Workers at Rome's City Hall remove a poster of reporter Jill Carroll after hearing news of her release.

Reporter: 'I Was Not Harmed

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | American reporter Jill Carroll's three-month hostage ordeal ended Thursday when she was left on a Baghdad street in front of a Sunni political party office. She appeared composed and eager to talk about her 82 days held captive in a tiny room.

"It's important people know that I was not harmed," she said.

Carroll was dropped off at midday near an office of the Iraqi Islamic Party. She was then driven to party headquarters before being handed over to U.S. authorities.

The 28-year-old freelancer for The Christian Science Monitor said her kidnappers confined her to a small room with frosted windows but treated her well. Although her captors issued televised threats to kill Carroll if American forces did not release women prisoners, she said: "They never said they would hit me, never threatened me in any way."

The U.S. ambassador said there was no ransom paid by the American embassy, but his remarks left open the question of whether "arrangements" were made by others. (AP)

Steroids Inquiry Criticized

Former senator with ties to Red Sox to lead investigation

NEW YORK | Baseball began its investigation Thursday into alleged steroid use by Barry Bonds and others, and the head of the inquiry immediately came under attack because of his close ties to the sport.

In the wake of a searing book about Bonds, commissioner Bud Selig appointed former Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell currently a director of the Boston Red Sox - to lead the investigation. The probe initially will be limited to events since September 2002, when the sport banned performanceenhancing drugs, but Mitchell has the authority to expand it.

Selig said Mitchell's report will be made public but didn't set a timetable. By then, Bonds may well have passed Babe Ruth's home-run mark on the way toward Hank Aaron's all-time record.

Mitchell said he will not resign his position with the Red Sox. He also is chairman of The Walt Disney Co., the parent of ESPN, a national broadcast partner of baseball.

"I don't think there's any conflict," he said. "I'm going to be independent, have complete independent authority and will act." (AP)

Mass. Court Limits Gay Marriage

Ruling bans couples from states prohibiting unions from marrying

BOSTON | In a disappointment for the gay rights movement, the state's highest court ruled Thursday that same-sex couples from states where gay marriage is prohibited cannot tie the knot in Massachusetts.

Gov. Mitt Romney, a Republican who is considering a run for president in 2008, welcomed the decision, saying he did not want Massachusetts to become "the Las Vegas of same-sex marriage." The Supreme Judicial Court upheld a 1913 state law that forbids nonresidents to marry in Massachusetts if their marriage would not be recognized in their home state.

If the court had struck down the law, Massachusetts would have been thrown open to gay couples from across the country to get married. They could then have returned to their home states to fight for legal recognition for those marriages.

The ruling leaves in legal limbo an undetermined number of outof-state gay couples who got married in 2004 in Massachusetts

Army Bans Privately Bought Body Armor

WASHINGTON | Soldiers will no longer be allowed to wear body armor other than the protective gear issued by the military, Army officials said Thursday, the latest twist in a running battle over the equipment the Pentagon gives its troops in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Army officials told The Associated Press that the order was prompted by concerns that soldiers or their families were buying inadequate or untested commercial armor from private companies.

"We're very concerned that people are spending their hardearned money on something that doesn't provide the level of protection that the Army requires people to wear. So they're, frankly, wasting their money on substandard stuff," said Col. Thomas Spoehr, director of materiel for the Army.

Veterans groups and some lawmakers immediately denounced the decision.

"Outrageously we've seen that (soldiers) haven't been getting what they need in terms of equipment and body armor," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who wrote legislation to have troops reimbursed for equipment purchases. LOLITA C. BALDOR (AP)

House Conservatives Blast Immigration Bill

Senate provision would give illegal immigrants chance at citizenship

WASHINGTON | A House conservative criticized President Bush, accused the Senate of fouling the air, said prisoners should pick America's crops instead of illegal farm workers and denounced the use of Mexican flags by protesters Thursday in a vehement attack on legislation to liberalize U.S. immigration laws.

"I say let the prisoners pick the fruits," said Rep. Dana Rohrabacher of California, one of more than a dozen Republicans who took turns condemning a Senate bill that offers an estimated 11 million illegal immigrants an opportunity for citizenship.

"Anybody that votes for an amnesty bill deserves to be branded with a scarlet letter A," said Rep. Steve King of Iowa, referring to a guest worker provision in the Senate measure.

Ex-FBI Agent Indicted For Mob Hits

Inside man's tips led mafia boss to order slavings, police say

NEW YORK | A retired FBI agent was indicted on murder charges Thursday for allegedly taking bribes from a mobster to supply him with inside information that led to four underworld slavings in Brooklyn.

R. Lindley DeVecchio, 65, was arrested in a case of "confidential leaks, payoffs and death" dating back two decades, District Attorney Charles Hynes said.

DeVecchio pleaded not guilty and was released on $1 million bail. He did not speak at his arraignment. One of the two alleged mob hitmen behind the slayings was jailed without bail. The other was in Florida, awaiting extradition.

Hynes said the charges stemmed from the unusually close relationship between DeVecchio - then head of the FBI's Colombo crime family squad — and Gregory Scarpa Sr.,

a government informant and Colombo captain nicknamed "The Grim Reaper."

The pair met each week during the 1980s and '90s and discussed a bloody civil war within the Colombo family. In exchange for bribes, DeVecchio "counseled Scarpa to protect himself by eliminating imminent threats," Hynes said.

In 1984, DeVecchio allegedly warned Scarpa that the girlfriend of a high-ranking Colombo figure was cooperating with federal authorities. As a result, authorities say, she was shot and killed in a Brooklyn social club — a pattern prosecutors said was repeated in three slayings of Scarpa rivals, the last one in 1992.

Scarpa gave DeVecchio weekly payments and also enhanced the agent's reputation within the FBI by helping him solve important cases, Hynes said.

DeVecchio surrendered Wednesday night at the Brooklyn district attorney's office. He had no comment as he entered.

New Orleans Recovery Could Take 25 Years

Repairing city's levees to pre-storm levels will cost extra $5.9 billion

WASHINGTON | A full recovery in New Orleans could take 25 years as homeowners, businesses and tourists are coaxed back to the city devastated by Hurricane Katrina, the Bush administration's Gulf Coast recovery coordinator said Thursday.

Don Powell said that much of the city's rebirth will hinge on factors he said were "out of our control," including restoring housing, ensuring safety and encouraging robust investment by the private sector.

Powell said the Army Corps of Engineers now estimates it will cost an additional $5.9 billion to repair levees enough to fully protect and insure nearly 1.1 million residents of the greater New Orleans area.

That is in addition to the $3.5 billion the Bush administration has so far sought to bring the levees back to at least their pre-Katrina levels by June 1, the start of the 2006 hurricane season

Over the next 60 days the Corps will be strengthening levees and building storm-proof pumping stations and flood gates to close canals in the event of a major storm. LARA JAKES JORDAN (AP)

Thursday's ruling by the council's nine appointed members allows the law to go into effect – depending on Chirac's actions - in what could be a turning point in the high-profile dispute. Chirac doesn't face any easy choices. If he signs the law, he risks a social battle and more pro-ing just a year before presidential and legislative elections.

Lawmakers and government officials have speculated that Chirac would push through the law, standing by Villepin as he has throughout the crisis.

The measure allows a two-year trial period for workers under 26, during which companies can fire them for no reason.

The jobs plan has taken a drastic toll on the popularity of Villepin, a poet, writer and longtime aide to Chirac appointed premier in May. He has never been elected to office, but was widely considered a presidential hopeful for next year's vote. EMMANUEL GEORGES-PICOT (AP)

FREETOWN. SIERRA LEONE | Trial in Africa is too risky for a man accused of fomenting bloodshed across West Africa, international prosecutors said Thursday in requesting that Charles Taylor's trial for crimes against humanity be moved to The Hague in the Netherlands.

The former Liberian president is set to become the first African head of state tried for war crimes before an international court. He has been indicted on 11 counts for allegedly supporting a brutal rebel movement in Sierra Leone.

Peter Andersen, a spokesman for the U.N. tribunal, said court officials had requested the trial be moved. "But I wish to stress that it would be the Special Court of Sierra Leone sitting in The Hague," he said.

Liberian President Ellen Johnson Sirleaf also raised concerns about stability Thursday. saying in an address to her nation that The Hague would be a "more conducive environment" for Taylor's trial than so close to Liberia, where many still support him. (AP)

The researchers singled out efforts by the Indian government, the World Bank and other non-governmental groups to educate sex workers and the men who frequent them about the dangers of HIV, efforts that "appear to have contributed to a drastic decline" in new infections.

India has an estimated 5.13 million people with HIV, second only to South Africa, although the percentage of those with the AIDScausing virus is much lower than in many parts of Africa.

Still, there are fears that ignorance and the stigma attached to the disease could hamper prevention efforts and lead to an explosion in new infections across India. NIRMALA GEORGE (AP)

Dozens Die After Bahrain Ferry Sinks

MANAMA, BAHRAIN | A ferry carrying up to 150 people sank Thursday night in the Persian Gulf off the coast of Bahrain, and at least 44 bodies had been recovered, the country's interior minister said. American divers and a U.S. helicopter aided the rescue effort.

Interior Minister Sheik Rashid

The official Bahrain News Agency said the ferry was on an evening cruise that was to last several hours. It overturned less than a mile off the coast, it said.

There was no indication of what caused the ferry to sink in what appeared to be ideal weather conditions. The government dismissed terrorism as a cause, and the news agency quoted Interior Ministry spokesman Maj. Mohammed Ben Dayna as calling the sinking an accident.

The passengers were thought to be a mix of Bahrainis, nationals of other Gulf Arab nations and Westerners. (AP)

WASHINGTON | Three taxicab companies that provide transportation for the region's disabled transit riders say they're not getting paid on time and that could hurt the service.

Cabbies

They say the company that operates the MetroAccess service still owes them nearly $500,000.

MV Transportation began providing the service in January for Metro.

MV uses its own fleet of vehicles as well as subcontractors and taxi companies to provide curb-to-curb service for about 16-thousand disabled people in the region.

A spokeswoman for MV says the payment delays have been caused by questionable or incomplete billing from the taxi companies.

Von Pelot, a spokesman for Red Top Cab Company in Arlington told The Washington Post the cab companies can't continue to be part of the deal if they don't get paid promptly.

Naval Officer Accused In '96 Killing Convicted

ALEXANDRIA, VA. | A former naval intelligence officer accused in the 1996 disappearance of his ex-wife, was convicted Thursday of kidnapping resulting in death.

Prosecutors convinced the federal jury that Jay Lentz lured his ex-wife from her Arlington home to his home in Fort Washington, Md., under the pretext of seeing their daughter. Officials said the child was with relatives at the time.

Doris Lentz' body was never found, but her blood-soaked car later turned up in the District.

Lentz has been in jail since his arrest in April 2001. He was convicted on the same charge in 2003 and a jury also recommended he be sentenced to life in prison.

A week later, U.S. District Judge Gerald Bruce Lee set aside the verdict, saying the prosecution had not proved its case. He also accused a prosecutor of planting inadmissible evidence in the jury room – two diaries that belonged to Doris Lentz. Some jurors said the diaries helped push them toward a conviction.

An appeals court in 2004 overruled Lee and cleared Mellin of misconduct charges, but agreed to a new trial because jurors had seen the inadmissible evidence. (AP)

INFLUENZA

Doctors at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) are conducting a research study (#06-I-0105) to evaluate the safety and tolerability of a new investigational drug called peramivir. This drug is related to some of the drugs currently used for influenza. It would be the first drug used for influenza that could be given by vein. Doctors believe that it may be more effective in treating influenza viruses than current medications. Participants will be compensated.

Workers' Web Use Curbed

Companies cracking down on use of tools like IM, outside e-mail

Companies are clamping down on employees' workplace use of the expanding range of free Internet services, such as instant messaging and video downloading, to protect themselves from viruses, communications traffic jams and regulatory missteps.

General Electric Co., for example, has barred outside instant-messaging and file-sharing programs. as well as access to personal online e-mail accounts like those offered by Yahoo Inc.

The corporate crackdown underscores an emerging challenge for the Web. As the spread of broadband technology makes it possible for millions of Americans to watch TV on the Web or make cheap phone calls, companies, government agencies and universities are concerned about the possible side effects — including the threat of a worm or other bit of malicious code sneaking into their systems.

Internet phone service Skype, which is owned by eBay, and other service providers say such concerns are overblown. They say their products are in many cases safer than e-mail attachments, a common source of viruses that are nonetheless seen as indispensable tools.

Telecom company Global Crossing started blocking its employees' access to personal email accounts on sites like Yahoo after a virus used them to slip in.

"I used to think nothing o checking my Yahoo mail several times a day," says Global Crossing Chief Marketing Officer Anthony Christie.

At Britain's Cambridge University, some colleges and departments ban Skype, fearing their data networks could become giant hubs for Skype transmissions from all over Europe.

Michael Jackson, Skype's vice president of operations, says that many technologies that are now crucial business tools were once greeted with suspicion. "Many organizations were initially scared of the Internet and e-mail," he said. "Now there's hardly a workplace on the planet that doesn't have an Internet connection." ### Delphi May Seek to Void Contracts

DETROIT | In a move that would send shudders through an ailing U.S. auto industry, Delphi Corp. was expected to ask a federal judge to cancel its union contracts Friday ers' wages.

Delphi, the largest U.S. auto supplier, had set a deadline of

A deadlock with parts supplier Delphi could be a new blow to the auto industry. Thursday to reach an agreement to lower wages for its 34,000 U.S. hourly workers, but it appeared unlikely Delphi would meet that goal since the United Auto Workers and GM hadn't agreed to Delphi's latest wage proposal as of Thursday afternoon.

On three other occasions, Delphi has delayed filing motions to cancel its contracts to continue talks with GM and its unions. The company has the option of delaying again

Confident Patriots are on the cusp of one of the greatest upsets ever

MASON HOOPS | By now, you know the Connecticut Assassins Association isn't a rap crew.

You know Jim Larranaga isn't Dr. Phil's protégé, despite his psychological savvy.

You've probably even heard enough factoids to write a Wikipedia entry on George Mason himself. (A dozen kids? Who knew?)

The Patriots are marching on Indianapolis. Join them, or get out of their way.

But a week's worth of feelgood features aside, the true lesson of Mason's improbable Final Four run may be this: It's one thing to espouse fearlessness. It's another to practice it.

Overcoming doubledigit deficits against North Carolina and Connecticut is about as easy as stealing from Tony Soprano (before he got shot).

That is, unless you don't care about the other team's reputation.

Cinderella can't have a good time at the ball if she harps on the powers conspiring against her.

"I don't think about the name on their jerseys," said senior Lamar Butler, the Washington D.C. Region's most outstanding player. "The main thing is that it gives me more motivation to play against those guys. There's no fear or intimidation at all."

For Mason (27-7), UConn star Rudy Gay was just another player they had to guard. UNC's Tyler Hansbrough may as well have been another tall guy who stopped by the Y for an afternoon run.

"They breathe just like us. They're human just like us," sophomore Folarin Campbell said. ntas

"So we just go out there and play."

The Patriots will take on Florida (31-6) on Saturday (6:07 p.m. tip). The Gators are the No. 3 seed out of the Minneapolis Region and were a trendy pick to reach Indianapolis at the tournament's outset. Regional MOP Joakim Noah (14.2 ppg) is getting all the press, but all five Gators starters average double figures. They play solid defense and shoot well from the perimeter. Sound familiar?

"Satisfaction doesn't really have to do with [beating a big-name] opponent," senior Tony Skinn said. "It's more within the team and knowing what we've accomplished. It's a good feeling right now. but we can't be satisfied because we have a chance to do something nobody else has ever done." ERIC BRANDNER

Is Florida the next giant to fall to George Mason?

KEYS TO THE FINAL FOUR

→ Just kicking it out: George Mason and Florida have similar offensive strategies: Pound the ball down low and then spot up their shooters.

→ Paint-minders: The Patriots can't afford big men Jai Lewis or Will Thomas to get in foul trouble.

→ Wings draining prayers: Folarin Campbell and Lamar Butler have been sensational, shooting 59 percent from the floor and 50 percent from three.

Tim Duncan and the Spurs have already lost once to the Wizards this year.

→ TEXAS TWO-STEP: The Wizards wrap up their road trip with games against Yao Ming and the Houston Rockets Friday (8:30 p.m. on CSN) followed by a game against the defending champion San Antonio Spurs Saturday (8:30 p.m. on CSN).

→ FINAL FOUR: George Mason finally takes the court again, this time playing Cinderella against Florida on Saturday (6 p.m. on CBS) in the first half of the Final Four. UCLA plays LSU after the Patriots' game ends.

→ FINAL FOUR 2: The women's Final Four is heavy on the ACC, as Maryland plays North Carolina Sunday (7 p.m. on ESPN) followed by Duke vs. LSU (9 p.m. on ESPN).

→ NATS-O'S: The Battle of the Beltway gives fans their first chance to see Washington play Baltimore in the area. Friday's game (7 p.m. on Channel 20) is at RFK and Saturday's matinee (4:30

Nationals hope their summer isn't like spring

NATIONALS | When the Washington Nationals take the field at RFK Stadium for tonight's exhibition game, the grass will be green and the weather will be warm and baseball will be back.

The Nationals, presumably, will just be happy to be out of Florida and wrapping up a tumultuous spring training, plagued by discontented players, injuries and the extended absences of those participating in the World Baseball Classic.

"This has been the oddest spring training I've ever been associated with," said manager Frank Robinson, who has four decades worth of spring trainings to choose from.

The story of the spring, of course, was Alfonso Soriano. The Nationals traded for the slugging second baseman in the off-season, only to learn that he was adamantly opposed to the Nationals' plan to move him to left field. Soriano returned from the WBC and after some tense moments – including his outright refusal to play the outfield in one game - he reluctantly relented.

Around that time, the Nationals were coming to grips with the loss of reliever Luis Ayala to ligament-replacement surgery. The steady right-hander injured himself pitching

an: Rookie of the Year

Catching up with the Nats: Alfonso Soriano isn't going to win any fans with his glove, based on the reports out of spring training. But his bat, coupled with the addition of Ryan Zimmerman as a full-time starter, should make for an improved offense that will also feature Brandon Watson's speed and Jose Guillen's power, Brian Schneider, Nick Johnson and Jose Vidro should provide consistency if they can stay healthy.

for Mexico in the Classic. Nationals officials contend that, coming off a previous injury, he should have been brought along more slowly.

He'll be joined on the disabled list by starting shortstop Cristian Guzman (shoulder), first baseman/ catcher Robert Fick (elbow), and pitchers Ryan Drese (shoulder) and Brian Lawrence (elbow). Lawrence, penciled in as the No. 3 starter after arriving in a trade, injured himself on the first day of spring training.

Throw in a nagging wrist injury to power-hitting right fielder Jose Guillen, an epidemic of errors in the field and the surprise demotion of center fielder Ryan Church and the Nationals appear in desperate need of a silver lining.

"This has been the oddest spring training l've ever been associated with."

They can, however, point to solid performances by frontof-the-rotation starters Livan Hernandez and John Patterson. Or the offensive emergence of third baseman Ryan Zimmerman and center fielder Brandon Watson, both rookies.

It has been an exhausting time for general manager Jim Bowden, but he knows that spring training is rarely an accurate indicator of regular-season success.

'To me, it has been one nightmare after another," he said. "It's like I am working for the fire department and putting out fires every day. But I have been through springs like this before, and then the season starts and you are in a pennant race all year. We are hoping that will happen here." DEREK TURNER

Hail to the Chief: If last year taught us anything, it's that if Washington can get to closer Chad Cordero, it is in good hands. Getting there might be the problem for a team that lost pitchers Esteban Loaiza and Hector Carrasco to free agency. John Patterson and Livan Hernandez are a strong start to a rotation, but who will step behind them is anyone's guess. Look for Gary Majewski to play a bigger role with set-up man Luis Ayala out for the season.

Sports Weekend

The Rivalry Begins

Nats, Orioles fight for fan allegiance in first games in the D.C. area

RIVALRY | OK, everybody off the fence. It's time to pick a side.

North or South. National League or American. Nationals or Orioles.

When the Washington and Baltimore baseball clubs get together this weekend, for the first time outside the Florida sunshine, a rivalry will be born. Sure, they are only exhibition games, but it's about to get real — real fast.

A year ago, Washington began its love affair with the Nationals as the team went about its inaugural season segregated from Peter Angelos' Orioles a short trip up the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. It's not the case this year. Major League Baseball has deemed the two franchises as interleague rivals, meaning they will play each other six times during the regular season, in addition to exhibition games tonight at RFK Stadium and Saturday at Camden Yards.

During Washington's threedecade absence from the big leagues, many area baseball fans looked north for their fix. These fans now must weigh their memories of Cal Ripken Jr. and Jim Palmer against their allegiance to the hometown team.

"I think that this is going to be

The Nationals drew 33,651 fans per game in their first season at RFK Stadium.

Orioles fans still exist despite the fact that D.C. has a team of its own now.

the year that the loyalties really start to shake out, whether you really are a Nats fan first or an Orioles fan first," said Colin Mills, president of the Nats Fan Club. "But whether you love the Orioles or you hate them,

I think that everybody appreciates that this isn't just another game."

In the first year of the fight for the baseball fans' affection, the Nationals averaged 33,651 fans per home game, good for 11th in baseball en route to an 82-82 finish. The Orioles drew 32,404, 14th best even as the team fell apart in the second half of the season.

The smart money says those numbers will go up when the two teams meet. And this weekend provides a perfect warm-up.

"Certainly I think Nationals fans are, in a way, out to prove themselves and this is the way to do it," said Ian Koski, editor and co-founder of the fan site NationalsPride.com. DEREK TURNER

Nats Make Final Cuts of the Spring

Only 8 on this season's roster opened up last year in Washington

NATIONALS | Daryle Ward and Wiki Gonzalez claimed two of the Washington Nationals' final backup spots Thursday, when the team released outfielder Michael Tucker and made three other moves to get down to the 25-man active roster limit.

Washington also sent righthander Travis Hughes outright to Triple-A New Orleans, and reassigned catcher Alberto Castillo and right-hander Kevin Gryboski to minor league camp. Hughes cleared waivers and accepted his assignment to the minors.

The team's roster has 11 pitchers and 14 position players — and only eight of the 25 were with the Nationals on opening day in 2005.

Tucker, who hit .158 in spring training, was granted his unconditional release after losing out to Ward in competition for a reserve spot, while Castillo was beaten out by Gonzalez for the second-string catching job. Gonzalez's contract was purchased from New Orleans. "Daryle Ward had a good spring, hit the ball hard, consistently throughout," manager Frank Robinson said. "We just felt like for the best 25 players on this ballclub, for starting the season, we would be better off with Ward than with Tucker."

With Ward, fourth outfielder Marlon Byrd, Matthew LeCroy (1B-C), Marlon Anderson (INF-OF) and Damian Jackson (INF-OF), Robinson said he feels much better about his late-inning options than last season.

"These people have done the job before with the bat," the manager said. Howard fendrich (AP)

Mitchell At the Plate

Former senate leader known for fair play is key man in drug probe

BASEBALL | In turning to former Senate leader George Mitchell to unravel its steroid scandal, Major League Baseball enlisted a global troubleshooter with an insider's knowledge of the game.

Plainspoken, even bland, with skills honed in courtrooms, boardrooms, in Washington and on the international stage, Mitchell brings a rare range of experience and a reputation for something at risk in baseball — fair play.

President Clinton once offered the former U.S. attorney a spot on the Supreme Court. His stewardship of the Northern Ireland peace talks made him a celebrity on another continent. He was the architect of a Middle East peace plan that won international support in 2001, and he led an investigation into alleged bribes in Salt Lake City's bid for the 2002 Olympics.

Baseball's investigation will test those sterling credentials.

The 72-year-old Mitchell is part of the baseball establishment - a director with the Boston Red Sox who has dreamed of becoming commissioner. Already there are questions from critics who say the league needs to clean house, not redecorate.

"Of course he has some ties to baseball, but we know what they are. Everybody will be watching to make sure he plays things absolutely straight," former commissioner Fay Vincent said. (AP)

Conte: Book 'Full of Outright Lies'

DOPING | BALCO founder Victor Conte insisted Thursday that he never gave performance enhancing drugs to Barry Bonds and that a new book that makes those claims is "full of outright lies."

Conte spoke to The Associated Press outside his San Mateo home hours after his release from prison, where he spent four months after pleading guilty to orchestrating an illegal steroids distribution scheme that allegedly involved many highprofile athletes, including Bonds.

Asked whether he gave Bonds steroids, Conte said: "No, I did not."

"Game of Shadows," by two San Francisco Chronicle reporters, chronicles the founding of the Bay Area Laboratory Co-Operative and details alleged extensive steroid use by Bonds and other baseball stars. Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig announced Thursday that former Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell will lead an investigation into the claims. (AP)

D.C. Remains United

Four-time champions haven't changed much from last year's roster

UNITED | It has been five months since D.C. United's season of untimely meltdowns ended in a memorable first-round playoff implosion. That time has been a busy one in American soccer - MLS clubs have been moved and sold, several big names have changed addresses and the national team has been preparing for this summer's World Cup.

But all has been quiet on East Capitol Street, where the four-time champs did not add a single player who might see significant minutes.

Whether or not the issues that resulted in United's poor showing in last season's most critical games have been resolved, or even addressed, will become clearer beginning Sunday at RFK Stadium, where Jaime Moreno, Freddy Adu and the rest will open their 11th season against New York. The club has stayed and grown together, it is unlikely to lose any

Noah's Arc of Triumph

Son of French tennis great becomes a star on the basketball court

FINAL FOUR | Wearing headphones and hustling to get to his biological anthropology class, Joakim Noah noticed someone following him.

He didn't say anything. He didn't look over his shoulder.

He didn't even care that the woman tailed him across campus and then grabbed a nearby seat in class.

He wondered what she was doing. Was she supposed to be there? Was she even a student? Was she stalking him?

He figured it out 50 minutes later, when she approached him after the lecture.

"She sat through the whole class and then asked me to sign a couple of T-shirts," Noah said.

Noah has received a lot of extra attention lately.

Joakim Noah's charisma has turned Florida into a basketball school, for now.

He has famous bloodlines, worldwide experiences and a unique combination of talent and charisma — all of which has helped transform the 6-foot-11 sophomore forward from part-time player to full-fledged star at Florida.

Noah has been the catalyst for the team's run to the Final Four, where the Gators will play George Mason on Saturday night.

He is one assist shy of leading Florida in every major category during the NCAA tournament. He has 69 points, 40 rebounds, 19 blocked shots, 14 assists and six steals in four games.

Maybe more importantly, he brings an unparalleled level of enthusiasm to every game, every possession.

He screams after blocks, pounds his chest after dunks and challenges teammates to match his passion and effervescence.

"He is seizing every moment that he has on the court," point guard Taurean Green said. "He has been stepping up big for us. He's an emotional player. When he gets all hyped up, we just feed off of that and it gets us going." MARK LONG (AP)

In Cinderella's Shadow

Final Four teams try to steal the spotlight from George Mason

FINAL FOUR | Florida, LSU and UCLA each have one seemingly impossible task this weekend — trying to steal some attention from the darlings of the Final Four.

"In the NCAA tournament, there are two things people love to see a Cinderella story and a team that is so powerful and explosive they look invincible," Florida coach Billy Donovan said Wednesday during a conference call with the other Final Four coaches.

George Mason (27-7) fits Donovan's first description perfectly.

Coach Jim Larranaga spent part of Wednesday's news conference explaining how the university has dealt with its identity crisis, being confused with nearby schools such as George Washington and James Madison.

By winning four games in the tournament and becoming the first No. 11 seed in two decades to reach the national semifinals, though, George Mason now has a place in college basketball lore.

And the only way for Florida, LSU or UCLA to reclaim the spotlight is to ruin the feel-good story.

"What I told my team right after we were seeded and placed into the brackets was that it really doesn't matter where you're seeded, and I think George Mason is a testament to that and the parity in college basketball," UCLA coach Ben Howland said. "There's just so much parity now and the margin for error is so slight among the teams." MICHAEL MAROT (AP)

Why Not Make Some History?

WHY NOT GEORGE MASON? Call it wishful thinking, but the upstarts from Fairfax feel like a team of destiny.

In a week full of media attention that would overwhelm almost anyone, the Patriots seem as calm as ever on the eve of possibly making history.

Coach Jim Larranaga is still telling stories. The team is still playing baseball against each other. And, most important, Tony Skinn, Lamar Butler and company are embracing their role as Cinderella.

The Patriots just have to crash the ball and hope the clock doesn't strike 12 before they win the NCAA championship.

It's the perfect year for the underdog of underdogs to cut down the nets.

No offense to Florida, LSU and UCLA, but there's not exactly an unbeatable team out there.

So why not George Mason? All the Patriots have going for them is experience, chemistry and Larranaga, who is on the coaching roll of a lifetime.

There has been nothing flukish about Mason's past four wins. The team plays great defense and can score from inside the paint and beyond the three-point arc.

That formula has been good enough to beat anybody not named Hofstra of late. What will change Saturday?

If UConn didn't intimidate

There has been nothing flukish about Mason's past four wins.

Mason, Florida won't either. Nor will the sheer magnitude of the Final Four, since it's clear the Patriots only know how to have fun on the court.

So, again, I ask, Why not George Mason?

There is no why not.

3's Company For Terrapins

Maryland joins UNC, Duke in ACC-heavy Final Four in Boston

TERPS WOMEN | It's going to be an Atlantic Coast Conference party in Boston this weekend.

With the second-seed Maryland Terrapins joining top seeds North Carolina and Duke in the Final Four, the path to the national championship will look very familiar to coach Brenda Frese's squad. The pairings represent the first time in NCAA history that one conference placed three schools in the Final Four.

No. 1 Louisiana State is the only outsider in the bunch.

The Terrapins have reason to be optimistic. They've beaten both North Carolina, their opponent Sunday, and Duke this season. On the other hand, they've also lost to both of them. They know it will take

"We feel pretty confident right now, but we know everyone is coming out here playing their best," said sophomore Crystal Langhorne, who this week was named to the Associated Press All-America team. "We are still going to have to come out and play great defense

peak performance to win it all.

As has been the case all season, Langhorne's play will be critical in the Final Four. She scored 25 points in February when the Terrapins (32-4) handed the Tar Heels (33-1) their only loss this season. However, she was held to 12 points when Maryland fell to North Carolina in the ACC tournament final.

The Tar Heels did a particularly good job defending her, limiting the center to just one shot in the second half. Meanwhile, All-American guard Ivory Latta and forward Erlana Larkins scored 26 points each in North Carolina's 91-80 victory.

"We're learning more about [the Terps] and how to play them," North Carolina coach Sylvia Hatchell said after that game.

Hatchell's assessment will be put to the test this weekend. So too will rounded by No. 1s, they'll have the chance to prove the selection committee wrong once and for all.

But it won't be their first trip to the Fleet Center. During a road trip to Boston College in January, Frese took her players to visit the arena and asked them to visualize reaching the Final Four.

Now they're back and looking for that respect.

"We are one of the top [four] teams in the country right now," Langhorne said. "Hopefully, people will recognize how good we are." DEREK TURNER

Madness Comes to Mason

Patriots deal with the media crush resulting from Final Four run

MASON HOOPS | For Gabe Norwood, the strangest part of George Mason's Final Four run has been the rumors.

"People on our floor are saying Sean Connery is going to play [coach Jim Larranaga in the movie about Mason]," the 6 foot 5 sophomore said after practice Tuesday.

Movie? At this point, it wouldn't be surprising.

The cameras turned out en masse Tuesday afternoon for another glimpse into the Patriots' improbable run. Larranaga —who had an audience of two reporters the day before Mason (27-7) left to play Michigan State two weeks ago — met a semicircle of scribes packed six deep in anticipation of his team's national semifinal matchup with Florida.

Larranaga has been the star of the Patriots' odyssey. His stories circulated through the Patriot Center again on Tuesday. Only this time, it was the players telling them.

"We released butterflies my sophomore year outside the Patriot Center," senior Lamar Butler said. "We actually had a ceremony. We were laughing and he was trying to get us to be serious. I just couldn't be serious releasing a butterfly. We actually waved goodbye to the butterflies as they flew off."

> And the message that day? "I can't remember."

Well, the week has been a blur. Larranaga said he'd had just eight hours of sleep in the two days since beating Connecticut.

Forward Will Thomas hasn't gotten much rest either, thanks to some of his fellow students. "People keep pulling the fire alarms where we live," said the forward, who resides with his sophomore teammates. "There was one Sunday night, and when the firemen left, 10 minutes later they pulled it again."

Apparently the Mason kids haven't mastered couch burning yet. But they sure are excited about one of the most unlikely Final Four berths in NCAA history.

"A lot of people have come up to me and congratulated me on everything we've done and saying how we've brought George Mason alive now," Folarin Campbell said. "This campus, people said it was dead. Now, a lot of people are just walking around happy." ERIC BRANDNER

Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim cites Mason as a reason to expand the field.

Boeheim: Add More Teams to The Big Dance

COLLEGE HOOPS | Jim Boeheim wants more schools playing in the NCAA tournament, and his coaching colleagues appear to agree.

The Syracuse coach believes the tournament field should expand from its current 65 teams and hopes to start lobbying for an increase Friday during a meeting with the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

"I have a number in mind, I think it should probably be about four to six, somewhere in there," Boeheim said. "The problem really is that it shouldn't come down to logistics."

Boeheim believes the rapid increase in Division I schools, to more than 300, and increased parity, as demonstrated by George Mason reaching the Final Four, indicates its time to include more teams. (AP)

A Welcome Slug

The slimy antics of 'Slither' herald a director to watch

FILM | In a world of brain-dead horror remakes, writer-director James Gunn didn't just set out to redo any old fright flick. In the body-snatchers-from-space tale "Slither," he aimed to remake them all – and more.

With the gore-minded glee of a fan attuned to every cinematic scare tactic, Gunn also knows how silly they are, infusing "Slither" with a wicked sense of parody while still crafting a clever, maniacally paced twist on B-movie slimefests.

Gunn establishes the story in a quick opening segment as a meteor hurtles toward Earth. Cut to the Southern burgh of Wheelsy, where bored police chief Bill Pardy (Nathan Fillion of the cult TV series "Firefly" and its big-screen spinoff"Serenity") and a deputy fritter away time in a patrol car by checking the speed of a whippoor will with their radar gun. They're so benumbed by the snail's pace of their town that they never notice the fiery flash behind them as the meteor crashes in the woods.

Things quickly speed up, though, as lunk-headed businessman Grant Grant (Michael Rooker) stumbles on the meteorite and the giant, oozy slug that crawls out of it. Grant becomes host for a parasite that turns him into a freakish, tentacled predator whose activities unleash hordes of slimy worms that turn the townsfolk into meat-hungry zombies.

Pardy and Grant's wife, Starla (Elizabeth Banks) race through a rip-roaring night of the living dead as they try to put down Grant and his zombie army.

The grisly creature effects and themes of parasitic possession pay respect to "The Thing," "Invasion of the Body Snatchers," the "Alien" franchise, the George Romero zombie flicks and countless other creature features.

Hollywood has hit on a dependable little gold mine churning out shoddy horror remakes. Here's hoping Gunn, who has a truly creative vision for the genre, can find the same commercial success. DAVID GERMAIN (AP)

Talk Among the Animals

The chatty beasts of 'Ice Age 2' embark on another antic quest

FILM | He's the centerpiece of the movie's poster. He's the creature the kids are all waiting to see. And he steals the show with every fleeting moment he's on screen.

Once again, Scrat, the little part-squirrel, part-rodent thing upstages the top-billed talent with his manic antics to secure his precious acorn.

The movie is right on par with the 2002 original: brisk, pleasant and loaded with slapstick that should keep young children giggling, though repetitive enough that parents at times may feel they're sitting through the first "Ice Age" all #### over again.

TOOTHSOME: The cute, gabby critters of "Ice Age: The Meltdown" face challenges and find friendships on their trek away from their soon-to-be-flooded valley.

The vocal trio of the original two-thirds droll and dour with Ray Romano and Denis Leary, onethird babbling whirlwind with John Leguizamo - is smartly enlivened through the saucy addition of Queen Latifah as a spunky female mammoth

But it's those moments with Scrat – whose bleats, grunts, howls and yelps are voiced with inarticulate glee by "Ice Age" director Chris Wedge – that are the most memorable.

As the title suggests, endless winter is coming to a close for the prehistoric posse of talking animals. Best pals Manny the mammoth (Romano), Diego the sabertoothed tiger (Leary) and Sid the sloth (Leguizamo) discover a giant ice dam holding back the sea is melting and about to break in a deluge that will flood their valley. So the gang starts a long migration to safety at the other end of the valley.

Even more so than the first movie, the sequel comes off as a series of comic episodes strung together along a loose central story.

In fits and starts, though, the fanged little goof asserts himself as the heart and soul of the "Ice Age" tales, adding warmth and loony pathos to what otherwise would be only a sturdy but temperate franchise. DAVID GERMAIN (AP)

Entertainment Weekend

AQUAMARINE (PG, 109 minutes) This mild-mannered comedy tells the story of 13-year-old best friends Claire (Emma Roberts) and Hailey (Joanna "JoJo" Levesque), who discover a mermaid named Aquamarine (Sara Paxton), who has come ashore to find love. She immediately sets her baby blues on a lifeguard named Raymond (Jake McDorman), whom Claire and Hailey have been crushing on all summer. The direction isn't particularly distinguished, but this movie is better than nothing for its woefully underserved tween audience. (AH)

BIG MOMMA'S HOUSE 2 (PG-13,99 minutes) Martin Lawrence is FBI agent Malcolm Turner, who slaps on the big lady equipment (again) so he can pose undercover as a nanny to uncover the nefarious doings of the big daddy of the household. To add subplot injury to main-plot insult, Malcolm has to keep his mission secret from the FBI and his pregnant wife (Nia Long). Please tell me you've heard enough. (DT)

THE BOYS OF BARAKA (Unrated, 84 minutes) This rich, satisfying documentary follows four inner-city boys who discover their potential at a boarding school in Kenya. We meet them as they wend their way through tortured schools and troubled families. Each has demonstrated potential, though, and they are recruited to attend the Baraka School, founded in 1996 by a Baltimore-based foundation. "Baraka" is a soaring, complex testament to survival, character and hope. (AH)

CRASH (R, 100 minutes) The aftermath of Rodney King and 9/11 seems to sear the nostrils of every Los Angeleno in Paul Haggis' Oscar-winning white-knuckle hatefest among characters of almost every ideological, cultural or religious stripe. Asians, Latinos, whites, blacks, rich and poor, Muslim and Christian all clash in this multi-character story. If "Crash" only showed the dark side of humanity, it would barely be worth the viewing. But the movie is also about the best in people. (DT)

DAVE CHAPPELLE'S BLOCK PARTY (R, 103 minutes) This film was shot in September 2004, when Dave Chappelle had just signed a $50 million deal for his comedy series. There's an innocent joy and a genial detachment, as if he's playing host to his own celebrity. But there's something deeper at work. Even with his cutting racial satire, he seems uniquely positioned to appeal to white and black Americans. (DT)

EIGHT BELOW (PG, 120 minutes) Eight canines pull their weight literally and figuratively in this lively adventure. The movie, based on true events, starts out with a gripping setup, in which National Science Foundation guide Jerry Shepard (Paul Walker) takes an arrogant scientist on an expedition. When a storm forces the humans to evacuate, Jerry is told he can't go back for the dogs. The movie is an often agonizing depiction of how these animals save themselves, and the sequences of them trying to survive are magnificent and deeply moving (AH)

FAILURE TO LAUNCH (PG-13,97 minutes) This movie is one of the best American films in months and the best comedy since I don't know when. Matthew McConaughey plays a 35-year-old boy-man who still lives with his parents. They hire Sarah Jessica Parker, a specialist in emptying nests, to get him to fall in love with her and move out. On this simple, sturdy frame, the writers work all kinds of comic riffs. The movie is so swift and sure, you can say: It achieves liftoff. (SH)

FIND ME GUILTY (R, 125 minutes) As cinematic distractions go, this one's right up there: the spectacle of Vin Diesel playing a real-life Italian American mobster. With hair. And a gut. Talk about suspension of disbelief. Once I got over that, I found myself charmed by Diesel. Playing the morally compro-

Amateurs, Unite!

FOR "AWESOME: I... SHOT THAT!," the Beastie Boys handed out video cameras to 50 fans and told them to go wild gathering footage of their October 2004 Madison Square Garden show. But because these are fans behind the cameras, the video is usually headacheinducing in its jerkiness. And the strobe effects and frantic edits certainly don't help, the cuts coming as quickly as DJ Mixmaster Mike works the turntables. The Beastie Boys don't need all this visual trickery and embellishment. As the trio works their way through hits including "So What'cha Want," "Brass Monkey," "Sure Shot" and "Sabotage," they reveal once again that they're a complete blast to watch. CHRISTY LEMIRE (AP) mised Giacomo "Jackie Dee" DiNorscio, Diesel infuses the Lucchese family made man with a convincing cocktail of sweetness and rage. But I was less enamored with the film's scraggly script. This is a courtroom drama without much drama going on. (TERESA WILTZ)

FIREWALL (PG-13, 120 minutes) Harrison Ford plays Jack Stanfield, a security systems designer who is held at gunpoint, along with his family, by a criminal mastermind who knows Jack designed the security for a global bank. Jack must save his family and outwit the bad guys. Unfortunately, Ford's brand of actionhero has become obsolete — at least for him. Although the actor looks great for 63, the job calls for vigor and virility. (DT)

GAME 6 (R,86 minutes) This movie actually springs from the head of a novelist, the postmodernist legend Don DeLillo. It's about a playwright named Nicky Rogan (Michael Keaton) who's on the verge of a nervous breakdown. But the movie's about as serious as the drunk writer's tale. If Rogan's not drinking, he's riding in taxis and making pointless chitchat with the drivers. It never gets either funny or interesting. (SH)

THE HILLS HAVE EYES (R, 105 minutes) This remake of the alleged 1977 Wes Craven classic is by French director Alexandre Aja ("High Tension"), who is a great reworker. The basics are: A disputatious, dysfunctional clan is headed to California. You can tell they're doomed to slaughter, in all sorts of ways: burning at the stake, pickax in the head, etc. Aja was clearly working on a big budget for his first American film and was told he could do anything he could think of. Visually, the movie is wildly alive, full of sure touches. (SH)

INSIDE MAN (R, 129 minutes) A deft, tense, pure thriller, this movie has great star turns and is brilliantly directed by Spike Lee. One morning, a Wall Street bank is taken over by heavily armed robbers. Cops quickly gather, headed by Detective Keith Frazier (Denzel Washington). But just when you think the movie's going to settle down to "Dog Day Afternoon II," it mutates weirdly (the first of several times) with the arrival of Jodie Foster, whose job is to make certain no one discovers what's in a certain safe deposit box. The movie is full of attractive people, smart dialogue, surprises and final satisfaction. (SH)

JOYEUX NOEL (PG-13, 116 minutes) This film tells the true story of a spontaneous truce during the first winter of World War I, when German, French and Scottish troops laid down their arms and spent Christmas singing carols, exchanging tobacco and whiskey and otherwise Continued on page 26

(AH) LARRY THE CABLE GUY: HEALTH INSPECTOR (PG-13, 89 minutes) This film features but one joke and it's only funny the first time, although they tell it 88 more times. Larry, who is to blue-collar as John Wayne is to westerns, appears in some tony setting where his low-rent, get-rdone crudity and his amply displayed gluteus maximus groove shocks a batch of swanky, indignant twerps, until his natural cunning and goodness bites them on the, er, assumption. Larry (Dan Whitney, by birth) has had a great ride as a standup comedian on cable and albums, but as an actor he's still trying to master the "don't bump into the furniture" skill of screen performance (SH)

MADEA'S FAMILY REUNION (PG-13, 107 minutes) This Tyler Perry movie is a cultural phenomenon, and understanding that is key to understanding the world of Madea (Perry in a dress, wig and bigbreasted fat suit), a tenderhearted black woman who talks straight as she tries to guide lost and broken souls. Some can point to other films of higher artistic quality that deal with resurrecting broken and battered souls of African Americans. Yet Perry has figured out how to deliver his message in a way that has mass appeal. (MARCIA DAVIS)

MATCH POINT (R, 124 minutes) In Woody Allen's new film, Jonathan Rhys-Meyers plays Chris Wilton, a retired tennis player who has given up the pro circuit to teach the rich and untalented. He starts dating a student's sister (Emily Mortenson), when he meets the sultry Nola (Scarlett Johansson). This film is elegant, uncompromising and oh-so nasty. (рт)

MUNICH (R, 140 minutes) Steven Spielberg's film focuses on a small Israeli killing team tasked with hunting and destroying the Palestinian Black September planners of the Munich Oympics massacre of 1972 across Europe and the Middle East. Give the movie credit for its rigor in facing the depressing problem of vengeance. But the film uses memories of the Munich Olympics massacre. Those events should be more than just fodder for ginning up tension at the end of a commercial movie. (SH)

Stone's black-widow crime novelist has moved to London, where she's accused in a sports star's death and focuses her wiles on the criminal psychiatrist (David Morrissey) assigned to evaluate her mental state. Of course, she drags him through the muck, along with his mentor (Charlotte Rampling) and a Scotland Yard detective (David Thewlis). But director Timur Bekmambetov handles these narrative bumps with ease, infusing even the goriest of horror-movie cliches with equal parts macabre fascination and jaunty humor. (AH)

was the little Sellers moments that made even the weakest "Pink Panther" a cinematic untouchable. In this version, most of the humor derives from Martin's silly French accent. (AH)

THE SHAGGY DOG (PG, 99 minutes) This movie is a pointless remake of the 1959 Disney classic. Tim Allen plays Dave Douglas, a Type-A careerist and doghater who, through a series of mishaps too ridiculous and tiresome to describe. is injected with the blood of a 300-yearold dog and turns into the pooch of the title. He discovers that he may not be a bad dog but that he has been a terrible husband and father. The movie

SHE'S THE MAN (PG-13, 105 minutes) In this teen-oriented tribute to Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," Amanda Bynes plays Viola, a soccer jock who disguises herself as her twin brother to join his school team. Bynes's rubbery expressions are occasionally funny, but there's no way people couldn't see through her disguise. For the teens this is aimed for, this won't matter. But once again, Hollywood makes the mistaken assumption that cribbing Shakespearean plots and dumping the poetry will somehow download the Bard's brilliance. (nt)

IG BLOCKS (PG-13, 105 minutes) This movie follows dispirited cop Jack Mosley (Bruce Willis) as he is assigned to escort crook Eddie Bunker (Mos Def) across Lower Manhattan to testify before a grand jury in two hours' time. What neither realize is that the guy Eddie is about to blow the whistle on is a cop, and if he's indicted, that cop will rat out an elite group of detectives. So the cops improvise a series of assassination attempts along what is basically the Chinese New Year parade route to wipe out Eddie and, if necessary, Jack. This feeble thriller is full of nonsense and implausibilities. (SH)

SOPHIE SCHOLL: THE FINAL DAYS (Unrated, 117 minutes) This movie tells the true story of Scholl and her brother, who secretly printed and distributed fliers denouncing Hitler, the injustice of the state and the penchant for atrocity. THE SYRIAN BRIDE (Unrated, 98 minutes) Mona (Clara Khoury), a Druze living in the Golan Heights, wants to marry Tallel (Derar Sliman), who lives in Syria. But Syria will allow Mona to enter only if she settles permanently. She makes the painful choice to leave her family forever, but her plans are derailed by bureaucrats on both sides. The movie seems to line up every cultural, sexual and religious fender-bender it can for maximum conflict, but the device is used to reveal touching human complexity. (DT)

SYRIANA (R, 126 minutes) George Clooney plays CIA operative Bob Barnes, an avuncular career agent who used to know where all the bodies were buried — mainly because he did most of the digging. This is a premium-octane thriller about a society that has become insidiously dependent on oil. (DT) utes) As a lobbyist for the tobacco industry, Nick Naylor (Aaron Eckhart) realizes that disingenuousness is a moral survival strategy: Don't think of cigarettes as a health hazard, Nick says, consider them a symbol of America's right to choose. Watching Nick get away with murder is the fun of this adaptation of Christopher Buckley's 1994 novel. But as a satire on Tobacco Inc.'s ability to market carbon monoxide as the elixir of life, this movie should be packing more nicotine. ## SHAPING THE FUTURE

THE BELTWAY CAME TO South America in 2002 when consultants from the United States were hired to image-fluff Bolivian presidential candidate Gonzalo Sanchez de Lozada. "Our Brand Is Crisis," a documentary following this process, offers jaw-dropping insights not so much into the inner workings of the Bolivian campaign process but the slimy guts of American power-branding. ARION BERGER (EXPRESS) good man, and Melquiades (the noble Julio Cesar Cedillo) is the best cowboy he ever knew. Then someone puts a .223 through Melquiades's rib cage, and he dies in the dust. This taut, provocative film is about white people who learn through stunning adventures that nameless, faceless immigrants are actually humans. It's not earth-shattering, but it is painful and unforgettable. (SH)

TSOTSI (R, 94 minutes) This South African movie, which won Best Foreign Language Film at the Oscars, is a mixture of thrilling documentary-style realism and Hollywood hokum. It follows Tsotsi (Presley Chweneyagae), a thug. His life takes an unexpected turn when he steals a BMW with a 3-month-old baby in the back. As Tsotsi, Chweneyagae turns his face into a living battle mask, but as the story unfolds, his mask begins to crack and his humanity begins to flow through. (pt)

ULTRAVIOLET (90 minutes, PG-13) An ultra-stupid fusion of sci-fi cliche, cyberspace stylings and wretched kung fu antics, starring Milla Jovovich's muscle-y stomach—the only fascinating thing in this movie. She plays a "hemophage," a genetically engineered superhuman who, having tasted the pleasures of Godhood, does not want to give them up. With her chums (whose stomachs are not as inter-Continued on page 29

Jarecki isn't just a polemicist, he's also a filmmaker. The argument is that America is foolish and knavish in that it depends on a war economy and that the secret purpose of its foreign policy is to find enemies to justify huge military spending. (sн)

WHAT DO YOU WANT TO DO TONIGHT? By david malitz of WashingtonPost.com

FRIDAY

Everyone knows about classic rock. But what about classic electronic? If such a genre existed, the Orb — Alex Paterson and Thomas Fehlmann — would be the equivalent of Led Zeppelin. The group's most recent album, "Okie Dokie It's the Orb on Kompakt," marks the duo's debut on influential German ambient-house label Kompakt and is a return to form after a couple of missteps. Enjoy the grooves at the 9:30 CLUB.

LULU'S. We loved to poke fun at the nightspot that became synonymous with college functions, bachelorette parties and under-21 events. But now that it is closing for good tonight, it's a bit sad.

STUCK IN THE MIDDLE: Middle Distance Runner doesn't just make hot Brit-style rock; the D.C. band is more confident and professional than many local upstarts.

Sure, Lulu's was far from the hippest place in town, but that was sort of the point. Lulu's was what it was, which is sort of refreshing. There will be a whole lot of letting loose tonight at the club's Closing Party, as a $20 cover gets you an open bar from 8 p.m. to 3 a.m. We shudder to think of the debauchery that might occur.

SATURDAY

For that brief time in the late '90s when it seemed like electronic music would be the Next Big Thing, Roni Size was one of the artists at the forefront of the scene. His 1997 album, "New Forms," remains a defining drum'n'bass record, sounding as fresh now as it did nearly a decade ago. He'll be sharing the decks tonight at the 9:30 CLUB with Brazilian superstar DJ Marky, while MC Armanni Reign — who has feet in both the hip-hop and d'n'b scenes — provides vocal accompaniment.

Bands hoping to make a name for themselves could look to local quintet Middle Distance Runner for some tips. The group has made its music readily available — leaving free CDs at Iota, handing them out after shows at the 9:30 CLUB — and it seems to be paying off. MDR's sound clearly draws on mid-'90s British rock and exudes confidence and professionalism. The Gaskets and the Cinematic Underground open.

It used to be that you couldn't read this column more than a few weeks without seeing a mention of our favorite drone-psych-folk-pop quintet Nethers. They've just been all over the country touring in support of their excellent debut album, "In Fields We Will Lie." Now the group makes its triumphant return home with a gig at Adams Morgan's D.C. ARTS CENTER.

SUNDAY

Fans of gentle, tuneful indie pop will want to head to Arlington tonight, where it will all be about the melodies. Private Eleanor plays hushed songs that bring to mind downers like Elliott Smith and Iron & Wine, but rarely comes off as quite as depressing. Sarah Azzara is a local veteran who has been making sweet, simple pop music for the past five years and just released her latest album, "It Turns Us On." Tonight's show at GALAXY HUT serves as the CD release party. It will likely be a subdued party, but that's fine for a Sunday night.

A LAUGH A MINUTE: Turner Classic Movies will celebrate April Fools Day this Saturday not by pranking viewers but pleasing them. The cable station will show comedy classics by W.C. Fields, the Marx Brothers, Woody Allen and others.

ON TV THIS WEEKEND

JUSTICE WEARS A FILMY NIGHTIE AND TOUSLED HAIR Justice arrives from beyond the grave on GHOST WHISPERER (Fri., 8 p.m., CBS).

ANOTHER SILICONE EXPLOSION The new series L.A. FORENSICS (Fri., 10:30 p.m., Court TV) offers a weekly glance at one of the nation's busiest crime labs.

sion, American soldiers stumble upon super-soldier monsters being engineered by Nazi scientists in a last-ditch effort to defeat the Allies. Corin Nemec stars. With the former "Parker Lewis" star on board, you just can't lose.

BETTER THAN EXPECTED: THE TORI SPELLING LEGACY

Tori Spelling plays an approximate version of herself in the new reality-infused sitcom SO NOTORIOUS (Sun., 10 p.m., VH1). Spelling's self-deprecation is disarming and frequently charming. While this inside-Hollywood trifle trades in many cliches and sitcom conventions, it has a good time doing so. The wardrobe and set design have been inspired by every color found in a bubble-gum dispenser, and the effect is sugar-shock silly.

THE VOTES COME IN

Election Day jitters on THE WEST WING (Sun., 8 p.m., NBC).

SEE IT FOR FREE;

CLAIM YOU SAW IT IN A THEATER Overlapping tales of racial animosity and personal pain intersect in the 2005 drama CRASH (Sun., 8 p.m., Showtime), which won the Oscar for Best Picture of 2005. SHUT UP, GEORGE

GREY'S ANATOMY (Sun., 10 p.m., ABC) George has a hard time taking a hint.

SO, 'HUFF' IS NOT 'MONK'? HUFF (Sun., 10 p.m., Showtime) A therapist (Hank Azaria) loses focus on his patients while trying to keep pace with his family dynamics as the show enters its second season.

CAMPY WITH A C

Showtime dusts off some history, airing a digitally remastered version of the 1972 special LIZA WITH A Z: A CONCERT FOR TELEVISION (Sat., 8 p.m., Showtime). Liza Minnelli performs popular ballads as well as numbers from "Cabaret."

Liza's legendary televised concert gets brushed up and re-broadcast.

MOMMY, THAT MAN IS SCARY THE HENRY ROLLINS SHOW (Sat., 10 p.m., IFC) kicks off a second 20-episode season of conversation about film, music and popular culture. Tonight's guest: director Oliver Stone. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Concern grows in Pr. George's over crime at apartment complexes

Sakinah Thompson moved into Southview Apartments after college, drawn to the Washington area by its abundance of young black professionals and diverse social life. At $600 a month, her one-bedroom apartment was a bargain in a region with skyrocketing rents.

She had lived in the Prince George's County complex two years when, on a spring night in 2003, a man in a ski mask hid in her bathroom, a hammer tucked in his belt. Minutes after she arrived home, he raped her.

After learning of the attack, Southview manager Odell Moon visited Thompson in her apartment. She remembers asking him if he was going to post notices to warn other residents. Moon said it was the first time he was aware of a sexual assault there.

Then he asked if she'd like to move to another apartment on the property. "Are you kidding me?" she recalled telling him. She moved out of Southview the next week.

A year later, after five more women reported being attacked, Thompson learned she was hardly the first victim at the sprawling complex near the District border. Dozens of other sex offenses had been reported previously to Prince George's police. In the past decade, there have been 63 reported incidents, ranging from assaults to fondling and attempted sex crimes. The victims were as young as 8 and as old as 73.

Southview managers like Moon say they were not aware of most sex offenses, and for years posted no warnings about the assaults. The managers sent out general safety cautions and supplemented a team of resident "courtesy officers" by hiring off-duty county police. But the off-duty officers were absent many days.

Infuriated by what she learned, Thompson sued Southern Management, the property's owner, contending that it had a responsibility to provide more protection. The complex, spread over 60 acres with 1,406 apartments, has no security cameras or alarm systems.

"Sexual assaults or not, we never heard anything about any crimes," Thompson said in a recent interview. The Washington Post generally does not name victims of sex assaults without their permission and is not using Thompson's entire name at her request.

Six other tenants who were sexually assaulted at Southview have filed similar lawsuits in the past five years. The company has settled four of the suits and the others are pending.

The lawsuits underscore the pervasive problem of crime in the county around garden apartments, which former Prince George's executive and Maryland Gov. Parris N. Glendening once called "breeding grounds for trouble."

Unlike some of the other complexes that have been cited as crime magnets, Southview is neither rundown nor graffiti-sprayed. Crime in the immediate area is common, but not the worst in the county.

While tenants such as Thompson blame their landlords, Southern Management blames the county for assigning inadequate police resources to the area. Ron Frank, Southern Management's president, said his company could not pay offduty officers for 24-hour patrols and still keep rents affordable. "It's not my responsibility" to do the job of the police, Frank said. And police officials say they can't be expected to be a constant presence in every apartment building.

"We've committed a tremendous amount of investigative hours there," said Lt. Col. Vincent C. Gay, chief of the county police Investigative Services Bureau. "Every incident reported there was thoroughly investigated."

There have been 12 arrests in the 63 reported incidents at Southview. All came in cases in which the victims knew their attackers. Sudarsan RAGHAVAN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

'Project Runway'

TIM GUNN, fresh from his second stint at "Project Runway," was online Thursday to talk about what to wear for spring. | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

I bought a pair of bronze gladiatorstyle sandals for the spring, but am unsure what would be a good match for a complete ensemble since I feel like I am in Roman high-tops.

Let's be blunt about this: gladiator sandals are just that. And I'm confident that you bought them for that very reason. Think '50s and embrace that style - a pair of black cropped pants, for example, with a crisp white top. Or try a circle skirt. Don't force the sandals to compete with the rest of your ensemble. Embrace your inner gladiator, just don't carry a trident!

Sandals on men ... a fashion do or a fashion don't? Most importantly, do you wear sandals in warm weather?

I don't. If you're an Agnelli and you're at your palazzo in Capri, do it. Otherwise, do it at your own risk!

My fiance is in his early thirties and yet still insists on living in baggy jeans and track jackets (I think, in part, to camouflage his exponentially expanding belly). Are there any comfortable but less, er, youthful alternatives for light jackets for men that you can think of?

I am in total sympathy with your plight. However, let's resign ourselves to the fact that the look you describe is here to stay. What makes an incremental difference is the quality of the material. Take that track jacket and substitute cashmere for nylon. And try coaxing him into some jeans that fit properly - try the APC brand, expensive, but very chic without being over-designed.

So we're seeing white, white, white (and off-white) this spring. But white shoes remind me of being a six-year-old in an Easter dress and just generally make me want to hurl. What do vou recommend shoe-wise for all this white?

I share your view of white shoes, especially in an urban setting like Washington or New York . I recommend that you wear a neutral, bone or taupe.

Why can't the fashion industry design for women who can't or don't want to wear sleeveless, spaghetti strap, low-cut, tight-fit, revealing clothes?

I understand your pain and frustration. There are solutions, but they're pricey — Jil Sander, Prada, MaxMara. Even if you don't want to spend a fortune, visit a high-end boutique, learn from the clothes and put looks together at a more budget-friendly locale.

Where Was the Review?

THE REVIEW OF the new Mercedes-Benz GL SUV in Wednesday's Express offers little information or insight about the vehicle. With the exception of the info box and a single paragraph, the rest of the article is comprised of a lecture on CAFE standards, the war, taxes and global warming. While I happen to agree with some of the author's views, that is irrelevant since he spends almost no time giving specifics about the SUV itself. I'm interested in learning about the automobile, not reading a rant about how it symbolizes the social ills of the world. Please know that I do not own an SUV; instead each day I ride Metro, where I read your publication. Still, I can see this is a mediocre diversion from real automotive journalism.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Give yourself more time to accomplish the usual things; you may have trouble getting started, and the pace may be unusually sluggish. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone may be acting on a grudge, and you'll have to work hard to keep yourself free of any real danger.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There is no point worrying about something that happened in the past, even if it was specific to those unrepeated circumstances.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) What begins slowly is sure to pick up speed, and you don't want to find yourself out of control — particularly where emotions are concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) What begins swiftly is likely to end swiftly as well; instead, focus on something that develops so slowly that you hardly notice it at all. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll find there are great benefits to be gained by spending more time on the simple things that otherwise come naturally

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Now is the time to proceed with extra caution; you don't want to close your eyes to the kinds of things that can present real dangers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Take care that others don't see you as being desperate. You'll want to remain calm, relaxed and in control at all times.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Why sit around and wonder what you should be doing when you can get up and do whatever comes to mind? At least you'd be making headway.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be sure to make yourself available to others throughout the day. Be there when you're needed, and you'll acquit yourself well.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You'llbedealing closely with those who are after something different. Be honest, but don't offer suggestions until they're solicited.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Give yourself more of a chance to see things in a new and unfamiliar way. You'll benefit greatly, particularly on the job.

The winner would only be identified as a family from Birmingham, Ala., Consaul said. The bag given to presenters at the Oscars included a BlackBerry 8700c, a Kay Unger kimono and a Tahitian-pearl necklace. (AP)

BAD MODELS Tyra Is Chortling

NAOMI CAMPBELL was charged with second-degree assault Thursday after allegedly bashing her housekeeper in the head with a phone, New York police said. The 35-year-old supermodel was taken into custody shortly after police investigated the reported assault. The housekeeper, whose name has not been released, needed four stitches. (AP)

ALLEGED CRUELTY Hey Y'all, Y'all Don't Need

Meals. Or Rest. Or Pay! Three men hired to guard

BRITNEY SPEARS have filed a lawsuit claiming they worked long hours and were not paid overtime. The lawsuit, filed Tuesday in Los Angeles, names Britney Brands Inc., Britney Touring Inc. and Team Tours Inc. as responsible for not properly compensating former bodyguards Lonnie Jones, Randy Jones and Silas Dukes. Together, the three are seeking damages exceeding $25,000 for unpaid wages and benefits. Randy Jones and Dukes worked 12- to 16-hour shifts and were required to be on call 24 hours a day during trips with Spears, according to the suit. Lonnie Jones worked 12-hour shifts, the suit said. The trio claimed they were only paid a "straight salary," missed meals and didn't receive overtime pay. (AP)

SOFT TOUCHES 'A Good Effort. But You Seem Nervous' for Three More Years

PAULA ABDUL has decided she can continue to put up with Simon Cowell on "American Idol." Abdul, who shares judging duties on Fox's hit talent show with Cowell and Randy Jackson, has signed a deal to remain for another three years, the network announced Wednesday. She and Cowell are known for their bickering on the program, which is drawing bigger audiences than ever in its fifth edition. While Cowell often slams contestants, Abdul takes a gentler approach in her comments. The contestants "truly inspire and amaze me each week," Abdul said in a statement. "Of course, I also look forward to putting Simon in his place for years to come." (AP)

Content of The Death of Metrosexualism

Man dates and guy grooming have felt a little less trendy since Monday's announcement that Cargo will publish its final issue in May. We'll all miss the gadget guides, the T-shirts of the month and the sticky tabs meant to earmark each future splurge, but most of all, we'll lament the passing of the metrosexual. At least we'll get a complementary subscription to GQ. The game's plastic stars are like compliments from Paula — so easy to win. Sadly, the mic is a cheap fake.

S Watch Even More American Idol

What will Ryan Seacrest not do for money? As of yet, that has not been determined — his latest venture is hosting "American Idol All Star Challenge" ($37), a DVD game bursting with clips of misguided contestants and Simon snark from show's first four seasons. Knowledge of Al minutiae helps, as does dumb luck: For many of the challenges (which include karaoke singing and busting a move), the game scores players randomly.

Airplanes Made Into Limos

The LimoJet, available to Chicago prom-goers via Exotic Coach, is a roadready, flightless airplane equipped with five televisions, surround sound and a disco ball. George Mason's other pride and joy doesn't play basketball — he researches every nook and cranny of the Metro system.

Station Agent

Zachary Schrag opens the doors on Metro history

IT'S EASY TO DWELL on the broken escalators and ugly orange seats, but to George Mason University history professor Zachary Schrag, D.C.'s subway system is a wonder to behold. In "The Great Society Subway: A History of the Washington Metro," he maps the development of the system from a twinkle in the eye of city planning wonks to today's 100-mile, multitentacled reality. Express' Vicky Hallett saw how he fared with these questions.

How did you become so interested in the Metro?

I was born in New York in 1970 and there was a subway stop on every corner. We moved to D.C. in 1977 when there was just this little stub of a Metro. I thought this was a joke. But in 1984, it finally got out to where I was living, Friendship Heights, and then the city was mine. This is an experience most American kids don't get until they're 16 and can drive. I got it two years early because of the Metro.

What surprised you the most about Metro's history?

That the Metro was affected so much by national politics. When I started this, there was no hint that I would have to go to four presidential libraries. But very early on, there were two key reports. A 1959 report said to build highways everywhere. A 1962 report said build rail everywhere. These were just three years apart and done by many of the same people. What had changed in that time? The election of JFK.

What would have happened if JFK hadn't been elected?

We might well have had a small subway line and a lot more highways. If you want to know what that would have looked like, go to Atlanta. If you can afford to drive in Atlanta, you drive. The people who take transit aren't there by choice, and they're disproportionately poor.

Contrary to the myth, you say Georgetown was never going to get a Metro stop.

Georgetown didn't want the Metro, but it didn't matter one way or the other. I talked to the three men who designed the Metro and they all told the same story. The system was for commuters and Georgetown was not a high priority, and it would have had to have been built very far underground. If Georgetown had begged for one, though, they might have gotten it. A lot of people in Washington believe that everything is done to benefit rich white doors open and the light spills out — it's a moment of intense drama."

people at the expense of poor black people. That's only true part of the time, not all of the time.

What about the Green Line taking until 1991 to open?

What interests me is that it exists at all. That it was slowed down so much was because of the activism of the neighborhoods. [Metro planners] studied whether to put the stop on Howard's campus, but the priority of the community was to rebuild the commercial strip on U Street after the riots.

Do you have a favorite Metro stop?

It may well be Dupont Circle because it's a side platform station with a mezzanine on both ends and a grand escalator. That probably gives it an edge over Judiciary Square.

What's the future of Metro?

The proposed Dulles extension is exciting. It will make Tysons pedestrian-friendly, and for Loudon, it will determine whether growth becomes classic American sprawl or turns into something more planned. Airport access is an added bonus.

What's it like for you to walk into a Metro station?

I still feel like I'm entering the future. The lighting effects of when a train is coming and that shadow appears across the vault, and when the doors open and light spills out — it's a moment of intense drama.

> The Manolo

ANSWERS FROM THE SHOEBLOGGER

I've been visiting your blog this week and I've noticed that you've been featuring lots of beautiful, but very expensive wedges. Can you recommend something for the impoverished working girl? -ERIKA

Manolo says, as the readers of the Manolo's humble shoe blog know, the Manolo has been completely entranced by the most fabulous wedges of this season, and indeed if the super fantastic girl she has $400 of the American dollars to spend, the possibilities they are endless.

Sadly, however, not all of the Manolo's readers are so flush, and with them the Manolo cannot but sympathize, for the Manolo, he knows what it is like to be poor, so poor that you must fashion your own super fantastic glittery wedge-heeled shoes out of the shards of disco balls and broken dreams you have recovered from the dumpster behind the Studio 54.

And so the Manolo has found for his many reader friends this beautiful high-heel wedge from the Franco Sarto, which is selling for under $100 of the American dollars ($83, zappos.com). He is especially fond of the pewter metallic finish, although it is also available in the bronze, the black, and something called the "tobacco waxy calf."

On the Cover

Our lovely model wears a blouse fashioned from a thrift-store T-shirt, many more of which can be found on pages 6 and 7. Here, blue lacing spices up a simple design — and for those who have mastered the art of shoetying, it takes but a minute to do. The design is from the book "Generation T: 108 Ways to Transform a T-shirt" by Megan Nicolay. Scissors by Staples. Photo by Michelle Repiso.

Benches are the eligible bachelors of the furniture world: If they're good-looking, you can put them just about anywhere. "They're versatile and mobile," says Jason Claire of Logan Circle decor den Vastu. "Store one under the flat-panel TV, then move it to the living room or pull it up to the dining table." And relax, current designs look way hipper than that ratty piano stool you had to sit on during holiday dinners as a kid. JENNIFER BARGER (EXPRESS)

PICTURE A COUPLE OF TENNESSEE WILLIAMS characters swilling mint juleps and lounging on a veranda. That's the vibe this retro, wrought-iron baby summons. THIS RIFF ON A LAYERED SKIRT from "Generation T" starts with a band of fabric cut from the bottom of a T-shirt. Add a drawstring, then stitch the bottom edge to a swath cut from a shirt of a different color.

CAP SLEEVES AND A BOAT NECK, top, round out the sharp edges of a typical Beefy tee. Black ties at the neck and waist add flair to the simple template from "99 Ways." Designs for longer skirts are few in these books. Adapt any mini-skirt pattern to make this long, simple skirt, bottom. Cut off the sleeves; sew one hole closed, then lace up the other.

GIGANTIC, RANDOM corporate tees (this one's from Verizon) are a must for any thrift-store shopper. Using a pattern from "99 Ways," we cut and stitched the tentlike garment into a babydoll tank, throwing in a few pleats to keep it fitted.

They lurk in every closet — XXL T-shirts from senior prom or a cousin's bar mitzvah or the company picnic. They're huge and they're hideous, but you can't throw them out. And that's where scissors come in handy. Three new books offer step-by-step instructions for snipping and sewing ancient tees into nouveau masterpieces. We tried out a few of the designs; turns out it's not too tough to turn T-shirt disasters into clothes you might actually wear. JULIA BEIZER

Styles | Look

IT'S A BITTERSWEET VICTORY when the most exquisitely kitschy tee is kid-sized (and you're not). "Don't Mess With Texas" was too good to leave behind, so we used the logo as a hoodie-style pocket on a miniskirt. The blue shirt was also a children's aisle find; a gray racing stripe upsized the skirt to fit an adult. This design was adapted from "Generation T."

ADVERTISING AN ORTHODONTICS PRACTICE with the visage of a brace-faced bulldog? This questionable marketing technique was destined for the donation bin. We squeezed mileage out of this mon-strosity by cutting it into a halter and cinching the waist with a draw-string on the side. "99 Ways" has all the details.

NOT YOUR AVERAGE SKIRT SUIT, this outfit is made from four tees in near-identical colors. The flouncy skirt design from "Generation T" requires stitching a ring made from the bottom of two T-shirts to the bottom of a third shirt. For the top, try the ribbon-embellished wrap-shirt recipe from "Rip It."

GENERATION T" SERVES UP a corseted look with this nearly backless number. Snip a 10-inch U into the back of a smallish T-shirt, then add evenly spaced eyelets. Either a ribbon or a strip of fabric can serve as the laces, which should be a color that complements both the shirt and the soon-to-be exposed skin.

Forget the stock market. This is much bigger!

New opportunity in $1.9 trillion currency market can help you recover your stock market losses

"With the help of my software to track it, the currency market is an incredible opportunity for you to achieve extraordinary returns 24 hours a day." Blake Morrow — President, 4X Made Easy, LF

f you think today's hottest investment is found on Wall Street, then read on, because I'm about to blow your mind!

Recent federal rule changes have opened the foreign currency market --- formerly reserved for banks, corporations, and high net worth individuals — to independent investors just like you, some of whom have already made tens of thousands of dollars!

World's largest market

I know this will surprise you, but the foreign currency market, or (spot) FOREX, has become the largest trading market in the world! And with $1.9 trillion or more traded very single day (source: Financial Times, Sept. 29, 2004), it dwarfs the volume of the Wall Street exchanges — even when you lump them together! That volume creates movement, and movement creates profit opportunities for you!

Much simpler and easier than stocks

Not only is it bigger than the stock market, it's a lot friendlier. If you are a stock market investor, you have a whopping 40,000 stocks and mutual funds to choose from. No wonder traditional investing has become so intimidating!

66 The foreign exchange market remains by far the world's biggest financial market by trading volume with turnover far greater than equity or bond markets. 99 — Financial Times

(spot) FOREX

World's single largest market

Free of corporate scandal

HUGE leverage of 100-1

Trade Sunday through Friday

Trade 24 hours a day (4 days)

But here's the good news: In the (spot) FOREX market — a market not influenced by corporate corruption - you only need only to follow six major currencies. Wouldn't you rather look at six proven investment options than research 40,000 potential ones? Yeah, me too.

You are witnessing history — don't miss being part of it

Imagine if you could turn back time to the start of the NASDAQ and invest in the NASDAQ at the very beginning with the knowledge you have now. How much would your portfolio be worth?

Life doesn't offer many second chances, but THIS IS ONE OF THEM. Sweeping changes in U.S. federal rules have opened this market to individual investors like you - creating perhaps the biggest opportunity since the start of the NASDAQ!

COMPARE (spot) FOREX TO THE STOCK MARKET

STOCK MARKET

Leverage of 2-1

Smaller volume means smaller opportunity

Trade only Monday through Friday

Plagued by corporate scandal

Trade 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Eastern Time

There will never be another first time to be a part of the (spot) FOREX Come hear about the profits possible in the (spot) FOREX market now — BEFORE EVERYONE ELSE CRASHES THE PARTY! Now that the federal rulings have changed, won't remain a secret forever

Don't let this opportunity pass you by. You have a special chance to get in early on what could be the biggest, most exciting investing opportunity of the 2000s!

Introducing 4X Made Easy® I'm Blake Morrow, President of 4X Made Easy, LP. The 4X Made Easy® system is userfriendly software and personal ongoing training that allows you to learn about and interpret trends on the (spot) FOREX. And when you can project these trends, amazing profits are possible.

Should a rise or decline in a particular currency be apparent. 4X Made Easy® will reveal its path and position you to capitalize on the opportunity. Rest assured, you can make money as currencies rise or fall against each other. In fact, it's this very movement — driven by the global forces of supply and demand — that creates your profit potential.

This simple-to-use system lights your way

With 4X Made Easy® as your navigator, tracking currency movement is easier than you could ever imagine. The 4X Made Easy® point-and-click trading system literally Ights the path of supply and demand for currencies. Red and green arrows point in the direction currencies have been moving — giving you the vital market information you need to instantly make intelligent trading decisions with confidence

Even Chrysler and Mercedes are doing it

The (spot) FOREX is new to most personal investors, but not to Detroit's mighty Big Three. In fact, DaimlerChrysler, the parent company of Chrysler and Mercedes, has revealed that it made more money trading currency than it did selling cars. In the second guarter of 2003, the majority of DaimlerChrysler's $1 billion in profits came from currency trades in the (spot) FOREX market.

Was DaimlerChrysler being reckless with its shareholders' money? Not at all! Certainly there is risk in the foreign currency market, as there is in all markets. But putting money in the (spot) FOREX gave them bigber returns than ANY bank. If you'd like to see how individuals like you are getting the same kind of monster financial windfalls as DaimlerChrysler, attend one of my FREE eye-opening workshops in your town.

Get ready for the (spot) FOREX

With only six major currencies to follow, and a market that's open 6 days a week, 24 hours a day (4 days), you just won't find a simpler, more flexible way to put money in your pocket.

The cleanly traded (spot) FOREX has an investing innocence not found in its equity market cousins. Its currency fluctuations are a result of pure market movement, not corporate corruption or Wall Street dishonesty. Come see the pure, unaltered fluctuations — and the incredible profit opportunities they present — of these six major foreign currencies alongside the U.S. Dollar:

• British Pound Australian Dollar

- Japanese Yen • Euro Dollar
- Swiss Franc Canadian Dollar

WHO SHOULD ATTEND:

- Stock investors
- → Mutual fund investors → Active or part-time traders
- → Options traders
- → Business people
- Entrepreneurs
- → Couples
- → Retirees
- → Those who want to diversify
- Individuals who have been burned by Wall Street

What is the (spot) FOREX?

(spot) FOREX — This is the acronym for the foreign exchange market, where one country's currency can be exchanged for that of another. The term "spot" simply refers to the activity of trading one country's currency against another (such as the U.S. Dollar against the British Pound, Swiss Franc, Japanese Yen, etr )

What 4X Made Easy® users are saying:

"In my 20 trades so far, I'm up about $10,000." – Jerry Watson, KS

"I made over $7,000 in my first three weeks!" - Larry Wenner TX

"I can do a week's salary in a day. In one morning, I made what was three weeks' salary at my old job." - Donald Schmalz, FL

"It's about freedom and control. It's about control of my financial future. The Internet allows guys like us to do this." - Rob McCarthy, AZ

"It's unbelievable returns compared to... the stock market." - Mark and Diane Piller, T

FIVE KEY ADVANTAGES OF THE (spot) FOREX MARKET

- TREMENDOUS SIMPLICITY: You track just six major currencies with 4X Made Easy®.
- ENORMOUS LIQUIDITY: Move your money in or out quickly.
- HUGE GROWTH POTENTIAL: You can get incredible leverage on your money of 100-to-one and even 200-to-one! 3
- AVAILABILITY: In a market that's open 6 days a week, 24 hours a day 4 (4 days), you trade on your time, your schedule.
  - UNMATCHED OPPORTUNITY: Your profit potential is unparalleled when you trade the world's largest market.

 $\frac{1}{2}$  by invitation only: upcoming weddings

Stacey Sevigny, John Zellers

Stacey, 30, is a federal law enforcement officer with the Department of Homeland Security. John, 31, is a site security supervisor for Vance Security. They live in Centreville.

WEDDING: An early-evening civil service in Fairfax, followed by a sitdown dinner, on June 3. They're expecting about 100 guests. HONEYMOON: Puerto Vallarta, Mexico.

 $\ensuremath{\mathsf{HOW\,THey\,Met}}$  : In prison. "We both worked there."

FIRST IMPRESSIONS: Stacey "thought he was good looking, but he was a smoker."

MEETING THE PARENTS: John met Stacey's folks on their first date; she met his on their second.

STUPIDEST FIGHT: John was making Stacey a fried egg, and she likes the yolk broken. "He wasn't breaking the yolk yet, so I came in and broke it. Then he told me to cook it myself."

THEIR SONG: "Bless the Broken Road" by Rascal Flatts. "We both have been through unsuccessful relationships in our lives and finally our roads crossed."

MMM, CAKE: White cake with raspberry and chocolate filling.

Love Hops the Pond

Sometimes subtlety works. Not for HOLLY STANTON, who "made elaborate plans" to convey her interest to Englishman JIM BEARDOW after he started working in her office. "All of these failed," she said. So she asked him out point-blank. "If she hadn't said anything, I would probably still be wandering D.C. with my well-practiced 'confused of England' look on my face," said Jim. His Brit background helped him propose, however. Before he visited his folks in England, Holly asked for some Kinder Surprise candy — chocolate eggs with toys inside that she'd only seen in Europe. When Jim returned, "I opened the egg, and inside was a note on pink paper that said, 'Marry me, peanut.'" The two will wed in a 13th-century church in Jim's hometown of Old Heathfield, but with some American twists: Bridesmaids will enter the church before the bride (in England, it's usually the reverse), and the cake will be chocolate instead of the traditional fruitcake.

Jim, 31, is an external relations officer at the International Monetary Fund. Holly, 26, is an event coordinator for Linden Educational Services. They live in Alexandria and will marry on July 1.

Jason Bellows, Jennifer Whitfield

Jason, 30, is an emergency medicine physician at Georgetown University Hospital/Washington Hospital Center. Jennifer, 30, is an emergency medicine resident at George Washington University. They live in Washington.

WEDDING: A semi-formal ceremony and reception in Madison, Wis., for 175 guests on May 27.

HOW THEY MET: Jen was doing a rotation at G.W.U. Hospital, where Jason was a resident. "I mentioned that I was going to live in Guatemala for a year," said Jen. "Jason asked me, 'What does your boyfriend think of that?' I said, 'Boyfriend? What do get me to sing Madonna, but there are certain things I don't do on a first date."

I want one of those for?' Evidently this scared him off for a bit." FIRST DATE: Drinks and sushi at Cafe Japone in Dupont Circle. HOW HE PROPOSED: On a weekend trip to New York City. Jason had the ring in his bag, waiting for the right moment, which turned out to be sunset in Union Square.

FAMILY TRADITIONS: "We will have local Wisconsin beer at the reception, and the wine is from a small winery in upstate New York, near where Jason grew up. Also, all Wisconsin weddings include a polka. No exceptions."

David Potts, Maurisa Turner

David, 37, is a management consultant for Booz|Allen|Hamilton. Maurisa, 32, is a marketing director for Wickwire Gavin, P.C. They live in Alexandria.

WEDDING: May 12. The Friday evening ceremony will be followed by a cocktail reception. They expect 125 guests.

HOW THEY MET: Maurisa worked in her mom's office during summer breaks from Virginia Tech. David there was going to be another girl at the party whom I was trying to avoid." HOW HE PROPOSED: In Hawaii, on the er girl | island of Lanai. They were taking a ing to | walk, when suddenly Maurisa found David on one knee. "Since it was dark outside, I thought he was hurt

and asked if he was OK!"

MOST HATED CLOTHING ITEM: For Maurisa, it's "the boxers he sleeps in. They have holes all through them ... I threaten that his boxers will be lost in the wash one day.

_____

THEIR SONG: "At Last" by Etta James. "It seems appropriate given the length of time we've been dating." WHEN IT HIT: "We have been the 'Oprah and Stedman' couple for so long that it hasn't really hit me this day is finally coming," said Maurisa.

PROCESSIONAL: "Come Away With Me" by Norah Jones.

Getting Married? If you'd like to see your wedding or commitment ceremony in B.I.O., send your favorite informal photo (wacky is fine, but please don't send a formal engagement shot), plus your names, contact info and the ceremony date to weddings@readexpress.com. We'll contact you with some questions as your big day approaches. Our space is limited, but we'll do our best to include as many as we can.

How to Play

The rules of Samurai Sudoku are the same as in the popular Sudoku puzzles that appear in Express and The Washington Post.

As with standard Sudoku, the Samurai version requires no math, just logic, reasoning ... and an iron will. The goal is to fill in each column, row and 3x3 box with the digits 1 through 9 without repeating any. The twist in Samurai Sudoku is that the digits that appear in the overlapping boxes must work for both puzzles.

A piece of advice to get you started: Don't focus on completing one grid at a time. Keep the whole puzzle in mind as you go, because filling in a number in one grid could give you clues to another. As always, there's only one solution, which will appear in next week's edition of LookOut Weekend.

Can't get enough Sudoku? Find a standard Sudoku puzzle in the Comics section of the Post every Sunday and in the Style section every Monday through Saturday.

Certificate Program in FINANCIAL PLANNING

The field of financial planning is experiencing record growth. According to U.S. Department of Labor Occupational Outlook Handbook 2006-2007, employment opportunities for financial planners are projected to increase "faster-than-average" (18 to 26 percent) through 2014.

In collaboration with Kaplan Financial™, the Georgetown University Center for Professional Development is pleased to offer a premier certificate program in Financial Planning.

Please contact us to reserve your seat in the April 2006 program offering.

Homing in On a Change

TRANSFORMING YOUR LIVING SPACE could mean buying a new condo, remodeling a decades-old flat or snapping up that 1960s white leather sofa for your living room.

Changing a section of Express, in this case the Condo Living insert you're holding, is a similar undertaking. To make this monthly guide more useful and appealing to condo dwellers, shoppers and the real-estate obsessed, we're adding several regular features.

In one, we profile an up-andcoming neighborhood, zeroing in on both hot properties and the bars, shops and attractions that surround them. This month, the story's all about Columbia Heights, where a fiery real-estate market is powering an explosion of retail development, yet the corner taco shops and dive bars still beckon.

In Apartment 3-D, we address specific design or remodeling issues by showing off new products and concepts. Think oversized decor for gargantuan lofts or new materials for redoing your kitchen. (Note: stainless steel appliances, so over!) This month, we focus on space-saving furniture and accessories fit for a wee 400-square-foot studio. Ideas range from a bed that conceals dresser drawers to a table so tiny it'll just hold a single martini.

Moving on up: Bare walls, depressing. HGTV-esque decor, much better.

In the spirit of sharing ideas about what makes an apartment a home, we're also asking you, our readers, to send in photos of how you've decorated your quarters. Whether you're an owner or a renter, whether you live in a country French flat or a punk-rock loft, we'd love to see what you've done. (Townhomes qualify, but detached single-family homes do not - sorry!) Send your digital images to photo@readexpress.com, and enter "my rad pad" in the subject line. THE EDITORS

Though real-estate prognosticators tell us

that U.S. house sizes keep getting bigger, it often seems like condos — affordable D.C. ones, at least — are getting smaller. So how do you furnish a pint-sized pad without making it look like an overstuffed dorm room or a crammed storage unit? "It's really about simplifying, using furniture that has more than one purpose," says Grace Bonney, a.k.a. Design Sponge, who dishes on decor trends in her popular blog (design sponge.blogspot.com). Multi-use pieces range from beds with drawers in their bases to foldout tables that attach to the wall like retro Murphy beds.

Brooklyn-based Bonney, who just moved from a 450-square-foot apartment into an 850-square-foot railroad flat, also recommends painting walls in warm neutral colors to make rooms look bigger, hanging pendant lamps from the ceiling to free up valuable floor real estate and seeking smaller-sized furniture (Pottery Barn and IKEA both produce many apartment-scale merch).

But sometimes, using an oversized, "statement" piece (a towering Victorian secretary, an oversized abstract painting) can add visual spice. "When everything in your apartment is small, you really don't have a focal point," says Kim Hessler, a D.C. interior designer and owner of Logan Circle's Dragonfly Design Decor. "Using something large — like a Chinese apothecary cabinet with lots of drawers — looks interesting. And a large piece can hold a lot of things, like towels or a computer, that you don't want lying around." Here are some products both great and small that'll make a tiny space chic. JENNIFER BARGER (EXPRESS)

"When you move lights to the ceiling, it makes a big difference in your space," says design blogger Grace Bonney. Block-printed silk in a tobacco brown, Afro-cool pattern covers this in-again drum shade pendant light by Philly-based designers Galbraith and Paul. It'd look groovy over a shiny white dining table. ($380, VIVI, 7254 WOODMONT AVE., BETHESDA; 301-656-5626; VIVIONLINE.COM)

"Chinese furniture was created to be multi-functional," says Kim Hessler of Dragonfly Design Decor. So it's not surprising that she sells lots of 18th-and 19th-century armoires to use as bathroom-towel holders. computer stashers, sweater keepers and, of course, homes for the TV. This one, though sold, is similar to examples that arrived in a recent shipment. ($1.600 TO $2,250, DRAGONFLY DESIGN DECOR. 1457 CHURCH ST. NW; 202-265-3359)

Just one drink, be it a Cosmo or a cuppa Earl Grey, is all that'll fit on the coaster-like nylon top of Dutch designer Edward Geluk's "Xes" table. Supported by a weighted chrome base, this skinny little thing "can tuck next to a sofa or an armchair if you don't have much space," says Douglas Burton, co-owner of Apartment Zero, which sells them. "It's a great spot for a martini, or even a tea light." ($370, APARTMENT ZERO, 406 7TH ST. NW; 202-628-4067; APARTMENTZERO.COM)

A blue steel base and wood veneer top lend Blu Dot's Barbarella Table some hard-edged, late-1960s flash. But it's the clever stash-space in the base that makes it appeal to design blogger Grace Bonney. "For a packrat and certified magazine hoarder like me, this is perfect. You can hide everything from newspapers to coasters in it before company arrives." ($329, DESIGNPUBLIC.COM)

Pesky roommate or in-your-face significant other cramping your living space? Divide it or cordon it off with Molo's paper softwall, a honeycomb, 6-foot-high translucent, fire-shunning screen that can stretch (and curve) up to 25 feet. When placed in a well-lighted room, it glows like a minimalist art installation. ($990, VELOCITYARTANDDESIGN.COM) IKEA's strange wall-mounted table-cum-bizarro artwork features four interchangeable scenes, including a birdie, a giraffe on the savanna, a cityscape and a strange monk-like figure. Designed by Anna Larsson and named PS Enkoping, it folds away when not in use. But then you couldn't weird your friends out with the thing. ($50, IKEA STORES)

Make-up brushes and lipstick! Pens and staplers! Zillions of Q-tips! Copious amounts of small things will fit into this Utensilo wall caddy. Designed by German modernist Ingo Maurer in the 1960s, it was recently reissued in black, white or red plastic, plus a limitededition chrome model. (AS SHOWN, $360, VELOCITY ARTANDDESIGN.COM)

Even Pottery Barn, the place that pretty much invented the mega sofa, is playing the small-is-cool game these days. The Stratton platform bed features undermatress compartments and baskets, which should elminiate clutter and cut down on the dust bunnies. It comes in white- or mahoganystained hardwood. ($999, POTTERYBARN.COM) Yeah, Junior's toys need a home, but that doesn't have to mean lame wicker baskets. Banish kiddie clutter — and stale style — with these hard-todestruct foam storage bins. They come in punch-bright hues (lime green, orange, turquoise) and a nifty bicycle- tread texture. ($24 AND $36, GO MAMA GO!, 1809 14TH ST. NW; 202-299-0850; GOMAMAGO.COM)

CLOSE QUARTERS : Brad and Cynthia Koons, with dog Barney, share a basement apartment near Dupont Circle that measures less than 400 square feet.

With a little give and take, couples thrive in teeny apartments

For couples who share tiny spaces, every moment presents an opportunity to snuggle up with the one you love. When you live in an apartment the size of a dorm room, everything — making dinner, doing dishes, folding laundry, paying bills — takes on a certain intimacy, whether you want it to or not.

The "tour" of Jennifer and Jeremy Haile's apartment lasts only as long as it takes a visitor to glance from left to right about 45 degrees. For the past four years, since returning from a Peace Corps stint overseas, the couple has called a 416-square-foot Georgetown studio home.

Their bed – which is also one of their two couches — is a futon, hard up against the front door. Books, papers, vitamins and foodstuffs share shelf space in one corner. The computer doubles as an entertainment center; they watch DVDs on it and store all of their music on its hard drive. Their refrigerator and stove look like full-size versions that have been shrunk to about 65 percent by some sort of kitchen-appliance copying machine.

Wait: It gets better. Jeremy Haile is currently a first-year law student at George Washington University and does most of his studying at home. And because first-year law students study more or less around the clock, peace and quiet are more valuable to him right now than anything.

During exams, he says, "I was pulling close to 20-hour days. But Continued on page E13

Jen has the patience of Job. She would use headphones [to watch TV or listen to music]; she prepared all of my meals, and I'd go in my little corner and study. And somehow it worked."

The Hailes are no strangers to domestic deprivation. As Peace Corps volunteers, they lived in what they refer to as a "Sovietstyle" apartment in Armenia, where it was so cold that any water left in the bathtub would freeze over. "To go into the kitchen, you had to dress like you were going outside," Jennifer says.

For two years they slept in a twin bed, with only a small kerosene heater — and each other — to warm them. "Now, when we go to a hotel and there's a king-size bed, we sleep together at the very edge of it," she says. "We don't really know how to sleep apart."

Living in comically cramped quarters may be easier when you're madly in love with your roommate, the Hailes say, but that doesn't necessarily make it easy. Every move they make reflects a negotiation of sorts. "Jeremy was losing his eyesight during his first semester," says Jennifer, an events coordinator for National Public Radio. "He thought he was going to have to get glasses. The doctor told him: 'You have to stop reading in such small amounts of light.' What was happening was that I would go to bed at 10:30 or so, and he would turn on this tiny little lamp" to stay up reading until 1:00 a.m. or later. "So now I have to go to bed with the lights on, which is unfortunate." Her husband recently bought her a sleeping mask. (It helps.)

"The three Cs – communication, commitment and compromise – will get you through almost any sort of conflict," says Regina Leeds, a Los Angeles-based professional organizer and author of the 2003 book "Sharing a Place Without Losing Your Space: A Couple's Guide to Blending Homes, Lives, and Clutter" (Alpha Books). In her work with cohabiting couples, she has learned that one of the most frequent sources of disagreement is over where to put, and indeed whether to keep, the innumerable things that accrue over the course of their lives.

"People usually bring too much stuff with them," says Leeds. "And then they make assumptions about that stuff. I'll presume that you're going to love my mother's pink china - and that this is what we will be using on the holidays. And I don't talk to you about it, because, well, surely, if you love me, you can see how beautiful this is. You, on the other hand, are presuming that I see how beautiful your mother's beige china is."

Both presumptions are wrong, she suggests. "Especially in a small space, you need to divest yourself of everything that is not critical. That can mean tossing things. But it can also mean getting a storage space, or better yet, asking Mom and Dad if you can store things in their garage, or in your old room."

That idea worked for Brad Koons. When his parents moved from Arizona to a nearby suburb in Maryland, he persuaded them to let him keep his car and his copious outdoor gear at their house, rather than at the minuscule English basement he and his wife, Cynthia, share near Dupont Circle. Though it's a one-bedroom, their apartment appears to be smaller than the Hailes' studio. (They don't know how many square feet it is, and have never asked. The figure wasn't disclosed in the original "for lease" listing.

Imagine that.)

But the Koonses — he's a lawyer, she just received her graduate degree - aren't complaining. "We think of the size of the apartment as the price of getting to have a completely walkable lifestyle," Cynthia says. "We really appreciate that we can walk to anything we need in the neighborhood. Brad can walk to work, and I can walk to school."

ing their lives, a unicycle leans against a wall in the vestibule; a bicycle wouldn't fit.

But their lifestyle may actually be good for their marriage. Cynthia says that living in a shoebox "encourages more communication. You're both sitting right there. There's no escape. If you have an argument, you're just going to have to talk through it and get over it. Every once in a while, one of us will go into the bedroom and shut the door, if we feel like we need some time alone. But for the most part, it forces us to battle it out until there's peace."

So far, they've managed to avoid the deadly third rail of living together in a tiny space: passive-aggressive "housecleaning" that results in the unauthorized removal of another's stuff.

The Hailes, alas, were not so lucky.

"My mom sent me a box with about $125 worth of cosmetics and vitamins in it," Jennifer says. "I was waiting to start my new beauty regimen until I finished my old supply.

of the size of the apartment as the price of getting to have a completely walkable lifestyle."

> CYNTHIA KOONS STUDIO DWELLER

Well, because I hadn't opened the clearly marked box in four months, Jeremy decided that I must not want it badly. He trashed it and didn't tell me."

That, as it turns out, was the wrong thing to do.

"It was one of the rare moments of shouting at our place," she says. "I took the opportunity to remind him of everything he's thrown away without my permission. I insisted that he hand-deliver my mom a check, and admit — and apologize for — his disregard for property. But finally I caved, and have been forced to lie to my mom for months about the wonders of Susan Lucci's skin-care therapy."

Now that's true love, people. JEFF TURRENTINE (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Columbia Heights, Soaring

Condo market, retail development sizzle in Columbia Heights

When Marty Zupancic moved to Columbia Heights in Northwest Washington more than five years ago, he was disappointed by the lack of services and hangouts in his new neighborhood. "It's kind of shocking when you realize that there's nothing here," said Zupanic, now 32. "That's the big problem in Columbia Heights right now: There are so many people and so few establishments. When I moved here, I assumed that I could get out of bed and get a cup of coffee. I walked about two hours in each direction, and didn't find anything."

But instead of decamping to a more happening 'hood, Zupancic took action. He opened Columbia Heights Coffee (3416 11th St. NW; 202-986-0079) nearly three years ago, enlisting the services of neighborhood contractors to create a cozy café. Now, this space with with exposed brick walls and black-and-white photos of D.C.

draws laptop-toting caffiends with free wi-fi, and avid readers with its relative peace and quiet. Since opening the coffeehouse, Zupanic has seen the neighborhood turn into a real-estate hot zone, in part because people like him didn't give up on a neighborhood with so much untapped potential.

New businesses, a Green Line Metro stop and a revitalized sense of community have also lured condominium developers with dollar signs in their eyes. The most notable ventures include the long-

The multiuse complex makes its home in the grand 1924 Tivoli Theatre, a former movie palace. Other tenants expected soon: a restaurant called Rumberos (April), a Carvel Ice Cream shop (May) and Ruby Tuesday's (July).

Among the many new condo buildings popping up, Columbia Station at 3500 13th St. NW has been selling for only nine weeks. Buyers have already snapped up 23 of the 40 total units, priced from $249,000 to $449,000; developers expect a sell-out in the next three months. "Buyers seem excited to be [moving in] at the beginning of one of the hottest neighborhoods in Washington," said John Fitzgerald, a partner with Tenacity Group, which is selling the Columbia Station units. "Because of DC USA, a lot of them have this really nice vision of being in a walking community. The Giant Foods has a lot to do with it."

Columbia Heights is bordered on the west by 16th St., on the east by Georgia Avenue, on the north by Spring St. and on the south by Florida Avenue. Within those boundaries, buyers can choose from about a dozen current and future condo complexes. While the developer touts Columbia Station as an affordable choice, many properties list at higher price points. Mod kitchens, high ceilings and stellar park views of Meridian Hill Park must've appealed to buyers at the Lofts at Meridian Hill; the complex is sold out.

Kevin Powers, a 26-yearold communications strategist who currently lives in a Dupont Circle studio apartment, recently purchased a condo in Columbia Station. Powers seems excited about moving to the neighborhood, particularly because of the impending retail explosion. "It seems to be one of those areas with ambitious development plans," he said. "The idea of living within walking distance of a Best Buy is fantastic."

Though many condo buildings are going up north of Columbia Road NW, the southern portion of the neighborhood has also attracted new developments. Gail Montplaisir, the developer — and a resident — of The Lofts at Meridian Hill at 2307 and 2311 15th St. NW, is also behind southern Columbia Heights' City Overlook, a condo development at 1454 Belmont Rd. NW set for completion this summer.

The building houses 18 units priced between $300,000 and $1 million. "Everything has become extremely dynamic, and the dynamism was actually here before the development," Montplaisir said of the blocks surrounding City Overlook. "We like to find places where the neighbors are welcoming and friendly."

Those neighbors hail from a variety of income brackets, countries and cultures, which gives Columbia Heights a distinctive, polyglot atmosphere. The multiculti, urban vibe attracts cultural organizations as well as condoseekers. The Dance Institute of Washington, which specializes in arts education and sponsors the Washington Reflections Dance Company, is building a performance facility at the corner of 14th and Monroe streets NW.

Last January, GALA Hispanic Theatre became the first tenant at Tivoli Square. The 20-year-old company performs works in both Spanish and English. "This is the heart of the Latino community, and it's close to 14th St.'s theater scene. It feels right that we're here," said GALA's production manager, Alessandra D'Ovido. "And since we bring other arts organizations in - Washington Performing Arts Society, school groups - it seems like we're adding to the neighborhood."

The surrounding St.s themselves also yield a variety of art, from African-inspired sculptures on Belmont St. NW to the fountain- and statue-rich Meridian Hill Park, which often hosts performance artists and regularly features a drum circle on Sundays, said Montplaisir. "It also tends to be a gathering place whenever there are demonstrations in the city."

Further north in Columbia Heights, there are days when 14th St. feels like part of Central or South America. The singsong sounds of Spanish echo in corner stores and conjunto beats buzz on car stereos.

Luis Marroquin, a native of El Salvador, has lived in or near Columbia Heights for the past 37 years. He has also lived in Mexico, which inspired him to open Taqueria Distrito Federal (3463 14th St.; 202-986-1138), a down-home spot with lime-colored walls, a shrine to the Virgin of Guadalupe and servers who rarely speak English. Marroquin decorated his restaurant with bright colors, folk art and photos to evoke south-of-the-border climes.

Marroquin prides himself on offering traditional Mexican cuisine. He even imports his Pepsi and Coca-Cola from Mexico because he said they taste different than the U.S. versions.

SOUTH-OF-THE-BORDER PATROL: Fourteenth Street's popular Taqueria Distrito Federal serves down-home Mexican cooking — salsa, guacamole, cabrito, barbacoa, tacos and burritos — in a space decorated with colorful tiles and posters.

"Even though I'm Salvadorean, my cooks are Mexican," he said. "There are plenty of places where vou can get Salvadorean food."

local food critics, and the customers keep coming back. Marroquin said non-Latinos often point at what they want on the menu, which includes beef barbacoa and goat, plus tacos, burritos and other dishes.

BIG BOX STORES INVADING COLUMBIA HEIGHTS

IS COLUMBIA HEIGHTS the next hot shopping zone, à la U Street? The DC USA project, a $149.5 million, 500,000-square-foot retail complex, set to open in 2008, should make it a retail destination. Target Stores will anchor the under-construction venture on 14th Street between Irving Street and Park Road NW. Other anticipated tenants include Bed Bath & Beyond, Best Buy and Marshalls.

In the meantime, residents can visit the Giant grocery store (Tivoli Square, 1345 Park Road NW: 202-777-1077). the Columbia Heights Pharmacy (3316 14th Street NW; 202-232-1455) and Cooper Hardware (3459 14th Street NW; 202-387-0808). R.R.

in Columbia Heights is down a bit. Coffee-shop owner Zupancic agrees, but noted that the window of his coffee shop was smashed a couple of weeks ago, and that neighborhood cleanup tools were recently stolen from the Northern Columbia Heights Civic Association.

But that won't keep progress - and new residents - from coming.

"I'm confident about the community around there," Powers said. "It's going to take a few years, but once [DC USA] is built, it's going to make things better."

Said GALA's D'Ovidio, "Things have really been happening since they opened the Metro stop. The neighborhood seems like it changes daily." RINA RAPUANO

'Hood hangout has movie nights, cool brews and live bands

Sure, the beer's always cold and the crowds usually convivial at Columbia Heights' funky Wonderland Ballroom. But it's the weekly events — a Monday trivia game, a Wednesday happy hour for parents (with kids in tow) and a Sunday movie screening — that make this laid-back corner bar stand out. The second level "ballroom," really a moderate-sized room with a small stage, a bar and second-hand sofas, hosts bands and live DJ nights, and there's also a loaded jukebox.

Husband and wife owners

Matthew McGovern (a former bartender at Madam's Organ) and Rose Donna opened the joint a year and a half ago. They decked the walls with metal beer signs and quirky artifacts (a barber's pole, vintage album sleeves) and filled the drinks menu with Double Diamond English ale, Bürgerbraü Czech lager and Delirium Tremens, a high-alcohol Belgian beer.

A diverse crowd of neighborhood residents shows up here most nights, but aging hipsters often dominate. Expect many of them to turn out for movie nights in April, when a four-week festival of Coen brothers flicks begins mid-month. R.R.

LIVE ONLINE

Home Front

The Washington Post HOME STAFF share their decorating advice every Thursday at 11 a.m. on washingtonpost.com/liveonline.

I'm looking for moderately priced patio furniture, but I haven't seen anything I love. Any suggestions on where to look, other than Lowes, Home Depot and Crate and Barrel?

Restoration Hardware has a great new collection — it's very substantial, outdoor-room stuff. (No straps.) But you'll pay big for it. Grandin Road, the little sister to Frontgate, has a good looking wicker lounging-around line (grandinroad.com). Also try outdoor living stores like Offenbacher Pool 'n' Patio. The new Smith & Hawken line for Target is worth looking at. as is Martha's line for K-Mart.

An area rug can really pull a room together, but the home I just bought is fully carpeted. Can I put an area rug over carpet, or is that a big decorating no-no?

Gary Lovejoy of Washington, one of our top-tier designers, said it's just fine to do that. But the wallto-wall carpeting needs to be very low pile for it to work. You generally don't need a non-skid rug pad because the carpeting serves that purpose.

I love the look of sisal rugs with the colored "tape" along the edges, but want something softer on my feet for my family room! Any suggestions on where to buy a soft sisal look-alike?

We are soooo over those sisals with the two-inch binding in green or brown or leather or whatever. We need some new looks in inexpensive carpeting. Check out some of the great rugs at West Elm at Tysons Corner, CB2.com or capelrugs.com.

I don't need decorating help so much as I need arranging help. Is there someone who can come to your house, look at your rooms and your stuff, and then say, put this here and that there?

Yes. There are people who specialize in makeovers. And you can find one through your local chapter of the American Society for Interior Designers. In D.C., that is 202-488-4100.

Any recommendations on where a do-it-yourself decorator on a budget might find ideas? I'm trying to find books, magazines, etc., but everything seems too high-end.

We like Domino, Cottage Living and Budget Living magazines. Also check out "$500 Room Makeovers" by Lisa Quinn (Clarkson Potter, $22.50). She gives you lots of tips on color palettes, inexpensive window treatments and theme rooms.

We are trying to decide whether to get stainless steel or white appliances. Our kitchen doesn't exact-Iv have a modern look, nor does the rest of the house. What do you recommend? We have white cabinets with silver knobs and the kitchen is pretty much microscopic.

Kitchen gurus are already saying that stainless is on its way out. So go with white, which will always be in.

I'm having trouble finding a smaller-than-2x3-foot accent rug for a small powder room. Can you recommend a store?

Have you tried Linens 'n' Things or Bed Bath & Beyond? Bloomingdale's has a great bathroom department too.

Besides Home Depot and Great Indoors, where else can I find traditional drawer pulls for my dresser?

Restoration Hardware has a great collection.

Any idea where I can find ovalshaped seat cushions for a pair of wicker chairs?

That's a tough one. Sounds like you need to find a friend who sews to make them for you.

Any recommendations for local places I can buy mohair upholstery fabric? (The kind of mohair with a straight pile — kind of like velvet with a longer pile.) I want to have a few pillows made with it.

We just called Discount Fabrics USA in beautiful Thurmont, Md. (discountfabricsusa.com, 301-271-2266). They try to carry mohair all the time.

Can you offer some color suggestions for the classic old-style black-and-white bathroom - small black-and-white tile floor and white tile with black trim on the walls about halfway up. The hall carpet is brown and the walls are light grayish-green. The bathroom doesn't have to match the hall colors, but I don't want it to clash, since the door is always open when its not in use. I've got maroon in there now on the towels and curtains, but I'm ready for a change.

Black-and-white bathrooms are the best — anything goes. You can choose towels in bold colors such as hot pink, yellow, kelly green or marine blue. You could paint the walls a high-gloss white, then vary the towel colors. The shower curtain can be stripes, dots, geometrics, florals etc.

I've got a guest bedroom question. I recently purchased all-new linens — beautiful, crisp whites and I'm looking to paint the walls a nice, inviting color, perhaps a shade of blue. (Right now, the walls are also white.) Any thoughts on what might work well? I don't want the room to feel too masculine or too feminine, and I'm trying to stay away from the neutrals so there will be good contrast with the linens. Seen any color combos you can recommend?

Sherwin Williams Hinting Blue is a kind of pale grayish blue. It will look different in morning and afternoon sun. If you want something stronger, try Vast Sky, a pale Wedgwood blue.

What type of flooring is appropriate in a kitchen/family combination room? I need something sturdy because I have kids and pets.

We keep plugging wood laminate for high-traffic, high-kid, high-pet areas. It works. Jura's got Pergo that is 7 years old, and even cat's claws haven't damaged it. Nor teenage boys. Nor golf cleats.

After two years of living with us in our small townhouse, our son and his family are finally moving out and facing the world on their own. We need a lot of work done. How can we make a significant but affordable change to pep up our empty nest?

What we would say is, first, enjoy your new space. Clean it up, toss or give away stuff you don't need and paint the walls a nice semi-gloss neutral like a warm Behr Eggnog. Don't start filling it up again for a little while. Space is a luxury.

I have 17-year-old daughter who'd like to update her room. She'll be leaving for college in a year, so a complete redesign isn't necessary but a "face-lift" is certainly in order. Any suggestions? She's a trendy girl who favors pinks and greens.

Check out Pottery Barn Teen (pbteen.com). They have a lot of pink and green. Some new sheets, a new coat of paint, new pillows and things like that will help make the room look fresh.

I am in search of area rugs for a new baby's room, as well as a master bedroom (which seems like an overstatement for a room that is 12x12, but what can you do). I would like the rugs to cover most of the floor. I've had trouble finding something nice and soft that's the right size and the right price. Is a trek out to Greenfront in order? Any other suggestions?

We consulted "DC Baby," a great book by Sarah Masterson. She likes IKEA for kids' furnishings, and IKEA has great inexpensive rugs. Also try Pottery Barn Kids.

I'm looking for a valance or window treatment for a window in a dining room. The walls are light brown and the dining table is a contemporary glass-top. Silk may be too fancy. We're having difficulty choosing the style, fabric and color.

Sage green would be nice with the light brown. A latte color might also be nice. JCPenney has a great window treatment department. Also, Bed Bath & Beyond has expanded its collection to include lifestyle diva B.Smith's line.

What area stores can you recommend for a wide selection of lighting? I need sconces to place around my living-room fireplace.

Dominion Electric Supply is currently having a 15 percent off in-stock lighting sale. The Great Indoors is a particular favorite of Annie's. Illuminations is high-end, but the style and service is terrific — it's located both in Cady's Alley and at 8th St. NW. Restoration Hardware has great sconces. Annapolis Lighting has locations all over, too. Gaylord's in Bethesda is more traditional but has great service — and they often can fix your lamps while you wait. At 46 stories each, the Turnberry Towers in Las Vegas, above, are a fair bit taller than the planned Turnberry Tower Arlington, which will boast a mere 26 stories.

Sin City In Rosslyn

An ultra-luxe Vegas complex will have a little sister in Virginia

So what do Arlington and Las Vegas have in common, you ask?

Why, an ultra-luxury condo tower being built by South Florida developer Turnberry Ltd., of course.

Never heard of Turnberry? You're probably not traveling in the right circles. Think Miami condos, the Fairmont Turnberry Isle Resort & Club and Aventura Mall in South Florida, a planned redevelopment of the iconic Fontainebleau Hotel in Miami Beach, an earlier Vegas condo project that was the first on the Strip, a joint Vegas hotel-condo venture to connect to the MGM Grand casino, and resorts in the Bahamas and Orlando.

There are some differences, though, as you might expect, between what's happening in Sin City and right here in Rosslyn.

At Turnberry Towers Las Vegas, the dual 45-story towers are a three-minute walk from the Strip. The apartments cost from $500,000 to more than $1.3 million. The project is right across the street from the company's first ultra-expensive Vegas project, Turnberry Place — and from the showgirls at the Sahara.

Turnberry Tower Arlington, to be built on the site of what's now a Best Western hotel near Key Bridge, will be just 26 stories. But that's enough to qualify it as the tallest condo building in Rosslyn or Arlington and maybe even in the region, according to Turnberry and Arlington County planners who approved the tower by different names in 2001 and 2004.

The high-rise at 1881 N. Nash St., scheduled to be finished in the spring of '08, will have 247 units, ranging in size from 1,312 square feet for one bedroom and 1½ baths to 5,304 square feet for the tower suite — three bedrooms, a formal dining room, a library, a lounge, a staff suite and 5½ baths.

than in Vegas. They range from $800,000 to a little more than $6 million for the penthouse, according to Jim Cohen, vice president of sales and marketing of Turnberry Ltd. in Miami.

Turnberry Tower Arlington won't have access to casinos; the 176-room Best Western sits next door to a Holiday Inn. But it will have those Rosslyn views of Georgetown, the monuments and the Potomac.

And it will have amenities including private elevators, a spa and fitness center, an indoor swimming pool, Italian cabinets, Miele appliances, Jacuzzi tubs and floor-to-ceiling windows. Plus, it will be "green" building certified, for environmentalists with a lot of green.

But aren't both ventures big gambles in two overheated condo markets?

After all, Arlington and Fairfax counties have 14,000 condo units under construction and 28,000 more planned or proposed, but only 4,000 units there sold last year, according to Kenneth Wenhold, director of the Virginia-Maryland division of MetroStudy, a Houston-based market research firm.

And in Las Vegas, where some had estimated last November that as many as 50 towers were being built or planned, the climate appears to have become way too cool lately, leading several developers to pull the plug. Among those leaving: Ivana Trump, ex-wife of Donald, who apparently doesn't vanna build her Ivana Las Vegas anymore, and Related Cos., which took 500 luxury units off the market in January.

Turnberry, however, sees no problem in either market, Cohen said.

Before deciding to enter the Washington region about a year and a half ago, "we watched that market," he said. "And it really had a good feeling as an area of need for luxury. We specialize in luxury, that's the basis of the whole business."

Since a sales office opened in the back of the Best Western about five months ago, around 120 condos have sold, including a $4 million unit, he said.

The experts can be wrong on such things, Cohen added.

"All the experts said not to go into condos in Las Vegas," said Cohen, because tourists wouldn't desert the hotels for their own luxury suites. "But we went against all the experts and had tremendous success."

Vegas still is "very strong" for developers who are careful, he explained. And that means catering to buyers who will live in the buildings, not those who are simply making a speculative investment. "We didn't jump on the investor market. We take a 30 percent deposit on a condo ... and that takes away a lot of the investors," Cohen said.

In the Washington area, "we know that the investor market has dried up quite a bit," he said. "But our sales pace is just as we estimated it going in."

The project "has wonderful amenities" and "the model looks great," said Ann Worley, an agent with McEnearney Associates in McLean, who had clients who considered buying there. She noted that the tower has lots of competition at the high end, in Rosslyn and Georgetown.

Her clients, who were in their seventies, decided not to buy because "it will take three years to build" and because "the best views are already gone."

Turnberry is partnering on the project with Facchina Development Co. of La Plata. The luxury tower was originally approved in mid-2001 as an even more swank building, with only about 176 units and a different developer. But the plan was suspended after Sept. 11, 2001, and re-approved with a different name and more units in 2004. SANDRA FLEISHMAN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Creatively Cashin' In

Buyers hock family jewels and cars to get down payments

Lauren and Chris Abi-Najm moved to the Washington area from Georgia last winter with a plan: They would save up and buy a place of their own. And to save up, they would move in with his parents in Lorton.

With two good jobs - he's a computer network engineer and she's an occupational therapist it seemed feasible.

The couple, still stunned by high home prices here, found a $423,000 condo they liked in a new Shirlington development. And then they had to contend with another big number: a 5 percent earnest-money deposit.

"Twenty-two thousand? I definitely thought, that's a lot of money," said Lauren Abi-Najm, 28. She and her husband were thousands of dollars short.

Throughout the recent housing boom, many Washington area residents have relied on low- or no-down-payment mortgages to purchase houses they otherwise may not have had the cash to afford.

So-called 103 percent loans even cover closing costs. But even in these times of low down payments, first-time home buvers are finding that they still need cash - and yes, a lot of it sometimes.

That money goes to up-front deposits, often referred to as earnest money. For new homes, the deposit amount is set by the builder and paid to reserve a unit. In resales, the amount is more loosely defined. In the recent buying frenzy, the size of the deposit sometimes became the determining factor in who won a bidding war.

Because deposits represent up to 10 percent of the purchase price, they have mushroomed along with home prices. After five years of double-digit gains in home values, even entry-level buyers in this region now face earnest-money deposits that can easily equal a year's salary.

That has sent would-be homeowners scrambling for cash from parents, second jobs, even retirement funds.

Some, real estate agents say, have resorted to more creative measures, such as negotiating signing bonuses on their first jobs, selling belongings on eBay lt's a dilemma for young buyers who don't have a history of savings. Most people aren't going to take their houses off the market for a tiny earnest money deposit."

and, in at least one case, pawning a family heirloom.

"The earnest money is one of the single biggest problems for young people," said Donna Evers, president of Evers & Co. Real Estate Inc. in the District.

"It is a dilemma for young buyers who don't have a history of savings. Most people aren't going to take their houses off the market for a tiny earnest money deposit," said Denise Champion, a Districtbased real estate agent with Long & Foster in Chevy Chase.

So just how much earnest money should buyers offer?

There is no written rule, and customary deposits vary by location and type of housing.

Heather and Brett Huhman scraped together only $2,000 in earnest money, but found a zero-down mortgage, which allowed them to buy a Derwood townhouse.

Local real estate agents said they have seen earnest money as low as a $1,000 deposit on a condo in Prince William County. Champion recalled one buyer who offered to put 100 percent of the purchase price of a Northwest Washington house into escrow, and thus beat out the competition in a bidding war.

Generally, though, a good guideline to follow is 5 percent to 10 percent of the purchase price, Evers said. For a $400,000 house, then, buyers can expect to put up $20,000 to $40,000 in earnest money.

For sellers, that kind of cash serves as a safety blanket, because buyers risk losing it if they back out of a deal.

to show they are sincere about their offer. The bigger the deposit, the thinking goes, the less likely the buyers are to walk away.

Earnest money is not given directly to the seller; it's put into an escrow account. If the offer is rejected, the money is returned to the buyer. If it is accepted, the cash is generally used toward the down payment or closing costs, or returned to the buyer at settlement.

to offer in the way of earnest money. In fact, they had only $2,000, scraped together from cash gifts they had received at their wedding in June.

"To us, that was a lot of money," said Heather Huhman, 22. But it represented just half a percent of the asking price on a Derwood townhouse. "We were definitely concerned. But we didn't really have other options."

Of course, it helped that the three-bedroom unit had been on the market for a while. (The seller had moved out.)

And the Huhmans' offer had other strengths. Both have good credit: They learned that they could buy a home through a zero-down loan for a monthly payment that was not much more than the rent they were paying for #### a Rockville townhouse.

Good credit — and bidding $15,000 over the asking price — helped Heather and Brett Huhman buy a townhouse even though they had a very small down payment.

They also have good jobs: He is an electrical engineer for L-3 Communications Titan Group; she is in public relations.

The seller was willing to work with them. To avoid paying closing costs up front, the couple bid $15,000 above the asking price and the seller in turn paid the closing costs.

"We thanked the seller profusely at closing," said Heather Huhman, who now works for a public relations firm whose clients include Evers, the real estate agent.

One way to come up with a solid earnest-money offering, of course, is the old-fashioned way: save. But increasingly, real estate agents and mortgage brokers said, not too many are patient enough to do that.

"We as a society can get everything we want immediately," said ter," said Maura Sullivan of Long

Mark Chilli, a loan officer with Mortgage Capital Investors in Woodbridge. "If I want a car, I can get it now with a lease. If you go to Best Buy, you can buy a plasma screen TV for zero percent financing."

To come up with their deposits, buyers have located cash in unexpected places. Some have temporarily liquidated their stocks, while others have sold their cars, real estate agents said.

One young couple hawked a diamond necklace, a family heirloom, for half its value for a $5,000 deposit, said Todd Hetherington of Century 21 New Millennium in Alexandria.

Another buyer turned to her boss for a $20,000 earnest-money deposit.

"She had been working for this guy for a long time. He kind of looked at her almost as a daughter," said Maura Sullivan of Long & Foster in Woodbridge.

Danielle Canonico, 26, relied on her parents' help for her earnest money. Two years ago, Canonico's parents chipped in the $12,000 deposit for a Centreville condo. She recently bought a unit in the same Shirlington project as the Abi-Najms. This time, she came up with the deposit money herself.

She plans to sell the first condo. From the profit she expects, Canonico said, she will pay her parents back in full.

"They were willing to help out. They knew it was going to be a good investment," she said.

The Abi-Najms also turned to what Evers calls "the Bank of Mom and Dad."

Last June, Francois and Regina Abi-Najm accompanied their son and daughter-in-law to one of the project's quickly booked sales appointments, and put down the $22,000 deposit on the spot.

Chris and Lauren Abi-Najm expect to move into the twobedroom condo, which has a sunroom, open floor plan and hardwood floors, after construction is finished in July.

"It was impossible to afford anything right away," said Lauren Abi-Najm, now the mother of a baby boy. "I really don't know how we could have done it without them."

Her in-laws said it never occurred to them not to pitch in. It doesn't matter if they get the money back or not, they said.

"We come from a large family, and we all help each other," Francois Abi-Najm said.

Jokingly, he added, "It's not for them — it's for my grandson." томоен мигаками тse (the washington post)

Va. man debates pros and cons of buying a place in Arlington

James Cave, 34, navigates smoothly through the congested streets of Arlington on a recent workday afternoon. He's wearing a baseball cap and driving a new black SUV. He's the very picture of urban cool, but he is simmering hot with rage. Shaking his head and waving his arms in frustration, he points out what he sees as the rising signs of insanity all around him.

He gestures to one newly built condominium tower where he had considered buying. "$350,000 to $1 million," he snorts. "Next to a gas station and a fast-food restaurant. Smell it! Smell it! You can smell the fast food cooking!"

Cave points to another rising edifice. "You can see the signs — luxury condos for $800,000. What could be so luxurious in a condo?"

He nods toward another pricey building, mockingly noting that it overlooks a bus parking lot. "That's no view," he says.

Real estate has become an obsession for a lot of people in this region, and Cave is one of them.

With 11 years of work experience as a graphic designer, secure in his job, climbing in his field, Cave is the kind of young man who normally would have already moved into the ranks of smug homeownership. He has spent the past eight years saving for a down payment. He is ready for the nesting phase of life, would like to buy and has identified the neighborhood he wants, but now it all just seems too uncertain, too expensive. And so he waits.

Instead, he spends at least part of every day thinking about real estate — what's for sale, how much it costs, what it looks like. He wonders how people can afford it, whether home prices can continue to rise and what would happen if they were to fall. He worries most about what would happen to him if values were to fall after he finally bought.

A University of Maryland graduate who grew up in Prince George's County, Cave recalls a time when he was about 20, during the real estate slump of the early 1990s, when houses in his family's Bowie neighborhood sat unsold for months, finally changing hands for much less than the owners had hoped.

Cave and other would-be firsttime buyers are part of the reason Continued on page E36

the Washington area market has slowed down. Instead of leaping into the market as others did in the past few years, more prospective purchasers are taking their time, agonizing over the decision and, in some cases, deciding to take a wait-and-see approach before committing.

"There are probably the same number of buyers as before, but they are not in any rush to buy," said Rick Bosl, a real estate agent who specializes in the Arlington condo market and works with Keller Williams Realty. And there are just so many more homes for sale, he said.

The multiple listing service lists 462 condos available for sale in Arlington, he said. There are several hundred more units available in new buildings and new condo conversions that aren't listed on that service.

"In some markets, we've seen prices go down, and nobody wants to buy in a falling market," he said. "On the other hand, there can be more opportunities, because if your house has been available for sale on the market for a while, you might be willing to sell for anything that comes along." He added that many condos have appreciated so much that the owners could decide to accept a $150.000 profit rather than $200,000, if they wanted to sell quickly.

Houses are now on the market in Arlington for an average of 59 days, up from 22 days a year ago, according to the most recent statistics from the Metropolitan Regional Information Systems, and the number of condo offerings is mounting. In February 2005, 94 condos and coops were for sale in Arlington; in February 2006, that number had increased to 444 units.

But many buyers can't afford condos even at today's prices. When Cave does the numbers, he finds it hard to justify the expense. A couple of years ago, he noted, one-bedroom condos were selling for $175,000,

What's happened in the last three years? My salary hasn't gone up anything like that. It's like the Internet stock craze.'

and now they are listed at twice the price.

Sitting at the computer in the video production firm where he works, Cave calculates how much he could afford to pay, at various interest rates and with different amounts of down payment. Take, for example, the Arlington condo he rents for $1,400 a month. Units similar to his have sold for $480,000. Recently the investor who is his landlord offered to sell him the place for $440,000. Cave could buy it, but he turned down the offer. He figured out it would cost him more than $3,000 a month to own the place, assuming a 20 percent down payment, taxes, insurance and the condo fee.

James Cave would like to buy a place in Clarendon, but he's finding the prices to be daunting. "It seems like the moorings are coming undone from reality," he says.

"It seems like the moorings are coming undone from reality," he said. "It's like the Internet stock craze - you'd sit there and say something doesn't compute here . ... What's happened in the last three years? My salary hasn't gone up anything like that."

He reflects on the old rule of thumb that people shouldn't pay more than one-third of their income for housing. When did that change? Some of his friends, he said, say they are paying 60 percent of their income for housing, doing it with interest-only loans, facing the prospect of balloon payments.

He worries that too many investors bought condos in recent years and that their speculative purchases do not reflect real demand.

"They can flip it and leave someone else holding the bag," Cave said. "That's the world we live in now. They don't care if you're hurt or if you can't pay your mortgage."

So now Cave watches carefully, walking his target market, which runs from Clarendon to Ballston in Arlington, checking out construction sites to see what is planned, and visiting the models when they become available. He does a lot of his searching on the Internet.

He clicks into one Web site he frequently visits, arlington condo.com, which shows both existing for-sale listings and new complexes, to see what is available. He quickly notes that there are now 47 new complexes being advertised for sale, which strikes him as a lot. He had been noticing that prices seemed to be dropping, and now when he visits the site, he notices that the listed prices are no longer available.

"It's like they're hiding the prices now," he said. "They've all taken the prices off the list."

Still, he said, his friends keep urging him to buy. They say the Washington area market is different than that in other parts of the country because there is so much job growth here and because so many jobs pay well. They talk about the tax advantages they are enjoying.

And, he said, they tell him, "You're throwing your money away." KIRSTIN DOWNEY (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Washington Post writer MARYANN HAGGERTY regularly discusses the D.C.-area housing market on washingtonpost.com/liveonline.

How can people afford to buy homes in D.C.? I have several degrees, make around $100K a year, have no debt and no dependents, and could make $170K in profit if I chose to sell my condo. But the best I could buy would be another, probably smaller condo (the one I have has three bedrooms). Why can't I buy a single family home in a reasonable neighborhood? And I am not interested in commuting from West Virginia or Pennsylvania. Most of the mortgage calculators say I can afford about $400K — enough for a onebedroom condo. Is everybody here rich or what?

Well, unfortunately for you, many people here ARE rich, at least in comparison with other areas of the country. And many of them are married or otherwise have partners, so they can combine two good incomes.

How do they afford it? Two highincome earners in a household, and equity from the old house. A single, first-time buyer, even with a good income — which is what I was, eight years ago — is just not going to be able to do it in today's market.

Yeah, that really is the way that people afford those houses: Equity built up over the years. Million-dollar houses are not starter homes. They just aren't. Many young folks do indeed feel closed out of the market, and they may be. But paradoxically, as long as interest rates remained relatively low, houses here were more affordable than at some times in the past, despite the high price tags. That's one reason so many of them changed hands.

That was an interesting story in the Post about the explosion of the D.C. exurbs in Virginia, with people moving out from close-in suburbs. What is your take on this phenomenon? Are people leaving because they can buy more affordable, larger homes out there? Is the crime scaring them away? It's a big trade-off to take on a com#### mute like that.

It's a big, big trade-off, but more and more people are making it. And the reason is pretty clear: Housing costs. I doubt crime is having all that much to do with it. Fairfax County isn't exactly the crime capital of the East Coast.

I heard that a flat income tax for D.C. has been proposed. What will that will do to real estate and to homeowners?

I suspect this isn't something to realistically worry about. Every few years, it seems, some Congresstype proposes using D.C. for a lab test of the flat tax or something similar. And then the proposal fades away.

I am buying a home. I have excellent credit and very little money. I'm single and make about $60,000. Although I am very responsible, I am getting approved for very low amounts on a loan. Help. I need more money, I will pay it back, I promise! But the houses are so expensive. What can I do?

Sorry to hear about your problem — because, as you know, you are not alone. The alternatives are not fun. If you have very little cash, you need to save more cash. And that means looking closely at all your expenditures.

My D.C. row house is adjoined to a home that's being rented and is very poorly maintained. I am very concerned about my property values and am embarrassed to have any visitors. I am pretty sure that the home is a Section 8 rental property, and I am hoping I can complain to a local housing agency. But I'm not sure what rights I have.

You can definitely complain. In the District, housing inspections are overseen by the Department of Consumer and Regulatory Affairs (dcra.dc.gov). Now, we all know that dealing with the D.C. government isn't always a barrel of laughs, but there are some hard-working housing inspectors who can help.

How do you suggest researching schools in a neighborhood in which you might want to purchase a home?

School quality is key to the homebuying decision. And there's lots of info out there. Check out the Web sites of the school districts that interest you. Also, see the package of stories the Post ran recently about the No Child Left Behind act, which makes even more school ratings available.

When my husband and I took out an equity loan on a house, we found some people named as "trustees" listed on the deed. We thought the deed should only mention us as the owner and the bank as the lender. Who are the trustees and what is their role on our deed?

Throughout this region, what we think of as a "mortgage" is usually a "deed of trust." The trustees are always those odd names that you see. It's a legal formality that allows the bank to foreclose on you if you don't pay, basically.

I am attempting a For Sale By Owner (FSBO). According to Internet real-estate sites, there are 28 comparable properties in Bowie with a median price of $369,900. My asking price is $359,900. Do I have a reasonable chance of selling without my house being listed in the MLS or using an agent? If so, what is the best method of advertising to use now?

Well, that's 28 market competitors who may be easier to find than you are. So if you're going to compete, you have to be aggressive. Start with an ad in The Washington Post, both paper and online. List elsewhere on the Web. And don't forget a lawn sign.

My wife died last month and I need to sell our house. The house was in both our names. What do I need to do before I can sell it?

I'm sorry for your loss. For the exact steps required to tidy up the deed, contact the recorder of deeds office in the county or city where the house is located. You'll need to file a few forms. It's not complex or expensive, usually.

I graduated from college, paid off my loans and am ready to buy a home. I often see foreclosed homes in the Post and wonder how much money I would need to buy one of them. I will be borrowing against my government TSP (like a 401k). Also, should I get a Realtor or can I go to court alone without feeling too intimidated?

Foreclosure houses are a traditionally risky form of real-estate investment — they sound like the bargain basement, but they have problems for the inexperienced. If you're really truly serious, you may want to talk to a real-estate agent who has experience in the field. Also, take a look at the HUD (the Department of Housing and Urban Development Web site, hud.gov) to find out more about investing in government foreclosures.

I rented a condo in January and the fire alarm for the building has beeped since then, despite my complaints to the D.C. City Council and the fire marshal. Is there anything more I can do? The alarm is so old the plastic cover fell off.

I'm assuming that you have complained in writing to your landlord, to building management and to the condo's board of directors. Your landlord has a responsibility to provide you with living quarters that don't beep; you may want to explain that cordially to him or her. I'm guessing this is more complicated than it appears on the surface, because normally condo owners would rise up in protest at something like this within, oh, say, an hour. Why aren't your neighbors - who, after all, own the building - complaining, too? Or are they all renters? If the latter, perhaps you'd get more oomph by complaining together to your councilmember and the fire marshall.

I bought a brand-new condo in Southwest last year, anticipating a break with the first-time home buyer credit of $5K that the D.C. government has been advertising for several years (and that many of my friends and colleagues who have bought property have received). While doing my taxes, I found out that D.C. is phasing out the tax credit, so based on my adjusted income tax (single filer. well above $70K), I will see virtually no tax credit. I find this to be false advertising by the D.C. government AND my real estate agent. Do I have any recourse?

Since the first day of the tax credit, it has phased out depending on income. It disappears completely at about $90K per year. That's pretty clearly set out in every pamphlet, article or tax thing I've ever seen. I think you could logically be expected to have done your due diligence. I'm trying to figure out whether I can create a bedroom with some of the extra space I have, so that when I'm ready to sell I'll have a four-bedroom house to list rather than a three-bedroom house.

Check with your county building department — but the usual answer is a window, a closet and a door that leads to the hall, rather than simply to another bedroom.

My husband and I live in the city as renters, but really need to start to look at buying a home. We have a moderate income, so our options are few anywhere inside D.C. or Virginia (Maryland is too far away from work). Could you recommend some books to guide us through the buying process or other resources?

There are lots and lots of books out there. Get yourself to the library or bookstore. Avoid anything that implies you will get rich quick. I continue to like "Homebuying for Dummies," but there are other good ones, too.

My partner and I are looking at buying a unit in a condo duplex. The condo has been self-managed by the two owners and they haven't paid condo fees in a while. The owners of the unit we're interested in (the larger one) has been paying the insurance and water bills for the building out of their own pockets. And the building is under-insured — in other words, they're paying hazard insurance for about half the entire building's value. Does this sound too messy? We're thinking of consulting with an attorney before making a decision on whether to make an offer, but we're not certain it's worth even that effort.

That sounds like a real mess. You would need to have a lengthy and honest discussion with the OTHER condo owner — who will, in effect, become your coowner. And you need to read the condo documents very closely — if you are seriously considering this, I would DEFINITELY have a lawyer read over them.

I am seeing lots of homes on the market that have been available for a long, long time. Is there an appropriate time to wait for a house to be on the market before one can offer less than asking? Continued on page E40

If so, when? And when offering a lower amount, what is a reasonable percentage? Is this all subjective?

Oh, the new things we all have to learn! Can we all spell "negotiate"? Yes, there are more homes on the market. Yes, they are staying there longer. That means you can indeed make an offer that is below the contract price. The seller can accept it, reject it or make a counteroffer (i.e., start negotiations). There's no prescribed level under the asking price that you should bid, or any prescribed time. You will want to look at what competitive properties are actually selling for (ask your agent), as well as what they are asking. Then offer something reasonable. If your offer is insultingly low, the buyer may indeed reject it outright. Hint: Offering 50 percent of the asking price is usually considered insulting. You are bargaining for a house, not for a souvenir in a street market.

My husband and I are moving to D.C., and we may stay only five years. Should we buy or rent? We are thinking of a two-bedroom somewhere in Dupont Circle. If we buy, we think it would cost around $800,000. What do you think?

Five years is usually the conservative estimate in favor of buying. It's enough time to ride out little waves. Look around, see what you can rent for your money vs. buy.

I will be moving into my fiancee's house in the next couple of months. I am trying to decide if I should rent or sell my condo. I bought it I4 months ago, so I have not yet lived there the two years I need to exempt capital gains taxes. I paid $285,000 for it and would hope to sell for $350,000 or rent at $1,650 per month. If I do sell and invest my earnings in my fiancee's house, would I avoid paying taxes? What is the best option?

Taking your profit and investing it in another residence where you will live — whether it be your fiancee's or any other house — will NOT affect your tax situation. You have an investment property, not a residence; you need to think about it that way. If you want to defer taxes, then you need to do a Starker exchange, rather than a straight sale.
