A NOTE TO OUR READERS . . .

Because funds are limited, we are very grateful for your donations, as well as your recommendations to your publishers to forward review copies to the Editor. NEW TITLES IN BIOETHICS is published four times per year (quarterly) by the National Reference Center for Bioethics Literature, Kennedy Institute of Ethics both as a print and electronic version (<http://bioethics.georgetown.edu>) beginning with 2004. With the exception of documents in the section New Publications from the Kennedy Institute of Ethics, materials listed herein are not available from the National Reference Center. They are often available directly from the publishers listed in each citation.

She works with the smallest and sickest patients: premature babies so ill that other doctors might give up on them. Maggie is fiercely devoted, despite the ethical conundrums that arise daily on the highest-tech edge of medicine—and in spite of colleagues who feel she often risks too much...Maggie's orderly life begins to unravel when she gets an anonymous note calling her ethics and reputation into question. At first she is able to ignore the increasingly virulent letters, but when her accuser goes public—putting up hate-filled warning posters around the hospital implicating her in a child's death—Maggie finds herself mired in a personal and professional hell.") "Eleven years have passed since SHEVA, an ancient retrovirus, was discovered in human DNA—a retrovirus that caused mutations in the human genome and heralded the arrival of a new wave of genetically enhanced humans. Now these changed children have reached adolescence...and face a world that is outraged about their very existence. For these special youths, possessed of remarkable, advanced traits that mark a major turning point in human development, are also ticking time bombs harboring hosts of viruses that could exterminate the "old" human race. Fear and hatred of the virus children have made them a persecuted underclass, quarantined by the government in special "schools," targeted by federally sanctioned bounty hunters, and demonized by hysterical segments of the population. But pockets of resistance have formed among those opposed to treating the children like dangerous diseases—and who fear the worst if the government's draconian measures are carried to their extremes.")
