LIBRARY PUBLICATIONS.

Bulletins.

The titles of new Books are entered on the Bulletin Boards of each Library. In the Bates Hall and Lower Hall the new books are displayed in cases at the desks. At each Branch and Delivery Station, in addition to its own list of fresh acquisitions, all of the new books added to the Central Library since April 17, 1893, are made known by the Lists printed every week. The Dorchester list is posted also at the Delivery Stations at Ashmont, Lower Mills, Neponset and Mattapan; and the Jamaica Plain list at the Delivery Stations at Roslindale and West Roxbury. Bates Hall books may be applied for at the several Branches and Delivery Stations, and they will be sent to the Branch or Delivery Station, on the day of application or the following day.

It is stated that persons found to have a copy of this play in their houses were guillotined. Written just before the death of Louis XVI., it was condemned for its loyalist sympathies. Marat, who is severely caricatured in the part of Duricrane, was the means of saving the author's life, against the decree of the Convention.

First represented Jan. 2, 1793. Followed in Sept., 1793, by Le Véritable ami des loix, ou le Républicain à l'épreuve, a drama of an opposite tendency.

ARCTIC REGIONS AND ANTARCTIC REGIONS.

These titles are printed, with some reduction and modification, substantially in the form in which they appear in the Public Catalogue, and represent the collection in the Library, on the Arctic and Antarctic regions and the countries and places included. No attempt has been made at a bibliography further than to reprint the card titles practically as they stand.

It will be understood that the geographical limit of the Arctic regions has in this list been placed at the Arctic Circle, although Alaska, Siberia, Hudson's Bay, Iceland, and Lapland are for convenience included, while the northern part of British America, Russia, and Norway are excluded.

See also in the Public Card Catalogue, the subjects Aurora Borealis and Whale Fishery.

ARCTIC REGIONS.

In the Lower Hall Catalogue of History, Biography and Travel, 2d ed., 1873, is a note by Dr. Justin Winsor, then Superintendent of this Library; it is here reprinted substantially as it first appeared, and no attempt has been made to extend it to date.

Bibliography. In Brown's "North-west passage," 1858 [701.11; 2263.5], which gives a summary of all the theories regarding the polar regions at the north, it is said that from Cabot to McClintock there had been 130 expeditions, of which 250 publications upon them had been published, of which 150 were in English. Since 1858 the bibliography of this subject has been steadily increased, and reference may be made to Allibone, pp. 639, 1006, 1723, 1873 and 1874. Summaries. There are various summaries of the history of northern exploration which will suffice the general reader.—Sargent's [704.11] to 1857; Kohl [308.4] to 1850; Hartwig, chapters 32 and 33. [704.14; 6263.7; in German, 2265.15]. Confined to the present century are Schmucker [704.17] and Barrow [709.13], the latter taking the voyages from 1818 to 1846, and abridging from official and other narratives. Companion volumes of the Edinburgh Cabinet library relate, the one "The northern coasts of America" [4319.10] to explorations by boat and sledge north from Hudson's bay; and the other, "Polar seas and regions" [810.15; 6269a.5] by Sir John Leslie and others, to discoveries by sea.

Theories. The existence of an open polar sea, asserted by Morton, [see Kane's expedition, 703.1; also Kane's "Access to an open polar sea," 6370a.50]; by Hayes [1705.1, chapter 32; address before the Academy of arts, Nov., 1861, in no. 918 of Living age; Journal of the American geographical and statistical society, 1870, vol. 3] and by recent German explorers [see no. 1436 of Living age], has been doubted by Edinburgh review, 1860, or Living age, nn. 861; by Quarterly review, 1865, or Living age, no. 1112; by Journal of the Royal geographical society, vol. 28, etc.; and has been maintained, however, by most recent geographers. See Living age, nos. 836, 844 and 845; Hours at home, June, 1868; St. Paul's, 1879, or Living age, no. 1310; New monthly magazine, 1868, or Living age, no. 1259. Bent, in the Journal of the Amer. geog. and stat. soc., 1872, vol. 2, and also as explained in Putnam's mag., Nov. and Dec., 1869, maintains that warm northward flowing currents from the Atlantic by the easterly side of Spitzbergen, and from the Pacific by Behring's straits, meet in the polar seas, and that the pole can be reached by following their courses. See the appendix to Richardson [704.8; 2367.7], on the physical geography of these regions; Barrington, on the possibility of approach to the north pole, [2367.8]; Babinet, in the Smithsonian report for 1869. The best approach to the pole is claimed for the Spitzbergen route by Belcher, Petermann, etc., [see Living age, nos. 845, 861, 1089 and 1112]; for that by Smith's sound by Hayes, Osborne, etc., [see Living age, no. 1082]; for that by sledge from Baffin's bay by Quarterly review, or Living age, no. 1112, etc.; and for that by Behring's straits by the French explorer, Lambert, [see Revue des deux mondes, 1868, or translation in Living age, no. 1274]. See Arctic regions in Chambers's Papers for the people, [385.1.3].

Successive explorations. The particular student will follow the course of discovery from the alleged efforts of the Greeks in the 3d and 4th centuries [see Living age, no. 844] down to the present time, of which the most prominent may be enumerated as follows:—For the Scandinavian explorations see Greenland, Iceland, Northmeu [in the 2d ed. of the Lower Hall Catalogue of History, Biography and Travel].

Arctic Regions

For the early voyages of the English, see the voyages to the North-west, 1496-1681, published by the Hakluyt society, [2264.5]; and those to the North-east, [2264.12]; those of the Cabots, [6267.1.1; see Cabot]; of Frobisher, 1576-78, to Hudson's straits, [2260.13.12; see Frobisher]; of Sir Humphrey Gilbert, [2264.8; see Gilbert]; of Barentz, 1594-96, the earliest Dutch effort for the North-east passage, [2277.12.1]; and of Hudson, 1608-10, both to the North-east and to the North-west, [see Hudson].

There had been no attempts to reach the pole for a century and a half when Phipps, in 1773, undertook it, [2260.16.1]. In the early part of this century, the ventures were mostly those of whalers, and such as Scoresby's, in 1805 [702.10; see Living age, no. 878], who adds a history of the whale fishery.

The systematic explorations of the present period began in 1818 with Ross and Parry's search for the North-west passage; and Buchan and Franklin's efforts to reach the pole by Spitzbergen [2273.1]. In 1819, 20, Parry [2360.12] explored Lancaster sound, while Franklin made an overland expedition from Hudson's bay, 1819-22, [6262.2]. In 1819-20, came Fisher's voyage, [2367.1]. In 1820-23, the Russian explorer, Wrangel, tried the Siberian route, [also in German, 4245.14; epitomized in Hartwig, 704.14, chapter 20]. In 1821-23, came Parry's second attempt by Repulse bay [2660.13]; and, in 1824, his third by Prince Regent's inlet [6269a.4]. For all his voyages, 1819-24, see 820.22. Franklin's second land expedition followed in 1825 [2270.14; 6262.2]. Beechey was sent by Behring's straits to meet, 1825-28, both Franklin and Parry from the East, [702.13]. Ross, in 1829-33, made his second expedition, the first with steam auxiliary [2360.8; 2370.10; 4468.6; see Allibone, under Ross, Sir John]. Back was sent, in 1833, to find Ross [703.12, and his narrative is supplemented by King's, 704.18]. In 1836-39, the officers of the Hudson's bay company prosecuted explorations to the North, and their narratives were given by Simpson [625.2].

Reorganized efforts were made by the despatching of Franklin, 1845, in the "Erebus" and "Terror," and a journal of their voyage to Disco, sent home by a Tender, is given in All the year round, or Living age, no. 797. Rae's expedition by land was despatched in 1846.

Subsequent expeditions for some years were sent out with the chief object of discovering traces of Franklin. In 1845, there were three despatched, and a summary of their results is given in chapter 1 of Richardson, [704.8]. See also Harper's monthly, vol. 2. In 1850 there were five new ones sent out. The first comprised Austin in the "Resolute," Omman in the "Assistance," and Osborn in the "Pioneer," and the latter's "Stray Leaves" [709.7, reviewed in Living age, vol. 34] gives the earliest experience of a screw-steamer. See also Osborn's imaginative account of Franklin's last voyage [Once a week, Oct. 22 and 29, Nov. 5, 1859, or no. 814 of Living age, or 707.19; also his search for Franklin in Living age, no. 815 and 854]. The second was under Ross. The third was Penny's [see Harper, vol. 1, and the Examiner review of his journal in Living age, vol. 36]. The fourth was under Forsyth, in the "Prince Albert." The fifth was the first Grinnell (American) expedition in the "Advance" and "Rescue," under De Haven, [702.2; 702.3; see Harper's monthly, vols. 4 and 8].

Maclure, the same year, first made the North-west passage, and his discovery is reviewed by Osborn, [704.4]. For continued search for Franklin, see Bellot, 1851-52, [617.13; also Harper, vol. 12]; Seemann to 1851 [2274.6]; Richardson's boat expeditions [704.8; 2367.7; 2367.16]; also McClraith's Life of Richardson, 1893 [1566.2; 4549a.16, reviewed from Examiner, in Living age, no. 1255]; Belcher, 1852 [702.1]; and MacDonnell [703.10]. See accounts of various sledge expeditions in Living age, vols. 33, 34 and 35. Also index to British parliamentary papers in Bates Hall Index, under Arctic, p. 336, and under Franklin, p. 340.

In 1853, came Dr. Kane's [also in French, 6291.1, 1860] second Grinnell expedition [703.1; epitomized in 1708.1], on which Morton first saw the open polar sea, and of which Hayes tells an episodic story in his Arctic boat journey [706.18; reviews in Living age, nos. 833, 838, 839 and 842]. In 1854, Rae, of the Hudson bay company, got the first relics of Franklin. In 1855, Hartstein was despatched in search of Kane. In 1858, McClintock ascertained the fate of Franklin, [706.13; 706.14; in French, with new illustrations, 6291.1, 1860; epitomized by Osborn in Living age, no. 815; the first accounts to the press are given in no. 807; and McClintock's address to the Royal geog. soc. in no. 819]. In Living age, no. 830, there is a chronology of the search for Franklin. Also Journal of the Royal geog. soc. [6265.2, passim]. The North-west passage being found to be of no commercial importance [see papers on it in Harper's, vol. 9, 14 and 20] and Franklin's fate discovered, the efforts of subsequent explorers have been to reach the pole. Dr. Hayes has reached by Smith sound the highest point yet as described in his "Open polar sea," [also in 2367.11; in French, with illus., 6291.1, 1868]. C. F. Hall's [701.14, also see Living age, nos. 959 and 1121; and Harper, vol. 25] efforts have been directed incidentally to discover further traces of Franklin's crew; and in a later expedition, he made discovery of such, 1860, [see Living age, no. 1325].

In 1868, several English, French and German expeditions were planned, and a summarized account of them will be found in the New monthly magazine, or Living age, no. 1259.

Dr. Wisnor's memoranda stop here. The principal expeditions since 1869 to date have been the Polar expedition in 1870, 71; the Austrian in 1872-74; by Nares in the "Alert," in 1875, 76; Nordenskiöld in "Vega," in 1878, 79; DeLong in the "Jeannette," 1879-81; De Long search expedition, in 1881, 82; International Polar expedition, in 1882, 83; Lady Franklin Bay Polar expedition (Greely's), in 1881-84; Greely relief expedition, in 1884; and Peary expedition, 1891, 92.

Hakluyt [6251 10]; and are summarized in Rundall's "Voyages to the North West" [2264.5]; Fox Bourne's "English Seamen" [4516.3.1, ch. 9], and in other recapitulations of Arctic voyaging. Davis's maps are all lost; but his results are preserved in Molineaux's Globe in the Library of the Middle Temple in London. Davis's third voyage brought the English search for Cathay to a close. His own account of these voyages is in his "Worldes Hydrographical Description," published in London by Thomas Dawson, 1595, one of the rarest of books. The presentation copy to Prince Henry, with his arms and a very curious manuscript addition, is in the Lenox Library.

Describes the best efforts made to reach the north pole by following the coast line of East Greenland, and illustrates the routes by maps on a large scale. Dr. Chavanne in Petermann's Mittheilungen, 1874, discusses the results of recent discoveries. Capt. G. E. Tyson's "Arctic experiences" [2365.62] is the fullest account of the Polaris on the other side of Greenland, giving a map, a biography of Capt. Hall, and reasons for not believing in an open polar sea.

A summary of the Arctic discoveries down to that of the "Polaris" forms the first chapter of Tyson's book, and on p. 414, etc., he gives a chronology of Arctic explorations; while, for the general reader, the whole ground is gone over popularly in Hyde's "Frozen zone and its explorers," with maps [1705.6]. — Note in Bulletin of B. — A whaling cruise to Baffin's bay and the Gulf of Boothia; and an account of the rescue of the crew of the "Polaris." London, 1874. Illus. Map. 8°. 2365.59

Noteworthy as showing how the successful penetration of ice-fields by the Dundee steam whalers confirms Admiral Osborn's expectations in 1850 — when he commanded the first screw steamer in these regions — that the use of this power was to reduce the risk of Arctic adventure to a minimum: and in the appendix is given the report to the Royal geographical society on the scientific results yet attained, and the arguments for renewed efforts to penetrate to the pole by the way of Smith's sound, indicated as most likely to give success, from the results of the Polaris expedition, which is made the subject of one of the chapters of the text, the account being chiefly drawn from the information of Dr. Bessels, one of the rescued crew. A popular summary of the Polaris expedition has also been given in a new ed. of Epes Sargent's "Arctic adventure," now called "Wonders of the Arctic world" [1705.3], and in Beach's "Science record" for 1874 [7915.50]. Capt. Markham's book has a map giving the Polaris track, and showing the configuration of the extreme northerly shores of the passage. An article by C. R. Markham, advocating an English expedition in 1874, appeared in the Contemporary review, Oct., 1873, and in Living age, no. 1535; and Dr. Hayes has covered the subject again in the N. A. review, Jan., 1874. — Note from Bulletin of this Library for April, 1874, p. 239.

The expeditions of Sir Martin Frobisher began in 1576; his second voyage was in 1577; and his third voyage in 1578. A general account of these three voyages was written by George Beste, and published, 1578, as "A True Discourse of Discoverie by the North Weast," which contains two maps, one a Mappemonde, the most significant since Mercator's, representing "Frobisher's Streights," cutting through North America at the North, and opening a passage to India; and the other is of the straits alone. This book is in the Lenox and Carter-Brown libraries. Hakluyt, in his third volume, 1600 [6251.10], reprinted the account, and Admiral Collinson has reproduced the maps in a volume edited for the Hakluyt Society [2264.52], with an introduction giving the bibliography of the early voyages, and appendixes, with transcripts of State papers relating to the expeditions. Collinson's book contains also an account, by Edward Sellman, of the third voyage. A rare account, "A True Reporte," etc., of the 1577 Voyage by Settle, is in the Carter-Brown Catalogue [C.R. 6.2.11, p. 266] and of this account a fac-simile reprint has been issued privately by Mr. Brown [2317.58; G.304.21], and it is included in Brydges's Restituta, 1814, vol. 2 [*2155.3.2; *G.46.1.2]. A French account of this 1577 voyage, printed 1578, is in the Lenox and Carter-Brown libraries. "De Martini Frobisleri Angli Navigatione in regiones occidentis et Septentrionis. Narratio historica ex Gallico sermone in Latinum translata per D. Joan. Tho. Fregium." 44 leaves, 1580, is on *G.356.22. This translation was reprinted at Hamburg, 1675, [*2367.2]. Other general accounts of the three voyages are contained in Biddle's "Life of Cabot" [4744.8, ch. 12]; in Pinkerton's Voyages [2260.13.12]; and in Raudall's "Voyages to the North-West" [2264.5]. Also see Fox Bourne's "English Seaman" [4516.3.1, ch. 6].

Collinson gives a brief life of Frobisher, and refers for authorities to Fuller's "Worthies of England" [2441.2]; Campbell's "Lives of the Admirals" [2450.11]; Barrow's "Naval Worthies" [564.8]; "Notes and Queries" [3159.1, June, 1839]; and Miller's "History of Doncaster." There are also brief popular accounts in Southey's "Admirals" [388.5.5], etc. See the New England Historic Genealogical Register [2335.1.3], where is another engraving of the portrait given in Collinson. The Contemporary Review, 1873, or Living Age, No. 1505, has an examination of the results of Frobisher's first voyage.

“* The eight names against which is the letter Q, had a Q set opposite to them in the margin of the original paper, denoting, as is supposed, that the individuals were Quakers. It is said in Sewell’s History of the Quakers that there arrived in Boston two other Quakers in July of this year, namely, Mary Fisher and Ann Austin, who were very ill treated on their arrival by Gov. Bellingham, though there was yet no law against Quakers.”

HYGIENE.

PERSONAL AND PUBLIC.

These titles are printed, with some reduction and modification, substantially in the form in which they appear in the Public Catalogues of the Bates Hall and Lower Hall, and represent the collection in the Library, on Health and Hygiene, together with many subordinate and allied topics. No attempt has been made at a bibliography further than to reprint the card titles practically as they stand.

This is a subject which, at several points, merges into and perhaps ought properly to include others not introduced below. In Personal Hygiene, the subjects of Diseases, Medicine, and particularly of Physiology, relate closely to bodily health. Works dealing with special portions or functions of the body, as with the Ears, Eyes, Teeth, Skin, Hair, Mouth, Digestion, bear also upon this subject. Public Hygiene and State Medicine are indirectly concerned with the study of Bacteria, Bacilli, and the Germ diseases, also with Poisons and Patent medicines, and less directly with Population and Statistics. The list however is kept advisedly within its present limits, and separate from the territory of Medicine and Physiology on one side and of Sociology on the other.

The Trustees wish to acknowledge the courtesy of Dr. Henry P. Walcott, Chairman of the Massachusetts State board of health, who has examined and approved the general plan of this Catalogue.

Cremation.

In the Bulletin of this Library for July, 1874, vol. 2, No. 30, p. 268 [*6200a.32.2], is a bibliographical note on this subject. It is here reprinted with some necessary alterations. A considerable number of writers have discussed, from historical and antiquarian points of view, the whole subject of sepulture, burial rites, and funerals. Besides encyclopædias, travels in India, Egypt, Rome, etc., and books on manners and customs generally, see among the older authorities, Bosio, De Roma sotteranea [4750.50]; also in Aringhi's Roma sotteranea 2750.1; Gutherius, De jure manium, in Grævius, vol. 5 and 12 [2950.1]; Kirchmannus, De funere Romanorum [Astor Lib.]; Laurentius, De funeribus antiquorum, etc., in Gronovius, v. 11 [2960.2]; Meursius, De funere, in Gronovius, v. 12 [2960.2], and same in Meursius, Opera [2210.2]; Montfaucon, Les funérailles des Grecs; des Romains; des nations barbares; in his Works, v. 5, and supplement, also v. 5 [2220.1 and 2]; Muret, Cérémonies funèbres de toutes les nations [Astor Lib.]; and same, transl. by Lorain [*6239.21]; Nicolai, De sepulcris Hebræorum [Astor Lib.]; Pancinius, De ritu sepeliendi apud veteres Christianos; Pomey, Libitina, seu de funeribus apud Romanos, etc. [Astor Lib.]; Porcacchi, Funerali antichi [Astor Lib.] of which there is a French translation; Quenstedt, De sepultura veterum, in Gronovius, v. 11 [2960.2]; Spelman, Canons concerning burial, or De sepultura, in his Works [2600.3]; Spondanus, Cœmeteria sacra [Astor Lib.].

A more modern discussion of the sepulture question arose in France, chiefly during and after the French Revolution, with reference principally to the same evils which occasioned the English parliamentary investigations and consequent enactments on the subject, half a century later; viz., the evils of interment in or under church edifices, and in the midst of towns. The authority most cited in this discussion was the Italian Piattoli, who investigated the subject by request of the government of Tuscany, and whose work was mostly transferred (with acknowledgment) by the French physician Vieq d'Azry into his own publication on the subject, entitled Essai sur les lieux et les dangers des sépultures, in v. 6 of the Œuvres de Vieq d'Azry [3720.11]. Other authorities for this stage of the discussion are, Cambry, Rapports sur les sépultures [Bost. Athenæum]; Girard, Des tombeaux, ou de l'influence des institutions funèbres sur les mœurs [Athenæum]; Maret, Mémoire sur l'usage d'enterrer les morts dans les églises, etc. [Astor Lib.]; other works by Navier, a physician of Chalons (1775). Hagenot, a professor at Montpellier, etc. The material of Piattoli as used by Vieq d'Azry was used again by Dr. Allen, of New York, in a pamphlet published by him in that city in 1822 [7762.37], and more fully by Dr. Pascalis, of New York, in another pamphlet which appeared in 1823 [M. Pph. v. 18]. Both these refer, among other authorities, to a report in the document of the New York City Board of Health of 1806 [No. 1 in *Med. Pph. v. 1] made by Dr. Miller, Mr. John Pintard and Mr. Van Zandt, on interment in cities. These New York publications had reference, more particularly, to cholera or yellow fever epidemics.

The English discussion of the question of intra-mural or extra-mural interment is presented pretty fully in the evidence before a parliamentary commission [R. Ct. 1842, v. 10] and in the subsequent reports, one by Edwin Chadwick in 1843 [R. Cr., 1843, v. 12; also 7063.9], and another by Lords Carlisle and Ashley, and Mr. Chadwick and Dr. Southwood Smith [R. Cr. 1850, v. 21; also 7063.5].

In the more ancient authorities, above quoted, the "cremation" (or burning) of the dead is discussed mainly in a historical manner as one of several methods of disposing of the remains. The French, American and English discussions next referred to only dealt with it incidentally or by implication; what they sought, and have obtained, was, the use of rural cemeteries instead of city or intra-mural burials. The renewal of the general question of disposing of the dead, which is at present in progress, is specifically directed to the "cremation" of the remains. For this particular view, see Grimm, Ueber das Verbrennen der Leichen, in the Transactions of the Berlin Academy of Sciences, 1849 [3322.2]; Jamieson, Origin of cremation, in Transactions of Royal Society of Edinburgh for 1815 [3360.1]; "The merits of cremation," a paper by P. Frazer, jr., in the Penn Monthly of June, 1874 [*5254.50, 1874], reprinted separately. The following, on points connected with interment, may also be consulted: Rossi, Roma sotteranea, 1864, etc. [4750.52]; a translation and compilation from Rossi by Northcott and Brownlow, London, 1869 [4752.25]; Burial of the dead, an Essay by Dr. Jacob Bigelow, in his "Modern inquiries" [4407.4]; Peydeau, Cereueils et inhumations au moyen âge; in Annales archéologiques, v. 14, 15, for 1854-5; [*3361.1.14.15]; Rauch, Intra-mural interments (pamphlet,) Chicago, 1866 [3796.43].

Maximilian I. the hero described under the name of Tewrdanneckh, was, in all probability, the author of some portions of this work, in conjunction with his chaplain, Melchior Pfintzing, or, at all events, its prompter. . . . The work is illustrated by 118 wood-engravings designed by Hans Scheufelein, a pupil of Albert Dürer, and engraved by Jost von Negker, probably also by Scheufelein himself and other artists. — Introd.

The Dudleian Lectures.

The following extract from Josiah Quincy's History of Harvard University will serve as a fit introduction to the list of lectures upon the foundation endowed by Paul Dudley, in 1755:

"By his last will he gave to Harvard College one hundred pounds sterling . . . the interest to be applied to supporting an anniversary sermon or lecture, to be preached at the College, on the following topics:

"The first lecture was to be for 'the proving, explaining, and proper use and improvement of the principles of Natural Religion;' the second, 'for the confirmation, illustration, and improvement of the great articles of the Christian Religion;' the third, 'for the detecting, convicting, and exposing the idolatry, errors, and superstitions of the Romish Church;' the fourth, 'for maintaining, explaining, and proving the validity of the ordination of ministers or pastors of the churches, and so their administration of the sacraments or ordinances of religion, as the same hath been practised in New England, from the first beginning of it, and so continued to this day.' The instrument proceeds to declare, that he does not intend to invalidate Episcopal ordination, or that practised in Scotland, at Geneva, and among the Dissenters in England, and in this country, all which I esteem very safe, scriptural, and valid.' He directed these subjects to be discussed in rotation, one every year, and appointed the President of the College, the Professor of Divinity, the pastor of the First Church in Cambridge, the Senior Tutor of the College, and the pastor of the First Church in Roxbury, trustees of these lectures, which commenced in 1755, and have since been annually continued without intermission," until 1858, when they were suspended. In 1888 they were resumed, Prof. Fisher, of Yale University, being the lecturer of that year.

In the discourse by Alexander Young, D. D., delivered May 13, 1846, is a list of all lectures up to that date, with the texts of the discourses, and a statement whether printed or not.

The library would gladly receive copies of those not now in its file.

Fac-simile of the Freeman's Oath

FAC-SIMILE OF THE FIRST DRAFT OF THE FREEMEN'S OATH, IN THE HANDWRITING OF GOVERNOR JOHN WINTHROP, AND OF THE SERVANT'S OATH TOGETHER WITH A MODIFICATION OF THE FREEMEN'S OATH, BOTH IN THE HANDWRITING OF GOVERNOR THOMAS DUDLEY. WITH A NOTE BY THE HON. MELLEN CHAMBERLAIN, LL.D.

On May 7, 1629, a little more than two months after the Charter of Charles I. to the Massachusetts-Bay Company passed the seals, a form of an oath was drawn under the direction of the Corporation in England, for John Endicott and his Council, who had been authorized to set up a local government for the plantation at Salem in New England.

This oath began with a promise to "be faithful and loyal unto our Sovereign Lord, the King's Majesty, and to his Heirs and Successors." But when Winthrop arrived at Salem, June 12, 1630, with the Charter, the English corporation was transferred to Massachusetts, and that which in England had been a great land company became an incipient Commonwealth with different and vastly greater interests, purposes, and requirements. Among other changes brought about by the transfer of the corporation was that in the number and character of the officers needed to establish and maintain a state. Nor was it long before this company came to entertain new views in respect to the political and ecclesiastical relations of its officers; for, after some time the oath of allegiance was omitted, and instead the governor was sworn to demean himself "according to the laws of God, and for the advancement of His gospel, the laws of this land, and of the good of the people of this plantation." This was not all; for an oath of the same general tenor was required of officers of every grade down to beadles and searchers of leather.

Having thus secured, as they thought, the fidelity of their rulers, they sought to make sure of their own; and to that end was the early regulation that none should become freemen of the corporation, or legal citizens, unless they were members of the church and took a prescribed oath of fidelity to the Commonwealth. This was no formal ceremony, but a most significant and substantial matter: so much so, that May 14, 1634, it was required of all inhabitants, and somewhat earlier, of every man above twenty years old and six months resident as a householder or sojourner, and not enfranchised. Oaths were multiplied and their forms changed with changing circumstances.

The document — of which following pages present a fac-simile — is the original draft of the first form of the Freeman's Oath adopted by the Massachusetts colony. It differs essentially from that presented by the Company in England, seen in 1 Col. Rec. page 351, and is substantially the same as that on page 353; and therefore, presumably is the oath in force before its modifications by the General Court, May 14, 1634. It was written by John Winthrop. As an autograph of the first and greatest Governor of Massachusetts, it is an interesting paper, the value of which is enhanced by the fact that it bears upon its reverse a modified draft of the Oath, as well as of the Servant's Oath, also shown in fac-simile, in the handwriting — even more rarely met with than Winthrop's — of Thomas Dudley, the second governor, and in some respects the most remarkable of those men who shaped the social and ecclesiastical policy of Massachusetts. The title he proposed for the document — the Oath of a man free or to be made free — was adopted with a slight change; but not his provision in respect to the choice of deputies. Winthrop's form was followed.

But there may be those who will regard every other interest attaching to these documents as secondary to the fact that the first of them is the original form of the first paper printed in British America.

Under March, 1639, is the following entry in Governor Winthrop's Journal:

Fac-simile of the Freeman's Oath

"Mo. 1. A printing house was begun at Cambridge by one Stephen Daye, at the charge of Mr. Glover, who died on sea hitherward. The first thing which was printed was the freemen's oath; the next was an almanac made for New England by Mr. William Pierce, mariner; the next was the Psalms newly turned into metre."

There is no known copy of the Freeman's Oath, or of William Pierce's Almanack thus printed — the oldest American almanac known to be extant is a single copy of that of Samuel Danforth, printed in 1648, by Matthew Daye, and formerly in the Brinley collection. Of the Bay-Psalm Book the Library is in possession of two copies.

The Trustees regard it as good fortune for the Library to have acquired by purchase at a nominal price a document which is unique and associated with the first printing press set up in the United States.

TRANSCRIPTIONS OF THE MANUSCRIPTS.

On following pages are given transcriptions of the obscure handwriting of John Winthrop and of the more legible handwriting of Thomas Dudley. All interlineations and cancelled words are reproduced, and each line stands as in the manuscripts. William P. Upham, Esq., and Abner C. Goodell, Esq., to whom the thanks of the Trustees are due, have made independent transcriptions, which have proved to be almost identical. Where a difference of opinion has arisen, each point has been settled after a careful comparison of the two readings.

TRACTS

OF THE PERIOD OF ENGLISH HISTORY COVERED BY THE REIGN OF CHARLES I., THE CIVIL WAR, AND THE COMMON-WEALTH, 1625-1660.

In 1889, William P. Upham, Esq., presented this Library with thirteen bound volumes, containing over two hundred works relating to the period above mentioned. These books once belonged to the Reverend Charles Wentworth Upham, and must have formed a part of the material upon which he drew in his historical studies.

In presenting the titles of the works given by Mr. Upham, it has seemed best to give in addition such works in the general collection, and especially in the Prince Library, as also bear upon the events, which relate so closely to the settlement and early history of Plymouth and the Massachusetts Bay. At the end of the list are given the few titles of Mr. Upham's gift, covering a later period. The Upham books may be recognized by the shelf-numbers, which range from **H.87.2 to **H.87.18.

London is understood to be the place of imprint, unless another place is mentioned.

By the King.

A Proclamation against the disorderly Transporting His Maiesties Subiects to the Plantations within the parts of America.

He Kings most Excellent MAIESTIE being informed that great numbers of His Subiects haue bin, and are euery yeare transported into those parts of America, which haue been granted by Patent to severall persons, and there settle themselves, some of them with their families and whole estates: amongst which numbers there are also many idle and refractory humors, whose onely or principall end is to live as much as they can without the reach of authority: His Maiestie hauing taken the premisses into consideration, is nunded to restraine for the time to come such promiscuous and disorderly departing out of the Realme; And doth therefore straitly charge and command all and euery the Officers and Ministers of his severall Ports in England, Wales, and Barwick, That they doe not hereafter permit or suffer any persons, being Subsidie men, or of the value of Subsidie men, to imbarque themselves in any of the said Ports, or the members thereof, for any of the said Plantations, without Licence from His Maiesties Commissioners for Plantations first had and obtained in that behalfe; Nor that they admit to be imbarqued any persons under the degree or value of Subsidie-men, without an Attestation or Certificate from two Justices of the Peace liuing next the place where the party last of all, or lately then before dwelt, that he hath taken the Oaths of Supremacie, and Allegiance, and like Testimony from the Minister of the Parish of his conuersation and conformity to the Orders and discipline of the Church of England. And further His Maiesties expresse Will and pleasure is, That the Officers and Ministers of his said severall Ports, and the Members thereof, do returne to His Maiesties said Commissioners for Plantations euery halfe yeare a particular and perfect List of the names and qualities of all such persons as shall from time to time be imbarqued in any of the said Ports for any of the said Plantations. And of these His Maiesties Royall Commands, all the Officers and Ministers of His said Ports, and the Members thereof are to take care, as they Will answer the neglect thereof at their perils.

Giuen at Our Court at Whitehall the last day of Aprill, in the thirteenth yeare of Our Reigne.

God saue the King.

Imprinted at London by Robert Barker, Printer to the Kings most Excellent Maiestie: And by the Assignes of JOHN BILL. 1637.

Some years before the date of this Proclamation the king's government became alarmed at the self-expatriation of many Puritans of substance to New England. Hutchinson (Hist. of Mass. i. 41) says, "In the year 1635, there was a great addition made to the numbers of inhabitants: among others, Mr. Vane, afterwards Sir Henry Vane, was admitted to the freedom of the colony on the 3d of March; and at the same time Mr. Harlakenden, a gentleman of good family and estate. There were many others; as Mr. Bellingham, Mr. Dummer, of the magistrates; Mr. R. Mather, Mr. Norton, Mr. Shepard and Mr. Peters, of the ministers, who came over in this and the last year, determined to take up their abode, and many other persons of figure and distinction were expected to come over, some of which are said to have been prevented by express order of the king, as Mr. Pym, Mr. Hampden, Sir Arthur Haslerigg, Oliver Cromwell, etc. I know this is questioned by some authors; but it appears plainly, by a letter from Lord Say and Seal to Mr. Vane, and a letter from Mr. Cotton to the same nobleman as I take it, though his name is not mentioned, and an answer to certain demands made by him, that his Lordship himself, and Lord Brooke and others, were not without thought of removing to New-England, and that several other persons of quality were in treaty about their removal also, but undetermined whether to join the Massachusettses or to settle a new colony."

The emigration became so serious that, in 1637, and probably on the suggestion of Laud, the proclamation here given in fac-simile was issued. Hume thus alludes to it (History of England, chap. 52, § 9): "The puritans, restrained in England, shipped themselves off for America, and laid there the foundations of a government which possessed all the liberty, both civil and religious, of which they found themselves bereaved in their native country: but their enemies, unwilling that they should any where enjoy ease and contentment, and dreading, perhaps, the dangerous consequences of so disaffected a colony, prevailed on the king to issue a proclamation, debarring these devotees access even into those inhospitable deserts. Eight ships, lying in the Thames, and ready to sail were detained by order of the council: and in these were embarked Sir Arthur Haslerigg, John Hambden, John Pym, and Oliver Cromwell, who had resolved for ever to abandon their native country, and fly to the other extremity of the globe, where they might enjoy lectures and discourses of any length or form which pleased them. The king had afterwards full leisure to repent this exercise of his authority."

The object of the proclamation was two-fold. First, to quell the rising puritan spirit in England by denying to it the forlorn hope of indulging its "refractory humors" in quiet beyond the Atlantic; for subsidy-men, were not permitted to leave their native land without a license from Her Majesty's Commissioners of Plantations; nor could any one embark who was under the degree of subsidy-man "without an Attestation or Certificate from two Justices of the Peace living next the place where the party last of all, or lately then before dwelt, that he hath taken the Oaths of Supremacie and Allegiance, and like Testimony from the Minister of the Parish of his conversation and conformity to the Orders and discipline of the Church of England."

The other purpose was to restrain the emigration of those whose property was needed for government revenues. These were the subsidy-men, and their character is sufficiently described in the following extract from Hume (History of England, Appendix iv. § 4): "Subsidies and fifteenths are frequently mentioned by historians; but neither the amount of these taxes nor the method of levying them have been well explained. It appears, that the fifteenths formerly corresponded to the name, and were that proportionable part of the moveables: but a valuation having been made in the reign of Edward III. that valuation was always adhered to, and each town paid unalterably a particular sum, which the inhabitants themselves assessed on their fellow-citizens. The same tax in corporate towns was called a tenth; because there at first it was a tenth of the moveables. The whole amount of a tenth and a fifteenth throughout the kingdom, or a fifteenth as it is often more concisely called, was about £29,000. The amount of a subsidy was not invariable, like that of a fifteenth. . . . We may learn from the subsidy bills, that one subsidy was given for four shillings in the pound on land, and two shillings and eight pence on moveables throughout the counties; a considerable tax, had it been strictly levied: but this was only the ancient state of a subsidy. During the reign of James, there was not paid the twentieth part of that sum. . . . The advantage of every change was taken against the crown; and the crown could obtain the advantage of none: and to make the matter worse, the alterations which happened in property during this age were generally unfavorable to the crown. The small proprietors, or twenty pound men, went continually to decay; and when their estates were swallowed up by a greater, the new purchaser increased not his subsidy. So loose indeed is the whole method of rating subsidies, that the wonder was not how the tax should continually diminish, but how it yielded any revenue at all: it became at last so unequal and uncertain, that the parliament was obliged to change it into a land tax."

The issue of this Proclamation as a stretch of the prerogative, was noticed at the time, and has since passed into the history of England. Although the Proclamation is found in the collections of printed documents of that day, its existence, in an original and perfectly preserved broadside copy, in the Boston Public Library, at the end of two hundred and fifty-seven years is a circumstance of interest, since it was aimed chiefly against the Boston Puritans.

INDEX OF TITLES RELATING TO AMERICA IN THE "COLECCION DE DOCUMENTOS INÉDITOS PARA LA HISTORIA DE ESPAÑA."

In this list of titles I have tried to give the full title of every document in volumes I-CVIII of the collection which concerns the history of America. The titles are given as they appear, and no attempt has been made to verify names or dates, except as this could be done with the document at hand. The date of the documents, and the places from which letters are dated, have been added to the titles. The arrangement is alphabetical, by the names of the writers, whenever they could be discovered. The titles under a single name are arranged as far as possible in the order in which they were written. The few notes are, for the most part, those prepared by Navarrete while he was editor of the "Coleccion."

COLONNADE ROW.

From West street south. Originally a uniform range of twenty-four brick houses, built in 1811 [Charles Bulfinch, architect], and "occupied by the élite of Boston society. Each house had, or was intended to have, a row of free-stone columns, in front, supporting a piazza, —hence the name. In 1824, after the visit of Lafayette, Amos Lawrence, and other occupants of the row, petitioned to have Colonnade row called Fayette place; but it failed to receive official sanction, though it continued to be so called by the residents."—[Drake's Landmarks of Boston.]

TREMONT STREET, FROM COURT STREET, SOUTH.

From "A view of Court and Tremont streets, Boston, with the new iron building," in Gleason's Pictorial, July 5, 1856. Showing the east side, as it then appeared, from Samuel S. Pierce's grocery, on the Court street corner, occupying, in part, the house in which Washington lodged during his visit in 1789 (which stood until 1883), to Horticultural building. The "new iron building," on Court street, next below S. S. Pierce's, was built on the site of the parsonage house of Brattle square church.

ROADS.

In the Public Card Catalogue, under the names of countries and states, division Public works; and under names of cities and towns, division Streets, are titles of works bearing more or less directly upon this topic. To A. A. Pope's Catalogue of books, pamphlets and articles on the construction and maintenance of roads, Boston, 1892 [shelf-no. 6175.73] have been added the shelf-nos. of many works in this library.

Many interesting titles on roads are in this library's Manuscript index of U. S. documents, which may be seen by request. The documents, however, do not deal with the construction of roads, but are of value from a historical and topographical side of the subject.

COREA, JAPAN, AND CHINA.

These titles are printed, with some reduction and modification, substantially in the form in which they appear in the Public Card Catalogue, and represent the collection in the Library on Corea, Japan, and China. No attempt has been made at a bibliography further than to reprint the card titles practically as they stand. Consult titles, under Asia, in the Card Catalogue for works which may incidentally bear upon these countries.

Holy journey made by the Tycoon, or Shogun, from Tokio to Nikko. 8 v. 8°. *5025.17
Each of these vols. is composed of a continuous sheet of paper, on which are presented sketches made and colored by hand, and form a panorama of the road and its surroundings from Tokio to Nikko. With the exception of the houses and trees, these scenes give a tolerable idea of the region. At intervals are circular pieces of gilt. The largest signifies where the Tycoon spent the night, the next in size where he took his principal meal, and the smallest, where he took his less important meal.

Philosophy.

See also, in this list, the divisions, Literature (name Legge); Religion.

The following note is reprinted from the Bulletin, vol. 3, no. 40, p. 178, June, 1877.

Whatever of philosophy the Chinese have had is mainly a set of rules of practical public and private morals and conduct; the Chinese being apparently further off than any other of the Asiatic nations from what is now called mental philosophy. For the "Chinese Classics," including the writings of Confucius, Mencius, and Lao-tsze, see the Chinese text with English translation by Legge [5012.1], with useful prefatory accounts of these writers and their books, and several lists of translations and other works consulted by the author, and without the Chinese text [5015.15]; and for two reviews of Legge's works, see vols. 129 and 132 of the Edinburgh Review [3152.1]; the same English version alone of Confucius and Mencius [5014.12]; and a French version by Panthier [3024.5], who has also translated the poems called Shu-king [3010.3, and in 3022.50, v. 2]. There is also a translation into English by Collie of the "Four Books" of Confucius [424.2]. See also an English version of the writings of Confucius and Mencius, with a miscellany of Chinese ethical selections appended, by Loomis [3023.3]. For Mencius, see also his "Life and Works," with essays and notes by Legge [5014.19]; and Julien's Latin version of his writings [5014.2]; and for Lao-tsze, the head of the 'Taou or Tau sect, who was a grade more metaphysical than Confucius and Mencius, see his "Speculations on metaphysics," etc., translated by Chalmers [3025.4]; Ampère's "La troisième religion de la Chine" [in 3015.21]; the "Livre de la voie et de la vertu" in French by Julien; and a paper on the life and opinions of Lao-tsze by A. Rémusat, in the Mémoires of the French Acad. des Inscriptions [3292.2.7]. There is an elaborate life of Confucius, in French, by Amiot, from the Chinese, with curious illustrations, in the Jesuit work, "Mémoires concernant l'histoire, etc., des Chinois par les missionnaires de Pe Kin" [3013.2.12], and short notices of him are in Partou's "People's book of biography" [1522.10], Goodrich's "Famous men of ancient times" [549.39, and v. 2 of 1869.1], and there is a good article on him and his works by Turner, in the "Bibliotheca sacra" [5310.2.3.], and another will be found in the "National Quarterly Review," for March, 1875 [7374.1.30]. See also, for information about Confucius, ch. xviii, p. 326, of Meadows's "The Chinese and their rebellions" [3017.7.], where Confucianism is considered the national doctrine; also, the references in the History and Biography Catalogue, p. 60; and information about the Chinese religious systems and related ideas is in Williams's "Middle Kingdom" [696.12], Nevius's "China" [696.20], and in other accounts of the country and its inhabitants; and a paper (in French) on the study of philosophy among the ancient Chinese, by De Guignes, in the Mémoires of the French Acad. des Inscriptions [3212.1.38], dated in 1770 or 71, may be read for historical purposes.

The Trustees are indebted to Mr. C. W. Ernst for the facts contained in the following note:

Wiswall was born in 1601, came here in one of a fleet of twenty-four ships, in 1638, and became a freeman in 1639. He came to make money, being attracted by the Boston "land boom." He looked over the ground, settled, and was entirely successful. He did not buy in Boston because prices were inflated. The peninsula consisted of but 450 acres, and was then fully occupied, with the exception of what we now call the Common. John Wiswall, therefore, bought in Dorchester, where prices were moderate. His business was in Boston, where he dealt in iron. When he had accumulated enough, he bought an estate in Boston, and himself moved there about 1661. He must have been a good merchant. From 1640 to 1660 there were great speculations in land and iron, and many fortunes were lost in Boston. John Wiswall avoided such ventures, and succeeded. In Dorchester he was selectman in 1639 and 1645-48, serving the latter term as chairman of the board; in 1653-55 he was town clerk; he was also a deacon. In 1646, 1654, 1656, and 1658 he represented Dorchester in the General Court. In 1646 and 1647 the same General Court had appointed him "police justice" for Dorchester. After he came to Boston he filled many positions of trust. The First Church made him a ruling elder, being the highest position to which a layman could rise in the church. The Boston Town Meeting asked him repeatedly to draft instructions to selectmen (the earliest form of town ordinances), and to the representatives in the General Court. In the instructions of 19 May, 1677, he demanded something like the city charter obtained by Boston in 1822. He paid part of the money left by Captain Keayne for a public library, and in that regard has peculiar claims upon attention. Meanwhile he accumulated property, had a large farm, and left a good estate when he died, 17 August, 1687. (See the Boston Town Records and the publications of the Boston Record Commissioners; also, the Suffolk Deeds and the Massachusetts Colony Records; Winthrop's Journal, Sewall's Diary, the New Eng. hist. geneal. Register of January, 1886, and Savage's Genealogical dictionary.) When Wiswall came, in 1638, Boston was, as he says, "a pretty town"; it was prosperous, and it had what a metropolis needs: shops furnished with all commodities, a warehouse, shipping facilities, and a fort to defend it in case of need. With the arrival of the immigrants in the fleet of twenty-four ships the free distribution of land stopped, and a round fee was charged for every acre thereafter assigned. As high as ten shillings sterling was asked and obtained for an acre of marsh in Brookline. Out of these fees the Town expenses were paid.

A LETTER

from JOHN WISWALL to GEORGE RIGBY, at Peel, "in old England, Lancashire, Deane Parish." 1638.

[Reprinted from "The manuscripts of Lord Kenyon," London, 1894, page 56 (Appendix, part iv. of the 14th rep. of the Historical Manuscripts Commission).]

1638, SEPTEMBER 27. "Dorchester in New England." — "Being mindfull of your worshipes kindnes and readynes, at all tymes, to doe me good and rescue me out of the handes of immeritinge and . . . . men, accordinge to the place and power God had set you in, I could not excuse myselfe of great ingratitude if I should not show my thankfullness some waye, and not knowing how more acceptably to doe it, I have adventured to present a few rude lynes unto your worshipes veiwe, certifieinge your worships of our prosperous, pleasant, and speedy journey unto New England, in seven weekes and odd dayes. Twenty three shipes more besides us, I think have come, but none so speedy: we were the first of all in Nantasket. It is a place where shipes oftymes anchor, before they goe downe into Boston or Charlestowne river. In the waye there is a pritty castle and fort to which the shipes lore [lower] their top gallans before they passe into Boston, and divers there, shoot two or three canons, and then the fort will welcome and salute them with one. For the land, it is a fyne land, good for corne, especially Indian, which is a very precious graine for divers uses beside bread, good for pasture, and good haye land, plenty of wood. It is a pleasant country to looke upon. Truly Sir, I like it very well, and soe I thinke any godly man God calls over will, when he sees Moyses and Aaron, I meane magistrate and minister, in church and commonwalke (sic) to walke hand in hand, discountenancing and punishinge sinne in whomsoever, and standinge for the praise of them that doe well. Our sovereigne Lord and Kinge, is Kinge Charles, whose crowne and honor is dayly prayed for in all the churches. Under him we have a Governour, Deputy, and Counsell, and men called Assistants, in power, much like your justices; Constables we have in every towne; men we call Comittyes we send from every towne to the Generall Court. Plantations there are divers, and they succeed and prosper well. Boston is a pritty towne; in it there are fyne houses and some six or seven shopes fynely furnished with all commodities. There is a prity key and a crane, as at Bristoll, to lade and unlade goods. There is a warehouse wherein strangers and passengers' goods may be pnt. Newtowne now is called Cambridge. There is a University house reared, I heare, and a prity library begune. There is also Roxbury, Dorchester, Salem, and divers townes. At Conectichnte, there are some pritty plantations. But to wind up all in one word, thinges prosper well, and men of pritty parts, God sends over, both for church and comonweale. The Indians are a prity active, ingenions people in kind, yet loveinge to us. . . . For personall strength, I thinke it not inferiour to us, if not exceed[ing]. They are active to cram (?) as they speake, that is: kill deere, fishe, fowle, beaver, and divers wilde beastes, in the woods. Our plantations are not anoyd with any. Some wolves now, at this tyme of the yeare, come downe after decre, and doe some hurt to calves, goats, and swine, &c. but it is but little."

POSTSCRIPT. — "I have for my owne share, a pritty house and outhouses with 12 (?) acres of my owne land, besides half a good house, to which pertaines 47, my share being then 23½."

ENDORSED, "John Wiswall's letter to me; received 22 January 1638[-9]." Seal.

OLD BUILDING ON PRINCE STREET. BRITISH HOSPITAL, 1775.

On Prince street, corner of Lafayette avenue, near the Charlestown street end. Built in 1770, a substantial three-story mansion-house in its day. Taken by the British and used for a hospital after the battle of Bunker Hill. In one of its chimneys, taken down in 1850-60, several relics were found: "among them a bayonet in good condition, and the roster of a military company, finely written, and tied up in a bundle of papers. Several human bones have been dug up from time to time in the rear of this and neighboring houses, probably the remains of British soldiers buried here during the siege" [Porter's "Rambles in Old Boston"]. The house, reduced by many changes, has been used as a dwelling and bakery for a long period, sometime occupied by Jabez F. Hewes, grandson of George R. T. Hewes, one of the "Boston Tea Party."

THE NEWMAN HOUSE.

On the southern corner of Salem and Sheafe streets. Razed in 1889. Home of Robert Newman, sexton of Christ Church, who is said to have placed Paul Revere's signal lanterns in the tower of that church, on the night of April 18, 1775. [For argument against this theory see Frothingham, Richard. The alarm on the night of April 18, 1775.] The house was bought by his father, Thomas Newman, a Boston merchant, who met reverses before his death in 1754 (lost at sea), and was the family homestead from that time. It was a three-story brick house, of generous proportions, originally with a cupola which commanded a fine view of the harbor. The front door was then reached by a flight of stone steps, extending both ways and obtruding into the street, in the Dutch fashion [Porter's "Rambles in Old Boston"]. At the time of the display of the signal lanterns British officers were quartered in the house, and Newman, to avoid suspicion, went to bed early that night. Then, as the story runs, he soon got up, stole out through a window, "let himself down along the sloping roof . . . over the shed into the back yard, and so out into Sheafe street; . . . with his keys and lanterns entered the church, . . . locked the door behind him, . . . ascending the tower gave the preconcerted signal, came down, passed through the church, jumped out of a back window," returned to his home, reached his room in the same way as he had left it, and was soon again in bed.

III.

THE MATHER-ELIOT HOUSE, HANOVER STREET.

West side of Hanover street, near North Bennet street. A small part of the house built in 1677 by Increase Mather, after the burning of his dwelling and the meeting-house in North square. This was his home from that time until his death in 1723. It was next long occupied by Andrew Eliot and his son John Eliot, the former minister of the New North Church from 1742 to 1778, and the other minister of the same church from 1779 to 1813.

BALDWIN-PLACE BAPTIST CHURCH.

At the end of Baldwin place, off Salem street. Second meeting-house of the Second Baptist church (founded 1743), built in 1810-11. Sold in 1865. Afterward occupied by the Home for Little Wanderers. Now a Jewish synagogue.

THE OLD "COCKEREL CHURCH."

View of the successor of the "New Brick," or "Cockerel church," Hanover street, so-called from the coppered weather-cock which crowned its steeple, taken after the great gale of September 8, 1869. This meeting-house was of stone, built in 1844-45, by the Second Church (formed, 1650), which, in 1779, united with the "New Brick Church" (formed, 1721, by seceders from the "New North"). In 1849 it was sold to the Methodists, the Second Church moving elsewhere and subsequently building on Bedford street. The ancient cockerel was made about the year 1721, by Deacon Shem Drowne, coppersmith and tin-worker, Anne street, who fashioned also the tall Indian vane for the Old Province house (now in the rooms of the Massachusetts Historical Society), and the grasshopper vane on Faneuil hall. It passed from the steeple of the "New Brick" to that of this meeting-house, and in the gale of 1869 was torn from its pedestal, and, falling upon a neighboring house in Prince street, startled the family by unceremoniously coming in to tea. It now crowns the steeple of the Shepard Memorial Church, in Cambridge. The meeting-house stood until 1871, when it was removed by the widening of Hanover street.

OLD BUILDING ON UNION STREET.

North-east corner of Union and Marshall streets. A two-story structure of brick, built about the middle of the eighteenth century. Hopestill Capen long kept a fashionable dry goods shop here, and in 1769 one of his apprentices was young Benjamin Thompson, of Woburn, then sixteen years old, who afterward became Count Rumford. Thomas, son of Hopestill, succeeded to the shop, and continued it until 1826. Since that date it has been an "Oyster house."

"THE OLD FEATHER STORE."

On the southerly corner of Dock square and Anne, afterward North street, from 1680 to 1860. Built by Thomas Stanbury originally for a shop and dwelling, divided into two tenements, with separate entrances, both on the square. It replaced a wooden building destroyed in the great fire of 1679, which swept over the trading part of the town. It was rough-cast, the basement story on the lines of the boundaries of the irregularly shaped lot, with jetties, or projecting stories above, pendills, and clustered gables, after the fashion of the time, imported from the north of Europe. The framework was of hard-oak, roughly hewn, and the outside was covered with a thick coat of cement, in which were worked coarse gravel and broken glass, fragments of junk bottles. In the face of the principal gable on the front, the date 1680 was impressed in Arabic figures, with ornamental devices. Stanbury first occupied the building as a shop and warehouse, and after his time it was variously used as a hat factory and shop, a hardware shop, West India goods shop, an apothecary shop, a feather shop, and a clothing shop. After it had become venerable it was long known as "The Old Warehouse"; the title of "The Old Feather Store" was bestowed upon it in the later years of its existence. It was first used as a feather shop in 1806, and thereafter was for many years devoted to this trade. For a few years near the end of the last century Daniel Greenleaf's apothecary shop, considered one of the best in town, was here. The structure was razed in July, 1860, "to the great regret," as Shurtleff truly says, "of many citizens, who delighted in looking upon that well-preserved specimen of the buildings of the first fifty years of the town's history."

THE NATIONAL THEATRE.

Portland and Travers streets. Second National Theatre, built during the summer of 1852, on the site of the first, burned in April, that year. Designed by Billings. The front, on Portland street, was covered with dark brown mastie. The principal entrance was from three arched doors. Stairs on one side led to the parquette and dress-circle, and on the other to the family-circle or second tier; and the upper tier or gallery was reached from a separate door outside. The lobbies were large and convenient. The auditorium was nearly a circle of about eighty feet in diameter. The stage was sixty feet deep by seventy-six feet wide. It was not a showy theatre, but it was pronounced, when completed, "safe, commodious, and extremely well situated." Its seating capacity was 2,500. During its short career of less than a dozen years its name was changed three times, and it degenerated from a play-house for melo-drama to a concert hall. It was burned March 24, 1863. The photograph reproduced was taken in 1860.

BRATTLE-SQUARE CHURCH.

Brattle square, corner of Brattle street. Second meeting-house of the Brattle-square society (formed 1699: dissolved, 1876), the pulpit of Samuel Cooper, Peter Thacher, Buckminster, Everett, Palfrey, and Lothrop. When built, in 1772-73, it was the "pride of the town." John Hancock contributed one-eighth of the building-fund. During the Siege British troops were quartered here by Gage, but services were held occasionally in the autumn of 1775, and possibly in the early winter. View taken in 1860. The "iron breast-pin which the rebels threw" appears above the porch, at the right. This ball was fired from the Cambridge shore, near the northern end of the Longwood bridge, on the night of March 2, 1776, toward the close of the Siege, and struck the tower. It was afterward picked up, and in 1824 was fixed in the front wall. When the meeting-house was taken down it was deposited in the rooms of the Massachusetts Historical Society. A model of the meeting-house is also in possession of this society.

HAYMARKET SQUARE AND NEIGHBORHOOD, ABOUT 1840.

Old panoramic view. From a drawing in colors mounted on canvas found in a building in the neighborhood twelve or fifteen years ago, and given to Dr. Samuel A. Green, by whom it was added to the Public library collection September, 1894. Date not known, but supposed to be about 1840. Showing the old Middlesex canal and draw-bridges, streets as at that time diverging from the square, buildings then standing, and others apparently proposed. The rounded front building, marking the corner of Union and Blackstone streets, long remained a familiar landmark, and for many years bore conspicuously on its face the sign of a clock-maker. Trucks similar to those in the drawing were in general use for hauling merchandise until after the fifties. They were usually drawn by three or four horses, not infrequently by five. The truckmen of Boston were a well organized body, and wore a distinctive uniform in street processions and on other public occasions.
