BENEFICIAL SUGGESTION WINNER - Steven Fujiyoshi, shop planner of Facilities Department here, checks the pressure rating of suction and discharge gages inside a refrigeration sug," in April '81 when he was an system compression room.

Federal employee's idea pays off by Sgt Marie Woods Ideas can mean big bucks, if they're submitted through the Armed Forces' Beneficial Suggestion Program.

Suggestion Program. The program is part of the Federal Incentive Awards Program for employees of the U.S. Federal Government. It's the only one available for civilian and military persons alike, according to Patrick Brown, employee relations specialist of the Civilian Personnel Office here.

One federal employee, Steven Fujiyoshi, shop planner of Facilities Department, had an idea for treatment of chill and cooling tower water in air condition and refrigeration systems. He submitted his and refrigeration units abourd the air station use water as either a cooling or condensing medium. The efficiency of a unit decreases gradually as the amount of dissolved solids accumulate in the system. If the level of dissolved solids is undesirable, treatment of the water would be started by using the proper chemicals. using the proper chemicals.

When Fujiyoshi made his suggestion, a private chemical company did the testing and treatment. He felt the Facilities Department could save a considerable amount of money if it bought the proper testing equipment and trained their personnel to use it.

Making its way through the proper channels, his "benny sug" was adopted in November '81. The air station saved $59,590 that year and awarded Fujiyoshi $1,000.

"I'd tried my idea on a few air condition units here," said Fujiyoshi, "and it worked. So I was confident that my idea would be approved. As for the award money," he continued, "that sure came at a good time with Christmas around the corner." A person who has a brainstorm for improving his work section, or any area at the air station, should any area at the air station, should any area at the air station, should submit it, encourages Brown. They can do so by filling out a suggestion form explaining the problem, difficulty, or circum-stances that prompted the suggestion; the suggested change; and where and how it can be used, what it will accomplish, and how what it will accomplish, and how it will benefit the government in terms of tangible savings, if possible. The form will be screened by the for accuracy and clarity. An evaluator will check it to see if the idea actually constitutes an improvement. "The evaluator is someone who has expertise in the job field the 'benny sug' is submitted for,' said Brown. If the evaluator says it's feasible, the suggestion is presented before the lncentive Awards Committee, conoprised of eight or 10 military and civilian people. The commontee will either recommend the idea or disapprove it. If recommended, the suggestion is sent to the commanding officer of the air station.

"The CO has the authority "The CO has the authority for cash awards up to $2,500," said Brown. Should the award be more than that, the beneficial suggestion is forwarded to Headquarters Marine Corps.

The Armed Forces' Beneficial Suggestion Program provides U.S. Federal Government employees an opportunity to gain recognition and monetary reward for their initiative, constructive imagination, and ingenuity. It's a program where a person has nothing to lose, but a lot to gain.

Archaeologist reads soil to explain the past by Sgt Corrina Martel Like historical books and pictures, the earth and its contents also tell a story.

VOL. 11 NO. 50

To help tell this story and explain the behavior of previous inhabitants of Mokapu Peninsula, Dave Tuggle, staff archaeologist with the Pacific Division, Naval Facilities Engineering Command, has been working in the air station soil for almost a year.

Tuggle said that the cultural inventory he has been undertak-ing is an attempt to identify the full range of remains for the history of the area. This history includes ancient Hawaiian to the military era. The inventory is also intended to meat the requirements intended to meet the requirements of federal law for the identifica-tion of historical and cultural property of federal agencies.

"Federal agencies that have land management responsibili-ties need to know what they have on their hands," said Tuggle. "They need to know which things need to be preserved, and which only need to be recorded and not preserved.

"I've done surveys at Kansas Tower, Fort Hase, the area west of the runways, the slope between the golf course and officers' housing, and French Battery. I will also be studying the Nuupia Ponds area."

Tuggle, who works at the air station two or three days a week, explained that he is following up on a primary recommendation from the Chiniago Report to complete the basic cultural resource inventory for the air station

The Chiniago Report, completed in February 1982, involved reconnaissance surveys and ethnohistoric assessments of the station, and recommended

follow-up work. DianeDrigot, Environmentalist at the Facilities Department, explained that the archaeological work is funded by the air station, but the workers are supplied by PacDiv. "Since we're a small installa-tion," said Drigot, "we draw

"Since we're a small installa-tion," said Drigot, "we draw experts from PacDiv to help us. If PacDiv does not have the time or in-house staff, they go out on contract to find someone for us." Tuggle said that his work involves the basic evaluation of historical site. "I simply view the sand through a coring device which enables me to determine if there is a historical site there," said Tuggle. "I am able to determine this by looking at samples of the earth. I then make recommendations concerning that area."

that area." The coring device Tuggle uses, is a tube-like piece of equipment which removes a cylinder sample of the earth of the earth. In addition to this device, Tuggle also uses a shovel. "On a larger scale, I may use mechanical equipment," said Tuggle. "The kind of work I'm doing is easily done by myself." Tuggle said that he found one major structural Hawaiian site burried below a sand dune that had not been discovered before. "We usually leave sites the way they are." said Tuggle. "There is only a Finited amount of excavation for the interpretation of a structure. Excavation is a very expensive process and fairly of a structure. Excavation 18 a very expensive process and fairly complicated, because you're destroying something as you try to discover it. The government wants to protect historical sites." Tuggle said that there are two mains hurid, argas on the sir major burial areas on the air station — Mokapu Dunes Area and the Ulupau Dunes section of Fort Hase beach.

"There's a problem with some archaeological remains," said Tuggle. "At the Ulupau Sand Dunes section of Fort Hase, I found places that were disturbed by vehicles which strayed off the main path and caused erosion. Some people who wander along may dig into the exposed burials. Also, many archaeological size Also, many archaeological sites are sensitive to damage such as looting and vandalism."

Tuggle said that one of his interests aboard the air station is historical valuables found from the military era.

"I'm curious to see if there's anything left from 'Fort Hase, which used to be an Army post," said Tuggle. "Between the Hawailan occupation and the military use of the area, there was a long period of ranching. I'm also interested in the structures from that period."

Tuggle explained that he is not a historian, but that as an archaeologist he may need to go through history to find out about human behavior.

"We attempt to see what is left "We attempt to see what is reit from the human behavior of before," he said. "I'm in the business because it adds another dimension to life. The more you know about an area, the richer it is and the greater your appreciation of culture! things." of cultural things."

When Tuggle is finished with his work aboard the air station, he will submit a preliminary report to the air station. This report will serve as a basis for continuing historic preservation responsibili-ties in future years.

ties in future years. Recommendations from the report that are adopted by the air station will be incorporated into the Station's Long Range, Multiple-Use Natural Resource Management Plan, according to Drigot Drigot.

Marines challenge Beirut roads

by Sgt Christopher Grey

BEIRUT, Lehanon (Delayed) Wheeling a Marine vehicle through the battered streets of Beirut is good experience for the Demolition Derby driver. For the Americans who man the jeeps and trucks supporting the U.S. units of the multi-national force, driving is an exercise in survival.

At daybreak, Marine drivers roll At daybreak, Marine drivers roll carefully out of the American compound, observing every rule and regulation of their training. When the front tires touch the madcap streets of Beirut, there's a dramatic metamorphosis and more basic instincts prevail. On these mean Mideast streets It is survival of the fastest and eggressiveness is the name of the Lebanese driving game.

In a war-torn city where traffic signals, signs and laws have become extinct, the Leathernecks must "blow the horn and go for broke."

"It's a free-for-all here," explained Sergeant Gary Stanton, 30, of Orlando, Fla. "New Marines that have come aboard must go through a certain amount of culture shock. Everything they've been fauwh in the bast is almost been taught in the past is almost worthless. Aggression and a loud horn is the answer, if they don't learn that, they will sit in traffic all day," he commented. Stanton is one of a growing number of veteran Marine drivers who are learning to support the American mission despite the chaotic traffic situation here.

Daily the drivers shuttle not only their fellow Marines, but Marine supplies and a growing number of visitors around this bombed-out city. "I have carried around people that I never thought I would see, much less drive for," emphasized Lance Corporal Antonio Cliberto, a 19-year-old driver from Ambler, Penn. Wide-eyed and clutching their seats in fear, everyone from well-known newscasters to congressman, have had their chance for a rollercoaster ride through Beirut's streets in Marine vehicles. Mercedes Benz autos are as Uhe here Hundreds of them fill the streets each workdny, racing to their final destinations. Driving on the right side of the road seems to be more of a loosely-observed custom than a rigid rule in Beirut.

"As a rule, we try to stay on the right side of the road, but you always have to be on the alert for hotdogs who feel they can make better time challenging the oncoming traffic head on," explained Stanton.

Aside from daring drivers who seem bont on suicides. Marines are faced with the perils of shell holes, orphaned animals and distracted pedestrians, These hazards keep both drivers and passengers on the edge of their jeep sents most

"You just have to be constantly "You just have to be constantly aware of what is around you," explained Ciliberto. "When you come to a so-called intersection, the person who looks the meanest and moves the fastest has the right of way.

Although the Lebanese police are returning to the streets here, it is rare to see one risking his life by challenging traffic violators. n't see any cops on the Stanton said, "I'm sure just don't there are some outstanding policemen here, but a guy could get killed standing in one of these intersections.

While intimidation and aggression may be the rules of the Lebanese road the last thing Marine drivers want is to get involved in a fender-bender. "We really have to be careful," concluded Stanton. "The last accident I saw between a task driver and another elvillan was solved with no-fault. 45-caliber insurance

Material side of Christmas blinds meaning

by Father Newton

Each year the shops and bazaars of our towns and cities greedily dress up their windows and stores several weeks in advance of Christmas. Indeed each year they seem to "open" the Christmas season a week or so earlier than the year before. the reds and greens, the reindeers and santas, the carols and tinsel all sound suntus, the cirrols and tinsel all sound their clear call, "come, see me, try me, ... buy me now (pay later)." Like the legendary loreloi these intleing "voices" of the Christmas season lare many an unsuspecting person to trauble on the rocks of financial difficulties.

It is too, too bad that this accent on the material side of Christians has often blinded some to the real job and beauty of the birth of Christ. The star of Bethlehem is sometimes obscured in the neon glos of our sparkling, shimmering shops. The child who was once lost in the temple, is sometimes lost today in the tinsel.

God, too, eagerly awaits the coming of Christmas each year. He waits, almost impatiently for the opportunity to come anew into our lives. He could have come in any form, shape, or guise. He chose to come to us in the most lovable form of all, the form no loving heart can resist. A baby, not just my baby but the most becautiful, most irresistable child the world has ever seen. His infant hands clasp and unchasp as if, already, He has begun his work of snatching souls from the fires of hell. His infant gaze lovingly embrases the addring, shabeds and embraces the adoring shepherds and draws their hearts to His. That heart that encompasses all mankind reaches out to us today.

O! Infant Saviour, let not our hearts be hard and cold. Let not cruel indifference turn us from the stable to the saloon, from the crib to the cha-cha, from Your love to the lusts of the world. Come, Infant Lord, Redeemer, Thou Promised One, awaited Matter of the ages. . . melt these hearts of stone: make them like unto Thine own. . . May peace, joy, and love from the bounty of Christ be yours this Christmas and thourghout the new year.

goods shipments

on household

WASHINGTON - There's an WASHINGTON - Interes an old adage in the military that says there's a lways a certain percentage who don't get the word. That adage applies to a nearly year-old change in entitlement for household goods shipment upon separation from recipa data. active duty

Under a change to the Joint Transfer Regulations that was effective Nov. 1, 1981, service members are now entitled to shipment of household goods for up to 180 days after release or separation from active duty. Before the change, shipment could be made up to one year after separation or release from active duty. Many people haven't gotten the word.

The Uniform Pay and Benefits Act of 1981 required that people ship their goods or make application for shipment within six months after separation. After applying, if personal hardship prevents shipment within six conthe they must reasonly to a months, they must reapply to a personal property shipping office for an extension. Retiring members still have up to one year for shipment.

The major reason people are unaware of the change seems to be that orders issued before Nov. 1, 1981, were annotated with the one-year figure, even though the separation date was after the change went into effect. But shipment of household goods is authorized for only 180 days after release from active duty. Check with local household goods offices for details.

Battalion Landing Team 3/8 digs in, fights mud was repeated 24 years later on Oct. 30 when contemporary armor rumbled ashore again in this devastated city. As if to confirm the cyclical nature of history, a unit from the same regiment that made the 1958 incursion on Lebanese soil, spilled out of the armored amphibians in 1982. Battalion Landing Team 3/8 is now dug in around this city's air terminal and the vehicles of Comapny B, 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion have become vital links in the security perimeter around that sector of West Beirut.

Most of the Marines who came ashore as the second U. S. Marine unit to serve as the American contingent of the multi-national force, reached Lebanese soil courtesy of the amphibian crews. "We were the first men ashore, and my men are damn proud of that," emphasized 1st Lieutenant Tom Ullrich, the 24-year-old amtrac platoon commander. Now that the initial landing is complete, the 24th MAU trackers have been assigned new duties that kept them high and dry-before the Mideast rains came along the southern portion of the U. call. Occasionally, the voice of a caller will belong to an individual who gots his kicks by saying things he's too timid to say face to An average of two of these calls are reported each month to the Provost Marshal's Office here, according to PMO statistics.

The difference between an obscene call and a nuisance call is content. According to Master Sergeant Louis Ventura, chief investigator of the Criminal Investigation Division, PMO, an obscene call involves vulgar language. "A nuisance call, however is any other kind of call however, is any other kind of call, like someone breathing into the phone," explained Ventura. "If a person receiving an obscene call pursues the conversation, the caller will most likely persist," he said. "It's better to hang-up than to give the caller something to keep talking about."

If there is a conversation, remembering what was said will greatly help CID. "A caller's accent or background noises can tell us a lot about him," said Vonture. Ventura.

Immediate reporting of an incident aids PMO and CID in tracking down the caller. Don't be afraid to report a call. Just notify the military police desk sergeant by calling 257.2123 to report an obscene or nuisance call.

Erik Stahl five miles later to win his first marathon in a record time of 2 hours, 15 minutes and 30 seconds. Gordon, a 23-year-old University of Montana graduate, shaved 43 seconds off of the previous Honolulu Marathon record set by Dean Matthews in 1979. In the 10th Annual running, Eileen Claugus of Sacramento, Calif. took the top female honors crossing the line at 2:41:11. Claugus, 27, led the entire race in the female division and claimed the victory unchallenged as the four-time women's champion. Patti Catalano could not enter due to an injury. Duncan McDonald, a three-time Honolulu Marathon winner, overtook Stahl at about 18 miles to finish second schead of Stahl. Shorter was unable to keep up with his over users of five minute winner, and seconds ahead of Stahl. Shorter was unable to keep up with his own pace of five minute miles and finished fifth with 2:22:16. Last year's winner, Jon Anderson, was eighth, clocking 2:23:11. The first Marine to cross the finish line was Corporal Bruce Hall, winner of the 1982 Windward Marathon. Although he was 30th overall, Hall, of Brigade Service Support Group, ran his race in 2:32:53. He was 13th in his age group, 20:29 years old.

How I survived 26 miles 385 yds.

by Cpl Charlie Marshall

by Cpl Charlie Marshall
... And the agony of da feet, da knees, da legs and da whole body that aches after running 26.2 miles.
More than 10,000 people were at the starting line ready to tackle the 10th Annual Honolulu Marathon Sunday and I was among the 49 percent that was ready to run their first marathon.
Honestly, I don't see what people get out of running marathons.
The body (using stored carbohydrates) can only run 18 miles tops as proven by the hundreds of athletes who stopped to walk at mile 15, 16, 17, 18, etc. (I stopped at 17 for a cigarette break.)
My knees finally gave out somewhere around the 20-mile marker. The thoughts flash through your mind: I'm not going to finish. This race is ridiculous. The pain. What mile are we on? Where's the next aid station? I snapped out of it when a runner passed me who was in worse condition.
Thinking about him made the pain go away.
Around mile 22 I had a limp that was away. Around mile 22 I had a limp that was getting sympathy from the crowds that gathered to watch us "heroes" run our bodies into the ground. It might appear that I sound a little negative about marathons, but that's negative about marathons, but that's only because my pride was hurting more than my knees. My estimated finishing time was 3:45 and at mile 20 I was just over three hours. From that point, if I had walked at a military cadence I could have finished 4:20. If I had limped at a military cadence I could have finished 4:40. If I had crawled at a military cadence I could have finished at five hours. I finished 5:05. Another disadvuntage about 10,000 people crowding the starting line is "people packing." Do you know what 10,000 peoples smell like? The only smell that was worse than

The only smell that was worse than that was rounding the corner at Kapiolani Park and getting a full whiff of the Honolulu Zoo.

of the Honolulu Zoo. As I headed for the finish line the juggler passed me. The Coast Guarda-man who ran it hackwards passed me ... even a "walka-thoner" passed me. Then there are the people who have the cuties asyings written on their shirts. "I survived Hurricane Iwa, but ... (on back) can I survive the Honolulu Marathon." I had to disagree with the couple that sported "Pride lasts longer than pain," on their shirts. They obviously weren't in my running shoes. One of the many friends I made out there had this comment, "This is a lot of fun, isn't it."

I thought to myself, "Yea, this is a lot of fun if you are a devoted masochistic. Only after I finished the distance could I really respect the Greek could I really respect the Greek messenger who died after he accomplished the mission. But, there ain't no message that important. Thank God for telephones.

In the Corps, you don't have to worry about a big medical bill when your child is delivered. Because low-cost medical care is available for the entire family. Plus you don't even have to pay insurance premiums for this coverage. Now what civilian job can offer that? It's just one of the advantages a Marine family has. When you add up security and pride in the Corps, medical, educational, retirement and other benefits, you've got some good reasons to....

by Cpt Charlie Marshall The Knneohe Bull Dogs

The Knbeone built Dogs completed a winning season Sanday by tenning up with the Schöfield Raiders to win their game in the 6th Annual Pan American International Friend-ship Bowl, 19-6.

The Bull Dog-Raider team took on a term made up of the Kalakana Monarchs and the Wheeler Rainbows and played 32 minutes of hard hitting football in Aloha Stadium.

Each team ran six plays and then surrendered the field to their co-team for six plays.

Kaneohe found the going tough Kaneone found the going tough at first, but then converted a Wheeler fumble (which was recovered by Schofield) into a touchdown. Schofield immedi-ately took charge after the fumble and quarterback Jason Lau marched his team down to the 27 Lau line where Kaneohe took yard.

Bull Dog William Avia picked Bull Dog William Aviu picked up 11 yards running asweep to the left side and, on the next play, Dave Roberts carried the ball around the right side for the touchdown and an early 6.0 lead. Neither the Rainbows nor the Monarchs could penetrate the Combined defenses of the Ball Dogs and the Raiders. Their quarterbacks were caught behind the lines for big losses hard hits the lines for big losses, hard hits caused fumbles and the challengers were hold to two first downs for the whole grune.

Schofield's Everatte Miller-Randell Harris passing team resulted in big yards and two touchdowns. When Miller wasn't throwing the bull he was rushing for the yards. Preventing a shutout, Kala-kaun's Brady Louis ran 15 yards for their only score. First Lieutenant Wade Blount, coach of the Schofield Raiders said, "Miller is like a miniature Lynn Swam. They just couldn't stop him." His post game comments were.

This is the best game my team has played all year. This is a great festival event and we hope to Have a friend who'd make a good Marine?

Then tell him about the Corps. By simply telling him about the jobs, skill and training opportunities available in the Corps, you could: Receive points toward a promotion; a meritorious promotion or extended leave. Your unit has full details. Refer to MCO 1130.62.

This is an excellent chance for you to do yourself and a friend a favor. See your hometown recruiter and help him sell the Corps to people you'd like to see in a proud Marine Corps uniform.
