassment. "I don't agree with what I was going to do," he says. "I saw this gigantic sign every night when I was driving home from studying at Akron U. to my home in Twin Lakes. You can probably surmise the rest."

Friends and family describe Zamos as a studious guy with a fondness for coffeehouses. He's one of the top students in Kent's Chemistry Department. "He's my son, so I can't be objective, but he's a very bright young man," David Sr. says.

When he first got wind of the lawsuit, David Sr. tried to get a lawyer for his son. He called around, but the cheapest intellectual-property attorney charged $190 an hour. David Sr. couldn't afford the bill, and the lawyer wouldn't take the case anyway. "I'm assuming that they were Chudakoff's buddies, but I can't be sure -- though all these guys know each other," he says.

David Sr., a jazz musician, felt torn, since he has experience representing himself. "Biochemistry is a daunting major, and I didn't want him to get impaled on this thing to the detriment of his education," he says. "But at the same time, what's right is right, and what's wrong is wrong. They had no case."

Before the suit, Zamos had little understanding of the law. Still, he decided to tackle the suit himself. "I fought it out of principle," he says.

As he perused the 18 pages of the suit, thick with legalese, he began putting his study skills to use, spending hours a day at the Akron U. law library. He memorized the way lawyers wrote complaints and motions, and he mimicked the tortured language of other cases.

"I was surprised he was fighting back, but it sounded like something Dave would do," says Amy Ritter, a fellow Kent student. "When he wants to learn something, he's very driven."

When Zamos cracked the complaint's legal language, he realized that the suit's claims of "irreparable injury to its business reputation and goodwill" were baseless. He hadn't pirated or stolen any software, falsely represented Microsoft, reproduced its trademark, or repackaged its goods, as the company's lawsuit suggests.

Microsoft even went so far as to accuse Zamos of unfair competition, claiming that his $143.50 in profits forced the company to sustain "substantial impact."

The suit, Zamos believed, made Microsoft -- busy flexing its muscles -- look like nothing more than a meathead.

He also discovered that the suit was essentially a carbon copy of others the company had filed -- such as Microsoft vs. Vantandoust, where the company sued a corporation that was selling counterfeit versions of its software. "They just tweaked a template and filed it," Zamos says.

He places page 15 of his case next to page 17 of the Vantandoust case. "If you look at page 17 of this case, it's the same exact thing as my case, except they took out the plural form, but now the verb-noun agreement is all messed up," he says. "Plus, none of these things have anything to do with me. I didn't sell anything counterfeit."

It looked as if Microsoft lawyers were so used to defendants caving, they hadn't even bothered to craft a suit that represented the circumstances of Zamos's case.

So Zamos spent his Christmas vacation assembling a 21-page counterclaim, which he filed January 3.

He fought Microsoft's claims of trademark and copyright infringement by citing more than 20 other cases, including a New Kids on the Block lawsuit, where the boy band sued a publishing company over the use of its song titles.

The New Kids lost, since the publishing company was simply using their titles to describe the songs, just as Zamos was using the Microsoft name when he described the software he was selling. "I was being a smartass, but it set precedents for trademark violations," he says. "I thought my counterclaims were solid. I didn't file anything frivolously, and I was the only one who submitted any evidence."

But Zamos made one mistake. He wasn't, in fact, a licensed "qualified end user," because he'd never signed the agreement that would allow him to resell his software. And he couldn't sign the agreement until he loaded the software.

He turned his mistake back on Microsoft, however, accusing it of deceptive sales practices, since the agreement had essentially been hidden from him. "How could I sign the agreement if I'd never opened the software? It didn't make any sense," he says.

He also claimed that he'd followed the resale policies publicly posted by Microsoft, and that he wasn't responsible if he violated any rules it failed to mention.

Microsoft responded by ridiculing Zamos's counterclaim as "premature," noting that he had requested a summary judgment without enough time for discovery. Obviously, the company's lawyers hadn't anticipated a fight.

Zamos went back to the drawing board and made two more motions, accusing Microsoft of perjury, causing him emotional distress, defamation, unconscionable consumer practices, abuse of process, fraud, and more.

The suit spiraled into a dizzying 37 filings. Every time Microsoft filed a motion to dismiss his claims, Zamos would file more the very next day. Not only did he force Microsoft to defend its accusations against him, but the company was now forced to defend its own practices as well.

After two months of back-and-forth filings, the judge ordered both sides to stop submitting any more paperwork.

Finally, Zamos gave Microsoft the migraine it hadn't expected. He requested a trial by jury, knowing that the company wouldn't want to spend tens of thousands of dollars in legal bills just to snuff one kid in Ohio. He was right. The lawyers said they'd drop their suit -- if Zamos dropped his countersuit.

But that wasn't good enough for Zamos, who'd wasted hours of his time and $40 in Kinko's copies. He didn't want billions of dollars or a new Ford Mustang. He wanted an apology and reimbursement for his copies.

"So they can file any ridiculous suit they want, and when it blows up in their face, they can walk away from it whenever they want?" David Sr. asks. "They claimed he was hassling them, but they filed the lawsuit!"

When Zamos realized that Microsoft wasn't going to say it was sorry, he decided to go to the press. It was the best move he made.

He typed up a one-page press release and contacted The Plain Dealer and Akron's Beacon Journal. The PD blew him off, while the Beacon's Phil Trexler wrote a brief story on March 7.

What the local press didn't realize was that a college kid taking on Bill Gates' loved and loathed kingdom would make an international story.

Zamos was in class the entire day. He'd lost his cell phone and couldn't get any calls. It wasn't until later that evening that he realized he'd activated his 15 minutes of fame.

At around 10 p.m. that night, he sat at his laptop in the student union, his e-mail in-box packed with interview requests from as far away as England. "Suddenly, I got all these requests from Washington and San Francisco," he says. "They even wanted me to go on the Nick Cavuto show on Fox, but I didn't want to go on some crazy conservative talk show -- that's scary. I just wanted to put pressure on Microsoft."

Meanwhile, the company's lawyers seemed to understand they'd created a PR nightmare. "I got a call from Chudakoff in the early afternoon, the day the story came out," says David Sr. "He was looking for my son, and when I asked him what for, that cockroach said he couldn't discuss the case with me, because it defies legal ethics. So I said, 'What legal ethics?'"

When Zamos finally talked to Chudakoff, his tone had changed. "He was very complimentary," Zamos says. "He said he was impressed by my pleadings. His flattery was ridiculous."

Chudakoff offered him a chance to settle.

To this day, Zamos's greatest critic remains his girlfriend. "She thinks it's wrong to sue anyone ever, and that I should have just gotten out of it as fast as possible, but I have a different view of the legal system," he says. "I think it's the only real way to effect any change. There are a lot of problems with this country, but at least I can defend myself in a court of law, which is saying a lot."

Zamos ponders what would have happened if he hadn't put up a fight. "I would have just declared bankruptcy, gone to grad school, and moved in with my girlfriend, like I was planning on anyway," he says.

When asked if he'd ever consider being a lawyer, Zamos answers, "Are you kidding? I hate this stuff!"

He plans to go into pharmaceutical research.

Before the settlement, Zamos expressed apprehension about accepting Chudakoff's offer. After all, it would force him to sign a nondisclosure agreement, which would prohibit him from discussing the case ever again. "I feel like a jerk settling, because I think more people should know about this," he says. "It's a time-management issue, really. I don't have the time to do all the work that goes into actually closing the case."

Zamos is no longer allowed to speak about the case, which is just the way Microsoft wants it.

Surely the company needs to protect itself from piracy. The music industry has taken much the same approach, bombarding everyone from middle-school girls to college students with suits over illegal downloading. But when the fights are so lopsided, there's a tendency to underestimate the defendant and rely solely on the superior firepower of lawyers and money.

Today, Microsoft wants nothing to do with the kid who just wanted his 60 bucks back.

The company refuses to comment on the case, offering only a written statement proclaiming its interest in the greater good: "Microsoft's academic program is a special low cost program that promotes education by providing students and qualified academic institutions software at reduced prices. This program can be abused when software is purchased for academic prices and resold to the general public."

The implication, of course, is that Zamos intentionally bought software at educational prices in order to unload it on eBay for a tidy profit. He says it ain't so. "If I had been doing something like that, don't you think the lawyers would have figured it out? I mean, they spent a lot of time and dough. You'd think they'd come up with something."

Besides, Zamos says, Microsoft's own return policies forced him to take this route. By essentially forcing Zamos to keep the software, the company left him with no option but to sell it on his own. A man earning $3,500 a year can't be expected to eat a $60 purchase.

Zamos says he'll still use the company's software. He has no choice. "I have to, since they practically own the universe."

As he stares at his Hotmail account, loaded with interview requests and ingratiating pleas from Chudakoff for a chance to chat, he laughs. "Today, I just realized -- Microsoft owns Hotmail!"

GERECHTSHOF TE ARNHEM

in de zaak van:

[appellant],
wonende te [woonplaats],
appellant in het principaal appèl, geïntimeerde in het incidenteel appèl, procureur: mr F.J. Boom,

tegen:

de besloten vennootschap met beperkte aansprakelijkheid
MultiMediaMachines B.V.,
gevestigd te Hengelo (O),
geïntimeerde in het principaal appèl, appellante in het incidenteel appèl, procureur: mr J.M. Bosnak.

1 Het geding in eerste aanleg

Voor de procedure in eerste aanleg wordt verwezen naar de inhoud van het vonnis van 4 mei 2005 dat de voorzieningenrechter in de rechtbank Almelo tussen principaal geïntimeerde (hierna ook te noemen:

MultiMediaMachines) als eiseres en principaal appelland (hierna ook te noemen: [appelland]) als gedaagde heeft geweest; van dat vonnis is een fotokopie aan dit arrest gehecht.

2 Het geding in hoger beroep

2.1 [appelland] heeft bij exploit van 31 mei 2005 aan MultiMediaMachines aangezegd van dat vonnis in hoger beroep te komen, met haar dagvaarding voor dit hof. Bij dit exploit heeft hij vijf grieven tegen het bestreden vonnis aangevoerd en toegelicht, heeft hij bewijs aangeboden en aangekondigd te zullen concluderen dat het hof (bij arrest) voorzover mogelijk uitvoerbaar bij voorraad het bestreden vonnis zal vernietigen en, opnieuw rechtdoende, Multimedia haar vordering voorzover in eerste aanleg toegewezen alsnog zal ontzeggen en haar zal veroordelen tot ongedaanmaking van het door [appelland] op basis van het bestreden vonnis reeds gepresteerde, ten aanzien van de betaalde vergoeding vermeerderd met de wettelijke rente van 11 mei 2005 af, een en ander met veroordeling van MultiMediaMachines in de kosten van beide instanties

2.2 Ter rolzitting van 14 juni 2005 heeft [appelland] bij mondelinge conclusie van eis geconcludeerd zoals hij bij voormeld exploit had aangekondigd.

2.3 Bij memorie van antwoord heeft MultiMediaMachines de grieven bestreden en heeft zij een aantal producties in het geding gebracht. Zij heeft harerzijds incidenteel beroep ingesteld tegen het vonnis, heeft daartegen twee grieven aangevoerd en toegelicht en heeft haar eis vermeerderd. Zij heeft geconcludeerd dat het hof het bestreden vonnis:

- voorzover het betreft het bepaalde in het dictum onder I tot en met III en V tot en met VIII zal bekrachtigen;
 - voorzover het betreft het bepaalde in het dictum onder IV zal vernietigen en opnieuw rechtdoende bij arrest, uitvoerbaar bij voorraad, de onder IV uitgesproken veroordeling zal herhalen met dien verstande dat de periode van zes maanden begint vanaf de datum van betekening van het vonnis van de voorzieningenrechter, onder oplegging van een dwangsom van € 500 per dag, een gedeelte van een dag daaronder begrepen, dat [appelland] hiermee in gebreke blijft, zulks tot een maximum van € 50.000;
 - voorzover het betreft de afwijzing van de vorderingen terzake de geleden materiële schade en de buitengerechtelijke incassokosten zal vernietigen en opnieuw rechtdoende [appelland] bij arrest, uitvoerbaar bij voorraad, alsnog zal veroordelen tot betaling aan haar van bedragen van € 2.500, althans een door het hof in goede justitie vast te stellen bedrag, en van € 1.400, beide bedragen vermeerderd met de wettelijke rente van de dag der dagvaarding in eerste aanleg tot die der voldoening;
- met veroordeling van [appelland] in de kosten van de procedure (het hof leest:) in hoger beroep, zowel in het principaal appel als in het incidenteel appel.

2.4 Bij memorie van antwoord in het incidenteel beroep heeft [appelland] verweer gevoerd, producties overgelegd en geconcludeerd dat het hof de vorderingen van MultiMediaMachines in incidenteel appel zal afwijzen en haar zal veroordelen in de kosten van beide procedures.

2.5 Vervolgens hebben partijen de stukken voor het wijzen van arrest aan het hof overgelegd.

3 De grieven

3.1 [appelland] heeft in het principaal beroep de volgende grieven aangevoerd:

1. Ten onrechte en/of onbegrijpelijk dan wel onvoldoende gemotiveerd heeft de voorzieningenrechter in rechtsoverweging 6.2 geoordeeld dat niet van de illegaliteit van de door MultiMediaMachines verkochte producten is gebleken.

2. Ten onrechte en/of onbegrijpelijk dan wel onvoldoende gemotiveerd overweegt de voorzieningenrechter in rechtsoverweging 7 dat het aannemelijk is dat de uitlatingen van [appellant] schade hebben veroorzaakt bij MultiMediaMachines.
3. Ten onrechte en/of onbegrijpelijk dan wel onvoldoende gemotiveerd oordeelt de voorzieningenrechter in rechtsoverweging 9 dat [appellant] aansprakelijk is jegens MultiMediaMachines uit hoofde van onrechtmatige daad.
4. Ten onrechte en/of onbegrijpelijk dan wel onvoldoende gemotiveerd heeft de voorzieningenrechter in rechtsoverweging 8 geoordeeld dat MultiMediaMachines op onjuiste gronden van het forum is verwijderd en daarop weer dient te worden toegelaten.
5. Ten onrechte en/of onbegrijpelijk en/of onvoldoende gemotiveerd heeft de voorzieningenrechter in het bestreden vonnis de vorderingen van MultiMediaMachines toegewezen, althans dient het hof die alsnog af te wijzen.

3.2 MultiMediaMachines heeft in het incidenteel beroep de volgende grieven aangevoerd.

1. Ten onrechte heeft de voorzieningenrechter overwogen dat de vordering terzake van de materiële schade dient te worden afgewezen.
2. Ten onrechte heeft de voorzieningenrechter de vordering van buitengerechtelijke incassokosten afgewezen en gesteld dat MultiMediaMachines ter onderbouwing van die vordering een brief van 4 november 2004 heeft overgelegd.

4 De vaststaande feiten

Tussen partijen staan in hoger beroep als enerzijds gesteld en anderzijds erkend dan wel niet of onvoldoende weersproken en op grond van de in zoverre niet bestreden inhoud van overgelegde producties dan wel als door de rechtbank vastgesteld en in hoger beroep niet bestreden, de navolgende feiten vast.

- a. MultiMediaMachines drijft een onderneming waarin zij zich onder meer bezig houdt met de verkoop via internet van het softwarepakket Windows XP Media Center Edition in combinatie met hardware-onderdelen als muis, afstandsbediening of tv-kaart.
- b. [appellant] drijft een onderneming onder de naam Strategic IT Solutions. Hij onderhoudt op een website waarvan de domeinnaam xpmce.nl op naam van die onderneming is geregistreerd, een forum op het gebied van dit softwarepakket.
- c. MultiMediaMachines heeft als deelnemer aan dit forum op deze website haar producten aangeboden.
- d. Op 3 november 2004 heeft [appellant] op dit forum de volgende tekst geplaatst:

Hallo iedereen!

Vandaag is gebleken dat er een persoon ([A.] van het forum) nogal wat posts heeft geplaatst over starterskit die te koop zouden zijn. Deze starterskits zijn illegaal. De enige die legaal zijn, zijn de starterskit met (Hauppauge) TV kaarten en de Windows Media Center software + afstandsbediening en die kan hij niet leveren.

Trap hier niet in!

Op dit forum mag geen illegale software aangeboden worden. [A.] (eigenaar van het forum www.degroeneknop.nl en van www.multimediamachines.nl) vond dat hij dat wel kon doen, en is daarom ook verbannen. Hij heeft een email gekregen van mij waarin alles duidelijk wordt uitgelegd. Software die legaal lijkt, hoeft nog niet legaal te zijn.

Be Sure it's Legal!!!

- e. [appellant] heeft tegelijk met het plaatsen van dit bericht MultiMediaMachines uitgesloten van deelname aan het forum en haar verder de mogelijkheid onthouden om op het forum gesponsorde links of andere berichten te (laten) plaatsen.

5 De motivering van de beslissing in het principaal hoger beroep

5.1 De eerste grief richt zich tegen het oordeel van de voorzieningenrechter dat voorshands niet van de illegaliteit van de door MultiMediaMachines verkochte producten is gebleken. Hierbij stelt het hof voorop dat dat oordeel in eerste aanleg in elk geval in zoverre juist was dat die illegaliteit door geen der procespartijen werd betoogd. Ook [appellant] deed dat in eerste aanleg niet. Hij liet weten dat hij zich aan die vraag, mede in verband met de rol die Microsoft als leverancier bij de beantwoording ervan speelde, niet wilde wagen, dat hij de vraag wilde laten rusten en dat dit kon omdat die vraag naar zijn oordeel ook niet de kern van de zaak was.

5.2 Thans echter stelt [appellant] die vraag in de eerste grief uitdrukkelijk wel aan de orde en betoogt hij dat MultiMediaMachines door het Windows softwarepakket XPMCE aan het publiek aan te bieden in combinatie met bijvoorbeeld een muis, een afstandsbediening of een tv-kaart, in strijd handelt met de Microsoft OEM System Builder License waaronder zij dat doet. Daartoe beroept [appellant] zich in de eerste plaats op artikel 6 dat aan distributie anders dan met een volledig geassembleerd computersysteem de voorwaarde stelt dat gedistribueerd wordt onder andere systeembouwers. Een systeembouwer is volgens [appellant] slechts "een professionele Original Equipment Manufacturer of een (her)assemblage- of installatiebedrijf voor software met computersystemen". De omschrijving in de licentie luidt echter in artikel 1: "een OEM (Original Equipment Manufacturer) of een (her)assemblage- of installatiebedrijf voor software op computersystemen". De toevoeging "professioneel" wordt door [appellant] gehanteerd zonder dat daarvan in de licentie sprake is. De uitleg van MultiMediaMachines dat de eindgebruiker die zelf een computersysteem maakt als "original equipment manufacturer" en daarmee als systeembouwer beschouwd moet worden, komt daarom voorshands niet onaannemelijk voor.

5.3 Subsidiair beroept [appellant] zich op artikel 4 van de licentie, bepalende dat distributie van het pakket anders dan met een volledig geassembleerd computersysteem slechts geoorloofd is met een computerhardware-onderdeel dat geen randapparaat is (dat wil zeggen dat een integraal onderdeel van het volledig geassembleerde computersysteem is). Dat een muis randapparatuur is wordt door [appellant] niet gesteld, maar naar zijn mening zijn de tv-kaart en de afstandsbediening dat wel. Daartoe beroept hij zich op een woordenlijst van Microsoft waarin "peripheral" wordt omschreven als "In computing a device, such as a disk drive, printer, modem, or joystick, that is connected to a computer and is controlled by the computer's microprocessor". Daar staan de tv-kaart en de afstandsbediening niet bij, maar volgens [appellant] moeten deze toch als "peripheral" worden beschouwd omdat het geen essentiële onderdelen van de computer zijn, ze daarmee wel zijn verbonden en door de processor van de computer worden aangestuurd. Volgens de licentievoorwaarden geeft de Microsoft OEM System Builder License het recht "om individuele softwarelicenties te distribueren op voorwaarde dat deze wordt gedistribueerd ... ofwel (b) met een computerhardwareonderdeel dat geen randapparaat is", dat wil zeggen met "een component dat een integraal onderdeel vormt van het volledig geassembleerd computersysteem waarop de softwarelicentie wordt geïnstalleerd". Partijen zijn het met Microsoft (productie 4 bij de inleidende dagvaarding) eens dat muis en toetsenbord "non-peripheral" zijn. Volgens [appellant] is het onderhavige softwarepakket een besturingssysteem waarmee onder meer foto's, muziek, zelfgemaakte video's en opgenomen televisieprogramma's op de computer kunnen worden opgeslagen en afgespeeld. Gelet op dit toepassingskader is het hof voorshands van oordeel dat ook de tv-kaart als "non-peripheral" moet worden aangemerkt.

5.4 Gelet op de door [appellant] op het forum geplaatste teksten over de door MultiMediaMachines geplaatste posts ziet het verwijt van [appellant] dat MultiMediaMachines illegale software zou aanbieden klaarblijkelijk niet op het aanbod van de software in combinatie met een afstandsbediening. Dit betekent dat deze door [appellant] opgeworpen grief ter onderbouwing van de door hem in deze teksten verweten illegaliteit zich niet tot de afstandsbediening kan uitstrekken.

5.5 Het hof is op deze gronden voorshands van oordeel dat de illegaliteit van de door MultiMediaMachines verkochte producten niet aannemelijk is geworden en verwerpt de eerste grief.

5.6 Aan de tweede grief legt [appellant] in de eerste plaats ten grondslag dat MultiMediaMachines in strijd met de licentievoorwaarden heeft gehandeld. Dit standpunt is bij de bespreking van de eerste grief echter reeds verworpen. Voorts voert [appellant] aan dat hij hoor en wederhoor heeft toegepast doordat ook berichten van tegenstanders van [appellant]' standpunt op het forum zijn geplaatst. Bovendien heeft [appellant] vooraf zijn standpunt aan MultiMediaMachines kenbaar gemaakt zodat deze de gelegenheid kreeg hem te overtuigen. Hij bestrijdt echter niet dat hij MultiMediaMachines van het forum heeft uitgesloten. Het hof is van oordeel dat het aldus te begrijpen hoor en wederhoor niet in de weg staat aan de aannemelijkheid dat MultiMediaMachines schade geleden heeft. Tenslotte voert [appellant] in de toelichting op deze grief aan dat het bedrag van € 2.500 als immateriële schade buitensporig hoog is. Die mening deelt het hof niet zodat de tweede grief verworpen wordt.

5.7 De derde grief bestrijdt dat [appellant] onrechtmatig gehandeld zou hebben. Daarbij beroept [appellant] zich op de vrijheid van meningsuiting. Terecht voert hij aan dat daarbij een afweging nodig is tussen die vrijheid van meningsuiting enerzijds en het recht op bescherming van eer en goede naam anderzijds. Hij betoogt dat die afweging in zijn voordeel had dienen uit te vallen. Voorzover dat betoog berust op de stelling dat zijn beschuldiging juist was en dat MultiMediaMachines inderdaad illegale software aanbod, dient de grief te stranden op het hiervoor reeds gegeven voorlopige oordeel dat zulks niet is gebleken.

5.8 Daarnaast voert [appellant] aan dat hij, zelfs als zijn mening over de illegaliteit van de door MultiMediaMachines gedane aanbiedingen onjuist was, toch niet onrechtmatig gehandeld heeft nu hij immers het beginsel van hoor en wederhoor heeft toegepast. Dat acht het hof onjuist, al ware het slechts omdat [appellant] aan het begrip "hoor en wederhoor" een heel eigen en wel zeer beperkte betekenis (zoals hiervoor onder 1.1 nader aangeduid) geeft. Hij heeft MultiMediaMachines in elk geval niet in de gelegenheid gesteld om haar eigen mening kenbaar te maken aan degenen tot wie [appellant] zich gericht had. Hij erkent immers dat MultiMediaMachines op het ogenblik dat hij zijn bericht plaatste van het forum was "verbannen".

5.9 Met inachtneming van het hiervoor overwogene is het hof van oordeel dat de door [appellant] bedoelde belangenafweging niet in zijn voordeel dient uit te vallen.

5.10 In de toelichting op de vierde grief voert [appellant] aan dat hij MultiMediaMachines de toegang tot het forum heeft ontzegd omdat MultiMediaMachines zich niet hield aan de huisregel dat het doen van commerciële uitlatingen niet is toegestaan. Bovendien is het zijn forum en zijn server en heeft hij het recht iedereen daartoe de toegang te ontzeggen wanneer hem dat goeddunkt behoudens wanneer hij misbruik van zijn bevoegdheid zou maken. Hierbij miskent [appellant] echter dat het bericht waarover MultiMediaMachines zich beklagt heeft, luidde: "Op dit forum mag geen illegale software aangeboden worden. [A.] (...) vond dat hij dit wel kon doen, en is daarom ook verbannen." Daaruit moet worden afgeleid dat MultiMediaMachines de toegang tot het forum helemaal niet is ontzegd omdat zij commerciële uitlatingen deed (wat op deze website in feite wel meer gebeurt), maar omdat zij illegale software zou hebben aangeboden. Als [appellant] dan niet alleen meent dat MultiMediaMachines illegale software aanbiedt en haar om die reden van het forum uitsluit, maar zijn mening ook op het forum publiceert en daarmee de goede naam van MultiMediaMachines onrechtmatig aantast, acht het hof een wedertoelating tot het forum met de voorzieningenrechter een gepaste vorm van schadevergoeding anders dan in geld.

5.11 Voorts beklagt [appellant] zich erover dat hij als gevolg van het bestreden vonnis MultiMediaMachines voor altijd in zijn forum heeft terwijl deze zich als enige niet hoeft te houden aan de huisregels van het forum. Die klacht mist echter feitelijke grondslag. De voorzieningenrechter heeft in het geheel niet bepaald dat MultiMediaMachines zich niet aan de huisregels van het forum hoeft te houden. Hij heeft integendeel de vordering van MultiMediaMachines tot "onvoorwaardelijke" toelating afgewezen en heeft uitdrukkelijk overwogen dat MultiMediaMachines zich na toelating zal hebben te houden aan de door [appellant] voor deelneming gestelde voorwaarden (mits redelijk). Aldus faalt ook de vierde grief. De vijfde grief mist zelfstandige betekenis en kan om die reden geen effect sorteren.

6 De motivering van de beslissing in het incidenteel hoger beroep

6.1 Aan haar eerste grief legt MultiMediaMachines ten grondslag dat van algemene bekendheid is dat beschuldigingen als waarvan in deze zaak sprake is, grote invloed hebben op het koopgedrag van de consument, dat het duidelijk is dat er schade geleden is en dat € 2.500 een uiterst reëel bedrag is. Het hof acht die grote invloed echter helemaal niet van algemene bekendheid en acht het feit dat materiële schade geleden is, niet op voorhand duidelijk. De materiële schade is thans van enkele kwalificaties voorzien maar nog steeds niet feitelijk onderbouwd. Daar komt bij dat het hier gaat om een geldvordering in kort geding. Daarbij is terughoudendheid geboden. Niet alleen is nodig dat de vordering aan eisen van aannemelijkheid voldoet, maar daarnaast dat er (ook in hoger beroep) een voldoende spoedeisend belang bij bestaat en dat de eisende partij naar behoren feiten en omstandigheden aanwijst die dat belang met zich brengen. MultiMediaMachines heeft ter motivering van haar spoedeisend belang niet anders aangevoerd dan dat "de gewraakte uiting nog steeds op het forum staat vermeld waardoor de schade blijft toenemen". Een spoedeisend belang bij de geldvordering kan daaruit echter niet worden afgeleid. De grief faalt.

6.2 In de toelichting op de tweede grief stelt MultiMediaMachines dat zij de brief van 4 november 2004 niet ter onderbouwing van de buitengerechtelijke incassokosten heeft overgelegd. Als onderbouwing voert zij thans aan dat de zaak grondig voorbereid diende te worden, onder meer resulterend in grondige bestudering van de relevante licentievoorwaarden, bestudering van uitingen van [appellant] op internet, enz. Het hof ziet hierin echter niet meer dan verrichtingen ter voorbereiding van gedingstukken en ter instructie van de zaak. Dat de aan deze verrichtingen verbonden kosten redelijkerwijs gemaakt zijn en een redelijke omvang hadden, zoals MultiMediaMachines stelt, doet dan ook niet terzake. De grief faalt.

6.3 MultiMediaMachines heeft in hoger beroep haar eis vermeerderd in die zin dat zij vordert dat aan de uitgesproken veroordeling tot het plaatsen van een rectificatie een dwangsom verbonden zal worden omdat [appellant] aan die veroordeling niet ten volle zou hebben voldaan. [appellant] verzet zich daartegen en stelt dat MultiMediaMachines daar geen belang bij heeft omdat hij aan de uitgesproken veroordeling wel degelijk volledig heeft voldaan.

6.4 Dat [appellant] aan de veroordeling niet volledig voldaan heeft, is niet gebleken. Dat neemt echter niet weg dat MultiMediaMachines belang heeft bij een mogelijkheid die veroordeling te kunnen ten uitvoer leggen als [appellant] zou ophouden daaraan te voldoen. Het hof zal daarom de gevraagde dwangsom opleggen, maar zal er bij de beslissing omtrent de kosten van het incidenteel appel rekening mee houden dat [appellant] in dit opzicht niet als substantieel in het ongelijk gesteld kan worden aangemerkt.

7 Slotsom

Het hiervoor overwogene brengt met zich dat het bestreden vonnis onder verwerping zowel van het principale als van het incidentele hoger beroep dient te worden bekrachtigd met dien verstande dat daaraan een dwangsbepaling zal worden toegevoegd. [appellant] en MultiMediaMachines dienen als in het ongelijk gesteld te worden verwezen in de kosten van het principaal hoger beroep onderscheidenlijk het incidenteel hoger beroep. Ten aanzien van de kosten van het principaal appel ziet het hof geen aanleiding om, zoals door MultiMediaMachines is bepleit, af te wijken van hetgeen bij de bepaling van de hoogte van die kosten gebruikelijk is.

De beslissing

Het hof, rechtdoende in hoger beroep:

bekrachtigt het vonnis van de voorzieningenrechter in de rechtbank Almelo van 4 mei 2005;

veroordeelt [appellant] aan MultiMediaMachines te betalen een dwangsom van € 500 voor elke dag, een gedeelte van een dag daaronder begrepen, dat hij in gebreke blijft te voldoen aan het onder IV van het bekrachtigde vonnis tot hem gerichte bevel, zulks tot een maximum van € 50.000;

verklaart deze veroordeling uitvoerbaar bij voorraad;

veroordeelt [appellant] in de kosten van het principaal hoger beroep, tot aan deze uitspraak aan de zijde van MultiMediaMachines begroot op € 894 voor salaris van de procureur en op € 389 voor griffierecht;

veroordeelt MultiMediaMachines in de kosten van het incidenteel hoger beroep, tot aan deze uitspraak aan de zijde van [appellant] begroot op € 316 voor salaris van de procureur.

Dit arrest is gewezen door mrs Mannoury, Rijken en Hilverda en in tegenwoordigheid van de griffier uitgesproken ter openbare terechtzitting van 17 januari 2006.

De "FAT" variant van onze Windows XP Media Center Edition OEM bundels bevat de basis ingrediënten om een Media Center install creëren.

Inbegrepen zijn:

-Windows XP Media Center Edition 2005 (NL) OEM system builder pakket* (update release2). (klik hier voor details)

-Hauppauge Amity2 (PVR150mce) TV/Radio tuner kaart met onboard MPEG Encoder (MCE gecertificeerd).

-MCE 2005 gecertificeerde remote control met receiver (USB versie). Receiver is voorzien van een "ir blaster" zodat settopboxen ed. vanuit Media Center aangestuurd kunnen worden.

! Een Mpeg2 decoder licentie is niet meer inbegrepen bij deze pack(losse mpeg2 decoder licentie die nodig is bij Windows XP MCE, let u hierop als u Windows XP MCE aanschafft !!)

Als gevolg van wisselende successen met eerder door ons aangeboden PowerDVD 5 decodersoftware, en wij op dit moment geen alternatief (lees keuze) in de ververschillende Mpeg 2 decoders kunnen leveren, hebben wij besloten de bundeling van Mpeg2 decoder voorlopig te staken. Als alternatief wijzen wij u erop dat u de decoder software online direct bij de betreffende softwareleverancier kunt kopen (vaak middels creditcard). Van de software nDVD MCE van nVidia hebben wij veel positieve geluiden gehoord, vooral in combinatie met low-end nVidia grafische kaarten.

U bouwt verder zelf het systeem met componenten van uw keuze.

Microsoft adviseert minimaal een 1.6 GHz processor, en als grafische kaart o.a. nVidia GeForce FX 5200, FX 5700, FX 5900, 6800 of ATI Radeon 9800 of X800. (actuele lijst

Leest u vooral op de diverse forums welke bevindingen andere mensen hebben met verschillende hardware configuraties. Onlangs lanceerde degroeneknop.nl een speciaal hiervoor ingericht Nederlandstalig forum.

* Door deze OEM bundel te kopen en te gebruiken om zelf een systeem af te bouwen bent u gehouden aan de OEM licentie van Microsoft. Zo is het is u o.a niet toegestaan de aangeschafte software licentie los verder te verkopen en is de software licentie slecht geldig op het te creeren systeem. U dient bij de aanschaf van deze bundel zelf de systembuilder te zijn. (definitie systembuilder volgens originele Engelse licentie: "System builder" means an original equipment manufacturer, or an assembler, reassembler, or installer of software on computer systems). De system builder hoeft niet perse bedrijfsmatig te opereren en kan dus ook een "doe-het-zelver" zijn. Een verdere bepaling van de licentie is dat de systembuilder een bepaalde mate van ondersteuning dient te bieden aan de eindgebruiker. Een "doe-het-zelvende" system builder welke een systeem creëert voor eigen gebruik is dus tevens de eindgebruiker. Meer informatie kunt u lezen op de site van Microsoft.

NB:

De derde CD bevat de update 2, echter wijzen wij u erop dat er met update 2 mogelijk enkele problemen kunnen ontstaan mbt standby en DRM zaken. Wij willen u erop wijzen dat u zich ook kunt beperken tot de roll-up update 1. Gebruikt u daarvoor de downloadbare rollup update 1 en andere benodigde updates en gebruikt u dan de meegeleverde update 2 cd niet (CD2 wordt tijdens de installatieprocedure overigens ServicePack2 CD genoemd).
