Each instrument begins with the finest stainless steel and ends with the König name.

(In between are up to 114 intricate steps.)

In an age of instant gratification and on-demand everything, you may find it refreshing to learn that creating a König surgical instrument is an exercise in patience and craftsmanship.

In fact, many König instruments take almost two months to make. From forging to machining, from finishing to passivation, each instrument's journey takes it through up to 114 slow and deliberate steps. The culmination is the crowning achievement for any instrument—the etching of the König name on to its polished surface.

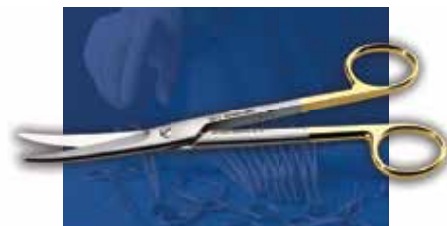

We take the König name seriously and we hope you will too. That's why we're pleased to present you with our latest catalog of over 5,000 surgical instruments.

We think you'll find that König instruments are built for years of demanding use.

König's Lifetime Warranty

We warranty every König surgical instrument to be free of functional defects in workmanship and materials. Medline promises to repair or replace, free of charge, any surgical instrument that does not meet these requirements when used for their intended surgical purpose.

A woman with brown hair in a ponytail, wearing blue scrubs, is looking at a computer monitor. The monitor displays the Medline University website. The website has a blue header with the logo and navigation links: HOME, COURSES, PROGRAMS, IN-PATIENT EDUCATION, ABOUT. The main content area has a blue background with the text "Clinical education, onboarding and more." and "Providing high quality, evidence-based continuing education courses at no cost to you." Below this is a "Learn More" button. To the right is a photo of a woman in scrubs holding a tablet. FOCUS ON COMPLIANCE: REPROCESSING OF REUSABLE MEDICAL DEVICES

INTRODUCTION

Following established protocols and requirements established by standards such as PIDAC and CSA (i.e. best practices for instrument reprocessing) is an important aspect of modern health care as it helps to minimize the patient's risk of infection. Key elements of a reprocessing program are outlined with the intention of providing recommended steps and focus products available in this catalogue to help facilities meet these requirements.

1: CLEANING

The first and most crucial step in instrument reprocessing is cleaning.

Improper cleaning can impede the sterilization process. Manual cleaning the instrument in enzymatic solution bath for at least 3–5 minutes will soften and loosen the soil that may have dried on the instrument between the time it was used and the time cleaning has started. A good quality enzyme detergent (Valsure Enzymatic 1C5208) is preferred as they help to break up organic soil more readily as well as protect your devices from the harmful effects of poor water quality.

2: CLEANING VERIFICATION

It is well known that you can sterilize what is not cleaned. Cleaning verification within standards (CSA Z314.8) are becoming more prevalent as part of good practice recommendations. These tests should be performed on a routine basis with documented results. For automated washers and ultrasonic cleaners, All Clean and Verify Ultrasonic Indicators can be used to verify the system performance. Verify All Clean monitors the effects of time, temperature, impingement and chemistry within an automated wash cycle and Verify Ultrasonic Indicators monitor the cavitation.

3: HIGH LEVEL DISINFECTION

Medical devices classified as Semi-Critical according to the Spaulding classification must minimally be disinfected chemically by high-level disinfection. Semi-Critical devices contact, but do not penetrate mucous membranes and sterile areas of the body. Examples of these devices may be flexible endoscopes or ultrasonic probes used in diagnostic imaging. Revital-Ox Resert can be used to achieve high level disinfection following precleaning and following the manufacturer's instruction for use. Resert is an aldehyde free product which is more desirable for patient and user safety.

4: STERILIZATION MONITORING

Sterility assurance of processed instruments should be routinely verified using three methods: physical, chemical, and biological.

Chemical Indicators

Chemical indicators should be used in every pack. Type 5 and Type 6 Chemical indicators (CIs) are the indicators of choice for a quality sterility assurance program. These indicators provide change color or show movement during the sterilizer cycle to verify that all sterilization parameters have been met for that specific cycle.

Biological Indicators

Biological Indicator (BI) monitoring is a requirement for sterility assurance as BI's contain bacterial spores that test the lethality of sterilizers. This is performed every day that the sterilizer is operational and for each load containing an implant. Incubation times range from 24 hours down to as little as 40 minutes for routine monitoring.
