NUCLEAR REGULATORY COMMISSION
OFFICE OF INSPECTION AND ENFORCEMENT
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20555

IE INFORMATION NOTICE NO. 83-05: OBTAINING APPROVAL FOR DISPOSING OF VERY-LOW-LEVEL RADIOACTIVE WASTE - 10 CFR
SECTION 20.302

Addressees:

All production and utilization facilities, including nuclear power reactors and research and test reactors, holding an operating license.

Purpose:

Modern radiation-detection equipment makes possible the detection of very low concentrations of radionuclides in materials, including very low levels of radioactive contamination in materials such as soils. A number of licensees have expressed concern over the perceived need to package and ship large quantities of such materials to low-level waste burial sites. Such shipments are expensive and use the limited space available in burial sites.

The purpose of this information notice is to call attention to a little-used section of NRC regulations [10 CFR §20.302(a)] that provides a method for obtaining approval of proposed procedures for disposing of licensed material and any other radioactive material involved, in a manner not otherwise authorized in the regulations. This section of the regulations may be used to obtain approval of proposed procedures for disposal of, among other things, large volumes of material contaminated at very low levels, such as contaminated soil, oil, or tools and equipment. It is expected that recipients will review this information notice for applicability to their facilities. No specific action or response is required.

Description of Circumstances:

In its Policy Statement on Low-Level Waste Volume Reduction (46FR 51100, October 16, 1981) the NRC recognized the need to minimize the quantity of waste generated and shipped to commercial waste-disposal sites. With one exception, existing NRC regulations provide no minimum level of radioactivity in waste from a licensee's facility that may be disposed of in a manner other than as normal radioactive waste. That exception is the provision, in 10 CFR §20.306, that licensees may dispose of certain levels of tritium and carbon-14 in liquid-scintillation and animal-carcass waste without regard to its radioactivity. In publishing its proposed licensing requirements for land disposal of radioactive waste, the Commission recognized the need for similar provisions for other radionuclides and other wastes, wastes that would be exempt from the proposed 10 CFR Part 61* and would be of no regulatory concern. In the notice of proposed rulemaking, the Commission stated that it believed that such exemptions should be determined on a specific waste basis. Over one-fourth of the commenters on the draft Environmental Impact Statement for Part 61 endorsed the need for such provisions. The fundamental concern of practically all commenters appeared to be not whether a generic or a case-by-case approach should be taken, but rather that some action be taken as soon as possible. The NRC staff believes that the current policy of examining waste streams on a case-by-case basis will result in the quickest and best results.

The NRC staff recognizes that setting generic limits is a desirable goal and plans to work toward this goal over the next few years. The NRC staff also believes that the process of examining a few specific waste streams will facilitate the development of generic requirements and is accelerating its efforts on setting standards for disposal of very-low-level wastes by less restrictive means. Toward this end, the NRC's Office of Nuclear Regulatory Research has initiated research to provide a technical basis for a regulatory provision for disposal of specific wastes from nuclear power reactors.

In the interim, before specific or generic provisions for disposing of very-low-level radioactive wastes are adopted through rulemaking, licensees have another alternative for obtaining approval to dispose of large volumes of materials contaminated with very low levels of radioactivity. That alternative is provided in 10 CFR §20.302(a), "Method for obtaining approval of proposed disposal procedures." For example, a licensee recently proposed to relocate 17,000 cubic feet of very-low-level contaminated soil from the restricted area to the parking lot area. The very-low-level contaminated soil was to be covered with a minimum of 6 inches of clean soil and possibly paved over with asphalt in the future. In another case, a licensee proposed that very-low-level contaminated oil be burned in its oil fired boilers and proposed a technical specification change to limit the amount of radioactivity released through the boiler exhaust. In both cases, the NRC's evaluations concluded that the estimated doses were negligibly small from the standpoint of occupational exposure limits and acceptably small for potential non-occupational exposures. The licensees' proposals were approved.

The purpose of this information notice is to bring the provisions of 10 CFR §20.302(a) to the attention of licensees. The NRC staff believes that submissions and approvals in accordance with 10 CFR §20.302(a) can provide a reasonable alternative to high cost disposals by shallow land burial at waste repositories of large volumes of material contaminated at low levels. Such submissions could also provide a data base for further development of regulatory provisions for disposing of specific wastes below some activity level without regard to their radioactivity similar to the provisions of 10 CFR §20.306 for disposing of certain licensed materials containing low levels of carbon-14 and tritium.

Applications pursuant to 10 CFR §20.302(a) should be submitted to the Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation (NRR). The Office of Inspection and Enforcement and NRC Regional Offices have no authority to approve such requests. NRR has indicated that such requests for disposal pursuant to 10 CFR §20.302(a) will be handled in a timely manner.
