Over 150 ex-officers write letter; 2 former chiefs listed claim they didn't sign it

PNS NEW DELHI

More than 150 military veterans, including eight former chiefs, have written a letter to President Ram Nath Kovind expressing concern over the "use" of the armed forces for "political purposes" and urged him to intervene in preserving the "apolitical" character of the armed forces. They said such misuse of the Services may affect the moral of the men and women in uniform and adversely impact their fighting efficiency.

However, at least two of the former chiefs, including NC Suri (IAF) and SF Rodrigues (Army), whose names were in the list, said they had not signed the letter dated April 11. Former Army vice chief Lt General ML Naidu too said his consent was not taken before

Elaborating upon the need for writing the letter, the veterans said it was written to the President to express sentiments of the former soldiers on an important issue. Moreover, the letter was addressed to the President as he is the custodian of the Constitution and the Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces.

It said, "We hereby respectfully urge you to take all necessary steps to urgently direct all political parties that they must forthwith desist from using the military, military uniforms or symbols, and any actions by military formations or personnel, for political purposes or to further their political agendas."

The veterans referred to the 'unusual and totally unacceptable practice' of political leaders taking credit for military operations like cross-border strikes and even being called "Modi ki seena' referring to repeated their seen and the seenal referring to the seenal seenal to the seenal referring to the seenal seena the military being allegedly used for political purposes, including Yogi's referring to the armed forces as "Modiji ki sena" and the display of images of Wing Commander Abhinandan Varthaman at political events. Abhinandan Varthaman at political events.

Referring to the alleged misuse, the letter said, "This is in addition to media pictures of election platforms and campaigns in which party workers are seen wearing military uniforms and posters and images with pictures of soldiers, specially of indian Air Force Wing Commander Abhinandan Varthaman, displayed." Varthaman was captured by Pakistan after an air combat with India on February 27 and subsequently released. In their rallies, Prime Minister Narendra Modi and a number Narendra Mourand a munica-of BJP leaders have been refer-ring to IAF's Balakot strikes besides mentioning the valour of the armed forces in defending the country.

The Election Commission has already taken note of the Prime Minister's comments asking first-time voters to dedicate their votes to those who carried out the air strike in Balakot.

The letter mentions the Election Commission's notifications to those violating the model code of conduct, including to Adiyanath, but adds that the actions do not have any impact on the ground.

"Indeed a notification has been issued asking for an explanation from those responsible for these statements, including from the Chief Minister of Uttar Pradesh," the letter said. SAD announces to support BJP in Haryana

The Shiromani Akali Dal The Shiromani Akali Dal (SAD), a long-time ally of the BJP has announced to support the saffron party in Haryana in the ensuing Lok Sabha polls. The two parties already have alliance in neighboring states of Punjab, Delhi and Uttarakhand.

Haryana Chief Minister Manghar Lal on Friday

Haryana Chief Minister Manohar Lal on Friday announced that the SAD will extend its support to all BJP candidates on 10 Lok Sabha seats in the state. While the SAD will support BJP's candidates in general elections 2019, the two parties will contest the Haryana Assembly polls due to be held later this year in an alliance, the Chief Minister said.

The SAD led by the Badals—father-son duo of Parkash Singh Badal and Sukhbir—is a key ally of the BJP-led NDA at the Centre. The SAD in an alliance with the BJP had ruled Punjab for a decade till 2017 and is now looking for political expansion in Haryana.

In Punjab, out of the 13 Lok Sabha seats, the SAD is contesting on 10 while the BJP has 3 seats in its kitty.

In Haryana, the SAD had ties with the Indian National Lok Dal but both the parties had parted ways in 2016 over the contentious issue of Sultey Yamuna Link (SYL) canal.

For a long time, the SAD had been supporting the INLD in Haryana despite its alliance with BJP in Punjab and at the national level. In 2014 assembly polls in Haryana, SAD president Sukbbir Singh Badal and party patron Parkash Singh Badal had even addressed rallies in support of INLD candidates, thereby drawing flak from the saffron party.
Although SAD had no seat-sharing arrangement with INLD for parliamentary polls and only supported it through its party network, it had got two out of rotal 90 seats to contest in the 2014 assembly elections. In the past elections, the SAD had also used its influence on the Sikh Jat ovters in Sirsa, Ambala, Panchkula, Kurukshetra, Karnal and Panipat to help INLD, a traditionally Jat-centric party in Haryana.

The two seats contested by SAD in 2014 assembly polis were Ambala and Kalanwali. The SAD has a lone member, who represents Kalanwali assembly segment in the 90-member Haryana Assembly.

assembly segment in the 90-member Haryana Assembly. After the old political coali-tion between the Badals in Punjab and the Chautalas in Haryana had come to an end, SAD president Sukhbir Badal had last year announced to contest all 10 Lok Sabha and 90 assembly seats in the state in 2019 elections. Eyeing the Sikh vote bank in the state, the SAD president Sukhbir has also addressed rallies in Ambala, Sirsa and Kurukshetra in the recent past.

Kurukshetra in the recent past.

The SAD was however holding talks with the BJP to form an alliance in Haryana to contest the polls. After the BJP insisted on going it alone in Haryana to contest on all Lok Sabha seats, a consensus was reached to form an alliance with SAD for the State Assembly polls due to held in October-November. Chief Minister Manohar Lal describing the SAD as a natural ally of the BJP on Friday said that the SAD will play a significant role in ensuring the victory of BJP candidates with the same state of the SAD will be the same state of the SAD will be the same state of the SAD will be decided after the Lok Sabha elections. The SAD has presence in around 25 assembly seats across the state.

Kaypee rebels as Cong reuses nomination from Jalandhar

CHANDIGARH

Disgruntled Mohinder Singh Kaypec continued to be in rebel mode after the Congress high command "ignored" his candidature from Jalandhar 119 elections in Punjab.

In what may cause trouble for the state's ruling party in the run up to the crucial Lok Sabha elections, Kaypee has teamed up with party so ther dalit leaders, "unhappy over the ticket allocation," and convened a meeting on April 15 at Chandigarh to mull over the future course of action. It has been learnt that Kaypee has organised a meeting of party's senior leaders, including former Union Minister Santosh Chaudhary, Punjab Congress, including former president Shamsher Singh Dullo, among others.

Minicing no mo over denial of ticket to him, Kaypee has all along been describing the move as his "political murder by the Congress party," Jalandhar's former Phas also made it amply clear that he would not shy to contest the ensuing elections as an independent candidate.

Kaypee, continuing his tirade against the Congress party, alleged that ticket has been given to those who managed to give to the old guard were being ignored. Releasing its first list of candidates, the Congress had decided to tretain its all sitting MPs, including Chaudhary Santok Singh from Jalandhar.

After Kaypee revolted, Chief Minister Capit Amarinder Singh decided to intervene to pacify the sulking Congress veteran while assuring him a "suitable" position. Dissatisfied, Kaypee took up the matter with the senior leadership in Delhi demanding review of the ticket allocation for Jalandhar seat.

day. "The preceding govern-ments, holding the fort in the country for over seven decades, have failed to grant due status to the martyrs which reflected their sick mindset, thus depriving them of the honour they deserved by virtue of the supreme sacrifices they made for the country, said the Leader of Opposition (LoP) in Punjab Vidhan Sabha Harpal Singh Cheema.

Cheema regretted that even after attaining independence from the British more than 72 years ago, they had miserably failed to take a call on this emotional issue.

"On one hand, the government is insisting on the British Parliament to tender apology for the horrendous pogrom, it has been dilly-dallying on the much-awaited status to the martyrs who lost their lives for the honour of their motherland," he said.

Accusing the Congress Party, BJP-SAD alliance governments in the State and the Centre for delaying the process of grant of status, Cheema said that those who lost their lives in the tragedy of such a magmartyrs to people who lost lives in massacre. Even Shaheed Bhagat Singh, Rajguru and Sukhdev, who made the Sukhdev, who made the supreme sacrifices, were given status of martyr," said Khiar while demanding to declare them "national martyrs" on the

He also demanded to identify all the martyrs of Jallianwala massacre.

The farmers in the region say they have been complaining about non-payment of dues for months now, but to no avail.

The Sugar Undertaking (Taking Over The Management) Act, 1978, enacted after the price of sugar was deregulated, was repealed in 2015.

The Act provided for temporary takeover of the management of sugar mills in case of prolonged non-payment of dues to protect the interests of farmers and consumers and to rescue services of the control o ers and consumers and to rescue ailing undertakings.
"After the Act was repealed, the sugar mills became fearless and they purposely stop payment of our dues, said Tribhuvan Singh, a farmer in Gopalpur village.

Reasons cited by the government for repealing the Act included it's non-usage in three decades and states having their own laws for the sector.

"There was at least a fear among them (sugar mills) that they can be held accountable under this Act," said Tribhuvan, adding that his dues worth *1.5 lakh are pending.

Farmers claimed that the Government is pushing them to cultivate other crops.

PAPER WITH PASSION The force awakens

Former service chiefs and veterans write to President to stop politicisation of the armed forces, give a conscience call murky row may have arisen over a letter written by more than 150 armed forces veterans, including former service chiefs, to the President, seeking an end to the "politicisation" of their institution in the ongoing Lok Sabha elections. Three chiefs may have disowned it, saying they would remain fiercely applitical and not be part of something that could even remotely be seen as challenging their neutrality as instruments of the State. The Rashtrapati Bhavan may have denied receiv-ing it. Efforts may be on to play down the embarrassment it has caused to the Modi government or its "vote influencer" quotient. But no matter the number of signatories, the letter's spirit is still more than unprecedented. For it is a noble self-defence by an apolitical and secular institution that inspires true national pride and shows why adopted militarism can never substitute the original, honourable kind. Why bravado and bravery are two different things. It is a conscience call to the entire nation to judge the nar rative of the Balakot airstrikes for what it is worth, a defence of our borders and eliminating real threats as they emerge rather than an exclusivist manoeuvre that suits the government of the day. It represents the courage of the men in uniform, standing up for what is right and do so with tremendous grace and without confrontation, staying within the ambit of the Constitution. It is about respecting principles, of speaking up for the serving men and women of the forces, who are bound by the oath of silence to not question the Executive. And finally, it is about upholding the overarching idea of democracy, the veterans standing like the last of the Mohicans, assuring that the forces neither wanted political space nor could be appropriated for political purposes. Or even remotely allow that misadventure. But best of all the old soldiers upheld the value of choice — they were aware of the political reality, knew their relevance in it as a constituency but would choose to stay out of it.

The letter, titled 'From A Group of Veterans To Our Supreme Commander', which the President is by Constitution, specifically refers to the "completely unacceptable practice of political leaders taking credit for military operations like cross-border strikes, and even going so far as to claim the Armed Forces to be Modiji ki Sena." It also referred to the use of military uniforms and photos of Indian Air Force Wing Commander Abhinandan Varthaman during campaigning. And while they acknowledged the Election Commission for swiftly addressing the complaints, they also rued that it did not have "substantive change of behaviour and plaints, they also rued that it do not have Substantive change of behaviour and practice on the ground." Just the other day, Prime Minister Modi himself urged the youth to vote for the airstrikes. And most poll speeches happen to be liberally peppered with words like "Pakistan," "national security," "strikes against the enemy" and "soldiers." One wonders if the heft of the signatories, which include former Army chiefs Shankar Roychowdhury and Deepak Kapoor and four former Navy chiefs — Laxminarayan Ramdas, Vishnu Bhagwat, Arun Prakash and Suresh Mehta — will matter at all. Or whether the President, who acts on the advice of the Executive, will indeed take note. As for stopping loaded speeches, that's a tall order despite the Model Code of Conduct. Leaders, knowing full well that they will be reprimanded and censured for violations, still go for an aggressive pitch to attain virality in news cycles and social media. For nothing can curb the speech as it is being made. A fine or warning is a small price to pay in retrospect. But such tactics have clearly affected the morale of our forces, disillusioned them even, that the democracy they so earnestly safeguard has given politicians who use them at their own sweet will for propaganda. And they do least in terms of defence policies. True, the Modi government did treat Army veterans as a constituency and pushed a milder version of the One Rank One Pension (OROP) scheme. But this has not matched the low priority accorded to them compared to civil and police services. Defence budgets continue to be pathetic, there is a gaping need for operational reforms, critical infrastructure and equipment. The least the government could do is to keep the forces out of its rightful propaganda to show why it stood out in the last 70 years. Post-Balakot, it did look that brilliance came from the political leadership and not soldiers. Just because they follow civilian control doesn't mean that they will allow misuse of their code for somebody else's agenda. The old generals reminded us that.

Hero to zero

Wikileaks founder Julian Assange revealed US secrets for the world to see. After the arrest, what's next for him?

2010, Wikileaks dumped a huge amount of United States (US) diplomatic cables, some dating back decades, onto its web-site. These documents were leaked to the site by a US soldier now called Chelsea Manning Many of the leaked diplomatic cables were mundane, others revealed American duplic ity and yet more, some pertaining to India, revealed how citizens were revealing their national secrets to the US. In short, they offered an intriguing insight into the world of diplo-macy and espionage. Thereafter, the charismatic founder of Wikileaks, Julian Assange, who had crowd-funded his web site, used the proceeds to try and find more secret documents that rich and pow-erful individuals and big governments did not want the public at large to find out.

To many, he was a hero and in 2010 he claimed the global spotlight.
The leak obviously had a negative impact on American diplomacy and Assange was right to believe that the US would want 'revenge.' Meanwhile, Manning was court-martialled and imprisoned by the US and while the narrative has been made that he was a confused young man, who was taken advantage of by Assange, he did face some punishment. Assange, on the other hand, managed to avoid extradition to Sweden, not for the diplomatic cable dump but to face sexual assault charges. He claims he did so to avoid the Swedes potentially extraditing him to the US but his refusal to face those charges lost him much goodwill, as did the revelation that Wikileaks was in touch with Donald Trump's campaign, specifi-cally his son, during the US presidential election of 2016. This was possibly in the hope that Assange could win a pardon for Trump if he was elected, but that the riope that Assange could will a parton for finiting in the was elected, but that did not happen. While Sweden dropped the charges after the Wikileaks founder ran away and hid in the Ecuadorian embassy, one of the alleged victims has apparently asked for him to be charged again. The Americans are booking him that after light light charge of computer hacking to gain access to protected information that will possibly lead to a maximum five-year sentence. Assange might still be a hero to some but US law is clear about computer backing and he might pay the price for his information warfare. More importantly, one hopes that his alleged victims in Sweden get a chance to prove or disprove their cases against him, because on that front Assange is nothing but a fugitive from the law

Lessons from a massacre

The Jallianwala Bagh tragedy continues to rankle in every Indian's heart. Hundred years later, all nations must unite for a peace-based order and end terror

Even though 100 years have lapsed since that inhuman massacre happened, the pain and agony continue to rankle in the heart of every Indian to this day. History is not a mere chronicle of events. It shows us the depths to which depraved minds can plunge and cautions us to learn from the past. It also tells us that the power of evil is transient. This was summed is transient. This was summed up most succinctly by the Father of the Nation, Mahatma Gandhi, who had once said: "When I despair, I remember that all through history, the way of truth and love has always won. There have been tyrants and murderers and for a time they seem invincible, but in the end, they always fall.. think of it, always."

India and the world have india and the world have india and the world have the massacre at alliainwal a Bagh. Mahathana Gandhi has shown to the rest of the world how through peaceful means and non-violence even a powerful colonial power can be brought to its knees. No doubt, or the colonialism has become a relic of the past. But it is important for everyone to draw lessons from history and shape a better future for humanity. Today, more than at any other time, the world community needs to come together to promote everlasting peace in all the corners of the globe and ensure everlasting peace in all the corners of the globe and ensure that sustainable development of the planet becomes the watchword at all times and at all levels, from schools to summits of global leaders. Progress cannot be achieved without peace.

All countries should unite in establishing a new and equitable world order where power wealth and earth's resources are shared in other words, the new world order must create a level-palying field for all countries. We should ensure that multi-alteral forums are not dominated or influenced by a few powers and communities. The voice of every nation will have to be taken into account. It is this approach and perspective which India applies whenever reviewing or addressing global issues. It is against this background that India and some other countries have been asking for a more important and significant role in the UN Security Council.

In fact, from time immemorial, India believed in the philosophy of Vasudaiva Kutumbukkam and viewed the entire world as one family. In the philosophy of Vasudaiva Kutumbukkam and viewed the entire world as one family. In the philosophy of Vasudaiva Kutumbukkam and viewed the entire world as one family. In the philosophy of Vasudaiva Kutumbukkam and viewed the about 25 per cent of the global GDP. Despite its pacifist raddition and remaining weddeded to the philosophy of nonviolence, India became a victim of successive foreign invasions in the past and of terrorism in the person of the properties of successive foreign invasions in the past and of terrorism in of successive foreign invasions in the past and of terrorism in the past few decades

Terrorism has become the biggest threat to humanity today. Several countries across the globe had to grapple with an upsurge in mindless violence while India had been victim of numerous terrorist attacks for decades. Stamping out the scourge of terrorism brooks no delay. The United Nations and the world leaders need to accord highest urgency to completing the deliberations on the Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism (CCIT), which has been pending with UN for too long — ever since India proposed it in 1996. Nations, which use terrorism as a state policy, should not be allowed to hold the rest of the world to ransom and need to be isolated.

ansom and need to be isolated internationally. Fundamentally, the channels for financing terrorism have to be cut off and sanctions need to be imposed on such nations. To accomplish this objective, the international community has to come together as one to ensure that no single country promoting terrorism feels safe and insulated from punitive action. All countries must remember that terrorism spares no one in the final analysis. No one can quite predict when it could afflict a country, which may choose to look the other way today. It can be wiped out only through mutual understanding of the real threat that terrorism poses mutual understanding of the real threat that terrorism poses to humanity and a true appreciation of the need to battle it.

With technology revolutionising every aspect of modern life on an unprecedented scale and virtually reducing the world to a global village, the international community to transform the lives of million of people in the poor, underdeveloped and developing nations. All countries should come together in combating climate change and sustaining the natural resources as nobody has the right to jeopardise the life of future generations and the plantised for the profound words of the Mahatma, who had said that the earth provides enough to staffy every man's greed.

Before concluding, I would like to appreciate the efforts of the Government in showcasing photographs, paintings and newspaper clippings depicting the authentic account of Jallianwala Bagh massacre at Yaade-e-Jallian Museum in Delhi.

Faith in democracy

Sir — This refers to the report, "No wave keeps poll outcome under wraps" (April 12). The festival of democracy has begun with the first phase of voting being completed peacefully. The absence of any "wave" this time has given the voters an opportunity to make the decision on ovting preference dispassionately. It's good that the voter turnout in the first phase of elections remained more or less the same as it was in the 2014 Lok Sabha election.

Misusing court order

Sir — This refers to the editorial, "For the sake of Rafale" (April 11). By overruling the Union Government's objections over the admissibility of some over the admissibility of some documents pertaining the Rafale deal, which they claimed, were sensitive in nature and had been obtained through "unauthorised photocopying and leakage", the Supreme Court has unwittingly provided the kind of opening the Opposition was desperately waiting for. Rafale is not a corwaiting for. Rafaie is not a corruption scam. For, nowhere in the mountain of invective and allegations in the Rafale deal has anyone even remotely provided a shred of evidence that illicit money changed hands. By agreeing to relook at its Locky, the enture process of debt resolution under IBC takes about 300 days; whereas it used to take five to eight years under the Board for Industrial and Financial Reconstruction (BIFF). But nowhere was the important role played by the National Company Law Tribunal (NCLT) highlighted. As an institution, NCLT has accomplished the takes as set under the IBC with limited resources and has completed the cases in a time-bound manner as directed by the IBC. The IBC, 2016 is the bankruptcy law of India that seeks to consolidate the existing framework by creating a single law for insolvency and bankruptcy cases. The enactment of the IBC on May 28, 2016, and the setting up the NCLT and the National Company Law Appellate Tribunal (NCLAT) were steps taken to unlock the vast amount of capital locked in defunct projects. This will help the financial and banking sector improve their balance sheet. In a recent judgement, the Supreme Court in the case of Swiss Ribbons Pet Life vi Union Of India and others, upheld the Constitutional validity of the IBC, saying "the defaulters' paradise is lost" and the economy's rightful position has been regained. It further stated that the flow of financial resource to the commercial sector in India has increased exponentially as a result of financial debts being repaid. The court also acknowledged the

The NCLI is instrumental in the implementation and success of the IBC. The same was acknowledged by Union Minister Arun Jaitley, when be categorically stated, "The early harvest through the IBC process has been extremely satisfactory. It has changed the debtor-creditor relationship. The creditor no longer chases the debtor. In fact, it is otherwise. Upon the constitution of the NCLT and the implementation of IBC, its functionality had revealed the need for improvements in the law. Two legislative interventions since then have taken place."

Recent data procured from the Registrar, NCLT showed that till date, 22.137 cases under the Companies Act and 7.252 cases under the IBC have been disposed of by the NCLT The number of admitted cases under the IBC stood at 1.575 and 92 resolution plans were approved by the adjudicating authority as on February 28. Initially, the Union Government appointed 23 members to the tiburual. The jurisdiction of cases under the IBC was entrusted to the NCLT in December, 2016 but the strength of the members remained 23 till March, 2018. Five more members were added thereafter. At present, NCLT is functioning with 16 judicial members, (including the President) and 10 technical members. Further, the members are also shouldering responsibility of newly-created benches at Alapira and Cuttack to ensure speedy disposal of cases. The facts and figures mentioned above are a testimony to the sincere efforts put by the tribunal at various benches, who work day-in and day-unt to keep up with the pace of ever-increasing number of cases being filed on a daily basis. That the tribunal has been functioning with about one-third strength as notified and the amount of work done till date speaks volumes about its efficiency and effectiveness. NCLTs accomplishment has been acknowledged by various sectors time and again.

Mass murder most foul

Theresa May has described the Jallianwala Bagh slaughter as a 'shameful scar' on British-Indian history. It will heal only after Britain formally apologises for the crime hundred years ago this day occurred the massacre at Jallianwala Bagh, Amrilsar, which remains one of the worst crimes of British impericating Brigadier, Reginald Dyer, ordered Gurkha soldiers under his command to fire on a peaceful and unarmed gathering of men, women and children to celebrate Baisakhi. The firing continued for 10 minutes, and was Gurkha soldiers under his command to Ire on a peaceful and unarmed gathering of men, women and children to celebrate Baisakhi. The Iring continued for 10 minutes and was directed at places where the concentration of people was the heaviest.

The toll, according to official figures, was 379 killed and about 1,100 wounded. Unofficial—and by all accounts more correct—counts put the figure above 1,000 dead and 1,200 wounded. Outrage among Indians was countyvide and intense. Prominent among those expressing it were Pandit Mottlal Nehru, Sir Punjale legislative council members, Nawab Din Murad and Karter Singh and, of course, Punjale legislative council members, Nawab Din Murad and Karter Singh and, of course, Punjale legislative council members, Nawab Din Murad and Karter Singh and, of course, Rabindranath Tagore, who renounced the knighthood conferred upon him by the British Government through an open letter to the Viceroy, Lord Chemisford, published in The Statesman (June 3, 1919) and Modern Review (July, 1919).

The letter, reflecting the deepest feelings of anguish and anger, began thus: "The enormity of the measures taken by the Government in the Punjalo for quelling some local disturbances has, with a rude shock, revealed to our minds the helplessmess of our position as British subjects in India. The disproportionate severity of the punishments inflicted upon the unfortunate people and the methods of carrying them out, we are convinced, are without parings of the punishments inflicted upon the unfortunate people and the methods of carrying them out, we are convinced, are without parings of the punishments inflicted upon the unfortunate people and the methods of carrying them out, we are convinced, are without parings of the punishments inflicted upon the unfortunate people and the methods of carrying them out, we are convinced, are without parings of the punishments inflicted upon the unfortunate people and the methods of carrying them out, we are convinced, are without parings of the punishments of the punish the universal agony and indignation aroused by the rulers, who were possibly congratulating themselves for having taught the people a salutary lesson, he added, "This callousness has been praised by most of the Anglo-Indian papers which have in some cases gone to the brutal length of making fun of our sufferings, without receiving the least check from the same authority — relentlessly careful in smothering every cry of pain and expression of judgement from the organs representing the sufferers."

Finally, declaring his decision to renounce his knighthood, he had stated, "The time has Thus, nearly all civil services officers, regardless of what rank they may retire with, get pension at the highest level of HAG4 or what those few appointed as Cabinet Secretaries are granted. If that sint hitting the jackpot, then what is?

One doesn't need to be a guru to figure out that such a system is contrary to all principles of management and without precedent anywhere in the world, either in the Government or corporate sector. As a matter of fact, Vivek Rae, the IAS member in the seventh Pay Commission, recommended that NFU be done away with on grounds that "to stroke for uniform

Such a dispensation with automatic acree progression till the HAG level, completely buries the concept of merit-based career progression till the relations of efficiency and accountability."

Singh's motivation for approving singh motivation for approving this, despite pretensions to intellectual and moral honesty, is not difficult to guess. Pragmatism required a veil to cover the scandalous actions of his coalition partners, which the buriau-craitery willingly provided, obviously in exchange for a quid pro quo. That Prime Minister Narendra Modi refused to do away with NFU, as the majority members of the seventh Pay Commission recommended, obviously suggests that he and his colleagues are as much a hostage to bureaucray as wast the previous Government, despite all his blather about good governance.

It is in the nature of the beast that when hogs are given unlimited access to the feeding trough, other hogs will follow, even those, who may not see themselves as hogs as well. It was just a matter of time before the Central Armed Police Forces (CAPF) and the armed forces approached the

The irony in all this is difficult to

It was accepted despite its "wide-ranging financial, organisational and governance implications" as the seventh Pay of the seventh season of the seventh season their military counterparts, which had been sacrosant till then since independence.

To quote Rathin Roy, the other member of the seventh Pay Commission, the "broad parity was disturbed by granting NFU to IPS, IFoS and organised group "A' services after the sixth Central Pay Commission report, without a similar dispensation being extended to the Defence Forces. Consequently, the Defence Forces. Consequently, the Defence Forces. Consequently, the Defence Forces officers, who are in no way lower in status or responsibility than Group "A' Central services, though not classified as such, have fallen steeply behind IPS/IFoS and 49 organised group "A' services".

E-LEARNING PLATFORMS SLOWLY CHANGING INDIAN EDUCATION LANDSCAPE

E-LEARNING PLATFORMS SLOWLY CHANGING INDIAN EDUCATION LANDSCAPE

New Delhi: E-learning platforms are changing the Indian education land scape by addressing the demand-supply gap of both students as well as corporate employees by dispensing personalised learning outcomes, experts say. Online learning has widened the scope of education and transcended it beyond class-room boundaries. With high internet penetration in the last two years, it has taken over the traditional methods not just in the urban landscape but also in rural rasa. The education system is evolving at a very fast pace, online education platform upGrad co-founder and MD Mayank Kumar said. "With industries directly connecting with e-learning institutions like ours, content has never been so up-to-date. All this put together makes e-learning platforms complete, and students and working professionals future-ready, in a matter of months," he said. Kumar noted that e-learning penetration in corporations is increasing, regardless of the company's size. Since class-based training is more expensive, proportionately, for small and medium-sized firms, these firms are increasingly recognising e-learning as a convenient and cost-effective mode. According to a report by KPMG, the Indian online education industry will grow from 1.6 million users in 2016 to 9.6 million users by 2021.

Actor SHEFALI SHAH's portrayal of DCP Vartika Chaturvedi in Delhi Crime is making waves. Strong emotions give her character layers, discovers Saimi Sattar omewhere in the second episode of Delhi Crime, in the aftermath of the brutal December 2012 gang rape, DCP South Vartika Chaturvedi decides to address a press conference to set the record straight about the inaction of the Delhi Police. press conference to set the record straight about the inaction of the Delhi Police. Shefall Shah, who plays the role in the web series which released last month, walks to the podium and when her junion, Bhupendra Singh, played by Rajesh Tailang offers her a hand up, she ignores it and climbs up on her own, setting the gender equation on an altogether different note. It is a small thing but matters to me in creating what Vartika became. Her sense of power is evident in the sense. But if she didn't have the vulnerability and the sensibility, she would not have taken the incident personally and gone all out to investigate it, 'points out Shefall. It is in the smallest of gestures that the actor inhuses her characters with that has got her accolades each time that she lights up the small or the large screen.

She goes on to point out, 'All of us have layers. The belief that if you cor or has strength even though its expression has strength even though its expression has trength; when the strength is a single minded focus of catching the perpetrators. She does not elet her motions overshadow her investigation but that does not feelit."

The web series as well as Shefalls role has been gamering parise from critics and does not feel it."

The web series as well as Shefali's role has been garnering praise from critics and audience alike. So did she intuitate the mannerisms or the behaviour of former DCP South Chhaya Sharma, who led a 41 member team to solve the case in a record five days. "I had the honour of meeting her over coffee for two hours and it is impossible to soak in the complete person in that time. I don't know how she behaved in office or at home. We were not there so I don't know what she did at which moment. It is not about trying to be like her. It was about being Vartika." Shefali emphasises over the phone. She does feel that it was essential to maintain the germ and the thread of ther being beat cor. There was a lot of work that I did to create her, 'she says.

No stranger to the small screen having started out with Aarohan in 1993, Shefali took all of three minutes to say yes The web series as well as Shefali's role

No stranger to me me in 1993, Shefali took all of three minutes to say yes to the role. "Most of my decisions are instinctive and impulsive. I read the first episode and I finished the entire series in one night. I said I have to be a part of it."

thinking? We were in touch even as he projects, lust before the shoot, every single day, even if he had just two hours, I would say we have to meet because I wanted to discuss the character. A scene, after all, is the window between the actor and the person but it is not what determines the character. It is the character which determines how she behaves or reacts in a scene," she says.

Recalling the actual incident, Shefail memphers that it left everyone startled and that scar would never go away. So it was also in a manner of reliving the incident." This was my most consuming and enriching experience and then you are just reacting to it. In the first sequence, there is a sense of disbeller dan shock. But

It was not just about the mother and daughter relationship, but also about what the entire generation felt in December 2012. Some critics of the show have said that it only has a single point of view and tried to humanise the police at the cost of the victim's parents, family and media. "This story and incident has several points of view. And this is the one that the director wants to tell. It is not about idealising. It is just about telling what really happened which a lot of people, including me, did not know," she says.

But having worked so closely with the story and living with it for so long, does she feel that we have become even more dehumanised as a society as more cases the denument of the company of the control o

Patriarchy, misogym, the way people are brought up, he sense of privilege men have, filteracy, caste and class have been the norm over the years. It will take time to completely disappear but it is not fair to say that things are not changing. It won't happen overnight," she says.

Moving on to her previous outing on Netflix as 'Tara Shetty in Once Again, Moving on to her previous outing on Netflix as 'Tara Shetty in Once Again, Shefali feels that it was one of the most beautiful characters that she has portayed. 'T am a hardcore romantic. People always think that a strong woman annot be romantic and the two are mutually exclusive. Tara is a strong woman. There is something lyrical and she is ready to walk that road, take that chance and is even ready to get hurt in the process. The film was nuanced where the romance, was unsaid yet said. You can actually feel the palpitation because of the way it was shot, 'she says, he reckitement and passion for the film not hard to discern even when heard at the other end of a phone.

Going back much in time, she recalls the character of Saavi, another woman in love that she portrayed at the start of a career in the serial Hasratein, which was telecast on Zee TV in 1996-97. While three other actresses had portrayed the role of a woman who leaves her husbard and has an extra martial affair with a Saavis shoes to give it the gravitas and grace that made the actions of the character seem justified. "I thought it was a sweet story. And I saw her very differently from the way it was being played earlier. I did not see her as a vamp. She was in love. She had her reasons. You need to have conviction to play such a character. The person might be bad in someone else's perception but for him or her they are doing the best they can. They are justified as they fell in love where there isn't a right or wrong," she says.

Another role that is etched in memory is that of Pyaari Mhatter in Sadyu (1998) for who can forget Shefalio Sappre de Milit Bad so much so that she became an embodiment of the song." I cannot forget it as it was my first film. It is also very special because of its ensemble cast, cult satus, the way it was shot by an international DOP. It was raw and organic. There are certain moments where the vision of the director comes through even when though the actor gets the accolades. In this, the moment was where she slaps her husband Bhiku Mhatte, played by Manoj Bajpai. On script, it was a very powerful moment. I heard it and agreed to do it," she recalls.

Of course, anyone who has seen Gandhi, My Father (2007) cannot help but be affected by the human angle at Juy in the film. The Mahattma was the father of the nation but what he was like at home and how it affected the family forms the crux of the story. However, talking to Shefali is incomplete without a mention of Monsoon Wedding (2001) where she plays Riya, who has been molested as a child by a family member. It was one of the rare films where pedophilia was portrayed on screen. "Mira called me and said that she had seen Satya and wanted me to play Riya. She gave me a brief over the phone and I agreed because I wanted to work with her. It was such prevertul part and the the distory which was the complete of the same and the same a

'WE DON'T APPEAR TO BE A CIVILISED SOCIETY'

Director SOUMITRA RANADE tells Chahak MITTAL that social media has become an online court of listing judgments and blurting out impulsive thoughts. We are literally abusing and lynching each other, he feels

After liberalisation and opening up of the economy, a major chunk of population was pushed away from development, believes the director. "While we were all enjoying multiplexes, mobile phones and other luxuries, a large part of humanity was left out," he says while talking about how he had discovered the theme of the film while travelling in the interiors of the country where he found that people were angry and frustrated with what the system had to offer.

hay of the count map people when the system had to offer.

The explains that the 1980's film depicted that there was still room for development. "However, today I don't see any scope. Everything is so full and has been occupied, I see no space for understanding or development. Those were simpler times. The common man is basically angry with himself that he is not able to do anything and is constantly facing backlash from the corrupt system," he says. Ranade's Albert Pinto presents the angst of the common man and is an "an interesting take on reality." The Indian demography is the young people are unhealthy and unemployed, which makes them angry. He says, "If they remain in this state, India can become a terrorist country. We can actually see that happening right now. They are so angry that they can be easily maneuvered by political groups. Unless this emotion is channelised well, we are sitting on the brink of a volcano which can erupt anytime."

The lainataram Mamantaram director "The lainataram Mamantaram director"

tion is Chaimeinsed weit, we are saming on the brink of a volcano which can erupt any-time."

The Jajantaram Mamantaram director believes that the ones who hold the greatest power to challenge or change the existing notions of the society belong to the middle class. "Most people in India belong to the middle class." Most people in India belong to the middle class — the only group which can change or challenge the system. The poor are too powerless and the rich are never interested. Unke lips to the said achia hi hota hai (things are always good for them). And most of the writers, painters, poets and the like can influence the people as they are all a part of the middle class. It's important for them to open the windows, see the reality and change it," he says. Giving an example of mass farmer suicides in India, he explains that the issue has become a slogan these days. "However," he says, "the farmers have been committing suicides since the past 25 years. It's only now that we have come to know about it. And it is so deeply rooted that we don't even realise how grave the situation is. We learnt about it only when the farmers marched into our cities. This is distress-needs to reframe some of its aspects. "If you use cinema only for Bollywood, masala films, it would be ridiculous exploitation of the medium. Big names and films don't always work. A few films that released last year are examples. And I am not surprised actually. When you keep on giving the same thing to the audience, they will not accept it after a point. They want to see interesting stories, which they can connect to, says he. He gives the example of Dangal, which was something new interesting and worth showcasting. He questions, So what crass and beautiful bodies all the time. How long can you keep giving the audience that? They need stories which could inspire them. The change is that even the audience is accepting new concepts. They are becoming smarter and are able to tell the creators their own choices. And an expossure to international clients through OTT platforms is the reason behind this changing society, he says, even the cinematic concepts have evolved. Ranade believes that his 2003 film, Jajantaram Mamantaram came when, although there was despair, there was still some innocence left. "I had young kids at the time and I was living a different story every night with them. And slowly, when my children grew up. I also looked in other directions and even the world around me changed. And that started impacting me, which is obvious," he says and adds that a film has to be relevant to its time. "And Albert Pinto... is very important in today's time. I am surprised that no one thought of making it as yet. We don't appear to be a civilised society if you see the kind of debates that we have on news channels. We are literally abusing and lynching each other. What's wrong with our language and culture." he questions. Contact the contact of the contact of the properties of the pr room, I can abuse anybody. It's easy. I hat rage is not the solution, but I understand it.

Well, what could be the solution it equality but attaining it is very difficult. I don't know if we are ever going to reach that goal. But we need to, at least, have the basic necessities distributed equally.'

Telling us the reason why he chose Manava and Nandita for the lead roles, he laughs and says that both are 'my very good friends.' However, that is just one of the many reasons in the list.

"I find Manav to be a very interesting actor. He can show every emotion very effortlessly. His face can deal with versatile emotions easily. If I tell you that he is a good-hearted person, you will want to believe me. If I say, he is a very kamena type ka aadmi, you would still want to believe me. Fou will believe me even if I say that he is a very sensitive man. He is not one kind of a person, he is all of these. He can be a beautiful, pretty, romantic hero as well. And Nandita, she is not an actor' actor. She is a thinking person, whose face reflects that intensity with which she works for anything, She is a writer and a director as well who is intelligent and sensitive to understand a lot of things altogether,' says he.

How different is it to work with How different is it to work with faces and skin tones that are Indian? What do you modify in your techniques?

I always start my work in the same way — looking for the right tone and texture for the skin. That will never change. You want to utilise products that work for the skin type and always start with a moisturiser. Hydrated skin is the key to your make-up looking its best.

What are the lip colours as well as blushes that work best with Indian skin tones?

The right lip colour for you is based on three things — your style, natural lip colour and skin tone. In general, the most flattering natural hue will either match or be slightly hue will either match or be slightly darker than your lips. Avoid shades lighter than your lips, especially those with gray or beige undertones, as they will make you look washed out. For blush, women with tan, warm skin tones should choose an almost plum shade that looks like a rich pink when applied. For deeper skin tones, redder shades that have bluish tones like cranberry leave a second of the plus to the state of the plus the plus like cranberry leave. bluish tones like cranberry leave a beautiful finish.

Earlier, Indians were looking towards the West in terms of skin colour and features but now they are more comfortable in their skin. What would you attribute it to?

to?

I think it's a combination of positive voices on social media and the beauty industry working to become more inclusive. There are more products, colour options, positive role models and unique voices with large platforms that are changing the conversations around beauty. Realism is in.

What does it take to be ranked among the top 10 beauty artists in the word?

A lot of hard work and determination. The advice I give is to be open. Be a sponge and absorb everything. Work hard—and for free if you have to—when following your dreams. Keep at it, don't let failure stop vou.

You've worked with some of the biggest names. What were some professional and personal lessons that you learnt along the way? My biggest takeaway is to be

My biggest takeaway is to b nice to everyone. It's as simple as that. You never know who you are going to meet or who knows who. Be kind, respectful and treat others how you want to be treated.

What is it that attracts you

What is it that attracts you about India?

Everything. I have wanted to come to India for a long time. The people, the history, the culture, and of course, the food is something I'm looking forward to experiment with. I am open to experiencing all that India has to offer. Visually, the make-up worn by women in the country scales from over the top, to make one of the country scales from over the top, to make up worn by women in the country scales from over the top, to make up worn by women in the country scales from over the top, to work with when in India. She is one of the most beautiful. Priyanka Chopra is someone I would definite, which is the country of the work with when in India. She is one of the most beautiful women on the planet and seems very down to earth and coul.

Why did you decide to collaborate with India Make-up Show? It's a unique opportunity to interact with artists and consumers in this type of set-ting. I am really excited to niques and more about my career.

Any more books on the anvil?

No new books right now but I just launched a new line of supplements. It's a collagen-based collection, all designed to target your beauty concerns with one of the largest retailers in America. We have an effervesent tablet made with hyaluronent tablet made with hyaluron-acid to boost your skin's mois-ture. There's a collagen and pro-tein powder that benefits are. There's a collagen and pro-tein powder that benefits hair, skin, and nails and gives you energy. It's all about supporting beauty from the inside out. I am back in the usen use inside out. I am back in the studio creating and curating content for my online magazine www.just-bobbi.com as a working make-urist. I am also creating content around my podcast Long Story Short. And Tim designing new experiences for our guest at our hotel, The George, in Montclair, New Jersey.

What do you keep in mind while doing the look for any person?

I always look at make-up as something that will enhance your natural features, not hide them.

Looking back at your journey, when you started out, did you have any idea that the brand would grow as big as it hat. I could have predicted the career that I ve had. If you had told me all of this when I chicago, I wouldn't have believed you. I'm proud of the work I did in building my brand and the impact my work had on the beauty industry.

A lookback at some of the more

A lookback at some of the more iconic moments, in your opinion?

A few moments that always stand out for me are working with Naomi Campbell and Patrick Demarcheler on Naomis first Vogue cover in 1989. It happened to be my first Vogue cover too. I did a lot of beauty spreads with the magazine over the years that I am really proud of. There were also moments like doing make-up for UWren Scott's show at London Fashion Week to doing Dr Jill Biden's (former Vice President) foe Biden's Wife make-up during the (Presidential) mer vice Presidential inauguration in 2009 and celebrating my 20-year anniversary at Bobbi Brown with a film by Bruce Weber.
I'll always cherish these moments.
